On October 23, 2014, Ms. Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct directed towards Dr. O'Malley, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made inappropriate and unsubstantiated comments about Dr. O'Malley's appearance, sexual proclivity, professionalism and hiring/promotion practices, as more fully set forth in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence. Ms. Lechelt's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for anyone who has had occasion to review her comments and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in her presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

Count 5 - Inappropriate comments directed at unidentified employees in the Training

On October 23, 2014, Ms. Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct against other unidentified employees in attendance at the Engrade training, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments about various unidentified employees:

- "maybe you should start slowly . . . like with this lady in the red tshirt in the second row";
- Following Mr. Van Pelt's statement that he "has been there done that," Ms. Lechelt stated, "so did JB";
- "she is a fan of the backchannel . . . and jean overalls."

Ms. Lechelt's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for anyone who has had occasion to review her comments and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in her presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

Count 6 - Inappropriate and offensive comments between each other

On October 23, 2014, Ms. Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments:

- "poor man's anything is as good as its gonna [sic] get in Edison";
- "oh I will be a supervisor soon – I'm cute and blonde";
- "I didn't realize your were a backchannel guy . . . thank god I found out";
- "this conversation is so beautifully filthy";
- "she hates us . . . but then again, who doesn't";
- In reference to the use of the word repository, Ms. Lechelt stated, "yes, its used in your backchannel";

- "Well you better start thinking about baseball or dick cheney before you stand up";
- Following a reference made by Mr. Van Pelt that he just returned from the bathroom where he masturbated, Ms. Lechelt stated, "I knew it! Do you still like her . . . or are you over it";
- After suggesting that Mr. Van Pelt ask the instructor if she wants to blow him, Ms. Lechelt stated, "I love when you guys ask me that";
- "that's better than the ol [sic] 'powder your balls' shower."

CHARGE II

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause Disruption of Professional Development Training

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, during an Engrade Training, Maryellen Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature. More specifically, by actively participating in a group chat through "Today's Meet", which was – in part – about Alysia Battista, visible to Ms. Battista and highly offensive to her, Ms. Battista was unable to focus and effectively forced to leave the training to forego further angst, ultimately preventing her from reaping any instructional benefits.

This misconduct by Ms. Lechelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE III

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Misuse of the District's Computer Network

CHARGE IV

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Violations of District Policies

Count 1 – Violation of Sexual Harassment Policies/Regulations

Mr. Lechelt's conduct violated Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, in that it subjected Alysia Bennett, as well as other Board employees, "to sexually offensive speech and conduct . . . wholly inappropriate to the harmonious employment relationships necessary to the operation of the school district." Further, Ms. Lechelt's conduct was severe and pervasive and had the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile or offensive working environment for others. More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made statements, including but not limited to, her sexual abilities and those of co-workers; obscene teasing, jokes and remarks of a sexual nature; comments of a sexual nature on, or staring at, an individual's physical attributes; and questions about sexual conduct. Regardless of whether such comments were directed at a particular individual, or even if such targets were aware that comments were made about them, Ms. Lechelt's graphic declarations constitute sexual harassment.

Count 2 – Violation of Affirmative Action Policy

Ms. Lechelt's conduct violated Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, in that it subjected Alysia Battista, as well as other Board employees, to a "learning environment [rife] with all forms of prejudice, discrimination and harassment . . ."

Count 3 – Violation of Sexual Harassment and Affirmative Action Policies pertaining to Affirmative Action Investigation

Following an Affirmative Action/Sexual Harassment Investigation conducted by the District's Affirmative Action Office, Margaret Deluca, Ms. Lechelt's conduct during the October 23, 2104 Today's Meet group chat was determined to be in violation of the District's Sexual Harassment and Affirmative Action Policies, as well as various other Board Policies. In relevant part, Ms. Deluca found that the "comments in the chat were directed against females and were so outrageous that the teacher filing the complaint was unable to concentrate on the needed instruction, thus interfering with her work performance." Further, Ms. Deluca expressed her concern that Ms. Lechelt did not understand the gravity of her conduct. As a result of same, Ms. Deluca recommended that Dr. O'Malley "consider the most severe [disciplinary] consequences for Ms. Lechelt." Ultimately, Ms. Lechelt's behavior triggered an Affirmative Action/Sexual Harassment investigation that resulted in a determination of misconduct by her.

Count 4 – Violation of Code of Ethics Policy

Ms. Lechelt violated Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, in that she failed to "exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons."

Count 5 – Violation of Inappropriate Staff Conduct Policy

Ms. Lechelt violated Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, by engaging in inappropriate conduct, outside of his professional responsibilities, including communications through the internet, which were available to pupils and for public display.

Count 6 – Violation of Healthy Workplace Environment Policy

Ms. Lechelt violated Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, by engaging in "repeated malicious conduct . . . directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that [Ms. Battista, and others, found] hostile [and] offensive."

Count 7 – Violation of Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members

Ms. Lechelt violated Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, by engaging in a group chat on the District's computer network that had no administrative and/or educational purposes. More specifically, Ms. Lechelt violated this Policy by actively participating in a conversation through the District's computer network that was highly inappropriate (contrary to the intended use of the network) and outright obscene (contrary to the generally accepted social standards for use of publicly owned and operated communication vehicles).

CHARGE V

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Failure to Pay Attention During Professional Development Training

CHARGE VI

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Ongoing Neglect of Duty

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, during an Engrade Training, Maryellen Lechelt stated her desire to continue to find ways to act similarly (i.e., engage in inappropriate conversations during instructional time), ultimately conceding her desire to not perform her job in the future. More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments:

- "we have spent 5 minutes idling which works out to 300,787 hours of time wasted per year . . . which the township has paid close to 300,000 dollars in salary for us to do – yay us";

- "I can continue to sit in the back of my room and read us weekly";

- "tvp, lets start a todays meet when we get back to school and are supposed to teach";
- "lets find another training we can all sign up for . . . this is extremely therapeutic."

This misconduct by Ms. Lechelt constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

CONTENTIONS OF THE BOARD

The Board argued as follows:

These facts pertain to Maryellen Lechelt.

- Ms. Lechelt has been employed by the Board since September 2011. She received tenure in or about September 2014 – just one month prior to engaging in the conduct at issue. 3T 63:22-25.
- Ms. Lechelt was an elementary teacher, assigned to Lincoln Elementary School for the 2014-2105 school year.
- On September 5, 2014, Ms. Lechelt executed the Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications Form, acknowledging that all Board policies and regulations can be found on the Board's website at http://www.edison.k12.nj.us/Page/514 and agreeing to review and conform to the requirements of same. B-18.

The following facts apply to all of the Respondents

- Article III(B)(1 and 2) of the Agreement for Professional Employees between Board of Education Edison Township New Jersey and Edison Township Education Association, July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014 ("CBA") state, in relevant part, that "all Board of Education policies will be upheld and enforced by all Board employees who are party to this Agreement, as well as by all Administrators, Principals, and Supervisors" and "all Board of Education policies will be available for review in the office of the principal, school library, and the Association office." B-27.
- Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, advises employees that the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Policy 3321 further states that "the Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only." Moreover, the foregoing policy, in relevant part, states that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)computers for . . . inappropriate or obscene purposes." B-24.

- Moreover, Policy 3321 subject employees who violate same to discipline, which includes but is not limited to, suspension, revocation of computer privileges and/or dismissal. B-24.

- Unequivocally, there is no expectation of privacy for any Board employee when using the district's computer network. In fact, there is no program and/or policy that would trump the foregoing fact. 3T-14:16-15:12; 2T 26:13-19.

- Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[s]exual harassment includes all unwelcome . . . verbal contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender." Policy 3362 further states that "when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint." B-21.

- Board Policy 3362 also states that "any employee . . . who is found to have sexually harassed an employee of this district will be subject to discipline which may include termination of employment." B-21.

- Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, establishes that the Board's affirmative action program will "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education." B-20.

- Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, states in relevant part that "[I]nappropriate conduct by a school staff member outside their professional responsibilities may be considered conduct unbecoming a staff member. Policy 3281 further states that "School staff's conduct in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all time . . . [and] school staff shall not make inappropriate comments about pupils." B-23.

- Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, indicates that "the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education." B-22.

- Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment." Policy 3351 further defines the foregoing unacceptable conduct to include the use of derogatory remarks; insults; verbal or physical conduct that a reasonable person would find threatening, intimidating, or humiliating. Finally, a single act of such conduct can constitute the unacceptable conduct prohibited by this policy if it is especially severe and egregious. B-25.

- Board Policy 3351 states that "appropriate disciplinary action may be taken depending on the severity of conduct." B-25

- On October 23, 2014, Respondents attended a mandatory Engrade Training (the "Training") at the Board's offices. Engrade was a new initiative (learning management system) for the District's elementary school teachers. 2T 24:3-23.

- The Training lasted for two-and-one-half hours (roughly 9:00-11:30AM) and was conducted by Sara Bleekinger, who is not a Board employee. 2T 28:24-29:2.

- Respondents were required to use their District issued Chromebooks to participate in the Training. All Respondents admit to using same during the Training and connecting to the Internet through the District's network. Further, Respondent's computers were open, with their screens exposed, throughout the duration of the Training. 1T 74:12-18; 2T 25:6-20.

- At 8:53AM, Mr. Van Pelt forwarded an email to Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber and Jonathan Bauza, requesting that they "join [him] on [his] personal wiseass backchannel discussion."[2] B-12.

- Mr. Van Pelt attached a link to bring the invitees to a web site called "Todays Meet." B-12. Today's Meet is an interactive program that hosts various educationally based conversations (i.e., teacher to teacher / teacher to student). However, Today's Meet is not a program that the District requires it teachers to use and/or be familiar with. In fact, it has no affiliation to this District. Importantly, the District does not maintain Today's Meet chat and/or content, nor does it request and/or require Today's Meet to do so. 3T 20:5-11; 5T 236:24-237:15.

- Respondents were not required to use Today's Meet as part of the Engrade Training. In fact, there was absolutely no compatibility and/or correlation between the Engrade Training the Today's Meet website. B-41.

- Respondents denied reading Lechelt-3 in its entirety prior to using the Today's Meet Program on October 23, 2014. More specifically, Respondent's did not review Today's

[2] Note that while the invitation was actually sent at 8:53AM, the email illustrates that it was sent at 5:53AM. The district's network is set not set to Pacific Standard time and is therefore displayed at a time three hours earlier than it actually is. 2T 45:13-46:3.

Meet's Privacy Policy and Terms of Service. In fact, said portions of Lechelt-3 became effective December 13, 2014 – after the chat at issue occurred! See, Lechelt-3.

- Moreover, the document bates stamped Lechelt-032 within Lechelt-3 illustrates that Today's Meet chat rooms can be public and/or have limited access. Without question, the chat at issue here was not totally private as Ms. DeLuca – who was not invited to take part in same – was able to access the chat room.[3] See, Lechelt-3.

- The Respondents, along with Jonathan Bauza, proceeded to engage in a 2.5 hour chat (beginning at 8:54AM and ending at 11:24AM) (hereinafter referred to as the "Group Chat"). B-13.

- James Madison Intermediate School Teacher, Alysia Battista, also attended the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training. 1T 60:10-16.

- Throughout the Training, Alysia Battista was seated in the last row, roughly 3 feet directly behind Ms. Lechelt. To the left of Ms. Lechelt were Jonathan Bauza and then Mr. Van Pelt. Ms. Weber was seated directly in front of Mr. Van Pelt. See, Lechelt-1; 1T 181:13; B-44 and Lechelt-1.

- Ms. Battista did not have any personal animosity towards Respondents prior to the Training. In fact she had no relationship (personal/professional) with any of them prior to same. 1T 83:4-9.

- A few moments after the Training began, Ms. Battista was distracted by noise emanating from Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Bauza. Mr. Battista proceeded to "shush" Ms. Lechelt. 1T 67:5-22.

- Ms. Lechelt turned around and gave Ms. Battista a look that Ms. Battista interpreted as "really did you just shush me?" Ms. Lechelt and Messrs. Van Pelt and Bauza continued to converse loudly and lean in towards each other's computer screens. 1T 68:14-20.

- Ms. Battista was able to clearly see Ms. Lechelt's computer screen and, therefore, observe the content of the conversation between Ms. Lechelt, Mr. Van Pelt, Mr. Bauza and Ms. Weber. In fact, Ms. Battista indicated that Respondents made no effort to hide what was going on and, in fact, at one point during the training, Ms. Lechelt actually got up from her seat, leaving the computer screen open and the chat on the screen – exposed to the general public and visible to anyone looking. More specifically, Ms. Battista observed the following comments: "short bus" and sexual innuendos – i.e., references to male genitalia, "blow me" and "how do you think I got my job"; comments about lesbians. Ms. Battista also observed comments about someone wearing red. Ms. Battista was wearing red and believed some of the commentary was directed towards her. 1T 69:18-71:22; 74:12-18; 1T 70:5-9, 74:12-19; B-8, B-10.

- Ms. Battista was heavily distracted and highly uncomfortable with the nature of the chat. She described same as "unbelievable". The content of the conversation was upsetting to Ms. Battista because: (1) she has a niece who is classified as special education; (2) she has an "uncle who's epileptic and his whole life he was called retarded and that affected him, so to see that from people who work with children"; and (3) she has a cousin who is discriminated against for being a lesbian. Ms. Battista indicated that "seeing those things especially with people who work with kids, whether it's a joke or not, that's not crossing the line, that's jumping over the line and turning around and spitting on it." 1T 73:5-24.

- Ms. Battista found the Group Chat to be "sexually offensive." 1T 151:16-20.

- Similarly, Ms. Battista clearly observed the web address that hosted the Group Chat. She documented same in both her note to Mr. Figurelli and her written statement. 1T 84:4-16; B-8 and B-10.

- Ms. Battista, based on the portions of the transcript she saw, believed that the Respondents were talking about her – i.e., she observed a comment about something red somebody was wearing, and assumed it was a reference to her because she was wearing a red sweater; and she saw a reference about someone "scratching their lips", which Ms. Battista tends to do when she gets upset, as was the case during the Group Chat. 1T 71:8-22; 176:11-21.

- Ms. Battista made a determination to inform central administration about this chat. She believed that since she preaches to her students to "say something if they see something", she would be disingenuous if she did not do same. Moreover, she expressed concern – i.e., "if that's what's going on in public when other people can see it and I don't think they made any effort to hide what was going on, what could possibly be going on when the kids were not being supervised by other adults." 1T 74:7-11.

- Ms. Battista proceeded to take photographs of Ms. Lechelt's computer screen so she would be able to prove the egregiousness of Respondent's chat. Ms. Battista did not take the time to focus her phone when she snapped the pictures and that is why same cam out blurry. 1T 75:21-25; B-7.

- Ms. Lechelt made all of the comments in the chat attributed to "mamalechelt." B-4. Specifically, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments about the Engrade Trainer – Sarah Bleekinger:

    - "the eyebrows are distracting";
    - "im [sic] trying to have her look at you";
    - "your [sic] making her nervous";

- "this is essentially like a robot teaching the class";
- Regarding the trainer, Ms. Bleekinger, allegedly looking at Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt stated, "lets make it a drinking game";
- "im [sic] starting to get a bit of a fargo accent from her";
- "still interested tvp???"
- "I have a feeling shed rather go out with me"
- "I think her car is parked behind him and she's seeing if she left her windows open"
- "im [sic] worried you'll catch something from her backchannel"[4];
- "lets take her to lunch tvp . . . you can share a burrito";
- "theres [sic] not enough room in her repository for two";
- "no hes [sic] going to have to take it slow, . . . no backchannels yet . . . that's his signature move too";
- "I'm going to use the bathroom now . . . I think I like her too";
- In response to Mr. Van Pelt's statement that he was "thinking of a super smart question to ask that will make her melt," Ms. Lechelt stated, "what is it? Do you want to blow me?" B-13.

- Ms. Lechelt made the following comments concerning special education/handicap students:
  - "I like the group name 'morons'";
  - "they take the tart cart home";
  - "I also prefer my lows 'jesus Christ, why the fuck did they place you with me?'";
  - "middle group = 'just shut your mouth and do your work.'" B-13.
- Ms. Lechelt made the following comments about Dr. O'Malley:
  - "I heard these engrade broads are easy . . . tricky d told me that . . . holla";[5]

[4] A reference to anal sex. 3T 266:4-7.

[5] "Tricky d" is a reference to Dr. Richard O'Malley. 3T 227:20-24.

- In response to Mr. Van Pelt's statement that he did not want Dr. O'Malley's "sloppy seconds," Ms. Lechelt stated "well that eliminates the whole district then . . . how do you think I got the job";
- "I can appreciate any man that looks like a turtle having the ability to get any woman";
- "I find him incredibly sexy . . . in a 'I need a job' kinda way";
- "oh he's proficient in pulling chicks . . . the catch is . . . theyre ugly." B-13.

- Ms. Lechelt made the following comment about Alysia Battista:
  - "she keeps scratching her lips and they are getting bigger." B-13.
- Ms. Lechelt made the following comments about various unidentified employees:
  - "maybe you should start slowly . . . like with this lady in the red tshirt in the second row";
  - Following Mr. Van Pelt's statement that he "has been there done that," Ms. Lechelt stated, "so did JB";
  - "she is a fan of the backchannel . . . and jean overalls." B-13.
- Ms. Lechelt made the following comments to Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Weber and Mr. Bauza:
  - "poor man's anything is as good as its gonna [sic] get in Edison";
  - "oh I will be a supervisor soon – I'm cute and blonde";
  - "I didn't realize your were a backchannel guy . . . thank god I found out";
  - "this conversation is so beautifully filthy";
  - "she hates us . . . but then again, who doesn't";
  - In reference to the use of the word repository, Ms. Lechelt stated, "yes, its used in your backchannel";
  - "suck in the beauty tvp because its all down hill when we get back to schoo [sic]";
  - "Well you better start thinking about baseball or dick cheney before you stand up";

- Following a reference made by Mr. Van Pelt that he just returned from the bathroom where he masturbated, Ms. Lechelt stated, "I knew it! Do you still like her . . . or are you over it";

- After suggesting that Mr. Van Pelt ask the instructor if she wants to blow him, Ms. Lechelt stated, "I love when you guys ask me that";

- "that's better than the ol [sic] 'powder your balls' shower." B-13.

The foregoing chat had no educational purpose, nor did it enhance the instruction of the Training in any manner. 3T 250:24-251:6; B-42.

- Ms. Battista left the Training to speak with Steve Figurelli about her observations. Mr. Figurelli was unavailable so Ms. Battista wrote him a quick note and placed same in a sealed envelope for his attention. B-8.

- Ms. Battista returned to the Training because she knew the Training was important and because she felt she had a professional obligation to sit through same. She did not believe she could simply leave for the day. 1T 79:19-80:1; 149:19-21.

- As a result of Respondents' conduct, Ms. Battista was unable to concentrate and was prevented from learning the content of the Training. Thus, Ms. Battista was unprepared to use Engrade with her students and/or to teach Engrade to her less computer savy team members and/or student teachers. 1T 71:23-25; 81:8-11; 1T 60:17-61:5.

- Within an hour after the Training, Ms. Battista met with her building Principal, Mr. Duggan, to inform him of Respondents' conduct. 1T 82:2-8.

- Pursuant to the request of Mr. Duggan, Ms. Battista prepared a handwritten statement, documenting her observations during the Training. 1T 83:15-19; B-10.

- Thereafter, later in the day on October 23, 2014, Ms. DeLuca interviewed Ms. Battista as part of an affirmative action investigation concerning Respondents' conduct. Ms. Battista provided Ms. DeLuca with a handwritten statement. Ms. Battista was very upset and visibly shaken during this meeting. See, B-11, B-10 and 2T 31:2-33:18; 1T 88:3-18; B-10.

- Ms. DeLuca accessed and reviewed a written copy of the Today's Meet Group Chat ("Transcript"). More specifically, Ms. DeLuca was initially provided with a copy of same by Tara Beams, but also was able to access a copy of the Transcript by simply opening Today's Meet.com and entering the Chat Room created by Mr. Van Pelt. 2T 41:4-20; B-13.

- Ms. DeLuca found the Transcript to be disgusting and offensive. 2T 48:20-23.

- The chat between Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Weber was open to the public and anyone with the chat name was able to access same. 2T 44:6-10; 6T 8:19-22.

- In fact, Don Platvoet, during his brief training of Respondent's on the potential uses of Today's Meet, did not inform Respondent's that it was a private program. 6T 8:8-15.

- Next, Ms. DeLuca met with and interviewed the other teachers in attendance during the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, with the expectation of three or four teachers that Mr. Duggan had already spoken with. 2T 50:12-25; See, teacher interview notes.

- Only one other teacher present during the Training (Angie McKenna) observed the content of the chat between Respondents. 2T 52:22-53:16.

- Ms. DeLuca then proceeded to separately interview each of the Respondents. B-14 through B-16; 2T 56:10-12.

- Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt indicated that they made derogatory references to special education and/or handicap students as a result of the Instructor's "offensive" use of the designation "low" for students. 2T 63:15-64:8.

- Per the District's Assistant Superintendent for Special Services, the Instructors use of the designation "low" should not have been offensive. In fact, all of the tests used by the District to classify special education students use the term "low" when classifying students. 2T 65:13-66:5; 3T 237:12-239:16.

- Respondents all appeared to be sorry they were caught, not sorry they had engaged in the conduct at issue. 2T 93:19-24; 104:14-105:4; 114:18-21.

- Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt did not take Ms. DeLuca's interview seriously. On two separate occasions during the interview, Mr. Van Pelt blurted out offensive, disgusting and unacceptable comments – i.e., (1) when explaining that the phrase "eating chicken" means oral sex, Mr. Van Pelt stated under his breath, audible to Ms. DeLuca, that he likes oral sex; and (2) after explaining that the phrase "get the baby batter off the brain" was a reference to masturbation, Mr. Van Pelt stated, that he did not masturbate, "at least not that time." 2T 75:2-8; 76:6-20; 88:6-89:6.

- Throughout the course of her investigation, Ms. DeLuca determined the following meanings for the following phrases used by Respondents:

    - That many, if not all, references to "backchannel" were references to anal sex. B-15; 2T 68:7-16; 3T 266:4-7.

    - Mr. Van Pelt consistently used the phrase "eating chicken", which means both smoking marijuana and oral sex. 2T 71:1-2, 73:22-23.

    - After Ms. DeLuca stated that Ms. Battista "keeps scratching her lips and they are getting bigger." Mr. Van Pelt stated, "DSL." "DSL" is an acronym for the phrase Dick Sucking Lips. B-13; 2T 77:5-24.

- "Tricky d" and "Little Richard" were derogatory references to Dr. O'Malley, made by Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt, respectively. B-13; 3T 227 20-24; 5T 244:12-20.

- Mr. Van Pelt's use of the phrase "get[ting] the baby batter off the brain" was a reference to male ejaculation/masturbation. 2T 87:10-88:5; B-14.

- Following her interviews of Respondents, Ms. DeLuca reviewed and analyzed all relevant Board Policies to determine whether violations had occurred. 2T 114:22-115:1; 2T 55:3-20.

- Finally, Ms. DeLuca analyzed and evaluated all of the information/evidence gathered throughout her investigation and prepared a memorandum summarizing her findings and providing recommendations for Dr. O'Malley's review. B-26; 2T 126:10-22.

- Ms. DeLuca recommended that Dr. O'Malley consider the most severe consequences possible for all three Respondents because "they didn't seem, for lack of a better term, to get it. They didn't seem to realize the seriousness of the situation." 2T 127:25-128:13.

- Dr. O'Malley recommended that Tenure Charges be filed against Respondents because he "felt their comments and their actions were so egregious, that it would not make them suit [sic] to fit in a position of entrusting them with children . . . I just felt that in the context of their – what they wrote and what they were talking about was just – just disgusting and unbearable . . . And how could I ever look a parent in the eye and say that their children are safe knowing that they are in front of their classroom." 3T 57:17-58:3.

- The Tenure Charges were posted to the public through the news media. Parents and teachers alike have approached Dr. O'Malley on a daily basis to express their trepidations to the possible return of Respondents to the classroom. 3T 62:22-63:19.

- Dr. O'Malley indicated that "every parent and Edison resident and teacher in the district aren't – now that the transcript was posted, that they feel that this was absolutely disgusting, and how can anyone not only talk about this, but talk about someone's child like this." 3T 63:4-8.

The record is closed and the evidence speaks for itself – the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Lechelt engaged in unbecoming conduct, misbehavior and/or other just cause warranting her dismissal from their tenured positions with the Board.

Lechelt conduct in engaging in a discriminatory, offensive and highly inappropriate group chat that constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or just cause warranting their dismissal. On October 23, 2014, during a mandatory Engrade Training, Lechelt and the other respondents engaged in a two and one-half hour "Group Chat" through the "Today's Meet Website, visible to those present in the room, observed in detail by Alysia Battista and ultimately printed through the news media and therefore, viewable by the general public. Respondents conceded that they were responsible for posting the various comments attributed to them (i.e., "tvp" = Mr. Van Pelt; "trish" – Ms. Weber; and "mamalechelt" = Ms. Lechelt).. The chat was full of sexual innuendo, discriminatory, offensive and ultimately created a hostile and uncomfortable work environment for Ms. Battista. In fact, Ms. Battista believed portions of the chat were directed at her and was made to feel so uncomfortable by the general content of same that she was unable to remain focused during the Training and was ultimately brought to tears after having been exposed to same.

The inappropriateness of Respondents' chat is born from an objective review of the Today's Meet Transcript (B-13). Respondents' subjective descriptions and/or interpretations of the chat as a joke or a misunderstanding are entirely irrelevant to this Tribunal's consideration. Conversely, the Board's conclusion that the Respondents displayed such poor judgment through their participation in the Group Chat that they are not fit to be entrusted with the care of this District's students, coupled with the common sense determination that their conduct crossed all behavioral boundaries for public school teachers, should not be disturbed.

As to Charge I Count 1, Respondents, as a group, consistently directed commentary towards and/or about Ms. Bleekinger that was sexually explicitly offensive, demeaning, derogatory and wholly inappropriate. More specifically, Respondents consciously decided to turn a serious and important instructional course into a fantasy game of sorts, within which they vividly described and/or actively suggested ways for Mr. Van Pelt to initiate and achieve sexual interactions with Ms. Bleekinger, along with the sexual fantasies Mr. Van Pelt had towards Ms. Bleekinger. Mr. Van Pelt admitted to making the following comments: "I'd like to tag her"; "you know what would look good on you? ME"; "do you like to have your hair pulled"; "I'd like to invite her to a private backchannel discussion . . . all night long".

Ms. Lechelt admitted to making the following comments: "I have a feeling she would rather go out with me";"im [sic] worried you'll catch something from her backchannel"; "theres [sic] not enough room in her repository for two"; "do you want to blow me". Ms. Weber admitted to making the following comments: "dare you to ask if she would go out with our friend ty"; "tell her to meet u [sic] at Dartmouth at 4"; "im [sic] sure his roomie would love to join too") our friend ty"; "tell her to meet u [sic] at Dartmouth at 4 (Van Pelt's address)" ; "im [sic] sure his roomie would love to join too").

Despite denying engaging in such behavior within their Answers to the Sworn Tenure Charges and Answers to Interrogatories, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber conceded, through their testimony, that their comments towards Ms. Bleekinger were inappropriate. Conversely, the record is devoid of any concession of remorse by Ms. Lechelt with regard to the specific comments she directed towards Ms. Bleekinger during the Group Chat.

Regardless of Respondent's testimony, even a cursory review of the portions of the Transcript directed towards Ms. Bleekinger illustrate that same is inappropriate for teachers to partake in during school hours and through the District's computer network. Further, whether or not Ms. Bleekinger observed the comments directed towards her is immaterial. The record is clear – the Board's administration, Ms. Battista (the only Board employee to view the chat) and the general public found the comments directed towards Ms. Bleekinger to be inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature. Thus, the Board has provided sufficient evidence to sustain this Charge.

With respect to Count 2 of Charge I, Ms. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt engaged in the following exchange:

> Performance indicators are very positive with this fella – tvp
> I like the group name "morons" – mamalechelt
>
> The mo moes – lol
>
> Bobo – tvp
> They take the tart cart home – mamalechelt
>
> Short bus kids – tvp
>
> I name my smart kids group "mr vp's favority students – tvp
> Lol – mamalechelt
> And my low group is called "I hate you don't waste my time" – tvp
>
> My middle group is "whatever" – tvp
>
> I also prefer for my lows "jesus christ, why the fuck did they place you with me?" – mamalechelt
> Middle group = "just shut your mouth and do your work" – mamalechelt

The foregoing comments were, without question, made by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt and directed towards the special education/handicap students in their respective classes (e.g., "tart cart" and "short bus" are references to vehicles used to transport special education students).

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, after having occasion to discuss, with each other, their conduct during the Group Chat, conspired and formulated an excuse that is illogical, unpersuasive and perhaps, most importantly, devoid entirely of any remorse. Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt indicated that he made the foregoing comments because Ms. Bleekinger "advised teachers they could feel comfortable labeling the students low because these labels wouldn't be seen" and such comments "struck a nerve." Similarly, Ms. Lechelt indicated that she made the foregoing statements following Ms. Bleekinger's categorization of students as "lows" and "your lows", coupled with Ms. Bleekinger informing the group that groups can be given any name the teacher desires. As a result of same, Ms. Lechelt explained that she countered such ridiculousness with more ridiculousness.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt are essentially attempting to argue that two wrongs make a right, their argument is fatally flawed and not credible for two reasons: (1) they acknowledged and accepted the district's use of various tests (i.e., Woodcock-Johnson, Wechsler, etc.) that classify students as "low", "very low", "low-average"; and (2) they did not raise any complaints during the Training regarding Ms. Bleekinger's classifications of students as "low," but, rather, devised such an argument only after realizing others viewed what they written. Most importantly, however, even if Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt were subjectively offended by something the instructor had said, their responsive commentary – made of their free will and volition – exhibited a disturbing lack of judgment and that, when viewed objectively, illustrates their true feelings towards this district's students. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt engaged in unbecoming conduct by making wildly inappropriate comments about special education/handicap students.

Finally, as argued by the Board in its opening remarks, and as elicited through the testimony of Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's efforts to blame their voluntary conduct on something said by Ms. Bleekinger illustrates their childishness, lack of remorse, poor judgment and inability to comprehend right and wrong. Respectfully, any effort by Respondents to mitigate the gravity of this particular Charge should be disregarded.

Charge I Count 3 concerns offensive and inappropriate comments made by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt about Dr. O'Malley, the Superintendent of Schools. In relevant part, they engaged in the following exchange:

> I heard these engrade broads are easy – mamalechelt
>
> Tricky d told me that – mamalechelt
>
> Well, I don't want that dudes sloppy seconds – tvp
>
> Well that eliminates the whole district then – mamalechelt
>
> I hear its part of the criteria – holla
>
> It is – mamalechelt
>
> How do you think I got the job – mamalechelt
>
> I'm not saying I disagree with all of the man's philosophies – tvp
> I can appreciate any man that looks like a turtle having the ability to get any woman – mamalechelt
> I find him incredibly sexy – mamalechelt
>
> In a "I need a job" kinda way – mamalechelt
>
> I am not prepared to accept the premise that little Richard has ever been proficient at pulling chicks – tvp
> Oh he's proficient at pulling chicks – mamalechelt
> The catch is . . . theyre ugly – mamlechelt

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt conceded making the foregoing statements and admitted that said exchange was about their boss – the superintendent of schools, Dr. O'Malley. On their face, the comments reference Dr. O'Malley's appearance, sexual proclivities and sexually-based hiring, firing and promotional practices. However, such defamatory comments are entirely without basis in fact or reality and ultimately caused Dr. O'Malley undue embarrassment once the Today's Meet transcript was posted by the news media.

Suffice it say that the inappropriateness of this exchange between Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt is borne from Ms. Weber's recognition and acknowledgment of same in the middle of the exchange – i.e., "inappropriate in so many ways." Further, however, this count must be sustained against Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt as they both acknowledged the inappropriateness and untruthfulness of their respective comments. 5T 139:19-140:6; B-15.

Charge I Count 4 deals with the unbecoming conduct of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt with respect to their harassing and offensive conduct about Alysia Batista. They engaged in the following exchange:

> She keeps scratching her lips and they are getting bigger – mamalechelt
>
> Actually ignore than [sic] – mamalechelt
>
> That – mamalechelt
>
> That was a complete threes company statement – mamalechelt
>
> Dsl – tvp
> We totally just made eye contact and totally had a moment – tvp

The foregoing comments were all made within a couple seconds of each other, as they are each time stamped 9:55AM. B-13.

Ms. DeLuca, through her investigation, deciphered the meaning and context of this portion of the chat between Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt. Specifically, Ms. Lechelt's reference to "scratching lips" was a direct reference to Ms. Battista, who testified that when she gets nervous/anxious she has a habit of scratching her lips, and was doing same during the Respondents' group chat. In response to Ms. Lechelt's comment about Ms. Battista's lips, Mr. Van Pelt stated "dsl." B-13. "Dsl" is a text acronym for "dick sucking lips." Clearly, Mr. Van Pelt's comment was directed toward Ms. Battista. Therefore, through the testimony of Ms. DeLuca and Ms. Battista, as well as the logical objective inferences to be drawn from the exchange on its face, the Board has sustained these allegations against Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt.

Charge I Count 5 indicates that Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt made offensive, discriminatory and inappropriate comments about unidentified employees in the training session. They made the following comments throughout his participating in the Today's Meet Group Chat:

> Following a reference by Ms. Lechelt to a lady in the red tshirt, Mr. Van Pelt stated, "been there done that"
> Had her when she was in her f-ing prime
>
> How's that for an image . . . try getting that out of your head
> Yea . . . she got the mustache too yo

Ms. Lechelt added the following comments:

> She is a fan of the backchannel . . . and jean overalls

Clearly, as was par for the course throughout the Training and the Group Chat, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt picked a target (i.e., lady in red tshirt) and attacked said employee through comments that were insulting, discriminatory, derogatory, offensive and sexual in nature. More simply, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, through the foregoing comments, degraded a colleague by mocking her age, appearance and alleged sexual behavior. Thus, such comments were highly inappropriate and deemed offensive to Alysia Battista, the Board's Administration and the general public - which likely includes the lady referenced by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt.

Count 6 of Charge I alleges that the Respondents made disgusting, offensive and inappropriate sexual comments among themselves and about each other.

Respondents, throughout the Group Chat, made consistent comments between each other about Mr. Van Pelt enjoying, preferring and/or engaging in anal sex – i.e., use of word "backchannel." Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt discussed masturbating, particularly in school and during the training session. In fact, the clear implication from their conversation was that Mr. Van Pelt had excused himself from the Training to masturbate in the restroom. Mr. Van Pelt made multiple references to the act of oral sex – i.e., eating chicken, as well as a flippant comment about him being a "lesbian". Ms. Lechelt stated emphatically that she "loves" when Respondents ask her to "blow" them. Finally, the inappropriateness of Respondents' exchange is encapsulated by Ms. Weber's admission that the conversation is "so beautifully filthy" and "it always is when tvp is chatting."

Without question, such comments were graphically sexual, offensive, discriminatory, harassing and inappropriate to Ms. Battisa, Ms. DeLuca, Dr. O'Malley and the general public. Such commentary simply has no place inside of a school building. Thus, the Board has established that Respondents, with respect to this Charge, have engaged in unbecoming conduct.

Charge II alleges that Respondents engaged in unbecoming conduct during the training session when the caused a disruption by preventing Ms. Batista from participating in the training.

The record evidence demonstrates that Ms. Battista, upon viewing portions of the Group Chat, became offended, was unable to focus and was effectively forced to leave the training to report the misconduct she observed Respondents partake in. In fact, Respondents' conduct prevented Ms. Battista from learning the content of the training. Thus, Ms. Battista was unprepared to use Engrade with her students and/or to teach the Engrade program to her team members and/or student teachers.

Respondents' defense to this Charge is entirely misplaced. More specifically, Respondents, through their testimony, failed to address the actual disruption to Ms. Battista (which was alleged in Charge II of the each of the Sworn Tenure Charges), while attempting to divert this Tribunal's attention to the lack of general disruption. Importantly, however, the Board did not charge Respondents with causing a general disruption to the Training as the Group Chat was only observed by one person and thus, logically, only could have disrupted one person – Alysia Battista.

Merrian's Webster Dictionary defines disruption as follows: to cause (something) to be unable to continue in the normal way; to interrupt the normal progress or activity of (something). Here, without question, Respondents' Group Chat resulted in a situation where Ms. Battista was unable to continue with the Training in the normal way. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Respondents disrupted the Engrade Training.

As a consequence of Respondents' partaking in a 2 ½ hour group chat, they failed to pay attention to the training . The Board has established by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents, as a result of their participation in a 2.5-hour conversation during the Training, failed to sufficiently pay attention to the content and/or presentation of the Engrade materials.

The Board had an expectation that all teachers present at the Training, or any professional development training for that matter, would pay attention to the entirety of the instructional presentation and refrain from engaging in ancillary and unrelated conduct. Respondents' conduct fell far short of the foregoing expectation.

The transcript of the Chat proves that it lasted for 2.5 hours. Mr. Van Pelt made his first comment at 8:54AM and his last comment at 11:23AM. Similarly, Ms. Lechelt made her first comment at 8:54AM and her last at 11:24AM. B-13. Finally, Ms. Weber made her first comment at 8:58AM and her last comment at 11:24AM. B-13. Between 8:54AM and 10:49AM, the longest period of time in between comments was only 4 minutes, on two separate occasions. Both Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber testified that they spent as much as 15-20 minutes participating in the chat. See, Ms. Lechelt did not attempt to quantify her participation in the chat.

Regardless of the self-serving estimates set forth by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber, even if each Respondent only spent 15-20 minutes participating in the chat (or the length of time it took them to type the comments they admitted to making into the chat), they failed to pay attention, or at the least, refrain from engaging in unrelated activity – by their own admission – throughout the entirety of the Training. Thus, the Board has sustained this Charge against all Respondents.

As to Charge III, on October 23, 2014, during the Training, Respondents participated in an inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing and offensive chat through the District's computer Network and District's computers. The chat was not the result of any educational and/or instructional requirements or necessities. Thus, it constituted a misuse of the District's computer network.

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, states – in relevant part – that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)/computers for illegal, inappropriate or obscene purposes, or in support of such activities . . . Inappropriate activities are defined as those that violate the intended use of the network(s) . . . ; and (3) using the computer network(s) in a manner that: engages in other activities that do not advance the education purposes for which computer network(s)/computers are provided."

Here Ms. Weber agreed that her conduct constituted a misuse of the District's network. Similarly, Ms. Lechelt grudgingly conceded that her participation in the Group Chat did not enhance any educational purposes. Only Mr. Van Pelt refused to acknowledge same by steadfastly arguing that the Group Chat, which provided an infusion of humor to the Training, enhanced the Respondents' learning capacity.

Next, an objective review of the content of the chat illustrate that same was wholly inappropriate in relation to Board Policy 3321 and entirely unrelated to the educational purposes of the Training. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the admissions of Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Weber that they misused the district network must be similarly attributed to Mr. Van Pelt, as his conduct during same was at least as egregious as the other two Respondents.

Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in proving that Respondents misused the District's computer network, constituting unbecoming conduct.

Charge IV indicates that Respondents' conduct during the training session violated several district policies. In September 2014, Respondents executed "Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications Forms." B-17, 18 and 19. These forms indicate, "employees are expected to review and become familiar with all Board policies and regulations" and further, directs employees to the web address where same can be found. In fact, Respondents all acknowledged that the policies and regulations are on the Board's website and agreed to "conform to the requirements of the policies and regulations of the Edison Township Board of Education."

Additionally, Article III(B), Board Policies, of the controlling CBA states, in relevant part, that: (1) all Board of Education policies will be upheld and enforced by all Board employees who are party to this Agreement, as well as by all Administrators, Principals, and Supervisors; and (2) all Board of Education policies will be available for review in the office of the principal, school library, and the Association office.

Thus, regardless of whether or not Respondent's actually adhered to their obligations to familiarize themselves with and abide by all Board policies and regulations, their affirmative obligation to do same undercuts any efforts by Respondents to argue that they were unaware of certain policy requirements that they disregarded. More simply put, in considering whether or not Respondents violated Board Policies as alleged in the Sworn Tenure Charges against them, this Tribunal must find that they were familiar with all Board Policies and aware of their obligations pursuant to same.

Pursuant to Counts 1, 2 and 3 of Charge IV, Respondents are charged with violating the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies. More specifically, Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, requires the Board to implement and "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in the policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education."

Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[t]he Board of Education recognizes that an employee's right to freedom from employment discrimination includes the opportunity to work in an environment untainted by sexual harassment." Said Policy further provides that "[s]exually offensive speech and conduct are wholly inappropriate to the harmonious employment relationships necessary to the operation of the school district and intolerable in a workplace which the children of this district are exposed." Sexual harassment includes all "verbal or physical contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender. When such inappropriate conduct is "severe and pervasive" and has the effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint. Finally, employees are put on notice through Policy 3362 that should they be found guilty of sexual harassment, they will be subject to discipline which may include termination.

Though Respondents were not charged with violating New Jersey's sexual harassment laws, Respondents sought to interject the more stringent standards of same into this matter in an effort to defend the Board's allegations. Respectfully, any comparison of the Respondents' conduct to New Jersey Law is not relevant and/or appropriate, as Respondents were not charged with violating state law.

However, to the extent this Tribunal disagrees with the Board's interpretation of the Sworn Charges, the Board contends Respondents have, in fact, violated New Jersey Law, as established by the New Jersey Supreme Court. Lehman v. Toys R Us, Inc., 132 N.J. 587, 603-604 (1993)(a four part test must be considered in determining whether or not sexual harassment has occurred: (1) the complained of conduct would not have occurred but for the employee's gender; and (2) was severe or pervasive enough; (3) to make a reasonable woman believe that (4) the conditions of employment are altered and the working environment is hostile or abusive).

Here, the credible record evidence is clear and convincing – Respondents violated the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies. Ms. Battista, based on the portions of the transcript she saw, believed that Respondents – at least in part - were talking about her (i.e., she observed a comment about somebody in read, and assumed it was a reference to her because she was wearing a red sweater; and she saw a reference about someone "scratching their lips", which Ms. Battista tends to do when she gets upset and was doing during the Group Chat). More specifically, but without limitation, Ms. Battista observed and recalled the following commentary between Respondents: reference to a "short bus" - a demeaning reference to the mode of transportation for special education students; the size of male genitalia; use of the word "dick"; comments about being a "virgin"; describing the trainer as a lesbian, with a reference to a rainbow; "blow me" – "how do you think I got my job"; "men who are like 'turtles'". As a result of Respondents' conduct, Ms. Battista was unable to concentrate and was prevented from learning the content of the training – i.e., Respondents altered and interfered with Ms. Battista's work performance and created an intimidating, hostile, and offensive working environment.

Further, the severity and pervasiveness of Respondent's 2.5 hour chat is borne from Ms. Battista's reaction at the time she observed same, Ms. Battista's demeanor during her testimony when she broke down in tears because she remains upset with the content of Respondent's chat and the testimony and conclusions of Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley.

Ms. DeLuca, an experienced affirmative action coordinator/investigator, determined that Respondents' comments during the Today's Meet Group Chat included: (1) explicit and graphic references to sexual acts and sexual sayings; (2) references and imaginations regarding a sexual relationship between Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Bleekinger; (3) comments concerning Ms. Bleekinger's sexual preferences – i.e., the suggestion that she is a lesbian; (4) inexcusable and insulting comments about special education/handicap students; (5) demeaning comments about other persons present in the training, including their sexual orientation and/or age; and (6) inappropriate, insulting and unfounded comments concerning Dr. O'Malley's physical appearance and hiring/promotion practices.

Ultimately, Ms. DeLuca concluded that the related Board Policies were violated because Respondents' verbal attack on females, elderly persons, lesbians and students with disabilities created a hostile and offensive working environment for Alysia Battista. Respectfully, the record would not support any alternative finding by this Tribunal.

Importantly, Respondents' efforts to attack the credibility of Ms. Battista by categorizing her as both unreasonable and atypical are unavailing. Initially, common sense must prevail.

Regardless of Respondents' self-serving and rehearsed definitions/meanings for the various phrases used throughout the transcript, this Tribunal must evaluate same based on the meaning the general public would have, and since has, attributed to such relevant statements – that they are disgusting, sexually offensive, insulting, demeaning, and discriminating on their face. Further, to the extent this Tribunal is convinced that Respondents' efforts to apply the "reasonable person standard" to Ms. Battista are appropriate, which the Board remains steadfastly opposed to, the Board argues that said standard has been satisfied – both Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley corroborated the reasonableness of her reaction to Respondents' Group Chat.

Thus, to categorize Ms. Battista's reaction to Respondents' commentary as "unreasonable" would be to implicitly identify such comments as acceptable. Moreover, the Board would be remiss to fail to point out the hypocrisy of Respondents' argument – i.e., Respondents, in one breath, ask this tribunal to find that Ms. Battista's reaction to Respondents' comments was atypical or unreasonable, while in the other breath, argue that their "reaction" to Ms. Bleekinger's well accepted categorizations/classifications of special education students (i.e., "low") was normal and a legitimate excuse to their behavior. Respondents' attempt to deflect this Tribunal's attention from their conduct, by yet again attacking Ms. Battista's person, should not be overlooked. The overwhelming record evidence illustrates that Respondents' conduct violated the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies.

Count 4 and 5 of Charge IV asserts that Respondents violated Board Policy 3211 and Board Policy 3281. The Code of Ethics policy states in relevant part that the educator "shall not intentionally expose the pupil to embarrassment or disparagement." Further, Policy 3211 requires that the "educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons."

Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, indicates, in relevant part, "staff members have the public's trust and confidence to protect the well-being of all pupils attending the school district." Policy 3281 further requires that "school staff's conduct in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all times. School staff shall not make inappropriate comments . . . about pupils." B-23.

The foregoing policies hold Board employees to the highest degree of morality and professional standards. Similarly, they confer expectations on Board employees to safeguard the trust and confidence conferred upon them by the public. However, Respondent's voluntary and willful conduct during the October 23, 2014 Group Chat, along with the content of said chat, constituted a grave lack of professional judgment and a breach in the trust attributed to these teachers by both the Board and the general public. More specifically, the 2.5-hour conversation between the Respondents, with no instructional/educational purpose, during an important Professional Development Training (a professional responsibility) was highly inappropriate and a drastic deviation from the administration's expectations for its employees to embrace the Engrade program and/or act with a certain level of respect and commitment during any professional development training.

Further, the content of same, specifically the derogatory references by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt about their special education / handicap students leapt across all bounds of decency. Perhaps most importantly, as a result of the words documented by Respondents, the young impressionable students (and their parents) previously assigned to Mr. Van Pelt and or Ms. Lechelt, at any time during the employment of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, are forced to wonder which hurtful and derogatory grouping they were assigned to by their respective teacher. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Respondents' conduct violated Board Policies 3211 and 3281.

Count 6 refers to Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, which states, in relevant part, "employees [must] interact with each other with dignity and respect . . . Repeated malicious conduct of any employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile or offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment."

Policy 3351 defines unacceptable conduct as conduct that constitutes the "use of derogatory remarks; insults; verbal . . . conduct that a reasonable person would find threatening, intimidating or humiliating. A single act of such conduct shall not constitute the unacceptable conduct prohibited by this policy unless it is especially severe and egregious."

Here, once again, the Board has sustained its burden in proving that Respondents have violated this Policy. By there own admission, the overall content of the Group Chat contained interactions devoid of both dignity and respect – e.g., graphic and vulgar sexual comments concerning Mr. Van Pelt's desires with respect to Ms. Bleekinger; derogatory and insulting comments about Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's student groupings and special education students in general; baseless insulting and defamatory remarks about Dr. O'Malley's appearance and hiring/firing/promotional practices; derogatory and insulting remarks about woman, lesbians, elderly persons. B-13. Further, the Group Chat by Respondent's lasted 2.5 hours, encompassed 16 pages of a transcript and contained 318 separate comments, making the foregoing malicious conduct repeated conduct. B-13.

Finally, notwithstanding Respondents' unjustified and desperate claims that Ms. Battista is not a reasonable person and/or did not have a reasonable reaction to the content of the Group Chat, Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley certainly found Respondents' conduct hostile, offensive and humiliating as well.[1] In reality, even a cursory review of the public comments associated with any of the printed news articles related to Respondents' conduct illustrates that the general public also finds the content of Respondents' Group Chat hostile, offensive and humiliating. Thus, without question, the Board has also satisfied the reasonable person element of this Policy.

[1]Importantly, note that until the news media released a copy of the Group Chat transcript, no non-administrator, besides Alysia Battista, had seen a copy of same. Thus, Respondents' argument that Ms. Battista's reaction was atypical is disingenuous in that no one else had occasions to observe the chat during the Training.

Respondent Lechelt's willingness and intent to continue to engage in similar inappropriate group chats during instructional time constitutes unbecoming conduct During the October 23, 2014 Group Chat, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments, exhibiting both her willingness to avoid performing her required job functions in the future and her desire to continue to find ways to act in a similar manner as Respondents acted during the Training (i.e., engage in inappropriate activities during instructional time):

> We have spent 5minutes idling which works out to 300,787 hours of time waster per year . . . which the township has paid close to 300,000 dollars in salary for us to do – yay us
> I can continue to sit in the back of my room and read us weekly

Predictably, Ms. Lechelt testified that such statements were taken out of context, and that, if given the opportunity to come back to her classroom, she would never engage in similar behavior again. However, Ms. Lechelt, as a result of her conduct during the Training, has not earned the right to be given the benefit of the doubt and/or avail herself to the "trust me" defense. Rather, this Tribunal must consider whether such testimony was authentic, or simply a self-serving effort to minimize the gravity of these statements in an effort to ultimately save her job.

The Board submits that the overwhelming evidence, coupled with Ms. Lechelt's lack of credibility, points to the latter. Had Ms. Battista not observed the Group Chat, and reported same to the administration, the logical inference from the comments attributed to Ms. Lechelt is that she had every intention of using Today's Meet as a tool to engage in additional inappropriate, offensive and disgusting discussions with her colleagues during instructional time. Ms. Lechelt's intentions must be evaluated at the time the relevant statements were made, not after she was caught, coached and prepared to defend her job. Importantly, at the time Ms. Lechelt contributed to the Group Chat she was clearly enjoying herself, speaking freely and unconcerned with the ultimate affects of her comments. Thus, there is simply no reason for this Tribunal to ignore Ms. Lechelt's stated intentions.

Credibility is the value that the fact finder gives to the testimony of a witness. It contemplates an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Credible testimony must proceed from the mouth of the credible witness and must be such as common experience, knowledge and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. The Board cites judicial case law in this regard.

In deciding the facts of a case, the fact finder must decide which witnesses to believe and which witnesses not to believe based on the following factors: (1) interest in the outcome of this case; (2) witness' recollection; (3) ability to know what he/she was talking about; (4) contradictions or changes in testimony; (5) demeanor; (6) whether or not testimony makes sense; (7) reasonableness of testimony when considered in the light of other evidence. See, NJ Model Civil Jury Charge. Additionally, New Jersey law permits a fact finder to reject the entirety of a witness's testimony if a determination is made that the witness deliberately lied on any fact significant to the decision in the case.

Initially, all Respondents' display of remorse during the Hearing was incredible as the Board exposed the same glaring contradictions made by each Respondent. Respondents attempted to illustrate, through their testimony, remorse for their behavior during the Training. However, the authenticity of such remorse, only displayed to the person responsible for deciding their fate, after undergoing hours of preparation with their counsels, must certainly be undermined by the Respondents conduct (i.e., lack of remorse) during their suspension meetings with Dr. O'Malley, November 11, 2014 interviews with Ms. DeLuca, Sworn Answers to the Tenure Charges and Answers to Interrogatories.

Notwithstanding the lone admissions of making the comments in the Transcript, as well as other various innocuous admissions, Respondents uniformly and consistently denied the remaining substantive allegations made by the Board in the Sworn Tenure Charges. Id. Therefore, the weight given to Respondents' staged showing of remorse during the Hearing, must certainly be weighed in light of their failure to exhibit the same remorse when meeting with Dr. O'Malley and Ms. DeLuca, filing their Answers to the Charges and serving their Answers to the Board's Interrogatories. Such behavior by the Respondents bolsters the Board's assertion that Respondent's were only sorry they got caught, but not sorry for what they had done.

Next, Respondents' efforts to assert an expectation of privacy in defense of their actions during the Group Chat is unreasonable based on the record and the law – i.e., Board Policy 3321 expressly denies Board employees of any expectation of privacy when using the district's network; pursuant to state and federal law, when something is exposed to the public view, such as this Group Chat, same is not protected by an reasonable expectation of privacy. Thus, Respondents' efforts to push such an illogical argument/defense on this Tribunal illustrate Respondents' lack of credibility.

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's lack of credibility is further borne from the unreasonableness of their defense to the Charge alleging that they made inappropriate comments directed towards special education / handicap students – i.e., that their perceived anger towards Ms. Bleekinger's direction to label a group of students "low" triggered their barrage of insulting and demeaning commentary.[2] This argument is irrational because: (1) the district's Assistant Superintendent / Director of Special Services informed Ms. DeLuca that the use of the designation "low" is an acceptable norm; (2) all Respondent's acknowledged and accepted the District's practice, as well as the nationwide practice, of using various test that ultimately label the students as "low", "very low" and "average"; and (3) not one of the Respondents confronted Ms. Bleekinger during the Training about her student designations or raised a concern with the administration with regard to their accepted use of such offensive tests/terms.

Rather, only after they realized they were in trouble for making such offensive comments did they devise, between each other, this defense. Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's position on this issue is so contrary to reality, and therefore, so inherently unreasonable, that it should be entirely discredited. More importantly though, the unreasonableness of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's testimony on this issue illustrates their lack of candor and overall lack of credibility.

Lastly, when engaging in credibility determinations related to each Respondent, it should not be lost on this Tribunal that all of the Respondents, rather than simply take ownership for their conduct, blamed and attacked others (i.e., Ms. Bleekinger and Ms. Battista), for causing these grown teachers to act in the manner they chose to act. More specifically, the notions that Ms. Bleekinger's use of a uniformly accepted student classification; or that Ms. Bleekinger was inadequately prepared for the presentation; or that Ms. Battista was a "peeping tom" with the intention of bringing trouble upon the Respondent's are so ostensibly absurd that the credibility of the persons making such statements must be gaged against he lunacy of same. In other words, a credible witness/person would not make such arguments.

Thus, the Board submits that this record is replete with reasons that should cause this Tribunal pause when considering whether Respondents provided credible testimony.

As a point of legal argument, the Board asserts that Respondents had no right to privacy when engaging in the Group Chat during the October 23, 2014 training session. Throughout this process, Respondents have asserted that they had a good faith belief that the Group Chat was private. More specifically, in concert, Respondents argued that if the chat rooms were open to the public, student privacy concerns under FERPA and state law would be triggered. However, Respondents' efforts to assert an expectation of privacy in defense of their actions during the Training are unavailing, as both the record and the law are fatal to such a defense. In fact, said argument is so suspect that it does nothing more than bolster the Board's assertion that Respondents are not remorseful for their conduct – i.e., despite the baselessness of the claim, Respondents have conspired to stick with the defense through the resolution of this matter.

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers And Resources by Teaching Staff Members, states – in relevant part – that "[t]he Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Further, every District employee is aware that there is no expectation of privacy when using the District's computer network, and there is no program and/or policy that trumps same. More specifically, Respondents were actually informed during Today's Meet training that the program was not private.

Here, Respondents all executed "Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications" Form, within which Respondents agreed to review and conform to all Board Policies. Simply put, there is no way the Board could have been more explicit with the reality that employees do not enjoy any expectation of privacy when using the District's network.

FERPA is a Federal Law that controls the disclosure of personally identifiable information from an eligible student's education records to a third party unless the eligible student has provided written consent. The applicable statute defines education records as those records, files, documents and other materials which: (1) contain information directly related to a student; and (2) are maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a person acting for such agency or institution. Importantly, without dispute, the Group Chat did not contain and/or reference specific students or information directly related to specific students. Further, the Board does not maintain the Group Chats and/or transcripts of the Chats, and there is simply no reason for Respondents to have thought otherwise. Thus, Respondents' efforts to grasp on to the protections of FERPA, despite the record evidencing that FERPA's application is unjustified, is merely an act of desperation.

A person cannot assert an expectation of privacy with regard to something exposed to the public view. There is no liability under the tort of invasion of privacy for observing a plaintiff or even taking his photograph while he or she is walking on a public highway, since he or she is not then in seclusion, and his or her appearance is public and open to the public eye. These premises are supported by judicial case law.

Here the record evidence is clear, Ms. Battista observed the conversation and identified the web address by viewing Ms. Lechelt's computer screen during a Training session. In fact, all Respondents engaged in the Group Chat on their computers in a room filled with thirty to forty other persons, with the screens open and on their desks for a two and a half hour period, during which they all, at one point or another, stood up and walked around, while not closing their computer screens. Had Respondents desired to avail themselves to an expectation of privacy, they surely would have found a way to be more discreet during the Group Chat. Thus, Respondent's expectation of privacy defense is contrary to well-established law. In fact, in the event this Tribunal feels compelled to give any deference to Respondents' FERPA based privacy argument – to which the Board contends none is warranted – Respondents' cavalier participation in the Group Chat during a training, visible to other members of the public, must trump any FERPA privacy considerations.

As to the charges served on Respondents, the record confirms that the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents are guilty of conduct unbecoming, insubordination and/or other just cause warranting dismissal. The infractions established in the record evidence cut to the core of Respondents' fitness to continue to teach. Unlike labor arbitration, this Tribunal's decision regarding any potential penalty must be first and foremost concerned with the welfare of students, not the employment rights of Respondent. There is ample, longstanding precedent for this proposition in the body of School Law in New Jersey that has developed over the last several decades, as well in the growing number of Tenure Hearing arbitral decisions under the recently revised Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TeachNJ Act").

With respect to just cause, in evaluating whether an employer has just cause to discipline an employee, Arbitrators follow guidelines similar to those utilized in Enterprise Wire Co., 46 LA 359, 363-64 (1966); Grief Brothers Cooperage Corp., 42 LA 555, 558 (1964). Consequently, it has been held that the employer should satisfy the conditions set forth in the above cases in order to prove "just cause" for the disciplining the employee.

The "inherent duties of a public employee include compliance with all reasonable rules and regulations, and duties arising from a fiduciary relationship to the public and from such duties as arise by the nature of the office held." Unless the penalty is unreasonable, arbitrary or offensively excessive under all of the circumstances, it should be permitted to stand. These statements have been well established by New Jersey courts.

Moreover, recent case law suggests that progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question because some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. For example, in American Arbitration Association Decision, 2010 AAA LEXIS 439, Arbitrator Renovitch acknowledged that extremely serious offenses usually justify the enforcement of a discharge.

The holding that dismissal was warranted in the cited case resulted from a Grievant failing to perform an end-of-run check, which resulted in a sleeping student being left on her school bus. In that case, the arbitrator enforced a summary dismissal. Arbitrators Tener, Dichter and Simon enforced summary dismissals in other cases that reflected other fact patterns.

Moreover, since the implementation of the TeachNJ Act, Arbitrators have dismissed teachers for engaging in inappropriate conduct that has reflected poorly on both the teacher and the school district. The cited decisions were all issued since 2012.

In anticipation of the cases Respondents will likely seek to rely upon to argue that their dismissal is not warranted in this matter, the Board asserts same are readily and easily distinguishable from the matter at bar based on discrepancies in fact and proofs.

Here, the just cause conditions have been satisfied: namely, Respondents were forewarned prior to the Group Chat that dismissal could result from misusing the District's computer network and violating various Board Polices and standards of expected behavior; Respondents conduct on October 23, 2014 violated established Board Policy and any reasonable expectations of employee conduct; Respondents' conduct was investigated fully; substantial evidence, including Respondents' acknowledgments of wrongdoing, admissions and a copy of the actual transcript, were obtained; and termination was reasonably related to the seriousness of Respondents' offenses (i.e., the duration and wholly inappropriate nature of the conversation, coupled with the grave lack of judgment displayed by Respondents) and the Respondents' past record. Specifically, Respondents' conduct with respect to the group chat, without the consideration of progressive discipline, rose above and beyond the level of egregiousness necessary for dismissal.

Accordingly, satisfaction of the just cause standard, along with the arbitral precedents, must result in the termination of Respondents. Their acts are egregious on their face. In fact, the totality of their conduct, and each specific charge considered alone, are more egregious than that deemed sufficient for dismissal in the above-cited precedents. Respondents violated board policies and the common decency expected of public school teachers, as illustrated in the record evidence, by misusing the District's network to mock, insult, harass and offend others (including special education students, the superintendent of schools, the Engrade Training presenter, females, older persons and each other), while creating a hostile and unhealthy work environment for the one person who openly observed same; continuing such conduct for a period of 2.5 hours during scheduled instructional time; failing to comprehend the seriousness of their conduct by constantly making excuses, placing the blame elsewhere and disingenuously declaring remorse only when face-to-face with the assigned arbitrator after being prepped by their counsel as to what this tribunal wants to hear; and, in the case of Mr. Van Pelt, admitting to masturbating on school property.

Respondents showed a complete lack of concern for the parents and students of the Edison Township School District, and a callous sense of desperation by attempting to attack and demonize the VICTIM – Ms. Battista (e.g., referring to her as a "peeping Tom", claiming that she went out of her way to discover their chat and ultimately blaming her for the trouble and embarrassment now endured).

The record, as discussed and documented above, clearly illustrates that Respondents recognize a large portion of their conduct was inappropriate. Specifically, Respondents concede, for the most part, that they misused the District's network and made regrettable comments about other persons and classifications of persons

It is well established in case law that the term "unbecoming conduct" is a broadly defined, elastic term, encompassing any conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and competence in the operation of public services. In hearings similar to this one, arbitrators have determined that conduct unbecoming a teacher has been found to include a broad range of behavior that impacts a teacher's ability to perform his duties or otherwise renders him unfit to have the responsibility to care for children. In this matter, Respondents have unmistakably breached the public trust placed in their position as teachers.

Charge VIII of the charges alleges that the acts of misconduct set forth in the Charges and the Counts, jointly and severally, manifest a series of ongoing infractions over an extended period of time, despite prior warnings, constituting a pattern of conduct unbecoming a teacher. This pattern warrants dismissal. Notwithstanding that each charge warrants a finding of conduct unbecoming a teacher and/or just cause for dismissal, when taken together, a pattern if unbecoming emerges sufficient to warrant Me. Van Pelt's dismissal from his tenured position.

The Commissioner has confirmed that a pattern of conduct that persists over a number of years warrants dismissal, even if the individual charges standing alone would not. It cites numerous decisions in this regard.

Based on the foregoing, Respondents have failed to satisfy the standards of a profession predicated on public trust and respect. Respondents' misdeeds were not mere oversights or simple mistakes. Their misconduct go to the heart of their character and fitness.

CONTENTIONS OF RESPONDENT

Respondent argued as follows:

In the present case, the material facts as to the misconduct which occurred are not in dispute. The transcript of the chat says what it says. This is simply not a case that warrants termination of employment. The punishment that the Edison Township Board of Education ("Board") is requesting does not fit the crime.

In this matter, Maryellen Lechelt ("Ms. Lechelt"), an award-winning teacher with an unblemished employment record who in the past has received acclaim and favorable evaluations for her classroom teaching excellence, engaged in a single act of misconduct, an on-line chat with colleagues which she reasonably believed to be private, and while engaged in the chat made a few regrettably inappropriate comments. Immediately after the chat, in an informal interview with the superintendent and assistant superintendent, Ms. Lechelt expressed sincere remorse for her comments, took ownership of her conduct, and clearly manifested that she understood the gravity of her comments and their potential impact.

In New Jersey, the lead case on misconduct-based tenure charges is In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967)(copy enclosed). The TEACHNJ Act does not specify whether the Arbitrator is bound by Fulcomer or whether your award is to be governed by the classic seven tests for just cause. In Fulcomer, the Appellate Division reversed a decision terminating a teacher's employment based upon a single incident of misconduct. The Commissioner reasoned that Mr. Fulcomer engaged in the misconduct alleged, and therefore, termination of employment was warranted. The court disagreed, breaking the test down to two elements:

- Did the employee engage in conduct unbecoming a teacher?
- If so, does the misconduct proven warrant the penalty of termination of employment or some lesser penalty?

The court noted that, in assessing penalty, the person hearing and deciding the case (then, the Commissioner of Education; now, under the TEACHNJ Act, you, the arbitrator) should consider factors including:

- impact of the decision on the respondent's teaching career;
- the longevity of the respondent's career;
- the respondent's otherwise good teaching record;
- the respondent's unquestioned teaching ability;
- the absence of discipline by the school board during employment;
- the absence of past increment withholdings;
- the nature and gravity of the offenses under all the circumstances involved;
- evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation, and

- any harm or injurious effect which the teacher's conduct may have had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

The proofs in this case have shown that, during Ms. Lechelt's tenure as a teacher in the Board's employ, she was recognized by the school district and by the community as an outstanding teacher. She always earned outstanding evaluations, and the Edison Chamber of Commerce named her Edison Township's Outstanding Classroom Teacher of the Year for 2012. In the interviews with administrators and in her testimony in this case, Ms. Lechelt took full responsibility for comments she made in the Engrade Chromebook Training on October 23, 2014 ("Training"). She acknowledged that her comments at issue in this case were inappropriate and she clearly demonstrated understanding and remorse as to the impact of those comments. Ms. Lechelt had one bad morning where she had a one-time lapse in judgment.

However, it is clear that the Board's characterization of Ms. Lechelt's attitude and demeanor toward the Training, other staff and faculty members, and of her students, during the Training and in general, is grossly inaccurate. In her testimony, Ms. Lechelt has explained the comment concerning special needs students which, if read in a vacuum, could be viewed as alarming. The presenter at the Training suggested that teachers could name groups of students "low" as in "low performing." Ms. Lechelt, who is a Special Education teacher and who is the mother of a special needs child, found the presenter's use of such terms personally offensive and mocked the presenter. Overall, although Ms. Lechelt's career has not been a long one, the conduct at issue here is consistent with a youthful indiscretion. When looking at Ms. Lechelt's comments during the chat, contrary to what the Board asserts, it is obvious she was paying attention to the Training. While admittedly some of her comments were inappropriate and in poor taste, the Board greatly exaggerates the malice behind those comments. By seeking the penalty of removal, and by filing tenure charges, the Board completely ignores the positive contributions Ms. Lechelt has made to her students and to the community while in the Board's employ.

The Board attempts to paint the chat as violating the Board's healthy workplace environment and anti-harassment policies. However, the proofs in this case have shown that the chat was neither severe nor pervasive, and was not readily accessible to members of the public. The chat was only accessed and accessible through the use of unusual means by a colleague who, because she had an axe to grind, re-positioned herself and zoomed her iPhone camera in on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen to view and photograph the chat, and then had an atypical, unreasonable, and idiosyncratic reaction to the chat. In addition, no person could access the chat unless invited or if the person knew the chat room's web address.

The impact of a decision to terminate Ms. Lechelt's employment would have the net effect of ending her teaching career. The conduct at issue here simply does not warrant such a harsh penalty, particularly in view of Ms. Lechelt's unblemished employment record.

The Board and its administrators have taken a prosecutorial approach to this matter and have chosen to try to "spin" this matter into much more than it is. As the proofs show, during the EEO/AA investigation, the Board's administrators brushed aside and failed to document any mitigating circumstances, or expressions of remorse, concluding that Ms. Lechelt did not acknowledge the gravity of her misconduct, when she plainly did, and that it warranted removal of Ms. Lechelt from her teaching position. The Board has repeatedly tried to spin and exaggerate the conduct at issue, assigning the worst possible meaning to each double entendre, overstating the disruption caused by the chat, and disregarding mitigating circumstances. The Fulcomer case and the seven tests for just cause require much more.

Furthermore, the Board's efforts to terminate Ms. Lechelt's employment ignore past case law where teachers have been charged with unbecoming conduct for much more egregious conduct than Ms. Lechelt's, and yet were not terminated from their positions. All of the counts in the Board's tenure charges center upon unwise conduct occurring during a two (2) hour training session, on one (1) single day, which did not take place in the classroom, and which Ms. Lechelt mistakenly believed was part of a private on-line chat. The Board's effort to terminate Ms. Lechelt's employment, especially given the fact that the Board itself has recognized that she is an outstanding teacher, is extremely disproportionate to her conduct. Although Ms. Lechelt did make some indiscreet comments, she did not engage in conduct unbecoming that warrants the termination of her employment.

We urge the Arbitrator to review this case keeping in mind Ms. Lechelt's outstanding teaching record and unblemished disciplinary record, the first-time nature of this conduct, Ms. Lechelt's remorse and realization of the impact of her comments, and prior case law which shows the Board's effort to terminate Ms. Lechelt's employment to be excessive. The punishment does not fit the crime.

Respondent urges the Arbitrator to consider to be the most critical elements of the proofs presented:

- Ms. Lechelt is a Special Education teacher who has been employed by the Board as a full-time teacher since June 2011. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T171-21 to -23[1])

At the dinner, Dr. O'Malley and Ms. Lechelt took a picture together, and Dr. O'Malley congratulated Ms. Lechelt on her achievement. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T97-6 to 98-21; Lechelt Testimony, 3T176-9 to -23)

- The Board announced on its own website that Ms. Lechelt was named Teacher of the Year in 2012 and, in the announcement, stated how proud it was of Ms. Lechelt. (Exh. Lechelt-4; O'Malley Testimony, 3T103-24 to 104-19; Lechelt Testimony, 3T176-2 to -8)

- Ms. Lechelt was nominated for teacher of the year on one other occasion. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T175-12 to -14)

- While employed for the Board, Ms. Lechelt either began or was a part of the following school activities, usually for no additional compensation:

    - school newspaper;
    - Special Education intervention referral service;
    - anti-bullying club advisor;
    - an after-school athletic club for girls;
    - piloted I-STEM, a program designed to promote science achievement in schools;

- asked to mentor other non-tenured teachers; and
- served on several committees. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T172-17 to 173-10)
- Ms. Lechelt was particularly proud of her efforts as the founding anti-bullying club advisor and in connection with the I-STEM inclusion program because of her teaching background and her experience as a parent of a special needs child. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T172-17 to 173-10)
- During her teaching career, Ms. Lechelt has successfully taught many Special Education students. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T173-19 to 175-2)
- Ms. Lechelt is the mother of a special-needs child named Hallie who has struggled achieving success in school. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T192-10 to -18)
- Before working for the Board, Ms. Lechelt participated in graduate classes with Ms. Alysia Battista ("Ms. Battista") The graduate classes were small, seminar-style classes, where students would present and comment. The program was a small one so many of the students were in the same classes with each other. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T186-1 to -12)
- Ms. Lechelt often attended Board-sponsored trainings and/or inservice sessions where Ms. Battista was present. Often, Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Battista would publicly disagree and volunteer opposite opinions on issues being discussed. In particular, Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Battista publicly and contentiously disagreed at a language arts training, on how a language arts program should be introduced in the classrooms. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T186-13 to 187-20)
- Today's Meet is a website that offers opportunities for teachers and students to log in and set up chat rooms and speak to one another. (Deluca Testimony, 2T42-43; Lechelt Testimony, 3T181-13 to 183-4) The Board offered training on the use of the site and it encouraged teachers to use this site. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T181-13 to 183-4)

- Ms. Lechelt first became aware of Today's Meet and its capabilities when she attended training for the science curriculum on October 10, 2014. The instructor of the science curriculum training was Mr. Don Platvoet ("Mr. Platvoet"), staff development trainer for Edison Township. He sent teachers links to be used during this training, and a link to a chat room on Today's Meet was one of the links Mr. Platvoet sent to the curriculum training's participants, including Ms. Lechelt. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T181-13 to 183-4)
- During the October 10, 2014 curriculum training, Mr. Platvoet encouraged the participants to converse with one another in a chat room during his presentation. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T182-5 to -11)
- After using the Today's Meet chat room at the curriculum training, Ms. Lechelt decided to try and use it with her students as part of her curriculum. She researched the Today's Meet website, and found, under the Frequently Asked Questions section, the following statement: "Rooms are never listed publicly, so only the people who know the name of your room can join it. With Teacher Tools you can add more controls—and accountability."[2] (Exh. Lechelt-2 at pp. 74; Lechelt Testimony, 3T182-21 to 183-4) This caused Ms. Lechelt to believe that comments made in these chat rooms were private, and never accessible to the public. (Exh. Lechelt-2 at pp. 74 ; Lechelt Testimony, 3T183-4) Ms. Lechelt also believed that only users sent a link to the chat room could access chat room content. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T181-5 [2]The Board argued that the date of the online documentation suggests that it was created after Ms. Lechelt engaged in the chat. Ms. Lechelt testified without contradiction that she read such documentation before she engaged in the chat. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T180-24 to 182-20) The Board offered no proofs that an earlier version of this documentation was not available on-line during the time period that Ms. Lechelt said she read it.

- Ms. Lechelt was totally unaware that any member of the public, or any person not specifically given the specific name and URL address of the chat room, could access conversation content in a Today's Meet chat room. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T181-3 to -5)
- The Training was led by Ms. Sara Bleekinger ("Ms. Bleekinger"). Also in attendance was Mr. Tyler Van Pelt ("Mr. Van Pelt"), Ms. Maria Weber ("Ms. Weber"), and Mr. Jonathan Bauza ("Mr. Bauza"). (Deluca Testimony, 2T44-45)
- Mr. Van Pelt, through the Today's Meet chat function, invited Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber, and Mr. Bauza to log into a chat room on the Today's Meet website to engage in informal discussions during the Training. At the Training, Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber, and Mr. Bauza all logged in to the chat room in reply to Mr. Van Pelt's invitation. (Exh. Board-13)
- During the Training, Ms. Battista was also in attendance. She was seated in the fifth row of seats back from the presentation screen. She was seated directly behind Ms. Lechelt, who was in the fourth row. (Exh. Board-44; Battista Testimony, 1T62-14 to 63-9; 1T93-19 to 94-22; 1T108-19 to -21)
- The distance from Ms. Lechelt's computer screen to Ms. Battista was approximately six (6) feet. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T185-8 to -10) This proposed fact finding is contrary to Ms. Battista's testimony. Ms. Battista claimed that her seat was only a "couple of feet" away from Ms. Lechelt's computer. (Battista Testimony, 1T180-7 to 181-13) This is belied by Ms. Margaret Deluca's ("Ms. Deluca") testimony that the two tables between Ms. Battista and Ms. Lechelt's computer screen were each 18 inches wide (Deluca Testimony, 2T281-3 to -15), and Ms. Lechelt's testimony that she had approximately three feet to sit and for someone to squeeze behind her. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T184-21 to 185-5) Ms. Lechelt's testimony should be credited over Ms. Battista's on this critical issue.

- Ms. Battista had a direct line of sight to the presentation screen at the front of the room. (Board-45, pg. 2, notes of Angie McKenna interview)
- During the Training, Ms. Lechelt made some inappropriate comments while engaged in the chat with Mr. Van Pelt, Mr. Bauza, and Ms. Weber. The comments were, for the most part, double-entendre and sarcasm. Ms. Lechelt used very little profanity in the chat. (Exh. Board-13, Lechelt Testimony, 3T180-15 to -23)
- At some point early in the Training, Ms. Lechelt turned in her seat. When she did, Ms. Battista saw comments on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen which offended Ms. Battista. (Battista Testimony, 1T108-3)
- In order to view the presentation screen that Ms. Bleekinger was using, Ms. Battista had to lean slightly to the right. Instead, she chose to reposition herself to the left to monitor and photograph the chat. (Battista Testimony, 1T126-2 to 127-24)
- More specifically, despite having a direct line of sight to the presenter, Ms. Battista:
- took her iPhone out;
- repositioned herself to the left;
- moved forward towards Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Lechelt's computer;
- zoomed in on Ms. Lechelt's screen; and
- took several pictures of the screen. (Exh. Board-7, pp. 2-9; Battista Testimony,1T108-7; 1T126-2 to 127-24)
- A logical inference can and should be drawn that Ms. Battista did all of these things to monitor and photograph the chat on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen.
- During her presentation in the Training, Ms. Bleekinger was using terms such as "low" and "middle" to describe groups of students by intellectual ability. Ms. Lechelt thought about her own child and was offended that Ms. Bleekinger used such labels and that Ms. Bleekinger said words to the effect that you can label the students and they'll never know what you are calling them. In the chat, Ms. Lechelt sarcastically referred to "low" kids in response to and as a way to mock Ms. Bleekinger using these terms. When Ms. Lechelt used the terms "morons" and "tart cart" in the chat, Ms. Lechelt was using the most ridiculous and offensive terms for Special Education students she could think as a logical extension of Ms. Bleekinger's usage of offensive terms, and was suggesting that Ms. Bleekinger might use such terms later in her (Ms. Bleekinger's) presentation. (Deluca Testimony, 2T97-12 to -17; Lechelt Testimony, 3T189-20 to 190-19; 3T192-10 to -18; 3T192-22 to 193-6)

- Ms. Lechelt's intention was to mock Ms. Bleekinger, not to mock special needs students, including her own daughter. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T189-10 to -16)
- Ms. Lechelt's comments regarding the "backchannel" is related to a feature on the Today's Meet website that provides opportunities for chat room meetings and exchanges between teachers and/or between teachers and students. (Exh. Lechelt-2, pg. 5; Lechelt Testimony, 3T266-18 to 267-1)
- Despite Ms. Battista's perception, Ms. Lechelt in no way personally attacked her in the chat. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T189-7 to -9)
- Ms. Battista's interpretation of Respondent's comments made in the chat room were idiosyncratic and erroneous. For example:

Ms. Battista reported that at some point that Respondents were making comments about her. However, not one comment in the chat refers to Ms. Battista. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T189-7 to -9) Ms. Battista reported that Ms. Lechelt's use of the word "turtle" referred to male genitalia. (Battista Testimony, 1T136-14 to 137-21) However, Ms. Lechelt's use of this word referred to Dr. O'Malley's personal appearance. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T280-25 to 281-4)

Ms. Battista quoted Respondents using the words "terrible" and "useless." However, nowhere in the entire chat do any of Respondents use these words. (Exh. Board-13) Ms. Battista was particularly offended because she thought the chat was directed specifically at her. (Deluca Testimony, 2T32-1 to -15) Ms. Battista had an idiosyncratic reaction to what she saw on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen. (Deluca Testimony, 2T286-21 to -23; Exh. Board-45, Notes of Angie McKenna interview, pg. 2)

Dr. O'Malley met with Ms. Lechelt on October 24, 2014, the day after the Training. Ms.Tara Beams, Assistant Superintendent ("Ms. Beams"), and Mr. Jeff Bowden, Edison Township Education Association President ("Mr. Bowden"), were also in attendance. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T27-24 to 28-1; 3T105-21 to 106-2; Lechelt Testimony, 3T195-9 to -15)

- Before speaking with Ms. Lechelt and hearing her explanations concerning the chat, Dr. O'Malley had already decided to suspend Ms. Lechelt. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T106-3 to -15; Lechelt Testimony, 3T195-17 to -19; 3T199-8 to -10)
- During the meeting with Dr. O'Malley, Ms. Lechelt was visibly upset and terrified while the meeting was proceeding. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T197-23 to 198-13, 3T198-21)
- After seeing Ms. Lechelt was visibly upset and crying, Dr. O'Malley asked Mr. Bowden to get her a tissue and asked Ms. Lechelt "Are you done?" (O'Malley Testimony, 3T109- 18 to -22; Lechelt Testimony, 3T198-4 to -5)
- During her interview with Dr. O'Malley, Ms. Lechelt never had the opportunity to fully explain the context and meaning of the terms she used in the chat. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T197-7 to -8)
- Dr. O'Malley reviewed the chat transcript at least ten (10) times. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T72-20 to 73-4)

- Dr. O'Malley felt personally attacked and hurt by the chat comments. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T24-14 to -17; 3T40-19 to 41-3; 3T106-25 to 107-3)
- Ms. Deluca, the Board's Chief Academic Officer, met with Ms. Battista on October 23, 2014, after the Training (Deluca Testimony, 2T31-6)
- Ms. Battista repeatedly told Ms. Deluca that she was in fear of it becoming known that she reported the Respondents. (1T81-21 to -23) Nevertheless, Ms. Deluca sent Ms. Battista an Affirmative Action Report form to Ms. Battista and told Ms. Battista to fill it out. (Deluca Testimony, 2T38-9 to -15; 2T229-6 to -12)
- Ms. Deluca was chosen by Dr. O'Malley to conduct the investigation into Ms. Battista's complaints concerning Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Weber, Mr. Bauza, and Ms. Lechelt's conduct during the Training. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T21-6 to -25)
- Ms. Deluca is also the Board's Affirmative Action Officer. In this role, part of her duty is to assure that all district staff receive training on affirmative action and sexual harassment policies. (Deluca Testimony, 2T20-22 to -24; 2T214-15 to -23)
- Ms. Deluca has a very close professional relationship with Dr. O'Malley. Ms. Deluca worked under Dr. O'Malley when both worked at the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, and when Dr. O'Malley became the Board's superintendent, he recruited Ms. Deluca to work for the Board. (Deluca Testimony, 2T255-56; O'Malley Testimony, 3T11-2 to -25; 3T21-25 to 22-2; 3T95-11 to -18)

In the chat transcript, eight (8) screen names are attributed to all of the comments in the chat room. The following is a list of the screen names and the participant who used each name:

- "tvp"-Mr. Van Pelt (Deluca Testimony, 2T190-91);
- "mamalechelt"-Ms. Lechelt (Id.);
- "jb"-Mr. Bauza (Id.);

- "trish"- Ms. Weber (Id.);
- "Captain"-(Ms. Deluca never determined who this was) (Id.);
- "lol"- (Ms. Deluca never determined who this was) (Id.);
- "docdick"- (Ms. Deluca never determined who this was) (Id.), and
- "holla"- (Ms. Deluca never determined who this was) (Id.).
- During her investigation, Ms. Deluca spoke to Ms. Battista, questioned the chat room participants who she could identify, and questioned all other teachers in attendance at the Training. (Deluca Testimony, 2T52-9 to -15)
- Ms. Deluca used the web address she was provided by Dr. O'Malley to access the chat transcript. (Deluca Testimony, 2T44-4 to -5; 2T46-11 to -15)
- Ms. Deluca took handwritten notes when conducting the interviews. Subsequently, she made typed notes of her interviews while reviewing her written notes. After completing her typed notes, she discarded her hand written notes. (Deluca Testimony, 2T34-9 to -13; 2T80-1 to -2; 2T194-20 to -24) Ms. Deluca received no training or instruction as to whether and how to maintain these primary materials. (Id. at 2T193-10 to -14)
- As part of her investigation, Ms. Deluca interviewed twenty-three (23) other people other than Ms. Battista and the three (3) respondents who attended the Training. Besides Ms. Battista, no other person who attended the Training complained of Ms. Lechelt's conduct being disruptive, offensive, or harassing in anyway.[3] (Deluca Testimony, 2T53-19 to -21; 2T170-24 to 171-24; 2T280-4 to -6)
- Besides Ms. Battista, only one other person who attended the Training claimed to have seen

[3]Tellingly, the Board initially chose to mark only part of its investigative file, omitting the notes of the interviews of others present at the training. Only after an objection was made to the proffer and admission of partial documentation did the Board mark this portion of its investigative file as Exhibit Board-45. The reason is clear. Exhibit Board-45 points to the fact that the chat did not generally disrupt the Training, undercuts the claim that the chat constituted severe and pervasive harassment, and also points to the idiosyncratic nature of Ms. Battista's reaction to the chat. See Point I.A.6. of Law and Argument below.

or viewed in any way the contents of the chat at issue. (Deluca Testimony, 2T53-15 to -16)

Besides Ms. Battista, no other teacher, staff member (excluding the administration), has told the Board and/or its administrators that they fear they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and/or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them, or about others. (Deluca Testimony, 2T203-10 to -20)

- Besides Ms. Battista, no teacher, staff member (excluding the administration), parent, student, and/or member of the public has reported accessing the Today's Meet chat-room transcript manifesting the chat-room discussion Ms. Lechelt engaged in during the Training. (Deluca Testimony, 2T185-19 to -25)
- Most people whom Ms. Deluca interviewed stated that the atmosphere and noise in the Training was similar to other inservices and/or workshops. (Exh. Board-45)
- Ms. Angie McKenna ("Ms. McKenna"), who sat directly on Ms. Battista's left at the Training, also saw a few inappropriate words on Ms. Lechelt's screen. However, unlike Ms. Battista, she chose to look away and focus on Ms. Bleekinger's presentation. (Deluca Testimony, 2T53-2 to -11; Exh. Board-45, pg. 2)
- According to Ms. McKenna, Ms. Battista was "consumed" by the chat, and was the only person present at the Training who was "consumed" by the chat. (Exh. Board-45, Notes of Angie McKenna interview, pg. 2; Battista Testimony, 1T102-14 to -15; Deluca Testimony, 2T171-12 to -16; 2T291-8 to -20)
- In the course of her investigation, Ms. Deluca spoke with the attorney from Engrade, the company that assigned Ms. Bleekinger to conduct the Training. Engrade's attorney spoke with Ms. Bleekinger, and told Ms. Deluca that Ms. Bleekinger was not disrupted in any way during the Training, and/or was not aware of any disruption at the Training. (Deluca Testimony, 2T173-1 to -2; 2T243-19 to -25)

- Ms. Deluca never timed the actual keyboarding time Ms. Lechelt spent actually typing comments during the Training. (Deluca Testimony, 2T253-9 to -14)
- Ms. Deluca's report contained no factual findings and/or no conclusions she reached after interviewing those she deemed were the relevant witnesses. (Exh. Board-26)
- Ms. Deluca's report fails to indicate what factors she took into consideration when deciding to recommend considering the "most severe consequences" for Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Weber, Mr. Bauza, and Ms. Lechelt. (Exh. Board-26)
- Ms. Deluca's typed notes inaccurately described what Ms. Battista was wearing during the Training. In her typed notes of her October 30-31, 2014 interview of Ms. Battista, Ms. Deluca stated that Ms. Battista told her that she was wearing a red dress in the Training. However, Ms. Battista was wearing a red sweater. (Battista Testimony 1T130-8 to -9; Deluca Testimony, 2T269-14 to 270-17) This is material because Ms. Battista erroneously thought that Ms. Lechelt and others were talking about her in the chat when they referred to a woman in the second row wearing a red T-shirt even though she was sitting in the fifth row, wearing a sweater. (Deluca Testimony, 2T265-7 to 267-3)
- Ms. Deluca's typed notes are not complete. When Ms. Deluca asked Ms. Lechelt at the end of the meeting if Ms. Lechelt had anything to add, Ms. Deluca snapped her pen down on the table, and stopped writing, as Ms. Lechelt continued to explain the context and meaning of her comments and express her remorse, but Ms. Deluca wrote none of the comments down. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T200-21 to 201-17)
- During her interview with Ms. Deluca, Ms. Lechelt never had the opportunity to fully explain the context and meaning of the terms she used in the chat. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T205-13 to 209-16)

- When recommending the "most severe consequences" for Ms. Lechelt and the other Respondents, Ms. Deluca never looked at Ms. Lechelt's personnel file to determine what kind of past discipline record Ms. Lechelt had. (Deluca Testimony, 2T253-17 to -18; contra Fulcomer and the seven tests for just cause, see Law and Argument below)
- Ms. Deluca's interviewed Ms. Lechelt approximately three (3) weeks after the Training. (Lechelt Testimony 3T199-11 to -15) Ms. Deluca's report fails to mention that, during Ms. Lechelt's interview:

Ms. Lechelt stated many times that she thought the chat was private (Deluca Testimony, 2T277-6 to -10);

- Ms. Lechelt mentioned many times that her comments were misguided jokes (Deluca Testimony, 2T97-12 to -17; 2T99-1 to -2; 2T104-18; 2T275-16 to -18; 2T278-16 to -17; 2T278-79; Lechelt Testimony, 3T200-16);
- Ms. Lechelt admitted that her comments were inappropriate (Deluca Testimony, 2T128-5 to -7; 2T275-16 to -18);
- Ms. Lechelt admitted that she used bad judgment (Deluca Testimony, 2T104-20);
- Ms. Lechelt stated that she never would waste time reading magazines when she is supposed to be teaching (Lechelt Testimony, 3T176-24 to 177-23);
- Ms. Lechelt stated that she never has, nor ever would use the same comments while working with students (Lechelt Testimony, 3T197-8 to -17); and
- Ms. Lechelt stated she did not seriously believe that one's appearance or sexual favors were related to the Board's personnel decisions (Exh. Board-15, pg. 3; Deluca Testimony, 2T75-9 to -24)
- When writing her report, Ms. Deluca painted Ms. Lechelt's comments with the most harassing interpretations when the comments could have had several other equally valid interpretations that were not harassing. (Deluca Testimony, 2T273-6 to 274-16; Lechelt Testimony, 3T205-18 to 209-17)

- Ms. Deluca's report fails to explain why there were four (4) chat room participants' conduct being investigated, but there were eight (8) chat room screen names seen posting comments during the chat. Ms. Deluca's report fails to match each participant with each screen name used, and does not explain which person(s) in the training used the chat room names "Captain", "lol", "docdick", and "holla." (Exh. Board-26)
- Ms. Deluca was supposed to investigate whether Respondents violated the Board's affirmative action policies. On her own, without the Board's direction, Ms. Deluca, in her report, suggested additional Board policies that she felt Respondents had violated. (Deluca Testimony, 2T200-20 to 202-02)
- Several principals from several Edison schools interviewed several teachers who were present at the Training and were not interviewed by Ms. Deluca. Not one teacher reported any kind of disruption at the Training. (Deluca Testimony, 2T51-1 to -25; 2T172-1 to -12)
- In order for any member of the administration, staff member, student, and/or member of the public to have access to the chat, unless they were specifically invited by email, they had to have the web address. If they did not have the web address, they could not access the chat transcript. (Deluca Testimony, 2T165-8 to -9; 2T198-13 to -24)
- Ms. Lechelt's remarks concerning sitting in the back of her class and reading magazines while she is supposed to be teaching, and having chats at other trainings, was an awkward attempt at humor and was a joke. As her prior record shows, Ms. Lechelt never has, nor ever will, sit in the back of a class and read magazines while she is supposed to be teaching her students. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T176-24 to 177-23)
- Ms. Lechelt expressed sincere remorse for her comments made in the chat room during the training. She expressed her remorse including, but not limited to during her interview with Ms. Deluca, her interview with Dr. O'Malley, and during her testimony. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T200-15; 3T202-4 to -5)

- Ms. Deluca expressed the sentiment that Ms. Lechelt failed to appreciate the gravity of this situation. (Deluca Testimony, 2T127-23 to 128-21) This claim is directly and specifically undercut by the testimony of Ms. Lechelt who testified without contradiction that at the time of her interview by Ms. Deluca she authorized her counsel to make a settlement offer to the Board's representatives. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T208-7 to -21)
- As to penalty, Ms. Lechelt has testified that a one-hundred twenty (120) day suspension would cost her approximately $22,000 in salary. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T210-12 to -13; Exh. Board-27, at pp. 75-76) This testimony is uncontested.
- If the arbitrator were to direct that Ms. Lechelt be suspended without pay from December 16, 2014 until the end of the 2014-2015 school year, this will cost her approximately $38,000.00 in salary. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T213-20 to -22; Exh. Board-27, at pp. 75-76) This testimony is uncontested.
- Based upon past contracts, Ms. Lechelt's salary increments for the 2015-2016 school year will be approximately $2,000.00. A one-time increment withholding would cost Ms. Lechelt approximately $2,000.00. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T214-8 to -9) This testimony is uncontested.
- Provided that the arbitrator returns Ms. Lechelt to work and if Ms. Lechelt were to teach an additional 22 years and then retire, a permanent increment withholding would cost Ms. Lechelt an additional approximately $40,000.00 in salary, and this loss would continue into retirement. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T214-11 to -17) This testimony is also uncontested.
- Ms. Lechelt is not disputing the Board's assertion that she participated in the chat and made inappropriate comments. However, the Fulcomer case and the seven tests for just cause demand that a separate determination be made as to whether Ms. Lechelt's employment should be terminated, or whether a lesser penalty is appropriate. In addition, New Jersey case law under the TEACHNJ Act, and the law preceding the TEACHNJ Act (the Tenured Employees Hearing Act ("TEHA")), provides several examples of public employees charged with conduct unbecoming for actions significantly more egregious and offensive than Ms. Lechelt's conduct, and which did not result in termination of employment. Given the context in which Ms. Lechelt's comments were made, the environment the comments were made in and who they were addressed to, and the relevant case law, it is clear that Ms. Lechelt's conduct is not egregious enough to warrant the harsh penalty of termination of employment.

A petitioning board of education has the burden of proving tenure charges brought against a respondent by the preponderance of the competent and credible evidence. Conduct unbecoming a public employee has been described as an "elastic" phrase that includes "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency" of the public entity or "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for ... [public] employees and confidence in the operation of ... [public] services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998); In re: Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). In the context of a school tenure case, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re: Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974).

As noted from the inception of this hearing, Fulcomer, supra, is the foundational case under New Jersey tenure charge case law. It sets forth the approach which finders of fact in tenure charge hearings must follow when deciding a tenure charge case.

After the State Board upheld the Commissioner's decision as to penalty, the teacher appealed to the Superior Court, Appellate Division. The court upheld the unbecoming conduct decision, but overturned the Commissioner's decision as to penalty. In doing so, the court explained:

However, in our opinion the Commissioner erred in failing to render an independent decision as to the penalty to be imposed based on the evidence before him and in permitting the local board to exercise this function. The Commissioner also erred in restricting his function to an appellate review as to whether the local board's determination was clearly unreasonable, arbitrary or unlawful. This restricted interpretation of the duties imposed upon him by the Tenure Employees Hearing Act, we believe, resulted in prejudice to the rights of the appellant and requires that the matter be remanded to the Commissioner for decision as provided herein . . . The teacher is entitled to an independent determination as to the scope of penalty based on all the evidence presented against him.

The court then applied the above standards to the circumstances of the case. Citing the teacher's unblemished prior disciplinary record and his outstanding teaching evaluations, the court determined that termination of employment was "an unduly harsh penalty" under these circumstances.

Each of the Fulcomer standards support the conclusion that you should not terminate Ms. Lechelt's employment and that you should impose a lesser penalty:

1. Impact of the Decision on Ms. Lechelt's Teaching Career

If Ms. Lechelt's employment is terminated, under New Jersey law, the Board is required to report the termination to the State Board of Examiners for possible revocation of Ms. Lechelt's certificates. N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-4.5. This would effectively end a promising teaching career for Ms. Lechelt, who has consistently proven to be an excellent teacher and has demonstrated her ability in providing an outstanding education for her students. She has had superior ratings in her observations, and she has won awards for her teaching. This factor weighs heavily in Ms. Lechelt's favor and supports the conclusion that her employment should not be terminated.

2. The Length of Ms. Lechelt's Employment with the Board

Although at the time of the Training Ms. Lechelt was into her fourth (4^{th}) year as a teacher for the Board, Fulcomer shows that the length of her career is not dispositive and does not overshadow other factors which clearly weigh in Ms. Lechelt's favor. At the time of his tenure hearing, Mr. Fulcomer was a teacher for only seven (7) years. However, the court determined that Mr. Fulcomer should be retained as a teacher. In this case, similar to Fulcomer, given the fact that all of the Fulcomer factors weigh heavily in Ms. Lechelt's favor, length of teaching career should not pre-dominate over the other factors.

3. Ms. Lechelt's Impeccable Teaching Record

Not only has Ms. Lechelt never had an increment withheld, she has never before been disciplined, formally or informally. It is unquestioned and unchallenged that Ms. Lechelt's teaching record prior to the Training was impeccable. Not only did Ms. Lechelt testify that she had never been disciplined in any manner for any kind of misconduct, Dr. O'Malley testified to her outstanding teaching record as well. (O'Malley Testimony, 3T100-7 to 103-15) The only type of recognition Ms. Lechelt received in her employ for the Board was positive recognition when, as stated above, she was named Teacher of the Year for 2012. Again, this factor weighs heavily in Ms. Lechelt's favor and supports the conclusion that her employment should not be terminated.

4. Ms. Lechelt's Unquestioned Teaching Ability

Besides the aforementioned Teacher of the Year award, Ms. Lechelt's outstanding teaching ability can be seen in a number of ways. Not only have Ms. Lechelt's ratings in her observations and evaluations always been outstanding, her supervisors often cited her as the model example for other teachers to follow. Ms. Lechelt's immediate supervisors even recognized this, as she was asked to serve as a mentor to other teachers who were struggling. A teacher who was not outstanding would not be asked to serve in such a role

5. Ms. Lechelt's Spotless Prior Disciplinary Record with No Increment Withholdings

As to this Fulcomer factor, it must be stated that, once again, this factor weighs heavily in

Ms. Lechelt's favor and supports the conclusion that her employment should not be terminated.

6. The Nature and Gravity of Ms. Lechelt's Offense under All Circumstances Involved

As to the nature and gravity of the offense, Ms. Lechelt's comments were made during a morning inservice training, and did not occur in the classroom with students present. No comments were ever made to any student. No comments were made to any other person besides the three other adults who were involved in the chat.

Under the New Jersey case law for hostile environment sexual harassment and the Board's own policies, the Board is hard pressed to contend that, under all of the circumstances, Ms. Lechelt's conduct amounts to sexual harassment. The lead case on sexual harassment in New Jersey is Lehmann v. Toys 'R' Us, Inc., 132 N.J. 587 (1993)(copy enclosed). The Supreme Court in Lehmann set forth the elements that a plaintiff must prove in a New Jersey sexual harassment case. Those standards have not been met here.

In its tenure charges and in the testimony of its witnesses, the Board repeatedly claims that Ms. Lechelt sexually harassed Ms. Battista, created a substantial disruption of the Training, and made others fear of being harassed. A careful review of the proofs in this matter demonstrates that no harassment occurred because the conduct was neither severe nor pervasive nor was it conduct that would make a reasonable woman believe that the working environment is hostile or abusive.

The tenure charges charge independent violation of the Board's Sexual Harassment and Healthy Workplace Environment policies (Exhs. Board-21 and Board 25). At hearing, the Board argued that the conduct was both severe and pervasive but attempted to read the "reasonable woman" element out of the policies. However, the "reasonable person" element is clearly an articulated part of the Healthy Workplace Environment policy. (Exh. Board 25 at pg. 1, ¶ 2, line 4) Moreover, notwithstanding the contention that the reasonable woman element is not present in the Board's Sexual Harassment policy, the source law cited as the basis of the policy, 29 C.F.R. §1604.11 clearly includes the element of reasonableness and provides "(3) such conduct has the purpose or effect of unreasonably interfering with an individual's work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment." This reasonableness element is plainly incorporated into the Board's policy (Exh. Board-21 at pg. 1, ¶ 2).

On the issue of severity or pervasiveness, the conduct at issue was neither severe nor pervasive. As to severity, the contents of the chat were not severe. The comments were sarcastic, filled with innuendos and double-entendres (Exh. Board-13). The fact that Ms. Deluca had to resort to Google to find the meaning of several of the comments (Deluca Testimony, 2T77-19 to -21) makes clear the fact that the comments were not particularly graphic or severe. There are very few curse words used, there is very little discussion about sex, and there is very little discussion concerning body parts, none of it graphic in nature (Exh. Board-13).

On the issue of "pervasiveness," at hearing the other parties often argued the issue of "expectation of privacy." These arguments miss the point. The true issue is one of pervasiveness. To be pervasive, the conduct must be, literally, "existing in or spreading through every part of something." http://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/pervasive This means that it must be generally known and public. In this case, the conduct was not generally known and public. Other than the participants, only Ms. Battista and Ms. McKenna were aware of the existence of the chat.

On the issue of "unreasonable interference" with work or of whether a "reasonable person" would view the working environment as hostile and abusive, the atypical reaction of Ms. Battista is critical. It is important to bear in mind the extraordinary lengths Ms. Battista had to resort to in order to see and photograph the chat on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen. Ms. McKenna, a neutral third-party witness, who was sitting next to Ms. Battista at the Training, told Ms. Deluca at her interview, that Ms. Battista had a direct line of sight to Ms. Bleekinger and the presentation board. Therefore, there was no need for Ms. Battista to adjust herself in any way to see Ms. Bleekinger's presentation.

In spite of this, Ms. Battista, who was, as Ms. McKenna described, "consumed" by the chat (Exh. Board-45 at p. 2), took out her iPhone, re-positioned herself to the left, leaned forward toward Ms. Lechelt's and her computer, aimed her iPhone at Ms. Lechelt's computer screen, zoomed in on the screen and took several pictures (Exh. Board-7, pp 2-9). This clearly shows that Ms. Battista had to make special efforts to be disrupted by and to photograph what was on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen.

When analyzing the other proofs against Ms. Battista's testimony, it is clear she did not testify truthfully as to the lengths to which she went to view and photograph the chat. One striking example is when she described the distance between where she was sitting and Ms. Lechelt's computer screen. Ms. Battista stated, on direct and on cross-examination, that she was a couple of feet from Ms. Lechelt's screen (Battista Testimony, 1T180-7 to 181-13). However, this is physically impossible. As Exh. Board-7, pg. 1 shows, there is someone sitting immediately to Ms. Battista's left. If Ms. Battista was only two (2) feet away from the computer screen as she contends, in order to see the screen around Ms. Lechelt, given the angle that she took the pictures in Exh. Board-7, pg. 2-9, Ms. Battista would either be sitting in her neighbor's lap, or Ms. Battista's neighbor would have had to move from his/her seat. There is no testimony that either of these things took place. However, if the computer screen was significantly further away than two (2) feet away, then Ms. Battista could have done what she testified she did. In other words, she could have re-positioned herself to the left, leaned forward, zoomed in on the screen, and took her pictures.

Ms. Lechelt's testimony on this matter is much more credible. Ms. Lechelt testified that the tables, by themselves, were at least two (2) feet wide. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T184-8 to 185-5, accord Deluca Testimony, 2T281-3 to -15) Given the fact that there was room between the tables for people in Ms. Lechelt's row to sit and squeeze behind the people who were seated (Lechelt Testimony, 3T184-8 to 185-5), and given Ms. Lechelt's unchallenged testimony that her computer was at the end of her table, there had to have been at least five (5) feet from where Ms. Battista was sitting, and where Ms. Lechelt's screen was.

It is a simple case of common sense and geometry. If Ms. Battista were as close to Ms. Lechelt's computer screen as she claimed she was, the photos would have been taken from a much more acute angle. The only logical conclusion to be reached is that Ms. Battista exaggerated how close she was to Ms. Lechelt's computer screen. Ms. Battista was further away from Ms. Lechelt's screen when she took the photographs. Therefore, Ms. Battista had to zoom her phone in to specifically focus on viewing the content of the chat and to photograph it.

To paraphrase Judge Garibaldi in Lehmann, Ms. Battista is the hypersensitive employee who had an idiosyncratic reaction to what she saw on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen. Not only did Ms. Battista have to go through extraordinary steps to view and take pictures of Ms. Lechelt's computer screen when having a direct line of sight to Ms. Bleekinger, in light of Ms. McKenna's reaction to the chat, Ms. Battista's reaction was unreasonable from its inception. The Board's own interviews clearly show that, despite the Board's claims, there was no general disruption of the Training. Furthermore, while Ms. Lechelt acknowledged that her comments were inappropriate and unprofessional, placed in the proper context, the conduct is not as severe and pervasive as the Board suggests.

Ms. Battista's response to the chat was plainly unreasonable. Ms. McKenna, sitting directly to Ms. Battista's left, also saw some of the chat, but only after Ms. Battista asked her to look at the screen. When Ms. McKenna did look at the screen, her reaction was almost polar opposite to Ms. Battista's "consumed" reaction: Ms. McKenna saw the words, chose to look away, and focus her attention on Ms. Bleekinger. (Deluca Testimony, 2T53-2 to -11) Ms. Battista, as stated above, instead chose to re-position herself to take pictures of Ms. Lechelt's computer screen. During the Training, Ms. McKenna was the reasonable woman–Ms. Battista was not.

The non-public, non-disruptive nature of the chat is borne out by Ms. Deluca's interviews of the other attendees at the Training which the Board initially chose to exclude from the record when it initially moved only portions of its investigative materials into the record. Other than Ms. Battista, not one person said he or she believed that Ms. Lechelt's conduct disrupted them. Other than Ms. Battista, not one person stated that his or her work environment was hostile or abusive.

Therefore, the Board's claim that Ms. Lechelt's conduct violated these policies is unfounded. Given the absence of severe or pervasive conduct and given Ms. Battista's unreasonable and idiosyncratic reaction, it is clear that Ms. Lechelt did not sexually harass Ms. Battista or anyone else. This Fulcomer factor, once again, weighs heavily in Ms. Lechelt's favor and supports the conclusion that her employment should not be terminated.

7. Evidence of Provocation, Extenuation, and/or Aggravation

Many of Ms. Lechelt's comments were in response to inappropriate comments made by Ms. Bleekinger during the Training. During the hearing, Ms. Lechelt testified that Ms. Bleekinger was frequently using terms such as "lows" to describe groups of students. As Ms. Lechelt memorably stated in her testimony, she was offended by the usage of that term, because of the struggles her daughter Hallie experiences in school. Her "tart cart" comment in the chat was an attempt to mock Ms. Bleekinger for using these offensive terms, in a "what offensive term will she use next" manner.

8. The Lack of Any Harm or Injurious Effect Which Ms. Lechelt's Conduct Had on the Maintenance of Discipline and the Proper Administration of the School System

There is no evidence that Ms. Lechelt's continued employment in Edison will have any kind of negative effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system. Ms. Deluca and Dr. O'Malley both testified in conclusory terms that they do not feel comfortable returning Ms. Lechelt to her position because the Board has fielded complaints about Ms. Lechelt. However, it is the Board's burden to prove this, and the Board has failed to enter one single document into evidence which would show some kind of public perception problem or problems with overwhelming parent concern if Ms. Lechelt were to remain employed.

C. Applying the Seven Tests for Just Cause

Applying the above-stated just cause principles to this case, the testimony and proofs clearly show that, at the very least, the Board has failed to provide satisfactory answers to questions 4, 5, and 7 of the seven tests for just cause. The Board's investigation was not conducted fairly and objectively, and it lacked substantial proof that Ms. Lechelt was "guilty as charged."

The testimony and proofs show the Board investigated this incident with the result being pre-determined. Ms. Deluca interviewed twenty-three (23) other staff members who attended the Training. She also spoke to Engrade's attorney, who spoke to Ms. Bleekinger. In addition, principals at several Edison schools conducted their own interviews. Out of all of these people who were interviewed, the only person who said there was a disruption during the Training was Ms. Battista. Yet, despite at least twenty-three (23) other people contradicting her by stating the atmosphere in the Training was the same as any other training, the Board decided there was a disruption.

Before the Training, she received an email invitation from Mr. Van Pelt to join him in a Today's Meet chat room during the Training. Once engaged in the chat, Ms. Lechelt knew there were no students in the chat room, and thought the chat was just between her and her adult friends. The chat Respondents engaged in was immature and inappropriate. However, during the Training, Ms. Bleekinger used terms for students that, as stated previously, greatly offended Ms. Lechelt.

While Ms. Lechelt's explanations in no way diminish her lack of judgment, once again Ms. Deluca omitted these explanations from her notes and report, and by doing so, her and Dr. O'Malley failed to consider any evidence of mitigation. That kind of investigation is grossly inadequate and completely improper.

As indicated above, Dr. O'Malley seeks her dismissal. New Jersey case law provides numerous examples of public employees charged with conduct unbecoming for conduct much more egregious and serious than Ms. Lechelt's conduct, but yet were not fired from their tenured positions. It is clear that, when comparing the circumstances of Ms. Lechelt's conduct and the comments she made, they pale in comparison to those of some of the teachers who were the subject of cited cases.

E. Cost Analysis of Potential Penalties

Ms. Lechelt testified without contradiction that a one-time increment withholding would cost her approximately $2,000 based upon the current guides. Ms. Lechelt testified that, based upon the 2013-14 salary guide, if she were to experience a permanent increment withholding, she would lose approximately $40,000 in salary over the course of her career due to the lost increment.

In addition, Ms. Lechelt provided uncontested testimony as to cost of the 120-day suspension from December 16, 2014 until April 15, 2015. She has already lost $22,000 in salary as a result of the 120-day unpaid suspension this year. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T210-12 to -13)

Ms. Lechelt provided uncontested testimony that if she was returned to her employment, but suspended without pay for a longer period of time from December 16, 2014 until the end of the 2014-2015 school year, based on the 2013-14 Salary Guide, her total loss in salary would be approximately $38,000. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T213-20 to -22) If the Arbitrator were to impose a suspension from December 16, 2014 until the end of the 2014-2015 school year and a one-time increment withholding, Ms. Lechelt would lose approximately $40,000 in salary. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T214-11 to -17) If Ms. Lechelt were to be suspended from December 16, 2014 until the end of the 2014-2015 school year and further penalized with a permanent increment withholding, she would lose approximately $78,000 in salary over her career.

In response to anticipated Board argument, Ms. Lechelt Is sincerely remorseful for her conduct. She has credibly taken full responsibility for her chat room comments.

The Board has claimed that Ms. Lechelt is not truly remorseful for her conduct in the chat. The Board has attempted to show this by alleging that Ms. Lechelt's did not have a remorseful attitude during her interviews, which it claims shows she did not understand the gravity of her conduct. However, when examining the proofs, it is clear that Ms. Lechelt expressed remorse for her comments at every step of this tenure charge process, from the day she was interviewed by Dr. O'Malley until the day she testified at hearing. She testified sincerely and honestly about how remorseful she was, demonstrated that she fully understood the impact of her comments and how they could be construed, and credibly stated that she would never repeat this conduct again. Nothing in Ms. Lechelt's teaching career or in her testimony suggests that there will be a re-occurrence of this conduct.

Additionally, Dr. O'Malley testified that, in his meeting with Ms. Lechelt, she began crying. However, he called her tears "crocodile tears." (O'Malley Testimony, 3T29, 11-20) Ms. Lechelt, during her testimony, said she began crying in Dr. O'Malley's office when she thought about the struggles her own special needs daughter experiences. Similarly, when Ms. Lechelt began talking about her daughter at the hearing, she began crying. Despite Dr. O'Malley's perspective, the anguish Ms. Lechelt feels when she considers her daughter's issues is real. This also strongly indicates the sincerity of Ms. Lechelt's remorse.

In its cross-examination, the Board tried to paint Ms. Lechelt's remorse as insincere by questioning her about her statements in her Answer to Tenure Charges and her responses to the Board's Interrogatories. The Board argues that because Ms. Lechelt did not admit to violating Board policies, she is somehow insincere in her remorse and does not understand the gravity of her actions.

The words her lawyers write in legal documents are not the measure of Ms. Lechelt's remorse. At hearing, she testified convincingly that she regretted her conduct during the Training, she understood how her comments could impact others, she understood that her comments were inappropriate, irresponsible, and could be construed as offensive, and that she would never repeat the same conduct again. You saw her testify; you can measure the sincerity of her testimony and her expressions of remorse. Moreover, the Board's argument ignores Ms. Lechelt's consistent expression of genuine remorse for her actions. She expressed remorse during her interview with Ms. Deluca, her interview with Dr. O'Malley, and most prominently, in her testimony.

It is unquestioned that besides one ill-advised morning, as noted above, Ms. Lechelt has dedicated herself to helping children with special needs and to improving the lives of all of her students.

Given New Jersey case law providing that the expression of remorse is a mitigating factor and given that Ms. Lechelt has never been disciplined for any reason prior to this single incident, you should not terminate Ms. Lechelt from her tenured teaching position.

At hearing, the Board's counsel alluded to legal principles articulated in In re: Tenure Hearing of Jennifer O'Brien, State-Operated School District of the City of Patterson, Passaic County, OAL Docket No. EDU 5600-11, Agency Ref. No. 108-5/11, 2011 WL 5429055 (Oct. 28, 2011), aff'd by Comm'r (Dec 12, 2011)(copy enclosed). However, O'Brien is not in any way similar to Ms. Lechelt's case, nor controlling of this case's outcome. In O'Brien, a teacher was charged with conduct unbecoming for posting on a publicly-available Facebook page that she was "not a teacher-she was a warden for future criminals!" among other disparaging comments about her students. Ibid. Here, the ALJ cites the primary reason for recommending termination of employment–that the teacher was not remorseful.

However, as the proofs and evidence shows, Ms. Lechelt's case cannot be more inapposite to O'Brien. As stated above, Ms. Lechelt expressed sincere remorse for her conduct and clearly understands the impact her conduct could have on the school and the Edison community. Ms. Lechelt has consistently expressed this remorse, beginning with the EEO/AA investigation conducted by Ms. Deluca, and continuing to her testimony at the tenure charge hearings. There is nothing in Ms. Lechelt's past history that would even remotely suggest that her conduct at the Training is likely to re-occur. The sincere remorse and understanding she has consistently expressed clearly distinguishes this case from the insincere and/or non-existent remorse and understanding expressed by the teacher in O'Brien.

There are numerous examples in New Jersey case law where a public employee's sincere remorse for their actions was a major factor in determining the penalty for those actions. Ms. Lechelt's circumstances and statements of remorse and understanding demonstrates that, unlike the teacher in O'Brien, her employment should be reinstated. Once again, Ms. Lechelt never had been previously disciplined for anything. She is legitimately and sincerely remorseful for her conduct. She clearly understands the possible impact of her conduct on the school and the Edison community. Ms. Lechelt's demonstrated sincere remorse, clear understanding, and lack of prior discipline demonstrate her ability to work with staff members and students alike, and that also shows her conduct will not repeat itself. Therefore, Ms. Lechelt should not be terminated from her tenured teaching position.

The Board's tenure charges are prosecutorial in tone, charging Ms. Lechelt with six different offenses, with two charges having multiple counts. By doing so, the Board paints Ms. Lechelt's conduct in as negative light as possible, refocusing the same conduct through six different lenses. The Board attempts to portray Ms. Lechelt's one-time occurrence of bad judgment into multiple charges and counts in an attempt to paint Ms. Lechelt as unworthy of her position and a threat to children. The Board could have merged the charges to accurately reflect the one-time nature of Ms.

Lechelt's conduct. At hearing, the Board continued to suggest that the chat amounted to multiple acts of misconduct.

However, the Board cannot escape what the proofs show. The proofs show that, once again, this is the first time Ms. Lechelt was disciplined in any way, and that her prior disciplinary record is spotless. It is uncontested that Ms. Lechelt participated in a single chat on one morning, during a two-and-one-half-hour (2 ½) inservice session. No matter how hard the Board attempts to spin Ms. Lechelt's conduct, the Board cannot change the fact that this was the first-and only-time Ms. Lechelt engaged in any kind of misconduct. While it does not excuse what Ms. Lechelt said, the Board's attempt to inflate Ms. Lechelt's one-time conduct into multiple charges and counts is improper. Therefore, the conduct should be analyzed as what it is–a single incident.

The Board argues that Ms. Lechelt was not justifiably offended by Ms. Bleekinger's usage of the terms "lows" during the training to describe students because Ms. Deluca testified that a Board-employed administrator said he did not find term offensive. Additionally, the Board argued that standardized tests use that term, so it cannot be offensive. However, by so arguing, the Board once again is completely ignoring the context in which Ms. Bleekinger used the term and how she used it.

It is undisputed that Ms. Bleekinger used the term "lows" several times to describe low performing and/or Special Education students. (Deluca Testimony, 2T97, 12-17; Lechelt Testimony, 3T189-90, 20-19; 3T192, 10-18; 3T192-93, 22-6) All three (3) Respondents testified that Ms. Bleekinger's usage of that term offended them. (Lechelt Testimony, 3T189-90, 20-19) Once again, Ms. Lechelt testified that when she heard that term she thought of how disgusted she would be if her daughter was ever grouped and/or thought of in that way. Given these thoughts, not only the usage of the term "lows," but the number of times Ms. Bleekinger used the term, and the callous manner in which she used the term–"you can call them lows and they'll never know it"–offended

Ms. Lechelt. This is the context that the Board has repeatedly ignored, and refused to consider. Ms. Deluca testified that because one of the Board-employed administrators said he was not offended by the term "lows," it could not have been offensive to Ms. Lechelt. However, once again, this testimony lacks credibility because it is unsupported hearsay with no documentary support. More importantly, this Board administrator was not in the Training, and did not see how many times Ms. Bleekinger used the term "lows" and the manner it was used.

The Board attempts to point to standardized testing using the term "low" as proof of the term's acceptability. However, using the term "low" as part of standardized tests is completely devoid of the context in which Ms. Bleekinger used the term. It reflects neither the number of times Ms. Bleekinger used the term nor the manner in which Ms. Bleekinger used the term. It also does not reflect Ms. Lechelt's consideration of her special needs child. Despite what the Board argues, context matters when assessing Ms. Lechelt's comments. When applying the proper context to Ms. Lechelt's comments, it is clear she was offended by Ms. Bleekinger's usage of the term "lows."

The Board separately charges Ms. Lechelt with violation of its Acceptable Use policy (Exh. Board-24), its Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy (Exh. Board-23) and its Code of Ethics (Exh. Board-22), arguing that the same conduct constitutes multiple infractions. However, as New Jersey case law clearly demonstrates, when teacher usage of school computers has been found to violate school board policies, the violation of the policies, on its own, is not sufficient to support terminating the teacher's employment. There are several cases which illustrate this principle. These cases clearly show that a school board is required to show more than a pro forma violation of its policies in order to support a termination of a teacher's employment. In each of these cases, the arbitrator applied the Fulcomer standard and/or the seven tests for just cause, and took the teacher's prior disciplinary record into account when deciding the appropriate penalty.

For these reasons and the other reasons outlined in this brief, the Board's proposed penalty does not fit the crime. We ask that you impose a penalty far less than what the Board has requested. A one-hundred twenty (120) calendar day suspension with a one year increment withholding and advancement to Step 6 of the Board's salary guide in the 2016-17 school year is appropriate.

OPINION

After considering the documentary and testimonial evidence, the undersigned concludes that Maryellen Lechelt is guilty of Charges I- Counts 1,2, 3, 4, 5, 6, IV- Counts 1,2, 4, 5, 6. 7, V and VI. Charges II, III, and IV-Count 3 are dismissed.

ANALYSIS OF THE CHARGES

The charges are arranged such that the numbered charges and specifications are preceded by a section entitled Background Common to All Charges. It would be appropriate to address that section before considering the numbered charges and specifications.

The bulk of this section deals with established Board policies. The cited policies concern sexual harassment (BX21), inappropriate staff conduct (BX23), the code of ethics (BX22), affirmative action (BX20), acceptable use of computer networks and computers (BX24) and a healthy workplace environment (BX25). The relevant Board Policy Numbers are 3362, 3281, 3211, 1140, 3321 and 3351 respectively.

On the theory that employees cannot be held accountable for the implementation of policies of which they were not put on notice, it is first essential to determine if and how the teachers employed by the Board knew of the existence of these policies and how they knew or should have known the substantive content of the policies.

The Board met its burden of demonstrating that the Respondents acknowledged their knowledge of the existence of said policies, the manner in which they could secure copies of the policies and their agreement to review the policies and to abide by them. It did so by producing a document entitled Important Board Policies, Regulations and Mandated Communications Form.

The record indicates that Respondent Lechelt executed this form on September 5, 2014 (BX18). Thus, she acknowledged that she was aware of the policies, that she would review them and conform to them.

In sum, Respondent Lechelt was on notice both procedurally and substantively of the Board's policies central to these charges. More important, she agreed to review the policies, to be conversant with the policies and to conduct herself in accordance with them.

It is well settled that employers are entitled to establish policies and work rules and to require employees to conform to them. This statement is true provided the employees are notified of the policies and rules. In this case, Respondent Lechelt acknowledged her responsibility to comply with them.

What is highly relevant here is that, under the circumstances, the failure to abide by the rules and policies is chargeable conduct. Since the failure to comply is chargeable, the Board is well within its rights to impose discipline on employees who are guilty of such breaches.

The second major component of Background Common to All Charges is a reference to a group chat on the Today's Meet website that was conducted through the District's computer network. The 2 ½ hour group chat was alleged to have taken place on October 23, 2014 during a professional development program that was called an Engrade Chromebook Training.

The District provides the teachers with laptop computers, Chromebooks. Thus, those participating in the group chat did so on District owned computers.

The record suggests that Engrade is a educational program employed by the District. The October 23, 2014 meeting was devoted to the program.

It is unchallenged that the Engrade meeting took place on October 23, 2014, that the group chat lasted (from beginning to end) 2 ½ hours and that Respondent Lechelt and approximately 25 other teachers were in attendance.

This section of Background Common to All Charges goes on to elaborate on the group chat and sets forth the allegedly unacceptable content of it. To the extent that these matters are included in the Charges and Specifications, they will be addressed below.

Charge I

This charge asserts that Respondent Lechelt's participation in the group chat rises to the level of unbecoming conduct and/or just cause. It alleges that Lechelt violated New Jersey law and Board policies, regulations and procedures concerning staff interactions. It charged that the chat room was public, was visible, and was accessible to other employees and students. It added that the chat room was offensive, discriminatory, rife with sexual innuendo and constituted a hostile work environment. This charge was the subject of six counts or specifications.

Count 1 concerned inappropriate comments about the Endgrade trainer, Sara Bleekinger. Lechelt was charged with a course of misconduct toward Ms. Bleekinger. It stated that the group chat was foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature. It cited the specific comments made by Lechelt during the group chat.

It should be stated that the group chat lasted for 2 ½ hours. It was downloaded from the computers and it was 16 pages in length (BX13). The text of Lechelt's comments were included in the charges served on her.

It must be noted that Lechelt's comments must be read in the context of comments made by other participants in the group chat. There were three main participants, Maria Weber, Maryellen Lechelt and Tyler Van Pelt. All of them were served with charges. While the matter was consolidated relative to the hearings, separate decisions are being written for each of the three named participants.

There was a small number of additional participants in the chat. They were either not identified or no longer employed by the Board. In any event, their participation was limited and minor as compared to the three charged teachers.

As to Lechelt's culpability or lack thereof of Count 1, her comments about Sara Bleekinger were inappropriate. The comments related to Bleekinger's looks and speech. They also dealt with an imaginary liaison between Van Pelt and Bleekinger. Many of her comments had sexual innuendos and denigrated Bleekinger's professional abilities.

When these comments are put in the context of the entire chat, their inappropriateness is magnified. Thus, an objective review of the comments concerning Sara Bleekinger suggests that Lechelt's comments in and out of context with the total chat were inappropriate.

Despite the obvious, Lechelt argued that, while there is no denying what her comments were, she is not guilty of this Count. She insisted that the she had an expectation of privacy relative to the chat. She posited that the chat would have gone unknown but for Alysia Battista, another attendee at the meeting, seeing it. Thus, in her view, the chat was private and her participation in it cannot be chargeable conduct.

As will be discussed in greater depth below, Lechelt and her cohorts had no expectation of privacy. They were engaged in a chat in a public setting while using a District computer and a District network. Under the circumstances, there could be no expectation of privacy.

The fact that they thought that the chat was private is of no moment. Thinking something does not make it so.

Their reasoning was that one needed an access code in order to see that chat's comments. That reasoning is fallacious. Anyone passing by could see what was on the screens of the computers. The fact that only one person complained about chat is irrelevant. The chat was undertaken in a public setting and, irrespective of all of the issues concerning the ownership of the computer and the network, it fell into the public realm. Once that is recognized, it is readily apparent that Lechelt had no expectation of privacy.

Much was said about Lechelt's remorse for her conduct. While she in fact made certain comments about her remorse for having participated, the defense suggests that she has not fully taken responsibility for her participation in the chat.

She always had the option of logging out of the chat. If she thought the comments being made were truly offensive, why would she continue to participate? She did not, suggesting that the comments were not, in her view, inappropriate until she was called to task for it.

Furthermore, Lechelt made a significant number of the comments in the chat transcript. Many of them were crude and surprising given her level of education and her profession. Her comments were not disputed.

Once the content of the chat became known, Lechelt became the subject of charges of unbecoming conduct for making inappropriate comments about Sara Bleekinger. The fact that the comments were not known to Bleekinger is irrelevant. The comments were public and were treated that way.

This count alleges that Lechelt's comments were disruptive and had a negative impact on another Engrade participant, Alysia Battista. These issues will be addressed below since they are part of many of the charges. In short, the Board met its burden relative to Count 1.

Count 2 concerns comments made about special needs students. The comments were undisputed. They referred to the children in outrageous pejoratives.

Lechelt indicated that she made these comments in response to Bleekinger referring to a low group. She suggested that she was offended by the term low group. She tearfully added that one of her children has special needs and resented the thought that her daughter would be described in such a way.

There is no way that Lechelt can justify her comments. Even if she did feel offended, a proposition that the undersigned has difficulty accepting, why would she not address her resentment like an adult and a professional? Under those conditions, she would have either privately or publicly expressed her displeasure. She certainly would not have made the comments quoted in the transcript in an attempt to be humorous. If she thought her comments were funny, no rational reader of the transcript would laugh.

Once again, even of Lechelt had been offended by Bleekinger's characterization, her conclusion that low group is demeaning was arrogant and is a view that was unsupported by anything in the professional literature. By contrast, District witnesses cited to test and other professional literature that specifically referred to low groups.

In sum, Lechelt has neither the credentials nor the standing to refute the use of an accepted term. She is entitled to have an aversion to it but she does not have the right to object to it by making the comments she made.

It must be added that Lechelt's comments must also be viewed in the context of Van Pelt's comments about special needs students. She and Van Pelt were clearly having what they thought was a good time at the expense of handicapped students

For the reasons stated above, Lechelt is culpable of Count 2.

Count 3 alleges that Lechelt made inappropriate comments about Dr. O'Malley, the Superintendent of Schools. A review of the transcript reveals that Lechelt's comments indicate her reference to Dr. O'Malley as tricky d. They comment about his appearance. They are replete with sexual innuendo and suggest that his hirings are less than ethical and professional.

Her comments were unacceptable. When put in the context of Tyler Van Pelt's comments about the Superintendent, they become even more offensive. Lechelt is guilty of Charge 3.

Count 4 addresses comments that Lechelt made about Alysia Battista. Alysia Battista is the teacher who saw Lechelt's computer screen and became upset when she read the comments that were part of the chat .

The comments made by both Lechelt and Van Pelt were graphic. Lechelt chose to comment about Battista's tendency to pick at her lips when she is anxious. Lechelt made a negative comment about this tendency and made a derisive comment about the lips getting bigger. Many of the comments in the exchange between Lechelt and Van Pelt were sexual in nature. The comments rose to the level of unbecoming conduct. Lechelt is guilty of Count 4.

Count 5 addresses comments made by Lechelt about unidentified individuals attending the training. The comments were primarily made by Lechelt and Van Pelt.

As were true of the comments made about Ms. Bleekinger, Ms. Battista and Dr. O'Malley the comments attributed to Lechelt about unidentified attendees at the training t were offensive, crude and sexual in nature. They were also discriminatory with respect to older people.

Count 5 was proven. The Board met its burden of proof in this regard.

Count 6 concerns comments made by Lechelt to Van Pelt and Weber. These comments concerned her becoming a supervisor because she is cute and blonde, made a reference to Van Pelt as being a backchannel guy (a reference to anal sex), references to Van Pelt being sexually aroused, a reference to male genitalia and an acknowledgment of her enjoying being asked to perform oral sex.

A review of the comments is sufficient to conclude that they constituted unbecoming conduct. Moreover, as noted above, Alysia Battista read the comments and became upset by them. Given the crudeness of the comments, her reaction was understandable and reasonable. Lechelt is guilty of Count 6.

This charge is limited to a single count. It alleges that Lechelt was insubordinate and guilty of unbecoming conduct in that she was involved in the disruption of Engrade training. An analysis of the allegation must be done before a determination is made about the charged misconduct.

The key word in this charge is disruption. An accepted definition of this word suggests that the action(s) of an individual or group interfered with the ability of others to continue an ongoing activity. Put another way, the actions of one or more people had to have prevented the organizers of a specific activity from continuing the activity to its planned conclusion.

With this definition in mind, one needs to examine the facts surrounding the instant matter. It is uncontested that the training started and ended on time. It is also clear that from the perspective the trainer, Sara Bleekinger, her presentation was made in an uninterrupted manner. Thus, it is difficult to conclude that Lechelt and others disrupted the training.

That is not to suggest that Alysia Battista was not upset by the contents of the chat. It is apparent that seeing the text of the chat interfered with her ability to benefit from the training.

It must be said that Battista was the subject of negative comments by the three main participants in the chat. There was a good deal of blaming the victim here. Such a response was inappropriate.

By any reasonable standard, there were many grossly offensive comments that were made during the chat. Any reasonable person would have found them offensive and large numbers of reasonable people would have been disturbed to read the comments, particularly in a professional setting.

The undersigned hastens to add that an absence of disruption of the training session does not obviate the contention that Lechelt was guilty of misconduct. As noted in the findings to Charge I, she was guilty of misconduct. Specifically in Charge I Count 3, 4, and 5, Lechelt was found to be culpable of unbecoming conduct in connection with Alysia Battista, Dr. O'Malley and Sara Bleekinger. Furthermore, as will be seen in charges not yet addressed, she is guilty of additional misconduct.

However, it cannot be said that Lechelt disrupted the training session. If the actions of Lechelt and her two cohorts had not transpired, from the perspective of the vast majority of the attendees, it is likely that the session would have been no different than it was in the presence of the group chat. Thus, Charge II is dismissed.

This charge alleges the misuse of the District's computer network through a group chat that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature. The District alleged that the foregoing was a flagrant misuse of the Board's resources. The Board concluded that this conduct constitutes unbecoming conduct, insubordination and just cause for dismissal.

Without commenting on the merits of Charge III, the Arbitrator points out that Charge IV Count 7 alleges, although worded in a slightly different way, the same misconduct in the context of Board Policy 3321.

Therefore, the issue of the alleged misuse of the District's computers and network will be addressed in the discussion of Charge IV Count 7. As such, Charge III is dismissed.

Charge IV

This charge asserts that Maryellen Lechelt violated various District policies. The District posited that such misconduct constituted unbecoming conduct and/or just cause for dismissal.

Charge IV is comprised of seven counts. Each of the counts will addressed individually. It should be noted that, of the seven counts, only Count 3 does not allege that Weber violated a specific District policy.

With that in mind, there are certain comments that apply to Counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7. Since it is more efficient to make certain observations about all six counts at the outset rather than repeat them in connection with each policy, the following observations apply to all of the cited Board policies.

As noted above, Lechelt was on notice about each policy (BX18). This document listed 34 policies and procedures in effect in the District. The policies cited in the six counts identified above are all listed on the document.

Lechelt signed this document to acknowledge receipt of it as well as an acknowledgment of her awareness that the policies can be found on the Board's website. Finally, Lechelt's signature reflects her agreement to conform to the listed policies and procedures.

What must be concluded is that Lechelt was bound to comply with the policies. If she failed to review the policies in order to be able to comply with them, she did so at her own risk. In short, she was required to comply with the policies.

A second observation to be made is that Lechelt and her two colleagues participated in the group chat. Their continued participation in the chat makes each of them responsible for its contents.

It is true that Lechelt made some, not all, of the inappropriate comments. However, had she been concerned about her commitment to honor District policies, she would have logged off of the chat and, in so doing, disassociated herself from it. She did not do so and must be held accountable for her actions.

What remains is an application of the facts of this case to the terms of the cited policies. Such an analysis will result in a determination of whether Weber is guilty of one or more of the counts.

Count 1 alleges a violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy (Policy number 3362) (BX21). In relevant part, the policy states:

> The Board of Education recognizes that an employee's right to freedom from employment discrimination includes the opportunity to work in an environment untainted by sexual harassment. Sexually offensive speech and conduct are wholly inappropriate to the harmonious relationships necessary to the operation of the school district and intolerable in a workplace to which the children of this district are exposed.
> Sexual harassment includes all unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and verbal or physical contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender. Whenever submission to such conduct is made a condition of employment or the basis for an employment decision, or when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect if unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint.
> The sexual harassment of any employee of this district is strictly forbidden. Any employee or agent of the Board who is found to have sexually harassed an employee of this district will be subject to discipline which may include termination of employment.
> The Affirmative Action Officer shall instruct all employees and agents of the Board to recognize and correct speech and behavior patterns that may be sexually offensive with or without the intent to offend.

Before considering the facts, there needs to be analysis of the policy. The policy addresses two forms of sexual harassment, sexually offensive speech and sexually offensive advances, both physically and verbally. There is no evidence of sexual advances in any way, shape or form. Thus, the relevant language in this policy concerns the first paragraph above.

The sexual harassment in this case concerns sexually offensive speech. The purported sexually offensive speech was contained in the comments made during the group chat.

The facts suggest that Alysia Battista, a participant at the Engrade training was sitting behind and to the left of Maryellen Lechelt. She was able to see Lechelt's computer monitor and was able to read the ongoing comments of the group chat and became offended by the comments that were overtly sexual as well as those that had sexual innuendos

Battista became upset by what she saw and left the meeting room. She filed a complaint about the chat and the instant proceeding resulted.

To be clear, counsel for Weber, Lechelt and Van Pelt all cited Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us, 132 N.J. 587 (1993) as the seminal case in New Jersey for matters involving sexual harassment. The cited case is applicable to the portion of the instant policy that deals with physical and verbal sexual advances. This aspect of the policy is found in its second paragraph, not the first one.

Moreover, the language in the second paragraph tracks Toys 'R' Us. The same cannot be said for the first paragraph. It is evident that, if the Board intended for the Toys 'R' Us standards to apply to both paragraphs, it would have made such an indication in the policy. Thus, the plain language of the policy indicates that the Board intended to distinguish sexually offensive language from sexual advances of either a physical or a verbal nature.

Thus Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us is inapposite here. The standards set forth in Toys 'R' Us do not apply in matters involving sexually offensive comments that are distinguishable from cases in which there was sexual advances of a physical or verbal nature.

This case deals with sexually offensive speech. The Board is well within its rights to issue policies that are relevant to the governance of the school district.

With the above analysis having been completed, the undersigned must now consider whether Lechelt was guilty of the violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy in terms of participating in sexually offensive speech.

The Arbitrator is persuaded that she did so through direct comments, by responses to the comments of others and by participating in the group chat from beginning to end. She directly commented on Van Pelt as being a backchannel guy. The record suggests that backchannel refers to anal sex. Lechelt made numerous other offensive sexual comments. Thus, Lechelt's comment were sexual in nature.

There are numerous examples of responses by Lechelt to comments made primarily by Van Pelt. These comments were made in the midst of a series of comments about Sara Bleekinger, Alysia Battista and Dr. O'Malley that were sexual in nature.

In sum, Maryellen Lechelt violated the Board's policy proscribing sexually offensive speech. Thus, she is guilty of Charge IV Count 1.

Count 2 alleges a violation of the Board's affirmative action policy (Policy Number 1140) (BX20). This policy is designed to promote the acceptance of people of diverse backgrounds regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status. The intent of the policy is spelled out in the first full paragraph of the policy statement.

While Lechelt's comments were about Alysia Battista and other people, some of them being unidentified participants at the training, they were disparaging of women, special needs students, lesbians and older people (BX13). She cannot credibly assert that she did not violate this policy while sitting through and participating in a chat that was replete with comments about people protected by the policy. Thus, she is guilty of Charge IV Count 2.

Count 3 concerns a purported violation of the policies alluded to in Counts 1 and 2 pertaining to the Affirmative Action Investigation. This count is dismissed.

Lechelt has already been found guilty of Counts 1 and 2. She is essentially being charged with the same misconduct a second time. In this regard, Count 3 is duplicative.

With respect to the interview per se, there are circumstances under which a interviewee's conduct at an interview could rise to the level of misconduct. However, under the facts of this case, Lechelt was said to have not understood the seriousness of the matter but was not shown to have been guilty of misconduct at the interview per se. Thus, as indicated above, Charge IV Count 3 is dismissed.

Count 4 suggests a violation of the Code of Ethics policy (Policy Number 3211) (BX22). The key language in this policy is found in Principle II. It states as follows:

> The education profession is vested by the public with a trust and responsibility requiring the highest ideals of professional service.
> In the belief that the quality of the services of the education profession influences the nation and its citizens, the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards, to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons.

Among other issues, this Code of Ethics requires teachers to endeavor to raise professional standards and to encourage the exercise of professional judgment. Lechelt's participation in the group chat was inconsistent with both of these principles.

Lechelt attended a professional development training session. It was offered in order to provide participants with the opportunity to improve their abilities with the Endgrade program. It is inconceivable that experienced educators would engage in group chat for 2 ½ hours while a trainer was engaged in a professional presentation. What makes the misconduct especially egregious is the content of the chat. It was demeaning, denigrating, offensive and discriminatory. There was nothing about the chat that reflected an endeavor to raise professional standards. It was crude by any standard and a clear violation of the District's Code of Ethics.

The Arbitrator is compelled to comment on the argument that the amount of time that the participants were involved in the chat was limited to the time spent in inputting the comments. This argument is invalid and inappropriate. It suggests that they may have spent 15-20 minutes actually inputting their entries in the chat.

It is highly disingenuous to assert that the chat lasted 150 minutes but that the participants were involved in the chat for 15 or 20 minutes. That implies that they were focused on the training material for 130-135 of the 150 minutes. That suggests that the three respondents spent no time reading each other's contributions to the chat and that they spent no time watching their computer monitors while waiting for responses to previous inappropriate comments.

The chat lasted 2½ hours from beginning to end. The greatest time gap between comments was four minutes. This argument trivializes the misconduct and does nothing to reinforce the premise that they are sincerely remorseful for their actions.

The second aspect of the Code of Ethics that is pertinent here is the creation of a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment. The participation in the group chat is the antithesis of the exercise of professional judgment.

The Arbitrator is convinced that Lechelt violated this policy. Thus, Lechelt is guilty of Charge IV Count 4.

Count 5 addresses the Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy (Policy Number 3281) (BX 23). The relevant provision in this policy is found in the fourth full paragraph. It states as follows:

> School staff in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all times. School staff shall not make inappropriate comments to pupils or about pupils and shall not engage in inappropriate conduct towards the pupils.

There was an extensive string of comments concerning special needs students in the transcript of the chat. The comments, many of which were made by Lechelt, were, to say the least, inappropriate and discriminatory.

What makes Lechelt even more culpable is the fact that she is a parent of a Special Education student. If such a teacher is not offended by negative statements about students like her daughter, who will be?

Suffice it to say that Maryellen Lechelt violated the Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy. She is culpable of Charge IV Count 5.

Count 6 concerns the Healthy Workplace Environment Policy (Policy Number 3351) (BX25). The relevant language in this policy is found in the second full paragraph of the text. It sates as follows:

> A significant characteristic of a healthy workplace environment is that employees interact with each other with dignity and respect regardless of an employee's work assignment or position in the district. Repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment.

The record indicates that Supt. O'Malley was the subject of numerous comments about his appearance, hiring practices and his purported sexual practices. The comments were graphic and crude. The treatment that he received in the group chat was prototypical of what was proscribed in the policy.

Lechelt made numerous offensive comments about various individuals other than Superintendent O'Malley. Therefore, there was repeated malicious conduct.

Therefore, she violated this policy. As such, Lechelt is culpable of Charge IV Count 6.

Count 7 addresses the final policy allegedly violated. It is the policy concerning the acceptable use of district computers and computer networks (Policy Number 3321)(BX24).

The key language in this policy is as follows:

> The Board recognizes that telecommunications will allow teaching staff members access to information sources that have not been pre-screened using Board approved standards. The Board therefore adopts the following standards of conduct for the use of computer network(s) and declares unethical, > unacceptable, inappropriate or illegal behavior as just cause for taking disciplinary action limiting or revoking access privileges, instituting legal action or taking any other appropriate action as needed necessary.

> The Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only. The Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use
> Standards for Use of Computer Network(s)
> Any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computer shall be subject to discipline or legal action:
> 3. Using the computer network(s) in a manner that:
> k. Engages in other activities that do not advance the educational purposes for which the computer network(s)/computers are provided.

Irrespective of the defenses offered by the three charged teachers, there can be no question that they used the District's computers in a manner that was violative of this policy. The defenses will be discussed below. However, the use of the computers for the group chat was clearly in violation of the Board's policy.

Lechelt, as one of participants in the chat, violated the policy concerning the use of District computers and computer networks. Thus, she is guilty of Charge IV Count 7.

Charge V

This charge is one of a single count of misconduct. Lechelt is charged with a failure to pay attention during the Endgrade training and with making no effort to benefit from the instruction provided.

As has been previously documented, Maryellen Lechelt has been found guilty of various kinds of misconduct, ranging from inappropriate conduct with other staff members and with other participants in the group chat and individuals not in the employ of the District to significant violations of Board policy. In each of those charges and counts, the misconduct could be documented through a review of the transcript of the chat and through a review of the conduct of Lechelt in the context of the terms of several Board policies.

In this charge, Lechelt is said to have not paid attention to the training and having made no effort to benefit from the instruction. The transcript of the chat shows the timing of the comments. At most, there was a time gap of four minutes between comments.

It makes no sense to limit the time spent on the chat to the amount of time writing comments. Lechelt was paying attention to the chat for virtually the full 2 ½ hour duration of the session. The total time she was involved in the chat precluded her paying attention to the content of the training.

Based on the record created, the Arbitrator concludes that Lechelt did not pay attention and did not make appropriate efforts to benefit from instruction that was designed to improve her teaching. As such, Charge V must be sustained.

This charge asserts that Lechelt was guilty of ongoing neglect of duty. The basis of this charge is found in comments she made that suggested that she wanted to avoid performing her duties in the future.

The comments referenced by the District were self-explanatory. She derided the training as a waste of time and then calculated the time wasted as about 300,000 hours of time at a cost of about $300,000. She ended the comment by congratulating them, presumably the chatters, for this waste.

One would think that she would have made better use of her time getting what she could from the training rather than making inane calculations. It is inconceivable that Lechelt, a relatively junior teacher, could not gain some measure of benefit from a staff development program. However, her approach was to publicly deride the District's effort to enhance the training of the teachers and then to engage in offensive calculations in an effort to show that the District was guilty of wasting time and money.

She followed the above described comment with two more that were equally inappropriate. The first one appeared to suggest that since the training was a waste of time, she could continue to waste time by sitting in the back of her classroom reading a magazine.

The second comment was directed to Van Pelt. She suggested setting up a chat when they return to their teaching duties and to continue the chat when they are supposed to be teaching.

These two comments need to be put in context. On the one hand, Lechelt stressed that none of her inappropriate comments were said to or in the presence of students. On the other hand, she suggested that, because she had so little appreciation of the training, it would be agreeable to her to deny her students instructional time.

Two comments are in order. If she thought her comments were humorous and should not be taken seriously, they were not funny and reflected a side of her that was unlike the image of a dedicated teacher that she tried to project at other points during the hearing.

Second, assuming arguendo (an assumption not shared by the Arbitrator) that the training session needed improvement, does Lechelt suggest that every pedagogical effort that she has made has been an outstanding success? Rather than appreciating the District's effort to support the staff through additional training, she chose to denigrate the District's effort and to humiliate the Superintendent and Bleekinger. A professional who finds a training to be in need of improvement makes suggestions for improvement but does not act as Lechelt did.

Lechelt's last comment suggested that the chat was therapeutic and that the chat group should attend other training sessions. The comment indicates that the group chat was so meaningful that they should continue to participate in them in future training sessions.

The comment posits that the negative comments about the Endgrade training were irrelevant. She viewed the training sessions as times for them to act in an irresponsible and unprofessional way.

It clearly puts the defenses she raised in a light that does not serve her well.

Lechelt argued that her teaching record suggests that she would never waste teaching time by reading magazines. Lechelt does not appear to recognize that, if purposeful use of instruction time was of such great importance, she would not have made such a comment because such a thought would never have dawned upon her.

The District charged Lechelt with neglect of duty. The comments reflect an intent to neglect teaching duties and professional obligations in the future. They also add further evidence of her actions during the Endgrade training as rising to the level of neglect of duty. Thus, Lechelt is culpable of Charge IV.

ANALYSIS OF THE DEFENSES

Lechelt offered a number of defenses in an effort to mitigate the findings of misconduct. They are deserving of mention and discussion.

She acknowledged that the facts in this matter are undisputed. However, she urged that she has an unblemished record and that she has expressed sincere remorse for her actions. She stressed that, although they are not mandatory, an application of the Fulcomer standards suggests that termination is unjustified in this case.

At the same time that Lechelt makes the above statements in her own defense, she sees her actions as a youthful indiscretion. She posits that the District exaggerated its claims of her malice. She minimizes her misconduct by claiming it was limited to two hours of a single day. She characterized her comments in the chat as being misguided jokes.

The two paragraphs above stand in contrast to each other. The first one seems to assume responsibility for her actions and simply suggests that a penalty short of termination would be appropriate.

The second paragraph trivializes her misconduct in a number of ways. It leaves the undersigned uncertain about the sincerity of her remorse and her assumption of responsibility.

The reference to Lechelt's youthful indiscretion makes suggests that Lechelt is a teenager. She may have behaved like one but she is a professional who can reasonably be expected to behave like one.

She objected to Dr. O'Malley's and Ms. DeLuca's characterization of her attitude at her interview as being unaccepting of the seriousness of her misconduct. Lechelt's beliefs as set forth in the second paragraph add great credence to the conclusions of Dr. O'Malley and Ms. DeLuca.

Lechelt made a conscious effort to demonstrate that she has added to the tone of the school through her participation in extra-curricular and co-curricular activities. The undersigned notes that Lechelt had a leadership role in an anti-bullying club. This program was designed for the benefit of students.

The Arbitrator is taken by her lack of insight into her own actions. Did she not realize that her comments about Sara Bleekinger were bullying ones? Did she not recognize that her castigation of Battista for having the temerity to look at a computer monitor that was publicly displayed involved bullying. Lechelt's current situation was primarily the result of her own actions. But for the actions of the three people involved in the chat, Battista would not have become upset and would have had nothing to report.

