PROGNOSTICKS, &c. of the ALLEGANY PHILOSOPHER.

THIS great Sage, as mentioned last year, lives on the other side of the Allegany Mountain, a place favourable to longevity, where he enjoys the most perfect health.
 Tho' he has counted ninety-nine revolving years, his judgment is nervous and sound, and his ideas of philosophy unimpaired.

This Sophist informs us, that Mrs. Britain, at this time, continues in a very low, lingering, languishing condition;
 her pulse, indeed, sometimes beats high, but the strongest efforts which she makes to keep up her importance, seem to arise from a sudden flow of animal spirits, and like the spasms of convulsion, are to be considered as injurious to the machine which is agitated by them. The disorder in her bowels, with which she has been for some years afflicted, gains ground; but she is most alarmed at the inflamed state of her extreme parts; and, indeed, they have so unpromising an aspect, that it is doubtful whether all the cooling medicines prescribed by her ablest physicians will be able to prevent amputations. The old lady exhibits the most

most striking symptoms of an inward decay, and is, evidently, hastening to her dissolution, though the precise moment, by the planets, cannot be ascertained. Her constitution is so much debilitated by severe shocks of various kinds (and particularly injured by that dreadful distemper the King's Evil,) that it is impossible she can survive them, without a miraculous revolution in her favour. With a broken constitution, and a bad habit of body, she must never expect to do what she has done. His sentiments concerning her recovery are every hour more and more confirmed, when he thinks of the frequent application which has been made of the lancet; for though phlebotomy may be highly serviceable in certain circumstances, the stoutest patient in Christendom may, like a devoted pig, be blooded to death.

He farther informs us that, by the most acute observation of the planets, she will be forced to acknowledge this year, in the fullest manner, the Independence of these United States, which will be recognized by all the powers of Europe; when heaven-born PEACE, with her balmy wings, will pervade this convulsed country, and heal the desolations that war has made.

THE LIBERTINE RECLAIMED:
A DIALOGUE.

BY THE REVEREND MR. OGDEN.

CHARACTERS.—Agoretus is possessed of opulence; is of a sociable disposition; hath piety without affectation, and learning without pride.—Lysander is a gentleman whose life doth honour to religion, and whose converse is as advantageous as it is pleasing.—The fine understanding of Philenor has been improved by education; his taste is elegant, and address polite; but, unhappily, his morals are depraved, and his conduct dishonourable to himself, and reproachful to humanity.

LYSANDER.

AT the entrance into the court of my friend, as I was saluted by Philenor, methought I perceived a change in his countenance, manner, and dress;—cheerful, without levity,

FEBRUARY, SECOND MONTH,

PANKAKES and fritters now in season are,
 And young men they for valentines prepare;
 Still we have blustering and tempestuous weather,
 With snow and sleet, and freezing mixt together:
 Let women then take council of my verse,
 And make much of themselves, good things are scarce.

FEBRUARY, SECOND MONTH,

PANKAKES and fritters now in season are,
 And young men they for valentines prepare;
 Still we have blustering and tempestuous weather,
 With snow and sleet, and freezing mixt together:
 Let women then take council of my verse,
 And make much of themselves, good things are scarce.

 Now his destin'd annual race
 Through the wintry signs has run.
 Lo! the bidden winds arise,
 Prompt to clear the ambient air,
 And the bright'ning azure skies
 For the summer beams prepare.

A P R I L, FOURTH MONTH,

NOW the winter's gone away,
 The trees, the flow'rs are fresh and gay,
 The birds melodious, wild, and free,
 Attune their rural minstrelsy :
 Young men and maidens they will now,
 Be dearly fondling—you know how,
 Until at length they'll join their hands
 In wedlock's soft and easy bands.

J U N E, SIXTH MONTH,

SWEETLY blushing May retires,
 With her early sportive train;
 Warm'd with bright ethereal fires
 June assumes her brilliant reign.
 Now the rising southern gales
 Warmly court the nodding trees;
 Streams that wander through the vales,
 Curling to the passing breeze.

