BEFORE RICHARD MURPHY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) seeks sanctions of the Casino Control Act against the above corporate and individual licensees, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 for a variety of alleged violations involving so called "cash comps" provided to a casino patron. Specifically, the Division alleges that casino patron Antonio Chan was provided with "Cash-Paid Out" disbursements on five occasions between December of 1985 and August of 1986 which were purportedly intended as reimbursement for travel expenses but, in actuality, were paid to Chan to reduce his gambling losses at the Tropicana. The Division claims that these payments of "cash comps" to Chan violated the provisions of the Casino Control Act, as well as regulations promulgated by the Casino Control Commission (Commission) as to complimentary services and recording practices. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-14a and c; N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a; N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3, 1.25, 1.2(c)3.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed a complaint in this case with the Commission on February 19, 1987, and the respondents requested a hearing on March 26, 1987, with respondent Sattazahn individually requesting a hearing on March 16, 1987. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq on August 13, 1987, and a prehearing conference was conducted by the Honorable Edgar Holmes, ALJ, on June 15, 1987. Prehearing briefs were filed by April 14, and the hearing scheduled for September 1 of 1987 was adjourned because discovery had not been completed.

On October 6, 1987, respondents moved before the Commission for an interlocutory judgment on the issue of the legality of "cash comps" and for a stay of these proceedings. This motion for interlocutory relief was denied by the Commission on December 9, 1987. Further hearing dates scheduled for December 2 through 4 of 1987 were adjourned pending the Commission's action as well as respondent's motion for partial summary decision, which was filed on January 13, 1988. The Division replied to the respondent's partial summary decision motion and dismissal on February 14, 1988.

In the interim, the provisions of the Casino Control Act pertaining to so-called "cash comps" were amended on February 1988. In light of the legislative amendment, respondent's motion for partial summary decision and dismissal were addressed at the hearing and are resolved below. After motions and a ruling on April 5 as to discovery, followed by a request for submission of additional documentation and information, the case was scheduled for hearing on August 29, 1988. Prior to that date, the parties were able to stipulate to many of the facts in this matter and the hearing was consequently completed on August 29. All post-hearing submissions were received by November 1, 1988, and the record was closed on that date.*

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Division alleges, and the respondents do not deny, that Tropicana employees authorized five cash paid-out slips in 1985 and 1986 to casino patron Antonio Chan, an established credit patron since 1981. Chan is a "high roller" who frequently bets $10,000 on a hand and has a habit of paying his gambling debt before leaving the Tropicana and returning to his home in the Philippine Islands, or venturing on to another casino.

The dates and amounts of the five payments in question are as follows:

December 14, 1985	$12,500
December 14, 1985	$8,500
May 14, 1986	$25,200
August 17, 1986	$12,800
August 24, 1986	$16,800

All of the cash paid out slips were signed by Chan, and four of them stated that the purpose of the payment was for airfare, but that no tickets were available. No other documentation was obtained from Chan or noted in Tropicana's records. As to the payment to Chan on August 17, 1986 for $12,800, respondents Brewer and Kesel obtained two airline tickets from him for a total of $4,542.60, but these do not relate to the August 17 date.

* The date for submission of the initial decision was extended from December 16, 1988 until December 29, 1988, and again until January 6 and 13 because of priority given another pending Commission decision, as well as other pending decisions. An additional extension until January 20, 1989, was granted because of intervening developments in another case.

There is also no question that, during the period of these payments, Chan ran up substantial gambling debts at the Tropicana losing as much as $300,000 on some occasions. The Division alleges that Chan used at least three of these cash payments to redeem outstanding counter checks issued to him on credit by the Tropicana: December 14, 1985 ($8,500); May 14, 1986 ($25,200); August 24, 1986 ($16,800).

The Tropicana employees who were involved in approving cash paid out to Chan were Robert James, Vice President for Casino Operations, who had approval of airfare up to $25,000, Richard Brewer, Casino Manager, with authority to $12,500, Robert Kesel, an Assistant Casino Manager, with the same level of approval authority, and Emil Russell, Casino Shift Manager, who was authorized to approve up to $2,000 in airfare comps (J-34). Also involved and named as a respondent is James Sattazahn, who was also an Assistant Casino Manager with a $12,500 airfare comp approval line. These Tropicana employees were involved in the above transactions as indicated:

December 14, 1985 ($12,500): James and Sattazahn
December 14, 1985 ($8,500): James and Kesel
May 14, 1986 ($25,200): James and Russell
August 17, 1986 ($12,800): Brewer and Kesel
August 24, 1986 ($16,800): James, Brewer and Kesel

These facts are set forth in more detail in stipulations entered into by the parties at the hearing on August 29, 1988, which are set forth in full below. The first stipulation is between the Division and Adamar, as well as individual respondents Robert James, Richard Brewer, Robert Kesel and Emil Russell, and stated that:

1. Respondent, Adamar of New Jersey, Inc. d/b/a Tropicana Hotel/Casino (hereinafter called 'Tropicana'), is now and at all times referenced herein has been a corporation which was incorporated on September 28, 1978 and now and at all times referenced herein has had its principal place of business located on the Boardwalk between Brighton and Iowa Avenues in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic, State of New Jersey.

2. Tropicana is the holder of a plenary casino license issued to it by the Casino Control Commission ('Commission') authorizing it to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations thereunder. Said license was initially issued to Tropicana effective on November 26, 1982, and has been renewed annually on that date. Tropicana has been conducting its casino hotel operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein.

3. Tropicana is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective November 26, 1981 at which time Tropicana was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Tropicana has conducted its casino hotel operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation continually to date since that time including all referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitled Tropicana to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. Respondent Robert James is the holder of a casino key employee license, #62-11, originally issued by the Commission on May 25, 1978. At all times relevant to this matter, Mr. James was employed by Tropicana as Vice President for Casino Operations.

5. Respondent Richard Brewer is the holder of a casino key employee license, #798-11, originally issued by the Commission on August 7, 1980. At al times relevant to this matter, Mr. Brewer was employed by Tropicana as Casino Manager.

6. Respondent Robert Kesel is the holder of a casino key employee license, #738-11, originally issued by the Commission on February 27, 1980. At all times relevant to this matter, Mr. Kesel was employed by Tropicana as an assistant Casino Manager.

7. Respondent Emil Russell is the holder of a casino key employee license, #1358-11, originally issued by the Commission on December 8, 1980. At all times relevant to this matter, Mr. Russell was employed by Tropicana as a Casino Shift Manager.

8. On or about December 6, 1981, a patron by the name of Antonio Chan was granted a credit amount at Tropicana with an approved credit limit of $200,000. As of December 13, 1985, patron Chan's approved credit limit was $300,000. A copy of patron Chan's credit application is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 1.

9. In his application for credit at Tropicana, patron Chan represented to Tropicana credit personnel that he resided at 1229 Acacia Street, Das Marinas Village, Philippines and that he was the President of World Wide Sugar Corp., which address was given as 100 Wall Street, New York, New York 10001.

10. On December 13, 1985, patron Chan was issued counter checks #612721, #612731 and #612778. Each counter check was payable in the amount of $100,000. According to player rating records maintained by Tropicana, patron Chan sustained net gaming losses of $250,000 on December 13, 1985. Copies of the 3 counter checks are attached hereto as Joint Exhibits 2 through 4.

11. Patron Chan partially redeemed counter check #612731 at or about 12:05 a.m., on December 14, 1985 (gaming day December 13, 1985) with $50,000 in gaming chips. Tropicana cage personnel processed Redemption Receipt #150571 to record the partial redemption transaction. Tropicana cage personnel also processed replacement counter check #612795 in the amount of $50,000 on the credit account of patron Chan to reflect the unpaid balance of $50,000 from counter check #612731. Copies of Redemption Receipt #150571 and counter check #612795 are attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 5 and 6.

12. On December 14, 1985, at or about 7:21 p.m., Tropicana cage personnel processed Redemption Receipt #150808 for the purpose of redeeming counter checks #612721 and #612778 on the credit account of patron Chan. Said counter checks were redeemed with $200,000 in cash. A copy of Redemption Receipt #150808 is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 7.

13. On December 14, 1985, at or about 7:33 p.m., Tropicana cage personnel processed Redemption Receipt #150814 for the purpose of partially redeeming counter check #612795, the preparation of which is described in paragraph 11, supra. Said counter check was partially redeemed with $41,500 in cash. A copy of Redemption Receipt #150814 is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 8.

14. Following the partial redemption of counter check #612795 as described in paragraph 13, supra, Tropicana cage personnel processed replacement counter check #613187 in the amount of $8,500 on the credit account of patron Chan to reflect the unpaid balance of $8,500 from counter check #612795. A copy of counter check #613187 is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 9.

15. On December 15, 1985 (gaming day December 14, 1985), at or about 1:49 a.m., Tropicana cage personnel processed Redemption Receipt #150979 for the purpose of redeeming replacement counter check #613187 on the credit account of patron Chan. Said counter check was redeemed with $8,500 in cash. A copy of Redemption Receipt #150979 is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 10.

16. Following the redemption of replacement counter check #613187 as described in paragraph 15, supra, patron Chan had no outstanding credit balance at Tropicana.

17. On December 14, 1985, Tropicana recorded 2 cash payments to patron Chan. The 2 payments were in the amounts of $12,500 and $8,500 respectively.

18. At the time that Tropicana paid patron Chan $12,500 in cash on December 14, 1985, Tropicana cage personnel prepared a Cash Paid Out slip to record the payment. The Cash Paid Out slip included the following handwritten notations: 'Airfare' and 'No Tickets Available' and was signed by James Sattazahn as authorizer. Robert James was not on the casino premises at the time the transaction was conducted but approved the payment by phone. A copy of the Cash Paid Out slip is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 11.

19. At the time that Tropicana paid patron Chan $8,500 in cash on December 14, 1985, Tropicana cage personnel prepared a Cash Paid Out slip to record the payment. The Cash Paid Out slip included the following handwritten notations: 'Air,' 'per B.J.' and 'No Ticket Available' and was signed by Robert Kesel as authorizer. Robert James was not on the casino premises at the time the transaction was conducted but approved the payment by phone. A copy of the Cash Paid Out slip is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 12.

20. On May 14, 1986, patron Chan was issued counter checks #670874, #670877 and #670885. Each counter check was payable in the amount of $100,000. According to player rating records maintained by Tropicana, patron Chan sustained net gaming losses of $300,000 on May 14, 1986. Copies of counter checks #670874 and #670877 are attached hereto as Joint Exhibits 13 and 14.

21. Patron Chan partially redeemed counter check #670885 at or about 11:32 p.m. on May 14, 1986 with $25,200 in cash. Tropicana cage personnel processed Redemption Receipt #190515 to record the partial redemption transaction. Tropicana cage personnel also processed replacement counter check #670917 in the amount of $74,800 on the credit account of patron Chan. Copies of Redemption Receipt #190515 and counter check #670917 are attached hereto as Joint Exhibits 15 and 16.

22. On May 14, 1986, Tropicana recorded the payment of $25,200 in cash to patron Chan.

23. At the time that Tropicana paid patron Chan $25,200 in cash on May 14, 1986, Tropicana cage personnel prepared a Cash Paid Out slip to record the payment. The Cash Paid Out slip included the following handwritten notations: 'Airfare,' 'No tickets Available,' 'Destination Manila,' 'Antonio Chan #2875,' 'Per Bob James (phone approval)' The payment was authorized by Robert James, who was not on the premises at the time but approved the payment by phone. Emil Russell signed the Cash Paid Out slip as authorizer at the time the payment was recorded. A copy of the Cash Paid Out slip is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 17.

24. On August 16 and 17, 1986, patron Chan gambled at Tropicana and, pursuant to player rating records maintained by Tropicana, sustained net gambling losses of $194,000.

25. On August 17, 1986, Tropicana recorded the payment of $12,800 in cash to patron Chan. Tropicana cage personnel prepared a Cash Paid Out slip to record the payment. The Cash Paid Out slip included the following handwritten notations: 'Chan, Antonio,' 'Twelve Thousand "Eight Hundred,' 'Das Marina's Village, Philippines,' 'Per D. Brewer.' Tropicana cage personnel obtained from patron Chan copies of 2 airline tickets in the total amount of $4,542.60. One ticket was issued by Philippine Airlines, was dated June 7, 1986, and listed Manila, Bacollod (located in the Philippines) and Manila as points of passage. The second ticket was issued by Pan Am, was dated February 12, 1985, and listed New York, San Francisco, Manila, Tokyo and New York as points of passage. The Cash Paid Out Slip was signed by Richard Brewer and Robert Kesel as authorizers. Copies of the Cash Paid Out slip and the 2 airline tickets are attached hereto as Joint Exhibits 18 through 20.

26. On August 23, 1986, patron Chan was issued counter check #812225 in the amount of $200,000. According to player rating records maintained by Tropicana, patron Chan sustained net gaming losses of $200,000 on August 23, 1986. A copy of counter check #312225 is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 21.

27. Patron Chan redeemed counter check #81225 at or about 6:18 p.m. on August 24, 1986 with $8,000 in cash and $192,000 in cage drafts. Tropicana cage personnel processed Redemption Receipt #221301 to record the redemption transaction. A copy of Redemption Receipt #221301 is attached hereto as Exhibit Joint 22 [sic].