The undersigned will discuss Lechelt's belief that she had a right to privacy. However, the bullying comments that she made were in a public venue. Anyone passing by could have seen her computer screen and would have had the opportunity to share the comments with Ms. Bleekinger.

Moreover, the comments were insulting and denigrating. There is a serious inconsistency between passing oneself off as leading an anti-bullying effort and then acting as she did in connection with Sara Bleekinger, Alysia Battista and others.

A major defense raised by Lechelt was that she had a right to privacy and that the chat was inaccessible to others. Her premise is totally without merit.

The computers and the network belong to the District. The District always had the right to confiscate the computers and to examine its contents. So much for the chat being inaccessible to others.

Additionally, the chat was conducted in a public venue and subject to being viewed by anyone passing by. The fact is that the chat was seen by Alysia Battista. Rather than recognizing that Battista read the chat in a public setting, Lechelt excoriated Battista as being similar to a voyeur. If Lechelt seriously believed that she had a right to privacy under the facts of this case, she is extremely misguided. Before engaging in the conduct that placed her in a position that could lead to her dismissal, she needed to have the curiosity needed to determine the extent of her liabilities.

It is difficult to credit the argument that Lechelt believed that she really had a right to privacy. She knew or should have known the District's policy concerning the use of its computers and computer networks. She had to know that the chat substantively violated various Board policies as well as common decency.

A second area of Lechelt's defense concerned Alysia Battista. She portrayed Battista as the villain. She claimed that Battista had an ax to grind.. Therefore, in Lechelt's view, she reported the misconduct.

She claimed that Battista and she had disagreed about various professional issues when they both attended training sessions. Thus, taken to its logical conclusion, professionals should not disagree about professional issues because such disagreements could lead to subsequent charges of animus. There is nothing in the record to suggest that Battista engaged in a personal vendetta against Lechelt and seized upon the chat to get Lechelt.

Lechelt observed that Battista's interpretations of the chat were erroneous. Lechelt fails to recognize that the basis of the charges have little to do with Battista's interpretations. The charges are largely based on the transcript of the chat.

She accused Battista of being untruthful. The basis of this claim is Battista's inaccurate estimate of the distance of her seat from that of Lechelt. An inaccurate estimate of distance is hardly an obfuscation of the truth.

Lechelt opined that Battista's response to the chat was unreasonable. Such a view is self-serving and is devoid of credibility. As noted, the chat was offensive on numerous levels. It is not unreasonable that a third party reader of the chat's transcript would become offended.

Are there people who might not have been offended? There are. However, that does not make those who do become upset unreasonable. On the contrary, Battista's being upset was entirely reasonable under the circumstances.

Lechelt engaged in a blame the victim exercise. Battista saw the chat and became upset by its crudeness. Objectively, the chat was crude. It would have been better for Lechelt to indicate mea culpa without trying mitigate the misconduct by in some way blaming Battista for the situation in which she currently finds herself.

Another significant aspect of Lechelt's defense is her allegedly being offended by Bleekinger's reference to some special needs students as being in the low group. As indicated above, Lechelt's view of this term is based on nothing other than her opinion. While the District cited professional literature that refers to a low group, Lechelt and Van Pelt evidently decided that they were was the final authorities on this matter. Moreover, even if Lechelt believed that she had a serious philosophical difference with Bleekinger, did she really think that making offensive and discriminatory comments about special needs students was the appropriate way to address the issue?

Lechelt's purported reaction to low group suggests a sensitivity to this issue. Perhaps her sensitivity stems from the fact that her daughter has special needs. That possibility is understandable. What defies understanding is her justifying her sensitivity while deriding what may have been Battista's sensitivity to a chat that was laden with overtly and extremely offensive statements.

Lechelt argued that the chat was private because of FERPA issues. This claim is without merit. FERPA is a statute that protects the privacy of student records. Student records were in no way discussed at the Endgrade training.

The Arbitrator concludes that this assertion is further evidence of Lechelt's failure to understand the seriousness of this matter. It also suggests that her remorse is not as sincere as she would like the Arbitrator to believe.

Lechelt suggested that she is an effective professional. Would an effective professional describe Dr. O'Malley as she did? Would such an individual suggest that his hiring practices are based on sexual favors? Would a professional accuse him of making up his mind to suspend her before he interviewed her? This question is posed in the context of Lechelt having reason to know that Dr. O'Malley read the transcript of the chat multiple tomes.

Last, Lechelt observed that, under Toys 'R' Us, she is not guilty of sexual harassment. The Arbitrator has addressed this matter in connection with the charge related to the violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy. That analysis need not be repeated here. Needless to say, this argument is not persuasive. As noted above, while the undersigned rejects the Toys 'R' Us defense, it is the opinion of the Arbitrator that, while recognizing that others might have reacted differently, Battista's reaction was reasonable. Her reaction was not idiosyncratic.

A final element of the defense concerned the interview conducted by Ms. DeLuca after becoming aware of the alleged misconduct. She outlined the interview by indicating the questions asked and the responses received (DX15).It is necessary to comment on this matter since, under Just Cause, the undertaking of a fair investigation is required.

DeLuca interviewed numerous people. She could not identify all of the possible interviewees but she made a reasonable effort to identify those who should be interviewed. The fact is that a large number of attendees at the training knew little or nothing about the matter at hand.

Lechelt claimed that many of her comments are not reflected in DeLuca's report. However, at the end of the interview, DeLuca specifically provided Lechelt with an opportunity to make any additional comments. Evidently, Lechelt availed herself of the opportunity and DeLuca included them in the summary of the interview.

DeLuca indicated that she took notes during the interview and then transcribed her notes. She was criticized for not preserving her hand written notes. No authority was cited that indicated that handwritten notes must be preserved.

Moreover, the interview was not done in the presence of a court reporter and was not recorded. If Ms. DeLuca was intent on making Lechelt appear guilty, she could have handwritten anything she wanted, preserved her handwritten notes and then transcribed them. The lack of preservation of the handwritten notes in this case is simply a red herring.

In the final analysis, the resolution of this matter comes down to a credibility determination. On the one hand, aside from the issue over DeLuca's notes, there were no credibility issues raised in connection with DeLuca. The same cannot be said relative to Lechelt.

The summary of the interview is lengthy and detailed. De Luca credibly stated that the summary was complete and accurate. In this regard, the undersigned credits DeLuca's testimony.

In a broader context, the Arbitrator is persuaded that the investigation of the instant matter was fair and comprehensive. This is fundamental to a finding of Just Cause.

THE FULCOMER STANDARDS

The Board is seeking the termination of Lechelt's services as a teacher. She argued that the leading New Jersey case concerning the termination of tenured teachers as a consequence of unbecoming conduct is In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 403 (App. Div. 1967). This was a case in which the Commissioner of Education concluded that Respindent Fulcomer engaged in unbecoming conduct and that dismissal was required.. The Appellate Division disagreed and held that the trier of fact must first determine if the respondent teacher engaged in unbecoming conduct and, if so, whether the misconduct warranted discharge or a lesser penalty.

The application of Fulcomer is not mandated. However, it is useful since, like Just Cause, it establishes an objective set of guidelines to be considered in cases such as this one.

In this regard, the Court determined that the following factors should be considered:

1. The potential impact on the charged teacher's career.

It is evident that, should Lechelt be terminated, the District would be required to report the dismissal to the State Board of Examiners for the possible revocation of her teaching certificates. It is reasonable to conclude that a termination in this case would dramatically increase the likelihood of Lechelt's teaching career being ended in New Jersey and probably in other states.

2. The longevity of Lechelt's career.

Maryellen Lechelt has been a teacher in New Jersey for about four years. She is a junior teacher and should not be given the consideration afforded teachers with many more years of effective service.

3. Lechelt's overall teaching record.

Lechelt's teaching record is devoid of negative comments. However, given the length of her tenure in Edison Township school, her record must be viewed as being not fully developed. Her four year record is good but one needs to suspend judgment in this regard until a determination can be made as to whether the past record is prelude to the future.

4. Lechelt's teaching ability

A review of Lechelt's evaluations reveals that she has been consistently rated positively both as a provisional and a tenured teacher. Her ratings as a tenured teacher were either Proficient or Accomplished on the sub-parts to the evaluations, as well as on her overall ratings. She apparently has done well but there is room for further growth. Greater respect for professional training would be helpful.

In addition, the record suggests her willingness to immerse herself in co-curricular and community activities. These activities reflect a desire to contribute to the school's standing through her contributions to out-of-classroom ventures.

5. Whether there was an absence of prior discipline affecting Lechelt during her employment.

Lechelt has never been disciplined in any manner

6 . Whether there was an absence of past increment withholdings.

There is no evidence of a salary increment being withheld.

7. The nature and the gravity of the offenses under all of the circumstances involved.

The misconduct described herein is very serious. She was part of a group of teachers who violated several important Board policies. She argued that her misconduct was mitigated in part by the fact that the trainer, in her view, made offensive comments about special needs students and by Battista's invasion of a private chat. As noted above, Lechelt's comments in this regard were given little weight.

8. Evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation.

Lechelt claimed that she was provoked by certain comments made by Bleekinger. This claimed provocation is without merit.

9. Any harm or injurious effect which Lechelt's conduct had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

This matter ultimately became public. It had an impact on the manner in which the community views the school. Further, the comments made about Dr. O'Malley had to be personally embarrassing and offensive and could have had the effect of weakening his image as the Superintendent of Schools.

Furthermore, Lechelt's comments related to Charge V suggest that she might need closer supervision until she can demonstrate that her intent to reduce her efforts while teaching were either not serious or were reconsidered.

JUST CAUSE

Just Cause standards emanate from Enterprise Wire, 46 LA 555 (1956). There are seven tests that need to be applied to a determination of the appropriateness of discipline.

In this case, there was Just Cause to discipline Lechelt. The Board policies forewarned her that she could be disciplined for violations of the policies. The cited policies were more than reasonably related to the business efficiency of the District and the performance the employer might expect from an employee. There was an investigation conducted to determine if Lechelt was culpable of misconduct. The investigation was fair and objective. It was related solely to the purported misconduct and there was an effort made to interview anyone who had knowledge of the underlying conduct Based upon the investigation and a review of the transcript, the District determined that there was substantial evidence of Lechelt's guilt. The rules/policies were applied fairly. Finally, the degree of discipline applied herein is related to Lechelt's misconduct and her past record.

CONCLUSIONS

A review of the Fulcomer and Just Cause standards persuades the Arbitrator that the Board had cause to serve disciplinary charges on Maryellen Lechelt. The Arbitrator points out that both sets of standards have been addressed herein. In sum, Ms. Lechelt is guilty of serious misconduct.

While she has expressed remorse, it is not entirely clear that she fully accepts responsibility for her actions. Nor is it evident that, aside from the possibility of losing her job, she comprehends just how serious her misconduct was.

However, when Lechelt's record is viewed as a whole, her misconduct , while very serious does not rise to the level of justifying termination of services. When this finding is combined with the analysis of the Fulcomer and Just Cause standards , it becomes clear that dismissal is excessive.

Therefore, Lechelt must recognize that her misconduct was serious and rose to the level of unbecoming conduct. She must also understand that future findings of unbecoming conduct could lead to the termination of her services.

Finally, counsel for the parties did an outstanding job of researching the relevant issues and presented numerous cases for the consideration of the Arbitrator. The cases were reviewed and considered. However, given the number of cases cited by both parties and their non-precedential nature, the cases are not cited in the Opinion. Furthermore, counsel for the parties are to be commended for their overall preparation, the quality of the examinations and cross-examinations and professionalism throughout a long and complicated case.

Thus, the Arbitrator finds that the appropriate penalty to be imposed on Maryellen Lechelt is a 120 day suspension without pay plus a one time loss of a salary increment. Therefore, based on the above, the undersigned makes the following

AWARD

1. Maryellen Lechelt is guilty of Charge I -Counts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, Charge IV- Counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, Charge V and Charge VI.
2. The following charges are dismissed: Charge II,, Charge III and Charge IV- Count 3
3. The penalty imposed on Maryellen Lechelt is a 120 day suspension without pay plus a one time loss of a salary increment.

Re: Center for Education v. New Jersey Department of Education, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 14525-14, Agency Dkt. No. 280-9/14.

Dear Counsel,

I have reviewed the parties' submissions in connection with the New Jersey Department of Education's (Department) request for interlocutory review of Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Schuster's March 26, 2015 oral ruling requiring disclosure of certain documents that the Department contends are privileged and non-discoverable, along with the full sound recording[1] of the five-hour hearing at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL).

At the outset, it should be noted that the record does not contain a written order, and a review of the sound recording of the proceedings at the OAL reveals that many documents were never actually ruled upon. The sound recording also reflects that the ALJ reviewed each unredacted document at issue – in the presence of counsel for both parties – despite the Department's request for in camera review. Finally, it cannot be determined from the sound recording precisely when (or which) documents were given to counsel for the Center for Education (Center) by the ALJ.

Ultimately, the ALJ determined that the following documents were not subject to any asserted privilege[2]: DOE135-308, 498-540[3], 541, 590, 592-595, 607, 608, 612, 619-622, 629-630, 631, 693-696[4], 702-704, 793, 796, 810-811, 823-825, 827, 837-839, 840-842, 845-847, 850, 892, 900, 909-911, 926-927, and 930.[5] According to the Department's certification, after denying its request for a stay pending interlocutory review, the ALJ immediately released unredacted copies of these documents to counsel for the Center. (Department's Certification, ¶¶28-31) For reasons unknown, the following documents were discussed during the hearing but omitted from the ALJ's oral ruling, and are therefore not considered herein: DOE613-614, 632, 801, 808, 854, 863, 865-867, 913, 921-922, and 925.[6] Any unredacted copies of documents that the ALJ deemed privileged were returned to counsel for the Department.

First, as to the Department's contention that the documents labeled DOE135-308 are privileged attorney-client communications, I conclude that DOE135 – an internal memo between Deputy Attorneys General – qualifies as attorney work product and therefore should not have been released to the parties. O'Boyle v. Borough of Longport, 218 N.J. 168, 188-89 (2014); LaPorta v. Gloucester Ctny. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 340 N.J. Super. 254 (App. Div. 2001). Attorney work product is not discoverable "unless 'the party seeking discovery has substantial need of the materials in the preparation of the case and is unable without undue hardship to obtain the substantial equivalent of the materials by other means.'" LaPorta, supra, 340 N.J. Super. at 260 (quoting Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495 (1947)); New Jersey Court Rule 4:10-2. There is nothing in the record to suggest that the Center demonstrated a substantial need for DOE135 that would compel its disclosure. Therefore, to the extent the ALJ ordered the release of DOE135 absent a finding of substantial need, that ruling is rejected. The Center and the Lakewood Board of Education (Lakewood) shall immediately return DOE135 to the DAG and destroy any and all copies thereof. Furthermore, DOE135 shall not be considered as part of the record in this matter or used as evidence during any of the proceedings.

In contrast, the documents labeled DOE136-308 consist of a transmittal notice, the Center's petition of appeal, and attachments related to the petition; those documents do not become privileged attorney-client communications simply because they were attached to

[2] To the extent the Department asserts in its pleadings that the ALJ also released other documents deemed non-privileged that are not listed or accounted for herein, the Commissioner can only render determinations based upon discernible findings of fact and conclusions of law, and will therefore only address those documents that were specifically mentioned by the ALJ during his oral ruling.

[3] A copy of DOE537 was not provided with the Department's application. Therefore, the Commissioner cannot review the ALJ's determination as to that document.

[4] The ALJ indicated that he would personally redact DOE693-696 and make the documents available for the Center's counsel the following morning in Freehold Township. Unfortunately, the ALJ failed to specify what would be redacted from the document or the reason for same.

[5] A copy of DOE930 was not provided with the Department's application. Therefore, the Commissioner cannot review the ALJ's determination as to that document.

[6] To the extent these documents remain a point of contention between the parties and were released, the documents shall be returned to the DAG pending the ALJ placing his determinations on the record.

DOE135 when the Deputy Attorney General (DAG) was assigned this matter and were later transmitted from the DAG to the client. See Leonen v. Johns-Manville, 135 F.R.D. 94, 98 (D.N.J.1990) ("Merely attaching something to a privileged document will not, by itself make the attachment privileged.") Therefore, to the extent the ALJ found that DOE136-308 were not privileged, that ruling is upheld.

Second, I concur with the Department's contention that the documents labeled DOE693-696 are both privileged attorney work product and privileged attorney-client communications, thereby shielded from disclosure absent a showing of adequate reasons to justify production. The documents were created by the client – at the direction of the DAG – to assist her in preparing the case. (Department's Certification, ¶ 31) Furthermore, the information was communicated from client to attorney within the scope of that professional relationship. K.L. v. Evesham Twp. Bd. of Educ., 423 N.J. Super. 337, 352 (App. Div. 2011) (communications between attorney and client in course of relationship are privileged and need not be disclosed). In addition, the record lacks any indication of a showing by the Center of substantial need for the materials or an inability, without undue hardship, to obtain the substantial equivalent through some other means. Therefore, to the extent the ALJ ordered the release of DOE693-696 – redacted or otherwise – to the parties, that ruling is rejected. The Center and Lakewood shall immediately return DOE693-696 to the DAG and destroy any and all copies thereof. Furthermore, DOE693-696 shall not be considered as part of the record in this matter or used as evidence during the proceedings.

Third, I conclude that the following pre-decisional, deliberative documents contain advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations about the Department's decision-making process and policies and are therefore shielded from disclosure in their entirety by the deliberative process privilege: DOE592-595 (internal memo analyzing application), 608 (e-mail message containing preliminary analysis of application), 620 (e-mail message with handwritten notes regarding the needs assessment), 630 (handwritten notes from Department staff regarding application), 702-704 (internal review document/checklist with handwritten notes reflecting deliberation over the application), 810-811 (internal memo analyzing application), 845-847 (internal memo analyzing application and supporting data interpreted as reflected in handwritten notes), 892 (internal document memorializing deliberation over the application with handwritten notes), and 900 (internal review document/checklist reflecting deliberations over application). Ed. Law Ctr. v. Dep't of Ed., 198 N.J. 274, 285-86 (2009); Ciesla v. Dep't of Health, 429 N.J. Super. 127, 137-38.

The longstanding justification of the deliberative process privilege acknowledges an interest in protecting government advisory opinions, recommendations and deliberations that would reveal the process by which its decisions and policies are formulated, as well as "the desire to prevent disclosure of proposed policies before they have been fully vetted and adopted by a government agency." Ed. Law. Ctr., supra, 198 N.J. at 285-86; See Ciesla, supra, 429 N.J. Super. at 140-41 (treating pre-decisional drafts as protected materials under the deliberative process privilege). "Without such protection, policy advisers would be reluctant to express on paper or a computer screen their tentative thoughts on a pending issue, lest their words be prematurely launched into the public domain." Ciesla, supra, 429 N.J. Super. at 140-41.

Once the privilege is invoked, the presumption of confidentiality afforded to these documents can only be overcome "upon a showing that the need for the materials overrides the government's interest in confidentiality." Ed. Law Ctr., supra, 198 N.J. at 286-87. "Only in 'exceptional' cases will it be deemed consistent with the public interest to compel an agency to produce inter- or intra- agency advisory opinions." Ciesla, supra, 429 N.J. Super. at 146. Here, the record lacks any showing by the Center of substantial need for the materials that would override the Department's interest in confidentiality. Therefore, to the extent the ALJ ordered the release of these documents to the parties absent the required showing by the Center, that ruling is rejected. The Center and Lakewood shall immediately return DOE592-595, 608, 620, 630, 702-704, 810-811, 845-847, 892, and 900 to the DAG and destroy any and all copies thereof. Furthermore, these documents shall not be considered as part of the record in this matter or used as evidence during the proceedings.

Fourth, I conclude that the following documents are not shielded from disclosure by the deliberative process privilege: DOE536, 621-622, 629, and 825.[7] See Ed. Law Ctr., supra, 198 N.J. at 299-300. In evaluating whether documents are deliberative, "the deliberative nature of the material sought must be functionally determined based on the document's nexus to the decision-making process and its capacity to expose the agency's deliberations during that process." Id. at 298. "[W]hen materials [can]not reasonably be said to reveal an agency's or official's mode of formulating or exercising policy-implicating judgment the deliberative process privilege is inapplicable." Correctional Medical Servs., Inc. v. State, 426 N.J. Super. 106, 123 (App. Div. 2012) (internal citations omitted). These e-mail messages lack a sufficient nexus to the agency's policy-implicating judgment about the Center's 2014 application and disclosure will not expose the nature of the Department's deliberations. In particular, the documents in question do not "spell[] out the cumulative formulation of ideas among the participants," thereby distinguishing the present matter from the facts in McGee v. Township of East Amwell, 416 N.J. Super. 602, 621 (App Div. 2010). Therefore, to the extent the ALJ found these documents were not privileged, that ruling is upheld.

Fifth, as to the remaining documents at issue[8], it appears that they contain – in part – opinions, recommendations, or advice about agency policies subject to the deliberative process privilege and therefore warrant redaction prior to disclosure. See Gannett N.J. Partners, L.P. v. County of Middlesex, 379 N.J. Super. 205, 220 (App. Div. 2005) (requiring redaction of deliberative entries prior to release of documents). According to the Department's privilege log, some of these documents were redacted and produced previously, while others were withheld altogether. Without having reviewed the documents containing the redactions – as only unredacted documents were provided to this office – it is impossible to determine whether the information redacted by the Department was, in fact, deliberative in nature and appropriately shielded. Therefore, to the extent the ALJ ruled that these documents, in their entirety, were not privileged and ordered the release of unredacted versions to the Center and Lakewood, that ruling is rejected. The Center and Lakewood shall immediately return the unredacted documents to the DAG and destroy any and all copies thereof. Furthermore, the unredacted documents shall not be considered as part of the record in this matter or used as evidence during the proceedings. Nevertheless, I conclude that the Department must immediately produce appropriately redacted documents (to the extent it has not already done so) to the Center and Lakewood. The redacted documents will become part of the record and may be used as evidence during the proceedings.

[8] The remaining documents ruled upon by the ALJ include DOE498-499, 504, 538-541, 590, 607, 612, 619, 631, 793, 796, 823-824, 827, 837-842, 909-911, and 926-927.

Accordingly, the ALJ's March 26, 2015 order is hereby upheld in part, rejected in part, and modified as indicated herein. The stay of the proceedings at the OAL is hereby lifted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[9]

Sincerely,

Peter Shulman

3. Upon final approval of the signed Stipulation by the Arbitrator, and no later than April 30, 2015, Respondent will receive her full salary prorated for the period effective December 19, 2014 through March 27, 2015 in a lump sum check. All salary paid for said period shall be subject to all applicable and mandatory salary withholdings and deductions. Respondent will be recorded as an employee on administrative leave with pay between December 19, 2014 and March 27, 2015. Between March 28, 2015 and June 30, 2015, Respondent will be recorded as an employee on unpaid administrative leave.

4. Respondent shall not earn any paid vacation, sick or personal days for any portion of the 2014-15 school year.

5. The Board shall provide Respondent with health insurance until June 30, 2015. Pursuant to Chapter 78, Respondent shall be responsible for her employee contribution for the 2014-2015 school year. Respondent's required Chapter 78 contributions shall be deducted from the payments she will receive pursuant to Paragraph 3 of this Stipulation of Settlement.

6. This Stipulation is based upon the understanding that Respondent's separation from employment with the Board, effective June 30, 2015, will be deemed a voluntary resignation in good standing. Upon inquiry from any third party to authorized employees or representatives of the Board, those employees or representatives will provide no information other than to confirm Respondent's employment, position, salary and dates of employment, and state that the reason for her separation from employment was her voluntary resignation. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Board has agreed to prepare a one-time "To whom it may concern" letter, which has been approved by Respondent, and attached hereto as Exhibit "B".

7. The Board will not oppose any application by Respondent for unemployment benefits.

8. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 (a) 6, Respondent has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners. Additionally, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4, Respondent has been advised of the Board's duty to notify the State Board of Examiners she has resigned. The Board is legally required to participate in proceedings initiated against Respondent's license by the State Board of Examiners resulting from the Commissioner's referral. Aside from such requirements, pursuant to the above-referenced regulation, the Board agrees to not independently seek the suspension or revocation of Respondent's teaching certification or license or seek to prevent her from applying for or receiving pension benefits on any grounds related to the Tenure Charges or her resignation pursuant to this Stipulation of Settlement.

9. As of the Effective Date, all of Respondent's rights of employment with the Board, including but not limited to accrued salary, benefits, tenure and seniority, will permanently end.

10. Respondent will not apply for reemployment with the Board at any time. If Respondent does apply for reemployment with the Board and is approved for employment, the terms of this Agreement shall control and shall be grounds for termination of Respondent's employment.

11. In exchange for the consideration set forth in paragraph 3 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Respondent, through the date of her resignation, hereby waives, releases and discharges any and all claims or rights that she has or may have against the Board, the Superintendent, its Board of Education and its Advisory Board members, and any and all other Board officers, employees, representatives, agents, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Released Parties") including any claim for attorneys' fees, costs or other monetary relief. This waiver, release and discharge includes, without limitation, any and all actions, claims, and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, directly or indirectly related to Respondent's employment with the Board or separation from employment with the Board. It specifically includes, without limitation, all claims which Respondent may have regarding tenure, withholding of increment, discrimination on any basis, any federal or state civil rights law, any alleged violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Worker Benefits Protection Act; Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Fair Credit Reporting Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act; the Employee Polygraph Protection Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the retaliation provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002; the False Claims Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the New Jersey Equal Pay Law; the New Jersey Occupational Safety and Health Law; the New Jersey Smokers' Rights Law; the New Jersey Genetic Privacy Act; the New Jersey Fair Credit Reporting Act; New Jersey Wages and Hours Law, unemployment compensations laws, disability benefits laws, retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law; the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution; and/or any other alleged violation of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance; any claim based on contract, implied contract, collective bargaining agreement, tort law, personal injury, or public policy, having any bearing whatsoever on her employment by and/or termination of her employment with the Board, including but not limited to any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, vacation pay, sick pay, wages, attorneys' fees, costs, and/or future wage loss. Respondent agrees to withdraw any and all other pending complaints or actions that have been filed against the Board or any of its employees or representatives. The parties agree that Respondent, by signing this Stipulation of Settlement, does not waive any claims she may have related to exposure to toxic or hazardous substances during the course of Respondent's employment.

12. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act, if applicable, this Stipulation of Settlement advises Respondent of the legal requirements of the Act and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Stipulation of Settlement. Accordingly, by executing this Stipulation, Respondent acknowledges that she: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Stipulation of Settlement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Stipulation of Settlement; (iii) specifically waives her right to pursue any current claims she may have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; (iv) has been given sufficient time within which to consider this Stipulation of Settlement; and (v) has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this Stipulation of Settlement to revoke it. Respondent understands that she may rescind this Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the Board either by hand or by certified mail within the seven (7) day period.

13. This Stipulation and all of its terms, are and will remain confidential to the maximum extent permitted by law, including the Open Public Records Act, N.J.S.A. 47:1A-1, et al. Respondent is expressly forbidden from discussing this Stipulation with any person, other than her accountant, tax advisor and attorney ("permitted disclosures") and any other individual or entity as necessary to implement the Stipulation or to which it is legally obligated to respond ("legally-required disclosures"). In making any permitted disclosure, Respondent agrees that it will inform the person to whom it is making the permitted disclosure that the existence and substance of this Stipulation, the settlement giving rise to this Stipulation and the sum of money paid pursuant to this Stipulation are to be held strictly confidential to the fullest extent permitted by law. Respondent specifically agrees not to discuss the nature, terms, conditions of this Stipulation with others, any representative of the media, or any past, present, or prospective employee of the Board, or its agents or attorneys. Respondent understands that this provision is not a simple recital but is an important, integral part of this Stipulation. The Board agrees that it will keep this Stipulation confidential to the extent permitted by law, including the Open Public Records Act, N.J.S.A. 47:1A-1, et seq. ("OPRA"). In the event that the Board receives an OPRA request, for which this Stipulation would be responsive to, the Respondent understands that the Board is legally obligated to disclose same under OPRA and that such disclosure would not be a breach of this Stipulation.

14. Respondent understands that the instant tenure charge is a public document maintained by the Board under the New Jersey Open Public Records Act ("OPRA"). As such, while the instant tenure charges and related documents will be maintained elsewhere by the District, Respondent's personnel file will not contain the tenure charges or any related documents referencing the tenure charges.

15. This agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other Board employees.

16. The Parties each acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Stipulation and that each is signing this Stipulation freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion or pressure from the other party, with full understanding of its terms and conditions and consents to the terms contained herein.

17. Each signatory to this Stipulation understands, acknowledges and agrees that this Stipulation constitutes the full agreement of the parties and may not be altered, amended, modified, or otherwise changed in any respect whatsoever except by a duly executed writing signed on behalf of both Parties.

18. This Stipulation shall be construed and enforced in accordance with New Jersey law. The Commissioner of Education and/or federal and state courts of the State of New Jersey, as applicable in accordance with such law, shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any dispute arising from, in connection with, or related to this Stipulation.

19. This Stipulation may be executed in counterparts with the same effect as if the signatures hereto and thereto were upon the same instrument. Each counterpart will be deemed an original, which taken together shall constitute a single instrument. Facsimile signatures or signatures in electronic Portable Document Format ("PDF") shall be construed and have the same force and effect as original signatures.

20. This Stipulation or any uncertainty or ambiguity therein shall not be construed against any party, but shall be construed as if both Parties to this Stipulation jointly prepared this Agreement.

21. Each party acknowledges that this is the entire agreement of the Parties concerning the subject matter of the foregoing paragraphs, and that there are no written or oral representations, understandings or agreements directly or indirectly connected with this Stipulation.

22. If any provision of this Stipulation is held by a court of competent jurisdiction or determined under applicable law to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions will continue and remain in full force and effect.

23. Additionally, this Stipulation is subject to final approval by the Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(c), and will become effective only upon approval by the Arbitrator. Counsel for the Parties shall jointly request the Arbitrator's approval of this Agreement and each shall take any and all necessary steps to effectuate dismissal of the Tenure Charges.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, the arbitrator is required to issue a brief decision approving the settlement of tenure charges and explaining why the arbitrator is approving the terms of settlement. I have approved these terms for the following reasons.

I am persuaded that the issues that were raised in the Statement of Tenure Charges and Specifications filed by the Petitioner and the Answer to Tenure Charges filed by the Respondent have been fully reviewed and discussed by all parties and that the issues raised therein have been satisfactorily addressed by the terms of settlement. The terms of settlement reflect an appropriate resolution of the charges leveled against the Respondent. The settlement will allow both parties to move forward without using valuable educational time as well as the avoidance of protracted and costly proceedings at the public's expense. The Respondent's determination to tender her resignation in exchange for a monetary settlement will allow the Board to continue to provide a thorough and efficient education to the Board's students. The Respondent has been advised and understands that by accepting this settlement and tendering her resignation the Commissioner of Education has a duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in a loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate. I believe that the settlement terms properly balance all of the parties' interests and provide a satisfactory basis for the resolution of any concerns that were raised by the Statement of, and the Answer to, the Tenure Charges that were set forth in the record of this proceeding.

Accordingly, and based upon all of the above, this will serve as the arbitrator's approval of the parties' settlement agreement.

In the matter of	:
ANGELA L. DUNLAP HARRIS	:	AGENCY REFERENCE NO.: 378-12/14
BOROUGH OF HILLSIDE BOARD OF EDUCATION	:	STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

The Borough of Hillside Board of Education (the "Board"), whose principal office is located at 195 Virginia Street, Hillside, New Jersey 07205, and its successors, assigns, officers, employees, agents and representatives (collectively, "School Board"), and Angela L. Dunlap-Harris, residing at 71 Westervelt Place, Teaneck, New Jersey 07666 ("Respondent") (collectively, the "Parties") have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Stipulation of Settlement, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them in full and complete settlement of all outstanding issues as detailed below.

WHEREAS Respondent is a tenured teaching staff member employed by the Board as a teacher; and

WHEREAS the Superintendent of Schools for the Board ("Superintendent") certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming and other just cause to the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, captioned In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Angela L. Dunlap Harris, Borough of Hillside Board of Education ("Tenure Charges"), under Agency Reference Number 378-12/14 upon allegations, including, but not limited to, that Respondent was arrested and indicted on charges relating to the manufacture, distribution and possession of a controlled dangerous substance; the maintenance and operation of a controlled dangerous substance production facility; tampering with evidence and resisting arrest; and failing to report her arrest in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.1(c); and

WHEREAS, Respondent filed an answer opposing the charges; and

WHEREAS the Commissioner of Education, having reviewed the charges and Respondent's answer, determined that the charges were sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in compensation, and accordingly referred the matter to Arbitrator Joyce M. Klein ("Arbitrator") for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, Respondent has denied the allegations set forth in the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the Parties are aware of the uncertainty of the outcome of arbitration; and

WHEREAS, the Board with stringent budget limitations and due to the expenditure of resources due to multiple days of hearings with numerous witnesses, and the concern that school personnel will be removed from their educational duties and responsibilities during that time, the Parties wish to resolve this matter in accordance with the terms set forth herein rather than proceed with arbitration; and

WHEREAS the proposed Stipulation of Settlement is in the best interest of the Parties and the public because Respondent resigns from her employment without litigation and avoids an uncertain conclusion after protracted and costly proceedings at the expense of the public;

NOW, THEREFORE, subject to approval by the Arbitrator, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Concurrent with the execution of this Stipulation, Respondent shall submit an irrevocable letter of resignation to the Board, which shall provide for her resignation from the Board effective June 30, 2015, ("Effective Date"). (See Exhibit "A," to the Stipulation, a copy of Respondent's signed letter of resignation).

2. Upon final approval of the signed Stipulation by the Arbitrator, the Board shall and hereby does withdraw the instant Tenure Charges. The Board agrees to not pursue the subject Tenure Charges against Respondent as long as this Stipulation remains in effect and is not voided by any court or administrative agency of competent jurisdiction. In the event the Stipulation is voided, the Board retains the right to file and consider for certification, tenure charges against Respondent, including those tenure charges which have been previously filed against her by the Board, and Respondent reserves the right to defend same.

3. Upon final approval of the signed Stipulation by the Arbitrator, and no later than April 30, 2015, Respondent will receive her full salary prorated for the period effective December 19, 2014 through March 27, 2015 in a lump sum check. All salary paid for said period shall be subject to all applicable and mandatory salary withholdings and deductions. Respondent will be recorded as an employee on administrative leave with pay between December 19, 2014 and March 27, 2015. Between March 28, 2015 and June 30, 2015, Respondent will be recorded as an employee on unpaid administrative leave.

4. Respondent shall not earn any paid vacation, sick or personal days for any portion of the 2014-15 school year.

5. The Board shall provide Respondent with health insurance until June 30, 2015. Pursuant to Chapter 78, Respondent shall be responsible for her employee contribution for the 2014-2015 school year. Respondent's required Chapter 78 contributions shall be deducted from the payments she will receive pursuant to Paragraph 3 of this Stipulation of Settlement.

6. This Stipulation is based upon the understanding that Respondent's separation from employment with the Board, effective June 30, 2015, will be deemed a voluntary resignation-in good standing. Upon inquiry from any third party to authorized employees or representatives of the Board, those employees or representatives will provide no information other than to confirm Respondent's employment, position, salary and dates of employment, and state that the reason for her separation from employment was her voluntary resignation. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Board has agreed to prepare a one-time "To whom it may concern" letter, which has been approved by Respondent, and attached hereto as Exhibit "B".

7. The Board will not oppose any application by Respondent for unemployment benefits.

8. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 (a) 6, Respondent has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners. Additionally, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4, Respondent has been advised of the Board's duty to notify the State Board of Examiners she has resigned. The Board is legally required to participate in proceedings initiated against Respondent's license by the State Board of Examiners resulting from the Commissioner's referral. Aside from such requirements, pursuant to the above-referenced regulation, the Board agrees to not independently seek the suspension or revocation of Respondent's teaching certification or license or seek to prevent her from applying for or receiving pension benefits on any grounds related to the Tenure Charges or her resignation pursuant to this Stipulation of Settlement.

9. As of the Effective Date, all of Respondent's rights of employment with the Board, including but not limited to accrued salary, benefits, tenure and seniority, will permanently end.

10. Respondent will not apply for reemployment with the Board at any time. If Respondent does apply for reemployment with the Board and is approved for employment, the terms of this Agreement shall control and shall be grounds for termination of Respondent's employment.

11. In exchange for the consideration set forth in paragraph 3 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Respondent, through the date of her resignation, hereby waives, releases and discharges any and all claims or rights that she has or may have against the Board, the Superintendent, its Board of Education and its Advisory Board members, and any and all other Board officers, employees, representatives, agents, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Released Parties") including any claim for attorneys' fees, costs or other monetary relief. This waiver, release and discharge includes, without limitation, any and all actions, claims, and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, directly or indirectly related to Respondent's employment with the Board or separation from employment with the Board. Respondent agrees to withdraw any and all other pending complaints or actions that have been filed against the Board or any of its employees or representatives. The parties agree that Respondent, by signing this Stipulation of Settlement, does not waive any claims she may have related to exposure to toxic or hazardous substances during the course of Respondent's employment.

12. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act, if applicable, this Stipulation of Settlement advises Respondent of the legal requirements of the Act and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Stipulation of Settlement. Accordingly, by executing this Stipulation, Respondent acknowledges that she: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Stipulation of Settlement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Stipulation of Settlement; (iii) specifically waives her right to pursue any current claims she may

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF AMANDA EISENHOUR,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP	:	DECISION
OF HOWELL, MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

In January 2012, the Board certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming against Amanda Eisenhour – a tenured special education teacher in petitioner's school district – for alleged abusive behavior toward a student and for failure to follow procedures for security during Alternate Proficiency Assessment (APA) testing. The matter was heard in the OAL in May 2012, and the Initial Decision was issued in December 2012. The Commissioner issued a final decision in February 2013, in which he concurred with the ALJ that the Board had established that respondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct, but found that the charges against respondent were of a serious nature, warranting a penalty more severe than that recommended by the ALJ. Accordingly, the Commissioner ordered that the respondent's increment be withheld for two years and that – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 – she be suspended without pay for 120 days following the certification of tenure charges; further, the Commissioner ordered an additional 360 day suspension without pay, as well as appropriate training – with cost to be borne at respondent's expense as applicable – in the use of assistive techniques for dealing with difficult students and the protocol for the APA. Subsequently, respondent appealed the penalty imposed by the Commissioner. The Appellate Division remanded the matter to the Commissioner for analysis and consideration of the mitigating factors and the proportionality of the penalty for the respondent's unbecoming conduct.

On remand from the Appellate Division, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that: the factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, any evidence as to provocation, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring; in this case, there was no indication that respondent's conduct was premeditated or done with the intent to punish, however physical force in the school environment will not be tolerated; the ALJ's recommended penalty was not sufficient to impress upon respondent the seriousness of her errors in judgment; respondent engaged in two separate and unrelated incidents of unbecoming conduct, one involving excessive use of physical force with a student, and one involving a breach of testing protocols; a review of the hearing transcripts indicates that respondent did not admit or accept responsibility for her conduct, and thus there is concern that the behavior could reoccur; the penalty imposed must be significant enough to effectively communicate that although she may remain a teacher in the school district, respondent's unbecoming conduct was completely inappropriate and can never be repeated. Accordingly, the Commissioner determined that the appropriate penalty herein shall be the withholding of respondent's increments for two years; suspension without pay for 120 days following certification of the charges; an additional suspension without pay of 360 days; and appropriate training and assistance in connection with the use of assistive techniques for dealing with difficult students and the protocol for the APA, at respondent's own expense where applicable.

HEARING OF AMANDA EISENHOUR,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP	:	DECISION
OF HOWELL, MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:

This case involves tenure charges brought by the Board against respondent, Amanda Eisenhour, a special education teacher in the Howell Township School District. The Board charged the respondent with unbecoming conduct for exhibiting abusive behavior involving improper physical contact towards students, and for failing to follow the appropriate security measures in connection with Alternate Proficiency Assessment (APA) testing. The Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") found that the respondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct, including use of excessive physical force with a student, and a breach of testing protocols. The ALJ recommended: loss of respondent's increment for two years; forfeiture of the 120 days of pay withheld pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 following the certification of tenure charges; and an additional 150 day suspension without pay. The ALJ also recommended that the respondent be provided with the appropriate training and assistance in connection with the use of assistive techniques for dealing with difficult students and the protocol for the APA.

In a decision dated February 11, 2013, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the Board established that the respondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct. The Commissioner was also in accord with the ALJ's determination based on the circumstances and considerations existing in this matter, that the removal of respondent from her tenured position was an unduly harsh penalty. However, recognizing the seriousness of the charges, the Commissioner found that the penalty recommended by the ALJ was not sufficient to impress upon respondent the seriousness of her errors in judgment. The Commissioner emphasized that inappropriate physical force will not be tolerated under any circumstances, and the breach of testing protocols by tampering with assessments is extremely serious. The respondent appealed the Commissioner's February 11, 2013 decision, and on June 18, 2014, the Appellate Division remanded this matter to the Commissioner for an analysis and consideration of the mitigating factors and the proportionality of the penalty for the respondent's unbecoming conduct.

The factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, any evidence as to provocation, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring. In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967). It is also well recognized that by virtue of the unique position they occupy educators must be held to an enhanced standard of behavior. As was succinctly stated in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, School District of Black Horse Pike Regional, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321

> [Teachers] are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment. (Emphasis added)

It is well established that "unfitness to remain a teacher may be demonstrated by a single incident if sufficiently flagrant." Fulcomer, supra, 93 N.J. Super. at 421 (citations omitted)

After a comprehensive analysis of the nature and circumstances surrounding respondent's conduct in this case, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that, based upon the mitigating and aggravating factors outlined in the Initial Decision, the conduct proven at the hearing does not warrant the removal of the respondent's tenure. Notably, there is no indication that the respondent's conduct was "premeditated, cruel or vicious, or done with the intent to punish." See, In re Fulcomer, supra, 93 N.J. Super. at 421. However, the Commissioner again finds that the penalty recommended by the ALJ is not sufficient to impress upon respondent the seriousness of her errors in judgment displayed in this matter.

Despite the fact that the respondent has received positive evaluations during her tenure with the District, the respondent engaged in two separate and unrelated incidents of unbecoming conduct that involve excessive physical force with a student, and a breach of testing protocols. When considering the nature of the incidents under the Fulcomer, supra, analysis, it is often important to assess whether the students were directly impacted by the inappropriate conduct. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lauren Cooke, School District of the Township of Egg Harbor, Atlantic County, Commissioner Decision No. 503-10, decided November 22, 2010 (When determining the appropriate penalty for the respondent's use of inappropriate name calling in reference to another staff member, the Commissioner considered the fact that the respondent never treated the students inappropriately and her comments were not directed at a student or made around the students.) The fact that the unbecoming conduct proven in this case was not isolated to the faculty or staff, but instead directly impacted the special education students in the District, is an aggravating factor in determining the proportionality of the penalty.

Further, the Commissioner has previously stated that physical force in the school environment will not be tolerated. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Edith Craft, School District of the Township of Franklin, Somerset County, Commissioner Decision No. 366-11, decided September 1, 2011. In that case the Commissioner emphasized that:

> There are a series of cases which are routinely cited by litigants involving incidents of physical contact between a teacher and a student. Although the penalties given in those cases can offer some insight into appropriate penalties to be imposed in future matters, it is important to recognize that cases involving physical force are extremely fact sensitive and require a case-by-case analysis. Moreover, conduct on the part of teaching staff members that occurred several decades ago may not be consistent with the type of behavior that will be tolerated in this day and age.

Although the student was not injured in this case when the respondent yanked him by the arm, the Commissioner finds the respondent's behavior particularly troubling under the circumstances because her use of excessive force involved a special education student who may not be in a position to understand the situation. Moreover, the excessive force was witnessed by three other staff members, and it had an impact on the school environment. It is without question "that teachers carry a heavy responsibility by their actions and comments in setting examples for the pupils with whom they have contact." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Blasko, School District of the Township of Cherry Hill, 1980 S.L.D. 987, 1003.

Additionally, with regard to the respondent's present state, a review of the transcripts indicates that the respondent did not admit or accept any responsibility for her conduct. The respondent denied using excessive force on the student, and with respect to the testing protocols, she simply provided excuses for the breaches.[1] There is a concern that, without accepting responsibility or acknowledging the extent of the inappropriate conduct, there could be a likelihood of the behavior recurring. Consequently, a significant penalty must be imposed on the respondent that effectively communicates to her that although she may remain a teacher in the District, her conduct was completely inappropriate and can never be repeated.

Therefore, the respondent's increments shall be withheld for two years and – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 – the respondent is suspended without pay for 120 days following the certification of tenure charges, and the respondent shall also be suspended for an additional 360 days without pay. Furthermore, the respondent shall receive, at her own cost and expense to the extent there is same, the appropriate training and assistance in connection with the use of assistive techniques for dealing with difficult students and the protocol for the APA.

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.[1] Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons set forth in the recommended Order – that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to *Crowe v. BEFORE JOAN BEDRIN MURRAY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Patricia Gallante (Gallante), a resident and taxpayer of the City of Elizabeth, has filed an application for emergency relief, seeking an order as follows: (1) voiding the votes cast by respondent, Rafael Fajardo (Fajardo), at the January 7, 2015 reorganization meeting of the Elizabeth Board of Education (the Board); and (2) enjoining respondent, Anthony Monteiro (Monteiro), from continuing to occupy a seat on the Board in light of his resignation submitted on January 6, 2015.

In response, the Board contends that the issues raised by Gallante were disposed of in a predecessor action she brought against respondents, known as Patricia Gallante v. Elizabeth Board of Education, Rafael M. Fajardo, and Harold E. Kennedy, Jr., Law Division, Union County, Docket No. UNN-L-105-15, filed on January 12, 2015.[1] In that matter, Gallante challenged, via Verified Complaint in Lieu of Prerogative Writs, the validity of a special board meeting convened on January 6, 2015, without proper notice, in contravention of the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA). Said meeting came one day before the Board's reorganization meeting on January 7, 2015. Among her other demands, Gallante asked that an order issue voiding all actions taken at the January 6, 2015 special meeting. These actions included the Board voting to appoint departing board member Fajardo to fill a seat made vacant by the resignation of Monteiro earlier that day. Fajardo was an incumbent board member whose November 2014 bid for re-election to the Board failed. As such, his term was on the brink of expiration. After assuming Monteiro's seat at the January 6 special meeting, Fajardo sat with the Board at the January 7, 2015 reorganization meeting, casting a number of votes and conducting himself in every regard as a lawfully seated board of education member.

[1] Monteiro was not named as a respondent in this initial action. After its dismissal by Judge Cassidy, Monteiro was added as a respondent in petitioner's Verified Amended Petition of Appeal, filed with the Commissioner of Education on March 6, 2015. His inclusion in the instant matter stems from his January 14, 2015 withdrawal of his January 6, 2015 resignation from the Board, and his resumption of his board seat from that date to the present. This occurred two days after Judge Cassidy heard oral argument on Gallante's application for injunctive relief, as set forth in greater detail herein.

Oral argument on Gallante's application in the preceding action was heard on January 12, 2015, the date her Order to Show Cause was filed. Based on representations made by defendants that Fajardo would no longer hold himself out as a board member, and that all actions taken at the January 6, 2015 special meeting would be declared null and void, the Hon. Karen M. Cassidy, A.J.S.C., dismissed the relevant counts of Gallante's complaint for mootness. Pursuant to Paragraph 3 of the Order, filed on February 13, 2015, "[j]urisdiction of all remaining aspects of this matter shall be and hereby is transferred to the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey and/or the New Jersey School Ethics Commission for further proceedings and resolution, and therefore this Complaint & Order to Show Cause are dismissed with prejudice." (Rodriguez Cert., Exh. D.).

On March 6, 2015, Gallante filed a Verified Amended Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner), which was then filed in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on March 10, 2015. In support of her motion for emergency relief, petitioner submitted a brief, a certification of Jose Rodriguez (Rodriguez Cert.), and a reply memorandum of law. Respondents submitted a brief in opposition to the motion and in support of a cross-motion to dismiss, and a certification of Stephen Edelstein, Esq. (Edelstein Cert.). Oral argument, initially scheduled to be heard on March 13, 2015, was postponed at the request of respondents' counsel. Oral argument on the motion was then held on March 31, 2015.

A summary of the pertinent evidence presented follows.

On January 6, 2015, Monteiro tendered his resignation as a member of the Board to Board Secretary Harold E. Kennedy, Jr. (Kennedy). That evening, during the course of the special board meeting referred to above, the Board accepted Monteiro's resignation and voted to install Fajardo in the vacant seat. On the following night, January 7, 2015, the Board reorganized. The newly constituted Board was invited to individually address the public. Board Member Trujillo recognized Monteiro, who was present in the room, for his service to the Board, and advised the audience that Monteiro had decided to "work on other problems in the City and he cannot do that serving in this capacity." (Rodriguez Cert., Exh. C, January 7, 2015 Minutes at page 3). Fajardo assumed the board seat vacated by Monteiro, and voted on all matters that typically come before a reorganizing Board. On another front, Board attorney Lehman that night rendered his legal opinion that Board member Rodriguez had a conflict with regard to his board membership, purportedly due to recently discovered information that he was the President of the Watchung Hills Regional Education Association. Based on Lehman's recommendation, Kennedy then disregarded all votes cast by Rodriguez that evening. Id. at 15-17. Kennedy's failure to count Rodriguez's votes was included in Gallante's application for injunctive relief, heard by Judge Cassidy on January 12, 2015. This claim, like the others mentioned above, was rendered moot by Kennedy's subsequent recording of all votes cast by Rodriguez.[2]

On January 14, 2015, after Gallante's Order to Show Cause was heard by Judge Cassidy, a regular board meeting was convened. Fajardo did not appear. Instead, Monteiro came to the meeting. Kennedy then read a letter from Monteiro stating that he was withdrawing his resignation from the Board (Rodriguez Cert., Exh. E, January 14, 2015 Minutes at page 1). Attorney Stephen Edelstein, counsel to the Board in the Gallante matter, then advised the Board that as the validity of the special January 6, 2015 meeting was being challenged in a court action, it had been decided by board counsel, Fajardo, Monteiro, and Board President Amin that the meeting would be declared null and void. Id. at 2. According to respondents, since Monteiro's resignation was not accepted due to the meeting being a nullity, he was able to withdraw his resignation at the January 14, 2015 meeting and resume his board seat.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) sets forth the standards governing motions for emergent relief. The regulation states in part:

> A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. Degioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
> 2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
> 3. The petitioner has a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying claim; and
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the relief is not granted.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).]

Petitioner has the burden of establishing each of the above requirements in order to warrant relief in her favor.

Beginning with the issue of whether petitioner will likely succeed on the merits of the underlying claim, the facts presented thus far tilt in favor of petitioner with regard to Monteiro. Respondents urge that although the Board accepted Monteiro's resignation at the June 6, 2015 meeting, the Board later nullified that action at a subsequent meeting, rendering the resignation void. In fact, Monteiro resigned his Board seat, and then conducted himself in a manner that comports with that of a former board member. He appeared at the January 7, 2015 reorganization meeting, and accepted the plaudits and good wishes that were offered him by board member Trujillo. He permitted Trujillo, in essence, to speak on his behalf in explaining that Monteiro had other endeavors that he was interested in pursuing, and that he could not do so in his position as member of the Board of Education. Trujillo's words, unrefuted by Monteiro, strongly suggest that the resignation was a thoughtful, considered act. In Silberstein v. Board of Education of the Township of Lakewood, 1990 S.L.D. 491, the Commissioner of Education held that, "[i]n that a board member cannot be compelled to serve . . . so long as a resignation is clearly communicated to and received by a board of education, it is effective, even without a formal vote by the board . . ." Id. at 499. The Commissioner explained that although a board must take formal action to accept a resignation, "it is not necessary, however, for a resignation to become effective that there shall be a formal acceptance. Any conduct on the part of the officers charged with the duty of filling the vacancy . . . is sufficient . . . such as the appointment of a successor . . . or in any other manner treating the resignation as operative." Ibid. (quoting 78 C.J.S. Resignation Section 115 (1952). Further, while Silberstein claimed that his resignation was submitted hastily and in the middle of an emotional board meeting, the ALJ, in upholding the resignation, was persuaded by the certifications of two board members who indicated that Silberstein had explained the reasons for his resignation to them. Interestingly, he offered that the business of the Board was " . . . beginning to eat into my family and business obligations." Id. at 494. Therefore, not only does Silberstein stand for the proposition that a resignation needs only to be clearly communicated to a board, but also that the resigning member's expressed intent and accompanying actions are also a critical factor.

While the facts in this matter appear to be complicated at first blush, they are fairly straightforward, and will be rendered even more so once testimony is taken in a plenary hearing. The other criteria for determining whether emergency relief is appropriate, however, present a more difficult challenge. Turning to the first standard stated in Crowe, it is well settled that relief should not be granted except "when necessary to prevent irreparable harm." Crowe, supra 90 N.J. at 132. The moving party bears the burden of proving irreparable harm. More than a risk of irreparable harm must be demonstrated. Continental Group, Inc. v. Amoco Chemicals Corp., 614 F. 2d 351, 359 (D.N.J. 1980).

In the instant matter, I am not persuaded by the assertions of petitioner, as set forth in the supporting briefs, that if Monteiro is permitted to remain in his board seat pending a full hearing of this matter, irreparable harm will occur. I might take a different view if there was a third party who had a meritorious claim to the seat occupied by Monteiro, but this is not the case. In addition, as is evident from the actions of the Board in recent history, its members are schooled in the mechanics of taking remedial action. Conversely, I do not agree with respondents' position that in the event Monteiro is enjoined from sitting on the Board, hardship would ensue as the Board is in the throes of budget preparation. No proofs were offered that Monteiro is a member of the budget committee or is otherwise indispensable to the budget process.

On the other hand, respondents have raised, among other issues, the question of whether petitioner has standing to bring the within action, given that she is neither a school board member nor a parent in the district. A consideration of respondents' assertions in this regard constrain me from concluding that the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is wholly settled, based on the limited record before me.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to meet the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6a:3-1.6(b) warranting a stay or emergency relief. Accordingly, I ORDER that petitioner's application for such relief be and hereby is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Re: Board of Education of the Township of Washington, Gloucester County v. J.G. on behalf of minor child, B.G., Agency Dkt. No. 307-10/14.

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with this matter and based upon the respondent's failure to submit an Answer to the Petition that complies with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of the petitioner.

On October 16, 2014, the Board filed its Petition of Appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 seeking an order assessing tuition and claiming that minor child B.G. was not entitled to attend school in the district during the 2011-2012, 2012-2013, and 2013-2014 school years pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition was served upon J.G. on October 14, 2014 – via certified and regular mail – as was an acknowledgment of filing, and notice dated October 22, 2014 that an Answer to the Petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because J.G. failed to respond to the initial notice, a second notice was sent on November 7, 2014 – via certified and regular mail – clearly indicating that, absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition within 10 days, each count in the Petition would be deemed admitted and the matter may be decided on a summary basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). According to information obtained from the U.S. Postal Service, the copy sent via certified mail to J.G.'s

Turnersville address was not claimed, but the copy sent via regular mail to the Turnersville address was not returned. J.G. also failed to respond to the second notice.

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of J.G. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that B.G. was not entitled to attend school in the district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted. It is hereby ordered that J.G. reimburse the petitioner $15,669[1] in tuition costs for B.G.'s ineligible attendance in the district during the 2013-2014 school year. Because N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.1(a) does not permit tuition to be assessed in excess of one year, tuition reimbursement for B.G.'s ineligible attendance in the district during the 2011-2012 and 2012-2013 school years must be denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe
Commissioner of Education

AGENCY DKT NO. 10-11/14A

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF :
THE CERTIFICATES OF YVETTE NICHOLS :
BY THE STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS. :

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

Order of Suspension Decision by the State Board of Examiners, October 23, 2014

For the Respondent-Appellant, Ronald J. Ricci, Esq.

For the Petitioner-Respondent State Board of Examiners, Frederick H. Wu, Deputy Attorney General (John J. Hoffman, Acting Attorney General of New Jersey)

The Commissioner has reviewed the record and the papers filed in connection with the appellant, Yvette Nichol's, appeal of the State Board of Examiners' (Board) Order of October 23, 2014, suspending her Teacher of Elementary School Certificate of Eligibility With Advanced Standing and her Teacher of Elementary School Certificate for one year. On appeal the appellant does not deny that she posted inappropriate comments about a student on her Facebook page. Instead the appellant argues that her comments do not rise to the level of conduct necessary to suspend her certificates because they do not make her unfit to be a school teacher. In the alternative, the appellant maintains that if the one-year suspension is upheld it should be retroactive to one of the following dates: the date when the petitioner resigned as a teacher with the district; the date when the Board issued the Order to Show Cause; or the date when the Board voted to suspend her certificates.

In reviewing appeals from decisions of the State Board of Examiners, the Commissioner may not substitute his judgment for that of the Board so long as the appellant received due process and the Board's decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record. Further, the Board's decision should not be disturbed unless the appellant demonstrates that it is arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.1(a).

After full consideration of the record and all submissions, the Commissioner finds that the record adequately supports the Board's determination that the appellant engaged in unbecoming conduct and that a one-year suspension of the appellant's certificates was the appropriate penalty. There is nothing in the record to suggest that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, and as a result the Commissioner finds no basis upon which to disturb the decision of the State Board of Examiners. Moreover, the Commissioner is not persuaded by the appellant's argument that the commencement date for the one year suspension should be triggered by one of the dates proposed by the appellant. The one-year suspension of the appellant's certificates was not finalized until the Board issued its decision on October 23, 2014, and there is nothing in the applicable regulatory provisions to suggest that backdating the appellant's suspension would be appropriate.

Accordingly the decision of the State Board of Examiners is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED*

YVETTE NICHOLS	:	ORDER OF SUSPENSION
_____	:	DOCKET NO: 1314-170

At its meeting of December 6, 2013, the State Board of Examiners (Board) reviewed information the Wayne Township School District (Wayne) had forwarded pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4 regarding Yvette Nichols. Nichols resigned from her tenured position in Wayne following allegations that she and others had posted inappropriate comments on Facebook about a student in her class. Nichols allegedly posted a screenshot of an assignment one of her students had completed instructing students to "practice writing my name the kindergarten way." The student's name contained a curse word and Nichols allegedly posted ""I want to ask the parents if I can change it" and 'I still can't get over the student's name!" In response to others' comments about the name, Nichols allegedly wrote "How do you think I feel when I have to address him???? I literally can't stop laughing! I have to go all year with this'---!!!"" Wayne investigated and determined that Nichols had violated the district's Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying (HIB) policy. Nichols currently holds a Teacher of Elementary School Certificate of Eligibility With Advanced Standing, issued in September 2000 and a Teacher of Elementary School certificate issued in June 2001. Upon review of the information, at its January 17, 2014 meeting, the Board voted to issue Nichols an Order to Show Cause.

The Board sent Nichols the Order to Show Cause by regular and certified mail on January 24, 2014. The Order provided that Nichols must file an Answer within 30 days. Nichols responded on March 3, 2014. In that Answer, Nichols admitted to the allegations regarding her Facebook posts but denied that she had engaged in bullying, harassment or intimidation. (Answer, ¶¶ 3, 4). Nichols further denied that her conduct warranted the revocation of her certificates or that her actions had any effect on "the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system." (Answer, Affirmative Defenses, ¶¶ 2, 3). She added that her conduct had resulted from a lapse in judgment rather than a pattern of conduct and noted that she had no prior disciplinary history as a teacher in New Jersey. (Answer, Affirmative Defenses, ¶¶ 5, 6). In a certification attached to her Answer, Nichols stated that she had only had the student in question for a few days and had no ill will towards him and "intended no harm towards him or his family." (Certification, ¶ 3). Nichols added that "I had and still do not have any idea of the student's name is based on religious beliefs or his national origin." (Certification, ¶ 3). Nichols admitted that her statements were immature but noted that they were "based solely on the fact the student's name contained the word 'shit'." (Certification, ¶ 4). Nichols stated that she resigned from Wayne because she did not want to adversely affect the administration of the school or distract from the education of the students. (Certification, ¶ 6). She acknowledged that the lapse in judgment took place when she was depressed because of a recent divorce and subsequent break up, struggling with diabetes and raising her child as a single mother without any support. (Certification, ¶ 7). Nichols added that she had just started counseling when the conduct took place and had continued with the counseling sessions. (Certification, ¶ 9). She noted that she understood her comments were inappropriate and she expressed her remorse. (Certification, ¶ 10). She added that she disagreed with Wayne's findings that her actions constituted bullying and added that the investigator would not meet with her to discuss the district's concerns. (Certification, ¶ 12). Nichols requested that while the Board may find her conduct inappropriate, that it not result in the suspension or revocation of her certificates. (Certification, ¶ 14).

Thereafter, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.7(e), on March 11, 2014, the Board sent Nichols a hearing notice by regular and certified mail. The notice explained that it appeared that no material facts were in dispute. Thus, Nichols was offered an opportunity to submit written arguments on the issue of whether the conduct addressed in the Order to Show Cause constituted conduct unbecoming a certificate holder as well as arguments with regard to the appropriate sanction in the event that the Board determined to take action against her certificates. It also explained that upon review of the charges against her and the legal arguments tendered in her defense, the Board would determine if Nichols' offenses warranted action against her certificates. Thereupon, the Board would also determine the appropriate sanction, if any. Nichols was also offered the opportunity to appear before the Board to provide testimony on the sanction issue. Nichols submitted a Hearing Response on April 11, 2014.

In her response, Nichols again admitted to posting the comments on Facebook but denied that she was bullying the child. (Hearing Response, pp. 2-3). Nichols insisted that "the curse word in the name was the target of the Facebook post, not the child himself." (Hearing Response, p. 3). She added that the boy had only been her student for a few days and she "obviously did not harbor any ill will towards the young man or his family during such a short time period." (Hearing Response, p. 3). Nichols emphasized that her posts were based on the uniqueness of the student's name and that there was nothing to indicate that the comments were based on the student's national origin. (Hearing Response, p. 4). In her Hearing Response, Nichols also contrasted prior instances where teachers had engaged in patterns of inappropriate communications with students and received various suspensions of their teaching certificates. (Hearing Response, pp. 5-7). Finally, Nichols argued that the loss of her teaching position was a serious enough punishment for her conduct. (Hearing Response, pp. 7-9). In addition to her Hearing Response, Nichols requested to appear before the Board.

In testimony before the Board, Nichols' counsel argued that Nichols was a teacher who was well liked by her peers, students and the community. He added that she was dealing with health and financial issues at the time of her conduct and resigned right away because she did not want to cause a commotion in the district. He noted that Nichols apologized immediately and that she never meant to hurt anyone. Finally, he added that Nichols' loss of her dream job and her self-imposed suspension from public school employment was a sufficient penalty for her conduct.

Nichols testified that she was extremely remorseful and recognized that she had acted immaturely and made a bad decision. She stated that she had no intention to hurt anyone and repeated that she was "very, very sorry." Nichols added that she loved teaching and did not want that to be taken away.

The threshold issue before the Board in this matter is whether Nichols' posting comments on Facebook about a student's name constitutes conduct unbecoming a certificate holder. At its meeting of September 19, 2014, the Board considered the allegations in the Order to Show Cause, Nichols' Answer and Hearing Response with accompanying submissions and her testimony. The Board determined that no material facts related to Nichols' offense were in dispute since she admitted to the conduct alleged in the Order to Show Cause. Thus, the Board determined that summary decision was appropriate in this matter. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.7(h). It is therefore ORDERED that the charges in the Order to Show Cause are deemed admitted for the purpose of this proceeding.

The Board must now determine whether Nichols' conduct, as set forth in the Order to Show Cause, provides just cause to act against her certificates pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5. The Board finds that it does.

The Board may revoke or suspend the certification of any certificate holder on the basis of demonstrated inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5. "Teachers... are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of ... school children. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment." Tenure of Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321. Furthermore, the Commissioner has long held that teachers serve as role models for their students.

In this matter, Nichols had posted comments on her Facebook page ridiculing a child's name. Regardless of whether or not she intended her comments to be made public, Nichols' conduct was immature and hurtful and falls below the "role model" status that is expected of teachers. Accordingly, the Board believes that Nichols' behavior here cannot go unremarked.

Nonetheless, Nichols fully accepted responsibility for her actions and has offered an explanation about what led to her conduct. She has also undertaken counseling to deal with her level of stress and many responsibilities. She has also had a long record of teaching experience free of any disciplinary action. However, although the Board cannot condone Nichols' actions, her sincere sense of remorse coupled with her long and unblemished record and her cogent explanation of what transpired in her life during that time period, militate against the revocation of her certificates. Thus, the Board believes that the appropriate sanction in this case is the suspension of Nichols' certificates.

Accordingly, on September 19, 2104, the Board voted to suspend Nichols' Teacher of Elementary School Certificate of Eligibility With Advanced Standing and her Teacher of Elementary School certificate for a period of one year. On this 23rd day of October 2014 the Board voted to adopt its formal written decision and it is therefore ORDERED that the one-year suspension of Yvette Nichols' certificates be effective immediately. It is further ORDERED that Nichols return her certificates to the Secretary of the State Board of Examiners, Office of Licensure, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625-0500 within 30 days of the mailing date of this decision.

This case involves a challenge by the petitioners to the Board's determination that certain conduct directed at E.R. by another student, P.H., did not constitute Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying (HIB) pursuant to the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act (Act), N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq. In an Initial Decision dated August 11, 2014, an Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the Board's determination that P.H.'s conduct did not meet the definition of HIB was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, and granted summary decision in favor of the petitioners. This determination was adopted by the Commissioner in a final decision issued November 10, 2014. Subsequent to the issuance of the final decision, the Commissioner granted the Board's motion for reconsideration because an error in mailing had precluded the Board from submitting exceptions to the Initial Decision prior to the issuance of the Commissioner's final decision in the matter.

Upon consideration of the Board's exceptions and a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner again concurred with the ALJ's conclusion that the Board's determination that E.R. was not the victim of HIB must be overturned as arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, finding, inter alia, that: all four elements of the definition of HIB were clearly established in this case; the objections advanced in the Board's exceptions were unpersuasive; the Board's arguments as to why the proven conduct did not rise to the level of HIB are contrary to the spirit of the anti-bullying Act; and the Board's own investigation report of P.H.'s alleged conduct alone indicates that his behavior toward E.R. clearly met the definition of HIB. Further, the Commissioner expressly rejected the Board's contention that, since the term "sexual harassment" is not specifically contained in the text of the Act, that acts of sexual harassment cannot form the basis for a finding of HIB within the intendment of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the Board's determination that E.R. was not the subject of HIB was overturned. The respondent Board was directed to comply with all reporting and other statutory and regulatory requirements applicable to the substantiation of an incident of HIB.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, SOMERSET COUNTY,	:	AMENDED DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the Board of Education (Board) and the petitioners' reply thereto.[1] This case involves a challenge by the petitioners to the Board's determination that certain conduct directed at E.R. by another student, P.H., did not constitute Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying (HIB) pursuant to the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act (Act), N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the Board's determination that P.H.'s conduct did not meet the definition of HIB was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, and granted summary decision in favor of the petitioners.

In its exceptions the Board contends that the ALJ improperly granted summary decision in favor of the petitioners, and that the Initial Decision is based upon erroneous factual determinations which were unsupported or contradicted by the undisputed facts presented on the motion for summary decision. The Board argues that the ALJ failed to consider several facts disclosed by the HIB investigation that was conducted by the Board. Additionally, the Board asserts that it conducted an HIB investigation in full compliance with the Act and its decision was entirely reasonable based on the investigation. As such, the Board maintains that its determination was entitled to deference and the ALJ had no authority to modify it by granting summary decision to the petitioners sua sponte. Finally, the Board suggests that the ALJ should have applied a de novo standard of review instead of using the arbitrary capricious and unreasonable standard. Therefore, the Board maintains that the Initial Decision should be rejected.

[1] No exceptions were considered in the final decision issued by the Commissioner on November 10, 2014. On February 26, 2015, the Commissioner granted the Board's motion for reconsideration to allow the Board to submit exceptions. It was determined that the OAL sent the Board's copy of the Initial Decision to an incorrect email address, and did not provide the Board with a copy of the decision via the postal service. Therefore, the Board was not originally afforded an opportunity to submit exceptions prior to the issuance of the final decision.

As a threshold matter, the Board attempts to argue in its exceptions that this case presents an issue of first impression with respect to the standard of review to be used by an ALJ in evaluating whether a board of education has correctly interpreted the statutory definition of HIB.[2] It is well established that when a local school board acts within its discretionary authority, its decision is entitled to a presumption of correctness and will not be upset unless there is an affirmative showing that the decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Bd. of Ed. of Morris Twp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd 46 N.J. 581 (1966). The fact that the substance of this case involves a challenge to the Board's HIB determination and the application of the Act does not impact the customary standard of review.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that the Board's determination that E.R. was not the victim of HIB must be overturned as arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable. The Commissioner is also in accord with the ALJ's determination – for the reasons thoroughly outlined in the Initial Decision – that all four

[2] Ironically in the Board's motion for summary decision the Board stated that the appropriate standard of review in this case is the arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable standard. In fact, the Board included the applicable case law to support the fact that its decision should not be overturned unless it was established that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner.

elements of the definition of HIB were clearly established in this case.[3] Moreover, the Commissioner finds the objections advanced in the Board's exceptions to be unpersuasive. The arguments made by the Board as to why the proven conduct did not rise to the level of HIB are contrary to the spirit of the anti-bullying Act. Despite the Board's contention to the contrary, the ALJ was fully authorized to grant summary decision in favor of the petitioners, as it is clear from the Board's own investigation report alone that the conduct of P.H. did in fact meet the definition of HIB.[4]

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the Board's determination that E.R. was not the subject of HIB is hereby overturned. The Board of Education of the Bridgewater-Raritan School District is hereby directed to comply with all reporting and other statutory and regulatory requirements applicable to the substantiation of an incident of HIB.

[3] The Commissioner expressly rejects the argument advanced by the Board in its summary decision motion that, since the term "sexual harassment" is not specifically contained in the Act, acts of sexual harassment cannot form the basis for a finding of HIB within the intendment of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. The Commissioner finds nothing in the language of the statute or in the legislative history of the Act to support the notion that the Legislature intended to exclude acts of sexual harassment from the definition of HIB. To the contrary, the Act was enacted "to strengthen the standards and procedures for preventing, reporting, investigating, and responding to incidents of harassment, intimidation, and bullying of students that occur in school and off school premises." N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.1.f. (emphasis added).

[4] The Board's investigation report states, "[d]uring the month of April P.H. asked E.R. to do inappropriate things through text and ooVoo. E.R. did not comply with P.H.'s request but he continued to ask her. After being counseled by Mrs. Geogham, P.H. stopped asking E.R. to do inappropriate things through text or ooVoo." Additionally, according to the report, P.H. admitted "that he asked to see [E.R.'s] breast a couple of times." Finally, other students who were interviewed during the investigation indicated that they saw or were aware of other text messages "that mentioned fingering and saying 'you're so sexy' [and where P.H.] asked [E.H.] to make out with him and strip [and] show him her private areas."

[5] This decision may be appealed to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1).

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF LINDEN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Agency Docket No.: 287-9/14

AWARD OF ARBITRATOR

Hearings were held in the above-entitled matter on February 5, 2015 and on March 13, 2015 at the Linden Board of Education in Linden, New Jersey before Daniel F. Brent, duly designated as Impartial Arbitrator for the purpose of adjudicating the tenure charges filed by the Board of Education of Linden Public Schools against Phyllis Mack pursuant to the TEACHNJ Act, NJSA 18A: 6-16, as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26. These charges alleged that Respondent had engaged in conduct unbecoming a public school secretary, gross misconduct, and other just cause requiring her dismissal. The Board of Education introduced documentary evidence setting forth in detail the basis for the charges in the instant case. The Respondent disputed the validity of the tenure charges. During the course of the hearings, the parties resolved their dispute amicably.

The terms and conditions of this voluntary resolution were reduced to a Settlement Agreement and Release executed by both parties on April 8, 2015. The Settlement Agreement and Release was ratified by the Linden Board of Education by a formal resolution adopted by the Board at its meeting on April 27, 2015, as certified by the Board Secretary on April 28, 2015.

The Settlement Agreement and Release was submitted to the Arbitrator for examination and approval. After duly considering the nature of the tenure charges, the Respondent's record of service to the Linden Public Schools, the absence of harm to any student, and the advantages and factors cited by the parties as the basis underlying their voluntary settlement, I hereby find the terms and conditions contained in the Settlement Agreement and Release between the Linden Board of Education and Respondent Phyllis Mack dated April 8, 2015, as agreed upon by the Respondent and the Board, each of whom has been advised by independent legal counsel, to be reasonable, consistent with the terms and intent of the TEACHNJ statute and applicable regulations, and in the best interest of both the parties and the public. The Settlement Agreement and Release resolved all issues and allegations of misconduct, including the charge of conduct unbecoming a public school employee.

Consequently, I accept the settlement as proposed by the parties in the Settlement Agreement and Release executed by the parties, and hereby issue this Award of Arbitrator incorporating the terms of the Settlement Agreement and Release, which Award will be effective as of April 27, 2015.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE CHARGES AGAINST PHYLLIS MACK, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

AGENCY REFERENCE NO. 287-9/14

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made and entered into between the Linden Board of Education ("Board") and Phyllis Mack ("Mack"), collectively referred to as the "Parties".

WHEREAS, Mack is a tenured secretary assigned to Linden High School; and

WHEREAS, the Board certified tenure charges against Mack on or about September 23, 2014 for unbecoming conduct; and

WHEREAS, the matter was assigned to Daniel F. Brent to arbitrate the tenure proceedings; and

WHEREAS, the parties have reached an amicable resolution in resolving the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the Parties deem it to be in their best interests to set forth in a formal written agreement their respective rights, duties and obligations regarding the resolution; and

WHEREAS, the Parties have been afforded the opportunity to consider the terms of this Agreement with advice of counsel and/or a representative of their choice;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and the mutual covenants herein contained, and for other good and valuable considerations, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The recitals set forth above are incorporated herein by reference and made part of this Agreement as if set forth at length.

2. The "Board", as used herein, shall at all times mean the Board of Education of the City of Linden, its affiliates, predecessors, successors and assigns of any and all of them, their present and former directors, officials, elected officials, officers, representatives, associates, partners, servants, employees, agents, attorneys, and successors, whether in their individual or official capacities, and all other persons, firms, corporations, associations, partnerships or any other entity connected therewith.

3. "Mack", as used herein, shall mean Phyllis Mack, her heirs, representatives, privies, executors, administrators, assigns, successors-in-interest and predecessors-in-interest.

4. In consideration of the covenants set forth in this Agreement, the parties agree as follows:

    a. Mack shall be assigned to a secretarial position within the District at the sole and exclusive discretion of the Superintendent and Board. Mack's assignment shall be made effective on a date selected by the Superintendent in his sole and exclusive discretion. The effective date of Mack returning to work is within the sole and exclusive discretion of the Superintendent. The District will notify Mack of her reassignment no later than seven (7) calendar days prior to her return-to-work date.

    b. Mack will not be reimbursed for the 120-day unpaid suspension she has already served as a result of tenure charges being filed against her. The suspension will remain recorded as an unpaid suspension.

5. Mack expressly understands and agrees that the terms and payment set forth in this Agreement include any and all amounts that may ever be claimed by Mack or on her behalf, or by her attorneys, heirs, successors or assigns against the Board. The parties covenant not to sue, initiate or continue any legal or administrative proceedings or appeals with regard to any or all claims released herein, provide; however, that this shall not preclude any claims pertaining to a breach or enforcement of this Agreement from being taken.

6. In consideration of the mutual promises and exchanges made herein, the Parties agree and understand that this Agreement is a compromise settlement of all claims asserted and unasserted in connection with the tenure charges certified by the Board against Mack and that the Board will not take any further disciplinary action against Mack based on the allegations that gave rise to the charges. By entering into this Agreement, neither party admits that it has violated New Jersey Statute, Title 18A; New Jersey Administrative Code, Title 6 and Title 6A; state or federal law or any contractual provisions that might exist. This Agreement is entered solely for the purpose of resolving disputed claims and neither the execution, delivery, nor performance of this Agreement, shall constitute or be construed at any time or for any purpose to be an admission of fact or liability by any of the Parties.

7. The Parties acknowledge and agree that this Agreement is a full and complete settlement of any and all claims that have been asserted or can be asserted or may be asserted or could be asserted by either Party against the other for compensatory damages, pain, suffering, emotional distress, stress, humiliation, embarrassment, mental anguish, medical expenses, punitive damages, interests, attorneys fees, costs of suit, loss of sick time, loss of vacation time, loss of benefits, consequential damages, reputation damages, breach of express or implied contract, interference in any contract, economic opportunity or prospective economic advantage which arose out of or could arise out of the Board's certification of tenure charges against Mack.

8. As an inducement for the Parties to enter into this Agreement, each Party does hereby remise, release and forever discharge all other parties from any and all debts, obligations, suits, actions, causes of action, claims or demands, in law or in equity, which any one Party now has or hereafter may assert against the others arising out of the Board's certification of tenure charges against Mack and/or her employment with the Board, including, but not limited to, all claims, liabilities, costs and attorneys' fees under: (1) the Civil Rights Acts of 1964, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2000(e) et seq.); (2) the Americans with Disabilities Act; (3) the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (N.J.S.A. 10:5-1, et seq.); (4) any collective negotiations agreement; (5) Title 18A and its rules and regulations, including, but not limited to, Title 6A, including any tenure appeal; (6) the Constitution of the United States; (7) the Constitution of New Jersey; (8) wage and hour laws, federal and state; (9) any other federal or state statute or common law; (10) any and all paid and/or unpaid medical and/or personal and/or family leave laws and regulations, federal and state including, but not limited to, FMLA and NJ FLA; (11) any and all federal and state tax laws and regulations, including, but not limited to, the Internal Revenue Code and New Jersey Tax provisions; (12) the New Jersey Tort Claims Act N.J.S.A. Title 59; (13) the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution; and/or (14) other causes of action whether enumerated herein specifically or not. Further, the parties hereby waive any and all relief not explicitly provided for in this Agreement. Nothing in this provision shall be deemed to bar either party from taking any and all necessary legal action to enforce the terms of this Agreement.

9. The Parties agree that in consideration of the promises set forth in this Agreement that neither party shall file: (a) an appeal before the Commissioner of Education seeking any type of relief whatsoever; (b) any grievances or arbitrations relative to Mack's employment; and (c) any type of judicial or administrative action of any type or nature in connection with Mack's employment, tenure charges, terms and conditions of employment or payments made under this Agreement. Mack agrees to release, acquit and forever discharge the Board from any and all claims which have been or may be made against the Board by any other person or organization on his behalf. Mack specifically waives any right to become, and promises not to become, a member of any class in any case in which any claim is asserted against the Board, involving any event that has occurred on or before the date of this Agreement. The Board affirms that, as of the date of execution of this Agreement, they have no knowledge of any pending class action against it to which Mack could be a potential class member.

10. Mack and the Board shall each bear their own costs, attorney's fees, and any other expenses associated with these tenure proceedings and this Agreement. As further consideration for this Agreement, Mack and her attorney and/or representative agree that the sums set forth in this Agreement represents all of the monies which the Board has agreed and will ever agree to pay in connection with Mack's tenure charges and her employment with the Board.

11. This Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.
12. Mack's and/or the Board's failure to contest a breach of any provision hereof shall not operate or be construed as a waiver of that breach by the other, or as a waiver of any subsequent breach by the other.
13. If any term, provision or condition of this Agreement is held invalid or unenforceable by a court of competent jurisdiction, such holding shall be without effect upon the validity or enforceability of any other provision, term or condition of this Agreement.
14. The parties hereby acknowledge and agree that they further expressly waive and assume the risk of any and all claims or damages which exist regarding Mack's tenure charges and/or her employment as of this date for which the Board and Mack do not know of or suspect to exists, whether through ignorance, oversight, error, negligence, or otherwise and which, if known, would materially affect their decision to enter into this Agreement.
15. Both parties acknowledge that this Agreement is subject to approval of the Board. If such approval is not given, this Agreement and all stipulations and acknowledgements, whether contained herein or attached hereto, shall be rendered null and void and the parties shall be returned to the status quo existing prior to this Agreement. If approved, the Board's resolution approving this Agreement shall be attached and maintained with this Agreement.
16. Both parties acknowledge that this Agreement is subject to approval by Arbitrator Daniel F. Brent. If such approval is not given, this Agreement and all stipulations and acknowledgements, whether contained herein or attached hereto, shall be rendered null and void and the parties shall be returned to the status quo existing prior to this Agreement.

17. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts but shall be enforceable only if executed by Mack and the Board.

18. This Agreement contains the entire Agreement between Mack and the Board with regard to the matters set forth in it, and shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of their officials, officers, directors, attorneys, representatives, employees, associates, partners, agents, servants, executors, administrators, personal representatives, heirs, successors and assigns of each, and all other persons, firms, corporations, associations or partnerships or any other entity or persons connected therewith, except as set forth herein or as may be agreed to in writing between the parties.

19. In entering into this Agreement, Mack has relied upon the legal advice of her attorney or representative, who is the attorney or representative of her own choice, as to the terms of this Agreement which have been completely read and explained by her attorney or representative and those terms are fully understood and voluntarily accepted as being reasonable.

20. The terms of this Agreement, the Agreement itself, and any information relative to the tenure charges, shall be held in strictest confidence by all parties and their agents and representatives and shall not be publicized or disclosed in any manner whatsoever, except that: (a) either party may disclose this Agreement or any other information relative to the tenure charges in confidence to their attorneys, accountants, auditors, tax preparers, and financial advisors; (b) the Board may disclose this Agreement or any other information relative to the tenure charges as necessary to fulfill its obligation under the Open Public Records Act, as well as all other standard or legally required reporting or disclosure requirements; and (c) the parties may disclose this Agreement or any other information relative to the tenure charges insofar as such disclosure may be necessary to enforce its terms or as otherwise required by law.

21. Both parties acknowledge and agree that they will not disclose, discuss or post the terms of this Agreement via electronic communication, including, but not limited to, e-mail or text messages; or via the internet or social media websites, including, but not limited to, Facebook, Twitter, blogs, NJ.com, or similar websites.

22. Both parties agree that, if asked about the Agreement by anyone, including any member of the media, they will respond only: "That the matter has been resolved to the mutual satisfaction of the parties."

23. Mack acknowledges and agrees that if she is to violate any of the terms of this Agreement, including but not limited to breach of the provisions set forth in paragraphs 20 through 23, all of the Board's obligations shall cease and the Parties will return to their original positions as if this Agreement never occurred and the tenure charges will be reinstated and proceed accordingly.

24. In any action commenced against a party to enforce the provisions of this Agreement, the moving party, if it is the prevailing party, shall be entitled to recover its reasonable attorneys' fees, costs and disbursements incurred in prosecuting the action.

25. Mack understands that, pursuant to the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, if applicable, she has been advised to consult with an attorney before signing this Agreement, had twenty-one (21) calendar days to consider the Agreement before signing it, and may revoke the Agreement within seven (7) calendar days after signing it. Mack further understands that the Agreement will not become effective or enforceable until the seven (7) day revocation period has expired. Timely revocation of this Agreement can be made in writing, signed by Mack, delivered to and received by counsel for the Linden Board of Education, Mark A. Tabakin, Esq., Weiner Lesniak, 629 Parsippany Road, Parsippany, New Jersey 07054 by no later than 5:00 P.M. on the seventh (7th) day after Mack signs this Agreement. Mack expressly understands and agrees that if she does not sign this Agreement, or if she revokes it within the Revocation Period, the Agreement shall not be effective or enforceable, and she will not be entitled to any of the payments and other benefits provided for in this Agreement until the Revocation Period expires. If the Agreement is revoked or not signed by Mack, the parties shall revert to the positions they were in as though the Agreement was never made.

26. For purposes of construction, this Agreement shall not be deemed to be drafted by any Party, and any ambiguity shall not be construed against any Party.

    a. Modrak will be returned to the Principals' Salary Guide effective July 1, 2015 at the Principals' Salary Guide for the High School Principal, MA+30, at Step 5. However, she shall continue to be paid at that step with no step movement for the remainder of her time in the District subject to Paragraph ~~B~~ C, below. MT

    b. Modrak shall be returned not to the position of Principal, but to the position of coordinator, supervisor, or some other administrative position. However, the parties agree that whatever the title may be that is assigned to Modrak, she shall retain her tenure in the category of Principal subject to Paragraph 5, below.

c. Modrak shall turn 55 on January 1, 2019. She shall remain governed by the two paragraphs listed above until June 30, 2019. At that time, in the discretion of the District, she may be returned to the classroom, as a tenured teaching staff member. She shall return to the highest step of the Linden Education Association MA+30 12 Month Guide then in effect.

d. It is mutually understood that in the event both parties to this Agreement shall determine at any point in the future to amend the terms of this Agreement and mutually agree to a different placement/assignment of Modrak, nothing contained in the Agreement shall be interpreted as precluding that possibility.

e. Modrak acknowledges that in entering into this Agreement she is waiving any claim to repayment for the 120 days she was suspended.

5. Modrak expressly understands and agrees that the terms and payment set forth in this Agreement include any and all amounts that may ever be claimed by Modrak or on her behalf, or by her attorneys, heirs, successors or assigns against the Board. The parties covenant not to sue, initiate or continue any legal or administrative proceedings or appeals with regard to any or all claims released herein, provided however, that this shall not preclude any claims pertaining to a breach or enforcement of this Agreement from being taken.

6. In consideration of the mutual promises and exchanges made herein, the Parties agree and understand that this Agreement is a compromise settlement of all claims asserted and unasserted in connection with the tenure charges certified by the Board against Modrak. By entering into this Agreement, neither party admits that it has violated New Jersey Statute, Title 18A; New Jersey Administrative Code, Title 6 and Title 6A; state or federal law or any contractual provisions that might exist. This Agreement is entered solely for the purpose of resolving disputed claims and neither the execution, delivery, nor performance of this Agreement, shall constitute or be construed at any time or for any purpose to be an admission of fact or liability by any of the Parties.

7. The Parties acknowledge and agree that this Agreement is a full and complete settlement of any and all claims that have been asserted or can be asserted or may be asserted or could be asserted by either party against the other for compensatory damages, pain, suffering, emotional distress, stress, humiliation, embarrassment, mental anguish, medical expenses, punitive damages, interests, attorney's fees, costs of suit, loss of sick time, loss of vacation time, loss of benefits, consequential damages, reputation damages, breach of express or implied contract, interference in any contract, economic opportunity or prospective economic advantage which arose out of or could arise out of the Board's certification of tenure charges against Modrak and/or her employment with the Board.

8. As an inducement for the Parties to enter into this Agreement, each Party does hereby remise, release and forever discharge all other Parties from any and all debts, obligations, suits, actions, causes of action, claims or demands, in law or in equity, which any one Party now has or hereafter may assert against the others arising out of the Board's certification of tenure charges against Modrak or her surrendering of her principal position, including, but not limited to, all claims, liabilities, costs and attorneys' fees under: (1) the Civil Rights Acts of 1964, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2000(e) et seq.); (2) the Americans with Disabilities Act; (3) the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (N.J.S.A. 10:5-1, et seq.); (4) any collective negotiations agreement; (5) Title 18A and its rules and regulations, including, but not limited to,

Title 6A, including any tenure appeal; (6) the Constitution of the United States; (7) the Constitution of New Jersey; (8) wage and hour laws, federal and state; (9) any other federal or state statute or common law; (10) any and all paid and/or unpaid medical and/or personal and/or family leave laws and regulations, federal and state including, but not limited to, FMLA and NJ FLA; (11) any and all federal and state tax laws and regulations, including, but not limited to, the Internal Revenue Code and New Jersey Tax provisions; (12) the New Jersey Tort Claims Act N.J.S.A. Title 59; (13) the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution; and/or (14) other causes of action whether enumerated herein specifically or not. Further, the parties hereby waive any and all relief not explicitly provided for in this Agreement. Nothing in this provision shall be deemed to bar either party from taking any and all necessary legal action to enforce the terms of this Agreement.

9. The Parties agree that in consideration of the promises set forth in this Agreement that neither party shall file: (a) an appeal before the Commissioner of Education seeking any type of relief whatsoever; (b) any grievances or arbitrations relative to Modrak's employment; and (c) any type of judicial or administrative action of any type or nature in connection with Modrak's employment, tenure charges, terms and conditions of employment or payments made under this Agreement. Modrak agrees to release, acquit and forever discharge the Board from any and all claims which have been or may be made against the Board by any other person or organization on her ~~his~~ behalf. Modrak specifically waives any right to become, and promises not to become, a member of any class in any case in which any claim is asserted against the Board, involving any event that has occurred on or before the date of this Agreement. The Board affirms that, as of the date of execution of this Agreement, they have no knowledge of any pending class action against it to which Modrak could be a potential class member.

10. Modrak and the Board shall each bear their own costs, expenses, attorney's fees and any other costs associated with these tenure proceedings and this Agreement. As further consideration for this Agreement, Modrak and her attorney and/or representative agree that the sums set forth in this Agreement represents all of the monies which the Board has agreed and will ever agree to pay in connection with Modrak's tenure charges and her employment with the Board, as of this date.

11. This Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

12. Modrak's and/or the Board's failure to contest a breach of any provision hereof shall not operate or be construed as a waiver of that breach by the other, or as a waiver of any subsequent breach by the other.

13. If any term, provision or condition of this Agreement is held invalid or unenforceable by a court of competent jurisdiction, such holding shall be without effect upon the validity or enforceability of any other provision, term or condition of this Agreement.

14. The parties hereby acknowledge and agree that they further expressly waive and assume the risk of any and all claims or damages which exist regarding Modrak's tenure charges and/or her employment as of this date for which the Board and Modrak do not know of or suspect to exists, whether through ignorance, oversight, error, negligence, or otherwise and which, if known, would materially affect their decision to enter into this Agreement.

15. Both parties acknowledge that this Agreement is subject to approval of the Board. If such approval is not given, this Agreement and all stipulations and acknowledgements, whether contained herein or attached hereto, shall be rendered null and void and the parties shall be returned to the status quo existing prior to this Agreement. If approved, the Board's resolution approving this Agreement shall be attached and maintained with this Agreement.

16. Both parties acknowledge that this Agreement is subject to approval by Arbitrator Daniel R. Brent. If such approval is not given, this Agreement and all stipulations and acknowledgements, whether contained herein or attached hereto, shall be rendered null and void and the parties shall be returned to the status quo existing prior to this Agreement.

17. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts but shall be enforceable only if executed by Modrak and the Board.

18. This Agreement contains the entire Agreement between Modrak and the Board with regard to the matters set forth in it, and shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of their officials, officers, directors, attorneys, representatives, employees, associates, partners, agents, servants, executors, administrators, personal representatives, heirs, successors and assigns of each, and all other persons, firms, corporations, associations or partnerships or any other entity or persons connected therewith, except as set forth herein or as may be agreed to in writing between the parties.

19. In entering into this Agreement, Modrak has relied upon the legal advice of her attorney or representative, who is the attorney or representative of her own choice, as to the terms of this Agreement which have been completely read and explained by her attorney or representative and those terms are fully understood and voluntarily accepted as being reasonable.

20. The terms of this Agreement and the Agreement itself shall be held in strictest confidence by all parties and shall not be publicized or disclosed in any manner whatsoever, except that: (a) either party may disclose this Agreement in confidence to their attorneys, accountants, auditors, tax preparers, and financial advisors; (b) the Board may disclose this Agreement as necessary to fulfill its obligation under the Open Public Records Act, as well as all other standard or legally required reporting or disclosure requirements; and (c) the parties may disclose this Agreement insofar as such disclosure may be necessary to enforce its terms or as otherwise required by law.

21. Both parties acknowledge and agree that they will not disclose, discuss or post the terms of the Agreement via electronic communication, including, but not limited to, e-mail or text messages; or via the internet or social media websites, including, but not limited to, Facebook, Twitter, blogs, NJ.com, or similar websites.

22. Both parties agree that, if asked about the Agreement by anyone, including any member of the media, they will respond only: "That the matter has been resolved to the mutual satisfaction of the parties."

23. Modrak acknowledges and agrees that if she is to violate any of the terms of this Agreement, including but not limited to breach of the provisions set forth in paragraphs 20 through 23, all of the Board's obligations shall cease and the Parties will return to their original positions as if this Agreement never occurred and the tenure charges will be reinstated and proceed accordingly.

24. In any action commenced against a party to enforce the provisions of this Agreement, the moving party, if it is the prevailing party, shall be entitled to recover its reasonable attorneys' fees, costs and disbursements incurred in prosecuting the action.

25. For purposes of construction, this Agreement shall not be deemed to be drafted by any Party, and any ambiguity shall not be construed against any Party.

DECISION APPROVING SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

For the Respondent:

On March 9, 2014, I was assigned as the arbitrator for the above referenced matter. Pursuant to my discussions with the parties' attorneys, a total of five (5) days were scheduled for this matter: March 26, April 1, April 2, April 28, and May 7, 2015. Settlement discussions took place on March 26th and April 1st. The hearing commenced on April 2nd, but the parties agreed to continue their settlement discussions in lieu of proceeding on the evidentiary record. The parties drafted a settlement agreement that was executed by the Respondent on April 20, 2015. The Board's next meeting was scheduled for April 28, 2015. I agreed to cancel the April 28th hearing date but kept the May 7th date in place in the event that the Board did not approve the settlement agreement.

On April 28, 2015, the Borough of Keansburg Board of Education [the "Petitioner"] formally executed and adopted the settlement resolving the tenure charges it filed with the State of New Jersey, Department of Education on February 12, 2015. The terms of settlement are included in the settlement agreement attached hereto. On May 7, 2015, I conducted a final conference with the parties' Counsel and the Respondent to discuss the terms of settlement.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 requires the arbitrator to issue a brief decision approving the settlement of tenure charges and explaining why the arbitrator is approving the terms of settlement.

The parties' settlement agreement expressly details the basis for resolution. I have thoroughly reviewed and considered the parties' reasons for settlement set forth therein. Having considered the stated reasons in conjunction with the issues raised in the Statement of Tenure Charges and the Statement of Evidence filed by the Petitioner and the Response to Tenure Charges filed by the Respondent, I am persuaded that the parties entered the settlement agreement knowingly and willingly and that the terms of the settlement agreement represent a reasonable basis for settlement that will serve the public's interest and are consistent with the public good.

Accordingly, and based upon the foregoing, I approve the parties' settlement agreement.

Accordingly, and based upon the foregoing, I approve the parties' settlement agreement.

Before: Robert Gifford, Arbitrator

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The above-captioned matter having been filed with the Commissioner of Education and transferred to Arbitrator Robert Gifford for a hearing on Tenure Charges filed by Petitioner, the Keansburg Board of Education against Respondent, Jason Ali, and the parties to this matter having discussed the amicable resolution of this litigation without the allocation of further time and expense, the parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Jason Ali shall be suspended, without pay or benefits, from February 3, 2015 through June 30, 2015. During this period of suspension, Respondent shall not appear on school property or at any school-related extra-curricular/co-curricular activity.

2. Jason Ali shall be reinstated to active service with the District as of July 1, 2015, with health benefits.

3. Respondent's increment shall be withheld for the 2015-2016 school year.

4. Respondent shall be reassigned to a new school building effective September 1, 2015. The administration shall use reasonable efforts to advise Mr. Ali of his new assignment, sufficient to allow him to prepare for the same. Respondent's Corrective Action Plan for the 2014-2015 school year shall be continued for the 2015-2016 school year. Respondent further agrees that he shall not apply for any extracurricular or co-curricular/after school stipended positions in the future.

5. The District shall provide a letter to the Monmouth County Prosecutor's Office, advising that the District and Mr. Ali have resolved all outstanding employment issues related to his home instruction submissions.

6. In the event Mr. Ali shall choose to leave the District, he shall be provided with a neutral letter of reference.

7. The parties further agree that all monetary relief with regard to these tenure charges shall be satisfied through the terms of this Agreement.

8. Petitioner and Respondent each agree that they will keep this Agreement confidential to the extent permitted by law. The parties further agree that neither party will disparage the other, whether orally or in writing, nor will either party encourage any other person to do so.

9. Petitioner and Respondent each waive any and all claims, in any forum, arising out of or related to this matter or Respondent's employment with Petitioner, including but not limited to Respondent's suspension, reinstatement, placement on leave, the certification of tenure charges against him, any tenure related claims, and any and all other claims. This waiver is intended to be given the broadest possible reading and includes any claims which either party has, had, or could have had against the other party, its employees, members, and agents.

10. Each party shall bear their own attorneys fees and costs.

11. The terms set forth herein constitute the parties' entire agreement with regard to this matter. No other terms shall be implied or included. In the event that the Arbitrator does not approve this Agreement, it shall become null and void, and the parties shall resume the litigation of this matter;

12. The parties acknowledge that all terms of this Agreement are subject to the review and approval of the Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6. As required by that regulation and in accordance with the standards established by the State Board of Education in In re Cardonick, the parties submit the following information in support of their mutual decision to resolve this matter:

    a. The Tenure Charges allege that during the course of his tenure Respondent committed several acts of Conduct Unbecoming by allegedly seeking and receiving overpayments for home instruction, central detention and academic support services. Respondent has denied such conduct, and has advised that the same were merely clerical errors;

    b. The parties, through counsel and with the assistance of the Arbitrator Robert Gifford, have identified terms of settlement which will amicably resolve the matter to the benefit of both parties, and will allow both parties to move forward without allocation of further time or expense involved in tenure litigation;

    c. Both parties, having had the opportunity to review this matter with their respective legal counsel, consent to this Agreement voluntarily and with the mutual interests of closure and moving forward;

d. Respondent, in entering this Agreement, represents that he does so with a full understanding or his rights and the effects and implications of all terms of this Agreement, and that he does so having thoroughly reviewed this matter with legal counsel;

e. The parties represent that this Agreement is in the public interest, as it adequately resolves this matter, and allows both parties to move forward without any further expenditure of public monies for the discovery, hearing, review, and possible appellate components of the litigation of tenure charges;

f. Respondent, in entering this Agreement, acknowledges that he has been advised of the Commissioner of Education's duty to refer tenure determinations to the State Board of Examiners in certain instances.

WHEREFORE, the parties to this matter are so agreed, and set their signatures on this 20th day of April, 2015

In the Matter of the Tenure Charges Against

EDWARD J. MACK III

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF LINDEN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Agency Docket No.: 286-9/14

AWARD OF ARBITRATOR

Hearings were held in the above-entitled matter on February 5, 2015 and on March 13, 2015 at the Linden Board of Education in Linden, New Jersey before Daniel F. Brent, duly designated as Impartial Arbitrator for the purpose of adjudicating the tenure charges filed by the Board of Education of Linden Public Schools against Edward J. Mack III pursuant to the TEACHNJ Act, NJSA 18A: 6-16, as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26. These charges alleged that Respondent had engaged in conduct unbecoming a tenured maintenance staff member during the 2013-14 school year, gross misconduct, and other cause requiring his dismissal. The Board of Education introduced documentary evidence setting forth in detail the basis for the charges in the instant case. The Respondent disputed the validity of the tenure charges. During the course of the hearings, the parties resolved their dispute amicably.

The terms and conditions of this voluntary resolution were reduced to a Settlement Agreement and Release that was executed by Respondent and witnessed by his attorney on March 27, 2015, and by the President of the Linden Board of Education and the Board Secretary on April 27, 2015. The Settlement Agreement and Release was ratified by the Linden Board of Education by a formal resolution adopted by the Board at its meeting on April 27, 2015, as certified by the Board Secretary on April 28, 2015.

The Settlement Agreement and Release was submitted to the Arbitrator for examination and approval. After duly considering the nature of the tenure charges, the Respondent's record of service to the Linden Public Schools, the absence of harm to any student, and the advantages and factors cited by the parties as the basis underlying their voluntary settlement, I hereby find the terms and conditions contained in the Settlement Agreement and Release between the Linden Board of Education and Respondent Edward J. Mack III dated April 27, 2015, as agreed upon by the Respondent and the Board, each of whom has been advised by independent legal counsel, to be reasonable, consistent with the terms and intent of the TEACHNJ statute and applicable regulations, and in the best interest of both the parties and the public.

The Settlement Agreement and Release resolved all issues and allegations of misconduct, including the charge of conduct unbecoming a public school employee. Consequently, I accept the settlement as proposed by the parties in the Settlement Agreement and Release executed by the parties, and hereby issue this Award of Arbitrator incorporating the terms of the Settlement Agreement and Release, which Award will be effective as of April 27, 2015.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE CHARGES AGAINST EDWARD J. MACK, III, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

AGENCY REFERENCE NO. 286-9/14

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made and entered into between the Linden Board of Education ("Board") and Edward J. Mack ("Mack"), collectively referred to as the "Parties".

WHEREAS, Mack is a tenured maintenance worker employed by the Board; and

WHEREAS, the Board certified tenure charges against Mack on or about September 23, 2014 for unbecoming conduct; and

WHEREAS, the matter was assigned to Daniel F. Brent to arbitrate the tenure proceedings; and

WHEREAS, the parties have reached an amicable resolution in resolving the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the Parties deem it to be in their best interests to set forth in a formal written agreement their respective rights, duties and obligations regarding the resolution; and

WHEREAS, the Parties have been afforded the opportunity to consider the terms of this Agreement with advice of counsel and/or a representative of their choice;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and the mutual covenants herein contained, and for other good and valuable considerations, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The recitals set forth above are incorporated herein by reference and made part of this Agreement as if set forth at length.

2. The "Board", as used herein, shall at all times mean the Board of Education of the City of Linden, its affiliates, predecessors, successors and assigns of any and all of them, their present and former directors, officials, elected officials, officers, representatives, associates, partners, servants, employees, agents, attorneys, and successors, whether in their individual or official capacities, and all other persons, firms, corporations, associations, partnerships or any other entity connected therewith.

3. "Mack", as used herein, shall mean Edward J. Mack, his heirs, representatives, privies, executors, administrators, assigns, successors-in-interest and predecessors-in-interest.

4. In consideration of the covenants set forth in this Agreement, the parties agree as follows:

a. Effective immediately, Mack shall be placed on a paid leave of absence through October 31, 2018, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-7. During the period of his paid leave of absence, Mack shall be relieved of all duties and responsibilities of his employment with the Board.

b. During Mack's paid leave of absence, he shall forfeit all accrued, but unused time, including sick, vacation and personal days available to him (185 sick, 25 vacation, 3 article: 213 total). Mack shall not accrue any additional time off whatsoever during the duration of his paid leave.

c. During the entirety of Mack's paid leave of absence, his right of access to the Board and its property shall be no different than that of a member of the public at large. As such, Mack will be subject to all statutes, regulations and Board policies governing the visitation by the public to school property/events.

d. During the entirety of the paid leave of absence, Mack shall be subject to all statutes, regulations and Board policies governing the conduct of public employees of the Board and school-District employees in general.

e. Mack agrees to sign and submit to the Board contemporaneous with the execution of this Agreement an irrevocable letter of resignation in furtherance of retirement, effective October 31, 2018. Mack's resignation in furtherance of retirement shall be deemed to be accepted simultaneously with the Board's approval of this Agreement. In the event that the Board and/or Arbitrator Brent do not approve this Agreement, the Board shall return the signed letter of retirement and all terms of this Agreement shall become null and void. In accordance with his resignation in furtherance of retirement letter, Mack's employment with the Board shall automatically cease on October 31, 2018.

f. For the entirety of Mack's paid leave of absence, Mack's salary will be "red-circled" at his current salary of $64,038. As such, Mack expressly acknowledges and agrees that he shall not be entitled to any pay increases during his remaining employment with the Board, so long as the instant Agreement remains in effect.

g. Mack will not be reimbursed for the 120-day unpaid suspension he has already served as a result of tenure charges being filed against him. The suspension will remain on record as an unpaid suspension.

h. The Board shall withdraw the instant tenure charges against Mack which were certified on or about September 23, 2014 for unbecoming conduct.

i. The Board shall not bring any tenure or other disciplinary charges nor take any other adverse employment actions against Mack based upon the conduct alleged herein or as alleged in the tenure charges against Mack which were certified on or about September 23, 2104 for unbecoming conduct.

5. The Board shall provide Mack with reasonable assistance in forwarding documents to the Division of Pensions and Benefits so as to facilitate Mack's retirement from the District. The Board shall complete the forms needed for Mack to seek a retirement; however, Mack acknowledges and understands that the Board will take no further action with regard to Mack's retirement unless required by law. In response to any Certification of Service and Final Salary – Retirement form received by the Board from the Division of Pensions and Benefits, the Board shall certify that Mack is not currently on suspension in response to question 7(a) (check the box marked "NO") of the current form presently in use and the Board shall certify that Mack is not facing nor has he recently been considered for disciplinary action or indictment in response to question 7(b) (check the box marked "NO"). Said form is attached hereto and incorporated by reference herein. Mack expressly agrees and understands that his resignation is final and irrevocable no matter what and regardless of whether or not his application for retirement is successful.

6. Mack expressly understands and agrees that the terms and payment set forth in this Agreement include any and all amounts that may ever be claimed by Mack or on his behalf, or by his attorneys, heirs, successors or assigns against the Board in connection with the resolution of the tenure charges certified by the Board against Mack. The parties covenant not to sue, initiate or continue any legal or administrative proceedings or appeals with regard to any or all claims released herein, provide; however, that this shall not preclude any claims pertaining to a breach or enforcement of this Agreement from being taken. This provision is subject to the limitation set forth in Paragraph 8 regarding Mack's reservation of rights and claims and ability to seek redress for any claims associated with environmental exposure or exposure to toxins or toxic chemicals.

7. In consideration of the mutual promises and exchanges made herein, the Parties agree and understand that this Agreement is a compromise settlement of all claims asserted and unasserted in connection with Mack's employment, tenure charges, terms and conditions of employment or payments made under this Agreement, subject to the reservations contained in Paragraph 8. By entering into this Agreement, neither party admits that it has violated New Jersey Statute, Title 18A; New Jersey Administrative Code, Title 6 and Title 6A; state or federal law or any contractual provisions that might exist. This Agreement is entered solely for the purpose of resolving disputed claims and neither the execution, delivery, nor performance of this Agreement, shall constitute or be construed at any time or for any purpose to be an admission of fact or liability by any of the Parties.

8. The Parties acknowledge and agree that this Agreement is a full and complete settlement of any and all claims that have been asserted or can be asserted or may be asserted or could be asserted by either party against the other for compensatory damages, pain, suffering, emotional distress, stress, humiliation, embarrassment, mental anguish, medical expenses, punitive damages, interests, attorney's fees, costs of suit, loss of sick time, loss of vacation time, loss of benefits, consequential damages, reputation damages, breach of express or implied contract, interference in any contract, economic opportunity or prospective economic advantage which arose out of or could arise out of Mack's employment, tenure charges, terms and conditions of employment or payments made under this Agreement. Mack expressly reserves his right to assert any claims associated with environmental exposure or exposure to toxins or toxic chemicals while employed by the Board.

9. As an inducement for the Parties to enter into this Agreement, each Party does hereby remise, release and forever discharge all other Parties from any and all debts, obligations, suits, actions, causes of action, claims or demands, in law or in equity, which any one Party now has or hereafter may assert against the others arising out of the Board's certification of tenure charges against Mack, including, but not limited to, all claims, liabilities, costs and attorneys' fees under: (1) the Civil Rights Acts of 1964, as amended (42 U.S.C. 2000(e) et seq.); (2) the Americans with Disabilities Act; (3) the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (N.J.S.A. 10:5-1, et seq.); (4) any collective negotiations agreement; (5) Title 18A and its rules and regulations, including, but not limited to, Title 6A, including any tenure appeal; (6) the Constitution of the United States; (7) the Constitution of New Jersey; (8) wage and hour laws, federal and state; (9) any other federal or state statute or common law; (10) any and all paid and/or unpaid medical and/or personal and/or family leave laws and regulations, federal and state including, but not limited to, FMLA and NJ FLA; (11) any and all federal and state tax laws and regulations, including, but not limited to, the Internal Revenue Code and New Jersey Tax provisions; (12) the New Jersey Tort Claims Act N.J.S.A. Title 59; (13) the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution; and/or (14) other causes of action whether enumerated herein specifically or not. Nothing in this provision shall be deemed to bar either party from taking any and all necessary legal action to enforce the terms of this Agreement.

10. The Parties agree that in consideration of the promises set forth in this Agreement that neither party shall file: (a) an appeal before the Commissioner of Education seeking any type of relief whatsoever; (b) any grievances or arbitrations relative to Mack's employment; and (c) any type of judicial or administrative action in connection with Mack's employment, subject to the reservations contained in Paragraph 8 above and elsewhere. Mack agrees to release, acquit and forever discharge the Board from any and all claims which have been or may be made against the Board by any other person or organization on his behalf. The Board affirms that, as of the date of execution of this Agreement, they have no knowledge of any pending class action against it to which Mack could be a potential class member.

11. Mack and the Board shall each bear their own costs, expenses, attorney's fees and any other costs associated with these tenure proceedings and this Agreement. As further consideration for this Agreement, Mack and his attorney and/or representative agree that the sums set forth in this Agreement represents all of the monies which the Board has agreed and will ever agree to pay in connection with Mack's tenure charges.

12. This Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

13. Mack's and/or the Board's failure to contest a breach of any provision hereof shall not operate or be construed as a waiver of that breach by the other, or as a waiver of any subsequent breach by the other.

14. The parties hereby acknowledge and agree that they further expressly waive and assume the risk of any and all claims or damages which exist regarding Mack's tenure charges as of this date for which the Board and Mack do not know of or suspect to exists, whether through ignorance, oversight, error, negligence, or otherwise and which, if known, would materially affect their decision to enter into this Agreement.

15. Both parties acknowledge that this Agreement is subject to approval of the Board. If such approval is not given, this Agreement and all stipulations and acknowledgements, whether contained herein or attached hereto, shall be rendered null and void and the parties shall be returned to the status quo existing as of February 5, 2015. If approved, the Board's resolution approving this Agreement shall be attached and maintained with this Agreement.

16. Both parties acknowledge that this Agreement is subject to approval by Arbitrator Daniel F. Brent. If such approval is not given, this Agreement and all stipulations and acknowledgements, whether contained herein or attached hereto, shall be rendered null and void and the parties shall be returned to the status quo existing as of February 5, 2015.

17. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts but shall be enforceable only if executed by Mack and the Board.

officials, officers, directors, attorneys, representatives, employees, associates, partners, agents, servants, executors, administrators, personal representatives, heirs, successors and assigns of each, and all other persons, firms, corporations, associations or partnerships or any other entity or persons connected therewith, except as set forth herein or as may be agreed to in writing between the parties.

19. In entering into this Agreement, Mack has relied upon the legal advice of his attorney or representative, who is the attorney or representative of his own choice, as to the terms of this Agreement which have been completely read and explained by his attorney or representative and those terms are fully understood and voluntarily accepted as being reasonable.

20. The terms of this Agreement and the Agreement itself shall be held in strictest confidence by all parties and shall not be publicized or disclosed in any manner whatsoever, except that: (a) either party may disclose this Agreement in confidence to their attorneys, accountants, auditors, tax preparers, and financial advisors; (b) the Board may disclose this Agreement as necessary to fulfill its obligation under the Open Public Records Act, as well as all other standard or legally required reporting or disclosure requirements; and (c) the parties may disclose this Agreement insofar as such disclosure may be necessary to enforce its terms or as otherwise required by law.

21. Both parties acknowledge and agree that they will not disclose, discuss or post the terms of this Agreement via electronic communication, including, but not limited to, e-mail or text messages; or via the internet or social media websites, including, but not limited to, Facebook, Twitter, Blogs, NJ.com, or similar websites.

23. The Board agrees that in response to inquiries as to Mack's employment with the Board including, but not limited to, inquiries from prospective employers that the Board shall limit any response to such inquiries to confirmation of Mack's title and position with the Board, the length of Mack's employment with the Board, that Mack has been continually employed with the Board since his employment with same began in October 1981, and that Mack's present salary is $64,038.00 per annum. All inquiries related to Mack's employment shall be responded to and directed to the Superintendent of Schools and only to the Superintendent of Schools. The provisions of this section of the Agreement shall not apply in the event that Mack provides the Board with a signed statement authorizing the release of information protected by this provision for prospective employers.

24. The Board and Mack acknowledge and agree that if either party violates any of the terms of this Agreement, including but not limited to breach of the provisions set forth in paragraphs 20-24, all of the duties and obligations under this Agreement shall immediately and automatically cease and the Parties will be returned to their original positions as if this Agreement never occurred and the tenure charges will be reinstated and proceed accordingly.

25. In any action commenced against a party to enforce the provisions of this Agreement, the moving party, if it is the prevailing party, shall be entitled to recover its reasonable attorneys' fees, costs and disbursements incurred in prosecuting the action.

26. Mack understands that, pursuant to the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, if applicable, he has been advised to consult with an attorney before signing this Agreement, had twenty-one (21) calendar days to consider the Agreement before signing it, and may revoke the Agreement within seven (7) calendar days after signing it. Mack further understands that the Agreement will not become effective or enforceable until the seven (7) day revocation period has expired. Timely revocation of this Agreement can be made in writing, signed by Mack, delivered to and received by counsel for the Linden Board of Education, Mark A. Tabakin, Esq., Weiner Lesniak, 629 Parsippany Road, Parsippany, New Jersey 07054 by no later than 5:00 P.M. on the seventh (7th) day after Mack signs this Agreement. Mack expressly understands and agrees that if he does not sign this Agreement, or if he revokes it within the Revocation Period, the Agreement shall not be effective or enforceable, and he will not be entitled to any of the payments and other benefits provided for in this Agreement until the Revocation Period expires. If the Agreement is revoked or not signed by Mack, the parties shall revert to the positions they were in as though the Agreement was never made.

27. For purposes of construction, this Agreement shall not be deemed to be drafted by any Party, and any ambiguity shall not be construed against any Party.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to the standards enunciated in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Accordingly, the recommended order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted for the reasons expressed therein.[1] The Commissioner returns the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for a plenary hearing – or such other proceedings as the ALJ and the parties determine – to resolve the underlying claim on the merits.[2]

B.C. o/b/o A.A.,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE HUNTERDON CENTRAL REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT,
Respondent.

Brian M. Adams, Esq., for petitioner (Canellis & Adams, L.L.C., attorneys)

John B. Comegno, II, Esq., for respondent (Comegno Law Group, P.C., attorneys)

BEFORE JOSEPH A. ASCIONE, ALJ:

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, B.C. o/b/o minor child, A.A., filed an application for emergent relief with the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes. The application requested among other things that A.A.'s thirty-day sanction from extra-curricular activities for violation of the substance abuse policy be reversed to allow A.A.

to participate in lacrosse practices and games immediately at the Hunterdon Central Regional High School ("HCRHS"). Respondent Board of Education Hunterdon Central Regional High School ("Board") suspended A.A. from extracurricular activities for behavior it deemed as not adhering to the behavioral expectations for students participating in the Districts Ski and Snowboarding Club's Trip (Trip) to Stowe Mountain (Stowe), Burlington, Vermont during the period from February 27 through March 1, 2015. At issue is the propriety of the discipline imposed by the Board, given the behavior of A.A.

The case was filed at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on March 16, 2015, for a hearing on the requested emergent relief. This Administrative Law Judge held oral argument on March 26, 2015, at the OAL, Quakerbridge Plaza, Building 9, Quakerbridge Road, Mercerville, New Jersey.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

This matter involves a challenge to the Board's policies on substance abuse and student conduct, which, in essence, outlines the efforts of the district to assist its students academically as well as protecting the welfare of the entire school community. As a result, the parties agree that the Board validly adopted random drug testing, substance abuse and code of conduct policies, and that those policies were in place as of September 2014, at the start of the 2014-2015 school year. In September 2014, students enrolled in the HCRHS either received copies of the policies or copies were made available on line, which contained behavioral expectations and established disciplinary measures for various infractions of the policies. Prior to acceptance in the Trip, the parents and A.A. received and agreed to be bound by an overnight trip procedure policy. One of the conditions, on page 3, at paragraph 3, included compliance with the substance abuse policy, and language confirmed a violation, "will result in disciplinary action... ." Further that policy in part provided on page 4, at paragraph 5, "... If alcohol and/or illegal drugs are found in a room, ALL those occupying the room may be held accountable and sent home. If discovered on an individual, only that individual will be penalized. THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO EXCEPTIONS to these rules."

A.A. is a twelfth grade student at HCRHS. A.A. has an interest in pursuing lacrosse. He is a member of the lacrosse team. He attended the Trip. While on the trip A.A., and his roommate, C.R., allowed another student in their motel room, K.J. K.J. brought with him hashish, a compressed cannabis substance.

HCRHS's teacher and chaperone for the Trip, Brendon Mahon (Mahon) advised HCRHS vice-principal Andrew Estrada (Estrada) of a February 27, 2015 incident, which occurred at approximately 8:45 p.m. in Burlington, Vermont. Estrada, at 11:18 p.m. by e-mail, advised Mahon and Suzanne Cooley (Cooley), the HCRHS principal that he would contact the parents. At the time of Estrada's e-mail, the two-hour window for drug testing under the policy had expired. Estrada or other staff contacted A.A.'s parents and they picked up A.A. from the Trip on the morning of February 28, 2015. Estrada, after unsuccessful attempts to contact the parents by phone, advised them by e-mail of the three-day suspension at 9:24 p.m. on Sunday, March 1, 2015.

Mahon's certification related that at approximately 8:45 p.m. on February 27, 2015, the smell of cannabis permeated the hall outside of room 114, A.A.'s and C.R.'s assigned room, and when the chaperone entered the room he discovery hashish and drug paraphernalia and K.J., another student. The police were called, and statements were obtained. K.J. admitted to the ownership of the hash and the paraphernalia. K.J. advised the police that there were more drugs in A.A.'s room mini refrigerator. The police issued a violation to K.J., but not to the other students. The possession, and/or consent to store within the room, the principal certified qualifies as a violation of the substance abuse policy. The principal also certified that K.J., on questioning, claimed he did not smoke in his own room as a result of his roommate's disinclination toward the hash. K.J. further provided the school with information that A.A. and C.R. had discussed using their room on the bus trip up to Stowe. This information is hearsay, and is not accepted for the truth of the statement.

The Board's decision to suspend A.A. from school for three days, thirty-day loss of participation in extra-curricular activities, and loss of parking privileges is consistent with the 2014-2015 HCRHS Substance Abuse Policy Guidelines.

The petitioner argues that A.A. denies taking any drugs and supports his position with a negative urine test in the afternoon of March 1. The Board argues the timing of the test is unacceptable under the guidelines. The timing is an appropriate concern but under the circumstances, the chaperones were responsible for A.A. until the parents could arrive. Although notice was given the parents, it was not immediate as provided by the substance abuse policy, but rather after two hours, and they were six hours away from the location at the time of the incident. The chaperone may not have had a responsibility to complete the drug testing timely, but the HCRHS cannot rely on the absence of a timely drug test as authority to invoke the provision of the policy that concludes that an untimely drug test yields a positive test. This tribunal cannot determine whether the negative test is at the approved testing criteria, or whether time had an effect on the results. Estrada did confirm that the school blood test given on March 6, 2015 was clear, a requirement for the return to school. That test is not related to the HCRHS finding of a violation of the substance abuse policy.

Petitioner argues the penalty is arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable, and disproportionate to the offense, comparing it to the actions when random testing results in a positive finding. The random testing may provide a positive result if alcohol or drugs are consumed off school property and the policy is designed to provide counseling. This tribunal does not find the objectives of the policies in contradiction to each other or indicative that a comparison to each other is appropriate. The substance abuse policy is designed to address activities on school premises or on school sponsored trips or events.

HCRHS's position is that the February 27, 2015, initial interview by Mahon, is the first afforded due process hearing, the second occurred on March 3, 2015, with the principal Cooley, vice-principal Estrada, and District Superintendent, Christina Steffner. These hearings provided petitioner with an opportunity to understand the charges leveled and to respond to them. The parent's main concern was the thirty-day extra-curricular prohibition. The school represented that it is understands the serious implications to A.A. but the drug abuse policy is not flexible in the penalty because of the requirement of uniformity.

A.A. has been accepted into the following colleges, Moravian, McDaniel, Washington College, Vermont, U. Mass at Amhurst, Villanova, and is on the wait list for Richmond, Freeman and Gettysburg. Moravian, McDaniel and Washington College have already granted scholarship monies to A.A. for lacrosse. The irreparable harm claimed by petitioner is that some college's lacrosse scouts want to see A.A., and the family is not in a position to provide them with dates A.A. will play.

The Board represented that the thirty-day restriction on extra-curricular activities is being tracked from February 28 not a date in early March, so that the restriction will end on March 30, 2015. However, no practices can occur until March 31, 2015, and pursuant to New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) rule at page 53, Section 7, six practice days are required until a student may play in a game. Violation of the NJSIAA rule could have an adverse effect on the entire team. Accordingly, if no practices are cancelled, and under the worst case scenario (practices do not occur on game days), the earliest A.A. may be able to play is April 11, 2015. A.A. would miss approximately half of the regular season.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION OF LAW

Petitioner claims that respondent's actions in this matter are arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious, and that respondent's actions violated their son's due process rights because of the proceedings before the HCRHS and Board. They also contend that the consequences of enforcing the substance abuse policy are punitive in nature and disciplinary, and inconsistent with the stated policies of educational and therapeutic approaches. While those are some of the stated policies, the policy is clearly a disciplinary policy designed to protect the individual student as well as the entire student community. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 in addition to discussing the due process procedures provides at N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(d) that suspension of extra-curricular participation is authorized.

The Board maintains that its substance abuse and code of conduct policies are in accordance with all acceptable standards of the Department of Education, that its policies have a beneficial impact on defining positive student behavior and encouraging students to resist peer pressure regarding the negative impact of drugs and alcohol, and that the policies create a positive educational opportunity for the affected student. Participation in extra-curricular activities is not a right, but a privilege. Thus, the Board contends that, after having signed the conditions for participation in the Trip, and being subject to the school policies, neither the student nor the parents can now argue that the policies have no application to them. The parents and child agreed to the terms of the conditions when they all accepted the overnight policy form, and implicitly agreed to the Board's policies, but now disavow it because A.A. admitted an infraction, which is the direct subject of the Board's policies.

Petitioner here has the burden of persuasion, yet, it has chosen to support its application with the certification of a parent, not present at the time of the incident. The petition is lacking in any certification from A.A., denying the violation, or explaining the circumstances surrounding the presence of hash in his room.

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a) provides for the granting of emergency relief where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case. In such circumstances, emergency relief pending a final decision may be ordered upon the application of a party. Subparagraph (f) of this section provides that temporary relief may be granted if there is a finding that immediate and irreparable harm will probably result, if there is the likelihood that the moving party will prevail, and if the relief is as limited in scope and as temporary as possible.

The foregoing regulation embodies the principles of law announced by the court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132 (1982). These legal principles may be summarized as follows:

1. Emergency relief should not issue except when necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages. In certain circumstances, severe personal inconvenience can constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief. Pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected.

2. Emergency relief should be withheld when the legal right underlying the claim of the requesting party is unsettled.

3. Emergency relief should not issue where all material facts are controverted. Thus, to prevail on an application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. That requirement is tempered by the principle that mere doubt as to the validity of the claim is not an adequate basis for refusing to maintain the status quo. The point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition when the final decision is issued, as they were when the litigation began.

4. The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief. The relief granted should be no broader than necessary to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits.

When this standard is applied to the facts of this case, it is apparent that petitioner has failed to meet the criteria for such relief.

Irreparable harm

Having carefully considered the parties' respective arguments, I agree that A.A. will suffer harm by not participating in half of the lacrosse season and the loss of his senior parking privileges. The harm he is suffering, however, is directly caused by his actions. The fact that scouts may not be able to evaluate A.A. for scholarship purposes for a period of time appears to address financial issues, not the opportunity to attend a college with a lacrosse scholarship. Financial issues are not generally considered as irreparable. Petitioner however has failed to identify any college or scout that sought to watch petitioner to determine whether he would be admitted to a wait-listed school. Further, there will still be approximately six games left in the season after A.A. is again allowed to play. If anything, if the stay were to be granted, it could have an adverse impact upon the ability of the Board to maintain good order and discipline in the high school for the benefit of every one in light of its policies relative to its efforts to dissuade students from participating in drug and/or alcohol activities.

I CONCLUDE that while petitioner has not shown a cognizable educational harm which would occur as a result of the application of the extra-curricular prohibition and loss of senior parking space, further, if the harm is deemed to be an irreparable injury, such harm must be weighed against the harm to respondent. Petitioner has not satisfied the irreparable injury prong of the test. I CONCLUDE the greater harm would be to the HCRHS or Board, if the stay were to be granted at this time.

Right to underlying claim must be settled

As to the requirement that the right underlying the claim of a requesting party must be settled, it is clear that each school district is obligated to provide a thorough and efficient system of education to all children residing in its school district. N.J. Const. (1947), Art. VIII, 1, N.J.S.A. 18A:33-1. To carry out this policy, local boards of education have been granted discretionary authority at N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 (c) and (d) to adopt rules for the management of the public schools of the district, and to perform all acts and do all things necessary for the lawful and proper conduct of the public schools of the district.

In the present matter, counsel for respondent has represented that the respondent Board has duly adopted policies that have been announced and disseminated over time for the benefit of children within the school district. Petitioner concedes to the lawful promulgation of those policies. Further, the petitioner received and accepted the Overnight Trip Procedure to participate in the Trip. Despite the foregoing, petitioner now claims the HCRHS policies were incorrectly applied, or not properly adhered to, by the Board.

Board policies are entitled to a presumption of correctness, and will not be upset by the courts unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Bd. of Educ. of Morris Twp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), affirmed, 46 N.J. 581 (1966). In assessing this, the local school board's factual determinations must be accepted if supported by substantial credible evidence. Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962). The policies of the Board provide a reasonable opportunity for compliance by all affected parties/families who wish to participate in extracurricular activities conducted by the Board.

In general, a board of education's actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Where board actions are challenged, the challenger bears the burden of proving that such actions were unlawful, arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Schuster v. Ed. of Educ. Montgomery Twp., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 670, 676 (citing Schnick v. Westwood Ed. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960), and Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962)). The "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" standard of review imposes a heavy burden on challengers of board actions. This standard has been defined by the New Jersey courts as follows:

In the law, "arbitrary" and "capricious" means having no rational basis. Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is no room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached. Moreover, the court should not substitute its judgment for that of an administrative or legislative body if there is substantial evidence to support the ruling. [Piccoli v. Ed. of Educ. of Ramapo Indian Hills Regional School District, OAL Dkt. EDU 1839-98 (January 22, 1999) (citing Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dent. of Envir. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).]

In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of the board of education. Massaro v. Bd. of Educ. of the Boro. of Bergenfield, 1965 S.L.D. 84, 85. In Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960), the Appellate Division stated, "The well established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently without rational basis or induced by improper motives." See also G.M. v. Roselle Park Boro. Bd. of Educ., 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 107, 109 (where the Commissioner adopted the decision of the ALJ when in a challenge to board action, the ALJ stated, "It is the management prerogative of boards of education that will not be usurped or assumed by the Commissioner of Education absent a definitive showing of bad faith or arbitrary actions taken in bad faith without a rational basis."). As long as the record reflects a rational basis for the action, as well as an absence of bad faith, a board's action shall be upheld. In the G.M. case, supra, the ALJ, after a full hearing, found the board's decision to change geographic boundaries for kindergarten pupil placement, with a goal of evenly distributing the pupils at different schools within the district, to be a reasonable exercise of authority.

Petitioner cites G.D.M. and T.A.M. v. Board of Education of the Ramapo Indian Hills Regional High School District, 427 N.J. Super. 246 (App.Div. 2012) as authority for the proposition that prohibiting extra-curricular activities is impermissible. However, the facts of that case differ substantially from those present here. The challenge to the policy there prohibited student action whether on or away from the school. The Court found the policy to apply broadly without a showing of harm to the school. Here the overnight policy specifically proscribed the conduct of A.A. The Trip involved the middle school as well as the high school. The proscribed conduct involved an illegal substance that, although denied by A.A. as his, was located within his room. The policies before this tribunal are very specific and A.A. recognized the policy. The maintaining of disciple and safety of A.A. and all other students on this Trip cannot be viably questioned by petitioner.

Based upon the foregoing and after having considered all the arguments advanced as well as the proofs offered by both sides, I CONCLUDE that the right underlying petitioner's claim is settled against the petitioner's position. Students do not possess an absolute right to participate in extra-curricular activities. The determination whether or not they may attend is within the sole discretion of the board of education. This is particularly true where, as here, there are written substance abuse and code of conduct policies that permit the board to suspend the student and prohibit him from attending extra-curricular activities. A.A. does not possess a well settled right to participate in the extra-curricular activities. No authority has been set forth by petitioner guaranteeing his right to participate in lacrosse. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to establish the right to relief and has failed to show that the action of respondent is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, this having occurred after having given them all due deference and a full and complete opportunity to present such arguments at the emergent relief hearing. In addition, petitioner failed to submit any proofs to show the actual adverse consequences that will attend the implementation of the policies against A.A. at this time.

Requirement to show reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits

The most difficult requirement for the moving party to establish in order to show entitlement to emergency relief is the third factor. In order to prevail on one's application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. If the point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition of the final decision as when this matter began, it must be established by the moving party that they will probably win on the merits. It is with respect to this that petitioner has great difficulty. Petitioner must show that respondent's actions in this matter are arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. Petitioner must show that respondent's actions violated petitioner's due process rights because of its purported failure to provide to petitioner an opportunity for redress from the Board, rather than just the Superintendant. Petitioner has not shown that the two hearings afforded him did not provide him with due process. Petitioner has not shown a reasonable probability of prevailing on this issue.

The circumstances are unfortunate for A.A., however, as a participant in a sports activity he knew the consequences of a violation of the policy. He cannot now be heard to object to its application to him.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to show the likelihood of prevailing on the merits. Respondent's actions in applying its policies to prohibit A.A.'s participation in extra-curricular activities for thirty days due to the chaperone's certification of finding an illegal substance in his room on the Trip, no matter how regrettable and unfortunate for A.A., cannot be disturbed.

Relative hardship to the parties

The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief in order to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits. As found hereinabove, there has been no actual showing of extraordinary hardship to A.A. other than his inability to engage in the extracurricular activity of lacrosse or park in his senior parking space. While A.A. has a substantial interest in participating in lacrosse and will suffer injury from non-participation, the Board also has a substantial interest in insuring that its disciplinary policies are applied so as to protect the safety and well-being of the students, the teachers, the administrators and other employees. Were it not to enforce its disciplinary policies, or treat A.A. differently than other students in the school, the Board would be sending the wrong message and possibly establishing a negative precedent. By contrast, I am concerned that the granting of a stay would promote a negative message regarding the ability of the Board to maintain good order and positive role modeling for its student community instead. Further, it could genuinely compromise the ability of the Board to actively participate as a community member and leader in providing a positive environment for the community youth. Petitioner has therefore not shown a reasonable probability of prevailing on this issue. And I so CONCLUDE.

Finally, I CONCLUDE that the Board has settled policies that the Board's policies have been properly enforced, and that the Board's policies are reasonable.

Consequently, I CONCLUDE that the respondent Board will suffer greater harm than the petitioner will if the requested relief is granted.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I have FOUND that for purposes of deciding this application for emergency relief, petitioner has not established: (1) the existence of irreparable harm, (2) that petitioner's claim is based upon a settled right, (3) that petitioner is likely to prevail on the merits, or that (4) A.A. will suffer a relative hardship pending a full hearing on the merits. In view of the fact that petitioner has failed to establish all of the requirements for emergency relief, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's request should be DENIED.

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergency relief seeking to stay implementation of the Board's decision to revoke the right of A.A. to participate in lacrosse or receive his senior parking privilege is DENIED.

This Order disposes of all issues in controversy regarding this matter and the petition is DISMISSED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The record, Settlement Agreement and Release, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner observes that the Interim Superintendent of the Washington Township Board of Education signed the agreement on behalf of the Board. In that neither the file nor the settlement agreement contains a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating the Interim Superintendent to sign the agreement on its behalf nor, in the alternative, is the agreement signed by the Board attorney – who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation – the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement agreement.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Settlement Agreement and Release consistent with the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to hearing.

This Settlement Agreement and Release ("Agreement") is entered into by and between M.R., individually and on behalf of his son, M. R. Jr. (collectively referred to as "Petitioners") and the Washington Township Board of Education ("Board") to resolve and settle all outstanding issues involved in this matter between the Petitioners and the Board.

WHEREAS, the Board is a local public board of education organized under Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes with its principal offices located at 206 E. Holly Avenue, Sewell, Gloucester County, New Jersey 08080; and

WHEREAS, M. R., Jr. ("the Student") attended the Washington Township High School as a freshman for the 2013-2014 school year; and

WHEREAS, the Student's father is M.R., senior; and

WHEREAS, as a result of a July 29, 2014 disciplinary hearing before the Board arising from the Student's violation of the Washington Township High School Student Code of Conduct, the Board placed the Student in an alternative educational setting, specifically the Gloucester County Alternative School ("GCAS") for the 2014-2015 school year; and

WHEREAS, on or about September 9, 2014 Petitioners filed a Petition of Appeal and Request for Emergent/Expedited Hearing ("September 9, 2014 Petition of Appeal") challenging the Board's placement of the Student at GCAS; and

WHEREAS, on or about September 18, 2014 Petitioners withdrew the September 9, 2014 Petition of Appeal; and

WHEREAS, on or about September 23, 2014 Petitioners reinstated the September 9, 2014 Petition of Appeal and Request for Emergent/Expedited Hearing, bearing Agency Docket No. 311-10/14 and OAL Docket No. EDU-13729-2014S (the September 9, 2014 Petition of Appeal and September 23, 2014 Petition of Appeal, along with the requests for Emergent/Expedited Hearings, are hereinafter collectively referred to as "Petition of Appeal"); and

WHEREAS, on or about November 24, 2014 the Board filed an Answer to the Petition of Appeal; and

WHEREAS, after extension negotiations, and in order to resolve any and all disputes between the Parties without resorting to time-consuming and costly litigation, the Petitioners and the Board have agreed to a full and final settlement of all claims and matters asserted in the Petition of Appeal and any claims that could have been asserted in a state or federal court proceeding that relate directly or indirectly to the Petition of Appeal; and

WHEREAS, this Agreement, and the execution and implementation of same, shall not be construed or considered an admission of liability by the Board, its present and former Board members, officers, employees, agents and servants, and said liability being expressly denied.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises and agreements contained herein, the Petitioners and the Board AGREE AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Student will continue in his placement at GCAS for the remainder of the 2014-2015 school year. Consistent with the terms of his removal from the Washington Township High School and his placement in the GCAS, the Student will not be allowed to participate in or attend any extra-curricular activities at the Washington Township Public Schools, nor will the Student be allowed on Washington Township Public Schools property, during his placement at the GCAS. Provided, however, that the Student will be allowed on School District property upon proper notice and approval of the High School administration for purposes of securing any documentation related to his anticipated re-entering Washington Township Highs School, including his participation in extra-curricular activities.

2. The Student will be eligible to return to the Washington Township High School for the 2015-2016 school year, and the Board's Administration shall recommend such return, at the conclusion of his placement at the GCAS if:

   a. The Student successfully completes his coursework at GCAS for the 2014-2015 school year;

   b. The Student successfully completes final examinations at GCAS for the 2014-2015 school year;

   c. The Student has no major attendance or disciplinary issues at GCAS during the 2014-2015 school year; and

d. The Student receives a positive recommendation from the staff at GCAS for his return to the Washington Township High School.

It is the understanding of the Parties that if the Student continues to perform at his current level of functioning at GCAS, he will meet the criteria for return to the Washington Township High School as set forth in this Agreement.

3. If the conditions set forth in Paragraph 2 of this Agreement are satisfied, the Student will have access to and be eligible to participate in summer activities at the Washington Township High School leading up to any fall sports for the 2015-2016 school year.

4. During the Student's placement at GCAS, he can submit medical and other documentation/information to the Washington Township High as required for his anticipated participation in any extracurricular activity offered by the Washington Township High School for the 2015-2016 school year.

5. Release and Waiver: The Petitioners agree to the following RELEASES AND WAIVERS:

a. For good and valuable consideration, the Petitioners RELEASE, WAIVE AND FOREVER DISCHARGE the Board (its former, present and future board members, officers, employees, agents, and servants) from any and all claims and causes of action, in law or in equity, whether known or unknown, whether asserted or unasserted, contingent or otherwise, arising from or relating directly or indirectly to M.F.'s education, placement, proposed placements, discipline, counseling, safety, and/or attendance within the Washington Township School District and any out-of-district placement. OAL Docket No. EDU-10632-2014S

This Settlement Agreement ("Agreement") is made this 7 day of March, 2015, by and between Petitioner, Donnie Johnson ("Petitioner" or "Johnson") and the Trenton Board of Education ("Respondent" or "Board") (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Parties").

WHEREAS, on or about July 25, 2014, Johnson filed a Petition of Appeal with the State of New Jersey Department of Education challenging the non-renewal of her employment contract for the 2014-2015 school year ("Action"); and

WHEREAS, on or about August 20, 2014, the Board filed an Answer denying the allegations in Johnson's Petition of Appeal; and

WHEREAS, the matter was transmitted by the State of New Jersey Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, a hearing was scheduled for a hearing before the Honorable Sarah G. Crowley, A.L.J. on February 19, 2015 and February 20, 2015; and

WHEREAS, the Parties intend to adopt, by way of compromise, without any admission of liability, all claims which were either raised or could have been raised in the Action; and

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing and of the mutual agreements contained herein, and intending to be legally bound, the Parties agree as follows:

1. This Agreement sets forth all the terms and conditions of the Parties' agreement.
2. Respondent shall schedule a Donaldson Hearing for Petitioner at its April 2015 Board meeting. The Donaldson Hearing will be held in Executive/Closed Session. Petitioner may be represented by counsel or by one individual of her choosing. Due to the allegations asserted by Petitioner in the instant Action, Petitioner will be allotted no less than thirty (30) minutes at her Donaldson Hearing to convince the Board to offer her reemployment. The time allotted to Petitioner for her Donaldson Hearing shall include any statements/comments by Petitioner, any statements/comments by her counsel or chosen representative, Petitioner's distribution and presentation of any documents/materials and any testimony by Petitioner's witness(es).

3. Petitioner fully understands that if her non-renewal is sustained by the Board in full compliance with the terms of this Agreement, she will not challenge or appeal the Board's decision in any manner. Respondent agrees that any non-renewal shall not bar Petitioner from applying for open positions in the District.

4. The Board agrees that it and its employees and representatives shall respond to any inquiry from any third parties concerning Johnson with a statement that its policy requires that it only confirm Petitioner's dates of employment, position, title and salary, and it shall limit itself thereto. The Board and its employees or representatives shall make no negative comments about Johnson, her work on behalf of the Board or her ability to provide work for other educational institutions or entities.

5. Respondent shall also pay to Johnson the sum of one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500.00), which will be paid to Johnson no later than the April 2015 Board meeting.

6. In return for the above promises and commitments, Petitioner agrees to dismiss the instant Action with prejudice and will notify the Office of Administrative Law of same once this Agreement has been fully executed by Petitioner and the Board.

7. Petitioner releases the Board from any and all liabilities, claims, damages, and/or remedies of any type that she may have by reason of any matter, cause, act, or omission arising out of or in connection with her prior employment with the Board and the instant Action. This releases any and all claims arising under any federal, state, or common law, contractual claims, claims for any tortious or negligent actions or other civil wrongs, attorneys' fees and all compensation claims. Petitioner further waives any claim for back pay and front pay. This release applies to claims arising prior to Johnson's execution of this Agreement that Petitioner knows about and those she may not know about as of the date of this Agreement.

8. This Agreement is a result of a compromise and accord to buy the Parties' peace. It is expressly understood and agreed that nothing contained in this Agreement is intended to be, nor shall be construed as, nor shall be represented by any party, their attorneys or their agents to be, as an admission or determination of liability by the Board, or its agents, employees or members, as to the validity of any claims asserted or assertable, as the Board continues to deny Petitioner's allegations and disclaims any responsibility for such claims. Nor shall this agreement be understood or construed as suggesting that any of Johnson's allegations or claims were in any way inaccurate or unfounded, and Johnson expressly denies any such construction or inference.
9. This Agreement shall not serve as a precedent for any other matter.
10. Petitioner acknowledges that she has entered into this Agreement voluntarily and hereby signs it without duress or coercion, and with the opportunity to consult counsel.
11. The Parties certify that they have had the opportunity to discuss this Agreement with counsel. They are fully satisfied with the services of their counsel with respect to both this Agreement and all other aspects of the Action and they enter into this Agreement knowingly, willingly and without any coercion or improper inducements.
12. This Agreement, and all of its terms, are and will remain confidential to the maximum extent permitted by law.
13. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining parts, terms or provisions shall not be affected thereby and said illegal or invalid part, term or provision shall be deemed not be part of this Agreement.

14. This Agreement may not be modified, altered, changed, discharged, terminated or waived, except upon express written consent of the Parties.
15. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey.
16. The Parties agree that this Agreement may be signed in counterparts and that facsimile of signatures will have the same force and effect as original signatures
17. The Agreement is subject to the formal approval of the Trenton Board of Education.

C.C., on behalf of minor child, S.C.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF JEFFERSON, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioner claimed that the respondent Board and certain staff members substantially harmed his minor child, S.C., through its investigation of and response to alleged acts of Harassment, Intimidation and/or Bullying (HIB) by S.C. against a fellow student at their elementary school. S.C. received one half-day in-school suspension and was denied three recess periods. Petitioner claimed that the actions of the respondents were retaliatory, arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, and that respondents themselves committed acts of HIB against S.C. Petitioner demanded to have the Board's determination that S.C. committed acts of HIB overturned and sought punitive damages. The Board filed a motion for summary decision, after which the ALJ granted Partial Summary Decision in favor of respondents, dismissing all but one of the issues: whether the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably with respect to its investigation and response to the alleged acts of HIB.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Board has implemented a formal policy on HIB pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14; petitioner did not take issue with the underlying factual findings of the Board, and did not deny that S.C. made the statements attributed to him, but argued that S.C. was not treated fairly; the County Superintendent issued a Complaint Investigation Report in response to the concerns of S.C.'s father, which report found that the District had implemented approved HIB policies and procedures and that the choice of suspension as a consequence for the HIB findings was appropriate; the County Superintendent did not act in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in addressing the procedural complaints of petitioner; S.C.'s action did constitute HIB as that term is defined by law; the HIB statute is intended to drive home the principle that cruel words will not be tolerated in a school environment; the consequence to S.C. was adequately restrained; and the actions of District personnel and the Board were consistent with the letter and spirit of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.7. The ALJ concluded that the petitioner did not meet the burden of establishing that respondent's actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, and dismissed the petition.

Upon comprehensive review of this matter, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision and the petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the Board's decision in connection with S.C. was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. C.C. O/B/O MINOR CHILD, S.C., Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF JEFFERSON, MORRIS COUNTY,

C.C., o/b/o Minor Child S.C., petitioner, pro se

Nicholas Celso, Esq., for respondent Board of Education of the Township of Jefferson, Morris County (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein, & Celso, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 24, 2015 Decided: April 6, 2015

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner C.C. o/b/o Minor Child S.C. (petitioner) filed a Petition with the Commissioner of Education claiming that the Jefferson Township Board of Education, (Board or District) its Superintendent, its Director of Special Services, and the Arthur Stanlick Elementary School (School) Principal and Guidance and Anti-Bullying

Specialist (Board or respondents) substantially harmed S.C. with respect to their investigation of and response to alleged acts of Harassment, Intimidation and/or Bullying (HIB) by S.C. at the School. Petitioner additionally claims that the actions of respondents were retaliatory, arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable and that they committed acts of HIB against S.C. Petitioner demands that the Board's determination that S.C. committed acts of HIB be overturned and that "punitive damages be awarded for the substantial harm inflicted upon [S.C.] . . . ."

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about August 11, 2014, petitioner filed its Petition against respondents. After respondents filed an Answer on August 28, 2014, the Department of Education Bureau of Controversies and Appeals transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 29, 2014, for a hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. I granted Partial Summary Decision in favor of respondents on February 11, 2015, ordering the dismissal of those portions of the Petition with allegations against individual Board personnel named in their individual capacities; claiming that S.C. suffered "substantial harm"; and demanding punitive damages. The remaining issue is whether the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably with respect to its investigations and responses to the alleged acts of HIB. I held a hearing on February 18, 2015, and closed the record on March 24, 2015, upon the receipt of closing briefs.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner does not dispute the facts gleaned from the Board's investigation. Rather, it disputes the quality of the investigation and the conclusions drawn by the Board after its investigation. Accordingly, I refer to the written statements of various individuals who were not called by either party as witnesses. Based on those uncontradicted statements, I FIND the following FACTS:

Lyndsey LaConti is the Anti-Bullying Specialist (ABS) and school counselor at the District's Arthur Stanlick Elementary School (School). Margaret Widgren is the District-wide ABS. A teacher forwarded to LaConti an e-mail from a parent, M.G., who expressed concern about her son, G.C., being allegedly bullied by fellow fifth graders. G.C. had been complaining that D.S. and S.C. had been verbally bullying him. M.G. subsequently filed an HIB Incident Report Form on March 5, 2014, accusing D.S. and S.C. of emotional bullying by insulting and demeaning G.C. More specifically, she claimed that S.C. "calls my son names such as short, loser, dumb. He has also told him he is no good in basketball, that he will never make it to the NBA, and that he will drop out of HS and not be accepted into college. He also used some concerning comments such as: 'you will become a drug dealer.'" LaConti then began a ten-day investigation that entailed interviewing G.C., D.S., S.C., and nine other classmates on March 5. She had them write their own statements on March 5 after asking them open-ended questions about G.C.'s interactions with D.S. and S.C. She did not lead the students or suggest answers to them.