J U L Y, SEVENTH MONTH,

THE Sun, in splendor, rides supreme,
 Along the azure road,
 And darts to earth his fiercest beam
 From his intense abode.
 The lab'rer plies his hardy toil,
 Throughout the sultry day,
 And stirs him o'er the parch'd up soil,
 To make the new mown hay.

The expressions of Agor. were regarded by Lysan with that satisfaction which a person of beneficence receives on the information of the good of another.— And how respectable, observed he, may now be the character of Philemor? Shining talents! Fashionable accomplishments! And literary attainments, embellished by the wisdom of VIRTUE!—Destitute of PIETY, how less revered would have been the names, even of BOYLE, of LOCKE, and of NEWTON! Agores. Without RELIGION, PHILOSOPHY, I conceive, would have been their reproach, and rendered them, indeed, less amiable. Lysander. How unhappy must be the MAN whose superior ABILITIES shall tend to make him superior only in GUILT and in MISERY!—Shall occasion him, in a peculiar manner, to become a SPECTACLE of DERISION,—an OBJECT of CONTEMPT!

AUGUST, EIGHTH MONTH.

SOME say that money ebberh like the tide,
 And many this experiment have try'd;
 But then they cannot make it out also,
 That money, like the fruitful tide, will flow;
 It is a maxim all the poor will own,
 The tide flows ten times to the pocket one.
 On eagles wings immortal scandal fly,
 Whilst virtuous actions are but born and die.

THERE are some things proper to be known by the husbandman that will be of great use to him, and serve for a good precaution against the rigours of the winter; and he may take this as a certain presage of a very severe winter; when there is great plenty of acorns.

A shepherd should take care to observe, whether the ewes, after they have taken ram, whether they seek after them again; and by that they may guess the next winter will be a hard one.

Again, let those who look after the cattle, observe if they go together in troops or herds; or whether the swine grub the earth with their heads turned to the north; and if they find it so, let them take care to provide store of fuel, for it generally proves a hard and long winter.

Take notice of the 24th of November, and as that day is, the winter is like to prove; and as you find the 25th of the same month, so will the month of January be.

You may easily know what sort of

NOVEMBER, ELEVENTH MONTH,

 Know, during our mortality,
 And each successive change;
 Our springs and summers quickly fly,
 Autumnal languors following nigh,
 Our wisest plans derange.

ANECDOTE of DAVID HUME.
THE late David Hume, Esq; (the learned and ingenious subject of the present anecdote) lived in the New-Town of Edinburgh; between which and the Old-Town, there is a communication, by means of an elegant bridge over a swamp. Desirous one day to cut his way shorter, Mr. H. took it into his head to pass over a temporary one, which had been erected for general accommodation, till the new one could be completed. Unfortunately part of the temporary bridge gave way and our Philosopher found himself stuck in the mud. On hearing him call aloud for assistance, an old woman hastened to the spot from whence the sound seemed to issue; but perceiving who he was, refused giving him any help. "What, cried she, are you not Hume the Atheist?" "Oh no! no!" returned the Philosopher. "I am no Atheist; indeed, you mistake, good woman, you do indeed!" "Let me hear, then, returned the other, if you can say your belief."

The Character of a very mischievous Monosyllable.

AS I find you admit the descriptions of characters in private as well as public life, give me leave to present you with a portraiture of myself, which (contrary to my usual practice) I shall draw faithfully and in it's true colours.

I must confess that I ever possessed a very mischievous disposition; that my great pleasure has ever been to mislead people; and that I have done more mischief in the world than can possibly be described; yet am I universally caressed by persons of all ranks, conditions, and persuasions.

Were I inclined to boast of my ancestry, I trace up my genealogy even higher than the sons of Adam; for I could bring scripture to prove, that my grand progenitor was no less a person than the tempter of Eve, himself.

At my very first entrance into life, I gave a proof of my natural disposition. I squalled disapprobation at my existing, though I could not but be glad of my coming into the world. I cried, whensoever my nurse offered me pap, at the same time that I longed for it; and while I pretended great fondness, I indulged a secret satisfaction in mumbling the nipple with my gums. When at school I got many a flogging on account of my shuffling, as the master used to call it; and I was reckoned a most arrant tell-tale by my play-fellows.