28. On August 24, 19876, Tropicana recorded the payment of $16,800 in cash to patron Chan.

29. At the time that Tropicana paid Chan $16,800 in cash on August 24, 1986, Tropicana cage personnel prepared a Cash Paid Out slip in the amount of $16,800. The Cash Paid Out slip contained the following handwritten notations: 'Airfare,' 'Chan Antonio,' 'Per B. James,' 'No Tickets Available,' 'Sixteen Thousand Eight Hundred' 'Address Over.' The back of the Cash Paid Out slip contained the following notation: '1229 Acacia St., Philippines Das Marinas Village.' Richard Brewer and Robert Kesel signed the Cash Paid Out Slip as authorizers. Robert James was not on the casino premises at the time the transaction was conducted but approved the payment by phone. A copy of the Cash Paid Out slip is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit 23.

Respondent James Sattazahn also entered into a Stipulation at the hearing on August 29, and that Stipulation is set forth in full below:

1. Respondent, James Sattazahn is the holder of a casino key employee license, #1092-11, originally issued by the Commission on February 27, 1981. Mr. Sattazahn was employed by Tropicana during the period from November 20, 1982 to July 4, 1986 as an Assistant Casino Manager.

2. On December 14, 1985, Mr. Sattazahn was approached by a Tropicana patron by the name of Antonio Chan who requested a reimbursement for his airfare expenses. Patron Chan requested a reimbursement in the amount of $12,500. [The parties agree that the actual figure is higher, as discussed below.]

3. Following patron Chan's request, as described in paragraph 2, supra, Mr. Sattazahn telephoned Tropicana Vice President for Casino Operations Robert James and advised Mr. James of patron Chan's request. Mr. James informed Mr. Sattazahn that the payment of $12,500 could be made to patron Chan.

4. Following his conversation with Mr. James, as described in paragraph 3, supra, Mr. Sattazahn signed a Tropicana Cash Paid Out slip as the authorizer of the $12,500 payment to Mr. Chan. The Cash Paid Out slip also included the following handwritten notations: 'Airfare' 'No Tickets Available.' A copy of the Cash Paid Out slip is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit A.

At the hearing on August 29, 1988, the Division Agent Three who investigated this matter, Aldo Gonzalez, testified that at least two of the five cash paid outs to Chan were used by him to redeem counter checks, and thereby reduce his gambling debt. Specifically, Gonzalez saw a clear connection between the $8,500 cash paid out to Chan on December 14, supposedly for airfare, and the $8,500 in cash that Chan paid on the same gaming day to redeem a counter check in that amount (see Stipulations 14-19). The cash connection was also clear, in agent Gonzalez's view (which was not presented as an expert opinion) between the $25,200 paid to Chan on May 14, 1986, again for airfare to Manilla, with no tickets available, and the partial redemption of a counter check by Chan on that date with $25,200 in cash (Stipulations 20-23). Agent Gonzalez also suspected that other cash paid out funds had been used by Chan to redeem his markers, particularly the payment of $16,800 on August 24, 1986, but felt that the proof on these three other payments was not as convincing. Antonio Chan was apparently not interviewed by the Division, but in a statement provided to DGE, Assistant Casino Shift Cage Supervisor Mark Armideo stated that Chan had told him to apply the $25,200 cash paid out for airfare to his markers and gave a personal check for the rest on May 14, 1986 (J-42, page 10, lines 16-25).

I FIND as a matter of fact that Antonio Chan applied cash paid out to him in the amount of $8,500 and $25,200 on December 14, 1985 and May 14, 1986, respectively, to redeem or partially redeem counter checks issued to him on those dates and thus to reduce his gambling debt to the Tropicana. It may well be that Chan reduced his gambling debt with all of the cash paid out by the Tropicana for "airfare", but the proofs are sufficient only to support a finding that he did so on December 14, 1985 and May 14, 1986.

There is also no dispute and I FIND as fact that the Tropicana had agreed to reimburse Chan in the amount of $4,200 for each claimed airfare to the Philippines and that he would receive multiples of that amount based roughly on the amounts lost by him in gambling on any given occasion (T-138, 153). For example, when Chan lost $300,000 in an unlucky evening of gambling on August 24, 1986, the Tropicana provided him with the $16,800 in airfare reimbursement requested by him in light of his extensive losses and without any evidence that this amount corresponded to the actual cost of airfare for Chan and his party, which sometimes included as many as four or five other individuals traveling with him (T-155-158; 162-163).

As indicated, James Sattazahn's involvement was limited to the cash paid out to Antonia Chan on December 14, 1985 and involved reimbursement that totaled approximately $21,000. Sattazahn also offered character references from a number of employees at Trump's Castle, Bally's Grand, and Showboat, among others, who all lauded his character and integrity. None of the other individual respondents, who were represented by separate counsel, introduced any letters of reference.

Counsel for the respondents other than James Sattazahn did, introduce the company's policy as to cash paid outs, effective September 5, 1985, which provided that cash paid out slips were to contain the date and shift of the paid out, pay description or reason, the amount of the paid out, and the patron's name. The policy further provided that the Main Bank Cashier would photocopy documentation supporting cash paid outs, if that documentation was necessary and available. If unavailable, employees were obliged to note the lack of documentation in the "description section" (R-3, at paragraphs 3.6 and 3.7).

Except as indicated above, there is no dispute as to the facts in this matter as set forth in the stipulations and otherwise described, and I so FIND.

CHARGES

The complaint filed by the Division with the Commission on February 19, 1987 sought the following judgment:

Count I

(a) that respondent Tropicana, Sattazahn, James, and Kesel violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in authorizing and processing two travel complimentaries on or about December 14, 1985 without obtaining detailed, supporting and subsidiary records to support the accumulation of costs and the number of persons provided with the complimentary services;

(b) that Tropicana, Sattazahn, James, and Kesel violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3 in authorizing and processing two travel complimentaries on or about December 14, 1985 without recording the travel complimentaries and amount based on the actual costs to the licensee of having the third party provide such services;

(c) that respondent Tropicana violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and/or c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) in the use of casino funds on or about December 14, 1985 for the purpose of providing a patron with credit or advance on something of value or which represented value to enable said patron to satisfy his debts incurred through his gaming activity as a player, to release or discharge a patron's debts to a casino, and/or to allow patron to redeem his countercheck in an amount less than the amount for which the countercheck was drawn;

Count II

(a) that Tropicana, James, and Russell violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in authorizing and processing a travel complimentary on or about May 14, 1986 without obtaining detailed, supporting and subsidiary records to support the accumulation of costs;

(b) that Tropicana, James, and Russell violation N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3 in the authorization and processing of a travel complimentary on or about May 14, 1986 without recording the complimentary and amount based on the actual cost to the licensee of having the third party provide such services;

(c) that Tropicana violation N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and/or c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) in the use of casino funds on or about May 14 for the purpose of providing a patron with credit or advance on something of value as stated under count 1;

Count III

(a) that Tropicana, Brewer, and Kesel violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3 in authorizing a travel complimentary on or about August 17 without recording the complimentary and amount based on the actual costs to the licensee of having a third party provide such services;

Count IV

(a) that Tropicana, James, Brewer, and Kesel violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in authorizing and processing a travel complimentary on or about August 24, 1986 without obtaining detailed, supporting and subsidiary records;

(b) that Tropicana, James, Brewer, and Kesel violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3 in authorizing and processing a travel complimentary on or about August 24 without recording the travel complimentary and an amount based on the actual cost to the licensee;

(c) that Tropicana violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and/or c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) in the use of casino funds on or about August 24, 1986, for the purpose of providing a patron with credit or advance on something of value as set forth in Count I.

The Division seeks sanctions under N.J.S.A. 5:12-129, 130.

MOTION TO DISMISS

Respondent's motion to dismiss the complaint was granted at the hearing as to alleged violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 and denied as to the other alleged violations set forth in the complaint. The Commission regulation controlling casino accounting records provides, in pertinent part, that:

> (a) Each casino licensee shall maintain complete, accurate, and legible records of all transactions pertaining to the revenues and costs for each establishment.
>
> (b) General accounting records shall be maintained on a double entry system of accounting with transactions recorded on the accrual basis. Detailed, supporting, subsidiary records sufficient to meet the requirements of (c) below shall also be maintained in accordance with the requirements of this chapter.
>
> . . .
>
> (c) The detailed, supporting, and subsidiary records shall include, but not necessarily be limited to:
>
> 3. Records supporting the accumulation of the costs and number of persons, by category of service, for regulated complimentary services. Such records shall include, on a daily basis, the name of each person provided with complimentary services, the category of services provided, the retail value of the aggregate of each category of service provided to such person, and the person authorizing the receipt of such service. . . . N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 (emphasis added.)

The Division alleges that Tropicana and the individual licensees violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in authorizing the five cash paid out slips described above without maintaining adequate "detailed, supporting and subsidiary records" in the form of airline tickets or other evidence.

Respondents' motion to dismiss the alleged violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 was granted at the hearing for essentially the reasons expressed by the Honorable Solomon A. Metzger, ALJ, in an order issued in a similar but unrelated case involving Trump's Castle. See, OAL Dkt. Nos. CCC 825-87 and CCC 5301-87 (consolidated), Agency Dkt. Nos. 87-214 and 87-425 (Order Granting and Denying Motion for Partial Summary Decision of December 16, 1987). The regulation does not specifically require that such documentation as airline tickets be provided so long as the records maintained include the required information. In this instance, Tropicana's records adequately complied with the express requirements of the regulation and on that basis it is ORDERED that the complaint be dismissed as it alleges violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3.

REMAINING ISSUES

The following issues remain to be resolved:

1. Are cash complimentaries permitted under the Casino Control Act and the Regulations thereunder? If so, under what circumstances can they be given?

2. Did respondent Tropicana's conduct in the redemption transactions of patron Antonio Chan on December 14, 1985, May 14, 1986 and August 26, 1986 violate N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)?

3. Did respondent Tropicana record travel complimentaries to patron Antonio Chan on December 14, 1985, May 14, 1986, August 17, 1986 and August 24, 1986 at amounts based upon the actual cost to the licensee of having a third party provide such services, as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3?

4. Did the following named respondents record travel complimentaries to patron Antonio Chan on the following dates at amounts based upon the actual cost to the licensee of having a third party provide such services, as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3?

    1. Robert James and James Sattazahn - December 14, 1985.
    2. Robert James and Robert Kesel - December 14, 1985.
    3. Robert James and Emil Russell - May 14, 1986.
    4. Robert James, Richard Brewer and Robert Kesel -August 17, 1986.
    5. Robert James, Richard Brewer and Robert Kesel - August 24, 1986.

5. Whether any penalties are warranted under N.J.S.A. 5:12-129, 130 against Tropicana and the individual licensees on the basis of the conduct alleged.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

(a) Violations

(1) Legality of "Cash Comps"

The Prehearing Order entered in this matter stated the first and threshold issue as "are cash complimentaries permitted under the Casino Control Act and the Regulations thereunder? If so, under what circumstances can they be given?" Whatever mystery may have once shrouded the question of "cash comps" has been lifted by the legislative amendment to the Casino Control Act passed in the course of this proceeding which provides that "cash comps," except as otherwise provided, are prohibited. See, L.1987, c.426, §5; N.J.S.A. 5:12-102(m).

The issue to be resolved here is whether the five payments made to Chan were lawful as complimentaries within the meaning of the Casino Control Act prior to this amendment. As their first line of defense, the respondents argue that the "cash paid outs" issued to Chan were lawful complimentaries under the Casino Control Act, prior to the amendment. Beyond the absence of any express prohibition restricting complimentaries in the form of cash in the Act, respondents cite the recent amendment as evidence that the Act did not, prior to the modification, prohibit cash complimentaries. Respondents also refer to various recommendations and proposals for amending the Act to buttress their argument that cash complimentaries were previously allowed in casinos, even if not dressed up as travel reimbursements or garbed in some other expressly approved form. (See R-1; R-2).

The Division argues that the plain language of the Act prior to the recent amendment as well as Commission regulations did not permit the unrestricted disbursement of cash from casino cage to casino patrons. It bases this argument on the express terms of N.J.S.A. 5:12-14(a), as well as the regulatory language set forth in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9. Because the plain language of the Act prior to amendment, as well as the express terms of the regulations, did not authorize unrestricted cash complimentaries, the Division argues that the subsequent amendment was not intended to prohibit that which was previously permitted, but was designed to more closely control the disbursement of all complimentary services, which were viewed by the Legislature as being subject to abuse and in need of closer monitoring.

I agree with the Division's analysis that the plain language of the Casino Control Act and Commission regulations prior to the amendment did not authorize or permit the issuance of "cash comps" in the form of the cash paid out provided by Tropicana on five occasions to Antonio Chan, nominally as reimbursement for airfare. Travel services have always been within the complimentary services contemplated by the statute and regulations. The question here is whether the respondents were authorized by the Casino Control Act to issue pure "cash comps" to Chan which were not connected to some other legitimate complimentary service, such as travel. I am persuaded by the Division's analysis of the statutory language, which is set forth in full at pages 10-17 of its prehearing brief, and CONCLUDE, substantially for the reasons set forth by the Division, that the plain language of the Act prior to the amendment and of the enforcing regulations did not authorize or permit the issuance of the sort of cash paid out to Chan by the Tropicana and its employees. Such a "cash comp" is not within the express terms of N.J.S.A. 5:12-14(a) or N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 and is not consistent with or contemplated by the procedures established by the regulations for recording and reporting of complimentary services. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-14(a); N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9. The Casino Control Act also expressly prohibits the giving of cash, checks, or credit to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player, and these restrictions also suggest that "cash comps" were not intended to be among the complimentary services permitted. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(1).