G.C.

> D. was calling me names like stupid dumb and a loser. Also saying that I would become a drug seller when I grow up and that I'll never get a real job. Also he said I'll never be tall that I'll be about 4'11 and stay little. That we were at recess when this happened. S.A. and H. were there when they heard this. S.[C.] call [sic] me the same thing. D. calls me and says I can't be in middle school because I'm to [sic] short and I'll never be a real basketball player and that I suck at basketball. S.[C.] has called me stupid, dumb, loser, I suck . . . . They made me feel annoyed and really mad when that [sic] say this. I'm trying to do my work and S.[C] says the names and then I get in trouble because the teacher thinks I'm talking to him. I'm embarrassed because they call me names in front of people. I feel like I'm being bullied by S.[C.] and D. After S.[C.] told me that I suck in basketball I said it back to him when we were going out. I wanted him to stop so I said that he sucks.

A.W.

> I'm in the class of G.[C.] and D.S. Something is going on between them. I don't know what is going on because I stay out of it. S.[C.] said something to G.[C.] but I don't remember what he said. G.[C.] didn't say anything back.

K.M.

D.[S.] is being disrespectful to G.[C.]. He often calls him rude and mean things as if he was trying to embarrass him. D.[S.] is being mean by calling names like shorty. D.[S.] also makes mean comments when he gets questions wrong in math like really G.[C.] or where is your math today. I think G.[C.] feels sad because he looks sad and scared when D.[S.] comes to say something mean. S.[C.] is also mean to G.[C.] because [sic] comes and always makes fun of him. S.[C.] once said that G.[C.] is not smart and will never go through college and get a job or play basketball. This happens during recess time in the classroom. When D. insults G.[C.], G.[C.] walks away. But when S.[C.] talks and insults G.[C.], G.[C.] tries to defend himself by saying something that he is good at what he does. G.[C.] feels sad when S.[C.] insults him, I can tell because he then would look sad.

B.T.

I'm friends with G.[C.] and D.[S.] but not really with S.[C.]. G.[C.] was talking about making it in the NBA but D.[S.] said G.[C.] was too short. I can't remember G.[C.] saying anything back to D.[S.] I feel that G.[C.] felt bad when he was called short. I never heard D.[S.] call G.[C.] dumb or anything. D.[S.] said that G.[S.] would drop out of college and become a drug dealer. D.[S.] said that to G.[C.] on the way to lunch about a week ago. I don't remember why he said it. I don't think G.[C.] said anything back but I do feel that G.[C.] felt mad at D.[S.]. I think S.[C.] said something to G.[C.] that was mean. But they are always near me in line and I try not to listen to them so I don't get in trouble by Dr. Cooke and my parents. D.[S.] talking about drug dealing.

A.G.

I've heard D.[S.] say that G.[C.] is not good at basketball. He has no friends and no one likes him. Tells him to go sit at a different table because he has no friends over here. D.[S.] stabbed G.[C.] with a plastic fork and knife at lunch but G.[C.] didn't do anything about it. D.[S.] never called G.[C.] dumb or stupid before but did call him short and make fun of him for that. I think G.[C.] feels bad about himself because everyone (S.[C.]) calls him short and I don't think he likes it. S[C.] said that G.[C.] is bad at basketball. G.[C.] says that he is the best at basketball. G.[C.] tries to make the best out of it and make himself feel better. I feel bad for G.[C.] because S.[C.] and D.[S.] make fun of him for lots of thing [sic], basketball, the way he looks and tells him that he has no friends. This is happening at lunch time.

S.C.

I do not have a good relationship with G.[C.]. He has said that I am bad at basketball and I say stuff back to him. Sometimes he makes fun of other people. Rarely, I start stuff with him. I tell him that he is not so good at basketball either. He tells other people (C.A. G.) that he hopes her plane crashes and she dies. It used to happen at lunch until he moved to another table. Now it happens mainly in art (the argument about basketball). I do not call him a loser stupid dumb or short. I never said anything about him dropping out or becoming a drug dealer. This makes me feel upset because most of the stuff he is accusing me of is false. I have heard D.[S.] call him a drug dealer and he said he is bad at basketball. I heard him say this at lunch like two weeks ago.

D.S.

. . . Then I said whatever and started talking to A. I was talking to A. while S.[C.] and G.[C.] were arguing. I called, G.[C.] names jokingly like dumb and annoying. I didn't mean for him to take them seriously. I thought G.[C.] took them as a joke because he was laughing. I never said that he would drop out of school and become a drug dealer. I have never seen S.[C.] call G.[C.] names. I have seen them argue but that was about the seating at the lunch table. Me and G.[C.] were friends before the incident. Then I was told to stay away from him.

D.B.

D.[S.] teases G.[C.] by calling him names like loser, short, not smart. D.S. hits G.[C.]. Beginning of year he hit G.[C.]. He took a plastic knife and smacked him on the arm. Happens at lunch. D.[S.] says he is never going to be good at basketball. S.[C.] support D.[S.] by saying yeah you're never going to be good at basketball. Last month this happened and G.[C.] moved his seat so it doesn't happen. Sometime G.[C.] [] at comment and something G.[C.] get [sic] upset. During class time S.[C.] does not make mean comments in class to G.[C.]. S.[C.] does not make comment [sic] but goes along with D.[S.]. I don't think G.[C.] like [sic] being teased and when D.[S.] teases him I think he gets a little upset. A., M., N., F., K. may have heard.

F.C.

A and D.[S.] are making fun of G.[C.]. They call him names and laugh at him. I don't now [sic] what names they call him. When he is being made fun of he's mad but doesn't show it. He usually doesn't say anything back to them. This happens during lunch and recess. S.[C.] doesn't make fun of G.[C.]. He just talks to other people.

N.J.

G.[C.] was sitting at the table at lunch. Then D.[S.], A. and A. told him he couldn't sit there. G.[C.] asked a teacher to come and help him. The teacher asked who got their firt [sic] and D.[S.] and M. said it was not G.[C.]. So G.[C.] moved to the other table even though he got there first. Nobody called G.[C.] any names. I never heard D.[S.] call G.[C.] any names. I never heard S.[C.] call any names either. I think G.[C.] felt really angry that he had to move.

M.S.

At lunch time D.[S.] told G.[C.] that he was to [sic] short to do sports and was stupid. D.[S.] told G.[C.] to sit with him and when G.[C.] came the table was full and told G.[C.] to go to the other table and called him names. Short, ugly, weird. (D.[S.] called G.[C.] those names). I think G.[C.] felt sad because D.[S.] was calling him names and told him to not sit by him. G.[C.] was crying. It makes me feel sad because if that was me I would not want to be hurt like that. S.[C.] laughs at what D.[S.] says to G.[C.] and makes G.[C.] feel sad too but S.[C.] does not call G.[C.] names. Sometimes G.[C.] is also mean to because he called me a bitch. I also think that D.[S.] made G.[C.] be mean to people. When D.[S.] started being mean to G.[C.], G.[C.] started to be mean to other people.

K.B.

> G.[C.] and D.[S.] used to be friends and now they aren't and I haven't heard D.[S.] say anything about him. I've heard D.[S.] say some things mean but I don't remember what he said. I have never heard S.[C.] say anything about G.[C.] or call him names.

Most of the student statements focused on comments by D.S. regarding characteristics of G.C. Some statements contained no references to such comments by S.C. LaConti, however, evaluated the statements of students K.M., A.G., and D.B. and determined that, aside from conduct by D.S., S.C. had also made negative comments to G.C. related to the characteristics of height, basketball skills, and intelligence, which supported the claims of G.C. against S.C. She further determined from the student statements that these comments were made during lunch period and made G.C. feel annoyed, upset, mad, and insulted.

LaConti prepared a report on March 5 based on the above investigation where she confirmed bullying by S.C. and that S.C. ". . . knowingly engaged in behavior with the specific objective of hurting, intimidating, or harassing another student." She further determined that the conduct was reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic; it took place on school property; and substantially disrupted or interfered with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of other students; and had the effect of insulting or demeaning a student. LaConti shared her report with School Principal Kelly Cooke. As a result of LaConti's findings, Principal Cooke proposed consequences to S.C. of one-half day of an in-school suspension and a denial of three days of recess. The proposed consequences were submitted to Superintendent of Schools Joseph Kraemer who approved them on March 21, 2014. The Superintendent subsequently presented a summary of allegations and factual findings at the next Board meeting on April 21, at which time the Board reviewed the Superintendent's report and acknowledged the findings.

The Board has implemented a formal policy on Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying, the preamble of which provides:

> The Board of Education prohibits acts of harassment, intimidation, or bullying of a student. A safe and civil environment in school is necessary for students to learn and achieve high academic standards. Harassment, intimidation, or bullying, like other disruptive or violent behaviors, is > conduct that disrupts both a student's ability to learn and a school's ability to educate its pupils in a safe and disciplined environment. Since students learn by example, school administrators, faculty, staff and volunteers should be commended for demonstrating appropriate behavior, treating others with civility and respect, and refusing to tolerate harassment, intimidation, or bullying.

> [(P-7.)]

Subsequent to the action taken by the Board with regard to S.C., petitioners filed a complaint with the Interim Executive County Superintendent for the Morris County Office of the Department of Education alleging that the suspension imposed against S.C. was a violation of the Board's approved code of student conduct and also that there was a failure to provide S.C. due process. On May 14, 2014, the County Superintendent issued a Complaint Investigative Report. (R-1.) He determined based on a factual finding from his investigation that the Board-approved HIB policy and procedures contain all the required components under the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act including a range of responses to incidents; the Board implemented the HIP policies and procedures; and under the HIB Policy and the Board's Code of Student Conduct, the choice of suspension as a consequence for the HIB findings was within the range of responses allowed. Although the County Superintendent noted that the Board's suspension proceedings policy (P-5) was not fully implemented, he found that there was no fatal effect in that S.C.'s father was afforded the opportunity to meet and discuss his concerns with the Principal prior to the short-term suspension being imposed and S.C. was allowed to provide a written statement to the ABS during the HIB investigation process. Although the County Superintendent subsequently required the Board to review its suspension proceedings policy with all principals and the School's safety team to include a teacher in the School, the County Superintendent did not require any corrective action specific to the Board's handling of the matters involving S.C.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Legislature has strengthened the definition of HIB to include:

> [A]ny gesture, any written, verbal or physical act . . . whether it be a single incident or a series of incidents, that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic such as race, color . . . or by any other distinguishing characteristic . . . that > substantially disrupts or interferes with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of other students and that:

> a. a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of physically or emotionally harming a student or damaging a student's property, or placing a student in reasonable fear of physical or emotional harm to his person or damage to his property;
>
> b. has the effect of insulting or demeaning any student or group of students; or
>
> c. creates a hostile educational environment for the student by interfering with a student's education or be severely or pervasively causing physical or emotional harm to the student.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14.]

Comprehensive regulations promulgated by the Department of Education further assist districts in complying with these statutory requirements. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.9. Petitioner does not take issue with the underlying factual findings of the Board and does not deny that S.C. made the statements attributed to him. Rather it argues that S.C. was not treated fairly, the investigation was faulty, the Board and its employees took missteps, and the Board did not follow proper suspension protocols when it imposed the one-half-day in-school suspension and the denial of three recess periods. It contends that the behavior of S.C. was not an act of HIB but was rather reflective of an ongoing unresolved conflict between the students involved and that both students engaged in verbal sparring throughout the ongoing unresolved conflict.

Petitioner argues that LaConti was not thorough in her investigation and failed to take into account that G.C. may have behaved in a manner that provoked the alleged HIB behavior. Petitioner also questions whether LaConti had received adequate training in investigating and evaluating HIB matters.[1] It is noteworthy that LaConti took statements from twelve students, but only S.C. made any claim that G.C. provoked S.C.'s behavior. Petitioner also complains that staff members did not follow the [1] Although the District did not produce in discovery LaConti's Certificate of Attendance at a November 19, 2013, HIB training session, it was subsequently established that she did so. Petitioners have not established that LaConti lacked adequate training to conduct the investigation in this matter.

District's Pupil Discipline/Code of Conduct (P-4) and its Suspension Procedures (P-5) with regard to the imposed consequences of the Board's confirmed HIB and that there were systemic failures of employees at the School for not observing early signs of conflict among various students.

As indicated above, the County Superintendent issued a Complaint Investigative Report in response to a submission by S.C.'s father involving the procedural issues related to this matter. After conducting an investigation, the County Superintendent concluded that the District had implemented approved HIB policies and procedures and that the choice of suspension as a consequence for the HIB findings was within the range of responses allowed. He further concluded that a failure to fully implement the Suspension Procedures policy was remediated by other actions. Although the County Superintendent directed certain responses by the District and made additional recommendations, he did not conclude that the process by which the HIB investigation occurred, its findings and/or the implementation of a penalty was such that the District's actions had to be reversed. The determination of a county superintendent will not be modified or reversed in the absence of a showing that the county superintendent acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner. Wynne v. Camden Cty. Superintendent of Schools, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 995, relying on Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). I CONCLUDE that the County Superintendent did not act in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in addressing the procedural complaints of petitioner and that his determination stands regarding those issues.

I further CONCLUDE that S.C.'s actions constituted HIB, as that term is defined by law. From the various student statements that acknowledged interactions (some statements had no relevant information) between S.C. and G.C. and D.S. and G.C., it is evident that D.S. was the primary antagonist against G.C. Nevertheless, there is ample evidence within the unchallenged written student statements that S.C. engaged in verbal acts that are reasonably perceived as being motivated by distinguishing characteristics of height, intelligence, and sports proficiency within the meaning of the statute. They were not trivial statements. The comments were more than "ordinary student conduct" as petitioner contends. They were made in front of other students.[2] The observation that these statements made G.C. feel bad, sad, scared, and insulted came not only from G.C. but from fellow students as well. S.C.'s comments created a hostile educational environment that interfered with G.C.'s education. The statute is intended to drive home the principle that cruel words will not be tolerated in a school environment. Consequences for students who violate this principle should be "varied and graded according to the nature of the behavior, developmental age of the student and the student's history of problem behaviors and performance." N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.7(a)(2)(v)(1). The consequence to S.C. in this instance was adequately restrained. Indeed, consistent with my observation that D.S. was more of the antagonist than S.C., D.S. received a more severe penalty. (See P-1, Bate "Jeff 0199.") I CONCLUDE that the actions of District personnel and the Board were consistent with the letter and spirit of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.7.[3]

As indicated above, petitioner takes issue with the fairness and completeness of the process followed in this matter by the Board and District personnel. However, the Commissioner will not overturn an action or the exercise of discretion by a local board unless that board acted in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner. T.B.M. v. Moorestown Bd. of Educ., EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/> (citing Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581(1966)); also see, Kopera, supra, 60 N.J. Super. 288. I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met the substantial burden of establishing that the actions of the Board or its personnel were arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. Although petitioner is distressed with the overall treatment of S.C., there is no evidence to suggest that the Board or its personnel acted in bad faith or in utter disregard of the extant circumstances.

[2] I disagree with petitioner's argument that the student statements are inherently unreliable in the absence of school employees witnessing anything. There is nothing in the statute that requires corroboration of student statements by other evidence.

[3] Petitioner argues that the investigation was tainted by the claim that LaConti lacked adequate training for conduct an HIB investigation. This is an unavailing argument since the findings of HIB arose, not from LaConti's subjective impressions, but rather from the independent statements and words of various students.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that the petition be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. DECISION

In this consolidated case, petitioners – formerly employed as custodians for the respondent Board – alleged that their tenure rights were violated when their employment was terminated. The Board asserted that the petitioners' appeal rests solely on contractual claims – which do not require an interpretation of school law – and filed a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Petitioners failed to answer the motion.

The ALJ granted the Board's motion to dismiss, finding that: petitioners were custodial workers employed by the Board before their respective termination dates; petitioners' positions did not require a certificate from the State Board of Examiners; and petitioners also filed grievances pursuant to their collective bargaining agreement. The ALJ concluded that, in light of petitioners' failure to respond to the motion to dismiss or provide any contrary legal or factual basis, the respondent's motion to dismiss must be granted. Accordingly, the petitioners' appeal was dismissed.

The Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision and remanded the matter for further proceedings, finding, inter alia, that: in order to determine whether the Commissioner has jurisdiction here, it is necessary to establish whether the Board appointed petitioners for a fixed term; Title 18A grants Boards of Education the discretion to determine which custodians, if any, will receive tenure benefits; and custodians appointed for a fixed term are excluded from statutory tenure, but may still negotiate contractual tenure rights over which the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction. Accordingly, the Commissioner remanded this matter to the OAL to determine whether petitioners were appointed for a fixed term and thereby excluded from statutory tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A17-3.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

AND

ALAN HUDSON,

PETITIONER,

V.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PISCATAWAY, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

The record in this matter, along with the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), have been reviewed. This controversy concerns whether petitioners, formerly employed as custodians for the Piscataway Board of Education (Board), possessed tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 which were violated when the Board terminated their employment. Arguing that petitioners lacked tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3, the Board filed motions to dismiss the petitions of appeal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted and lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Ultimately, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) granted the Board's motions and dismissed both petitions. For the reasons stated herein, the Commissioner rejects the ALJ's Initial Decision and remands the matter for further proceedings.

Title 18A grants Boards of Education "discretion to determine which custodians, if any, are to receive the benefit of tenure." Wright v. Bd. of Educ., 99 N.J. 112, 119 (1985). Custodians appointed for a fixed term are excluded from statutory tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3, which provides: "Every public school janitor of a school district shall, unless he is appointed for a fixed term, hold his office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed" except for a reduction in force or "neglect, misbehavior or other offense." Custodians excluded from statutory tenure by virtue of fixed term appointment may, however, negotiate contractual tenure rights – over which the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction. See Wright, supra, 99 N.J. at 116 (holding contractual provision granting tenure to custodians after three years of employment is not barred by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and falls within the scope of collective negotiations). Therefore, in order to determine whether the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide this matter under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3, it is necessary to establish whether the Board appointed petitioners for a fixed term.

Upon her review of the record, the ALJ made the following three findings of fact:

1. Petitioners were employed with the Board as custodial workers until Hudson was terminated on December 19, 2013 and Kechula was terminated on January 9, 2014.
2. Their positions did not require certification from the New Jersey State Board of Examiners.
3. Petitioners have also filed grievances pursuant to their collective bargaining agreement. (Initial Decision at 2)

Based upon those findings, the ALJ granted the Board's motions and dismissed the petitions of appeal "in light of the petitioners' failure to respond to the motion or provide any contrary legal or factual basis" and determined that the Board's motions were "sufficient to support judgment in its favor as to the lack of jurisdiction of the subject of the petitioners' appeals." (Initial Decision at 2).

Notably, neither the petitions nor the Board's certification in support of its motion indicated whether petitioners were appointed for a fixed term of employment.

Because the record is devoid of information as to whether petitioners were appointed by the Board for a fixed term of employment, the Commissioner cannot conclude that petitioners lacked tenure rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3. Absent a finding that petitioners were appointed for a fixed term – and thereby excluded from statutory tenure under Title 18A – the ALJ lacked the requisite factual basis to dismiss the petitions for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Initially, the fact that custodians do not require certification from the New Jersey State Board of Examiners is an irrelevant, insufficient factual basis upon which to find that petitioners are not tenured custodial employees under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3. In addition, it cannot be assumed that petitioners possess contractual tenure – and not statutory tenure – simply because they filed grievances and failed to respond to the Board's motions.

Accordingly, this matter is remanded to the Office of Administrative Law for a determination as to whether petitioners were appointed by the Board for a fixed term of employment and thereby excluded from statutory tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

BEFORE TIFFANY M. WILLIAMS, ALJ:

This decision serves as a response to the request of the respondent, Piscataway Township Board of Education, to dismiss these consolidated matters for failure to state a claim and lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The motion filed by the respondent was unopposed by the petitioners. Accordingly, the motion is GRANTED.

The respondent asserts in its motion that the petitioners' appeal rests solely on contractual claims, which do not require an interpretation of school law. Picogna v. Board of Education of Cherry Hill, 249 N.J. Super. 322, 225 (App. Div. 1991). See also In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jason Newby, School District of the Township of Hillsdale, Union County, Agency Dkt No. 256/9-12 (November 2, 2012). Moreover, the respondent alleges that based on conversations with the petitioners, they believe that they are alleging to have tenure rights, which it asserts would not extend to these employees. The respondent provided a certification of facts from the Board's Director of Human Resources as to the following, which I FIND as FACT:

1. Petitioners were employed with the Board as custodial workers until Hudson was terminated on December 19, 2013, and Kechula was terminated on January 9, 2014.

2. Their positions did not require a certificate from the New Jersey State Board of Examiners.

3. Petitioners have also filed grievances pursuant to their collective bargaining agreement.

In light of the petitioners' failure to respond to the motion or provide any contrary legal or factual basis, the respondent's motion is GRANTED as it is sufficient to support judgment in its favor as to the lack of jurisdiction of the subject of the petitioners' appeals.

It is so ORDERED that the petitioners' appeals are DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF HARRISON, HUDSON COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner – formerly employed by the respondent Board as an athletic trainer – filed an appeal of her non-renewal in May 2013. Petitioner alleged that she attained tenure in September 2010, and was wrongfully terminated as a non-tenured staff member effective June 2013. The Board contended that petitioner was hired to the position of Athletic Trainer in October 2007, but was not issued the standard certificate for this position until January 2013; as such, petitioner had not attained tenure at the time of her non-renewal. Additionally, the Board asserted that the within appeal was late filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), as petitioner became aware that she needed to obtain a standard certificate in November 2012, but did not file her petition until May 2013.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the petition was timely filed; prior to 1999, the Department of Education did not issue certification for school athletic trainers, who were initially under the purview of the New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners (NJBOME); petitioner began employment as a school athletic trainer before current licensing requirements went into effect in 1999, and had been lawfully working under a certificate issued by the NJBOME; Breitwieser v. Jersey City, 286 N.J. Super. 633 (App. Div. 1996) is the controlling authority in this case, stating that teaching staff members must hold "proper certificates in full force and effect", and must have been employed by the board of education for three consecutive years in order to become tenured; further, in Breitwieser, service under an emergency certificate may be counted toward the service needed for tenure when that service is followed by the teacher obtaining a certificate in the same field as the emergency certificate; though she did not hold an emergency certificate, petitioner's situation herein was sufficiently analogous to Breitwieser that her period of employment as an athletic trainer before the effective date of the statute requiring the new certificate for athletic trainer must count toward the acquisition of tenure, as specified in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4(b); and petitioner served in the position of athletic trainer for more than three consecutive years as required in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(a). Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that: petitioner acquired tenure on January 11, 2013, the date on which the State Board of Examiners issued her School Athletic Trainer certificate; she was wrongfully terminated on June 30, 2013; and should be reinstated as a tenured staff member effective on January 11, 2013.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision and dismissed the petition, finding, inter alia, that: N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2.4 is the law that controls this controversy; while petitioner appears to have kept up-to-date with the requirements for maintaining her NJBOME license – which is one requirement for service as an athletic trainer – she appears to have made no attempt to keep current with educational certification requirements; no time toward tenure could begin to accrue to petitioner until January 10, 2013, when she was issued her Educational Services certificate with a School Athletic Trainer endorsement. Accordingly, when she was non-renewed on April 26, 2013, she had no tenure rights.

PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF HARRISON, HUDSON COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

Before the Commissioner is a dispute regarding the tenure status of petitioner in 2013, at which time she was employed by respondent as an athletic trainer. After careful consideration of the record, including the transcripts of three hearing days in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the Initial Decision of the OAL, and respondent's exceptions to same, the Commissioner concludes that petitioner had not earned tenure at that time.

There is little controversy regarding the material facts of this case. Rather, the parties disagree about the significance of those facts, and the application of the relevant law. For example, there is no dispute about the fact that – prior to the 2007 commencement of petitioner's employment with respondent – petitioner had earned New Jersey instructional certificates with endorsements to teach health, physical education and driver education. She had also secured an athletic trainer license from the New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners (NJBOME), and a certification from the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA).

Petitioner's first employment as an athletic trainer in a school district was in 1991, when she was hired by the Paterson School District. At that time, the New Jersey Department of Education (NJDOE) did not issue certification for athletic trainers, and the New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners (NJBOME) only required that athletic trainers be "registered." At some point subsequent to 1991, the NJBOME changed its policy concerning athletic trainers, and began to require that they obtain licenses, which petitioner did.[1]

In 1997, petitioner left her employment with the Paterson school district. Shortly thereafter she had an accident which led to her doctor's recommendation that she not work as an athletic trainer. The record indicates that petitioner's next jobs were in the Passaic and Orange School Districts as a health and physical education teacher from 1999 to 2002, and from 2002 to 2007, respectively. (P-8) In 2006 petitioner apparently started per diem athletic trainer work at Essex Community College and decided to look for a full time job as an athletic trainer. (1T15)

Petitioner was appointed to the position of Athletic Trainer in respondent's school district on or about October 15, 2007. (P-1) Petitioner testified that, at that time, respondent's job description did not require an educational services certificate with an athletic trainer endorsement, and she was not asked to produce one. (P-2; 1T17-18) It is, however, undisputed that in 1999, a law had been enacted requiring school athletic trainers to hold educational services certificates with athletic trainer endorsements. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2.4; see also N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.17 (now codified as N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-12.17).

It appears that at some point in 2010, the district focused on the certifications of its employees. It distributed forms to all staff members requiring them to update contact information and verifications concerning their certifications. On or about May 3, 2010, and again in September 2010, petitioner was given information update forms which asked for her contact information and her certifications. (R-6; R-10) On the forms, she filled in telephone numbers and emergency contact information. She did not correct the sections of the forms that stated that she held athletic trainer certification, because she believed that her NATA certification satisfied the inquiry. (1T60-61)

The Commissioner notes, however, that the update forms were designed to verify New Jersey educational certification. More specifically, they asked that the employees indicate whether their credentials were certificates of eligibility (CE), certificates of eligibility with advanced standing (CEAS), provisional certificates (PROV) or standard certificates (STAND CERT). Petitioner testified that she had not known what the above described certification abbreviations meant, and had never asked for clarification. (1T64) In fact, petitioner disclosed that, prior to 2012, she had never sought to ascertain what the DOE requirements for school athletic trainers were. (1T63) Nonetheless, she certified that what was set forth on the form, i.e., that she held standard certification as an athletic trainer, was true. (1T65)

In May of 2010, petitioner's contract was not renewed, but she reapplied for the athletic trainer position and was rehired. Petitioner points out that in Superintendent Doran's June 25, 2010 letter to her advising her of her reappointment, he wrote that she would achieve tenure in the 2010-2011 school year. (P-3) The record indicates that petitioner served both that year and the following school year, i.e., 2011-2012.

At the beginning of the 2012-2013 school year – on or about September 17, 2012 – petitioner was given and signed another update form. (R-11) This questionnaire had a more detailed format. On the second page it required an employee to designate the kind of certificate he or she held for each assignment. The types of certificates were fully identified at the bottom of the page and each was given a code number. For example, the code number for a certificate of eligibility was "7." (R-11 at 2) Employees were also asked whether they obtained their certificates via the traditional route or the alternate route. (Ibid.) As regards the position of athletic trainer, petitioner entered a "1," the numerical code for standard certificate. (Ibid.)

Shortly after petitioner submitted the September 17, 2012 update questionnaire she was in an automobile accident, which precipitated workers compensation leave. (1T82-84) While she was on the workers compensation leave, Superintendent Doran advised her via certified letter, that respondent had discovered that she did not hold the required educational certificate for athletic trainer. (P-4) Petitioner was given sixty days paid leave to get the certificate and, at her request, respondent sent a letter to the New Jersey Board of Examiners (NJBOE) advising that petitioner would be employed, effective upon the issuance of her School Athletic Trainer certificate. (R-13; 1T92)

Petitioner testified that prior to Doran's advisement, she did not know that School Athletic Trainer certification existed. (1T26) After receiving the November 9, 2012 letter from Doran, she did not call anyone at respondent's school district or at the DOE; she just used the information attached to Doran's letter to go on the internet and apply for certification. (1T89-91) On December 28, 2012, the NJBOE evaluated petitioner's credentials and asked for proof of a bachelors degree from a regionally accredited college or university. (P-5) A delay in sending the proper transcripts to the NJBOE was caused by errors made by administrators at Montclair State College, 1T22, but petitioner's Educational Services certificate with a School Athletic Trainer endorsement was issued on January 10, 2013. (P-6; R-28; R-30)

On Friday, January 11, 2013, petitioner met with Superintendent Doran and Assistant Superintendent Confessore, at which time petitioner was told that she was reinstated and that her tenure would start accruing when she returned to work on Monday, January 14, 2013. (1T99-100) At that meeting they also spoke of respondent's incumbent job description for school athletic trainer. Doran asked petitioner to look at other job descriptions that might be useful in improving it. (1T110) Doran wrote petitioner a letter dated January 11, 2013 memorializing the above mentioned meeting discussions, including the advisement that January 14, 2013 marked the onset of her tenure accrual. (P-7)

Petitioner testified that at her meeting with Doran and Confessore on January 11, 2013 she expressed disagreement that her tenure would only begin accruing on January 14, 2013. (1T99-100) She returned to work on January 14, 2013 and did not take any formal action regarding her belief that she was tenured; she did, however, speak with union representatives. (1T101-03) In April, petitioner received a "Rice letter" dated April 22, 2013 advising that her employment would be discussed at the respondent's April 25, 2013 Board meeting.[2] (R-15) Subsequently, petitioner received a letter dated April 26, 2013 from Doran advising that her contract had not been renewed. (R-16)

The School Athletic Trainer position was posted on April 26, 2013, with May 3, 2013 as the application deadline. (R-18) A new job description was attached to the posting. (R-17) Petitioner testified that she was not aware of the posting until the deadline or shortly before same. (1T118-21) She told Athletic Director Kim Huaranga that she wished to apply, and Huaranga advised that the deadline had been extended. (1T121; 1T123) Petitioner also acknowledged receiving an email dated May 9, 2013 from Celia Mariano of respondent's district (R-19) advising that the deadline to apply for the Athletic Trainer position had been extended to May 15, 2013. (1T123-25) Additionally, Doran testified that he had extended the application so that petitioner could apply. (3T89)

[2] Petitioner testified that she did not attend the meeting because it conflicted with her work schedule, and because a union member had told her that no one would be fired. (1T109)

Petitioner consulted a lawyer in May 2013. Subsequently, on May 14, 2013, petitioner both sent a petition to the Commissioner of Education and sent a letter to Doran stating: "I'm writing to express my interest in discussing the Athletic Training Position at Harrison H.S. for the 2013-2014 school year." (R-21) Petitioner testified that she sent said letter by regular postal service mail – as opposed to using the district's mail system. (1T123) Doran did not regard the letter as a bona fide application and did not respond, 3T91, nor did petitioner ever follow up on same. (1T163)

The law which controls this controversy is N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2.4, which provides in pertinent part: "To be eligible for appointment by a board of education as a school athletic trainer in any public school, an applicant shall possess an educational services certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners." [Emphasis added.][3]

When the law was enacted, the legislature included language which denoted that, for purposes of tenure eligibility, it did not intend to nullify the years of service which a certificated school athletic trainer may have accumulated prior to the 1999 law: "Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, any person who is employed as a school athletic trainer in a public school prior to the effective date of P.L. 1999, c. 87 (C.18A:26-2.4 et al.) may continue to be so employed pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4."

Thus, for example, if a school athletic trainer had begun employment in a district in 1990 and continued that employment beyond the August 1999 effective date of N.J.S.A. 18A: 26-2.4, all of his or her years of employment would count toward tenure – so long as the employee obtained an educational services certificate with a school athletic trainer endorsement.

The tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4, is not to the contrary. It provides that:

> No teaching staff member shall acquire tenure in any position in the public schools in any school district or under any board of education, who is not the holder of an appropriate certificate for such position, issued by the State Board of Examiners, in full force and effect, except that no board of education shall terminate the employment or refuse to continue the employment or reemployment of ...

That person shall be issued the new certificate without being required to meet any additional qualifications, and any periods of employment as an athletic trainer prior to the effective date of that act shall count toward the acquisition of tenure to the same extent as employment after he effective date of that act.

The foregoing statute reiterates the requirement that each teaching staff member must hold the proper certificate/endorsement. A provision added in 1999 also ordained that: 1) school athletic trainers who began service prior to 1999 and held the appropriate license from the NJBOME could not be terminated simply because they did not hold an educational services certificate with a school athletic trainer endorsement, and 2) their service prior to 1999 could be counted toward tenure. The new provision permitted the NJBOE to issue new endorsements to such school athletic trainers without requiring any additional qualifications.

What the new provision did not do was allow uncertificated employees to serve as school athletic trainers. The prohibition against penalizing school athletic trainers for not being certificated prior to 1999 – by terminating their employment or extinguishing their tenure – did not and does not bestow upon them a waiver from their responsibility to obtain the appropriate certificate/endorsement. Each teaching staff member has "primary responsibility" for obtaining appropriate certification. William Feldman v. Board of Education of the Township of Branchburg, Somerset County and Rebecca Gensel, Docket No. A-2736-11T3 (App. Div., February 27, 2013) at 19-20. School officials share responsibility for verifying proper certification, but it is each individual educator's obligation to obtain any necessary certificates. Sydnor v. Englewood Bd. of Ed., 1976 S.L.D. 113, 117 (Comm'r 1976). While petitioner appears to have kept up-to-date with the requirements for maintaining her NJBOME license – which is one of the requirements for service as a school athletic trainer – she appears to have made no attempt to keep up with educational certification requirements, even when she was asked to fill out "update forms" which used terminology which should have, at minimum, alerted her to the possibility that additional qualifications were necessary for her position and prompted further inquiry.

The present case has nothing to do with the 'tacking' of service under emergency or provisional certificates. Petitioner held no certificate at all until January 10, 2013. Only then could tenure begin to accrue. The Commissioner also notes that petitioner could have reapplied for the athletic trainer position in respondent's district. The record indicates, in fact, that the application deadline was extended to May 15, 2013 for her benefit. Yet petitioner did not apply. The only communication from her was a three sentence letter expressing her "interest in discussing" the position, which letter was dated one day before the application deadline.[4] [4] As it was sent by regular mail, the Commissioner cannot conclude that respondent received it by the application deadline.

Accordingly, the Commissioner rejects the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law and dismisses the petition.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[5]

BEFORE BARRY E. MOSCOWITZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Kollar, an athletic trainer at Harrison High School, obtained her School Athletic Trainer certificate before she was non-renewed. Can Kollar tack on her service before she obtained her certificate to acquire tenure? Yes. Under Breitwieser v. Jersey City, 286 N.J. Super. 633, 42-43 (App. Div. 1996), a teacher must obtain or become eligible for a standard certificate in the appropriate field before the termination of employment.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 15, 2013, Kollar filed a petition against the Harrison Board of Education (Harrison). In her petition, Kollar alleges that she attained tenure on September 1, 2010, but was wrongfully terminated as a non-tenured staff member on June 30, 2013. Wherefore, Kollar demands that her termination be discontinued.

On June 3, 2013, Harrison filed its answer. In its Answer, Harrison states that Kollar was hired in October 2007 to the ten-month annual position of Athletic Trainer but was not issued the standard certificate for such a position until January 2013. As such, Harrison asserts that Kollar has failed to state a viable claim upon which relief can be granted and that this case should be dismissed.

On June 6, 2013, the Department of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15, and the act establishing the Office of Administrative Law, N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23, for a hearing under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6.

On June 9, 2014, June 19, 2014, and July 1, 2014, I held the hearing.

By January 20, 2015, the parties submitted their closing briefs and I closed the record.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the testimony the parties provided, and my assessment of its credibility, together with the documents the parties submitted, and my assessment of their sufficiency, I FIND the following as FACT:

I.

In May 1988, Kollar became a student member of the National Athletic Trainers Association (NATA).

In May 1991, Kollar received a certificate from NATA as an Athletic Trainer.

In May 1991, Kollar also received a certificate from the Department of Education for Teacher of Driver Education.

In July 1991, Kollar received a certificate from the Department of Education for Teacher of Health and Physical Education.

On October 18, 2007, Harrison appointed Kollar to the position of Athletic Trainer, effective October 15, 2007.

Kollar remained in the position of Athletic Trainer for the 2007-08, 2008-09, and 2009-10 school years.

On May 7, 2010, the superintendent, James Doran, wrote to Kollar that she would not be offered another contract of employment for the 2010-11 school year.

On May 15, 2010, Kollar re-applied for the position.

On June 24, 2010, Harrison re-appointed Kollar to the position of Athletic Trainer for the 2010-11 school year.

In his notice, Doran wrote to Kollar that she would acquire tenure during the 2010-11 school year.

II.

On November 9, 2012, Doran wrote to Kollar that new State requirements for compiling and recording data on all certified professionals revealed that she did not hold the required educational certificate for School Athletic Trainer. More specifically, Doran wrote that in addition to the license from the Board of Medical Examiners, N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2.4 required Kollar to hold the educational certificate for School Athletic Trainer. Indeed, Doran testified that he told Kollar to get that certificate "with all deliberate speed."

Meanwhile, Doran contacted a private entity, Game Day, for per diem trainers in her absence.

On December 21, 2012, the assistant superintendent, Frederick Confessore, wrote to Kollar that she would be employed by Harrison in the capacity of Athletic Trainer, effective upon the issuance of her School Athletic Trainer certificate from the Department of Education.

On December 28, 2012, the Department of Education evaluated her credentials for a School Athletic Trainer certificate and determined that she still needed proof of a bachelor's degree from a regionally accredited college or university.

Kollar testified that she requested her undergraduate transcript from Montclair State College but Montclair State College sent her graduate transcript instead, which delayed her submission to the Department of Education.

On January 11, 2013, the Department of Education issued Kollar a certificate for School Athletic Trainer, which was posted online. On that same date, Doran wrote to Kollar that she would be reinstated as a School Athletic Trainer effective January 14, 2013. Moreover, Doran informed Kollar that her tenure would begin to accrue under her new certificate on that date, January 14, 2013.

III.

Kollar testified that such a School Athletic Trainer certificate from the Department of Education did not exist when she first began her career as an Athletic Trainer and that the only certificate that existed when she first began her career as an Athletic Trainer was the one from NATA, which she had always maintained.

IV.

On January 28, 2013, Doran received the School Athletic Trainer certificate from Kollar.

On April 22, 2013, Doran wrote to Kollar that Harrison would be discussing her employment at its meeting scheduled for April 25, 2013. Doran testified that he received no response from either Kollar or the Union. Meanwhile, Kollar testified that she understood she did not have to attend the meeting scheduled for April 25, 2013.

On April 26, 2013, Doran wrote to Kollar that she was employed by Harrison as a non-tenured staff member and that she would not be offered a contract for the 2013-14 school year.

Nevertheless, on that same date, April 26, 2013, Doran posted that Harrison was accepting applications for the position of Athletic Trainer for the 2013-14 school year and that the deadline to submit applications was Friday, May 3, 2013. Doran testified that he had expected Kollar to apply for the position and that Harrison had anticipated it would rehire her. Later that same date, on May 3, 2013, Doran posted that Harrison had extended the deadline to submit applications to Wednesday, May 15, 2013. Doran testified that Kollar had not applied for the position and that Harrison had extended the deadline because he had still expected Kollar to apply for the position and that Harrison had still anticipated it would rehire her. As Doran put it, he gave her the "benefit of the doubt" and wanted to go "the extra mile."

On May 14, 2013, Kollar wrote to Doran that she was interested in "discussing" the position. Kollar, however, never applied for the position. Indeed, Doran testified that he did not consider her letter to be an application. As Doran testified, "What was there to discuss?" In fact, Doran asserted that he even called her about the delay in her application but that she did not return his calls.

Doran testified that he ultimately stayed with Game Day because they did good work and he had received positive feedback about them. He also testified that Game Day was a lot cheaper—less than half the price of what he would have had to pay Kollar. In addition, no one, including Kollar, ever applied for the position. Finally, Doran resigned that he just couldn't understand why Kollar waited until the last minute to obtain her School Athletic Trainer certificate and why she wasn't more proactive in obtaining it.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I.

A petitioner must file a petition no later than the ninetieth day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling, or other action by the district board of education, which is the subject of the contested case. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

In this case, Harrison argues that Kollar filed her petition out of time. More specifically, Harrison argues that Kollar learned on November 9, 2012, that she did not have the requisite School Athletic Trainer certificate and would have had to obtain one to continue employment with the school district. Thus, Harrison argues that Kollar would have had to have filed her petition objecting to her need for a School Athletic Trainer certificate on February 7, 2013.

In addition, Harrison argues that Kollar learned on January 11, 2013, that she did not have tenure and that her tenure would only begin to accrue as of that date so she would have had to have filed her petition objecting to her tenure status on April 11, 2013.

Since Kollar did not file her petition until May 15, 2013, Harrison argues that this case must be dismissed.

Harrison, however, is mistaken. On April 26, 2013, Doran wrote to Kollar that she was employed by Harrison as a non-tenured staff member and that she would not be offered a contract for employment for the 2013-14 school year. As such, I CONCLUDE that April 26, 2013, is the date of final action by the district board of education under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), that Kollar had until July 26, 2013, to file her petition, and that Kollar filed her petition challenging the determination that she was a non-tenured staff member who would not be offered employment for the 2013-14 school year on time.

A succinct recitation of tenure law is set forth in Breitwieser v. Jersey City, 286 N.J. Super. 633 (App. Div. 1996), which is the controlling authority in this case. In that case, the Appellate Division explained that the right to tenure is created and governed by statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1, et seq., and that the statute sets for the conditions under which a public school teaching staff member, including an athletic trainer, can earn tenure. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 637.

Citing N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, the Appellate Division explained that the teaching staff member must hold "proper certificates in full force and effect" and must have been employed by the board of education for three consecutive calendar years, three consecutive academic years together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year, or the equivalent of more than three academic years within any four consecutive academic years. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 637.

When Kollar was hired, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 appeared as follows:

§ 18A:28-5. Requirements for tenure

a. The services of all teaching staff members employed prior in the positions of teacher, principal, other than administrative principal, assistant principal, vice principal, assistant superintendent, and all school nurses including school nurse supervisors, head school nurses, chief school nurses, school nurse coordinators, and any other nurse performing school nursing services, school athletic trainer and such other employees as are in positions which require them to hold appropriate certificates issued by the board of examiners, serving in any school district or under any board of education, excepting those who are not the holders of proper certificates in full force and effect and school business administrators shared by two or more school districts, shall be under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and they shall not be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, or conduct unbecoming such a teaching staff member or other just cause and then only in the manner prescribed by subarticle B of article 2 of chapter 6 of this Title, after employment in such district or by such board for:

(a) Three consecutive calendar years, or any shorter period which may be fixed by the employing board for such purpose; or

(b) Three consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year; or

(c) The equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years.

For the purposes of this chapter, tenure in any of the administrative or supervisory positions enumerated herein shall accrue only by employment in that administrative or supervisory position. Tenure so accrued shall not extend to any other administrative or supervisory position and nothing herein shall limit or restrict tenure rights which were or may be acquired pursuant to N.J.S. 18A:28-6 in a position in which the individual actually served.

[N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.]

Similarly, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1, the Appellate Division explained that the very definition of a teaching staff member includes the prerequisite that the teaching staff member holds a "valid and effective" standard, provisional, or emergency certificate. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 637-38.

When Kollar was hired, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 appeared as follows:

> § 18A:1-1. Definitions
>
> "Teaching staff member" means a member of the professional staff of any district or regional board of education, or any board of education of a county vocational school, holding office, position or employment of such character that the qualifications, for such office, position or employment, require him to hold a valid and effective standard, provisional or emergency certificate, appropriate to his office, position or employment, issued by the State Board of Examiners and includes a school nurse and a school athletic trainer.

More emphatically, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4, the Appellate Division explained that no teaching staff member, who is not a the holder of an "appropriate certificate" for such position issued by the State Board of Examiners, shall acquire tenure. Breitwieser, supra, 28 N.J. Super. at 638.

When Kollar was hired, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4 appeared as follows:

> § 18A:28-4. Requirements for certain school personnel to acquire tenure, exceptions
>
> No teaching staff member shall acquire tenure in any position in the public schools in any school district or under any board of education, who is not the holder of an appropriate certificate for such position, issued by the State Board of Examiners, in full force and effect, except that no board of education shall terminate the employment or refuse to continue the employment or reemployment of
> a. any school nurse appointed prior to May 9, 1947 for the reason that such nurse is not the holder of such a certificate and the State Board of Examiners shall make no rule or regulation which will affect adversely the rights of any such nurse under any certificate issued prior to said date; or > b. a school athletic trainer appointed prior to the effective date of P.L. 1999, c. 87 (C.18A:26-2.4 et al.) for the reason that the school athletic trainer is not the holder of a certificate, provided that the person is registered with or licensed by the New Jersey State Board of Medical Examiners, as applicable, as an athletic trainer. That person shall be issued the new certificate without being required to meet any additional qualifications, and any periods of employment as an athletic trainer prior to the effective date of that act shall count toward the acquisition of tenure to the same extent as employment after the effective date of that act.

In addition, the Appellate Division explained that these certificates are, in turn, governed by the regulations promulgated by State Board of Examiners. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 638.

Finally, the Appellate Division explained that the tenure statute should be liberally construed. Id. at 639.

B.

In this case, Harrison specifies that athletic trainers must hold a School Athletic Trainer certificate, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:2-2.4; that tenure cannot be required without one, citing, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4; and that this law is well-settled, citing Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 37.

Indeed, Harrison notes that the New Jersey Supreme Court has held that these precise statutory requirements must be met, citing Picogna v. Cherry Hill Board of Education, 143 N.J. 391, 400 (1996) ("Tenure arises only upon compliance with the precise conditions articulated in the statute.").

Moreover, Harrison reminds that the petitioner has the burden of proving that he or she has met these statutory requirements, citing Canfield v. Pine Hill Board of Education, 51 N.J. 400 (1968), rev'g on dissent, 97 N.J. Super. 483, 493 (App. Div.

1967) ("The burden of proving the right of tenure is upon plaintiff and ordinarily that right must be clearly proved.").

C.

Kollar argues that she earned tenure in her position as an athletic trainer and was improperly terminated from her position as an athletic trainer because she had served in her position as an athletic trainer for three consecutive calendar years, as N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(a) requires.

In addition, Kollar argues that she earned tenure in her position as an athletic trainer and was improperly terminated from her position as an athletic trainer because she obtained the new certificate for athletic trainer without being required to meet any additional qualifications, as N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4(b) specifies, and because her period of employment as an athletic trainer before the effective date of the statute requiring the new certificate for athletic trainer count toward the acquisition of tenure, as N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4(b) further specifies.

Moreover, Kollar argues that she earned tenure in her position as an athletic trainer and was improperly terminated from her position as an athletic trainer because she obtained the new certificate for athletic trainer before she was non-renewed, as Breitwieser allows.

Harrison argues in response that none of the cases Kollar cites are on point because Kollar did not hold an emergency or provisional certificate or even a certificate of eligibility.

III.

In this case, I agree with Kollar and her reliance on Breitwieser and reject the argument Harrison argues in response. In Breitwieser, Breitwieser attempted to acquire tenure for service under a permanent certificate by tacking on an earlier period of service under an emergency certificate in a different field. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 635. The agency refused to permit the tacking on of an earlier period of service in a different field and the Appellate Division affirmed. Ibid.

More significant, however, is the reasoning. In its opinion, the Appellate Division explained that N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 requires a teacher to hold "the proper certificate" when claiming tenure, that the "proper certificate" must be either a provisional or standard certificate, and that Breitwieser had to show that she has served the requisite period of time under that "proper certificate." Id. at 639-40. In addition, the Appellate Division explained that no teacher may acquire tenure solely upon service under an emergency certificate, no matter how long that teacher may have served under the emergency certificate, because holders of emergency certificates have not fully satisfied the educational prerequisites for standard certification, citing Kubas v. Linden Board of Education, 1980 S.L.D. 1172, 1179-80 (Commissioner of Ed.) ("Because of the uncertainty surrounding continued eligibility to teach, the protection of tenure laws was not intended to extend to holders of substandard certificates and has not been so extended.). Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 640. Indeed, the Appellate Division explained that the requirement that teachers hold a non-emergency certificate to obtain tenure is appropriate because emergency-certified teachers are by definition unqualified to hold their positions and merely hold their positions temporarily, subject to termination and nonrenewal, as soon as the district locates a provisionally or permanently certified teacher. Id. at 641.

But the Appellate Division further explained that this does not mean that service under an emergency certificate can never be considered service under a "proper certificate" and counted toward tenure. Ibid.

To the contrary, the Appellate Division, citing and discussing six specific cases referred to as the K'Burg line of cases, explained that teachers have been allowed to tack service under emergency certificates to service under standard certificates. Ibid.

A.

First, the Appellate Division discussed K'Burg v. Lower Alloways Creek Board of Education, 1973 S.L.D. 636. In that case, K'Burg had been employed as a kindergarten teacher under an emergency certificate for nearly five years. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 641. She began in September 1968 and continued into the 1972-73 academic year. Ibid. In March 1973 she was informed that her employment would not be renewed for the 1973-74 academic year but she continued teaching through June 1973. Ibid. Although K'Burg held only the emergency certificate when she was non-renewed in March 1973, she obtained the standard certificate in April 1973, before the termination of her employment. Ibid. Thus, K'Burg claimed that she was tenured as of April 1973. Ibid. "She claimed that she was tenured under N.J.S.A. 18A:25 as of April 1973 because at that time she was the 'holder of a proper certificate in full force and effect'—a permanent certificate—and had been employed for more than three consecutive academic years." Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 641-42. Thus, the Commissioner ruled in favor of K'Burg and allowed her to tack her service under her emergency certificate onto her service under her standard certificate. Id. at 642.

In Givens v. Newark Board of Education, 1974 S.L.D. 906, a ten-month period at the beginning of her employment was counted toward tenure, even though Givens did not receive a standard certificate until the end of the ten-month period, because she had applied for the standard certificate before the start of her employment and the delay in processing was not her fault. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 642.

In Smith v. Sayerville Board of Education, 1974 S.L.D. 1095, aff'd, 1976 S.L.D. 1120 (App. Div.), Smith taught for ten years under an emergency certificate and then became eligible for standard certification in the same subject while still employed. Relying on K'Burg, the Commissioner credited the service under the emergency certificate. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 642. Thus, Smith was granted tenure. Ibid.

In Salerno v. Newark Board of Education, 1980 S.L.D. 439, Salerno had served as a high school principal under an emergency certificate issued in October 1972, received a permanent certificate for high school principal in July 1974, but was credited with the service under the emergency certificate. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 642.

Similarly, in Amato v. Hudson County Area Vo-Tech Schools Board of Education, # 350-84 (Nov. 8, 1984), Amato had worked as a job-placement coordinator under an emergency certificate beginning in February 1983, received the permanent certificate in March 1984, but was credited with the service under the emergency certificate. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 642.

Last, the Appellate Division discussed Smith v. Board of Education of Atlantic City Vo-Tech School, 1985 S.L.D. 704. In that case, Smith taught under an emergency certificate for ten years and then became eligible, but did not receive, the standard certificate in the same subject while still employed. Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 642. Still the Commissioner could find no meaningful difference between Smith's eligibility for the standard certificate and Smith's possession of the standard certificate. Id. at 642-43. Thus, Smith was credited with the service under the emergency certificate. Ibid. More pointedly, the Appellate Division quoted the Commissioner in Smith who declared with emphasis that the teacher must either obtain or become eligible for a standard certificate in the appropriate field before the termination of employment. Ibid.

B.

In summary, the Appellate Division in Breitwieser wrote that service under an emergency certificate may be counted toward the service needed for tenure when that service is followed by the teacher obtaining a certificate in the same field as the emergency certificate:

> Our understanding of the K'Burg cases, consistent with the propose of the tenure scheme, treats them as standing for this more limited proposition: service under an emergency certificate may be counted towards the service needed for tenure only when that service is followed by the teacher ultimately obtaining a permanent certificate in the same field > as the emergency certificate. Whatever their other factual variations, every one of the K'Burg cases involved a teacher who received a standard certificate in the same area in which that teacher had served under an emergency certificate.

> [Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 644-45.]

Incidentally, the Appellate Division in Breitwieser further explained that a district may hope that a teacher who is teaching under an emergency certificate proves to be qualified rather than merely legally employable, and that the district may even expect that teacher to become qualified, but the failure of the teacher to earn the standard certificate in the same field indicates that the teacher never became qualified, and the hope the teacher proves to be qualified simply remains unfulfilled. Id. at 646. Under such circumstances, the Appellate Division continued, the service under the emergency certificate was not under the "appropriate certificate," for purposes of the tenure statute. Ibid. By contrast, a standard certificate in the same field, the Appellate Division noted, implicitly conveys an endorsement of the service under the emergency certificate, which is stronger and different in kind than that conveyed by renewal of the emergency certificate, and vindicates to a large extent whatever expectation the district had about the service and progress the teacher made toward the standard certificate. Id. at 646-67.

As will be seen below, such reasoning will find direct application in this case.

C.

Kollar also cites the unpublished Appellate Division decision of Ruiz v. Board of Education of the Borough of Fort Lee, A-4443-11 (App. Div. July 8, 2013), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/, which follows Breitwieser. In Ruiz, the Commissioner determined, and the Appellate Division upheld, that tenure can be achieved through service under a provisional certificate so long as the teacher satisfies the conditional requirements of the provisional certificate. The Appellate Division noted with emphasis, just as it did in Breitwieser, that the determination was in keeping with the requirements of the standard certificate, which are only issued to those who have met all the requirements for state certification. Ruiz, supra, A-4443-11 at *2. But in Ruiz, Ruiz was determined not to have obtained tenure because he had not met all of the requirements for state certification before he was terminated.

As will be seen below, such reasoning will also find direct application in this case.

IV.

The facts and circumstances of this case are no different in kind than the facts and circumstances of the K'Burg cases. Although Kollar did not hold an emergency or provisional certificate or certificate of eligibility before she obtained the School Athletic Trainer certificate from the State Board of Examiners, the fact remains that she did hold a proper certificate before she obtained the School Athletic Trainer certificate from the State Board of Examiners before she was non-renewed, just as the teaching staff members did in the K'Burg cases. Moreover, Kollar did not have to meet any additional qualifications for the position or certificate, which was emphasized more recently in Ruiz.

To parrot the language the Appellate Division used in Breitwieser, Harrison had hoped that Kollar, who had been teaching under the certificate provided by the Board of Medical Examiners, proved to be qualified rather than merely legally employable. Kollar then proved to be qualified when she obtained the School Athletic Trainer certificate from the State Board of Examiners, which vindicated the expectation Harrison had about the service Kollar had provided. Indeed, Harrison made it quite clear that it expected her to continue in her role as athletic trainer by providing her with a leave of absence to obtain the certificate from the State Board of Examiners and by extending the deadline to apply for the position of athletic trainer. The fact that Kollar did not take advantage of that courtesy and apply for the position is of no moment given my conclusion that she had already obtained tenure before then and did not have to reapply.

Finally, the facts remain that Kollar served in the position of athletic trainer for more than three consecutive calendar years, as N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(a) requires, and that her period of employment as an athletic trainer before the effective date of the statute requiring the new certificate for athletic trainer count toward the acquisition of tenure, as N.J.S.A. 18A:28-4(b) specifies.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Kollar acquired tenure on January 11, 2013, the date the State Board of Examiners issued her School Athletic Trainer certificate, that Kollar was wrongfully terminated as a non-tenured staff member on June 30, 2013, and that Kollar should be reinstated as a tenured staff member effective January 11, 2013.

ORDER

Given my findings of fact and conclusion of law, I ORDER that Kollar acquired tenure on January 11, 2013, that the termination of Kollar on June 30, 2013, be discontinued, and that Kollar be reinstated as a tenured staff member effective January 11, 2013.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The petitioner – a tenured teaching staff member employed in the Camden City School District – appealed the actions of the respondent school administrators relative to her teacher evaluations for the 2013-2014 school year. The petitioner sought, inter alia, the correction of alleged errors in respondents' evaluations of her performance, including the removal of "unfair, opinionated and biased Partially Effective and Ineffective judgments" that resulted in petitioner's classification as a "Partially Effective" educator, pursuant to the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TEACHNJ) Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123b and N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.2; assurances regarding the training being provided to principals and evaluators to help teachers "grow and thrive in their classroom"; and a credit of three sick days that she purported to have used to deal with the stress caused by respondents' evaluations. Respondents moved to dismiss the petition as untimely, and because petitioner does not raise a cognizable claim over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the petition was timely filed under the 90-day rule; all of the allegations set forth in the petitioner's appeal, and all of the relief requested therein, arise from the petitioner's 2013-2014 teacher performance evaluations; teacher evaluations are governed by the provisions of the TEACHNJ Act, and the corresponding regulations permit only a narrow review by the Commissioner of an annual summative rating of a teacher prior to the filing of tenure charges, and only under circumstances that are not present in the case at hand; petitioner therefore has asserted no cause of action arising under the TEACHNJ Act; further, the appeal process under TEACHNJ regulations requires the teacher to first appeal the evaluation to the chief school administrator, which petitioner did not do; and petitioner asserted no other claim over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the petition for lack of jurisdiction.

Upon comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the matter is appropriately dismissed for failure to advance a cause of action over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

RESPONDENTS.	:

The record in this matter, along with the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law, have been reviewed. None of the parties filed exceptions as permitted under N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Upon full and independent consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the determination of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that petitioner has not advanced a cause of action over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction.

Petitioner – a tenured teaching staff member – alleges that respondents acted improperly when conducting her annual summative educator evaluation during the 2013-2014 school year. Primarily, petitioner requests "the correction of errors in [her] evaluations 'by removing unfair, opinionated and biased Partially Effective and Ineffective judgments that [led] to [her] being categorized as a Partially Effective' educator."[1] (Initial Decision at 2) No tenure charges have been filed against her. Respondents filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of answer, arguing that: (1) the petition lacks a cognizable claim over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction and (2) that the petition was filed beyond the 90-day regulatory period. Ultimately, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) granted respondents' motion and dismissed the petition because the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction, but rejected the argument that the petition was untimely filed.

Educator evaluations are governed by the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TEACHNJ) Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6A-117 et seq., and the related regulations, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 et seq. Enacted in 2012, the Act aims to "raise student achievement by improving instruction through the adoption of evaluations that provide specific feedback to educators, inform the provision of aligned professional development, and inform personnel decisions." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-118. The Act empowers school districts to develop their own evaluation rubrics to assess teacher effectiveness, subject to review and approval by the Commissioner. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-122. Under the Act, evaluation rubrics must incorporate student growth objectives, or "multiple objective measures of student learning that use student growth from one year's measure to the next year's measure." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123b; N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.2. In addition, the evaluation standards adopted by districts must – at a minimum – include four defined annual rating categories for teachers: ineffective, partially effective, effective, and highly effective. Ibid.

Through implementation of a new educator evaluation system, TEACHNJ fundamentally changed the process by which teachers earn and maintain tenure. Specifically, the annual summative rating awarded to a teacher has a direct impact on whether the district must file tenure charges under the Act. For example, if a teacher receives a rating of either ineffective or partially effective – and subsequently receives a rating of ineffective the following year – the Act requires the district superintendent to forward a written tenure charge of inefficiency to the Commissioner against that teacher. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3a(1). Or, if a teacher receives a rating of partially effective for two consecutive years, the district superintendent is required to forward a tenure charge of inefficiency to the Commissioner, except upon a finding of exceptional circumstances that would permit deferment pending the next annual evaluation. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3a(2).

Once tenure charges are filed, the Act requires the Commissioner to appoint an arbitrator to hear the case unless he determines upon review of the charges that the evaluation process has not been followed. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c. If the Commissioner refers the case to an arbitrator for determination, the arbitrator shall consider whether:

> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
> (2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
> (3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or > (4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2a.

If the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the above circumstances occurred, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2b. If the fact did not materially affect the outcome, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed. Ibid. The arbitrator's final determination is binding and cannot be appealed to the Commissioner. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1e.

As indicated by the ALJ in her Initial Decision, TEACHNJ's corresponding regulations permit an exceedingly narrow review by the Commissioner of an annual summative rating prior to the filing of tenure charges – but under circumstances that are not present here. Specifically, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.2(f) provides that "if a teacher's student growth objective score was the sole cause for an ineffective or partially effective summative rating for the 2013-2014 academic year, the teacher may appeal the summative rating by February 1, 2015, or within 15 school days of receiving the summative rating, whichever is later, to the chief school administrator or designee." Thereafter, the chief school administrator's determination can be appealed to the Commissioner within 15 days. Ibid. In this case, petitioner is not arguing that her student growth objective score (SGO) was the sole cause for her partially effective rating, nor did she seek review of her SGO score from the chief school administrator.[2] (Initial Decision at 6). Apart from the limited review permitted by N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.2(f), nothing else in the current regulations or the legislative history of TEACHNJ suggests an intent to afford teachers any other opportunity to seek the Commissioner's review of an annual summative rating absent the filing of tenure charges.

As a result, the Commissioner fully concurs with the ALJ's determination that petitioner has not advanced a cause of action over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction.[3] First, petitioner has acquired tenure and no tenure charges have been lodged against her. Second, the limited appeal provision contained within N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.2(f) is not applicable to these facts. If tenure charges are filed against petitioner in the future, however, the process by which she was evaluated for the 2013-2014 school year will be subject to review by the Commissioner, and – unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed – also by the arbitrator appointed to hear the matter, thus affording petitioner due process. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c; N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2a. Nonetheless, at the present time, petitioner lacks a cognizable cause of action under TEACHNJ; therefore, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to award the remedies she seeks.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law is adopted, respondents' motion to dismiss is granted, and the petition of appeal is dismissed.

MARGARET GOODE,

KEITH MILES AND HYE-WON GEHRING,

Margaret Goode, petitioner, pro se

Robert M. Schwartz, appearing for respondents (Schwartz Law Group, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 15, 2015 Decided: March 26, 2015

BEFORE SUSAN M. SCAROLA, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Margaret Goode, a tenured teaching staff member employed by the State-Operated School District of the City of Camden, appeals certain actions taken by respondents Keith Miles and Hye-Won Gehring (respondents), who are administrators within the school district. The petitioner alleges that the respondents acted improperly with respect to her teacher evaluations for the 2013–2014 school year. Respondents move to dismiss the complaint because (1) petitioner's petition of appeal was not timely filed in accordance with the ninety-day rule, and/or (2) the petitioner does not raise a cognizable claim over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND FACTS

On August 21, 2014, the petitioner filed a petition of appeal with the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Bureau), alleging that respondents acted improperly with respect to her teacher evaluations for the 2013–2014 school year. As relief, she seeks (1) the correction of errors in respondents' evaluations of her "by removing unfair, opinionated and biased Partially Effective and Ineffective judgments that [led] to [her] being categorized as a Partially Effective" educator; (2) the removal of respondent Miles's June 3, 2014, "write up" regarding documentation of student-growth objectives from her personnel file; (3) assurance "that principals and evaluators are being properly trained to use the Danielson Framework as a tool to help teachers grow and thrive in their classroom [sic] and not being used to bully, harass, intimidate or threaten teachers in order to force them out"; and (4) a credit of three sick days "that [she] used because [her] blood pressure elevated after [she] saw Gehring's second bad evaluation and the nurse sent [her] home and told [her] to go to the doctor's, because the stress accumulated until it affected [her] health."

On August 25, 2014, the Bureau advised the petitioner that the matter could not move forward until the petitioner served the petition upon the respondents and then submitted proof of service to the Bureau. On September 11, 2014, the Bureau again advised the petitioner that it had not received proof of service, and notified her that "if this deficiency is not cured by Thursday, September 24, 2014, this matter will be considered withdrawn as a controversy before the Commissioner of Education." On September 17, 2014, the petitioner submitted proof of service to the Bureau.

On October 2, 2014, the petitioner amended her petition to include further allegations regarding a Corrective Action Plan related to her 2013–2014 evaluations. On December 3, 2014, and December 22, 2014, the Bureau advised the petitioner that she had failed to submit proof of service of the amended petition. On January 5, 2015, the Bureau received the proof of service from the petitioner.

On January 13, 2015, the respondents filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer because the petition "does not raise a cognizable claim over which the Commissioner of Education has jurisdiction" and/or because "given that the most recent factual claim in the petition occurred on June 4, 2014, and the petition was 'filed' on September 18, 2014, the petition must also be dismissed on the basis that it was filed beyond the ninety-day statute of limitations [under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i)]."

On January 15, 2015, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The threshold issue is jurisdiction.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

I. The petition of appeal should not be dismissed under the ninety-day rule.

An interested person may file a petition with the Commissioner of Education to hear and decide a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1; N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. A petitioner shall "serve such petition upon each respondent, together with any supporting papers the petitioner may include with the petition," and "shall file proof of service on each respondent . . . and the original petition and supporting materials, if any, with the Commissioner c/o the Director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, New Jersey State Department of Education." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(a). A "petitioner shall file a petition no later than the ninetieth day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the contested case hearing." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). This is commonly referred to as the "ninety-day rule." Nonetheless, the ninety-day rule "may be relaxed or dispensed with by the Commissioner, in the Commissioner's discretion, in any case where a strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16.

In this matter, the petition was filed on August 21, 2014, which was within ninety days of June 3, 2014, which is latest date of respondents' actions that are the subject of the petition.[1] To the extent the ninety-day rule applies to petitions that were filed within the relevant ninety days, but without proof of service, strict adherence to the rule would be inappropriate.

Although the petitioner filed her original petition with the Bureau, she did not follow all of the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1, because she failed to provide the Bureau with proof that she had served the petition on respondents. The Bureau gave the petitioner an opportunity to cure this procedural deficiency by September 24, 2014, and she complied by providing proof of service on September 17, 2014. Under these circumstances, the petition should not be dismissed based on the ninety-day rule.

II. The petition should be dismissed because the petitioner has advanced no cause of action over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction.

The Commissioner has "jurisdiction to hear and determine . . . all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws, excepting those governing higher education, or under the rules of the State board or of the commissioner." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. All of the allegations set forth in the petition and amended petition, and all of the relief requested therein, arise from the petitioner's 2013–2014 teacher performance evaluations.

The 2012 "Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TEACHNJ) Act," N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 to -129, and the regulations promulgated thereunder, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 to -9.1, were designed "to raise student achievement by improving instruction through the adoption of evaluations that provide specific feedback to educators, inform the provision of aligned professional development, and inform personnel decisions." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-118(a). A district board of education annually shall adopt and submit for approval by the Commissioner evaluation rubrics for all teaching staff members. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.1. The evaluation rubrics shall have four defined annual ratings: ineffective, partially effective, effective, and highly effective. Ibid. "Ineffective" or "partially effective" means "the employee receives an annual summative evaluation rating of 'ineffective' or 'partially effective' based on the performance standards for his [or her] position established through the evaluation rubric adopted by the board of education and approved by the commissioner." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-119.

The TEACHNJ Act and regulations provide only one basis for a teacher to appeal to the Commissioner.

> If a teacher's student growth objective score was the sole cause for an ineffective or partially effective summative rating for the 2013–2014 academic year, the teacher may appeal the summative rating by February 1, 2015, or within 15 school days of receiving the summative rating, whichever is later, to the chief school administrator or designee. Within 15 school days of receiving the appeal, the chief school administrator or designee shall notify the teacher of the decision. If the chief school administrator or designee agrees the student growth objective score was the sole cause for an ineffective or partially effective summative rating, the teacher's student growth objective score weight shall be adjusted from 15 percent to one percent and the teacher practice score weight shall be increased accordingly. Any decision of the chief school administrator with regard to recalculating a teacher's percentage weight and annual summative rating in accordance with this provision may be appealed directly to the Commissioner no later than 15 school days following the chief school administrator's or designee's decision notification to the teacher. The Commissioner shall review whether the annual summative rating was directly and numerically caused by the student growth objective score and may decide the matter on a summary basis.

Here, the petitioner does not allege, and the papers do not show, that her student-growth-objective score was "the sole cause for an ineffective or partially effective summative rating for the 2013–2014 academic year." Thus, she has not asserted a cause of action arising under the TEACHNJ Act. Moreover, the appeal process under the TEACHNJ regulations requires a teacher to first appeal the rating to the chief school administrator, and if the teacher is dissatisfied with the outcome of that appeal, he or she may thereafter appeal the decision to the Commissioner. Thus, even if the petitioner's rating was based solely on her student-growth-objective score, she did not follow the proper appeal procedure by appealing first to the chief school administrator.

Lastly, the petitioner has not asserted any other claim over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction, such as an allegation that she was improperly dismissed or reduced in salary under the tenure laws.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, the petitioner filed her petition within the ninety-day period and it was served in accordance with the directive of the Bureau shortly thereafter. Under these circumstances, dismissal on the basis that the petition was not served within ninety days is not warranted. Accordingly, the petition shall not be dismissed based on the ninety-day rule. However, because the petition does not raise a cognizable claim over which the Commissioner has jurisdiction, the petition shall be dismissed on that basis.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, the motion to dismiss the petition and the amended petition is hereby GRANTED.[2] The petition and the amended petition are hereby

[2] This Initial Decision encompasses both the original petition and the amended petition, as no claims were set forth in either which would be cognizable under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner.

DISMISSED without prejudice to the petitioner filing a complaint within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Before MELISSA H. BIREN, Esq., Impartial Arbitrator

APPEARANCES:

For the Complainant
Purcell, Mulcahy, Hawkins, Flanagan & Lawless, LLC
Robert Tosti, Esq.

For the Respondent
Caruso Smith Picini, PC
Nicholas Poberezhsky, Esq.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, as amended by P.L. 2012, c 26 ("TEACHNJ"), the tenure charges brought by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County (the "District") against Elizabeth Corbacho-Musngi ("Corbacho-Musngi") were referred to me for a hearing and decision. I conducted a hearing at the offices of Caruso Smith Picini, PC on February 3, 2015, February 19, 2015 and April 7, 2015. The record closed on April 17, 2015 upon the arbitrator's receipt of the parties' post hearing memoranda and supporting authorities.

Both parties were represented by counsel and had a full opportunity to adduce evidence, to cross-examine each other's witnesses and to make argument in support of their respective positions. A stenographic record of the proceedings was taken. Neither party has raised any objection to the fairness of this proceeding. The evidence adduced, the legal authorities cited and the positions and arguments set forth by the parties have been fully considered in the preparation and issuance of this Opinion and Award.

The Charges and Procedural Background:

A Statement of Charges, dated August 25, 2014, was served upon Corbacho-Musngi alleging chronic and excessive absenteeism, absence without leave and other just cause, as follows:

CHARGE ONE: CHRONIC AND EXCESSIVE ABSENTEEISM

1. On or about September 2003, Respondent began her employment with the District as a teacher and has attained tenure since that time.
2. Respondent has been chronically and excessively absent from her teaching duties for several years now.
3. During the 2010-11 school year, Respondent incurred approximately forty-two (42) absences in sick and personal days...
4. During the 2011-12 school year, Respondent incurred approximately sixty-nine (69) absences in sick and personal days...
5. During the 2012-13 school year, Respondent incurred approximately forty-seven (47) absences in sick, personal and bereavement days...
6. During the 2013-14 school year, Respondent incurred approximately One hundred twenty six (126) absences in sick, personal and AWOL days...
7. Respondent failed to meet an acceptable level of attendance under District and State guidelines for several years now.
8. Respondent's amount of absence from the classroom constitutes excessive absenteeism which adversely impacted the instruction to students, regardless of whether Respondent's absences were authorized by contract or otherwise caused by legitimate medical reasons.
9. Respondent was previously warned about her excessive absenteeism and that continued absenteeism would result in more harsh discipline...
10. Respondent's pattern of excessive absenteeism over the foregoing period caused a substantial interruption in the continuity of educational instruction and had a corresponding adverse impact upon the instruction to students of the District.
11. Respondent's conduct and pattern of excessive absenteeism as described above are sufficient to warrant dismissal from employment.

CHARGE TWO: ABSENCE WITHOUT LEAVE

12. The District restates the allegations contained in Charge One and reallege and incorporate them by reference as if fully set forth at length herein.
13. During the 2013-14 school year, Respondent was assigned to The Early Childhood School as a pre-kindergarten teacher.
14. In August of 2013, Respondent was previously warned about her excessive absences and that continued absenteeism would result in more harsh discipline...
15. During the 2013-14 school year, Respondent applied for intermittent family leave of absence pursuant to the Family Medical Leave Act of 1993 ("FMLA")...

16. Respondent was denied an FMLA leave from December 3, 2013 until March 3, 2014 because she did not qualify due to insufficient hours worked. Respondent was granted a leave of absence due to illness from January 9, 2014 through January 28, 2014 without pay with a scheduled return to work date of Tuesday, January 28, 2014...
17. Respondent failed to return to her assigned location on January 28, 2014...
18. Respondent failed to contact the District with regard to her continued unauthorized absence from the District beyond January 28, 2014...
19. On March 28, 2014 and April 4, 2014, the District corresponded with Respondent providing formal notice that her failure to return to work on January 28, 2014, coupled with her failure to provide the District with notice of her intentions to return to work resulted in her being marked AWOL and that, as a result, the District would be taking disciplinary action against her...
20. The District's March 28, 2014 correspondence also indicated that an immediate response regarding her absences was required...
21. Respondent failed to respond to the District's March 28, 2014 or April 4, 2014 correspondence.
22. Respondent failed to provide the District with any notice of her intention to return to work.
23. Respondent's AWOL resulted in additional costs to the District and caused a substantial disruption to the continuity of educational instruction and had a corresponding adverse impact upon the students of the Newark Public Schools.
24. Respondent's failure to follow the District's directive as well as her actions in failing to report her absences constitute acts of unbecoming conduct and serve to substantially disrupt and/or interfere with the orderly operation of the District and the school.
25. Respondent's unbecoming conduct and disregard of District directive touches upon her character and highlight her propensity to engage in prohibited behavior.
26. Respondent's actions in being AWOL since January 28, 2014 as well as her failure to respond to the District's request for a response is extremely inappropriate and highly egregious in and of itself given the heightened standards of conduct to which educators are held to.
27. Respondent's willful, inappropriate and unbecoming conduct as described above constitutes Conduct Unbecoming of a Teacher sufficient to warrant dismissal from employment and/or reduction in salary.

CHARGE THREE: OTHER SUFFICIENT CAUSE

28. The District restates the allegations contained in Charge One and Two and reallege and incorporate them by reference as if fully set forth at length herein.
29. The cumulative effect of Respondent's absenteeism, AWOL and misconduct as set forth above constitutes other sufficient cause sufficient to warrant dismissal or a reduction in salary.

On October 20, 2014, the State District Superintendent of Newark Public Schools, Cami Anderson, determined that there was "probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges."[1] Respondent filed an Answer to the tenure charges on November 6, 2014, and an Amended Answer on December 4, 2014.

The tenure charges were referred to me on November 17, 2014. An initial request for an extension of time under TEACHNJ due to scheduling difficulties was granted. During the first hearing on February 3, 2015 the parties discussed settlement. During the second hearing on February 19, 2015, the parties continued settlement discussions and counsel for both parties then represented that a settlement had been reached. Thereafter, however, the settlement was not finalized. A further extension of time was granted under TEACHNJ to allow the case to proceed to a hearing on the merits on April 7, 2015 and for the issuance of a decision.

At the end of the day on April 2, 2015, Respondent filed a voluminous Motion to Dismiss. Given the late filing of the motion, prior to a holiday weekend and just two business days prior to the scheduled hearing, the motion was not considered. At the start of the hearing, however, Respondent moved to preclude the District's presentation of any witnesses due to the District's failure to provide a complete summary of their testimony as required by TEACHNJ. Respondent had not previously raised this issue during two prior hearing dates, many communications regarding the hearing and a prior conference call regarding witnesses. In addition, information as to earlier disclosures by Claimant's counsel[2] to verify whether such a statement had been previously provided was not readily available at the hearing. Therefore, under the unique circumstances of this case, including the inability to adjourn the hearing again to resolve the issue, Respondent's motion was denied and the hearing went forward on the merits. Respondent also raised concerns regarding Claimant's failure to produce documents relating to the Respondent's FMLA leaves despite multiple requests and the arbitrator's order that such documents be produced. This issue will be addressed in the discussion below.

[1] Although Anderson's Certificate of Determination indicates that Respondent filed a response to the notice of charges prior to her determination of probable cause, the Affidavit of Service indicates that no response was received.

[2] Although the same law firm represented the District throughout the proceedings, a different attorney was assigned after the initial stages.

Background:

The following is a summary of the relevant evidence in this case. Corbacho-Musngi is a tenured teacher in the District. She is a pre-school teacher. Corbacho-Musngi began working in the District in September 2003 and over the years has been assigned to several schools, including the old Belmont-Runyon, the new Belmont-Runyon, Clifton Avenue and Chancellor Avenue Annex schools.

It is undisputed that Respondent was absent 42 times during the 2010-2011 school year, 69 times in 2011-2012, 47 times in 2012-2013 and 126 times in 2013-2014. (See District Exhibits 1-4.) Homere Breton, Executive Legal Assistant for the District's Talent Office, testified that his office prepared the information contained in the charges regarding Corbacho-Musngi's absences. Breton acknowledged that Corbacho-Musngi had been granted both consecutive and intermittent FMLA leave during the 2010-2011 and 2011-2012 school years. He also admitted that approved FMLA days cannot be used for purposes of imposing disciplinary action. (Tr. at 40, 51.) Nonetheless, Breton testified that the number of absences contained in the Statement of Charges and supporting documentation include the gross number of absences, i.e., total absences, including leave days pursuant to the parties' collective bargaining agreement as well as approved FMLA leave days. When asked if he could calculate the number of FMLA days included in the absence totals, Breton testified that he could not. (Tr. at 37.) He testified that there are clerks in his office who are charged with reviewing time records and information from the Health Services Department in order to determine whether absences are properly considered approved FMLA leave. While the clerks would have the information as to which absences are properly considered FMLA, that information was not considered in preparing the charges. Nor was that information produced to the Respondent notwithstanding multiple requests.

Jeanne Ramirez, now CIO (Vice Principal) at Elliot Street School, was Corbacho-Musngi's Vice Principal for three years, including the last three years listed in the Statement of Charges. According to Ramirez, District policy requires that employees be given a letter when they reach five absences and again when they reach 12 absences. A meeting is held to discuss the absences. After 18 or more absences, disciplinary action can be imposed. For purposes of disciplinary action, absences do not include personal days or bereavement leave; they do include sick leave. Ramirez also confirmed that disciplinary action cannot be imposed in connection with FMLA approved absences. She testified that she was provided information as to which absences were approved FMLA leave, but she was not asked to produce this information in connection with this proceeding.

Ramirez was unaware of any letter regarding attendance being issued to Corbacho-Musngi during the 2010-2011 or 2011-2012 school years, notwithstanding that the charges allege excessive absenteeism in those years. Ramirez issued the first letter addressing attendance under the District's policy on December 21, 2012 after six sick days. A meeting was held to discuss absences. (District Exhibit 6.) On January 23, 2013, Ramirez issued a second letter, after 11 sick days. A meeting was held to discuss attendance. (District Exhibit 7.) On May 29, 2013, Corbacho-Musngi was referred for disciplinary action, after 18 or more absences. (District Exhibit 9.) Ramirez did not know what discipline was imposed.[3]

Ramirez testified that in the 2013-2014 school year, the year with the highest number of absences, a long-term substitute qualified to teach the students was retained to teach Corbacho-Musngi's class for the second part of the school year. Ramirez and other teachers all provided assistance to the long term substitute. On direct examination, Ramirez testified that she had no communication with Corbacho-Musngi after February 1, 2014 and that she did not know that Corbacho-Musngi would be absent for the rest of the school year. On cross-examination, however, when shown copies of multiple text messages between Corbacho-Musngi and Ramirez during the period from January 9, 2014 through February 21, 2014, Ramirez confirmed that the text messages were accurate. (Respondent Exhibit 2.)[4]

Corbacho-Musngi testified at length as to the reasons for her absences over this period of time, including the periods for which FMLA leave had been approved. In February 2009, her brother died unexpectedly of heart failure at age 46. In April 2009, her uncle died of brain cancer. In November 2009, her husband died of prostrate cancer at age

[3] Corbacho-Musngi testified that she worked for three days without being paid as discipline; in other words, she received a fine equal to three-days pay. This is the only discipline she has ever received in connection with absenteeism prior to these tenure charges.

[4] Ramirez' first reaction when shown the text messages after testifying that there was no contact between her and Corbacho-Musngi was "does she have a right to make a copy of my text messages?" (Tr. at 81.)

45. She testified that she and her children watched her husband's health decline due to cancer until his death. The psychological impact of his death was significant, not only upon Corbacho-Musngi but also upon her children, especially her oldest daughter who was ten years old at the time of her father's death. (Corbacho-Musngi is not charged with excessive absenteeism during the 2009-2010 school year.)

Following her husband's death, in 2010 Corbacho-Musngi was diagnosed with severe depression, panic/anxiety attacks and post-traumatic stress. Her daughter was similarly diagnosed. As Corbacho-Musngi was improving, her daughter was not. Notwithstanding individual and family counseling, her daughter's psychological health deteriorated. In early 2012, she discovered that her daughter was cutting herself and in February 2012 her daughter was admitted to a psychiatric ward. Once released, she went to a high intensity outpatient program from March to June 2012.

Thereafter, Corbacho-Musngi began suffering from what was ultimately diagnosed as restless leg syndrome. Her symptoms became especially bad by November 2013. She testified that when she would get ready to go to sleep, her legs would start to kick uncontrollably. As a result, she was unable to sleep. She became so sleep-deprived that she was no longer able to function. Her mother moved in with her to help care for the children. She suffered from loss of memory and balance. She applied for another FMLA leave, but the request was denied, as she was not eligible for another leave. Corbacho-Musngi testified that she tried coming to work from November until January until it became impossible for her to continue teaching due to lack of sleep. Although she was not eligible for FMLA, a leave of absence was granted in January 2014. Upon her return to work on January 28, 2014, Ramirez stopped by her class and seeing her condition, sent Corbacho-Musngi home. She did not return to work for the remainder of the 2013-2014 school year, although as discussed below, Corbacho-Musngi testified she was in contact with Ramirez and the school regarding her absence.

Corbacho-Musngi was diagnosed with restless leg syndrome in January 2014. After trying various treatments over a period of time, the condition is now under control. In April 2014, however, while still suffering the effects of restless leg syndrome, Corbacho-Musngi fell down the stairs in her home. She broke the right side of her jaw and fractured her left cheekbone. She was hospitalized and had surgery. Her mouth was wired shut for a period of time and she was taking pain medicine. She was bedridden for several months. With her face broken in two places, she experienced "intense headaches and dizziness" and was not able to get around. (Tr. at 138.) In May, she developed an abscess and required another operation. This recurred in July, with a final operation in August 2014.[5] She is now fully recovered.

During this time, Corbacho-Musngi testified that she was unable to come to work. She and Ramirez exchanged text messages throughout January and February 2014 regarding her absences. In addition, she testified that she continued to call Sub-Finder and spoke to Ms. Woijuck, a secretary at the school, about her absences. At one point, after her jaw was wired and she could barely speak, she called the school and spoke to Woijuck. Corbacho-Musngi testified: "It was very hard for [Woijuck] to understand me because I was wired shut, but I told her what was going on and that I wasn't going to be able to make it back for the rest of the year, and she said don't worry about it, that she will put it in and I don't have to call anymore." (Tr. at 161.)

Corbacho-Musngi testified that she did not receive the District's March 28, 2014 and April 4, 2014 letters regarding her absences until May 2014 as she was not residing at the address to which they were sent. Her aunt, who suffers from dementia, was living at this address and had not told her that she received these letters. The letters indicated that she was considered AWOL and directed that she contact the Administrative Operation Services regarding her intent to return to work. (District Exhibit 10.) When Corbacho-Musngi finally received the letters, she asked her mother to drive her to the District offices, where she submitted the medical documentation with respect to her absences. (Respondent Exhibit 5.) This was just prior to her second operation in May 2014 for the abscess. She testified that she had planned to give the documentation to the District when she returned to work; she did not think that she needed to submit the medical documentation all along. When asked whether she thought it advisable to tell the District that she was under a doctor's care during this period, she responded: "You're absolutely right, and I'm sorry that I – again, that was my mistake, and I was just not thinking clearly." (Tr. at 135.)

[5] In October 2014, after she returned to work for the 2014-2015 school year, she had a PICC line inserted in her arm to remedy repeated infections. She missed two days of work, when the line was inserted and removed. She has not had any problem since that time.

Corbacho-Musngi learned during the summer 2014 that Clinton Avenue School was being closed and teachers reassigned. Other teachers told her that she was assigned to the Chancellor Annex. She confirmed this assignment with the school over the summer and reported to the school at the start of the 2014-2015 school year as a preschool 3 teacher assigned to her own class with an assistant. On October 27, 2014 she was advised that she was suspended due to these tenure charges. Corbacho-Musngi testified that if returned to the classroom, she would not have a problem with absenteeism. The issues causing the absences have now been remedied. She is recovered from the surgeries and her restless leg syndrome is now under control; she is not feeling any of the effects of the fall or of the restless leg syndrome. (Tr. at 117.)[6]

Positions of the Parties:

On this record, the District argues: (a) that the Commissioner of Education has long held that chronic and excessive absenteeism may warrant dismissal even where legitimate illness and approved leaves were involved; (b) that this standard has been affirmed by arbitrators; (c) that the District need not prove the adverse impact of chronic absenteeism on students' achievement; (d) that while Corbacho-Musngi's "personal family circumstances over the time since her husband passed away in 2009 have been tragic, the inquiry should not end there" (Closing Memorandum at p. 5); (e) that chronic absenteeism has been held to constitute "incapacity", "unbecoming conduct" and/or "just cause" warranting dismissal; and (f) that the tenure charges and termination should be sustained.

Respondent, on the other hand, contends: (a) that the number of absences alleged in the tenure charges inappropriately include FMLA approved leave, personal days and bereavement days which the District's own witnesses concede cannot be used for discipline; (b) that the tenure charges should be dismissed due to the District's failure to comply with disclosure and discovery obligations, including the failure to produce documentation as to Corbacho-Musngi's FMLA approved leave days; (c) that disciplinary action for excessive absenteeism may not be based solely on the sheer number of absences, but should take into account the reasons for the absences; (d) that the "harrowing circumstances" in this case provide "more than ample justification for Respondent's absences during the relevant calendar years" (Closing Memorandum at p. 9); (e) that the District had not imposed an increment withholding, or made any accommodations to assist Corbacho-Musngi, prior to seeking dismissal; (f) that Corbacho-Musngi's observations and evaluations were, by and large, extremely positive, without a negative end of year evaluation during her entire career with the District; (g) that the evidence demonstrates that Corbacho-Musngi "has the ability to be an effective teacher who would benefit her students" (Closing Memorandum at p. 9); (h) that there is no evidence that the District's operations or students were adversely impacted by Respondent's absences; (i) that Corbacho-Musngi was in contact with the school about her absences and was not AWOL; (j) that Corbacho-Musngi has indicated that if returned to the classroom, she will "dramatically improve" her attendance issues (Closing Memorandum at p. 9); (k) that under all of these circumstances, termination is not the appropriate penalty; and (l) that Corbacho-Musngi should be returned to the classroom with a lesser penalty.

[6] Respondent also called Mario Cardinale, a former Superintendent in other NJ school districts, as an expert witness. He testified about accommodations that the District might have offered to Corbacho-Musngi and that additional counseling would have been appropriate prior to commencing tenure charges.

Discussion:

On the record before me, including my assessment of witnesses' credibility and the probative value of evidence, I find that the District has established that Corbacho-Musngi engaged in conduct unbecoming her position as a tenured teacher, but termination is not warranted under the particular circumstances of this case. The reasons for these conclusions are set forth below.

First, the absences set forth in the tenure charges for the 2010-11 and 2011-12 school years impermissibly include approved FMLA leave.[7] The District's own witnesses testified that Respondent had approved FMLA leave during these school years and, moreover, that FMLA days cannot be considered in making disciplinary decisions. Significantly, Breton, the person who prepared the information and signed the tenure charges, testified that based on the information available at the hearing, he could not determine how many days during those school years were FMLA approved and, therefore, not properly considered for disciplinary purposes. Further, both Breton and Ramirez testified that this information is available, yet the information was not produced to Respondent despite multiple requests and the arbitrator's direct order.[8] Based on the above, therefore, in deciding whether to sustain the tenure charges against Corbacho-Musngi, I will not consider the absences for 2010-11 and 2011-2012.

Second, while not considering the absences for these two years improves Corbacho-Musngi's overall attendance record, it is undisputed that she was absent on 47 days during the 2012-2013 school year and 126 days during 2013-14 school year.[9] Approximately 170 absences over a two-year period is an excessive number of absences. That these absences were due to legitimate reasons does not require dismissal of the tenure charges. As the District states, chronic and excessive absenteeism, even if for legitimate reasons, can warrant imposition of discipline, including discharge. In a case involving 197 absences over a six-year period, one ALJ found that:

> excessive or chronic absenteeism of a tenured employee, even if related to legitimate medical or health problems, has been held to constitute "incapacity," "unbecoming conduct," and/or "just cause," within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, to warrant dismissal from employment."

The Commissioner of Education upheld this decision in June 2012. IMO A. Dugan and Jersey City BOE, 2012 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 249. See also, IMO Lenore Francis and Jersey City Board of Education, Hudson County, NJ, Agency Dkt. No. 285-9/12 (Arbitrator Walt De Treux, 1/10/13); IMO Lisa Rosa – Jersey City BOE, 2011 NJ AGEN LEXIS 390 (9/1/11); Camden School District v Rucker, OAL Docket No. 4327-92 and 6204-92 (12/30/92).

Further, contrary to Respondent's argument, it is not necessary for the District to produce "direct, tangible, evidence that its operations or its students were adversely impacted by Respondent's absences." (Closing Memorandum at p. 10.) As set forth by the

[8] In so finding, I accept the District counsel's representation that he requested the documents from the District.

[9] This number includes personal and bereavement days, despite Ramirez' testimony that these days are not considered by the District in imposing discipline.

ALJ in Metallo v Union City Board of Education (May 12, 2003) aff'd State Board (January 7, 2004):

> It is not necessary for a school district to prove a direct correlation between student achievement and a teacher's attendance to validate concerns about the effect of a teacher's absence on the educational program. As the Commissioner has recognized, '. . . the repeated absences of a teacher from his classroom, however legitimate, will have negative impact on instruction and compromise the basic purpose of the District in the most fundamental obligation of an educator to the student.' (citations omitted.)

Id., at p. 13. See also, Camden Board of Education v Ricker, OAL Docket No. 4327-92 and 6204-92 (ALJ Duncan, 12/30/92).[10]

Nonetheless, it is not true that a finding of chronic and excessive absenteeism requires discharge in all instances. In deciding whether discharge is warranted, it is appropriate to consider the reasons for the absences and, more importantly, whether the underlying reasons for the absences have abated such that the pattern of absenteeism will not continue in the future if the teacher is returned to the classroom. See e.g., School District of the City of Elizabeth, Union County v Ramos, Agency Dkt No. 261-9/14 (Arbitrator Randi Lowitt, 1/5/15); Passaic Board of Education v Viani, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 2535-90, 1991 WL 419896 (ALJ Reiner, 12/9/91); Board of Education of the Toms River Regional School District, Ocean County v. Marsden, (OAL Dkt No. EDU 1188-84 (ALJ Tylutki, 8/26/85). As will be discussed more fully below, the circumstances in this case warrant giving Corbacho-Musngi an opportunity to return to the classroom, rather than termination.

Third, Corbacho-Musngi is also charged with being absent without leave ("AWOL") during the 2013-2014 school year. The District has not proven these charges and, therefore, Charge Two must be dismissed. The essence of this charge is that Corbacho-Musngi failed to return to work on January 28, 2014 following an authorized leave of absence,[11] and that she was thereafter absent without notifying the District that she would be absent or the reason for the absence. Corbacho-Musngi, however, testified that she did return to work on January 28, 2014 as required and that when Ramirez came by her [10] I note that in this case, a long term licensed substitute teacher was retained to cover Corbacho-Musngi's pre-school class during the spring 2014, covering many of the absences during that school year, reducing some of the negative impact of the absenteeism upon the students.

[11] It is undisputed that Corbacho-Musngi was ineligible for another FMLA leave at this time.

classroom, she told Corbacho-Musngi to go home. This testimony is supported by the fact that the absence on January 28, 2014 is designated as "Administratively Excused." (District Exhibit 4.)

Further, despite Ramirez's testimony on direct-examination that after this date Corbacho-Musngi did not communicate with her regarding her absences, documentary evidence, authenticated by Ramirez, established that Corbacho-Musngi communicated by text message with Ramirez through February 2014. In addition, Corbacho-Musngi testified that she continued to call Sub-Finder and that she called Woijuck to keep the school apprised of her situation and absences. She spoke to Woijuck when her jaw was wired following surgery and told Woijuck that she would not be able to return to school for the remainder of the school year. According to Corbacho-Musngi, Woijuck told her that it was not necessary to continue to call. Significantly, the District provided no evidence to rebut this testimony. That the District hired a long-term substitute for Corbacho-Musngi's classroom also suggests that the District was aware that Corbacho-Musngi would be absent for a prolonged period of time.

The tenure charges also allege that Corbacho-Musngi failed to respond to the March 28, 2014 and April 4, 2014 letters regarding her absence. Corbacho-Musngi acknowledged that she did not timely respond to the letters the District sent, as they were sent to an address where she was not living at the time. When she received the letters, however, she acted promptly to provide medical documentation to the District. Corbacho-Musngi testified that she planned to submit the medical documentation upon her return to school. She admits she was wrong in failing to submit the documentation on an ongoing basis, stating that she was "not thinking clearly" during this period. (Tr. at 135.) While this testimony does not excuse her failure to respond to the letters in a more timely manner or to produce the medical documentation on an ongoing basis, on this record it does not require a finding of AWOL particularly given the unrebutted testimony that Corbacho-Musngi was calling Sub-Finder and communicating with the school as to her situation and her inability to return to school for the remainder of that school year.[12]

[12] I also note that the District apparently did know of her intent to return to school for the 2014-2015 school year. She called the new school during the summer to confirm her assignment and started at the school with Accordingly, on this record, the District has established that Corbacho-Musngi is guilty of chronic and excessive absenteeism and, therefore, conduct unbecoming as a result of the approximately 170 absences over a two year period, most in 2013-2014. She is not guilty of being AWOL as charged. Charge Two, therefore, is dismissed.

Finally, as to penalty, there are mitigating factors to support a lesser penalty than termination as sought by the District. As a preliminary matter, I note that there is no evidence that Corbacho-Musngi had any attendance issues in the years before her husband's illness and subsequent death in 2009. The evidence also establishes that Corbacho-Musngi's observations and evaluations were satisfactory in prior school years. (Respondent Exhibits 7 and 4.) Further, despite the District's claim of excessive absenteeism over a four year period and the District policy for addressing absenteeism on an ongoing basis, Corbacho-Musngi was disciplined only once prior to tenure charges seeking her dismissal. Corbacho-Musngi did not receive any letters, warnings or discipline prior to the letters Ramirez issued on December 21, 2012 and January 23, 2013 and the subsequent imposition of a three-day fine. Nor was any other discipline imposed, such as increment withholding, after the three-day fine. Indeed, there is little evidence of counseling or progressive discipline.

In addition, Corbacho-Musngi's circumstances were, indeed, "tragic" as described by the District, and "harrowing" as described by Respondent. Her absenteeism problems started with the death of three family members, including her husband, and continued due to the psychological impact of her husband's death on her and her daughter (who required hospitalization and significant care) and then the onset of restless leg syndrome followed by a serious fall resulting in her face being broken in two places. More importantly, however, on this record I am persuaded by Corbacho-Musngi's testimony that the causes of the absences have been addressed and have abated, that she is now able to return to work and that she is confident that she will be able to be regular in her attendance. Significantly, the series of events causing the excessive absenteeism is not likely to recur. It is now several years since the unfortunate death of her husband. The psychological issues she and her daughter faced following his death appear to have abated with treatment and the passage of time. Following the diagnosis of restless leg syndrome and treatment, the illness is now controlled by medication and she no longer suffers from the adverse effects. Finally, she has recovered from the serious damage incurred by her fall in the spring 2014, which was the cause of a significant number of absences during that school year.

Under all of the circumstances of this case, therefore, with particular focus on the conclusion that it is not likely that the pattern of absenteeism will continue, it is appropriate to provide Corbacho-Musngi with an opportunity to establish that she again can be an effective teacher with regular attendance who will benefit the students in her class and be a credit to the District. Corbacho-Musngi is on notice, however, that should the problem with excessive absenteeism continue, she will likely face additional tenure charges and she may not be given another opportunity to return to the classroom as a District employee.

Although Corbacho-Musngi's employment with the District is not being terminated, her pattern of excessive absenteeism as proven in this case warrants a significant penalty. Accordingly, Corbacho-Musngi shall be suspended without pay from the date of this Opinion and Award through the end of the 2014-2015 school year. Further, she shall not be entitled to back pay for the 120-day period she was suspended without pay pending resolution of these tenure charges. She shall be reinstated to her teaching position at the start of the 2015-2016 school year, with an increment withheld for the 2015-2016 school year.

By reason of the foregoing, I issue the following:

a) Charge 1 is sustained to the extent consistent with the findings in this Opinion and Award; by these actions, Elizabeth Corbacho-Musngi engaged in conduct unbecoming a tenured teacher. All other charges are dismissed.

b) For the violation set forth above, the penalty shall be a suspension without pay from the date of this Opinion and Award through the end of this school year, and further reduction in salary equal to the salary withheld during the 120-day suspension period without pay pending resolution of these tenure charges, and, upon her return, the withholding of a salary increment for the 2015-2016 school year only. The District shall reinstate the Respondent to her teaching position at the start of the 2015-2016 school year.

BACKGROUND

JOINT STATEMENT OF FACTS AND EXHIBITS
I. Procedural History

1. Respondent began his employment as a teacher with the Paterson Public Schools ("District") on September 17, 2002.

2. Respondent became tenured in his teaching position on September 18, 2005.

3. On October 7, 2014, the District certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal against Respondent to the Commissioner of Education (See Joint Exhibit J-1 - Tenure Charges, attached hereto) and suspended him without pay effective October 8, 2014.

4. On October 28, 2014, Respondent submitted his answer to the tenure charges to the Commissioner of Education (See Joint Exhibit J-2 - Answer to Tenure Charges, attached hereto).

5. On November 10, 2014, the Commissioner of Education determined that the tenure charges, if true, would warrant dismissal or reduction in salary and assigned this case to hearing before Arbitrator Tia Schneider Denenberg ("Arbitrator Denenberg").

6. A hearing on the tenure charges is scheduled for December 17, 18, and 19, 2014.

II. Facts Agreed to by the Parties

7. For the 2013-2014 school year, Respondent was assigned to the School of Education and Training ("SET") located in the John F. Kennedy Educational Complex ("JFK") as a French teacher.

8. The 2013-2014 school year was Respondent's first year working at J.F.K.

9. Sixth period at JFK began at 12: 14 p.m. as set forth in the school's bell schedule (See Joint Exhibit J-3, "Bell Schedule".)

10. The attendance records, disciplinary referral form and final grades of Y.P. for the 2013-2014 school year are attached hereto as Joint Exhibit J-4.

11. Student O.N. was assigned to Respondent's class for the 2013-2014 school year.
[Joint Exhibit 1]

The Sworn Tenure Charges of Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause for Dismissal, contains the following charges:

CHARGE ONE

On or about May 13, 2014, Mr. Sall was involved in a verbal altercation with female student Y.P. After this verbal altercation, Y.P. proceeded to leave the area of the classroom. Mr. Sall pursued her through the hallway, leaving his class unattended. Y.P. then began to walk down a flight of stairs. Mr. Sall shouted at her "you're dirty and stink, go home and take a shower" or words to that effect.

As she proceeded down the stairs, Mr. Sall leaned over the railing at the top of the stairs and deliberately spit at her. Mr. Sall behaved in this way in the presence of another student, A.B.

This conduct by Mr. Sall constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE TWO

Throughout the 2013-2014 school year, Mr. Sall exhibited a pattern of aggressive behavior towards his students and his building principal, Ms. MaryAnn Perotta. The behavior exhibited by Mr. Sall caused Ms. Perotta to become concerned for the safety and well[-]being of his students.

This conduct by Mr. Sall constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE THREE

Under New Jersey's school laws, specifically N.J.S.A. 18A:30-1, sick leave is defined as:

> [T]he absence from his or her post of duty, of any person because of personal disability due to illness or injury, or because he or she has been excluded from school by the school district's medical authorities on account of a contagious disease or of being quarantined for such a disease in his or her immediate household.

On or about December 11, 2013, in contravention of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-1, Mr. Sall utilized his sick leave to attend a job interview at International High School.

This conduct by Mr. Sall violates the NJ School Laws as well as Board policy and constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE FOUR

On or about October 31, 2013, Mr. Sall displayed his students' French tests, with their names and scores attached, on a wall in his classroom in violation of the students' privacy rights. Moreover, in an apparent attempt to embarrass and humiliate one student, Mr. Sall wrote the following on the student's test paper which was posted on the wall: "You need to behave better in class. Stop being loud and fighting." Mr. Sall was directed to remove these tests from the wall and he did not comply with this directive.

This conduct by Mr. Sall constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE FIVE

On or about September 25, 2013, Mr. Sall met with Mr. Suarez, Director of ESL/Bilingual/World Languages, and Ms. Houry Yeganeh, Supervisor of World Languages, regarding his assignment. At that meeting, Mr. Sall demanded a transfer out of John F. Kennedy High School. Mr. Sall told Mr. Suarez and Ms. Yeganeh that he "wants out of the building", that he is "unhappy" and "doesn't want to be there," or words to that effect. Mr. Sall conducted himself in a hostile, belligerent, irrational and insubordinate manner at the meeting. His conduct included making the following threatening comment to Mr. Suarez and Ms. Yeganeh, "I don't want to do anything that's gonna make me flip" or words to that effect. Mr. Sall kept insisting that he "wants out."

Mr. Suarez advised Mr. Sall that there are consequences for his actions and that there would be consequences if Mr. Sall "flipped." Mr. Suarez further advised Mr. Sall that there were no other available French class positions in the district and that he would have to remain where he had been assigned.

This conduct by Mr. Sall constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE SIX

For the 2012-2013 school year, Mr. Sall was assigned as a French teacher at HARP Academy. On or about February 5, 2013, Mr. Sall requested a transfer from HARP Academy to another school for the upcoming school year. When Mr. Sall requested the transfer, he advised Ms. Maria Santa, Assistant Superintendent, that he would like to transfer to John F. Kennedy High School or, if that was not available, International High School.

For the 2013-2014 school year, the district assigned Mr. Sall to John F. Kennedy High School in accordance with his request. On the first day of school, Ms. MaryAnne Perrotta, principal of the School of Education and Training at John F. Kennedy High School ("SET"), introduced herself to Mr. Sall. As principal of the school/academy to which he was assigned, Ms. Perrotta was Mr. Sall's immediate supervisor. Upon introducing herself, Mr. Sall told Ms. Perrotta that: (a) he doesn't know why he is assigned to JFK; (b) he's very angry about the transfer; (c) he wants to go back to the school he was transferred from and (d) he will go back to the school he was transferred from. Mr. Sall was hostile and inappropriate during this interaction with his new supervisor.

This conduct by Mr. Sall constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE SEVEN

Charges One through Six are incorporated herein, as if set forth at length. This conduct by Mr. Sall, when viewed as a whole, constitutes an ongoing pattern of unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause for dismissal.

[Joint Exhibit 1]

Conference calls involving the arbitrator and the parties were conducted on November 6, November 14, and November 25, 2014, to discuss preliminary matters before the hearing. The respondent filed several motions, primarily seeking disclosure by the district of contact information (addresses, phone numbers) for potential witnesses, including students and their parents or guardians. The respondent also wished to send a private investigator to contact them directly. After extensive discussion and submissions, the arbitrator adopted the suggestion of the district that the respondent write letters to each prospective student witness for hand-delivery by the school attendance officer to the student's home. The contact procedure respected the privacy of potential witnesses while allowing the teacher a reasonable opportunity to secure witness testimony. Although winter weather occasioned some delay in delivery, several students testified in support of the accused teacher.

The parties were afforded an opportunity to present evidence and argument at the hearings, which were held on December 17 and December 18, 2014. A stenographic record of the hearing was transcribed in two volumes. They are cited herein as Tr. I and Tr. II. The following witnesses testified under oath or affirmation:

For the District (Petitioner):

A. B.,[1] High School Student
Y. P.,[2] High School Student
Joaquin Perez,[3] District Security Officer
Pablo Maute,[4] School Resource Officer
Robert Pleasant,[5] School Resource Officer
James Smith,[6] Executive Director of School Security

For the Teacher (Respondent):

J. L.,[7] High School Student

---

[1] A.B. was a twelfth-grade student at the John F. Kennedy Educational Complex, which comprises four specialized schools, at the time of the incident at issue. He is enrolled in Passaic County Community College [Tr. I, p. 26].

[2] At the time of the hearing, Y.P. was in the tenth grade [Tr. I, p. 59].

[3] Joaquin Perez has been the District Security Officer in Paterson for 20 years. He prepared a disc with three files taken from the Kennedy's security system [Tr. I, pp. 98-99, Petitioner Exhibit 1]. He said, "I recorded the incident that happened" [Tr. I, p. 104]. He explained that, although the camera is always on, "If there's no image, it will stop. Can vary from a minute, or two, or three, but as soon as there's movement, it will continue recording again" [Tr. I, p. 100]. The footage is encrypted, and it is not possible to tamper with it.

[4] Mr. Maute joined the Paterson Police Department in 1984 and was promoted to detective in 1989. In 2006 he became a detective sergeant in the major crimes division, serving in that position until his retirement in 2011. He is employed by the Paterson district as a security officer assigned to the Kennedy complex [Tr. I, pp. 110-111].

[5] Mr. Pleasant served in the Paterson Police Department for 25 years, working in the narcotics division, a criminal investigation task force, and the juvenile division [Tr. I, pp. 128-130]. He has been a school resource officer in the Paterson district since September, 2013.

[6] Mr. Smith attended the Paterson Police Academy and served as a police officer in that city for more than 26 years, retiring as a captain. [Tr. I, pp. 157-159]. Captain Smith, as he is still known, is the Executive Director of School Security in the Paterson district, a position he has held for more than 12 years. His duties include developing safety and security plans.

[7] J. L. is a 15-year-old in the second year at the STEM Academy in the John F. Kennedy Educational Complex [Tr. II, p. 8].

T. M.,[8] High School Student
Y. R.,[9] High School Student
Gennaro Tortoriello,[10] Paterson Education Association (PEA) Representative
Eman Hijjawi,[11] Teacher
Omar Khalil,[12] Teacher
Lat Sall,[13] Teacher (Respondent)

At the outset of the hearing, the respondent moved to exclude witnesses from the hearing room when not testifying. The district did not object, except that it wished Captain Smith to stay throughout as well as testify. The district challenged the presence of the union representative, Mr. Tortoriello, who was also on the witness list.

It was determined that Mr. Tortoriello would be testifying mainly about policy issues and that the district had instructed Captain Smith to limit his testimony to the following matters: "the background of the Paterson public schools and community, what our city is like, and why you recommended any charges in this case" [Tr., I, pp. 6-7]. Since neither person would be a fact witness to the central events in the case, the arbitrator permitted both to remain in the hearing room in order to assist the advocates. The respondent, who testified on his own behalf, also remained throughout the hearing, as did his wife. In addition, students, when testifying were accompanied by parents, and several teacher union officials were in attendance.

The evidentiary record was closed at the end of the hearing. Briefs and replies were filed. During the proceeding, the commissioner granted deadline extensions, making the award due on May 20, 2015.

[8] T. M. is a student in the School of Education and Training at the. Kennedy complex [Tr. II, p. 18].

[9] Y. R. has been a student in the Kennedy complex for three years [Tr. II, p. 22].

[10] Mr. Tortoriello, who is a Special Education resource teacher, has been employed at the Kennedy complex for six years. He has been a PEA building representative and serves on the union's executive board [Tr. II, pp. 27-31].

[11] Ms. Hijjawi has been employed for 14 years as a teacher of Arabic at the Kennedy complex [Tr. II, pp. 46-47].

[12] Mr. Khalil has been employed at the Kennedy complex for 15 years. He is a social studies teacher [Tr. II, pp. 58-59].

[13] The respondent has been employed at the Kennedy complex for 12 years as a teacher of French. He holds a bachelor's degree from Rutgers University and a master's degree in education from Saint Peter's College [Tr. II, pp. 75-77, 108]. He is certified to teach French and psychology, and is provisionally certified as a principal [Respondent Exhibit 2].

DISCUSSION

A number of students and colleagues testified as character witnesses.[14] The issue before the arbitrator is not, however, his overall pedagogical merits but rather his conduct toward a hostile student. In its opening statement, the district leveled the following accusation against the respondent:

> Although the district's tenure charges consist of seven separate charges, the heart of this case is charge number one; specifically, Mr. Sall's gross misconduct in dealing with student Y.P. on May 13, 2014. It is the district's position that Mr. Sall's behavior on that occasion, in and of itself, warrants his removal from his tenured position.
> [Tr. I, p. 11]

Charges Two to Seven were subsequently withdrawn [Tr. I, p. 16].

The threshold question in Charge One is whether the teacher directed abusive language at Y.P. and spit at her, as the district has contended. She gave the following account of the incident during her testimony:

> I was going to class and he wouldn't let me in. He came by the door and said I can't come in without going to see the principal. I said, Give me my write-up for I could leave. He said the security guard would take me. I said, Give me my write-up. So I pulled the paper and it ripped. It was the paper and I left. While I was going down the stairs, he went by the railing and said, you dirty, you stink, so go take a shower. So then I spazzed out, like I was upset. Then while I was going down, he spit at me, but I moved.
> [Tr., I, p. 66]

She said that when she looked up, she could see spittle coming toward her: "It was too much of a spit to be by accident" [Tr., I, p. 63].

The teacher denies uttering the words attributed to him or spitting. He submitted a written account on the day of the incident:

> Ms. Y., a student in my French I class, walked in late in my classroom and was stopped at the door. I told her that I had filled out a disciplinary referral form for her and she had to go with the security guard to see Mr. Pierce, an administrator who is in charge of discipline. The student said she was not going to see Mr. Pierce, pushed me to re-enter the classroom and ordered me to give her the disciplinary referral. I told Ms. Y. she could not take the disciplinary referral and the normal [14] The character witnesses painted a flattering portrait of the teacher. J.L.—"a good teacher....[H]e made sure you understood, but he didn't force it too hard" [Tr. II, p. 11]. T. M.---- "a teacher who likes to teach, who loves his job" [Tr. II, p. 19]. Y.R.—"Energetic, active, very helpful to students when we don't understand.... Even when they're failing, he would try the best to help them pass [Tr. II, p. 23]. Mr. Tortoriello—"an innovative teacher" [Tr. II, pp. 28, 33]. Ms. Hijjawi—"a nice person, very dedicated to his job, very good with his colleagues.... [H]e care[s] about students" [Tr. II , p. 48].

> procedure is to have a security guard escort her to see Mr. Pierce. I stepped out and called the security guard to take the student to Mr. Pierce' office. Ms. Y. started to yell and curse at me, calling me names, insulting both my mother and father. She refused to go with the guard, continued cursing in front of the security guard and walked out. Then, the officer returned to his post after the departure of the student. Ms. Y. came back to my class five (5) minutes later. While I was standing at the door, she snatched the disciplinary referral from me, tore it in two pieces, and continued cursing at me in the hallway. She finally took the stairs to go down and was at least 12 feet away from me when I told her from the staircase that a security guard has to escort her. She replied saying all what I can do is bla, bla, bla, bla, and making fun of how I talk. From the staircase, I told Ms. Y. that she was the one who was doing the incessant bla, bla, bla, bla talk by being both very disrespectful to her teacher and refusing to follow school rules. She accused me of spitting at her while I was talking and said she was going to get me fired.
> It is also important to mention that Ms. Y. had previously displayed the same type of behavior and was written up twice by me. I also followed up with two separate phone calls to her mother who apologized for her daughter's behaviors and said she would talk to her. There were also times when she walked out of the classroom super frustrated because I did not let her use her cell phone in class. The next door Special Education teacher has seen Ms. Y. being disrespectful to me in many occasions.
> [Respondent Exhibit 8]

A.B., who happened to be alongside Mr. Sall on the stairwell landing, submitted a handwritten description of the incident that is quite different from the teacher's:

> The student went downstairs then the teacher said you are dirty nasty go home and take a shower and he spit on her. Then she came back to upstairs making loud and crying. Teacher said to me that did I see everything what she did.

A.B. repeated this version of events almost verbatim in his testimony at the arbitration hearing: "He say, you are dirty, nasty, and go home and take a shower. Go home and take shower." Then, according to the student witness, the teacher "spit on her. He spit on her" [Tr. I, pp. 27-28].

The teacher disputed A.B.'s accuracy when "he said that he, that he saw Mr. Sall spit, that's wrong." The teacher also challenged the student's description of his language: "You see, those words don't come across my mind at all because I never use them. Never" [Tr. II, p. 121]. He believed that Y.P. was motivated by anger to fabricate the allegation.

The video footage adds some details. Owing to the camera angles and the lack of fine image resolution, it does not show spitting conclusively. However, the teacher is seen bending over the rail with his face down and his shoulders hunched—a position at least consistent with spitting at the female student as she descended the stairs. Approaching the bottom of the stairs, Y.P. looks up and abruptly jogs to her left, as if dodging something falling from above. She again looks up and points her finger as if to confirm the source of what she avoided.

The video shows the girl sweeping by A.B. as she bounded back up the stairs and into the hallway. In passing, he said, she told him that "you are a witness."[15] In the hallway she met Mr. Robinson, the Special Education teacher whom Mr. Sall was later to mention in his post-incident statement. Mr. Robinson provided the following description of the encounter on a K-12 Disciplinary Referral Form:

> While standing on the second floor hallway in front of the library a young lady Y. P. came running towards me. She was angry visually upset. I asked her [what's] wrong. She said to me that "the teacher spat at her he tried to spit on me and told me I was dirty and need to take a shower." The young lady then took off [g]oing down stairs saying she was going to see the principal. The teacher she was complaining about is her French teacher Mr. Sal[l].
> [Petitioner Exhibit 7]

The similarity of the two students' accounts is striking. The boy and the girl were not acquainted with each other and lacked an opportunity to coordinate their narratives. Yet the story told to Mr. Robinson closely matched A.B.'s statement and testimony. Furthermore, A.B. was an accidental bystander who had no obvious reason to invent a tale that would inculpate the teacher, since he was not studying French and had no prior dealings with him. A.B. seemed to be genuinely startled by what he characterized as the "bad words" he heard from the teacher [Tr. I, p. 27]. The student's testimony was not impeached during the hearing. The version of events conveyed to Mr. Robinson by Y.P. also deserves to be given weight as form of "excited utterance," a declaration under pressing circumstances whose spontaneity tends to rule out premeditated fabrication. Taken together, these factors compel a finding that the teacher over-reacted to an unruly student in the manner charged.

The arbitrator accepts that Y.P. was a chronic irritant for the teacher. He testified that the interactions with her > were not positive....They transfer her to my class, and she had disciplinary, many disciplinary problems. I wrote her up many times. I have spoken to her mother, and the behavior didn't change..... [S]he is using the cell phone in the class while instruction is going on. We can't, we cannot have that. We cannot allow that. She used to use profanity in the classroom. You cannot do that. She had, she used to fight kids again inside the classroom, and I said no.... She never cooperated. She didn't want to cooperate at all. I had to, I had to, to keep on going over and over for her, I mean, to do what I wanted her to do.

> [Tr. II, pp. 82, 84-85]

Y.P. was disruptive, disrespectful and foul-mouthed, even to the point of accusing the teacher's "beloved deceased mother of being a whore" [Tr. II, p. 90]. Nevertheless, in coping with provocation of that kind, a teacher is obliged to act with restraint and emotional control. Spitting is a gesture of contempt. It is repulsive, demeaning, and calculated to damage a student's self-esteem, as is suggesting that the student is somehow unclean.

Captain Smith, an experienced law enforcement officer with broad knowledge of the district, testified that the community served by the Kennedy complex consists largely of minorities living in impoverished and crime-ridden neighborhoods. Almost all students qualify for free or reduced-cost lunches. Perhaps half of each freshman class fails to graduate. He thus regards the students as at-risk: "When I say 'at risk,' I mean at risk of dropping out of high school" [Tr. I, p. 161]. He added:

> ...[W]e have a lot of children, students here that are low self-esteem to begin with. After being repeated by numerous witnesses that you're dirty, you stink, go home, take a shower, spitting on them, this kind of like shocks the [conscience] of the community, and myself, also, because I place myself in a situation, how would I feel if that was my child, and how would I react. And based on all those considerations, I felt that Mr. Sall had no place teaching our children here in Paterson.
> [Tr. I, pp. 164-165]

The teacher contends that he was never warned against leaving the classroom to follow a hostile student. However, a few months before the May incident (on February 19, 2014) there had been an incident, involving the teacher and another student (O.N.). He had followed the student to the Main Lobby of the building to remonstrate with her, believing that she had misbehaved by throwing books out of a window.[16] Officer Maute testified that she was > very agitated, and saying, Get him off me. Get him off me.... And I saw Mr. Sall coming down pushing, moving kids away from him, trying to get to the student.... I grabbed Mr. Sall, I said, What are you doing? He keeps walking. And I'm walking along with him. He saying, I'm going to get her. I want to get inside. I said, What? Are you crazy? You want to lose your job?

Although school authorities did not issue a formal warning or otherwise impose a disciplinary penalty, an Operational Security Team Investigative Report was prepared by Officer Pleasant. It summarized a meeting that was held on February 27:

> ...Mr. Sall and this writer discussed other actions that could have been taken or other actions that should be taken in the future to protect himself and students. Principal Perrotta and Mr. Sall discussed the write up of students (class management) when a student is in noncompliance. All parties discussed actions that should be taken when confronted with a hostile or violent student.

[16] The teacher's counsel objected to questioning Officer Maute about an incident related to a charge that has been withdrawn. The arbitrator admitted the testimony, however, because it pertained to the issue of whether the teacher had been previously cautioned about his response to disruptive students.

> These actions consisted of teachers submitting an incident report and contacting security to remove violent or hostile students which he did indeed.
> As per Principal Perrotta it was suggested that there should be no teacher student contact unless an emergency. Should the identity of the student be obtained the teacher should not pursue a student through the hallways who has voluntarily left the class. It was suggested that the teacher submit an incident to the proper administrators who would then follow-up with disciplinary actions. It was suggested that teachers remain calm as possible when dealing with students who display hostility or anger. In conclusion the meeting ended with all parties in agreement.

Officer Pleasant also testified about the meeting described in the report. The principal, he recalled, > spoke about other measures that could have been—that could have taken place, what could have been done differently to avoid the situation. This consisted of informing Mr. Sall that he should never have any contact, physical contact, with the student unless it's an extreme emergency or for the safety of a child. It was explained to him that being that he knew the student, he could have just submitted a report and let the administrators handle it as far as if any disciplinary action should be taken place, such as suspensions. He was informed that he should, at no time, follow a student down a hallway for any reason when a student is hostile or upset. It was spoken about, if the student's hostile, upset, the security guard should be notified to remove the student.

Captain Smith acknowledged that he was unaware of the February incident when he recommended dismissal for the May incident. Even "a one-time isolated incident," he reasoned, "doesn't excuse the fact that it occurred.... [B]ut when I found out later on that there was some type of warning given, then it made my charge even more justified, in my opinion" [Tr. I, pp. 166-167].

The first incident does render the second more serious. The teacher was put on notice in February that leaving the classroom to pursue a misbehaving student through the building was anathema to the principal and the school's security staff.[17] Yet despite the clear words of caution directed at him, the teacher evidently did not accept the message. He implausibly maintained that he was being praised: "They told me, Sall, you did the right thing. Everything that you did was fine." Similarly, he could not recall being told "you cannot follow a student or you cannot do this or that. No, I don't remember that" [Tr. II., pp. 122-123].

Considering Officer Maute's remark about job loss, Mr. Pleasant's suggestions about handling hostile students, and the principal's face-to-face instruction not to pursue students, the teacher had ample reason to know that following Y.P. into the stairwell would be regarded as a deliberate abdication of his responsibilities. He went after the student for refusing to take the referral form and present herself at the disciplinarian's office, whereas he should have heeded the principal's call to remain calm and turn the matter over to a security officer. Instead, he allowed the guard to return to his post and needlessly followed the student into the stairwell. The teacher disputes what happened in the stairwell, but he plainly left himself vulnerable by placing himself there.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed above, and after considering all arguments and the entire record, the arbitrator finds that the accusation of verbal abuse and spitting (Charge One) has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence and that the teacher therefore engaged in unbecoming conduct. Although Mr. Sall appears to be a capable teacher with multi-lingual skills and good performance reports, by reacting intemperately to an aggressive student in defiance of a clear caution, he gave the district grounds for doubting his self-control. Thus, taking all the circumstances into account, the district has shown just cause for removing the respondent from his tenured teaching position.

SYNOPSIS

This matter was remanded to the OAL for consideration of petitioner's explanation for his non-appearance at a scheduled prehearing telephone conference in February 2015. Petitioner had filed a pro se challenge of respondent's determination to deny his application for teacher certification after petitioner's certifications in both Pennsylvania and Maryland were revoked in the wake of his plea to several counts of identity theft and forgery in Lancaster County, PA, Court of Common Pleas.

On remand, the ALJ found that: petitioner failed to participate in the February 3, 2015 prehearing conference; his sole excuse was that he was working on the day of the prehearing conference; petitioner failed to provide an argument as to why the actions of the Board of Examiners were incorrect; and accordingly the excuse for his failure to appear was not accepted. The ALJ concluded that petitioner's reason for his failure to appear was not good cause for same, and accordingly, the failure to appear was not excused. Further, the ALJ determined that the respondent acted within its discretion in denying petitioner's application for a teaching cerification. The petition was denied.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petitioner's explanation did not show good cause for his failure to appear at the OAL hearing. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted for the reasons expressed therein, and the petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the explanation provided by petitioner, Ron Roda, did not show good cause for his failure to appear at the hearing at OAL. Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is adopted for the reasons expressed therein and the petition is hereby dismissed.[1]

v.
NEW JERSEY STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,
Respondent.

Ron Roda, petitioner, pro se

Frederick H. Wu, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (John J. Hoffman, Acting Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: March 31, 2015 Decided: April 9, 2015

BEFORE JOSEPH A. ASCIONE, ALJ:

Petitioner Ron Roda (Roda), brought an emergent relief application to the Commissioner of Education seeking an order from this tribunal and/or the Commissioner compelling respondent, New Jersey State Board of Examiners (SBE) to issue a teaching certification. On November 6, 2013, the Examiner's blocked the certification due to petitioner's June 16, 2005, plea in Pennsylvania, Lancaster County Court of Common Pleas, to multiple counts of identity theft and forgery. Lancaster County Court of Common Pleas sentenced petitioner to seven years probation, the offenses carried exposure to incarceration for up to seven year. Pennsylvania revoked petitioner's certification on November 15, 2006. Sometime thereafter, petitioner gained employment as a teacher in Maryland. On January 17, 2012, the certification authority in Maryland, based upon the Pennsylvania conviction, revoked petitioner's teaching certification. Petitioner's position is that he entered the plea, against advice of his counsel, to protect his family and in an attempt to save his marriage. Petitioner's wife is the alleged victim of the crimes charged. Petitioner attempted to reapply in Pennsylvania for his teaching certification. Pennsylvania denied the application as the State requires a ten-year passage of time from the date of sentencing to consider expungement of the conviction.

On April 11, 2014, petitioner made an application for emergent relief to the New Jersey State Commissioner of Education. On July 23, 2014, the New Jersey State Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-8.2. A hearing was conducted on July 28, 2014, and an order denying emergency relief was entered on July 29, 2014. On August 27, 2014, the then Acting Commissioner of Education approved the OAL decision, however, the matter was returned to the OAL to conduct a hearing on the merits. On September 3, 2014, the OAL sent petitioner notice of a prehearing telephone conference on February 3, 2015, at 3:30 p.m. Petitioner did not communicate that day with the office of the OAL. On February 4, 2015, petitioner had telephone communication with the OAL and the OAL advised petitioner that his reason for failure to contact the OAL on February 3, 2015, would be required to be in writing. On February 5, 2015, a facsimile transmittal set forth petitioner's reason for failure to appear as his work schedule. Petitioner also expressed confusion as to the requirement for a hearing as New Jersey had reciprocal laws to Pennsylvania. The latter would not consider reinstatement of his teaching license until ten years elapsed after the criminal conviction, which will occur in June of 2015. The OAL marked the file failure to appear and returned it to the transmitting agency. On March 16, 2015, the New Jersey State Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C.

1:1-8.2, and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.7(a), to ascertain if the ALJ rejected the February 5, 2015, communication of the petitioner as sufficient to excuse the failure to appear pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c)(2). The Initial Decision of this date responds to the Commissioner's March 16, 2015, remand.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The following facts are not disputed, and I FIND:

1. On September 3, 2014, the OAL gave petitioner notice of a telephone prehearing conference in OAL DKT NO: EDU 09228-14 on February 3, 2015, at 3:30 p.m..

2. On February 3, 2015, petitioner did not contact the OAL and the OAL could not reach petitioner by phone.

3. On February 4, 2015, at approximately 1:41 p.m., petitioner contacted the OAL and advised of his awareness of the February 3, 2015, telephone conference call but was working (OAL-1). Petitioner also advised he could not facsimile a writing of his reason for missing the telephone conference call as he was at work.

4. On February 5, 2015, the OAL received a facsimile from petitioner advising of his work on February 3, 2015, as the only reason for his failure to appear on February 3, 2015. That same date, the undersigned rejected the petitioner's submission as good cause to excuse the failure to appear on February 3, 2015.

5. Petitioner may be in a position to restore his teaching certification in the State of Pennsylvania, after June 2015. Under the present circumstances, the petitioner nor the undersigned is aware of any exclusion to allow the issuance of a teaching certification prior to that time.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The OAL provided petitioner a hearing on emergency relief. The OAL denied petitioner's obligation. The OAL has provided petitioner an opportunity to conference the matter to schedule a hearing date. Petitioner failed to participate in said proceeding and his sole excuse was other work. This is direct evidence of his failure to participate to prosecute his claim. He has failed to provide an argument as to why the actions of the Department of Education are incorrect. Accordingly, the undersigned did not accept his excuse for his failure to appear on February 3, 2015.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that petitioner's reason to be excused from his participation on February 3, 2015, at the prehearing telephone conference is not good cause for the failure to appear for said hearing and as a result thereof, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c)(2), petitioner's failure to appear is not excused.

For the foregoing reasons, the jurisdiction of the within matter with the OAL is terminated and the file is to be forwarded to the New Jersey State Board of Examiners. Respondent's determination to deny petitioner's application for a teaching certification is within its discretion, which has been exercised reasonably considering the SBE's concern for the welfare and safety of the students, and public.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's petitioner is DENIED for the unexcused failure to appear on February 3, 2015, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c)(2).

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for relief from the actions of the New Jersey State Board of Examiners is DENIED in all respects. This Order disposes of all issues in controversy regarding this matter.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Petitioner – a non-tenured guidance counselor formerly employed by the respondent Board – appealed the non-renewal of her contract following her notification via hand-delivered letter dated May 8, 2014 that the Superintendent would recommend against her renewal for the 2014-2015 school year. The petition was filed on August 11, 2014. In lieu of an answer, the Board filed a motion to dismiss the petitioner's complaint, asserting that the appeal was time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The petitioner asserted that the May 8, 2014 letter was a Rice notice of the recommendation to the Board for formal action, and not a final action within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The petitioner further contended that the Superintendent's recommendation at the May 13, 2014 Board meeting was the final action in this matter, and therefore the within petition was timely filed.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the time for filing a petition is clearly set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), which provides that a petition of appeal before the Commissioner must be filed no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order or ruling; pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b), a non-tenured employee who is not recommended for renewal by the superintendent is considered non-renewed without any action by the board of education; in this matter, the Board took no action with regard to petitioner's non-renewal at the May 13, 2014 meeting or thereafter; case law has consistently determined that the ninety-day limitations period commences with the first written notice. The ALJ concluded that the within petition was not timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and the petitioner has not set forth any compelling reason to relax the timely filing requirement. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision, denied petitioner's cross-motion, and dismissed the petition.

Upon careful review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein, and dismissed the petition.

RESPONDENTS.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), along with the parties' exceptions filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, have been carefully reviewed.

In her exceptions, petitioner reiterates and recasts the arguments she advanced at the OAL, which do not warrant additional discussion here. In its reply exceptions, respondents maintain that – as a threshold issue – petitioner's appeal was untimely filed and therefore should be dismissed.

Upon full consideration of the record, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the instant petition is appropriately dismissed because it was filed outside the 90-day limitation period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The Commissioner likewise concurs that petitioner has failed to set forth any compelling reason to relax the timely filing requirement.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein, respondents' motion for summary decision is granted, petitioner's cross-motion is denied, and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.[1]

Rita F. Barone, Esq., for respondents (Purcell, Mulcahy, Hawkins, Flanagan & Lawless, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 16, 2015 Decided: March 2, 2015

BEFORE JOHN S. KENNEDY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondents, Board of Education of the North Hunterdon-Voorhees Regional High School District, et al., have moved, in lieu of Answer, to dismiss petitioner's complaint asserting that the petition is time barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Petitioner cross moved for summary decision that respondent school board's action to not renew the petitioner's employment contract was improper.

The original Petition of Appeal was filed with the Department of Education on August 11, 2014. The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on September 16, 2014. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The parties filed several briefs in support of the motion and cross motion and the record closed on January 16, 2015.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

This matter arises from the decision of the Superintendent not to renew Jordan's contract. She had been employed as a guidance counselor by the Board from January 26, 2011 to June 30, 2014. By letter dated May 8, 2014, petitioner was informed that the Superintendent would recommend against renewal of her employment with the Board of Education for the 2014-2015 school year. This letter was signed by JoAnn F. Keffer, Director of Human Resources, and hand delivered to petitioner on May 8, 2014. The letter further advised petitioner that should any discussion be needed, the exchange will take place in executive session at the Board of Education meeting scheduled for May 13, 2014, unless petitioner advises the Board in writing of her desire for a public discussion. On May 13, 2014, petitioner, through her attorney, hand delivered a letter to the Board of Education outlining her position that she should be rehired for the 2014-2015 school year and requesting that the Board discuss the matter in public. Petitioner appeared at the May 13, 2014 meeting and addressed the Board of Education during the public portion of the meeting. The Board of Education took no formal action on the Superintendent's recommendation at the May 13, 2014 meeting or thereafter. Petitioner filed her petition with the Commissioner of Education on August 11, 2014. There is no assertion that petitioner is a tenured employee.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

In support of the motion, respondents contend that petitioner was notified of the non-renewal of her contract by letter dated May 8, 2014, and that the petition was filed more than ninety days after receipt thereof. Moreover, there is no reason for relaxation of the ninety-day time limit.

Petitioner maintains that the letter dated May 8, 2014, was not the final action of the School District. Petitioner requested a public discussion before the Board and she was granted an opportunity to discuss her non-renewal at the Board of Education meeting on May 13, 2014. Petitioner maintains that the ninety-day period begins with the Superintendent's recommendation to the Board of Education on May 13, 2014, and that relative to this date the filing of the petition was timely. Thus, the issue is whether the ninety-day period in which to file the petition began with receipt of the May 8, 2014 letter, or as of the May 13, 2014 Board of Education meeting.

N.J.A.C. 1:12-5, governing motions for summary decision, permits early disposition of a case before the case is heard if, based on the papers and discovery which have been filed, it can be decided "that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:12-5(b). The provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:12-5 mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 of the New Jersey Court Rules governing motions for summary judgment. To survive summary decision, the opposing party must show that "there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." Ibid. Failure to do so entitles the moving party to summary decision. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520 (1995).

Moreover, even if the non-moving party comes forward with some evidence, this forum must grant summary decision if the evidence is "so one-sided that [the moving party] must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 536. This tribunal is required to do "the same type of evaluation, analysis or sifting of evidential materials as required by Rule 4:37-2(b) in light of the burden of persuasion that applies if the matter goes to trial." Id. at 539-540. Like the New Jersey Supreme Court's standard for summary judgment, summary decision is designed to "liberalize the standards so as to permit summary [decision] in a larger number of cases" due to the perception that we live in "a time of great increase in litigation and one in which many meritless cases are filed." Id. at 539 (citation omitted).

There is no genuine issue as to any material fact in this matter in relation to the time limit in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The material facts are as follows:

1. Petitioner was employed by respondents as a guidance counselor during the 2013-2014 school year and prior thereto.

2. By letter dated May 8, 2014, Director of Human Resources JoAnn F. Keffer advised petitioner that the Superintendent will recommend against renewal of her employment with the Board of Education for the 2014-2015 school year.

3. The May 8, 2014 letter was hand delivered to petitioner on May 8, 2014.

4. Petitioner requested an opportunity to discuss the matter with the Board of Education in public at the May 13, 2014 meeting. This request was granted.

5. The Board of Education took no formal action on the Superintendent's recommendation at the May 13, 2014 meeting or thereafter.

6. Petitioner filed her petition with the Commissioner of Education on August 11, 2014.

The applicable regulation is N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), which provides in pertinent part as follows:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

The ninety-day limitation period has been upheld by the Supreme Court of New Jersey as "a fair and reasonably-necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes under the school laws." Kaprow v. Board of Educ. of Berkeley Tp., 131 N.J. 572, 582 (1993). The Court further stated as follows:

> The limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. It stabilizes the relationship between the teachers and the administration. Because education disputes frequently involve conflicting claims to one teaching position, the remedy is to award the prevailing party the position with back pay. The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Ibid.

Petitioner asserts that the May 8, 2014 letter was a Rice notice of the recommendation to the Board for formal action and not a final action within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). See Rice v. Union County Regional School Bd. Of Ed., 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977). In petitioner's view, the Superintendent's recommendation at the May 13, 2014 meeting was the final action in this matter. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b) states, in pertinent part:

> A board of education shall renew the employment contract of a certificated or non-certificated officer or employee only upon the recommendation of the chief school administrator and by a recorded roll call of the majority vote of the full membership of the board. The board shall not withhold its approval for arbitrary and capricious reasons. A non-tenured officer or employee who is not recommended for renewal by > the chief school administrator shall be deemed non-renewed.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b), a non-tenured employee who is not recommended for renewal by the superintendent is considered non-renewed without any action by the board of education. In this matter, the Board of Education took no action with regard to petitioner's non-renewal either at the May 13, 2014 meeting or thereafter.

The ninety-day period commences when a district employee "knew or should have known" that he or she was not going to be offered a new contract for the following academic year. Nissman v. Board of Educ., 272 N.J. Super. 373, 379 (App. Div.) certif. den., 137 N.J. 315 (1994). Various school law cases address a situation where a teacher is given written notice of non-renewal of a contract for the following school year and then tries some means other than an appeal to the Commissioner to persuade the local school board to change its determination. The teacher typically contends that subsequent action in regard to the effort to change the determination constitutes the action which commences the ninety-day period. However, the consistent determinations are that the first written notice begins the ninety-day limitations period. See Pacio v. Lakeland Reg'l High School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 1989 S.L.D. 2060, (the first written communication provided to a staff member of an action by the Board initiates the 90-day timeline); Wise v. Bd. Of Ed. Of the City of Trenton, decided by the Commissioner September 11, 200, aff'd State Bd. January 4, 2001 (when a teaching staff member receives notice that his contract will not be renewed is when the 90-day period is initiated). See also LeMee v. Bd. Of Ed. Of the Village of Ridgewood, 1990 S.L.D. 663, 667, wherein the Commissioner concurred that the day petitioner received notice that her contract was not renewed was the date that the ninety-day timeline commenced, notwithstanding the request to appear before the Board of Education to try to convince the board to change its decision and offer a contract of employment.

In this case, the notice of non-renewal was issued in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, which provides as follows:

> On or before May 15 in each year, each non-tenured teaching staff member continuously employed by a board of education since the preceding September 30 shall receive either > a. A written offer of a contract for employment from the board of education for the next succeeding year providing for at least the same terms and conditions of employment but with such increases in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education, or > b. A written notice from the chief school administrator that such employment will not be offered.
>

This section requires written notice that employment will not be offered for the next school year by May 15. Written notice pursuant to this section certainly should alert the non-renewed teacher to the consequences. While the May 8, 2014 letter received by petitioner in this case was signed by the Director of Human Resources and not the chief school administrator, there is no requirement under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) that the requisite notice that triggers the ninety-day limitations period come from the chief school administrator.

The first written notice was the letter dated May 8, 2014, advising petitioner that her contract would not be renewed for the 2014-2015 school year. Petitioner received this letter on May 8, 2014. The petition in this matter was filed on August 11, 2014, which was more than ninety days after May 8, 2014. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petition in this matter was not filed within the ninety-day time limit set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

Rules may be relaxed where strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16. An example would be where there is a compelling public interest. DeMaio v. New Providence Board of Education, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 449, 453. Petitioner contends that an extension of time in which to file her petition should be granted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 12:20-3 which provides, in pertinent part, that a late appeal shall nevertheless be considered if the filing was delayed for good cause. Good Cause is defined as where the delay was due to circumstances that were not reasonably foreseeable or were beyond the petitioner's control. N.J.A.C. 12:20-3(i).

Petitioner asserts that the May 8, 2014 letter was misleading and should be considered a Rice notice as opposed to a notice of non-renewal. In Suarez v. State-Operated School District of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County, 2005 N.J.AGEN LEXIS 533 p. 7 OAL Dkt. No. EDU 11077-2004, Agency Dkt. No. 218-8/14 (Initial Decision September 13, 2005 (Commiss'r Dec. October 28, 2005) the commissioner ruled that the ninety-day period commenced when the petitioner received notice, prior to any action by the board of education, indicating that the superintendent had decided not to renew her contract. This letter was not signed by the superintendent and it preceded any formal action by the board. The commissioner found that "the ninety-day period commences when a teacher knows or should have known that he or she will not be offered a contract for the next year. Id. at Page 4. Here, petitioner knew or had reason to know that her employment would not be renewed upon receipt of the May 8, 2014 letter. Petitioner has not advanced a compelling public interest or good cause sufficient to relax the ninety-day time limit in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and there does not appear to be any reason to do so.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner failed to file her petition within the ninety-day time limit in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) and that therefore the petition in this matter should be dismissed.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that:

1. Respondents' motion for summary decision is GRANTED;

2. Petitioner's cross motion is DENIED; and

3. The petition in this matter is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record, settlement agreement (Agreement), and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed – mindful of the Commissioner's March 27, 2015 determination that the prior Agreement submitted did not comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.13(d) as it was neither signed by the Board's attorney, nor contained a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating the Superintendent to sign the Agreement on its behalf. Since the file now contains a copy of an April 1, 2015 Board resolution approving the settlement and designating the Superintendent to sign the Agreement on its behalf, the Commissioner can approve the within Agreement in its present form.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision recommending approval of the parties' settlement as the final decision in this matter is hereby adopted, and the matter is dismissed subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

The record of this matter, the Settlement Agreement (Agreement), and the Initial Decision on Remand of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1. On January 22, 2015, the Commissioner remanded this matter to OAL based upon a determination that the prior settlement agreement recommended for adoption by the Administrative Law Judge did not include the requisite approval from each Board of Education – as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.13(d).

Upon review of the revised record on remand, the Commissioner finds that the deficiencies have been corrected and that the Agreement contains the requisite Board approvals. Record Closed: April 1, 2015 Decided: April 8, 2015

BEFORE BARRY E. MOSCOWITZ, ALJ:

This case was remanded to the Office of Administrative Law on February 26, 2013, because the Initial Decision did not contain copies of the board resolution for each board of education. Both board resolutions are now attached. Having reviewed the board resolutions, together with the settlement agreement, which is again attached, I FIND that the parties have voluntarily agreed to settle this case as evidenced by the signature of the president of the board of education for Jamesburg on the settlement agreement, the signature of the president of the board of education for Monroe on the settlement agreement, the signature of the county superintendent of schools for Middlesex County on the settlement agreement, the signature of the board secretary for Jamesburg on its board resolution, and the signature of the board secretary for Monroe on its board resolution.

Having found that the parties have voluntarily agreed to settle this case, I CONCLUDE that the settlement agreement, together with the board resolutions, fully dispose of all issues in controversy, and are consistent with law.

I also CONCLUDE that the settlement agreement, together with the board resolutions, meet the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, and that the settlement agreement, together with the board resolutions, should be approved.

Having approved the settlement agreement, I ORDER that the parties comply with the terms of the settlement agreement and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for his consideration.

Agreement

THIS AGREEMENT made on this 23 day of October, 2014, between the Jamesburg Board of Education in the County of Middlesex in the State of New Jersey (hereinafter referred to as "Jamesburg") and the Monroe Township Board of Education in the County of Middlesex in the State of New Jersey (hereinafter referred to as "Monroe");

WHEREAS, Jamesburg sends its students to the high school of Monroe ("Monroe Township High School" or "High School"); and

WHEREAS, the parties have executed an Agreement made as of March 2011 regarding tuition due from Jamesburg to Monroe; and

WHEREAS, Monroe's certified tuition calculation includes an allocation of general fund expenditures as well as an allocation of annual interest charges on the bond indebtedness relating to the construction of the Monroe Township High School; and

WHEREAS, Jamesburg has alleged that it is unable to pay the arrearages in tuition it owes to Monroe and has disputed this amount; and

WHEREAS, Monroe has filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education, Agency Ref. No. 9-1/13, OAL Dkt. No. EDU02793-2013N, alleging that Jamesburg owes past due tuition to Monroe; and

WHEREAS, the matter is pending in the Office of Administrative Law; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire to amicably resolve the dispute.

W I T N E S S E T H:

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the agreements, covenants and conditions herein contained, the parties agree as follows:

1. The parties acknowledge that the certified tuition rate used by Monroe for calculating the actual tuition rate and the "Current Indebtedness" includes an allocation of general fund expenditures as well as an allocation of annual interest charges on the bond indebtedness relating to the construction of the Monroe Township High School.

2. Jamesburg acknowledges that: (1) it owes past due tuition to Monroe for the years 2011-12 and 2012-13, $615,213.00 and $333,898.00, due in the 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years respectively; and (2) it may owe additional tuition for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years (collectively the "Current Indebtedness"). If the tuition amount due from Jamesburg continues to decrease as shown in the trend from the 2011-12 and 2012-13 school years, the parties anticipate that the certified tuition for the 2013-14 school year could decrease from the 2012-2013 school year and Monroe may eventually owe Jamesburg a credit in which case Monroe may apply any such credit against the Current Indebtedness.

3. Jamesburg acknowledges that it has received a school warrant demand from Monroe for payment of the Indebtedness.

4. Jamesburg agrees to pay the Current Indebtedness owed to Monroe upon the terms set forth in this Agreement.

5. The parties anticipate that the High School tuition rate will decrease in future school years, because the High School costs are anticipated to increase slightly and enrollment is anticipated to steadily increase, thus driving the tuition rate per pupil down. The parties acknowledge and agree that in the event the change in the High School tuition rate does not result in Jamesburg's ability to pay the Current Indebtedness in a seven (7) year timeframe, Monroe may re-file its Petition of Appeal in accordance with Paragraph 9 below.

6. The State Certified Tuition and the NJ Department of Education budget tuition figures for the High School are set forth as follows:

YEAR	STATE CERTIFIED TUITION	DOE BUDGET TUITION (This DOE software calculation does not include bond interest cost)
2007-08	$ 15,990.00	$ 13,704.00
2008-09	$ 17,957.00	$ 13,893.00
2009-10	$ 17,965.00	$ 14,126.00
2010-11	$ 17,363.00	$ 14,691.00
2011-12	$ 16,564.00	$ 16,107.00
2012-13	$ 15,900.00	$ 15,264.00
2013-14	N/A	$ 14,685.00
2014-15	N/A	$ 14,291.00

7. Jamesburg agrees to budget and pay to Monroe the Current Indebtedness on the terms as set forth in this Agreement until the Current Indebtedness is satisfied. Jamesburg shall pay $14,291.00 per student for 267 students for a total payment of $3,815,697 each school year even if Monroe's estimated tuition rate and/or Jamesburg's estimated number of students attending the High School in any school year is projected at a lesser amount. Monroe shall apply any difference between the $3,815,697 and the actual total tuition amount owed by Jamesburg to Monroe, as certified by the state from the A4-1/A4-2 tuition calculation, to the Current Indebtedness. In the event the estimated per pupil tuition rate is higher than $14,291.00 in any school year and/or in the event the estimated number of students attending the High School in any school year is higher than 267 students, the total amount that Jamesburg shall pay to Monroe as estimated tuition for that school year shall be calculated based upon these higher figures.

8. As acknowledged that Monroe continues to expand its housing capacity and continues to grow its population and Jamesburg does not have the capacity for development and that Jamesburg's enrollment has remained constant other than for normal fluctuations in household size, Monroe shall not charge Jamesburg and Jamesburg shall not be responsible for any further debt services associated with the construction of a new high school, or additions or renovations to the existing High School.

9. In consideration of Jamesburg's approval and execution of this Agreement, Monroe will voluntarily dismiss its Petition of Appeal without costs against any party but Monroe may re-file its Petition of Appeal without regard to any Statute of Limitations or time limitations under any rules or regulations or otherwise and no defense will be raised by Jamesburg that the reassertion of the claim is untimely for any of the years in which tuition is past due now or in the future.