It would be an endless work for me to enumerate all the particulars in which I have employed those little arts, which have never failed to recommend me every where. Suffice it to say in general, that I have been caressed from the king down to the beggar; and that I have always been esteemed among the ladies in particular, and constantly made one of their company in all their routs and assemblies.

I have concerned myself greatly in religious matters; and not only the Roman Catholick religion, but the various sects among Protestants have been wonderfully supported and encouraged by my influence. You will think it strange, but I assure you, that the infidel also, and even the atheist, boast of me as their strongest advocate.

But the Bar, and Courts of Justice, are more immediately my province. Here I am to be found in my true glory: I am sure to be retained on both sides in every cause; and if it were not for me, a Lawyer would have very little to say.

I have been of great service to the practitioners of physic, as well regular as irregular. The first of these I have frequently assisted in drawing up cases fitted to the writings in theory, though contrary to the observations in practice. The latter, who go under the ignominious denomination of quacks are obliged to me for furnishing the contents of their advertisements; and many persons have been perjured in swearing to affidavits in behalf of these doctors, which have been dictated entirely by me.

I have

I have had a great hand in many works relating to almost every branch. I have made up the far greater part of most books of voyages and travels, the authors of which are known to be very intimate with me even to a proverb: I have compiled many volumes of authentic and impartial histories; I have furnished many new systems in philosophy, and have carried on many a warm controversy in polemical divinity. As for poetry, my talent has lain chiefly in panegyric, though I have not frequently dabb'd in satire. I will not pretend that I ever assisted the Laureat in his sublime odes; but I declare that I never dictated a single expression in any of Mr. Churchill's compositions.

In Politics, Gentlemen,—in Politics,—aye, there indeed, I shine. During the present political squabbles, I have been of infinite service to both parties; and in every thing that has been published, it has plainly appeared, that I have had no small concern. Nor have I thought it beneath me to supply materials even for common Newspapers. Maubert could not have eked out his Brussels Gazette without me; and all the News Printers have received from me many wonderful paragraphs. To conclude quite in character,

I am, Gentlemen,

Your most obliged, and

Affectionate humble servant,

To the R E A D E R.

A FEW days since being in company with a friend, amongst other topics arose that of mortality; my friend said that he could furnish me with a SERMON on the subject. I begged the favour (thinking it a written discourse) but he assured me that it was very laconic; and therefore would deliver it verbatim, as he found it somewhere. Now, Sir, as I trust, (by my own measure) that it may not prove unenterprising to many of you, I submit it to your consideration, and am your's, &c.

TEXT.—Job v. 7. “Man is born unto trouble, as the sparks fly upwards.”

I shall divide the discourse into, and consider it under the three following heads.

First, Man's ingress into the world.

Secondly, Progress through the world.

Thirdly and lastly, His egress out of the world.

And first, Man's ingress into the world—is naked and bare!

Secondly, His progress thro' the world—is trouble and care:

Third and lastly, His egress out of the world—is nobody knows where.

To conclude,

“If we do well here, we shall be well there;”

“I can tell you no more, if I preach a whole year.”

An approved Receipt to pickle Hams.

ALLOW to each ham a quart of fine salt and one ounce of saltpetre, mixing therewith a sufficient quantity of mlasses to give them the colour of 7d sugar, with which rub the hams thoroughly, and lay them skin down strewing a proportion of the mixture betwixt each layer, let them lay thus six days, when they may be repacked, adding a little more salt to separate the layers and give room for the pickle to pass between, at the same time removing those at top to the bottom of the vessel, where they must remain six days, when prepare a strong pickle, to each gallon of which, add a quart of ley; wherewith cover the hams so as that the upper layer, when a weight is put on the top may sink at least two inches below the surface. In this situation they may continue two weeks, when they must be taken out, well drained, and hung up to dry.

Probatum est.

A Receipt to cure an Inflammation in the Bowels.

TAKE away 10 ounces of blood, and repeat the bleeding according to the urgency of the complaint; give a clyster twice every day, till the patient has had two or three stools; and to appease the pain, and stop the excessive vomiting, give 10 drops of liquid laudanum, in a little broth, every six hours.