(2) Violation of the Credit Provisions

The Division alleges that the Tropicana gave funds in the form of cash paid out slips to Antonio Chan for the purpose of providing him with credit or an advance of something of value to enable him to satisfy his gambling debts or to release or discharge these debts and also to allow him to redeem his counter checks in an amount less than the amount for which the check was drawn, all of which is alleged to violate N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and/or c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). The Casino Control Act provides as to credit that:

> a. Except as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee or any person licensed under this act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under this act, shall:

>
> (c). . .the drawer of the check may redeem the check by exchanging cash or chips in an amount equal to the amount for which the check is drawn; or he may redeem the check in part by exchanging cash or chips and other check which meets the requirements of subsection b. of this section for the difference between the original check and the cash or chips tendered; or he may issue one check which meets the requirements of subsection b. of this section in an amount sufficient to redeem two or more checks dawn to the order of the casino licensee. (N.J.S.A. 5:12-101).

Regulations adopted by the Commission amplify this restriction and specify that:

>
> 1. Cash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player;
>
> 2. Release or discharge any debt which is uncollectible, either in whole or in part, which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without maintaining a written record of the deposit, check return and collection efforts as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 and 19:45-1.29; or

The Division seeks judgment that respondent Tropicana violated the above provisions but demands no sanction against the individual licensees on the basis of this conduct. Specifically, the Division charges that the three transactions conducted with patron Chan on December 14, 1985, May 14, 1986 and August 24, 1986 violated the statute and regulations by providing Chan with credit to redeem his counter checks. Beyond these three transactions, the Division perceives a pattern conduct by Tropicana reflected in all five transactions to reimburse him for gaming losses at a fixed percentage calculated at approximately 8.4 percent. Because Chan was a credit player, funds provided by Tropicana after his gambling are viewed by the Division as enabling him to take part in the gaming activity within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). In addition to enabling (or at least encouraging) Chan to continue to gamble by giving him credit on his losses through purported travel complimentaries, Tropicana is also alleged by the Division to have discharged his debts without determining them to be uncollectible (which is unlikely given his great wealth) and also failing to make the proper written record.

Respondent Tropicana argues that the "cash paid outs" issued were, in fact, complimentaries not rebates as charged, and contends that the cash comps did not enable Chan to gamble because they were issued after he finished gambling and had zeroed out his account before leaving for the Philippines or some other casino.

Based on the above Findings of Fact that two of the "cash paid outs" were used by Chan to fully or partially pay his gambling debts by redeeming counter checks, I CONCLUDE that Tropicana's action constituted a discharge of a debt not shown to be uncollectable without the requisite written record in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(2) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)(2). The proofs support by a preponderance of the believable evidence the Division's allegation that at least these two "cash comps" were provided to Chan and used by him to discharge his gambling debt. It may well be that all of the "cash comps" provided to Chan were intended, as the Division maintains, to provide a percentage rebate on gambling losses, but the Division's evidence establishes this only as to the two "cash paid outs", which were used for this purpose. I further reject the Division's argument that funds were provided to Chan to "enable him" to take part in gaming activity as a player, in violation of statute and regulations. The "cash paid outs" provided to Chan may have encouraged him to return on future occasions to the Tropicana's gambling tables, but they did not enable him to do so in the sense that he would have been unable to continue gambling without the cash comps. Even though Chan's gambling losses ran into the hundreds of thousands, he was apparently a better businessman than he was a gambler and needed no cash from the Tropicana to enable him to continue to indulge his fondness for games of chance. For these reasons, I CONCLUDE that the Division has failed to prove a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)(1). I further CONCLUDE that the Division has proven a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(c) for substantially the reasons set forth in its post-hearing brief.

(3) Violation of the Record Keeping Provisions

Both Tropicana and the individual respondents are charged with violating the Commission regulation concerning recording of complimentary services or items which provides that:

> (a) A complimentary service or item is a service or item provided directly or indirectly by a licensee at no cost or at a reduced price.
> (b) All complimentary services or items shall be recorded as follows:
>
> 1. A complimentary service or item provided directly to patrons in the normal course of a licensee's business shall be recorded at an amount based upon the full retail price normally charged for such service or item by licensee;
> 2. A complimentary service or item not offered for sale to patrons in the normal course of a licensee's business, but provided directly to the licensee shall be recorded at an amount based upon the actual cost to the licensee providing such service or item;
> 3. A complimentary service or item provided directly or indirectly to a patron on behalf of the licensee by a third party not affiliated with the licensee shall be recorded at an amount based on the actual cost of the licensee of having the third party provide such service or item . . . . (N.J.S.A. 19:45-1.9(b)(3) [emphasis added].

The Division argues that the five "cash paid outs" given to Chan as described above were, in fact, reimbursements for his gambling losses and not travel complimentaries and were therefore inaccurate and misleading complimentary records which did not reflect the actual cost to the licensee of having a third party provide travel services, because no such services were provided.

Tropicana and the individual respondents argue that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3) was not violated because the complaint did not allege and the Division has failed to show that any airline company either directly or indirectly provided anything to Chan on behalf of the casino. Respondent's claim that the lack of evidence that any airline was providing complimentary travel on behalf of the Tropicana prevents any finding of a violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3).

The Division's argument is based on the factual premise that the five "cash paid outs" given to Chan were provided as rebates for gambling losses under the guise of travel complimentaries. Since no travel actually was provided, the Division argues that the "actual cost" of travel was not properly recorded under N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3). As discussed, the evidence submitted substantiates the two "cash paid outs" marked as covering airfare were, in fact, used by Chan to pay his marker.

The regulation does not require, as the respondents suggest, that some sort of specific agency relationship be established between the third party provider and the casino licensee: it is enough that the licensee reimburse the gambler for legitimate travel expenses and record those at their actual cost. The cost of Chan's travel to the Philippines was not stipulated to, but there is evidence that the price of a ticket at that time was approximately $3,900 (J-20). Chan apparently traveled to and from Atlantic City with an entourage of varying size, although the precise number of his traveling companions was not determined or ever seriously looked into by Tropicana or its employees. Chan's requests for "airfare" were honored with virtually no questions asked. The Tropicana assessed the reasonableness of his request for reimbursements on the basis of his gambling losses, and there is persuasive evidence that the amount of "cash paid outs" provided to Chan was not based on the actual cost of travel for him and his retinue but, rather, was calculated and assessed on the basis of his gaming losses, for which he received multiples of $4,200 calculated on the basis of his overall gambling loss for the day. Chan may have incurred actual travel costs equal to the five "cash paid out" slips issued, but whether or not he did, it is apparent that the Tropicana's recording of these supposed "airfare" complimentaries was based not on the actual cost for travel but was gauged on gambling losses suffered by Chan. Because all five of the "cash paid out" slips were issued on that basis, rather than on the actual cost of travel, I CONCLUDE that a violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3) has been established as charged.

(b)Penalties

As to Tropicana, the Division urges imposition of a monetary penalty in the amount ranging from $35,00 to $50,000 for each of the three violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) and, further, at least $10,000 for each of the five violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3). (As discussed above, only two violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and the corresponding regulation have been upheld). As to the individual respondents, the Division requests an appropriate monetary penalty and/or a letter of reprimand.

The Casino Control Act provides for the following supplemental sanctions:

> (1) Revoke the license or registration of any person for the conviction of any criminal offense under this act or for the commission of any other offense or violation of this act which would disqualify such person from holding his license or registration;
> (2) Revoke the license or registration of any person for willfully and knowingly violating an order of the commission directed to such person;
>
> (3) Suspend the license or registration of any person pending hearing and determination, in any case in which license or registration revocation could result;
> (4) Suspend the operation certificate of any casino for violation of any provisions of this act or regulations promulgated hereunder relating to the casino operation, including games, internal and accountancy controls and security;
> (5) Assess such civil penalties as may be necessary to punish misconduct and to deter future violations, which penalties may not exceed $10,000.00 in the case of any individual licensee or registrant, except that in the case of a casino licensee the penalty may not exceed $50,000.00;
> (6) Order restitution of any moneys or property unlawfully obtained or retained by a licensee or registrant;
>
> (7) Enter a cease and desist order which specifies the conduct which is to be discontinued, altered or implemented by the licensee or registrant;
>
> (8) Issue letters of reprimand or censure, which letters shall be made a permanent part of the file of each licensee or registrant so sanctioned; or
> (9) Impose any or all of the foregoing sanctions in combination with each other. N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 [emphasis added].

The Division seeks no sanction beyond fines and reprimands. In considering appropriate sanctions in any particular case, the Commission is bound to consider the following factors:

> a. The risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the conduct of the licensee or registrant;

> c. Any justification or excuse for such conduct by the licensee or registrant;
>
> d. The prior history of the particular license or registrant involved with respect to gaming activity;
>
> e. The corrective action taken by the licensee or registrant to prevent further misconduct of a like nature from occurring; and
>
> f. In the case of a monetary penalty, the amount of the penalty in relation to the severity of the misconduct and the financial means of the licensee or registrant. The commission may impose any schedule or terms of payment of such penalty as it may deem appropriate.
> g. It shall be no defense to disciplinary action before the commission that an applicant, licensee, registrant, intermediary company or holding company inadvertently,unintentionally, or unknowingly violated a provision of this act. Such factors shall only go to the degree of the penalty to be imposed by the commission, and not to a finding of a violation itself. N.J.S.A. 5:12-130 [emphasis added]

The Division argues that the credit violation gave Antonio Chan an unfair and unlawful advantage over the odds not provided to other players and thus posed the risk to the integrity of gaming operations. It views the recording violations as going to the heart of accounting controls and undermining regulation of complimentary services. Prior reported violations by Tropicana in different areas have been sanctioned by fines of up to $10,000 in the cases as the Division notes at pages 21 and 22 of the it's post-hearing brief. As to the element of purpose and knowledge (130b), the Division contends that the Tropicana considered the payments to Chan to represent reimbursement for his gaming losses rather than travel expenses and thereby intentionally sought to contravene the restrictions of the Act. The Division dismisses Tropicana's claim of justification or excuse based on the company's interpretation of the Casino Control Act prior to its recent amendment as to "cash comps". It also notes pending enforcement actions against individual respondents, Robert James, Richard Brewer and Robert Kesel concerning unrelated matters.

Respondent Tropicana and individual respondents James, Brewer, Kesel, and Russell, argue that they were operating under the belief that the issuance of "cash paid outs" was lawful and also acted in accordance with approved company policy as to records. (See, R-3). They claim therefore that their conduct was not a purposeful and knowing violation of the Act and regulations, but rather was based on a justifiable interpretation of the Casino Control Act and that the unintentional nature of the violation precludes any penalty in this instance. Respondent James Sattazahn, who was individually represented, denies the single violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3) with which he is charged and claims that his action in approving a "cash paid out" for Chan was reasonably based on the actual cost of travel and therefore should not be penalized.

As to Tropicana, the Division has shown two violations of the credit provision, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(2) and (c), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) and five violations of the complimentary recording regulation, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3. Each of the individual licensees has been proven to have violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3 by failing to record the actual cost of the "travel" complimentary.

Both the credit violations and failure to comply with the complimentary recording regulations undermine the integrity of gaming operations in the sense that they gave an unfair gambling advantage to a "high roller" and concealed this favoritism under the guise of travel complimentaries which were not recorded at actual cost. This conduct cannot be lightly dismissed and seriously calls into question the fairness of Tropicana's practices and the accuracy of its records. Although Tropicana maintains that it acted under the belief that "cash comps" were lawful under the Casino Control Act as part of the recent amendment, this claim of lack of knowledge of the violation or of excuse is undermined by the fact that Tropicana employees recorded the "cash paid outs" as travel complimentaries. If the Tropicana and its employees justifiably believe that "cash comps" were permitted by the Casino Control Act, there would have been no need to justify them in terms of "airfare" and they could have been recorded as what they were: an agreement to comp Chan with cash based on the extent of his gambling losses. Under these circumstances, Tropicana's conduct was purposeful within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-130(b), and without justification or excuse. The action of the individual respondents in failing to record travel complimentaries at actual cost was also purposeful in the this sense, although there is some justification or excuse to the extent that they were following general company policy and established practice as to Antonio Chan.

The Commission must also consider the prior history of the particular licensee or registrant with respect to gaming activity. N.J.S.A. 5:12-130(d). The history of enforcement actions filed against Tropicana is set forth at pages 23-25 of the Division's post-hearing brief and shows one prior offense concerning credit violations for which a $10,000 fine was imposed (See, State of New Jersey v. Adamar of New Jersey, Inc., Agency Docket No. 84-101 (Final Order August 23, 1985). Substantial financial penalties have been imposed in other matters for violations unrelated to credit or recording practices. Tropicana cited no corrective action taken to prevent future misconduct from recurring, although the recent amendment to the Casino Control Act will change practices as to complimentaries. Given the seriousness of the risk posed to the integrity of gaming, the purposeful and unjustified nature of conduct, as well as the prior enforcement history, I CONCLUDE that a $20,000 fine should be imposed on Tropicana for each of the two credit violations and I further CONCLUDE that a $5,000 fine be levied on the company for each of the five violations of N.J.S.A. 19:45-1.9(b)3 found to have occurred.

With respect to the individual respondents, I CONCLUDE that monetary penalties are warranted against individual respondents Robert James, vice-president for casino operations, and Richard Brewer, casino manager, and recommend that a $2,000 fine be imposed on both licensees in view of the nature of their positions of responsibility, and involvement in these transactions. I further CONCLUDE and recommend that a $1,000 fine be imposed on respondent Robert Kesel in light of his involvement in several of the recording transactions, as well as his prior disciplinary record. As to James Sattazahn, former assistant casino manager and Emil Russell, casino shift manager, I recommend that they receive letters of reprimand for their single violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3, which shall be made a permanent part of their file.