10. This Agreement shall not become effective and enforceable until: (1) Jamesburg and Monroe approve this Agreement by resolution; and (2) the Agreement is signed by both parties. Once effective, the Agreement shall continue in full force and effect until Jamesburg pays the total Current Indebtedness to Monroe, at which time the Agreement shall expire.

11. This Agreement shall be made part of an Order of the Commissioner of Education dismissing the Petition of Appeal and Counterclaim.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties, by their duly authorized representatives, have executed this Agreement on the date shown by their signatures below.

The record of this matter, the proposed Settlement Agreement and Notice of Withdrawal, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, with the following observation. STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS DOCKET NO. 1213-107
OAL DOCKET NO. EDE 944-13
AGENCY DOCKET NO. 9-9/14A

IN THE MATTER OF THE	:
REVOCATION OF THE CERTIFICATES	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF RONALD MORENO BY THE	:	DECISION
STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS.	:

Order of Revocation by the State Board of Examiners, July 24, 2014

For the Respondent-Appellant, Ned P. Rogovoy, Esq.

For the Petitioner-Respondent State Board of Examiners, Lauren A. Jensen, Deputy Attorney General (John Jay Hoffman, Acting Attorney General of New Jersey)

Appellant challenges the determination of the New Jersey State Board of Examiners (Board) that his actions warranted the revocation of his teaching certificates. On appeal, he asserts that the ALJ "failed to recognize certain blatant inconsistencies in the facts presented" and takes issue with the State Police's involvement in the underlying investigation of his conduct.[1] (Appellant's Brief at 1-3). In response, the Board argues that its determination was not arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law and that it appropriately deferred to the credibility determinations made by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) following four days of hearing at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). (Board's Appeal Brief at 29)

In reviewing appeals from decisions of the State Board of Examiners, the Commissioner may not substitute his judgment for that of the Board so long as the appellant received due process and the Board's decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record. Further, the Board's decision should not be disturbed unless the appellant demonstrates that it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.1(a).

Initially, the Commissioner notes that appellant's objections to the Board's decision are fundamentally rooted in his disagreement with the ALJ's credibility determinations and the resultant weighing of testimonial and documentary evidence. The legal standard with respect to objections of this type is well established,[2] and in the present instance, the Commissioner finds the ALJ's credibility and fact determinations, as adopted by the Board, to be both clearly explained in the Initial Decision and sufficiently supported by the record. The Commissioner further finds that appellant has offered nothing in his papers that would warrant disturbing the deference to which the ALJ – as finder of fact with the greatest opportunity to observe the demeanor of witnesses – is entitled to in this regard. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987).

Upon careful consideration of the record, including the hearing transcripts and all submissions, the Commissioner finds that the record fully supports the Board's determination that the appellant engaged in unbecoming conduct – vis-à-vis his inappropriate relationship with an eighteen-year old student – despite his self-serving testimony to the contrary. Specifically, as detailed in the Initial Decision, the consistent and credible testimony offered by two students, two school administrators, and two State Police detectives established that: 1) appellant was observed touching the student's leg and putting his hand up her skirt during a school field trip; 2) appellant allowed the student to rest her head on his shoulder at an awards ceremony and while riding a bus; 3) appellant allowed the student to enter his hotel room twice during a school field trip; 4) appellant drove the student home after a field trip; 5) appellant exchanged 1,857 text messages with the student between April 18 and May 11, 2012, some of which were sexually explicit; and 6) appellant and the student admitted to the two State Police detectives that they engaged in a consensual sexual relationship which began after the student's 18th birthday. Additionally, the inconsistent testimony offered by both appellant and the student with whom he maintained the inappropriate relationship wholly contradicted their prior admissions to State Police detectives and was found to be incredible by the ALJ. Although appellant obviously disagrees with the revocation of his certificates, it is clear from the record that he was afforded due process throughout the proceedings. In view of appellant's disturbing lapses in judgment and blatant disregard for the boundaries that must be maintained between teacher and student, the Commissioner finds that revocation of his certificates was the appropriate penalty.

[2] N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) states in pertinent part: "The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record."

Because there is nothing in the record to suggest that the Board's decision to revoke the appellant's certificates – based on the nature and extent of the unbecoming conduct proven during the hearing at the Office of Administrative Law – was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, the Commissioner finds no basis upon which to disturb the decision of the State Board of Examiners.

Accordingly, the decision of the State Board of Examiners is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.[3]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDE 944-13
AGENCY DKT. NO. 1213-107

IN THE MATTER OF THE CERTIFICATES OF RONALD MORENO.

Lauren A. Jensen, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner State Board of Examiners (John J. Hoffman, Acting Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Ned P. Rogovoy, Esq., for respondent Ronald Moreno

Record Closed: April 4, 2014 Decided: May 19, 2014

BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In the matter, the New Jersey Department of Education's State Board of Examiners (hereinafter "petitioner" or "Examiners") issued an Order to Show Cause against respondent Ronald Moreno (hereinafter "Moreno") who is the holder of (1) Teacher of Elementary School Certificate of Eligibility, dated July, 1994; (2) Teacher of Data Processing Certificate of Eligibility, dated July, 1994; (3) Teacher of Computer Science Technology Certificate of Eligibility, dated September 1994; (4) Teacher of Elementary School certificate, dated July, 1997; (5)Teacher of Data Processing certificate, dated July, 1997; (6)Teacher of Computer Science Technology certificate, issued in July 1997 and; (7)Teacher of Law Enforcement certificate, issued in October 2010, which was based upon information supplied to petitioner by the Cumberland County Technical Education Center (hereinafter the "Center "), where Moreno had been employed as a teacher in 2012. The matter arose from allegations that Moreno had engaged in inappropriate conduct with an eighteen-year-old student known as A.H. during the course of her enrollment in his law enforcement class, which purportedly happened during her senior year at the Center. It is noted that, although A.H. was already an adult at the time, she and all of the other students referenced in this matter shall only be referred to by their initials in the interest of consistency and privacy. Moreno filed an answer in which he denied the occurrence of the incidents.

As a result of the issuance of the Order to Show Cause, petitioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where the matter was heard on September 25 and 26, and November 19, 2013 as well as on January 30, 2014, at the OAL. Upon its conclusion the parties were afforded the opportunity to obtain final transcripts, after which a briefing schedule was set. Upon their receipt, the hearing record closed on April 4, 2014.

TESTIMONY OF THE WITNESSES

In this matter, eight witnesses testified. Their relevant testimonies are summarized as follows:

Bonnie Marano

Bonnie Marano is employed by the Center as a guidance counselor, where she has been employed since December 1, 2009. She knows respondent Moreno as being a former co-worker there. They were both part of the four-person chaperone team which escorted a group of students who had been selected by the Center to participate in the New Jersey Skills USA State Championship contest at the Garden State Exposition Center, Somerset, New Jersey, which occurred between March 30 and 31, 2012. The estimated time of departure was 11:30 a.m., which included an overnight stay in the immediate area of the Garden State Exposition Center. All the students had signed a Student Code of Conduct and Agreement to Attend, which included, among other things, a statement that transportation home from the Center on Saturday night was the responsibility of the parent or guardian. All students had to be picked up within one half-hour of their arrival back at the Center, which was scheduled to allow for return at approximately 11:00 p.m. on Saturday, March 31, 2012. It further stated that "under no circumstances will [the Center] chaperones be able to provide transportation to a student's home." (P-2.) In relevant part, it also stated that all students were to be in their rooms by 11:00 p.m. and remain there until competition time the following morning. Students were not permitted to be in any other member's rooms without permission from the advisor. Further, room checks would be performed to ensure students were in the re-assigned rooms at the proper times. The female students were assigned to a single room at the Holiday Inn, Somerset, while the male students were in another room. The chaperones were similarly separated, with Moreno, the only male chaperone, having his own room. They also arranged to have those two chaperone rooms used as respective male/female lounges after the night's sleepover so that the students could use them as changing rooms the next day after they completed their respective competitions in order to prepare for the dinner/awards ceremony banquet. Most of the participants wore uniform basic clothing for the competition, but could then change into more fashionable clothing for the banquet. Student A.H., a finalist in the Criminal Justice competition, signed her Code of Conduct and Agreement to Attend on January 31, 2012. It was also signed by her parent- guardian L.L. on the same date.

Pursuant to the 11:00 p.m. curfew, Marano personally sealed the male and female students into their respective rooms by placing two pieces of tape across each unit door, with a big piece of masking tape on the top and clear scotch tape on the bottom. She noted that the students had only been told about the presence of the scotch tape and not the masking tape. At 5:30 the next morning, Marano conducted a check of the students' doors at which time she noticed that both tapes on the door to A.H.'s room were broken. Marano immediately became frantic. She knocked on the door and then discovered that only two female students were there, neither of whom was A.H. She then looked for her in the dining room area and searched other parts of the hotel for approximately five minutes. At that time she returned to the hallway at which point she saw A.H. standing at the door to Moreno's room. A.H. claimed that she had gone there to wake him up. Marano then knocked on the door at which point Moreno admitted to her that A.H. had been in there. She noted that A.H. had also told her that she had also been in Moreno's room.

Later that day, at approximately 3:30 p.m., Marano went to Moreno's room to ask him a question. She knocked on the door but not did not get an answer. She then knocked a second time and this time she announced her name so that anyone inside would know it was her, but she still got no answer. She knocked a third time and said that she was coming in. She opened the door and saw A.H. lying on the bed alone in the room. A.H. was fully clothed and the bed was made. A.H. was lying on top of the comforter on her stomach. A.H. looked over and told Marano that Moreno was in the bathroom. Marano then asked A.H. to tell him to find her when he came out. A few minutes later Moreno did come out and verified that he had been in the bathroom when Marano had come to his room.

The awards ceremony took place that evening. While at the ceremony, A.H. complained of being hot and not feeling well at some point. Moreno took her into a separate side room off the main dining room where some other students and chaperones were located and he had her sit down. Moreno proceeded to fan A.H., and one of the other students told Marano, and commented that the interaction between the teacher and the student was "creepy." Marano tried to side-step the discussion with that student, however. But later, during the actual awards ceremony, A.H. sat next to Moreno and rested her head on his shoulder pretty much the entire time. At one point Moreno got up and A.H. followed. Marano believes that they both returned at some point.

After the ceremony, they all piled in the bus, except for Marano who drove the van, and they all headed back to Gloucester County immediately after the program because all of the luggage had been pre-loaded. Before driving back, however, Marano took roll call on the bus at which point she observed Moreno and A.H. sitting together there. A.H. had her head on his shoulder once again. They arrived back at the school at approximately 11:00 p.m. with Moreno arriving approximately five minutes before the bus. As part of the written procedures in place, all the students were supposed to call their homes one hour before their ride back in order to confirm travel arrangements to their respective homes. In addition, pursuant to the announced policy in place, the adult staff would wait a half-hour until the arrival of the drivers. If a driver did not show by then, the local police could have been notified for assistance. All the students got picked up except for A.H. Instead, Marano saw A.H. get into Moreno's car and they drove away pretty quickly as they got back to the school. Marano thought that this was very inappropriate and viewed this in the context of the culmination of events starting with the morning's observation of A.H. being at Moreno's room at the Holiday Inn.

On cross-examination, she acknowledged that she did not see A.H.'s clothing or hair being mussed up, either at the door to Moreno's room or later when she found A.H. on the bed in Moreno's room. In addition, A.H. never told her that she was ill that weekend. It was only after she saw Moreno fanning A.H. at the ceremony side room that another student may have told her that A.H. hadn't been feeling well that day. In any event Marano did not think that it was appropriate for A.H. to have been in the boys' lounge room at all that afternoon.

A. C.

A.C. was a senior student at the Center in 2012 and was a classmate of A.H. in the forensic science-criminal justice class which was run by respondent Ronald Moreno. They were both also part of an honor guard, whose adviser was also Moreno. In May 2012, Moreno escorted the honor guard team to a trip to Washington, D.C. in order to participate in a law enforcement memorial tribute for "fallen" officers as well as to perform an honor guard ceremony at the United States Capitol. They stayed approximately three nights. There were about seven students from the honor guard who attended the outing, along with several chaperones, including the bus driver and his wife along with Moreno. During one of the nights, which was May 14, 2012, they celebrated the birthday of A.C. by going to an Italian restaurant in the D.C. area. They sat at a rectangular table, with A.H. sitting at the head of the table and Moreno to her left. A.H. was not feeling well that night. At one point A.C. saw Moreno's right arm under the table near the legs of A.H. as if reaching toward the head of the table in her direction. A.C. nudged her tablemate at which point Moreno saw her and then casually and nonchalantly moved his arm back in a normal motion. Nothing else unusual happened that night at the dinner.

However, the next day they returned to Gloucester County on the bus. Initially, A.H. sat next to A.C., but after they went to a rest stop in Delaware, A.H. moved forward several seats and sat next to Moreno. A.C. saw A.H. rest her head against Moreno and fall asleep, which she was able to observe in the rearview mirror adjacent to the bus driver. After A.H. left the seat to move forward, A.C. observed that she left her cell phone on the seat, at which point A.C. and a male student (who knew the password of A.H.) entered her password on that cell phone and proceeded to observe more than fifty text messages between A.H. and Moreno, which included (1) a discussion about the dinner, (2) the seating arrangements on the bus, (3) Moreno indicating about A.H. not wearing any panties, (4) how thinking about A.H. made Moreno "hard," and (5) how she would be coming to his seat, among other messages. When A.C. saw the context of the messages, she was in shock. But it never occurred to A.C. at the time to record any of the statements word for word. She did not disclose this to the school at first. Instead, she initially only reported this to her mother because she felt that it was not appropriate to do such things. A.C. also did not report her observations immediately because she saw Moreno as being a good teacher and did not want to get him into trouble. As a result, after A.C. told her mother about it, her mother then called Superintendent Elliott. A.C. was then directed to Superintendent Elliott and on May 29, 2012, she told her what she had observed in the text messages. (P-6.) In the intervening time, A.C. admitted that she did discuss the texts with other students as well as both of her parents. At the hearing A.C. was then shown the written prepared report by Elliott, especially the bulleted text comments. She had never seen that report before. A.C. also noted that she had been suspicious about the relationship between A.H. and Moreno for a period of time. He would frequently walk A.H. out of a little hallway from the building to the busses, even though he would not walk others out in a similar fashion. A.C. also thought it was odd that A.H. would sit in the back of the class with Moreno after a lesson.

On cross-examination A.C. recalled that on the return trip from Washington on May 15, 2012, Moreno sat in the first or second seat behind the bus driver, while the wife of the bus driver was either adjacent to him or slightly ahead of him. She recalled that, although A.H. had been sick during the two days before, she did not appear to be sick on the return trip. A.C. also recalled that approximately four people saw A.C. attempt to access A.H.'s cell phone on the bus, all the while A.C. was looking at A.H. to make sure that she was not going to return to the seat in order to observe that A.C. had been spying on her.

On further cross-examination, she indicated that she did not personally have "frequent" one-to-one conversations with Moreno. Also, unless Mareno called a student to the back of the classroom to talk, it appeared that only A.H. would go back there. A.C. acknowledged that she races motorcycles and there were two times when Moreno did go to her races and arranged for a photographer there. He never made any inappropriate remarks to her at any time. A.C. also noted that she never texted him or vice versa or, as she then stated, not that she remembers. A.C. admitted that she would talk to him on the phone about the honor guard and matters relating to it, although she does not remember how she got his phone number. A.C. also indicated that she liked A.H. and never criticized her for what she wore. When further asked by counsel, she indicated that she did not know if A.H. had worn panties the night of A.C.'s birthday dinner in Washington since the students got individually dressed in a bathroom.

N.M.

N.M. is now twenty years old. He previously attended Millville Senior High School and then the Center, which attendance at the Center was during his junior and senior years in high school. His teacher in the law enforcement course during both years was respondent Ronald Moreno. According to N.M.'s best recollection, his fellow classmates included A.H. and A.C., both of whom participated with him in police week in Washington, D.C. in approximately March 2012. They were all members of the Center's honor guard. During one of the nights in Washington, they attended a dinner at a local restaurant. A.C. sat to his left and a guest of the bus driver was seated to his right. He drew a sketch of the seating arrangements at the hearing. (R-1.) He saw nothing inappropriate by or between Moreno and A.H. at the dinner but noted that he was focused on talking to his fellow classmate J. during the course of the dinner.

However, on their way home from Washington, he recalled that something did happen regarding A.H. and Moreno. N.M. sat at a window seat, while A.C. was one seat behind and to the right of him. Initially, A.H. sat with A.C. but then at some point A.H. got up and moved to sit with teacher Moreno when they left a rest stop. He first saw A.H.'s cell phone before A.C. picked it up and showed it to him because the seats were low and he could see the phone on the now empty seat vacated by A.H. He initially thought nothing of it, however, but then A.C. mouthed the words to him "what's the code?" N.M. did not offer the phone to A.H. because he and other students had had suspicions about her over time so they wanted to investigate it. Having used A.H.'s cell phone many times, N.M. knew her phone password. When the phone was opened, he observed sexual text messages such as having sex, touching and other such things. Moreno's name was on several of the text messages. When shown the recitation of the texts messages in Exhibit R-6, he identified several of the passages contained there, to wit, "I got my period;" "That's good. Have you ever had sex while you had your period?" and references made to panties and juices. N.M. indicated that he was a little upset with what he saw because he had known A.H. since sixth grade, he knew her troubled past, and how older men had taken advantage of her over time. He was going to say something to the school authorities but does not know why he did not. Instead, N.M. spoke to A.C. who was then called in to the school superintendent's office before he did anything further with her about it.

On cross-examination, N.M. acknowledged that he never confronted A.H. about the information he had observed but he claimed that he did not have enough courage to do it. He admitted that he had snooped on her password and snooped on her text messages. N.M. noted that A.H. and A.C. had been acquaintances but were perhaps somewhat jealous of each other, although not regarding his personal attention to A.H. N.M. then noted that by the end of the school year his friendship with A.H. had eventually fizzled out and he never talked to her about it all. Regarding his suspicions, N.M. had noticed that A.H. and teacher Moreno were always together whether it was at school or on a field trip. In addition, there were rumors floating around the student body which indicated that Moreno would give a lot of attention to those who wanted it but not to those who did not. This was the total basis for his ongoing suspicions.

Dina Elliott, Ed.D.

Dina Elliott, Ed.D., has been the superintendent of the Center since January 2012. Her district encompasses 900 students with a tenth through twelfth grade class level as well as adult programs. There are also forty full-time students as well as special education students from grades nine through twelve. Most of the students, however, are juniors and seniors, who take a specialized course part of the day. The school consists of eighteen technical programs for which they have a full staff in the technical trade areas. The Center is located in one school facility in Bridgeton, Cumberland County, New Jersey, and is a receiving district for several schools, including Vineland, Bridgeton, Millville, and Cumberland Regional at Seabrook. The instructor in the law enforcement/homeland security course requires one to have an extensive background in law enforcement, which can also include military background. The honor guard at the Center is part of that class environment. Respondent Ronald Moreno was the instructor for that program for a period of time.

Dr. Elliott indicated that she has known A.C. for a period of time. In January 2012, A.C. was halfway through her senior year at the Center. In approximately May of that year, Dr. Elliott received a telephone call from the mother of A.C. who indicated that A.C. did not feel comfortable going to school any longer. As a result, she met with and had a discussion with A.C. who reported that during the law enforcement class trip to Washington, D.C. in May, she had learned of a number of facts of some serious nature regarding Moreno and a student at the school. As result of that conference, Dr. Elliott typed up notes from that meeting which reflected the observations recited to her by A.C. They included A.C.'s claim that an inappropriate relationship existed between Moreno and the student A.H. Further, and in particular, on May 14, 2012, while at a dinner in Washington, D.C., A.C. saw Moreno put his hand on the leg of A.H. When Moreno saw that A.C. had made the observation, he then removed his hand. On the way home, A.H. moved away from her seat next to A.C. and sat with Moreno for part of the time. A.C. also reported that A.H. had been texting with Moreno prior to that seat change on the return bus trip. A.C. read the text messages after A. H. left the seat, which were inappropriate. Dr. Elliott reduced to writing a series of comments which A.C. said she had observed in the text messages, which are contained in Exhibit P-6, all of which are highly inappropriate and sexually explicit. Based upon that discussion with A.C., Dr. Elliott initially called the Board of Education solicitor. She then called the Bridgeton State Police Barracks located in Deerfield Township. She spoke initially with a desk sergeant who thereafter transferred her to Detective Sergeant Brian Smith. He indicated that he intended to assign the matter to two detectives, Detective Barilotti and Detective Austin to investigate. Dr. Elliott met with them both and related the information she received from A.C. Moreno and his union representative were then summoned for a meeting, after which he was summarily suspended without further notice on May 29, 2012. (P-7.) Dr. Elliott later met with A.C. again on May 30, 2012, at which time A.C. indicated that when she had gone back to class on May 29, 2012, Moreno questioned her about why she had been with Dr. Elliott.

Dr. Elliott found out that the relationship between Moreno and A.H. had begun in March 2012, at a time when A.H. was already eighteen years old. As a result, no criminal charges were filed against Moreno since the State Police reported to her that there was apparently a consensual relationship present between the two of them at the time. She made further notes of the matter accordingly on May 29 and 30, 2012. The Board of Education took action to accept the suspension with pay and to pursue tenure charges at its July 28, 2012, meeting. However, Moreno immediately thereafter filed a notice to retire from his position. Dr. Elliott thereafter contacted Robert R. Higgins, Ph.D., Director, Office of Licensure and Credentials in the Department of Education on July 9, 2012, regarding the involvement of Moreno and an improper relationship with a student in their district. (P-11.). On July 11, 2012, Moreno advised Dr. Elliott in writing that he had resigned his position effective June 30, 2012, for purposes of retirement. (P-12.) The Board of Education accepted his resignation on July 19, 2012, to be effective July 1, 2012. (P-13.)

Dr. Elliott further noted that prior to the complaints registered to her by A.C., she had received information in April 2012, that Moreno had taken a student home after the Skills USA academic competition in March 2012, which was a violation of the rules of the Center. The chief chaperone on the trip, Bonnie Marano had also reported other suspicious activities by him during that trip, and as a result, she had reviewed the report prepared by Marano at that time. (P-1.) Dr. Elliott met with Moreno and his union representative as a result of those allegations, and he received a letter reprimand/written warning regarding the transportation violation on April 5, 2012. (P-3.) On cross-examination, Dr. Elliott acknowledged that she had determined that the allegation of unbecoming conduct was not established regarding his other actions on that trip. She also conceded that she never called the parent of A.H. about how she had gotten home that night. But Moreno admitted to Dr. Elliott that he had driven A.H. home. Moreno had told her that A.H.'s home situation was not the best and that he and his wife were trying to help her. Moreno told Dr. Elliott that he was concerned that an alcoholic parent might have been picking A.C. up that night and that is why he drove her home himself.

Further, the notes which Dr. Elliott took regarding her meeting with A.C. on May 29, 2012, were from statements made to her by A.C. But A.C. never produced any written documents herself. Dr. Elliott also acknowledged that her husband is a State trooper, a staff sergeant assigned to the Woodstown station. She also admitted that the person who took over the job left by Moreno is a retired State trooper named Lopez. However, Dr. Elliott indicated that she never spoke to her husband regarding the Moreno matter at any time.

Detective Sergeant Arthur Barilotti

Detective Sergeant Arthur Barilotti has been employed by the Division of State Police for seven years and he is now assigned to the Woodstown station. He was previously assigned to the Bridgeton station at which time he received a phone call from Detective Sergeant Smith, who advised him about a phone call he had received from Dr. Elliott of the Center. He and Detective Austin were assigned to conduct an investigation. They met with Dr. Elliott and two of representatives from the Center, at which time Dr. Elliott provided them with her written synopsis of her conversations with A.C. (P-6.) As a result of that initial contact, Moreno was escorted to the station in handcuffs and with his cell phone. A communications data warrant was needed, which they did not have. Moreno did not consent to the search of the cell phone accordingly.

Upon their arrival back at the station, the detectives initially spoke to A.H., the alleged victim, regarding the actions by Moreno at the Washington, D.C. dinner in which he allegedly put his hand up A.H.'s skirt. She admitted that it did happen. A.H. admitted that they were in a relationship which started back in March 2012. She also indicated that after the first trip in March, she and Moreno had had consensual sex. The detectives determined that she was eighteen at the time. They then spoke to Moreno about what had happened on the bus on the way back from Washington, D.C. He admitted and confirmed that there were text messages between them on the phones and that he and A.H. had been in a sexual relationship. Moreno admitted having had intercourse with her at some point and that he did put his hand up her skirt at the dinner table in Washington, D.C., but he contended that he never had intimate relations with her on school property.

On cross-examination Detective Sergeant Barilotti admitted that he never conferred with A.C. about the truthfulness of her allegations. He also noted that, while initially talking to A.H, they had determined that there were no crimes involved so did they did not pursue any criminal investigation regarding Moreno accordingly. He also admitted that he knows Sergeant Elliott and knew at the time of his arrival at the Center that Dr. Elliott was the wife of Sergeant Elliott. But Detective Sergeant Barilotti noted that he never spoke to Sergeant Elliott about this matter at any time whatsoever. He noted that the entire investigation involving the interview of both parties at the station lasted approximately two-and-a-half hours. He also noted that the confirmation by both Moreno and A.H. regarding Moreno having put his hand up the dress of A.H. confirmed the observations of A.C. from the dinner in Washington, D.C.

Detective Gregory Austin

Detective Gregory Austin has been employed by the Division of State Police for nine years and has served as a detective for two years. He was involved in the investigation concerning respondent Ronald Moreno along with Detective Sergeant Barilotti. He noted that he was never involved with any school investigation at the Center prior to that time and did not know the superintendent (Elliott) when he was so assigned. He was initially aware of the fact that it involved a purported inappropriate relationship between a teacher and student and included text messages and written statements of those texts. After the initial interview with the Center authorities, Moreno was confronted by the detectives and agreed to go back to the station with them where he was placed in an interview room. However, they determined to interview the student victim first, A.H., after she had shown up there voluntarily at their invitation. After that initial interview with A.H., they determined that no crime had been committed since she was eighteen years old at the time of the interaction between her and Moreno. Detective Austin recalled that A.H. confirmed the information supplied earlier by Dr. Elliott of the Center. In particular, A.H. confirmed and admitted that a sexual relationship had existed with Moreno. She also indicated that she had strong feelings for Moreno. As result of that conversation, Detective Austin determined to speak with Moreno to confirm the relationship. Moreno did confirm it. Moreno was sixty-three years old at the time. His conclusion was that all of the allegations were confirmed, there was no crime, and the investigation concluded. Detective Austin indicated on cross-examination that it is not unusual for five troopers to be involved in any investigation since some of them may only just have been part of the process after having taken a phone call.

A.H.

A.H. also testified in this matter. She is now twenty years old. She was born on October 10, 1993. She completed her vocational studies at the Center in June 2012, at a time when she was then eighteen years old, but she actually graduated from Vineland High School at that time. As a result, as of October 2011, she would have been eighteen years old. Respondent Ronald Moreno was her teacher during her junior and senior years at the Center, at which time he taught her in the area of law enforcement. She was also part of the school honor guard at the Center which included marching and discipline. There were six to seven members of the team at any given time. They practiced approximately three times per week during school hours at the time that other students practiced law enforcement techniques. In both of A.H.'s years on the team, there were three female students on the team, which included herself, A.C. and one other female student. They never practiced on weekends. They attended two trips during her senior year, which included a trip to Somerset, NJ to the Skills USA competition and then a trip to Washington, D.C. in April 2012 to participate in a police event.

During the Somerset skills trip, she indicated that she had not been feeling well during the two-day/one-night trip since she has epilepsy and suffers with grand mal seizures. She noted that during her junior year she had actually been hospitalized for it. She roomed with two other girls at the Holiday Inn in Somerset, New Jersey. She brought with her a blue shirt and black pants for the competition. After the competition, a party was planned for that evening so she changed at the hotel, packed, and headed for the party and the awards ceremony. On the way into the awards ceremony she was overwhelmed and had to be escorted to another room by Moreno and other students. After the ceremony they left for home and she sat with Moreno. She was feeling better at the time. She called her stepfather to pick her up but he was drunk so she asked Moreno to give her a ride home, because her mother cannot drive. Before she did so A.H. gave the head chaperone Bonnie Marano a hug and then she drove off with Moreno to her house, which was fifteen minutes away, where he dropped her off. He did not walk her to the door.

She also noted that during their junior year, Moreno had put his cell phone number on the blackboard on the first day of school so that anyone could access him. She does not recall her cell phone number which she had at the time. She did admit that she did text Moreno in her senior year, especially when she was depressed. She had had no relationship with her own father and her relationship with her own mother was also not good. She now works in a diner.

The honor guard trip to Washington, D.C. was held to honor Police Week and fallen police officers. The chaperones included Moreno and the bus driver, Mr. Gambino, and his wife. They all stayed at the Wingate Hotel where A.H. bunked with A.C. and S.B. She felt much better on this trip. At one point they celebrated the birthday of A.C. at a local Italian restaurant. A.H. wore a white dress. She admitted that when she was questioned by the State Police about that dinner, she told them that Moreno had "felt her up." At the same time A.H. testified she denied that he actually put his hand up her dress or that he engaged in any improprieties with her at the dinner or any other time on the trip. On the bus trip home, she claimed that she sat with A.C. the entire way and denied ever sitting with Moreno at anytime on the trip home. She claimed that she did not know that A.C. had looked at her cell phone on that trip home. When she was shown the bulleted comments in Exhibit P-6, she claimed that she had never seen them before and denied ever sending or receiving any text messages to or from Moreno at all. She indicated the phone never left her possession at any time and that she had no reason to know why A.C. said those things about her. They did not have any reason to have ill will between them. A.H. also indicated that neither A.C. nor anyone else ever came to her to question her or to say that they had seen such messages on her phone. She claimed that she had been located in an aisle seat on the bus and recalls having fallen asleep on the trip home with A.C. The date of May 15, 2012, was the date of the return trip from Washington.

After that trip, Bonnie Marano and the school nurse spoke to A.H. several times and indicated that they were her friends and wanted her to be okay. All of this made her suspicious. A couple days later, on her way to her allergist, a lady she still lives with called her and told her that a police officer had called looking for her. The next thing she knew, a State police detective called her on the phone and then met her at her doctor's office at which time the trooper took her car keys and her phone. A.H. eventually got her car keys back and she followed him into the State police barracks at which time she was told that Moreno was already inside "confessing;" whatever it was, she did not know. A.C. was then met by three State troopers who told her that she did not do anything wrong. She claimed that she made "stuff up" with them because they said that what she had told them initially was not true. A.C. denies ever having had sex with Moreno at anytime but admitted that she did tell the troopers about having had feelings for him. She also admitted that she had told the State police about Moreno putting his hand up her dress but maintained that it was also a lie.

After the events, it seemed like no one would talk to her. But her fellow classmates would leave notes about them wanting to have their teacher Moreno back in school. A.H. did not go back to school during the last week even though Moreno was no longer her teacher, since he had been let go from school. She admitted that she did text Moreno after that because she needed someone to talk to and that he listened to her while she was depressed.

On cross-examination, A.H. was asked about the Somerset, New Jersey Skills USA competition. She admitted that she had left her hotel room but that she was only trying to wake everyone up to get ready for the day's activities, including Moreno. She also admitted that she did rest her head on his arm at some point during the evening ceremony but she denied putting her hand on him on the way home. They returned at approximately 11:00 p.m. and she admitted that he did drive her home.

A.H. returned for additional examination at the January 30, 2014, hearing and cross-examination was continued at that time. When shown the State Police report of their investigation (P-16) she denied having made any statement about having feelings for Moreno, which were contained in that report. A.H. then denied having made any of the statements at all to the State Police. On redirect examination she stated that Moreno did not put his hand on her at the Washington, D.C. dinner. She claimed that during the questioning by the State Police, in frustration, she had agreed with the State Police that whenever Moreno had said to the State Police she agreed with. She also claimed that during the dinner Moreno actually sat between two boys, and she drew a sketch which illustrated the seating positions of the parties at that dinner. (R-2.) She once again contended that she never sat with Moreno on the bus trip home from Washington. He also never drove her home that time. A.H.'s boyfriend at the time, J.K., took her home. On recross-examination, A.H. admitted that she would text Moreno a lot at school. And on one occasion Moreno and his family even came to her diner where she worked. In view of her very difficult background and upbringing, A.H. had no one else to turn to except for Moreno who was the only male figure in her life who could provide her with appropriate emotional support. For example, at one time in March or April 2012, A.H. ran out of her anti-depressant medicine so she contacted Moreno who helped her get to a community health care doctor, who was able to treat her for suicidal and anxiety problems. As a result, A.H. was not surprised about the amount of text messages which were generated between them. That package of messages and message summary was produced by the Deputy Attorney General at the hearing. (P-18, 19 and 20.) She indicated that none of the text messages were about sex.

Ronald Moreno

Ronald Moreno testified on his own behalf. He is presently sixty-five years old. A 1967 high school graduate, he attended Rutgers University at Camden where he majored in computer science and criminal justice, ending in 1974. After serving in and ultimately receiving his honorable discharge as result of his engagement in Search and Rescue Operations in the United States Air Force, he joined the Camden Police Department in 1972, where he rose to the rank of lieutenant before completing his twenty-five years of service in 1997. He has been married since 1989 and is the parent of three children. Upon his retirement from the police department, he became a member of the Center in 1997 and worked there in tenured status until 2012. At that time Dina Elliott became the superintendent of the facility in January 2012. Prior to her arrival Moreno had never been involved with any discipline whatsoever. After the incidents which were directed against him in March and April 2012, he chose to resign because (1) he became upset because he had been suspended due to purported inappropriate text messaging, despite not even knowing the contents; (2) developing high anxiety and high blood pressure as a result of those charges; (3) having a daughter at a residential facility; (4) it wasn't worth it to jeopardize the students at the Center, and (5) he already had a police pension and one from military service. Moreno made the decision without any legal advice whatsoever. He also found that that the teacher who was appointed to replace him was a retired State trooper and he had been told that Superintendent Elliott intended to have a State trooper on the job.

The honor guard was an extracurricular activity which Moreno started in 2011. He did not personally select the members of the guard, and that included A.H. He also noted that A.H. was one of his students during her junior and senior years. His class composition included students who were with him for a half-day in a receiving-district setting after having spent the earlier part of the day in their regular district schools. He recalled that A.H. participated in the Skills USA competition in the spring of 2012 along with K.C., who was her boyfriend at the time. They both wanted to go and wound up training together for the event. They were transported to and from the event on a bus. A.H. sat with him Moreno both ways. But she was never alone with Moreno in his room at the event. Moreno first saw A.H. on the day of the skills competition when she knocked on his door to wake him up. An awards banquet was scheduled for that evening. However, upon their arrival at the banquet, A.H. felt ill, which was compounded by the fact that the banquet hall was packed shoulder-to- shoulder with people. As a result, he and A.H. moved to a side room for a while but then returned to the main room. Moreno admits that she put her head on his shoulder in a "dozy" fashion when they were back in the banquet room. She also followed him when he got up to get her water in the back of the room. They both returned to their original seats. After the ceremony, A.H. sat next to him on the way home after they were underway for barely ten minutes. Sometime into the trip, A.H. called her mother about the pickup but found out that her stepfather was then intoxicated and could not drive. At that point, A.H. could not go home with K.C. due to a breakdown in their relationship. So Moreno drove her home, carried her bags to her house, and then left her there. Thereafter, Superintendent Elliott asked him about the drive home and reminded him that it was against policy to drive a student home. As a consequence, Moreno never drove her home any time after that. Dr. Elliott nonetheless sanctioned him with a written reprimand for the incident involving the drive home.

Moreno then testified about the honor guard trip to Washington, D.C. in May 2012. He personally arranged the trip which was to last approximately five days. The honor guard routinely practiced twice a week to get ready. They were transported back and forth by a school bus which was driven by an off-duty Washington Township police officer, whose wife also served as a chaperone on the trip. On the trip down Moreno sat alone in the front seat. During the dinner at the Italian restaurant to celebrate A.C.'s birthday Moreno confirmed the seating arrangement which had been testified to by A.H. except that A.C. was directly across from him and not the other female student. He denied ever touching A.H. during the dinner. Moreno also indicated that A.H. never sat with him on the way back on the bus. Instead, she sat with A.C. and he recalled that she fell asleep on A.C. He indicated he had no contact with A.H. other than seeing her on the bus. Upon their return to the school, Moreno went back into the school since it was still in session and it was still daylight hours. Sometime thereafter, which he recalled may have been two weeks later, he was summoned to the office of Superintendent Elliott where he was confronted by two State Police troopers. Dr. Elliott read a letter to Moreno suspending him for text messaging he had purportedly done with A.H.. He then left with one of the State troopers after he was searched. They took his cell phone and keys, handcuffed him, and one of them escorted him to their car where they waited approximately twenty minutes before the second trooper emerged from the building (after remaining there with Superintendent Elliott) before they transported him to the State Police barracks in Bridgeton. Moreno was not Mirandized but was left locked in a room for a couple of hours before the troopers reappeared. At that time the two State troopers (detectives) appeared and said that A.H. had "confessed." They then said there were going to be no charges against him since everything had been consensual, but they still wanted to confirm that the stories matched, relating to Moreno having his hand on her leg and up her dress. This questioning went on for another hour. Moreno was also told that although there were no charges being brought by the State Police, the school was still in the process of investigating the matter. He felt that there was trickery involved in this process in the manner in which they tried to question him about the events. The troopers never asked him for a statement. There was no tape recording and there was no sign-off of any summary of any exchange between him and the two detectives. Moreno only first saw the State Police report (P-16) when his attorney showed it to him. When shown page 36 of that report by his attorney at the due process hearing, he denied having made any of the admissions which were contained in that recitation. After the interview process was completed, the troopers told him that he could ride back to his car with A.H. The troopers never drove him back themselves.

Regarding the text messaging, Moreno indicated that every year for two years he has given his cell phone number to all of his students which is placed on the classroom blackboard at the beginning of the semester. He has never been aware of any school prohibition on giving out either one's cell phone or home phone number. Regarding A.H., she had significant emotional issues, like 80% of the other students in his classes and some of whom were also special education students, all of which caused him to text her frequently. A.H. had had three suicide attempts. He personally interceded in one of her suicide attempts which involved her having a gun at a lake. In a second attempt, A.H. wanted to take pills and did not want to live anymore but he convinced her to dump them into a toilet. In a third case, Moreno was aware that she had injected heroin in her leg and threatened an overdose. The bulk of the exchanges he had with her were generated pursuant to text messages accordingly. She also pleaded with him about her mother's brother having molested her and was concerned than her mother smoked marijuana on a daily basis. All of this bothered A.H. and she shared those thoughts with Moreno routinely. As a result, all in all he wanted to "keep her alive" since her upsets became an everyday type of issue. There was, as he described it "one hump over another." In the process, Moreno, as well as his wife, has done a lot of social work in his life, including having hosted Russian exchange students. His wife knew all along that he would get text messages from various students. Moreno also noted that he had previously texted A.C. regarding her own personal, mostly social, problems and had her phone number accordingly. He even attended two of her motorcycle events and worked with a photographer to record the events for her. At the same time, Moreno attended events on behalf of other students as well, such as N.M.'s wrestling matches and other students' basketball games and ROTC competitions. As he described it, he would "go that extra mile" for special education students as well as single parent family situations because he wanted to show those students that he really cared for them. He still does mission volunteer work in Philadelphia. He indicated that he never did anything inappropriate with A.H. At the same time, he had noticed that there appeared to be some tensions between A.C. and A.H., the latter of whom was very popular. In the process, Moreno would observe A.C. make faces and mimic A.H. She would also make the point of talking to A.H.'s boyfriend, K.C., a lot, except when A.H. was present.

Regarding Dina Elliott, Moreno felt that she was initially very open with him and even wanted her husband to check out his program at school. But she also thought that there should be a greater emphasis on State Police practices and not corrections procedures which he had been conducting in his class. It was Moreno's understanding that Elliott's husband is a sergeant in the Division of State Police and is the supervisor over the two detectives who investigated him and A.H. His replacement as an instructor at the Center was a retired State trooper. He even wrote to the Division of State Police regarding information about the "unfounded investigative report" relative to his matter

On cross-examination, Moreno indicated that he never recalled ever seeing any signed copies of the permission forms which were utilized on the Skills USA conference trip but he assumed that there was probably a briefing by Bonnie Marano with the students beforehand regarding the requirements of the trip. He helped her apply the curfew tape to all the students' doors after they were bedded down at the hotel. After the students checked out of their rooms the next morning they placed their luggage in their respective chaperones' rooms so that they could then go to the competition, change their clothes as necessary later on, and attend the dinner before the entire group left for home. Once they arrived back at the school late that night Moreno admitted that he drove A.H. to her house. It was his contention that it was a common practice that either a chaperone or another student would drive a student home. No one ever called the police to perform that function even though the permission slips indicate that would be the protocol. At the same time Moreno admitted that he never consulted with any of the other chaperones before driving A.H. home that night. He also acknowledged that in his answers to the interrogatories which were preferred against him in this matter, he failed to mention that he did receive a discipline for that infraction even though the question was, "Set forth in detail any other disciplinary action, including verbal or written warnings, taken against you during the course of your career in education." (P-21, DOE page 58 at question 9.) He only stated that he had no discipline by stating, "None that I remember." (P-21, DOE page 72 at answer 9.) His follow-up explanation at the due process hearing was that the official written warning which was generated as a result of that incident was part of this current matter not any prior matter.

He also contended that although Dr. Elliott was well aware of the emotional issues involving A.H. and that he was aware that the guidance department met with her at least once a week in that regard, Moreno told Dr. Elliott that he was also counseling her about her issues. On further cross-examination, he was directed to the text message log which was culled from the text messages between him and A.H. (P-20). Regarding the high volume of text messages which were generated in the afternoon of Friday, April 27, 2012, he surmised that he was probably off from work that day but he had no actual facts to support that assertion. Ordinarily, the students, including A.H., would be in class with him in the afternoon session at that time.

He also maintained that A.C. was mistaken about him having put his hand up A.H.'s dress. As a result, all of the allegations which were contained in the State Police report (P-16) were inaccurate, totally false and wrong. The troopers were, as he described it, "lying" when they wrote their report about the investigation. In addition, he volunteered that A.C. never entered his room the morning of the Skills USA competition.

On redirect examination, he noted that the trip permission slip instructions indicated that all chaperones were to have cell phone numbers available for the use of anyone who tried to reach them "during the trip." (P-2.)

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

As indicated herein above, the State Board of Examiners of the New Jersey Department of Education issued an Order to Show Cause regarding a revocation proceeding against Ronald Moreno, who is the holder of (1) Teacher of Elementary School Certificate of Eligibility, dated July, 1994; (2) Teacher of Data Processing Certificate of Eligibility, dated July, 1994; (3) Teacher of Computer Science Technology Certificate of Eligibility, dated September 1994; (4) Teacher of Elementary School certificate, dated July 1997; (5) Teacher of Data Processing certificate, dated July, 1997; (6) Teacher of Computer Science Technology certificate, issued in July 1997 and; (7) Teacher of Law Enforcement certificate, issued in October 2010. The Order to Show Cause was issued on November 30, 2012, after which he appealed on January 15, 2013. It was based upon information received from the Center, which reported that Moreno had retired from his teaching position following allegations that he had been involved in an inappropriate relationship with a student.

In accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38, the Board of Examiners is the State agency entrusted with the issuance and revocation of certificates to teach in public schools and, as such, it may revoke or suspend a certificate of any certificate holder on the basis of "demonstrated inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause." N.J.A.C. 6A: 9-17.5.

"Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

The Board of Examiners bears the burden of proof relative to the charges and which must be established by a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 12 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974). Determining whether a charge has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence usually resolves itself down to a credibility determination by the finder of fact. Credibility contemplates an assessment of a witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it hangs together with other evidence. In re Schulman, 92 N.J.A.R. 2nd (BDS) 16, 27 (citing Carbo v. United States, 314 F. 2nd 718 (9th Cir. 1963)).

Further, the Board must show by a preponderance of the competent relevant and credible evidence that respondent engaged in the conduct alleged in the Order to Show Cause. In re Papadaniil, EDE 8H21-00, Initial Decision (March 13, 2002), adopted Bd. of Exam'r (May 9, 2002) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html.

In relevant part, the Order to Show Cause in this matter charged respondent Moreno as follows:

> [T]he [Center/ reported that Moreno had placed his hand on the leg of a student, A.H., during a dinner outing on a school trip. Another student alleged that she read text messages between A.H. and Moreno which included references to Moreno being "hard," lotion/soap, animals having sex, a discussion mentioning that A.H. got her period, and Moreno asking "Have you ever had sex while you had your period?" and a text from Moreno regarding the end of the trip and taking A.H. home and parking "out of view of the security cameras."

In addition, the Center had also advised the Board that in interviews with the Division the State Police both A.H. and Moreno had admitted that they were engaged in a consensual relationship which began after the student's eighteenth birthday and that the State Police did not file any charges against Moreno accordingly.

Based upon the foregoing, the Board of Examiners found just cause for consideration of the revocation of Moreno's certificates based upon his conduct in engaging in an inappropriate relationship with a student. The Order to Show Cause ordered Moreno to show why his various certificates should not be revoked under the circumstances.

Where proof consists primarily of witness testimony, a careful analysis of credibility is necessary in order to make critical findings of fact and the choice of accepting or rejecting the witness' testimony or credibility rests with the finder of facts. See Freud v. Davis, 64 N.J. Super. 242, 246 (App. Div. 1960). "Firmly entrenched in decisional law and court rule is the concept that the question of credibility is preeminently one for the trial court, since it hears the case, sees and observes the witnesses, hears them testify, and has better opportunity to judge their credibility than the reviewing court." Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1, 5 (App. Div. 1961) (citing Capozzoli v. Capozzoli, 1 N.J. 540 (1949)). For testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation of mankind that it can be approved as probable under the circumstances. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16

N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, supra, (both citing In re Perrone's Estate, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950)). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness even though not contradicted when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." In re Perrone, supra, 5 N.J. at 521-522; See also D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997).

The Board of Examiners has repeatedly deferred to the findings of the administrative law judge in due process hearings. In re Certificates of Schiavo, EDE 08425-04, State Board of Examiners (May 4, 2006); In re the Certificates of Ferriera, EDE 03390-04, State Board of Examiners (September 22, 2005); In re Certificates of Grendysa, EDE 00985-03, State Board of Examiners (January 17, 2008).

Credibility is defined as: "The quality that makes something (as a witness or some evidence) worthy of belief." Blacks Law Dictionary (Ninth Edition).

Accordingly, credibility does not mean determining who is telling the truth, but rather requires a determination of whose testimony is "worthy of belief" based upon numerous factors. Credibility is not based on who presented the most witnesses. Instead, it is "the interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness [that] may affect his credibility and justify the . . . [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony." State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div. 1952), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The process entails observing the witnesses' demeanor, evaluating their ability to recall specific details, evaluating the consistency of their testimony under direct and cross-examination, determining the significance of any inconsistent statements and otherwise gathering a sense of their candor with the court. Thus, "[c]redibility involves more than demeanor. It apprehends the over-all evaluation of testimony in the light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it hangs together with other evidence." Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963).

It is in light of all the above that I have considered the proofs presented in this matter. In the process, I have attached the appropriate weight to the respective testimonies of all the witnesses, and their interests in the outcome of this matter. In that regard, I note that, as to this first incident, the principal Skills USA chaperone, Bonnie Marano, was in the key position to make certain observations regarding the conduct by Moreno which formed the backdrop of the accumulated inappropriate interactions between Moreno and A.H. during the overnight stay, the full day at the competition as well as on the drive home to the Center and back to the home of A.H. Although Moreno was ultimately only cited by the Center with having violated the drive home policy, his clearly repeatedly physically close contact with A.H. during those two days was improvident at best and created the opportunity for the appearance of unbecoming conduct in his role as a teacher with a student. His recognition and testimonial acknowledgement that the student was already undergoing school counseling for emotional issues did not translate into him being allowed to assume a similar role with her. If anything, it should have served as a sizable red flag for him to ensure that the student would not misconstrue any of his best noble intentions, which could have further added to and/or compromised her apparent deep seated emotional dilemmas and/or confusions. As a result, Moreno's repeated close-quarter interactions with A.H. at the Skills USA competition were clearly inappropriate and ill-advised.

In that regard, and after considering the testimony of each of the parties therein, I FIND that the relevant facts are that Moreno and A.H. did make admissions and admitted to Marano that A.H. had been in Moreno's room in the early morning, which occurred after A.H. violated the field trip protocol by breaking out of her assigned room before she was supposed to leave it with the other female students. Their respective denials of her status in his room in the early morning at the due process hearing were not believable under the circumstances since I am satisfied that Bonnie Marano had no vested interest in attempting to fabricate the occurrence of those admissions, while, at the same time, both Moreno and A.H. clearly did have such an interest since they were apparently cultivating a personal, close relationship for their respective reasons. Under those circumstances, it is no wonder that Marano was, as she described it, "frantic" when she discovered that the tape security to the girls' hotel room had been broken in the early morning hours, which resulted in her conducting an immediate frenzied search for A.H. and which search ended at the entrance to Moreno's hotel room. It is also noteworthy that the statements made by A.H. to the State Police during the ensuing investigation indicated that she began to have feelings with Moreno after that class trip in March 2012, and that those feelings began with a hug she had had with Moreno during a study session while at that class trip. (P-16 at DOE page 35.) This further corroborates the fact that Moreno began to loom as a key figure in the eyes of A.H. at that time.

The subsequent interactions between Moreno and A.H. during the rest of that day were also equally disturbing and unsettling. They all illustrated an unhealthy and inappropriate nexus between a teacher and student, the perception of which reflected unbecoming conduct by Moreno. In that regard, I FIND that the afternoon presence of A.H. in the male-only hotel room (which was now used as a holding area for the luggage of and as a changing room for the male students in the afternoon) which was in the custody and control of Moreno, and who later admitted to Marano was also in the room at the same time, was highly inappropriate and totally inexcusable. Had A.H. been so sick and incapacitated as to have had need to rest and recover from some illness at the time, she should have been directed to Bonnie Marano immediately by Moreno. Instead she wound up in his room where Marano found her clothed and alone on top of the made-up bed. Soon thereafter, Moreno admitted to Marano that he was in the bathroom when Marano arrived.

Then, A.H.'s physical reliance upon Moreno at the dinner reception caused another student to question Marano by asking her if she thought that the face fanning interaction between the student and instructor was "creepy." This was followed up by A.H. later resting her head on the shoulder of Moreno during the ceremony and by her then getting up and following him out of the room at which point Marano overheard another student immediately comment, to the effect, "what's up with those two?" The trip home on the small bus was another example of the student A.H. resting her head on the shoulder of Moreno (also observed briefly by Marano as she did a head count before driving back separately) and was equally unsettling, disturbing and inappropriate. All of this was followed up by Moreno quickly taking A.H. home from the school in violation of the announced and agreed-to policy regarding acceptable transportation options. Based upon all of the foregoing, there is no justifiable excuse to have allowed for the sum total of those actions on the Skills USA trip by Moreno, as so credibly reported by Bonnie Marano (P-1) under the circumstances. All of those actions by Moreno reflected unbecoming conduct by a teacher with a student. The issuance of only a written warning by the Center cannot diminish the seriousness of his infraction regarding the drive home policy, much less the sum total of his excessively close and inappropriate contact with A.H. at the various denoted times during the preceding two days. And I so FIND. Further, all of those interactions reflected poorly upon Moreno as a proper role model and served to add to his highly diminished overall credibility.

There was also an issue in this matter raised regarding the text messaging which was generated between Moreno and A.H. over time. In that regard there was a focus on the text messaging exchange among the two of them between April 18 and May 11, 2012, which consisted of 1,857 text messages. (P-18, 19 and 20.) Since the contents of those messages could not be ascertained, retrieved or produced at hearing, one cannot conclude that an inappropriate relationship was reflected in those exchanges. However, it is the sheer massive volume of them alone which casts doubt regarding any innocent relationship between a teacher and student. Further, many of the text messages occurred at all times of day and night, including at 3:21 a.m. on April 19, 2012. That most certainly raises additional questions regarding the existence of a unhealthy relationship between a teacher and student. In addition, it is most curious that a number of exchanged text messages even occurred during hours when it was presumed that Moreno would have been teaching the law enforcement class of which A.H. was a member. Thus, even though the Board never confirmed the status of Moreno and A.H. on those occasions (i.e., whether he or she was absent from school or whether or not school was actually in session on those occasions), the inference which was attached to those proofs under the circumstances was never successfully rebutted by respondent. As a result, I am satisfied and FIND that the accumulated and vast amount of text exchanges was highly excessive and inappropriate, and, in the process, it demonstrated unbecoming conduct by a supervising adult over a student. This would have existed regardless of whether or not the student involved manifested the level and extent of the emotional issues raised with reference to A.H. by Moreno herein. However, the fact that Moreno contends that the student had such emotional difficulties further exacerbated the seriousness of concerns about the vast number of text messages between them since Moreno clearly had no authority to assume such responsibility on her behalf. His actions in that regard went way beyond reasonable limits and reflected negatively upon his role as a teacher.

The matter involving the observations by A.C. regarding the actions by Moreno at the Washington, D.C. dinner table was also the subject of concern raised in the Order to Show Cause. A.C. contends that she saw Moreno with his hand on the leg and briefly up A.H.'s skirt. Upon observing her awareness of that event, A.C. maintained that Moreno removed his hand. Moreno denied the occurrence of that event and attempted to illustrate how A.C. could not have been able to make such an observation from her seating position. However, after examining the sketches made by A.C, N.M., and A.H., (P-17, R-1 and R-2) and considering the testimony offered, I FIND that it is entirely plausible that A.C. made those observations as she did. And in light of the fact that I found the overall testimony of A.C. to be highly credible and worthy of belief, her account of that event was accepted as being true. This also became evident when the proofs regarding the content of the text messages from A.H.'s cell phone were also evaluated in this matter since the contents of a number of those messages totally conformed with observations of the actions of Moreno putting his hand on A.H.'s leg and up her skirt. As a result, although Moreno attempted to discredit the testimony of A.C. regarding her ability to make those observations there, I FIND that those observations were sufficiently credible in their own right in view of the relative positioning and seating of the attendees at A.C.'s birthday dinner.

I am also satisfied and FIND that the petitioner has carried its burden to demonstrate that a highly inappropriate and most graphically intimate, disturbing and sexually explicit interplay of text messages occurred between Moreno and A.H. in the display of messages which was observed and scrutinized by both A.C. and N.M., the latter of whom had the password code access to the A.H.'s phone. In that regard, I FIND that all of this occurred after A.H. moved from her seat next to A.C. while the bus was stopped at a rest area in Delaware on the way home, left her cell phone behind on that seat, and then sat next to and leaned on the shoulder of Moreno during the next part of the trip. Curiously, but not surprisingly, these head-resting actions are consistent with and reminiscent of what had occurred at the Skills USA competition banquet dinner and on the ride home from Somerset. Also, athough one cannot condone the admitted snooping and spying by both of those fellow students (A.C. and N.M.) on the ride home from Washington, D.C., their indiscretions in that regard cannot excuse or diminish the scurrilous nature of the text exchanges between the teacher and student. If anything, those text messages were so outlandishly and flagrantly graphic as to make their truthfulness more believable than not under the circumstances. Further, and as noted above, some of those text messages appeared totally consistent with the observations by A.C. regarding Moreno putting his hand on A.C.'s leg and reaching up the dress of A.H. at the restaurant dinner table.

In the process, although A.H. attempted to suggest that A.C. manifested such jealousy as to cause her to fabricate the circumstances attendant to her table observations and her observed text messages on A.H.'s cell phone, I am not satisfied that A.H. has demonstrated the sufficiency of any such proofs by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The fact that, at the direction and urging of her mother, A.C. ultimately divulged her concerns to Superintendent Elliott and then recited her observations to the State Police detectives demonstrated sufficient consistency so as to make her observations credible and believable. Her testimony at hearing was also consistent with the report by Dr. Elliott. In the process, I find that it is highly unlikely and improbable that A.C. would have run the incredible risk of fabricating such a disturbing account to either Superintendent Elliott or the State Police. Further, the testimony of N.M. totally corroborated the testimony of A.C. about the content of the text messages, both of whom I found to be credible and worthy of belief under the circumstances. By contrast, both Moreno and A.H. had a highly vested interest in denying any interactions regarding the scandalous allegations of inappropriateness between the significantly older teacher and his student.

In addition, the conflicting and contradictory testimony by A.H. at the due process hearing over two days added further suspicion regarding the credibility of her responses there. By her own varying admissions and testimony, she initially testified that she had told the State Police various things about her intimate involvement with Moreno (i.e., "made things up") but then claimed on the second day of her testimony that she never did. After having closely scrutinized her responses from the hearing, I found her to be much less than credible and her testimony not worthy of belief. Her vested interest in protecting Moreno was obvious and that made her testimony dubious at best. It was also noted that it was admitted that A.H. was driven to the hearing by Moreno on both occasions, which adds greater concern for the opportunity for them to have coordinated their stories in the face of the highly credible testimony of six witnesses to the contrary prior to their individual presentations.

The charges of unbecoming conduct by Moreno were egregious and shocking since they demonstrated a highly unwholesome relationship between a teacher and student. Under those circumstances, it is entirely understandable why Superintendent Elliott and the Board at the Center acted as quickly as they did in order to address the serious allegations of such misconduct. Moreno's ongoing intimate interactions with A.H. were highly inappropriate and contrary to the good order and moral fabric of the Center. The fact that various students had their suspicions and made negative comments about them over a period of time further inflamed the good order of that institution. In addition, A.C. was so upset about what she had witnessed that she did not want to return to that school, which illustrates the adverse impact of Moreno's misconduct.

In addition, the claims and allegations by Moreno about some nefarious conspiracy to harpoon his career at the Center by Dr. Elliott and the Division of State Police were incredible at best. After having considered all the testimony in that regard, I FIND that he has failed to demonstrate and sufficiently corroborate any credible proofs to support or prove that assertion. In addition, his steadfast denial about what he told the State Police detectives and his claim that they "lied" about what was said to them by both Moreno and A.H. strains credible limits and shocks the conscious. Here is someone who had spent a career in local law enforcement and yet he had the temerity to attempt to discredit these law enforcement officers as he did. It is virtually inconceivable that these State Police officials would had jeopardized their professional status or would have exposed the Division of State Police to such scandal or malfeasance by creating facts which were not true. In the same way, and after having attached the appropriate weight of the testimony of Moreno, I found his testimony and his defenses to be incredible and lacking any viable validity whatsoever. Curiously, his wife never appeared to provide testimony regarding the relationship between him and A.H. or lend any other level of validity to his assertions regarding his purported altruistic outlook on life and volunteer involvements in his community.

Therefore, based upon all of the relevant proofs and after having attached the appropriate weight to the testimony of all the witnesses, as well as their interest in the outcome, I FIND that the bulk of the relevant facts show that Moreno engaged in an unwholesome and inappropriate relationship with A.H., as set forth in the Order to Show Cause herein.

It is also problematic that A.H. was an emotionally fragile young woman at the time, which merely added to the probability and reality of her attraction to a teacher at a time when her background of negative influences had seriously impacted upon her. The notion that she was suicidal was a horrendous burden for anyone to carry or with which to contend. But that did not give leave for Moreno to have invested in her life the way he did since the consequences of and risks attendant to such effort were so negatively significant in their own right. Needless to say, however, as I have found herein above, Moreno went well above and beyond innocent interaction and, in the process, he overstepped his authority, position and responsibility as a teacher to a very large and totally unsavory degree.

The law is generally well settled that an inappropriate contact between a teacher and a student would be found to be a sufficient basis to warrant revocation. In re The Certificates of Papadaniil, EDE 8821-00, State Board of Examiners Decision (May 9, 2002) (in which a teaching certificate was revoked predicated upon a teacher's sexual relationship with a student); In re Certificate of Cantillon, EDE 10433-06, State Board of Examiners Decision (July 17, 2008) (in which the teacher maintained an inappropriate out-of-school relationship with a seventeen-year-old female student at the school); In re Castel, EDE 5768-08, State Board of Examiners Decision (October 12, 2010) (in which a tenured teacher's contact with two middle school female students was inappropriate where he would pull the girls from their classes, would bestow additional attention on the girls, and left voicemail messages for one student which included offers to "hang out", "party" and "go to dinner"; In re Certificates of Nieves, State Board of Examiners (March 2, 2006), aff'd., SB No. 19-06 (N.J. Bd. of Educ. December 6, 2006) aff'd. per curiam, No. A-2627-06T3, 2008 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 2568 (App. Div. April 7, 2008), in which a teacher engaged in an exchange of inappropriate and suggestive notes during class with an eighth-grade student.

Thus, while I am cognizant of the potential adverse impact that these findings and conclusions can have on Moreno and his future career plans, one cannot change the facts which have been presented in this matter. He violated his role as a teacher over a student and demonstrated unbecoming conduct, which adds to the problematic nature of his supervisory role as a teacher over students.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based upon all the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner Board of Examiners has demonstrated unbecoming conduct by respondent Ronald Moreno by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

It is ORDERED that all of the teaching credentials listed herein of respondent Ronald Moreno are hereby REVOKED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS for consideration.

IN THE MATTER OF	:	NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
THE CERTIFICATES OF	:	STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS
RONALD MORENO	:	ORDER OF REVOCATION
_____	:	DOCKET NO: 1213-107

At its meeting of September 21, 2012, the State Board of Examiners (Board) reviewed information it had received from the Cumberland County Technical Education Center (CCTEC) regarding Ronald Moreno. CCTEC reported that Moreno retired from his position following allegations that he was involved in an inappropriate relationship with a student. Specifically, CCTEC alleged that Moreno had placed his hand on the leg of a student, A.H., during a dinner outing on a school trip. Another student alleged that she read text messages between A.H. and Moreno which included references to Moreno being "hard," lotion/soap, animals having sex, a discussion mentioning that A.H. got her period and Moreno asking "Have you ever had sex while you had your period?' and a text from Moreno regarding the end of the trip and taking A.H. home and parking "out of view of the security cameras." CCTEC also informed the Board that in interviews with the State Police, both A.H. and Moreno admitted that they were engaged in a consensual sexual relationship which began after the student's 18th birthday. The State Police did not file any charges against Moreno. Moreno currently holds Teacher of Elementary School and Teacher of Data Processing Certificates of Eligibility, both issued in July 1994, a Teacher of Computer Science Technology Certificate of Eligibility, issued in September 1994, Teacher of Elementary School, Teacher of Data Processing and Teacher of Computer Science Technology certificates, all issued in July 1997 and a Teacher of Law Enforcement certificate, issued in October 2010. After reviewing the above information, at its November 30, 2012 meeting, the Board voted to issue an Order to Show Cause to Moreno as to why his certificates should not be revoked.

The Board sent Moreno the Order to Show Cause by regular and certified mail on December 5, 2012. The Order provided that Moreno must file an Answer within 30 days. Moreno responded on December 21, 2012. In his Answer, Moreno stated that he did not know what CCTEC had reported to the Board, but denied all of the allegations in the Order to Show Cause as to his conduct. (Answer, ¶¶ 3, 4). He also denied that there was cause to consider revoking his certificates and left the Board to its proofs. (Answer, ¶ 5).

Since there were material facts in dispute, the Board transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case. Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) John R. Futey heard the matter on September 25, 26, and November 19, 2013 as well as on January 30, 2014. The record closed on April 4, 2014, and the ALJ issued an Initial Decision on May 19, 2014. In the Matter of the Certificates of Ronald L. Moreno, Dkt. No. EDE 944-13 (Initial Decision, May 19, 2014).

In that decision, ALJ Futey found that, in March 2012, while on a school field trip, A.H. violated protocol by leaving the hotel room she shared with other female students prior to the time she was allowed and wound up in Moreno's hotel room, where she was eventually discovered by the female chaperone, Bonnie Marano. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 26). The ALJ also found A.H.'s presence in Moreno's hotel room later in the afternoon while he was in the bathroom "highly inappropriate and totally inexcusable." Id. at 27. ALJ Futey determined that there was "no justifiable excuse" for Moreno's actions on that field trip including, allowing A.H. to rest her head on his shoulder during an awards ceremony and while riding on the bus home, and driving A.H. home once the bus arrived back at the school. Id. at 27, 28. The ALJ concluded that "all of those actions by Moreno reflected unbecoming conduct by a teacher with a student." Id. at 28. In addition, after noting that Moreno and A.H. had exchanged 1,857 text messages between April 18 and May 11, 2012, the ALJ stated that he found the "accumulated and vast amount of text exchanges was highly excessive and inappropriate, and, in the process, it demonstrated unbecoming conduct by a supervising adult over a student." Ibid. ALJ Futey also found credible the testimony of A.C. and N.M., fellow students of A.H. Id. at 29-30. A.C. had testified that, at a dinner in Washington, D.C. during a field trip chaperoned by Moreno, she observed Moreno put his hand on A.H.'s leg and briefly up her skirt. Id. at 29. N.M. and A.C. both testified that, on that same trip, they looked at A.H.'s cell phone, which she had left on her bus seat after she went to sit next to Moreno. Ibid. Both A.C. and N.M. testified that they saw many sexually explicit text messages between A.H. and Moreno on A.H.'s phone. Ibid. Although ALJ Futey did not condone A.C. and N.M.'s "snooping and spying," he noted that "their indiscretions in that regard cannot excuse or diminish the scurrilous nature of the text exchanges between the teacher and student." Id. at 30. In contrast to A.C. and N.M.'s credible testimony, the ALJ found that A.H. "to be much less credible and her testimony not worthy of belief." Id. at 31. ALJ Futey determined that A.H. had a vested interest in protecting Moreno, which made her testimony "dubious at best." Ibid.

After assessing the evidence and "having attached the appropriate weight to the testimony of all the witnesses," ALJ Futey concluded that the facts demonstrated that Moreno had engaged in "an unwholesome and inappropriate relationship with A.H., as set forth in the Order to Show Cause herein." Id. at 32. After determining that the Board had demonstrated the allegations of unbecoming conduct against Moreno by a preponderance of the credible evidence, ALJ Futey ordered the revocation of his certificates. Id. at 33. Neither party filed Exceptions in the case.

The Board must now determine whether to adopt, modify or reject the Initial Decision in this matter. At its meeting of July 15, 2014, the Board reviewed the Initial Decision. After full and fair consideration of the Decision, the Board voted to adopt the Initial Decision.

There is no doubt that the ALJ is in the best position to render credibility determinations in this matter. Accordingly, the Board will defer to those findings. As noted above, after assessing the evidence and the credibility of the witnesses, ALJ Futey concluded that the Board had amply demonstrated that Moreno engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher vis-a-vis his inappropriate relationship with A.H., which warranted the revocation of his certificates. (Initial Decision, slip op. at 33).

"Teachers ... are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of ... school children. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment." Tenure of Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321. Unfitness to hold a position in a school system may be shown by one incident, if sufficiently flagrant. Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J.L. 369, 371 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd, 131 N.J.L. 326 (E & A 1944). In this case, Moreno's action of inappropriately touching a student's leg and putting his hand up her skirt, without more, certainly satisfies that requirement. His added behavior of exchanging sexually explicit texts with her, allowing her to rest her head on his shoulder on numerous occasions, allowing her to enter his hotel room while on school field trips and driving her home from a field trip only amplifies the litany of his offenses. Moreno's conduct amply demonstrates that he crossed a boundary that should exist between teacher and student. Finally, although ALJ Futey recognized, as does the Board, the potential damage a revocation would have on Moreno's future career plans, ultimately it is Moreno who is responsible for his conduct as a whole and that conduct warrants revocation. The Board therefore adopts the Initial Decision in its entirety.

Accordingly, on July 15, 2014, the Board voted to adopt the Initial Decision and ordered to revoke Moreno's certificates. On this 24th day of July 2014, the Board formally adopted its written decision to adopt the Initial Decision in this matter, and it is therefore ORDERED that Ronald Moreno's Teacher of Elementary School, Teacher of Data Processing, and Teacher of Computer Science Technology Certificates of Eligibility, and his Teacher of Elementary School, Teacher of Data Processing, Teacher of Computer Science Technology and Teacher of Law Enforcement certificates are hereby revoked, effective immediately. It is further ORDERED that Moreno return his certificates to the Secretary of the State Board of Examiners, Office of Licensure, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625-0500 within 30 days of the mailing date of this decision.

NEW PROVIDENCE SCHOOL DISTRICT

Consistent with the requirements pursuant to NJAC 6A: 3-5-6

Settlement of this case is justified by the need for an expeditious resolution. The parties engaged in sophisticated motion practice. SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Education Association (Association) sought declaratory and injunctive relief to compel respondent Cami Anderson – Superintendent of the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark – to attend all Newark Public Schools Advisory Board (SAB) meetings in order to comply with her obligations pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(b). An emergent relief hearing was held on May 21, 2014 in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and petitioners' request for emergent relief was subsequently denied by the Commissioner on July 23, 2014. Respondents filed a motion for summary decision, which was opposed by the petitioners.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; contrary to petitioners' assertions, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(a) and (b) do not clearly state that a State-Operated School District Superintendent is required to appear at board meetings; rather, the statute states that the superintendent may meet with the board as frequently as necessary; there is no statutory requirement that the superintendent meet with the board; meetings are entirely within the discretion of the State-appointed superintendent; there is no dispute that reports to the board have been made by Superintendent Anderson or by some individual acting in that capacity; the petitioners' attempt to require the superintendent to attend SAB meetings is misplaced as the statute clearly does not mandate that the superintendent personally attend each SAB meeting; and the superintendent has fulfilled all of her requirements under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(a) and (b). The ALJ concluded that the respondents are entitled to summary decision, and ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioners and the District's reply thereto.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons outlined in the Initial Decision – that the petitioners' application for injunctive relief to compel the Superintendent to attend all School Advisory Board meetings should be dismissed. Moreover, the Commissioner finds the petitioners' exceptions unpersuasive, largely reflecting arguments and objections previously raised before the ALJ and clearly taken into account by him in granting summary decision in favor of the District. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondents have filed a Motion seeking Summary Decision denying and dismissing the petitioners' application for declaratory and injunctive relief compelling the respondent, Cami Anderson, the Superintendent for the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, to attend all Newark Public Schools (NPS) Advisory Board meetings in order to comply with her obligations pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(b). On May 20, 2014, petitioners filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner), who transmitted this matter to and filed with the Office of Administrative Law for emergent relief on May 21, 2014. After oral argument on June 10, 2014, an Order denying the petitioners' request for emergent relief was entered on June 11, 2014. The Commissioner denied the petitioners' request for emergent relief on July 23, 2014.

On February 2, 2015, respondents filed a Motion for Summary Decision along with the supporting documents as follows: Certification of Charlotte Hitchcock, Esq., and the Certification of Shana Don with Exhibits and a Certification of Service. On February 17, 2015, petitioners field a letter brief in opposition to the respondents' motion. Respondents filed a letter brief in reply to the opposition papers submitted by the petitioners. After reviewing the motions submitted by the parties, the record closed March 10, 2015.

A summary of the pertinent FACTS are presented as follows:

1) The District of the City of Newark is a State-Operated School District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. since 1995.

2) The District operates and administers the public schools and provides educational services to the residents thereof.

3) The petitioner, Newark Teachers Union (NTU), is the majority collective negotiations representative for all certified teaching staff members employed by the respondent with the exception of supervisory personnel.

4) Respondent, John Abeigon, is a resident and taxpayer of the City of Newark, within which the respondent School District operates and administers the public schools and provides educational services to the residents. Abeigon is the Director of Operations for the NTU.

5) A State-Operated School District Superintendent may be appointed by the State Board of Education upon the recommendation of the Commissioner of Education. Respondent, Cami Anderson, was appointed by the State Board of Education in May 2011 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35.

6) As the State District Superintendent for the District, respondent Anderson is empowered to convene and schedule meetings of the District's Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(b).

7) In the 2013-2014 school year, the District's School Advisory Board (SAB) held monthly business and regular meetings regarding the School District.

8) Superintendent Anderson scheduled and attended SAB meetings from the beginning of the school year, October 15, 2013, through February 18, 2014.

9) On January 28, 2014, the scheduled SAB meeting took place and the public comment was raucous and tumultuous. During the course of this meeting, the District was unable to properly conduct business or engage in any meaningful dialogue with the Advisory Board.

10) In response to the nature of the SAB meeting, the District issued an "Open Letter to Newark Families" on February 25, 2014. The District stated that the monthly meetings were no "longer focused on achieving educational outcomes for children" and the NPS Leadership—including Superintendent Anderson—would no longer attend these meetings "until the SAB can commit to ensuring a space conducive to open dialogue with the community."

11) In order to continue to provide the community with the reports previously delivered at the School Advisory Board meetings, the District's letter provided that "NPS will videotape its monthly update, traditionally presented at the SAB meeting and distribute it directly on its website and on Channel 77, the Newark community cable network." This open letter was posted on the SAB website on that same date.

12) In a separate statement addressing the District's decision, members of NPS Leadership published individual statements regarding the current state of the SAB meetings. The publicly available statements went on to detail the District's commitment to engagement with the community and dedication to a free, open and productive dialogue.

13) Despite the District's Open Letter, Superintendent Anderson attended the SAB meetings on March 18, 2014, and May 20, 2014. In addition, members of the NPS leadership, on behalf of Superintendent Anderson, attended subsequent monthly meetings in February, March, April and May.

14) Specifically, Charlotte Hitchcock, Esq., in her capacity as General Counsel and Chief of Staff for the District and on behalf of the Superintendent, attended SAB meetings on February 18, 2014; February 25, 2014; March 18, 2014; March 25, 2014; April 29, 2014; May 20, 2014; and May 27, 2014, subsequent to the February 25, 2014, "Open Letter." Furthermore, Arsen Zartarian, Deputy General Counsel for the District, in his capacity as the Board Secretary and Valarie Wilson, in her capacity as the District's Business Administrator, also attended the following SAB meetings: February 18, 2014; February 25, 2014; March 18, 2014; March 25, 2014; April 29, 2014; May 20, 2014; and May 27, 2014. As such, District representatives were in attendance at all SAB meetings for the 2013-2014 School Year, since the February 25, 2014 "Open Letter."

15) The State District Superintendent has continued to attend other certain meetings, provided information, reports and engage with the public, as well as her deputies and members of the NTU leadership team.

16) NTU does not necessarily represent the interests of the general Newark community, the families, students, or its taxpayers.

17) Nowhere does petitioner, Abeigon, allege that his tax funds have been used improperly by the State-Operated School District or that any tax monies have been spent by the District for invalid purposes.

Based upon the above, the respondents' motion for summary decision is considered.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Standard for Motion for Summary Decision

The New Jersey Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules (N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1, et. seq.) provide that a party may move for summary decision upon all or any of the substantive issues at any time after a case is deemed contested. Applications for a summary decision after a matter has been transmitted to the OAL must be filed with the Administrative Law Judge in accordance with applicable rules of the Office of Administrative Law. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.12(b).

Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), a summary decision may be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Ibid. The standard is substantially the same as that governing a motion under Rule 4:46-2(c) for summary judgment in civil litigation. Contini v. Bd. of Educ. of Newark, 286 N.J. Super. 106, 121 (App. Div. 1995); Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 523-36 (1995). Based on this review, the court or agency must determine "whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in light most favorable to the non-moving party in consideration of the applicable evidentiary standard, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Id. at 523.

Respondents have filed a Motion for a Summary Decision. A summary decision is appropriate in this case because there exists no genuine issue of material fact. Accordingly, a summary decision was granted based on the finding of facts and the applicable law as set forth herein.

The Appeal Made by the Petitioners Fails to Present a Viable Claim

In this case the appeal made by the petitioners claim that the State-appointed superintendent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(b) by failing to attend SAB meetings. It appears that the petitioners' claim is based on the alleged fact that Superintendent Anderson failed to attend all SAB meetings.

In 1995, the Newark Public School System was placed under State control by the Commissioner of Education pursuant to the then-applicable Public School Education Act of 1975 (PSEA). This action included the removal of the local board of education and stripping it of any authority for the operation of the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. The local board's authority was placed entirely in the hands of a State-appointed superintendent of schools. Ibid. The local school board then transformed into an "advisory committee," which has been subsequently referred to as the School Advisory Board.

In 2005, the PSEA was amended and a quality single accountability continuum (QSAC) was established, modifying the manner in which the State evaluated the thoroughness and efficiency of all public schools in the State. Under QSAC, public school districts are evaluated in five areas of district effectiveness. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-10. A school district's capacity and effectiveness are assessed through the use of "quality performance indicators." Based upon district compliance with these indicators, the Commissioner assesses "district capacity and effectiveness and place[s] the district on a performance continuum that . . . Determine[s] the type and level of oversight and technical assistance and support the district receives." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-10.

Intervention is required where the Commissioner determines, based upon a variety of factors, that there exists an "insufficient local capacity to ensure that the public school district will provide a thorough and efficient education to the students in the public school district." N.J.A.C. 6A:30-6.2(b)(5).

In a complete take over, such as Newark, the Commissioner will intervene in each of the five areas of school functioning. Here, the Commissioner appointed a "highly skilled professional" to provide oversight as the State-appointed superintendent. N.J.A.C. 6A:30-6.1. The State-appointed superintendent is authorized by State to "perform such duties and possess such powers as deemed appropriate by the Commissioner" and maintains the authority of the school board as under PSEA. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35; see also N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-38 and N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-42(A)(3).

The State-appointed superintendent has the power to perform all acts and do all things consistent with law necessary for the proper conduct, maintenance and supervision of the schools in the district. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35(e).

Despite the petitioners' claim, nowhere in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(a) and (b) does it clearly state that a State-Operated School District Superintendent is required to appear at the board meetings. As set forth in the statute, it states:

> (b) The State district superintendent may meet with the board as frequently as necessary for the effective operation of the school district. The meetings of the board shall be convened and scheduled at the direction of the State district superintendent and the State district superintendent shall determine the agenda. At the meetings, the State district Superintendent shall report to the board on all actions taken and on pending actions in a timely fashion and provide an opportunity for a full discussion by the board and by the public of those actions. Meetings shall be conducted pursuant to the provisions of the "Open Public Meetings Act." P.L. 1975, c. 231 (C.10:4-6 et seq.). On a regular basis, but no less than twice each year, the board of education shall report in writing directly to the State district superintendent concerning its assessment of the progress of the district. Copies of the report shall be forwarded to the commissioner and the State board. The State district superintendent shall make such clerical and > other resources available as are necessary for the effective operation of the board of education.

> [N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(b) (emphasis added).]

The Legislature was free to require the State district superintendent to do certain acts and in a certain manner, but did not. The only overt direction to the superintendent is that the superintendent may meet with the board. This is clearly not a statutory requirement. These meetings are entirely within the discretion of the State-appointed superintendent. The meetings of the board shall be scheduled at the direction of the State district superintendent and the State district superintendent shall determine the agenda. It is clear that Superintendent Anderson has fulfilled these requirements.

In addition, the Legislature, by statute, required that the State district superintendent to report to the board on all actions taken and on pending actions in a timely fashion. However, the statute is silent on the mode of reporting. The statute could have stated that the State district superintendent report to the board in person, but it did not so state. There is no dispute that reports to the board have been made by Superintendent Anderson or by some individual in that capacity, including the General Counsel and Chief of Staff for the District; the Deputy General Counsel for the District (Board Secretary); and the District's Business Administrator. Accordingly, the District representatives were in attendance at all SAB meetings since the February 25, 2014 "Open Letter."

From a clear reading of the statutory language, the obligations of the State-appointed superintendent are set forth should such a meeting be convened by the State district superintendent. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47. The petitioners attempt to require the State-appointed superintendent to attend SAB meeting is misplaced. It is the State-appointed superintendent who has the discretion to convene such meetings and should such meetings be called to order, then the superintendent must perform certain duties at such meetings. The statute clearly does not mandate that the State-appointed superintendent personally attend the SAB meeting. Petitioners have failed to cite any properly binding case or statute to this effect.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-47(a), the board of education has only the right, powers and privileges of an advisory board. Gillespie v. Dep't of Educ., 397 N.J. Super. 545 (App. Div. 2008), generally examining the role of the board of education in a State-operated school district under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15. All the powers and authority of the board of education are vested in the State-appointed superintendent in a district under a full state intervention. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-49(f), (g). There is no doubt that the board's authority is vested with the State-Appointed Superintendent Anderson.

In Brown v. State-Operated School District of Jersey City, 93 N.J.A.R.2d 874 (1993), an Administrative Law Judge found that:

> The takeover legislation clearly was designed to repose substantial authority in the superintendent to implement the laws and the rules of the State Board which normally would be the province of the local board of education as the Commissioner noted in the Mantone case, it is "without question that N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35(e) empowers the Superintendent to engage in all necessary activities to allow the district to be fully functional."

As set forth above, clearly Superintendent Anderson has the discretion to convene meetings with the SAB.

Lastly, the State district superintendent shall provide an opportunity for a full discussion by the board and by the public of the actions. This role too has been fulfilled by Anderson whereby meetings were scheduled, reports presented, and open discussions transpired. Superintendent Anderson attended SAB meetings in March and May 2014 and her delegates attended each and every meeting of the SAB.

During the 2013-2014 school year, the Distinct held over 100 meetings with the local community. In addition, Superintendent Anderson continued to make reports to the community at large, including the SAB, as well as attend meetings. Also, the General Counsel and Chief of Staff, as well as the Deputy General Counsel, Board

Secretary, and Business Administrator have attended SAB meetings on February 18, 2014; February 25, 2014; March 18, 2014; March 25, 2014; April 29, 2014; May 20, 2014; and May 27, 2014.

I CONCLUDE that the respondents have shown in their moving papers that they are entitled a decision denying the petitioners' appeal to require the superintendent to attend SAB meetings.

ORDER

Accordingly, I ORDER that respondents' motion for summary decision be and hereby is GRANTED. I further ORDER that petitioners' petition be DENIED and is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

State-Operated School District

Agency Docket No. 49-3/15

Ruling on Respondent's Motion to Dismiss

Tia Schneider Denenberg, Arbitrator

APPEARANCES

FOR THE PETITIONER:

Christina Michelson, Scarinci Hollenbeck

FOR THE RESPONDENT:

Nancy I. Oxfeld, Oxfeld Cohen

BACKGROUND

On November 20, 2014, the parties and the arbitrator opened hearings by telephone in the tenure charges filed by the district against Marie Ebert [Agency Docket No. 267-9/14] and agreed to postpone two other hearings scheduled for November 21 and 22. In a Ruling on Respondent's Motion to Dismiss, issued on January 30, 2015, the arbitrator dismissed the charges for failure to comply with statutory time limits. The ruling stated, in relevant part: "[T]he dismissal is without prejudice to the district's right to file charges again in a manner that fully comports with applicable statutory provisions" [at p. 19].

Subsequently, the district filed "amended" tenure charges against the respondent, alleging inefficiency and unbecoming conduct, pursuant to Section 25 and Section 8 of TEACHNJ [Agency Docket No. 49-3/15]. In a telephone conference held on April 8, 2015, the arbitrator advised the parties that, in light of her January 31, 2015, decision in Rinita Williams, SOSD of Newark [Agency Docket No. 241-8/14], she was inclined to dismiss the Section 25 charge of inefficiency. As requested, the arbitrator gave the parties permission to file submissions. Hearings were scheduled for June 11 and 12 at the offices of Scarinci Hollenbeck.

On April 20, 2015, the respondent submitted a motion to dismiss the charges. On April 30, 2015, the district replied, opposing the motion to dismiss.

DISCUSSION

The respondent asserts, among other contentions, that the district's amended tenure charges were not filed in a timely manner and, therefore, must be dismissed. The district maintains that its filing was timely and that the charges are properly before the arbitrator.

A review of the applicable statutes and regulations, along with the court's decision in Cowan [224 N.J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988)], demonstrates that: (1) once tenure charges are filed with the district, the tenured employee has 15 days to submit a written statement of position and evidence; and (2) upon receipt of the employee's statement of position and evidence, or upon expiration of the allotted 15-day time period, the district superintendent shall determine within 45 days whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges and whether such charges are sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction in salary. Here, the record demonstrates that the determination of probable cause was made within 45 days of the respondent's response to the amended tenure charges. See District's Opposition to Respondent's Motion to Dismiss, Exhibits B-H. Accordingly, I reject the respondent's claim and find that the filing of amended tenure charges was timely.

For the reasons detailed in the Williams decision and discussed with the parties in the April 8 telephone conference, I grant the respondent's motion to dismiss the inefficiency charge that is based on Section 25 of TEACHNJ. The charge relies on teacher evaluations in the 2012-2013 school year. Nothing in the record warrants a departure from my conclusion in Williams that such evaluations could not support removal under Section 25.

The respondent also seeks dismissal of the inefficiency charge filed under Section 8 on the ground that inefficiency can be charged only under Section 25. The district, in response, contends that in cases where "the requirements for inefficiency tenure charges under Section 25 have not been met, the inefficiency charge must be evaluated under Section 8" [District Brief, p. 12].

In enacting Section 25, the legislature introduced a comprehensive framework for resolving tenure charges of inefficiency, clearly intending that the provision would succeed Section 8 as the regular procedure for dealing with such disputes. With regard to inefficiency, Section 25 is meant to supplant Section 8. Nowhere did the legislature express an intention to maintain indefinitely two incompatible procedures for trying such charges. In addition, nothing indicates that the legislature envisioned an inefficiency charge brought under Section 25 reverting to a charge under Section 8 as a fallback tactic.

In this instance, however, the tenure dispute arose during the transition to Section 25 as the designated procedure for resolving a charge of inefficiency, and the charge was originally based on both Section 25 and Section 8. Although a charge involving 2012-2013 evaluations may not be brought under Section 25, no similar impediment prevents the district from seeking removal according to the requirements of Section 8.

The amended tenure charge of unbecoming conduct also is properly before the arbitrator under Section 8. Since Section 25 does not provide an alternative framework for bringing charges of that kind, Section 8 remains the standard procedure for reviewing accusations of unbecoming conduct.

In sum, both charges—inefficiency and unbecoming conduct—shall be heard on June 11 and 12, 2015.

Re: Bd. of Educ. of the City of Hoboken v. New Jersey State Dept. of Educ. and Bd. of Trustees of the Hoboken Dual Language Charter School, Agency Dkt. No. 98-4/14

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with the Hoboken Board of Education's (Board) Motion to Stay the March 20, 2015 decision granting Hoboken Dual Language Charter School's (HoLa) application for charter renewal and expansion, pending appeal of this decision to the Superior Court, Appellate Division.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), a motion for stay is considered an extraordinary remedy that may only be issued upon a finding that petitioner has met each prong of the four-pronged standard for the granting of interim relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Thus, a stay may be granted where necessary to prevent irreparable harm, where the legal right underlying the movant's claim is settled, where there is a likelihood of success on the merits and where the relative hardship to the moving party favors granting such relief. Id. at 132-134.

Upon review of the parties' submissions, I find that the Board has failed to meet the standard required for a stay of the March 20, 2015 decision. Most notably, the Board has failed to establish a likelihood of success on the merits. In its papers, the Board argues that it has established a likelihood of success on the merits for several reasons, including the following: the Commissioner failed to consider HoLa's segregative effect on the Hoboken School District (District); the Commissioner failed to consider the funding impact of HoLa on the District's budget; the March 20, 2015 decision failed to address HoLa's practices and policies; and the Commissioner violated his duty to enforce the thorough and efficient education clause of the New Jersey Constitution.

Following the Board's appeal to the Appellate Division of the Commissioner's original decision dated March 28, 2014 that renewed and expanded HoLa's charter,[1] the matter was remanded to the Commissioner for further analysis of demographic statistics and other data in light of the Board's claim that HoLa's expansion would create a racial divide within the District. In connection with the remand, the Department afforded all interested parties an opportunity to submit documentation relevant to the reconsideration of HoLa's application for renewal and expansion. In addition to a thorough review of the submitted materials, the Office of Charter Schools also conducted its own review of data to determine if HoLa is having a segregative effect on the District.

Prior to the issuance of the March 20, 2015 decision, the Department considered the concerns presented by the Board and thoroughly reviewed all of the documentation submitted by the Board and HoLa. Moreover, the March 20, 2015 decision fully outlines the analysis preformed by the Department and provides ample support for its determination that HoLa is not having a segregative effect on the District. In its papers, the Board has not presented any evidence indicating that the March 20, 2015 decision granting HoLa's application for charter renewal and expansion was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. As a result, the Board has failed to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits.

In light of the fact that all of the Crowe prongs must be met in order for a stay to be granted, it is not necessary to analyze the three remaining factors. Accordingly, the Board's request for a stay of the March 20, 2015 decision is hereby DENIED.[2]

Re: J.M., on behalf of minor child, T.M. v. Board of Education of the Monmouth Regional High School District[1], Monmouth County, Commissioner Decision No. 124-15R

Dear Parties:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with petitioner's motion for reconsideration of the Commissioner's decision upholding the Board's determination that Coach McGee's conduct did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq.

Initially, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's motion for reconsideration was timely filed. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b) provides that "any party may make a motion for reconsideration...of the Commissioner's decision within 10 days of the filing of the Commissioner's decision." Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.14, Commissioner decisions are deemed filed three days after the date of mailing to the parties. "Day" means business day when the [1]When the original petition was filed, the respondent was erroneously identified as the Board of Education of the Town of Tinton Falls.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer • Printed on Recycled Paper and Recyclable

period specified is less than seven days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.2. In this case, the Commissioner's decision was mailed to the parties on Thursday, April 2, 2015, and is therefore deemed filed as of Tuesday, April 7, 2015. Petitioner's motion for reconsideration was received on Friday, April 17, 2015 – exactly 10 days later – and within the time frame provided by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b).

However, petitioner has failed to demonstrate she is entitled to reconsideration. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2, a motion for reconsideration shall be considered by the Commissioner based upon the following:

i. Claim(s) of mistake, provided, however, that disagreement with the outcome of a decision, or with the analysis upon which it is based, shall not constitute "mistake" for purposes of this section;
ii. Newly discovered evidence likely to alter the outcome of a matter, where such evidence could not have been previously discovered by due diligence;
iii. Newly ascertained misrepresentation or other misconduct of an adverse party, where such misrepresentation could not have been previously known; or
iv. Reversal of a prior judgment on which the present matter is based.

In her motion, petitioner does not argue that she has satisfied any of the prerequisites set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2; rather, she expresses her disagreement with the outcome of the Commissioner's decision and the analysis upon which it is based. As noted by the Board in its response, petitioner had the opportunity to present her case at the Office of Administrative Law. Having had that opportunity, any argument by petitioner that certain factual issues were not addressed at the hearing is unpersuasive. Petitioner elected not to present testimony from T.M. or any eyewitnesses and was unable to meet her burden of establishing that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. On the other hand, the Board's witnesses were found to be credible by the Administrative Law Judge – and the Commissioner must defer to the ALJ's credibility determinations.[2]

Finally, to the extent petitioner contests the fact that her exceptions were not considered because she failed to provide proof of service as required by N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, it is noted that petitioner belatedly submitted said proof of service along with her motion for reconsideration. Even so, petitioner is not entitled to reconsideration on that basis since the required proof of service should have been supplied when her exceptions were filed in accordance with the regulation.

[2]The ALJ's credibility determinations are entitled to deference from the Commissioner, absent a finding that they are arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or unsupported by the record. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Dominic Costanzo, Commissioner Decision No. 142-14, decided April 4, 2014.

Accordingly, petitioner's motion for reconsideration is hereby DENIED.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

WANDA BLACKWELL,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a teaching staff member formerly employed in respondent's school district -- alleged that she is entitled to reinstatement as a tenured teacher because the respondent improperly refused to permit her to rescind her resignation. Petitioner's intent to resign effective October 31, 2014 was memorialized in a settlement agreement and simultaneous letter of resignation to respondent dated July 24, 2014. A clause within the parties' settlement agreement stated that the petitioner had seven calendar days from the date of the execution of the agreement to rescind her resignation. By letter dated July 29, 2014, petitioner requested that her resignation be rescinded for personal reasons. The respondent refused to permit petitioner to rescind or withdraw her resignation. Petitioner contended that the separation agreement was not enforceable once she exercised her revocation rights, which had been expressly agreed upon by the parties. Further, petitioner argues that respondent's action violated petitioner's rights under the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act. The respondent filed a motion for summary decision, asserting that the petitioner's claims should be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the Commissioner's jurisdiction is defined by statute, and is limited to "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws" (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9); case law has held that where a controversy does not arise under Title 18A, it is outside of the jurisdiction of the Commissioner, even if the dispute pertains to school personnel; the Commission has consistently declined to exercise jurisdiction over contractual disputes; petitioner herein cites no provisions of the school laws in support of her claims; and petitioner's belated claim that her letter of resignation was not accepted by the school district prior to its rescission – and therefore places this matter within the purview of school law – cannot be considered herein as that argument was not among the allegations presented in petitioner's appeal. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the petition of appeal must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusion of the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

WANDA BLACKWELL,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This matter involves whether the Commissioner's jurisdiction encompasses a contractual dispute regarding petitioner's employment in the district. The record and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been independently reviewed, along with petitioner's exceptions – filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – and respondent's reply to the exceptions. Upon full consideration of the controversy, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) findings, conclusions, and ultimate determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – to dismiss the petition for lack of jurisdiction.

The material facts are not in dispute. Petitioner's intent to resign from her position as a tenured special education teacher effective October 31, 2014 was memorialized in a settlement agreement executed by the parties.[1] (Petition, ¶ 2-5) In accord with the terms of the agreement, petitioner simultaneously tendered a letter of resignation to respondent. (Petition, ¶ 4) Five days after she executed the agreement – and one day after the agreement was executed by the State district superintendent – petitioner sent a follow-up letter rescinding her letter of resignation. (Petition, ¶ 5-6) However, the district replied that it was "not amenable" to petitioner rescinding or withdrawing her letter of resignation. (Petition, ¶ 7)

In her petition of appeal, petitioner alleged that either: 1) the agreement is not an enforceable contract because she revoked her resignation one day after the agreement was executed; or 2) the agreement is an enforceable contract and respondent violated the agreement as well as the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act, P.L. 101-433, 29 U.S.C.A. § 626(f), when it failed to accept her "notice of rescission."[2] (Petition, ¶ 8-12) As a consequence, petitioner requests reinstatement to her tenured teaching position. In response, the district filed a motion for summary decision asserting that the petition must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

Upon review, the ALJ concluded the matter was ripe for summary decision and granted respondent's motion since petitioner failed to allege any claims arising under school law.[3] To the extent petitioner belatedly raised an issue potentially cognizable under school law in her brief opposing respondent's motion – namely, that "a school employee's resignation is not binding unless and until it is accepted by the local board of education" – the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the petition contains "no factual allegations...related to her newly raised claim that her letter of resignation was not accepted by the District prior to its rescission." (Initial Decision at 5-6) Furthermore, the petition was never amended.[4] On the contrary, the claims set forth in the petition concern only the interpretation of the parties' settlement agreement and federal law. As indicated in the Initial Decision, neither petitioner's contract claim nor her federal claim fall under the Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and decide controversies arising under the school laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9; Bd. of Educ. v. Twp. Council of E. Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94, 102 (1966) ("Where the controversy does not arise under the school laws, it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction even though it may pertain to school personnel"). Additionally, the Commissioner is not persuaded by petitioner's exceptions, which substantially reiterate the arguments presented below and endeavor to reframe the allegations in school law terms while ignoring the context out of which this dispute arose: i.e., the parties' settlement agreement.

[2]Paragraph 10 of the parties' agreement states: "To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, if applicable...Blackwell...has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this Agreement to revoke it. Blackwell understands that she may rescind this Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of signing it[.]" Via letter dated July 29, 2014, petitioner requested that her letter of resignation be rescinded for personal reasons.

[3]N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4 requires that a petition include "a statement of the specific allegation(s) and essential facts supporting them which have given rise to a dispute under the school laws."

[4]Once a petition of appeal is transmitted to the OAL, it can only be amended via the filing of a motion to be determined in accordance with applicable OAL rules. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.7(b). The record does not contain any information indicating that petitioner ever filed a motion to amend her petition of appeal.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter, respondent's motion for summary decision is granted, and the petition is dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[5]

Record Closed: April 9, 2015 Decided: April 21, 2015

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Wanda Blackwell (Blackwell), a teaching staff member formerly employed by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (the District), alleges that she is entitled to reinstatement as a tenured teacher of special education because the District improperly refused to permit her to rescind her resignation. The District replies that Blackwell's claims should be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Blackwell filed her appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on October 22, 2014. An answer was filed on behalf of the District on November 19, 2014, and the matter transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on November 20, 2014. The District filed a motion for summary decision on February 17, 2015. Blackwell filed opposition to the motion on March 31, 2015; the District replied on April 9, 2015, and the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The pertinent facts are not in dispute and I FIND:

Blackwell was employed by the District as a tenured teacher of special education, when she agreed to resign from her position of employment via a settlement agreement executed by her on July 24, 2014. The agreement was signed by the State District Superintendent of Schools, Cami Anderson, on July 28, 2014. In accordance with its terms, Blackwell tendered a letter of resignation dated July 24, 2014, which confirmed that she would be leaving her position of employment effective October 31, 2014.

The agreement between the parties specified as follows:

> To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, if applicable, the Agreement advises Blackwell of the legal requirements of the Act, and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Agreement. Accordingly, by executing this Agreement, Blackwell acknowledge that she: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Agreement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Agreement; (iii) specifically waives her right to pursue any current claims she have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; (iv) has been given sufficient time within which to consider this Agreement; and (v) has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this Agreement to revoke it. Blackwell understands that she may rescind this > Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the District either by hand or certified mail within the seven-day period.

After submitting her letter of resignation, Blackwell sent a follow-up letter dated July 29, 2014, rescinding her letter of resignation. By letter dated August 8, 2014, counsel for the school district wrote to Blackwell's attorney that "the District is not amenable to permitting Ms. Blackwell to rescind or withdraw her resignation." Via letter dated August 13, 2014, the District acknowledged receipt of the letter of resignation, and noted that the State District Superintendent of Schools "has approved of same."

The petition of appeal alleges that the separation of employment agreement entered into between the parties is "by its own terms not enforceable," because Blackwell exercised the revocation rights expressly agreed upon by the parties. In a second count, the petition avers that the refusal of the District to honor the rescission of her resignation violated Blackwell's rights under the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act. The petition of appeal raises no other claims.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'fanciful frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520 (1995) (citing Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (citing Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214. I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material disputed facts, and the District has correctly asserted that the petition should be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The only issues raised by the petition are whether Blackwell should be permitted to rescind her resignation under either her separation of employment agreement or the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act, P.L. 101-433, 29 U.S.C.A. § 626(f). Neither claim is properly cognizable before the Commissioner.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction is defined by statute, and is limited to "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Our courts have held that where a controversy does not arise under Title 18A, it is outside the jurisdiction of the Commissioner, even if the dispute pertains to school personnel. Bd. of Educ. of E. Brunswick Twp. v. Twp. Council of E. Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94, 102 (1966). As the Appellate Division held in Picogna v. Board of Education of Cherry Hill, 249 N.J. Super. 322, 335 (App. Div. 1991), "[w]hether [a] petitioner's employment was wrongfully terminated under [his] contract . . . is for the court, not the Commissioner, to decide."

The Commissioner has consistently declined to exercise jurisdiction over contractual disputes. In Demikoff v. Harrington Park Board of Education, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 16, the claims of a non-tenured school business administrator, whose employment was terminated pursuant to a contractual sixty-day-notice provision, were dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The Commissioner, quoting the Initial Decision, held that "'the gist of the petition does not sufficiently implicate education law or statutory entitlement under education law to warrant or permit exercise of the Commissioner's dispute resolution jurisdiction over what are fundamentally contractual matters more properly cognizable in [a] judicial forum.'" Demikoff, supra, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) at 18; see also Paladino v. Bd. of Educ. of Lacey, 1989 S.L.D. 3063, 3065; Fanego v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City, EDU 10968-97, Initial Decision (April 27, 1999), adopted, Comm'r (June 14, 1999), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; Larsen v. Piscataway Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. 1445-81 (State Board, October 6, 1982). Thus, where the only dispute between parties centers on the interpretation of an agreement rather than any specific provision of Title 18A, the Commissioner is without jurisdiction, as "the expertise of the Commissioner would not significantly further the interpretative process as to the intended meaning of the parties' agreement." S. Orange-Maplewood Educ. Ass'n v. S. Orange-Maplewood Bd. of Educ., 146 N.J. Super. 457, 462 (App. Div. 1977).

Blackwell cites no provisions of the school laws in support of her claims. The only statute that she does cite is the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act, P.L. 101-433, 29 U.S.C.A. § 626(f). But our case law is likewise clear and unequivocal that the Commissioner is without the expertise or authority to interpret the rights of parties under a statute not contained in Title 18A of the New Jersey school laws. See, e.g., Hornstine v Twp. of Moorestown, 263 F. Supp.2d 887, 899-900 (D.N.J. 2003); Galbraith v. Lenape Reg. High Sch. Dist., 964 F. Supp. 889, 895 (D.N.J. 1997); Jenkins v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 166 N.J. Super. 357, 368 (Law Div. 1979).[1]

In her brief in opposition to the motion for summary decision, Blackwell, for the first time, asserts that as a general proposition, a school employee's resignation is not binding unless and until it is accepted by the local board of education. See, e.g., [1] The exclusive exception would be where a non-school law claim is pendent to "an equally or more significant related 'school law' issue." Rovello v. Boyle, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 313; Sukin v. Northfield Bd. of Educ., 171 N.J. Super. 184, 187 (App. Div. 1979).

Bloomfield Educ. Ass'n v Bloomfield Bd. of Educ., EDU 8308-01, Comm'r (December 29, 2003), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, where the Commissioner noted that > [I]t is well-established in school law that in the absence of statutory provisions dealing with the effect of resignations and their rescission or modification, principles of contract law are applicable . . . upon acceptance of [a] letter resignation/retirement by the board the teaching staff member does not have a right to unilaterally rescind the resignation.

Blackwell thus contends that her claims require neither an interpretation of the separation of employment agreement, nor an interpretation of federal law. The District replies that Blackwell has only now, and belatedly, raised an issue that might be within the Commissioner's jurisdiction. I agree. Only the separation of employment agreement and the Older Workers' Benefit Protection Act are cited in Blackwell's petition; the factual allegations of the petition center on the agreement and federal law; and Blackwell makes no factual allegations in the petition related to her newly raised claim that her letter of resignation was not accepted by the District prior to its rescission.

I moreover agree with the District that both it and this forum can be guided only by what the pleading alleges, and not by claims raised in subsequent briefs of counsel. A review of the petition makes it readily apparent that Blackwell's claims exclusively concern the interpretation of both the separation of employment agreement and federal law; neither of which fall under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petition of appeal must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that the petition of appeal be DISMISSED for lack of jurisdiction.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

17. BREACH: If either party breaches this Agreement, the breaching party shall bear the costs of the non-breaching party of any litigation or efforts to have such breach corrected or compensated for, including but not limited to, reasonable attorneys' fees.

18. RATIFICATION: The undersigned representatives of the Board hereby acknowledge that they have been duly authorized by the Board to sign this Agreement and bind the Board to its terms. Upon ratification of this Agreement, the Board authorizes its Board President to execute same on its behalf.

19. GOOD FAITH AND NONDISPARAGEMENT: The Parties expressly agree that they shall act in good faith to ensure implementation of this Separation of Service Agreement and General Release and Waiver. The Parties mutually agree to refrain from making any derogatory comments, written or oral; retaliation or disparagement, in any manner, against the other party or their families, family members, agents, officials, administrators, representatives and employees.

    The Board agrees that in the event it receives any inquiries or reference requests for Ms. Swensen-Hartie that its comments shall be limited to an acknowledgement of her position, length of employment, salary history, and effective resignation date.

20. COBRA: Nothing contained within this Separation of Service Agreement shall alter Ms. Swensen-Hartie's rights to continuation of health insurance through Federal law, i.e. the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 ("COBRA") upon separation from employment with the Board as of the date which coincides with the date that Ms. Swensen-Hartie no longer receives health insurance as provided by the Board.

21. MODIFICATIONS: This Agreement may not be altered, amended or modified except in writing, signed and duly authorized by all Parties.

22. EXECUTION IN COUNTERPARTS AND FACSIMILE SIGNATURES: This Agreement may be executed in two (or more) counterparts each of which, when executed and delivered shall be deemed to be an original, and of which counterparts, taken together, shall constitute one and the same agreement. An original signature transmitted by facsimile shall be deemed to be an original for purposes of this Agreement and for the accompanying letter of resignation.

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Wayne Wedderman, School District of the Township of Barnegat, Ocean County, Agency Dkt. No. 369-12/14.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the record in the contested case entitled In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Wayne Wedderman, School District of the Township of Barnegat, Ocean County, Agency Dkt. No. 369-12/14. The record includes the District's request to withdraw the tenure charges filed in this matter, as well as the respondent's formal resignation filed with the District on April 14, 2015 and accepted by the Board on April 28, 2015. In light of this information, I find that no purpose would be served by further proceedings in this matter.

Accordingly, I approve the dismissal of the tenure charges with prejudice and dismiss the matter as a contested case before me. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

Sincerely,

WHEREAS, the Board filed a verified petition (the "Petition") with the Commissioner of Education (Agency Ref. No. 316-10/14 and OAL Docket No. EDU 16073-2014N) which seeks a determination that the Parents are liable to the Board for the payment of tuition in the amount of sixty thousand four hundred thirteen and 00/100 dollars ($60,413.00);

WHEREAS, the Parents dispute the calculation of tuition in the Petition;

WHEREAS, the Parents have asserted numerous defenses to any liability whatsoever for the cause of action asserted in the Petition;

WHEREAS, the Board and the Parents (collectively, the "Parties") are entering into this Agreement to fully and finally release and discharge any and all claims that they have, ever had or may have had against each other as of the date of this Agreement and to provide for the dismissal of the Petition with Prejudice.

WHEREAS, the parties have agreed to a payment plan and are desirous of memorializing the terms in a written agreement which shall be submitted to an administrative law judge and the New Jersey Commissioner of Education for approval and incorporation in a decision which can be entered on the docket of the Superior Court of New Jersey in the event of default;

NOW, WHEREFORE, based on the foregoing premises and the mutual promises and covenants contained herein, the parties agree as follows:

1. No Admissions of Liability: This Agreement shall not be offered or construed as an admission by any Party of any wrongdoing, liability or damages. The Parties specifically deny that they engaged in any improper or violation of any law, that they have any liability to any other Party, or that they caused any damage to any other Party. The Parties are settling the Action and entering into this Agreement solely to avoid the burden and expense of litigation.

2. Payment Amount; Incentive Discount; Schedule. Parents shall pay the Board the amount of twenty thousand and 00/100 dollars ($20,000.00), which shall be reduced to fifteen thousand and 00/100 dollars ($15,000.00) (the "Incentive Discount") if the Parents make timely payments. Payments shall be made in accordance with the following payment schedule:

a. Fifty-nine (59) payments in the minimum amount of one hundred twenty five and 00/100 dollars ($125.00) for each payment shall be paid, with the first payment being made at the time the Parents sign this Agreement and the following payments on the first day of each month beginning May 1, 2015 for fifty-eight (58) months.

b. Said payments may be made in advance, in the Parents' discretion, without prejudice to the Parents.

c. A final payment which reflects the balance due on the fifteen thousand and 00/100 dollars ($15,000.00) shall be paid no later than March 1, 2020.

3. Payment Instructions. Parents shall make all payments to the Board by check, payable to the Hawthorne Board of Education, and shall be received at the Board office located at 445 Lafayette Avenue, P.O. Box 2, Hawthorne, New Jersey 07506 no later than the date payment is due, except as expressly provided for herein.

4. Late Payments. During the course of repayment, in the event that the Parents make a payment late, but nonetheless by the fifteenth (15th) day of the month in which that payment was due, such payment shall be accepted as timely (and without prejudice to their right to the Incentive Discount) provided that it is accompanied by a late charge of twenty five and 00/100 dollars ($25.00).

5. Default. If payment is not made by the fifteenth (15th) day of any month in which it was due, the Board may notify the Parents that they are in default. Such notice shall be provided to them at the address stated on Page 1 of this agreement, or to any other substitute address subsequently provided to the Board by the Parents. Default shall be effective upon actual receipt of said notice.

6. Redemption. In the event of default, the Parents shall have thirty (30) days to pay to the Board the full amount of fifteen thousand and 00/100 dollars ($15,000.00), less any amounts actually paid in accordance with Section One (1) of this agreement. Late fees, if any, shall not be credited as amounts paid for these purposes. If the Incentive Discount is paid within thirty (30) days, the payment described above shall constitute full and complete payment of all obligations by the Parents pursuant to this Agreement.

7. Demand. If the Parents have not paid the above amount in full within thirty (30) days from the Parents' receipt of a notice of default, the Board may demand (in writing, to the address stated on Page 1 of this agreement or any subsequent address provided by the Parents) the immediate payment of the full balance due (twenty thousand and 00/100 dollars ($20,000.00), less any amounts actually paid in accordance with Section One of this Agreement, not including late fees), within seven (7) days (the "Demand Notice"). If payment of the balance due is not made within seven (7) days of the Parents' receipt of the Demand Notice, the Board shall be entitled to judgment in the amount of twenty thousand and 00/100 dollars ($20,000.00), less credit for monies previously paid in accordance with Section One (1) of this Agreement (not including late fees). In this event, Parents consent to the entry of a judgment in the Superior Court of New Jersey for the amount due under the terms of this Agreement.

8. Collection. Upon obtaining a judgment from the Superior Court ofNew Jersey, the Board may (in its discretion) initiate collection procedures against the Parents for collection of the amount due. Parents shall reimburse the Board for the cost of such collection procedures, including the reimbursement of reasonable attorney's fees, if they default on this agreement.

9. Release. Upon receipt of payment by the Parents in accordance with the terms of this Agreement, the Parents shall be released from any and all claims and actions at law that the Board has against the Parents.

10. Miscellaneous Representations. The Parties acknowledge that they have had an opportunity to have this Agreement reviewed by an attorney of their own choice. The Parties further acknowledge that this Agreement has been entered into voluntarily, without duress and of

Re: Board of Education of the Township of Millburn, Essex County v. M.G. and A.G., on behalf of minor child, Q.G., Agency Dkt. No. 9-1/15

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with this matter, and based upon the respondents' failure to submit an Answer to the Petition that complies with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of the petitioner.

On January 13, 2015, the Board filed its Petition of Appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 seeking an order assessing tuition and claiming that minor child Q.G. was not entitled to attend school in the district during the 2013-2014 school year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition was served upon respondents M.G. and A.G. on January 13, 2015, via certified and regular mail, as was an acknowledgment of filing and notice dated January 15, 2015 that an Answer to the Petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because respondents failed to respond to the initial notice, a second notice was sent on February 19, 2015, via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that – absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition within 10 days – each count in the Petition would be deemed admitted and the matter may be decided on a summary basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). According to information obtained from the U.S. Postal Service, the copy sent via certified mail was claimed, and the copy sent via regular mail was not returned. M.G. and A.G. failed to respond to the second notice. Two additional notices were sent via certified and regular mail, on March 20, 2015 and April 24, 2015, to which M.G. and A.G. also failed to respond. The notices sent via regular mail were not returned, and although the March 20, 2015 certified mailing was unclaimed, the April 24, 2015 certified mailing was claimed.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer • Printed on Recycled Paper and Recyclable

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of M.G. and A.G. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that Q.G. was not entitled to attend school in the district pursuant to *N.J.S.A.*18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted. It is hereby ordered that respondents reimburse the petitioner for tuition costs in the amount of $14,876 for Q.G.'s ineligible attendance in the district during the 2013-2014 school year.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

David C. Hespe

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Marie Ebert, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 49-3/15

Dear Counsel:

Upon review of the parties' submissions, relevant sections of Title 18A, and the corresponding regulations, it is apparent that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting a stay pending proceedings in the Appellate Division since this matter is presently before an arbitrator for final determination. Under these circumstances, and in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b), the parties are free to direct requests to hold the matter in abeyance to the assigned arbitrator.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters is limited by statute. At the outset, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 provides that an arbitrator "shall hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. The Commissioner is required to refer promptly such matters to a panel of arbitrators subject to the criteria set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. In an effort to further expedite the tenure hearing process, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(d) mandates a 45-day timeframe for issuance of arbitrators' written decisions. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(e), an arbitrator's final determination is not appealable to the Commissioner or the State Board of Education, but is subject to judicial review and enforcement in the Superior Court. See N.J.S. 2A:24-7 through N.J.S. 2A:24-10.

Notwithstanding an arbitrator's broad jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. grants the Commissioner limited authority to perform certain related functions following referral of a tenure matter to an arbitrator for final determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. For example, the tenure laws require the Commissioner to "approve or disapprove" within five days an arbitrator's request for extension of the mandated 45 day timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(g). If an arbitrator fails to adhere to the 45-day timeframe absent Commissioner approval of an extension request, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-1(h) allows the Commissioner to remove that arbitrator from the case and assign the matter to a new arbitrator within five days. However, the tenure laws do not bestow upon the Commissioner any authority to hear and decide related motions once a given matter is transmitted to an arbitrator for final determination.

Furthermore, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b) provides specific guidance as to whom the parties should direct requests to hold a tenure matter in abeyance. The ultimate answer to this inquiry hinges upon whether the Commissioner has already referred the matter to an arbitrator:

> Where a party to a tenure matter requests, the Commissioner may agree to hold the matter in abeyance at any time prior to transmittal to an arbitrator. Thereafter, requests to hold the matter in abeyance shall be directed to the arbitrator.

Once a tenure matter is before an arbitrator for final determination, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to determine whether a stay should be granted. In this instance, the Commissioner referred the matter to an arbitrator via letter dated March 30, 2015. Subsequently, petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting a stay was filed with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on May 20, 2015.

For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief. This determination shall not preclude the parties from seeking the desired relief before the arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b).

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

related functions following referral of a tenure matter to an arbitrator for final determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. For example, the tenure laws require the Commissioner to "approve or disapprove" within five days an arbitrator's request for extension of the mandated 45-day timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(g). If an arbitrator fails to adhere to the 45-day timeframe absent Commissioner approval of an extension request, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-1(h) allows the Commissioner to remove that arbitrator from the case and assign the matter to a new arbitrator within five days. However, the tenure laws do not bestow upon the Commissioner any authority to hear and decide related motions once a given matter is transmitted to an arbitrator for final determination.

Furthermore, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b) provides specific guidance as to whom the parties should direct requests to hold a tenure matter in abeyance. The ultimate answer to this inquiry hinges upon whether the Commissioner has already referred the matter to an arbitrator:

> Where a party to a tenure matter requests, the Commissioner may agree to hold the matter in abeyance at any time prior to transmittal to an arbitrator. Thereafter, requests to hold the matter in abeyance shall be directed to the arbitrator.

Once a tenure matter is before an arbitrator for final determination, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to determine whether a stay should be granted. In this instance, the Commissioner referred the matter to an arbitrator via letter dated April 13, 2015. Subsequently, petitioner's Motion for Stay Pending Appeal was filed with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on May 18, 2015.

For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Stay Pending Appeal. This determination shall not preclude the parties from seeking the desired relief before the arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b).

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Sandra Cheatham-Powell, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 68-3/15

Dear Counsel:

Upon review of the parties' submissions, relevant sections of Title 18A, and the corresponding regulations, it is apparent that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Stay Pending Appeal since this matter is presently before an arbitrator for final determination. Under these circumstances, and in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b), the parties are free to direct requests to hold the matter in abeyance to the assigned arbitrator.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters is limited by statute. At the outset, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 provides that an arbitrator "shall hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. The Commissioner is required to refer promptly such matters to a panel of arbitrators subject to the criteria set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. In an effort to further expedite the tenure hearing process, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(d) mandates a 45-day timeframe for issuance of arbitrators' written decisions. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(e), an arbitrator's final determination is not appealable to the Commissioner or the State Board of Education, but is subject to judicial review and enforcement in the Superior Court. See N.J.S. 2A:24-7 through N.J.S. 2A:24-10.

Notwithstanding an arbitrator's broad jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. grants the Commissioner limited authority to perform certain related functions following referral of a tenure matter to an arbitrator for final determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. For example, the tenure laws require the Commissioner to "approve or disapprove" within five days an arbitrator's request for extension of the mandated 45-day timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(g). For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Stay Pending Appeal. This determination shall not preclude the parties from seeking the desired relief before the arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b).

By the April 2, 2015 appointment letter from the Department of Education of the State of New Jersey, I was appointed Arbitrator in the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lorraine Williams, State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Docket No.58-3/15. I had previously served as the Arbitrator in the L. Williams/Newark 501-14 matter (see my Decision of December 20, 2014, dismissing charges) On April 24, 2015, Respondent moved for Summary Judgment and Dismissal of all of the charges in the present case now before me. A flurry of pre-hearing papers had already commenced, and increased in complexity and intensity, further supplemented by concurrent telephonic oral argument in several instances. Commissioner of Education Hespe stated in his letter of June 9, 2015 that the District could bring its May 19, 2015 Motion for a Stay Pending Appeal to me as the Arbitrator. During May 17-25, 2015, I was attending the annual meetings of the American Law Institute as a Life Member and of the National Academy of Arbitrators. Both principal lawyers also took some vacation time, with one of the lawyers traveling abroad. In order to be fully informed upon her return, she reasonably requested some necessary additional time. Meanwhile, over the course of the winter and spring of 2015, several encyclopedic decisions were issued by highly respected arbitrators on the TEACH NJ panel of 25. Most, albeit not all, of these decisions clearly favor Respondent.

The equitable principles of Comity and of resolution of the entire case are critically important in this matter, and the District's request that this Arbitration be placed in Abeyance is very well presented in both the District's papers and in the telephonic oral arguments further elucidating those papers. The dilemma of the decision maker only deepens, for the Motion papers and oral arguments of Respondent's attorney are just as impressive. The Commissioner of Education weighed in with letters bearing on these complexities. The steadily growing body of arbitral authority on the 25 member statewide panel of TEACH NJ arbitrators may indeed be more favorable to Respondent regarding the issues at the heart of the present matter. As I discussed at some length in my December 20, 2014 Decision in Newark, it would, at the very least, be outrageously and unjustifiably expensive to proceed forward with the arbitration hearing while awaiting the response from appeals to the New Jersey Superior Court Appellate Division. More prudent and more gracious than wrestling with legalisms, Comity embodies common sense and civility among and within branches of government. "Sensible case management dictates that arbitration should not go forward on an agency referral to arbitration that has been appealed ..." (District's attorney's June 8 2015 letter at page 1). More immediate, the District asserts that I was selected out of order, and not at random, to serve as arbitrator for this present Williams case.)

What I said in the first Williams/Newark case I decided in December 2014 seems even more apt several months later, making the District's request that I place the present case in abeyance even more jurisprudentially resonant.

To wit:

"By letter dated September 29, 2014, the Department of Education of the State of New Jersey referred this TEACHNJ matter to me as Arbitrator. By letter dated December 4, 2014, Respondent Tenured Teacher Ms. Lorraine Williams filed this Motion to Dismiss the Tenure Charges brought against her for inefficiency. The District replied to the Motion. By Notice letter dated December 16, 2014, the District cross-moved for a ruling that I preclude Respondent from introducing any evidence at the hearing.

I have carefully read and studied all of the parties' submissions. I render my Decision pursuant to law. Felix Frankfurter, Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, was the eminent proponent of the pithy axiom that the law is largely the history of procedure. It is indubitable----procedure matters.

New Jersey has dramatically redesigned and rejuvenated its teacher tenure dynamic to be prospective and proactive. TEACHNJ does not operate in a vacuum. Over time, and probably sooner than later, New Jersey should begin to realize impressive cost savings via the TEACHNJ panel of distinguished Arbitrators. The issue in this battery of analogous cases is especially conducive to being determined with precedential effect, guiding at least the institutional parties in any future cases without significant additional costs..

Although the decisions of fellow panel members do not formally have res judicata or collateral estoppel effect, their prior decisions that routinely involve one of the institutional parties, focus on the same particular statutory law, have closely analogous facts and corresponding Arbitral elucidation are, at the very least, appropriately highly influential. "...the precedential value of a prior award between the parties is to be determined by the subsequent arbitrator." Elkouri and Elkouri, How Arbitration Works (6th Edition) at 598.

Respondent has extensively cited a burgeoning litany of very persuasive decisions, finding that "the District erred when it discharged Respondent when it used 2012-13 as one of the two evaluation ...years ." Arbitrator Stephen M. Bluth, Sandra Cheatham and School District of the City of Newark, Agency Dkt Number 226-8/14, at 14, October 16, 2014. Furthermore, having lost in the Section 25 context, the unsuccessful School District cannot then invoke Section 8, as Arbitrator Bluth explains at considerable length in his decision in Cheatham.

It appears that Arbitrator Robert T. Simmelkjaer has written the comprehensive definitive decision governing the identification, determination, and failure of tenure charges prematurely brought. See, Arbitrator Robert T. Simmelkjaer, Neil Thomas and the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Agency Dkt Number 244-9/14, November 19, 2014. This 52 page, singled spaced decision is cited extensively in Respondent's Motion. The most recent pertinent decision applying the Sinnmelkjaer doctrine is the 25 page, single spaced order of Arbitrator Joyce M. Klein, Elena Brady and the State Operated School District for the City of Newark, Agency Dkt Number 270-9/14, December 7, 2014.

The District categorically maintains that the formidable array of arbitral authority contrary to the District's position is simply wrongly decided. The District's rationale is unpersuasive, suggesting that any additional time allowed a presumptive congenitally incorrigible only exacerbates what is already a colossal waste of everyone's time. However, what the District regards as an unwarranted and ungovernable year is often quite the contrary. Rather than cavalierly disregard the gravity of tenure charges, experience instead demonstrates that teachers facing charges usually endeavor to rise to the occasion. Most take full advantage of all ameliorating and rehabilitative professional programs maximizing due process. In any event, Lawmakers periodically provide for transition periods in the implementation of especially important legislation. The federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 did not go into effect for another year and the Americans with Disabilities was gradually and incrementally effectuated."

Abeyance is not in perpetuity, and it certainly is not another means to buy time. Comity equitably reinforces the propriety of timely deference to the state judiciary in this matter. Absent a reasonably timely response decision from the state appellate court, Respondent may bring motions necessary and sufficient to move to hearing dates convening the arbitration in the present matter.

So Ordered,

Dave Gregory

David L. Gregory

I, David L. Gregory, affirm that I have executed this document as my Decision and Order on this 2nd of July, 2015.

In the Matter of Tenure Hearing of Leonard Yarborough:

STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT

Case No. 69-3/15

OPINION

LEONARD YARBOROUGH

Before:

Appearances:
For the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County:
Ramon E. Rivera, Esq.

For the Respondent:
Charles I. Auffant, Esq.
Stuart Ball, LLC

The State Operated School District of City of Newark ("District") initially filed a Notice of Inefficiency Charge against Leonard Yarborough ("Respondent") on October 9, 2014 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17-3. In an Opinion and Award of December 9, 2014, (#509-14) a Motion to Dismiss the tenure charges was granted. The Award was in reliance on the Opinion and Award of The State Operated School District of the City of Newark and Elena Brady, 270-9/14, wherein it was held that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17-3 does not provide for consideration of 2012-2013 summative evaluations for the purpose of tenure revocation. As in Brady, the District relied upon the 2012-2013 summative evaluations in bringing tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17-3 against Yarborough. Accordingly, the motion was granted based upon the doctrine of collateral estoppel.

The District filed an Amended Tenure Charge on January 26, 2015 alleging inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16,

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (Section 8) against the Respondent. The amended charges make the same factual allegations as those stated in the original charges. It was specifically alleged that Yarborough demonstrated an inability to completely and responsibly execute his duties as a teacher and enumerated failures to implement curricular goals and objectives, design coherent instruction, access student learning, create an environment of respect and rapport, manage student behavior, etcetera. It was further alleged that the Respondent received an Ineffective rating for the 2012-2013 school year in an Annual Summative Evaluation and received a Partially Effective rating for the 2013-2014 school year in an annual Summative Evaluation.

On April 24, 2015, I was appointed to serve as arbitrator to hear and decide these amended charges. On May 5, 2015, Leonard Yarborough moved for an order dismissing the tenure charges against him with prejudice and filed a brief and answer in support of its motion.

RESPONDENT'S ARGUMENT IN SUPPORT OF MOTION

The Respondent specifically argues in support of its Motion to Dismiss that:

1) Pursuant to the doctrine of Law of the Case, the District is bound by the arbitrator's previous, precedential Opinion and Award barring the District from proceeding with inefficiency charges against Yarborough pursuant to Section 8 of the TEACHNJ Act. The law of the case doctrine requires judges to respect unreversed decisions made during a trial by the same court or a higher court regarding questions of law. Once an issue is litigated and decided in a suit, relitigation of that issue should be avoided, if possible. Sisler v. Gannett Co., 222 N.J. Super 153 App Div. (1987), State v. Hale, 127 N.J. Super 407, 410 App Div. (1974).

   The issue has already been decided in this case; the amended charge is bound by the prior ruling. Specifically, the initial charge of inefficiency filed against Yarborough has been dismissed. Now the District seeks to proceed under Section 8 of the TEACHNJ Act. That same request was rejected by Arbitrator Simmelkjaer In The Matter of Neil Thomas and State Operated School District of the City of Newark, November 20, 2014 (465-15) when he held that "the District cannot rehabilitate charges found to be deficient under Section 25 by proposing that they be reconsidered under Section 8 as a default position." Also, Arbitrator Daniel Brent held In The Matter of Jodi Thompson, Dkt. No. 240-8/14 "the arbitrator is constrained by well established principles of equity and the labor arbitration rules of the American Arbitration Association not to permit a charging party to plead a new cause of action that was not part of the original charge" (p. 6).

2) Pursuant to the doctrine of res judicata, the charge at issue has already been fully resolved, cannot be relitigated and must be dismissed. Even if the charge is treated as a new charge, it is nonetheless barred as a matter of law pursuant to the doctrine of res judicata, a "an ancient judicial doctrine which contemplates that when a controversy between the parties is once fairly litigated and determined, it is no longer open to relitigation and rests upon policy considerations which seek to guard the individual against vexatious repetitious litigation and the public against serious burdens which such litigations impose upon the community." Lubliner v. Board of Alcoholic Beverage Control for the City of Paterson, 33 N.J. 428 (1960). Unlike the doctrine of law of the case, res judicata is a mandatory doctrine that a tribunal must apply to bar a party from relitigating a case or an issue already fully disposed of.

   For res judicata to bar the relitigation of a claim, the following three elements must be met:

   1) The judgment in the prior action must be valid, final and on the merits
   2) The parties in the later action must be identical to or in privity with those in the prior action and
   3) The claim in the later action must grow out of the same transaction or occurrence as the claim in the earlier one. Bondi v. Citi Group, 423 N.J. Super 377 App Div. (2011).

   The doctrine of res judicata applies to arbitration awards, see Chattin v. Cape May Green, Inc., 216 N.J. Super 618 App Div. (1987).

   In this matter, if the charge is considered a new charge, res judicata requires that the new charge be dismissed. The initial charge of inefficiency was brought against Yarborough last year on or about August 30, 2014. The District had ample time to consider the charge upon which it would seek dismissal. The District elected to pursue a charge of inefficiency under Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act. Once it was determined that its Section 25 charge against Yarborough was substantively deficient, the District expressly sought to pursue an inefficiency charge against him under Section 8. That charge must be rejected. Since the December 29, 2014 Opinion and Award was never appealed, it is a valid, final and on the merits. It is argued that it was specifically determined that the District could not proceed under Section 8. The parties are obviously identical and the instant charge plainly grows out of the transaction or occurrence as the prior tenure charge since the statements of evidence and exhibits of the charge are identical. Except for the section of TEACHNJ Act cited, the charges are exactly the same and the charge against Yarborough should be dismissed.

4) The District's amended charge against Yarborough is untimely filed and must be dismissed. Assuming arguendo that the District has filed a new charge against the Respondent, the District has failed to file that charge in a timely manner under either Section 25 or Section 8 of TEACHNJ. The TEACHNJ Act specifically provides timelines in which tenure charges must be served. Specifically, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1, notice of tenure charges must be served on the teacher within three days of service on the State District Superintendent. If the charges are for inefficiency, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1, the employee has an opportunity within ten days to submit a written statement of position demonstrating how the District failed to follow the applicable evaluation procedures. The Superintendent then must certify the charges and file the same with the Commissioner of Education within thirty (30) days of receipt of same. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. Once charges are filed with the Commissioner, there are specific mandatory timelines for the filing of answers to tenure charges. Notably absent from either the statutory or regulatory scheme is a procedure for the amendment of certified tenure charges, whether brought for inefficiency pursuant to Section 25 or otherwise. The notice of tenure charge against Yarborough was initially served on him over nine months ago, on August 30, 2014. He duly filed his position to the charge with the State District Superintendent on September 19, 2014. The charge was certified by the District Superintendent and served on Yarborough on September 22, 2014. Yarborough's Motion to Dismiss was granted by this arbitrator on December 29, 2014. The three month period within which the District could have moved to vacate this arbitrator's Opinion and Award expired on March 29, 2015. The District did nothing for more than three months and now, long after the timeframes set forth by applicable statute and regulation governing the filing of tenure charges have expired, and long after its timeframe to move to vacate this arbitrator's decision, the District seeks a "do over" on the case.

The charge is not "new." Rather, it is merely a rehash of the same charge of inefficiency dismissed complete with the same notice of charges, statement of evidence and exhibits. The District is far beyond the time periods contemplated by law for either the certification of tenure charges or the amendment of same. Under Section 25, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, the District was required to file charges against Yarborough with the Commissioner of Education within thirty (30) days of filing with the State District Superintendent. The District here filed charges with the State District Superintendent on July 9, 2014. The charge filed was based on the identical series of facts and allegations as the instant charge; thus the District was under an obligation to file the tenure charge within thirty (30) days thereof. The current charge was filed well outside that time period and thus the charge is untimely.

Alternatively, once charges were filed with the State District Superintendent, Yarborough could submit a statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath within fifteen (15) days of receipt of the charge N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1. Upon receipt of the statement or within fifteen days, the State District Superintendent had forty-five (45) days to decide whether to certify the charges to the Commissioner of Education. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-13. The District filed charges with the State District Superintendent on September 22, 2014. The charges were based upon the identical series of facts and allegations and thus the District was under an obligation to vote on whether to file the charge under Section 8 within forty-five (45) days of receiving Yarborough's response to the charge and then was required to file the charge with the Commissioner within fifteen (15) days of making its decision. Clearly, it did not do so and the charge was filed outside the applicable time frame and must be dismissed. The statutory and regulatory time frames set forth exist for a reason; they protect the due process rights of educators subject to tenure charges. The District's conduct in belatedly amending its prior charge violate Yarborough's due process rights and should be dismissed.

5) The District's amended charge is barred by the entire controversy doctrine. The District cannot bring amended or new charges based on the same facts and series of transactions or occurrences at this stage of the proceedings.

The entire controversy doctrine requires that "to the extent possible, courts must determine an entire controversy in a single judicial proceeding and that such a determination necessarily embraces not only joinder of related claims between the parties but also joinder of all persons who have a material interest in the controversy." Cogdell by Cogdell v. Hospital Center at Orange, 116 N.J. 7 (1989). The entire controversy doctrine is equitable in nature and is fundamentally predicated upon judicial fairness and will be invoked in that spirit. Crispin v. Volkswagen Werk, 96 N.J. 336 (1984).

New Jersey Court Rule 4:30A provides, in relevant part, that "non-joinder of claims required to be joined by the entire controversy doctrine shall result in the preclusion of omitted claims to the extent required by the entire controversy doctrine." The entire controversy doctrine applies to arbitration proceedings. Shoremount v. APS Corp., 368 N.J. Super 252, 255 App Div. (2004).

The District has already litigated its tenure charge of inefficiency against the Respondent based upon its evaluations for school years 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 and lost that charge. It could have brought other charges simultaneously under Section 8 based upon those same facts or series of transactions or occurrences. It cannot now relitigate the case. If the District is permitted to bring the instant charge, it will be free to continue refilling the same charge against the Respondent under various legal theories over and over again. Clearly this violates the entire controversy doctrine as well as principles of judicial finality and efficiency. And no less importantly, it violates Yarborough's due process rights to not be subject to the same charge repeatedly. The District cannot get a second bite at the apple. The case is concluded.

5) Inefficiency tenure charges can only be brought under Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act. Therefore, the District's charges must be dismissed. Section 25 of TEACHNJ is the exclusive means through which a District can bring charges of inefficiency. Charges of inefficiency are now defined by and are required to proceed pursuant to Section 25 of the TEACHNJ only. TEACHNJ reforms the prior tenure law by linking tenure decisions directly to effectiveness ratings. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. TEACHNJ made a dramatic change to the tenure revocation process, particularly on the grounds of inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. The new TEACHNJ deleted from Section 8, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 the former 90 day improvement period during which teachers were afforded notice of inefficiency and opportunity to cure any professional deficiencies. In its place, Section 25 was added which specifically addresses charges of inefficiency. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

   Section 25 has created a new definition of inefficiency. Tenure retention is now based upon continued efficient performance directly tied to evaluation outcomes and student achievement. The evaluation process itself was substantially revamped. Now only two performance evaluations can result in termination. Section 25, create a very limited scope of review of teacher evaluations and the limitations on defenses set forth therein directly flow from a concurrent overhaul of the evaluation process and procedures. Teachers may no longer challenge an evaluator's determination, but only so long as that determination is based upon evaluations which comply with applicable procedures.

   Here, however, what the District is effectively saying is that both N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 are optional. It may comply with statutory and regulatory procedures or not. The District apparently believes that if it fails to comply with applicable procedures necessary to bring charges under Section 25 as was previously determined in this case, it may simply ignore Section 25 altogether. The limitations on review of evaluations and defenses cannot apply because those limitations were predicated on compliance with statutory evaluation requirements and procedures. Effectively, the efforts of the legislature to streamline tenure proceedings are rendered a complete nullity. In sum, the terms of the applicable statute, regulatory provisions and guidance issued by the Department of Education all confirm that the exclusive means by which to bring inefficiency charges against a teacher is through Section 25 and only Section 25. The District is seeking to amend the charge against the Respondent so as to pursue the charges under Section 8. Arbitrators have flatly rejected such attempts as held by Arbitrator Simmelkjaer in the matter of Thomas supra held that:

> The Respondent logically argues that the District, having brought the charges pursuant to Section 25 is bound by the procedures in that section of the statute. Failure to adhere to these requirements result in the tenure charges being dismissed. On this point, the District cannot rehabilitate charges found to be deficient under Section 25 be reconsidered under Section 8 as a default position. The District cited absolutely no language in Section 25 of the Act or any other authority which would indicate that the legislature intended for deficient inefficiency charges to simply proceed to arbitration via Section 8 of the Act.

Similarly, Arbitrator Simmelkjaer also held in Ursula Whitehurst in the State Operated School District for the City of Newark, Agency Docket No. 282-9/14.

> The arbitrator is not convinced that having dismissed the charge against Miss Whitehurst based on the District's non-compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 through its utilization of the Respondent's annual Summative Evaluation for the 2012-2013 school year, he can now proceed to a hearing under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

It is undisputed that the District may proceed against the Respondent on statutory grounds other than inefficiency by filing such charges in accordance with Section 8. However, the District cannot file inefficiency charges on alternative grounds or once its filing under Section 25 has been found deficient, rehabilitate the inefficiency charges under Section 8 and then proceed to arbitration on this basis. Had the legislature in enacting TEACHNJ intended this outcome, it would have written the appropriate language. See also, In the Matter of Tenure Charges of Inefficiency of Sandra Cheatham and the School District of the City of Newark, Agency Dkt. No. 226-8/14, Arbitrator Stephen M. Bluth, wherein the request of the District to convert a tenure charge under Section 25 to a Section 8 matter effectively would give the District two bites at the apple and rejected that request. See also, In the Matter of the Tenure Charges against Reninta Williams and the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Agency Docket Nos. 211-8/14 and 217-1/15 wherein Arbitrator Tina Schneider Denenberg, citing the decisions in Whitehurst and Thompson, rejected the District's pursuit of charges under Section 8 as well. It is argued that if the legislature had intended for deficient Section 25 inefficiency charges to proceed to arbitration via Section 8, it would have so stated. Instead, it specifically and clearly revamped the entire process of bringing inefficiency charges against a teacher, removing them from the general framework of Section 8 and creating an entirely new and specific process under Section 25. Section 25 separated out inefficiency from all other charges with its own statutorily and regulatory provisions concerning unique timeframes, procedures and requirements, all of which are different from the requirements set forth in Section 8 which involve charges brought on grounds other than inefficiency.

Accordingly, based upon all of the above arguments, the Respondent urges that the instant charge of inefficiency be dismissed and Yarborough be made whole for any lost wages and benefits.

PETIONER'S ARGUMENT IN OPPOSITION TO THE MOTION

On May 15, 2015, the Petitioner filed a brief in opposition to Respondent's Motion to Dismiss. The Petitioner makes the following arguments:

1) The amended tenure charges were timely filed and the State Appointed Superintendent completed a Certification of Determination within the time limits for tenure charges. The arbitration award dismissing the original tenure charges was issued on December 29, 2014. The Petitioner's amended tenure charges were submitted to the State Appointed Superintendent on or about January 6, 2015. On or about January 7, 2015, the State Appointed Superintendent advised the Respondent that the tenure charges had been amended and that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1, the Respondent had fifteen (15) days to submit a response to same. A response was filed by the Respondent with the District on or about February 13, 2015. Thus, the District then had forty-five (45) days from February 13, 2015 as to make a determination as to probable cause on the amended tenure charges. The District certified this determination on the 40th day, on March 25, 2015. On March 27, 2015, the 42nd day, the District filed the amended tenure charges and certification with the Commissioner of Education and notified the Respondent of the determination of probable cause. The Commissioner of Education acknowledged receipt of the amended tenure charges and noted the applicable timeliness for same on or about March 21, 2015. The Commissioner did not find any procedural defects for the filing of the amended charges and on April 24, 2015, this was referred to Arbitrator Gerber on the Section 8 charges. Therefore, the amended tenure charges were timely filed in accordance with the clear procedures set forth for tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-13, and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(B)(4).

2) The evaluations of Respondent for the 2012-2013 school year are valid as Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act was in effect and in full force in the 2012-2013 school year. TEACHNJ was enacted on August 6, 2012 and was effective prior to the start of the 2012-2013 school year. The effective date of the adoption of TEACHNJ was provided as stated in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117, "adopted L. 2012, c. 26 ¶1, approved August 6, 2012 in the 2012-2013 school year." The statute provides thereafter (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-118 through 119), that it was adopted "August 6, 2012 in the 2012-2013 school year." In addition, the statutes that established the procedure for adjudicating tenure charges N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 through 17.5 also cite that same was approved "August 6, 2012 in the 2012-2014 school year."

   The District piloted a new teacher evaluation system in the 2011-2012 school year, not 2012-2013 as asserted by the Respondent. Thus, evaluations conducted in 2011-2012 pilot did not "count" for official purposes, but the experience of that pilot program informed the development of the TEACHNJ process adopted, approved and implemented in the subsequent school year, 2012-2013.

   It is indisputable that the legislature purposefully adopted and approved TEACHNJ August 6, 2012 in the 2012-2013 school year. There is no question that the evaluations in 2012-2013 were to be used towards determining if tenure charges were warranted.

   On October 24, 2014, the Department of Education notified Respondent to the District's request for clarification with respect to its intent in "Guide to TEACHNJ Act" states that "no evaluation outcomes in the 2012-2013 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-2014 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place and the first year when the Summative rating "clock" will start."

   Such clarifications did not indicate a prohibition on school districts to use 2012-2013 evaluation data to make personnel decisions such as the decision to renew or non-renew a tenure teacher to the decision to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency charge against a tenured teacher. The Department did not perceive any limitations to the use of evaluation rubrics in the 2012-2013 school year for personnel decisions as no such limitation is mentioned in the TEACH NJ Act.

The Department of Education is the agency tasked with taking all actions necessary for the Act's implementation. It is for that agency or a reviewing court of competent jurisdiction to evaluate the legislative intent of the Act. Nowhere in the limited purview of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 is "consideration for an arbitrator in rendering a decision."

TEACHNJ required school districts to institute pilot programs to test their new evaluation rubrics by January 31, 2013 at the latest. Neither the legislature nor the Department of Education required school districts to wait a year to implement their evaluation rubrics if the rubrics had been adopted and approved earlier. N.J.S.A. 18:A:6-17.2 provided the latest dates by which districts were required to test and implement their new rubrics. They did not prohibit implementation of approved rubrics earlier than the stated deadline. Nothing in TEACHNJ, or any regulations, provides that evaluations performed in 2012-2013 in accordance with an adopted, approved rubric are to be treated differently from those performed in 2013-2014 for purposes of triggering tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. See IMO Tenure Hearing of Renee Pulliam-Newell and State Operated School District of Newark, Agency Docket No. 276-9/14 where the Commissioner of Education upheld tenure charges for inefficiency under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 based upon annual summative ratings for consecutive years 2012-2013 and 2013-2014.

In the Mater of IMO LaRhonda Ragland and the State Operated School District for the City of Newark, Docket No. 258-9/14, Arbitrator Timothy Brown, concluded that he had the authority to review the tenure charge to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and once the Commissioner transferred the matter, the arbitrator was required to hear the merits of the case. The arbitrator concluded that "the Commissioner's referral of this matter to me was specifically pursuant to TEACHNJ Section 25 and no other Section of the Act and grants me the narrow authority to determine the case under the provisions of Section 25 and no other." The District argues that the teacher evaluations conducted within the District in 2012-2013 were valid, effective and counted for all purposes, including to support tenure charges such as this. The Respondent's contention to the contrary should be rejected.

3) The arbitrator has jurisdiction to decide this matter for inefficiency under Section 8. In Chavez, s*upra*, the arbitrator found that TEACH NJ provides more broad authority for arbitrator review of tenure charges than that narrowly provided in Section 23 [now N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16]. Section 22 of the Act [now N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1] provides, among other things, "the Commissioner of education shall maintain a panel of 25 permanent arbitrators to hear matters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. The plain meaning of such langue supports the conclusion that the Act grants authority to arbitrators to consider all types of tenure charges, including inefficiency charges beyond merely those covered by Section 23."

Similarly, IMO the Tenure Hearing of Dr. Audrey Cuff, Cumberland Regional School District Board of Education, Docket No. 71-3/14 (June 26, 2014), the arbitrator stated:

> As the parties have acknowledged, this proceeding was initiated before the new procedures of the TEACH NJ Act could be fully implemented. Under TEACHNJ, charges of inefficiency can only be brought where there have been two annual evaluations conducted in accordance with the "rubric adopted by the Board and approved by the Commissioner. C.L. 2012 c. 26, [N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17(3)(d)]. Accordingly, until such time as there have been two annual evaluations, inefficiency must be decided upon the old standard."

Upon review of the evidence set forth at the hearing, the tenure charges alleging inefficiency were sustained and the teacher was dismissed.

The contention that an inefficiency charge cannot proceed on any basis other than N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and that a charge cannot proceed on that basis either, until all applicable requirements are met, that is, the legislature intended to hand poorly performing teachers a "free pass" for two years after the Act's effective date, has been rejected by TEACH NJ arbitrators. See in the matter of IMO Tenure Hearing of Henchey, Agency Dkt. No. 8-15 January 3, 2015 where the arbitrator stated "to hold otherwise would be to usurp the power of the legislature." (Id. at pg. 8-9). See also the matter of IMO Tenure Hearing Pugliese, Agency Dkt. No. 272-9/12, February 15, 2013, confirmed Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Div. Essex County, Dkt. No. C84-13, September 16, 2013, Appeal pending, Dkt No. A-000-57-13.

Arbitrators in several cases in which Section 25 charges have been dismissed have suggested that dismissal might not have been required if the charges had been pled, in the alternative on the basis of Section 8 as well as section 25 Where Section 25 of TEACHNJ is inapplicable because it was held that a teacher cannot be based on two years of ineffective or partially effective ratings, a school district must nevertheless be permitted to proceed with an inefficiency charge in an appropriate case. More importantly, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 provides a statutory basis to do so.

Since TEACHNJ's adoption, arbitrators have not hesitated to consider tenure charges of inefficiency in non-mandatory cases pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

Accordingly, even if the arbitrator here concludes, notwithstanding the facts and argument presented herein, that the requirements for inefficiency tenure charges under Section 25 have not been met, the inefficiency charge must be evaluated under Section 8.

4) The role of the arbitrator is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1 is limited. Tenure charges are no longer transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law and are instead submitted to an arbitrator to be evaluated under specific criteria. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1, the arbitrator's authority is confined to determine based on the evidence presented at hearing whether or not:

    1) The employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;

    2) There is a mistake of fact in the evaluation

    3) The charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or

    4) The district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.

    For the charges regarding inefficiency under Section 25, the arbitrator can only make a determination on the four elements set forth above; thus a hearing on the merits on the District's inefficiency charges under Section 8 and Section 25 must be heard pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1. Therefore, at this juncture, the arbitrator is required to make a determination in effect and conduct a hearing on this matter.

6) The Doctrine of res judicata does not apply to preclude the instant charges. Res judicata is a term that refers broadly to the common law doctrine barring relitigation of claims or issues that have already been adjudicated. Velasquez v. Franz, 123 N.J. 498, 505 (1991). The doctrine of res judicata will only apply to a final and valid adjudication of the merits of a claim. The merits of the amended tenure charge against Yarborough were never adjudicated and thus the defense does not apply. The District previously filed an inefficiency tenure charge against Respondent (Docket No. 268-9/14) under Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act. The arbitrator dismissed the charge on the basis of the argument concerning the applicability of Section 25. See In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Leonard

Yarborough supra. The arbitrator did not reach the merits of the charge under Section 8 and never addressed the issue of inefficiency per se. Thus, Section 8 was not adjudicated. Even if the District is bound by the arbitrator's decision in the previous matter, it is not precluded by that decision from bringing the instant charge because the arbitrator did not address the charge now presented under Section 8.