DISPOSITION

On the basis of the above Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, it is ORDERED that respondent Tropicana be fined $20,000 for each of two violations of N.J.A.C. 5:12-101(a)(2) and (c) and fined $5,000 each for five violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3). It is further ORDERED that the complaint is DISMISSED insofar as it alleges violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3. It is further ORDERED that Robert James and Richard Brewer be fine $2,000, and that Robert Kesel be fined $1,000 for violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)(3). It is further ORDERED that respondents James Sattazahn and Emil Russell receive letters of reprimand for violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(b)3, which shall be included within their personnel file.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on December 7, 1987, seeking sanctions against the respondent's casino license and casino key employee license as provided for in N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 for alleged violations of the Casino Control Act. More specifically, the Division alleges that the respondents violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 by granting or extending credit to one casino patron with full knowledge that the gaming chips obtained through that extension of credit were used by another casino patron whose credit privileges were suspended for further gaming, and violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102m, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 by falsely recording as a complimentary a payment of a fee or commission for allowing a player whose credit privileges were suspended to continue to play on credit.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed a complaint with the Commission on December 7, 1987, seeking sanctions against the respondents for the above-alleged violations of the Casino Control Act. By answer dated January 6, 1988, and received by the Commission on January 13, 1988, the respondents denied the allegations and requested a hearing. On January 19, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was received on February 2, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held on the matter before me on April 18 and 22, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Is the conferring of money or anything of value from one gaming patron to another gaming patron, wherein the conferrer has received the fund for the conferring of said money or thing of value from casino credit, violative of the Casino Control Act, specifically section 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) and 19:45-1.27, assuming a casino licensee has knowledge of the conferring of said money or thing of value, has knowledge that the conferee is a person who may not receive casino credit because of an overdrawn credit account and has received said funds for the purpose of continuing his gaming activities?

B. Did the Tropicana or Robert James or any person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with the Tropicana or Robert James provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value with the knowledge that Harry K. Kim was thereby enabled to take part in gaming activity as a player while the credit privileges of Harry K. Kim were suspended as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a or N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b)?

C. Did the Tropicana or Robert James or any person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with the Tropicana or Robert James accept a counter check from Young N. Kang, Keum Y. Shin, Keum Hong Lee or Kyung Hui Paik with the knowledge that another person, to wit, Harry K. Kim, whose credit privileges had been suspended as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27, was enabled to take part in gaming activity as a player in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b)?

D. Does a casino licensee or one of its employees violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) and 19:45-1.27 by extending a credit to a gaming partnership wherein one of the partners has been suspended from receiving casino credit while the other partner has drawn on casino credit, thus allowing the partner who has been suspended from receiving casino credit to continue play with the funds received through casino credit by his gaming partner?

E. Did either respondent violate N.J.S.A. 5:12-102m and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2 by reporting and recording as "miscellaneous good will" a $5,000 payment to Kyung Hui Paik, which payment is alleged to have been a commission, fee, or discount against her debt for the purpose of compensating, rewarding or encouraging Kyung Hui Paik to provide to Harry K. Kim gaming chips with the intent of allowing Harry K. Kim to continue to be a credit player at the Tropicana while his credit privileges were suspended?

F. Did either respondent violate N.J.S.A. 5:12-102m and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 by issuing as a complimentary a payment of $5,000 to Mrs. Kyung Hui Paik for a purpose not authorized by statute or regulation?

G. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 and 5:12-130, what is the appropriate penalty for each of the violations of statute and regulation proven?

A timetable for the submission of prehearing briefs was also set at the prehearing.

By letter dated May 10, 1988, and received by me on May 12, 1988, the respondents' attorney requested that issue "D" contained in the prehearing order be amended. On May 16, 1988, a telephone conference was held with all parties to discuss this request. By letter dated May 17, 1988, and received by me on May 20, 1988, the respondents' attorney submitted specific language for a revised issue "D." By letter dated May 23, 1988, and received by me on May 24, 1988, the Division responded to the respondent's request. On May 26, 1988, a second telephone conference was held with the parties to discuss this issue. At that time, I granted the respondents' request and confirmed my order in a follow-up letter, dated June 7, 1988. The revised issue "D" is as follows:

D. Does a casino licensee or one of its employees violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) and 19:45-1.27 by extending credit to a gaming patron who thereafter forms a gaming partnership with another patron who is a person who may not receive casino credit because of an overdrawn credit account?

Also on May 26, 1988, I granted the Division's request for an extension of time to submit its prehearing brief. I received the Division's prehearing brief on May 31, 1988, and I received the respondent's response brief on June 28, 1988. Several telephone conferences were held throughout the summer on a variety of procedural issues.

A hearing was commenced on September 14, 1988, at the Municipal Courtroom, Galloway Township Municipal Building, Absecon, New Jersey, and continued into September 15, 1988. Late in the afternoon on September 15, 1988, the parties agreed to settle this matter. The hearing was adjourned, and the record remained open in order to afford the parties the opportunity to enter into a written settlement agreement. I received the written settlement agreement on October 3, 1988, and the record closed at that time.

The parties have agreed to a settlement of all issues in dispute and have prepared a stipulation indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I further CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. It is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

CCC Docket No. 88-342

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, Complainant, v. ADAMAR OF NEW JERSEY, INC., t/a TROPICANA HOTEL and CASINO; and MILLIE BROWNDORF, CAGE CREDIT SHIFT MANAGER, Respondents.	STIPULATION OF FACTS AND SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The matters involved having been discussed by and between the parties involved, Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney for complainant, State of New Jersey, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement, by Christopher Pitts, Deputy Attorney General, and Mark Sandson, Esquire,of Hankin, Sandson and Sandman, attorneys for Respondents Adamar of New Jersey, Inc. and Millie Browndorf and certain matters having been agreed upon, it is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the parties as follows:

1. Respondent, Adamar of New Jersey, Inc. t/a Tropicana Hotel and Casino (hereinafter "Tropicana"), is now and at all times referenced herein has been a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and has now and at all times referenced has had its principal place of business located at Iowa Avenue and the Boardwalk in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic, and State of New Jersey.

2. Tropicana is now the holder of a casino license issued by the Commission authorizing Tropicana to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Said license was initially issued to Tropicana effective on November 26, 1982, and most recently renewed on November 26, 1988. Tropicana has been conducting its casino hotel operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein.

3. Tropicana is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective November 26, 1981, at which time Tropicana was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Tropicana has conducted its casino hotel operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitles Tropicana to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. Respondent Millie Browndorf holds a valid casino key employee license, #2305-11, which was initially issued by the Commission on or about July 13, 1982 and most recently renewed on July 31, 1988.

5. Respondent Millie Browndorf is now and at all times referenced herein has been employed by Tropicana in the capacity of Cage Credit Shift Manager. Attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibit A is a copy of Tropicana's job description for the position of Cage Credit Shift Manager.

6. On June 8, 1987, shortly before 12:00 noon, an individual by the name of Joseph Tominaro telephoned Tropicana and spoke with Respondent Browndorf.

7. Pursuant to the telephone conversation referred to in paragraph 6 of this Stipulation of Facts and Settlement Agreement (hereinafter "Stipulation"), supra, Joseph Tominaro informed Respondent Browndorf that he would be arriving at Tropicana later that same day and that he would be bringing a certified check with him for gaming purposes. Joseph Tominaro provided Respondent Browndorf with information concerning the check so that said check could be verified prior to his arrival at the Tropicana. Specifically, Mr. Tominaro informed Ms. Browndorf that the check to be presented was numbered 2228X, dated June 8, 1987, in the amount of $5,000 and payable to Tropicana. Joseph Tominaro also informed Ms. Browndorf that the check was drawn on account number 3282061336 at the Bowery Savings Bank, 2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York.

8. In addition to the information described in paragraph 7 of this Stipulation, supra, Joseph Tominaro also provided Respondent Browndorf with a telephone number, (718)946-8087, representing that said number was that of the bank upon which the check was drawn, and the name of a bank employee ("Dave Levine") representing that said person should be contacted in order to verify the check. Joseph Tominaro represented to Ms. Browndorf that the telephone number was that of the Bowery Savings Bank, located at 2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York, and that the name provided was that of a bank official.

9. Respondent Browndorf recorded the information provided by Joseph Tominaro during their telephone conversation of June 8, 1987 on a blank sheet of paper. A copy of said sheet of paper is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.

10. Respondent Browndorf relied solely upon the information provided to her by Joseph Tominaro. Ms. Browndorf did not consult the bank reference sources available to her nor did she contact telephone directory assistance to independently obtain the telephone number of the Bowery Savings Bank at 2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York.

11. Based upon the information provided to her by Joseph Tominaro, Respondent Browndorf telephoned the number provided by Mr. Tominaro at approximately 12:00 noon on June 8, 1987. Upon dialing said telephone number a person representing himself to be "Dave Levine" answered the telephone. "Mr. Levine" represented himself to be a Bank Manager and informed Respondent Browndorf that the check in question (#2228X) was "good".

12. A review of Tropicana's telephone charge records for the month of June, 1987 revealed that Respondent Browndorf's telephone call to the telephone number provided by Joseph Tominaro, (718) 946-8087, was made at 12:02 p.m. on June 8, 1987.

13. Respondent Browndorf documented her telephone conversation with "Dave Levine" and noted the fact that, "per Dave Levine", check #2228X was "good". Respondent Browndorf affixed her signature and license number, the date (June 8, 1987) and the time (12:00 noon) of the conversation on the same sheet of paper that Ms. Browndorf used to document her telephone conversation with Joseph Tominaro shortly before 12:00 noon. (See Exhibit B).

14. On June 8, 1987, at approximately 5:00 p.m., Joseph Tominaro arrived at Tropicana and presented check #2228X to Respondent Millie Browndorf. Said check was made payable to "Tropicana", was signed by Joseph Tominaro and was dated June 8, 1987. The numbers "228" were printed in the upper right hand corner of the check. Directly to the left of said numbers the number "2" was handwritten, and the letter "X" was also handwritten directly to the right of the printed numbers so that the check would appear to be numbered 2228X rather than 228. Said check (hereinafter "check #2228X") had the name "Joseph Tominaro" printed in the upper left hand corner, with the address "1867 W. 10th St. Brooklyn, 11223" handwritten beneath it. Handwritten adjacent to Mr. Tominaro's printed name was a telephone number, "718-372-8623". In addition, check #2228X was stamped with the words "Certified Check". A copy of check #2228X is attached hereto as Exhibit C and made a part hereof.

15. Upon being presented with check #2228X, Respondent Browndorf contacted Assistant Cage Supervisor Tom Carter, license #02257-11, and presented said check to Mr. Carter and advised him that Joseph Tominaro requested to establish a customer deposit account with Tropicana.

16. Tom Carter then reviewed the written material prepared by Respondent Browndorf regarding Ms. Browndorf's conversation with "Dave Levine." Said material is more fully described at paragraphs 11 and 13 of this Stipulation, supra. (See Exhibit B).

17. Based upon Respondent Browndorf's representation that check #2228X had been verified, check #2228X was accepted by Mr. Carter and placed on customer deposit with Respondent Tropicana. Said customer deposit was processed at 5:13 p.m. on June 8, 1987 in the amount of $5,000. Customer Deposit receipt #295336 documents this transaction. Said receipt is signed by the patron and Cage Supervisor Carter. A copy of Customer Deposit receipt #295336 is attached hereto as Exhibit D and made part hereof.

18. On June 8, 1987, from approximately 5:19 p.m. until 8:30 p.m., the funds placed on customer deposit by Joseph Tominaro were withdrawn by him in five (5) separate $1,000 increments.

19. Respondent Tropicana deposited check #2228X in its depository bank account on or about June 9, 1987. Said check was subsequently returned unpaid to Tropicana on or about June 18, 1987.

20. Shortly after the return of check #2228X from Tropicana's depository bank on June 18, 1987, Tropicana notified the Division of the fraudulently presented check and criminal and regulatory investigations commenced.

21. The telephone number provided by Joseph Tominaro and relied upon by Respondent Browndorf, (718) 946-8087, is not the telephone number of the branch of the Bowery Savings Bank located at 2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York. Nor is said telephone number the telephone number of any branch or office of the Bowery Savings Bank.

22. The telephone number of the branch of the Bowery Savings Bank upon which check #2228X is drawn (2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York) is (718) 373-1919. Said telephone number appears in the bank reference source utilized by Tropicana employees to obtain the telephone numbers of various banks and financial institutions (U.S. Savings and Loan Directory). Said telephone number is also the number provided by directory assistance for the branch of the Bowery Savings Bank located at 2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York.

23. Check #2228X, drawn on the account of Joseph Tominaro, was not, in fact, certified for payment by the Bowery Savings Bank.

24. The account upon which check #2228X was drawn, account #3282061336, was closed in September of 1986.

25. There was no employee by the name of "Dave Levine" employed at the branch of the Bowery Savings Bank upon which check #2228X was drawn.

26. As of June 8, 1987, Respondent Tropicana's internal procedures required Cage Credit Shift Managers or Credit Clerks to determine the validity of cash equivalents presented by gaming patrons. Respondent Millie Browndorf, in her capacity as Cage Credit Shift Manager, was responsible for determining the validity of check #2228X prior to its acceptance by Tropicana on June 8, 1987.

27. Respondent Millie Browndorf, in her capacity as Cage Credit Shift Manager, prepared documentation which represented that check #2228X was valid prior to its acceptance on June 8, 1987.

28. Based upon Respondent Browndorf's representation as to the validity of check #2228X, said check was accepted by Assistant Cage Supervisor Tom Carter on June 8, 1987.

29. Had Respondent Millie Browndorf placed a direct inquiry with the Bowery Savings Bank prior to the acceptance of check #2228X on June 8, 1987, Respondent Browndorf would have learned of the worthless nature of said check.

30. At all times relevant hereto, Respondent Browndorf was acting within the scope and in furtherance of her employment by and agency of the Tropicana.

31. By utilizing for verification only the information provided by Joseph Tominaro, Respondents Millie Browndorf and Tropicana failed to take sufficient steps to perform the necessary verification to determine the validity of check #2228X prior to its acceptance on June 8, 1987, in violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e).

32. By accepting check #2228X as a cash equivalent when, in fact, said check was not a cash equivalent, Respondents Tropicana and Millie Browndorf violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e).

33. Respondent Tropicana, by requiring Cage Credit personnel and not general cashiers or their supervisors to determine the validity of cash equivalents prior to their acceptance violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e), N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)6, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)9 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(g).

34. Subsequent to the presentation of check #2228X by Joseph Tominaro, Respondent Tropicana altered its internal procedures to require General Cashiers or their supervisors and not Cage Credit personnel to determine the validity of cash equivalents presented by gaming patrons.

35. As part of the Division's investigation in the instant matter, sworn investigative interviews of Respondent Millie Browndorf and of Tropicana Assistant Cage Shift Supervisor Tom Carter were conducted on September 28, 1987. Transcripts of the sworn investigative interviews of Respondent Millie Browndorf and Assistant Cage Shift Supervisor Tom Carter are attached hereto and marked as Exhibits E and F, respectively.

SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, the parties have endeavored to submit to the Commission a detailed submission of all of the material and relevant facts pertinent to the allegations contained in Complaint 88-342. Additionally, the parties submit for purposes of this Stipulation of Facts various exhibits described in the Table of Exhibits attached hereto, and

WHEREAS, Respondents Tropicana and Millie Browndorf acknowledge failing to take sufficient steps to perform the necessary verification to determine the validity of check #2228X prior to its acceptance on June 8, 1987, in violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e), and

fact, said check was not a cash equivalent, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e), and

WHEREAS, Respondent Tropicana acknowledges violating N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e), N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)6, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)9 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(g) by requiring Cage Credit personnel and not General Cashiers or their supervisors to determine the validity of cash equivalents prior to their acceptance, and

WHEREAS, all of the allegations contained in the Division's Complaint in this matter are hereby resolved.

IT IS THEREFORE consented to and agreed upon by and between the parties that:

A. Respondent Millie Browndorf agrees to the issuance of a letter of reprimand pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(8) for the aforementioned violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e) in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in Count I of the Division's Complaint.

B. Respondent Tropicana agrees to pay the sum of $5,000 to the New Jersey Casino Control Fund pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5) for the aforementioned violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b), N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c) and (g) in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in Counts I and II of the Division's Complaint.

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the New Jersey Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of November 16, 1988,

IT IS on this 16th day of February 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

> The ALJ's reference to the respondent's "inadvertent participation in a drug transaction" is disapproved. The respondent was convicted of knowingly engaging in a conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance. This determination of the Superior Court of New Jersey, made pursuant to the respondent's plea of guilty, is binding upon this tribunal under the doctrine of res judicata. The respondent may have been less involved in the conspiracy than were his two co-conspirators, but his conduct cannot fairly be described as "inadvertent."

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint for revocation of the respondent's casino hotel employee registration is dismissed substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision which, as modified, is incorporated herein by reference and made a part hereof.

Record Closed: September 15, 1988 Decided: October 5, 1988

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter concerns the complaint filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on March 24, 1988, seeking the revocation of the respondent's registration as a casino hotel employee, pursuant to the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. The respondent requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on April 27, 1988, for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held on June 28, 1988, and at that time the parties agreed that the issues in this matter are:

1. Whether the respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

2. Whether the respondent's continued registration is inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2).

3. Whether the respondent can demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

4. Whether the respondent meets the requirements for a waiver pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91e.

The hearing took place on September 15, 1988, at the Galloway Township Municipal Building in Absecon, New Jersey, and the record in the matter closed on that date.

FACTUAL FINDINGS

On November 19, 1986, the respondent, a hairdresser, was asked by a friend, Gabe Rivera, to cut his hair. The respondent borrowed his roommate's car and went to Mr. Rivera's home. While the respondent was there, Mr. Rivera went to another room to speak to another visitor and to take a telephone call. After the haircut was completed, Mr. Rivera asked the respondent to drive him to the Shore Mall so that he could meet a person who was going to repay a debt. The respondent agreed since he was going to the Shore Mall to pick up a pair of shoes.

The respondent was curious as to why Mr. Rivera was meeting the person who owed him money at the Shore Mall. On the way to the mall he questioned Mr. Rivera about his plans. Mr. Rivera then told him that he planned to sell cocaine at the mall.

At that time, the respondent had known Mr. Rivera for five years, initially meeting him while they both worked at the Playboy Hotel and Casino. However, he denied knowing before this conversation on November 19, 1986, that Mr. Rivera was involved with narcotics. After Mr. Rivera told him why he was going to the mall, the respondent considered requesting that Mr. Rivera leave the car immediately; however, because of his friendship with Mr. Rivera and because he was going to the Shore Mall anyway, the respondent continued to the mall. The respondent left Mr. Rivera at the entrance to the auto department of the Sears store and told him that he did not want to have anything to do with the drug sale.

After dropping off Mr. Rivera, the respondent drove to another entrance of the Sears store and parked the car. As he was doing this, Andres Hidalgo drove up. The respondent recognized Mr. Hidalgo as a friend of Mr. Rivera. While they were talking in the parking lot, the police arrived and arrested both of them (P-1, P-2). Later, Mr. Rivera, Mr. Hidalgo and the respondent were indicted (P-3). In the indictment, Mr. Rivera was charged with the possession of cocaine, the possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, and the distribution of cocaine to an undercover agent; Mr. Hidalgo was charged with several counts of conspiracy; and the respondent was charged with one count of conspiracy to facilitate the commission of the crime of possession of a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine) with intent to distribute same, in a quantity of one ounce or more that includes at least 3.5 grams of pure free base, contrary to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 24:21-24 (P-3).

The respondent was represented by an attorney, and after plea bargaining, he pled guilty on March 6, 1987 to the conspiracy offense. At that time, the respondent was aware that if convicted after a trial, he could receive a sentence of up to 12 years in jail (R-1). For the offense the respondent was sentenced to 30 days in jail and probation for 18 months, and he was required to make a $30.00 payment to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board (P-3). The respondent paid the $30.00, spent 15 days in the Atlantic County Jail and will complete his probationary period on September 21, 1988.

According to the respondent, his only involvement in the matter was that of driving Mr. Rivera to the Shore Mall knowing that he intended to sell drugs there. This was confirmed by Mr. Rivera in his sworn statement to the police after his arrest, and by the fact that the police reports of the investigation, prior to November 19, 1986, do not mention Mr. Arroyo (R-6).

Since his guilty plea, the respondent has had no further contact with Mr. Rivera. The respondent has complied with the terms of his probation, which includes working at a full-time job and reporting once a month to a probation officer. According to the respondent, he has never personally taken or sold any cocaine during his life.

In addition to the 1986 incident, the respondent's criminal record reflects only one other arrest. On February 27, 1982, the respondent and Wadsworth Hamilton Campbell were arrested for theft by unlawful taking, a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3a. They were accused of taking personal property from another employee's locker at Bally's Park Place Hotel and Casino (P-4). The respondent stated that he was not involved in any theft and that Mr. Campbell had given him an empty wallet which he assumed belonged to Mr. Campbell. This matter was discharged when the complainant failed to appear in court.

The respondent started to work for the Playboy Hotel and Casino (Playboy) in 1982 and except for a short time in 1987, when there was a strike, he is still employed by that casino as a waiter (the Playboy became the Atlantis Hotel and Casino [Atlantis]). The respondent stated that he was suspended by Atlantis for three days for blowing a party horn during working hours on New Year's Eve. In addition, the records of Playboy-Atlantis show that between May 30, 1982 and June 22, 1987, the respondent was given ten written warnings regarding improper procedures or improper conduct (P-6).

During the break in employment with Atlantis, Mr. Arroyo applied for a job with Caesars Hotel and Casino. He partially filled out an application form for a position with Caesars and left blank the question relating to any criminal convictions (P-7).

On two separate occasions the respondent has worked for Resorts International Hotel and Casino (Resorts). The first time he worked for Resorts as a busboy and left that position for a better paying job with Playboy. On the second occasion, he was employed as a bar porter for approximately one year, however, he did not recall why he left that position. Resorts' records show that the respondent quit in 1981 without giving "due notice", and that when he was employed in 1982, the respondent was excessively late during one month and was apparently discharged because of an unauthorized leave (P-5).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

On behalf of the Division, Deputy Attorney General Nancy P. Scharff argued that the Division has shown a statutory disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Mr. Arroyo was convicted of a violation of conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance, a violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-5, which is comparable under current law to a conviction for conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2 and N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, which are listed as statutory disqualifiers. I agree with Ms. Scharff and I CONCLUDE that the Division has established a statutory disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Therefore, there is no need to consider whether the respondent's action is also inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2).

Since the Division has established a statutory disqualifier, it is now necessary to consider whether the respondent has proven his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d sets forth the following criteria to be considered in determining whether or not a person has demonstrated rehabilitation for purposes of retaining registration as a casino hotel employee:

1. The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

4. The date of the offense or conduct;

5. The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

The evidence presented by the respondent does not address most of these criteria. On behalf of the respondent, Richard Goldstein, Esq., argued that Mr. Arroyo does not have to show rehabilitation since he was not guilty of any intentional criminal wrongdoing and had pled guilty only to avoid a trial. In the alternative, Mr. Goldstein argued that the respondent's degree of criminal culpability is minimal and therefore he does not have to present a substantial amount of evidence in order to prove rehabilitation. Mr. Goldstein argued that the respondent has shown rehabilitation since he has no other criminal convictions, has severed his friendship with Mr. Rivera, has been continually employed since his release from jail, and shortly will successfully complete his period of probation.

Ms. Scharff disagreed and argued that the conviction occurred just over a year ago and that insufficient time has elapsed for the respondent to show rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence.

In prior cases involving rehabilitation, the Commission has placed emphasis on the nature of a person's position within the casino industry and has recognized that although the same statutory criteria are used to judge rehabilitation for registrants and licensed employees, the criteria are to be weighed differently depending on the nature and duties of the position. In this matter, the respondent is a waiter and therefore has no direct responsibility for any casino gambling activity. Also, Mr. Arroyo's conviction was based on his inadvertent participation in a drug transaction. In addition, although he does not have an outstanding work record in the casino industry, there is nothing in said record which adversely reflects on his rehabilitation. Therefore, I agree with Mr. Goldstein's argument and I CONCLUDE that the respondent has shown his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

The last issue regarding a waiver pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91e, does not have to be considered in this matter since I have concluded that the respondent has demonstrated his rehabilitation.

DISPOSITION

I ORDER that the casino employee registration of Remberto Arroyo, Jr. not be revoked.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, Complainant, v. BALLY'S PARK PLACE, INC., t/a BALLY'S PARK PLACE CASINO HOTEL; and GLORIA EDWARDS, Casino Cage Shift Manager, Respondents.	STIPULATION OF FACTS AND SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The matters involved having been discussed by and between the parties involved, Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney for complainant State of New Jersey, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement, by Christopher J. Pitts, Deputy Attorney General, and Shelley Waxman, Esquire, Assistant Counsel, Bally's Park Place Casino Hotel, Inc., attorney for Respondents Bally's Park Place, Inc. and Gloria Edwards and certain matters having been agreed upon, it is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between the parties as follows:

1. Respondent, Bally's Park Place, Inc., t/a Bally's Casino Hotel (hereinafter "Bally"), is now and at all times referenced herein has been a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and has now and at all times referenced herein has had its principal place of business located at Park Place and the Boardwalk in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic, State of New Jersey.

2. Bally is now the holder of a casino license issued by the Casino Control Commission (hereinafter "Commission") authorizing Bally to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Said license was issued to Bally effective December 29, 1980, and most recently renewed on September 14, 1988. Bally has been conducting its casino hotel operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein.

3. Bally is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective December 29, 1979, at which time Bally was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Bally has conducted its casino hotel operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitles Bally to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. Respondent Gloria Edwards holds a valid casino key employee license, #1862-11, which was initially issued by the Commission in June, 1985 and most recently renewed on August 5, 1987.

5. Respondent Gloria Edwards is now and at all times referenced herein has been employed by Bally in the capacity of Casino Cage Shift Manager. Attached hereto and made a part hereof as Exhibit A is a copy of Bally's job description for the position of Casino Cage Shift Manager.

6. On May 26, 1987 at approximately 9:35 p.m. a person by the name of Joseph Tominaro presented to Bally's Casino Cage Cashier Theresa Bove, casino employee license #66899-21, a personal check which was stamped with the words "Certified Check".

7. The check presented by Joseph Tominaro to Ms. Bove at approximately 9:35 p.m. on May 26, 1987, as referred to in paragraph 6 of this Stipulation of Facts and Settlement Agreement (hereinafter "Stipulation"), supra, had the number 151 printed in the upper right hand corner of the check. Handwritten directly to the left of the printed numbers was the number "2". In the upper left hand corner of the check (hereinafter "check #2151") the name "Joseph Tominaro" was printed while an address, 1867 West 10th Street, Brooklyn, New York 11223, was handwritten directly beneath the printed name. Adjacent to the printed name "Joseph Tominaro" was a telephone number, (718)372-8623. Said telephone number was handwritten.