While the two charges of inefficiency against the Respondent have been based upon the same facts, they are supported by different statutory authority. Therefore, this is not a "second bite of the apple" as Respondent asserts and this matter must proceed to a hearing for a determination on the merits of the inefficiency charge under Section 8.

Assuming arguendo that it is determined that the issue of Respondent's inefficiency has already been litigated The Restatement (Second) of Judgments, supra ¶28, sets forth the following with regard to claim preclusion:

> Although an issue is actually litigated and determined by a valid and final judgment, and the determination is essential to the judgment, negation of the issue in a subsequent action between the parties is not precluded in the following circumstance[s]: 2) the issue is one of law and (a) the two actions involve claims that are substantially unrelated or (b) a new determination is warranted in order to take account of an intervening change in the applicable legal context or otherwise to avoid inequitable administration of the laws.

Here the initial determination by the arbitrator essentially set forth that the evaluations of 2012-2013 could not be utilized under Section 25 of TEACHNJ. Unless the District is now permitted to proceed with tenure charges under Section 8, the evaluations during that time period cannot be utilized at all for the purposes of tenure charges. This is clearly an inequitable administration of the TEACHNJ Act and a new determination which takes into account the evaluations and performance of the Respondent is warranted.

7) The entire controversy doctrine is not applicable. Rule 4:30A requires all claims against all potential defendants be brought in one encompassing litigation. The threefold objectives behind the doctrine are 1) to encourage the comprehensive and conclusive determination of a legal controversy; 2) to achieve party fairness, including both parties before the court as well as prospective parties; and 3) to promote judicial economy and efficiency by avoiding fragmented, multiple and duplicative litigation. Cogdell v. Hospital Ctr. at Orange, supra.

Respondent asserts that the District is relitigating the tenure charges against him because these charges have already been brought before and arbitrator and the District lost. However, that decision was not based upon Respondent's evaluations or the merits of the District's argument. The previous charges were dismissed against the Respondent based upon the arbitrator's interpretation of TEACHNJ which he determined does not allow for evaluations from the 2012-2013 school year to be considered in tenure matters. This is not a conclusive determination of the legal controversy presented between the parties. Further, a dismissal of these charges would not achieve an equitable result because the District would essentially be unable to bring tenure charges against any teachers based upon their poor evaluations from the 2012-2013 school year. Lastly, this charge does not constitute a duplicative litigation because the merits of the charges have yet to be heard. Accordingly, the District's tenure charges against Respondent should proceed to hearing and a determination on the merits.

8) The doctrine of Law of the Case is not applicable. The doctrine sets forth that unreversed decisions made during the trial by the same court regarding questions of law should not be disturbed. State v. Weldan, 100 N.J. 187, 203 (1985). The policy for such a doctrine is that "once an issue is litigated, relitigation should be avoided if possible." However, the law of the case doctrine is discretionary. State v. Weldan (supra at 205). The doctrine does not apply in matters which contain an "ambiguous or uncertain decision" Sisler v. Gannett Co., Inc., 222 N.J. Super 153, 160 (App Div. 1987) Certif. Denied, 110 N.J. 304 (1988). Additionally, the doctrine is usually applicable in situations "where a judge must decide where a ruling made in one trial stage of the action is binding throughout the remainder of the trial." Sisler v. Gannett (Supra at 159).

In the instant matter, the law of the case doctrine is clearly inapplicable. The initial charges against the Respondent were dismissed on a procedural issue regarding Section 25 of TEACHNJ. The arbitrator did not review any evidence in support of the charges in this dismissal, nor did he analyze the legal sufficiency in the District's position. Also, the arbitrator's decision was ambiguous with regard to utilizing the authority of Section 8 to bring the charges. The issue regarding the substance of the District's underlying charges was never litigated and no legal determination was made in this regard. This issue has yet to be argued, let alone re-litigated.

Additionally, the application of this doctrine is discretionary and should be applied flexibly to serve the interests of justice. State v. Weldan supra at 205). Here, the interests of justice would not be served by procedural dismissal. If the evaluations for the 2012-2013 school year do not count for purposes of tenure charges under Section 25, and the District's request to charge Yarborough under Section 8 was denied, Yarborough simply gets a free pass for his poor performance for this time period. This was clearly not the intent of the drafters of TEACHNJ. The interests of justice would be served by permitting this matter to proceed to a hearing on the merits.

DISCUSSION

In granting the Motion to Dismiss of the initial tenure charges against the Respondent, this arbitrator, in applying the doctrine of collateral estoppel relied upon the decision of Arbitrator Joyce Klein in Elena Brady, supra. In that Opinion and Award, the arbitrator did not address whether the District could proceed with tenure charges against the Respondent under Section 8, Rather the Award was limited to the finding that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 does not provide for consideration of a summative evaluation for the year 2012-2013. As the arbitrator stated:

> The notice of "charges based upon inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6—17.3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-3.5.1" against the Respondent charge her with inefficiency under Section 25 N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17 rather than Section 8N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, which covers tenure charges other than those of inefficiency under the new provisions of TEACHNJ. The District's efforts to proceed under Section 8 are limited by the charges themselves, which include N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17-3 and not N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. The District cannot seek to amend its charge to include N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 at this juncture. As there is no basis for proceeding under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, I do not address whether such a proceeding would be warranted based upon the record in this case. Supra. Pg 24

Accordingly, since the Award relied upon in granting the original Motion to Dismiss never addressed whether tenure charges may be brought based upon conduct during the 2012-2013 school year, the Respondent's arguments that this matter was subject to res judicata or that the matter is bound by the Law of the Case simply do not apply.

Further, I the District's Amendment to the tenure charges in this matter is not untimely. The initial opinion and award dismissing the tenure charges was issued on December 29, 2014 and the District notified the respondent of its intention to file an amendment to its tenure charges on or about January 6, 2015 or approximately 8 days later. As argued by the District, every subsequent action by the District and Department of Education fell within regulation guidelines. There is no rule directly on point concerning the timing of the filing of amended charges after the granting of a Motion to Dismiss the original charges. However, the timing of the Petitioner's Amendment is certainly timely. The Respondent argues that all filings must be timed from the filing of the initial tenure charges but such an argument has no legal support and is unconvincing.

The issue of this arbitrator's jurisdiction to rule upon the instant motion has been previously determined. See City of Newark and Elena Brady, supra. This arbitrator does have authority to rule upon the instant motion.

Further, I find that, pursuant to the Entire Controversy Doctrine, the District had an obligation to present its entire controversy in its initial pleadings.

> The entire controversy doctrine has evolved "to eliminate delay, prevent harassment of a party ..... and promote fundamental fairness." See Barres v. Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc. 74 N.J. 461, 465 (1977) (Schreiber J., dissenting). See Cogdell v. Hospital Ctr., supra

The Entire Controversy Doctrine embodies the principle that the adjudication of a legal controversy should occur in one litigation at which all of the claims and defenses of the parties should be presented. When an action is brought, alternative causes of action should be included in the initial pleadings. There was nothing to prevent the District from alternatively pleading a count of inefficiency under Section 8 in its initial papers. The Respondent here faced tenure charges to remove him from his position as teacher and was successful in having those charges dismissed, only to have a second set of charges re-filed concerning the identical alleged facts. Although the District argues that it would be inequitable to prevent it from allowing to present its case on the merits, the harm done to the Respondent would be far greater. It is a denial of fundamental fairness to force the respondent to defend his face an action regarding the identical facts which would deny him of his position a second time. As Arbitrator Bluth held in Sandra Cheatham, supra "the District is not entitled to two bites at the apple."

It is not necessary to make a determination as to whether the evaluations for the 2012-2013 school year may be used in bringing a charge of inefficiency under Section 8. I note however, in a prior matter, this arbitrator did take evaluations of 2012-2013 into consideration in a tenure proceeding where the parties did not challenge the Board had a right to do so. In the Matter of Aubrey Cuff supra.

Accordingly, I enter the following:

The Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the charges in their entirety is granted and Respondent Leonard Yarborough shall be made whole for all lost wages and benefits.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent State Board of Examiners (SBE) that she had not met the requirements for issuance of a certificate of eligibility (CE) for the position of Teacher of Preschool through Grade Three. Specifically, the SBE disqualified twelve liberal arts credits out of 125 credit hours which petitioner completed at Baptist Bible College, leaving her short of the 60 liberal arts credits required for the CE she desires. Petitioner holds a Bachelor of Science degree from the college, where she majored in Bible. The parties mutually agreed to proceed without a hearing, and the SBE filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3), the issuance of a teaching certificate for preschool through grade three requires completion of "a liberal arts, science dual content or interdisciplinary academic major or a minimum of 60 semester hours in liberal arts and/or science"; the SBE's basis for the denial of the requested CE was that the petitioner's coursework at Baptist Bible College did not constitute the required liberal arts credits because they were "not intended to provide general knowledge," but, rather, were "in depth study of a particular discipline"; the SBE's interpretation, however, created a separate basis for evaluating a Liberal Arts major that contravened the plain language of the regulation that defines same; Theology and Biblical Studies is comparable to other traditional liberal arts majors listed in the regulation; and there was no evidence to establish that the Theology and Bible course of study at Baptist Bible College is vocational in nature. The ALJ concluded that the preponderance of evidence supports a reversal of the SBE's decision. Accordingly, summary decision in favor of the petitioner was granted, and the ALJ ordered reversal of the SBE's decision.

Upon review, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that the ALJ made no findings of fact regarding which course credits had been counted or rejected by the SBE in assessing the 60 semester-hour liberal arts requirement. Absent specific factual findings in this regard, the Commissioner was unable to determine whether the SBE's decision was consistent with applicable statutory and regulatory provisions. Accordingly, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for further action and development of the record consistent with this decision.

NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by respondent, State Board of Examiners ("Board"), and petitioner's reply thereto. In her petition of appeal to the Commissioner, petitioner challenges the Board's May 22, 2014 decision denying her application for issuance of a Teacher of Preschool through Grade Three Certificate of Eligibility ("CE") on the basis that she lacks 12 of the 60 semester-hour liberal arts credits required under N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3).[1]

Petitioner was awarded a Bachelor of Science degree in Bible from the Baptist Bible College and Seminary ("BBC"), with a major in "Teacher Education – 4 Year – Elementary Education." (Petitioner's official transcript) Her official transcript further indicates she earned 125 semester-hour credits through coursework in a variety of disciplines. In July 2013, petitioner was informed that her application for a CE was deficient because she lacked

[1] N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3) provides that candidates seeking a Preschool through Grade Three Certificate of Eligibility shall, among other requirements, "complete a liberal arts, science, dual content or interdisciplinary academic major or a minimum of 60 semester hour credits in liberal arts and/or science." The regulation was cited as N.J.A.C. 6A:9-11.1(a)(3) prior to the amendments which took effect on July 7, 2014.

12 of the 60 semester-hour liberal arts credits required under N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3).[2] Following notification that she failed to satisfy the requirements for certification, petitioner requested a credentials review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-4.13(a)[3] and provided the Board with additional information concerning the theology and bible course credits she completed at BBC, including full course descriptions. N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-4.13(a); (Board Decision at 1)

After considering petitioner's application, the Board issued a written decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-4.15[4] declining to find that certain credits she earned upon completion of "theology and bible" courses at BBC constituted liberal arts credits. The Board determined that a review of the course descriptions did not "suffice as providing a one-to-one correspondence between the licensure deficiency, i.e. 12 liberal arts credits, and what [petitioner] proffered" and denied petitioner's application for certification. (Board Decision at 2-3) Neither the Board's decision nor anything else in the record indicates specifically which course descriptions the Board reviewed during its assessment.[5]

This appeal followed. Subsequently, respondent filed a motion for summary decision and the parties agreed to proceed without a hearing. Upon review, the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") denied respondent's motion, reversed the Board's determination, and granted summary decision in favor of petitioner. (Initial Decision at 4) Yet no findings of fact were made by the ALJ as to which course credits the Board had rejected, or which course credits the Board counted toward the 60 semester-hour liberal arts credits requirement under

[2] Because the record does not contain a copy of this decision, presumably made pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-5.15(b), the Commissioner is unable to determine which of petitioner's 48 course credits were counted toward this requirement, and which course credits did not qualify as liberal arts credits.

[3] This provision was cited as N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.13(a) prior to the amendments which took effect on July 7, 2014.

[4] This provision was cited as N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.15 prior to the amendments which took effect on July 7, 2014.

[5] Petitioner's official transcript contains 12 three-credit courses coded as either theology ("TH") or bible ("BI"), comprising 36 of the 125 total credits she earned at BBC.

N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3). Furthermore, the Initial Decision is devoid of citations to the record and lacks the requisite listing of exhibits admitted into evidence. N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.3(c)11. Adding to the confusion is a statement in petitioner's reply to respondent's motion, which indicates that the Board accepted "many" of her "religion" courses and rejected others. (Petitioner's April 6, 2015 reply to motion at 4)

When a Board decision denying a request for issuance of a certificate is appealed to the Commissioner, the appropriate standard of review is "whether the decision is consistent with the applicable statutory and regulatory provisions." Walder v. Board of Examiners, Commissioner Decision No. 503-14, decided December 24, 2014, at 3. Absent specific factual findings as to which course credits were accepted by the Board in satisfaction of the 60 semester-hour liberal arts credits requirement under N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3), which course credits were rejected by the Board, and which course descriptions were evaluated by the Board in connection with petitioner's subsequent request for a credentials review, the Commissioner is unable to determine whether the Board's decision was consistent with applicable statutory and regulatory provisions.

Accordingly, the Commissioner is constrained to remand the matter to the OAL, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.7, for further action and development of the record consistent with this decision.

Record Closed: April 22, 2015 Decided: April 28, 2015

BEFORE TIFFANY M. WILLIAMS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The facts in this matter are undisputed and are FOUND as FACT. The petitioner applied for her Certificate of Eligibility for a Teacher of Preschool through Grade Three. Her application was denied by the Board on May 22, 2014, and the petitioner appealed requesting a credentials review. On April 4, 2014, the Board heard the application for the credentials review and ultimately determined that the petitioner was short twelve credits of liberal arts classes; therefore, was not eligible for the requested certificate. The Board has specifically disqualified petitioner's twelve liberal arts credits from 125 credit hours completed at Baptist Bible College. Petitioner appealed and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing. During a telephone status conference, the parties mutually agreed to proceed without a hearing, opting to resolve the case by motion instead. By way of motion, the Board requested summary decision in its favor, upholding the denial of the petitioner's application for the Preschool through Grade Three Certificate.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

It is undisputed that the Board has been delegated the authority to oversee the issuance and revocation of teaching certificates in the State of New Jersey. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38. The Petitioner bears the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the evidence that the Board improperly denied her teaching certificate. The issuance of a teaching certificate for preschool through grade three instructions requires completion of "a liberal arts, science dual content or interdisciplinary academic major or a minimum of 60 semester hours credits in liberal arts and/or science." N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-10.1(a)(3).

Having reviewed the undisputed facts and the briefs of the parties, I CONCLUDE that the preponderance of the undisputed evidence compels a reversal of the Board's decision. In support of summary decision, the Board rests on the original articulated basis for the denial—namely that the petitioner's coursework from Baptist Bible College did not constitute liberal arts coursework because the credits were "not intended to provide general knowledge, rather, in depth study of a particular discipline." (See Board's Br. at 3.) I disagree with the Board's analysis on several respects. First, the Board's analysis is concluding that a Theology course of study does not meet the definition of a "Liberal Arts Major," is not supported by the relevant regulatory authority. According to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-2.1, a liberal arts major is defined as follows:

> Any college major, such as philosophy, history, literature, sociology or world language that is intended primarily to > provide general knowledge and to develop an individual's general intellectual capacities to reason and evaluate, as opposed to professional or vocational skills.

The plain language of the regulatory language makes a distinction between courses of study that "develop general intellectual capacities to reason and evaluate," from courses of study that develop "professional or vocational skill." Ibid. The Board rejected Theology as a Liberal Arts Major because it offered "in depth study of a particular discipline." In so doing, the Board failed to follow the criteria embedded in the regulatory guidance, which did not specifically exclude majors as qualifying for Liberal Arts on grounds that they offered in depth study of a discipline. In fact, the Board's interpretation would obviate the existence of any discipline qualifying as a Liberal Arts Major because every field of study involves in depth study of a discipline. The Board, in using its discretion, created a separate basis of evaluating a Liberal Arts Major in a manner that contravened the plain language and common meaning of the governing regulation.

Accordingly, the plain language of the regulation must be afforded due deference. The petitioner's course of study should be evaluated based on whether it develops general intellectual capacities to reason and evaluate or whether it develops a particular professional or vocational skill. It is axiomatic that a Theology course of study does not develop a particular professional or vocational skill. One cannot graduate with a degree in Theology and secure a position as a theologian, or Bible authority. While there are positions within society and in the ecumenical sector where general knowledge of theology or study of the Bible can be helpful, nonetheless, there is no professional or vocational track for Theology majors. When compared to the Liberal Arts disciplines listed in the regulation, Theology is comparable to Philosophy, Sociology, History, Literature and World Languages, where similarly, a graduate cannot assume a position with a company or organization as a philosopher, sociologist, historian, etc. Rather, one possessed with the knowledge and world view that is developed and perpetuated in those disciplines, adopts those perspectives into whatever professional or vocational role selected as one's life work. The course of study in Theology and Biblical studies is no different. Students take the world view, critical thinking, and analytical skills into their life's work.

Moreover, based on the review of the course curriculum at Baptist Bible College, I find no evidence that the Theology course of study is intended to develop a professional or vocational track. In the event that the course of study marketed itself as a dedicated to producing clergy or some particular career vocation in the ecumenical realm, then a Liberal Arts Major designation would not be appropriate given the regulatory authority. Here, on the instant facts, there has been no evidence presented to establish that the Theology and Bible course of study at Baptist Bible College are vocational in nature.

Additionally, public policy would not favor assuming that a Theology course of study can only be utilized for a vocational career in ecumenical work or that it does not promote general knowledge in developing intellectual capabilities. The fact that the petitioner also rendered examples of other colleges and universities that offer Theology courses of study as Liberal Arts Majors, underscores the wide acceptance that a Theology course of study is not a specialized vocational or professional tract.

Finally, I note that the petitioner has maintained throughout the proceedings and appeal process that her credits should be counted as liberal arts credits. Accordingly, she has not been offered the opportunity to fully submit evidence that she also may have alternative education and/or experience that also may provide a separate basis for warranting the issuance of the certificate. In the event that the petitioner is unsuccessful ultimately in this appeal, justice would demand that the Board also give her an opportunity to provide such evidence for the Board's consideration.

ORDER

Accordingly, the Board's decision is REVERSED and summary decision is DENIED as to the Board and GRANTED in favor of the petitioner as a matter of law. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Re: D.L., on behalf of minor child, J.F. v. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY, AGENCY DKT. NO. 78-4/15

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with the above captioned matter and based upon the Board's failure to submit an Answer to the petition, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of petitioner.

On April 15, 2015, D.L. filed a Petition of Appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 et seq. claiming that J.F. was entitled to attend school in the District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition of Appeal was served upon the Board Secretary via facsimile on April 15, 2015, together with an acknowledgment of filing and notice that an Answer to the petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because the Board failed to respond to the initial notice, on May 12, 2015, a second and final notice was sent to the Board Secretary via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that, absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition of Appeal within 10 days, each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and this matter may be decided on a summary decision basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). The certified mail return receipt card indicates that the Board received the second and final notice on May 18, 2015. However, the Board failed to respond to the second and final notice.

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of the Board. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that J.F. is entitled to attend school in the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted by the Board. The Board is hereby ordered to Re: Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, Union County v. E.B., on behalf of minor child, J.B., Agency Dkt. No. 63-3/15

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with this matter and based upon the respondent's failure to submit an Answer to the Petition that complies with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of the petitioner.

On March 25, 2015 the Board filed its Petition of Appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 seeking an order assessing tuition and claiming that minor child, J.B., was not entitled to attend school in the district during the 2013-2014 school year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition was served upon respondent on March 24, 2015 via certified and regular mail, as was an acknowledgment of filing and notice dated March 25, 2015 that an Answer to the Petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because E.B. failed to respond to the initial notice, a second notice was sent on April 17, 2015, via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that – absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition within 10 days – each count in the Petition would be deemed admitted and the matter may be decided on a summary basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). According to information obtained from the U.S. Postal Service, the copy sent via certified mail was not claimed, but the copy sent via regular mail was never returned to this office. E.B. failed to respond to the second notice. A third and final notice, sent to E.B. via regular mail on May 21, 2015 and reiterating the information contained within the prior notice, was never returned to this office.

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of respondent. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that J.B. was not entitled to attend school in the district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted. It is hereby ordered that respondent reimburse the petitioner $15,344 in tuition costs for J.B.'s ineligible attendance in the district during the 2013-2014 school year.

Dear Counsel:

Your April 30, 2015 letter to me – wherein you renew your motion for reconsideration of the decision approving the request of the Camden State-Operated School District to close several school facilities – has been reviewed. For the reasons which follow, your motion is denied.

As Director Duncan advised you by letter dated April 23, 2015, the decision you seek to have reviewed was issued by Director Piaia, not by me. Therefore, there could be no opportunity for a motion for reconsideration, since I have not yet considered the issue. Furthermore, as the regulatory provision in N.J.A.C. 6A:26-17.1(a) was the result of an administrative/technical error, effective with publication in the June 15, 2015 New Jersey Register, the Office of Administrative Law has corrected the error. That section now correctly reads: "All appeals of final determinations made by the Commissioner pursuant to EFCFA and this chapter shall be to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court." Accordingly, the subparagraphs of N.J.A.C. 6A:26-17.1 which apply are (b) and (c).

By letter dated May 1, 2015, as provided in N.J.A.C. 6A:26-17.1(b), you requested an informal hearing before an Assistant Commissioner. Your request was forwarded to Assistant Commissioner Robert Bumpus, who sent you a briefing schedule by letter dated May 29, 2015. If, after the opportunity for written and oral submissions, you are not satisfied with Assistant Commissioner Bumpus's determination, you may appeal his decision to me in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:26-17.1(c) by filing a petition of appeal with Controversies and Disputes pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3.

Petitioners – who include public school parents and students, taxpayers and teachers employed in Newark schools – asserted, inter alia, that the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark's "One Newark" reorganization plan (the Plan) violated the constitutional rights of Newark children to receive a thorough and efficient public education. Respondents filed a motion to dismiss, contending, inter alia, that the petition was untimely filed and that petitioners lack standing to assert their claims.

In considering the within case, the ALJ found that the appeal sought to remedy the disparity in achievement between students in poor urban school districts such as Newark and those in wealthier suburban districts – issues of educational inequality which have plagued educators for years. Nevertheless, she found that the current petition is fraught with procedural and substantive deficiencies such that the District's motion to dismiss must be granted. In so determining, the ALJ concluded, inter alia, that: petitioners' challenge to the Plan in counts two and three of the petition was untimely; 22 of the 25 petitioners lacked standing to bring the within claims, and the claims of the three remaining petitioners were not ripe for adjudication; no facts were alleged in support of the claim in count three that the District violated the Charter School Act; and the fourth count, pertaining to desegration, failed to name indispensible parties. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the petition.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The twenty-five petitioners, who include public school parents and students, taxpayers, and teachers employed in the Newark schools, assert that the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (the District) has implemented a reorganization of its schools, the "One Newark Plan" (the Plan), that violates the constitutional right of Newark children to receive a thorough and efficient public education. Petitioners moreover contend that the District has violated statutory requirements for converting public schools to charters, as well as enrollment procedure requirements for charter schools. Finally, petitioners assert that the Newark schools are de facto segregated; as a remedy, they seek the creation of a county-wide school district.

Respondents have filed a motion to dismiss, contending that the petition was untimely filed; that petitioners lack standing to assert their claims; that petitioners have failed to proffer facts that, if true, establish that the Plan violates their constitutional rights or the provisions of the Charter School Program Act; and that the fourth count of petition, asserting that the Newark schools are unconstitutionally segregated, must be dismissed for failure to name indispensible parties.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners filed a petition of appeal and application for emergent relief with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on August 18, 2014. The District replied via letter memorandum on August 22, 2014. Oral argument was scheduled for September 2, 2014. I conferred with counsel via telephone on August 28, 2014, and it was agreed that the oral argument would be converted to an in-person case management conference, per my letter of the same date.

At the case management conference, it was determined that petitioners would file and serve a motion for leave to amend the petition to name the Commissioner and the Department of Education as parties to this action. They filed and served their motion on September 12, 2014. Thereafter, a telephonic status conference was conducted on October 4, 2014, in which two deputy attorneys general participated on behalf of the Department of Education. During the course of that telephone conference, the deputies urged that the Department of Education was not a necessary party to this proceeding. Notwithstanding his motion to amend, counsel for petitioners appeared to agree. Accordingly, I offered him the opportunity to reflect and determine in consultation with his clients whether he wished to pursue his amended pleading. Via letter dated October 10, 2014, counsel for petitioners advised that after careful review, he had determined that it was unnecessary to name the Commissioner or the Department of Education as respondents. Accordingly, he withdrew his motion to amend, and indicated that his clients would proceed under the originally filed petition.

Respondents filed a motion to dismiss on October 17, 2014. Petitioners filed a brief in opposition to the motion on November 12, 2014. Respondents replied to the opposition on November 24, 2014. Oral argument took place on January 26, 2015.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Respondents' motion is filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g), which permits the filing of a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer. In ruling on a motion to dismiss, this forum's inquiry is limited to examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the petition. Printing Mart-Morristown v Sharp Electronics, 116 N.J. 739, 746 (1989); see also R. 4:6-2(e). While our case law provides that a reviewing forum must search "the complaint in depth and with liberality to ascertain whether the fundament of a cause of action may be gleaned even from an obscure statement of claim . . . ," Printing Mart-Morristown, supra, 116 N.J. at 746 (citing DiCistofaro v. Laurel Grove Memorial Park, 43 N.J. Super. 244, 252 (App. Div., 1957)), dismissal of a complaint "is mandated where the factual allegations are palpably insufficient to support a claim . . ." Rieder v State of N.J. Dep't of Transp., 221 N.J. Super. 546, 552 (App. Div. 1987).

For purposes of the pending motion, "all facts alleged in the complaint and legitimate inferences drawn therefrom are deemed admitted." Smith v City of Newark, 136 N.J. Super. 107, 112 (App. Div. 1975). Accordingly, I FIND as follows:

The District has operated under State control for about twenty years. Respondent Cami Anderson is the State Superintendent for the District, and was appointed by the Governor of the State of New Jersey. Newark is an urban school district, comprised primarily of Black and Hispanic students; the petition states that African-Americans make up 51% of the school population, and Hispanics make up 40%. According to the petition, less than 1% of the student population is white.[1]

On or about November 21, 2013, Anderson publicly announced her proposal for a reorganization that would alter the manner in which students are assigned to local schools; would close failing schools; and would expand the presence of charter schools in Newark. On December 18, 2013, Anderson again publicly discussed her District-wide restructuring of the Newark schools, "calling it the One Newark Plan." A question and answer sheet describing the Plan in detail is attached to the petition as Exhibit A; the sheet describes monthly stakeholder roundtables and School Advisory Board meetings where the plan was discussed, and notes that "[w]e listened intently to the feedback we were getting and the following things become clear: we need to keep focused on solving the challenges, keep working to attain our goals, and make key adjustments based on the input [received]."

Exhibit A is four pages long, was issued in February 2014, and shares details about the Plan, including guidance for families regarding school enrollment in grades K-12. The document likewise details the expansion of charter schools in Newark, noting that they will occupy existing school district buildings. At oral argument, counsel for petitioners urged that there was no finality to the Plan until June 2014; asserting it was not until then that his clients' cause of action became ripe. But he could not offer any documentary evidence that the Plan was finalized then, or even pinpoint the operative event in June 2014 that crystallized petitioners' claims. Petitioners assert that the Plan was developed without any meaningful community input, notwithstanding the fact that the petition itself describes at least three instances, well before the start of the 2014-2015 school year, that the public received information about the Plan from school district administration.

The petition challenges the underlying rationale for the Plan; claims that it is based on faulty data and methodology; and baldly asserts that "the One Newark Plan is doomed to both fail and further negatively impact the majority of African American and Hispanic students at the 'closed' and 'converted' schools." When I pressed at oral argument for an example of how the Plan would discriminate against minority students, particularly when the vast majority of students district-wide are members of minority groups, counsel referred me to Exhibit B to his petition.

Exhibit B reports on the results of a study completed in January 2014 by a Rutgers professor and a doctoral student. Its analysis is based on the information shared by Anderson on December 18, 2013, when she "announced a wide-scale restructuring of the Newark Public Schools." In a thirty-four-page document, the authors challenge the assumptions upon which the Plan is based, and opine that the Plan, including but not limited to its expansion of the presence of charter schools in Newark, will not successfully right what is wrong with the school system. But the report is based not upon hard facts, but rather upon supposition and speculation. The following excerpt is representative. In regard to the use of standardized test scores as an indicator of school success, the report states:

> . . . there is no indication here as to whether a school's student population characteristics were used in making One Newark decisions. Yet the influence of these characteristics on test scores is very well established: if a child lives in economic disadvantage, does not speak English as a first language, or has a special education need, that child is far more likely to underperform on standardized tests.
> If One Newark decisions were made without considering these student characteristics, schools that might be "beating the odds"—performing over expectations, given their student populations—could still be closed . . . .

Thus, the report opines that "student characteristics" should have been a factor in the One Newark determination to close underperforming schools, but its authors admit they do not know if these characteristics were considered by Newark personnel, or not.

Additionally, petitioners assert that under the Charter School Program Act, an existing public school is eligible to become a charter school only if more than half the teaching staff in the school sign a petition in support of this change, as do more than half the parents of students attending the school. See N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-4(b). No such petitions were signed here. But the closed schools were not converted to charters; rather the district leased closed school buildings to charter schools. The petition does not allege otherwise, stating that "[t]he District attempts to avoid the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-4(b) by closing public schools and then leasing the same building that housed those school to private/outside charter school entities." Petitioners term this "a stealth conversion of existing public schools," but proffer no facts that support this contention. Petitioners also assert that the "One Newark Enrolls" process through which the district will make final decisions regarding student enrollment in charter schools on the basis of a "sophisticated mathematic equation/algorithm," likewise violates the Charter School Program Act, which provides that seats in charter school classrooms must be open to all students on a space-available basis. N.J.S.A. 18A:36-7.

Finally, in the fourth count of the petition, it is alleged that the Plan is "a feeble attempt to address and ameliorate the oppressive consequences of the segregation that exists in the Newark School District . . . ." This racial segregation negatively impacts the educational opportunity available to Newark students and isolates them from the rest of the public school population in New Jersey. A dual system of public schools has evolved as a result, which the petition describes as "separate and unequal." Thus, petitioners seek an order regionalizing public education in Essex County, on a county-wide basis.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

This petition seeks to remedy the disparity in achievement between students in poor urban school districts such as Newark, and those in wealthier suburban districts. Petitioners urge that the Plan exacerbates those disparities, violates the Charter School Act, and disserves the students of Newark. The issues of educational inequality raised by this petition are serious and very real, and have plagued educators for time immemorial. But the petition in its present form is so fraught with procedural and substantive deficiencies, that I CONCLUDE that the motion to dismiss filed by the District must be granted.

The Timeliness of the Challenge to the One Newark Plan Counts Two and Three of the Petition

Petitioners have filed their petition pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq., which establishes the procedures for appeals before the Commissioner of Education. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The time for filing is clearly set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), which provides that a petition of appeal before the Commissioner must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education . . . which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." The "notice of a final order, ruling or other action" of the Board contemplated by the rule has been defined as notice "sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley, 131 N.J. 572, 587 (1993).

Here, it is uncontroverted that the District announced that it would be implementing the Plan as early as November 2013; the petition characterizes the Plan so announced with a good bit of detail, averring "that [the Plan] calls for, inter alia, the universal enrollment of all District students and reorganization that will impact over 28 of the District's 70 schools, including school consolidations, closings and the conversion of certain closed schools to charter schools." On December 18, 2013, the specifics of the Plan were announced yet again. A February 2014, pamphlet (Exhibit B) again discusses the Plan and the "charter launch" in detail. Accordingly, the petition arguably should have been filed within ninety days of the November 2013 announcement by Anderson. But giving petitioners every benefit of the doubt, at a minimum, their claims should have been formalized no later than ninety days after the release of the February 2014 pamphlet; or not later than the end of May 2014. The petition was not filed until August 18, 2014. The claims in counts two and three of the petition are thus untimely, and must be dismissed.

This conclusion is buttressed by the report that accompanies the pleading as Exhibit A, and upon which petitioners rely almost exclusively in support of their claims in count two of the petition. The report's findings are based on data reviewed and received from the District itself, and which obviously must have been available to the report's authors in advance of its release in January 2014. Accordingly, query why the petition was not filed within ninety days from the issuance of a report that counsel urges forms the basis of his clients' claims?

The ninety-day rule has been strictly applied by the Commissioner. See Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. 572; Morris-Union Jointure Comm'n v. Bd. of Educ. of S. River, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 453; Markulin v. Bd. of Educ. of Neptune, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 406. The rationale for this requirement was articulated by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 582, as follows:

> The [ninety-day] limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. . . . The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days.

These considerations have particular applicability here. Petitioners had months to call into question the appropriateness of the enrollment and building changes proposed by the Plan, but instead waited until the eve of the start of the new school year, when their challenge would have created the most disruption and confusion for the school children of Newark. They utilized this strategy at their peril. I CONCLUDE that the challenges to the Plan articulated in counts two and three of the petition are untimely and must be dismissed.

The Commissioner has the discretion to relax the timeliness rule, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16, but this extraordinary relief has been reserved only for those situations where a substantial constitutional issue is presented or where a matter of significant public interest is involved, beyond that of concern only to the parties. Portee v. Bd. of Educ. of Newark, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 381, 384; Wise v. Trenton Bd. of Educ., EDU 160-00, Initial Decision (July 25, 2000), adopted, Comm'r (September 11, 2000), aff'd, St. Bd. (January 3, 2001), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. The claims of counts two and three of the petition surely are couched in such terms, asserting that the Plan violates the guarantee that the children of New Jersey receive a thorough and efficient public education. N.J. Constitution, Art. VIII, § IV, par. 1. But to relax the rule, a viable constitutional claim must be articulated by petitioners; I CONCLUDE that they have failed to articulate such a claim, as set forth below.

Standing – Counts Two and Three of the Petition

The twenty-five petitioners comprise a diverse group of stakeholders, to include taxpayers, teachers, students, and parents. Standing is a "threshold justiciability determination whether the litigant is entitled to initiate and maintain an action before a court or other tribunal." In re Six-Month Extension of N.J.A.C. 5:91-1, 372 N.J. Super. 61, 85 (App. Div., 2004); Stubus v. Williams, 339 N.J. Super. 38, 47 (App. Div. 2001). To have standing, a party "must present a sufficient stake in the outcome of the litigation, adverseness with respect to the subject matter and a substantial likelihood that the party will suffer harm in the event of an unfavorable decision." In re Camden Cty., 170 N.J. 439, 449 (2002). A petitioner must show a direct impairment of his own constitutional rights, and must have suffered a distinct injury or harm that was caused by the adverse party and that can be remedied by the administrative forum. See Trombetta v. Atl. City, 181 N.J. Super. 203, 221 (Law Div. 1981), aff'd o.b., 187 N.J. Super. 351 (App. Div. 1982); New Jersey Turnpike Auth. v. Parsons, 3 N.J. 235, 240 (1949); In re Ass'n of Trial Lawyers of Am., 228 N.J. Super. 180 (App. Div. 1988); Herron v. Montclair Bd. of Educ., Initial Decision (April 16, 2014), Comm'r's Decision (June 2, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

Accordingly, a desire to vindicate the public interest is insufficient to confer standing; there must be a specific connection between the petitioner and the public interest he alleges to represent. D.H. on behalf of J.M.H. v. Montclair Bd. of Educ., EDU 9419-04, Initial Decision (November 22, 2004), Comm'r's Decision (December 29, 2004), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. For example, in Montclair a parent challenged the imposition of a testing requirement for enrollment in Algebra, but had no children affected by the controverted test. Her claim was dismissed, with the administrative law judge noting that neither the petitioner nor her child "[would] be directly affected by the challenged policy . . . or harmed by an unfavorable decision." Ibid. As the District correctly asserts, here, the taxpayer and teacher petitioners have no right to a thorough and efficient education, and accordingly, lack standing to bring claims that the Plan violates the New Jersey Constitution. Of the twenty-five petitioners, fifteen fall into this category.[2] None of these petitioners claim to have children that attend either the Newark public schools, or the charter schools that now fill once vacant Newark school buildings.

Four of the petitioners are high school students.[3] But as the District again correctly points out, they too make no allegations that the Plan affected their access to a through and efficient public education. Indeed, there was no change to the school placements for these petitioners in the aftermath of the implementation of the Plan, and these petitioners do not allege otherwise. I CONCLUDE that accordingly, the student petitioners likewise lack standing to assert that the Plan violated the constitutional rights of Newark students, as they proffer no facts that, if true, would reflect a direct impairment of their own constitutional rights. Trombetta, supra, 181 N.J. Super. at 222. For the same reason, they are without standing to assert that the leasing of District facilities to charter schools violated their rights, as this aspect of the Plan in no way affected their access to a thorough and efficient education.

The six remaining petitioners are parents of school age children. Three of these petitioners, however, likewise, do not allege that the Plan directly affected their children's education, and indeed their children attend schools that have remained open and unaltered during the 2014-2015 school year.[4] (See Petition Exhibit A.) I CONCLUDE that accordingly, these petitioners likewise lack standing to assert that the Plan violated the constitutional rights of Newark students, as they offer no facts that would reflect a direct impairment of their own constitutional rights, or those of their children. Trombetta, supra, 181 N.J. Super. at 222. Again, they are likewise without standing to assert that the leasing of District facilities to charter schools violated their rights, as this aspect of the Plan in no way affected their access to a thorough and efficient education or otherwise directly impacted the delivery of educational services to their children, nor does the petition allege otherwise.

Justiciability – Count Two of the Petition

This leaves three petitioners with children who had attended schools that were closed under the Plan, to include Tillman, Moore, and Branch. But even as to these three remaining petitioners, the petition fails to allege that their children's educational programming has been disrupted by the Plan or by their reassignment to another school. Indeed, the petition does less specify any shortfalls in their education in the aftermath of the Plan's implementation. Rather, the pleading simply speculates that the Plan ultimately will not remedy the poor academic performance of Newark students overall.

Neither the courts nor the Commissioner enter rulings that are advisory or abstract. N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. State of New Jersey, 88 N.J. 605, 611 (1982); Crescent Park Tenants Assoc. v. Realty Eq. Corp. of New York, 58 N.J. 98.107; Milano v. Franklin Bd. of Educ., EDU 08606-08, Initial Decision (February 24, 2009), Comm'r's Decision (December 21, 2009), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Our jurisprudence recognizes that a case must "[involve] a real and substantial controversy for which specific relief may be provided through a decree of conclusive character, as distinguished from an opinion advising what the law would be on a hypothetical set of facts." Presbyterian Church v. Florio, 902 F. Supp. 492, 503 (D.N.J. 1995). Claims are ripe for adjudication when the "harm asserted has matured sufficiently to warrant judicial intervention. Issues must be fully developed, clearly defined and not merely speculative, conjectural or premature." Trombetta, supra, 181 N.J. Super. at 223. Petitioners' assertions that the Plan will not remedy educational disparities in Newark are speculative and are not grounded in any facts directly related to the children of these petitioning parents.

Thus, the District correctly urges that these remaining petitioners do not articulate cognizable claims. The expert report upon which petitioners rely readily confirms the correctness of this conclusion. The report ties nothing about the Plan to these specific petitioners and their children's educational programs. It offers a difference of opinion as to how to best reorganize the Newark schools, noting that "if" the reorganization failed to consider "student population characteristics" it "would be" likely to fail. The report appears to contain the conclusions of educational experts, but there must be a factual basis for an expert's opinion. Bahrele v. Exxon Corp., 279 N.J. Super. 5, 30 (App. Div. 1995). When an expert's opinion is merely a bare conclusion unsupported by factual evidence, in other words, a "net opinion," it cannot form the basis of a justiciable claim, and ultimately will be inadmissible at hearing. State v One Marlin Rifle, 319 N.J. Super. 359, 370 (App. Div. 1999).

The petition, which relies almost exclusively on this report as the basis for the claims in its second count, echoes its non-specific and speculative tone. The petition's general message is simply that the Plan won't help make the public schools better, and may make matters worse. By way of example, the pleading avers that "[t]he interventions and school closings by Respondents . . .are doomed to fail." Elsewhere the pleading states that "expanding charters to replace public schools will leave the neediest students to languish in other district schools that are failing or less successful." Nowhere does the petition offer concrete factual allegations that tie the Plan to some sort of disruption in the educational program for the children of petitioners Tillman, Moore, or Branch. I CONCLUDE that the claims of these remaining three petitioners are not ripe for adjudication relative to their claims in count two of the petition that the Plan will not deliver a thorough and efficient education to their children.[5]

The Alleged Violations of the Charter School Act
Count Three of the Petition

It uncontroverted that as a component of the Plan, certain Newark schools were closed, and the buildings that previously housed them were leased to charter schools. Petitioners do not contend otherwise; they nonetheless assert that the District violated the Charter School Program Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1, et seq. But the petition offers no factual support for its contention that the District's actions constituted a "stealth" conversion of the District schools to charter schools.

Indeed, the District has the clear statutory authority to lease school property that it does not presently intend to use, but that may, at some future time, be required for school purposes. N.J.S.A. 18A:20-8.2. The decision to close a particular school likewise lies within the District's sound discretion. Boult v. Passaic Bd. of Educ., 136 N.J.L. 521 (E. & A. 1947); Glynos v Bd. of Educ. of Union Cty., EDU 9008-93, Comm'r (August 31, 1993), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Here, as superintendent of a state-operated school district, Anderson has the power to take the steps needed to properly conduct and maintain the schools of Newark, including the closing of school buildings, when appropriate. See N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-38(b); N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35.

The statute cited by petitioners addresses a very specific situation; one where teachers and parents make application to the Commissioner for conversion of their public school to a charter. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-4(b) requires that they show support for that change through signatures on a petition. What occurred here, the closing of public school buildings and the leasing of the vacant space to an outside entity, likewise requires an approval process, just a different one. Indeed, the Commissioner's review and approval process must include evaluation of a comprehensive application; submission of addenda and supporting documents; an "in-depth" interview; and an on-site preparedness visit. N.J.A.C. 6A:11-2.1 et seq. Our courts have recognized that the Commissioner is "exceedingly careful in the approval of charter schools because of the impact that a wrong decision will have on students who attend a charter school that falters, or worse, fails to provide an educational program that satisfies the constitutional standard of a thorough and efficient education." Quest Acad. Charter Sch. of Montclair Founders Grp., supra, 216 N.J. at 388 (citing In re Grant of Charter Sch. Application of Englewood on the Palisades Charter Sch., 164 N.J. 316, 323 (2000)).

[5] Petitioners urge that there is an inconsistency in the District's position; that is, is the District arguing that the petition is too early, or that it is too late? While these arguments superficially appear inconsistent, they are not. To the extent that the petition alleges that the proposed Plan is flawed, it is too late. To the extent that the petition speculates how the Plan will affect the education for Newark students, it is too early.

The charters that now occupy vacated District buildings assumedly complied with this rigorous process; in any event, the petition of appeal does not aver otherwise. Accordingly, the petition alleges no facts in support of its claim that District violated the Charter School Act, and I CONCLUDE that these claims, as articulated in count three of the petition, must be dismissed.

The Legality of the Universal Enrollment Plan

Petitioners contend that the Universal Enrollment Plan component of One Newark violates the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-7 and N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-8. These provisions of the Charter School Act require that charter schools "be open to all students on a space available basis." N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-7. Similarly, N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-8 specifies that preference must be given to local students; charters must give priority to siblings; and must "seek the enrollment of a cross section of the community's school age population including racial and academic factors." Petitioners assert that the Universal Enrollment Plan violates these requirements.

Importantly, however, the statutes relied upon by petitioners establish obligations with which the charter schools must comply. The petition asserts that the relationship the Plan establishes between the charters and the District causes these obligations to remain unmet. But the petition does not identify the offending charter schools or join them as parties. These charter schools are indispensible parties to this action. The regulations governing the filing of controversies and disputes before the Commissioner require that a "petitioner shall name as a party any person or entity indispensible to the hearing of a contested case." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(b). Failure to do so may be grounds for dismissal. Ibid. A review of R. 4:28-1(a) is instructive, and it provides:

> A person who is subject to service of process shall be joined as a party to the action if (1) in the person's absence complete relief cannot be accorded among those already parties, or (2) the person claims an interest in the subject of the action and is so situated that the disposition of the action in the person's absence may . . . as a practical matter impair or impede the person's ability to protect that interest . . . .

The New Jersey Supreme Court has described an indispensable party as one having "an interest inevitably involved in the subject matter before the court and a judgment cannot justly be made between litigants without either adjudging or necessarily affecting the absentee's interest." Allen B. DuMont Labs v Marcalus Mfg. Co., 30 N.J. 290, 298 (1959). Under this standard, it is readily apparent that these unnamed charter schools have a clear stake in this litigation, and that the rights that petitioners seek to vindicate, would, in part, require an order directing that the charter schools comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-7 and N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-8. Thus, complete relief cannot be granted without their participation, and for this reason, I CONCLUDE that the claims articulated in count three of the petition must be dismissed for failure to name indispensible parties.

Finally, the District suggests that petitioners' claims might be seen as an effort to vindicate the right of these unnamed charters to be unfettered in their enrollment decisions. Viewed this way, the claims in count three nonetheless cannot survive this motion to dismiss. As set forth at length above, these petitioners have standing to assert only rights personal to themselves. They lack standing to assert the rights of the charter schools now housed in vacated District school buildings.

The Claims in Count Four – Desegregation

Count Four of the petition asserts that the District "has or will be attempting to implement its One Newark Plan as a feeble attempt to address and ameliorate the oppressive consequences of the segregation that exists in the Newark School District . . . ." The petition goes on to assert that "[a]s conceived by Respondents Newark School District and Superintendent Cami Anderson, the One Newark Plan falls short of eradicating the corrosive segregated environment that pervades the Newark School District, which is highly segregated by race." It is incontrovertible that while Newark and several other Essex County districts primarily educate minority students, others primarily educate White students. All of these districts, Newark included, reflect the racial and ethnic breakdown of the communities they serve.

The petition asks for the following relief:

> . . . a remedial plan that will eliminate this form of racial segregation in the Newark Public Schools and that will remedy the harms caused by such segregation by the creation of appropriate county-wide or regional-wide school district which would mandate the inclusion of predominately Essex County white suburban school districts into any county-wide or regionalization plan that would effectively desegregate the Newark School District as mandated by the New Jersey Constitution.

The petition names as parties neither the "white suburban school districts" alluded to in the pleading, nor any of the other Essex County districts that are primarily home to minority students. Nor does the petition name either the Commissioner or State Board of Education, all the while averring that it is the Commissioner and State Board of Education who "have failed . . . to fulfill their constitutional responsibility to eliminate racial segregation in the Newark School District . . . ." I CONCLUDE that the fourth count of the petition must be dismissed because it fails to name indispensible parties; to include, either the parties who potentially could provide petitioners the relief they seek, or the parties who would be impacted by petitioners' claims.

New Jersey law specifically provides that "[e]ach municipality shall be a separate school district." N.J.S.A. 18A:8-1. Accordingly, the Newark District is a creature of statute that exists to educate the children domiciled within its boundaries. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. Thus, as the District correctly asserts, it cannot, by law, send its students to neighboring suburban districts and desegregate itself. Accordingly, petitioners' argument that educational services as currently delivered in Essex County violate the rights of Newark school children to a thorough and efficient education, N.J. Const. Art. VIII, § IV, para. 1, is essentially a contention that N.J.S.A. 18A:8-1 unconstitutionally serves, in practice, to segregate students by race.

A contested case is "a proceeding . . . in which the legal rights, duties, obligations, privileges, benefits or other legal relations of specific parties are required by constitutional right or statute to be determined by an agency . . . ." N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2. Accordingly, essential to a properly brought contested case are party respondents who are legally capable of supplying the relief sought by the petition; the petition asserts that the Commissioner has failed to meet his obligations to desegregate schools, but nonetheless fails to name him as a respondent. See Div. of State Police v. Maguire, 368 N.J. Super. 564, 573 (App. Div. 2004). As I advised counsel when we first conferred on this case, and as I continue to CONCLUDE, the Commissioner of Education is an indispensible party to this action. N.J.S.A. 6A:3-1.3(b).

Historical efforts to remedy educational inequality due to disparities in funding are instructive. In Abbott v. Burke, 100 N.J. 269 (1985), Raymond Abbott, and some twenty additional school children brought suit against the Commissioner of Education, State Board of Education, the State Budget Director and State Treasurer, claiming that Public School Education Act of 1975 was unconstitutional as funded. Importantly, the respondents in Abbott v. Burke were the governmental agencies actually responsible for allocating funds to local school districts; they were thus, at least in theory, capable of granting the petitioners the relief they sought.

I thus offer Abbott v. Burke as an example of the procedural course the petitioners should have taken to properly present their claim that the state-wide system of assigning school children to classrooms based on the cities and municipalities in which they reside unconstitutionally deprives them of a thorough and efficient education. Jenkins v. Morris Twp. Sch. Dist., 58 N.J. 483 (1971) offers another model for properly bringing this desegregation challenge. The deputy attorneys general representing the Department of Education successfully convinced petitioners' counsel that their client did not need to be named as a party respondent. Perhaps they had Jenkins in mind. There, petitioning parents brought suit against three districts, seeking their merger to effectuate racial balance. The court determined both that the Commissioner could serve as the forum to adjudicate that dispute, and had the authority to "cross district lines to avoid 'segregation in fact.'" Id. at 501. But it is noteworthy that in Jenkins, all the districts implicated by the desegregation order sought by the petitioners were joined as party respondents.

Thus, even assuming for argument's sake that it was unnecessary to name the Commissioner or State Board of Education as parties, the claims in count four of the petition cannot survive the District's motion to dismiss because petitioners fail to join the other districts whose educational structure and programming would be impacted by the relief sought. Regionalization county-wide would implicate the delivery of educational services to each and every public school student in Essex County. A failure to join each Essex County school district would plainly impede the ability of these districts to protect their interests. See R. 4-28-1(a). Moreover, any order directing such desegregation would call upon the neighboring districts to take the steps needed to effectuate such a broad ranging and monumental change in the delivery of educational services; to include a potential consolidation of staff, school buildings, equipment, and administrative services. Without the participation of these districts, "complete relief could not be accorded among those already parties." Ibid. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that count four of the petition must be dismissed for failure to name indispensible parties. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(b).

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, the petition of appeal is DISMISSED, as follows:

1. As to all the named petitioners, Counts Two and Three of the petition are dismissed on timeliness grounds.

2. As to all the petitioners with the exception of Tillman, Moore, and Branch, Counts Two and Three are also dismissed for lack of standing. The claim that the Universal Enrollment Plan violates the Charter School Act is also dismissed for failure to name indispensible parties.

3. As to petitioners Tillman, Moore, and Branch, Counts Two and Three of the petition are also dismissed for failure to state a justiciable claim. As to these petitioners, the claim that the Universal Enrollment Plan violates the Charter School Act is also dismissed for failure to name indispensible parties.

4. Count Four of the petition is dismissed for failure to name indispensible parties.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Brian Toal	Department of Education
School District of the Town of Kearny, Hudson County	Docket No. 45-3/15

Before: Joel M. Weisblatt, Arbitrator

At the arbitration of the tenure charges captioned above, the parties reached a settlement of the issues presented by the charges. The parties finalized the terms of that settlement and by June 15, 2015, they executed a written agreement resolving the issues. The Arbitrator finds that the terms of that settlement are clearly in the public interest. Therefore the Arbitrator issues this Award approving the terms of the parties' settlement.

Specifically, the parties response to the health issues directly related to the conduct at issue in the dispute, is appropriate. The teacher has agreed to a professional medical assessment and to follow appropriate continuing treatment, as determined.

The Arbitrator hereby finds it in the public interest to approve the parties' settlement.

Skillman, New Jersey

Joel M. Weisblatt, Arbitrator

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement (hereinafter "Agreement") is entered into on this 11th day of June, 2015, by and between Brian Toal (hereinafter "Toal") and the Kearny Board of Education (hereinafter "Board")'

WHEREAS, Toal is employed by the Board as a teacher of music;

WHEREAS, during the 2014-2015 school year, Toal was assigned to Kearny High School;

WHEREAS, the Board certified sworn tenure charges against Toal on February 23, 2015;

WHEREAS, the tenure charges were submitted to the Commissioner of Education and assigned Agency Docket Number 45-3/15;

WHEREAS, Arbitrator Joel Weisblatt has been assigned to hear the aforementioned matter;

WHEREAS, in the interest of cost savings and uncertainty associated with litigation, Toal and the Board desire to resolve the matters with the purpose of the Agreement set out below.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants contained herein, Toal and the Board agree to the following terms in settlement of the pending matter:

1. Toal agrees to undergo a psychiatric evaluation by a professional of the Board's choosing at the Board's cost, consistent with the relevant provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A and N.J.A.C. 6A.
2. Toal will be reinstated and returned to the classroom as soon as possible upon clearance by the evaluating psychiatrist referenced in paragraph 1. In the event of a non-clearance the parties will proceed in accordance with statutes, regulations and contractual dictates for such an event.

3. In the event that the evaluating psychiatrist determines that continuing treatment or follow-up is necessary following the evaluation, the evaluating psychiatrist shall consult with Toal's treating doctor in determining an appropriate continuing treatment / follow-up plan. If continuing treatment is recommended, the Board may request periodic updates to confirm Toal's compliance with said plan.
4. Toal's employment record shall be revised to reflect a thirty (30) day suspension without pay between the dates of February 24, 2015 and March 26, 2015.
5. The period between March 27, 2015 and April 26, 2015 shall be designated as a paid approved leave of absence and Toal shall receive back pay for this period.
6. For the period between April 27, 2015 and the date Toal is cleared/non-cleared to return to work by the evaluating psychiatrist, Toal will be paid for one (1) day out of every two (2) days;
7. Toal will lose one (1) increment.
8. Toal may be reassigned to another school as the Superintendent feels is in the school district's best interests. Toal understands that this transfer does not prohibit the Board for making future transfer decisions in accordance with its policies and procedures.
9. Toal will have no priority for any stipend positions he previously held, nor will be barred from applying for any stipend position going forward.
10. The Board agrees to withdraw the tenure charges currently docketed before the Department of Education as Agency Docket Number 45-3/15.

11. This Agreement does not constitute an admission of guilt or wrong-doing on behalf of Toal or the Board. The Board reserves the right to include the allegations contained in the sworn tenure charges in any future discipline action for purposes of determining appropriate sanctions only.
12. Toal acknowledges that no promise, inducement or other agreement not expressly contained in the Agreement has been made conferring any benefit upon him; that this Agreement contains the entire agreement between Toal and the Board with respect to any benefit conferred and that all prior agreements and understandings, whether oral or written are expressly superseded by this agreement and of no other force or effect.
13. This Agreement is subject to approval by vote of the members of the Kearny Board of Education. Toal will be returned to work as soon thereafter as possible.
14. This Agreement is binding on the parties but does not establish practice or precedent and cannot be relied upon for any purpose other than enforcement of the terms contained herein.
15. This Agreement shall be governed by the law of the State of New Jersey and any action to enforce this Agreement shall be brought in the State of New Jersey.
16. The terms of this Agreement may not be modified, except by written agreement signed by the parties. If any provision of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable for any reason, the remainder of the Agreement shall remain binding and in effect.
17. This Agreement may be executed by the parties in one or more counterparts, and each fully-executed counterpart shall be deemed an original. Any facsimile copy of an executed signature page hereto shall be deemed an original signature page for all purposes.

18. By signing this Agreement, Toal states that:

a. He has read the Agreement;

b. That he agrees with the terms of this Agreement;

c. That he has been afforded an opportunity to consult with a union representative and/or attorney prior to executing this Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, and intending to be legally bound, Brian Toal and the Kearny Board of Education have executed the foregoing Settlement Agreement.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release ("this Agreement") is entered into by and between Jerome D'Agostino ("D'Agostino") and the Camden City School District (the "District"). Together, D'Agostino and the District may be referred to herein as "the Parties."

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made and entered into as of this 27 day of March, 2014, between L.D. on behalf of K.D./K.G. (referred to herein as "PETITIONERS"), petitioners in that certain due process action (the "Due Process Action") pending in the State of New Jersey, Office of Special Education, Office of Administrative Law, and styled L.D. o/b/o K.D., Petitioners, vs. Atlantic City Board of Education, Respondents, Agency Reference Number 2014-20874, on the one hand, and Atlantic City Board of Education (referred to hereinafter as "RESPONDENTS") or "Atlantic City ", on the other hand.

By means of this Agreement, PETITIONERS intend to fully and unconditionally release any and all claims they, their heirs, administrators, executors, personal representatives, beneficiaries, and assigns may have against RESPONDENTS, and each of RESPONDENTS' affiliates, predecessors, successors, parents, subsidiaries, divisions, assigns, officers, directors, representatives, employees, former employees, insurers, attorneys, consultants and agents, (collectively referred to as "Releasees"), the remaining terms of which Agreement are now fully set forth in Paragraphs I through XVII below.

I. Agreement

The Petitioner and Respondent engaging in good faith negotiations have amicably resolved their disputes as asserted by this Agreement, both the Petitioner and Respondent voluntarily agree to the following:

A. Petitioner agrees to immediately withdraw with prejudice the above-captioned Complaint L.D. o/b/o K.D. v. Atlantic City Board of Education (Agency Reference Number 2014-20874) before the Department of Education Office of Special Education and L.D. v. K.D. v. Atlantic City Board of Education (Verified Petition & Emergent Relief Motion Agency Reference Number 40-2/14)before the Commissioner of Education Bureau of Controversies and Disputes. (Collectively the "Complaints")

B. In consideration for withdrawing Petitioner's Complaints the Respondent agrees to reinstate K.D., also known as K.G., at Atlantic City High School immediately upon his release from the Atlantic County Youth Detention Center. If, however, K.D./K.G. remains at a juvenile detention center and receives his education there and enough credits to graduate, the home instruction offer would become null and void. Essentially, the Respondent is unaware of what K.D./K.G. is charged with and how long he will be at the juvenile detention center. Presently, the Respondent agrees to allow K.D/K.G.

return to the Atlantic City High School unless he is forced to remain at a juvenile justice facility.

C. In addition to his immediate reinstatement, Respondent will provide K.D./K.G. a total of 30 hours of compensatory education. This compensatory education will be scheduled upon his reinstatement at the Atlantic City High School. The home instruction will take place either after school hours at Atlantic City High School or at L.D.'s home. The Atlantic City School District will provide home instruction for two hours per week day over the course of three weeks. L.D. will contact K.D./K.G.'s case manager, Tara Lake and inform her of her choice for the location of home instruction. If either the home instructor or K.D./K.G. are unable to participate in home instruction due to illness or a scheduling conflict, they will provide advance notice and reschedule the missed hours. K.D./K.G. agrees that should he miss a session of home instruction without prior notice, those hours will not be made up.

II. Covenant to Not Pursue Further Legal Action

PETITIONERS hereby covenant and agree that the Due Process Action and the Verified Petition and Emergent Relief Motion shall be dismissed with prejudice and without costs as to all parties. PETITIONERS shall take no further action against any individual or entity based upon the matters set forth within PETITIONERS' pleadings and/or based upon any other cause of action that PETITIONERS may have stemming or originating from the provision of education and related services by RESPONDENTS.

III. General Release

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PENNSAUKEN, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to the standards enunciated in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Accordingly, the ALJ's recommended order denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted for the reasons expressed therein. Because the present proceeding fully disposed of all issues in dispute between the parties, no further proceedings are necessary, and this matter is, therefore, dismissed with the request that the Clerk of the OAL return the file to the agency pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-3.3.

Record Closed: June 18, 2015 Decided: June 18, 2015

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ/t/a:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In this matter T.J. (petitioner) filed an application for emergent relief for an order permitting her son, R.D., to participate in the 8th grade commencement ceremony on this date at 6:30 p.m.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 17, 2015, petitioner filed a request for emergent relief which was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on the same day. The matter was assigned to the undersigned for hearing on June 18, 2015. After a hearing which included brief testimony from both parties and the submission of evidence, the hearing and record was closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner states in her Petition (P-1) and respondent confirms, and I so FIND that R.D. failed to attain a passing math grade on his final eighth grade report card. As a result, T.V.J. was notified on June 15, 2015 that her son, R.D., had been denied the opportunity to participate in the 8th grade commencement scheduled to take place on June 18 at 6:30 p.m.

T.V.J. states that she requested an explanation why R.D. would not be able to participate in the graduation when she contends he has satisfied all educational requirements in accordance with New Jersey State Board of Education to be promoted to the 9th grade and that the school district failed to provide this. T.V.J. testified that she was advised by the someone in the county superintendent's office that R.D. met all requirements to graduate but could not identify that individual or refer me or respondent to the provisions of any law or regulations supporting her contention.

In response to petitioner, respondent relied upon the Certification (R-1) and testimony of Thomas Honeyman, Principal of the Howard Phifer Middle School, which R.D. attends. In his certification and testimony, Mr. Honeyman confirmed that R.D. has failed the 8th grade math class. In accordance with the school district's handbook and promotional ceremony practice (J-1), R.D. has not earned the right to participate in the 8th grade promotion ceremony. This policy states:

> Students who attain failing grades in one and/or two courses are required to attend summer school to receive credit for the courses they failed. If the student does not attend summer school he/she will be retained in the grade level, and will not be promoted to the next grade.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The authority to grant emergency relief is governed by the seminal case of Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). That case sets forth the standard by which emergency relief can be granted. In order to do so, the petitioner must demonstrate compliance with all of the following:

1. that he will suffer irreparable harm;
2. that his legal right is settled;
3. that material facts are not in dispute;
4. that he has a reasonable probability of success on the merits and;
5. that the hardship to the petitioner out weighs the hardship to the other party.

With regard to the demonstration of irreparable harm by R.D.'s prohibition to attend 8th grade graduation ceremonies, I am mindful of the position taken by the Commissioner of Education in recent cases. See, e.g., M.L. v. Bd. of Educ. of Ewing, EDU 4949-09, Final Decision (June 15, 2009), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. The Commissioner has observed that harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In past cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity of the harm have frequently been addressed as a totality. They are, however, two separate factors and it is on the basis of this severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of the interest – and not its irreparable nature, that applications of this kind typically fail. In considering these comments by the Commissioner, I am satisfied that there is no adequate after-the-fact remedy or redress from the loss of the 8th grade graduation experience after the event is over, and that irreparable harm has been demonstrated. It is noted, however, that success on this one prong of the Crowe case does not absolve the petitioner from demonstrating compliance with the other requirements.

With respect to whether petitioner's legal right to attend the ceremony is settled, I have attempted to review in the short time available to me provisions of State laws and Regulations in order to locate educational requirements of the State Board of Education to allow R.D. to graduate despite his failing of the math class. I have been unable to locate any such provisions. The only provision I have been able to locate is found at N.J.S.A. 18A:35-4.9(a), which authorizes local boards of education to adopt policies and procedures for pupil promotion and remediation related to district goals, objectives and pupil proficiency. Based upon this provision it appears clear to me that the respondent has the authority to adopt the provisions found in its policy (J-1). In the absence of any further proofs with respect to this issue, I FIND that petitioner has failed to demonstrate that the legal right of R.D. to graduate is settled.

Although I FIND that the material facts in this matter are not in dispute, I FIND that based on the evidence before me, petitioner has not established a reasonable probability of success on the merits.

With respect to weighing the hardship upon the parties if the remedy requested is granted or denied, I have previously recognized that preventing R.D. from participating in the 8th grade graduation ceremony amounts to an irreplaceable loss of a happy experience. However, I also recognize that granting the relief requested for R.D. would undermine the authority of the school district to require students to pass all required courses in order to graduate and that this undermining of authority would have a far reaching effect on the school district in its dealings with its students. Therefore, I FIND that the hardship to petitioner does not outweigh the hardship to the respondent school district.

Because I have found that petitioner has only established compliance with the irreparable harm requirement and has failed to establish compliance with the other requirements, I ORDER petitioner's request for emergent relief be DENIED. This Order resolves all issues raised in the petition.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

WEST WINDSOR-PLAINSBORO REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY	STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT, RESIGNATION, AND RELEASE

The West Windsor-Plainsboro Regional School District, whose principal office is located at 505 Village Road West, West Windsor, New Jersey, 08550, as well as its successors, assigns, officers, employees, agents and representatives (collectively hereinafter referred to as the "District"), and Barbara Jetton, residing at 44 York Road, West Windsor, New Jersey, 08550, (hereinafter referred to as "Respondent") have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Stipulation of Settlement, Resignation, and Release, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them in full and complete settlement of all outstanding issues as detailed below.

WHEREAS, Respondent is a tenured teaching staff member employed by the District as a teacher; and

WHEREAS, Dr. David Aderhold, Superintendent of Schools, filed sworn tenure charges of conduct unbecoming and other just cause against Respondent, which were certified to the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, captioned In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Barbara Jetton, by the West Windsor-Plainsboro School District, Mercer County ("Tenure Charges"), for allegations related to the breach of standardized test confidentiality, and Respondent filed an answer opposing the charges; and the Commissioner of Education, having reviewed the charges and Respondent's answer, determined that the charges were sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in compensation, and accordingly referred the matter to Arbitrator Alan A. Symonette, Esq. ("Arbitrator") for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, Respondent has denied the allegations set forth in the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the Parties are aware of the uncertainty of the outcome of arbitration; and

WHEREAS the proposed Stipulation of Settlement, Resignation, and Release, is in the best interest of the Parties and the public because Respondent resigns from her employment without litigation and it avoids an uncertain conclusion after protracted and costly proceedings at the expense of the public;

NOW, THEREFORE, subject to approval by the Arbitrator, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Concurrent with the execution of this Stipulation, Respondent shall submit an irrevocable letter of resignation to the District, which shall provide for her resignation from the District effective December 31, 2015, ("Effective Date"). (See Exhibit A to the Stipulation, a copy of Respondent's signed letter of resignation).

2. Upon final approval of the signed Stipulation by the Arbitrator, the District shall and hereby does withdraw the instant Tenure Charges. The District agrees to not pursue the subject Tenure Charges against Respondent as long as this Stipulation remains in effect and is not voided by any court or administrative agency of competent jurisdiction. In the event the Stipulation is voided, the District retains the right to file and consider for certification, tenure charges against Respondent, including those tenure charges which have been previously filed against her by the District, and Respondent reserves the right to defend same.

3. Upon final approval of the signed Stipulation by the Arbitrator, Respondent shall remain on the payroll at her current yearly salary of $70,760.00, and she will be immediately placed on paid administrative leave through December 31, 2015. All salary paid for said period shall be subject to all applicable salary withholdings and deductions. Respondent shall not be entitled to any other compensation, including, but not limited to, back-pay.

4. Respondent understands that all compensation, inclusive of monetary and health benefits, under this Stipulation shall immediately cease if her certification is revoked by the State Board of Examiners, or other state appointed agency.

5. This Stipulation is based upon the understanding that Respondent's separation from employment with the District, effective December 31, 2015, will be deemed a voluntary resignation in good standing.

6. The Parties hereby agree and consent that this Settlement Agreement, Release, and Waiver, satisfies the standards set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a)(1) – (4). This includes agreement that the within Settlement Agreement, Release, and Waiver will serve the public interest, eliminating potential additional litigation costs and expenses. The parties agree that settlement of this case is justified by the need for an expeditious and final resolution. As a result of Respondent's irrevocable resignation, the Board will achieve a certain result, in an expeditious manner, at a comparatively low cost, and will avoid the uncertainty of litigation before an arbitrator.

7. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 (a) 6, Respondent has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners. Respondent has been advised of the District's duty to notify the State Board of Examiners she has resigned. Further, Respondent has been advised that the District is legally required to participate in any proceedings initiated against Respondent's license by the State Board of Examiners resulting from the Commissioner's referral.

8. As of the Effective Date, all of Respondent's rights of employment with the District, including but not limited to accrued salary, benefits, tenure and seniority, will permanently end.

9. Respondent will not apply for reemployment with the District at any time and will be deemed to have permanently resigned from her tenured position. If Respondent does apply for reemployment with the District and is approved for employment, the terms of this Agreement shall control and shall be grounds for immediate termination of Respondent's employment.

10. In exchange for the consideration set forth in paragraph 3 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Respondent hereby waives, releases and discharges any and all claims or rights that she has or may have against the District, the District's Superintendent, its Board of Education, and any and all other District officers, employees, representatives, agents, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Released Parties") including any claim for attorneys' fees, costs or other monetary relief. This waiver, release and discharge includes, without limitation, any and all actions, claims, and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, directly or indirectly related to Respondent's employment with the District or separation from employment with the District. 16. The Parties each acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Stipulation and that each is signing this Stipulation freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion or pressure from the other party, with full understanding of its terms and conditions and consents to the terms contained herein.

20. Each party acknowledges that this is the entire agreement of the Parties concerning the subject matter of the foregoing paragraphs, and that there are no written or oral representations, understandings or agreements directly or indirectly connected with this Stipulation.

21. If any provision of this Stipulation is held by a court of competent jurisdiction or determined under applicable law to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions will continue and remain in full force and effect.

22. The terms and conditions of this Settlement Agreement, Release, and Waiver, and Respondent's irrevocable letter of resignation, are subject to the ratification and approval of the Board.

23. Additionally, this Stipulation is subject to final approval by the Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(c), and will become effective only upon approval by the Arbitrator. Attorneys for Petitioner West Windsor-Plainsboro Regional Board of Education

IN THE MATTER OF TENURE CHARGES AGAINST BARBARA JETTON, WEST WINDSOR-PLAINSBORO REGIONAL BOARD OF EDUCATION (MERCER COUNTY)	STATEMENT OF CHARGES OF UNBECOMING CONDUCT AND OTHER JUST CAUSE

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and 6-11, the undersigned, Superintendent of Schools for the West Windsor-Plainsboro Regional School District in Mercer County ("the District" or "Petitioner"), hereby institutes tenure charges against Barbara Jetton (Respondent), a tenured teacher, for unbecoming conduct and other just cause. These charges are based upon incidents occurring during her employment in the 2013-2014 school year, as evidenced by the sworn statement of evidence and supporting documentation accompanying these charges. These incidents were of such a nature to warrant discharge from employment.

PART A: Unbecoming Conduct

The charge of unbecoming conduct is based on the following facts:

1. Ms. Jetton has been employed by the West Windsor-Plainsboro Regional Board of Education ("the Board") as a tenured high school Language Arts teacher.
2. Ms. Jetton has been employed by the District for approximately twelve (12) years.

3. On March 24, 2014, Ms. Jetton attended a training session for test administrators of the Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College Careers ("PARCC") field test to be administered to her students on April 1, April 2 and April 3, 2014.
4. At the March 24, 2014, training session all attendees (including Ms. Jetton) were told that the PARCC field test was confidential and its content should be kept secure, just like the High School Proficiency Assessment ("HSPA") which all attendees had previously administered to their students.
5. At the end of the training session, all attendees were told to read and sign a "Spring 2014 PARCC Field Test Security Agreement," hereinafter referred to as the "Security Agreement."
6. The Security Agreement required inter alia, that each test administrator should "not view test content or student responses" nor "reveal or discuss test content or student responses before, during, or after testing."
7. Ms. Jetton signed the Security Agreement on March 24, 2014, indicating an understanding of its contents.
8. On April 6, 2014, Ms. Jetton sent an e-mail with an attached memo to four fellow Language Arts teachers asking them to review the memo before it was sent to Language Arts teachers and administrators in both of the District's high schools.
9. On April 9, 2014, Ms. Jetton sent the same memo to all District Language Arts teachers, as well as the Principal, Assistant Principal and Administrative Intern at West Windsor-Plainsboro High School North.

10. Ms. Jetton's memo stated, in part, as follows:

> "Last week my Art of the Essay Honors class participated in the PARCC test for the ELA version of the graduation exam. As proctor, I spent a great deal of time reading over their shoulders to see what each test involved, then I debriefed them daily to see what they thought of each assessment."

The memo went on to detail much of the contents of the PARCC filed test she proctored. Ms. Jetton's admitted actions were in direct violation of the PARCC security agreement which she signed on March 24, 2014.

PART B: Other Just Cause

The charge of other just cause is based upon the specifics supporting the foregoing charge of unbecoming conduct.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF CRANBURY, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioner challenged the determination of the respondent Board that her son, A.S., engaged in behavior that fell under the school district's policy against harassment, intimidation and bullying (HIB). This case stems from an incident that took place on or about May 22, 2014. Petitioner's appeal was not perfected until January 30, 2015. The respondent Board filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer, contending that petitioner's appeal was filed beyond the 90-day period allowed under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute here, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; petitioner was properly advised that she could request a hearing before the Board to reconsider the superintendent's decision regarding the HIB finding, and was also advised that the Board's decision could be appealed to the Commissioner no later than 90 days after the issuance of the decision; petitioner requested a hearing via correspondence received by the Board on September 19, 2014; the hearing was held on September 30, 2014, at which time the Board affirmed the superintendent's determination that A.S. had committed acts of HIB; both petitioner and her husband were present at the hearing; the Board's written decision was received by petitioner on October 14, 2014; petitioner submitted an incomplete appeal by mail, which was received by the Department of Education on December 30, 2014; petitioner was informed of the deficiencies in her appeal by letter, which stated that if the incomplete petition was perfected in a timely manner, the filing date of December 30th would be allowed; however, petitioner did not file the perfected petition until January 30, 2015. The ALJ concluded that petitioner failed to file her appeal within the 90 days allowed under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and provided no evidence or law to allow the relaxation of the 90-day time limit. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision to the Board and dismissed the petition.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petitioner's appeal was time-barred under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

BEFORE KIMBERLY A. MOSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, M.S. on behalf of A.S. (M.S. or petitioner) filed an appeal of the determination of the Board of Education of the Township of Cranbury (Board) that A.S.

committed acts of harassment, intimidation or bullying (HIB) contact toward another student. On February 20, 2014, this matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Respondent filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of answer. A conference was held on March 19, 2015. At that time petitioner was given until April 10, 2015 to file a response to the motion. Petitioner requested an adjournment to file her response, which was granted. Apparently petitioner sent her response to the OAL office in Trenton. I received respondent's reply to petitioner's response on May 8, 2015. Respondent sent me a copy of petitioners' response to the motion on May 11, 2015.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the procedural record in the file, I FIND the following FACTS:

On or about May 22, 2014, there was an incident with A.S and another student. The matter was investigated by the District and on June 17, 2014, the Board was provided with a report regarding the Districts findings. On June 23, 2014, petitioner was advised that the District found evidence that A.S. had committed an act of HIB. She was advised that she could request a hearing before the Board and that the Board's decision could be appealed to the Commissioner no later than ninety days after the issuance of the Board's decision. On September 19, 2014, the District received correspondence from petitioner requesting a hearing before the Board with respect to the HIB determination. A hearing before the Board was held on September 30, 2014. The Board affirmed that A.S. committed acts of HIB. It issued a written decision. Petitioner and her husband were present at the September 30, 2014 Board meeting. Jennifer Osborne (Osborne), an attorney for the Board was also present at this meeting. After the meeting, Osborne spoke to petitioner and her husband, informing them that the Board's decision may be appealed to the Commissioner of Education within ninety days. On October 1, 2014, petitioner was sent written notice from the Board by certified mail, advising her of its decision and the fact that she could appeal the decision to the Commissioner of Education within ninety days of the issuance of the decision. Petitioner received the notice on October 14, 2014.

Petitioner states that her petition was timely filed because she mailed it out on December 27, 2014. However, the Department of Education received her letter requesting an appeal of the Board's decision on December 30, 2014. The Department of Education sent petitioner a letter stating that her appeal had to meet the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq. The letter listed five specific items that must be included in the petition including that the petition must be filed within ninety day of the action which is the subject of the appeal. The letter further stated that The Department of Education will hold the materials that were submitted and if the necessary filings were timely submitted December 30, 2014 would be deemed as the filing date. The corrected petition for appeal was mailed by petitioner on January 23, 2015 and received by the Department of Education on January 30, 2015.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This language is substantially similar to the guidelines for summary judgment under R. 4:46-2(c), which provides in part that the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law.

In order to defeat a summary decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing." Use of the summary procedure is aimed at "the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial." Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954).

The New Jersey Supreme Court has encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Id. at 540 (citations omitted).

Although respondent has filed a Motion to Dismiss rather than a Motion for Summary Decision, the same principles apply. I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary disposition. There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing regarding the issue of whether the appeal was timely filed, and the Board is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.2 et seq., known as the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights was enacted to strengthen the standards and procedures for "preventing, reporting, investigating and responding to incidents of harassment, intimidation and bullying of students that occur in school and off school premises." N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.1(f). A parent or guardian may request a hearing before a school board, which must be heard within ten days of the request. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15b(6)(d). Among the obligations of a board of education to respond to a complaint of HIB, it must issue a written decision affirming, rejecting or modifying a superintendent's decision which the parents/guardians have ninety days to appeal to the Commissioner of Education. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15b(6)(e).

N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15(b)(6)(e) provides the following: "...The Board's decision may be appealed to the Commissioner of Education, in accordance with the procedures set forth in law and regulation, no later than 90 days after the issuance of the Board's decision." In this matter the Board issued its decision on September 30, 2014. Petitioner was present at the board meeting. Petitioner was told directly after the hearing that she had ninety days within which to file an appeal on September 30, 2014 by Osborne, the Board's attorney. The Department of Education received an incomplete request for an appeal from petitioner on December 30, 2014, which is ninety-one days after the Board issued its decision. The ninety-day requirement is to be strictly construed and is mandatory. See eg. Wise v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Trenton, EDU 160-00, Comm'r (September 11, 2000), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (January 3, 2001), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/. The date that a petition is filed is the date it is received by the Department of Education, not the date that petitioner mailed the petition.

Petitioner was informed by letter that her petition was incomplete and told that if she filed a corrected petition in a timely manner the petition would be considered filed on December 30, 2014. The Department of Education did not receive the petition until January 30, 2015. This is a delay of several weeks. Petitioner did not timely provide the requested information; therefore the petition was filed on January 30, 2015.

Petitioner in her brief cited two cases where the ninety day requirement was relaxed. In P.P, a minor by his Parent and Guardian v. Board of Education of the Pinelands Regional School District, 2011 N.J. Super.Unpub. LEXIS 66, the plaintiff filed an appeal of a suspension with two counts; Count One requesting his suspension be reversed and expunged from his disciplinary record, Count Two the Board's zero tolerance policy violates his procedural due process rights under the New Jersey Constitution. The petition was filed out of time. The Court affirmed the dismissal of Count One because the petition was filed out of time. Count Two was remanded to consider the merits of the constitutional claim. P.P was decided based on R- 69-6(c) regarding when actions in Lieu of Prerogative Writ shall commence. The present case is not an action in lieu of prerogative writ and there is no constitutional claim in the petition. Petitioner also cites the case of Board of Education of TWP of Waterford vs. Board of Education of Town of Hammonton 2009 N.J. Super. Unpub. 2252. which involved a mediation requirement that would toll the ninety day requirement. There is no mediation requirement in this case.

For the above reasons, I CONCLUDE that petitioner failed to file an appeal within ninety days of the issuance of the Board's decision. I further CONCLUDE that petitioner has not provided any evidence or law to allow relaxation of the ninety day filing timeline.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the matter be DISMISSED. I DIRECT the Clerk to return the matter to the Commissioner of the Department of Education for appropriate disposition.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION

Petitioner – formerly employed as a teaching staff member in respondent Board's school district – alleged that the failure of the Board to employ her for the 2007-08 school year violated her tenure and seniority rights. The petitioner was employed as a teacher in the school district for the 2002-03 through 2004-05 academic years, before taking a Board-approved maternity leave for the 2005-06 school year; she then returned to work for the 2006-07 school year. The petitioner sought reinstatement to her tenured position, together with back pay and emoluments. The Board contended that the petitioner had not acquired tenure because of a break in service, and that her non-renewal in April 2007 as part of a reduction in force (RIF) was proper. The case was heard at the OAL, and the ALJ issued an Initial Decision which concluded that petitioner: had obtained tenure and had 3.9 years of seniority credit at the time of the RIF; should have been recalled by the District in September 2007; and was entitled to retroactive back pay in the amount of $137,212 for the 2007-08 through 2009-10 school years, as well as seniority credit for the same years. In a decision dated May 16, 2013, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision, determining that petitioner had not attained tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 at the time of her dismissal in 2007. Petitioner appealed this decision, and on July 24, 2014, the Appellate Division reversed and remanded the matter to the Commissioner for a determination of petitioner's seniority rights and any consequent entitlement to relief.

On remand, the Commissioner noted that the only dispute between the parties regarding the Appellate Division's instructions on remand was whether the petitioner is entitled to seniority credits for 30 days under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) for her unpaid maternity leave during the 2005-06 school year. The Commissioner found, inter alia, that: the interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) is key to the determination of petitioner's seniority entitlement because the amount of back pay and seniority credit is dictated by whether the petitioner is entitled to 30 days of credit for the 2005-06 school year, when she was out on unpaid maternity leave; and if petitioner receives the 30 day credit for that period, she would have acquired 3.9 years of seniority credit at the time of the 2007 RIF and would have had more seniority than the teacher retained by the District. In light of the Appellate Division's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) in Erica A. Cohen v. Emerson Board of Education, 225 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1988), the Commissioner has no discretion but to find that the petitioner is entitled to receive 30 days of seniority credit for the 2005-06 school year – despite the fact that she was on an unpaid maternity leave for more than 30 days – and therefore, at the time of the RIF, petitioner had 3.9 years of seniority credit and should have been recalled in September 2007. Accordingly, the Commissioner determined that petitioner is entitled to retroactive back pay in the amount of $137,212 and seniority credits for the 2007-08 through 2009-2010 school years.

DARCY KOLODZIEJ,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This matter originated as a petition of appeal filed by the petitioner, Darcy Kolodziej – a health and physical education teacher – challenging the Southern Regional High School District's (District) decision not to renew her employment for the 2007-08 school year due to a reduction in force (RIF). The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued a series of Orders over the course of the litigation that addressed petitioner's tenure and seniority rights and her entitlement to damages, followed by an Initial Decision that confirmed the ALJ's previous findings. The ALJ ultimately determined that the petitioner obtained tenure and seniority rights with the District. The ALJ found that at the time of the RIF in 2007, the petitioner had acquired 3.9 years of seniority credit – which was more seniority than that of Edmond Costa, another physical education teacher in the District who had acquired 3.8 months of seniority credit. As a result, the petitioner should have been recalled by the District in September 2007 instead of Mr. Costa. The ALJ further determined that petitioner was entitled to retroactive back pay, less unemployment benefits received by the petitioner, in the amount of $137,212.00 for the 2007-08,

2008-09 and 2009-10 school years, and seniority credit for those years as if she were properly employed. [1]

In a decision dated May 16, 2013, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision and determined that the petitioner had not attained tenure at the time of her dismissal in 2007. The petitioner appealed the Commissioner's May 16, 2013 decision, and on July 24, 2014, the Appellate Division reversed and remanded this matter to the Commissioner for a determination of petitioner's seniority rights and any consequent entitlement to relief. Specifically, the Appellant Division suggested that the Commissioner evaluate whether the petitioner is entitled to 30 days of seniority credit for the 2005-2006 school year under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b), in light of the fact that the petitioner was out on unpaid maternity leave for the entire school year. [2]

Seniority is part of the regulatory framework adopted under authority of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-10 to establish the order of dismissals among a district's tenured staff in the event of a reduction in force. The only dispute between the parties regarding the Appellate Division's instructions on remand is whether the petitioner is entitled to seniority credit for 30 days under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) for her unpaid maternity leave during the 2005-2006 school year. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b):

> Seniority, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-9 et seq., shall be determined according to the number of academic or calendar years of employment, or fraction thereof, as the case may be, in the school district in specific categories as hereinafter provided. The periods of unpaid absences not exceeding 30 calendar days aggregate in one academic or calendar year, leaves of absence at full or partial pay and unpaid absences granted for study or research shall be credit toward seniority. All other unpaid absences or leaves of absence shall not receive seniority credit.

[1] Pursuant to the ALJ's interim Order, the District reinstated the petitioner to her former position in September of 2010.

[2] Following the remand of this matter from the Appellate Division, the parties were afforded an opportunity to submit their respective positions in connection with the petitioner's seniority rights.

The interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) is a key component of the petitioner's seniority entitlement in this case because the amount of back pay and seniority credit is dictated by whether the petitioner is entitled to 30 days of credit for the 2005-2006 school year when she was out on an unpaid maternity leave. Specifically, if the petitioner receives a 30 day credit for the 2005-2006 school year, she would have acquired 3.9 years of seniority credit at the time of the 2007 RIF and would have been entitled to a position as a physical education teacher for the 2007-2008 school year. On the other hand, if the petitioner does not get credit for 30 days of her unpaid maternity leave, she would have acquired 3.8 years of seniority credit at the time of the 2007 RIF and would have been tied for seniority with Mr. Costa. It is undisputed that in the case of a tie, a board of education has the discretion to determine which teacher to recall.

In Erica A. Cohen v. Emerson Board of Education, 225 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1988) the Appellate Division considered competing seniority rights of two teachers and analyzed the language contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b).[3] One component of the appeal in that case involved a challenge to the State Board of Education's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b). The State Board of Education interpreted the plain language of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) to preclude "credit for any portion of an unpaid leave which, when totaled with all other unpaid leaves during that calendar or academic year, is in excess of 30 days. Erica A. Cohen v. Emerson Board of Education, 1985 S.L.D. 2562, 2573-2574. The State Board further noted that its "interpretation is consistent with the purpose of the seniority system to insure equitable determinations on the basis of actual service, and we find that to broaden the exception provided by N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b) would undermine that purpose." Id. at 2574.

[3] At the time of the Cohen, supra, decision the predecessor regulation to N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) was N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b), which includes the identical language contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b).

On appeal the Appellate Division recognized and accepted the State Board of Education's position regarding the purpose of the seniority system and the importance of "equitable determinations on the basis of actual service." Cohen, supra, 225 N.J. Super. at 10. However, the court rejected the State Board of Education's interpretation of the language found in N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b), and instead found that under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b), the first 30 days of an unpaid maternity leave is counted toward seniority, and any additional leave time is not credited for seniority purposes. The court expounded, "[i]f the Board has determined that 30 days' aggregate leave within a year is sufficiently inconsequential not to affect an employee's seniority rights, then the rule should be equitably applied to those who take more or less than that period." Applying that interpretation of the regulatory language, the court concluded that the petitioner in Cohen, supra, was entitled to seniority credit for the first 9 days of her maternity leave that was paid sick time and the first 30 days of her unpaid maternity leave; and the remainder of her unpaid maternity leave was properly deducted from her seniority credits. Cohen, supra, 225 N.J. Super. at 10-11.

In light of the Appellate Division's interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(b) in Cohen, supra, the Commissioner has no discretion but to find that the petitioner is entitled to receive 30 days of seniority credit for the 2005-2006 school year despite the fact that she was on an unpaid maternity leave for more than 30 days. Therefore, at the time of the reduction in force in 2007, the petitioner had acquired 3.9 years of seniority credit. As a result, the petitioner had more seniority than Mr. Costa and she should have been recalled by the District in September 2007. Finally, neither the Family and Medical Leave Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 2601-2654, nor the Collective Bargaining Agreement between the parties dictate a different result as neither can serve to give the petitioner less rights than that afforded by the applicable regulatory provision.

Accordingly, the petitioner is entitled to retroactive back pay, less unemployment benefits received by the petitioner[4], in the amount of $137,212.00 for the 2007-08, 2008-09, and 2009-10 school years.[5] The petitioner is also awarded seniority credits for the 2007-08, 2008-09, and 2009-10 school years as if she had actually been employed.

[4] The District is responsible for reimbursing the unemployment benefits to the Department of Labor and a copy of this decision will be forwarded to that Department.

[5] Following the remand of this matter from the Appellate Division, the petitioner requested that the Commissioner award her damages in the form of lost wages and other benefits stemming from a RIF that occurred in 2013. Any potential damages that were the result of the 2013 RIF were not a part of this case. If the petitioner believed that the Board violated her tenure and seniority rights in 2013, a separate petition of appeal should have been filed.

[6] Pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1), Commissioner decisions are appealable to the Superior Court, Appellate Division.

SYNOPSIS

On March 18, 2015, the petitioning school district served upon respondent an Order to Show Cause why an order should not be entered suspending his teaching certificate for unprofessional conduct pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for resigning his position on inadequate notice. The respondent failed to answer the order. Respondent was duly advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to respond would cause each allegation raised by the Board to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner.

There being no response to the order to show cause, the Commissioner concluded that the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted, and justify suspension of respondent's certification. Accordingly, summary decision was granted to petitioner, and respondent's certificate is suspended for a period of one year from the date of the filing of this decision – a copy of which has been forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for the purpose of effectuating this order.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 44-3/15

For petitioner, Robert F. Varady, Esq. (LaCorte, Bundy, Varady & Kinsella)

No appearance by or on behalf of respondent

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on March 18, 2015, by way of an Order to Show Cause served by petitioner (Union County Vocational-Technical School District) upon respondent (Earl Rush), requiring respondent to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending his teaching certificate pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for resigning without giving the notice required by his contract with petitioner. By notice dated March 19, 2015, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Bureau) acknowledged receipt of proof that the Order to Show Cause had been served upon respondent and directed respondent to answer within 20 days. A second acknowledgment was sent on April 8, 2015 to correct a potential typographical error.[1]

No answer having yet been received, on April 17, 2015, the Bureau sent respondent a final notice – via regular and certified mail – directing that he file an answer within ten days. The notice advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to answer would cause each allegation in petitioner's papers to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner. The notice sent by certified mail was returned by the postal service as unclaimed; however, the notice sent by regular mail was not returned. Due to some confusion regarding respondent's house number, another final notice was sent to respondent – via regular and certified mail – on May 22, 2015. The certified mailing was claimed on May 23, 2015, as indicated by the return receipt received by the Bureau, and the notice sent by regular mail was not returned. No answer to the Order to Show Cause has been filed as of this date.

Having reviewed petitioner's affidavit in this matter – which states that respondent ceased working as a teacher without giving the 60 days written notice required by his employment contract – and noting that respondent has not denied the allegations therein, the Commissioner deems such allegations admitted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e) and further deems them sufficient to justify suspension of respondent's teaching certification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to petitioner, and respondent's teaching certification is suspended for a period of one year from the filing date of this decision, a copy of which shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for implementation of the suspension.

SYNOPSIS

The petitioners herein are football coaches who, during the 2013-2014 school year, coached students in the respondent Board's athletic program. Petitioners Sadloch and Manzo are the head football coach and assistant football coach, respectively; the remaining petitioners served as volunteer assistant coaches for the team. Petitioners challenged a determination by the Board that they engaged in conduct that constituted harassment, bullying and intimidation (HIB) as that term is defined under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. This matter arose out of a complaint from a Cedar Grove student athlete that the petitioning coaches engaged in a pattern of conduct that made the high school football program uncomfortable for this particular student. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the matter is ripe for summary decision, as the evidence is overwhelming that the petitioners must prevail as a matter of law; regarding petitioners Sadloch, Manzo, and Sinisi, it was learned during discovery that there was never any finding by the Board or school district administration that they had engaged in conduct that constituted HIB under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14; regarding volunteer coaches Weber and Gogerty, the documents that accompanied the parties' submissions did not make clear the basis for the HIB charge against these volunteer coaches, and neither of them were afforded the due process guaranteed them under the statute, as the Board – among other things – failed to comply with the investigatory process contained in the statute. The ALJ concluded that there is no other remedy herein but the removal of any mention of HIB from petitioners' files. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that any references to HIB be expunged from the personnel and/or volunteer files maintained by the Board in regard to the petitioning football coaches.

Upon comprehensive review of this matter, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision and the Commissioner ordered that any reference to HIB be removed from all of the named petitioners' files.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the respective exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioners and the Board of Education (Board), and the replies thereto.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the Board did not comply with the provisions contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15 for Harassment, Intimidation and Bulling (HIB) investigations. Notably the Board never issued a written decision affirming, rejecting or modifying the Superintendent's decision; the coaches were not afforded an opportunity to appear before the Board; and it was not until the parties exchanged discovery in the context of the within matter that three of the coaches ascertained that neither the Board nor the school administration found them to have engaged in HIB.[1] The Commissioner is also in accord with the ALJ's conclusion that in light of the lack of documentation and the state of the record, there

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioners are football coaches. During the 2013-2014 school year they coached students in the Cedar Grove Board of Education's (the Board) athletic program. Petitioners challenge a determination by the Board that they engaged in conduct that constituted harassment, bullying and intimidation (HIB) as that term is defined by N.J.S.A. 18A: 37-14.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners filed their appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on December 12, 2013. The Board filed an answer on January 14, 2014, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on January 15, 2014. Several hearing dates were adjourned while the parties sought, in the end unsuccessfully, to amicably resolve this dispute. Petitioners filed a motion for summary decision on November 3, 2014. The Board replied via cross-motion on December 4, 2014. Petitioners responded to the cross-motion on January 2, 2015. Oral argument took place on February 9, 2015. Thereafter, via letter dated February 18, 2015, I asked counsel to supplement the record with a copy of the final decision referenced in a checklist annexed to Mr. Farsiou's certification as Exhibit C. Upon receipt of correspondence from counsel, the record closed on March 2, 2015.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The salient background facts are uncontroverted, and I FIND:

During the 2013-2014 school year, Edward Sadloch was employed by the Board as head coach of the Cedar Grove football team, having held this position for twenty-four years. Charles Manzo was employed as assistant football coach. The remaining petitioners, Brian Gogerty, Michael Weber, and David Sinisi, served as volunteer assistant coaches for the Cedar Grove team.

This matter arose with a complaint by A.P., a Cedar Grove student athlete, that the petitioning coaches engaged in a pattern of conduct that made the high school football program uncomfortable for him. His complaint was verbally communicated to school administration on August 28, 2013, and was referred the following day to the Anti-Bullying Specialist, Joseph McBride, who had A.P. put his concerns in writing. A.P. alleged that the coaching staff harassed him by requiring that he remain after practice for extra "conditioning"; unfairly assigned him homework because he misused the word "slightly" in response to a question; and that, because he was inquisitive, placed question marks all over his jersey with tape, advising him that he reminded the coaches of "the Riddler," a character from Batman. A.P. wrote that these were the main instances of abuse directed at him, but indicated that the coaching staff also criticized his hair and suggested that it resembled that of a Black person; generally referred to the student athletes as "idiots, retards, fatties, fatsos"; and made offensive comments to the students, to include, for example, "that kid has an IQ below 40."

McBride investigated A.P.'s concerns, and issued a report on or about September 9, 2013. McBride found that nothing alleged by A.P. rose to HIB, with the exception of Weber's action in covering A.P.'s jersey with question marks. The investigative report noted that coaches Gogerty and Sinisi knew about Weber's conduct "but did not intercede." McBride stated that "[t]heir intention was like Coach Michael Weber's in that they wished to help make [A.] more self aware of his questioning and the need for a quicker on field response to a play." The report determined that the distinguishing characteristic of the targeted student was "frequently and repeatedly asking questions."

Superintendent of Schools Michael Fetherman advised the Board about the HIB investigatory findings at its September 10, 2013, meeting of the Board. Upon reviewing McBride's findings, apparently the Board determined that both Weber and Gogerty violated the Board's HIB policy. It is difficult to know for certain, because the Board failed to put the rationale for its decision in writing. Indeed, accompanying counsel's certification as Exhibit C was a checklist that confirms the steps taken by school district administration and the Board to investigate the allegations of HIB lodged by A.P. It paraphrases legal requirements, stating, "[the] Board must issue decision, in writing, to affirm, reject or modify the superintendent's decision, at next board meeting following receipt of report. Board's decision may be appealed to the Commissioner of Education within 90 calendar days." The checklist then indicates that the Board issued a written decision on October 22, 2013.

The record supplied to me in support of the cross-motions did not include any such written decision by the Board; accordingly, I held the record open and inquired further of counsel. In reply, counsel for the Board could share no such written decision, and I FIND that none exists. Rather, he shared a copy of Board minutes from its September 10, 2013, meeting, and advised that the decision to affirm the findings of the administrative HIB investigation was made that night, and remained unmodified following the subsequent meetings with petitioners, A.P., and his parents. But the minutes shared with me reveal no determination relative to HIB, rather they simply note that relative to "an incident involving student number 301430" discipline was imposed on "Employees A-E."

Also according to Fetherman, the Board adopted McBride's conclusion that the targeted distinguishing characteristic was A.P.'s propensity to ask many questions, but likewise determined that the harassment was motivated by the perceived characteristic of having a mental disability. Again, no written Board decision confirms these findings.[1] The confusion created by the lack of a formal Board decision cannot be minimized. Indeed, Fetherman's certification gives the impression that the other ridicule A.P. claimed to have endured, including name-calling such as references to idiots and retards, was a further basis for the Board's HIB finding. But counsel for the Board urged at oral argument that the HIB finding was based exclusively on Weber's and Gogerty's actions in placing question marks on A.P.'s jersey and calling him "the Riddler," and that the remaining allegations were shared by Fetherman exclusively to provide a context for the HIB-related findings. But again, the Board issued no written determination that would clarify its rationale, or more importantly, give Gogerty or Weber clear notice of the charges against them.

In any event, there appears to be no dispute and I FIND that the Board determined that Sadloch, Manzo, and Sinisi did not violate the HIB law, but rather exercised poor judgment and failed to meet professional expectations. Via letter dated September 13, 2013, Gogerty and Weber were advised that they were being placed on administrative leave for the duration of the football season. The remaining petitioners received similar letters dated September 13, 2013. Sadloch was placed on leave for the first game of the season. Manzo was placed on leave for the second and third game of the season. Sinisi was placed on leave until October 9, 2013. All the petitioning coaches were directed to complete an online training program entitled "Teaching and Modeling Behavior." Not one of these letters mentions HIB, however.

[1]Answers to interrogatories are the first a written document that states that the distinguishing characteristic that motivated the coaches' actions is "a mental disability." This was not reflected in the report completed by McBride. It is not reflected in the report supplied to A.P.'s parents. It is not reflected in any other documents generated by the Board that were shared with me.

Fetherman claims to have met privately with Gogerty and Weber, and to have verbally advised them that the Board found that they violated the HIB law. He offers no date upon which that conversation took place, and petitioners disagree that it did. The parties do agree that on September 30, 2013, a meeting took place at which A.P.'s parents, Fetherman, Board counsel, petitioners and their counsel were present, and during which Fetherman confirmed that an HIB investigation had taken place. Again, none of these meetings resulted in written confirmation of what was discussed. The parent report dated September 17, 2013, confirms a finding that Gogerty and Weber committed acts that rose to HIB, but this document was not shared with them until after suit was filed. This document is likewise nonspecific in regard to the rationale for the Superintendent's findings; including neither a description of the precise conduct at issue or the "distinguishing characteristic" that he concluded met the statutory definition of HIB.[2]

A.P.'s parents requested a Board-level hearing, which took place on October 8, 2013. While Fetherman states in his certification that petitioners and their counsel were present at that meeting, counsel for the Board agreed with petitioners' assertion that they were not. This is not the exclusive error in the Fetherman certification. Indeed, in certified answers to interrogatories, Fetherman stated that only Weber engaged in conduct that rose to HIB and that the remaining petitioners engaged in unprofessional conduct. His answer is inconsistent with the certification filed in support of this motion, in which he asserts that both Weber and Gogerty were found to have engaged in HIB.

[2] The document recounts A.P.'s various complaints, but then generally finds an HIB violation without specifying more.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The parties' motions are filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g), which permits the filing of a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer. The rule provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "[t]he judgment or order sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party . . . offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'fanciful frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995) (quoting Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "'judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214. This matter is ripe for summary decision. Relative to Sadloch, Sinisi, and Manzo, I CONCLUDE that they are entitled to the relief they seek as there was never any finding by the Board or school district administration that they engaged in conduct that constituted bullying or harassment under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. Any documents that reflect otherwise should be expunged from their personnel and/or volunteer files.[3] I CONCLUDE that Gogerty and Weber are entitled to dismissal of the HIB charges against them in view of the gross violations by this Board of its investigatory and due process obligations under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15.

This appeal asks that I consider whether the conduct engaged in by Weber and Gogerty rose to bullying as defined by law, and whether these two volunteer athletic coaches were afforded adequate due process during the course of the Board's investigation of the charges filed against them by student athlete, A.P. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14 defines HIB to include:

> [A]ny gesture, any written, verbal or physical act . . . whether it be a single incident or a series of incidents, that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory disability, or by any other distinguishing characteristic, that takes place on school property, at any school-sponsored function, on a school bus, or off school grounds . . . that substantially disrupts or interferes with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of other students and that:
> a. a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of physically or emotionally harming a student or damaging a student's property, or placing a student in reasonable fear of physical or emotional harm to his person or damage to his property;
>
> c. creates a hostile educational environment for the student by interfering with a student's education or be severely or pervasively causing physical or emotional harm to the student.

[3] The rights and obligations established by the Anti-Bullying legislation clearly apply to school volunteers. Indeed, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 provides that, " . . . since students learn by example, school administrators, faculty, staff and volunteers should be commended for demonstrating appropriate behavior, treating others with civility and respect, and refusing to tolerate harassment, intimidation or bullying." (Emphasis supplied.)

Districts are required by law to adopt policies that prohibit HIB; that outline expectations for student behavior; that set forth consequences for inappropriate behavior; and create procedures for reporting HIB related concerns. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15. A school anti-bullying specialist must be assigned to each school, and the results of HIB investigations must be shared with the Superintendent of Schools and the Board of Education. Moreover, the law specifically requires as follows:

> (c) the results of each investigation shall be reported to the board of education no later than the date of the board of education meeting next following the completion of the investigation, along with information on any services provided, training established, discipline imposed, or other action taken or recommended by the superintendent;
>
> (d) parents or guardians of the students who are parties to the investigation shall be entitled to receive information about the investigation, in accordance with federal and State law and regulation, including the nature of the investigation, whether the district found evidence of harassment, intimidation, or bullying, or whether discipline was imposed or services provided to address the incident of harassment, intimidation, or bullying. This information shall be provided in writing within 5 school days after the results of the investigation are reported to the board. A parent or guardian may request a hearing before the board after receiving the information, and the hearing shall be held within 10 days of the request. The board shall meet in executive session for the hearing to protect the confidentiality of the students. At the hearing the board may hear from the school anti-bullying specialist about the incident, recommendations for discipline or services, and any programs instituted to reduce such incidents;
>
> (e) at the next board of education meeting following its receipt of the report, the board shall issue a decision, in writing, to affirm, reject, or modify the superintendent's decision. The board's decision may be appealed to the Commissioner of Education, in accordance with the procedures set forth in law and regulation, no later than 90 days after the issuance of the board's decision . . . .
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15 (emphasis supplied).]

Regulations promulgated by the Department of Education further assist local districts in complying with these statutory requirements. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.9. The Commissioner has recognized that these requirements have equal applicability when a bullying charge is directed against a staff member. See K.T. on behalf of K.H. and T.D. v. Deerfield Bd. of Educ., EDU 00489-13, Initial Decision (June 19, 2013), rev'd and remanded, Comm'r (July 30, 2013), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/> (where, in the context of a claim that a teacher bullied a kindergarten student, the Commissioner confirmed that the internal HIB investigation mandated by law is not discretionary).

Neither Weber nor Gogerty were afforded the due process that was guaranteed them by statute. While the law provides that "parents or guardians of the students who are parties to the investigation" must receive written information about that investigation, this requirement must be held to extend to staff members and volunteers whose conduct is implicated by a bullying allegation. The intent of a statute or regulation should be gleaned from a view of the whole and of every part of the statute, with the real intention prevailing over the literal sense of its terms. Schierstead v. City of Brigantine, 29 N.J. 220 (1959). Here, the bullying statute can be subject to no other logical interpretation; indeed, without knowing what has been alleged how can a staff member determine whether and upon what factual basis to file an appeal with the local board or the Commissioner? More importantly, how can that staff member or volunteer know how to redirect his behavior in the future?

Indeed, this appeal exemplifies the harm that can flow from a failure to interpret the statute as I suggest. Five coaches filed this petition; only after formal discovery did they learn that three did so unnecessarily. Neither the Board nor administration had found them to have engaged in HIB. The remaining two could not parse out the basis for the determination that they had engaged in HIB; only during discovery did they learn that their conduct was thought to have been motivated by the perception that A.P. had a low mental ability. I shared their confusion. Indeed, the documents that accompanied the parties' submissions left me perplexed as to the basis of the HIB charge against Weber and Gogerty, and only through the assistance of counsel was I able to ascertain that exclusively their conduct in placing question marks on A.P.'s jersey was at issue. The inconsistencies in the Fetherman submissions buttressed my perception that even district personnel were not entirely clear which coaches engaged in HIB, or why they thought that they did so.

Moreover, the Board clearly knew what its statutory responsibilities entailed, and even developed a checklist to ensure that it met all of its obligations. Notwithstanding this effort, Weber and Gogerty never were afforded an opportunity to appear before the Board; never were provided a written summary of the investigation of the charges against them; nor ever given a written decision from the Board in which it explained its rationale for upholding the charges against them. The fact that these coaches were volunteers does not diminish my conclusion that their rights were violated. Football is a high-profile sport, and volunteer coaching opportunities can grow into paid positions. Weber and Gogerty had a right to defend the charges against them. I CONCLUDE that because the Board failed to comply with the investigatory process contained in statute, any reference to HIB should be expunged from the volunteer files maintained for Weber and Gogerty by the Board.

Petitioners assert that their conduct did not rise to HIB as that term is defined by law. But the record created via the Board's internal investigation does not permit me to properly make a determination relative to this critical issue. While McBride's investigatory report fully explains his rationale for determining what conduct constituted HIB, and appears to state that Weber is responsible, once the matter moved to the Superintendent and the Board apparently a broader view of who was involved in the alleged misconduct resulted. But neither Weber nor Gogerty were given a proper opportunity at the local level to formally respond to clearly articulated charges against them.

For this additional reason, I CONCLUDE that the law permits no other remedy but the removal of any reference to HIB from these coaches' files. The Anti-Bullying statute is quite specific in regard to the sort of investigation required, and it includes tight timelines for completing the steps needed to properly investigate a claim that bullying took place. These timelines are in place for several reasons; first and foremost to ensure that victim's concerns are promptly addressed, but also because charges of this nature are best explored promptly, when memories are fresh. Here, the events at issue took place well over a year ago. In theory a remand to the Board, or allowing a hearing before me to serve as a substitute for the required local investigatory steps, are possible remedies. But I CONCLUDE that such remedies would unfairly prejudice these volunteer coaches.

ORDER

Base on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that any reference to HIB be deleted from the personnel and/or volunteer files maintained by the Board in regard to the petitioning football coaches.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

In the Matter of the Tenure Charges Against

JODI THOMPSON

and

THE STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE

CITY OF NEWARK

Agency Docket No.: 240-8/14 and 16-1/15

Hearings were held in the above-entitled matter on October 27, November 14, November 17 and November 24, 2014 at the New Jersey State Board of Mediation in Newark, New Jersey, before Daniel F. Brent, duly designated by the New Jersey Commissioner of Education as Impartial Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17, the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TeachNJ) statute. Both parties participated in these hearings, were represented by counsel, and were afforded full and equal opportunity to offer testimony under oath, to cross examine witnesses, and to present evidence and arguments.

The evidentiary record was declared closed on November 24, 2014, subject to the receipt of the stenographic transcript and the subsequent submission of post-hearing briefs by both parties. After the record had closed, but before post-hearing briefs were filed, counsel for the School District of Newark requested, by letter dated December 19, 2014, that the instant matter be held in abeyance because the School District had filed a second set of tenure charges for inefficiency against the Respondent arising from the same set of facts and circumstances during the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years, the difference being that the new charges were brought under Section 8 of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-16, rather than Section 25, of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.

Counsel for Respondent Jodi Thompson opposed the School District's request to hold the instant matter in abeyance, and asserted that there was no statutory or equitable basis for suspending the proceedings addressing the initial tenure charges after the close of the record. The Arbitrator considered the School District's request and Respondent's reply opposing the request, and issued an Interim Award dated January 16, 2015, which denied the District's motion for suspending the first proceeding and held that the District cannot materially increase the exposure of the Respondent to culpability and penalty by adding a cause of action after the hearing phase of a tenure charge proceeding had ended and the evidentiary record has been closed.

The controversy concerning whether issues raised by the second set of charges could be considered in a second proceeding was deferred and consolidated for consideration in the context of addressing the original tenure charges.

The parties submitted post-hearing briefs, followed by a succession of written exchanges commenting on arbitrators' awards issued after the parties' briefs had been submitted in which various interpretations of the TeachNJ statute by other arbitrators were discussed. Both parties reiterated various aspects of their arguments in light of these subsequent decisions. The Arbitrator requested and received extensions of time to address these additional submissions, and now renders his Award and Opinion after considering the initial set of tenure charges, the second set of tenure charges to the extent discussed below, and the subsequent written communications submitted by counsel for both parties.

ISSUE SUBMITTED

What shall be the disposition of the tenure charges filed against Respondent, Jodi Thompson, by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark?

NATURE OF THE CASE

Respondent Jodi Thompson was employed as a teacher by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (hereafter, the District or the Board) at the Roberto Clemente Elementary School, where she was assigned to teach Pre-kindergarten classes until the 2013-14 school year, when she was initially assigned to teach a Kindergarten class. Respondent Thompson was observed teaching in her classroom by her Building Principal and by two Assistant Principals on multiple occasions during both the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years. At the conclusion of the 2012-13 school year, Respondent was rated Partially Effective in her annual evaluation. This rating was primarily the result of the deduction of two points when computing a value for Competency 5, regarding "Commitment to Personal and Collective Excellence", one of the categories of the newly implemented rubric for evaluating teachers under the District's Teacher Practice Evaluation Instrument, which was approved by the New Jersey Department of Education in mid-October 2012.

The deduction of points was made because the Respondent had been absent fourteen times and tardy eighty-two times during this school year. In addition, Respondent arrived and punched in between 8:18 and 8:20 a.m. on sixty-five other days. The balance of the annual evaluation, which was conducted using a rubric that the District implemented in or about October 2012, addressed Respondent's pedagogical techniques, teaching strengths and weaknesses, and classroom management skills in sections designated as Competencies 1 through 4. But for the negative impact of Respondent's attendance record for the year, she would not have received a Partially Effective summative rating for the 2012-13 school year.

As a result of the Partially Effective rating, the Principal prepared a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) designed to assist Respondent in improving her teaching techniques and to alert Respondent to the negative impact of her attendance and tardiness record on her annual evaluations. Respondent Thompson was invited to participate in the refinement of the CAP. The extent to which she was afforded this opportunity, and to which she engaged in collaborative interaction in order to improve the design of the CAP or to modify the expectations established under the CAP, was disputed during the arbitration hearings.

The version of Respondent's CAP to be implemented for the 2013-14 school year was not finalized until on or about October 14, 2013, which Respondent contends invalidated the CAP, as it was implemented after the September 15th deadline established under the TeachNJ statute. Respondent raised this defense, among others, in support of her position that the tenure charges filed against her should be dismissed. The District asserted that the implementation of the CAP was timely because the District had received written authorization from a designee of the Commissioner of Education explicitly extending until October 15, 2013 the deadline for finalizing Corrective Action Plans for teachers who had been rated Partially Effective in the 2012-13 school year.

Among the other defenses interposed by Respondent were that the 2012-13 school year evaluation was precluded from consideration by operation of the provisions of the TeachNJ statute, which provided that school districts throughout the state had to complete their implementation of new evaluation rubrics no later than January 31, 2014. According to Respondent, this deadline and other factors considered by arbitrators adjudicating TeachNJ efficiency cases involving 2012-13 annual summative ratings supported her assertion that, whatever shortcomings in her teaching performance, including attendance and tardiness issues, occurred during the 2012-13 school year could not be used by the District as a basis for tenure charges seeking termination of Respondent's employment for inefficiency as a teacher under the TeachNJ statute.

Respondent also asserted that the evaluation process conducted during the 2013-14 school year, when both parties agree the rubrics tested by the District during 2011-12 and approved by the Commissioner of Education in October 2012 were fully operative, was procedurally defective, as a major evaluation had been arbitrarily and capriciously implemented, and thus her annual summative rating could not form a proper basis for a tenure charge, as the defenses to tenure charges alleging inefficiency explicitly provided by the TeachNJ statute include arbitrary and capricious action by the District. Respondent asserted that the primary pre-announced classroom evaluation of her performance was inherently unfair and procedurally flawed because she was observed on her first day of student contact in her new assignment as a writing support specialist, while dealing with unfamiliar children in a blended classroom that included students with special education needs, although she was not licensed as a special education teacher, and at grade levels with which she was not experienced. Respondent characterized the scheduling of this evaluation on her first day of teaching after returning from an extended Family Medical Leave (FMLA) Act leave as an arbitrary and capricious action by the District establishing one of the limited defenses to tenure charges specifically established by the TeachNJ statute.

The District refuted these allegations, contending that annual evaluations of the Respondent as Partially Effective for both the 2012-13 and the 2013-14 school years could properly be considered to support tenure charges for inefficiency because Newark was among a small number of school districts for whom the Commissioner of Education had approved 2011-12 as a pilot year for the development of new evaluation rubrics under the TeachNJ statute. Moreover, according to the District, the Department of Education had approved the District's evaluation instrument in time for implementation early in the 2012-13 school year, and the District had negotiated contract language with the Newark Teachers Union permitting implementation of an approved rubric for evaluating teacher performance beginning in the 2012-13 school year. The District cited various statutory provisions in support of its position.

The District asserted that Respondent was properly evaluated on multiple occasions, and was offered coaching and other assistance by a master teacher, but that she failed fully to utilize these resources, declined opportunities to observe other successful teachers in her building, and consistently failed to implement the differentiated, individualized teaching techniques that the District reasonably expected its teachers to incorporate into their lessons. The District defended its methods of evaluation and the rating of Respondent Thompson as Partially Efficient for two consecutive school years as proper actions under the TeachNJ statute. The District disputed that any procedural defect existed in the evaluation process, denied that the defect alleged by Respondent had materially affected the outcome of Respondent's evaluations, and moved for the tenure charges to be sustained.

The legal arguments offered by Respondent and by the District have been set forth in detail in their post-hearing submissions, and thus need not be reiterated at length herein.

OPINION AND ANALYSIS

Many of the arbitrators who have been designated under the TeachNJ statute to decide tenure charges of teaching inefficiency brought against teachers employed by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark during the 2012-13 school year have rendered opinions stating that evaluations conducted during this year cannot form a valid basis for inefficiency charges under the TeachNJ statute. Tenure charges for misconduct during the 2012-13 school year that were brought under Section 8 of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, and thus were not dependent on assessment of the pedagogical techniques and classroom performance, have been properly distinguished as suitable for supporting tenure charges because, unlike teachers facing tenure charges for inefficiency under Section 25 of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17, the misconduct charges brought under Section 8 of the TeachNJ statute were not dependent upon application of an approved performance evaluation framework, also known as a rubric. Teach NJ requires that: "Beginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle, and high schools in the district."

According to the Respondents in the tenure cases decided by several of my colleagues, no inefficiency tenure charge could properly be brought before the deadline established under TeachNJ mandating that all New Jersey public school districts develop rubrics satisfying TeachNJ statutory teacher evaluation criteria had passed. Based on this premise, the Newark School District's use in 2012-13 of rubrics developed by the District in 2011-12 was deemed premature, and thus invalid, notwithstanding the designation of the Newark School District by the Commissioner of Education, among as many as eleven of the 604 public school districts in New Jersey, as a pilot district for TeachNJ during the 2011-12 school year. School districts, other than these specially designated pilot districts, could not implement approved rubrics to determine whether a teacher was performing with high efficiency, efficiency, partial efficiency, or inefficiency until the 2013-14 school year. At issue in the instant case is whether a similar restriction governing the use of 2012-13 teacher evaluations performed under the District's Teacher Practice Evaluation Instrument, approved by the New Jersey Department of Education in mid-October 2012, must be applied to the Newark District in the instant case.

Nothing in the provisions of the TeachNJ statute explicitly created a two-year, much less a four-year, hiatus during which ineffective teachers would be immune from evaluations of their performance resulting in discipline or discharge. Nor has any arbitrator on the Tenure Panel held, to my knowledge, that gross misconduct during 2012-13 must be ignored or condoned because school districts were impotent to react to misconduct or conduct unbecoming under both the old tenure law and the new TeachNJ law when it became effective. This arbitrator, and many others, have resolved tenure cases alleging conduct unbecoming a teacher, principal, or other school employee that arose before and during the 2012-13 school year. These cases were governed by the procedures and criteria set forth in Section 8 of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

Similarly, nothing in the new TeachNJ statute precludes a school district that had been designated a pilot district in 2011-12 and successfully implemented a rubric approved by the Commissioner in 2012-13 from evaluating its teachers under the approved teaching performance assessment criteria. That the statute imposed a specific deadline by which every district in the state was to have implemented these new rubrics in accordance with the standards of TeachNJ neither precludes valid assessment of teachers for 2012-13 by other districts using the standards previously approved by the Commissioner nor invalidates utilization of the newly approved rubrics by Newark to evaluate its teachers in 2012-13 after the Department of Education had approved the District's Teacher Practice Evaluation Instrument. Therefore, also at issue in the instant case is whether annual evaluations under the newly approved rubric can form a valid basis supporting tenure charges for inefficiency in teaching performance during 2012-13.

The evidentiary record involving Respondent Jodi Thompson established persuasively by a preponderance of the evidence that she was accurately evaluated in 2012-13 regarding her classroom performance and teaching acumen. This evaluation found that her teaching was worthy of being rated as Efficient. However, after her egregious attendance and tardiness record was included when computing Competency Five, which addresses the factor of "Commitment to Personal and Collective Excellence", a two-point deduction for poor attendance reduced Respondent's annual rating for 2012-13 to Partially Effective. Given her fourteen days of absence, her tardiness on eighty-two days, and her last minute arrival a minute of two before she was scheduled to begin working with her students on sixty-five more school days when she was not actually tardy, Respondent's attendance and tardiness record in 2012-13 was reasonably construed by the District as negatively affecting Respondent's entire job performance as a teacher to the extent that her annual rating was reasonably reduced to Partially Efficient by the deduction of two points.

Whether or not the 2012-13 summative annual rating could be counted for sustaining teacher efficiency tenure charges in the instant case, the District exercised reasonable management discretion and authority by deeming Respondent "Partially Effective" (or the equivalent term for the third of four possible levels of performance under the pre-existing evaluation scheme) for the 2012-13 school year based solely on her attendance, tardiness, and near-tardiness record, the extent of which was undisputed. Regardless of whether two points could be deducted from the TeachNJ rubric under Competency Five, dropping Respondent from the Effective category to the Partially Effective category; whether she was evaluated under the pre-existing rubric; or whether her performance was assessed by applying well-recognized labor relations principles using neither of these rubrics, Respondent's 2012-13 school year justified an annual performance rating of "Partially Effective" or the equivalent term then in effect, and exposed her to appropriate discipline. Nevertheless, the District elected not to impose discipline immediately under Section 8 for Respondent's poor attendance at the end of the 2012-13 school year.

Nothing in the evidentiary record before me, or in the published opinions of my colleagues, convinced me that the TeachNJ statute established a safe harbor that unequivocally and completely insulated teachers from the adverse consequences of their actions for a minimum of two, to as many as three, years before tenure charges based on inefficiency could be brought. However, the well-reasoned opinion of Arbitrator Robert Simmelkjer in The Matter of Ursula Whitehurst, issued on January 5, 2015, in which he thoroughly and persuasively analyzed the relevant factors that govern the disposition of many of the parties' arguments in the instant case, persuasively mandates a conclusion that neither the approval of the District's Teacher Practice Evaluation Instrument by the New Jersey Department of Education by a memo issued in mid-October 2015, nor the acquiescence of the Newark Teachers Union to a provision in its collective bargaining agreement with the District, justified using an annual evaluation for 2012-13 as the basis for inefficiency tenure charges brought pursuant to Section 25 of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.

Whether or not unreliable and untimely attendance at work to the extent demonstrated by Respondent during the 2012-13 school year constituted misconduct or conduct unbecoming a teacher that was sufficient, per se, to justify termination of tenure, there is no valid basis in the evidentiary record to find that Respondent was insulated from an annual evaluation that incorporated her egregious attendance and tardiness or near-tardy record as a significant factor. Thus. Respondent's attendance and tardiness record could properly be included as a factor in assessing her performance. However, Arbitrator Simmelkjer's detailed analysis and conclusions of law are sufficiently persuasive to support Respondent's assertion in the instant case that her annual summative rating for 2012-13 cannot be used as a valid basis for tenure charges based on insufficiency applying only the standards of Section 25 of N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.

This conclusion necessitates a discussion regarding the second set of tenure charges that the District issued following the publication of arbitration decisions by several of my colleagues that invalidated tenure charges based on annual summative assessments for 2012-13 made by Newark administrators applying the "new" rubric in insufficiency cases. While prudent lawyering may explain the District's decision to file an additional set of tenure charges alleging identical facts and conduct under a different section of the statute, Section 8 of N.JS.A. 18A:16-6, the District's filing of these charges after the record addressing the first set of charges had closed imposed an inherently unfair burden both on Respondent and on the attorneys who represent her. Permitting duplicative filing of tenure charges alleging identical facts to be submitted in a separate action under a different statutory provision that imposes different standards for establishing conduct sufficient to terminate tenure would unduly encumber the tenure adjudication process established by TeachNJ, which process the Legislature required to proceed expeditiously by creating short time limits within which the arbitration process must be completed.

Moreover, the second tenure charges did not amend the first charges by the introduction of new facts. Nor was the second theory raised in a timely manner. The second set of tenure charges simply alleged a second cause of action under a different statutory standard in order to prove that Respondent's teaching was legally unacceptable to the extent that her tenure should be rescinded. Respondent's alleged misconduct, other than her pedagogical shortcomings, that could have formed a basis for imposing discipline under Section 8 during 2012-13, such as her attendance or an incident involving a verbal altercation with a Vice-Principal in front of her students, was addressed by the District in the calculations of professionalism under Competency Five of the rubric. Thus, the District's decision not to file Section 8 tenure charges at the end of the 2012-13 school year supports Respondent's assertion that neither her 2012-13 attendance record, her interaction with parents, the quality of her driving near the school, nor the incident involving a verbal altercation with a Vice-Principal in front of her students established a second, independent cause of action justifying terminating her employment that could be raised after the record addressing the first set of charges had been closed.

There is no valid basis in the statute to afford the District two separate, sequential opportunities to litigate identical charges arising from the same set of facts by citing two different sections of the statute in two sets of tenure hearings. Nor is there any compelling basis under the rules of the American Arbitration Association governing TeachNJ cases, or mandated under sound arbitration or legal practice, to permit a duplicate filing of amended tenure charges based on the same set of facts after the record in the first case has been closed. Therefore, the second set of tenure charges filed by the District against Respondent Thompson must be dismissed as procedurally invalid and untimely.

According to the testimony and the documents comprising the evidentiary record of the instant case, Respondent Thompson's attendance record would have justified a rating of "Partially Effective" or its equivalent rating in for 2012-13 school year whether the District had used the prior evaluation standards, the disputed current rubric, or considered Respondent's attendance and tardiness record as an independent factor. Although the District reasonably concluded that Respondent's 2012-13 attendance and tardiness record was a material impediment to an efficient teaching performance during the 2012-13 school year, the District misapplied a rubric that had not yet unequivocally been approved by the Commissioner for use by the District during the 2012-13 school year as a basis for filing tenure charges based on inefficiency under Section 25 of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17. In light of such a material defect by erroneously applying the standards of the TeachNJ statute for the 2012-13 school year, the District's rating of Respondent as "Partially Effective" for 2012-13 must be deemed invalid regardless of the methodology used to evaluate her classroom techniques and performance and notwithstanding her egregious tardiness and attendance record.

A similar conclusion must be reached for the 2013-14 school year, but for a different reason because the District's summative evaluation of Respondent's performance, while achieved using an approved rubric the validity of which was undisputed, contained at least one serious material procedural flaw that satisfied an explicit statutory criterion of a valid defense. By electing formally to evaluate Respondent's teaching on the first day of student contact in her new assignment as a writing support specialist, thus observing her work with a class that was unfamiliar with her and that included a substantial cadre of special education students, the District created a procedural defect that satisfied the "arbitrary and capricious" standard of defenses specified in the TeachNJ statute.

No valid excuse for scheduling a major evaluation under such adverse circumstances has been offered in the evidentiary record. Time limits for completing annual evaluations that were alleged as justification for asking a teacher to prove her competence in a different subject area with students who were strangers to her on the first day she entered their classroom was far outweighed by the detriment to Respondent and the material negative impact on her annual summative evaluation for the 2013-14 school year by the arbitrary and capricious timing of this observation.

Much testimony was devoted to the timeliness of the Corrective Action Plan implemented for Respondent during the 2013-14 school year; the degree to which Respondent cooperated in developing the CAP; and the applicability of a Corrective Action Plan developed while Respondent was a Pre-kindergarten teacher for use after she was assigned to teach Kindergarten commencing in September 2013. None of these factors, however, invalidated the District's annual rating for 2013-14. The District has established persuasively by a preponderance of the evidence that:

(1) The District satisfied the requirement that the CAP arising from Respondent's performance rating for the 2012-13 school year be finalized by October 15, 2013, the extended date established by a designee of the Commissioner of Education, with at least apparent authority, upon which the District reasonably relied;

(2) Respondent Thompson was offered ample opportunity to participate in the development and refinement of her CAP;

(3) Respondent Thompson was afforded substantial access to coaching and other assistance by a Master Teacher during 2013-14;

4) The pedagogical deficits identified by the CAP were equally valid, if not more so, in the context of teaching Kindergarten students than Pre-K students, and thus Respondent suffered no material detriment from any failure substantially to review and edit her CAP after Respondent's initial teaching assignment was changed from Pre-kindergarten to Kindergarten for the 2013-14 school year;

(5) There was no adverse consequence to Respondent Thompson because of her valid use of FMLA leave from January through April 2014, and any allegation of retaliation against Respondent for using FMLA was unsubstantiated in the evidentiary record;

(6) The Building Principal's decision not to return Respondent to her original Kindergarten class after Respondent returned from extended FMLA leave in April 2014 was based on valid educational considerations, including the successful performance of the long-term substitute teacher who had replaced Respondent during her protracted FMLA leave and the likely adverse consequences for the students from disrupting their bond with a teacher for a second time during the same school year; and

(7) Respondent Thompson did not significantly improve her performance between September 2013 and January 2014, despite being given a Corrective Action Plan.

Notwithstanding these conclusions, the District's evaluation of Respondent's performance for the year was fatally tainted by an arbitrary and capricious action that materially impaired Respondent's right to be judged and rated on the basis of valid observations and evaluations as required under the TeachNJ statute.

The District has credibly described deficiencies in Respondent's performance observed during that evaluation visit, but the arbitrary and capricious timing and circumstances of this evaluation session was unjustified by sound educational policy, prohibited by applicable statute, and undermined the validity of the District's summative evaluation of Respondent Jodi Thompson for the 2013-14 school year, resulting in the tenure charge for inefficiency.

Respondent Thompson's testimony convincingly articulated that she was well-meaning in her efforts to foster a learning environment in her classroom that incorporated multiple creative pedagogical techniques to reach students in her classes, many of whom were often below grade level in their reading skills and were dealing with other emotional and physical circumstances. These factors posed greater challenges to a teacher, such as Respondent, who was evaluated during more than one informal observation as needing coaching and assistance and unequivocally advised that she must expend substantial and consistent effort to achieve an efficient level of teaching performance, whether as a Kindergarten teacher or as a writing support specialist.

The Arbitrator does not, and should not, substitute his judgment for the substantive professional evaluations of Respondent's teaching performance, lesson preparation, and classroom management by two Assistant Principals and a Building Principal at Roberto Clemente Elementary School, who competently discerned on several occasions professional weaknesses in Respondent's teaching organization, pedagogical, and classroom management skills that must be addressed immediately if she is to succeed as a teacher in the future. However, the glaring procedural error in evaluating Respondent on her first day teaching a new subject to classes of students with whom she had no prior opportunity to develop a relationship or to set the standards for her classroom cannot be ignored when applying the standards and defenses clearly articulated in the TeachNJ statute. Because the District's annual evaluation of Respondent Jodi Thompson for the 2013-14 school year was improper under the statutory criteria, the District's rating of Respondent Thompson's teaching performance for the 2013-14 school year as Partially Effective cannot be sustained.

The evidentiary record as a whole supported the District's assertion that Respondent was deficient in the areas of professional development described by District administrators. To protect her employment going forward, Respondent must significantly improve her classroom management skills and develop more focused, multi-level lesson plans appropriate for the mix of students in whatever teaching role she may be assigned in the future. Respondent would be well advised to ask for, assiduously pursue, and willingly accept whatever coaching or other assistance District professionals can provide so that she can be successful as a classroom teacher for the Newark School District. If she continues to teach with the same lack of sophistication in her lessons, and the rudimentary level of classroom management and organizational skills described by the District's witnesses, Respondent may find herself vulnerable to tenure charges in the future.

Despite her daunting family situation, Respondent Thompson must also expend whatever energy and organization is necessary to arrive at school in a timely and reliable manner sufficiently before classes begin to be ready to perform her professional duties. Failure to take such steps to improve her out of classroom performance may also jeopardize her continuing employment.

Having considered thoroughly the written evidentiary record, sworn testimony, and legal arguments submitted in the instant case, I am compelled to find by at least a preponderance of the evidence that the Tenure Charges filed against Respondent Jodi Thompson by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark cannot be sustained. Respondent's Motion to Dismiss these tenure charges is hereby granted.

All claims by Respondent Thompson alleging violation of the Family Medical Leave Act by the District or alleging that retribution for Respondent's use of FMLA leave in the 2013-14 school year was a factor in her annual evaluation have been considered by the Arbitrator and are hereby rejected as unsubstantiated in the evidentiary record.

Respondent Thompson shall be returned forthwith to employment by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, with uninterrupted medical benefits. The 120 days pay lost as a consequence of the filing of tenure charges shall be reimbursed to her, less any substitute interim earnings during this interval.

The Arbitrator hereby retains jurisdiction for the purposes of resolving any and all disputes regarding the tenure charges brought against Respondent Jodi Thompson by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, including the remedy herein ordered.

SYNOPSIS

In this consolidated case, petitioners – formerly employed as custodians for the respondent Board – alleged that their tenure rights were violated when their employment was terminated. The Board asserted that the petitioners' appeal rests solely on contractual claims – which do not require an interpretation of school law – and filed a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and lack of subject matter jurisdiction. In an Initial Decision dated April 7, 2015, the ALJ granted the Board's motion to dismiss. However, the Commissioner rejected the decision and remanded the matter to the OAL for fact finding to determine whether the Board appointed the petitioners for a fixed term and thereby excluded them from statutory tenure.

On remand, the ALJ found that a revised certification from the Board's Director of Human Resources supports the respondent's contention that the petitioners were in fact appointed for fixed one year terms, and therefore not subject to statutory tenure. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the matter must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Upon review, the Commissioner was able to determine that, because the Board's certification is now part of the record, the petitioners do lack tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3. Therefore, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide the within consolidated petitions. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted the respondent's motion to dismiss.

CHRISTOPHER KECHULA, PETITIONER V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PISCATAWAY, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION ON REMAND
ALAN HUDSON, PETITIONER V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PISCATAWAY, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:

The record in this consolidated matter – along with the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), issued April 7, 2015, and the subsequent Initial Decision, issued June 2, 2015 in response to the Commissioner's remand – have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions.

By way of background, this controversy concerns whether petitioners, formerly employed as custodians for the Piscataway Board of Education (Board), possessed tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3[1] that were violated when the Board terminated their employment. The Board filed motions to dismiss the petitions of appeal for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted and lack of subject matter jurisdiction.[2] Ultimately, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) granted the Board's motions and dismissed both petitions as reflected in the Initial Decision dated April 7, 2015.

In order to determine whether the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide this matter under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3, it is necessary to establish whether the Board appointed petitioners for a fixed term and thereby excluded them from statutory tenure. As a result, on May 12, 2015, the Commissioner rejected the ALJ's Initial Decision – because neither the Initial Decision nor the record contained the requisite factual finding – and remanded the matter to the OAL for further proceedings.

Thereafter, the Board submitted a certification from its Director of Human Resources (R-1) to the ALJ indicating that for each year of their employment with the district, petitioners were, in fact, appointed by the Board for a fixed one-year term. After considering the certification, the ALJ issued an Initial Decision on June 2, 2015 which "serves as a supplement to and incorporates by reference the Initial Decision issued...April 7, 2015" granting the Board's motion and dismissing the petitions for lack of jurisdiction. Because the Board's certification is part of the record, the Commissioner can now conclude that petitioners lacked tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3. Therefore, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide the consolidated petitions of appeal.

[1] N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 provides that "Every public school janitor of a school district shall, unless he is appointed for a fixed term, hold his office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed" except for a reduction in force or "neglect, misbehavior or other offense." (Emphasis added)

[2] Custodians excluded from statutory tenure by virtue of fixed term appointment may negotiate contractual tenure rights – over which the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction. See Wright v. Bd. of Educ., 99 N.J. 112, 116 (1985) (holding contractual provision granting tenure to custodians after three years of employment is not barred by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and falls within the scope of collective negotiations).

Accordingly, respondent's motion is granted and the consolidated petitions are dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

BEFORE TIFFANY M. WILLIAMS, ALJ:

This decision serves as a supplement to and incorporates by reference the Initial Decision issued at docket number EDU 02417-2014, dated April 7, 2015. The matter was remanded and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on May 13, 2015, and received by the undersigned on May 27, 2015. The matter was remanded for a determination as to whether the petitioners were appointed by the Board for a fixed term of employment and thereby excluded from statutory tenure.

Upon notice of the remand, the respondent provided a revised certification from Ms. Catherine Sousa, the Board's Director of Human Resources. Ms. Sousa certified that for each year of the petitioners' employment, they were appointed by the Board for a fixed one-year term. (R-1). As noted, in the Initial Decision of April 7, 2015, the petitioners failed to respond to the respondent's motion to dismiss, which was granted in the Initial Decision. To date, the petitioners failed to respond to refute the revised certification of Ms. Sousa or communicate any response after being afforded an opportunity to do so.

Accordingly, for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision dated April 7, 2015, and including the additional facts from the revised accompanying certification, I CONCLUDE that these matters are DISMISSED for lack of jurisdiction, and the respondent's motion is GRANTED.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Stephen Donovan, School District of the Township of Irvington, Essex County. Agency Dkt. No. 113-5/15.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with respondent Stephen Donovan's Motion to Dismiss the tenure charges filed by the Irvington Township Board of Education. The respondent maintains that the charges should be dismissed because they are duplicative of previous charges that were filed by the Board in May 2014. Following the filing of those original charges in May 2014, the parties entered into a Consent Order that was approved by an Arbitrator on August 1, 2014. Under the Consent Order, the respondent was required to file an application for disability retirement with the New Jersey Division of Pensions and Benefits (Division). In response to the current charges, the respondent submitted proof that he has filed an application with the Division for a disability pension, and to date the Division has not yet issued a decision approving or denying the application. As such, the respondent argues that the current charges are premature because the Board is only permitted to re-file the tenure charges if he is denied disability.

On the other hand, the Board maintains that it is authorized to file the current charges because the Consent Order states that if the respondent is not approved for disability the Board may re-file the tenure charges. The Board contends that it does not have the requisite information from the respondent regarding when he filed for disability, and the status of his application. Without that information, and based on its need to plan for the upcoming school year, the Board asserts that it should be permitted to proceed with the current tenure charges.

Upon review and consideration of the submissions, I find that under the Consent Order the Board may only re-file the tenure charges if the respondent is not approved for a disability retirement. Despite the Board's concerns, it is clear from the documents submitted by the respondent that he has in fact applied for a disability retirement with the Division. Moreover, the respondent's independent medical examination was scheduled for June 25, 2015. Therefore, the Board may not re-file tenure charges until a decision is issued by the Division as to whether the respondent is eligible for a disability retirement.

Accordingly, the Motion to Dismiss is hereby GRANTED, and the tenure charges are dismissed.*

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

In the Matter of Tenure Charge of Inefficiency of Sandra Cheatham — Docket No. 68-3/15

-and-

School District of the City of Newark

APPEARANCES

For the District
Brenda C. Liss, Esq.

For the Respondent
Colin M. Lynch, Esq.

BEFORE: ARBITRATOR STEPHEN M. BLUTH

BACKGROUND

The facts of this matter are unusual and stem from a previous charge against Respondent in 2014. At that time the Newark School District (District) preferred charges of inefficiency against Sandra Cheatham (Cheatham or Respondent) under Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Legislation (Law). As a result it sought the termination of her employment on the grounds of inefficiency. Subsequently, Respondent answered the charges against her. Consequently, I was selected to hear and decide this matter. However, after hearing this matter I determined the District had not followed the appropriate procedures and dismissed the charges against her. On or about October 16, 2014, I issued my decision whereby I determined Respondent should be reinstated with full back pay.

Also, at this hearing the District claimed even if a teacher is exonerated under Section 25, it did not preclude it from instituting charges under against Respondent Section 8 of the Law. In my decision I firmly rejected the District's contention if I found Respondent not culpable of the charges against her under Section 25, I should treat the matter as if the charges had been filed under section 8.

Thereafter, on or about January 30, 2015 the District brought forth a second tenure charge seeking Respondent's dismissal. In the District's view, this second set of charges they claimed were "new" or "amended." Consequently, Respondent again challenged the District's claim. I met with parties on April 28, 2015 to discuss this matter and hear oral argument in support of their positions. This Opinion and Award follows.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

The District contends Respondent's reliance on the "Law of the Case" doctrine is misplaced. It points out this doctrine is a non-binding rule to prevent re-litigation of a previously resolved issue in the same case. Further, the District maintains, the Respondent's claim this instant matter is the same as the previous one is not accurate. To buttress that contention, it explains, the first case was docketed as 226-814, while the instant matter was assigned Docket Number 68-3/15. In its view this proves these are two different cases and renders the "Law of the Case" doctrine inapplicable.

Further, the District argues, the Res Judicata Doctrine does not apply to the instant matter because the present matter is not the same as the previous proceeding. It points out, for this doctrine to apply, the judgment in the prior action must be valid, final, and on the merits. Also, the claim in the later action must grow out of the same transaction or occurrence as the claim in the earlier one. The District also insists the issue of whether a school district may proceed on inefficiency charges under section 8 and whether Respondent should be removed from her position are matters of public importance which should not be barred from consideration.

Also, according to the District, there is no merit to Respondent's claim inefficiency charges must be brought only under Section 25, as using Section 8 is contrary to the law. It points out the Legislature created a new form of charge, that of Section 25 in TEACHNJ, which dealt with the discipline of inefficient teachers. It was under this Section the District proceeded with this form of charge against Respondent in 2014. However, the District emphasizes, absent from TEACHNJ is any statement Section 25 is the only type of inefficiency that may be brought against a poorly performing teacher. It explains Section 25(a) of the ACT N.J.S.A.18:6-17.2(a) states "In the event that the matter before the arbitrator. . . is employee inefficiency pursuant to Section 25 of this act. . . ." indicates inefficiency may be brought before an arbitrator other than pursuant to Section 25.

Moreover, it argues, interpreting Section 18A:6-17.3 as the exclusive authority for insufficiency charges leads to the illogical, untenable result in that it created a three-year hiatus from 2012 to at least 2015 during which time the State's boards of education would be prohibited from bringing any charges of inefficiency against poorly performing teachers.

Also, the District refers to numerous arbitration awards that have recognized charges brought under Section 8 N.J.S.A.18:6-16 would have been available to the School District if that basis for the charge had been pled. The contention that an inefficiency charge cannot proceed on any basis other than N18:6-173 would lead to the absurd conclusion the Legislature intended to hand poorly performing teachers a "free pass" for three years after the Act's effective date is contrary to legislative intent.

Additionally, the District rejects Respondent's claim the new evaluation rubrics were developed in exchange for speedy tenure charges with limited defenses. While it acknowledges that claim may be accurate, it avers Respondent reaches too far in suggesting the "quid pro quo" also entailed the complete elimination of inefficiency charges under Section 8, and a three-year moratorium on all charges without warranting a single statement from the Legislature to that effect. The District emphasizes TEACHNJ is not a wholesale replacement of New Jersey's Tenure Act; rather it is a package of amendments to some, but not all, of the sections of the Tenure Act. It argues, as well, under Respondent's interpretation no teacher within the State of New Jersey could be removed based on inefficiency during that three-year time period. Therefore, based on reasons delineated herein the School District of Newark submits Respondent's motion to dismiss and/or for summary judgment should be denied and this matter should proceed to hearing.

Respondent alleges the charges against her are baseless. In her view the instant amended charges filed against her are simply a legal ploy to avoid the consequences from the District's premature filing of charges against her pursuant to Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act. Respondent stresses the District initially failed and the charges were dismissed. As a result, she relates, it now seeks to file so-called "new" tenure charges. However, Respondent avers, these charges are not new. Rather, they are simply a rehash of the same charges filed against her with the Commissioner in August 2014. Also, Respondent reports, these new charges are ostensibly brought pursuant to Section 8 rather than Section 25 of TEACHNJ. However, she emphasizes, even a cursory inspection of these "new" charges reveals they constitute little more than an amendment of the prior charges I dismissed in my decision of October 14, 2014. Moreover, she reports, both the Statement of Evidence and the accompanying documentary exhibits appended to the "new" charge are effectively identical to those accompanying the dismissed charge. Thus, in Respondent's view, these amendments are not "new." At best, they are an amendment of the previously dismissed charges, she declares.

In addition to that factor, Respondent relates these amendments have been filed long after I previously dismissed the charges against her, Respondent reports. Further, she avers, they are predicated on a legal theory I expressly rejected when I determined the District could not proceed under Section 8 of TEACHNJ, given its failure under Section 25. Importantly, Respondent reminds, I barred the District from getting a "second bite at the apple" and a "do-over." She further avers if the District disagreed with my findings, it had ample opportunity to attempt to vacate my Award, something it failed to do.

Also, according to Respondent, the amended complaint is substantively deficient, as the charge seeks to pursue a claim of inefficiency against her under Section 8 of TEACHNJ in light of the revamping of the tenure laws, which hold the only section of that statute in which a school district may bring a charge of inefficiency against a teacher is Section 25; Section 8 is available for other charges such as misconduct or "conduct unbecoming." Therefore, Respondent posits, the District's amended charge of inefficiency must be dismissed with prejudice.

Respondent explains as well, she taught in the District from 1974 to approximately 1992, at which time she moved to Georgia. However, she returned to Newark in 2003-2004 and has taught there ever since that time, she explains. Respondent emphasizes, for the entirety of her career including 2011-2012, she has been rated as a "proficient" and "effective" educator. It was only after Cheatham filed a workers' compensation claim and filed complaints regarding the health and safety of her Kindergarten classroom she received a "partially effective" rating for 2012-2013, while at the conclusion of the 2013-2014 her rating was "ineffective." In her view these ratings were solely in retaliation for her workers' compensation claim and complaints about the health conditions of her classroom.

As a result of these two ratings, Respondent was served with a Notice of Tenure charge seeking her removal for "inefficiency" pursuant solely to Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act. Then, on or about August 16, 2014, Respondent relates, the State District Superintendent, Cami Anderson, certified the tenure charges and filed them with the New Jersey Department of Education, Respondent reports. As a result, the matter proceeded to arbitration in which I was appointed arbitrator. After hearing all the evidence, I concluded the District's evaluation program was not in compliance with applicable regulations in the form of ACHIEVENJ because those regulations did not go into effect until the 2013-2014 school year.

Additionally, Respondent explains, I rejected the District's claim it could proceed under Section 8 of the Act N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 if a teacher is exonerated under Section 25. She emphasizes, too, I rejected the District's claim exoneration under Section 25 that does not preclude it from instituting a similar procedure under Section 8, thus giving the District the proverbial "second bite." Notwithstanding my ruling, the District served a second Notice of Tenure Charges on Respondent pursuant to Section 8 of TEACHNJ, and filed them with the Commissioner of Education on or about March 30, 2015. In Cheatham's view, the improperly certified and filed amended charges by the District should be dismissed because they were not in compliance with the law.

Moreover, Respondent contends the dismissal of tenure charges against her is now the "law of the case," and the District's amendment of those charges is constrained by that doctrine. This is so because the amended inefficiency charges rely on the same facts and evidence presented in the initial charges. The District's attempt to amend tenure charges that have already been dismissed is fundamentally unfair and in clear violation of her rights, Respondent argues, and should not be permitted to proceed. This "law of the case" doctrine, she relates, requires judges to respect un-reversed decisions made during a trial by the same or higher court regarding questions of law. This is based on the simple principle once an issue is litigated and decided in a suit, re-litigation of that issue should be avoided if possible, Respondent explains. Since, in the instant matter, the issue has already been decided, the amended charges are bound by the "law of the case," Respondent contends. She reminds, the District attempted to proceed under Section 8 after I dismissed the charges filed under Section 25 and that I specifically rejected the notion that, having failed under Section 25, the District could proceed with charges under a different section of the law. She also reminds the District had three months in which to attempt to vacate my Award. It did not do so, Respondent avers, but rather adopted the questionable tactic of refiling the same charges with the apparent hope of getting a different result.

Further, Respondent cites the Res Judicata Doctrine, which holds when a controversy between parties is once fairly litigated and determined it is no longer open to re-litigation. Thus, while "Law of the Case" is a discretionary doctrine applied by a tribunal regarding legal determinations made in the same case, Res Judicata is a mandatory doctrine that a tribunal must apply to bar a party from re-litigating in a new case an issue already disposed of, Respondent declares. She maintains the criteria for Res Judicata to bar re-litigation of a claim have been met in this matter. She reminds, the first criterion is the judgment in the prior action must be valid, final, and on the merits. Second, the parties in the later action must be identical to or in privity with those in the prior action. Finally, the claim in the later action must grow out of the same transaction or occurrence. As a result this issue cannot be re-litigated as it is the same claim as the District made in the earlier case. Therefore, Respondent argues, since all three criteria in this matter have been met, the Res Judicata Doctrine prohibits the District from re-litigating this matter.

Additionally, when the District realized the charges against her were deficient, it sought to pursue inefficiency charges against her under Article 8, Respondent informs. However, she points out, I expressly rejected that claim in my first Award. In fact, because my decision was final, the parties were identical, and the instant charges grew out of the same transaction or occurrence as the prior tenure charge, and since the Statements of Evidence and the exhibits attached thereto for both charges are effectively identical, Respondent claims, this Doctrine precludes the District from proceeding with the new charges.

Moreover, according to Respondent, the District's amended charges against her were untimely filed and must, therefore, be dismissed. For example, she explains, under Section 25 the District was required to file charges against her with the Commissioner of Education within 30 days of filing with the State District Superintendent. In this case, the District certified the charges in August 2014. Said charges were based on the identical series of facts and allegations as the instant charges. Thus, the District was under an obligation to file the tenure charges against Respondent within 30 days thereof, she maintains. It is clear the current charges were filed well outside that time period and are untimely under TEACHNJ. Accordingly, Respondent argues, they must be dismissed.

Also, even if the instant charges were deemed to have been filed pursuant to Section 8, they are still untimely, Respondent avers. She stresses, once charges were filed with the State District Superintendent, she could submit a position statement and statement of evidence within 15 days of receipt of charges. Upon receipt of this statement, or at the end of the 15-day period, the District Superintendent had 45 days to decide on whether to certify the charges to the Commissioner of Education, Respondent relates. Then, it had 15 days to file written charges with Commissioner after making a decision. In the instant matter, Respondent explains, the District filed charges with the State District Superintendent in August 2014. These charges were based on the identical series of facts and allegations as the instant charges. Therefore, according to Respondent, the District was obligated to vote on whether to file charges under Section 8 within 45 days of receiving her response to the charges; it was then required to file charges with the Commissioner within 15 days of making its decision. Respondent argues the District did not do so and the charges were filed outside the applicable time frame. Consequently, the charges were untimely filed under TEACHNJ and should be dismissed, Respondent insists.

Finally, Respondent cites the "entire controversy doctrine" that bars the District from bringing "amended" or "new" charges based on the same facts and series of transactions or occurrence at this stage of the proceeding. In this case the District has already fully litigated its tenure charges against Respondent based on her 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 evaluations. It lost on those charges, Respondent reminds. She also emphasizes the District could have attempted to bring other charges simultaneously under Section 8 based on those same facts of transaction or occurrence and attempted to do so. However, Respondent stresses, I rejected its attempt to do so. She maintains the District cannot now re-litigate the case. If it is to be allowed to do so, it will be free to continue re-filing the same charges against her under various legal theories. This would allow it to get second, third or more bites at the apple, and would violate Respondent's due process rights to not be subjected to the same charges repeatedly and indefinitely by the District, she maintains. Therefore, Respondent asks the instant charges not be permitted to be brought anew under Section 8. Accordingly, she asks the charges be dismissed and she be made whole for any lost wages or benefits.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

I have reviewed the arguments, submissions and briefs submitted by the parties. Based on my examination, I determine the District may not proceed with charges against Respondent. I so find for several reasons.

First, at the arbitration I held in 2014, the District charged Respondent with inefficiency and sought her dismissal. At that time I dismissed the charges against her brought under Section 25 of TEACHNJ. The District then argued it could bring these charges against Respondent under Section 8. At that time I indicated it could not do so because it filed under Section 25. My reasoning in that matter was the District was attempting to get a "second bite of the apple" and a "do-over," and should not be permitted to do so.

I observe, as well, after my Award was issued, the District made no attempt to have it vacated. That failure indicates to me the Department accepted my findings and that should have ended the controversy.

Moreover, I find the Doctrine of Res Judicata is relevant in this matter. This so because I have examined both the first and second set of charges and observe the charges filed in January 2015 were virtually identical to the charges I had previously dismissed. Further, I reject the District's claim the matters raised in the second set of charges are not the same matter and thus, do not fall under Res Judicata. In my opinion, this is pure nonsense. Just because the charges were filed under a different section of the law does not render the matter different. I am also unsympathetic to the District's claim this is a matter of public importance and should not be barred from being heard. While I certainly agree the matter is one of public importance, this does not override the age old Res Judicata.

Additionally, I find, the District's claim it could file "new" or "amended" charges does not conform to TEACHNJ. My review of that Section reveals it is part and parcel of other Sections specifically Section 5. Section 8 simply contains the procedures the parties must follow if charging a tenured teacher. While Section 8 makes no mention of inefficiency, it must be read in conjunction with Section 5 (N.J.S.18A:6-11). That Section reads, "Any charge made against an employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency (emphasis added) shall be filed with the secretary. . . ." Therefore, Section 8 refers to teachers who, among other criteria, are deemed to be "efficient." Therefore, Section 8, in conjunction with Section 5, limits charges to teachers who are efficient. Thus, under this principle excluded are teachers who are deemed inefficient, This squares with the long-established concept of "expression unius est exclusive alterius" (to include one thing is to exclude others). Since teachers with good behavior and efficiency are covered by Section 8, the only way to proceed against an inefficient teacher is under Section 25. The District's claim this would lead to an unacceptable three-year hiatus due to the need for three less than efficient ratings over a three-year period, the fact remains that is the way the legislation was written.

As for the District's argument the "Law of the Case" is not binding, while true, it certainly provides guidance as to what criteria must be met to establish it. In this, I find Respondent clearly met the criteria.

Finally, with regard to the timeliness issue, since I have determined the District improperly charged Respondent and that those charges should be dismissed, I find no reason to address that matter. Consequently, I make no comment on it.

Based on the evidence presented, I determine the District improperly charged Respondent under Section 8 of TEACHNJ. The appropriate remedy is reinstatement with full back pay and benefits. It is so ordered.

AWARD

The District improperly charged Respondent under Section 8 of TEACHNJ. The appropriate remedy is reinstatement with full back pay and benefits.

BACKGROUND

On November 24, 2014, Dr. Richard O'Malley (hereinafter "Dr. O'Malley") filed tenure charges with the Board of Education. On December 12, 2014, Ms. Weber filed a Statement of Position with the Board of Education, which is optional pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. Ms. Weber's Statement of Position was incorporated as part of the Answer filed in this proceeding. (Board Exhibit 6, as revised).

On December 16, 2014, the Board certified the tenure charges and forwarded the charges to the Commissioner of Education. On January 7, 2015, Ms .Weber filed her Answer, consistent with an agreed upon extension of time approved by the Commissioner of Education's designee.

On February 6, 2015, a pre-hearing conference was conduced at which time a discovery schedule was established, as were tentative hearing dates.

The parties thereafter exchanged initial disclosures and discovery materials. This matter was consolidated for a hearing with In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Maryellen Lechelt, Docket No. 365-12/14 and In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Tyler Van Pelt, Docket No. 362-12/14. Hearings were conducted on March 10, 2015, March 19, 2015, March 25, 2015, April 2, 2015, April 12, 2015 and telephonically on April 21,2015. Subsequently, May 8, 2015 was established as the due date for the submission of the Post Arbitration Hearing Brief on behalf of Ms. Weber.

The parties were represented by counsel and were afforded a full and fair opportunity to conduct direct and cross examination of witnesses and to present relevant documentary evidence. The record was closed upon the Arbitrator's timely receipt of the parties' post-hearing briefs.

THE CHARGES

BACKGROUND COMMON TO ALL CHARGES

Ms. Weber has been employed by the Board as a Special Education teacher since the 2000-2001school year. Ms. Weber was obliged, among other things, to ensure the implementation and enforcement of all Board policies, follow administrative directives and procedures, as well as New Jersey law, and accord herself appropriately towards and amongst the other Board employees she works with on a day to day basis – i.e., not to conduct herself inappropriately in their presence and cause them embarrassment, discomfort, offense and concern. Ms. Weber, however, has ignored the foregoing duties and responsibilities, and knowingly accorded herself in both a highly inappropriate and highly offensive manner – exposing others to a hostile and uncomfortable working environment.

Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[s]exual harassment includes all unwelcome . . . verbal contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employees gender." Policy 3362 further states that "when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint."

Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, states in relevant part that "[I]nappropriate conduct by a school staff member outside their professional responsibilities may be considered conduct unbecoming a staff member. Therefore, school staff members are advised to be concerned with such conduct which may include, but is not limited to, communications and/or publications using emails, text-messaging, social networking sites, or any other medium that is directed and/or available to pupils or for public display."

Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, indicates that "the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education."

Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, establishes that the program shall "promote the acceptance of persons of diverse backgrounds regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status." Further, this Policy provides that the Board's affirmative action program will "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education."

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, advises employees that the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Policy 3321 further states that "the Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only." Moreover, the foregoing policy, in relevant part, states that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)computers for . . . inappropriate or obscene purposes."

Finally, Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment."

On October 23, 2014, during a voluntary Engrade Chromebook Training, Ms. Weber actively participated in a group chat on the Today's Meet website (https://todaysmeet.com/engraderocks) through the District's computer network. Today's Meet is a public web forum, accessible by all Board employees and students. The group chat spanned for a period of roughly two and a half hours and served no instructional purpose. Rather, the chat was graphically sexual in nature; discriminatory to women, homosexuals, elderly persons and special education/handicap students; highly offensive to anyone not involved with same; and created a hostile work environment to other Board employees who were able to view, at any point in time, the content of the discussion.

The nature of the foregoing conversation is egregious beyond the bounds of decency. No persons and/or classifications of persons were spared. Ms. Weber's behavior, as set forth more specifically below, illustrates a complete and shameful disregard of her responsibilities as an employee of the Edison Township Board of Education and a member of the teaching profession, including, but not necessarily limited to, violations of the above mentioned policies. Ms. Weber's conduct has caused both members of the Board's Administration and members of the staff grave concerns over her intentions and capabilities, to the point of no longer feeling comfortable to be in her presence and/or permitting her to interact with other Board employees or students.

I hereby charge Maria Weber with conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member, misbehavior and/or other just cause, including but not necessarily limited to insubordination; all of which warrant her dismissal, pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:28-5, and 18A:6-10.1, et seq. As more specifically set forth below, it is clear that she has exhibited a callous disregard for the expectations of her employer, as well as the rights of other employees of the Board, to conduct their daily activities in an environment that is free from harassment, discrimination, bullying and inappropriate conduct and communications, as well as an egregious breach of the professional standards imposed upon her as a member of the teaching profession.

SPECIFICATION OF CHARGES

CHARGE I

Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Inappropriate Staff Conduct With Other Staff Members

On October 23, 2014, while attending a voluntary Engrade Chromebook Training at the Board's Offices, Maria Weber engaged in a course of misconduct that violated New Jersey Law, as well as Board policies, regulations and procedures regarding staff interaction with and/or concerning other staff members. More specifically, Ms. Weber actively participated in a conversation through the District's network, in a public chat room ("Today's Meet"), that was visible to those present in the room and obtainable by any District employee and student through the Today's Meet website, which was discriminatory, offensive, rife with sexual innuendo and ultimately created a hostile work environment (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). This misconduct by Ms. Weber is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

Count 1 - Inappropriate comments about Sara Bleekinger – Engrade Trainer

On October 23, 2014, Ms. Weber engaged in a course of misconduct directed towards Ms. Bleekinger, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. Weber made the following comments about Ms. Bleekinger:

(1) "maybe she was caught in the rain";

(2) "I think you make her nervous";

(3) "your (sic) cuter... your mamalechelt"

(4) "was that your alarm or did I hear church bells";

(5) "are you winking at her';

(6) "maybe we would have learned something if stevie was giving the workshop";

(7) "does anyone have tips for her? Is that her way of saying I don't know what the hell im (sic) talking about";

(8) "I would hate to be her";

(9) "she keeps looking at you ...especially when she says repository";

(10) "teach like a robot ty";

(11) "dare you to ask her if she would go out with our friend ty";

(12) Adding her insight into potential pick-up lines for Mr. Van Pelt to use on Ms. Bleekinger, Ms. Weber stated, " how bout (sic) my eyes are the only thing I don't wanna (sic) take off of your (sic)" ;

(13) "she keeps staring at ty";

(14) "she keeps looking for your approval...can you give her a little something";

(15) "don't say good bye...just say see ya (sic) later babe";

(16) tell her to meet u (sic) in Dartmouth at 4(sic)";

(17) "im sure his roomie would love to join too",

(18) "do you want the pad ty? You can give her your number".

Ms. Weber's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for anyone who has had occasion to review her comments and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in her presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

Count 2 - Inappropriate and offensive comments between each other

On October 23, 2014, Ms. Weber engaged in a course of misconduct which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive and harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. weber made the following comments:

(1) "hes a virgin still...leave him pure";

(2) " I like control fu (sic).

(3) In response to Mr. Van Pelt stating that he is a "backchannel guy", Ms. Weber stated. "cant you tell b the way she walks";

(4) In response to Ms. Lechelt stating that the conversation is "so beautifully filthy, Ms. Weber stated, "always is when tvp is chatting".

(5) "whats a repository? Is it something u (sic) stick up your ass";

(6) In response to Ms. Lechelt's comment regarding "the 01 (sic) powder your balls shower, " Ms. Weber stated "or soap in the wash cloth".

Ms. Weber's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for anyone who has had occasion to review her comments and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in her presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Weber make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

CHARGE II

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Disruption of Professional Development Training

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, during an Engrade Training, Maria Weber engaged in a course of misconduct that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature. More specifically, by actively participating in a group chat through "Today's Meet", which was – in part – about Alysia Battista, visible to Ms. Battista and highly offensive to her, Ms. Battista was unable to focus and effectively forced to leave the training to forego further angst, ultimately preventing her from reaping any instructional benefits. This misconduct by Ms. Weber is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE III

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Misuse of the District's Computer Network

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, Maria Weber actively participated in a group chat through the District's computer network that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence), by way of the "Today's Meet" website, which constituted a flagrant misuse of Board resources and showed a concerning lack of judgment and failure to comply with the heavy duty of self-restraint and controlled behavior expected from any member of the teaching profession. This misconduct by Ms. Weber is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE IV

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause Violations of District Policies

Count 1 – Violation of Sexual Harassment Policies/Regulations

Ms. Weber's conduct violated Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, in that it subjected Alysia Batista, as well as other Board employees, "to sexually offensive speech and conduct . . . wholly inappropriate to the harmonious employment relationships necessary to the operation of the school district." Further, Ms. Weber's conduct was severe and pervasive and had the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile or offensive working environment for others. More specifically, Ms. Weber made statements, including but not limited to, her sexual abilities and those of co-workers; obscene teasing, jokes and remarks of a sexual nature; comments of a sexual nature on, or staring at, an individual's physical attributes; and questions about sexual conduct. Regardless of whether such comments were directed at a particular individual, or even if such targets were aware that comments were made about them, Ms. Weber's graphic declarations constitute sexual harassment.

Count 2 – Violation of Affirmative Action Policy

Ms. Weber's conduct violated Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, in that it subjected Alysia Battista, as well as other Board employees, to a "learning environment [rife] with all forms of prejudice, discrimination and harassment . . ."

Count 3 – Violation of Sexual Harassment and Affirmative Action Policies pertaining to Affirmative Action Investigation

Following an Affirmative Action/Sexual Harassment Investigation conducted by the District's Affirmative Action Office, Margaret Deluca, Ms. Weber's conduct during the October 23, 2104 Today's Meet group chat was determined to be in violation of the District's Sexual Harassment and Affirmative Action Policies, as well as various other Board Policies. In relevant part, Ms. Deluca found that the "comments in the chat were directed against females and were so outrageous that the teacher filing the complaint was unable to concentrate on the needed instruction, thus interfering with her work performance." Further, Ms. Deluca expressed her concern that Ms. Weber did not understand the gravity of her conduct. As a result of same, Ms. Deluca recommended that Dr. O'Malley "consider the most severe [disciplinary] consequences for Ms. Weber." Ultimately, Ms. Weber's behavior triggered an Affirmative Action/Sexual Harassment investigation that resulted in a determination of misconduct by her.

Count 4 – Violation of Code of Ethics Policy

Ms. Weber violated Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, in that she failed to "exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons."

Count 5 – Violation of Inappropriate Staff Conduct Policy

Ms. Weber violated Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, by engaging in inappropriate conduct, outside of her professional responsibilities, including communications through the internet, which were available to pupils and for public display.

Count 6 – Violation of Healthy Workplace Environment Policy

Ms. Weber violated Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, by engaging in "repeated malicious conduct . . . directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that [Ms. Battista, and others, found] hostile [and] offensive."

Count 7 – Violation of Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members

Ms. Weber violated Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, by engaging in a group chat on the District's computer network that had no administrative and/or educational purposes. More specifically, Ms. Weber violated this Policy by actively participating in a conversation through the District's computer network that was highly inappropriate (contrary to the intended use of the network) and outright obscene (contrary to the generally accepted social standards for use of publicly owned and operated communication vehicles).

CHARGE V

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Failure to Pay Attention During Professional Development Training

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, during an Engrade Training, as a result of a roughly two and a half hour inappropriate and extraneous conversation, unrelated to the Training in any way, Maria Weber failed to pay attention and/or make any effort to benefit from the instruction provided. This misconduct by Ms. Weber constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

CONTENTIONS OF THE BOARD

The Board argued as follows:

These facts pertain to Maria Weber.

- Ms. Weber has been employed by the Board since the 2000-2001 school year. She is currently a tenured employee.
- Ms. Weber was a special education teacher, assigned to James Monroe School for the 2014-2015 school year.

On September 4, 2014, Ms. Weber executed the Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications Form, acknowledging that all Board policies and regulations can be found on the Board's website at http://www.edison.k12.nj.us/Page/514 and agreeing to review and conform to the requirements of same. B-19.

The following facts apply to all of the Respondents

- Article III(B)(1 and 2) of the Agreement for Professional Employees between Board of Education Edison Township New Jersey and Edison Township Education Association, July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014 ("CBA") state, in relevant part, that "all Board of Education policies will be upheld and enforced by all Board employees who are party to this Agreement, as well as by all Administrators, Principals, and Supervisors" and "all Board of Education policies will be available for review in the office of the principal, school library, and the Association office." B-27.

- Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, advises employees that the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Policy 3321 further states that "the Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only." Moreover, the foregoing policy, in relevant part, states that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)computers for . . . inappropriate or obscene purposes." B-24.
- Moreover, Policy 3321 subject employees who violate same to discipline, which includes but is not limited to, suspension, revocation of computer privileges and/or dismissal. B-24.
- Unequivocally, there is no expectation of privacy for any Board employee when using the district's computer network. In fact, there is no program and/or policy that would trump the foregoing fact. 3T-14:16-15:12; 2T 26:13-19.
- Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[s]exual harassment includes all unwelcome . . . verbal contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender." Policy 3362 further states that "when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint." B-21.

- Board Policy 3362 also states that "any employee . . . who is found to have sexually harassed an employee of this district will be subject to discipline which may include termination of employment." B-21.
- Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, establishes that the Board's affirmative action program will "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education." B-20.
- Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, states in relevant part that "[I]nappropriate conduct by a school staff member outside their professional responsibilities may be considered conduct unbecoming a staff member. Policy 3281 further states that "School staff's conduct in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all time . . . [and] school staff shall not make inappropriate comments about pupils." B-23.
- Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, indicates that "the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education." B-22.
- Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment." Policy 3351 further defines the foregoing unacceptable conduct to include the use of derogatory remarks; insults; verbal or physical conduct that a reasonable person would find threatening, intimidating, or humiliating. Finally, a single act of such conduct can constitute the unacceptable conduct prohibited by this policy if it is especially severe and egregious. B-25.

- Board Policy 3351 states that "appropriate disciplinary action may be taken depending on the severity of conduct." B-25
- On October 23, 2014, Respondents attended a mandatory Engrade Training (the "Training") at the Board's offices. Engrade was a new initiative (learning management system) for the District's elementary school teachers. 2T 24:3-23.
- The Training lasted for two-and-one-half hours (roughly 9:00-11:30AM) and was conducted by Sara Bleekinger, who is not a Board employee. 2T 28:24-29:2.
- Respondents were required to use their District issued Chromebooks to participate in the Training. All Respondents admit to using same during the Training and connecting to the Internet through the District's network. Further, Respondent's computers were open, with their screens exposed, throughout the duration of the Training. 1T 74:12-18; 2T 25:6-20. At 8:53AM, Mr. Van Pelt forwarded an email to Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber and Jonathan Bauza, requesting that they "join [him] on [his] personal wiseass backchannel discussion."[1] B-12.

- Mr. Van Pelt attached a link to bring the invitees to a web site called "Today's Meet." B-12. Today's Meet is an interactive program that hosts various educationally based conversations (i.e., teacher to teacher / teacher to student). However, Today's Meet is not a program that the District requires it teachers to use and/or be familiar with. In fact, it has no affiliation to this District. Importantly, the District does not maintain Today's Meet chat and/or content, nor does it request and/or require Today's Meet to do so. 3T 20:5-11; 5T 236:24-237:15.
- Respondents were not required to use Today's Meet as part of the Engrade Training. In fact, there was absolutely no compatibility and/or correlation between the Engrade Training and the Today's Meet website. B-41.
- Respondents denied reading Lechelt-3 in its entirety prior to using the Today's Meet Program on October 23, 2014. More specifically, Respondent's did not review Today's Meet's Privacy Policy and Terms of Service. In fact, said portions of Lechelt-3 became effective December 13, 2014 – after the chat at issue occurred! See, Lechelt-3.
- Moreover, the document date stamped Lechelt-032 within Lechelt-3 illustrates that Today's Meet chat rooms can be public and/or have limited access. Without question, the chat at issue here was not totally private as Ms. DeLuca – who was not invited to take part in same – was able to access the chat room. See, Lechelt-3.

[1] Note that while the invitation was actually sent at 8:53AM, the email illustrates that it was sent at 5:53AM. The district's network is set not set to Pacific Standard time and is therefore displayed at a time three hours earlier than it actually is. 2T 45:13-46:3.

- The Respondents, along with Jonathan Bauza, proceeded to engage in a 2.5 hour chat (beginning at 8:54AM and ending at 11:24AM) (hereinafter referred to as the "Group Chat"). B-13.
- James Madison Intermediate School Teacher, Alysia Battista, also attended the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training. 1T 60:10-16.
- Throughout the Training, Alysia Battista was seated in the last row, roughly 3 feet directly behind Ms. Lechelt. To the left of Ms. Lechelt were Jonathan Bauza and then Mr. Van Pelt. Ms. Weber was seated directly in front of Mr. Van Pelt. See, Lechelt-1; 1T 181:13; B-44 and Lechelt-1.
- Ms. Battista did not have any personal animosity towards Respondents prior to the Training. In fact she had no relationship (personal/professional) with any of them prior to same. 1T 83:4-9.
- A few moments after the Training began, Ms. Battista was distracted by noise emanating from Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Bauza. Mr. Battista proceeded to "shush" Ms. Lechelt. 1T 67:5-22.
- Ms. Lechelt turned around and gave Ms. Battista a look that Ms. Battista interpreted as "really did you just shush me?" Ms. Lechelt and Messrs. Van Pelt and Bauza continued to converse loudly and lean in towards each other's computer screens. 1T 68:14-20.
- Ms. Battista was able to clearly see Ms. Lechelt's computer screen and, therefore, observe the content of the conversation between Ms. Lechelt, Mr. Van Pelt, Mr. Bauza and Ms. Weber. In fact, Ms. Battista indicated that Respondents made no effort to hide what was going on and, in fact, at one point during the training, Ms. Lechelt actually got up from her seat, leaving the computer screen open and the chat on the screen – exposed to the general public and visible to anyone looking. More specifically, Ms. Battista observed the following comments: "short bus" and sexual innuendos – i.e., references to male genitalia, "blow me" and "how do you think I got my job"; comments about lesbians. Ms. Battista also observed comments about someone wearing red. Ms. Battista was wearing red and believed some of the commentary was directed towards her. 1T 69:18-71:22; 74:12-18; 1T 70:5-9, 74:12-19; B-8, B-10.

- Ms. Battista was heavily distracted and highly uncomfortable with the nature of the chat. She described same as "unbelievable". The content of the conversation was upsetting to Ms. Battista because: (1) she has a niece who is classified as special education; (2) she has an "uncle who's epileptic and his whole life he was called retarded and that affected him, so to see that from people who work with children"; and (3) she has a cousin who is discriminated against for being a lesbian. Ms. Battista indicated that "seeing those things especially with people who work with kids, whether it's a joke or not, that's not crossing the line, that's jumping over the line and turning around and spitting on it." 1T 73:5-24.
- Ms. Battista found the Group Chat to be "sexually offensive." 1T 151:16-20.
- Similarly, Ms. Battista clearly observed the web address that hosted the Group Chat. She documented same in both her note to Mr. Figurelli and her written statement. 1T 84:4-16; B-8 and B-10.
- Ms. Battista, based on the portions of the transcript she saw, believed that the Respondents were talking about her – i.e., she observed a comment about something red somebody was wearing, and assumed it was a reference to her because she was wearing a red sweater; and she saw a reference about someone "scratching their lips", which Ms. Battista tends to do when she gets upset, as was the case during the Group Chat. 1T 71:8-22; 176:11-21.

- Ms. Battista made a determination to inform central administration about this chat. She believed that since she preaches to her students to "say something if they see something", she would be disingenuous if she did not do same. Moreover, she expressed concern – i.e., "if that's what's going on in public when other people can see it and I don't think they made any effort to hide what was going on, what could possibly be going on when the kids were not being supervised by other adults." 1T 74:7-11.
- Ms. Battista proceeded to take photographs of Ms. Lechelt's computer screen so she would be able to prove the egregiousness of Respondent's chat. Ms. Battista did not take the time to focus her phone when she snapped the pictures and that is why same came out blurry. 1T 75:21-25; B-7.
- Ms. Weber made all of the comments in the chat attributed to "trish." B-6. Specifically, Ms. Weber made the following comments about the Engrade Trainer – Sarah Bleekinger:
    - "maybe she was caught in the rain";
    - "I think you make her nervous";
    - "your cuter . . . your mamalechelt"
    - "was that your alarm tvp or did I hear church bells";
    - "are you winking at her";
    - "maybe we should have learned something if stevie was giving the workshop";
    - "does anyone have tips for her? is that her way of saying I don't know what the hell im talking about [sic]";

- "I would hate to be her";
- "she keeps looking at you . . . especially when she says repository";
- "teach like a robot ty";
- "dare you to ask her if she would go out with our friend ty";
- Adding her insight into potential pick-up lines for Mr. Van Pelt to use on [the trainer], Ms. Weber stated, "how bout my eyes are the only thing I don't wanna take off of your [sic]";
- "she keeps staring at tvp";
- "shes looking for your approval . . . can you give her a little something";
- "don't say good bye . . . just say see ya later babe [sic]";
- "tell her to meet u on Dartmouth at 4 [sic]";
- "im sure his roomie would love to join too [sic]";
- "do you want the pad ty? you can give her your number." B-13.

- Ms. Weber made the following comments to Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Bauza:
  - "hes a virgin still . . . leave him pure [sic]";
  - "I like control fu";
  - In response to Mr. Van Pelt stating that he is a "backchannel guy", Ms. Weber stated, "cant you tell by the way he walks";
  - In response to Ms. Lechelt stating the conversation is "so beautifully filthy", Ms. Weber responded "always is when tvp is chatting";
  - "whats a repository? is it something u stick up your ass [sic]";

- In response to Ms. Lechelt's comment regarding "the ol powder your balls shower," Ms. Weber stated "or soap on the wash cloth." B-13.

- The foregoing chat had no educational purpose, nor did it enhance the instruction of the Training in any manner. 3T 250:24-251:6; B-42.
- Ms. Battista left the Training to speak with Steve Figurelli about her observations. Mr. Figurelli was unavailable so Ms. Battista wrote him a quick note and placed same in a sealed envelope for his attention. B-8.
- Ms. Battista returned to the Training because she knew the Training was important and because she felt she had a professional obligation to sit through same. She did not believe she could simply leave for the day. 1T 79:19-80:1; 149:19-21.
- As a result of Respondents' conduct, Ms. Battista was unable to concentrate and was prevented from learning the content of the Training. Thus, Ms. Battista was unprepared to use Engrade with her students and/or to teach Engrade to her less computer savvy team members and/or student teachers. 1T 71:23-25; 81:8-11; 1T 60:17-61:5.
- Within an hour after the Training, Ms. Battista met with her building Principal, Mr. Duggan, to inform him of Respondents' conduct. 1T 82:2-8.
- Pursuant to the request of Mr. Duggan, Ms. Battista prepared a handwritten statement, documenting her observations during the Training. 1T 83:15-19; B-10.
- Thereafter, later in the day on October 23, 2014, Ms. DeLuca interviewed Ms. Battista as part of an affirmative action investigation concerning Respondents' conduct. Ms. Battista provided Ms. DeLuca with a handwritten statement. Ms. Battista was very upset and visibly shaken during this meeting. See, B-11, B-10 and 2T 31:2-33:18; 1T 88:3-18; B-10.

- Ms. DeLuca accessed and reviewed a written copy of the Today's Meet Group Chat ("Transcript"). More specifically, Ms. DeLuca was initially provided with a copy of same by Tara Beams, but also was able to access a copy of the Transcript by simply opening Today's Meet.com and entering the Chat Room created by Mr. Van Pelt. 2T 41:4-20; B-13.
- Ms. DeLuca found the Transcript to be disgusting and offensive. 2T 48:20-23.
- The chat between Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Weber was open to the public and anyone with the chat name was able to access same. 2T 44:6-10; 6T 8:19-22.
- In fact, Don Platvoet, during his brief training of Respondent's on the potential uses of Today's Meet, did not inform Respondent's that it was a private program. 6T 8:8-15.
- Next, Ms. DeLuca met with and interviewed the other teachers in attendance during the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training. 2T 50:12-25; See, teacher interview notes.
- Only one other teacher present during the Training (Angie McKenna) observed the content of the chat between Respondents. 2T 52:22-53:16.
- Ms. DeLuca then proceeded to separately interview each of the Respondents. B-14 through B-16; 2T 56:10-12.
- Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt indicated that they made derogatory references to special education and/or handicap students as a result of the Instructor's "offensive" use of the designation "low" for students. 2T 63:15-64:8.
- Per the District's Assistant Superintendent for Special Services, the Instructors use of the designation "low" should not have been offensive. In fact, all of the tests used by the District to classify special education students use the term "low" when classifying students. 2T 65:13-66:5; 3T 237:12-239:16.

- Respondents all appeared to be sorry they were caught, not sorry they had engaged in the conduct at issue. 2T 93:19-24; 104:14-105:4; 114:18-21.
- Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt did not take Ms. DeLuca's interview seriously. On two separate occasions during the interview, Mr. Van Pelt blurted out offensive, disgusting and unacceptable comments – i.e., (1) when explaining that the phrase "eating chicken" means oral sex, Mr. Van Pelt stated under his breath, audible to Ms. DeLuca, that he likes oral sex; and (2) after explaining that the phrase "get the baby batter off the brain" was a reference to masturbation, Mr. Van Pelt stated, that he did not masturbate, "at least not that time." 2T 75:2-8; 76:6-20; 88:6-89:6.
- Throughout the course of her investigation, Ms. DeLuca determined the following meanings for the following phrases used by Respondents:
    - That many, if not all, references to "backchannel" were references to anal sex. B-15; 2T 68:7-16; 3T 266:4-7.
    - Mr. Van Pelt consistently used the phrase "eating chicken", which means both smoking marijuana and oral sex. 2T 71:1-2, 73:22-23.
    - After Ms. DeLuca stated that Ms. Battista "keeps scratching her lips and they are getting bigger." Mr. Van Pelt stated, "DSL." "DSL" is an acronym for the phrase Dick Sucking Lips. B-13; 2T 77:5-24.
    - "Tricky d" and "Little Richard" were derogatory references to Dr. O'Malley, made by Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt, respectively. B-13; 3T 227 20-24; 5T 244:12-20.
    - Mr. Van Pelt's use of the phrase "get[ting] the baby batter off the brain" was a reference to male ejaculation/masturbation. 2T 87:10-88:5; B-14.

- Following her interviews of Respondents, Ms. DeLuca reviewed and analyzed all relevant Board Policies to determine whether violations had occurred. 2T 114:22-115:1; 2T 55:3-20.
- Finally, Ms. DeLuca analyzed and evaluated all of the information/evidence gathered throughout her investigation and prepared a memorandum summarizing her findings and providing recommendations for Dr. O'Malley's review. B-26; 2T 126:10-22.
- Ms. DeLuca recommended that Dr. O'Malley consider the most severe consequences possible for all three Respondents because "they didn't seem, for lack of a better term, to get it. They didn't seem to realize the seriousness of the situation." 2T 127:25-128:13.
- Dr. O'Malley recommended that Tenure Charges be filed against Respondents because he "felt their comments and their actions were so egregious, that it would not make them suit [sic] to fit in a position of entrusting them with children . . . I just felt that in the context of their – what they wrote and what they were talking about was just – just disgusting and unbearable . . . And how could I ever look a parent in the eye and say that their children are safe knowing that they are in front of their classroom." 3T 57:17-58:3.
- The Tenure Charges were posted to the public through the news media. Parents and teachers alike have approached Dr. O'Malley on a daily basis to express their trepidations to the possible return of Respondents to the classroom. 3T 62:22-63:19.
- Dr. O'Malley indicated that "every parent and Edison resident and teacher feel that this was absolutely disgusting, and how can anyone not only talk about this, but talk about someone's child like this." 3T 63:4-8.

The record is closed and the evidence speaks for itself – the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents have engaged in unbecoming conduct, misbehavior and/or other just cause warranting their dismissal from their tenured positions with the Board.

Respondents conduct in engaging in a discriminatory, offensive and highly inappropriate group chat constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or just cause warranting their dismissal. On October 23, 2014, during a mandatory Engrade Training, Respondents engaged in a two and one-half hour "Group Chat" through the "Today's Meet Website, visible to those present in the room, observed in detail by Alysia Battista and ultimately printed through the news media and therefore, viewable by the general public. Respondents conceded that they were responsible for posting the various comments attributed to them (i.e., "tvp" = Mr. Van Pelt; "trish" – Ms. Weber; and "mamalechelt" = Ms. Lechelt).. The chat was full of sexual innuendo, discriminatory, offensive content and ultimately created a hostile and uncomfortable work environment for Ms. Battista. In fact, Ms. Battista believed portions of the chat were directed at her and was made to feel so uncomfortable by the general content of same that she was unable to remain focused during the Training and was ultimately brought to tears after having been exposed to same.

The inappropriateness of Respondents' chat is born from an objective review of the Today's Meet Transcript (B-13). Respondents' subjective descriptions and/or interpretations of the chat as a joke or a misunderstanding are entirely irrelevant to this Tribunal's consideration. Conversely, the Board's conclusion that the Respondents displayed such poor judgment through their participation in the Group Chat that they are not fit to be entrusted with the care of this District's students, coupled with the common sense determination that their conduct crossed all behavioral boundaries for public school teachers, should not be disturbed.

As to Charge I Count 1, Respondents, as a group, consistently directed commentary towards and/or about Ms. Bleekinger that was sexually explicit and offense, demeaning, derogatory and wholly inappropriate. More specifically, Respondents consciously decided to turn a serious and important instructional course into a fantasy game of sorts, within which they vividly described and/or actively suggested ways for Mr. Van Pelt to initiate and achieve sexual interactions with Ms. Bleekinger, along with the sexual fantasies Mr. Van Pelt had towards Ms. Bleekinger. Mr. Van Pelt admitted to making the following comments: "I'd like to tag her"; "you know what would look good on you? ME"; "do you like to have your hair pulled"; "I'd like to invite her to a private backchannel discussion . . . all night long".

Ms. Lechelt admitted to making the following comments: "I have a feeling she would rather go out with me";[2] "im [sic] worried you'll catch something from her backchannel"; "theres [sic] not enough room in her repository for two"; "do you want to blow me". Ms. Weber admitted to making the following comments: "dare you to ask if she would go out with our friend ty"; "tell her to meet u [sic] at Dartmouth at 4"; "im [sic] sure his roomie would love to join too") our friend ty"; "tell her to meet u [sic] at Dartmouth at 4"; "im [sic] sure his roomie would love to join too").

Despite denying engaging in such behavior within their Answers to the Sworn Tenure Charges and Answers to Interrogatories, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber conceded, through their testimony, that their comments towards Ms. Bleekinger were inappropriate. Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt stated, "[d]id I make inappropriate comments about [Ms. Bleekinger]? Yes, I would agree they were inappropriate, yes."

With regard to the comments made by Ms. Weber, Ms. Weber conceded, "it wasn't right and

[2] An implication that Ms. Bleekinger is a lesbian.

I've apologized a million times." Conversely, the record is devoid of any concession of remorse by Ms. Lechelt with regard to the specific comments she directed towards Ms. Bleekinger during the Group Chat.

Regardless of Respondent's testimony, even a cursory review of the portions of the Transcript directed towards Ms. Bleekinger illustrate that same is inappropriate for teachers to partake in during school hours and through the District's computer network. Further, whether or not Ms. Bleekinger observed the comments directed towards her is immaterial. The record is clear – the Board's administration, Ms. Battista (the only Board employee to view the chat) and the general public found the comments directed towards Ms. Bleekinger to be inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature. Thus, the Board has provided sufficient evidence to sustain this Charge.

Count 6 of Charge I alleges that the Respondents made disgusting, offensive and inappropriate sexual comments among themselves and about each other. Respondents, throughout the Group Chat, made consistent comments between each other about Mr. Van Pelt enjoying, preferring and/or engaging in anal sex – i.e., use of word "backchannel." Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt discussed masturbating, particularly in school and during the training session. In fact, the clear implication from their conversation was that Mr. Van Pelt had excused himself from the Training to masturbate in the restroom. Mr. Van Pelt made multiple references to the act of oral sex – i.e., eating chicken, as well as a flippant comment about him being a "lesbian". Ms. Lechelt stated emphatically that she "loves" when Respondents ask her to "blow" them. Finally, the inappropriateness of Respondents' exchange is encapsulated by Ms. Weber's admission that the conversation is "so beautifully filthy" and "it always is when tvp is chatting."

Without question, such comments were graphically sexual, offensive, discriminatory, harassing and inappropriate to Ms. Battisa, Ms. DeLuca, Dr. O'Malley and the general public. Such commentary simply has no place inside of a school building. Thus, the Board has established that Respondents, with respect to this Charge, have engaged in unbecoming conduct.

Charge II alleges that Respondents engaged in unbecoming conduct during the training session when they caused a disruption by preventing Ms. Batista from participating in the training.

The record evidence demonstrates that Ms. Battista, upon viewing portions of the Group Chat, became offended, was unable to focus and was effectively forced to leave the training to report the misconduct she observed Respondents partake in. In fact, Respondents' conduct prevented Ms. Battista from learning the content of the training. Thus, Ms. Battista was unprepared to use Engrade with her students and/or to teach the Engrade program to her team members and/or student teachers.

Respondents' defense to this Charge is entirely misplaced.[3] More specifically, Respondents, through their testimony, failed to address the actual disruption to Ms. Battista (which was alleged in Charge II of the each of the Sworn Tenure Charges), while attempting to divert this Tribunal's attention to the lack of general disruption. Importantly, however, the Board did not charge Respondents with causing a general disruption to the Training as the Group Chat was only observed by one person and thus, logically, only could have disrupted one person – Alysia Battista.

Merrian's Webster Dictionary defines disruption as follows: to cause (something) to be unable to continue in the normal way; to interrupt the normal progress or activity of (something).

[3]Mr. Waldman asserts that "the charges themselves . . . point to a much more general disruption and, in fact, they say that the harassment was public." 3T 131:20-24. However, such a statement is not accurate, as this Charge states, in relevant part, that "by taking part in a group chat through Today's Meet, which was –in part – about Alysia Battista, visible to Alysia Battista and highly offensive to her, Ms. Battista was unable to focus and was effectively forced to leave the training . . ." B-3. The Board did not charge "general disruption."

Here, without question, Respondents' Group Chat resulted in a situation where Ms. Battista was unable to continue with the Training in the normal way. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Respondents disrupted the Engrade Training.

As a consequence of Respondents' partaking in a 2 ½ hour group chat, they failed to pay attention to the training . The Board has established by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents, as a result of their participation in a 2.5-hour conversation during the Training, failed to sufficiently pay attention to the content and/or presentation of the Engrade materials.

The Board had an expectation that all teachers present at the Training, or any professional development training for that matter, would pay attention to the entirety of the instructional presentation and refrain from engaging in ancillary and unrelated conduct. Respondents' conduct fell far short of the foregoing expectation.

The transcript of the Chat proves that it lasted for 2.5 hours. Mr. Van Pelt made his first comment at 8:54AM and his last comment at 11:23AM. Similarly, Ms. Lechelt made her first comment at 8:54AM and her last at 11:24AM. B-13. Finally, Ms. Weber made her first comment at 8:58AM and her last comment at 11:24AM. B-13. Between 8:54AM and 10:49AM, the longest period of time in between comments was only 4 minutes, on two separate occasions. Both Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber testified that they spent as much as 15-20 minutes participating in the chat. Ms. Lechelt did not attempt to quantify her participation in the chat.

Regardless of the self-serving estimates set forth by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber, even if each Respondent only spent 15-20 minutes participating in the chat (or the length of time it took them to type the comments they admitted to making into the chat), they failed to pay attention, or at the least, refrain from engaging in unrelated activity – by their own admission – throughout the entirety of the Training. Thus, the Board has sustained this Charge against all Respondents.

As to Charge III, on October 23, 2014, during the Training, Respondents participated in an inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing and offensive chat through the District's computer Network and District's computers. The chat was not the result of any educational and/or instructional requirements or necessities. Thus, it constituted a misuse of the District's computer network.

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, states – in relevant part – that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)/computers for illegal, inappropriate or obscene purposes, or in support of such activities . . . Inappropriate activities are defined as those that violate the intended use of the network(s) . . . ; and (3) using the computer network(s) in a manner that: engages in other activities that do not advance the education purposes for which computer network(s)/computers are provided."

Here Ms. Weber agreed that her conduct constituted a misuse of the District's network. Similarly, Ms. Lechelt grudgingly conceded that her participation in the Group Chat did not enhance any educational purposes. Only Mr. Van Pelt refused to acknowledge same by steadfastly arguing that the Group Chat, which provided an infusion of humor to the Training, enhanced the Respondents' learning capacity.

While Mr. Van Pelt's lack of credibility will be addressed in greater detail below, suffice it to say that Mr. Van Pelt's claim surely does not overcome the Board's proofs coupled with the other Respondents' concessions. Initially, Mr. Van Pelt set up the Group Chat and invited the other Respondents and Mr. Bauza to his "personal wiseass backchannel discussion." Clearly, the name he chose for the Group Chat depicts his true intentions for the chats direction and content – i.e., inappropriate.

Next, an objective review of the content of the chat illustrates that same was wholly inappropriate in relation to Board Policy 3321 and entirely unrelated to the educational purposes of the Training. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the admissions of Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Weber that they misused the district network must be similarly attributed to Mr. Van Pelt, as his conduct during same was at least as egregious as the other two Respondents.

Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in proving that Respondents misused the District's computer network, constituting unbecoming conduct.

Charge IV indicates that Respondents' conduct during the training session violated several district policies. In September 2014, Respondents executed "Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications Forms." B-17, 18 and 19. These forms indicate, "employees are expected to review and become familiar with all Board policies and regulations" and further, directs employees to the web address where same can be found. In fact, Respondents all acknowledged that the policies and regulations are on the Board's website and agreed to "conform to the requirements of the policies and regulations of the Edison Township Board of Education."

Additionally, Article III(B), Board Policies, of the controlling CBA states, in relevant part, that: (1) all Board of Education policies will be upheld and enforced by all Board employees who are party to this Agreement, as well as by all Administrators, Principals, and Supervisors; and (2) all Board of Education policies will be available for review in the office of the principal, school library, and the Association office.

Thus, regardless of whether or not Respondent's actually adhered to their obligations to familiarize themselves with and abide by all Board policies and regulations, their affirmative obligation to do same undercuts any efforts by Respondents to argue that they were unaware of certain policy requirements that they disregarded. More simply put, in considering whether or not Respondents violated Board Policies as alleged in the Sworn Tenure Charges against them, this Tribunal must find that they were familiar with all Board Policies and aware of their obligations pursuant to same.

Pursuant to Counts 1, 2 and 3 of Charge IV, Respondents are charged with violating the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies. More specifically, Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, requires the Board to implement and "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in the policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education."

Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[t]he Board of Education recognizes that an employee's right to freedom from employment discrimination includes the opportunity to work in an environment untainted by sexual harassment." Said Policy further provides that "[s]exually offensive speech and conduct are wholly inappropriate to the harmonious employment relationships necessary to the operation of the school district and intolerable in a workplace which the children of this district are exposed." Sexual harassment includes all "verbal or physical contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender. When such inappropriate conduct is "severe and pervasive" and has the effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint. Finally, employees are put on notice through Policy 3362 that should they be found guilty of sexual harassment, they will be subject to discipline which may include termination.

Though Respondents were not charged with violating New Jersey's sexual harassment laws, Respondents sought to interject the more stringent standards of same into this matter in an effort to defend the Board's allegations. Respectfully, any comparison of the Respondents' conduct to New Jersey Law is not relevant and/or appropriate, as Respondents were not charged with violating state law.

However, to the extent this Tribunal disagrees with the Board's interpretation of the Sworn Charges, the Board contends Respondents have, in fact, violated New Jersey Law, as established by the New Jersey Supreme Court. Lehman v. Toys R Us, Inc., 132 N.J. 587, 603-604 (1993)(a four part test must be considered in determining whether or not sexual harassment has occurred: (1) the complained of conduct would not have occurred but for the employee's gender; and (2) was severe or pervasive enough; (3) to make a reasonable woman believe that (4) the conditions of employment are altered and the working environment is hostile or abusive).

Here, the credible record evidence is clear and convincing – Respondents violated the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies. Ms. Battista, based on the portions of the transcript she saw, believed that Respondents – at least in part - were talking about her (i.e., she observed a comment about somebody in red, and assumed it was a reference to her because she was wearing a red sweater; and she saw a reference about someone "scratching their lips", which Ms. Battista tends to do when she gets upset and was doing during the Group Chat). More specifically, but without limitation, Ms. Battista observed and recalled the following commentary between Respondents: reference to a "short bus" - a demeaning reference to the mode of transportation for special education students; the size of male genitalia; use of the word "dick"; comments about being a "virgin"; describing the trainer as a lesbian, with a reference to a rainbow; "blow me" – "how do you think I got my job"; "men who are like 'turtles'". As a result of Respondents' conduct, Ms. Battista was unable to concentrate and was prevented from learning the content of the training – i.e., Respondents altered and interfered with Ms. Battista's work performance and created an intimidating, hostile, and offensive working environment.

Further, the severity and pervasiveness of Respondent's 2.5 hour chat is borne from Ms. Battista's reaction at the time she observed same, Ms. Battista's demeanor during her testimony when she broke down in tears because she remains upset with the content of Respondent's chat and the testimony and conclusions of Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley.

Ms. DeLuca, an experienced affirmative action coordinator/investigator, determined that Respondents' comments during the Today's Meet Group Chat included: (1) explicit and graphic references to sexual acts and sexual sayings; (2) references and imaginations regarding a sexual relationship between Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Bleekinger; (3) comments concerning Ms. Bleekinger's sexual preferences – i.e., the suggestion that she is a lesbian; (4) inexcusable and insulting comments about special education/handicap students; (5) demeaning comments about other persons present in the training, including their sexual orientation and/or age; and (6) inappropriate, insulting and unfounded comments concerning Dr. O'Malley's physical appearance and hiring/promotion practices.

Ultimately, Ms. DeLuca concluded that the related Board Policies were violated because Respondents' verbal attack on females, elderly persons, lesbians and students with disabilities created a hostile and offensive working environment for Alysia Battista.[1] Respectfully, the record would not support any alternative finding by this Tribunal.

Importantly, Respondents' efforts to attack the credibility of Ms. Battista by categorizing her as both unreasonable and atypical are unavailing. Initially, common sense must prevail.

Regardless of Respondents' self-serving and rehearsed definitions/meanings for the various phrases used throughout the transcript, this Tribunal must evaluate same based on the meaning the general public would have, and since has, attributed to such relevant statements – that they are disgusting, sexually offensive, insulting, demeaning, and discriminating on their face. Further, to the extent this Tribunal is convinced that Respondents' efforts to apply the "reasonable person standard" to Ms. Battista are appropriate, which the Board remains steadfastly opposed to, the Board argues that said standard has been satisfied – both Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley corroborated the reasonableness of her reaction to Respondents' Group Chat.

Thus, to categorize Ms. Battista's reaction to Respondents' commentary as "unreasonable" would be to implicitly identify such comments as acceptable. Moreover, the Board would be remiss to fail to point out the hypocrisy of Respondents' argument – i.e., Respondents, in one breath, ask this tribunal to find that Ms. Battista's reaction to Respondents' comments was atypical or unreasonable, while in the other breath, argue that their "reaction" to Ms. Bleekinger's well accepted categorizations/classifications of special education students (i.e., "low") was normal and a legitimate excuse to their behavior. Respondents' attempt to deflect this Tribunal's attention from their conduct, by yet again attacking Ms. Battista's person, should not be overlooked. The overwhelming record evidence illustrates that Respondents' conduct violated the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies.

[1] Respondents' argument that the chat was not severe and pervasive because it only affected Ms. Battista is unavailing and disingenuous. Ms. Battista was the only employee to have viewed the chat during the chat. Thus, same should not serve as a mitigating factor in support of Respondents' case.

Count 4 and 5 of Charge IV asserts that Respondents violated Board Policy 3211 and Board Policy 3281. The Code of Ethics policy states in relevant part that the educator "shall not intentionally expose the pupil to embarrassment or disparagement." Further, Policy 3211 requires that the "educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons."

Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, indicates, in relevant part, "staff members have the public's trust and confidence to protect the well-being of all pupils attending the school district." Policy 3281 further requires that "school staff's conduct in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all times. School staff shall not make inappropriate comments . . . about pupils." B-23.

The foregoing policies hold Board employees to the highest degree of morality and professional standards. Similarly, they confer expectations on Board employees to safeguard the trust and confidence conferred upon them by the public. However, Respondent's voluntary and willful conduct during the October 23, 2014 Group Chat, along with the content of said chat, constituted a grave lack of professional judgment and a breach in the trust attributed to these teachers by both the Board and the general public. More specifically, the 2.5-hour conversation between the Respondents, with no instructional/educational purpose, during an important Professional Development Training (a professional responsibility) was highly inappropriate and a drastic deviation from the administration's expectations for its employees to embrace the Engrade program and/or act with a certain level of respect and commitment during any professional development training.

Further, the content of same, specifically the derogatory references by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt about their special education / handicap students leapt across all bounds of decency. Perhaps most importantly, as a result of the words documented by Respondents, the young impressionable students (and their parents) previously assigned to Mr. Van Pelt and or Ms. Lechelt, at any time during the employment of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, are forced to wonder which hurtful and derogatory grouping they were assigned to by their respective teacher. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Respondents' conduct violated Board Policies 3211 and 3281.

Count 6 refers to Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, which states, in relevant part, "employees [must] interact with each other with dignity and respect . . . Repeated malicious conduct of any employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile or offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment." Policy 3351 defines unacceptable conduct as conduct that constitutes the "use of derogatory remarks; insults; verbal . . . conduct that a reasonable person would find threatening, intimidating or humiliating. A single act of such conduct shall not constitute the unacceptable conduct prohibited by this policy unless it is especially severe and egregious."

Here, once again, the Board has sustained its burden in proving that Respondents have violated this Policy. By their own admission, the overall content of the Group Chat contained interactions devoid of both dignity and respect – e.g., graphic and vulgar sexual comments concerning Mr. Van Pelt's desires with respect to Ms. Bleekinger; derogatory and insulting comments about Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's student groupings and special education students in general; baseless insulting and defamatory remarks about Dr. O'Malley's appearance and hiring/firing/promotional practices; derogatory and insulting remarks about woman, lesbians, elderly persons. B-13. Further, the Group Chat by Respondent's lasted 2.5 hours, encompassed 16 pages of a transcript and contained 318 separate comments, making the foregoing malicious conduct repeated conduct. B-13.

Finally, notwithstanding Respondents' unjustified and desperate claims that Ms. Battista is not a reasonable person and/or did not have a reasonable reaction to the content of the Group Chat, Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley certainly found Respondents' conduct hostile, offensive and humiliating as well. In reality, even a cursory review of the public comments associated with any of the printed news articles related to Respondents' conduct illustrates that the general public also finds the content of Respondents' Group Chat hostile, offensive and humiliating. Thus, without question, the Board has also satisfied the reasonable person element of this Policy.

Credibility is the value that the fact finder gives to the testimony of a witness. It contemplates an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Credible testimony must proceed from the mouth of the credible witness and must be such as common experience, knowledge and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. The Board cites judicial case law in this regard.

case; (2) witness' recollection; (3) ability to know what he/she was talking about; (4) contradictions or changes in testimony; (5) demeanor; (6) whether or not testimony makes sense; (7) reasonableness of testimony when considered in the light of other evidence. See, NJ Model Civil Jury Charge. Additionally, New Jersey law permits a fact finder to reject the entirety of a witness's testimony if a determination is made that the witness deliberately lied on any fact significant to the decision in the case.

Initially, all Respondents' display of remorse during the Hearing was incredible as the Board exposed the same glaring contradictions made by each Respondent. Respondents attempted to illustrate, through their testimony, remorse for their behavior during the Training. However, the authenticity of such remorse, only displayed to the person responsible for deciding their fate, after undergoing hours of preparation with their counsels, must certainly be undermined by the Respondents conduct (i.e., lack of remorse) during their suspension meetings with Dr. O'Malley, November 11, 2014 interviews with Ms. DeLuca, Sworn Answers to the Tenure Charges and Answers to Interrogatories.

Notwithstanding the lone admissions of making the comments in the Transcript, as well as other various innocuous admissions, Respondents uniformly and consistently denied the remaining substantive allegations made by the Board in the Sworn Tenure Charges. Id. Therefore, the weight given to Respondents' staged showing of remorse during the Hearing, must certainly be weighed in light of their failure to exhibit the same remorse when meeting with Dr. O'Malley and Ms. DeLuca, filing their Answers to the Charges and serving their Answers to the Board's Interrogatories. Such behavior by the Respondents bolsters the Board's assertion that Respondent's were only sorry they got caught, but not sorry for what they had done.

Next, Respondents' efforts to assert an expectation of privacy in defense of their actions during the Group Chat is unreasonable based on the record and the law – i.e., Board Policy 3321 expressly denies Board employees of any expectation of privacy when using the district's network; pursuant to state and federal law, when something is exposed to the public view, such as this Group Chat, same is not protected by an reasonable expectation of privacy. Thus, Respondents' efforts to push such an illogical argument/defense on this Tribunal illustrate Respondents' lack of credibility.

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's lack of credibility is further borne from the unreasonableness of their defense to the Charge alleging that they made inappropriate comments directed towards special education / handicap students – i.e., that their perceived anger towards Ms. Bleekinger's direction to label a group of students "low" triggered their barrage of insulting and demeaning commentary.[2] This argument is irrational because: (1) the district's Assistant Superintendent / Director of Special Services informed Ms. DeLuca that the use of the designation "low" is an acceptable norm; (2) all Respondent's acknowledged and accepted the District's practice, as well as the nationwide practice, of using various tests that ultimately label the students as "low", "very low" and "average"; and (3) not one of the Respondents confronted Ms. Bleekinger during the Training about her student designations or raised a concern with the administration with regard to their accepted use of such offensive tests/terms.

When engaging in credibility determinations related to each Respondent, it should not be lost on this Tribunal that all of the Respondents, rather than simply take ownership for their conduct, blamed and attacked others (i.e., Ms. Bleekinger and Ms. Battista), for causing these grown teachers to act in the manner they chose to act. More specifically, the notions that Ms. Bleekinger's use of a uniformly accepted student classification; or that Ms. Bleekinger was inadequately prepared for the presentation; or that Ms. Battista was a "peeping tom" with the intention of bringing trouble upon the Respondents are so ostensibly absurd that the credibility of the persons making such statements must be gauged against the lunacy of same. In other words, a credible witness/person would not make such arguments.

Thus, the Board submits that this record is replete with reasons that should cause this Tribunal pause when considering whether Respondents provided credible testimony.

As a point of legal argument, the Board asserts that Respondents had no right to privacy when engaging in the Group Chat during the October 23, 2014 training session. Throughout this process, have asserted that they had a good faith belief that the Group Chat was private. More specifically, in concert, Respondents argued that if the chat rooms were open to the public, student privacy concerns under FERPA and state law would be triggered. However, Respondents' efforts to assert an expectation of privacy in defense of their actions during the Training are unavailing, as both the record and the law are fatal to such a defense. In fact, said argument is so suspect that it does nothing more than bolster the Board's assertion that Respondents are not remorseful for their conduct – i.e., despite the baselessness of the claim, Respondents have conspired to stick with the defense through the resolution of this matter.

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers And Resources by Teaching Staff Members, states – in relevant part – that "[t]he Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Further, every District employee is aware that there is no expectation of privacy when using the District's computer network, and there is no program and/or policy that trumps same. More specifically, Respondents were actually informed during Today's Meet training that the program was not private.

Here, Respondents all executed "Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications" Form, within which Respondents agreed to review and conform to all Board Policies. More importantly, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber acknowledged reviewing and being familiar with the Board's Acceptable Use Policy, along with the Board's right to monitor their network activity. Simply put, there is no way the Board could have been more explicit with the reality that employees do not enjoy any expectation of privacy when using the District's network.

FERPA is a Federal Law that controls the disclosure of personally identifiable information from an eligible student's education records to a third party unless the eligible student has provided written consent. The applicable statute defines education records as those records, files, documents and other materials which: (1) contain information directly related to a student; and (2) are maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a person acting for such agency or institution. Importantly, without dispute, the Group Chat did not contain and/or reference specific students or information directly related to specific students. Further, the Board does not maintain the Group Chats and/or transcripts of the Chats, and there is simply no reason for Respondents to have thought otherwise. Thus, Respondents' efforts to grasp on to the protections of FERPA, despite the record evidencing that FERPA's application is unjustified, is merely an act of desperation.

A person cannot assert an expectation of privacy with regard to something exposed to the public view. There is no liability under the tort of invasion of privacy for observing a plaintiff or even taking his photograph while he or she is walking on a public highway, since he or she is not then in seclusion, and his or her appearance is public and open to the public eye. These premises are supported by judicial case law.

Here the record evidence is clear. Ms. Battista observed the conversation and identified the web address by viewing Ms. Lechelt's computer screen during a Training session. In fact, all Respondents engaged in the Group Chat on their computers in a room filled with thirty to forty other persons, with the screens open and on their desks for a two and a half hour period, during which they all, at one point or another, stood up and walked around, while not closing their computer screens. Had Respondents desired to avail themselves to an expectation of privacy, they surely would have found a way to be more discreet during the Group Chat. Thus, Respondent's expectation of privacy defense is contrary to well-established law. In fact, in the event this Tribunal feels compelled to give any deference to Respondents' FERPA based privacy argument – to which the Board contends none is warranted – Respondents' cavalier participation in the Group Chat during a training, visible to other members of the public, must trump any FERPA privacy considerations.

As to the charges serves on Respondents, the record confirms that the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents are guilty of conduct unbecoming, insubordination and/or other just cause warranting dismissal. The infractions established in the record evidence cut to the core of Respondents' fitness to continue to teach. Unlike labor arbitration, this Tribunal's decision regarding any potential penalty must be first and foremost concerned with the welfare of students, not the employment rights of Respondent. There is ample, longstanding precedent for this proposition in the body of School Law in New Jersey that has developed over the last several decades, as well in the growing number of Tenure Hearing arbitral decisions under the recently revised Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TeachNJ Act").

With respect to just cause, in evaluating whether an employer has just cause to discipline an employee, Arbitrators follow guidelines similar to those utilized in Enterprise Wire Co., 46 LA 359, 363-64 (1966); Grief Brothers Cooperage Corp., 42 LA 555, 558 (1964). Consequently, it has been held that the employer should satisfy the conditions set forth in the above cases in order to prove "just cause" for the disciplining the employee.

The "inherent duties of a public employee include compliance with all reasonable rules and regulations, and duties arising from a fiduciary relationship to the public and from such duties as arise by the nature of the office held." Unless the penalty is unreasonable, arbitrary or offensively excessive under all of the circumstances, it should be permitted to stand. These statements have been well established by New Jersey courts.

Moreover, recent case law suggests that progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question because some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. For example, in American Arbitration Association Decision, 2010 AAA LEXIS 439, Arbitrator Renovitch acknowledged that extremely serious offenses usually justify the enforcement of a discharge.

The holding that dismissal was warranted in the cited case resulted from a Grievant failing to perform an end-of-run check, which resulted in a sleeping student being left on her school bus. In that case, the arbitrator enforced a summary dismissal. Arbitrators Tener, Dichter and Simon enforced summary dismissals in other cases that reflected other fact patterns.

Moreover, since the implementation of the TeachNJ Act, Arbitrators have dismissed teachers for engaging in inappropriate conduct that has reflected poorly on both the teacher and the school district. The cited decisions were all issued since 2012.

In anticipation of the cases Respondents will likely seek to rely upon to argue that their dismissal is not warranted in this matter, the Board asserts same are readily and easily distinguishable from the matter at bar based on discrepancies in fact and proofs.

Here, the just cause conditions have been satisfied: namely, Respondents were forewarned prior to the Group Chat that dismissal could result from misusing the District's computer network and violating various Board Polices and standards of expected behavior. Respondents conduct on October 23, 2014 violated established Board Policy and any reasonable expectations of employee conduct; Respondents' conduct was investigated fully; substantial evidence, including Respondents' acknowledgments of wrongdoing, admissions and a copy of the actual transcript, were obtained; and termination was reasonably related to the seriousness of Respondents' offenses (i.e., the duration and wholly inappropriate nature of the conversation, coupled with the grave lack of judgment displayed by Respondents) and the Respondents' past record. Specifically, Respondents' conduct with respect to the group chat, without the consideration of progressive discipline, rose above and beyond the level of egregiousness necessary for dismissal.

Accordingly, satisfaction of the just cause standard, along with the arbitral precedents, must result in the termination of Respondents. Their acts are egregious on their face. In fact, the totality of their conduct, and each specific charge considered alone, are more egregious than that deemed sufficient for dismissal in the above-cited precedents. Respondents violated board policies and the common decency expected of public school teachers, as illustrated in the record evidence, by misusing the District's network to mock, insult, harass and offend others (including special education students, the superintendent of schools, the Engrade Training presenter, females, older persons and each other), while creating a hostile and unhealthy work environment for the one person who openly observed same; continuing such conduct for a period of 2.5 hours during scheduled instructional time; failing to comprehend the seriousness of their conduct by constantly making excuses, placing the blame elsewhere and disingenuously declaring remorse only when face-to-face with the assigned arbitrator after being prepped by their counsel as to what this tribunal wants to hear; and, in the case of Mr. Van pelt, admitting to masturbating on school property.

Respondents showed a complete lack of concern for the parents and students of the Edison Township School District, and a callous sense of desperation by attempting to attack and demonize the VICTIM – Ms. Battista (e.g., referring to her as a "peeping Tom", claiming that she went out of her way to discover their chat and ultimately blaming her for the trouble and embarrassment now endured).

The record, as discussed and documented above, clearly illustrates that Respondents recognize a large portion of their conduct was inappropriate.[1] Specifically, Respondents concede, for the most part, that they misused the District's network and made regrettable comments about other persons and classifications of persons

It is well established in case law that the term "unbecoming conduct" is a broadly defined, elastic term, encompassing any conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and competence in the operation of public services. In hearings similar to this one, arbitrators have determined that conduct unbecoming a teacher has been found to include a broad range of behavior that impacts a teacher's ability to perform his duties or otherwise renders him unfit to have the responsibility to care for children. In this matter, Respondents have unmistakably breached the public trust placed in their position as teachers.

[1] Importantly, it should not be lost on this tribunal that Respondents testified to same, despite their prior submissions denying any misconduct.

Based on the foregoing, Maria Weber has failed to satisfy the standards of a profession predicated on public trust and respect. Her misconduct goes to the heart of her character and fitness.

CONTENTIONS OF RESPONDENT

Respondent argued as follows;

Maria Weber (hereinafter "Ms. Weber" or "Respondent") has been recognized as an outstanding Special Education Teacher within the Edison Township School District receiving consistent "accomplished" and "distinguished" evaluative ratings. Ms. Weber's Principal Lynda Zapoticzny (hereinafter "Zapoticzny") in writing a letter on behalf of Ms. Weber, that was part of Respondent's Answer in this proceeding referred, in part, to Ms. Weber being "...the kind of professional who constantly seeks out best practices and new interventions that may lead to success for her students, even if it is just one who will benefit. Maria is willing to take on whatever comes her way for the greater good of the children of the school community".

It is uncontroverted that Ms. Weber was involved in the chat activity that took place on October 23, 2014 at which time Ms. Weber attended a voluntary Engrade training session at the Board's administrative offices. Ms. Weber, who was a novice regarding the use of social media sites, agreed to be a participant in a chat within the Today's Meet website that she viewed, based on information that had been previously provided to her, to be a private chat that was not accessible to anyone who was not specifically invited to be a participant and who did not know the applicable "room number" to be a participant in the chat room activity.

The Today's Meet website emphasized the privacy rights of the participants. Moreover, the recommendation of Edison Township School District personnel that the Today's Meet website be used in a supplemental curriculum capacity indicated, in part, that the Board recognized that there were FERPA implications involving student notes and comments that could be a part of any Today's Meet chat activity, substantiating the chat participants' understanding that they were involved in a private chat room.

It is undisputed that Ms. Weber did not make any negative comments about classified students or any students in general. Moreover, it was stipulated that Ms. Weber did not make any critical comments about any supervisors or administrators employed within the Edison Township School District. There were no inappropriate comments addressed to any School District teachers by the Respondent aside from jocular jibes directed primarily at one of the other participants in the chat.

It was equally uncontroverted that, despite the Board of Education's tenure charge allegations to the contrary, there was absolutely no disruption of the training session. Out of the approximately 25 teachers who were interviewed as part of the Board of Education's investigation prior to the proffering of the tenure charges at issue only one teacher, Alysia Battista (hereinafter "Ms. Battista"), alleged that there was any disruption regarding the training session.

Ms. Weber testified concerning her full participation in numerous interactive activities as part of the Engrade training program, both independently and collaboratively with her fellow 4th grade teachers. The Respondent, in part, asked "Presenter" Sara Bleekinger, during the course of the training program, specific questions that were responded to.

Throughout the entire investigatory process and throughout the arbitration hearing itself, Ms. Weber was consistently apologetic and remorseful.

One of the foundational principles in evaluating what punishment should be assessed, assuming that it is determined that Ms. Weber engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher, is to consider the applicable administrative and judicial decisions in this State applying the principle of progressive discipline.

Applying that progressive disciplinary policy mandates the conclusion that Ms. Weber should be the beneficiary of the application of progressive discipline principles. For over fifteen years in the Edison Township School District, Ms. Weber's record was unblemished, wherein she consistently received excellent evaluations.

Ms. Weber's participation in the chat does require a penalty, however, it is averred that the penalty should be a minimal one for a teacher who has provided consistently exemplary service for such a lengthy period of time and who was apologetic since "day one" concerning her involvement in a chat that she viewed related exclusively to private activity wherein her remarks, that Ms. Weber acknowledged were inappropriate, were almost exclusively limited to mocking remarks addressed to a former co-teacher, Tyler Van Pelt.

The Fulcomer and just cause standards are the relevant standards to be applied in teacher tenure cases. The lead case in New Jersey regarding tenure charges that have been initiated by local Boards of Education concerning allegations of unbecoming conduct is In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967)

Under Fulcomer, the Arbitrator is asked to consider the following factors:

1. The potential impact of your decision on Respondent Maria Weber's teaching career;

2. The longevity of Ms. Weber's career;

3. Ms. Weber's overall teaching record;

4. Ms. Weber's teaching ability;

5. Whether there was an absence of prior discipline;

6. Whether there was an absence of past increment discipline affecting Ms. Weber during her employment;

7. The nature and gravity of the offenses under all of the circumstances involved;

8. Evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation; and

9. Any harm or injurious effect which Ms. Weber's conduct may have had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

The Fulcomer standards have been periodically "tweaked" in other Commissioner of Education decisions and by the courts. Factors which have previously been taken into account in making penalty determinations include (1) the nature and gravity of the offenses under all of the circumstances involved; (2) the teacher's attitude - i.e., whether the acts were premeditated, cruel or done with intent to punish; (3) any evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation; (4) any harm or injurious effect which the teacher's conduct may have had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system; and (5) the likelihood of such behavior recurring. Under the TEACHNJ Act, arbitrators have consistently applied the Fulcomer tests and several arbitrators have also considered the often cited seven tests of "just cause" that have historically been applied

Encompassed within the Fulcomer standards, and as part of the just cause tests summarized above, is the need to consider principles of progressive discipline in fashioning remedies in cases in which an arbitrator has determined that at least one act of "conduct unbecoming" has been proven by the Board of Education. The New Jersey courts have observed that progressive discipline is to be used to justify severe penalties or to mitigate penalties based on the absence of prior disciplines.

The Fulcomer tests, as well as the application of progressive discipline standards, as referenced above, will be applied in the following legal points in evaluating Respondent Maria Weber's conduct in this case.

When applying the Fulcomer principles it becomes clear that Ms. Weber's employment should not be terminated but that she receive a fair and proportionate punishment reflective of how similar offenses of other public employees have been treated in tenure charge proceedings. The Board of Education has argued that Ms. Weber and the other two Respondents in this consolidated proceeding, violated District affirmative action policies and that her conduct somehow amounted to sexual harassment.

Under New Jersey case law for "hostile environment" sexual harassment, and in consideration of the Board's own policies, the Board cannot successfully argue that, under all of the circumstances, Ms. Weber's conduct amounted to any form of sexual harassment. It is significant that the Board of Education did not even accuse Ms. Weber of directing any of her limited chat remarks towards Ms. Battista and failed to present a scintilla of evidence that there was any disruption in the Engrade training program and that there were any teachers, aside from Ms. Battista, who were fearful "of being harassed".

It is submitted that the only "offense" committed by Maria Weber related to her violation of the District's computer use policy when she logged onto a chat when, after the initial chat remarks, Ms. Weber agreed that this "backroom chat" did not address any educational related issues. For this violation Ms. Weber apologized profusely to District administrators and exhibited substantial remorse for her actions.

Assuming arguendo that the Board of Education's tenure charges could be construed as even alleging that Maria Weber engaged in a violation of the Board's Sexual Harassment, and/or Healthy Workplace Environment policies, when the Board of Education did not even include any allegations that any of Ms. Weber's limited comments were directed at Ms. Battista or, in fact, at any one other than the participants in the chat, the facts in this matter establish that the conduct at issue was "neither severe nor pervasive".

Regarding the issue of "pervasiveness" the record established that only Alysia Battista and one other teaching staff member Angie McKenna were even aware of the existence of the chat. Regarding the issue of "unreasonable interference" with work, the record clearly established how atypical Ms. Battista's reaction was.

The record established, consistent with the statements of Ms. McKenna, that Ms. Battista appeared to be "consumed" by the chat and took out her I-Phone, moved to her left, leaned forward towards Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Lechelt's computer, aimed her I-Phone at Ms. Lechelt's computer screen, zoomed in on the screen and took a series of pictures because of Ms. Battista's unsubstantiated belief that the chat participants were talking about her. No other teaching staff member advised Margaret DeLuca, the District's Affirmative Action Officer, that there was any disruption in the training program.

In consideration of the above, it is clear, as determined by the Board itself in the drafting the tenure charges that Maria Weber did not sexually harass Ms. Battista or anyone else.

There was no evidence presented by the Board of Education to indicate that Ms. Weber's continued employment within the Edison School District had or will have any negative effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

While Board witnesses Margaret DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley testified that they did not feel comfortable returning Ms. Weber to her position because the Board had supposedly received certain complaints about the participants in the chat room, the Board did not present any written evidence that could establish that there would be any problem raised by parents, or members of the Edison Township community, if Ms. Weber continued to be employed, in consideration of her outstanding reputation within the District.

A review of several recent TEACHNJ arbitration awards that related to the use of Board computers and social media sites, wherein teachers were charged with "conduct unbecoming" that was substantially more egregious and serious than the conduct attributed to Maria Weber, that did not result in the termination of the teachers at issue, substantially supports Ms. Weber's argument that her limited involvement in the chat room activity, with none of her remarks addressed to any District students, administrators or supervisors or teaching staff members, aside from those participants in what she viewed to be a private chat room, does not justify termination or a long term suspension.

A review of many tenure charge cases decided by the Commissioner of Education prior to the TEACHNJ Legislation involving the criminal acts of teaching staff members, as well as numerous acts of unbecoming conduct, in many instances as part of a pattern of disciplinary actions taken against the affected teachers, further supports the Respondent's contentions regarding the extent of any penalty that is imposed on her.

A review of all of the cases reviewed mandates the conclusion that not only is termination not warranted in this matter, no long term suspension is required as well.

Ms. Weber's decision not to exit the chat room when she realized that the backchannel discussion only briefly referred to the Engrade instruction should not warrant the 120 day suspensions assessed against teachers Ciripompa, Buglovsky, Boyle and Dzownar imposed by other arbitrators!

If there had not been inappropriate remarks made by the other chat participants about special education students (taken out of context but still made) and the Superintendent of Schools would tenure charges have been filed against the Respondents at all? Very unlikely!! The Board of Education would probably have only withheld the increments of the "chat participants" for one year, with no suspension sought, if the chat only referred to jocular comments addressed at a colleague's imaginary flirtation with the training presenter.

Since Maria Weber did not make any negative remarks at all about District students, administrators or teachers not involved in the chat one can argue that, in consideration of the Fulcomer standards and the seven tests of "just cause", the imposition of a sixty day suspension without pay; i.e. a $20,000 loss in salary, although excessive, still represents a measured, reasonable penalty.

Relevant case law as well as a review of the Fulcomer standards, establish that a teacher's expressions of remorse are often positively referred to whether the "trier of fact" was an Administrative Law Judge or an Arbitrator. A teacher's arrogant dismissal of the tenure charges, along with a refusal to acknowledge culpability would tend to support a local board of education's assertion that the behavior at issue was not aberrant and that the conduct that was the subject of the tenure charges could be repeated in the future. However, not every arbitrator has considered the "lack of remorse" to be a dispositive consideration in the assessment of a penalty.

Maria Weber consistently expressed remorse for her actions in being a participant in the October 23, 2014 chat activity. She apologized from the time that she first met with her building Principal, prior to her meeting with the Superintendent of Schools on October 27, 2014.

As the Arbitrator you were able to observe Ms. Weber's demeanor during the course of her testimony and saw how passionate she has always been about teaching. Her remorse was genuine -- she had let her students, co-workers and supervisors down and had compromised her own values, by participating at all in the chat room.

There is no dispute that Maria Weber engaged in a single act of unbecoming conduct when she participated in the chat on October 23, 2014, regardless of her limited involvement in that chat and the absence of any negative remarks addressed to special education students within the District or to any students at all, or to any District supervisor or administrator, or to any teacher in attendance during the training session aside from the teachers who were also active participants in the chat. Her conduct did violate the District's Acceptable Use of Computer Network Policy.

However, the focus of the Board of Education's investigation was on the Battista sexual harassment claims. For the reasons set forth earlier in this Brief, it is averred that there was not a scintilla of evidence presented to establish that Ms. Weber engaged in any conduct that was prohibited by the District's Sexual Harassment or Affirmative Action policies.

The cited portion of Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, that was cited in the tenure charges filed against Ms. Weber refers to conduct, including the use of e-mails or social networking sites "...that is directed and/or available to pupils or for public display". Ms. Weber's participation in what she viewed to be a private chat room did not result in any communications that were readily available to pupils or for members of the public. The chat was not accessible to anyone who was not specifically invited to be a participant and who did not know the applicable "room number" to be a participant in the chat room activity. Had it not been for Alysia Battista's all consuming decision, during the course of the 2-1/2 hour training program, to limit herself to what became a surveillance operation designed to produce evidence of improper computer use, because of her incorrect perception that she was being singled out for criticism, no one who was not an active chat participant would have known anything about the statements that were made during the course of that chat!

The Board of Education even referred to a violation of Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, that requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a health workplace environment". It is averred that there again was no evidence produced that any "reasonable person" would have found the actions of Respondent to be hostile and offensive and certainly there was no evidence of "repeated malicious conduct".

The only "conduct unbecoming" charge that was proven in this matter was Respondent's one time violation of the District's computer use policy. The penalty for this violation should be fair and reasonable and again reflective of the Fulcomer standards.

As summarized in the earlier Points of this Post Hearing Brief, New Jersey case law has provided many examples of teachers who were charged with "conduct unbecoming" for engaging in conduct that was substantially more egregious and serious than Maria Weber's conduct yet, not only were they not terminated from their tenured positions but they generally received no more than 120 day suspensions without pay even in cases, such as the Ciripompa matter, wherein the arbitrator determined that there was no remorse shown by that respondent.

Maria Weber testified that for every 30 calendar days that she was suspended this would represent a $10,000 penalty, adversely affecting not only her but her entire family. The relevant cases certainly establish that a 120 calendar day suspension is not a "default remedy" to be imposed in every instance when termination is not warranted, regardless of the application of the Fulcomer standards and the seven tests of just cause.

It is respectfully submitted that the application of the Fulcomer tests to Maria Weber's conduct provides substantial reasons why a 60 day suspension without pay would be a fair and measured penalty amounting to a $20,000 loss in salary for gently chiding a former colleague of hers for his self deprecating remarks and his imaginary flirtation with the training Presenter that he knew he would never see again. Not only would a 60 day suspension without pay represent a very significant penalty for a teacher with a previous long term spotless record it should also be considered along with the significant devastating effect of Ms. Weber's removal from the classroom.

It is submitted that any greater penalty would be unnecessarily punitive and disproportionate to her conduct on the date in question.

OPINION

After considering the documentary and testimonial evidence, the undersigned concludes that Maria Weber is guilty of Charges I- Counts 1,2 IV- Counts 1,2, 4, 5, 6, 7 and V. Charges II, III, and IV-Count 3 and V are dismissed.

ANALYSIS OF THE CHARGES

The charges are arranged such that the numbered charges and specifications are preceded by a section entitled Background Common to All Charges. It would be appropriate to address that section before considering the numbered charges and specifications.

The bulk of this section deals with established Board policies. The cited policies concern sexual harassment (BX21), inappropriate staff conduct (BX23), the code of ethics (BX22), affirmative action (BX20), acceptable use of computer networks and computers (BX24) and a healthy workplace environment (BX25). The relevant Board Policy Numbers are 3362, 3281, 3211, 1140, 3321 and 3351 respectively.

On the theory that employees cannot be held accountable for the implementation of policies of which they were not put on notice, it is first essential to determine if and how the teachers employed by the Board knew of the existence of these policies and how they knew or should have known the substantive content of the policies.

The Board met its burden of demonstrating that the teachers acknowledged their knowledge of the existence of said policies, the manner in which they could secure copies of the policies and their agreement to review the policies and to abide by them. It did so by producing a document entitled Important Board Policies, Regulations and Mandated Communications Form. The record indicates that Respondent Weber executed this form on September 4, 2014 (BX19). Thus, she acknowledged that she was aware of the policies, that she would review them and conform to them.

In sum, Respondent Weber was on notice both procedurally and substantively of the Board's policies central to these charges. More important, she agreed to review the policies, to be conversant with the policies and to conduct herself in accordance with them.

It is well settled that employers are entitled to establish policies and work rules and to require employees to conform to them. This statement is true provided the employees are notified of the policies and rules. In this case, Respondent Weber acknowledged her responsibility to comply with them.

What is highly relevant here is that, under the circumstances, the failure to abide by the rules and policies is chargeable conduct. Since the failure to comply is chargeable, the Board is well within its rights to impose discipline on employees who are guilty of such breaches.

The second major component of Background Common to All Charges is a reference to a group chat on the Today's Meet website that was conducted through the District's computer network. The 2 ½ hour group chat was alleged to have taken place on October 23, 2014 during a professional development program that was called an Engrade Chromebook Training.

The District provides the teachers with laptop computers, Chromebooks. Thus, those participating in the group chat did so on District owned computers.

The record suggests that Engrade is a educational program employed by the District. The October 23, 2014 meeting was devoted to the program.

It is unchallenged that the Engrade meeting took place on October 23, 2014, that the group chat lasted (from beginning to end) 2 ½ hours and that Respondent Weber and approximately 25 other teachers were in attendance.

This section of Background Common to All Charges goes on to elaborate on the group chat and sets forth the allegedly unacceptable content of it. To the extent that these matters are included in the Charges and Specifications, they will be addressed below.

Charge I

This charge asserts that Respondent Weber's participation in the group chat rises to the level of unbecoming conduct and/or just cause. It alleges that Weber violated New Jersey law and Board policies, regulations and procedures concerning staff interactions. It charged that the chat room was public, was visible, accessible to other employees and students. It added that the chat room was offensive, discriminatory, rife with sexual innuendo and constituted a hostile work environment. This charge was the subject of two counts or specifications.

Count 1 concerned inappropriate comments about the Endgrade trainer, Sara Bleekinger. Weber was charged with a course of misconduct toward Ms. Bleekinger. It stated that the group chat was foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature. It cited the specific comments made by Weber during the group chat.

It should be stated that the group chat lasted for 2 ½ hours. It was downloaded from the computers and it was 16 pages in length (BX13). The text of Weber's comments were included in the charges served on her.

Eighteen of Weber's comments were listed in the charges. They were demeaning of Bleekinger and many had sexual overtones.

It must be noted that Weber's comments must be read in the context of comments made by other participants in the group chat. There were three main participants, Maria Weber, Maryellen Lechelt and Tyler Van Pelt. All of them were served with charges. While the matter was consolidated relative to the hearings, separate decisions are being written for each of the three named participants.

There was a small number of additional participants in the chat. They were either not identified or no longer employed by the Board. In any event, their participation was limited and minor as compared to the three charged teachers.

As to Weber's culpability or lack thereof of Count 1, her comments about Sara Bleekinger were inappropriate. The comments related to Bleekinger's looks, her mannerisms and her ability. Many of her comments had sexual innuendos.

When these comments are put in the context of the entire chat, their inappropriateness is magnified. Thus, an objective review of the comments concerning Sara Bleekinger suggests that Weber's comments in and out of context with the total chat were inappropriate.

Despite the obvious, Weber argued that she is not guilty of this Count. She insisted that the she had an expectation of privacy relative to the chat. She posited that the chat would have gone unknown but for Alysia Batista, another attendee at the meeting, seeing it.

As will be discussed in greater depth below, Weber and her cohorts had no expectation of privacy. They were engaged in a chat in a public setting while using a District computer and a District network. Under the circumstances, there could be no expectation of privacy.

The fact that they thought that the chat was private is of no moment. Thinking something does not make it so.

The reasoning was that one needed an access code in order to see that chat's comments. That reasoning is fallacious. Anyone passing by could see what was on the screens of the computers. The fact that only one person complained about the chat is irrelevant. The chat was undertaken in a public setting and, irrespective of all of the issues concerning the ownership of the computer and the network, fell into the public realm. Once that is recognized, it is readily apparent that Weber had no expectation of privacy.

Much was said about Weber's remorse for her conduct. While she, in fact, made certain comments about her remorse for having participated, the defense suggests that she has not fully taken responsibility for her participation in the chat.

Weber always had the option of logging out of the chat. If she thought the comments being made were truly offensive, why would she continue to participate? She did not, suggesting that the comments were not, in her view, inappropriate until she was called to task for it.

Once the content of the chat became known, Weber became the subject of charges of unbecoming conduct for making inappropriate comments about Sara Bleekinger. The fact that the comments were not known to Bleekinger is irrelevant. The comments were public and were treated that way.

In short, the Board met its burden relative to Count 1.

Count 2 addresses comments made by Weber to individuals other than Sara Bleekinger. The comments were primarily made to Lechelt and Van Pelt.

As were the comments made about Ms. Bleekinger, the comments attributed to Weber that were made to Lechelt and Van Pelt were offensive, crude and sexual in nature. Weber again claimed that she was not guilty of this Count on the grounds that she legitimately had an expectation of privacy.

As noted above, she had no valid basis for believing that a chat conducted in a public setting on a computer and on a network that belonged to the District simply does not carry with it an expectation of privacy.

Thus, the comments must be judged on the own merits. These comments were made while Weber was engaged in a District training program in a District facility, using District equipment and networks while being paid by the District. Under the conditions described immediately above, the comments were unacceptable.

The fact is that the comments were upsetting to one of the other attendees, Alysia Batista. Weber and her collaborators in the chat chose to blame the victim. The comments on their face were crude, discriminatory and upsetting and it is clearly understandable and reasonable that Ms. Batista would have reacted as she did, given the setting and the purpose for her being there.

The comments about Weber's remorse in Count 1 are applicable here. They need not be repeated.

Count 2 was proven. The Board met its burden of proof in this regard.

Charge II

This charge is limited to a single count. It alleges that Weber was insubordinate and guilty of unbecoming conduct in that she was involved in the disruption of Engrade training. An analysis of the allegation must be done before a determination is made about the charged misconduct.

The key word in this charge is disruption. An accepted definition of this word suggests that the action(s) of an individual or group interfered with the ability of others to continue an ongoing activity. Put another way, the actions of one or more people had to have prevented the organizers of a specific activity from continuing the activity to its planned conclusion.

With this definition in mind, one needs to examine the facts surrounding the instant matter. It is uncontested that the training started and ended on time. It is also clear that from the perspective the trainer, Sara Bleekinger, made her presentation in an uninterrupted manner. Thus, it is difficult to conclude that Weber and others disrupted the training.

That is not to suggest that Alysia Batista was not upset by the contents of the chat. It is apparent that seeing the text of the chat interfered with her ability to benefit from the training.

It must be said that Batista was the subject of negative comments by the three main participants in the chat. There was a good deal of blaming the victim here. Such a response was inappropriate.

By any reasonable standard, there were many grossly offensive comments that were made during the chat. Any reasonable person would have found them offensive and large numbers of reasonable people would have been disturbed to read the comments, particularly in a professional setting.

The undersigned hastens to add that an absence of disruption of the training session does not obviate the contention that Weber was guilty of misconduct. As noted in the findings to Charge I, she was guilty of misconduct. Specifically in Charge I Count 2, Weber was found to be culpable of unbecoming conduct in connection with Alysia Batista and others. Furthermore, as will be seen in charges not yet addressed, she is guilty of additional misconduct.

However, it cannot be said that Weber disrupted the training session. If the actions of Weber and her two cohorts had not transpired, it is likely that the session would have been no different than it was in the presence of the group chat. Thus, Charge II is dismissed.

Charge III

This charge alleges the misuse of the District's computer network through a group chat that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature. The District alleged that the foregoing was a flagrant misuse of the Board's resources. The Board concluded that this conduct constitutes unbecoming conduct, insubordination and just cause for dismissal.

Without commenting on the merits of Charge III, the Arbitrator points out that Charge IV

Count 7 alleges, although worded in a slightly different way, the same misconduct in the context of Board Policy 3321.

Therefore, the issue of the alleged misuse of the District's computers and network will be addressed in the discussion of Charge IV Count 7. As such, Charge III is dismissed.

Charge IV

This charge asserts that Maria Weber violated various District policies. The District posited that such misconduct constituted unbecoming conduct and/or just cause for dismissal.

Charge IV is comprised of seven counts. Each of the counts will addressed individually. It should be noted that, of the seven counts, only Count 3 does not allege that Weber violated a specific District policy.

With that in mind, there are certain comments that apply to Counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7. Since it is more efficient to make certain observations about all six counts at the outset rather than repeat them in connection with each policy, the following observations apply to all of the cited Board policies.

As noted above, Weber was on notice about each policy (BX19). This document listed 34 policies and procedures in effect in the District. The policies cited in the six counts identified above are all listed on the document.

Weber signed this document to acknowledge receipt of it as well as an acknowledgment of her awareness that the policies can be found on the Board's website. Finally, Weber's signature reflects her agreement to conform to the listed policies and procedures.

What must be concluded is that Weber was bound to comply with the policies. If she failed to review the policies in order to be able to comply with them, she did so at her own risk. In short, she was required to comply with the policies.

A second observation to be made is that Weber and her two colleagues participated in the group chat. Their continued participation in the chat makes each of them responsible for its contents.

It is true that Weber made some, not most or all, of the inappropriate comments. However, had she been concerned about her commitment to honor District policies, she would have logged off of the chat and, in so doing, disassociated herself from it. She did not do so and must be held accountable for her actions.

What remains is an application of the facts of this case to the terms of the cited policies. Such an analysis will result in a determination of whether Weber is guilty of one or more of the counts.

Count 1 alleges a violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy (Policy number 3362) (BX21). In relevant part, the policy states:

> The Board of Education recognizes that an employee's right to freedom from employment discrimination include the opportunity to work in an environment untainted by sexual harassment. Sexually offensive speech and conduct are wholly inappropriate to the harmonious relationships necessary to the operation of the school district and intolerable in a workplace to which the children of this district are exposed.
> Sexual harassment includes all unwelcome sexual; advances, requests for sexual favors, and verbal or physical contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender. Whenever submission to such conduct is made a condition of employment or the basis for an employment decision, or when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect if unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint.
> The sexual harassment of any employee of this district is strictly forbidden. Any employee or agent of the > Board who is found to have sexually harassed an employee of this district will be subject to discipline which may include termination of employment.

> The Affirmative Action Officer shall instruct all employees and agents of the Board to recognize and correct speech and behavior patterns that may be sexually offensive with or without the intent to offend.

Before considering the facts, there needs to be analysis of the policy. The policy addresses two forms of sexual harassment, sexually offensive speech and sexually offensive advances, both physically and verbally. There is no evidence of sexual advances in any way, shape or form. Thus, the relevant language in this policy concerns the first paragraph above.

The sexual harassment in this case concerns sexually offensive speech. The purported sexually offensive speech was contained in the comments made during the group chat.

The facts suggest that Alysia Battista, a participant at the Engrade training was sitting behind and to the left of Maryellen Lechelt. She was able to see Lechelt's computer monitor and was able to read the ongoing comments of the group chat and became offended by the comments that were overtly sexual as well as those that had sexual innuendos Battista became upset by what she saw and left the meeting room. She filed a complaint about the chat and the instant proceeding resulted.

To be clear, counsel for Weber, Lechelt and Van Pelt all cited Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us, 132 N.J. 587 (1993) as the seminal case in New Jersey for matters involving sexual harassment. The cited case is applicable to the portion of the instant policy that deals physical and verbal sexual advances. This aspect of the policy is found in its second paragraph, not the first one.

Moreover, the language in the second paragraph of the Board policy tracks Toys 'R' Us. The same cannot be said for the first paragraph. It is evident that, if the Board intended for the Toys 'R' Us standards to apply to both paragraphs, it would have made such an indication in the policy. Thus, the plain language of the policy indicates that the Board intended to distinguish sexually offensive language from sexual advances of either a physical or a verbal nature.

Thus Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us is inapposite here. The judicial decision must read to indicate that the standards set forth in Toys 'R' Us do not apply in matters involving sexually offensive comments that are distinguishable from cases in which there was sexual advances of a physical or verbal nature.

This case deals with sexually offensive speech. The Board is well within its rights to issue policies that are relevant to the governance of the school district.

With the above analysis having been completed, the undersigned must now consider whether Weber was guilty of the violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy in terms of participating in sexually offensive speech.

The Arbitrator is persuaded that she did so through direct comments, by responses to the comments of others and by participating in the group chat from beginning to end. She directly commented on Van Pelt as being a backchannel guy by commenting about the way Van Pelt walks. The record suggests that backchannel refers to anal sex. Thus, Weber's comment was sexual in nature. Another bit of evidence of a sexual comment by Weber is found in her comment about repositories being stuck up your ass.

There are numerous examples of responses by Weber to comments made by Lechelt and Van Pelt. She added to a comment of Van Pelt about pick-up lines by saying how about my eyes are the only thing I don't wanna take off of your (sic). She also said to Van Pelt don't say goodbye just say see you later babe and tell her to meet u on Dartmouth at 4 (Van Pelt's address). These comments were made in the midst of a series of comments about Sara Bleekinger that were sexual in nature.

Finally, it is obvious that Weber stayed on the chat for its full length. She did not object to its content. She did not log off. It is disingenuous to argue that she did not violate the sexual harassment policy.

It may be true that Weber made fewer sexually offensive comments than did the other respondents in this case. That fact will be considered when a penalty determination is made.

In sum, Maria Weber is guilty of Charge IV Count 1.

Count 2 alleges a violation of the Board's affirmative action policy (Policy Number 1140) (BX20). This policy is designed to promote the acceptance of people of diverse backgrounds regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status. The intent of the policy is spelled out in the first full paragraph of the policy statement.

While Weber made no comments that were directly violative of this policy, she participated in a chat that was disparaging of special needs students, lesbians and older people (BX13). She cannot credibly assert that she did not violate this policy while sitting through a chat that was replete with comments about people protected by the policy. She neither objected to the offensive statements nor withdrew from the chat entirely. Thus, she is guilty of Charge IV Count 2.

Count 3 concerns a purported violation of the policies alluded to in Counts 1 and 2 pertaining to the Affirmative Action Investigation. This count is dismissed.

Weber has already been found guilty of Counts 1 and 2. She is essentially being charged with the same misconduct a second time. In this regard, Count 3 is duplicative.

As to Weber's comments at the investigative interview, Weber is being charged with a lack of understanding of the seriousness of the matter. Even if true, that does not suggest misconduct. It introduces a factor to be considered when the penalty is determined.

With respect to the interview per se, there are circumstances under which a interviewee's conduct at an interview could rise to the level of misconduct. However, under the facts of this case, Weber was not guilty of misconduct when she was held to be lacking in her understanding of the seriousness of this matter. Thus, as indicated above, Charge IV Count 3 is dismissed.

Count 4 suggests a violation of the Code of Ethics policy (Policy Number 3211) (BX22). The key language in this policy is found in Principle II. It states as follows:

> The education profession is vested by the public with a trust and responsibility requiring the highest ideals of professional service.
> In the belief that the quality of the services of the education profession influences the nation and its citizens, the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards, to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons.

Among other issues, this Code of Ethics requires teachers to endeavor to raise professional standards and to encourage the exercise of professional judgment. Weber's participation in the group chat was inconsistent with both of these principles.

Weber attended a professional development training session. It was offered in order to provide participants with the opportunity to improve their abilities with the Endgrade program. It is inconceivable that experienced educators would engage in group chat for 2 ½ hours while a trainer was engaged in a professional presentation. What makes the misconduct especially egregious is the content of the chat. It was demeaning, denigrating, offensive and discriminatory. There was nothing about the chat that reflected an endeavor to raise professional standards. It was crude by any standard and was a clear violation of the District's Code of Ethics.

The Arbitrator is compelled to comment on the argument that the amount of time that the participants were involved the chat was limited to the time spent in inputting the comments. This argument is invalid and inappropriate. It suggests that they may have spent 15-20 minutes actually inputting their entries in the chat.

It is highly disingenuous to assert that the chat lasted 150 minutes but that the participants were involved in the chat for 15 or 20 minutes. That implies that they were focused on the training material for 130-135 of the 150 minutes. That suggests that the three respondents spent no time reading each other's contributions to the chat and that they spent no time watching their computer monitors while waiting for responses to previous inappropriate comments.

The chat lasted 2½ hours from beginning to end. There was a maximum of four minutes between chat comments. Weber's argument trivializes the misconduct and does nothing to reinforce the premise that she is sincerely remorseful for her actions.

The second aspect of the Code of Ethics that is pertinent here is the creation of a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment. The participation in the group chat is the antithesis of the exercise of professional judgment.

The Arbitrator is convinced that Weber violated this policy. Thus, Weber is guilty of Charge IV Count 4.

Count 5 addresses the Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy (Policy Number 3281) (BX 23).

The relevant provision in this policy is found in the fourth full paragraph. It states as follows:

> School staff in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all times. School staff shall not make inappropriate comments to pupils or about pupils and shall not engage in inappropriate conduct towards the pupils.

There was an extensive string of comments concerning special needs students in the transcript of the chat. The comments were, to say the least, inappropriate and discriminatory.

It is true that Weber did not make any of the comments. However, she participated in the full chat and had to have known about the comments about these children. She did nothing to stop the comments or to register outrage to the manner in which these students were described.

What makes Weber even more culpable is the fact that she is a Special Education teacher. If such a teacher is not reactive to offensive comments about the students she teaches, who will be?

Suffice it to say that Maria Weber violated the Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy. She is culpable of Charge IV Count 5.

Count 6 concerns the Healthy Workplace Environment Policy (Policy Number 3351) (BX25). The relevant language in this policy is found in the second full paragraph of the text. It states as follows:

> A significant characteristic of a healthy workplace environment is that employees interact with each other with dignity and respect regardless of an employee's work assignment or position in the district. Repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment.

The record indicates that Supt. O'Malley was the subject of numerous comments about his appearance, hiring practices and his sexual practices. The comments were graphic and crude. The treatment that he received in the group chat was prototypical of what was proscribed in the policy.

The Arbitrator is compelled to note that the comments were made by Lechelt and Van Pelt. Weber made none of them. However, as noted above, there were three identified people in the chat and she was one of them. The fact that she remained part of the chat for its entire duration subjected her to at least part of the responsibility for it.

Therefore, she violated this policy. As such, Weber is culpable of Charge IV Count 6.

Count 7 addresses the final policy allegedly violated. It is the policy concerning the acceptable use of district computers and computer networks (Policy Number 3321)(BX24).

The key language in this policy is as follows:

> The Board recognizes that telecommunications will allow teaching staff members access to information sources that have not been pre-screened using Board approved standards. The Board therefore adopts the following standards of conduct for the use of computer network(s) and declares unethical, unacceptable, inappropriate or illegal behavior as just cause for taking disciplinary action limiting or revoking access privileges, instituting legal action or taking any other appropriate action as needed necessary.
> The Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only. The Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use.
> Standards for Use of Computer Network(s)
> Any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computer shall be subject to discipline or legal action:

> 3. Using the computer network(s) in a manner that:
> k. Engages in other activities that do not advance the educational purposes for which the computer network(s)/computers are provided.

Irrespective of the defenses offered by the three charged teachers, there can be no question that they used the District's computers in a manner that was violative of this policy. The defenses will be discussed below. However, the use of the computers for the group chat was clearly in violation of the Board's policy.

Weber, as one of participants in the chat, violated the policy concerning the use of District computers and computer networks. Thus, she is guilty of Charge IV Count 7.

Charge V:

This charge is one of a single count of misconduct. Weber is charged with a failure to pay attention during the Endgrade training and with making no effort to benefit from the instruction provided.

As has been previously documented, Maria Weber has been found guilty of various kinds of misconduct, ranging from inappropriate conduct with other staff members and with other participants in the group chat and individuals not in the employ of the District to significant violations of Board policy. In each of those charges and counts, the misconduct could be documented through a review of the transcript of the chat and through a review of the conduct of Weber in the context of the terms of several Board policies.

In this charge, Weber is said to have not paid attention to the training and having made no effort to benefit from the instruction. The transcript of the chat shows the timing of the comments.

At most, there was a time gap of four minutes between comments. It makes no sense to limit the time spent on the chat to the amount of time writing comments. Weber was paying attention to the chat for virtually the full 2 ½ hour duration of the session. The total time she was involved in the chat precluded her paying attention to the content of the training.

Finally, Weber was on duty during the training. The session took place at a time when she would have been teaching. She had a professional obligation to make every effort to improve her teaching services by paying attention to the trainer. Instead, she opted to engage in an offensive, crude and grossly immature exercise of exchanging highly inappropriate comments on a chat.

Based on the record created, the Arbitrator concludes that, for practically the full length of the training session, Weber did not pay attention and did not make appropriate efforts to benefit from instruction that was designed to improve his teaching. She was expected to gain further expertise in a pedagogical program so that her students would benefit. She made little or no effort to actualize that goal. As such, Charge IV must be sustained.

ANALYSIS OF THE DEFENSES

Weber offered a number of defenses in an effort to mitigate the findings of misconduct. They are deserving of mention and discussion.

She observed that she made no vulgar comments during the chat. That statement is, for the most part, true. On the other hand, there were inappropriate innuendos in many of her comments.

That being said, comments can be inappropriate without being vulgar. Moreover, a portion of Weber's liability relates to her participation in a chat that was rife with inappropriate, both vulgar and not vulgar comments. She knew or should have known that some of her comments were inappropriate and that the group chat, in essentially its totality, was inappropriate. She also should have known that she should not have been part of an activity that was improper and potentially hurtful and defamatory.

In short, despite the accuracy of her claim that many of her comments were not vulgar, this assertion does little to mitigate her wrongdoing.

Weber claims that she spent only 15 minutes in the chat. This defense was previously discussed and dismissed.

This claim trivializes the misconduct. One would have to accept the premise that the wrongdoing was limited to the time actually spent on inputting inappropriate comments. That proposition must be dismissed out of hand.

While it may be that Weber was not focused on the chat every second of its 2 ½ hour duration, her involvement had to have been very much longer than the time she actually spent writing her comments.

Weber asserted that her misconduct did not occur in the classroom and that such is a mitigating factor. The reality is that, had the misconduct been perpetrated in the classroom, the penalty in this case would certainly be dismissal.

This defense also presupposes that findings of misconduct can only be made when the events transpire in the classroom. Weber is a tenured employee every minute of her work day. Misconduct can take place in the presence or absence of children. Misconduct can also be found when the perpetrator is alone. The actions define the misconduct and not the people present when the actions are taken.

Weber argued that she had not violated the standards of sexual harassment, as set forth in Toys 'R' Us. This argument has been partially addressed above. However, it is sufficiently significant that it requires further discussion.

Weber's reliance on this argument is misplaced for several reasons. She is charged with violating a Board policy, not a New Jersey statute. School boards are expected to adopt policies that set forth guidelines to be followed by various members of the school community. Certainly, the professional staff is part of that community and teachers are required to abide by them.

If the Board adopts a policy that is inconsistent with the law, the remedy is found in a legal challenge. There is nothing in the record that indicates that any legal action has been taken to challenge the legality of the policy.

In addition, one must look at the consequences of violating a law as compared the breach of a policy. The violation of a law can result in either civil or criminal consequences imposed by the Court.

By contrast, the breach of a school board policy can result in the imposition of discipline in an administrative proceeding. While the imposition of discipline may be severe, it is not a civil or criminal penalty.

Weber's argument in this case suggests that the statutory standard for sexual harassment should be used in an administrative, non-judicial proceeding. As such, the argument must fail.

Finally, the Board's policy addresses two areas of possible misconduct. The first one involves the use of sexually offensive speech while the second one addresses unwelcome sexual advances that are either verbal or physical.

The section of the policy relating to unwelcome sexual advances appears to track the Toy 'R' Us language. It requires that the action be severe and pervasive as required by the Court's decision.

This case is not about unwelcome sexual advances. Toys 'R' Us specifically deals with verbal and physical sexual advances.

This is about sexually offensive speech. Toys 'R" Us is not. Thus, it is inapposite here. Weber is alleged to have engaged in sexually offensive speech. The undersigned has concluded that she did indeed engage in such speech. Weber was not charged with unwelcome sexual advances and the relevant defenses to such a charge are not applicable here.

Weber averred that none of her comments were addressed to District students or administrators. That may be true but she had an obligation, to say the least, to disassociate herself from the chat by either logging off or by expressing her condemnation over crude and discriminatory comments about students and Dr. O'Malley. She did neither. She went along to get along and now wants credit for not making the offensive comments while tolerating them.

Weber's culpability may not be as great as that of the makers of the wholly inappropriate comments about special needs children and Dr. O'Malley. However, she is not devoid of guilt on this regard. On the contrary, her culpability is significant.

Her final defense is that her actions did not have an injurious effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the District. This matter will be addressed fully in an analysis of the Fulcomer standards.

THE FULCOMER STANDARDS

The Board is seeking the termination of Weber's services as a teacher. She argued that the leading New Jersey case concerning the termination of tenured teachers as a consequence of unbecoming conduct is In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 403 (App. Div. 1967). This was a case in which the Commissioner of Education concluded that Fulcomer engaged in unbecoming conduct and that dismissal was required.. The Appellate Division disagreed and held that the trier of fact must first determine if the respondent teacher engaged in unbecoming conduct and, if so, whether the misconduct warranted discharge or a lesser penalty.

In this regard, the Court determined that the following factors should be considered:

1. The potential impact on the charged teacher's career.

It is evident that, should Weber be terminated, the District would be required to report the dismissal to the State Board of Examiners for the possible revocation of her teaching certificates. It is reasonable to conclude that a termination in this case would dramatically increase the likelihood of Weber's teaching career in New Jersey being ended.

2. The longevity of Weber's career.

Maria Weber has been a teacher in New Jersey for 20 years, 15 of them in Edison Township. She is a senior teacher and should be given consideration for her years of service in the context of the other Fulcomer standards.

3. Weber's overall teaching record.

Weber's teaching record is devoid of negative comments. This comment will be expanded upon in Items 5 and 6 below.

4. Weber's teaching ability

A review of Weber's evaluations reveals that she has been consistently rated either Accomplished or Distinguished on the sub-parts to the evaluations, as well as on her overall ratings.

In addition, the record suggests her willingness to immerse herself in co-curricular and community activities. These activities reflect a desire to contribute to the school's standing through her contributions to out-of-classroom ventures.

Finally, her principal wrote a long and thoughtful letter about Weber's dedication and professionalism.

5. Whether there was an absence of prior discipline affecting Weber during her employment.

Weber has never been disciplined in any manner. Given the length of her service, a clean disciplinary record must be afforded serious attention.

6. Whether there was an absence of past increment withholdings.

There is no evidence of a salary increment being withheld.

7. The nature and the gravity of the offenses under all of the circumstances involved.

The misconduct described herein is very serious. She was part of a group of teachers who violated several important Board policies. She argued that her misconduct was mitigated by the fact that the majority of her comments were neither offensive nor discriminatory.

That is largely true. However, her continued involvement in the chat suggested that she saw nothing wrong with the comments of others and was devoid of condemnation of crude and unacceptable comments.

Her misconduct may have differed from that of the others but was only marginally less serious. Her lack of crudeness does not obviate her culpability.

8. Evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation.

Weber was not provoked. There were no extenuating circumstances. There were no aggravating conditions.

9. Any harm or injurious effect which Weber's conduct had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

This matter ultimately became public. It had an impact on the manner in which the community views the school. Further, the comments made about Dr. O'Malley had to be personally embarrassing and offensive and could have had the effect of weakening his image as the Superintendent of Schools.

JUST CAUSE

Just Cause standards emanate from Enterprise Wire, 46 LA 555 (1956). There are seven tests that need to be applied to a determination of the appropriateness of discipline.

In this case, there was Just Cause to discipline Weber. The Board policies forewarned her that she could be disciplined for violations of the policies. The cited policies were more than reasonably related to the business efficiency of the District and the performance the employer might expect from an employee. There was an investigation conducted to determine if Weber was culpable of misconduct. The investigation was fair and objective. It was related solely to the purported misconduct and there was an effort made to interview anyone who had knowledge of the underlying conduct Based upon the investigation and a review of the transcript, the District determined that there was substantial evidence of Weber's guilt. The rules/policies were applied fairly. Finally, the degree of discipline applied herein is related to Weber's misconduct and her past record.

CONCLUSIONS

A review of the Fulcomer and Just Cause standards persuades the Arbitrator that the Board had cause to serve disciplinary charges on Maria Weber. She is guilty of serious misconduct.

It may be that she is not guilty of making comments that are obscene and inappropriate. It is disappointing to note that she believes that her sole culpability concerns the misuse of District computers and its computer network. She does not recognize that her participation in the group chat, in and of itself, represents unbecoming conduct. Nor does she seem to understand that her involvement in the chat led directly to violations of several District policies.

Weber asserted that she was extremely remorseful for her involvement in the group chat. Her expressions may have been sincere but, as noted relative to the Affirmative Action interview, she does not fully get it.

At the end of the case, she still believes that she only violated one Board policy and was properly remorseful. To paraphrase her remorse, she suggested that I am sorry but..... There should have been no buts.

However, when the record is viewed as a whole, Weber's misconduct does not rise to the level of justifying termination of services. When this finding is combined with the analysis of the Fulcomer and Just Cause standards , it becomes clear that dismissal is excessive.

Finally, counsel for the parties did an outstanding job of researching the relevant issues and presented numerous cases for the consideration of the Arbitrator. The cases were reviewed and considered. However, given the number of cases cited by both parties and their non-precedential nature, the cases are not cited in the Opinion. Furthermore, counsel for the parties are to be commended for their overall preparation, the quality of the examinations and cross-examinations and professionalism throughout a long and complicated case.

Thus, the Arbitrator finds that appropriate penalty to be imposed on Maria Weber is a 90 day suspension without pay. Therefore, based on the above, the undersigned makes the following

AWARD

1. Maria Weber is guilty of Charge I -Counts 1, 2, Charge IV- Counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7 and Charge V
2. The following charges are dismissed: Charge II, Charge III and Charge IV- Count 3.
3. The penalty imposed on Maria Weber is a 90 day suspension without pay.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 24, 2014, Dr. Richard O'Malley ("Dr. O'Malley") filed tenure charges with the Board. Van Pelt timely served and filed a statement of position, which is optional under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. On December 16, 2014, the Board certified the tenure charges and forwarded them to the Commissioner of Education, who received the charges on December 17, 2014. Van Pelt timely filed his answer. On Friday, February 6, 2015, a pre-hearing conference was held between the parties. A discovery deadline was established, as were tentative hearing dates.

Subsequently, the parties exchanged initial disclosures and discovery. This matter was consolidated for hearing. Hearing was conducted on March 10, March 19, March 25, April 2, April 13, and telephonically on April 21, 2015.

On April 2, 2015, following conferral with counsel, May 26, 2015 was established as the due date for Mr. Van Pelt's and the Board's post-hearing brief.

THE CHARGES

BACKGROUND COMMON TO ALL CHARGES

Mr. Van Pelt has been a Teacher employed by the Board since the 2000-2001 school year. He is currently a union representative for his building. As an employee of the Board, Mr. Van Pelt was obliged, among other things, to ensure the implementation and enforcement of all Board policies, follow administrative directives and procedures, as well as New Jersey law, and accord himself appropriately towards and amongst the other Board employees he works with on a day to day basis – i.e., not to conduct himself inappropriately in their presence and cause them embarrassment, offense, discomfort and concern. Mr. Van Pelt, however, has continuously ignored the foregoing duties and responsibilities, and worse, has demonstrated an unwillingness and/or inability to improve, correct and modify his performance.

Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[s]exual harassment includes all unwelcome . . . verbal contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender." Policy 3362 further states that "when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint."

Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, states in relevant part that "[I]nappropriate conduct by a school staff member outside their professional responsibilities may be considered conduct unbecoming a staff member. Therefore, school staff members are advised to be concerned with such conduct which may include, but is not limited to, communications and/or publications using emails, text-messaging, social networking sites, or any other medium that is directed and/or available to pupils or for public display."

Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, indicates that "the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education."

Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, establishes that the program shall "promote the acceptance of persons of diverse backgrounds regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status." Further, this Policy provides that the Board's affirmative action program must "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education."

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, advises employees that the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Policy 3321 further states that "the Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only." Moreover, the foregoing Policy, in relevant part, states that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)computers for ... inappropriate or obscene purposes."

Finally, Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment."

Additionally, Article VI Section C , School Visitations by Association Representatives, of the Agreement for Professional Employees between the Board of Education Edison Township New Jersey and Edison Township Education Association, states in relevant part that "Representatives of the Association . . . shall be permitted to transact official Association business on school property at all reasonable times with the approval of the principal and/or Superintendent, provided that doing so shall not interfere with or interrupt normal school operations."

Mr. Van Pelt has an imperfect record of employment with the Board. Importantly, Mr. Van Pelt was first reprimanded during the 2005-2006 school year for using "the e-mail system of the [Board] on December 23, 2005 to transmit an email, which was not related to the educational mission of the Board, to every user in the District." Thereafter, on September 28, 2007, Mr. Van Pelt received a written reprimand for failing to submit a signed Technology Agreement and an executed Appendix A of the Alcohol and Drug Free Workplace Form. Additionally, Mr. Van Pelt was issued a written reprimand, resulting in his pay being docked for one day, after he failed to provide the Board with a sufficient physician's statement of illness following the use of a sick day. Perhaps most troubling is that the foregoing disciplinary action taken against Mr. Van Pelt has not served to modify and/or improve his conduct moving forward. Rather, it appears to have emboldened him, particularly in light of his initiation of and participation in the egregious conversation that lies at the heart of the herein Charges.

Specifically, on October 23, 2014, during a voluntary Engrade Chromebook Training, Mr. Van Pelt invited three (3) other Board employees (Maryellen Lechelt, Maria Weber and Jonathan Bauza), via email, to join a group chat on the Today's Meet website (https://todaysmeet.com/engraderocks) through the District's computer network. Today's Meet is a public web forum, accessible by all Board employees and students. The group chat spanned for a period of roughly two and a half hours and served no instructional purpose. Rather, the chat was graphically sexual in nature; discriminatory to women, lesbians, elderly persons and special education/handicap students; highly offensive to anyone not involved with same; and created a hostile work environment to other Board employees who were able to view, at any point in time, the content of the discussion.

The nature of the foregoing conversation is egregious beyond the bounds of decency. No persons and/or classifications of persons were spared. Mr. Van Pelt's behavior, as set forth more specifically below, illustrates a complete and shameful disregard of his responsibilities as an employee of the Edison Township School District and a member of the teaching profession, including, but not necessarily limited to, violations of the above mentioned policies, New Jersey Law and the controlling collective bargaining agreement. Even worse, Mr. Van Pelt's conduct has caused both the Board's Administration and members of the Board's staff grave concerns over his intentions and capabilities, to the point of no longer feeling comfortable to be in his presence or permitting him to be in the presence of other Board employees and students.

I hereby charge Tyler Van Pelt with conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member, misbehavior, neglect and/or other just cause, including but not necessarily limited to insubordination; all of which warrant his dismissal, pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:28-5, and 18A:6-10.1, et seq. As more specifically set forth below, it is clear that he has exhibited a callous disregard for the expectations of the Board, and the rights of other employees of the Board, to conduct their daily activities in an environment that is free from harassment, discrimination, bullying and inappropriate conduct and communications, as well as an egregious breach of the professional standards imposed upon him as a member of the teaching profession.

SPECIFICATION OF CHARGES

CHARGE I

Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Inappropriate Staff Conduct With Other Staff Members

On October 23, 2014, while attending a voluntary Engrade Chromebook Training at the Board's offices, Tyler Van Pelt engaged in a course of misconduct that violated New Jersey Law, as well as Board policies, regulations and procedures regarding staff interaction with and/or concerning other staff members. More specifically, Mr. Van Pelt initiated and participated in a conversation through the District's network, in a public chat room ("Today's Meet"), visible to those present in the room and obtainable by any District employee and student through the Today's Meet website, which was full of sexual innuendo, discriminatory, offensive and ultimately created a hostile work environment (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit H of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). This misconduct by Mr. Van Pelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

Count 1 - Inappropriate comments about Sara Bleekinger – Engrade Trainer

On October 23, 2014, Tyler Van Pelt engaged in a course of misconduct directed towards Ms. Bleekinger, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit H of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through Today's Meet that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison School District community, as Today's Meet is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Mr. Van Pelt made the following comments about Ms. Bleekinger:

A. "she looks like a poor man's denise richards";

B. "I dare one of you to delete her whole shit";

C. "oh she is aware of my presence . . . she is getting flush around the drop collar";

D. "I made a video of her presenting and that shit gets 5 stars";

E. "i'd like to invite her to a private backchannel discussion . . . all night long";

F. "i'd like to give her some bad options";

G. "it's nervousness cuz [sic] I fear she may reject me ... it may be over betwee [sic] us before it got started";

H. "my next pick up line was going to be 'how about I cook you breakfast'";

I. "I would treat her like a queen ... do you hear me a queen";

J. "i'd like to tag her";

N."I am thinking of a super-smart question to ask that will maker her melt ... maybe 'do you like to have your hair pulled?' ... have you ever seen a crisp one hundred dollar bill?";

O."how do you like to do it? Do you like to shower first? Personally I like to give my undercarriage a good how's your father beforehand."

Mr. Van Pelt's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for all persons who have had occasion to review his commentary and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in his presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Mr. Van Pelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

CHARGE II

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Disruption of Professional Development Training

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, during an Engrade Training, Tyler Van Pelt engaged in a course of misconduct that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature. More specifically, by taking part in a group chat through Today's Meet, which was – in part – about Alysia Battista, visible to Ms. Battista and highly offensive to her, Ms. Battista was unable to focus and was effectively forced to leave the training to forego further angst, ultimately preventing her from reaping the benefits of the instruction. This misconduct by Mr. Van Pelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE III

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Failure to Pay Attention During Professional Development Training

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, during an Engrade Training, as a result of his participation in a roughly two and a half hour inappropriate and extraneous conversation, Tyler Van Pelt failed to pay attention and/or make any effort to benefit from the instruction provided, destroying the trust placed in Mr. Van Pelt by the Board. This misconduct by Mr. Van Pelt constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

[3] "Eating chicken" refers to oral sex.

CHARGE IV

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Misuse of the District's Computer Network

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, Tyler Van Pelt initiated and participated in a group chat through the District's computer network that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit H of the Sworn Statement of Evidence), by way of the Today's Meet website, which constituted a flagrant misuse of Board resources and showed a concerning lack of judgment and failure to comply with the heavy duty of self-restraint and controlled behavior expected from any member of the teaching profession. This misconduct by Mr. Van Pelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE V

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Masturbating In or Around Board Property

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, Tyler Van Pelt excused himself from the Engrade Training, at around 10:39 AM, presumably to masturbate within the confines of Board property. In fact, Mr. Van Pelt was not shy in informing Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber and Mr. Bauza of same when he informed the group that he was gone for a while because he "had to get the baby batter off the brain" – a reference to masturbation. Moreover, Mr. Van Pelt admitted to masturbating in or around school property on at least one other prior occasion and advised Ms. DeLuca of same while being interviewed during Ms. DeLuca's Affirmative Action investigation. This misconduct by Mr. Van Pelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

CHARGE VI

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Violations of District Policies

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. On October 23, 2014, Tyler Van Pelt initiated and participated in a group chat through the District's computer network that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit H of the Sworn Statement of Evidence), by way of the Today's Meet website, which was both viewable to other attendees of the Engrade Training and obtainable by any District employee and student through the Today's Meet website, in violation of numerous Board Policies, as more specifically set forth immediately below within this Charge. This misconduct by Mr. Van Pelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

Count 1 – Violation of Sexual Harassment Policy

Mr. Van Pelt's conduct violated Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, in that it subjected Alysia Battista, as well as other Board employees "to sexually offensive speech and conduct ... wholly inappropriate to the harmonious employment relationships necessary to the operation of the school district." Further, Mr. Van Pelt's conduct was severe and pervasive and had the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile or offensive working environment for others. More specifically, Mr. Van Pelt made statements, including but not limited to, his sexual abilities and those of co-workers; obscene teasing, jokes and remarks of a sexual nature; comments of a sexual nature on, or staring at, an individual's physical attributes; and questions about sexual conduct. Regardless of whether such comments were directed at a particular individual, or even if such targets were aware that comments were made about them, Mr. Van Pelt's graphic declarations constitute sexual harassment.

Count 2 – Violation of Affirmative Action Policy

Mr. Van Pelt's conduct violated Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, in that it subjected Alysia Battista, as well as other Board employees, to a "learning environment [rife] with all forms of prejudice, discrimination and harassment ..."

Count 3 – Violation of Sexual Harassment and Affirmative Action Policies pertaining to Affirmative Action Investigation

Following an Affirmative Action/Sexual Harassment Investigation conducted by the District's Affirmative Action Office, Margaret DeLuca, Mr. Van Pelt's conduct during the October 23, 2104 Today's Meet group chat was determined to be in violation of the District's Sexual Harassment and Affirmative Action Policies, as well as various other Board Policies. In relevant part, Ms. DeLuca found that the "comments in the chat were directed against females and were so outrageous that the teacher filing the complaint was unable to concentrate on the needed instruction, thus interfering with her work performance." Further, Ms. DeLuca expressed her concern that Mr. Van Pelt did not understand the gravity of his conduct, particularly in light of Mr. Van Pelt's unrestrained commentary regarding his attraction to the presenter and his off color comments regarding his proclivity for oral sex and his suggestion that he has previously masturbated on Board premises. As a result of same, Ms. DeLuca recommended that Dr. O'Malley "consider the most severe [disciplinary] consequences for Mr. Van Pelt." Ultimately, Mr. Van Pelt's behavior triggered an Affirmative Action/Sexual Harassment investigation that resulted in a determination that he engaged in misconduct.

Count 4 – Violation of Code of Ethics Policy

Mr. Van Pelt violated Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, in that he failed to "exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons."

Count 5 – Violation of Inappropriate Staff Conduct Policy

Mr. Van Pelt violated Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, by engaging in inappropriate conduct, outside of his professional responsibilities, including communications through the internet, which were available to pupils and for public display.

Count 6 – Violation of Healthy Workplace Environment Policy

Mr. Van Pelt violated Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, by engaging in "repeated malicious conduct ... directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that [Ms. Battista and others found] hostile [and] offensive."

Count 7 – Violation of Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members

Mr. Van Pelt violated Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, by engaging in a group chat on the District's computer network that had no administrative and/or educational purposes. More specifically, Mr. Van Pelt violated this Policy by initiating and participating in a conversation through the District's computer network that was highly inappropriate (contrary to the intended use of the network) and outright obscene (contrary to the generally accepted social standards for use of publicly owned and operated communication vehicles).

CHARGE VII

Insubordination and Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause Violations of the Collective Bargaining Agreement

All of the allegations contained in the Background Information and preceding Charges are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. Contrary to the requirement of Article VI© of the Agreement for Professional Employees between Board of Education Edison Township New Jersey and Edison Township Education Association, Tyler Van Pelt has consistently conducted union activity during instructional time (i.e., engaging in conduct involving and/or concerning union activities, events and/or obligations while he should have been teaching and/or monitoring his students), without the approval of the principal and/or Superintendent. This conduct, as more specifically set forth below, constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

Count 1

On September 11, 2014, at 2:00PM and 3:01PM, during Math class and Science/Social Studies respectively, Mr. Van Pelt drafted and sent out emails concerning and/or relating to union activity/events.

Count 3

On September 18, 2014, at 2:10PM, during Math class, Mr. Van Pelt drafted and sent out an email concerning and/or relating to union activity/events.

Count 4

On October 23, 2014, at 12:13PM and 3:22PM, during Literacy class and immediately following Science/Social Studies, Mr. Van Pelt drafted and sent out emails concerning and/or relating to union activity/events.

Count 5

On October 23, 2014, at or around 9:38AM and 10:05AM, during Engrade Training – Professional Development, Mr. Van Pelt reviewed an email from ETEA President Jeff Bowden and then prepared and sent an email to Vanessa Barros, both concerning and/or relating to union activity/events.

CHARGE VIII

Pattern of Unbecoming Conduct, Insubordination and/or Other Just Cause over Protracted Period of Time

All of the allegations and facts set forth in the above Background Information, Charges and Counts are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. By virtue thereof, it is evident that Mr. Van Pelt has been engaged in a course of misconduct extending over a protracted period of time, such that, his pattern of misconduct, jointly and severally, constitutes unbecoming conduct and manifestly demonstrates his unfitness to serve in a position of educational leadership, warranting his dismissal.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

CONTENTIONS OF THE BOARD

The Board argued as follows:

These facts pertain to Tyler Van Pelt.

- Mr. Van Pelt has been employed by the Board since the 2000-2001 school year. He is currently a tenured employee.

- Mr. Van Pelt, during the 2014-2015 school year, was an elementary teacher assigned to Lincoln Elementary School.

- Mr. Van Pelt was a union representative for his building during the 2014-2015 school year. 5T 159:10-13.

- In or about January 2006 Mr. Van Pelt received a written reprimanded from former Superintendent of Schools Carol A. Toth for misusing the district's email system in December 2005 (i.e., transmitting an email "which was not related to the educational mission of the Board, to every user in the school district"). B-33.

- Mr. Van Pelt, in response to the foregoing reprimand, indicated that he understood Superintendent Toth's concerns and promised that he "would not utilize the Board's e-mail system in this manner in the future." B-33.

- Importantly, Mr. Van Pelt refused to meet with Superintendent Toth on three (3) separate occasions, prior to actually meeting with her, to address this email issue. See B-33.

- On or about October 13, 2006, former Assistant Principal Rutan forwarded a memorandum to Principal Kovacs, documenting inappropriate comments made by Mr Van Pelt to a superior of Mr. Van Pelts. Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt stated to Assistant Principal Rutan "if I had a dog that shit over and over on my carpet, I would get rid of it." Assistant Principal Rutan characterized Mr. Van Pelt's comments as "intimidating" and an "affront to [his] person [and] character." B-34.

- In or about July 2007 Mr. Van Pelt again demonstrated his unwillingness to cooperate with central administration by effectively refusing to be interviewed as a fact-witness in connection with an affirmative action investigation. B-35.

- In or about June 2007, Mr. Van Pelt was reprimanded for the following conduct: (1) possessing beer at the Rutgers Athletic Center during and/or shortly after the Edison High School Graduation Ceremony; and (2) arriving at the main office, the morning after graduation, and acting in a "belligerent, demanding, and loud manner," making the secretaries feel uncomfortable – resulting in a Detective being forced to escort Mr. Van Pelt from the premises. As a result of the foregoing conduct, Mr. Van Pelt was notified that former Superintendent Toth intended to recommend that the Board withhold his increments for the 2007-2008 school year. B-36.

- On or about August 20, 2007, Mr. Van Pelt's increments were, in fact, withheld for the 2007-2008 school year. B-39.

- In or about September 28, 2007 Mr. Van Pelt received a written reprimanded for failing to "provide a signed Technology Agreement and Appendix A of the Alcohol and Drug Free Workplace." In other words, Mr. Van Pelt effectively refused to acknowledge his obligation to properly use the Board's technology and his obligation to ensure the work place remains free from drug and alcohol use. B-37.

- In or about June 2008, Mr. Van Pelt was arrested an issued a Temporary Restraining Order for physical assaulting his then wife and co-employee. B-46.

- As a result of the foregoing incident, Mr. Van Pelt entered into a consent order prohibiting him from contacting his wife and resulting in his transfer from Edison High School so he would not be in the same building as his wife. B-46.

- In or about June 2012, Mr. Van Pelt was again reprimanded, this time by current Superintendent of School – Richard O'Malley, Ed.D. – for failing to provide a sufficient certification that an absence was due to a medical illness. Moreover, Dr. O'Malley expressed his concern with Mr. Van Pelt's attempt to supply a deficient and misleading doctor's note that was prepared by a family member. B-38

- On September 11, 2014, Mr. Van Pelt executed the Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications Form, acknowledging that all Board policies and regulations can be found on the Board's website at http://www.edison.k12.nj.us/Page/514 and agreeing to review and conform to the requirements of same. B-17.

- Mr. Van Pelt's schedule for the 2014-2015 school year was established prior to the start of the 2014-2015 school year. Mr. Van Pelt was expected to provide instruction during scheduled instructional time. B-32; 6T 28:13-17.

- On Thursday September 11, 2014, Mr. Van Pelt engaged in union activity during instructional time. More specifically, he forwarded union related emails to ETEA president Bowden at 2:00PM and 3:01PM, while he was conducting Math and Science/Social Studies Classes, respectively.[4] B-28 and 32; 2T 136:1-138:9.

- On Wednesday and Thursday September 17 and 18, 2014, Mr. Van Pelt engaged in union activity during instructional time. More specifically, he forwarded union related emails to [4] Note that the time times reflected on the emails are 3 hours behind the actual time due to a time zone issue with the District's network. See, 2T 136:6-12.

ETEA president Bowden at 2:14PM on the 17th and 2:10PM on the 18th, during his scheduled Math instructional time. B-29 and 32; 2T 138:10-139:20.

- On Thursday October 23, 2014, Mr. Van Pelt engaged in union activity during instructional time. More specifically, he forwarded union related emails to ETEA president Bowden at 12:13PM and 3:22PM, during his Literacy Class and immediately following his Science/Social Studies Class (meaning same, logically, must have been prepared as class was ending and sent right after class ended). B-30/32; 2T 140:1-141:25.

- On Thursday October 23, 2014, Mr. Van Pelt engaged in union activity during instructional time – Engrade Training. More specifically, he reviewed and responded to union related emails at 9:38Am and 10:05AM, while he was supposed to be focused on Engrade Training. B-30 and 32; 2T 142:3-143:11.

- There were no changes to Mr. Van Pelt's schedule, nor were there any assemblies, on September 11, 17, 18th or October 23rd. 6T 27:3-6, 29:11-14.

The following facts apply to all of the Respondents

- Article III(B)(1 and 2) of the Agreement for Professional Employees between Board of Education Edison Township New Jersey and Edison Township Education Association, July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2014 ("CBA") state, in relevant part, that "all Board of Education policies will be upheld and enforced by all Board employees who are party to this Agreement, as well as by all Administrators, Principals, and Supervisors" and "all Board of Education policies will be available for review in the office of the principal, school library, and the Association office." B-27.

- Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, advises employees that the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Policy 3321 further states that "the Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only." Moreover, the foregoing policy, in relevant part, states that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)computers for . . . inappropriate or obscene purposes." B-24.

- Moreover, Policy 3321 subject employees who violate same to discipline, which includes but is not limited to, suspension, revocation of computer privileges and/or dismissal. B-24.

- Unequivocally, there is no expectation of privacy for any Board employee when using the district's computer network. In fact, there is no program and/or policy that would trump the foregoing fact. 3T-14:16-15:12; 2T 26:13-19.

- Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[s]exual harassment includes all unwelcome . . . verbal contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender." Policy 3362 further states that "when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint." B-21.

- Board Policy 3362 also states that "any employee . . . who is found to have sexually harassed an employee of this district will be subject to discipline which may include termination of employment." B-21.

- Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, establishes that the Board's affirmative action program will "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education." B-20.

- Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, states in relevant part that "[I]nappropriate conduct by a school staff member outside their professional responsibilities may be considered conduct unbecoming a staff member. Policy 3281 further states that "School staff's conduct in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all time . . . [and] school staff shall not make inappropriate comments about pupils." B-23.

- Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, indicates that "the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education." B-22.

- Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment." Policy 3351 further defines the foregoing unacceptable conduct to include the use of derogatory remarks; insults; verbal or physical conduct that a reasonable person would find threatening, intimidating, or humiliating. Finally, a single act of such conduct can constitute the unacceptable conduct prohibited by this policy if it is especially severe and egregious. B-25.

- Board Policy 3351 states that "appropriate disciplinary action may be taken depending on the severity of conduct." B-25

- On October 23, 2014, Respondents attended a mandatory Engrade Training (the "Training") at the Board's offices. Engrade was a new initiative (learning management system) for the District's elementary school teachers. 2T 24:3-23.

- The Training lasted for two-and-one-half hours (roughly 9:00-11:30AM) and was conducted by Sara Bleekinger, who is not a Board employee. 2T 28:24-29:2.

- Respondents were required to use their District issued Chromebooks to participate in the Training. All Respondents admit to using same during the Training and connecting to the Internet through the District's network. Further, Respondent's computers were open, with their screens exposed, throughout the duration of the Training. 1T 74:12-18; 2T 25:6-20.

- At 8:53AM, Mr. Van Pelt forwarded an email to Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber and Jonathan Bauza, requesting that they "join [him] on [his] personal wiseass backchannel discussion."[5] B-12.

- Mr. Van Pelt attached a link to bring the invitees to a web site called "Todays Meet." B-12. Today's Meet is an interactive program that hosts various educationally based conversations (i.e., teacher to teacher / teacher to student). However, Today's Meet is not a program that the District requires it teachers to use and/or be familiar with. In fact, it has no affiliation to this District. Importantly, the District does not maintain Today's Meet chat and/or content, nor does it request and/or require Today's Meet to do so. 3T 20:5-11; 5T 236:24-237:15.

- Respondents were not required to use Today's Meet as part of the Engrade Training. In fact, there was absolutely no compatibility and/or correlation between the Engrade Training the Today's Meet website. B-41.

- Respondents denied reading Lechelt-3 in its entirety prior to using the Today's Meet Program on October 23, 2014. More specifically, Respondent's did not review Today's Meet's Privacy Policy and Terms of Service. In fact, said portions of Lechelt-3 became effective December 13, 2014 – after the chat at issue occurred! See, Lechelt-3.

- Moreover, the document Bates dare stamped Lechelt-032 within Lechelt-3 illustrates that Today's Meet chat rooms can be public and/or have limited access. Without question, the chat at issue here was not totally private as Ms. DeLuca – who was not invited to take part in same – was able to access the chat room.[6] See, Lechelt-3.

[5] Note that while the invitation was actually sent at 8:53AM, the email illustrates that it was sent at 5:53AM. The district's network is set not set to Pacific Standard time and is therefore displayed at a time three hours earlier than it actually is. 2T 45:13-46:3.

[6] Moreover, this chat was not private as the Respondents, notwithstanding their lack of privacy expectation on the district's network, have no expectation of privacy to the content of a chat displayed on their computer to a third party while in a public room.

- The Respondents, along with Jonathan Bauza, proceeded to engage in a 2.5 hour chat (beginning at 8:54AM and ending at 11:24AM) (hereinafter referred to as the "Group Chat"). B-13.

- James Madison Intermediate School Teacher, Alysia Battista, also attended the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training. 1T 60:10-16.

- Throughout the Training, Alysia Battista was seated in the last row, roughly 3 feet directly behind Ms. Lechelt. To the left of Ms. Lechelt were Jonathan Bauza and then Mr. Van Pelt. Ms. Weber was seated directly in front of Mr. Van Pelt. See, Lechelt-1; 1T 181:13; B-44 and Lechelt-1.

- Ms. Battista did not have any personal animosity towards Respondents prior to the Training. In fact she had no relationship (personal/professional) with any of them prior to same. 1T 83:4-9.

- A few moments after the Training began, Ms. Battista was distracted by noise emanating from Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Bauza. Mr. Battista proceeded to "shush" Ms. Lechelt. 1T 67:5-22.

- Ms. Lechelt turned around and gave Ms. Battista a look that Ms. Battista interpreted as "really did you just shush me?" Ms. Lechelt and Messrs. Van Pelt and Bauza continued to converse loudly and lean in towards each other's computer screens. 1T 68:14-20.

- Ms. Battista was able to clearly see Ms. Lechelt's computer screen and, therefore, observe the content of the conversation between Ms. Lechelt, Mr. Van Pelt, Mr. Bauza and Ms. Weber. In fact, Ms. Battista indicated that Respondents made no effort to hide what was going on and, in fact, at one point during the training, Ms. Lechelt actually got up from her seat, leaving the computer screen open and the chat on the screen – exposed to the general public and visible to anyone looking. More specifically, Ms. Battista observed the following comments: "short bus" and sexual innuendos – i.e., references to male genitalia, "blow me" and "how do you think I got my job"; comments about lesbians. Ms. Battista also observed comments about someone wearing red. Ms. Battista was wearing red and believed some of the commentary was directed towards her. 1T 69:18-71:22; 74:12-18; 1T 70:5-9, 74:12-19; B-8, B-10.

- Ms. Battista was heavily distracted and highly uncomfortable with the nature of the chat. She described same as "unbelievable". The content of the conversation was upsetting to Ms. Battista because: (1) she has a niece who is classified as special education; (2) she has an "uncle who's epileptic and his whole life he was called retarded and that affected him, so to see that from people who work with children"; and (3) she has a cousin who is discriminated against for being a lesbian. Ms. Battista indicated that "seeing those things especially with people who work with kids, whether it's a joke or not, that's not crossing the line, that's jumping over the line and turning around and spitting on it." 1T 73:5-24.

- Ms. Battista found the Group Chat to be "sexually offensive." 1T 151:16-20.

- Similarly, Ms. Battista clearly observed the web address that hosted the Group Chat. She documented same in both her note to Mr. Figurelli and her written statement. 1T 84:4-16; B-8 and B-10.

- Ms. Battista, based on the portions of the transcript she saw, believed that the Respondents were talking about her – i.e., she observed a comment about something red somebody was wearing, and assumed it was a reference to her because she was wearing a red sweater; and she saw a reference about someone "scratching their lips", which Ms. Battista tends to do when she gets upset, as was the case during the Group Chat. 1T 71:8-22; 176:11-21.

- Ms. Battista made a determination to inform central administration about this chat. She believed that since she preaches to her students to "say something if they see something", she would be disingenuous if she did not do same. Moreover, she expressed concern – i.e., "if that's what's going on in public when other people can see it and I don't think they made any effort to hide what was going on, what could possibly be going on when the kids were not being supervised by other adults." 1T 74:7-11.

- Ms. Battista proceeded to take photographs of Ms. Lechelt's computer screen so she would be able to prove the egregiousness of Respondent's chat. Ms. Battista did not take the time to focus her phone when she snapped the pictures and that is why same came out blurry. 1T 75:21-25; B-7.

- Mr. Van Pelt made all of the comments in the chat attributed to "tvp." See, B-2. Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt made the following comments about the Engrade Trainer – Sarah Bleekinger:

    - "she looks like a poor man's denise richards";
    - "I dare one of you to delete her whole shit";
    - "oh she is aware of my presence . . . she is getting flush around the drop collar";
    - "I made a video of her presenting and that shit gets 5 stars";
    - "i'd like to invite her to a private backchannel discussion . . . all night long";
    - "i'd like to give her some bad options";
    - "it's nervousness cuz [sic] I fear she may reject me ... it may be over betwee [sic] us before it got started";
    - "my next pick up line was going to be 'how about I cook you breakfast'";

- "I would treat her like a queen ... do you hear me a queen";
- "i'd like to tag her";
- "no, see, you guys don't get it ... when they are with me they love it all";
- "had to get the baby batter off the brain ... well that is the test, if you still care after that occurs ... and that's how I have always known I'm in true love ... and I love her";
- "can you help me with my pickup line at the end ... I was gonna [sic] go with 'you know what would look good on you? ME'";
- "I am thinking of a super-smart question to ask that will maker her melt ... maybe 'do you like to have your hair pulled?' ... have you ever seen a crisp one hundred dollar bill?";
- "how do you like to do it? Do you like to shower first? Personally I like to give my undercarriage a good how's your father beforehand." B-13.

- Mr. Van Pelt made the following inappropriate comments about special education/handicap students:
  - "bobo";
  - "short bus kids";
  - "I name my smart kids group 'mr vp's favority students'";
  - "and my low group is called 'I hate you don't waste my time'";
  - "my middle group is 'whatever'". B-13.
- Mr. Van Pelt made the following comments about Superintendent of Schools, Dr. O'Malley:
  - "well, I don't want that dudes sloppy seconds";
  - "I am not prepared to accept the premise that little Richard[7] has ever been proficient at pulling chicks". B-13.
- Mr. Van Pelt, in response to a comment by Ms. Lechelt directed towards Ms. Battista, concerning Ms. Battista "scratching her lips," stated, "dsl"[8] and then "we totally just made eye contact and totally had a moment". B-13.

[7] "Little Richard" is a derogatory reference towards Dr. Richard O'Malley. 5T 244:3-4.
[8] "DSL" is slang for the phrase "dick sucking lips." 2T 77:5-24.

- Mr. Van Pelt made the following comments about various unidentified employees:
    - Following a reference by Ms. Lechelt to "this lady in the red tshirt in the second row," Mr. Van Pelt stated "been there done that";
    - "had her when she was in her f-ing [sic] prime";
    - "how's that for an image ... try getting that out of your head";
    - "yea ... she got the mustache too yo [sic]." B-13.
- Mr. Van Pelt made the following comments to Ms. Lechelt, Ms. Weber and Mr. Bauza:
    - After Ms. Lechelt stated to Mr. Van Pelt that "I didn't realize you were a backchannel guy," Mr. Van Pelt stated: "now you know ... thought everybody knew" and "you can tell by the way the ladies walk ..."
    - "on the contrary, I am both a feminist and devout lesbian";
    - "I eat more chicken any man ever seen [sic]";[9]
    - "like being in the backseat of a vw bug?";
    - "I eat it all ... cookies and milk, cookies and milk ... and chicken". B-13.
- The foregoing chat had no educational purpose, nor did it enhance the instruction of the Training in any manner. 3T 250:24-251:6; B-42.

- Ms. Battista left the Training to speak with Steve Figurelli about her observations. Mr. Figurelli was unavailable so Ms. Battista wrote him a quick note and placed same in a sealed envelope for his attention. B-8.

- Ms. Battista returned to the Training because she knew the Training was important and because she felt she had a professional obligation to sit through same. She did not believe she could simply leave for the day. 1T 79:19-80:1; 149:19-21.

- As a result of Respondents' conduct, Ms. Battista was unable to concentrate and was prevented from learning the content of the Training. Thus, Ms. Battista was unprepared to use Engrade with her students and/or to teach Engrade to her less computer savvy team members and/or student teachers. 1T 71:23-25; 81:8-11; 1T 60:17-61:5.

- Within an hour after the Training, Ms. Battista met with her building Principal, Mr. Duggan, to inform him of Respondents' conduct. 1T 82:2-8.

[9] "Eating chicken" refers to oral sex. B-14; 2T 73:22-23.

- Pursuant to the request of Mr. Duggan, Ms. Battista prepared a handwritten statement, documenting her observations during the Training. 1T 83:15-19; B-10.

- Thereafter, later in the day on October 23, 2014, Ms. DeLuca interviewed Ms. Battista as part of an affirmative action investigation concerning Respondents' conduct. Ms. Battista provided Ms. DeLuca with a handwritten statement. Ms. Battista was very upset and visibly shaken during this meeting. See, B-11, B-10 and 2T 31:2-33:18; 1T 88:3-18; B-10.

- Ms. DeLuca accessed and reviewed a written copy of the Today's Meet Group Chat ("Transcript"). More specifically, Ms. DeLuca was initially provided with a copy of same by Tara Beams, but also was able to access a copy of the Transcript by simply opening Today's Meet.com and entering the Chat Room created by Mr. Van Pelt. 2T 41:4-20; B-13.

- Ms. DeLuca found the Transcript to be disgusting and offensive. 2T 48:20-23.

- The chat between Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Weber was open to the public and anyone with the chat name was able to access same. 2T 44:6-10; 6T 8:19-22.

- In fact, Don Platvoet, during his brief training of Respondent's on the potential uses of Today's Meet, did not inform Respondent's that it was a private program. 6T 8:8-15.

- Next, Ms. DeLuca met with and interviewed the other teachers in attendance during the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, with the expectation of interviewing three or four teachers that Mr. Duggan had already spoken with. 2T 50:12-25; See, teacher interview notes.

- Only one other teacher present during the Training (Angie McKenna) observed the content of the chat between Respondents. 2T 52:22-53:16.

- Ms. DeLuca then proceeded to separately interview each of the Respondents. B-14 through B-16; 2T 56:10-12.

- Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt indicated that they made derogatory references to special education and/or handicap students as a result of the Instructor's "offensive" use of the designation "low" for students. 2T 63:15-64:8.

- Per the District's Assistant Superintendent for Special Services, the Instructors use of the designation "low" should not have been offensive. In fact, all of the tests used by the District to classify special education students use the term "low" when classifying students. 2T 65:13-66:5; 3T 237:12-239:16.

- Respondents all appeared to be sorry they were caught, not sorry they had engaged in the conduct at issue. 2T 93:19-24; 104:14-105:4; 114:18-21.

- Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt did not take Ms. DeLuca's interview seriously. On two separate occasions during the interview, Mr. Van Pelt blurted out offensive, disgusting and unacceptable comments – i.e., (1) when explaining that the phrase "eating chicken" means oral sex, Mr. Van Pelt stated under his breath, audible to Ms. DeLuca, that he likes oral sex; and (2) after explaining that the phrase "get the baby batter off the brain" was a reference to masturbation, Mr. Van Pelt stated, that he did not masturbate, "at least not that time." 2T 75:2-8; 76:6-20; 88:6-89:6.

- Throughout the course of her investigation, Ms. DeLuca determined the following meanings for the following phrases used by Respondents:

    - That many, if not all, references to "backchannel" were references to anal sex. B-15; 2T 68:7-16; 3T 266:4-7.

    - Mr. Van Pelt consistently used the phrase "eating chicken", which means both smoking marijuana and oral sex. 2T 71:1-2, 73:22-23.