8. Check #2151 presented by Joseph Tominaro to Ms. Bove at approximately 9:35 p.m. on May 26, 1987, as referred to in paragraph 6 supra, was made payable to "Bally's Casino" in the amount of $5,000 and was dated May 26, 1987. Said check was drawn on account #3282061336 and listed The Bowery Savings Bank, 2154 86th Street, Brooklyn, New York, as the payor bank. A copy of check #2151 is attached hereto as Exhibit B and made a part hereof.

9. Upon presenting check #2151 to Ms. Bove, Joseph Tominaro advised Ms. Bove that he had telephoned Bally's Casino Cage personnel earlier that day to provide information concerning the check. Ms. Bove then presented check #2151 to Casino Cage Shift Manager Gloria Edwards for the purpose of approving the acceptance of said check.

10. Respondent Gloria Edwards did not independently determine the validity of check #2151 prior to the acceptance thereof. Rather, Ms. Edwards has represented that upon being presented with check #2151 by Ms. Bove, she reviewed cage documentation regarding the verification of said check that had been prepared during the day shift on May 26, 1987, by another Bally employee, the identity of whom Ms. Edwards cannot recall.

11. After reviewing the cage documentation regarding the verification of check #2151, as referred to in paragraph 10 supra, Respondent Edwards represents that she authorized the acceptance of check #2151. Said authorization is signified by the initials "G.E." placed in the upper right hand portion of check #2151 by Respondent Edwards.

12. Based upon Respondent Edwards' authorization, as described in paragraph 11 supra, check #2151 was accepted by Cage Cashier Theresa Bove and the funds represented by check #2151 were placed on deposit with Bally. Said deposit was made at 9:38 p.m. on May 26, 1987 and was in the amount of $5,000. Bally's Customer Deposit Voucher #312268 documents this transaction. A copy of Customer Deposit Voucher #312268 is attached hereto as Exhibit C and made a part hereof.

13. During the period from 9:45 p.m. on May 26, 1987, until 12:43 a.m. on May 27, 1987, Joseph Tominaro withdrew the funds which are the subject of paragraph 12 supra, in five (5) separate $1,000 increments.

14. On or about May 27, 1987, check #2151 was deposited by Bally in its depository bank account. Said check was subsequently returned unpaid to Bally on or about June 5, 1987.

15. Shortly after the return of check #2151 unpaid from Bally's depository bank on or about June 5, 1987, Bally's notified the Division of the fraudulently presented check and criminal and regulatory investigations commenced.

16. Information obtained by the Division from representatives of the Bowery Savings Bank revealed that check #2151, drawn on the account of Joseph Tominaro, was not, in fact, certified for payment by the Bowery Savings Bank.

17. Information obtained by the Division from representatives of the Bowery Savings Bank revealed that the account upon which check #2151 was drawn, account #3282061336, had been closed in September of 1986.

18. During the course of the Division's investigation in the instant matter, the Division made several requests of Respondents Bally and Gloria Edwards to locate and produce the cage documentation regarding the verification of check #2151 as described in paragraph 10, supra. Upon being so requested, Respondents Bally and Gloria Edwards were unable to locate or produce said documentation.

19. Pursuant to internal policies of Respondent Bally, approval for the acceptance of cash equivalents presented by gaming patrons and the responsibility to insure that such instruments have been verified prior to acceptance is the responsibility of the general cashier supervisors, more specifically, Assistant Casino Cage Shift Supervisors or above.

20. Respondent Gloria Edwards, in her capacity as Casino Cage Shift Manager, was responsible for determining the validity of check #2151 prior to its acceptance by Respondent Bally's casino cage on May 26, 1987.

21. On May 26, 1987, Respondent Gloria Edwards, in her capacity as Casino Cage Shift Manager, authorized the acceptance of check #2151. Based upon said authorization, check #2151 was accepted by Cage Cashier Theresa Rove on May 26, 1987.

22. The Division represents that had Respondent Gloria Edwards, or any other casino cage representative of Bally, placed a direct inquiry with the Bowery Savings Bank prior to the acceptance of check #2151 on May 26, 1987, Respondent Bally would have learned of the worthless nature of said check.

23. At all times relevant hereto, Respondent Gloria Edwards was acting within the scope and in furtherance of her employment by and agency of Respondent Bally.

24. By failing to contact the Bowery Savings Bank prior to the acceptance of check #2151, Respondents Bally's Park Place, Inc. and Gloria Edwards failed to take sufficient steps to perform the necessary verification to determine the validity of check #2151 prior to its acceptance on May 26, 1987, in violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e).

25. By accepting check #2151 as a cash equivalent when, in fact, said check was not a cash equivalent, Respondents Bally's Park Place, Inc. and Gloria Edwards violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e).

26. By failing to locate or produce the cage documentation which is the subject of paragraph 10, supra, Respondent Bally has failed to maintain all books, records or documents pertaining to the operation of its casino and approved hotel on the site of the approved hotel building for a period of seven years, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-96(e) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.8(a)2.

27. By failing to locate or produce the cage documentation which is the subject of paragraph 10, supra, Respondent Bally has failed to hold those documents immediately available for inspection by agents of the Commission and Division during all hours of operation, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-96(e) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.8(a)3.

28. During the course of the Division's investigation in the instant matter, the Division requested that Respondent Bally produce documentation regarding telephone calls placed from the casino cage during the month of May 1987.

29. Specifically, the Division requested that Respondent Bally produce copies of the telephone charges for the month of May 1987 in order to determine if the bank upon which check #2151 was drawn had been contacted by employees of Bally on May 26, 1987 in an attempt to determine the validity said check. Upon being so requested, Respondent Bally was unable to locate or produce the records which reflect telephone charges from the casino cage for the month of May, 1987.

30. Subsequent to the filing of the Division's Complaint in this matter, Respondent Bally instituted procedures designed to ensure the proper maintenance and retention of telephone charge records. Said procedures will ensure that telephone charge records will be kept available for agents of the Commission and Division pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-96(e) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.8(a)(2) and (3).

31. As part of the Division's investigation in the instant matter, sworn investigative interviews of Respondent Gloria Edwards and of Bally's Cage Cashier Terry Bove were conducted on September 22, 1987. Transcripts of the sworn investigative interviews of Respondent Gloria Edwards and Cage Cashier Terry Bove are attached hereto and marked as Exhibits D and E respectively.

SETTLEMENT

WHERFAS, the parties have endeavored to submit to the Commission a detailed submission of all of the material and relevant facts pertinent to the allegations contained in Complaint 88-344. Additionally, the parties submit for purposes of this Stipulation of Facts various exhibits described in the Table of Exhibits attached hereto, and

WHEREAS, Respondents Bally's Park Place, Inc. and Gloria Edwards acknowledge failing to take sufficient steps to perform the necessary verification to determine the validity of check #2151 prior to its acceptance on May 26, 1987 in violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e), and

WHEREAS, Respondents Bally's Park Place, Inc. and Gloria Edwards acknowledge accepting check #2151 as a cash equivalent when, in fact, said check was not a cash equivalent, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e), and

WHEREAS, Respondent Bally's Park Place, Inc. acknowledges its failure to locate or produce documentation regarding the verification of check #2151, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-96(e) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.8(a)(2) and (3), and

WHEREAS, Complainant, Division of Gaming Enforcement, agrees to the dismissal, without prejudice, of the allegations contained in Count III of the Division's Complaint based upon the facts set forth at paragraph 30 of this Stipulation of Facts and Settlement Agreement, and

WHEREAS, all of the allegations contained in the Division's Complaint in this matter are hereby resolved.

IT IS THEREFORE consented to and agreed upon by and between the parties that:

A. Respondent Gloria Edwards agrees to the issuance of a letter of reprimand pursuant to N.J.S.A.

5:12-129(8) for the aforementioned violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e) in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in Count I of the Division's Complaint.

B. Respondent Bally's Park Place, Inc. agrees to pay the sum of $5,000 to the New Jersey Casino Control Fund pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5) for the aforementioned violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-96(e), N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b), N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.8(a)(2) and (3) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e) in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in Counts I and II of the Division's Complaint.

ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge (ALJ) having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of March 1, 1989,

IT IS on this 14th day of April 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

> to disavow the ALJ's statement "[c]onsidering the public apathy concerning the recreational use of small amounts of marijuana...." Init. dec. at 4. We do not accept this statement as the general public's sentiment in this area. Moreover, this case does not deal with the recreational use of marijuana as the ALJ's statement suggests. The respondent's conviction was for possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

ORDER NO. 89-9-12

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the casino hotel employee registration held by Dorothea P. Barker is revoked substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision, as modified, which is incorporated herein and made a part hereof; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any license, registration, qualification or approval under the Casino Control Act except pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8.

Charles Kimmel, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)
Dorothea P. Barker, respondent, pro se

Record Closed: December 8, 1988 Decided: January 13, 1989

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent, Dorothea P. Barker, is a casino hotel employee registrant with the Casino Control Commission (Commission). On June 19, 1987, she was convicted of possession of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana) over one ounce, with intent to distribute, contrary to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)(1). As a result, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Commission on February 4, 1988 seeking to revoke her casino employee registration. When the offense was committed, N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)(1) was listed as a disqualifying criterion for casino licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Section 91b of the Casino Control Act (Act) made revocation a possible sanction for registrants if convicted for an 86c(1) disqualifier. Since then drug offenses have been recodified at N.J.S.A. 2C:35-1 et seq. The Act has been amended accordingly and N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 is the equivalent disqualification offense to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)(1).

The respondent requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

At a prehearing conference on October 12, 1988, the issues to be addressed at the plenary hearing were identified as whether the respondent was convicted of a statutory disqualifier listed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), the distribution of a controlled dangerous substance, and if so, could she affirmatively show that she was rehabilitated according to the guidelines set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. A plenary hearing was conducted on December 8, 1988.

DISQUALIFICATION

The respondent admitted that she possessed more than one ounce of marijuana with the intent to distribute it and was convicted on June 19, 1987 of a violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)(1). The facts recited by the respondent constitute a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 in the third degree.

I CONCLUDE that the respondent may be disqualified from casino employee registration unless saved from disqualification by an affirmative showing that she is rehabilitated from her crime pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

REHABILITATION

The Act permits an otherwise disqualified applicant for employee registration to avoid the onus of disqualification by affirmatively showing that she is rehabilitated. N.J.S.A 5:12-91d. The rehabilitation statute requires consideration of the following eight factors: (1) the nature and duties of the position applied for; (2) the nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct; (3) the circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred; (4) the date of the offense or conduct; (5) the age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed; (6) whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident; (7) any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct; (8) any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

I FIND that:

(1) The applicant is employed as a guest room attendant in a casino hotel. She expects to become a supervisor in that department after she enrolls in and completes the "Upward Mobility Program" offered by her employer.

(2) This was a drug offense in the third degree. The sentencing judge determined that respondent's conduct neither caused nor threatened serious harm.

(3) Lionel Gettings, respondent's paramour, operated a small marijuana distribution operation from respondent's home, selling small bags of less than an ounce of marijuana. He sold these in order to support his own habit of smoking marijuana. Respondent assisted him in this and would often sell the marijuana to persons who came to the door looking for a buy. She insisted that she did not sell the marijuana at the casino. She acknowledged that she needed the money to "bail her out of a tight spot."

(4) Respondent was arrested on February 14, 1987.

(5) Respondent was 36 years old when she was arrested.

(6) This is respondent's first arrest and conviction. She acknowledged however that she did sell marijuana for about a year prior to her arrest.

(7) There was no evidence offered at the hearing to indicate that social conditions may have contributed to the offense.

(8) Respondent is on 3 years probation and is currently paying her $1000 fine obligation. She has a letter from a supervisor indicating that she is a good, reliable employee.

Because respondent has not completed payments on her fine and because she must still serve one more year on probation, she cannot be considered rehabilitated from her crime. Until she has completed her sentence she is not even permitted to vote, N.J.S.A. 19:4-1(8).

ADDITIONAL FACTORS MERITING CONSIDERATION

Until 1980 when respondent was employed in the casino industry she was a recipient of Aid to Families With Dependent Children. One of her children, who is now 20 years old, is emancipated. Respondent has three unemancipated children at home; twin boys 16 years old and a four year old daughter. The four year old's father, Lionel Gettings, is responsible for child care when respondent is at work. Respondent has worked continuously in the casino industry since 1980 as a room attendant. She works 8:45 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. five and often six days per week. Her supervisor is pleased with her work and respondent anticipates a promotion to a supervisory position.

Respondent argued that she will not be involved with marijuana again. She stated that she did not want to go to jail and that she did not want to lose her registration.

Lionel Gettings also testified. In addition to his confession referred to in the third paragraph of the section entitled "Rehabilitation", above, he too, indicated that there would be no more sale or use of marijuana by either of them. He simply and truly said "We have too much to lose."

Revocation in this case would be onerous since this crime did not occur on casino property. Considering the public apathy concerning the recreational use of small amounts of marijuana together with the respondent's minor role in the provision of housekeeping services in a casino hotel, her continued employment would not undermine the public's confidence or trust in the casino industry.

LAW AND DISCUSSION

The provisions of section 91b provide wide discretion to the Commission. It ..."may revoke, suspend, limit, or otherwise restrict the registration upon a finding that the registrant is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C.5:12-86)."