    - After Ms. DeLuca stated that Ms. Battista "keeps scratching her lips and they are getting bigger." Mr. Van Pelt stated, "DSL." "DSL" is an acronym for the phrase Dick Sucking Lips. B-13; 2T 77:5-24.

    - "Tricky d" and "Little Richard" were derogatory references to Dr. O'Malley, made by Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt, respectively. B-13; 3T 227 20-24; 5T 244:12-20.

    - Mr. Van Pelt's use of the phrase "get[ting] the baby batter off the brain" was a reference to male ejaculation/masturbation. 2T 87:10-88:5; B-14.

- Following her interviews of Respondents, Ms. DeLuca reviewed and analyzed all relevant Board Policies to determine whether violations had occurred. 2T 114:22-115:1; 2T 55:3-20.

- Finally, Ms. DeLuca analyzed and evaluated all of the information/evidence gathered throughout her investigation and prepared a memorandum summarizing her findings and providing recommendations for Dr. O'Malley's review. B-26; 2T 126:10-22.

- Ms. DeLuca recommended that Dr. O'Malley consider the most severe consequences possible for all three Respondents because "they didn't seem, for lack of a better term, to get it. They didn't seem to realize the seriousness of the situation." 2T 127:25-128:13.

- Dr. O'Malley recommended that Tenure Charges be filed against Respondents because he "felt their comments and their actions were so egregious, that it would not make them suit [sic] to fit in a position of entrusting them with children . . . I just felt that in the context of their – what they wrote and what they were talking about was just – just disgusting and unbearable . . . And how could I ever look a parent in the eye and say that their children are safe knowing that they are in front of their classroom." 3T 57:17-58:3.

- The Tenure Charges were posted to the public through the news media. Parents and teachers alike have approached Dr. O'Malley on a daily basis to express their trepidations to the possible return of Respondents to the classroom. 3T 62:22-63:19.

- Dr. O'Malley indicated that "every parent and Edison resident and teacher in the district aren't – now that the transcript was posted, that they feel that this was absolutely disgusting, and how can anyone not only talk about this, but talk about someone's child like this." 3T 63:4-8.

The record is closed and the evidence speaks for itself – the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents have engaged in unbecoming conduct, misbehavior and/or other just cause warranting their dismissal from their tenured positions with the Board.

Respondents conduct in engaging in a discriminatory, offensive and highly inappropriate group chat constitutes unbecoming conduct and/or just cause warranting their dismissal. On October 23, 2014, during a mandatory Engrade Training, Respondents engaged in a two and one-half hour "Group Chat" through the "Today's Meet Website, visible to those present in the room, observed in detail by Alysia Battista and ultimately printed through the news media and therefore, viewable by the general public. Respondents conceded that they were responsible for posting the various comments attributed to them (i.e., "tvp" = Mr. Van Pelt; "trish" – Ms. Weber; and "mamalechelt" = Ms. Lechelt).. The chat was full of sexual innuendo, discriminatory, offensive and ultimately created a hostile and uncomfortable work environment for Ms. Battista. In fact, Ms. Battista believed portions of the chat were directed at her and was made to feel so uncomfortable by the general content of same that she was unable to remain focused during the Training and was ultimately brought to tears after having been exposed to same.

The inappropriateness of Respondents' chat is born from an objective review of the Today's Meet Transcript (B-13). Respondents' subjective descriptions and/or interpretations of the chat as a joke or a misunderstanding are entirely irrelevant to this Tribunal's consideration. Conversely, the Board's conclusion that the Respondents displayed such poor judgment through their participation in the Group Chat that they are not fit to be entrusted with the care of this District's students, coupled with the common sense determination that their conduct crossed all behavioral boundaries for public school teachers, should not be disturbed.

As to Charge I Count 1, Respondents, as a group, consistently directed commentary towards and/or about Ms. Bleekinger that was sexually explicit and offense, demeaning, derogatory and wholly inappropriate. More specifically, Respondents consciously decided to turn a serious and important instructional course into a fantasy game of sorts, within which they vividly described and/or actively suggested ways for Mr. Van Pelt to initiate and achieve sexual interactions with Ms. Bleekinger, along with the sexual fantasies Mr. Van Pelt had towards Ms. Bleekinger. Mr. Van Pelt admitted to making the following comments: "I'd like to tag her"; "you know what would look good on you? ME"; "do you like to have your hair pulled"; "I'd like to invite her to a private backchannel discussion . . . all night long".

Despite denying engaging in such behavior within their Answers to the Sworn Tenure Charges and Answers to Interrogatories, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber conceded, through their testimony, that their comments towards Ms. Bleekinger were inappropriate. Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt stated, "[d]id I make inappropriate comments about [Ms. Bleekinger]? Yes, I would agree they were inappropriate, yes."

Regardless of Respondent's testimony, even a cursory review of the portions of the Transcript directed towards Ms. Bleekinger illustrate that same is inappropriate for teachers to partake in during school hours and through the District's computer network. Further, whether or not Ms. Bleekinger observed the comments directed towards her is immaterial. The record is clear – the Board's administration, Ms. Battista (the only Board employee to view the chat) and the general public found the comments directed towards Ms. Bleekinger to be inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature. Thus, the Board has provided sufficient evidence to sustain this Charge.

With respect to Count 2 of Charge I, Ms. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt engaged in the following exchange:

> Performance indicators are very positive with this fella – tvp
>
> I like the group name "morons" – mamalechelt
>
> The mo moes – lol
>
> Bobo – tvp
>
> They take the tart cart home – mamalechelt
>
> Short bus kids – tvp
>
> I name my smart kids group "mr vp's favority students – tvp
>
> Lol – mamalechelt
>
> And my low group is called "I hate you don't waste my time" – tvp

> My middles group is "whatever" – tvp
>
> I also prefer for my lows "jesus christ, why the fuck did they place you with me?" – mamalechelt
> Middle group = "just shut your mouth and do your work" – mamalechelt

The foregoing comments were, without question, made by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt and directed towards the special education/handicap students in their respective classes (e.g., "tart cart" and "short bus" are references to vehicles used to transport special education students).

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, after having occasion to discuss, with each other, their conduct during the Group Chat, conspired and formulated an excuse that is illogical, unpersuasive and perhaps, most importantly, devoid entirely of any remorse. Specifically, Mr. Van Pelt indicated that he made the foregoing comments because Ms. Bleekinger "advised teachers they could feel comfortable labeling the students low because these labels wouldn't be seen" and such comments "struck a nerve." Similarly, Ms. Lechelt indicated that she made the foregoing statements following Ms. Bleekinger's categorization of students as "lows" and "your lows", coupled with Ms. Bleekinger informing the group that groups can be given any name the teacher desires. As a result of same, Ms. Lechelt explained that she countered such ridiculousness with more ridiculousness.

Notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt are essentially attempting to argue that two wrongs make a right, their argument is fatally flawed and incredible for two reasons: (1) they acknowledged and accepted the district's use of various tests (i.e., Woodcock-Johnson, Wechsler, etc.) that classify students as "low", "very low", "low-average"; and (2) they did not raise any complaints during the Training regarding Ms. Bleekinger's classifications of students as "low," but, rather, devised such an argument only after realizing others viewed what they written. Most importantly, however, even if Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt were subjectively offended by something the instructor had said, their responsive commentary – made of their free will and volition – exhibited a disturbing lack of judgment and that, when viewed objectively, illustrates their true feelings towards this district's students. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Mr. Van Pelt engaged in unbecoming conduct by making wildly inappropriate comments about special education/handicap students.

Finally, as argued by the Board in its opening remarks, and as elicited through the testimony of Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley, Mr. Van Pelt efforts to blame their voluntary conduct on something said by Ms. Bleekinger illustrates his childishness, lack of remorse, poor judgment and inability to comprehend right and wrong. Respectfully, any effort by Respondent to mitigate the gravity of this particular Charge should be disregarded.

Charge I Count 3 concerns offensive and inappropriate comments made by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt about Dr. O'Malley, the Superintendent of Schools. In relevant part, they engaged in the following exchange:

>
> Tricky d told me that – mamalechelt
>
> Well, I don't want that dudes sloppy seconds – tvp
>
> Well that eliminates the whole district then – mamalechelt
>
> I hear its part of the criteria – holla
>
> It is – mamalechelt

How do you think I got the job – mamalechelt

I'm not saying I disagree with all of the man's philosophies – tvp

I can appreciate any man that looks like a turtle having the ability to get any woman – mamalechelt

I find him incredibly sexy – mamalechelt

In a "I need a job" kinda way – mamalechelt

I am not prepared to accept the premise that little Richard has ever been proficient at pulling chicks – tvp

Oh he's proficient at pulling chicks – mamalechelt

The catch is . . . theyre ugly – mamlechelt

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt conceded making the foregoing statements and admitted that said exchange was about their boss – the superintendent of schools, Dr. O'Malley. On their face, the comments reference Dr. O'Malley's appearance, sexual proclivities and sexually-based hiring, firing and promotional practices. However, such defamatory comments are entirely without basis in fact or reality and ultimately caused Dr. O'Malley undue embarrassment once the Today's Meet transcript was posted by the news media.

Suffice it say that the inappropriateness of this exchange between Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt is borne from Ms. Weber's recognition and acknowledgment of same in the middle of the exchange – i.e., "inappropriate in so many ways." Further, however, this count must be sustained against Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt as they both acknowledged the inappropriateness and untruthfulness of their respective comments. 5T 139:19-140:6; B-15.

Charge I Count 4 deals with the unbecoming conduct of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt with respect to their harassing and offensive conduct about Alysia Battista. They engaged in the following exchange:

She keeps scratching her lips and they are getting bigger – mamalechelt

Actually ignore than [sic] – mamalechelt

That – mamalechelt

That was a complete threes company statement – mamalechelt

Dsl – tvp

We totally just made eye contact and totally had a moment – tvp

The foregoing comments were all made within a couple seconds of each other, as they are each time stamped 9:55AM. B-13.

Ms. DeLuca, through her investigation, deciphered the meaning and context of this portion of the chat between Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt. Specifically, Ms. Lechelt's reference to "scratching lips" was a direct reference to Ms. Battista, who testified that when she gets nervous/anxious she has a habit of scratching her lips, and was doing same during the Respondents' group chat. In response to Ms. Lechelt's comment about Ms. Battista's lips, Mr. Van Pelt stated "dsl." B-13. "Dsl" is a text acronym for "dick sucking lips." Clearly, Mr. Van Pelt's comment was directed toward Ms. Battista. In fact, Mr. Van Pelt's incredible and wavering testimony on this issue should add credence to the foregoing conclusion – i.e., during his November 11, 2014 interview with Ms. DeLuca, Mr. Van Pelt could not remember what he meant by the phrase "dsl" and further denied knowing the meaning of same; thereafter, in response to the Board's discovery responses, Mr. Van Pelt – for the first time - stated that he used the phrase "dsl" in reference to an internet connectivity problem encountered by the present. Clearly, as was par for the course, Mr. Van Pelt was untruthful, and exhibited a callous willingness to provide deceitful testimony in an attempt to diminish the gravity of his conduct. In fact, the gravity of Mr. Van Pelt's conduct with respect to this particular Charge is borne from Ms. Van Pelt's efforts to deny his knowledge of the phrase "dick sucking lips" – had this allegation been less serious, it is likely Mr. Van Pelt would have taken ownership of the statement. Therefore, through the testimony of Ms. DeLuca and Ms. Battista, as well as the logical objective inferences to be drawn from the exchange on its face, the Board has sustained these allegations against Ms. Lechelt and Mr. Van Pelt.

Charge I Count 5 indicates that Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt made offensive, discriminatory and inappropriate comments about unidentified employees in the training session. They made the following comments throughout his participating in the Today's Meet Group Chat:

> Following a reference by Ms. Lechelt to a lady in the red tshirt, Mr. Van Pelt stated, "been there done that"
>
> Had her when she was in her f-ing prime
>
> How's that for an image . . . try getting that out of your head
>
> Yea . . . she got the mustache too yo

Ms. Lechelt added the following comments:

> Maybe you should start slowly . . . like with this lady in the red tshirt in the second row
>
> Following Mr. Van Pelt's statement that he "has been there done that," Ms. Lechelt stated, "so did JB"
> She is a fan of the backchannel . . . and jean overalls

Clearly, as was par for the course throughout the Training and the Group Chat, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt picked a target (i.e., lady in red tshirt) and attacked said employee through comments that were insulting, discriminatory, derogatory, offensive and sexual in nature. More simply, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, through the foregoing comments, degraded a colleague by mocking her age, appearance and alleged sexual behavior. Thus, such comments were highly inappropriate and deemed offensive to Alysia Battista, the Board's Administration and the general public - which likely includes the lady referenced by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt.

Count 6 of Charge I alleges that the Respondents made disgusting, offensive and inappropriate sexual comments among themselves and about each other.

Respondents, throughout the Group Chat, made consistent comments between each other about Mr. Van Pelt enjoying, preferring and/or engaging in anal sex – i.e., use of word "backchannel." Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt discussed masturbating, particularly in school and during the training session. In fact, the clear implication from their conversation was that Mr. Van Pelt had excused himself from the Training to masturbate in the restroom. Mr. Van Pelt made multiple references to the act of oral sex – i.e., eating chicken, as well as a flippant comment about him being a "lesbian". Ms. Lechelt stated emphatically that she "loves" when Respondents ask her to "blow" them. Finally, the inappropriateness of Respondents' exchange is encapsulated by Ms. Weber's admission that the conversation is "so beautifully filthy" and "it always is when tvp is chatting."

Without question, such comments were graphically sexual, offensive, discriminatory, harassing and inappropriate to Ms. Battisa, Ms. DeLuca, Dr. O'Malley and the general public. Such commentary simply has no place inside of a school building. Thus, the Board has established that Van Pelt, with respect to this Charge, has engaged in unbecoming conduct.

Charge II alleges that Respondents engaged in unbecoming conduct during the training session when the caused a disruption by preventing Ms. Battista from participating in the training.

The record evidence demonstrates that Ms. Battista, upon viewing portions of the Group Chat, became offended, was unable to focus and was effectively forced to leave the training to report the misconduct she observed Respondents partake in. In fact, Respondents' conduct prevented Ms. Battista from learning the content of the training. Thus, Ms. Battista was unprepared to use Engrade with her students and/or to teach the Engrade program to her team members and/or student teachers.

Respondents' defense to this Charge is entirely misplaced. More specifically, Respondents, through their testimony, failed to address the actual disruption to Ms. Battista (which was alleged in Charge II of the each of the Sworn Tenure Charges), while attempting to divert this Tribunal's attention to the lack of general disruption. Importantly, however, the Board did not charge Respondents with causing a general disruption to the Training as the Group Chat was only observed by one person and thus, logically, only could have disrupted one person – Alysia Battista.

Merrian's Webster Dictionary defines disruption as follows: to cause (something) to be unable to continue in the normal way; to interrupt the normal progress or activity of (something). Here, without question, Respondents' Group Chat resulted in a situation where Ms. Battista was unable to continue with the Training in the normal way. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Respondents disrupted the Engrade Training.

As a consequence of Respondents' partaking in a 2 ½ hour group chat, they failed to pay attention to the training. The Board has established by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents, as a result of their participation in a 2.5-hour conversation during the Training, failed to sufficiently pay attention to the content and/or presentation of the Engrade materials.

The Board had an expectation that all teachers present at the Training, or any professional development training for that matter, would pay attention to the entirety of the instructional presentation and refrain from engaging in ancillary and unrelated conduct. Respondents' conduct fell far short of the foregoing expectation.

The transcript of the Chat proves that it lasted for 2.5 hours. Mr. Van Pelt made his first comment at 8:54AM and his last comment at 11:23AM. Similarly, Ms. Lechelt made her first comment at 8:54AM and her last at 11:24AM. B-13. Finally, Ms. Weber made her first comment at 8:58AM and her last comment at 11:24AM. B-13. Between 8:54AM and 10:49AM, the longest period of time in between comments was only 4 minutes, on two separate occasions. Both Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber testified that they spent as much as 15-20 minutes participating in the chat. See, Ms. Lechelt did not attempt to quantify her participation in the chat.

Regardless of the self-serving estimates set forth by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber, even if each Respondent only spent 15-20 minutes participating in the chat (or the length of time it took them to type the comments they admitted to making into the chat), they failed to pay attention, or at the least, refrain from engaging in unrelated activity – by their own admission – throughout the entirety of the Training. Thus, the Board has sustained this Charge against all Respondents.

As to Charge III, on October 23, 2014, during the Training, Respondents participated in an inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing and offensive chat through the District's computer Network and District's computers. The chat was not the result of any educational and/or instructional requirements or necessities. Thus, it constituted a misuse of the District's computer network.

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, states – in relevant part – that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)/computers for illegal, inappropriate or obscene purposes, or in support of such activities . . . Inappropriate activities are defined as those that violate the intended use of the network(s) . . . ; and (3) using the computer network(s) in a manner that: engages in other activities that do not advance the education purposes for which computer network(s)/computers are provided."

Here Ms. Weber agreed that her conduct constituted a misuse of the District's network. Similarly, Ms. Lechelt grudgingly conceded that her participation in the Group Chat did not enhance any educational purposes. Only Mr. Van Pelt refused to acknowledge same by steadfastly arguing that the Group Chat, which provided an infusion of humor to the Training, enhanced the Respondents' learning capacity.

While Mr. Van Pelt's lack of credibility will be addressed in greater detail below, suffice it to say that Mr. Van Pelt's claim surely does not overcome the Board's proofs coupled with the other Respondents' concessions. Initially, Mr. Van Pelt set up the Group Chat and invited the other Respondents and Mr. Bauza to his "personal wiseass backchannel discussion." Clearly, the name he chose for the Group Chat depicts his true intentions for the chats direction and content – i.e., inappropriate.

Next, an objective review of the content of the chat illustrates that same was wholly inappropriate in relation to Board Policy 3321 and entirely unrelated to the educational purposes of the Training. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the admissions of Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Weber that they misused the district network must be similarly attributed to Mr. Van Pelt, as his conduct during same was at least as egregious as the other two Respondents.

Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in proving that Respondents misused the District's computer network, constituting unbecoming conduct.

Charge IV indicates that Respondents' conduct during the training session violated several district policies. In September 2014, Respondents executed "Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications Forms." B-17, 18 and 19. These forms indicate, "employees are expected to review and become familiar with all Board policies and regulations" and further, directs employees to the web address where same can be found. In fact, Respondents all acknowledged that the policies and regulations are on the Board's website and agreed to "conform to the requirements of the policies and regulations of the Edison Township Board of Education."

Additionally, Article III(B), Board Policies, of the controlling CBA states, in relevant part, that: (1) all Board of Education policies will be upheld and enforced by all Board employees who are party to this Agreement, as well as by all Administrators, Principals, and Supervisors; and (2) all Board of Education policies will be available for review in the office of the principal, school library, and the Association office.

Thus, regardless of whether or not Respondent's actually adhered to their obligations to familiarize themselves with and abide by all Board policies and regulations, their affirmative obligation to do same undercuts any efforts by Respondents to argue that they were unaware of certain policy requirements that they disregarded. More simply put, in considering whether or not Respondents violated Board Policies as alleged in the Sworn Tenure Charges against them, this Tribunal must find that they were familiar with all Board Policies and aware of their obligations pursuant to same.

Pursuant to Counts 1, 2 and 3 of Charge IV, Respondents are charged with violating the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies. More specifically, Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, requires the Board to implement and "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in the policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education."

Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[the Board of Education recognizes that an employee's right to freedom from employment discrimination includes the opportunity to work in an environment untainted by sexual harassment." Said Policy further provides that "[sexually offensive speech and conduct are wholly inappropriate to the harmonious employment relationships necessary to the operation of the school district and intolerable in a workplace which the children of this district are exposed." Sexual harassment includes all "verbal or physical contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employee's gender. When such inappropriate conduct is "severe and pervasive" and has the effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint. Finally, employees are put on notice through Policy 3362 that should they be found guilty of sexual harassment, they will be subject to discipline which may include termination.

Though Respondents were not charged with violating New Jersey's sexual harassment laws, Respondents sought to interject the more stringent standards of same into this matter in an effort to defend the Board's allegations. Respectfully, any comparison of the Respondents' conduct to New Jersey Law is not relevant and/or appropriate, as Respondents were not charged with violating state law.

However, to the extent this Tribunal disagrees with the Board's interpretation of the Sworn Charges, the Board contends Respondents have, in fact, violated New Jersey Law, as established by the New Jersey Supreme Court. Lehman v. Toys R Us, Inc., 132 N.J. 587, 603-604 (1993)(a four part test must be considered in determining whether or not sexual harassment has occurred: (1) the complained of conduct would not have occurred but for the employee's gender; and (2) was severe or pervasive enough; (3) to make a reasonable woman believe that (4) the conditions of employment are altered and the working environment is hostile or abusive).

Here, the credible record evidence is clear and convincing – Respondents violated the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies. Ms. Battista, based on the portions of the transcript she saw, believed that Respondents – at least in part - were talking about her (i.e., she observed a comment about somebody in red, and assumed it was a reference to her because she was wearing a red sweater; and she saw a reference about someone "scratching their lips", which Ms. Battista tends to do when she gets upset and was doing during the Group Chat). More specifically, but without limitation, Ms. Battista observed and recalled the following commentary between Respondents: reference to a "short bus" - a demeaning reference to the mode of transportation for special education students; the size of male genitalia; use of the word "dick"; comments about being a "virgin"; describing the trainer as a lesbian, with a reference to a rainbow; "blow me" – "how do you think I got my job"; "men who are like 'turtles'". As a result of Respondents' conduct, Ms. Battista was unable to concentrate and was prevented from learning the content of the training – i.e., Respondents altered and interfered with Ms. Battista's work performance and created an intimidating, hostile, and offensive working environment.

Further, the severity and pervasiveness of Respondent's 2.5 hour chat is borne from Ms. Battista's reaction at the time she observed same, Ms. Battista's demeanor during her testimony when she broke down in tears because she remains upset with the content of Respondent's chat and the testimony and conclusions of Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley.

Ms. DeLuca, an experienced affirmative action coordinator/investigator, determined that Respondents' comments during the Today's Meet Group Chat included: (1) explicit and graphic references to sexual acts and sexual sayings; (2) references and imaginations regarding a sexual relationship between Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Bleekinger; (3) comments concerning Ms. Bleekinger's sexual preferences – i.e., the suggestion that she is a lesbian; (4) inexcusable and insulting comments about special education/handicap students; (5) demeaning comments about other persons present in the training, including their sexual orientation and/or age; and (6) inappropriate, insulting and unfounded comments concerning Dr. O'Malley's physical appearance and hiring/promotion practices.

Ultimately, Ms. DeLuca concluded that the related Board Policies were violated because Respondents' verbal attack on females, elderly persons, lesbians and students with disabilities created a hostile and offensive working environment for Alysia Battista. Respectfully, the record would not support any alternative finding by this Tribunal.

Importantly, Respondents' efforts to attack the credibility of Ms. Battista by categorizing her as both unreasonable and atypical are unavailing. Initially, common sense must prevail.

Regardless of Respondents' self-serving and rehearsed definitions/meanings for the various phrases used throughout the transcript, this Tribunal must evaluate same based on the meaning the general public would have, and since has, attributed to such relevant statements – that they are disgusting, sexually offensive, insulting, demeaning, and discriminating on their face. Further, to the extent this Tribunal is convinced that Respondents' efforts to apply the "reasonable person standard" to Ms. Battista are appropriate, which the Board remains steadfastly opposed to, the Board argues that said standard has been satisfied – both Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley corroborated the reasonableness of her reaction to Respondents' Group Chat.

Thus, to categorize Ms. Battista's reaction to Respondents' commentary as "unreasonable" would be to implicitly identify such comments as acceptable. Moreover, the Board would be remiss to fail to point out the hypocrisy of Respondents' argument – i.e., Respondents, in one breath, ask this tribunal to find that Ms. Battista's reaction to Respondents' comments was atypical or unreasonable, while in the other breath, argue that their "reaction" to Ms. Bleekinger's well accepted categorizations/classifications of special education students (i.e., "low") was normal and a legitimate excuse to their behavior. Respondents' attempt to deflect this Tribunal's attention from their conduct, by yet again attacking Ms. Battista's person, should not be overlooked. The overwhelming record evidence illustrates that Respondents' conduct violated the Board's Affirmative Action and Sexual Harassment Policies.

Count 4 and 5 of Charge IV asserts that Respondents violated Board Policy 3211 and Board Policy 3281. The Code of Ethics policy states in relevant part that the educator "shall not intentionally expose the pupil to embarrassment or disparagement." Further, Policy 3211 requires that the "educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons."

Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, indicates, in relevant part, "staff members have the public's trust and confidence to protect the well-being of all pupils attending the school district." Policy 3281 further requires that "school staff's conduct in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all times. School staff shall not make inappropriate comments . . . about pupils." B-23.

The foregoing policies hold Board employees to the highest degree of morality and professional standards. Similarly, they confer expectations on Board employees to safeguard the trust and confidence conferred upon them by the public. However, Respondent's voluntary and willful conduct during the October 23, 2014 Group Chat, along with the content of said chat, constituted a grave lack of professional judgment and a breach in the trust attributed to these teachers by both the Board and the general public. More specifically, the 2.5-hour conversation between the Respondents, with no instructional/educational purpose, during an important Professional Development Training (a professional responsibility) was highly inappropriate and a drastic deviation from the administration's expectations for its employees to embrace the Engrade program and/or act with a certain level of respect and commitment during any professional development training.

Further, the content of same, specifically the derogatory references by Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt about their special education / handicap students leapt across all bounds of decency. Perhaps most importantly, as a result of the words documented by Respondents, the young impressionable students (and their parents) previously assigned to Mr. Van Pelt and or Ms. Lechelt, at any time during the employment of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt, are forced to wonder which hurtful and derogatory grouping they were assigned to by their respective teacher. Thus, the Board has sustained its burden in establishing that Respondents' conduct violated Board Policies 3211 and 3281.

Count 6 refers to Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, which states, in relevant part, "employees [must] interact with each other with dignity and respect . . . Repeated malicious conduct of any employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile or offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment." Policy 3351 defines unacceptable conduct as conduct that constitutes the "use of derogatory remarks; insults; verbal . . . conduct that a reasonable person would find threatening, intimidating or humiliating. A single act of such conduct shall not constitute the unacceptable conduct prohibited by this policy unless it is especially severe and egregious."

Here, once again, the Board has sustained its burden in proving that Respondents have violated this Policy. By there own admission, the overall content of the Group Chat contained interactions devoid of both dignity and respect – e.g., graphic and vulgar sexual comments concerning Mr. Van Pelt's desires with respect to Ms. Bleekinger; derogatory and insulting comments about Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's student groupings and special education students in general; baseless insulting and defamatory remarks about Dr. O'Malley's appearance and hiring/firing/promotional practices; derogatory and insulting remarks about woman, lesbians, elderly persons. B-13. Further, the Group Chat by Respondent's lasted 2.5 hours, encompassed 16 pages of a transcript and contained 318 separate comments, making the foregoing malicious conduct repeated conduct. B-13.

Finally, notwithstanding Respondents' unjustified and desperate claims that Ms. Battista is not a reasonable person and/or did not have a reasonable reaction to the content of the Group Chat, Ms. DeLuca and Dr. O'Malley certainly found Respondents' conduct hostile, offensive and humiliating as well. In reality, even a cursory review of the public comments associated with any of the printed news articles related to Respondents' conduct illustrates that the general public also finds the content of Respondents' Group Chat hostile, offensive and humiliating. Thus, without question, the Board has also satisfied the reasonable person element of this Policy.

Respondent Van Pelt admitted to engaging in unbecoming conduct by masturbating on school property. The Board's proofs in support of this Charge are limited to an admission from the mouth of Mr. Van Pelt. Specifically, during the Training, Mr. Van Pelt came back to the room after roughly 5 minutes in the bathroom and after being told "you took a while" by Ms. Lechelt, stated "had to get the baby batter off the brain." During his November 11, 2014 meeting with Ms. DeLuca, Mr. Van Pelt explained that the foregoing phrase was a line from the Movie Something About Mary that meant masturbating prior to going on a date. Immediately after offering that he did not masturbate in the bathroom during the Training, Mr. Van Pelt stated "at least not that time," implying that he has engaged in such illicit behavior on past occasions. Said admission was clearly heard by Ms. DeLuca, who was only 3-4 feet away from Mr. Van Pelt. 2T 88:23-89-6.

Conveniently and predictably, Mr. Van Pelt denied making such an admission. However, similar to Ms. Lechelt, there is simply no reason for this Tribunal to discredit Mr. Van Pelt's original inculpatory admission in light of his later self-serving recantation (i.e., his record of discipline and insubordination while employed by this Board). Most importantly, perhaps, at no point during his testimony did Mr. Van Pelt actually deny that he had masturbated on school property on prior occasions. Rather, he simply denied making an admission to Ms. DeLuca. Therefore, it is certainly fair for this Tribunal to infer that Mr. Koy failed to ask Mr. Van Pelt whether or not he had ever masturbated on Board property because Mr. Koy was fearful of the answer. Ultimately, the Board submits that when Ms. DeLuca's credibility is weighed against Mr. Van Pelts, this Tribunal will have no option but to credit Ms. DeLuca's testimony. Thus, the Board has sustained this Charge - Mr. Van Pelt engaged in unbecoming conduct by masturbating on school property.

Respondent Van Pelt violated Article VI Section C of the CBA by conducting union activity during instructional time. Mr. Van Pelt has failed to overcome the overwhelming record evidence illustrating violations of Article VI Section C of the Collectively Bargained Agreement by conducting union activity during instructional time. Article VI Section C, School Visitations by Association Representatives, states that "representatives of the Association . . . shall be permitted to transact official Association business on school property at all reasonable times with the approval of the principal and/or Superintendent, provided that doing so shall not interfere with or interrupt normal school operations."

Specifically, on Thursday September 11, 2014 at 2:00PM and 3:01PM, during Math and Science / Social Studies respectively, Mr. Van Pelt drafted and forwarded electronic correspondence concerning union activities (concerning deduct days for an ETEA member) to ETEA President Bowden. B-28; B-32. Thereafter, on both Wednesday September 17th and Thursday September 18th during Math class, Mr. Van Pelt prepared and forwarded electronic correspondence concerning union activities (regarding teachers volunteering prep time to partake in professional development trains) to ETEA President Bowden. Then, on October 23, 2014 at 10:05AM, during Engrade Training, Mr. Van Pelt prepared and forwarded electronic correspondence to another teacher regarding the designation of a union representative for upcoming roundtable discussions. Finally, on Thursday October 23, 2014 at 12:13PM and 3:22PM, during Literacy Class and immediately following Science/Social Studies, Mr. Van Pelt prepared and forwarded electronic correspondence to ETEA President Bowden concerning union business (roundtable representatives and procedures for communications between ETEA representatives and Assistant Superintendent Beams). Mr. Van Pelt's defense to the foregoing allegations consists of a general assertion that his schedule changed on a daily basis, with a more specific claim that on September 11, 2014 "there was an afternoon assembly."

Importantly, however, said allegations were proved to be wholly without merit and further exposed Mr. Van Pelt as a dishonest and desperate person. Specifically, Ms. DeLuca testified that: (1) Mr. Van Pelt's schedule did not change at all between September 2014 and October 23, 2014; and (2) there was not an assembly on September 11, 2014, or any of the other dates that Mr. Van Pelt was determined to have engaged in union business during instructional time.

Accordingly, the Board has satisfied its burden in establishing that Mr. Van Pelt engaged in union business during instructional time on at least seven separate occasions. Notwithstanding the fact that the Board exposed Mr. Van Pelt as completely incredible, Mr. Van Pelt's baseless and self-serving allegation that his schedule changed on a daily basis, without a shred of evidence in support of same, is wholly insufficient to overcome the substantial evidence established by the Board.

The record indicates that Respondent Van Pelt has demonstrated a pattern of misconduct and insubordination over a protracted period of time. Based upon the egregiousness of Mr. Van Pelt's disciplinary record, it is both disturbing and unclear as to why his employment has not been terminated earlier. Without question, Mr. Van Pelt has displayed a troubling lack of patience for dealing with superiors and a consistent lack of professional judgment. More specifically, Mr. Van Pelt's disciplinary record reads as follows:

- A written reprimanded for misusing the district's email system in December 2005 (i.e., transmitting an email "which was not related to the educational mission of the Board, to every user in the school district"). B-33.

- Mr. Van Pelt refused to meet with former Superintendent Toth on three (3) separate occasions, prior to actually meeting with her, to discuss the foregoing issue. See B-33.

- In October 2006, Mr. Van Pelt attempted to intimidate and threaten Assistant Principal Rutan by stating "if I had a dog that shit over and over on my carpet, I would get rid of it." B-34.

- In or about July 2007 Mr. Van Pelt again demonstrated his unwillingness to cooperate with central administration by effectively refusing to be interviewed as a fact-witness in connection with an affirmative action investigation. B-35.

- In or about June 2007, Mr. Van Pelt was reprimanded for (a) possessing beer at the Rutgers Athletic Center during and/or shortly after the Edison High School Graduation Ceremony; and (b) arriving at the main office, the morning after graduation, and acting in a "belligerent, demanding, and loud manner," making the secretaries feel uncomfortable – resulting in a Detective being forced to escort Mr. Van Pelt from the premises. B-36.

- On or about August 20, 2007, Mr. Van Pelt's increments were withheld for the 2007-2008 school year. B-39.

- In or about September 28, 2007 Mr. Van Pelt received a written reprimanded for failing to "provide a signed Technology Agreement and Appendix A of the Alcohol and Drug Free Workplace." B-37.

- In or about June 2008, Mr. Van Pelt was arrested an issued a Temporary Restraining Order for physical assaulting his then wife and co-employee (Pursuant to the officer's police report, the victim suffered from visible bruises on her left arm, a swollen left cheek and blood in her left eye). B-46.

- As a result of the foregoing incident, Mr. Van Pelt entered into a consent order prohibiting him from contacting his wife and resulting in his transfer from Edison High School so he would not be in the same building as his wife. B-46.

- In or about June 2012, Mr. Van Pelt received a written reprimand for failing to provide a sufficient certification that an absence was due to a medical illness. Moreover, Dr. O'Malley expressed his concern with Mr. Van Pelt's attempt to supply a deficient and misleading doctor's note that was prepared by a family member. B-38

Despite receiving numerous reprimands, having an increment withheld and being warned that his behavior must improve, Mr. Van Pelt did not heed such advice. Rather, Mr. Van Pelt's poor behavior and incomprehensibly reckless judgment culminated with the events of October 23, 2014, during which he soared across all bounds of decency associated with any public school teacher. Most troubling though, in a bit of an ironic twist, Mr. Van Pelt actually engaged in the same sort of misconduct that resulted in his first written reprimand – i.e., a misuse of the District's network. Thus, Mr. Van Pelt has failed entirely to conform his behavior to any level of appropriateness. As such, his continued employment will only serve to further endanger the students and staff of the Edison Township School District.

Credibility is the value that the fact finder gives to the testimony of a witness. It contemplates an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Credible testimony must proceed from the mouth of the credible witness and must be such as common experience, knowledge and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. The Board cites judicial case law in this regard.

In deciding the facts of a case, the fact finder must decide which witnesses to believe and which witnesses not to believe based on the following factors: (1) interest in the outcome of this case; (2) witness' recollection; (3) ability to know what he/she was talking about; (4) contradictions or changes in testimony; (5) demeanor; (6) whether or not testimony makes sense; (7) reasonableness of testimony when considered in the light of other evidence. See, NJ Model Civil Jury Charge. Additionally, New Jersey law permits a fact finder to reject the entirety of a witness's testimony if a determination is made that the witness deliberately lied on any fact significant to the decision in the case.

Initially, all Respondents' display of remorse during the Hearing was incredible as the Board exposed the same glaring contradictions made by each Respondent. Respondents attempted to illustrate, through their testimony, remorse for their behavior during the Training. However, the authenticity of such remorse, only displayed to the person responsible for deciding their fate, after undergoing hours of preparation with their counsels, must certainly be undermined by the Respondents conduct (i.e., lack of remorse) during their suspension meetings with Dr. O'Malley, November 11, 2014 interviews with Ms. DeLuca, Sworn Answers to the Tenure Charges and Answers to Interrogatories.

Notwithstanding the lone admissions of making the comments in the Transcript, as well as other various innocuous admissions, Respondents uniformly and consistently denied the remaining substantive allegations made by the Board in the Sworn Tenure Charges. Id. Therefore, the weight given to Respondents' staged showing of remorse during the Hearing must certainly be weighed in light of their failure to exhibit the same remorse when meeting with Dr. O'Malley and Ms. DeLuca, filing their Answers to the Charges and serving their Answers to the Board's Interrogatories. Such behavior by the Respondents bolsters the Board's assertion that Respondents were only sorry they got caught, but not sorry for what they had done.

Next, Respondents' efforts to assert an expectation of privacy in defense of their actions during the Group Chat is unreasonable based on the record and the law – i.e., Board Policy 3321 expressly denies Board employees of any expectation of privacy when using the district's network; pursuant to state and federal law, when something is exposed to the public view, such as this Group Chat, same is not protected by an reasonable expectation of privacy. Thus, Respondents' efforts to push such an illogical argument/defense on this Tribunal illustrate Respondents' lack of credibility.

Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's lack of credibility is further borne from the unreasonableness of their defense to the Charge alleging that they made inappropriate comments directed towards special education / handicapped students – i.e., that their perceived anger towards Ms. Bleekinger's direction to label a group of students "low" triggered their barrage of insulting and demeaning commentary. This argument is irrational because: (1) the district's Assistant Superintendent / Director of Special Services informed Ms. DeLuca that the use of the designation "low" is an acceptable norm; (2) all Respondent's acknowledged and accepted the District's practice, as well as the nationwide practice, of using various tests that ultimately label the students as "low", "very low" and "average"; and (3) not one of the Respondents confronted Ms. Bleekinger during the Training about her student designations or raised a concern with the administration with regard to their accepted use of such offensive tests/terms.

Rather, only after they realized they were in trouble for making such offensive comments did they devise, between each other, this defense. Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's position on this issue is so contrary to reality, and therefore, so inherently unreasonable, that it should be entirely discredited. More importantly though, the unreasonableness of Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Lechelt's testimony on this issue illustrates their lack of candor and overall lack of credibility. With regard to Mr. Van Pelt individually, his lack of credibility must be also be determined as a result of his refusal and/or inability to be responsive to the Board's questions on cross-examination, his overall demeanor throughout this case (i.e., his constant interruptions, blurt-outs and curt exchanges with both the Arbitrator and the Board's counsel), and his extensive record of discipline throughout his employment with the Board (including his arrest and receipt of a temporary restraining order for physically assaulting his wife) – particularly his inability to concede same, despite an abundance of supportive testimonial and documentary evidence.

In fact, most telling perhaps was the testimony of Mr. Van Pelt's character witness – Christian Pedersen . He conceded that had he known about Mr. Van Pelt's lengthy disciplinary record he would not have testified that Mr. Van Pelt is someone with good character or someone who takes their job seriously.

Lastly, when engaging in credibility determinations related to each Respondent, it should not be lost on this Tribunal that all of the Respondents, rather than simply take ownership for their conduct, blamed and attacked others (i.e., Ms. Bleekinger and Ms. Battista), for causing these grown teachers to act in the manner they chose to act. More specifically, the notions that Ms. Bleekinger's use of a uniformly accepted student classification; or that Ms. Bleekinger was inadequately prepared for the presentation; or that Ms. Battista was a "peeping tom" with the intention of bringing trouble upon the Respondent's are so ostensibly absurd that the credibility of the persons making such statements must be gauged against the lunacy of same. In other words, a credible witness/person would not make such arguments.

Thus, the Board submits that this record is replete with reasons that should cause this Tribunal pause when considering whether Respondents provided credible testimony.

As a point of legal argument, the Board asserts that Respondents had no right to privacy when engaging in the Group Chat during the October 23, 2014 training session. Throughout this process, have asserted that they had a good faith belief that the Group Chat was private. More specifically, in concert, Respondents argued that if the chat rooms were open to the public, student privacy concerns under FERPA and state law would be triggered. However, Respondents' efforts to assert an expectation of privacy in defense of their actions during the Training are unavailing, as both the record and the law are fatal to such a defense. In fact, said argument is so suspect that it does nothing more than bolster the Board's assertion that Respondents are not remorseful for their conduct – i.e., despite the baselessness of the claim, Respondents have conspired to stick with the defense through the resolution of this matter.

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers And Resources by Teaching Staff Members, states – in relevant part – that "[the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Further, every District employee is aware that there is no expectation of privacy when using the District's computer network, and there is no program and/or policy that trumps same. More specifically, Respondents were actually informed during Today's Meet training that the program was not private.

Here, Respondents all executed "Important Board Policies, Regulations, and Mandated Communications" Form, within which Respondents agreed to review and conform to all Board Policies. More importantly, Mr. Van Pelt and Ms. Weber acknowledged reviewing and being familiar with the Board's Acceptable Use Policy, along with the Board's right to monitor their network activity. Simply put, there is no way the Board could have been more explicit with the reality that employees do not enjoy any expectation of privacy when using the District's network.

FERPA is a Federal Law that controls the disclosure of personally identifiable information from an eligible student's education records to a third party unless the eligible student has provided written consent. The applicable statute defines education records as those records, files, documents and other materials which: (1) contain information directly related to a student; and (2) are maintained by an educational agency or institution or by a person acting for such agency or institution. Importantly, without dispute, the Group Chat did not contain and/or reference specific students or information directly related to specific students. Further, the Board does not maintain the Group Chats and/or transcripts of the Chats, and there is simply no reason for Respondents to have thought otherwise. Thus, Respondents' efforts to grasp on to the protections of FERPA, despite the record evidencing that FERPA's application is unjustified, is merely an act of desperation.

A person cannot assert an expectation of privacy with regard to something exposed to the public view. There is no liability under the tort of invasion of privacy for observing a plaintiff or even taking his photograph while he or she is walking on a public highway, since he or she is not then in seclusion, and his or her appearance is public and open to the public eye. These premises are supported by judicial case law.

Here the record evidence is clear, Ms. Battista observed the conversation and identified the web address by viewing Ms. Lechelt's computer screen during a Training session. In fact, all Respondents engaged in the Group Chat on their computers in a room filled with thirty to forty other persons, with the screens open and on their desks for a two and a half hour period, during which they all, at one point or another, stood up and walked around, while not closing their computer screens. Had Respondents desired to avail themselves to an expectation of privacy, they surely would have found a way to be more discreet during the Group Chat. Thus, Respondent's expectation of privacy defense is contrary to well-established law. In fact, in the event this Tribunal feels compelled to give any deference to Respondents' FERPA based privacy argument – to which the Board contends none is warranted – Respondents' cavalier participation in the Group Chat during a training, visible to other members of the public, must trump any FERPA privacy considerations.

As to the charges serves on Respondents, the record confirms that the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondents are guilty of conduct unbecoming, insubordination and/or other just cause warranting dismissal. The infractions established in the record evidence cut to the core of Respondents' fitness to continue to teach. Unlike labor arbitration, this Tribunal's decision regarding any potential penalty must be first and foremost concerned with the welfare of students, not the employment rights of Respondent. There is ample, longstanding precedent for this proposition in the body of School Law in New Jersey that has developed over the last several decades, as well in the growing number of Tenure Hearing arbitral decisions under the recently revised Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TeachNJ Act").

With respect to just cause, in evaluating whether an employer has just cause to discipline an employee, Arbitrators follow guidelines similar to those utilized in Enterprise Wire Co., 46 LA 359, 363-64 (1966); Grief Brothers Cooperage Corp., 42 LA 555, 558 (1964). Consequently, it has been held that the employer should satisfy the conditions set forth in the above cases in order to prove "just cause" for the disciplining the employee.

The "inherent duties of a public employee include compliance with all reasonable rules and regulations, and duties arising from a fiduciary relationship to the public and from such duties as arise by the nature of the office held." Unless the penalty is unreasonable, arbitrary or offensively excessive under all of the circumstances, it should be permitted to stand. These statements have been well established by New Jersey courts.

Moreover, recent case law suggests that progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question because some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. For example, in American Arbitration Association Decision, 2010 AAA LEXIS 439, Arbitrator Renovitch acknowledged that extremely serious offenses usually justify the enforcement of a discharge.

The holding that dismissal was warranted in the cited case resulted from a Grievant failing to perform an end-of-run check, which resulted in a sleeping student being left on her school bus. In that case, the arbitrator enforced a summary dismissal. Arbitrators Tener, Dichter and Simon enforced summary dismissals in other cases that reflected other fact patterns.

Moreover, since the implementation of the TeachNJ Act, Arbitrators have dismissed teachers for engaging in inappropriate conduct that has reflected poorly on both the teacher and the school district. The cited decisions were all issued since 2012.

In anticipation of the cases Respondents will likely seek to rely upon to argue that their dismissal is not warranted in this matter, the Board asserts same are readily and easily distinguishable from the matter at bar based on discrepancies in fact and proofs.

Here, the just cause conditions have been satisfied: namely, Respondents were forewarned prior to the Group Chat that dismissal could result from misusing the District's computer network and violating various Board Polices and standards of expected behavior; Respondents conduct on October 23, 2014 violated established Board Policy and any reasonable expectations of employee conduct; Respondents' conduct was investigated fully; substantial evidence, including Respondents' acknowledgments of wrongdoing, admissions and a copy of the actual transcript, were obtained; and termination was reasonably related to the seriousness of Respondents' offenses (i.e., the duration and wholly inappropriate nature of the conversation, coupled with the grave lack of judgment displayed by Respondents) and the Respondents' past record. Specifically, Respondents' conduct with respect to the group chat, without the consideration of progressive discipline, rose above and beyond the level of egregiousness necessary for dismissal.

Accordingly, satisfaction of the just cause standard, along with the arbitral precedents, must result in the termination of Respondents. Their acts are egregious on their face. In fact, the totality of their conduct, and each specific charge considered alone, are more egregious than that deemed sufficient for dismissal in the above-cited precedents. Respondents violated board policies and the common decency expected of public school teachers, as illustrated in the record evidence, by misusing the District's network to mock, insult, harass and offend others (including special education students, the superintendent of schools, the Engrade Training presenter, females, older persons and each other), while creating a hostile and unhealthy work environment for the one person who openly observed same; continuing such conduct for a period of 2.5 hours during scheduled instructional time; failing to comprehend the seriousness of their conduct by constantly making excuses, placing the blame elsewhere and disingenuously declaring remorse only when face-to-face with the assigned arbitrator after being prepped by their counsel as to what this tribunal wants to hear; and, in the case of Mr. Van Pelt, admitting to masturbating on school property.

Respondents showed a complete lack of concern for the parents and students of the Edison Township School District, and a callous sense of desperation by attempting to attack and demonize the VICTIM – Ms. Battista (e.g., referring to her as a "peeping Tom", claiming that she went out of her way to discover their chat and ultimately blaming her for the trouble and embarrassment now endured).

The record, as discussed and documented above, clearly illustrates that Respondents recognize a large portion of their conduct was inappropriate. Specifically, Respondents concede, for the most part, that they misused the District's network and made regrettable comments about other persons and classifications of persons

It is well established in case law that the term "unbecoming conduct" is a broadly defined, elastic term, encompassing any conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and competence in the operation of public services. In hearings similar to this one, arbitrators have determined that conduct unbecoming a teacher has been found to include a broad range of behavior that impacts a teacher's ability to perform his duties or otherwise renders him unfit to have the responsibility to care for children. In this matter, Respondents have unmistakably breached the public trust placed in their position as teachers.

Mr. Van Pelt should be dismissed from his tenured position based on his pattern of misconduct over a protracted period of time. Charges VIII of the charges alleges that the acts of misconduct set forth in the Charges and the Counts, jointly and severally, manifest a series of ongoing infractions over an extended period of time, despite prior warnings, constituting a pattern of conduct unbecoming a teacher. This pattern warrants dismissal. Notwithstanding that each charge warrants a finding of conduct unbecoming a teacher and/or just cause for dismissal, when taken together, a pattern of unbecoming emerges sufficient to warrant Mr. Van Pelt's dismissal from his tenured position.

The Commissioner has confirmed that a pattern of conduct that persists over a number of years warrants dismissal, even if the individual charges standing alone would not. It cites numerous decisions in this regard.

Mr. Van Pelt's pattern of unbecoming conduct began during the 2005-06 school year and continued thereafter. The Board has shown that Mr. Van Pelt has not satisfied the standards of one whose profession is linked to the teaching and shaping of young minds , and who is held to a higher standard than is the general public. He has shown an unwillingness or inability to comply with prior warnings and has continued to engage in unbecoming conduct over and over again, culminating with the latest and perhaps most outrageous conduct. His actions directly injured his reputation, that of the district and the trust of the district's administration and parents.

Based on the foregoing, Respondents have failed to satisfy the standards of a profession predicated on public trust and respect. Mr. Van Pelt has done so time and again. He has been progressively disciplined and given repeated chances. He is not deserving of another one.

Regardless of the differences between Mr. Van Pelt and the other respondents, their misdeeds were not mere oversights or simple mistakes. His misconduct go to the heart of his character and fitness to be a public school teacher. He should be dismissed.

CONTENTIONS OF RESPONDENT:

Respondent argued as follows:

Picture a time before the internet, say 1980. A few teachers are involved in a private conversation during a training session. They whisper some comments back and forth as to their thoughts on some of the comments from the lecturer. They also throw some comedic barbs back and forth over the course of a few hours.

One person overhears the talking and shushes the group. The group lowers their voices but continue talking now and then. No one else in the room notices anything. The lone complainer is offended that the group did not adhere to her shushing and proceeds to listen in to their private conversation. Since the complainer was outside the range of the conversation, she sneaks up behind the group in an effort to listen in. During the course of this espionage, she hears multiple items out of context and complains to the Board about this conversation.

It is hard to believe that the above would be even considered to be grounds for termination. A transcript that, when taken out of context, is the basis of the entire case.

Throughout the arbitration, there were discussions of privacy which were downplayed by the Board due to the computer policy. This policy should be used only in so far as to prove that the individuals were chatting during portions of the training (not an uncommon occurrence). To allow the out of context chat transcript, reported by a hypersensitive individual, to be the basis for tenure charges is akin to allowing Big Brother into the school.

All of the participants testified that they believed the chat was private and would not be able to be accessed by any outside party. This was proven to be true, as the only one who accessed the chat was Ms. Battista, who testified to the leaning and focusing outside the norm in order to retrieve the chat room title.

This privacy breach goes beyond a mere computer policy, but rather encourages other teachers to in effect spy on their co-workers and report any alleged over-hearings. The individuals in this chat were not posting on a public website expressing their viewpoints to the public a la Facebook and Twitter, but were merely having a private chat.

It is undisputed and admitted that portions of the chat were offensive and inappropriate. However, are we at the point where we all need to examine our own private conversations at the work place? It is hard to believe that anyone who examines all of their conversations among friends would not, at one time or another, say something that they regret in jest.

No one is perfect and no one should be ultimately judged for jocular exchanges between consenting friends who are all adults. It must be noted that no students were involved or part of the chat in any way. It also should be noted that only one out of twenty five (25) teachers in the voluntary training were distracted or had any issue with the chat. To charge a teacher with termination under such circumstances sets a dangerous precedent where teachers and employees in a school would essentially be looking over their shoulder to see if Big Brother was indeed watching them and waiting to pounce on their private thoughts and conversations.

We ask that the Arbitrator keep an open mind and when reviewing the testimony, try to picture how people talk in private among friends.....and ask if you would like to be judged on a single documented conversation where there was thought to be complete privacy, whether there should be an expectation of it or not. Also, would you want to be judged, whether to be a competent employee or not, based upon an overheard private conversation with a friend.

This is how the Board wants to judge Tyler Van Pelt ("Van Pelt"). It is undisputed that Van Pelt participated in the chat. He has admitted such and has expressed remorse. Many of the items in the chat were inappropriate, but Van Pelt has explained that at no time were students involved or disparaged. Part of the problem with interpreting a conversation among friends as a third party is not being able to interpret the true intent of the parties. Through the testimony of Van Pelt and others, it is clear that the most serious accusation, disparaging students, has been explained for what it was – a mocking of the instructor for ridiculous categorization and not the students in any way. The rest of the conversation has also been exposed for what it was; jocular exchanges among friends.

While it was admitted to being inappropriate at times, it should not result in the loss of a promising career.

The Board also insists on viewing this incident with Van Pelt as some sort of pattern of wrong doing. The attempted bootstrapping of the Board is a desperate attempt to terminate Van Pelt. The other incidents pointed to by the Board are remote in time and were all dealt with in an appropriate manner, most without any type of formal discipline. There is no way that these past incidents resemble a pattern in any way. In fact, the loss of increment was not even a part of the tenure charges and as such may not be used against Van Pelt after the fact. If this was a significant event it would have been part of the charges.

When these charges are viewed in their proper context and without the manufactured "outrage" by the Board, we are left with reality. The reality of an excellent teacher who made the mistake of having an inappropriate conversation with friends during a training session. Van Pelt himself admits this is wrong. Van Pelt has made clear that it was an error in judgment and it will not happen again. However, to destroy this young man's career over an incident that has shown no direct harm except to a hypersensitive employee and bruised feelings of the Superintendent is not equitable. Van Pelt has paid for his actions and such conversation not in the presence of any student should not result in any further discipline.

It is important to note that Mr. Tyler Van Pelt ("Van Pelt") is an Elementary School Teacher with the Edison Township Board of Education, presently assigned to the fifth grade at the Lincoln School (TVP Tr. 72:7-8). Van Pelt has 15 years of experience as a teacher with significant experience in regular education and special education (TVP Tr. 72:11-75:5)

During his 15 years in teaching, Van Pelt has been evaluated as superior and outstanding on a consistent basis (TVP 75:12-84:1 and TVP Exhibit 1). Yet, neither Superintendent, Dr. O'Malley nor Administrator, Ms. DeLuca have been in Van Pelt's classroom despite his outstanding and acknowledged record (TVP Tr. 84:2-8 and TVP Tr. 85:13-15).

Nor, as the record states, have Dr. O'Malley and Ms. DeLuca taken into account Van Pelt's teaching record, commendations and accolades within their investigation and recommendation to pursue the tenure charges against him (DeLuca Tr. 154:1-155:22 and O'Malley Tr. 118:22-120:19).

Van Pelt's record outside the classroom is also remarkable working with "struggling" students, and their academic proficiencies (TVP Tr. 85:22-87:5 and 88:22-90:17). Van Pelt has been recognized by the State of New Jersey for its SGP rating system. In fact, in the two years that the State has done this, Van Pelt has been the ONLY teacher in his school to achieve a rating of "highly effective" (TVP Tr. 86:25-87:10 and 88:12-21).

Van Pelt has been bestowed with many commendations and accolades (Exhibit TVP 2). It is important to note that Dr. O'Malley did not take any of this into consideration (O'Malley Tr. 118:22-120:19) in formulating his decision as to the tenure charges. Neither did Ms. DeLuca in completing her investigation (DeLuca Tr. 154:13-155:22).

The incident that was the primary factor that led to the charges took place at a training session. Van Pelt initiated a chat room during the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training. He admits to this, as well as participation in the chat room throughout the 2.5 hour session (although his time dedicated to this chat was between 15 - 20 minutes).

The chat escalated, In fact, as to the issue, Group Labeling, as conveyed by the Training Presenter, and was the catalyst of Van Pelt continuing the Today's Meet chat. Van Pelt states, "What the presenter was putting forward struck a nerve in me....She was pitching a selling point ..... stating, you can label your kids low, and they won't see it." (TVP Tr. 97:9-98:1; 217:3-19 and 212:13-214:21).

In stating that his reaction to the presenter's labeling, Van Pelt conveyed that his (chat) response was "clumsy" and "ludicrous". He also stated that the presenter created an environment that he reacted to by his special education commentary within the transcript (Van Pelt Tr. 217:3-19). Van Pelt expressed extreme remorse for his inappropriate, ill-timed comments in reaction to the presenter's expressions of labels for students with disabilities (TVP Tr. 98:1-99:23).

As to Van Pelt initiating the "backchannel discussion", he again expresses extreme remorse and "would delete it in a heartbeat". And, he has expressed to every individual along the line his regret (TVP Tr. 103:13-25). Van Pelt thought the chat was private, as he was initially trained by Don Platvoet, District Staff Developer. Van Pelt conveyed that Platvoet stated the chat was "secure" for use with teachers and students (Van Pelt Tr. 246:23-247:4). Van Pelt thought it was "safe". Van Pelt validated this privacy after the fact by reviewing Today's Chat materials (See Lechelt Exhibit no. 2) as confirmation of what Mr. Platvoet stated (TVP Tr. 107:20-109:3 and 113:9-13). In addition, Van Pelt knew that in order to view the chat on one's computer screen, the specific and private address had to be typed in.

The Board called Mr. Platvoet, Professional Development Trainer, as a rebuttal witness. Mr. Platvoet stated that he did not convey an expectancy of privacy to his trainees. He considers the site public because the URL (address) can relate to any individual and anyone that has knowledge of that URI can access the site (It is noted that anyone who does not have the site address would not be able to access the site) (Platvoet Tr. 7:8-8:22).

It is important to note that the Board has endorsed all that was presented at the Training by Mr. Platvoet, through one of his supervisors, Steve Figruelli, Elementary Supervisor (Platvoet Tr. 12:19-22). As to Board document ED 1119, Platvoet is asked what is the meaning of HTTPS? He stated that he did not know. When asked if the "s" meant "secure", Platvoet stated that he did not know (Platvoet Tr. 15:21-17:25).

When questioned as to Board document ED 1123, Platvoet states that he used this slide during his training presentation which had "HTTPS, TodaysMeet.com" on the last line. Platvoet again stated that he did not know the meaning of HTTPS (Platvoet Tr. 18:1-19:25).

Finally, when questioned, "in a Today's Meet site, is it true the only way you could enter it is if you have the address?" Platvoet answers, "To the best of my knowledge, yes." Platvoet adds, "to access a particular chat room on Today's Meet, yes, you need the URL for that chat room" (Platvoet Tr. 21:9-20). Mr. Platvoet contradicts himself as to the privacy issue - during Direct Examination, he conveyed that the site is public, yet, he now states that you need a specific address (URL) to access a site. Therefore, the argument of privacy is bolstered by Mr. Platvoet's own words (Platvoet Tr. 22:13-18).

The chat itself was during the 2.5 hour training, however, Van Pelt confirms that his actual keyboarding time was 15-20 minutes while admitting that the chat room transcript was valid (TVP 116:3-20 and Board Exhibit 13). Ms. DeLuca did not look into the actual keyboarding time of Mr. Van Pelt (DeLuca Tr. 207:22-208:2). Neither did O'Malley (O'Malley Tr. 121:17-23). Nor did O'Malley access the chat site during his investigation (O'Malley Tr. 82:23-83:1).

As to the chat itself, 8 names are attributed to the comments therein. "Ms. Deluca's report fails to explain why there were only four (4) chat room participants' conduct being investigated.

Van Pelt, commenting on TVP Exhibit 3/Board Exhibit 10, Ms. Battista's Statement and Affidavit, has concerns with no. 4; her concerns that the teachers in the chat room were making fun of her; Van Pelt had never met Battista, nor had any knowledge of her presence behind them. In addition, Van Pelt challenges Ms. Battista's statements herein as inaccurate and not factual representations.

Van Pelt was interviewed by Affirmative Action Officer, Margaret DeLuca. He describes his meeting with DeLuca as being "guided through the chat" and he was honest and forthright (TVP Tr. 128:1-13). DeLuca took WRITTEN NOTES in response to Van Pelt's answers to her questions (TVP Tr. 128:14-23). DeLuca stated that she destroyed the written notes after she typed them; she never produced her actual hand written notes of the Van Pelt interview (DeLuca Tr. 60:24-61:2 and 78:22-82:1 and 104:6-10). O'Malley stated that he never told DeLuca to destroy her handwritten notes, nor did he instruct her to preserve her notes (O'Malley Tr. 115:23-116:7). Therefore, the integrity of the interview and its transfer to Ms. DeLuca's notes (now typewritten) has been compromised.

In response to Ms. DeLuca's testimony that he was not remorseful, Van Pelt stated, "Its not true". He continued by conveying, "The notion of, you know, we're sorry only because we got caught of this widespread testimony about a lack of remorse on all individuals. My contention is two part with this notion that DeLuca testified": 1. Short of falling to our knees and resigning...in tears, I don't know what we could have done to express remorse to satisfy Ms. DeLuca; 2. The second notion was ... that we were caught. Van Pelt's understanding was an individual (Ms. Battista) was offended and brought an affirmative action complaint. Van Pelt doesn't know how else he could have expressed remorse to satisfy the Board's understanding of his regret, aside from being honest and trying to cooperate to the fullest extent, which he did, as well as deeply apologizing for any offense that he made (TVP Tr. 129:9-130:14).

As to the Affidavit of Ms. DeLuca (Exhibit TVP 5), Van Pelt strongly objects to her conclusions as forwarded to Superintendent O'Malley. Specifically, Ms. DeLuca, under oath, swears to the following in no. 8, ".....I personally entered https://todaysmeet.com/engraderocks and accessed a copy of the relevant transcript to confirm it was open to the public. I had no difficulties accessing same." DeLuca does not note that it was ONLY because she had the specific address for the chat site that she was able to access the site. Therefore, her statement was not truthful.

As to TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14, Ms. DeLuca's questions for Van Pelt, her typed notes cannot be accurate representations of her handwritten notes. In fact, these "misinterpretations" are critical to the record herein. Van Pelt states, "There are a number of patently false statements attributed to me. Questions that are not accurate in terms of how they were asked. There are a number of incomplete responses contained herein:

Page one, how the chat works, TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14 - DeLuca asked Van Pelt if he was surprised that she was able to access this chat by simply going online. It is obvious that DeLuca needed the code/chat room address to gain access or she would not be able to gain access (Van Pelt Tr. 135:3-136:1 and DeLuca Tr. 164:6-165:9). Therefore, without the code/address, the chat room was private and secure. In addition, Van Pelt testified that he, as well as the other Respondents had their confirmation of privacy from Exhibit Lechelt 2 (Van Pelt Tr. 207-16-208:17).

On page 2, TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14, Van Pelt points out where DeLuca's entries deviate from the actual interview as it occurred. Van Pelt conveys that DeLuca "wildly misinterpreted" his responses as to "short bus kids". DeLuca's entry was a "gross mischaracterization" and "oversimplification" of the response he provided to her at that time.

Also on page 2, bullet no. 7, TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14, Van Pelt commenting as to "you can tell by the lady's walk", Ms. DeLuca was making light of the fact that he was trying to be polite and explain the double entendre for a romantic interlude

On page 3, TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14, Van Pelt states as to the "eating chicken" comment that DeLuca stated that his response was about oral sex and/or smoking marijuana. All that Van Pelt was conveying was his interpretation of a song by the Doors, which refers to a gentleman eating chicken - he treats women better - so he gets the chicken and then when she comes home, they get the pork and beans. He gets the good food, they get the scrap.

Also on page 3, TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14, Van Pelt admits to the posts in reference to Supt. O'Malley. Van Pelt states, "what I said was regrettable again and this is an incomplete answer. I expressed my apologies for making that statement". Van Pelt also expressed to Ms. DeLuca that's not in keeping with his character. Not only do (I) regret it, (I) felt it was cowardly (Van Pelt Tr. 139:19-140:4). This was missing from DeLuca's document.

On page 4, TVP Exhibit 6/Board Exhibit 14, Van Pelt elaborates as to DeLuca's entry that he admitted to her allegations of masturbation. He states, "This was the most profound inaccuracy of the entire transcript." Van Pelt asserted that he was politely trying to address her questions and comments. "She had already had these slang interpretations." Van Pelt explained to DeLuca that this was a reference to a euphemism [TVP Tr. 9:14]. And she did aptly note that he didn't masturbate. But she also asserted that she was saying "TMI - too much information". DeLuca then stated that Van Pelt said, under his breath, that he did masturbate, as she categorized in her final report to the Superintendent which gave rise to the masturbation charge. There were no follow up questions and Van Pelt emphatically denies making any admission of this type (Van Pelt Tr. 141:1-142:1). The Board presented no proofs as to the support of their masturbation charge.

Van Pelt then concluded the DeLuca interview by stating his regret and remorse, commenting on his late brother who had special needs, as well as his disabled step-son. He also conveyed to DeLuca that this would never happen again and he understood that it was ill-worded, absolutely regrettable. (Van Pelt Tr. 142:3-143-16). Of course, this did not make it into Ms. DeLuca's notes.

Van Pelt commented, as to DeLuca's "conclusions" of her teacher interviews that no teacher other than Ms. Battista reported an alleged disturbance of any kind. Early in the Training, Ms. Lechelt turned in her seat. When she did, Ms. Battista saw comments on Ms. Lechelt's computer screen which allegedly offended Ms. Battista. This was a personal choice by Ms. Battista (Battista Tr. 107:25-108-3). In order to view the screen that the presenter was using, Ms. Battista had to lean slightly to the right. Instead, she chose to reposition herself to the left to monitor and photograph the chat (Battista Tr. 126:4-127:24). More specifically, despite having a direct line of sight to the presenter, Ms. Battista took her iPhone out, repositioned herself to the left, moved forward towards Ms. Lechelt and Ms. Lechelt's computer, zoomed in on Ms. Lechelt's screen; and took several pictures of the screen (Board Exhibit 7, pp. 2-9; Battista Tr. 108-7, 126:2-127:24). It is clear that Ms. Battista wilfully took these actions on her own.

Ms. Einhorn, sitting right next to Ms. Battista, is not even on DeLuca's interview list. Ms. Einhorn was interviewed by her building principal and did not report any disturbance or anything of concern (DeLuca Tr. 171:22-172:15). No teacher interviewed by Ms. Battista's school principal, Mike Duggan, had seen anything (DeLuca Tr. 51:17-52:2). These interviews by Ms. DeLuca should be reason enough to impeach Ms. Battista's testimony as to her discomfort and being ill at ease.

As to Ms. DeLuca's Affirmative Action Report to the Superintendent, TVP Exhibit 8/ Board Exhibit 26, Van Pelt comments on her conclusion that he should face the most severe consequences. However, Ms. Deluca's report contained no factual findings nor any conclusions she reached after interviewing those she deemed were the relevant witnesses. Ms. Deluca's report does not list or discuss any factor she took into consideration when recommending the "most severe consequences" for all Respondents. No conclusions were discussed with Van Pelt by the Superintendent or DeLuca, herself. The first time he saw these were subsequent to the tenure charges.

As to DeLuca's statement that "teachers may be in violation of other Board policies (4 policies listed), Van Pelt states that he was never contacted by anyone as to those allegations, yet he is accused of violating those policies within the tenure charges against him (Van Pelt Tr. 150:2-152:1). Ms. DeLuca conveys that she did not investigate these 4 policies (DeLuca Tr. 201:15-6). Supt. O'Malley claims that he did an investigation thereto, however, there is no evidence of this whatsoever (O'Malley Tr. 33:13-23).

In addition to recognizing his sustained remorse, Van Pelt has sustained significant qualitative and quantitative damages, and will sustain further penalty should the arbitrator render his decision beyond Van Pelt's current suspension from the classroom.

In addition, mending professional and family relationships will be needed and Van Pelt is ready to move into that arena. His marriage has dissolved and this incident has caused no chance at any reconciliation; he has special needs members of his family which he will need to address.

Any increment withholding will be at a loss of several thousands of dollars for one or more years. And should the arbitrator sustain the tenure charges against Van Pelt, his career as an outstanding teacher could be over. The impact of a decision to terminate Van Pelt's employment would have the effect of ending his teaching career. Mr. Van Pelt's conduct herein does not warrant this harsh penalty. With not only a financial impact, but his teaching certification and pension standing at risk, Van Pelt would be an endangered species, at best.

The Board has not documented any mitigating circumstances, Van Pelt's expressions of remorse, nor did the Board acknowledge the gravity of his misconduct, as Van Pelt surely did. The Board repeatedly exaggerated the conduct herein by introducing allegations against him when they did not include these allegations within the Charges against Van Pelt.

The bottom line is that the record shows that Van Pelt is an outstanding teacher. That must be given serious recognition as to the scales of justice (Van Pelt Tr. 152:2-156:20).

As to the specific written tenure charges filed against him, Van Pelt expressed concern that he has been singled out as a "union representative" therein (Van Pelt Tr. 158:20-159:12). Supt. O'Malley, when testifying as to Van Pelt's union leadership position, becomes evasive as to why his union status is even mentioned within the charges (O'Malley Tr. 125:19-128:16).

As to Charge I, in addition to his prior testimony beginning with Charge One, Van Pelt added that he was surprised that the Presenter, Sara Bleekinger, did not offer any concern of her own (Van Pelt Tr. 160:14-161:7). In addition, Van Pelt states that he never used the presenters name, but he would agree that the comments were inappropriate (Van Pelt Tr. 238:8-23). He did not make comments to the presenter, but admits to making comments about her (Van Pelt Tr. 245:5-8 and 272:1-7).

As to Count Two, Special Ed Students, Van Pelt stands on his prior testimony conveyed (Van Pelt Tr. 161:19-23).

As to Count Three, his commentary regarding the Superintendent, in addition to his prior testimony, Van Pelt sincerely apologized for those comments and he regrets them (Van Pelt Tr. 161:24-162:2). He denies making any derogatory comment to the Superintendent, but admits making the comments about the Superintendent (Van Pelt Tr. 244:17-245:3 and 272:1-7).

As to Count Four, re: Ms. Battista, Van Pelt offers that this count is false; that he made no comment directed at Ms. Battista and he was unaware of her comments (Van Pelt Tr. 162:3-8).

As to Ms. Battista, the parties on either side of her, Ms. McKenna and Ms. Einhorn did not report any disturbance. Ms. Battista reported to Ms. DeLuca that when she was sitting normally, the computer screen of Ms. Lechelt was in her direct line of sight. Ms. Lechelt was sitting directly in front of her, in a chair, with her computer screen on the table in front of her. Therefore, Ms. Battista would not be able to see the screen upon her normal seating position.

When Ms. Battista testified under cross by counsel for Ms. Lechelt that she saw the phrase "short bus kids", it occurred at the moment when Lechelt turned her body and "shot Battista a look" after being "shushed" - yet JB (Mr. Bauza) posts as to the "shushing" in the Today's Meet transcript, and it is separate from the "short bus kids" comment by 8 minutes according to the time stamps. This further impugns Battista's credibility and "reasonableness"

It was also damning that when Ms. Lechelt posted "looks like a turtle", Battista testified that she thought turtle meant "penis" - Battista then goes on to state, "Most of it [the transcript] was open to interpretation". How reasonable is it for one to be offended by text when one admits said text is "open to interpretation," particularly when one doesn't know the context for the text (Battista Tr. 138:14-139:6).

As to Ms. McKenna's comments, she chose to look away and not see Ms. Lechelt's screen. Ms. DeLuca was asked,, "did it ever occur to you, in your mind at all, that Ms. Battista had an atypical idiosyncratic reaction to what was happening?" Ms. DeLuca stated that, "No, it never occurred to me. She was legitimately upset".

Ms. DeLuca stated that she could not see Ms. Battista's pictures (of the computer screen) as they were blurry. And, in the first photo of the series, Ms. Battista could not see the screen at all as Ms. Lechelt was positioned between her screen and Ms. Battista. This calls into question that Ms. DeLuca did not take into consideration that Ms. Battista made it her business to look around Ms. Lechelt to see what was on the screen.

Ms. DeLuca did not think that was odd as she stated that Ms. Battista was trying to get a picture because nobody would believe her. Then, Ms. DeLuca was asked if she took into account the reasonableness of Ms. Battista's response in light of Ms. McKenna's response that Ms. Battista seemed consumed by the chat conversation.

Ms. DeLuca is then asked as to the severe and pervasiveness of the actions therein within her role of an investigator. Ms. McKenna is the reasonable woman; Ms. Battista is not. As the Board cited throughout the charges, they repeatedly said this was public. If only the two women saw the chat, then, it is not public. If the two woman saw the same snippets of the chat initially, the question is, ultimately, the Board of accusing these people of engaging in sexual harassment, and is framing a charge that they're guilty of sexual harassment. If the conduct is so severe and pervasive that a reasonable woman would just choose to look elsewhere, its relevant and probative. As such, the Board cannot prove the charge that this was public. The question is, did you consider whether Ms. Battista's reaction was mainstream or idiosyncratic (DeLuca Tr. 279:9-297:13). Even Supt. O'Malley admits that no other teacher, but Ms. Battista, stated that they could not concentrate/could not hear the presenter (O'Malley Tr. 85:23-86:2).

When asked of the two people that viewed the screen, did he take into consideration that one was offended and one was not, and how Ms. Battista came to see what was on the screen via her cellphone pictures, the Supt. conveyed that was all he needed (O'Malley Tr. 113:2-114:7). See additional commentary within the legal analysis.

As to Count Five, comments as to unidentified employees in the training, Van Pelt disagrees that the chat was visible to Ms. Battista and others. No other person, but Ms. Battista, made this claim. Van Pelt never named any individual therein. His comments would be considered vague at best therein (Van Pelt Tr. 162:9-17 and 239:3-17).

As to Count Six, inappropriate and offensive comments between each other, Van Pelt offers that no participant within the chat was offended by each other's comment (Van Pelt Tr. 162:18-24).

In summary to these Counts, Ms. DeLuca conveys that the presenter was not offended. Ms. Beams was not offended, Ms. Patuco was not offended, every other district employee was not offended, nor were parents offended as to her affirmative action investigation. Only after the fact complaints were conveyed by some parents to Ms. Beams, however, neither she nor Ms. DeLuca conveyed these to Mr. Van Pelt (DeLuca Tr. 202:7-25:19).

As to Charge II, Disruption of Professional Development Training, Van Pelt relies on his previous comments, especially Exhibit TVP 7, wherein Ms. DeLuca's and the Principal's interviews of the teachers in attendance showed no one but Ms. Battista indicated any disturbance.

As to Charge III (Failure to Pay Attention), Van Pelt asserts that he did pay attention. There may have been short moments of keyboarding time during the 2.5 hour training. As those moments occurred, Van Pelt still paid attention to the training program (Van Pelt Tr. 239:18-240:9).

As to Charge IV, Misuse of the District's Computer Network, Van Pelt denies and relies on his previously cited testimony

As to Charge V, Masturbating in or around Board Property, Van Pelt offers discrepancies as to his interview with Ms. DeLuca as well as the discrepancies within her report (TVP Exhibit 6). In addition, he objects to the language within this charge to be "presumably" to masturbate (Van Pelt Tr. 162:25-163:164:1). As the Arbitrator notes, this must be proven. Also, the Board attempts to "pile on" by attempting to link a far fetched allegation of a "sticky substance" on gloves left in Van Pelt's classroom.

As to Charge VI, Violations of District Policies, Van Pelt "does not recall" any specific policy presentations by his Principal, Ms. Cavuto. Van Pelt does admit to signing the policy awareness document but notes that there was never any District follow up at all (Van Pelt Tr. 164:2-165:2). Ms. DeLuca, when questioned herein, states that she never discussed any of these policies with Mr. Van Pelt, she never checked (she did not look into it) if Van Pelt's principal discussed any of these policies at a faculty meeting (DeLuca Tr. 208:3-209:25). Also, Supt. O'Malley states, upon testifying as to the Use of Computer Policy (Board Exhibit 24), these policies were not distributed to teaching staff members, nor was there specific training as to what not to do with the computers (O'Malley Tr. 77:1-80:4).

As to harassment, Ms. DeLuca disagrees as to what she needs to know about harassment. She states that she needs to know the Board policy. There in no "reasonable woman" standard within the policy. One must question Ms. DeLuca's training of same when there is consensual participation in conduct. Ms. DeLuca indicated that she took her original handwritten notes, then transposed same into her report.

Specific thereto, Ms. DeLuca's typed notes inaccurately described what Ms. Battista was wearing during the Training. In her typed notes of her October 30-31, 2014 interview of Ms. Battista, Ms. Deluca stated that (Battista Tr. 130:8-9; Deluca Tr. 269:14-270:17) Ms. Battista told her she was wearing a red dress in the Training. However, Ms. Battista was wearing a red sweater (Battista Tr. 130:8-9; Deluca Tr. 269:14-270:17). This is material because Ms. Battista erroneously thought that Ms. Lechelt and others were talking about her in the chat when they referred to a woman in the second row wearing a red T-shirt even though she was sitting in the fifth row, wearing a sweater, not a red dress (Deluca Tr. 265-7 to 267-3). The inconsistency between Ms. DeLuca's alleged written notes and her typed notes are compromised.

Van Pelt denies violating the affirmative action policy and relies on his previous testimony herein. In addition, Ms. Deluca was supposed to investigate whether Respondents violated the Board's affirmative action policy (Board Exhibit 20). On her own, without the Board's direction, Ms. Deluca, in her report, suggested additional Board policies that she felt Respondents had violated (Deluca Tr. 200:20- 202:6). Within said policy is the mandate that "The Board shall provide professional training to all certificated and non-certificated school staff members on a continuing basis.....". That has not happened (Board Exhibit 20, page 2, para. 3).

It is noted that the Board's focus was on the sexual harassment claims of Ms. Battista. There was no evidence to sustain that charge against Van Pelt. The conduct during the training was neither severe or pervasive which had the effect of "unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile or offensive environment..." (Board Policy 3362/Exhibit 21).

With respect to Count 4 , Violation of Code of Ethics Policy , the Superintendent testifies as to Board Exhibit 22, the policy. He bases his statement of a violation as to, "the educator shall observe every effort to raise professional standards, to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons" (O'Malley Tr. 42:1-19). Other than this statement, the Board does not offer anything into evidence to prove this charge. In addition, there has been no evidence produced that any "reasonable person" would have found the actions of Van Pelt to be hostile and offensive and there has been no citing of "repeated malicious conduct". As stated within the policy, there has been no "deliberate actions", "intentional actions", "exclusions", "denials", "misrepresentations", or any "disclosures of pupil information".

As to Count 5, Violation of Inappropriate Staff Conduct Policy, this policy, Board Exhibit 23, was cited against Van Pelt referring to conduct, including the use of emails or social networking sites "that is directed and/or available to pupils or for public display". Van Pelt's role in what he thought was a private chat did not result in the above requisite conduct. This chat was not accessible to anyone who did not have the specific address. But for Ms. Battista's idiosyncratic conduct and her perception that she was being singled out, there would not have been anyone who saw/knew about the statements within the chat.

This Charge cannot be sustained as their proofs do not confirm the allegation of insubordination and misconduct, in light of the fact that the Charge maintains that Respondents' communications "were available to pupils and for public display." This is not true. There has been no evidence produced that any "reasonable person" would have found the actions of Van Pelt to be hostile and offensive and there has been no citing of "repeated malicious conduct".

The Board positions the same conduct as multiple violations. This is not so Count 6 alleges a violation of the healthy workplace policy. As to Board Exhibit 25/Policy 3351, the requirement therein is, "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect". The policy cites the conduct of an employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment".

There has been no evidence produced that any "reasonable person" would have found the actions of Van Pelt to be hostile and offensive. The proofs herein indicate that the chat was neither severe nor pervasive, and was not accessible to the public (one needed to have the specific address of the chat). Ms. Battista's actions, as described herein, indicate that she was unreasonable and idiosyncratic in her actions.

The Board positions the same conduct as multiple violations. This is not so. Therefore, the Board cannot sustain its Charge of insubordination and misconduct against Van Pelt.

With respect to Count 7, New Jersey case law clearly demonstrates, when teacher usage of school computers has been found to violate board policies, the violation of the policies, on its own, is not sufficient to support terminating the teacher's employment. The Board positions the same conduct as multiple violations. This is not so. Therefore, the Board cannot sustain its Charge of insubordination and misconduct against Van Pelt.

Charge VII alleges a violation of the collective bargaining agreement. Van Pelt amplifies that the District reliance on his block schedule is flawed. He did not send the emails during student instructional time. When questioned, Ms. DeLuca admitted that she did not check into the accuracy of her claim as Van Pelt's student instructional time can change on a daily or minute to minute basis (Van Pelt Tr. 165:3-167:2 And 263:10-269:19).

In another bite at the apple, the Board called Ms. DeLuca as a Rebuttal Witness. There can be no confusion as to Ms. DeLuca's testimony. She did not check Mr. Van Pelt's schedule for any deviation or disturbance to the normal schedule as she alleged Van Pelt sent these emails during instructional time. Therefore, Charge Seven should not be sustained, as well as not be included in any pattern of alleged discipline as by the Board in Charge Eight.

As to the final Charge VIII, Pattern of Unbecoming Conduct, Insubordination and/or other Just Cause over a Protracted Period of Time, Van Pelt relies on his representations herein, as well as emphasizing that the three (3) events actually cited by the Board within the Tenure Charges against him, are ministerial, incomplete (Van Pelt's missing response to the absent note dockage) and Remote in Time. Therefore, the Board has not met its burden of proving any pattern whatsoever.

The Board alleges that Mr. Van Pelt has been engaged in a course of misconduct extending over a protracted period of time, such that, his pattern of misconduct, jointly and severally, constitutes unbecoming conduct and manifestly demonstrates his unfitness to serve in a position of educational leadership, warranting his dismissal. More specifically, the Board cites within the Charge, "All of the allegations and facts set forth in the above Background Information, Charges and Counts are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein." (See Charge VIII, lines 1-2).

A complete review of the Background Information, Charges and Counts reveal only 3 cited allegations of Van Pelt's allegedly "imperfect record of employment, which Van Pelt vigorously rejects. These three citations are ministerial, incomplete, not disciplinary in nature, and remote in Time, to be further discussed herein, and, therefore, do not create any pattern of misconduct, whatsoever.

The Board then states, referring to these 3 allegations, "Perhaps, most troubling is that the foregoing disciplinary action taken against Mr. Van Pelt has not served to modify and/or improve his conduct moving forward. Rather, it appears to have emboldened him, particularly in light of his initiation of and participation in the egregious conversation that lies at the heart of the herein Charges". Most important to this issue of establishing a pattern against Van Pelt, is that the Superintendent did review Van Pelt's personnel file, as well as reviewing the personnel file of Van Pelt with the Board attorney. For the Board to exclude the listed incidents/allegations from the Charges is a blatant omission. The Board cannot be permitted to "back fill" this grave error of omission. They had access to any and all of Van Pelt's personnel documents (O'Malley Tr. 16:20-23).

As to this Charge, the Pattern, the arbitrator, during a lengthy colloquy, stated that each charge must be proven. Should the charge be proven, then the arbitrator will consider a penalty. If the charge is not proven, there would not be a penalty imposed (Van Pelt Tr. 24:8-28:5).

In the State of New Jersey, a tenured teacher shall not be dismissed from his or her position or reduced in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. A petitioning board of education has the burden of proving tenure charges brought against a respondent by the preponderance of the competent and credible evidence. In re: Tenure Hearing of Randall N. Kavet, Dist. of the City of New Brunswick, Middlesex Cty., OAL Docket Nos. EDU 13695-09 and EDU 1539-10, (Aug. 19, 2010). Van Pelt argues that it is questionable if the Board is able to prove unbecoming conduct, however, it is clear that the Board fails to meet the high threshold to establish termination as a penalty.

The Fulcomer case establishes the test as to the penalty in matter such as the one at bar. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967). The Court broke the test down to two elements: (1) Did the employee engage in conduct unbecoming a teacher? and (2) If so, does the misconduct proven warrant the penalty of termination of employment or some lesser penalty? The following factors are to be considered when deciding the proper penalty under the Fulcomer standard:

- impact of the decision on the respondent's teaching career;
- the longevity of the respondent's career;
- the respondent's otherwise good teaching record;
- the respondent's unquestioned teaching ability;
- the absence of discipline by the school board during employment;
- the absence of past increment withholdings;
- the nature and gravity of the offenses under all the circumstances involved;
- evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation, and
- any harm or injurious effect which the teacher's conduct may have had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

Id. at 422.

When reviewing the above factors, it is clear that the Board fails to meet its burden for conduct unbecoming as well as the high bar required to terminate. As noted above, the Board cannot meet the Fulcomer standards

The Board, during the hearing, attempts to establish an allegation that Van Pelt was recommended for an increment withholding (Board Ex. 36). The Board's exhibit did not show any discipline or record of an increment withholding. The exhibit was only a recommendation. This was eight years ago for an allegation not involving students or instruction. The Board did not choose to list this within the charges against Van Pelt.

The nature and gravity of the offense under review of all circumstances is again to be viewed in Van Pelt's favor. The remote in time offenses have been debunked above as mere window dressing by the Board in an attempt to establish a pattern that doesn't exist. The actual alleged offenses all relate from the chat.

It should be noted in Van Pelt's favor that this chat was at a voluntary training session away from any and all students. There are absolutely no allegations that Van Pelt or any of the respondents interacted inappropriately towards or in front of any student. The discussion took place within the context of all consenting adults who presumed that such discussion was private. No comments were made to any individual outside the consenting friends.

The most serious allegations resulting from the chat were as to certain comments regarding class of students; comments toward the Superintendent and certain jokes/commentary with sexual innuendos. Privacy is an essential theme in this case. Despite the Board's self-serving policies entered into evidence, there is case law that establishes that Van Pelt had a legitimate expectation of privacy. The computer policy (Board Ex. 21) is a broad overreaching policy that does not necessarily address all contingencies. While the entire chat clearly did not have advanced educational purposes, portions were in relation to the training session and the discussions stemming from such instructor commentary. As such, there is an issue whether some content within the overall discussion violated such policy.

It has been found that a breach of policy with regard to use of computers does not necessarily justify an employer's claim of ownership to personal communications and information accessible therefrom or contained therein. Stengart v. Loving Care Agency, Inc. 408 NJ Super 54, 70 (App Div. 2009).

Computers are provided in almost all areas and types of employment. Computer use and communication through such communication is common. In the neighboring jurisdiction of New York, the Court in Thyroff recognized that a computer setting constitutes little more than a file cabinet for personal communication. Thyroff v. Nationwide Mut Ins. Co, 8 N.Y. 3d 283 (2007).

The court stated that even while a legitimate business purpose could support a search of such computer, when an employer examines documents stored on a computer it's akin to rifling through a folder containing an employee's private papers or reaching in and examining the contents of an employee's pockets. Stengart at 69.

A policy imposed by an employer purporting to transform all private communications into company property merely because the company owned the computer used to make such private communications during work hours furthers no legitimate business interest. Id. At 71. The only legitimate interest for the company is that the employee may be engaging in business other than company business (i.e.: personal matters during work hours), however the right to discipline or terminate does not extend to the confiscation of the employee's personal communications. Id.

It is undisputed that the chat in question was meant and believed to be a private conversation between the participants. Van Pelt has acknowledged that portions of the chat were not related to educational purposes. Aside from this general fact, the content of the chat should not be a part of the consideration for discipline as it would breach his right to privacy.

That being said, it is fair to say that participating in other personal matters during the training session is a wrongful act, it is certainly not an act that would raise to the level of imposing serious discipline. If this is the case, then a floodgate of discipline should open to every teacher who uses his or her cell phone in any way (including Ms. Battista) during working hours.

It is only the content of the chat which the Board is relying on as the crux of its argument for discipline against Van Pelt. Regardless, if the chat haven was provided by the school, it is clear that the participants had an expectation of privacy and as such the information within the chat should not be considered negatively against Van Pelt. It was clearly established at the hearing that one needs the specific chat address to have access thereto.

The facts at hand are akin to four teachers having a private discussion with no intention of broadcasting these thoughts outside the individuals participating. Despite the Board's efforts to establish the chat room as "accessible to the public", it was exposed as wrong with the admissions that one would have to know the group name in order to access the chat. The required group name is not available on Google or any public information. The only way to have the group name is to be an invited participant or an uninvited individual peering over the shoulders of the invited individuals as Ms. Battista.

Enforcing any discipline based on Ms. Battista's actions is ratifying a quasi-police state in the schools where other teachers, administration and students are encouraged to spy on their peers private conversations in hopes of uncovering any type of off the cuff commentary to be used against the targeted individuals.

In its tenure charges as well as throughout the proceedings, the Board alleges that Van Pelt's conduct constituted "sexual harassment". While the Board alleges that such harassment allegations were based upon the Board policy, Board Exhibit 21, it is clear that such policy language mirrors the legal case law standard for sexual harassment as outlined in Lehman v. Toys R Us. As such, it is logical to analyze the facts at hand against the legal standard for sexual harassment. Lehmann v. Toys 'R' Us, Inc., 132 N.J. 587 (1993).

As there are no allegations of quid pro quo harassment, the issue is whether the actions of Van Pelt created a hostile work environment. In order to state a claim for hostile work environment sexual harassment, a female plaintiff must allege conduct that occurred because of her sex and that a reasonable woman would consider sufficiently severe or pervasive to alter the conditions of employment and create an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment. Id.

For the purposes of establishing and examining a cause of action, the test can be broken down into four prongs: the complained-of conduct (1) would not have occurred but for the employee's gender; and it was (2) severe or pervasive enough to make a (3) reasonable woman believe that (4) the conditions of employment are altered and the working environment is hostile or abusive. However, the second, third, and fourth prongs, while separable to some extent, are interdependent. One cannot inquire whether the alleged conduct was "severe or pervasive" without knowing how severe or pervasive it must be. The answer to that question lies in the other prongs: the conduct must be severe or pervasive enough to make a reasonable woman believe that the conditions of employment are altered and her working environment is hostile. Id at 604.

The fact patterns of many cases suggest, however, that most plaintiffs claiming hostile work environment sexual harassment allege numerous incidents that, if considered individually, would be insufficiently severe to state a claim, but considered together are sufficiently pervasive to make the work environment intimidating or hostile. Id.

Rather than considering each incident in isolation, courts must consider the cumulative effect of the various incidents, bearing in mind "'that each successive episode has its predecessors, that the impact of the separate incidents may accumulate, and that the work environment created may exceed the sum of the individual episodes.'" Burns v. McGregor Elec. Indus., 955 F.2d 559, 564 (8th Cir.1992) (quoting Robinson v. Jacksonville Shipyards, 760 F.Supp. 1486, 1524 (M.D.Fla.1991)).

Therefore, a plaintiff in a hostile work environment sexual harassment case establishes the requisite harm if she shows that her working conditions were affected by the harassment to the point at which a reasonable woman would consider the working environment hostile. Id.

A hypersensitive employee might have an idiosyncratic response to conduct that is not, objectively viewed, harassing. Allegations of such non-harassing conduct do not state a claim, even if the idiosyncratic plaintiff perceives her workplace to be hostile, because the complained-of conduct, objectively viewed, is not harassment, and the workplace, objectively viewed, is not hostile. Id at 613.

The Board attempts to establish a violation of sexual harassment through both the content of the chat as well as its effect on Ms. Battista.

Our courts have also noted that "it will be a rare and extreme case in which a single incident will be so severe that it would, from the perspective of a reasonable woman, make the working environment hostile," but it can occur. The New Jersey Supreme Court ruled in Taylor v. Metzger, 152 N.J. 490 (1998), that a supervisor's reference to an African-American subordinate as a "jungle-bunny," to her face and in front of witnesses, was determined to be one of those "rare and extreme cases" envisioned by the Lehmann Court where one incident could create a hostile working environment.

In that case, however, the kind of racial slur used by the employee's supervisor was an egregious manifestation of bigotry and unlawful discrimination known to our culture; it was viewed as the "extreme case" where an isolated incident might be sufficiently severe or pervasive to state an actionable claim. Though Taylor was a race discrimination case, it can be imputed to a sexual harassment hostile working environment.

Normally, a plaintiff is required to adduce evidence of "numerous incidents" which, taken together, could create the requisite degree of hostility. To be actionable as pervasive harassment, conduct must be extreme. Courts consider the totality of circumstances, including the "frequency of the discriminatory conduct; its severity; whether it is physically threatening or humiliating, or a mere offensive utterance and whether it unreasonably interferes with an employee's work performance. Harassment is pervasive when incidents of harassment occur either in concert or with regularity. Andrews v. City of Philadelphia, 895 F2d 1475. Our courts have characterized pervasive harassment as "a gauntlet of sexual abuse". Mentor v. Vinson 477 U.S. 57(1986). It must be more than a single non-extreme circumstance. (cf. Taylor, supra.)

The case at bar simply does not rise to the level of severe and pervasive. Despite the failed attempt to connect to non-similar incidents from years ago, the charges are based upon the chat which was a one-time private event.

The contents of the chat were essentially innuendos and double-entendres. When viewed in context with the testimony of the respondents, it is clear that the content was a poor attempt at witty banter amongst friends in an attempt to one up each other. The majority of the comments were not graphic on its face, with many comments having to be looked up in order to learn their meaning. Unlike the Taylor case there were no comments made directly to anyone that was not a willing participant. It certainly does not rise to the "rare and extreme case" as cited by Taylor. As the chat does not rise to the severe and pervasive standard, Van Pelt could not have committed sexual harassment.

The second flaw in the Board's case as to sexual harassment is the reasonable woman standard. While not specifically cited in the policy, the reasonable woman standard is an integral part of any sexual harassment analysis. The standard would not make sense without it as there would be no comparator to distinguish acceptable conduct, akin to the obscenity, "I'll know what's obscene if I see it" argument from a long ago era.

As there must be a reasonable woman standard, Ms. Battista is the quintessential "hypersensitive employee" referenced in the Lehman case. In most matters the Court needs to guess in order to see what the reaction of other women put in such a witnesses position would think. This is not the case here as other women interviewed observing the same commentary and behavior as Ms. Bautista were not concerned about it at all.

Ms. McKenna, who was sitting right next to Ms. Battista showed absolutely no concern with the chat. She even described Ms. Battista as "consumed" by the chat. (Board Ex 45). True sexual harassment victims are trapped by their harassers with no choice but to be exposed to the behavior. This is unlike Ms. Battista who had multiple choices that day to avoid exposure to the chat. Ms. Battista could have simply focused her attention on the presentation. She chose to focus on the chat which could not be viewed without her repositioning herself (Battista Tr. 126:4-127:24). She also chose to leave the room (due to being supposedly upset) and finally after being away from the supposed harassment, voluntarily returns to the room. Ms. Battista even went through the trouble of using her IPhone to zoom onto the screen (which would not have been visible otherwise), and took several pictures. (Board Ex 7). Finally despite choosing to return, the testimony about her over the top reaction to the chat simply must be characterized as hyper-sensitive.

If ten individuals were in the same position as Battista, it is fair to say that only she would react in the way that she did. According to the investigation notes, twenty-three other individuals at the training were not disrupted. The fact that Ms. McKenna had no such reaction in any way brings credence to this characterization of hyper-sensitivity.

The Courts have stated that behavior that may be socially inapt and, no doubt, annoying, does not approach sexual harassment. Godfrey v. Princeton 196 NJ 178 (2008). The Court in Godfrey went so far as to state that "persons who are socially tone deaf are not, by that characteristic, necessarily the equivalent of sexual harassers. To allow the Law Against Discrimination to replace such basic human interaction trivializes the purpose for which the LAD was established." Id.

While Van Pelt fully admits that portions of the chat were inappropriate, there was no sexual harassment. The chat does not rise to the level of severe or pervasive nor would a reasonable woman in Ms. Battista's position have felt that the work environment was hostile based on such acts. Portions of the discussion may have been socially inapt but certainly not harassing. There is no legitimate reason for Ms. Battista to have the extreme reaction that occurred and as such proves herself to fall short of the reasonable woman standard.

In conclusion, this factor must also be viewed in favor of Van Pelt as the allegations do not rise to the level of nature and gravity to support further discipline.

One of the focuses of the "outrage" as to the chat are the references to the special education students. The testimony of all the Respondents was consistently clear that any and all comments regarding these students were in effect mocking the instructors insulting reference to the students as "lows". Van Pelt reacts strongly, stating in the chat stating "how many times is she going to encourage us to use the phrase 'lower group kids'". For a complete recitation, see Factual Basis, section one, the Training Session.

There was ample testimony during the proceedings of the offensive statements by the instructor regarding the "categorization" of students. This was offensive to Van Pelt and the other respondents. Van Pelt states, "What the presenter was putting forward struck a nerve in me....She was pitching a selling point ..... stating, you can label your kids low, and they won't see it." (TVP Tr. 97:9-98:1; 217:3-19 and 212:13-214:21).

Based on the ridiculousness of the categorization statements by the instructor, Van Pelt made the various statements attributed to him regarding special education students. The Board attempts to take these statements out of context but all of respondents testimony clarified that these statements were made in response to these statements by the presenter. In addition, the mistakes in interpretation by Ms. DeLuca completely exacerbated this situation. For a complete recitation as to DeLuca's misinterpretations, see Factual Basis, The Investigation.

There is no evidence of any discomfort or injury on anyone besides Ms. Battista who has been established as hypersensitive and should not be in equation. While it is regrettable that the Superintendent has hurt feelings over some portions of the chat, it is not enough of a basis for Van Pelt to lose his career. The Board supplied no direct evidence of parental, teacher or student concern with Van Pelt.

In summary to these Counts, Ms. DeLuca conveys that the presenter was not offended. During Ms. DeLuca's investigation, she spoke with Engrade's attorney, the employer of the presenter. The attorney informed Ms. DeLuca that the Presenter was not disrupted in any way during the training session and was not aware of any disruption therein [DeLuca Tr. 243:1-25], she did not know if the Superintendent was offended, Ms. Beams was not offended, Ms. Patuco was not offended, every other district employee was not offended, nor were parents offended as to her affirmative action investigation.

Only after the fact complaints were supposedly conveyed by some parents to Ms. Beams, however, neither she nor Ms. DeLuca conveyed these to Mr. Van Pelt (DeLuca Tr. 202:7-205:19). It also should be noted that these supposed parent complaints were double hearsay and not authenticated by any credible direct testimony, though the opportunity was there for the Board to present such to the arbitration.

In sum, there was no written or verbal evidence presented by the Board that Van Pelt's continued employment would have a negative effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system. As a result thereto, this final factor is in favor of Mr. Van Pelt's return to his classroom.

When reviewing the above factors based on the Fulcomer test, it is clear that the punishment of terminating Van Pelt is excessive. Van Pelt is an excellent teacher who made a mistake of having an inappropriate chat with his friends at the wrong time. No students or individuals were harmed as a result of this act. There is no evidence presented that there would be any cause for concern or outrage if Van Pelt was returned to the class room. Van Pelt expressed extreme remorse for his inappropriate, ill-timed comments in reaction to the presenter's expressions of labels for students with disabilities (TVP Tr. 98:1-99:23). As to Van Pelt initiating the "backchannel discussion", he again expresses extreme remorse and "would delete it in a heartbeat". And, he has expressed to every individual along the line (his) regret. (TVP Tr. 103:13-25).

In response to Ms. DeLuca's testimony that he was not remorseful, Van Pelt stated, "It's not true". He continued by conveying, "The notion of, you know, we're sorry only because we got caught of this widespread testimony about a lack of remorse on all individuals. My contention is two part with this notion that DeLuca testified "Short of falling to our knees and resigning...in tears, I don't know what we could have done to express remorse to satisfy Ms. DeLuca" Van Pelt doesn't know how else he could have expressed remorse to satisfy the Board's understanding of his regret, aside from being honest and trying to cooperate to the fullest extent, which he did, as well as deeply apologizing for any offense that he made (TVP Tr. 129:9-130:14).

Van Pelt admits to the posts in reference to Supt. O'Malley. Van Pelt states, "what I said was regrettable again and this is an incomplete answer. I expressed my apologies for making that statement". Van Pelt also expressed to Ms. DeLuca that that's not in keeping with his character. Not only do (I) regret it, (I) felt it was cowardly (Van Pelt Tr. 139:19-140:4). This Van Pelt representation was not present within Ms. DeLuca's document.

Van Pelt concluded the DeLuca interview by stating his regret and remorse, commenting on his late brother who had special needs, as well as his disabled step-son. He also conveyed to DeLuca that this would never happen again and he understood that it was ill-worded and absolutely regrettable. (Van Pelt Tr. 142:3-143-16). This also did not make it into Ms. DeLuca's notes.

Van Pelt has already been suspended and lost valuable time in his career. He also has suffered an economic impact based upon the suspension. His suspension of 120 days, without pay, has already cost Van Pelt $38,000.00. Any further suspension without pay will cost him approximately $10,000.00 per month. Any increment withholding will be at a loss of several thousands of dollars for one or more years.

As such, it is respectfully requested that there are alternative penalties that could be imposed rather than termination. Upholding the 120 day unpaid suspension without pay would be a tough, but fair, punishment under the circumstances.

The Board bears the burden of proving such charges by the preponderance of evidence. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 NJ 550, 560 (1982); I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Marrero, 97 N.J.A.R 2d (EDU) 104 (1997). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro Bottling Co., 26 NJ 143 (1962). Preponderance is the greater weight of credible evidence in the case; that is, the evidence not necessarily having the greater number of witnesses but rather the evidence having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 NJ 47 (1975).

Van Pelt's record outside the classroom is also remarkable working with "struggling" students, and their academic proficiencies (TVP Tr. 85:22-87:5 and 88:22-90:17). Van Pelt has been recognized by the State of New Jersey for its SGP rating system. In fact, in the two years that the State has done this, Van Pelt has been the ONLY teacher in his school to achieve a rating of "highly effective" (TVP Tr. 86:25-87:10 and 88:12-21).

Any findings must be well founded in reason and logic. Lesniewski v. W.B. Furze Corp., 308 NJ Super 270 (App Div 1998). After reviewing the detailed factual basis above, it is clear that the Board has not met this burden.

In addition to the Fulcomer test, arbitrators have also imposed a "just cause" standard In answering whether the termination was for just cause, in general, "just cause ... requires that before an employee is disciplined that employee should know of the existence of a pertinent rule, that the rule is reasonably related to the business of the employer, and the employee knew or should have known the possible consequences of the violation of the rule." Linden Bd. of Educ. v. Linden Educ. Ass'n ex rel. Mizichko, 202 N.J. 268, 278 (2010)

As Van Pelt is essentially charged for a private conversation, it is his position that there was no specific existence of this rule. There was also testimony as to the lack of presentation and guidance as to the policies in this matter. While Van Pelt acknowledges that portions of the chat were inappropriate and unrelated to educational purposes, he was clearly unaware of the severity of the implementation of such punishment regarding same.

During the course of the proceeding and within the charges, the Board attempts to establish a supposed "pattern" based on other as well as remote prior incidents. As stated earlier, the incidents were mischaracterized by the Board and do not rise to any level that should be considered in this arbitration.

In addition, the Board had the opportunity and did in fact address these incidents in the past. Although double jeopardy is a criminal concept and did not apply, the concept that an appropriate penalty was already meted out, precluded the District from raising the same conduct again. In re Tenure Hearing of Jill Buglovsky, Randolph Township Board of Education, Agency Docket No. 265-9/12 (issued December 21, 2012) quoting: In the Tenure Hearing of Wachendorf, OAL Docket No: EDU 6860-04, decision of Administrative Law Judge May 3, 2005.

In Buglovsky, it was determined that "The Board cannot now retry Ms. Buglovsky based on conduct transpiring over three years ago, which did not involve harm or realistic potential harm to students, and was resolved at that time by an official reprimand. The Arbitrator rejected an alleged "pattern of misconduct" by Buglovsky thereby precluding use of a prior reprimand for that purpose as well. Supra.

As such, the Board is not able to institute a "pattern" against Van Pelt based upon these prior incidents.

Unbecoming conduct is a term which encompasses conduct which "destroys public respect for government employees and competence in the operation of public services". Karins v. Atl. City, 152 NJ 532 (1998).

When reviewing such cases of unbecoming conduct it is clear that there is a high threshold: repeated warnings for a teacher being directly verbally abusive and ridiculing students (using terms as "geek, dork and jerk" directly to students); a teacher distributing a secure test to students and then denying it when questioned[1]; a teacher engaged in corporal punishment with students; a teacher who participated in a scheme to defraud the State Health Benefits System common theme in these cases is a teacher who has gone beyond the bounds of common decency and exhibited a total disregard for fulfillment of the responsibilities of his position as well as his welfare for his students.

1 In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Vincent Martone, State Operated School District of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County, C#650-97 (12/19/98)

The allegations against Van Pelt even taken at face value, do not rise to a level close to the threshold established. There were never any instances as to jeopardizing any safety or security of the students and faculty. The Board has not proven any evidence of destruction of public respect for Van Pelt.

When reviewing comparable cases, there are many examples of public employees charged with conduct far beyond what is alleged herein, but were not terminated from tenured positions. Many of the relevant cases illustrate that violating policy, including a computer policy in of itself, is not grounds for termination.

When reviewing the cited cases, all have a factual basis more serious than a private chat amongst friends. All of the above kept their job. Van Pelt should be given the same chance.

Based on the above, Van Pelt respectfully requests that any punishment be limited to time served as to his unpaid suspension. Van Pelt has shown great remorse and is eager to return to his life's calling of educating.

OPINION

After considering the documentary and testimonial evidence, the undersigned concludes that Tyler Van Pelt is guilty of Charges I- Counts 1,2, 3, 4, 5, 6, III, V, VI- Counts 1,2, 4, 5, 6. 7, and VII. Charges II, IV, VI-Count 3 VIII are dismissed.

ANALYSIS OF THE CHARGES

The charges are arranged such that the numbered charges and specifications are preceded by a section entitled Background Common to All Charges. It would be appropriate to address that section before considering the numbered charges and specifications.

The bulk of this section deals with established Board policies. The cited policies concern sexual harassment (BX21), inappropriate staff conduct (BX23), the code of ethics (BX22), affirmative action (BX20), acceptable use of computer networks and computers (BX24) and a healthy workplace environment (BX25). The relevant Board Policy Numbers are 3362, 3281, 3211, 1140, 3321 and 3351 respectively.

On the theory that employees cannot be held accountable for the implementation of policies of which they were not put on notice, it is first essential to determine if and how the teachers employed by the Board knew of the existence of these policies and how they knew or should have known the substantive content of the policies.

The Board met its burden of demonstrating that the teachers acknowledged their knowledge of the existence of said policies, the manner in which they could secure copies of the policies and their agreement to review the policies and to abide by them. It did so by producing a document entitled Important Board Policies, Regulations and Mandated Communications Form. The record indicates that Respondent Van Pelt executed this form on September 11, 2014 (BX17). Thus, he acknowledged that he was aware of the policies, that he would review them and conform to them.

In sum, Respondent Van Pelt was on notice both procedurally and substantively of the Board's policies central to these charges. More important, he agreed to review the policies, to be conversant with the policies and to conduct himself in accordance with them.

It is well settled that employers are entitled to establish policies and work rules and to require employees to conform to them. This statement is true provided the employees are notified of the policies and rules. In this case, Respondent Van Pelt acknowledged his responsibility to comply with them.

Van Pelt argued that the Board must have a legitimate business reason for enforcing the rules. That argument has no merit here because that Board had legitimate business reasons for adopting the policies. None of the policies are irrelevant to the business of running a school district. Moreover, there is nothing in the record to indicate that anyone at anytime challenged the legitimacy of the policies. Thus, how can enforcing those policies that relate to the management of the school district be anything but a legitimate business reason?

What is highly relevant here is that, under the circumstances, the failure to abide by the rules and policies is chargeable conduct. Since the failure to comply is chargeable, the Board is well within its rights to impose discipline on employees who are guilty of such breaches.

Suffice it to say, Boards of Education are expected to create policies for the District. Part of their mandate as elected officials is to do so.

The business of the District is to offer an educational program to the children in the school district. The implementation of the policies is relevant in terms of managing the District. It is difficult to understand how Van Pelt does not recognize that the policies at issue here are legitimate interests in that they define appropriate professional conduct and set forth rules about the use of District equipment. Does he not recognize that his comments about various specific individuals and groups of individuals constitute violations of legitimate Board policies?

Van Pelt characterized the Board's policies as being self-serving. The term self-serving connotes a self-enhancement effort. There is no basis for the suggestion that the Board, individually and collectively, enacted policies that were personally beneficial.

Van Pelt may not appreciate the implementation of the policies. However, the policies are appropriate. There will be a full discussion of the applicability of the policies cited in the charges.

The second major component of Background Common to All Charges is a reference to a group chat on the Today's Meet website that was conducted through the District's computer network.

The 2 ½ hour group chat was alleged to have taken place on October 23, 2014 during a professional development program that was called an Engrade Chromebook Training.

The District provides the teachers with laptop computers, Chromebooks. Thus, those participating in the group chat did so on District owned computers.

The record suggests that Engrade is an educational program employed by the District. The October 23, 2014 meeting was devoted to the program.

It is unchallenged that the Engrade meeting took place on October 23, 2014, that the group chat lasted (from beginning to end) 2 ½ hours and that Respondent Van Pelt and approximately 25 other teachers were in attendance.

This section of Background Common to All Charges goes on to elaborate on the group chat and sets forth the allegedly unacceptable content of it. Van Pelt argued that the content of the chat was taken out of context. The record indicates that the entire chat was retrieved and placed in evidence. There was no objection raised as to the completeness of the document. Thus, the chat was not taken out of context. The transcript was the complete context. To the extent that these matters are included in the Charges and Specifications, they will be addressed below.

A section of this portion of the charges deals with Van Pelt's employment record. This issue will be dealt with below.

Charge I

This charge asserts that Respondent Van Pelt's participation in the group chat rises to the level of unbecoming conduct and/or just cause. It alleges that Van Pelt violated New Jersey law and Board policies, regulations and procedures concerning staff interactions. It charged that the chat room was public, was visible, accessible to other employees and students. It added that the chat room comments were offensive, discriminatory , rife with sexual innuendo and constituted a hostile work environment. This charge was the subject of six counts or specifications.

The immediate reason for the service of disciplinary charges is that the chat was held in a public place and was seen by one of the attendees at the training, Alysia Battisa. Ms. Battista complained about the chat and the District, pursuant to its polices and rules, addressed the complaint.

As noted in each of the counts, the chat comments made Ms. Battista sufficiently uncomfortable that she was unable to benefit from the training. She came to the training for appropriate professional reasons and the char prevented her from achieving her goal

While the above is expressed in each of the counts, it will not be repeated. However, it is applicable to each of the Charge I counts.

Count 1 concerned inappropriate comments about the Endgrade trainer, Sara Bleekinger. Van Pelt was charged with a course of misconduct toward Ms. Bleekinger. It stated that the group chat was foul, demeaning, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature. It cited 15 specific comments made by Van Pelt during the group chat.

It should be stated that the group chat lasted for 2 ½ hours. It was downloaded from the computers and it was 16 pages in length (BX13). The text of Van Pelt's comments were included in the charges served on him.

It must be noted that Van Pelt's comments must be read in the context of comments made by other participants in the group chat. There were three main participants, Maria Weber, Maryellen Lechelt and Tyler Van Pelt. All of them were served with charges. While the matter was consolidated relative to the hearings, separate decisions are being written for each of the three named participants.

There was a small number of additional participants in the chat. They were either not identifiable or no longer employed by the Board. In any event, their participation was limited and minor as compared to the three charged teachers.

When Van Pelt's comments are put in the context of the entire chat, their inappropriateness is magnified. Thus, an objective review of the comments concerning Sara Bleekinger suggests that Van Pelt's comments in and out of context with the total chat were inappropriate.

Despite the obvious, Van Pelt argued that, while there is no denying what his comments were, he is not guilty of this Count. He insisted that that he had an expectation of privacy relative to the chat. He posited that the chat would have gone unknown but for Alysia Battista, another attendee at the meeting, seeing it. Thus, in his view, the chat was private and his participation in it cannot be chargeable conduct.

As will be discussed in greater depth below, Van Pelt and his cohorts had no expectation of privacy. They were engaged in a chat in a public setting while using a District computer and a District network. The Board policy states it always has the right to examine that which is on the District owned computer's hard drive. Under the circumstances, the chat was public and the employer, the school district, had the right to view a chat that was not engaged in for educational purposes. In short, there could be no expectation of privacy.

The fact that Van Pelt thought that the chat was private is of no moment. Van Pelt claimed that one of the people who is a member of the staff that is engaged in computer technology, Mr. Platvoet, told him that he and the others did have a right to privacy. Platvoet testified and denied making such a statement. This subject will be elaborated on in the section devoted to Van Pelt's defenses. Assuming that he even thought about it at the time of the chat, regardless of what Van Pelt thought at the time of the chat, thinking something does not make it so.

Moreover, as is true of most of Van Pelt's defenses, there is no evidence that he or anyone else even considered the question of privacy or the consequences of engaging in it at the time of the chat.

Van Pelt's reasoning was that one needed an access code in order to see that chat's comments. That reasoning is fallacious. Anyone passing by could see what was on the screens of the computers. The fact that only one person complained about the chat is irrelevant. The chat was undertaken in a public setting and, irrespective of all of the issues concerning the ownership of the computer and the network, it fell into the public realm. Once that is recognized, it is readily apparent that Van Pelt had no expectation of privacy.

Much was said about Van Pelt's remorse for his conduct. While he in fact made certain comments about his remorse for having participated, his defense suggests that he has not taken responsibility for his participation in the chat.

Van Pelt initiated the chat and invited others to join him. He referred to the proposed chat as his personal wiseass backchannel discussion. He never intended for the chat to be other than what it was. He always had the option of logging out of the chat if it developed in ways unlike what he intended ir to be. As the initiator of the chat, he could have ended it.

He did neither, suggesting that the comments were not, in his view, inappropriate until he was called to task for it. When he was held accountable, he raised numerous meritless defenses. Much more will be said about the defenses in a section of the Opinion related specifically to them.

In addition, Van Pelt made a significant number of the comments in the chat transcript. Many of them were crude, vulgar and surprising given his level of education and his profession. His comments were not disputed.

Once the content of the chat became known, Van Pelt became the subject of charges of unbecoming conduct for making inappropriate comments about Sara Bleekinger. The fact that the comments were not known to Bleekinger is irrelevant. The comments were public and were treated that way.

This count alleges that Van Pelt's comments were disruptive and had a negative impact in another Engrade participant, Alysia Battista. These issues will be addressed below since they are part of many of the charges. In short, the Board met its burden relative to Count 1.

Count 2 concerns comments made about special needs students. The comments were undisputed. They referred to the children in outrageous pejoratives.

Van Pelt indicated that he made these comments in response to Bleekinger referring to a low group. He suggested that he was offended by the term low group. He added this brother had special needs and resented the thought that his brother would be described in such a way.

There is no way that Van Pelt can justify his comments. Even if he did feel offended, a proposition that the undersigned has difficulty accepting, if he really believed that Bleekinger's comments were improper, why would he not address her resentment like an adult and a professional. Under those conditions, he would have either privately or publicly expressed his displeasure.

He did not do so because, from the outset, Van Pelt considered the chat to be his personal wiseass backchannel discussion. He never intended the chat to be related to professional and/or educational matters. If he thought his comments were funny, no rational reader of the transcript would laugh.

Once again, even if Van Pelt had been offended by Bleekinger's characterization, his conclusion that low group is demeaning was arrogant and is a view that was unsupported by anything in the professional literature. By contrast, District witnesses cited to test and other professional literature that specifically referred to low groups.

In sum, Van Pelt has neither the credentials nor the standing to refute the use of an accepted term. He is entitled to have an aversion to it but he does not have the right to object to it by making the comments he made.

It must be added that Van Pelt's comments must also be viewed in the context of Lechelt's comments about special needs students. He and Lechelt were clearly having what they thought was a good time at the expense of handicapped students

To the extent that the chat was public, it had a negative effect on Alysia Battista. She was understandably made to feel uncomfortable. As noted above, the chat was public and Battista was exposed to offensive comments that interfered with her ability to benefit from the training.

For the reasons stated above, Van Pelt is culpable of Count 2.

Count 3 alleges that Van Pelt made inappropriate comments about Dr. O'Malley, the Superintendent of Schools. A review of the transcript reveals that Van Pelt's comments indicate his reference to Dr. O'Malley as little Richard as well as his doubts about the Superintendent's ability to pull chicks. Van Pelt made other offensive comments.

However his comments must be read in combination with Lechelt's statements. They comment about his appearance. They are replete with sexual innuendo and suggest that his hiring practices are based on sexual issues and, therefore, are less than ethical and professional.

His comments were unacceptable. When put in the context of Lechelt's comments about the Superintendent and his responses to them, they become even more offensive. Van Pelt is guilty of Charge 3.

Count 4 addresses comments that Van Pelt made about Alysia Battista. Alysia Battista is the teacher who saw Lechelt's computer screen and became upset when she read the comments that were part of the chat .

The comments about Battista made by both Lechelt and Van Pelt were graphic. Lechelt chose to comment about Battista's tendency to pick at her lips when she is anxious. Lechelt made a negative comment about this tendency and made a derisive comment about the lips getting bigger.

Van Pelt responded to Lechelt's comments by indicating dsl (a term defined as dick sucking lips). Many of the comments in the exchange between Lechelt and Van Pelt were sexual in nature.

What is as distressing about Van Pelt's dsl comment was his effort at the hearing to characterize it as a reference to a computer technology phrase. This response was part of the context of extreme remorse. The context in which dsl was stated clearly had nothing to do with technology and everything to do with a disgusting sexual reference. The comments about Battista rose to the level of unbecoming conduct. Van Pelt is guilty of Count 4.

Count 5 addresses comments made by Van Pelt about unidentified individuals attending the training. The comments were primarily made by Lechelt and Van Pelt.

As was true of the comments made about Ms. Bleekinger, Ms. Battista and Dr. O'Malley , the comments attributed to Lechelt and Van Pelt were offensive, crude and sexual in nature. Van Pelt seized on an apparently mature woman. He responded to a Lechelt comment about the woman by indicating been there and done that and followed that with had her in her fucking prime.

These comments were grossly offensive. They were also discriminatory with respect to the woman as well as to older people in general.

Count 5 was proven. The Board met its burden of proof in this regard.

Count 6 concerns comments made by Lechelt to Van Pelt and Weber. These comments concerned her becoming a supervisor because she is cute and blonde, made a reference to Van Pelt as being a backchannel guy (a reference to anal sex) and his response acknowledging same. Van Pelt commented about eating chicken (a reference to oral sex), references to Van Pelt's personal sexiness and replete with sexual fantasies.

Evidently, Van Pelt went to the rest room and returned and when he did so he commented about getting the baby batter off the brain. This comment refers to male ejaculation. This comment will become relevant in connection with Charge V.

A review of the comments is sufficient to conclude that they constituted unbecoming conduct. Van Pelt is guilty of Count 6.

Charge II

This charge is limited to a single count. It alleges that Van Pelt was insubordinate and guilty of unbecoming conduct in that he was involved in the disruption of Engrade training. An analysis of the allegation must be done before a determination is made about the charged misconduct.

The key word in this charge is disruption. An accepted definition of this word suggests that the action(s) of an individual or group interfered with the ability of others to continue an ongoing activity. Put another way, the actions of one or more people had to have prevented the organizers of a specific activity from continuing the activity to its planned conclusion.

With this definition in mind, one needs to examine the facts surrounding the instant matter. It is uncontested that the training started and ended on time. It is also clear that from the perspective of the trainer, Sara Bleekinger, she made her presentation in an uninterrupted manner. Thus, it is difficult to conclude that Van Pelt and others disrupted the training per se.

That is not to suggest that Alysia Battista was not upset by the contents of the chat. It must be said that Battista was the subject of negative comments by the three main participants in the chat. There was a good deal of blaming the victim.(Battista).

However, by any reasonable standard, there were many grossly offensive comments that were made during the chat. Any reasonable person would have found them offensive and large numbers of reasonable people would have been disturbed to read the comments, particularly in a professional setting. As will be noted below, the fact that the woman sitting next to Battista did not react negatively to the chat does not suggest that Battista's response was unreasonable.

The undersigned hastens to add that an absence of disruption of the training session does not obviate the conclusion that Van Pelt was guilty of misconduct. As noted in the findings to Charge I, he was guilty of misconduct. Specifically in Charge I Counts 1, 3, 4, and 5, Van Pelt was found to be culpable of unbecoming conduct in connection with Alysia Battista, Dr. O'Malley and Sara Bleekinger. Furthermore, as will be seen in charges not yet addressed, he is guilty of additional misconduct.

However, it cannot be said that Van Pelt disrupted the training session. If the actions of Van Pelt and his two cohorts had not transpired, from the perspective of the vast majority of the attendees, it is likely that the session would have been no different than it was in the presence of the group chat. Thus, Charge II is dismissed.

Charge III

This charge is one of a single count of misconduct. Van Pelt is charged with a failure to pay attention during the Endgrade training and with making no effort to benefit from the instruction provided.

As has been previously documented, Tyler Van Pelt has been found guilty of various kinds of misconduct, ranging from inappropriate conduct with other staff members and with other participants in the group chat and individuals not in the employ of the District to significant violations of Board policy. In each of those charges and counts, the misconduct could be documented through a review of the transcript of the chat and through a review of the conduct of Van Pelt in the context of the terms of several Board policies.

In this charge, Van Pelt is said to have not paid attention to the training and having made no effort to benefit from the instruction. The transcript of the chat shows the timing of the comments. At most, there was a time gap of four minutes between comments.

It makes no sense to limit the time spent on the chat to the amount of time writing comments. Van Pelt was paying attention to the chat for virtually the full 2 ½ hour duration of the session. The total time he was involved in the chat precluded his paying attention to the content of the training. Moreover, the maximum time between chat comments was four minutes. Van Pelt's attention was on the chat and not the training.

Finally, Van Pelt was on duty during the training. The session took place at a time when he would have been teaching. He had a professional obligation to make every effort to improve his teaching services by paying attention to the trainer. Instead, he opted to engage in an offensive, crude and grossly immature exercise of exchanging highly inappropriate comments on a chat.

Based on the record created, the Arbitrator concludes that, for practically the full length of the training session, Van Pelt did not pay attention and did not make appropriate efforts to benefit from instruction that was designed to improve his teaching. As such, Charge III must be sustained.

Charge IV

This charge alleges the misuse of the District's computer network through a group chat that was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, harassing, offensive and sexual in nature. The District alleged that the foregoing was a flagrant misuse of the Board's resources. The Board concluded that this conduct constitutes unbecoming conduct, insubordination and just cause for dismissal.

Without commenting on the merits of Charge IV, the Arbitrator points out that Charge VI Count 7 alleges, although worded in a slightly different way, the same misconduct in the context of Board Policy 3321.

Therefore, the issue of the alleged misuse of the District's computers and network will be addressed in the discussion of Charge IV Count 7. As such, Charge IV is dismissed.

Charge V

Van Pelt was charged with masturbating in or around Board property. The basis of this charge is related to a comment that Van Pelt made during his interview by Ms. DeLuca.

Ms. DeLuca questioned Van Pelt about the comment when she interviewed him. The transcript of the interview (DX14) indicates that Van Pelt explained that the expression refers to men masturbating before going on a date. The end of his response indicates that he denied masturbating when he went to the rest room on the day of the training and then added at least not that time.

Ms. DeLuca reasonably took the comment to mean that Van Pelt denied masturbating on Board property on the day of the training but admitted doing so at other times.

It is uncontested that, during the chat, Van Pelt made a comment about getting the baby batter off the brain. This phrase was previously defined as a reference to masturbation and ejaculation.

Van Pelt vigorously denied making such an admission. Since there was no one in the room, the question becomes which of the two people is credible.

On the one hand, De Luca has been found to be credible and forthright throughout the hearing. Moreover, she had no reason to fabricate. Van Pelt claimed that Ms. DeLuca was not credible due to lack of retention of her handwritten notes of his interview after word processing them. This argument will be considered in the section.

As to Van Pelt, it is patently clear that Van Pelt made the baby batter comment during the chat. Since De Luca wanted Van Pelt to explain the comment, she asked Van Pelt to explain it.

Van Pelt's answer, relative to the origin of the quote, was not disputed. However, he denied admitting that he masturbated on Board premises at times other than the date of the training.

It is not credible that De Luca's report was accurate with respect to everything about the quote except for the admission. Given its crudeness, it is difficult to believe that Van Pelt made the original comment during that chat. However, he made other comments during the chat that were equally inappropriate. Thus, the baby batter comment is consistent with the offensiveness of many of his other comments.

Moreover, he did not deny his explanation of the quote. Yet he would expect the undersigned to believe that the entry in Ms. DeLuca's report concerning this matter is accurate except for the admission.

Furthermore, the record suggests that Van Pelt made other statements that stretch credulity. De Luca did not, In short, De Luca's version of the Van Pelt's admission to having masturbated on Board property is credited. Thus, Van Pelt is guilty of Charge V.

Charge VI

This charge asserts that Tyler Van Pelt violated various District policies. The District posited that such misconduct constituted unbecoming conduct and/or just cause for dismissal.

Charge VI is comprised of seven counts. Each of the counts will addressed individually. It should be noted that, of the seven counts, only Count 3 does not allege that Van Pelt violated a specific District policy.

With that in mind, there are certain comments that apply to Counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7. Since it is more efficient to make certain observations about all six counts at the outset rather than repeat them in connection with each policy, the following observations apply to all of the cited Board policies.

As noted above, Van Pelt was on notice about each policy (BX18). This document (BX18) listed 34 policies and procedures in effect in the District. The policies cited in the six counts identified above are all listed on the document.

Van Pelt signed this document to acknowledge receipt of it as well as an acknowledgment of his awareness that the policies can be found on the Board's website. Finally, Van Pelt's signature reflects his agreement to conform to the listed policies and procedures.

What must be concluded is that Van Pelt was bound to comply with the policies. If he failed to review the policies in order to be able to comply with them, he did so at his own risk. In short, he was required to comply with the policies.

A second observation to be made is that Van Pelt and his two colleagues participated in the group chat. Their continued participation in the chat makes each of them responsible for its contents.

It is true that Van Pelt made some, not all, of the inappropriate comments. However, he was the one who initiated the chat and dubbed it his Personal Wiseass Backchannel Discussion. That being said, had he become concerned about his commitment to honor District policies, he would have either terminated the chat or, at the very least, logged off of the chat and, in so doing, disassociated himself from it. He did not do either and must now be held accountable for his actions.

What remains is an application of the facts of this case to the terms of the cited policies. Such an analysis will result in a determination of whether Van Pelt is guilty of one or more of the counts.

Count 1 alleges a violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy (Policy number 3362) (BX21). In relevant part, the policy states:

> The Board of Education recognizes that an employee's right to freedom from employment discrimination include the opportunity to work in an environment untainted by sexual harassment. Sexually offensive speech and conduct are wholly inappropriate to the harmonious relationships necessary to the operation of the school district and intolerable in a workplace to which the children of this district are exposed.
>
> Sexual harassment includes all unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and verbal or physical contacts of a sexual nature that > would not have happened but for the employee's gender. Whenever submission to such conduct is made a condition of employment or the basis for an employment decision, or when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint.

>
> The sexual harassment of any employee of this district is strictly forbidden. Any employee or agent of the Board who is found to have sexually harassed an employee of this district will be subject to discipline which may include termination of employment.
>
> The Affirmative Action Officer shall instruct all employees and agents of the Board to recognize and correct speech and behavior patterns that may be sexually offensive with or without the intent to offend.

Before considering the facts, there needs to be analysis of the policy. The policy addresses two forms of sexual harassment, sexually offensive speech and sexually offensive advances, both physically and verbally. There is no evidence of sexual advances in any way, shape or form. Thus, the relevant language in this policy concerns the first paragraph above.

The sexual harassment in this case concerns sexually offensive speech. The purported sexually offensive speech was contained in the comments made during the group chat.

The facts suggest that Alysia Battista, a participant at the Engrade training was sitting behind and to the left of Maryellen Lechelt. She was able to see Lechelt's computer monitor and was able to read the ongoing comments of the group chat and became offended by the comments that were overtly sexual as well as those that had sexual innuendos.

Battista became upset by what she saw and left the meeting room. She filed a complaint about the chat and the instant proceeding resulted.

To be clear, counsel for Weber, Lechelt and Van Pelt all cited Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us, 132 N.J. 587 (1993) as the seminal case in New Jersey for matters involving sexual harassment. The undersigned read the cited case and concludes that it is applicable to the portion of the instant policy that deals with physical and verbal sexual advances. The facts in Toys 'R' Us relate to physical and verbal advances. This aspect of the policy is found in its second paragraph, not the first one.

Moreover, the language in the second paragraph tracks Toys 'R' Us. The same cannot be said for the first paragraph. It is evident that, if the Board intended for the Toys 'R' Us standards to apply to both paragraphs, it would have made such an indication in the policy. Thus, the plain language of the policy indicates that the Board intended to distinguish sexually offensive language from sexual advances of either a physical or a verbal nature.

Therefore, Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us is inapposite here. The standards set forth in Toys 'R' Us do not apply in matters involving sexually offensive comments. They are distinguishable from cases in which there was sexual advances of a physical or verbal nature.

This case deals with sexually offensive speech. The Board is well within its rights to issue policies that are relevant to the governance of the school district. Its policy in this regard is appropriate.

With the above analysis having been completed, the undersigned must now consider whether Van Pelt was guilty of the violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy in terms of participating in sexually offensive speech.

The Arbitrator is persuaded that he did so through direct comments, by responses to the comments of others and by participating in the group chat from beginning to end. He directly commented about Bleekinger, Battista and Dr. O'Malley in highly offensive language. He made comments about backchannel discussions with Bleekinger. The record suggests that backchannel refers to anal sex. He also engaged in verbal sexual fantasies about her. He took part in comments about Dr. O'Malley that dealt with his sexual practices and hiring methods. His dsl comment concerning Battista alluded to oral sex. In sum, Van Pelt made numerous other sexually offensive comments. Thus, Tyler Van Pelt violated the Board's policy proscribing sexually offensive speech. Therefore, he is guilty of Charge VI Count 1.

Count 2 alleges a violation of the Board's affirmative action policy (Policy Number 1140) (BX20). This policy is designed to promote the acceptance of people of diverse backgrounds regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status. The intent of the policy is spelled out in the first full paragraph of the policy statement.

While Van Pelt's comments were about previously identified people, some of them concerned unidentified participants at the training. The comments were disparaging of women, special needs students, lesbians and older people (BX13). He cannot credibly assert that he did not violate this policy while sitting through and participating in a chat that was replete with comments about people protected by the policy. Thus, he is guilty of Charge VI Count 2.

Count 3 concerns a purported violation of the policies alluded to in Counts 1 and 2 pertaining to the Affirmative Action Investigation. This count is dismissed.

Van Pelt has already been found guilty of Counts 1 and 2. He is essentially being charged with the same misconduct a second time. In this regard, Count 3 is duplicative.

With respect to the interview per se, there are circumstances under which a interviewee's conduct at an interview could rise to the level of misconduct. However, under the facts of this case, Van Pelt was said to have not understood the seriousness of the matter but was not shown to have been guilty of misconduct at the interview per se. Thus, as indicated above, Charge VI Count 3 is dismissed.

Count 4 suggests a violation of the Code of Ethics policy (Policy Number 3211) (BX22). The key language in this policy is found in Principle II. It states as follows:

> The education profession is vested by the public with a trust and responsibility requiring the highest ideals of professional service.
>
> In the belief that the quality of the services of the education profession influences the nation and its citizens, the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards, to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education, and to assist in preventing the practice of the profession by unqualified persons.

Among other issues, this Code of Ethics requires teachers to endeavor to raise professional standards and to encourage the exercise of professional judgment. Van Pelt's participation in the group chat was inconsistent with both of these principles.

Van Pelt attended a professional development training session. It was offered in order to provide participants with the opportunity to improve their abilities with the Endgrade program. It is inconceivable that experienced educators would engage in group chat for 2 ½ hours while a trainer was engaged in a professional presentation. What makes the misconduct especially egregious is the content of the chat. It was demeaning, denigrating, offensive and discriminatory. There was nothing about the chat that reflected an endeavor to raise professional standards. It was crude by any standard and a clear violation of the District's Code of Ethics.

The Arbitrator is compelled to comment on the argument that the amount of time that Van Pelt was involved the chat was limited to the time spent in inputting the comments. This argument is invalid and inappropriate. It suggests that he may have spent 15-20 minutes actually inputting his entries in the chat.

It is highly disingenuous to assert that the chat lasted 150 minutes but that Van Pelt was involved in the chat for 15 or 20 minutes. That implies that the was focused on the training material for 130-135 of the 150 minutes. That suggests that he spent no time reading the other participant's contributions to the chat and that he spent no time watching his computer monitor while waiting for responses to previous inappropriate comments.

The chat lasted 2½ hours from beginning to end. The greatest time gap between comments was four minutes. This argument trivializes the misconduct and does nothing to reinforce the premise that he is sincerely remorseful for his actions.

The second aspect of the Code of Ethics that is pertinent here is the creation of a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment. The participation in the group chat is the antithesis of the exercise of professional judgment.

The Arbitrator is convinced that Van Pelt violated this policy. Thus, Van Pelt is guilty of Charge VI Count 4.

Count 5 addresses the Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy (Policy Number 3281) (BX 23). The relevant provision in this policy is found in the fourth full paragraph. It states as follows:

> School staff in completing their professional responsibilities shall be appropriate at all times. School staff shall not make inappropriate comments to pupils or about pupils and shall not engage in inappropriate conduct towards the pupils.

There was an extensive string of comments concerning special needs students in the transcript of the chat. The comments, many of which were made by Van Pelt, were, to say the least, inappropriate and discriminatory.

What makes Van Pelt even more culpable is the fact that he is the brother of a special needs person. If such a teacher is not offended by negative statements about students like his brother, who will be?

Suffice it to say that Van Pelt violated the Inappropriate Staff Conduct policy. He is culpable of Charge VI Count 5.

Count 6 concerns the Healthy Workplace Environment Policy (Policy Number 3351) (BX25). The relevant language in this policy is found in the second full paragraph of the text. It sates as follows:

> A significant characteristic of a healthy workplace environment is that employees interact with each other with dignity and respect regardless of an employee's work assignment or position in the district. Repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment.

As has been documented above, the record indicates that Supt. O'Malley was the subject of numerous comments to his appearance, hiring practices and his purported sexual practices. The comments were graphic and crude. The treatment that he received from Van Pelt and the others in the group chat was prototypical of what was proscribed in the policy.

Van Pelt made numerous offensive comments about various additional individuals. Therefore, there was repeated malicious conduct.

Therefore, he violated this policy. As such, Van Pelt is culpable of Charge VI Count 6.

Count 7 addresses the final policy allegedly violated. It is the policy concerning the acceptable use of district computers and computer networks (Policy Number 3321)(BX24).

The key language in this policy is as follows:

> The Board recognizes that telecommunications will allow teaching staff members access to information sources that have not been pre-screened using Board approved standards. The Board therefore adopts the following standards of conduct for the use of computer network(s) and declares unethical, unacceptable, inappropriate or illegal behavior as just cause for taking disciplinary action limiting or revoking access privileges, instituting legal action or taking any other appropriate action as needed necessary.
>
> The Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only. The Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use
>
> Standards for Use of Computer Network(s)
>
> Any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computer shall be subject to discipline or legal action:
>
> Item 3. Using the computer network(s) in a manner that:
> k. Engages in other activities that do not advance the educational purposes for which the computer network(s)/computers are provided.

Irrespective of the defenses offered by Van Pelt, there can be no question that he used the District's computers in a manner that was violative of this policy. There is no way that an educational purpose can be ascribed to the 2 ½ hour chat. The defenses will be discussed below. However, the use of the computers for the group chat was clearly in violation of the Board's policy.

Van Pelt, as one of participants in the chat, violated the policy concerning the use of District computers and computer networks. Thus, he is guilty of Charge VI Count 7.

Charge VII

Charge VII alleges that Van Pelt violated the CBA and that his doing so constituted insubordination and unbecoming conduct. Specifically, Van Pelt was the union building representative and he was charged with conducting union business at times when he was should have been teaching.

The relevant language in the CBA is found in Article VI Section C. It states as follows:

> School Visitations by Association Representatives
>
> Representatives of the Association, the Middlesex County Education Association, the New Jersey Education Association, and the National Education Association, shall be permitted to transact official Association business on school property at all reasonable times with the approval of the principal and/or Superintendent, provided that doing so shall not interfere with or interrupt school operations.

Charge VII is comprised of five counts. Each one alleges that Van Pelt sent emails related to union activities at time when he was expected to be teaching.

Count 1 indicates that Van Pelt sent such emails on September 11, 2014 at 2:00pm and 3:01pm (BX28). The District produced Van Pelt's schedule (BX32). September 11, 2014 was a Thursday and Van Pelt was scheduled to teach a Math class at 1:49-2:34pm and a Science/Social studies class at 2:36-3:21pm.

Therefore, the emails were sent during Van Pelt's teaching time.

Count 2 states that Van Pelt sent such an email at 2:14pm on September 17, 2012 (BX29). September 17, 2014 was a Wednesday and Van Pelt was assigned to teach a Math class at 1:49-2:34pm (BX32). Thus, this email was sent at a time when Van Pelt was supposed to be teaching.

Count 3 asserts that Van Pelt sent an email dealing with union affairs at 2:10pm on September 18, 2014 (BX29). His schedule shows that Van Pelt was expected to be teaching a Math class on that Thursday (BX32). Thus, the email was sent at a time when he was scheduled to teach.

Count 4 charges Van Pelt with sending union related emails at 12:13 and 3:22pm on Thursday, October 23, 2014 (BX30). His schedule indicated that Van Pelt had a Literacy/Math class at 12:15-1:00pm and a Science/Social Studies class at 2:36-3:21pm.

The 12:13pm email was sent when Van Pelt was supposed to be teaching. The 3:22pm mail was sent one minute after the end of the 2:36-3:21pm period. However, the CBA states that such business may be conducted within the school at reasonable times but only with the approval of either the principal or the Superintendent. There is no evidence that such approval was ever requested or granted.

Count 5 states that Van Pelt sent emails at 9:38am and 10:05am during the Endgrade training session on October 23, 2014 (BX31). The Endgrade training was scheduled at times when Van Pelt would ordinarily been teaching Literacy and Gym classes. Moreover, the training was a District program and the terms of Article VI apply here.

The defense offered by Van Pelt was that his schedule changes day to day and, at times, hour by hour. He claimed that one of the classes he was scheduled to teach on October 23, 2014 attended an assembly program and that he was free to send the email. He added that the District did not meet its burden of proof because no one determined if Van Pelt's schedule was changed.

Ms. DeLuca appeared as a rebuttal witness and indicated that there were no changes in the schedule on any of the dates and times noted in Charge VII. She noted that the charges were proven.

Van Pelt offered nothing in the way of evidence, other than his self-serving testimony, in support of his assertion. The District provided evidence relative to Van Pelt's schedule. It cannot prove that the schedule had not been changed on the day in question. It is virtually impossible to prove a negative.

It was Van Pelt's burden to show that the schedule had been modified. He did not satisfy that burden.

The Arbitrator adds that Van Pelt argued that Ms. DeLuca's rebuttal testimony was giving her a second bite of the apple. That characterization was inapt and reflects a lack of understanding of the nature of rebuttal testimony.

Van Pelt claimed that the class in question went to an assembly. Ms. DeLuca rebutted the statement by stating that there were no assembly programs at the times when the emails were sent. The rebuttal testimony was proper and created additional evidence of Van Pelt's poor credibility.

In short, Van Pelt is guilty of Charge VII Counts 1-5.

Charge VIII

The District charged Van Pelt with a pattern of unbecoming conduct over a protracted period of time. This charge focuses largely on the reprimands and the withholding of a salary increment previously. These measures reflect on disciplinary actions previously imposed on Van Pelt.

It is well settled that employees may not be penalized twice for the same misconduct. The effect of this charge would be to do just that.

However, this is not to say that that the earlier disciplinary actions are irrelevant. They are considered for purposes of determining the appropriate penalty to be imposed.

In this particular setting, both the Fulcomer and the Just Cause standards call for a consideration of the charged employee's disciplinary history. Consistent with these approaches, Van Pelt's disciplinary record will be considered at the appropriate time.

However, this charge calls for the consideration of this record during the process of determining the scope of Van Pelt's misconduct. That cannot and will not be done. Therefore, Charge VIII is dismissed.

ANALYSIS OF THE DEFENSES

Van Pelt offered a number of defenses in an effort to mitigate the findings of misconduct. They are deserving of mention and discussion.

He acknowledged that some of the facts in this matter are undisputed. However, he urged that he has a very good record and that he has expressed sincere remorse for his actions.

He stressed that an application of the Fulcomer standards suggests that termination is unjustified in this case.

At the same time that Van Pelt makes the above statements in his own defense, he sees his actions as adding humor to the training session. As will be further discussed, he stressed that Alysia Battista acted improperly by looking at Lechelt's computer monitor and reading the contents of the chat. He further stated that the Board was creating a police state by responding to Battista's complaint. As will be seen, Van Pelt's defenses were not limited to these issues.

However, the two paragraphs above stand in contrast to each other. The first one seems to assume responsibility for his actions and simply suggests that a penalty short of termination would be appropriate. The second paragraph trivializes his misconduct in a number of ways. It leads the undersigned to doubt the sincerity of his remorse and his assumption of responsibility.

He objected to Ms. DeLuca's interview record by stating that her transcription of the notes she took at the interview into a printed document somehow rendered the printed interview record invalid.

It is true that Ms. DeLuca did not retain her handwritten notes. There is no rule compelling her to do so. Van Pelt's criticism was that she discarded the handwritten notes without Dr. O'Malley's approval.

This defense is meritless. The interview was conducted in the absence of a court reporter or a recording device. Ms. DeLuca could have written anything in her notes at the time of the interview and Van Pelt would have had no reason to know what she wrote. Thus, she could have transcribed her handwritten notes, regardless of their content. Under those circumstances, would the presence of the handwritten notes made the printed copy more reliable?

Further, Van Pelt denied some of the specific statements in the report. He would have made the same denials even if the handwritten notes had been preserved.

The undersigned's findings relative to this issue were based on a credibility assessment of De Luca and Van Pelt. As a consequence, the Arbitrator credited Ms. DeLuca's testimony.

Ms. DeLuca was the subject of another of Van Pelt's assertions. She appeared as a rebuttal witness for the District. On Van Pelt's direct examination, in response to Charge VII, he claimed that there had been an assembly on October 23, 2014 and that he had been relieved of his teaching assignment at that time. Ms. DeLuca investigated this claim and appeared as a rebuttal witness to state that there was no assembly on that date.

Van Pelt characterized her appearance as a rebuttal witness as DeLuca being given a second bite of the apple. Such a statement is patently inaccurate and reflects an ignorance of established practice and procedure. In addition, it suggests that the proceeding was somehow biased in favor of the District. This argument is unseemly and reflects more on the maker of it than it does on the hearing.

Finally, Van Pelt criticized Ms. DeLuca because she recommended that Dr. O'Malley impose a serious penalty on him. She did make a recommendation to Dr. O'Malley. Her stature and her role in this matter suggests that she had the authority to recommend a penalty. She did not make the decision- Dr. O'Malley did. It is not clear what the basis of the objection was.

Van Pelt also objected to the fact that neither Dr. O'Malley nor Ms. DeLuca considered his teaching record. None of the charges concern Van Pelt's actual teaching and it is understandable that they would have considered the relevant facts and his disciplinary history rather than his classroom performance.

In this connection, Van Pelt suggested that, since his teaching per se was not the subject of disciplinary charges, he could not and should not have been served with the instant charges. His view is not valid.

Van Pelt's conduct in all areas of his employment is relevant. He is charged herein with misconduct, not incompetency. The charges are appropriate procedurally and substantively.

Van Pelt made a conscious effort to demonstrate that he has added to the tone of the school through his efforts with underachieving students. This training program was designed for the benefit of students.

The Arbitrator is taken by Van Pelt's lack of insight into his own actions. Did he not realize that the training might have given him additional skills with which he could help his students? By contrast, did he believe he knew all there was to know and, therefore, had no need to make an effort to learn as much as he could during the training.

The undersigned will discuss Van Pelt's belief that he had a right to privacy. However, the comments that he made during the chat were made in a public venue. Anyone passing by could have seen her computer screen. The fact is that the chat was seen by Alysia Battista. Rather than recognizing that Battista read the chat in a public setting, Van Pelt excoriated Battista as being snooping on a private chat..

Aside from the public nature of the chat, there are other issues that militate against the privacy argument. Van Pelt asserted that the chat was inaccessible to others. Despite all of the claims that a right to privacy attached, even if there was a legal basis for a right to privacy, it was waived by the public nature of the chat.

Thus, even if one credits Van Pelt's theory of privacy, he waived it by conducting the chat in a public space. The computers and the network belong to the District. Based on Board policy, the District had the right to confiscate the computers and to examine its contents. So much for the chat being inaccessible to others. Had Van Pelt read the policy, he would have been aware of its contents.

If Van Pelt seriously believed that he had a right to privacy under the facts of this case, he is extremely misguided. Before engaging in the conduct that placed him in a position that could lead to his dismissal, he needed to have the curiosity needed to determine the extent of her liabilities.

It is difficult to credit the argument that Van Pelt believed that he really had a right to privacy. He knew or should have known the District's policy concerning the use of its computers and computer networks. He had to know that the chat substantively violated various Board policies as well as common decency. The Arbitrator concludes that this defense is contrived and should be afforded little weight.

A second area of Van Pelt's defense concerned Alysia Battista. He portrayed Battista as the villain. He claimed that Battista snooped on him and his chat cohorts and became the equivalent of an informer. Therefore, in Van Pelt's view, she reported the misconduct.

It should be added that Van Pelt viewed the District's response to the complaint as creating a police state. These two comparisons lay Van Pelt's insight into his own misconduct bare.

In his efforts to denigrate Battista, Van Pelt referred to her in ugly sexually offensive terms. His dsl comment stands out. This term was defined as dick sucking lips. That definition makes sense in the context of the chat. Lechelt had just commented that Battista, through a nervous mannerism, picked at her lips and that her lips became swollen. Van Pelt's response was dsl.

He argued that dsl is a computer technology term. The Arbitrator is aware of it, however, in context, it had nothing to do with technology and everything to do with oral sex.

Van Pelt opined that Battista's response to the chat was unreasonable. Such a view is self-serving and is devoid of credibility. As noted, the chat was offensive on numerous levels. It is not unreasonable that a third party reader of the chat's transcript would become offended.