This discretion has been approved by the Appellate Division. State v. Wynette Harris, Docket No. A-3774-81T2 (unpublished opinion decided March 1, 1983).

Nevertheless, the Commission has determined from its review of section 64 of the Casino Control Act that "...the proper response to a disqualifying offense by an unrehabilitated registrant is revocation..." State v. Wynette Harris, OAL DKT. NO. CCC 3038-81, Final Commission Decision Decided June 29, 1983, p.13. The Commission Decision on page 13 also quotes section 64 in pertinent part as follows:

> The commission shall assure that licenses, certificates, or permits shall not be issued to nor held by...unqualified or disqualified persons or unsuitable persons...For the purposes of this section, "unqualified person," "disqualified person," or "unsuitable person" shall mean any person who is found by the commission to be disqualified pursuant to the criteria set forth in section 86c., e., f., g., and h.... [emphasis added by Commission]

Persons who are disqualified from registration are barred from reapplication to the Casino Control Commission for registration for a period of 5 years. N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8(a).

The Commission, in the Wynette Harris decision, supra p.2., illuminates the only escape from that provision; it notes that the Chairman can grant permission to make an early reapplication if he finds" "...that there exists extraordinary facts and circumstances warranting early reapplication." N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8(g)."

I therefore CONCLUDE that the respondent is disqualified from registration because she has been convicted of a disqualifying offense pursuant to section 86c(1) and 91b of the Act. I also CONCLUDE that she is not rehabilitated pursuant to section 91d of the Act.

I ORDER that the registration of respondent Dorothea P. Barker be REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CCC 8829-88
AGENCY DKT. NO. 89-EA-139

BRUCE R. BASKOW,
Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND
PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION
OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

Bruce R. Baskow, petitioner, pro se

James J. Armstrong, Deputy Attorney General, for the respondent (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: April 20, 1989 Decided: May 23, 1989

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

This matter concerns the letter filed by the respondent, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), with the Casino Control Commission on September 2, 1988, objecting to the renewal of the casino employee license of the petitioner, Bruce R. Baskow. The petitioner requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted on December 5, 1988, to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held on February 16, 1989, and at that time the parties agreed that the issues in this matter are:

1. Whether petitioner committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 (theft by deception).*

2. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b.

3. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

The hearing took place on April 20, 1989, in the Office of Administrative Law in Atlantic City, New Jersey, and the record in the matter closed on that date.

FACTUAL FINDINGS

During its investigation regarding the petitioner's application for the renewal of his casino employee license, the Division found that the petitioner had received excessive unemployment benefits for several weeks during 1984-85 while employed as a part-time craps dealer by Caesars Boardwalk Regency Hotel and Casino (Caesars) (R-3, R-4, R-5). After a hearing, the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance, State Department of Labor (UDI Division), determined that the amount of the overpayment was $873 (R-6, R-7, R-8, R-9). A judgment was filed against the petitioner by the UDI Division on August 1, 1985, in the amount of $1,091.25 ($873 plus a penalty of $218.25) (R-2, R-8). With the assessment of interest, the petitioner had to repay the UDI Division the amount of $1,240.49.

* There is a typographical error in the Division's September 2, 1988 letter as to the citation for theft by deception. The correct citation is N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4.

As of the date of the Division's September 2, 1988 letter to the Casino Control Commission, the petitioner had repaid $851.25 and still owed a balance of $389.24 (R-10). Prior to the hearing in this matter, the petitioner paid off the remaining amount due to the UDI Division (R-11).

According to the petitioner, he had been advised that he was entitled to unemployment benefits while he held the part-time position with Caesars. The petitioner stated that every week he gave the UDI Division his pay stub with a salary verification form given to him by Caesars' financial office, and the UDI Division issued him a check. The record of the UDI Division hearing appears to confirm that the petitioner provided the UDI Division with his pay stubs (R-7). According to the petitioner, he was not aware of the procedure used by the UDI Division to calculate his benefits and he was not aware that he had received any overpayments until he received a formal notice from the UDI Division.

The petitioner stated that it took him a while to pay the amount of the judgment since he had a substantial number of other debts as well as additional expenses due to his mother's illness (R-1).

Since 1984-85, the petitioner has taken several casino gaming courses in order to qualify as a dealer in blackjack, baccarat and mini-baccarat and he is now licensed as a dealer in four games and as a floorperson in two games.

The petitioner is 33 years old and he has been employed by Caesars since May 2, 1984. The petitioner stated that his casino employee license is very important to him and that he would like to continue working for the casino, especially since he will soon be a father. The petitioner stated that he is not married since his girlfriend also works for Caesars and the casino has a rule prohibiting married couples from both working there. However, the petitioner indicated that he plans to marry his girlfriend sometime in the future.

On behalf of the petitioner, Bruce G. Coffas, a supervisor employed by Caesars, stated that the petitioner's work performance has been satisfactory, that his courteous manner to customers is highly commendable and that he has a positive attitude to his job which makes him a valued employee (P-1).

I FIND the facts as stated above are not in dispute.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Based on the facts presented, Mr. Armstrong argued that the petitioner misrepresented his part-time wages to the UDI Division, resulting in an overpayment of unemployment benefits. Although no criminal action was taken against the petitioner, Mr. Armstrong argued that the petitioner's actions are analogous to theft by deception, in excess of $500, a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, which is a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), even though no criminal action was initiated against the petitioner, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

Further, Mr. Armstrong argued that because of the overpayment of unemployment benefits, the petitioner cannot demonstrate his good character, honesty and integrity as required for the continuation of his casino employee licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b.

It is Mr. Baskow's position that he gave the UDI Division all the information it requested and that he never misrepresented his salary from Caesars. According to Mr. Baskow, the miscalculation of his benefits was made by the UDI Division and was probably due to the fact that Caesars had a different pay period than that used by the UDI Division for its unemployment benefits payments. However, Mr. Baskow reiterated that he was not aware of how the UDI Division calculated his benefits or that he received overpayments until he received the notice from the UDI Division.

Having reviewed the facts and the arguments of the parties, I CONCLUDE that the Division has not shown that the overpayment of unemployment benefits to the petitioner was due to any misrepresentation or deception by him. In order to prove a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, it is necessary to show a conscious interest to cheat or defraud, State v. Moore, 158 N.J. Super. 68 (App. Div. 1978); State v. Graves, 60 N.J. 441 (1972). In this case, the Division has not shown a mens rea. There was no proof that the petitioner concealed or misrepresented his earnings to the UDI Division or that he knowingly accepted more money than he was entitled to pursuant to the law governing unemployment benefits.

Since the Division has not shown a statutory disqualification, it is not necessary to consider the issue of rehabilitation. Further, since the only negative information presented by the Division relates to the overpayment of unemployment benefits, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has shown that he possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity necessary for casino employee licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b.

Therefore, I ORDER that the casino employee license of Bruce R. Baskow be renewed.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Record Closed: November 21, 1988 Decided: December 20, 1988

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

BEFORE RICHARD J. MURPHY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

At issue is whether Bayshore Rebar, Inc., a reinforced concrete construction ("rebar") company operating primarily in Atlantic City, is disqualified under the Casino Control Act, L. 1977, c. 110; N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq., from doing business with casino applicants and licensees because of the allegedly inimical association of its officers with a member of organized crime contrary to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f, and whether it should be denied a license as a casino service industry pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.1 et seq. Both sides see this as a case of family ties: the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) alleges that the respondent has an inimical association with the crime family of Nicodemo Scarfo through one of its members, Lawrence Merlino, a/k/a Lawrence "Yogi" Merlino, who is the father of Bayshore's vice-president and former president as well as ex-husband of its current president; Bayshore Rebar, Inc. (Bayshore), claims that its only association with Lawrence Merlino is purely incidental to constitutionally protected family bonds formed through blood and marriage and that these alone may not provide a basis for disqualification or denial of a license under the Casino Control Act and Commission regulations.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed its initial complaint in this matter with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on January 6, 1987, alleging various connections between Bayshore and its officers and owners and Lawrence Merlino, an admitted career criminal offender and a member of a career offender cartel headed by Nicodemo Scarfo. Joseph Merlino, former president of Bayshore, requested a hearing on February 11, 1987, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on March 5, 1987, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The Division filed an amended complaint with the Commission on May 6, 1987, seeking to disqualify respondent Joseph N. Merlino from vendor registration under N.J.S.A. 5:12-104b because of his indictment on March 17, 1987, in Atlantic County on charges of aggravated assault, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, and possession of a deadly weapon for unlawful purposes. These criminal charges are still pending. The parties initially agreed to hold proceedings on the amended complaint in abeyance pending resolution of the criminal charges, but, as these charges were not rapidly resolved, it was determined to be more advisable to proceed to hearing on the allegations of the original complaint, and a prehearing to this end was held on November 17, 1987, with a prehearing order issued the next day. Decision on the unrelated criminal charges was deferred, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86d, during the pendency of that charge. The hearing on the original complaint was scheduled for January 7, 1988, but this date was adjourned at the respondent's request due to the unavailability of counsel. The hearing was conducted on March 14, March 29 and March 31, 1988. After the completion of the hearing, additional documentation was submitted by respondent on April 7, 1988, with a ten-day reply period allowed to the Division. Before expiration of the time period for submission of an initial decision, the Division advised that it intended to move to reopen and supplement the record by submission of a sworn affidavit by Thomas A. DelGiorno. Bayshore filed a letter brief in opposition on July 5, 1988. On July 22, 1988, the record was reopened and the Division was ordered to produce Thomas A. DelGiorno for testimony; the respondent was directed to have Lawrence Merlino testify. Because of a pending federal criminal matter in which both men were involved, this could not be arranged and it was determined, on August 19, 1988, to admit the proposed affidavit from Thomas DelGiorno. Bayshore was also given an opportunity to submit an opposing affidavit from Lawrence Merlino, and did so.

On July 29, 1988, Bayshore applied to the Commission for licensure as a casino service industry pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3 et seq. The Division objected and argued that the applicant was disqualified on the grounds of its association with Lawrence Merlino, as well as the indictment of Joseph N. Merlino and by what the Division characterizes as misrepresentations by the applicant's principals in the course of the hearing in this matter. The matter of the application was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case with a request that it be consolidated with the pending matter in OAL DKT. CCC 1445-87. Consolidation was granted and the parties rested on the evidence introduced in the previously-filed casino control matter, which had been heard in March.

On September 7, 1988, Bayshore submitted an affidavit by Lawrence Merlino, responding to that previously submitted by Thomas DelGiorno. On September 21, 1988, the Division submitted an affidavit of Division Agent Barbara Friese and excerpts from reports of the Pennsylvania Crime Commission. On November 4, 1988, Bayshore forwarded sections of a transcript from a trial in United States District Court, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, entitled United States of America v. Nicodemo Scarfo, et al; in which the testimony of Thomas DelGiorno as to Bayshore and Lawrence Merlino was featured. The Division submitted a responsive argument on November 21, 1988, and the record as to the consolidated matter was closed on that date. The matter of the indictment pending against Joseph Merlino remains to be determined through criminal proceedings and is not dealt with in this decision.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The following material facts are not in dispute. Bayshore stipulated that Lawrence Merlino is a career criminal offender within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f and N.J.A.C. 19:48-1.1, as well as an associate of career criminal offenders and a member of a career criminal offender cartel. Specifically, Lawrence Merlino is an associate of Nicodemo Scarfo, the acknowledged head of an organized crime family operating out of Philadelphia in southern New Jersey and the Atlantic City area. Official notice is taken that, on November 19, 1988, Lawrence Merlino was convicted on a number of federal criminal charges in the matter of United States of America v. Nicodemo Scarfo, et al., U.S. District Court Criminal No. 88-003. Also convicted were Lawrence Merlino's brother Salvatore Merlino; his nephew, Phillip Leonetti; Nicodemo Scarfo, and others. The Merlino brothers are known to be members of the Scarfo crime family, with Salvatore Merlino functioning as an underboss, and Lawrence Merlino and Phillip Leonetti serving as soldiers within that organization. Lawrence Merlino's association with Nicodemo Scarfo goes back to at least 1979 when the two, along with Phillip Leonetti, were charged with the murder of Vincent Falcone, an Atlantic City cement contractor. The three were subsequently acquitted. Lawrence Merlino also has worked as president and part owner, of Nat Nat, Inc., a construction company in Atlantic City. He has also worked for Scarf, Inc., a construction company owned by Nicodemo Scarfo's nephew, Phillip Leonetti.

Because of his status as a career offender and an associate of a career offender, Lawrence Merlino was barred from casino premises by the Commission and this exclusion was affirmed. See, State v. Lawrence Merlino, 216 N.J. Super. 579 (App. Div. 1987), affirmed, State v. Merlino, 109 N.J. 134 (1988). Lawrence Merlino is currently incarcerated in Pennsylvania awaiting trial on other charges.

There is also no dispute that Lawrence Merlino was president of Nat Nat, Inc., a reinforced steel construction company, at the time of the incorporation of Bayshore Rebar in December of 1985. He had incorporated a company called Bayshore Rebar, Inc., in Florida prior to that time, which corporation was involuntarily dissolved on November 1, 1985, for failure to file its annual report (P-32). Prior to 1985, Nat Nat operated out of offices at 28 North Georgia Avenue, Atlantic City, which was the same address used by Scarf, Inc., a construction company headed by Phillip Leonetti, nephew of Nicodemo Scarfo and a career offender, as discussed above. The operations of Nat Nat were later moved to a home located at 15 North Decatur Avenue in Margate, which Lawrence Merlino had purchased for his former spouse and children. Lawrence Merlino did not at any time reside at that address but occasionally visited his children there, as well as to check on the affairs of Nat Nat, which were being handled by his daughter, Kimberly.