Are there people who might not have been offended? There are. However, that does not make those who do become upset unreasonable.

Van Pelt engaged in a blame the victim exercise. Battista saw the chat and became upset by its crudeness. Objectively, the chat was crude. It would have been better for Van Pelt to indicate mea culpa without trying mitigate the misconduct by in some way blaming Battista for the situation in which he currently finds herself.

Another significant aspect of Van Pelt's defense is his allegedly being offended by Bleekinger's reference to some special needs students as being in the low group. As indicated above, Van Pelt's view of this term is based on nothing other than her opinion. While the District cited professional literature that refers to a low group, Lechelt and Van Pelt evidently decided that they were was the final authorities on this matter. Moreover, even if Van Pelt believed that he had a serious philosophical difference with Bleekinger, did he really think that making offensive and discriminatory comments about special needs students was the appropriate way to address the issue?

Van Pelt's purported reaction to low group suggests a possible sensitivity to this issue. Perhaps his sensitivity stems from the fact that his brother has/had special needs. That possibility might be understandable. What defies understanding is his justifying his sensitivity while deriding what may have been Battista's sensitivity to a chat that was laden with overtly and extremely offensive statements.

The undersigned adds that the last paragraph is laden with conditional language. That is so because of other Van Pelt statements that stretch the truth.

Van Pelt argued that the chat was private because of FERPA issues. This claim is also without merit. FERPA is a statute that protects the privacy of student records. Student records were in no way discussed at the Endgrade training.

The Arbitrator concludes that this assertion is further evidence of Van Pelt's failure to understand the seriousness of this matter and his propensity for contriving reasons for clearly inappropriate conduct.

It also suggests that his remorse is not sincere. The defenses he employed are transparently flawed and are offered in lieu of taking responsibility for his actions.

Van Pelt suggested that he is an effective professional. Would an effective professional describe Dr. O'Malley as she did? Would such an individual suggest that his hiring practices are based on sexual favors? This question is posed in the context of Dr. O'Malley having read the transcript of the chat multiple times.

Here again, Van Pelt expressed regret for his comments. It is difficult to conclude that he would have initially made very offensive comments that went to the heart of the Superintendent's professionalism and integrity. Given the nature of the comments and Van Pelt's other expressions of remorse, the Arbitrator questions the sincerity of Van Pelt's expression if remorse in connection with Dr. O'Malley.

As to Charge VI Count 1, Van Pelt observed that, under Toys 'R' Us, he is not guilty of sexual harassment. The Arbitrator has addressed this matter in connection with the charge related to the violation of the Board's sexual harassment policy. That analysis need not be repeated here. Needless to say, this argument is not persuasive.

Here again, the Board policy is clear and unambiguous. The Board's policy proscribed sexually offensive language (as set forth in Paragraph 1 of the policy).

Toys 'R' Us is a case that addresses physical and verbal advances. This kind of sexual harassment is covered by Paragraph 2 of the policy.

Van Pelt was accused of sexually offensive language. Therefore, the terms of Paragraph 1 are applicable. In short, Toys 'R' Us has limited relevancy here.

A final element of the defense concerned the interview conducted by Ms. DeLuca after becoming aware of the alleged misconduct. She outlined the interview by indicating the questions asked and the responses received (DX15).It is necessary to comment on this matter since, under just cause, the undertaking of a fair investigation is required.

DeLuca interviewed numerous people. She could not identify all of the possible interviewees but she made a reasonable effort to identify those who should be interviewed. The fact is that a large number of attendees at the training knew little or nothing about the matter at hand.

Van Pelt claimed that many of her comments are not reflected in DeLuca's report. However, at the end of the interview, DeLuca specifically provided Van Pelt with an opportunity to make any additional comments. Evidently, Van Pelt availed herself of the opportunity and DeLuca included them in the summary of the interview.

DeLuca indicated that she took notes during the interview and then transcribed her notes. She was criticized for not preserving her hand written notes. No authority was cited that indicated that handwritten notes must be preserved.

In the final analysis, the resolution of this matter comes down to a credibility determination. On the one hand, aside from the issue over DeLuca's notes, there were no serious provable credibility issues raised in connection with DeLuca.

The same cannot be said relative to Van Pelt. As detailed above, and as will continue to be shown, Van Pelt's responses to various issues have lacked credibility and consistency.

The summary of the interview is lengthy and detailed. De Luca credibly stated that the summary was complete and accurate. In this regard, the undersigned credits DeLuca's testimony.

In a broader context, the Arbitrator is persuaded that DeLuca conducted a fair and comprehensive investigation of the instant matter. This is fundamental to a finding of Just Cause.

One of the defenses raised by Van Pelt is that these charges were brought as a result of anti-union animus. There is no evidence to support such a claim.

Van Pelt challenged the District's reference to his union activities. The reference to his union role was not made in a vacuum. Charge VII concerns his conducting union business during teaching time and/or without the authorization of the principal or the Superintendent.

Interestingly, essentially the same charges were brought against Maria Weber and Maryellen Lechelt. According to the record, they have no official involvement with the union. Is Van Pelt suggesting that the District brought disciplinary charges against two other people in order to charge him? How does he explain many of the facts are undisputed and that he and the other teachers engaging in the chat have been found guilty of many of the charges?

It is significant to note that Van Pelt asserted that he is remorseful for some of his actions. What is he remorseful about if the charges were a ruse to further some unknown agenda to punish him for his union activities? This issue represents one more example of Van Pelt's lack of credibility and unwillingness to assume responsibility for his actions.

Van Pelt made much of his theory that his prior disciplines have no relevancy and his prior loss of a salary increment should not be considered. While the undersigned dismissed Charge VIII, that finding was based on the fact that teachers should not be disciplined twice for the same misconduct.

There was a further reference to the Fulcomer standards. One of them specifically calls for a recitation of prior disciplinary actions.

The same is true of whether the charged teacher was ever denied a salary increment. Thus, the Fulcomer standards, which Van Pelt argued should be given significant weight, require consideration of issues that Van Pelt says are irrelevant here.

It must be added that these factors were given consideration in the companion cases. Those teachers benefitted from the analysis. Is the Arbitrator being asked to consider the Fulcomer standards only when it is beneficial to a charged teacher?

This matter is continuing evidence of a lack of consistency in Van Pelt's arguments. It further weakens his credibility.

Van Pelt's treatment of Alysia Battista was especially noteworthy. Consistent with his declaration that the District was establishing a police state through its follow up on Battista's complaint and its implementation of its own policies, he characterized Battista's actions as being part of a big brother venture and that paying attention to her complaints encourages teachers to spy on each other.

He apparently believes that there was little wrong with the chat. Is he suggesting that Battista was fabricating the nature of the chat? Is he implying that viewing offensive and discriminatory conduct in a public and reporting it is big brother?

His co-chatters clearly understood that the chat was improper. They may not have appreciated Battista's reporting it, but they did not argue that Battista was somehow unethical or immoral for doing so.

Van Pelt was in the hearing room throughout the hearing and heard all of the testimony. Perhaps he paid as much attention to what the other charged teachers said as he did to Sara Bleekinger's training session.

Van Pelt claimed that the chat caused no harm to either Battista or Dr. O'Malley. The Arbitrator has found the chat to have been crude, offensive and discriminatory. Van Pelt argued that Battista was the only one who complained about it.

Thus, in his view, unless many people complain, the single complainant should not be afforded the protections offered by Board policies. The reality is that of the approximately 25 attendees at the training, other than the participants in the chat, evidently only two people saw it, Battista and the woman sitting next to her.

The woman sitting next to Battista chose to ignore it. Battista could not or would not do the same. Following Van Pelt's logic, the fact that one person ignored precluded another one from being offended to the point that it interfered with her ability to benefit from training that she sought.

The fact that Van Pelt could not even consider the possibility that Battista was emotionally injured by the vulgarity of the chat says more about Van Pelt than it does about Battista.

Van Pelt does not believe that Dr. O'Malley was injured. He went so far as to indicate that Dr. O'Malley's feeling may have been hurt.

Does Van Pelt seriously think that casting aspersions on Dr. O'Malley's sexual activities and Van Pelt's participation in a chat that suggests that Dr. O'Malley's hiring practices are improper and based on sexual considerations are not injurious to his professional standing? Are the results of the chat to be summarized as Dr. O'Malley having his feelings hurt?

Once again, Van Pelt's inconsistencies are mind-boggling. Van Pelt expressed great remorse and contrition when he testified and then argued that the injury suffered by the Superintendent was limited to hurt feelings.

Van Pelt, when he testified, said that Mr. Platvoet, a District employee involved in computer technology, assured him that the chat would be private. Platvoet was called as a rebuttal witness and denied making such a statement.

What was the result? Van Pelt proceeded to attack Platvoet's technical knowledge. Platvoet was not called to testify as a computer expert. The District called him to confirm or deny what he (Platvoet) allegedly told Van Pelt. When Van Pelt did not get the answers he wanted, he treated Platvoet in the same way he treated Battista.

Van Pelt produced a character witness, Christian Pederson. He testified in positive terms about Van Pelt being an upstanding individual. On cross-examination, he was asked if he was aware of Van Pelt's prior disciplines. He stated that he had no knowledge of them. He then conceded that had he known about these matters, he would not have appeared as a character witness on behalf of Van Pelt.

Van Pelt's treatment of Pederson suggests that his credibility is so poor that he did not even give a person who was willing to help him a clear picture of the person who he is trying to help. If Van Pelt is willing to withhold crucial information from people trying to help him, how much more true of his interactions with people trying to hold him accountable.

A review of the defenses offered by Van Pelt reveals that they are contrived, irrelevant and, in very large measure, meritless. What is equally disturbing is the evidence he produced of his own lack of credibility, terribly poor judgment and disregard for the damage that he does to others.

THE FULCOMER STANDARDS

The Board is seeking the termination of Van Pelt's services as a teacher. He argued that the leading New Jersey case concerning the termination of tenured teachers as a consequence of unbecoming conduct is In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 403 (App. Div. 1967). This was a case in which the Commissioner of Education concluded the Fulcomer engaged in unbecoming conduct and that dismissal was required.. The Appellate Division disagreed and held that the trier of fact must first determine if the respondent teacher engaged in unbecoming conduct and, if so, whether the misconduct warranted discharge or a lesser penalty.

The application of Fulcomer is not mandated. However, it is useful since, like Just Cause, it establishes an objective set of guidelines to be considered in case such as this one.

In this regard, the Court determined that the following factors should be considered:

1. The potential impact on the charged teacher's career.

It is evident that, should Van Pelt be terminated, the District would be required to report the dismissal to the State Board of Examiners for the possible revocation of his teaching certificates. It is reasonable to conclude that a termination in this case would dramatically increase the likelihood of Van Pelt's teaching career being ended in New Jersey and probably in other states.

2. The longevity of Van Pelt's career.

Tyler Van Pelt has been a teacher in New Jersey for about fifteen years. He is a senior teacher and, under certain circumstances, could be given the consideration not afforded teachers with many fewer years of effective service.

However, Fulcomer does not suggest that length of service precludes the discharge of senior teachers. It is simply one factor among others to be considered when determining if termination of services is appropriate.

3. Van Pelt's overall teaching record.

Van Pelt's teaching record is devoid of negative comments. However, the only evaluation he provided in which he was rated on a scale of Developing to Distinguished was for the 2013-14 school year. His overall rating was Accomplished. This rating was second from the top rating.

He provided evaluation for 2012-13, 2009-10, 2008-09 and 2007-08. Those evaluations were much less structured and the evaluations were not pursuant to the scale used in 2013-14. The comments about Van Pelt's performance were reasonably positive and he was recommended continued employment by the school district.

Noticeable by their absence were the evaluations for 2011-12 and 2010-11. No reason was given for their for not being produced. This gives pause for the Arbitrator to consider why two evaluations in a seven year sequence were missing.

4. Van Pelt's teaching ability

A review of Van Pelt's evaluations reveals that there is little evidence of limited teaching ability. With the possible exception of the two missing evaluations, te has been consistently rated positively both as a provisional and a tenured teacher.

5. Whether there was an absence of prior discipline affecting Van Pelt during his employment.

Van Pelt has been disciplined on a number of occasions. He was reprimanded in January 2006 for the improper use of the District's email system. It should be noted that it took several memos from the superintendent for Van Pelt to meet with her over the matter. It required a threat of being charged with insubordination before a meeting was scheduled (DX33). Thus, aside from Board policy, Van Pelt was well aware of the need to use District networks only for educational purposes

An element in the above matter suggests conduct with respect to a Superintendent the lessens one surprise about Van Pelt's treatment of Dr. O'Malley.

While it was not subject of discipline, in October 2006, Van Pelt was held to have intimidated and threatened an assistant principal by stating if I had a dog that shit over and over on my carpet, I would get rid of it. (DX34). This suggests that Van Pelt's resorting to crude and offensive language in a professional setting was not out of character with him when he did so during the chat during the training.

Van Pelt was given formal reprimands in June and September 2007 (DX36 &37). The June reprimand was for being in possession of beer during or after the graduation ceremonies as well as for acting belligerently in the school's office the following day.

The September reprimand was for his failure to provide a signed Technology Agreement and Appendix A of the Alcohol and Drug Free Workplace (DX37). Is this not similar to Van Pelt's disregarding Board policies in the instant matter?

In June 2012, Van Pelt was reprimanded for failing to provide sufficient certification to suggest that an absence was due a medical illness (DX38).

Last, Van Pelt's former wife was District employee. In June 2008, he was arrested and charged with domestic violence. His wife was issued a Temporary Restraining Order. As a result, Van Pelt entered into a Consent Order banning him from being in contact with his former wife. The domestic violence took place while he was off duty. However, in order for it to comply with the Consent Order, the District was required to transfer Van Pelt to another school. Thus, Van Pelt's off duty violence impacted on the District's ability to manage its schools (BX46)

6 . Whether there was an absence of past increment withholdings.

In August 2007, Van Pelt had a salary increment withheld

7. The nature and the gravity of the offenses under all of the circumstances involved.

The misconduct described herein is very serious. He was part of a group of teachers who violated several important Board policies. He made numerous arguments in defense of his actions. As noted above, they were unpersuasive and were given little weight.

8. Evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation.

Van Pelt claimed that he was provoked by certain comments made by Bleekinger. about special needs children. This claimed provocation is without merit.

9. Any harm or injurious effect which Van Pelt's conduct had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

This matter ultimately became public. It had an impact on the manner in which the community views the school. Further, the comments made about Dr. O'Malley had to be personally embarrassing and offensive and could have had the effect of weakening his image as the Superintendent of Schools.

Furthermore, Van Pelt's lack of remorse and assumption of responsibility indicate that he would repeat his misconduct were he to be reinstated. This would result in the need for the Superintendent to devote unreasonable resources to Van Pelt's supervision

Van Pelt argued that the District lacked Just Cause to discharge him. Just cause is a term of art and stems from Enterprise Wire, 46 LA 359 (1966). There are seven tests associated with a determination of whether the Just Cause standards were satisfied. A discussion of those standards follows.

1. Was the employee forewarned of the consequences of his actions?

At its core, Van Pelt was alleged to have breached five Board policies. Van Pelt was on annual notice of the policies and, on September 11, 2014, acknowledged in writing that he was expected to review numerous policies, including the ones relevant here, and to abide by them (DX17).

These policies are part of the instant record. A review of the text of the policies reveals that most of them explicitly state that violation of the policies subject the person who breaches them to discipline. The other policies make it clear that violations of the policies will not be tolerated.

Thus, Van Pelt knew or should have known the contents of relevant Board policies. He also knew or should have known that breaching the policies could lead to discipline being imposed.

2. Were the rules/policies reasonably related to business efficiency and employee performance?

These policies relate to the manner in which employees are expected to respect the rights of others to have a work environment that is free from offensive and discriminatory conduct of others in the workplace. One of the policies regulates the use of employer owned computers and networks.

All of these policies relate to business efficiency in that they are needed to maximize the productivity of employees. They also prevent the abuse of District equipment by limiting the use of the equipment to educational purposes. Education is the business of a school district and the employees can be expected to conduct themselves and to use District equipment to further the educational process. Violations of these policies deter the actualization of the District's educational program.

3. Was an effort made to determine if the employee was guilty as charged?

The instant matter was received and was promptly investigated. The charged employees were interviewed by Ms. DeLuca, the District's Affirmative Action Officer, in fewer than 30 days from the date of the training session at which the misconduct took place. Ms. DeLuca interviewed Van Pelt and his responses were taken down in handwritten form and then transcribed to a printed document.

Other attendees were interviewed by their principals. If it became apparent that they were not guilty of misconduct or knew nothing about the misconduct, they were not interviewed by Ms. DeLuca.

4. Was the investigation fair and objective?

Ms. DeLuca could not identify all of the attendees and some resigned and were no longer employees of the District The three people who participated in the chat were interviewed by Ms.

DeLuca. The interview questions were related to the chat and the interviewees were afforded the opportunity to explain their actions and to express their remorse.

The approach taken by Ms. DeLuca was consistent and focused on the specifics of the chat. Some of the terms used by the interviewees were slang and they were asked to define those terms. In sum, the investigation was fair and objective.

5. Was there substantial evidence of guilt?

The text of the chat was downloaded from the computers. Thus, it is unchallenged that the transcript of the chat is an accurate reflection of the comments made. Those comments formed the basis for the charges. Thus, the guilt of the employees was proved by substantial evidence.

6. Were the rules/policies applied fairly and without discrimination?

The policies were applied to all of the chat participants equally. They were the only employees who were guilty of the instant misconduct.

There were another person who violated the policies. He resigned shortly after the misconduct came to light. Thus, everyone who was purportedly guilty was charged and the same penalty was sought for all three of them.

7. Was the discipline related to the seriousness of the offense and the employee's past record?

Van Pelt violated several Board policies. He was in notice that he was required to abide by them.

His violation of the policies resulted on his use of sexually offensive offense language concerning a significant number of identified and unidentified people. His misconduct resulted in Alysia Battista being upset such that she could not benefit from training that was designed to improve her skills and those of other people.

He seriously denigrated Dr. O'Malley. The chat might have demeaned him professionally and damaged both his and the District's reputation for appropriate hiring and promotions.

He also violated the CBA by conducting union business at times when he was to be engaged in professional activities. His misconduct in this regard was not a singular occurrence. He exacerbated the issue by making a claim that he could not substantiate that a class that he was scheduled to teach was attending an assembly program.

Therefore, his misconduct was serious and rises to the level of unbecoming professional conduct. This must be placed in the context of his prior record.

As detailed in the section devoted to the Fulcomer standards, Van Pelt's record suggests that he has been the subject of prior warnings and reprimands. In addition, he also engaged in off duty conduct that impacted on the District in that it needed to transfer him to another school in order for a Consent Order to be honored. Moreover, as noted above, Van Pelt's conduct resulted in his having a salary increment withheld.

Given the seriousness of the misconduct and in the light of Van Pelt's disciplinary history, the District had Just Cause to discipline him and to seek his termination.

CONCLUSIONS

The first two paragraphs of Van Pelt's arguments reflect his reflections on his assessment of his own culpability. He thinks he did nothing wrong and believes that these charges are improper since other people are to blame for the chat and its aftermath. After all is said and done, Van Pelt does not hold himself accountable for his own misconduct.

A review of the Fulcomer and Just Cause standards persuades the Arbitrator that the Board was justified in serving disciplinary charges on Tyler Van Pelt. While he has expressed remorse, it is apparent that these expressions lack sincerity and his remorse s for having been discovered for having engaged in very serious misconduct.

He superficially accepted responsibility for his actions. However, when his statements are closely examined he finds fault with Alysia Battista, Margaret DeLuca, Sara Bleekinger and even Don Platvoet.

But for his own actions, he would not be in his current situation. It is entirely clear that he does not accept responsibility for his own actions. He initiated the chat and played a major role in setting its tone. He, on his own, violated valid and rational Board policies. Instead of admitting his guilt and accepting the consequences, he chose to try to hold others responsible.

What distinguishes Van Pelt from the two other chat members, is his record. He tried to characterize his prior misconduct as being remote in time. That is not true and, in addition, as noted above, there are similarities between these charges and the earlier misconduct.

It is evident that Van Pelt believes that he did little that was wrong. In that context and in the presence if having been disciplined in the past such that he should know that employers are entitled to have employees who act in a professional, appropriate and mature manner. Thus, the Arbitrator concludes that were Tyler Van Pelt to be reinstated, it is very likely that he would repeat the kind of misconduct that preceded this proceeding.

Counsel for the parties researched the relevant issues and presented numerous cases for the consideration of the Arbitrator. The cases were reviewed and considered. However, given the number of cases cited by both parties and their non-precedential nature, the cases are not cited in the Opinion.

Finally, at the outset, the District moved to have Van Pelt's Answer to the Sworn Charges and his application for an extension to file said Answer deemed untimely. Its application to the Arbitrator sought to have Van Pelt summarily dismissed. Given the above findings, that application need not be addressed at this time.

Thus, the Arbitrator finds that appropriate penalty to be imposed on Tyler Van Pelt is termination of his services as a teacher in the Edison Township school district. Therefore, based on the above, the undersigned makes the following

1. Tyler Van Pelt is guilty of Charge I -Counts 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, Charge III, Charge V,Charge VI-Counts 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7 and Charge VI.I

2. The following charges are dismissed: Charge II, Charge IV, Charge VI- Count 3 and Charge VIII.

3. The penalty imposed on Tyler Van Pelt is termination of his services as a teacher in the Edison Township school district.

RESPONDENT.	:

On April 30, 2015, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner granted summary decision to petitioner Board and assessed respondent $15,669 in tuition to compensate the Board for his child's period of ineligible attendance in the public schools of the district during the 2013-2014 school year, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that respondent has failed to comply with his decision, and requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the assessment on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. Respondent offered no reasons why the judgment against him should not be so docketed, although given an opportunity by this agency to do so.

Accordingly – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10 – Jack Gulli is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $15,669, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY AND NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioners – four Jersey City charter schools – challenged the manner in which charter schools are funded pursuant to the Charter School Program Act of 1995 (CSPA), N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1 to -18, and the School Funding Reform Act of 2008 (SFRA), N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-43 to -63. Petitioners contend that they are statutorily and constitutionally entitled to additional funding, specifically a portion of the State "Adjustment Aid" allocated to the Jersey City Board of Education. They further assert that New Jersey's Thorough and Efficient education requirement mandates that charter schools receive at least the "base per pupil amount" of funding, and this requires a portion of Jersey City's Adjustment Aid to raise the city's charter school funding to the mandated minimum level. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there is no genuine issue of material fact herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the funding for charter schools is specifically prescribed by statute; pursuant to the statutory framework, petitioners are not entitled to receive a portion of the Adjustment Aid received by Jersey City; the Appellate Division has recognized that charter schools are not required to be funded at the same level as traditional public schools; the funding scheme for charter schools represents the Legislature's judgment in maximizing the allocation of scarce State resources; the thorough and efficient mandate in the New Jersey Constitution requires that all students have an equal educational opportunity; a funding disparity between petitioners' schools and traditional public schools in Jersey City does not demonstrate a lack of equal educational opportunity for petitioners' students as their attendance at a charter school is voluntary; they have the option of attending a traditional public school in Jersey City that receives Adjustment Aid, and are therefore not being denied Adjustment Aid. The ALJ concluded that petitioners failed to establish a claim under the thorough and efficient clause of the State Constitution, and have not demonstrated that current funding received deprives petitioners' students of a thorough and efficient education. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision to the respondents, denied petitioners' motion for summary decision, and dismissed the petition.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY AND NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,	:

This controversy involves a challenge to the manner in which charter schools are funded pursuant to the Charter School Program Act of 1995 (CSPA), N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1 to -18, and the School Funding Reform Act of 2008 (SFRA), N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-43 to -63. The record and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have petitioner's exceptions – filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – and the New Jersey State Department of Education's ("Department") reply to the exceptions. The untimely reply filed by the Board of Education of the City of Jersey City ("Jersey City BOE") was not considered by the Commissioner in rendering this determination.[1]

The petitioners – four charter schools located in Jersey City – contend that they are statutorily and constitutionally entitled to additional funding. (Amended Petition[2] at 2)

[1] Jersey City BOE never sought an extension of time to file its reply, which was submitted over a month late.

[2] On January 23, 2012, the Acting Commissioner determined not to consider this matter as one for declaratory ruling pursuant to his discretionary authority under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-2.1(a), but instead found that it should proceed as a Petition of Appeal.

Specifically, petitioners assert that Jersey City BOE should be required to share its State "Adjustment Aid"[3] with petitioners pursuant to the CSPA and the SFRA. In further support of their claim, petitioners argue that the Thorough and Efficient (T&E) clause of the New Jersey Constitution requires charter schools to be funded at mandated minimum levels and that – without a portion of Jersey City BOE's Adjustment Aid – petitioners' funding falls below that minimum. Therefore, petitioners maintain they should receive at least the same "base per pupil amount"[4] given to the district's public schools. Respondents contend that petitioners are not entitled to any of Jersey City BOE's Adjustment Aid under the plain language of the CSPA or the SFRA, and that petitioners fail to establish a valid claim for additional funding under the T&E clause of the New Jersey Constitution.

Following transmittal to the OAL, Jersey City BOE and the Department filed motions for summary decision, and petitioners cross-moved for summary decision. Ultimately, the Administrative Law Judge issued a comprehensive Initial Decision concluding that: 1) the matter was ripe for summary decision; 2) pursuant to the relevant statutory framework, petitioners are not entitled to receive any portion of Jersey City BOE's Adjustment Aid; and 3) petitioners failed to establish a claim under the T&E clause of the New Jersey Constitution. In their exceptions, petitioners express their disagreement with the outcome and essentially recast and reiterate the arguments presented below, which were comprehensively addressed by the ALJ in her Initial Decision. Consequently, the Commissioner finds petitioners' exceptions do not warrant additional discussion.[5] [3] "Adjustment Aid" is defined in the SFRA, at N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58, and discussed in detail by the ALJ in her Initial Decision.

[4] "Base per pupil amount" is defined in the SFRA, at N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-45, and discussed in detail by the ALJ in her Initial Decision.

[5] The Department replied to petitioners' exceptions and expressed its support for the ALJ's findings of fact and conclusions of law.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter for the reasons set forth therein. Accordingly, respondents' motions for summary decision are granted, petitioners' cross-motion for summary decision is denied, and the amended petition is hereby dismissed.

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners filed an Amended Petition for Declaratory Ruling that (1) respondent Jersey City Board of Education (Jersey City) is required to pass along to Jersey City charter schools 90 percent per pupil enrolled in the charter school of the Adjustment Aid it receives from the State; (2) petitioners must be funded at constitutionally mandated minimum levels under the thorough-and-efficient clause of the New Jersey Constitution, N.J. Const. art. VIII, § 4, ¶ 1; (3) the current funding formula, which petitioners allege arises from a misinterpretation of a statutory ambiguity concerning Adjustment Aid, has resulted in petitioners receiving a level of funding below the constitutional minimum; and (4) petitioners are entitled to receive, at a minimum, the "base per pupil amount" of funding determined by the Commissioner of Education and the Legislature as necessary to satisfy the State's obligation to provide a thorough and efficient education to all children in its public schools. The Department of Education (the Department) and Jersey City filed answers to the Amended Petition, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case. Subsequently, the Department and Jersey City filed motions for summary decision, petitioners cross-moved for summary decision, and oral argument on the parties' respective motions was entertained.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioners are four charter schools located within the Jersey City School District. The Learning Community Charter School (Learning Community) opened in September 1997 with ninety-eight students in grades K–2, and currently serves approximately 520 students in grades K–8. (Amended Petition at ¶36.) The Soaring Heights Charter School (Soaring Heights) is one of the first thirteen charter schools formed in New Jersey and serves 250 students in grades K–8. (Id. at ¶37.) The Ethical Community

Charter School (Ethical Community) was founded in 2009 with kindergarten and first-grade students, the school has added a grade each year, and it has approximately 200 students. (Id. at ¶38.) The Golden Door Charter School (Golden Door) was founded in 1998 as one of Jersey City's first charter schools and it currently serves approximately 500 students in grades K–8. (Id. at ¶39.)

For the 2008–2009, 2009–2010, 2010–2011, and 2011–2012 school years, Jersey City received the following State aid:[1]

School Year	Total State Aid	Equalization Aid	Adjustment Aid
2008–2009	$474,786,062	$277,591,645	$110,391,114

2011–2012	$484,373,394	$270,464,463	$115,906,457

In addition to State aid, Jersey City's budget was also supported by local tax levy as follows:[3]

School Year	Local Tax Levy	Local Tax Levy Inflated by CPI
2008–2009	$82,809,873	$85,203,078
2009–2010	$86,122,268	$88,998,752
2010–2011	$93,012,049	$93,012,049
2011–2012	$102,313,254	$103,571,707

For the 2008–2009, 2009–2010, 2010–2011, and 2011–2012 school years, petitioners received the following funds:

[1] See Exhibits A, B, C, and D attached to the Department's brief.
[2] Although the Department's brief states that the total State aid and Equalization Aid were $474,325,497 and $277,054,829 respectively, Exhibit B reflects total State aid of $477,325,497 and Exhibits B and F reflect Equalization Aid of $277,385,300.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The Summary-Decision Standard

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), summary decision "may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This rule is substantially similar to the summary-judgment rule embodied in the New Jersey Court Rules. See Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954). In Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995), the New Jersey Supreme Court addressed the appropriate test to be employed in deciding the motion:

> [A] determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not . . . to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." . . . If there exists a single, unavoidable resolution of the alleged disputed issue of fact, that issue should be considered insufficient to constitute a "genuine" issue of material fact for purposes of Rule 4:46-2.

[8] See Exhibit L attached to the Department's brief.

In evaluating the merits of the motion, all inferences of doubt are drawn against the movant and in favor of the party against whom the motion is directed. Judson, supra, 17 N.J. at 75. However, "[w]hen a motion for summary decision is made and supported, an adverse party in order to prevail must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b).

The pivotal issue presented in this matter is a legal issue involving an interpretation of the relevant statutes governing funding for charter schools and whether petitioners are entitled to receive a portion of the Adjustment Aid provided to Jersey City. I CONCLUDE that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the matter is ripe for summary decision.

The Charter School Program Act

In 1995, the Legislature enacted the Charter School Program Act of 1995 (CSPA), N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1 to -18. In connection therewith, the Legislature found that "the establishment of charter schools as part of this State's program of public education can assist in promoting comprehensive educational reform by providing a mechanism for the implementation of a variety of educational approaches which may not be available in the traditional public school classroom." N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-2. The Legislature further determined that "the establishment of a charter school program is in the best interests of the students of this State and it is therefore the public policy of the State to encourage and facilitate the development of charter schools." Ibid.

A charter school is "a public school operated under a charter granted by the [C]ommissioner" of Education (the Commissioner). N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-3(a). It "is operated independently of a local board of education and is managed by a board of trustees," who are "deemed to be public agents authorized by the State Board of Education to supervise and control the charter school." Ibid. An initial charter granted by the Commissioner is for a term of four years. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-17. A charter may later be renewed for a five-year period. Ibid.

Charter schools are open to all students on a space-available basis. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-7. However, enrollment preference must be given to students who reside in the school district in which the charter school is located, and the school may not charge tuition to district residents. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-8. Student enrollment in a charter school is completely voluntary, and a student may withdraw from a charter school at any time and enroll in a traditional public school. See N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-9.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12, charter schools are funded on a "per pupil" basis. Specifically, the statute instructs in pertinent part:

> The school district of residence shall pay directly to the charter school for each student enrolled in the charter school who resides in the district an amount equal to 90% of the sum of the budget year equalization aid per pupil and the prebudget year general fund tax levy per pupil inflated by the CPI rate most recent to the calculation. In addition, the school district of residence shall pay directly to the charter school the security categorical aid attributable to the student and a percentage of the district's special education categorical aid equal to the percentage of the district's special education students enrolled in the charter school and, if applicable, 100% of preschool education aid. The district of residence shall also pay directly to the charter school any federal funds attributable to the student.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(b).][9]

In addition to the above funding, charter schools are permitted to "[s]olicit and accept gifts or grants for school purposes." N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-6(g). Such gifts may include real property for use as a school facility. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-6(c). Charter schools may also receive federal funds. See N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-10.

In order to receive its charter, a charter school must undergo an extensive application process. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-5. The application must include a financial plan for the charter school. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-5(l). "That plan . . . must be formulated within the funding parameters [in the CSPA] providing for ninety percent per pupil operational funding and no facilities funding." J.D. ex rel. Scipio-Derrick v. Davy, 415 N.J. Super. 375, 380 (App. Div. 2010). The financial plan must also "satisfy the Commissioner that the charter school can adequately serve the educational needs of the prospective students." Id. at 381. Students who attend a charter school are "required to meet the same testing and academic performance standards as established by law and regulation for public school students," and must "also meet any additional assessment indicators which are included within the charter approved by the [C]ommissioner." N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-5(d). During the operation of a charter school, the Commissioner must "annually assess whether each charter school is meeting the goals of its charter, and shall conduct a comprehensive review prior to granting a renewal of the charter." N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-16(a). The Commissioner may further revoke a school's charter if the school has not fulfilled any condition of its charter or if the school has violated any provision of its charter. N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-17. The Commissioner may also place a charter school on probationary status to allow implementation of a remedial plan and, if that plan is unsuccessful, the charter may be summarily revoked. Ibid.

[9] The statute further provides that, "in the case of a student who was not included in the district's projected resident enrollment for the school year, the State shall pay 100% of the amount required pursuant to [N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(b)] for the first year of the student's enrollment in the charter school." N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(d).

The School Funding Reform Act

In 2008, the Legislature passed the School Funding Reform Act of 2008 (SFRA), N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-43 to -63. The SFRA "is the product of the State's most recent, lengthy and painstaking effort to craft a redesigned school funding formula that satisfies the constitutional standard." Abbott v. Burke, 199 N.J. 140, 147 (2009) (Abbott XX). It was designed "to resolve the question of the level of funding required to provide a thorough and efficient system of education for all New Jersey school children," and to develop and implement "an equitable and adequate school funding formula [that] will not only ensure that the State's students have access to a constitutional education as defined by the core curriculum content standards [CCCS], but also may help to reduce property taxes and assist communities in planning to meet their educational expenses." N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-44(q). That funding formula "accounts for the individual characteristics of school districts and the realities of their surroundings, including the need for additional resources to address the increased disadvantages created by high concentrations of children at-risk." N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-44(h).

The New Jersey Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the SFRA in Abbott XX and concluded that "[t]he State has constructed a fair and equitable means designed to fund the costs of a thorough and efficient education, measured against delivery of the CCCS." Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 172. The Court explained that the SFRA is > a weighted school funding formula. SFRA identifies a base cost associated with the education of an elementary pupil without any particular special needs. Once identified, the per-pupil amount is increased to reflect characteristics that are widely accepted as increasing the cost of education. Those characteristics are: 1) grade level, and whether the pupil is 2) an at-risk pupil (defined as one eligible for a free- or reduced-price lunch), 3) a Limited English Proficiency (LEP) pupil, or 4) a special education student of mild, moderate, or severe classification.

The funding formula includes an Adequacy Budget that is "wealth equalized, which means that it is based on the community's wealth and ability to provide funding through local resources." Id. at 153. The Adequacy Budget includes four categories of aid: "'1) a base aid amount for elementary, middle, and high school students, 2) additional weights for at-risk and LEP students, and vocational districts, 3) two-thirds of the census-based costs for special education, and 4) all census-based costs for speech-only special education.'" Ibid. (citation omitted); see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-51.

"The per-pupil amount is intended to represent the cost of educating an elementary school student, that is, of providing that student with the CCCS and extracurricular and co-curricular activities necessary for a thorough and efficient education." Id. at 153; see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-45 (defining "base per pupil amount" as "the cost per elementary pupil of delivering the core curriculum content standards and extracurricular and cocurricular activities necessary for a thorough and efficient education"). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-49, the "base per pupil amount" for the 2008–2009 school year was $9,649, and the base per pupil amount is subject to adjustment in later years. According to the Education Funding Report submitted by Acting Commissioner Christopher D. Cerf dated February 23, 2012, the base per pupil amount (elementary) was $9,971 for fiscal years 2010 and 2011; $10,256 for fiscal year 2012; and $10,555 (recommended) for fiscal year 2013. (See Exhibit E attached to Petitioner's Brief at 68.)

In accordance with the statutory framework, the base per pupil amount is adjusted upward using specific weighing factors. Grade-level weights are applied to account for the additional resources needed to educate higher grade levels. Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 154; see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-50. The formula also includes additional weights for "at-risk" and LEP pupils. Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 154; see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-51.[10] There is also an adjustment for geographic cost. Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 155; see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-51. The total calculation is the school district's Adequacy Budget. Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 155.

The Adequacy Budget is not the amount of State aid provided to a school district. Rather, the school district's local fair share (LFS) must first be determined. See N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-52 (setting forth the formula to calculate a district's local share). The difference between a school district's Adequacy Budget and its LFS is the amount of State aid due the school district in the form of Equalization Aid. Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 155. As the Court explained in Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 155:

> Equalization Aid is State-provided aid to support the Adequacy Budget by funding the difference between a district's Local Fair Share (LFS) and its Adequacy Budget. A district's LFS is the amount it is required to contribute in support of the Adequacy Budget. That amount is determined by adding a district's equalized property wealth and its equalized income wealth. Under SFRA, a district must provide the lesser of either its LFS, as calculated using [10] The SFRA defines "at-risk pupils" as "those resident pupils from households with a household income at or below the most recent federal poverty guidelines available on October 15 of the prebudget year multiplied by 1.85." N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-45.

> SFRA's formula, or the local share it raised in the previous year.

The SFRA also provides for Educational Adequacy Aid, which is aid "provided to certain Abbott districts currently spending below their Adequacy Budgets," and "is intended to help bring the district up to adequacy if the district is failing to meet education adequacy standards or is municipally overburdened." Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 157; see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58(b). The SFRA further includes provisions for Categorical Aid, which is provided to districts for certain specific education expenses, such as a portion of the costs for special education, security aid, preschool aid, extraordinary aid for special education and transportation aid. See Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 155–57; N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-54 to -57.

As part of the SFRA, the Legislature also created Adjustment Aid. As explained in Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 157, 165:

> Adjustment Aid is provided as transition assistance to SFRA's funding methodology. It is designed to enable districts that are spending above their Adequacy Budget to maintain their existing level of spending without significant tax levy increases. Adjustment Aid is provided if the sum of a district's Equalization Aid, Categorical Aid, Extraordinary Aid, and Transportation Aid is less than the district's 2007–2008 spending, plus two percent. If a district's current-year aid is less than that amount, the district receives Adjustment Aid for the difference.
>
>
> Adjustment Aid ensures that no district in 2008–2009 will receive less aid than it received in the 2007–2008 year plus two percent. The amount of funding then continues in subsequent years so that no district will receive less than its 2008–2009 aid.

N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58(a), which addresses Adjustment Aid, states:

> (1) For the 2008–2009 school year, each school district and county vocational school district shall receive adjustment aid in such amount as to ensure that the district receives the greater of the amount of State aid calculated for the district pursuant to the provisions of this act or the State aid received by the district for the 2007–2008 school year multiplied by 102%. The State aid received by the district for the 2007–2008 school year shall include the following aid categories: Core Curriculum Standards Aid, Supplemental Core Curriculum Standards Aid, Education Opportunity Aid, Above Average Enrollment Growth Aid, High Expectations for Learning Proficiency Aid, Instructional Supplement Aid, Demonstrably Effective Program Aid, Stabilization Aid, Supplemental Stabilization Aid, Adult and Postsecondary Education Grants, Bilingual Education Aid, Special Education Aid, County Vocational Program Aid, Transportation Aid, School Choice Aid, Consolidated Aid, Additional Formula Aid, Full-day Kindergarten Supplemental Aid, Targeted-At-Risk Aid, Abbott-Bordered District Aid, Nonpreschool ECPA, Extraordinary Special Education Aid paid in 2006-2007, and Aid for Enrollment Adjustments, taking into consideration the June 2008 payment made in July 2008.

(2) For the 2009–2010 and 2010–2011 school years a school district or county vocational school district shall receive adjustment aid in such amount as to ensure that the district receives the greater of the amount of State aid calculated for the district pursuant to the provisions of this act or the State aid, other than educational adequacy aid, received by the district for the 2008–2009 school year.

(3) For the 2011–2012 school year and for each school year thereafter, a school district or county vocational school district that does not have a decline in its weighted enrollment, adjusted for bilingual education pupils and at-risk pupils, between the 2008–2009 school year and the budget year that is greater than 5% shall receive adjustment aid in such amount as to ensure that the district receives the greater of the amount of State aid calculated pursuant to the provisions of this act or the State aid, other than educational adequacy aid, received by the district for the 2008–2009 school year.

(4) For the 2011–2012 school year and for each school year thereafter, a school district or county vocational school district that has a decline in its weighted enrollment, adjusted for bilingual education pupils and at-risk pupils, between the 2008–2009 school year and the budget year that is greater than 5% shall have its adjustment aid reduced in an amount equal to the district's 2008–2009 per pupil adjustment aid > amount multiplied by the decline in its resident enrollment that is greater than 5%.

> [Emphasis added.]

Against this backdrop, petitioners aver that the Commissioner is required to ensure that each Jersey City charter school receives 90 percent of the Adjustment Aid paid by the State to Jersey City, proportional to each child enrolled in that charter school, under N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-43 to -63. (Amended Petition at ¶47.) Petitioners argue that the SFRA "establishes an objective measurement of the 'base per pupil amount' necessary to meet 'core curriculum content standards' to provide a thorough and efficient public education," "the current funding of Jersey City charter schools fails to meet this constitutionally mandated minimum," and "[t]his shortfall is the result of a statutory ambiguity concerning the Adjustment Aid paid by the State to Jersey City." Petitioners maintain that "[b]ecause of Jersey City's extensive use of long-term corporate tax-abatements, Adjustment Aid is a critical component of school funding in Jersey City" and has "become essential and indispensable State-provided aid in support of the per pupil Adequacy Budget." Petitioners contend that Jersey City's tax abatements "drastically decrease the general fund tax levy, thereby severely reducing local revenue for Jersey City schools"; "[a]s a result, the Local Fair Share . . . bears no relation to the amount of tax revenue Jersey City actually collects"; and "[c]onsequently, Jersey City's Equalization Aid calculation, which is supposed to support the per pupil Adequacy Budget, is suppressed." Petitioners aver that, "[t]o ensure that Jersey City can meet its Adequacy Budget, Jersey City schools depend upon the receipt of substantial financial assistance from the State in the form of Adjustment Aid," and the "Adjustment Aid statute is the legislative means by which schools in districts with a smaller tax base and insufficient Equalization Aid can maintain funding at constitutionally adequate levels." Petitioners urge that the "Legislature simply did not anticipate the critical shortfall experienced by Jersey City charter schools as a result of Jersey City tax abatements, which artificially reduce both the tax levy and Equalization Aid as sources of funding," and the "Legislature did not intend that [Jersey City] retain Adjustment Aid allocated based upon charter school students it does not educate." Petitioners argue that the Adjustment Aid statute and the CSPA should be interpreted to require that petitioners are entitled to receive their fair share of State Adjustment Aid "to comport with the objective financial standard set by the Commissioner and the Legislature as the minimum constitutional level of funding for public school students." In short, the Department and Jersey City maintain that petitioners are not entitled to Adjustment Aid pursuant to the governing statutes.

The funding for charter schools is specifically prescribed by statute. The issues presented necessitate an interpretation of two statutes: N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(b), the provision in the CSPA governing the aid to be paid to charter schools, and N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58(a), the provision in the SFRA authorizing Adjustment Aid.

The principles governing statutory construction are well-settled. The "overriding objective in determining the meaning of a statute is to 'effectuate the legislative intent in light of the language used and the objects sought to be achieved.'" McCann v. Clerk of Jersey City, 167 N.J. 311, 320 (2001) (citation omitted). The general rule of statutory construction requires an examination of the language of a statute to determine whether the language is clear or ambiguous and susceptible to more than one interpretation. "If the statute is clear and unambiguous on its face and admits of only one interpretation, [it is necessary to] delve no deeper than the act's literal terms to define the Legislature's intent." State v. Butler, 89 N.J. 220, 226 (1982). As the Supreme Court explained in Murray v. Plainfield Rescue Squad, 210 N.J. 581, 592 (2012) (citations omitted)

> [t]he objective of all statutory interpretation is to discern and effectuate the intent of the Legislature. To achieve that objective, we begin by looking at the statute's plain language, ascribing to the words used "their ordinary meaning and significance." We do not view the statutory words in isolation but "in context with related provisions so as to give sense to the legislation as a whole." If the Legislature's intent is clear on the face of the statute, then we must apply the law as written. It is not our function to rewrite a plainly written statute or to presume that the Legislature meant something other than what it conveyed in its clearly expressed language.

The CSPA establishes a discrete funding mechanism for charter schools, including a specific list of the various types of aid that a school district of residence must directly pay to the charter school for each resident student enrolled in the charter school. Pursuant to the expressed and unambiguous language of N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(b), the payments that the school district must make to the charter school for each student enrolled in the charter school who resides in the district are limited to: (1) "an amount equal to 90% of the sum of the budget year equalization aid per pupil and the prebudget year general fund tax levy per pupil inflated by the [most recent] CPI rate"; (2) "the security categorical aid attributable to the student"; (3) "a percentage of the district's special education categorical aid equal to the percentage of the district's special education students enrolled in the charter school"; (4) "100% of preschool education aid" if applicable; and (5) "any federal funds attributable to the student." Petitioners do not assert that Jersey City has failed to pay them the funding detailed in the above five categories but, rather, claim that they are also entitled to receive a share of Jersey City's Adjustment Aid.

Succinctly stated, the plain and unambiguous language of the statute does not provide that charter schools are entitled to 90 percent, or some other percentage, of all aid received by the school district. Rather, the Legislature expressly enumerated and limited the specific types of aid that must be paid to charter schools. Adjustment Aid is not one of the designated funding sources for charter schools, and the statute does not impose any requirement that a portion of the Adjustment Aid received by a school district must be shared with charter schools.

Similarly, N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58(a) is clear and unambiguous as to the intended recipients of Adjustment Aid. The statute specifically directs that Adjustment Aid is to be provided to a "school district" and a "county vocational school district." Charter schools are not listed among the recipients of such aid. They are also not included in the SFRA definitions of a "school district" or "county vocational school district." See N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-45.[11] The plain language of the statute limits the intended recipients of Adjustment Aid and does not suggest that any portion of the Adjustment Aid received by a school district should be passed on to charter schools in the school district. And, no provision in the SFRA expands the nature of the funding provided for in the CSPA that charter schools are entitled to receive.

[11] A "school district" is defined as any local or regional school district established pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:8-1 et seq. or N.J.S.A. 18A:13-1 et seq., and a "county vocational school district" is defined as any entity established pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:54-11 et seq. N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-45.

I concur with respondents' position that the CSPA and the SFRA are both clear and unambiguous regarding the funding due to charter schools and the recipients of the SFRA-created Adjustment Aid, and that the Adjustment Aid petitioners seek is not authorized by the SFRA, the CSPA or any other statute. The absence of any reference to Adjustment Aid in N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(b), and the absence of any reference to charter schools in N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58(a), evidences the Legislature's intent that Adjustment Aid funding was intended solely for the school district. "The Legislature is presumed familiar with prior legislation" and, had the Legislature intended to include Adjustment Aid as a funding source for charter schools, "it would have been an easy matter to have expressed such an intent" in either the CSPA or the SFRA. N.J. Coal. of Health Care Prof'ls v. N.J. Dep't of Banking & Ins., 323 N.J. Super. 207, 256 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 162 N.J. 485 (1999). Indeed, although Adjustment Aid was created as part of the SFRA, and certain changes were also made to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12 during the enactment of the SFRA, the Legislature made no change to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-12(b) to add Adjustment Aid as part of the funding scheme for charter schools. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that, pursuant to the statutory framework, petitioners are not entitled to receive a portion of the Adjustment Aid received by Jersey City.

Petitioners further argue that, without receiving Adjustment Aid, their students are being denied a thorough and efficient education in violation of the New Jersey Constitution. Petitioners assert that "[t]he result of Jersey City's unique funding situation is a tremendous disparity in 'base per pupil funding' and 'actual per pupil funding' between [Jersey] City's non-charter public schools and charter public schools," and that this "disparity" is not only "unfair," but "is unconstitutional because it results in charter school funding below the constitutionally mandated minimum amount of funding necessary to provide a thorough and efficient education to Petitioners' students."[12] Petitioners contend that "[c]harter school students in Jersey City, like their non-charter school peers, are constitutionally entitled to receive a thorough and efficient public school education"; petitioners do not "receive the 'base per pupil amount' defined by the Legislature as necessary for 'delivering the core curriculum content standards and extracurricular and cocurricular activities necessary for a thorough and efficient education'"; and, without petitioners receiving their fair share of State Adjustment Aid, "the funding of Jersey City charter schools does not meet the constitutionally mandated minimum necessary to provide a thorough and efficient education." Petitioners further note that, because charter schools are excluded from receiving State or local funding for facilities, they must also pay for facility expenses out of their operating budgets and, consequently, their "per pupil expenditures on instructional academic services fall well below the objective minimum amount of funding needed to deliver the core curriculum content standards and extracurricular activities necessary for a thorough and efficient education, as determined by the Legislature and Commissioner." Petitioners assert that they "cannot long survive, much less grow and thrive, in this precarious funding predicament," and seek a ruling that "Jersey City charter schools are entitled to receive their fair share of State Adjustment Aid so that they are funded at least at the minimum level required to provide their students a thorough and efficient education, as required by the New Jersey Constitution." The Department and Jersey City dispute petitioners' constitutional claim.

The New Jersey Constitution requires that the Legislature must "provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools for the instruction of all the children in the State between the ages of five and eighteen." N.J. Const. art. VIII, § 4, ¶ 1. This constitutional mandate requires a funding scheme of public schools that provides all students with an equal educational opportunity. See Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 144; Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287 (1990). In enacting the SFRA, the Legislature similarly declared that "[e]very child in New Jersey must have an opportunity for an education based on academic standards that satisfy constitutional requirements regardless of where the child resides, and public funds allocated to this purpose must be expended to support schools that are thorough and efficient in delivering those educational standards." N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-44(d).

As noted, the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the SFRA in Abbott XX. Pursuant to the SFRA, charter schools are not entitled to receive Adjustment Aid under N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58. Abbott XX further does not indicate that Adjustment Aid was part of the aid in the SFRA formula designed to fund the costs of a thorough and efficient education, measured against delivery of the CCCS. Rather, as the Court explained, this aid was "provided as transition assistance to SFRA's funding methodology" and "designed to enable districts that are spending above their Adequacy Budget to maintain their existing level of spending without significant tax levy increases." Abbott XX, supra, 199 N.J. at 157. Adjustment Aid is also not part of the base per pupil amount (see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-49 and N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-46), and it is not allocated on a per pupil basis (see N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-58). (See also Education Funding Report at 55, noting that Adjustment Aid "is completely unmoored from district size or even student needs," and that "under the SFRA funding formula, no school district can receive less State aid than 102% of its 2007–2008 spending, even where the SFRA itself declares that less State aid would be 'adequate' to provide a 'thorough and efficient' education for the district's students".)

In Davy, the plaintiffs brought a class action on behalf of several thousand Newark charter school students, contending that the Educational Facilities Construction and Financing Act and the CSPA violate their equal protection rights under the New Jersey Constitution because "charter schools receive only ninety percent of the per pupil funding provided to traditional public schools" and "charter schools are excluded from receiving any state or local funding for facilities." Davy, supra, 415 N.J. Super. at 377–78. Although Davy involved an equal protection claim, the underlying "affected right" in that case, as here, was the right to receive a thorough and efficient education. Id. at 391. The Appellate Division recognized:

> Limited state funds are available for funding a thorough and efficient system of education throughout the State. That system stands ready to accommodate all who choose to attend traditional public schools.
> [Id. at 390.]

The court also noted the distinction between charter school students and students in traditional public schools in terms of the voluntary nature of a charter student's enrollment:

> Unlike the students involved in the Robinson and Abbott cases, who, by virtue of their residence, were required to attend specific public schools in their district, plaintiffs' enrollment in their charter schools is completely voluntary. They can withdraw at any time and enroll in the traditional public schools in Newark which are receiving the full funding which they seek for their charter schools. See In re 1999–2000 Abbott v. Burke Implementing Regulations, 348 N.J. Super. 382, 441, 792 A.2d 412 (App. Div. 2002) (rejecting constitutional challenge to regulations for excluding charter schools from the definition of "Abbott districts" because a charter school is an "optional program . . . [and] students may, at any time, exercise the option of withdrawing from the charter school if they wish to benefit from the Abbott remedial measures").
> [Id. at 391–92.][13]

The Appellate Division in Davy further recognized that, while charter schools are not funded in the same manner or to the same level as traditional public schools, the schools are not regulated to the same extent as traditional public schools. Rather, "the legislative history makes clear that charter schools are permitted to seek waiver of most board regulations in order to give them maximum control to devise innovative and creative methods of education," and charter school students, "unlike traditional public school students, receive an education largely exempt from regulation." Id. at 392. The court added:

---

[13] The Appellate Division in In re 1999–2000 Abbott, supra, 348 N.J. Super. at 441 (citation omitted), stated:

> [I]t is our view that the charter school concept does not fit within the Abbott school construct simply because it is an optional program available to parents and students who opt not to accept the advantages and remedial measures placed upon the Abbott school districts. They make this voluntary choice because they wish to participate in a program offering the "potential to improve pupil learning." . . . Unlike the parents of students enrolled in traditional Abbott school districts, parents of charter school students may, at any time, exercise the option of withdrawing from the charter school if they wish to benefit from the Abbott remedial measures.

> [A]ny time plaintiffs or their parents or guardians are dissatisfied with the education plaintiffs are receiving, they are free to give up the benefits conferred on charter schools and enroll in a traditional public school. The voluntariness of the program vitiates any asserted deprivation of a right to receive an education at a school that is fully funded to the same extent as other Newark public schools when charter school students have the unabridged option of attending one of those traditional public schools in their district.

The court noted that "'[t]he justification for the restriction [in charter school funding] is the public need to reduce the diversion of scarce resources from existing traditional public schools so that the State may continue to provide a thorough and efficient education to all students." Id. 393–94.

The Appellate Division found that the Legislature's decision to fund charter schools at the 90 percent per pupil level and to prohibit them from receiving facilities funds was "not an arbitrary decision," and held that the statutes "constituted an effort to ensure a thorough and efficient education for all children, not undermine it." Id. at 395. It further concluded that "this method of legislative compromise was well within the State's purview." Ibid.; see Barone v. Dep't of Human Servs., 107 N.J. 355, 370 (1987) ("State funds available for public assistance programs are limited. It is the Legislature that has the duty to allocate the resources of the State. As long as the classification chosen by the Legislature rationally advances a legitimate governmental objective, it need not be the wisest, the fairest, or the one we would choose. It is not for the courts to determine if there is a better way to allocate resources under these programs.")

Turning to the within matter, as the Appellate Division recognized in Davy, charter schools are not required to be funded at the same level as traditional public schools. Rather, the funding scheme for charter schools represents the Legislature's judgment in maximizing the allocation of scarce State resources and evidences the Legislature's intention to fund charter schools at levels lower than traditional public schools. As observed by Jersey City, petitioners' claim that under the thorough-andefficient clause students in their schools must be funded at the same constitutionally mandated minimum levels as public school students, would, if carried to its logical conclusion, require the invalidation of the current 90 percent per pupil funding for charter schools because it differs from the constitutionally required per pupil funding for the public schools, a contention that the Appellate Division in Davy has already rejected.

The thorough-and-efficient mandate requires that all students have an equal educational opportunity. A funding disparity between petitioners' schools and traditional public schools in Jersey City does not demonstrate a lack of equal educational opportunity for petitioners' students. Rather, as the Appellate Division in Davy explained:

> Throughout the Robinson and Abbott decisions, it is clear that the constitutional [thorough-and-efficient] mandate requires an equal educational "opportunity." Plaintiffs' allegation of inequality between Newark charter schools and Newark traditional public schools is based solely upon the disparity in funding. Plaintiffs fail to demonstrate how they are deprived of the equal opportunity to attend the fully funded traditional public schools available to them in their city.

In other words, "[t]he voluntariness of the program vitiates any asserted deprivation of a right to receive an education at a school that is fully funded to the same extent as other . . . public schools when charter school students have the unabridged option of attending one of those traditional public schools in their district." Id. at 393. These principles apply with equal force to the within matter. Petitioners' students have the option of attending a traditional public school in Jersey City that receives Adjustment Aid and, thus, they are not being denied Adjustment Aid.

Beyond this, petitioners have failed to raise a genuine issue that they are unable to provide their students a thorough and efficient education with the funding available to them. Although petitioners submitted affidavits by representatives at their respective schools addressing the impact of not receiving their fair share of the Adjustment Aid, petitioners' submissions are bereft of any specific facts to support the constitutional claim that the education at their schools "fell below applicable state regulations, guidelines and criteria as required to fulfill the [thorough-and-efficient] obligation," Davy, supra 415 N.J. Super. at 391, and do not cite any statute or regulation that petitioners have failed, or will fail, to meet with their current funding. Indeed, petitioners acknowledge that they are "currently satisfying state educational criteria in objective performance measures."

Finally, as previously noted, a charter school must undergo an extensive application process, including the submission of a financial plan that must be formulated within the funding parameters in the CSPA. See N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-5(l); Davy, supra, 415 N.J. Super. at 380. And, "remedies other than funding remedies are available" to the Commissioner to address a charter school that does not meet its thorough-and-efficient-education obligation. Davy, supra, 415 N.J. Super. at 393.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have failed to establish a claim under the thorough-and-efficient clause of the New Jersey Constitution. I CONCLUDE that the record does not demonstrate that the funding currently received by petitioners deprives their students of an equal educational opportunity or prevents petitioners from providing their students with a thorough and efficient education.

ORDER

I ORDER that the Department's and Jersey City's motions for summary decision be and hereby are GRANTED. I further ORDER that petitioners' motion for summary decision be and hereby is DENIED and that the Amended Petition for Declaratory Ruling be and hereby is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Re: Y.V., on behalf of minor child, K.T. v. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY, AGENCY DKT. NO. 77-4/15

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with the above captioned matter – and based upon the Board's failure to submit an Answer to the petition – I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of petitioner.

On April 14, 2015, Y.V. filed a Petition of Appeal in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 et seq. claiming that her minor child, K.T., was entitled to attend school in the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition of Appeal was served upon the Board Secretary via facsimile as per N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1(a)2 on April 15, 2015, together with an acknowledgment of filing and notice that an Answer to the petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because the Board failed to respond to the initial notice, on May 5, 2015, a second and final notice was sent to the Board Secretary via certified and regular mail. The second and final notice clearly indicated that, absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition of Appeal within 10 days, each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and the matter may be decided on a summary decision basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). The certified mail return receipt card indicates that the Board received the second and final notice on May 8, 2015. However, the Board failed to respond to it.

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of the Board. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that her minor child, K.T., is entitled to attend school in the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted by the Board. The Board is hereby ordered to continue to admit K.T. into its public school system, free of charge, so long as there is no change in circumstances that would alter that entitlement.*

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

AAA SCHOOL LLC / EL ELDESOUKY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
PASSAIC COUNTY EDUCATIONAL SERVICES COMMISSION,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner AAA School, LLC (AAA) – a company that provides transportation services to public schools – owns six (6) seven-passenger minivans. On July 31, 2014 it was awarded a contract by respondent Passaic County Educational Services Commission (PCESC) for one transportation route which required this type of vehicle. On August 11, 2014, petitioner filed a challenge to respondent's determination that it did not qualify to receive contracts for four other routes for which it submitted the lowest bid, along with an application for emergent relief. On September 5, 2014, the ALJ denied the motion and dismissed the petition in its entirety. Subsequently, in a decision dated October 16, 2014, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL after finding that there were factual issues in the instant controversy that required resolution, and that petitioner had not been afforded a hearing on the merits. In so doing, the Commissioner outlined the factual disputes to be resolved and instructed that the issues that remained be settled by fact-finding based on witness testimony or certifications.

On remand, the ALJ once again found, inter alia, that: there are no genuine issues of material fact, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; petitioner has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted; petitioner has filed three emergent applications addressing the same issue, and has been denied relief in all three; the Commissioner issued a final decision in this matter on July 10, 2014, affirming the denial of emergent relief and reasoning that the petitioner cannot be successful in his appeal. As to the Commissioner's order on remand to address the merits, the ALJ found that policy determinations by local boards of education are entitled to a presumption of correctness; the respondent's requirement of sixteen passenger buses for the four bus routes at issue was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; and petitioner's contention that respondent has not followed State rules, and has discriminated against bus operators who own seven passenger minivans, is without merit. Accordingly, the ALJ once again granted respondent's motion for summary decision, and ordered the petition dismissed with prejudice.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner – while concurring with the ALJ's determination that petitioner has not met the standards for a grant of emergent relief – found that the factual issues in dispute in this specific case still have not been fully adjudicated, and petitioner remains entitled to a hearing and a decision on the merits regarding the disputed material facts. Further, the Commissioner's prior decision in this specific matter – dated October 16, 2014 – was not a final decision on the merits, but rather was limited to a finding that petitioner had not satisfied the four-prong criteria for emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Accordingly, the ALJ's Initial Decision was rejected in its entirety and the matter was again remanded to the OAL for a hearing and decision on the merits that includes a determination on the disputed factual issues that were previously outlined in the Commissioner's October 16, 2014 decision.

PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
PASSAIC COUNTY EDUCATIONAL SERVICES COMMISSION,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the Passaic County Educational Services Commission's (Commission) reply thereto. Upon careful review of the record and proposed Initial Decision of the OAL, and for the reasons that follow, the Commissioner again remands the matter to the OAL for further proceedings.

On June 18, 2014, respondent solicited bids for transportation services for the 2014-2015 school year. The bids were opened on July 31, 2014, and petitioner won a contract for one of the routes. By way of a petition to the Commissioner – filed on August 11, 2014 and transmitted to the OAL on August 18, 2014 – petitioner challenged four of the other contract awards. The petitioner maintained that as low bidder he should have won those contracts – notwithstanding that they called for sixteen-passenger yellow school buses, which he does not own or operate. An application for emergent relief accompanied the August 11, 2014 petition. On September 5, 2014, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) heard argument on the emergent relief motion. The decision issued by the ALJ on the same date both denied the motion and dismissed the petition in its entirety.

In a decision dated October 16, 2014, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's determination that the petitioner was not entitled to emergent relief. At the same time, the Commissioner expressly rejected the ALJ's summary dismissal of the petition of appeal. Instead, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for a hearing and a determination of the merits based upon the fact that there were factual issues in dispute that were not fully resolved at the OAL. Moreover, in the October 16, 2014 decision, the Commissioner outlined the factual disputes that require a hearing on the merits, and instructed that the issues that remain "should be settled by fact-finding based upon witness testimony, or at the least, certifications." Yet, the petitioner was not afforded an opportunity on remand to have a hearing before the OAL, and the petition of appeal was again dismissed via summary decision. Notably, the Initial Decision failed to include a determination with respect to the factual disputes as directed by the Commissioner.

The Commissioner is mindful that the parties have been involved in a series of cases that at times appear to be an attempt by the petitioner to revisit legal issues that have already been decided in prior litigation between the same parties. However, the factual issues in dispute that have been alleged by the petitioner in this specific case have not been fully adjudicated, and the petitioner remains entitled to a hearing and a decision on the merits regarding the disputed material facts and the legal conclusions which the factual findings implicate.

It is also important to recognize that simply because a petitioner does not establish a likelihood of success during an emergent relief application, it does not deprive a petitioner of the opportunity for a full plenary hearing on the merits where he or she may attempt to prove entitlement for the relief sought. Despite the ALJ's assertion to the contrary, the Commissioner's decision in this matter with respect to the application for emergent relief was not a final decision on the merits. Instead the decision was limited to a finding that the petitioner did not satisfy the four-pronged criteria for emergent relief under Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is rejected in its entirety. The Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for a hearing and a decision on the merits that includes a determination on the disputed factual issues that were previously outlined in the October 16, 2014 decision.

IT IS SO ORDERED. *

INITIAL DECISION
DISMISSAL
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 13493-14
AGENCY DKT. NO. 222-8/14

AAA SCHOOL LLC / EL ELDESOUKY, Petitioner,
v.
PASSAIC COUNTY EDUCATIONAL SERVICES COMMISSION,
Respondent.

ON REMAND EDU 10510-14

El Eldesouky, petitioner, pro se

Derlys Gutierrez, Esq., for respondent (Adams, Gutierrez & Lattiboudere, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 26, 2015 Decided: May 27, 2015

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

Petitioner, the owner of the bus company, AAA School, initially brought this action seeking emergency relief along with an underlying petitioner on the same issue on June 26, 2014, wherein the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on June 27, 2014. Petitioner challenged the decision of respondent, Passaic County Educational Services (PCESC), an educational services commission that provides coordinated transportation services to school districts, to not accept his bids on four sixteen-passenger school bus routes that he bid the lowest.

On June 11, 2014, petitioner submitted a bid specification and challenged respondent's sixteen-passenger bus routes even though he did not own sixteen-passenger buses, requesting these routes to be modified to permit a seven-passenger minivan. Although he was the lowest bidder on four of the school routes, those routes required a sixteen-passenger bus.

Although Judge Barry Moscowitz decided this same issue on emergent relief on June 18, 2014, denying petitioner's request and finding that PCESC followed the applicable bidding requirements, I heard and decided this second request for emergent relief on July 7, 2014. An Order was issued denying emergent relief and the matter was scheduled for October 30, 2014, addressing the exact same issues. The undersigned also heard and decided another emergent relief hearing on September 5, 2014, filed by petitioner under OAL Docket No. EDU 10510-14. Both emergent relief matters held on July 7 and September 5, 2014, were denied.

On September 30, 2014, the undersigned received the Commissioner's Final decision. The Commissioner stated that the petitioner cannot prevail under a legal authority when the facts of this case are applied. I agreed. The Commissioner further stated in part " . . . the Commissioner cannot conclude that a balancing of the equities would favor petitioner. Petitioner's motion for emergent relief is consequently denied."

On October 17, 2014, respondent filed a Motion to Dismiss alleging that because petitioner does not own sixteen-passenger buses on the sixteen-passenger bus routes he bid for and addressed in the emergent applications, there are no additional issues to be determined. Petitioner filed a response on October 24, 2014, requesting that this matter be returned to the Commissioner "without trial and without order [judgment]" from the undersigned or "any other OAL/Newark judge." Petitioner also requested that " . . . the responsible people at OAL/NEWARK not to accept any future cases to me or my company to have a trial there . . . ." He also requested another judge hear the matter and for the undersigned to recuse myself. I denied that request.

Respondent, in its initial Motion to Dismiss, asserted that the petitioner fails to demonstrate that the denial was unreasonable, arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law and instead argues that it was correctly and reasonably decided under controlling regulations and case law. It asserts the same in its current Motion to Dismiss and reiterates that there are no factual issues in dispute. Petitioner complains that the District is using sixteen-passenger buses for one or two students and that his vans should be considered for these routes.

Although couched as a motion to dismiss, respondent's motion may also be seen as a request for summary decision. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, governing motions for summary decision, permits early disposition of a case before the case is heard if, based on the papers and discovery which have been filed, it can be decided "that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:12-5(b). The provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 of the New Jersey Court Rules governing motions for summary judgment. To survive summary decision, the opposing party must show that "there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." Ibid. Failure to do so entitles the moving party to summary decision. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520 (1995).

The matter is appropriate for summary decision as there are no genuine issues as to any material facts. Petitioner has failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted as held by the Commissioner by Final Decision. He has filed three emergent applications addressing the same issue and has been denied relief in all three. The Commissioner issued a final decision in this matter on July 10, 2014, affirming the denial of emergent relief, reasoning that petitioner cannot be successful.

The matter was remanded to the undersigned to address the merits. Petitioner argues that the district is not following State rules when requesting sixteen-passenger buses for one student, thereby discriminating against bus owners such as he who own seven-passenger minivans that can transport this one student.

It is a well-settled principle that policy, legislative, and quasi-legislative determinations are committed to the judgment of local governmental bodies. Riggs v. Long Beach Twp., 109 N.J. 601, 610-11 (1988); United Advertising Corp. v. Metuchen, 42 N.J. 1, 8 (1964). Such determinations enjoy a distinct presumption of validity, First Peoples Bank of N.J. v. Medford Township, 126 N.J. 413, 418 (1991); Hutton Park Gardens v. West Orange Town Council, 68 N.J. 543, 564 (1975), and will remain undisturbed absent a showing of arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable action on the part of the governmental agency. Palamar Constr. v. Pennsauken Twp., 196 N.J. Super. 241, 250 (App. Div. 1983).

These principles apply to policy determinations made by local Boards of Education. See Parsippany-Troy Hills Educ. Ass'n v. Bd. of Educ. of Twp. of Parsippany-Troy Hills, 188 N.J. Super. 161, 167 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 94 N.J. 527 (1983); Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of W. Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). When such a body acts within its authority, its decision is entitled to a presumption of correctness and will not be upset unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The agency's factual determinations must be accepted if supported by substantial credible evidence. Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of N. Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962); Schinck v. Bd. of Educ. of Westwood Consol. Sch. Dist., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960).

The terms "arbitrary" and "capricious" embrace a concept which emerges from the due process clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments of the United States Constitution and operate to guarantee that acts of government will be grounded on established legal principles. See Canty v. Bd. of Educ., City of New York, 312 F. Supp. 254, 256 (D.C.S.D.N.Y. 1970). Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached. State v. Jones, 66 Wash.2d 199, 401 P.2d 841, 842 (Wash. Sup. Ct. 1965). Moreover, the court should not substitute its judgment for that of an administrative or legislative body if there is substantial evidence to support the ruling. Kansas City Southern Ry. Co. v. Louisiana Public Serv. Comm'n, 254 La. 160, 223 So. 2d 132, 136 (La. Sup. Ct. 1969).

Petitioner cites no legal authority in support of his appeal. In fact, he does not own the prerequisite sixteen-passenger bus whose routes he is disputing. He does not cite any legal authority that shows the bid specifications are unlawful or discriminatory. He presents no proofs that respondent falsified information sheets submitted by the Districts. I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to shoulder the burden of proving his various claims.

Accordingly, since no violations occurred, no interim measures or remedies are available to petitioner. I therefore CONCLUDE that there are no remaining issues to determine in this matter.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law and respondents' Motion for Summary Decision is ripe for determination.

ORDER

Based upon the forgoing, respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED. It is ORDERED that petition is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

It is further ORDERED that petitioner is foreclosed from filing a new application raising the same issues filed in this petition, in the petition filed under OAL Docket No. EDU 10510-14, or under Docket No.EDU 07495-14, which are identical.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. SYNOPSIS

Petitioner herein was referred by the Salem County One Stop Career Center (One Stop) to participate in the Salem County Vocational School's Medical Assistant/Multi-Skilled Technician program, one of the district's adult education programs. Subsequent to his completion of Phases I and II of the program, petitioner was notified on June 25, 2014 that he was disqualified from participating in the Phase III externship for failure to disclose his criminal history. On June 26, 2014, petitioner filed a tort claim notice , and thereafter filed successive litigation in Superior Court. On February 2, 2015, petitioner filed the within appeal, seeking $4,000 in damages based on tuition payments made by the One Stop agency on his behalf, as well as $7,000 to compensate him for footwear, uniforms, school supplies and lost contract benefits. The respondent filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer, asserting that petitioner's claims are time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(1).

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner was notified on June 26, 2014 that he was rejected by the externship due to his undisclosed criminal history, and this date starts the 90 day clock under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3; petitioner had adequate notice of the action taken by the district; petitioner chose to file claims in Superior Court instead of filing with the Commissioner, and only after his claims were dismissed by the Court did he file the within appeal; petitioner's appeal needed to be filed by September 24, 2014 in order to comply with the 90-day rule; the instant petition was filed on February 2, 2015, which was 131 days beyond the deadline for the filing of an appeal. The ALJ concluded that the petition is untimely and that there are no reasons to waive or relax the time limits set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3. Further, petitioner was verbally warned by the Vocational School staff several times that he had to be truthful about his criminal history, and was also received written warning in the program forms that he executed that he had to divulge information about any criminal history or there would be consequences for the externship program. The ALJ granted the respondent's motion to dismiss the matter as untimely, and dismissed the petition.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, Albert Fields, and the Salem County Vocational School's reply thereto.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the petition of appeal was time-barred under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The Commissioner is not persuaded that the exceptions submitted by the petitioner dictate a different result, as the arguments advanced by the petitioner in his exceptions were considered and fully addressed by the ALJ in the Initial Decision.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is dismissed.

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about June 26, 2014, the Salem County Vocational School (respondent or district) verbally notified petitioner, Albert Fields (Fields or petitioner) that he was ineligible to participate in an externship under its Medical Assistant/Multi-Skilled Technician program due to the failure to disclose his criminal history.

On February 2, 2015, Fields filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education seeking $4,000 in damages based upon tuition payments made by the One Stop Agency on his behalf. Fields also sought another $7,000 to compensate him for footwear, uniforms, school supplies and loss contract benefits (Petition at page 3).

On February 19, 2015, the district filed a motion to dismiss, in lieu of filing an answer. The motion was filed with the Commissioner and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) with the file. The district asserts that petitioner's claims are untimely under education law and must be dismissed (ninety-day limitation of action N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i)).

On February 20, 2015, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A telephone prehearing conference was held on March 31, 2015. Fields was instructed to file opposition to the district's motion to dismiss, and same was received on May 7, 2015.

Fields attempted to recover damages in the civil courts, prior to commencing the present administrative matter. On July 10, 2014, Fields filed a complaint in the Superior Court, Law Division, Special Civil Part, Salem County seeking contract damages. (Respondent's May 8, 2015, letter brief) On or about August 5, 2014, Fields filed another complaint in the Superior Court, Chancery Division, Salem County against the same district and Maria Alleva, the program coordinator. Fields sought specific performance and monetary damages under the Consumer Fraud Act. By order dated November 21, 2014, the Chancery Division dismissed the complaint pursuant to R. 4:6-2(e) (failure to state a claim). On January 9, 2015, the Chancery Division denied Field's motion for reconsideration.

For the reasons explained below, the district's motion to dismiss, in lieu of filing an answer is GRANTED.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The Salem County Vocational School is a public school that offers career and technical educational programs to high school age students and adult students. (See Certification of Maria Alleva[1], the district's Adult Admissions Coordinator, dated October 28, 2014, hereinafter "Alleva Cert.") at ¶ 3. One of the district's adult education programs is the Medical Assistant/Multi-Skilled Technician program ("Program"). Id. at ¶ 5. The program specializes in technical training, including phlebotomy and EKG procedures. Id. at ¶ 6.

The program is composed of three phases totaling 600 hours. Id. at ¶ 7. Students must successfully complete all three phases of the program in order to be eligible to sit for the National Healthcareer Association certifications. Id. at ¶ 8.

Phase I consists of the instructional component of the program. This is the only component of the program that is provided by the district. Id. at ¶ 7. During Phase II of the program, students receive their Basic Life Support Certification through the Red Cross. Ibid. And, in phase III of the program, students complete 180 hours of a clinical experience/externship. Ibid. For phase III, students apply to off-site externships and representatives of the externships determine whether or not to accept the applicants. Ibid. Indeed, the district is not involved in the acceptance or rejection of a student for an externship. Ibid. Students must also agree to release their "criminal background check," to the off-site externships. Id. at ¶ 10.

Salem County One Stop Career Center ("One Stop") referred Albert Fields to the district for participation in the program. Id. at ¶ 11. On February 5, 2014, Maria Alleva, presented an Introduction to Health Career Pathway program. Id. at ¶ 12. Fields attended the seminar. Ibid. Alleva provided the attendees with important information regarding the medical programs including, but not limited to, criminal background clearance requirements for externships. Id. at ¶ 13. Alleva emphasized several times that candidates are encouraged to disclose any criminal offenses. Ibid. Alleva explained that the disclosure of criminal offenses is critical because students who have criminal backgrounds are barred from externships in the medical field. Ibid.

On March 13, 2014, Alleva conducted an entrance interview of Fields. Id. at ¶ 14. Alleva again reviewed the requirements of the program. Ibid; Exhibit "A". Alleva also discussed Field's employment and educational experience and directly asked Fields if he had a criminal history. Id. at ¶ 15. Fields told Alleva that he did not have a criminal history. Ibid. Fields also signed a "Release of Information" form that authorized the district to release records pertaining to his criminal history to the externship where he would apply. Id. at ¶ 16; Exhibit "1". And Fields signed a "Postsecondary Agreement" and agreed "to purchase educational services from the district" and to "comply with the policy regarding pre-enrollment counseling, testing, and documentation." Id. at ¶ 17; Exhibit "B" to Plaintiff's Complaint. Field's signature on the Agreement certified "that all of the information provided by [him] is true to the best of [his] knowledge." Id. at ¶ 18; Exhibit "B". Field's signature also acknowledged that "a student may be terminated prior to completion for unsatisfactory attendance, non-payment of tuition or failure to comply with board policy and administrative rules and regulations without a refund." Ibid.

Fields claims that the district did not provide him with "an opportunity to sit for the certification examinations as provided by the contract." However, nowhere in the contract does it state that the district would provide Fields with an opportunity to sit for the NHA certifications. And, the contract does not guarantee graduation from the program or placement in an externship. Ibid.

On April 24, 2014, Fields attended an orientation for the program. Id. at ¶ 20. Fields executed a "Disclosure Statement", wherein he certified that he does "not have a criminal background and understand[s] that failure to disclose any relevant information may result in removal from the program without refund." Id. at ¶ 21; Exhibit "2".

Fields completed Phase I of the program. He attended an externship conference on June 9, 2014. Id. at ¶ 23. Fields selected an externship with the Salem County Correctional Facility ("Correctional Facility"), as one of his top choices. Ibid; Exhibit "3".

Fields completed an externship application, wherein he certified that "the information included on and with [his] application and on accompanying materials is accurate and true." Id. at ¶ 24. Fields acknowledged that he understood "that if [he] chose or am unable to meet the requirements to complete my externship as per affiliated site, [he] will forfeit the externship placement opportunity without refund." Ibid; Exhibit "4".

On June 25, 2014, a representative from the Correctional Facility informed the district that Fields had a criminal history and was recently incarcerated in the correctional facility. Id. at ¶ 25. Fields did not meet the requirements for an externship in the medical field because of his criminal history. The correctional facility could not provide him with a placement as a result. Ibid. The respondent immediately informed Fields that he was disqualified from the externship program due to his criminal history and failure to disclose same. On June 26, 2014, Fields filed a tort claims notice. (Respondent's May 8, 2015, letter brief). He thereafter filed successive litigation in the Superior Court. Each of these reflects that Fields was well aware of the action taken by the district.

The total tuition for the Program was $4,350 and One Stop paid $4,000 of this amount. Id. at ¶ 26. The remaining $350 was Field's responsibility and he has not paid this money to the district. Ibid; Exhibit "5".

CONCLUSIONS

The district cites N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3 for the proposition that the administrative claim filed by Fields, is untimely. The regulation provides, in relevant part:

> (a) To initiate a contested case for the Commissioner's determination of a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws, a petitioner shall prepare a petition of appeal conforming to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4 and serve such petition upon each respondent. . . .
>
> (i) The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education . . . which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing. This rule shall not apply in instances where a specific statute, regulation, or court order provides for a period of limitation shorter than 90 days for the filing of a particular type of appeal.

The timeline presented by the district is as follows: On June 26, 2014, Fields was notified by Alleva that he was rejected from the externship program offered at the correctional facility due to his (undisclosed) criminal history. (Field's Petition ¶ 8; page 2). June 26, 2014 starts the clock for applicability of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3. On August 5, 2014, Fields filed a complaint in the Superior Court seeking a remedy (consumer fraud and specific performance) in connection with his termination or exclusion from the externship program (District's brief; Exhibit 1). On November 21, 2014, the complaint was dismissed the Chancery Judge. On February 2, 2015, Fields filed the present administrative action with the Commissioner seeking monetary relief and other remedies.

Ninety days from June 26, 2014, is September 24, 2014. From September 24, 2014, to February 2, 2015 is 131 days. The district contends that the complaint filed with the Commissioner was out of time by 131 days.

Petitioner had adequate notice of the action taken by the district through its agent and program coordinator; he acknowledged that he had adequate notice by filing claims in this, and other forums certifying in his pleadings when he received notice; petitioner chose to file claims in the Superior Court first, instead of filing with the Commissioner; and only after his claims were dismissed by the Superior Court did he file with the Commissioner; albeit well out of time under school law. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3

In Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley Twp., 131 N.J. 572, 587 (1993) the Supreme Court defined adequate notice as:

> Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate. See Burns v. West Am. Corp., 137 N.J. Super. 442, 446, 349 *A.*2d 142 (Dist.Ct.1975). Moreover, adequate notice under the regulation must be sufficient to further the purpose of the ninety-day limitations period. See Apex Roofing Supply Co. v. Howell, 59 N.J.Super. 462, 467, 158 *A.*2d 49 (App.Div.1960). A limitations period has two purposes. The first is to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims. Ochs v. Federal Ins. Co., 90 N.J. 108, 112, 447 *A.*2d 163 (1982). The second purpose is "'to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose'" by giving security and stability to human affairs. Ibid. (quoting Farrell v. Votator Div., 62 N.J. 111, 115, 299 *A.*2d 394 (1973)).

The Supreme Court went on to explain in Kaprow:

> When a plaintiff knows or has reason to know that he has a cause of action against an identifiable defendant and voluntarily sleeps on his rights so long as to permit the customary period of limitations to expire, the pertinent considerations of individual justice as well as the broader considerations of repose, coincide to bar his action. [Farrell, supra, 62 N.J. at 115, 299 *A.*2d 394.]
> [Emphasis added]

As explained by the Supreme Court, Kaprow learned that the Board had in fact taken formal and final action. This was illustrated when he (Kaprow) wrote a letter to the secretary of the Board confirming that he had sufficient knowledge of the relevant facts to bring a RIF claim. Kaprow wrote:

> I have recently become aware that the position of Assistant Superintendent, to which I retain tenure rights, was reinstated as late as September 1986, if not before. Additionally, the duties which I performed as Assistant Superintendent have been transferred to a new position entitled District Supervisor of Elementary Education. I am certain that those duties were consolidated under one individual prior to the appointment of the District Supervisor of Elementary Education.

The Supreme Court explained that Kaprow's attempt to resolve his claim through negotiations with the local board was irrelevant. It does not negate the fact that he received adequate notice on February 23, nor does it toll the running of the limitations period. Riely v. Hunterdon Central Bd. of Educ., 173 N.J. Super. 109, (App. Div. 1980).

The present matter is similar to the facts embodied in Kaprow as to notice and similar to Wagner v. Bridgewater-Raritan Reg'l School Dist. Bd. of Ed., 1978 S.L.D. (November 3, 1978) as to procedure. In Wagner, a non-tenured teacher was notified in March 1976 that her contract would not be renewed for the following school year. She filed a grievance and demanded arbitration, which went forward resulting in an award. The board had refused to participate in the arbitration. On March 21, 1977, the board rejected the arbitrator's award which favored the teacher. In June 1977 the teacher filed a petition with the Commissioner again challenging her non-renewal. The board moved to dismiss and the Commissioner granted the motion to dismiss because the action that was filed with the Commissioner (1977) was over one year after the non-renewal notice was issued to petitioner (1976).

The Commissioner in Wagner was mindful that limitation regulation (N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2) was not in effect when the board gave notice to the teacher that her contract would not be renewed. The Commissioner nonetheless reasoned that it should have been obvious to petitioner after the decision in Union Cty. Bd. of Ed. v. Union Cty. Teachers Ass'n, 145 N.J. Super. 435, 437 (App. Div. 1976), certif. den. 74 N.J. 248 (1977), and the "rule changes codified in Title 6, Chapter 24, that administrative relief should be requested from the Commissioner [within ninety days]." The Commissioner held that the petitioner had ninety days from the adoption of the rule in which to file her appeal. Waiting for more than six months [after arbitrator's ruling and its rejection by the board] before appealing, clearly rendered the teacher's action as untimely.

I CONCLUDE that the action filed by petitioner is untimely. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Fields confirmed that he had notice of the action taken by the respondent when he filed the tort claim notice on June 26, 2014 and civil actions on July 10, 2014 and August 5, 2014. Petitioner intentionally chose to pursue his remedies in the Superior Court rather than filing with the Commissioner. He certified that he was notified by the district on June 26, 2014, of his disqualification from the program due to his criminal history as verified in each of the aforementioned civil complaints. He waited until February 2, 2015, to file the present action with the Commissioner, only after the Superior Court dismissed his case. The action should have been filed on or before September 24, 2014, to meet the ninety-day limitation found in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

I CONCLUDE that there are no reasons to waive, relax or suspended the time limits in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Petitioner already sought monetary damages in the Superior Court. This relief was denied. He is now seeking a second attempt at monetary damages ($7,000) in an administrative proceeding. Ordinarily monetary remedies are left to the Superior Court – thus petitioner had a substantial portion of his day in court in a prior matter.

Petitioner is also seeking a refund ($4,000) on behalf of the One Stop entity as outlined in his petition. He has no standing to pursue claims on behalf of One Stop. It unclear if the One Stop has filed a claim against petitioner and thus what petitioner is really seeking is insulation against a claim by the One Stop against him.

Finally, petitioner was verbally warned several times that he had to be truthful about his criminal history. And he was also warned in the program forms that he executed that he had to be truthful regarding his criminal history and if he was not truthful, there would be consequences for the externship program. Amazingly, petitioner failed to divulge his criminal history, and then applied for an externship with the county corrections department where he was recently incarcerated. I see no reason to relax the time limit regulation under these circumstances.

ORDER

I ORDER that the district's motion seeking a dismissal of the within matter as being filed untimely, is GRANTED. The action field by the petitioner is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER,

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF UNION, UNION COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner challenged the residency determination of the respondent Board that her children are not entitled to a free public education in the Union Township schools. Respondent's determination was based on a residency investigation conducted during the months of March, April, and May 2014, which concluded that S.L.'s children were not domiciled at the Union address provided to the school district, and likely were living at their father's house in Irvington. Petitioner contended that she did reside with her children at the Union address, but that her work schedule required the children were frequently cared for by their grandmother at her home in Maplewood. The Board sought to have S.L.'s children removed from Union schools, and sought reimbursement of tuition for the period of their ineligible attendance.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that she is domiciled within the school district; in this case, S.L. has failed to present any evidence that she was domiciled in Union during the 2013-2014 school year; petitioner was unable to provide any documents linking her name to the Union address provided to the district, and likewise failed to present testimonial evidence substantiating her alleged domicile on Tampa Terrace in Union. The ALJ concluded that S.L. failed to meet her burden to prove that her children were eligible for a free public education in Union schools, and assessed tuition costs – as set forth by the Board through March 4, 2015 – of $64,499.40 for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. The ALJ further ordered that petitioner will owe additional per-diem costs to be added beyond March 4, 2015 for continued ineligible attendance for the remainder of the 2014-2015 school year.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusion that the petitioner's minor children were not entitled to a free public education in Union schools for the time period in question. The Commissioner ordered petitioner to reimburse the Board for tuition in the amount of $64,499.40 for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. The Commissioner, however, noted that he was not provided with any information confirming that the minor children continued to attend Union schools beyond March 4, 2015, or setting forth the exact number of days of ineligible attendance by S.L.'s children. Therefore, no addition per diem tuition costs could be assessed to the petitioner. The petition was dismissed.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF UNION, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter[1] and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding that petitioner failed to sustain her burden of establishing that she was a domiciliary of Union Township during the 2013-2014 school year. Additionally, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that the minor children were, therefore, not entitled to a free public education in the District's schools during this time. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b, the Board is entitled to tuition reimbursement for the time period during which petitioner's minor children were ineligible to attend in the amount of $64,499.40 for the 2013-2014 school year and the 2014-2015 school year (calculated through March 4, 2015) as detailed in the ALJ's comprehensive Initial Decision.

Although the ALJ recommended that petitioner be assessed additional per-diem tuition costs beyond March 4, 2015 for any future ineligible attendance by the minor children, the Commissioner was not provided with any information confirming that the minor children continued to attend school in the District beyond March 4, 2015 – or setting forth the exact number of days of ineligible attendance during the time period in question. Therefore, no additional per-diem tuitions costs can be assessed to petitioner.

[1] The record included transcripts of the November 5, 2014 and November 25, 2014 proceedings which took place at the Office of Administrative Law.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision – as modified herein – is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Petitioner is assessed tuition in the amount of $64,499.40 for her minor children's ineligible attendance in the District, and is directed to compensate the Board in accordance with this decision. The instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, S.L., challenges the residency determination made by the Union Township Board of Education (Board) with regard to the minor children, J.L., J.L., and O.L. On August 14, 2014, respondent submitted an answer, which was filed with the Commissioner of Education on August 15, 2014. Respondent's demand included a request that the Commissioner dismiss the petition, that the children be removed from the district, and that the petitioner be assessed a tuition charge for each day of ineligible attendance of J.L., J.L., and O.L. in the Board's schools.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 19, 2014, as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Hearings were held on November 5, 2014, and November 25, 2014. The parties submitted written summations, and following their receipt, the record closed. An Order was entered extending the time for filing this decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

After carefully considering the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following FACTS:

S.L. is the mother of three children, J.L., J.L. and O.L. The children's father, O.L., resides at 56 38th Street, Irvington, New Jersey. He has lived in Irvington the last thirteen years. S.L. and O.L. have never been married or engaged to each other and there is no court order governing the custody of the children or defining parental rights.

S.L.'s employment and work schedule are largely undisputed. Specifically, S.L. has been employed as a diet technician at Bayonne Medical Center since November 2013. Since February 2014, she worked from 10:30 p.m. to 7:00 a.m., three to four days a week, including weekends. S.L. worked the same hours during the period of March 2014 to May 2014 when the Board conducted its investigation. S.L. also is employed by ARAMARK Food Service, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

S.L. testified that at one time, she and her three children lived in her mother's home at 2036 Tampa Terrace, Union, New Jersey. When her mother lost the home in early 2011, S.L. and her children moved to Mr. O.L.'s residence in Irvington, New Jersey and lived there from April 2011 to January 2012. In January 2012, S.L. and her children moved to 2039 Tampa Terrace, Union, New Jersey.

S.L. noted that when she works at night, her children stay with her mother, J.A., at 181 Burnett Avenue, Maplewood, New Jersey. At the end of the school day, S.L. would pick up her children and take them to 2039 Tampa Terrace, where she would prepare their dinner. S.L. added that if she is working at night, she would get the children ready and take them to her mother's house in Maplewood, and then go to work. When S.L. works on weekends, J.A. would watch the children in Maplewood. S.L. explained that on the nights that she would work, she would get done with her job at Bayonne Medical Center around 7:00 a.m., drive approximately thirty to forty-five minutes to her mother's house in Maplewood, pick up her children, and drive them to school.

S.L. elaborated as to the living arrangements at 2039 Tampa Terrace. She stated that the house is a single-family home. The owners of the home, referred to as "aunt" and "uncle," have two children of their own, who reside in the house. S.L. indicated that she resides "downstairs," which consists of one room, one bathroom, and a kitchen. S.L. added that she does not pay rent and cannot produce proof of any payment towards utilities. She also could not produce filed income tax returns with her name and address, paystubs from Bayonne Medical Center, or W-2s from Bayonne Medical Center. The documents that S.L. could produce; Sally Mae student loan documents, driver's license and doctor bills, were recently issued and outside the period in question.

J.A., S.L.'s mother, testified on S.L.'s behalf. J.A. stated that S.L. and her children reside at 2039 Tampa Terrace, Union, New Jersey. J.A. clarified that the owners of 2039 Tampa Terrace, referred to as "aunt" and "uncle," are not related to J.A. or S.L. by blood. J.A. initially indicated that S.L.'s children would stay at her home two to four times a week, including weekends. Later she stated that the children would only stay two to three nights each week, including weekends. She would have clothes and toys at her house and the children would eat dinner at her house every night that they would stay there. J.A. testified that she does not know where the children's father, O.L., resides or whether the children spend any time with him.

Tom Sheridan, a residency investigator for the Board since 1996, testified on behalf of respondent. Sheridan stated that since there had been a residency investigation in a prior year, the Board wished to verify the residency status of S.L.'s three children. Sheridan indicated that he conducted surveillance at 2039 Tampa Terrace, Union, New Jersey, from 6:00 a.m. until 9:00 a.m. on the following dates in 2014: March 28, March 31, April 1, April 2, April 3, April 4, May 13, May 14, May 22, May 23, May 27. Sheridan observed that he did not see S.L.'s three children exiting the house on any of the dates and times that he was present. He did confirm the children's attendance at school on the aforementioned dates. Sheridan recalled that on April 4, 2014, he spoke to the owner of 2039 Tampa Terrace who advised Sheridan that S.L.'s children do not live there but that they live in Irvington. The owner of the house, however, did not testify at this hearing. Sheridan noted his observations and submitted a written investigation report to the Board with his findings.

Donna Hubbard, an administrative assistant to the Board, testified on respondent's behalf. Hubbard noted the respective children's grades and the applicable tuition expense. The following tuition rates applied to the respective children for the 2013-2014, 180-day school year; J.L. ($13327 – fifth grade), J.L. ($13327 – fifth grade), O.L. ($11979 – kindergarten) for a total of $38633 for all three children. The tuition rate for the 2014-15, 180-day school year with per diem rates are as follows; J.L. ($13965 – sixth grade/$77.58 per diem), J.L. ($13965 – sixth grade/$77.58 per diem), O.L. ($13642 – first grade/$75.79 per diem). During the 2014-15 school year, there were 112 school days between September 4, 2014, (start of school) through March 4, 2015, (hearing record close) for total tuition due of $25866.40. The total tuition for 2013-14 and 2014-15, applicable to J.L., J.L., and O.L., through March 4, 2015, is $64499.40.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a), "[a]ny person who is domiciled within the school district" is entitled to a free education from that district."[1] However, "[i]f the superintendent or administrative principal of a school district finds that the parent or guardian of a child who is attending the schools of the district is not domiciled within the district . . . , the superintendent or administrative principal may apply to the board of education for the removal of the child." N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). The parents may contest a local school board's decision regarding the student's right to attend school in the district to the Commissioner of Education and "shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence" to prove domicile in the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). The State Board of Education has promulgated various rules implementing N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 and governing student domicile and eligibility to attend school. See N.J.A.C. 6A:22-1.1 to -6.3.

"A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is the child of a parent or guardian whose domicile is located within the school district." N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1). "Domicile" has been "defined as 'the place where [a person] has his [or her] true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has an intention of returning.'" See D.L. v. Bd. of Educ. of Princeton Reg'l Sch. Dist., 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273-74 (App. Div. 2004) (quoting T.B.W. v. "A person may have several residences or places of abode, but only one domicile at a time." D.L., supra, 366 N.J. Super. at 274.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1's special procedures governing appeals of a local school board's "determinations with respect to entitlement to attend school" do not "preclude a district board of education from seeking payment of tuition, consistent with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.1(a), for a student it determines to be ineligible to attend school in the district." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1(e). Under N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.1(a),

[1] The school district must also provide a free education to "[a]ny person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district" when that person "is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child" in certain circumstances if the other person files certain documentation with the secretary of the local board of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(1). This is referred to as an "affidavit student." A.M.S. v. Bd. of Educ. of Margate, 409 N.J. Super. 149, 158 n.4 (App. Div. 2009); see also N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(2).

> [i]f no appeal to the Commissioner is filed by the parent, guardian, adult student, or district resident keeping an "affidavit" student following notice of an ineligibility determination, the district board of education may assess tuition for up to one year of a student's ineligible attendance, including the 21-day period provided by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 for appeal to the Commissioner.[2]

The rules also provide for the Commissioner to assess tuition where the petitioners appeal a local school board's determination that their child was not entitled to attend school in the district. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.2(a) applies where the petitioners do not prevail in their appeal; it provides that > [i]f an appeal to the Commissioner is filed by the parent, guardian, adult student, or school district resident keeping an "affidavit" student and the petitioner does not sustain the burden of demonstrating the student's right to attend the school district . . . the Commissioner may assess tuition for the period during which the hearing and decision on appeal were pending, and for up to one year of a student's ineligible attendance in a school district prior to the appeal's filing and including the 21-day period to file an appeal.

In this case, petitioner S.L., failed to present any evidence that she was domiciled in Union, New Jersey during the 2013-2014 school year. Petitioner was unable to produce any documents linking her name to the 2039 Tampa Terrace address during the 2013-2014 school year. Petitioner was also unable to produce any testimonial evidence substantiating her alleged domicile at 2039 Tampa Terrace as well. The testimony provided by petitioner's mother, J.A., was unpersuasive in this regard.

I CONCLUDE that S.L. failed to meet the burden of proof that her children, J.L., J.L., and O.L., met the requirements to receive a free education within the Union

[2] Thereafter, "[i]f the responsible party does not pay the tuition assessment, the district board of education may petition the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3[-1.1 to -13.1] for an order assessing tuition." N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.1(a)(1).

Township Board of Education public schools for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, calculated through March 4, 2015, the hearing record close date. I therefore CONCLUDE that J.L., J.L., and O.L., were not entitled to a free public education in the Union Township Board of Education public schools during the period of time in question. I further CONCLUDE that the tuition costs set forth by respondent are undisputed. Therefore, petitioner is assessed tuition in the amount of $64499.40 for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, calculated through March 4, 2015, with a per-diem rate for the 2014-2015 school year of $77.58 (J.L. and J.L.) and $75.79 (O.L.).

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's appeal of respondent's determination is DENIED. It is ORDERED that petitioner be assessed tuition costs as set forth above for the period of ineligible attendance for J.L., J.L., and O.L., with additional per-diem costs to be added beyond March 4, 2015, for continued ineligible attendance for the remainder of the 2014-2015 school year.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

J.C., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, J.C.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent Board that her daughter, J.C., is not domiciled in the Linden School District and therefore not entitled to a free public education in Linden schools. The respondent Board contended that petitioner and J.C. reside at a home in Roselle, New Jersey, which petitioner and her husband purchased in 1993, and consequently owe tuition for the period of J.C.'s ineligible attendance in Linden schools. Petitioner asserted that she is no longer domiciled at the Roselle house because she is separated from her husband. A hearing in the matter was conducted on September 9, 2014.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the burden of proving that she is now domiciled in Linden rests with petitioner; petitioner's proofs regarding her domicile included an incomplete lease and a blank personal check, which items are insufficient to corroborate petitioner's legal domicile; petitioner last voted in Roselle; and utility bills for the Linden address are not in petitioner's name, but in her eldest daughter's name. The ALJ concluded that petitioner failed to submit sufficient evidence of legal domicile in Linden, and accordingly determined that petitioner and her daughter, J.C., are not residents in the respondent's school district. The ALJ ordered the petitioner to reimburse the Board at the per diem rate of $85.67 for the period of J.C.'s ineligible attendance in its schools.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions in this matter, but determined that the record lacks information required to calculate the amount of tuition owed to the school district, specifically the number of days of J.C.'s ineligible attendance. Accordingly, Commissioner remanded the case to the OAL for calculation of tuition due and supplementation of the record as warranted.

J.C., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, J.C.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF LINDEN, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1] The parties did not file exceptions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding that petitioner failed to sustain her burden of establishing that she was a domiciliary of Linden during the 2013-2014 school year. The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that the minor child was, therefore, not entitled to a free public education in the District's schools during this time.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b, the Commissioner shall assess tuition against petitioner for the time period during which the minor child was ineligible to attend school in Linden. However, the present record lacks information required to calculate the amount of tuition monies owed to the District – specifically, the number of days of ineligible attendance by the minor child.[2]

[1] The Commissioner was not provided with a transcript of the September 9, 2014 hearing at the OAL.

[2] While respondent's certification (R-12) establishes the district's tuition rates for 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, it fails to establish the minor child's date of enrollment in the district and the total number of days of ineligible attendance. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b, "tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local school district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance."

Accordingly, this matter is remanded to the OAL for calculation of tuition due to the District and supplementation of the record as warranted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

BEFORE IRENE JONES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner appeals the decision of the respondent that determined that her daughter was not eligible to attend the Linden Public Schools because she is not a resident of the District.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing on June 12, 2014. A hearing was held and concluded on September 9, 2014. The record remained open for receipt of additional documents.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Petitioner, J.C., has a fifteen-year-old daughter "Amber" who attends the Linden Public School System.[1]
2. Petitioner also has a thirty-six-year-old daughter, R.C., who resides in Linden, New Jersey at _____.
3. Petitioner is married and has been for thirty-six years. The marital home is located at 570 West _____ Avenue in Roselle, New Jersey and the petitioner's husband resides there. Petitioner's name is on the marital home. They have owned the property since September 10, 1993.
4. Petitioner testified that she and her husband are separated. Partially, because they disagree on the appropriateness of getting a reverse mortgage.
5. Petitioner works in East Orange, New Jersey at Kidsville Daycare Center. Her work day starts at 7:00 a.m. She shares the commute with a J.G., who picks her up at the residence at 6:00 a.m. J.G. drops Amber off at her dad's in Roselle, who then takes her to school. Dad also picks up Amber after school.
6. Amber is a high honor student and involved in ROTC and the school's band.
7. Amber was adopted by petitioner and her husband. In 1998, petitioner was named Foster Parent of the year.
8. Petitioner's electric bill is in her daughter's name. Her cell phone is in her husband's name.
9. In the November 2013 election, petitioner voted in Roselle.
10. In 2013-2014 petitioner registered her daughter as an Affidavit Student. Petitioner did not present proof of residency; however, her eldest daughter did. Petitioner reported living on Price Street in Linden.

[1] Amber is a fictitious name so as to maintain the confidentiality.

11. Martha Fekete is the Attendance Officer for Linden High School and conducted a residency investigation on the petitioner. Fekete conducted a stake-out surveillance.
12. Fekete went to the Price Street address where petitioner reported living and left her business card instructing petitioner to call her.
13. Fekete learned of petitioner's home in Roselle.
14. On November 18, 2013, petitioner advised the Board that she, R.C., and Amber were evicted from the Price Street address. (R-8.)
15. Petitioner's name is on the lease agreement dated December 11, 2013, where she is referred to as a tenant along with R.C., but there is no signatory page.
16. Fekete found that petitioner had moved to East Henry Street.
17. On June 12, Fekete observed Amber being dropped off at the High School by her father.
18. In January 2014, the District sent also John Horre, Attendance Officer, to visit the petitioner's Linden address. On May 6, 2015, R.C. told Horre that petitioner and Amber did not live there. They left and moved in with "Dad" in Roselle.
19. Horre did subsequent visits on May 12, 15, 21, 23, 28, and June 3, 2014. (R-5.) Horre sent his findings to his supervisor, which are set forth in R-5.
20. Joanne Hamilton is the Director of Assessment and Pupil Personnel. Her duties include residency determination. She was told by the Attendance Officer that petitioner no longer resided in Linden and that she owned a home in Roselle. (R-4.)
21. Hamilton testified that December 13, 2013, was the deadline for submission of all residency documents. (R-10.) Hamilton received a lease from the petitioner but it was incomplete.
22. Petitioner was given a Disenrollment Form on May 7, 2014. (R-11.)
23. Residency is determined by a 6-point system and petitioner received 1 point. All applicants must obtain 6 points to establish residency.

FINDINGS, DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) "[a]ny person who is domiciled within the school district" is entitled to a free education from that district. "[I]f the superintendent or administrative principal of a school district finds that the parent or guardian of a child who is attending the schools of the district is not domiciled within the district . . . the superintendent or administrative principal may apply to the board of education for the removal for the child." N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). The parents bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that they are in fact domiciled in the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2).

Domicile is the place of a person's abode where he or she, if absent, intends to return. Mercandante v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971). A person may have multiple residences, but may only have one true domicile at a time. Therefore, residence may coincide with domicile, but does not alone determine domicile. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 251 (1955). Intent is the decisive factor in establishing domicile. It is the manifestation of a person's intent that converts residence from a mere place in which a person lives to a domicile. Ibid. The New Jersey Supreme Court held in Lyon v. Glaser, 60 N.J. 259, 264 (1972), that domicile requires proof of physical presence and the intention to remain there indefinitely. Domicile is acquired upon the "concurrence, even for a moment, of physical presence at a dwelling place with the intention of making it a permanent abode." Ibid.

The domicile or residence of children, for school purposes under Title 18A, is the domicile of the parent. I.P. v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Leonia, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 128 132 (1993); see also V.R. on behalf of A.R. v. Hamburg Bd. of Educ., N.J.A.R. 283, 286 (EDU) (1980), aff'd, State Bd., 1981 S.L.D. 1553, rev'd on other grounds, Rabinowitz v. New Jersey State Bd. of Educ., 550 F. Supp. 481 (DNJ 1982).

In the instant matter, petitioner contends that she is no longer domiciled at the Roselle address. She contends that she is separated from her husband. The law respects the right of married couples to live in separate abodes. It is generally recognized that where a student's parents are divorced or separated and residing in different school districts, then one of the parent's districts must be chosen as the student's domicile. Where there is no court order or written agreement between divorced or separated parents designating a district for a school attendance, the student is domiciled with the parent with whom the student resides for the majority of the school year, regardless of which parent has legal custody. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1)(i).

Further, where one of the parents temporarily resides in a district and the other is either domiciled or temporarily residing in another district, a district may require a parent or legal guardian to demonstrate that this temporary residence is not solely for purposes of the student attending school within the district of temporary residence. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.2(c)(1).

As noted above, the burden of proof lies with the petitioner. I FIND that petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that she is domiciled in the District or that she is residing in Roselle with the intent to stay. Petitioner presented no corroborating testimony or evidence to support her testimony. The lease that she submitted is incomplete. The blank personal check that contains a Linden address is not sufficient corroborating evidence. Notably, petitioner did not provide her monthly bank statement for the account.

I further FIND petitioner last voted in Roselle. Her utility bills are not in her name, but in her eldest daughter's name. She presented no corroborating proof that is in fact separated from her husband. Petitioner has failed to submit a driver's license, a utility bill, or a voter registration document, all of which are indicative of domicile.

Finally, the sworn statement given by her daughter, R.C., that denied that she told the investigator that her mother had moved back to Roselle is nothing other than hearsay. Hearsay is not legally competent testimony, thus it is insufficient to support a finding of fact thereon.

Thus, while petitioner cannot be faulted for desiring to give her daughter the best education, she must, like all citizens abide by the law. In this case the law requires that she be domiciled in Linden to be entitled to a free education for Amber. I CONCLUDE that petitioner and her daughter are not a residents of the District.

ORDER

I therefore ORDER the petitioner to reimburse the respondent the per diem tuition rate of $ 85.67 from the date of Amber's enrollment to the close of record herein or September 24, 2014.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a school bus driver – appealed the respondent Department's determination to suspend his school bus endorsement pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29 after incident in which V.Z. – a high school foreign exchange student, with limited English language skills – fell asleep on a school bus driven by petitioner, missed his bus stop, and was driven to the bus yard before petitioner discovered that there was still a student on the bus. The Department contended that petitioner failed to meet his obligation to inspect his bus at the end of his route to ensure that no students remained on board, as required under N.J.S.A. 18A:39-26 et seq. Petitioner asserted that his conduct was at all times compliant with statutory requirements because he did not leave the child alone on the bus and conducted a visual inspection upon his return to the bus yard, which was the end of his route. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; although the statute could be subject to differing interpretations, prior decisions have made clear that, in the Commissioner's view, the law requires that an inspection be conducted when the last child is dropped off during the route – not after the vehicle has finished its drop-offs and returned to the garage; petitioner failed to inspect his bus at the end of the route, thereby leaving a student aboard until he was discovered at the bus lot; and N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29 mandates a six-month suspension of the school bus "S" endorsement on the petitioner's drivers license. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Department's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition.

Upon full review and consideration of the record, Commissioner concurred with the findings and determinations of the ALJ. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed and the respondent was directed to notify the Motor Vehicle Commission of its obligation to suspend petitioner's school bus endorsement pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 et seq., and to notify petitioner's employer that he is ineligible for the period of suspension for continued employment as a school bus driver.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the Office of Criminal History Review Unit is entitled to summary decision. Accordingly, the petition of appeal is dismissed. Respondent is directed to notify the Motor Vehicle Commission of its obligation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 et seq. to suspend petitioner's school bus endorsement for the mandatory six-month period, and to notify petitioner's employer that he is ineligible for the period of suspension for continued employment as a school bus driver.

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Robert Vickery, a school bus driver, appeals the determination by the Department of Education, Criminal History Review Unit, (the Department), that he failed to meet his obligations to inspect his bus at the end of its route, and ensure that no students had remained on board, as required by the School Bus Safety Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:39-26 et seq. Vickery contends that his conduct was at all times compliant with statutory requirements; the Department disagrees and seeks the suspension of his driver's license in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Vickery filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on November 20, 2014, and filed a corrected version thereof on December 11, 2014. An answer was filed on behalf of the Department on December 19, 2014, and the contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 31, 2014.

The parties asked to proceed on a stipulated record. Cross-motions for summary decision, and briefs were filed on May 1, 2015. Replies were filed on May 22, 2015, and May 26, 2015, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The pertinent facts were agreed upon by the parties, who filed a Joint Stipulation of Fact, and I FIND as follows:

1. Vickery is employed as a school bus driver by the Havens Bus Service, Inc. (Havens).

2. Havens is located at 112 Clark Rd. in Sussex, NJ, 07461.

3. Havens has a contract with the High Point Regional High School District, which provides bus services to the Vernon Township School District (District or Vernon).

4. Vickery is assigned to drive busses that carry Vernon students.

5. Vickery's school bus is equipped with a system that requires him to pull a lever at the rear of the bus before he shuts the bus down.

6. On October 29, 2014, Vickery drove his assigned route, carrying high school students.

7. Vickery's assigned route was the P.M. route designated HP3.

8. V.Z. was a passenger on Vickery's bus on October 29, 2014, for the HP3 P.M. route.

9. V.Z. was a foreign exchange student from China, and was sixteen-years-old at the time of the incident. V.Z. was very limited in his ability to speak the English language.

10. The HP3 Route is scheduled to begin at the Veritas Christian Academy at approximately 2:30 P.M.

11. The HP3 P.M. route is scheduled to pick up students at Pope John XXIII Regional High School (Pope John) at approximately 2:38 P.M.

12. V.Z. boarded Vickery's bus at Pope John.

13. V.Z. was scheduled to exit the bus at the intersection of Route 565 and Drew Mountain Road, at approximately 3:46 P.M.

14. The final stop of the route is at the Holland American Bakery, 246 NJ-23, at approximately 3:56 P.M.

15. At the conclusion of the route Vickery did not see any students on the bus.

16. Vickery then yelled out in the bus "is there anyone on the bus?" or some similar question approximately three times.

17. Vickery did not hear a response.

18. V.Z. was asleep on the bus at the conclusion of Vickery's bus route.

19. Vickery then drove the bus to the Havens bus yard, located at 112 Clark Rd. in Sussex, NJ, 07461.

20. V.Z. remained on the bus while Vickery drove to the Havens bus yard.

21. V.Z. woke up while riding to the bus yard.

22. When the bus stopped at the bus yard, V.Z. approached the front of the bus and spoke to Vickery, while Vickery was still seated at the front of the bus.

23. Vickery told V.Z. to exit the bus while Vickery conducted his inspection of the bus.

24. Vickery walked to the rear of the bus and pulled the lever allowing him to shut down the bus alarm.

25. Upon exiting the bus, V.Z. contacted his host family via mobile phone.

26. According to Vickery, he exited the bus immediately after V.Z., while V.Z. stated that Vickery exited the bus "right behind" V.Z.

27. While V.Z. was on the phone with his host family, Leo Martin, another Havens employee, approached Vickery and V.Z. outside Vickery's bus.

28. Martin spoke with V.Z.'s host mother, and provided her directions to the bus yard.

29. Martin took V.Z. to the bus yard office to wait for his host family to arrive.

30. Vickery left the bus yard after Martin took V.Z. to the bus yard office.

31. Martin waited with V.Z. until V.Z.'s host mother arrived.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Both the Department and Vickery seek relief pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, which provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party . . . offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'fanciful frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995) (quoting Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "'judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214.

I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing, and the Department is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. My determination in this case is governed by the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A: 39-28, which provides that

> A school bus driver shall visually inspect the school bus to which he is assigned at the end of the transportation route to determine that no pupil has been left on the bus. For the purposes of this act, "school bus" means every motor vehicle operated by, or under contract with, a public or governmental agency, or religious or other charitable organization or corporation, or privately operated for compensation for the transportation of children to or from school for secular or religious education, which complies with the regulations of the Department of Education affecting school buses, including "School Vehicle Type I" and "School Vehicle Type II" as defined pursuant to R.S.39:1-1.
> [Emphasis supplied.]

Vickery urges that he complied with the statute, because he did not leave the child alone on the bus, and conducted a visual inspection, albeit after he had already returned the bus to its depot and had discovered that the foreign exchange student, who had fallen asleep, was still with him. But the Department replies that Vickery misunderstands the definition of "end of the transportation route," and misapprehends when his obligation to conduct an inspection arose.

While concededly, the statute could be subject to differing interpretations, the Commissioner has made it clear that, in his view, the law requires that an inspection be conducted when the last child is dropped off during the route, and not after the vehicle has finished its drop-offs and has returned to its garage or depot. See Klein v. New Jersey State Dep't of Educ., Crim. Hist. Rev. Unit, EDU 00852-11, Initial Decision (January 5, 2012), rev'd, Comm'r (February 21, 2012), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. There, the Commissioner determined that the "'end of route' . . . terminates at the point where all of the children in that group leave the bus to enter their school and the bus is empty of riders, and before the driver moves on to her next route." In language expressly dismissing the argument made by Vickery here, the Commissioner held that "[a]ccepting petitioner's argument that the inspection did not have to take place until the bus returned to the depot at the end of day defies reason and eviscerates the fundamental purpose of the statute – to protect our children and ensure their safety." See also Firman v. N.J. Dep't of Educ., Crim. Hist. Rev. Unit, EDU 04415-10, Initial Decision (February 7, 2011), adopted, Comm'r (March 24, 2011), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

The intent of a statute or regulation should be gleaned from a view of the whole and of every part of the statute, with the real intention prevailing over the literal sense of its terms. Schierstead v. City of Brigantine, 29 N.J. 220 (1959). The Commissioner's interpretation of N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 is a reasonable one and is consistent with the statute's clear purpose and intent. Moreover, insofar as the Commissioner is tasked with overseeing all aspects of school operations in New Jersey, his view is informed by his regulatory obligations. Vickery's argument that this requirement would be absurd, because it would necessitate that "school bus drivers . . . stop the bus and visually inspect same after each and every stop . . . " is unavailing. That is not what the law requires; rather, it demands an inspection at the last stop for discharging students, and before the return of what should be an empty vehicle to its depot. Vickery urges elsewhere in his brief that the Department's arguments "would mean that all school bus drivers, at their last drop off spots, are required to pull the bus over to the side of the road and visually inspect same for children before driving back to their bus depots. Intuitively, we do not surmise that such is what the legislature intended." But per Klein, that is exactly what the law requires, and it is an eminently reasonable and doable requirement. Indeed, is not the bus already stopped at the last point where it discharges students?

Having determined that Vickery indeed failed to inspect his bus in the manner required by the statute and that accordingly, a student was left on the bus after the end of his route, N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29 mandates a six-month suspension of Vickery's license. It provides as follows:

> In the event that, after notice and opportunity to be heard, a school bus driver is found to have left a pupil on the school > bus at the end of his route, his school bus endorsement shall be:

>
> a. suspended for six months, for a first offense
>
> b. permanently revoked, for a second offense
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29.]

Accordingly, the statute does not permit me to consider mitigating circumstances, or to consider the fact that, gratefully, this student was unharmed. The statute speaks in the imperative. For this reason, Vickery's reliance on N.J. Department of Children and Families v. M.H., 2014 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 1778 (App. Div. 2014), is misplaced. There, the driver left a four-year-old child on the bus, after having done no visual inspection at all. Here, the failure to inspect here took place only too late, rather than not at all; and the child left behind was not of tender years, and thus mature enough to advocate for himself, notwithstanding a language barrier. Notwithstanding these differences from the facts in M.H., the law does not permit me to alter the penalty expressly required by law.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the Department's motion for summary decision be GRANTED and the petition of appeal DISMISSED. Vickery's motion for summary decision is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ursula Whitehurst, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 70-3/15

Dear Counsel:

Upon review of the parties' submissions, relevant sections of Title 18A, and the corresponding regulations, it is apparent that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting an order staying the arbitration pending appeal to the Appellate Division since this matter is presently before an arbitrator for final determination. Under these circumstances, and in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b), the parties are free to direct requests to hold the matter in abeyance to the assigned arbitrator.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters is limited by statute. At the outset, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 provides that an arbitrator "shall hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. The Commissioner is required to promptly refer such matters to a panel of arbitrators, subject to the criteria set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. In an effort to further expedite the tenure hearing process, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(d) mandates a 45-day timeframe for issuance of arbitrators' written decisions. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(e), an arbitrator's final determination is not appealable to the Commissioner or the State Board of Education, but is subject to judicial review and enforcement in the Superior Court. See N.J.S. 2A:24-7 through N.J.S. 2A:24-10.

Notwithstanding an arbitrator's broad jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. grants the Commissioner limited authority to perform certain related functions following referral of a tenure matter to an arbitrator for final determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. For example, the tenure laws require the Commissioner to "approve or disapprove" within five days an arbitrator's request for extension of the mandated 45-day timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(g). If an arbitrator fails to adhere to the 45-day timeframe absent Commissioner approval of an extension request, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-1(h) allows the Commissioner to remove that arbitrator from the case and assign the matter to a new arbitrator within five days. However, the tenure laws do not bestow upon the Commissioner any authority to hear and decide related motions once a given matter is transmitted to an arbitrator for final determination.

Furthermore, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b) provides specific guidance as to whom the parties should direct requests to hold a tenure matter in abeyance. The ultimate answer to this inquiry hinges upon whether the Commissioner has already referred the matter to an arbitrator:

> Where a party to a tenure matter requests, the Commissioner may agree to hold the matter in abeyance at any time prior to transmittal to an arbitrator. Thereafter, requests to hold the matter in abeyance shall be directed to the arbitrator.

Once a tenure matter is before an arbitrator for final determination, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to determine whether a stay should be granted. In this instance, the Commissioner referred the matter to an arbitrator via letter dated April 24, 2015. Subsequently, petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting a stay of the arbitration was filed with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on June 19, 2015.

In its reply, petitioner insists that its request for relief is made pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, and not N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5 – although its Notice of Motion for Emergent Relief clearly requests "an Order staying the arbitration." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(a) provides, in relevant part, that "where the subject matter of the controversy is a particular course of action by a district board of education or any other party subject to the jurisdiction of the Commissioner", a petitioner can move for emergent relief "pending the Commissioner's final decision in the contested case." (emphasis added) Because N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 grants an arbitrator – not the Commissioner – jurisdiction to "hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 is inapplicable here.

For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief. This determination shall not preclude the parties from seeking the desired relief before the arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b).

Under these circumstances, and in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b), the parties are free to direct requests to hold the matter in abeyance to the assigned arbitrator.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters is limited by statute. At the outset, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 provides that an arbitrator "shall hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. The Commissioner is required to promptly refer such matters to a panel of arbitrators, subject to the criteria set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. In an effort to further expedite the tenure hearing process, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(d) mandates a 45-day timeframe for issuance of arbitrators' written decisions. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(e), an arbitrator's final determination is not appealable to the Commissioner or the State Board of Education, but is subject to judicial review and enforcement in the Superior Court. See N.J.S. 2A:24-7 through N.J.S. 2A:24-10.

Notwithstanding an arbitrator's broad jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. grants the Commissioner limited authority to perform certain related functions following referral of a tenure matter to an arbitrator for final determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. For example, the tenure laws require the Commissioner to "approve or disapprove" within five days an arbitrator's request for extension of the mandated 45-day timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(g). If an arbitrator fails to adhere to the 45-day timeframe absent Commissioner approval of an extension request, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-1(h) allows the Commissioner to remove that arbitrator from the case and assign the matter to a new arbitrator within five days. However, the tenure laws do not bestow upon the Commissioner any authority to hear and decide related motions once a given matter is transmitted to an arbitrator for final determination.

Furthermore, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b) provides specific guidance as to whom the parties should direct requests to hold a tenure matter in abeyance. The ultimate answer to this inquiry hinges upon whether the Commissioner has already referred the matter to an arbitrator:

> Where a party to a tenure matter requests, the Commissioner may agree to hold the matter in abeyance at any time prior to transmittal to an arbitrator. Thereafter, requests to hold the matter in abeyance shall be directed to the arbitrator.

Once a tenure matter is before an arbitrator for final determination, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to determine whether a stay should be granted. In this instance, the Commissioner referred the matter to an arbitrator via letter dated April 22, 2015. Subsequently, petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting a stay of the arbitration was filed with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on June 19, 2015.

In its reply, petitioner insists that its request for relief is made pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, and not N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5 – although its Notice of Motion for Emergent Relief clearly requests "an Order staying the arbitration." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(a) provides, in relevant part, that "where the subject matter of the controversy is a particular course of action by a district board of education or any other party subject to the jurisdiction of the Commissioner", a petitioner can move for emergent relief "pending the Commissioner's final decision in the contested case." (emphasis added) Because N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 grants an arbitrator – not the Commissioner – jurisdiction to "hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 is inapplicable here.

For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief. This determination shall not preclude the parties from seeking the desired relief before the arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b).

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF SHEILA SLAPPY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK,	:
ESSEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of chronic and excessive absenteeism against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.4(h), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant termination of the respondent from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

AGENCY DKT NO. 137-6/15

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE:

HEARING OF SHEILA SLAPPY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK,	:
ESSEX COUNTY.	:

For the Petitioner, Robert M. Tosti, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, Sheila Slappy

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 19, 2015 through tenure charges of conduct unbecoming certified by Cami Anderson, State District Superintendent of the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, together with supporting evidence against Sheila Slappy, a teaching staff member in the petitioner's employ. The petitioner provided respondent with written notice of such certification at the respondent's last known address, via Federal Express, on June 18, 2015. The petitioner also served a copy of the tenure charges on the respondent's union representative.

On June 19, 2015, the Commissioner directed the respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. No reply to the tenure charges was received from, or on behalf of, respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate that respondent has engaged in a pattern of chronic and excessive absenteeism since the 2011-12 school year. Additionally, respondent has been absent from work without having been granted a leave of absence, or without personal, sick, or vacation leave time having been approved by the District. Although respondent was deemed fit to return to work by a physician as of December 2, 2014 – and warned about her excessive absenteeism on numerous occasions – she failed to return, and – to date – remains absent without leave ("AWOL").

Deeming the allegations to be admitted and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against her, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's charges of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member have been proven and warrant the respondent's dismissal from employment.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from her tenured position with the District. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Toni Lenz, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 97-4/15

Dear Counsel:

Upon review of the parties' submissions, relevant sections of Title 18A, and the corresponding regulations, it is apparent that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting an order staying the arbitration pending appeal to the Appellate Division since this matter is presently before an arbitrator for final determination. Under these circumstances, and in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b), the parties are free to direct requests to hold the matter in abeyance to the assigned arbitrator.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters is limited by statute. At the outset, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 provides that an arbitrator "shall hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. The Commissioner is required to promptly refer such matters to a panel of arbitrators, subject to the criteria set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. In an effort to further expedite the tenure hearing process, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(d) mandates a 45-day timeframe for issuance of arbitrators' written decisions. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(e), an arbitrator's final determination is not appealable to the Commissioner or the State Board of Education, but is subject to judicial review and enforcement in the Superior Court. See N.J.S. 2A:24-7 through N.J.S. 2A:24-10.

Notwithstanding an arbitrator's broad jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. grants the Commissioner limited authority to perform certain related functions following referral of a tenure matter to an arbitrator for final determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. For example, the tenure laws require the Commissioner to "approve or disapprove" within five days an arbitrator's request for extension of the mandated 45-day timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(g). If an arbitrator fails to adhere to the 45-day timeframe absent Commissioner approval of an extension request, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-1(h) allows the Commissioner to remove that arbitrator from the case and assign the matter to a new arbitrator within five days. However, the tenure laws do not bestow upon the Commissioner any authority to hear and decide related motions once a given matter is transmitted to an arbitrator for final determination.

Furthermore, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b) provides specific guidance as to whom the parties should direct requests to hold a tenure matter in abeyance. The ultimate answer to this inquiry hinges upon whether the Commissioner has already referred the matter to an arbitrator:

> Where a party to a tenure matter requests, the Commissioner may agree to hold the matter in abeyance at any time prior to transmittal to an arbitrator. Thereafter, requests to hold the matter in abeyance shall be directed to the arbitrator.

Once a tenure matter is before an arbitrator for final determination, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to determine whether a stay should be granted. In this instance, the Commissioner referred the matter to an arbitrator via letter dated April 30, 2015. Subsequently, petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief requesting a stay of the arbitration was filed with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on June 22, 2015.

Petitioner insists that its request for relief is made pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, and not N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5 – although its Notice of Motion for Emergent Relief clearly requests "an Order staying the arbitration." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(a) provides, in relevant part, that "where the subject matter of the controversy is a particular course of action by a district board of education or any other party subject to the jurisdiction of the Commissioner", a petitioner can move for emergent relief "pending the Commissioner's final decision in the contested case." (emphasis added) Because N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 grants an arbitrator – not the Commissioner – jurisdiction to "hear and make a final determination" on controversies and disputes arising under the tenure laws, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 is inapplicable here.

For the foregoing reasons, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear and decide petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief. This determination shall not preclude the parties from seeking the desired relief before the arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b).

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

Agency Docket No. 300-10/14	:

For Petitioner – Louis R. Lessig, Esquire; Benjamin S. Teris, Esquire

For Respondent – Robert M. Schwartz, Esquire; Andrew W. Schwartz, Esquire

Arbitrator - Scott E. Buchheit

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The procedural history of this case is in large part set forth in the December 23, 2014 Opinion and Award of Arbitrator Walt DeTreux ("DeTreux Award"). The DeTreux Award is attached to this Award as Appendix A, and is incorporated herein in its entirety.

On January 8, 2015, the Department of Education ("DOE") appointed the undersigned to replace Arbitrator DeTreux in this matter. DOE subsequently approved extension of the statutory time limitation for concluding this case until July 15, 2015.

The arbitration hearing took place on April 17, 2015, May 5, 2015, May 21, 2015 and June 1, 2015. On June 26, 2015, both parties submitted extensive post-hearing briefs.

FACTS[1]

In 1992, Respondent began her employment in the Camden School District as a Math Teacher. Respondent remained a Math Teacher until September 2009. While serving in this capacity, Respondent was assigned to the Camden High School and the Veterans Memorial Middle School.

In September 2009, Respondent became a Vice Principal at the Woodrow Wilson High School. She remained in that position until February 2013, when she was reassigned to the Pyne Point Middle School. Respondent was a Vice Principal at that school for the remainder of the 2012-2013 school year.

[1] What follows is a basic statement of facts. The full recitation of facts, at least from the perspective of Petitioner and Respondent, is set forth in their briefs. Other facts of relevance are set forth in the DeTreux Award.

On May 1, 2013, Respondent received correspondence advising that she would not be renewed as a Vice Principal for the 2013-2014 school year for reasons of economy. Respondent anticipated that she would be reassigned as a Teacher.

Respondent applied for Unemployment Compensation benefits for the summer of 2013. She received at least one unemployment check.

On July 25, 2013, Respondent was notified that she was being reassigned to the Dudley Family School ("Dudley"), a K-8 school, as Vice Principal. This correspondence instructed Respondent to report to Dudley no later than August 2, 2013.

Peggy Nicolosi ("Nicolosi"), the interim Superintendent of Schools, had made the recommendation that Respondent be reassigned to Dudley. By then the State had already assumed operation of the District pursuant to the State Intervention Statute, with the takeover occurring on June 25, 2013.

On or about August 2, 2013, Respondent did report to Dudley. Respondent thereafter discovered that the Principal of the School, Joseph Ortiz ("Ortiz"), was on medical leave.

On August 21, 2013, Respondent attended a convocation for Principals and Vice Principals. Part of the discussion entailed the new rubrics used to evaluate Teachers, Principals and Vice Principals. Attendees were given a document titled "Attachment 1: Vice Principal Evaluation and Support in Camden City Public Schools, 2013-2014".

On August 26, 2013, Respondent met with Nicolosi. As a result of this meeting, Nicolosi offered assistance to Respondent to prepare Dudley for its opening. She assigned Diane Hathaway to assist Respondent, as well as the former Vice Principal at Dudley.

On September 2, 2013, Dudley Teachers reported for their first day of service. On September 10, 2013, Dudley students reported for their first day of school. At that time, Respondent was the administrator responsible for Dudley.

On or about September 19, 2013, Ortiz returned and assumed his Principal position at Dudley. Until that date, Respondent was the Administrator in charge of Dudley.

On October 9, 2013, Respondent commenced a medical leave for weight reduction surgery. She remained on leave from that surgery through December 5, 2013.

Respondent received three evaluations during the 2013-2014 school year. All had the same format.

The rubric used for Respondent's evaluations had four domains – Instructional Leadership, Internal Leadership, Organizational Leadership, and Effectiveness of Teacher Evaluations. Each domain had sub-domains. For each sub-domain, Respondent received one of four possible scores ("ineffective", "partially effective", "effective" or "highly effective"), followed by narratives titled "Evidence" and "Recommendations". The ratings for each sub-domain, which earned scores of 1 ("ineffective") to 4 ("highly effective") were averaged, leading to an overall score for each domain, and ultimately an overall score for the entire evaluation. At the conclusion of the evaluation form was a section titled "Evaluator's Summary Comments".

Respondent's first evaluation, dated January 10, 2014, was given by Dr. Victor Gilson ("Gilson"). Respondent's overall rating was 1.95 ("partially effective").

Respondent's second evaluation, dated March 31, 2014, was also given by Gilson. Respondent's overall rating was 1.85 ("partially effective").

Respondent's third evaluation, dated June 12, 2014, was given by Thomas Fleming ("Fleming"). Respondent's overall rating was 2.05 ("partially effective").

In late June 2014, Gilson completed an Annual Performance Report for Respondent. Respondent's average overall score was 1.95 ("partially effective"). Gilson had a summative evaluation conference with Respondent on or about June 27, 2014, where he discussed the summative evaluation with Respondent.

On July 30, 2014, Petitioner served Respondent with tenure charges for inefficiency. On August 22, 2014, Respondent submitted an answer to the charges. On October 8, 2014, the District certified the charges to the Commissioner of Education. On October 24, 2014, Respondent submitted an answer to the certified charges.

Thereafter, the Commissioner referred the matter to Arbitrator DeTreux. The procedural history of this matter before Arbitrator DeTreux is set forth in the DeTreux Award.

POSITION OF PETITIONER[2]

To ensure students are able to achieve their full potential, the Camden City School District needs effective school leaders with the ability and desire to implement high-level instructional practices. In the early stages of State intervention of a failing school district, broad powers are bestowed upon the State District Superintendent to effectuate swift and efficient reform. The law mandates the school district to conduct three (3) evaluations of building principals and vice principals within the first twelve (12) to eighteen (18) months of State intervention. If a school district deems a vice principal inefficient following those evaluations, the law permits the State District Superintendent to dismiss her/him. That is exactly the basis of the inefficiency charge against Respondent.

Those inefficiency charges must be sustained. Rather than accepting any responsibility for her performance deficiencies as a vice principal, Respondent blames others using half-baked excuses. She blames the District for assigning her to an elementary school, even though it was actually a family school, she has an elementary teacher certification, and her principal certification qualifies her to serve as a family school principal. She blames the District for not providing her any support to open her school, even though the District assigned an experienced principal coach, a former vice principal, and others to help. She blames her abysmal evaluation ratings on a lack of training, even though the District provided her with ample professional development sessions to help her succeed. She blames other performance deficiencies on a dispute with her principal, even though a reasonable professional would have found ways to work both with him and around him. She blames her evaluators for not helping her, even though they provided her with numerous recommendations on how to improve and she never reached out to them for help. Respondent simply blames everyone but herself.

In short, Respondent has proven through her actions and inaction that she is not going to take part in the important changes the District is trying to effectuate. She can no longer be permitted to be a roadblock to student achievement. The tenure charges must be sustained and Respondent permanently dismissed from employment.

POSITION OF RESPONDENT[3]

The charges filed by Petitioner against Respondent are procedurally and substantively defective. The procedural defects are fatal and substantive defects render the charges arbitrary and capricious. Both warrant dismissal.

First, Petitioner failed to comply with the twelve-month assessment cycle required by the State Intervention Statute. The assessment cycle could not have begun until the assessment unit was in place, which did not occur until the fall of 2013. However, because Respondent was not employed during the month of July 2013, and only began as the vice principal at Dudley effective August 2, 2013, even assuming that the assessment cycle began on the date of take-over as the Petitioner contends, the requirement that the "assessment cycle" be "not less than 12-months" still has not been met.

Additionally, the Petitioner failed to implement a CAP as required by its own process, and by TEACHNJ, and its implementing regulations. Arbitrator DeTreux, in his decision that is the law in this case, said it governs this matter and must be read "in concert" with the State Intervention Statute.

Moreover, Petitioner failed to provide Respondent the "additional support" and "at least one additional observation" required by the explanatory document, the Petitioner's representatives drafted and disseminated at the convocation held for administrators during the week of August 19, 2013.

In addition, Petitioner paid only lip service to the training that was to occur on the evaluation rubrics as they applied to vice principals and principals. The applicable TEACHNJ regulation states in relevant part that Petitioner was required to provide "training, on and descriptions of each component of the evaluation rubric...and provide more thorough training for any teaching staff member who is being evaluated in the school district for the first time." The only training that occurred on the evaluation instrument for principals and vice principals was on August 21, 2013, and that only lasted for at best a couple of hours and it only included training on the evaluation rubrics as they applied to teachers.

Petitioner has interpreted the Intervention Statute in such a way as to render as meaningless the procedures put into place by both that Statute and TEACHNJ. They are to be read in concert with each other and are intended to offer a measure of employee protections as a counterweight or balance to the Intervention Statute's otherwise expansive authority.

The case law, particularly the TEACHNJ arbitration decisions, hold that districts must adhere to the requisite procedures. There is no exception for a State Operated School District.

Substantively, Petitioner posits its entire case on the three evaluations. For Petitioner, nothing else mattered. As Petitioner did not pay any heed to procedures, either its own or those in statute and/or regulation, it did not take into account at all material factual circumstances.

That Respondent made every effort to implement the recommendations made of her first evaluator, under what was acknowledged by him to be very difficult circumstances, and in fact implemented many of those recommendations, was of no moment. That the Petitioner's evaluators did not adhere to the inter-rater reliability between evaluators touted by Gilson also didn't matter. For Petitioner, only the evaluation scores mattered, even if the evaluations themselves were flawed.

The tenure charges against Respondent must be dismissed.

OPINION

As set forth above, the parties have placed before me numerous arguments. I, however, have neither the time[4] nor

---

[4] TEACHNJ includes the following provision: "The arbitrator shall receive no more than $1250 per day and no more than $7500 per case". A simple mathematical calculation establishes that under this Statute an Arbitrator cannot work for the State more than six days on any case (less if she/he wishes to be reimbursed for travel expenses).

Suffice it to state that for this case - involving various administrative matters, four days of hearing resulting in a transcript of 882 pages, 76 exhibits (many lengthy), and 100 pages of post-hearing briefs (with accompanying material) - I have worked all of those six days.

need to analyze more than one of these arguments in order to decide properly this case.

More specifically, I agree with Respondent that Petitioner's actions towards her were arbitrary and capricious because Petitioner did not strictly adhere to its own "Evaluation and Support System" ("ESS") prior to bringing tenure charges against her. A detailed, six-page document[5] containing the ESS was distributed to all Principals and Vice Principals, including Respondent, at a

I reject any suggestión that arbitrators must work beyond the allotted compensated days in order to afford the parties due process. What constitutes adequate due process is governed by what creates the dispute resolution system, in this case TEACHNJ.

Moreover, even if arbitrators were routinely willing to work uncompensated days on TEACHNJ cases, I respectfully suggest that this would not be effectuating the legislative intent. If the expectation is that arbitrators will work beyond the six day limitation, the inevitable result will be that TEACHNJ cases, particularly inefficiency cases that often involve fact intensive matters, will frequently turn into much more lengthy and resource depleting proceedings than apparently envisioned by the legislature when enacting TEACHNJ.

Thus, under TEACHNJ the parties and arbitrator must make difficult decisions about how to best use the six allotted days. Possibilities include not only limiting the arbitrator's Opinion, but also limiting the scope of the arbitration hearing itself. This could even include the exclusion of relevant evidence because its probative value is substantially outweighed by a danger of undue delay (See Fed. R. Evid. 403), as dictated by TEACHNJ.

gathering on August 21, 2013. Thereafter, the ESS remained in place for the entire 2013-2014 school year.

Although Respondent contends that Petitioner failed to adhere to the ESS in several different ways, my focus is on the fact that Respondent never received a Corrective Action Plan ("CAP"). In addition, as should have occurred once Respondent received a CAP, she never received at least one additional observation beyond the three that are required for all Vice Principals[6].

I reject Petitioner's assertion that the ESS did not entitle Respondent to receive a CAP. While not a model of clarity in every respect, it is stated in more than one place in the ESS that a Vice Principal who, like Respondent, is rated as ineffective or partially effective "will" receive additional support through a CAP. For example, on page seven of the ESS is written the following:

> Corrective Action Plan (CAP): Any teaching staff member who is rated Ineffective or Partially Effective on his or her evaluation will receive additional support through a CAP. The teaching staff member will work with his or her supervisor to create a plan of professional development that is designed to correct the needs identified in the evaluation. The CAP will include timelines for professional improvement and growth and clearly delineate responsibilities of the [6] It is stated in the ESS that among the "minimum requirements" is that "All Vice Principals are required to have at least three observations a year...Vice Principals on Corrective Action Plans...must have at least one additional observation per year".

teaching staff member in implementing the plan. (emphasis added)

I do not accept the testimony of Interim State Takeover Superintendent Nicolosi that Respondent was in fact placed on a CAP. According to Nicolosi, that CAP was set forth in all three evaluations Respondent received in the "Recommendation" section that was at the conclusion of each sub-domain. Nicolosi's opinion on this point is not persuasive, as there is a clear distinction between a CAP and Recommendations.

Presumably, Vice Principals routinely receive Recommendations in their evaluations. It does not follow, however, that all of these Vice Principals have received a CAP, as that term is used generally and in the ESS. As set forth above, under the ESS a CAP must adhere to a number of specific standards, few if any of which are included in Recommendations.

I further reject any argument by Petitioner that the "actionable feedback" contained in the Recommendations section of Respondent's evaluation was the functional equivalent of a CAP. Whatever the merits of this argument might be for other Vice Principals, it is not persuasive in the context of Respondent's individual situation.

In this regard, the conditions under which Respondent worked during the 2013-2014 school year were, to say the least, highly unusual. Those factors are fairly characterized by Respondent as including the following: (1) Respondent's late assignment to the Dudley Family School; (2) her lack of elementary experience; (3) that the principal was on leave until September 19, 2013; (4) that Respondent herself was on leave from October 9 through December 5, 2013;[7] or (5) that there was little, if any, meaningful communication, cooperation and/or collaboration from Principal Ortiz during the school year.

It is this final factor that in particular made Respondent's situation so unique. On direct examination, Evaluator Fleming candidly testified about this dysfunctional relationship between Ortiz and Respondent, and who was responsible for that dysfunction, as follows:

> I don't think that there was any meaningful communication. And I have to say, that I don't think it was because of Ms. Gay Brown's action. I would more so attribute that to the Principal's actions or lack of actions.

[7] During this leave Respondent underwent weight reduction surgery. Respondent testified that she was "morbidly obese", according to the medical definition of that term, and that she lost 100 pounds as a result of the surgery. Given this testimony, I cannot agree with Petitioner that this was elective surgery. Although Petitioner stresses that Respondent did not submit any medical documentation to support her contention about the need for the surgery, neither is there any evidence to refute it.

On cross-examination Fleming reaffirmed his previous testimony about this dysfunction and who was at fault. Fleming then testified as follows:

> I just did the final evaluation, and I think I mentioned it in my – my summary, the lack of cooperation between Miss Gay Brown and her principal, it was unheard of, it was unheard of. And as I stated earlier, I don't think that's because of Miss Gay Brown's actions. And I also evaluated the principal. And I would attribute most of that resistance to communication to the principal. So being evaluated by the rubric, she did not fare well. (emphasis added)

While Petitioner argues that Respondent should have found ways to work both with and around her Principal, notwithstanding the "unheard of" situation between them, that expectation was an undue burden for Respondent. This is particularly so because, according to Respondent's unrebuted testimony, Ortiz told her that if she went "over his head" then "I'm going to deem it insubordination and I'm going to write you up".

Petitioner chose to ignore all of these considerations when evaluating Respondent. All that mattered to Respondent's evaluators when rating her, as well as Petitioner itself when deciding to bring tenure charges against her, was how Respondent performed in each of the domains and sub-domains, without any serious consideration to the context in which that performance occurred.

While I in no way review, let alone take issue with, the determinations made by Respondent's evaluators as to the quality of Respondent's administrative performance, I do find that because of the strict accountability the evaluators and Petitioner demanded of her, Respondent likewise could demand strict accountability from Petitioner when applying to her the ESS. For the reasons set forth above, and perhaps others[8], Petitioner failed to meet that standard. It follows that Petitioner's actions towards Respondent, a long-term employee about whom there is no indication that prior to the 2013-2014 school year she had ever been considered a roadblock to student achievement, were arbitrary and capricious.

Accordingly, notwithstanding Petitioner making every possible argument to the contrary, I must and will dismiss the tenure charges against Respondent in their entirety. I will also, as requested by Respondent, order that she be reinstated with all back pay and emoluments owed.

[8] I make no judgments on the merits of the arguments that I have not analyzed in this Opinion.

AWARD

The tenure charges against Respondent are dismissed and she shall be reinstated with all back pay and emoluments owed.

Signed this 14th day of July 2015.

LEON MASHORE, EDWARD BROWN, GAY S. BROWN, BRIAN MEDLEY, STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN

Agency Docket #303-10/14; 290-9/14; 300-10/14; 291-9/14

For Petitioner School District – Louis R. Lessig, Esq.; Benjamin S. Teris, Esq.; Lauren E. Tedesco, Esq., BROWN & CONNERY, LLP

Introduction and Statement of Relevant Facts

On June 25, 2013, the State of New Jersey assumed operation of the Camden City School District pursuant to the State Intervention Statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-45. As part of the takeover, the State District Superintendent directed an evaluation of each building principal and vice-principal during the 2013-14 school year. The State-appointed officials employed an evaluation instrument, approved by the New Jersey Commissioner of Education, that was intended to comply with the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ") evaluation criteria, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123, and its related regulations, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 et seq.

The principals and vice-principals were evaluated in four domains – instructional leadership, cultural leadership, organizational leadership; and effectiveness of teacher evaluation. In each area, the administrators were scored "ineffective," "partially effective," "effective," or "highly effective." The ratings earned a score of 1 ("ineffective") to 4 ("highly effective"). The scores were averaged for a total score on the 1 to 4 scale with a corresponding rating.

During the 2013-14 school year, principals and vice-principals in the Camden City School District were evaluated three times. Respondents Mashore, E. Brown, G. Brown, and Medley received ratings of "ineffective" or "partially effective." After the conclusion of the school year, the State District Superintendent brought tenure charges against Respondents, seeking their removal for inefficiency. The Commissioner of Education found that the charges, if proven, are sufficient to warrant dismissal and referred the case of each Respondent to an Arbitrator for a tenure hearing.[1]

On November 7, 2014, prior to receipt of the Commissioner's assignment of the Mashore case to Arbitrator Edmund Gerber, Counsel for Respondent Mashore filed a Motion To Dismiss, arguing that the tenure charges "were defective and premature in that such charges were not based on a two-year evaluative cycle pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and were not preceded by the issuance of a corrective action plan as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5." In short, Respondent asserted that the District did not comply with the legal requirements of TEACHNJ regarding evaluations.

The Commissioner's referral of the Mashore case to Arbitrator Gerber overlapped Respondent Mashore's motion. Counsel for Respondents Medley, E. Brown, and G. Brown indicated their intention to file similar motions in each Respondent's case, leading to several discussions between Counsel for Respondents and Petitioner, the four assigned Arbitrators, and the Commissioner's office.

For purposes of judicial economy and efficiency and to achieve uniformity regarding the resolution of what would be identical motions in four separate cases, Respondents and Petitioner agreed to treat the Mashore Motion To Dismiss as a consolidated motion, applicable to each of the four tenure cases, to be decided by one Arbitrator. The parties executed a consent order encompassing that agreement and submitted it to the Arbitrators and the Department of Education's Division of Disputes and Controversies.

The parties submitted written briefs in support and opposition to the Motion To Dismiss. Oral argument was heard on the motion on December 2, 2014, and Respondents filed a reply brief and Petitioner a sur-reply brief soon thereafter. The Motion was then submitted to the Arbitrator for a decision.

Issue

Should Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the tenure charges be granted or denied?

Analysis and Decision

Procedural Objection

In its Brief In Opposition to Respondents' Motion To Dismiss, Petitioner raised several procedural objections. First, it argues that the motion is untimely in that the Mashore motion was not "filed with the time allotted for the filing of an Answer." (citing N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)(1)) Second, it contends that a motion to dismiss cannot be filed after the Commissioner has referred the charges to an Arbitrator. Finally, it asserts that the American Arbitration Association Labor Arbitration Rules do not allow for submission and consideration of dispositive motions.