Joseph N. Merlino is the son of Lawrence Merlino and is currently 21 years old. At the time of the filing of the Division's original complaint, he was designated as president and sole owner of Bayshore Rebar, Inc. By the time of the hearing in this matter he no longer held that office, which had been assumed by his mother, although he was still vice-president and was principally employed by it in the construction rebar business. His ownership share had also been reduced to twenty-five percent, with his mother holding the rest. The "rebar" business involves the placing of steel rods at building contruction sites prior to the pouring of concrete so that the building cement structure will be reinforced with steel. Bayshore has worked on a number of casino sites in Atlantic City. Lawrence Merlino holds no office in the company and there is no evidence that he holds any interest in it or that he has been employed by it in any capacity. There is also no evidence that Lawrence Merlino has received any monies from Bayshore or, for that matter, from Joseph Merlino or Phyllis Mistie, his former spouse and the mother of his five children. The Division also has offered no evidence showing any payments by Bayshore or Joseph Merlino to Nicodemo Scarfo, Salvatore Merlino, Phillip Leonetti or anyone else associated with the reputed Scarfo crime family, nor has any other evidence been offered to demonstrate business or personal dealings between Bayshore or its principals and Scarfo, Leonetti, and Salvatore Merlino, beyond Joseph Merlino's prior employment with Scarf, Inc., and Nat Nat, Inc.

There is no dispute as to the above facts and I so FIND.

The Division offered an affidavit signed by one Thomas Albert DelGiorno, an acknowledged former member of the Scarfo crime family who has testified against its members, including Lawrence Merlino, in a number of proceedings (See, P-48). DelGiorno states in his affidavit, which I set forth in full, that:

> 1. I am currently in protective custody in an undisclosed location. I currently face criminal charges for various criminal offenses and have testified for the federal government and the States of New Jersey and Pennsylvania in various criminal matters of which I have knowledge. It is my understanding that I will be provided no favorable treatment as a result of the information provided in this affidavit, nor have I been provided any other inducement for the provision of this information, such as a reduced sentence, defferal or dismissal of charges, or any other promised act in my benefit.
> 2. I first met an individual known as Lawrence Merlino in 1972. Lawrence Merlino was also known to me and others as Lawrence "Yogi" Merlino. Since that time, I have met with, and engaged in matters of mutual interest with Lawrence Merlino on numerous occasions. To my knowledge, Lawrence Merlino is currently in a Pennsylvania jail awaiting trial.
> 3. I was a fully-initiated member of an Organized Crime family headed by an individual known as Nicodemo Scarfo. I was initiated into this organization in January 1982. Furthermore, I also know that Lawrence Merlino is a fully-initiated member of the Scarfo Organized Crime family. Lawrence Merlino was initiated in the Scarfo Organized Crime family in the spring of 1980. Lawrence Merlino was promoted to the rank of captain in the Scarfo Organized Crime family in 1982.

4. During the approximate period 1982 through 1986, Lawrence Merlino spoke with me directly and personally on numerous occasions concerning various developments in certain business interests held by Lawrence Merlino, including the construction activities of certain rebar companies operating in Atlantic City, New Jersey. Lawrence Merlino is the father of an inidividual known as Joseph Merlino of Atlantic City. Lawrence Merlino informed me of a rebar company operating in the Atlantic City area by the name of Bayshore Rebar, which was the first mention of that company I heard.

5. With regard to rebar construction contracts, Lawrence Merlino informed me that it was his practice to obtain various rebar jobs in and around Atlantic City and to utilize Bayshore to actually perform the work and to receive payment for the work. Lawrence Merlino also informed me that he shared the money obtained from the Bayshore Rebar operations with Bayshore.

6. Lawrence Merlino informed me that he conducted operations in the above-described manner with Bayshore because he, Lawrence Merlino, felt he could not operate in his own name in Atlantic City due to his reputation as a member of Organized Crime. Lawrence Merlino informed me that he believed the authorities would never allow him to operate directly with casinos and other companies due to his reputation as a member of Organized Crime. For this reason, Lawrence Merlino also believed that he could not operate in the name of his own company, Nat-Nat, Inc. For these reasons, Lawrence Merlino told me he utilized Bayshore Rebar.

7. I make this affidavit at the request of the New Jersey Division of Gaming Enforcement, which agency I understand has charged that Lawrence "Yogi" Merlino is associated with Bayshore Rebar, Inc., and persons within that company. It is my testimony here that Lawrence "Yogi" Merlino is associated with Bayshore Rebar, Inc., as I have set forth above (emphasis added. [P-50]

Bayshore submitted an opposing affidavit from Lawrence Merlino, which is also set forth in full:

1. I have read the affidavit of Thomas Albert Del Giorno in support of the Division of Gaming Enforcement's application for suspension of Bayshore Rebar, Inc., and make this affidavit in response to the allegations contained within Mr. Del Giorno's affidavit.

2. In regards to the allegation of Mr. Del Giorno that I discussed with him a rebar company operating in the Atlantic City area by the name of Bayshore Rebar, Inc., I had never discussed such company with Thomas Del Giorno. Further, I never informed Mr. Del Giorno that it was my practice to obtain various rebar jobs in and around Atlantic City, nor did I inform Mr. Del Giorno that I actually utilized Bayshore Rebar to actually perform the work and to receive payment for the work. Also, I have never received or shared in any monies obtained by Bayshore Rebar operations with Bayshore or Joseph Merlino.

3. Nor have I ever informed Mr. Del Giorno that I conducted operations using Bayshore Rebar because I felt that I could not operate in my own name due to my reputation.

4. Those allegations of Mr. Del Giorno regarding Bayshore Rebar are not true, and I submit this affidavit in response to the affidavit of Mr. Del Giorno. I further disavow and deny any association with Bayshore Rebar, Inc., other than that Joseph Merlino is my natural born child (emphasis added). [R-2]

At the recent trial in the matter of United States of America v. Nicodemo Scarfo, which resulted in the conviction of Lawrence Merlino, Salvatore Merlino, Phillip Leonetti and Nicodemo Scarfo on various federal criminal charges, Thomas DelGiorno testified on behalf of the government and was questioned concerning the above affidavit. The following excerpt of transcript is taken from the cross-examination of Thomas DelGiorno:

Q Mr. DelGiorno, I return to you the affidavit that I asked you to read yesterday, did you have an opportunity to read it yesterday before we broke for the day?

A Yes.

Q I had started to ask you some questions with respect to the procedure and the circumstances under which you took this affidavit. You may be repeating some answers, but woul you please tell the members of the jury, under what circumstances it came about that you were asked to take this affidavit and how was the affidavit formulated?

A It's whoever they are from the State of New Jersey —

Q I'm sorry. Could you speak a little clearer.

A I said, whoever took this from the State of New Jersey asked me about Larry's involved in Nat-Nat.

Q Well, let me see if I understand something and correct me if I'm wrong. Somebody from the State — and you've already told us that you were escorted by Federal authorities to a meeting with some people from the State of New Jersey; is that correct?

A Correct.

Q And those people, whoever they are, was it one person or more than one person?

A I think there was more than one.

Q They interviewed you and asked you to tell them what you knew about Larry, meaning Lawrence Merlino, correct?

A Right.

Q Involvement with a company in Atlantic City by the name of Nat-Nat, that Lawrence Merlino had something to do with; is that correct?

A Correct.

Q Okay, and you told them, I gather from the answer that you gave me, that you told them information about what you knew about Lawrence Merlino's involvement with Nat-Nat; is that correct?

A Correct.

Q Did they ask you any specific questions or did they just say tell us what you know about Nat-Nat? How did it come about? What were the questions, if you recall?

A I can't recall.

Q Well, the affidavit was notarized in June of 1988. I can read it, see, the June 25th, that's about three or four months ago, is it your testimony that you can't recall today what you were asked three or four months ago?

A This looks like a summary of it.

Q It looks like a summary of it?

A Yes.

Q Is it signed?

A Yes.

Q Didn't you read it before you signed it?

A Yes.

Q All right. Now, before I asked you any more questions, I want you to read the affidavit to the jury.

A Why don't you read it? There's a lot of big words there I can't pronounce.

Q Okay, fine. All right. I'll read it and if I misstate anything — I didn't mean to embarrass you but If I —

A You didn't embarrass me. It's just that it will be faster that way.

[The affidavit is read into the record.]

Q In that affidavit, and as I understand by your testimony that you read this before you signed it; is that correct?

A Yes.

Q Did you actually dictate the words or was it after a conversation that you had with whoever from the New Jersey Division of Gaming Enforcement, that they prepared the affidavit and brought it back to you for your signature?

A They prepared it and brought it back.

Q Now, you told us that — the members of the jury, a few moments ago, in response to one of my questions, that they, whoever the representatives were from the State of New Jersey, asked you about Nat-Nat; is that correct?

A Yes, yes.

Q Well, this entire affidavit is about Bayshore, isn't it?

A Yes.

Q Would it surprise you — now, did you also understand from the people from the State of New Jersey who spoke with you, that the reason they wanted this affidavit is so that Bayshore Construction, Bayshore Company, the company of Joseph Merlino, the son of Lawrence Merlino, could not engage in casino construction, did they tell you that's the reason?

A They said to me, I explained to them that Larry had this place Nat Nat and he used other companies to get work down the shore, and that's all I explained to them. Okay.

Q Well, did they explain to you, as paragraph seven suggests, that the reason they wanted to talk to you, I mean, this wasn't really a law enforcement agency, in that nature of that word, that they were investigating Bayshore —

A Excuse me, I thought they were a law enforcement agency.

Q Okay. All right. They were a law enforcement agency. I'll agree with you, that their purpose was to get you to take an affidavit that Lawrence Merlino was somehow involved with Bayshore and was somehow getting money from Bayshore so that Joseph Merlino, the owner of Bayshore, could not engage in business with the casino industry, did they explain that to you?

A No, they didn't explain it that way.

Q Did you understand that?

A No. They didn't explain it to me that way.

Q They didn't explain that to you.

A I told them, as far as I knew, Joseph Merlino, Larry's son, had nothing to do, except was a worker, when I knew them. I don't know what he does now.

Q Well, is it the —

A That's what I explained to them.

Q Would you agree that this entire affidavit —

A They came back with this.

Q — and your indication in there, that you had spoken with Lawrence Merlino from 1982 through 1986, leaves one who reads it to believe that it has to do with Lawrence Merlino's involvement with Bayshore? [The Court rules on an objection.]

Q Somebody wrote the affidavit and you signed it?

A Yes.

Q Did you make any attempt to correct any of it?

A When I gave — [The Court rules on another objection.]

THE WITNESS: I explained that — again, I'll explain that I only knew what Larry did. I had no knowledge of what Joseph Merlino did. The only think I knew about Joseph Merlino is that he worked in a company. When I read this affidavit, to me it doesn't say that Joseph Merlino did anything wrong. It says, that Larry was involved in construction and that's what I thought I was signing, Larry. Joseph Merlino, as far as I know, worked in a rod company. He was a young kid and he never did anything wrong. I don't know what that's supposed to mean. I know what I took it to mean.

Q Well, did you know — did you tell them that you knew about Bayshore from 1982?

A No, I said that he used various companies. I said, one of the companies he used was a brother-in-law, an ex-brother-in-law and I didn't remember the name. And they said, was it Bayshore? I said, it could be Bayshore. I wasn't sure. Again, I said, I did not know what Joseph Merlino did and this doesn't say that Joseph Merlino did anything.

Q Is it your testimony then, that the name Bayshore Construction Company was a name that was sort of foreign to you and was suggested in response to a question from the New Jersey Division of Gaming Enforcement? Was it the Bayshore you said it could have been?

A I said, it could have been, yes.

Q And then you signed the affidavit where it says, Bayshore, doesn't it?

A Yes.

Q Well, did you say to them, hey, I'm not sure it was Bayshore?

A I read this affidavit and to me this affidavit doesn't accuse him of anything only that he was in the Rebar business, and I don't even know it was Rebar. I though it was ironwork business.

Q Whatever your thoughts were as to whether it accused anyone of anything, did you believe that when you signed the affidavit, which you took under oath, that what was conveying in the affidavit, that you signed and it was notarized in your presence, was completely 100 percent the truth?

A As far as I'm concerned it was the truth, yes.

Q You just said that you didn't even know the name Bayshore until it was suggested to you, didn't you?

A No, I didn't say that. I said that he used other companies and they said was one of them Bayshore? I said it sounds like one of them, yes. Okay. Again, I signed the paper, still — it still to me doesn't say that he did anything wrong in this paper.

Q Okay, that's your feeling. Would it surprise you to know that Bayshore, the company in this affidavit, wasn't incorporated until December of 1985? [Objection ruled on by the Court.]

Q All right. Do you know Bayshore was incorporated?

A No, I don't.

Q Do you know whether or not from the time that you — during the period of time that you say that you had occasion to speak with Lawrence Merlino, whether Bayshore ever obtained a construction job with the casino industry or even more so, ever received any funds from the casino industry?

A Bayshore was incorporated when I spoke to Larry Merlino. Larry Merlino was under me in early '86 and he had to explain to me what jobs he had and how he was getting them. So, Bayshore was incorporated at the time I was speaking to him. So, when the guy said to me, is it Bayshore? I said, it could be. Larry was supposedly reporting the job that he was doing through me in early of '86. So, yes, if it was incorporated in '85 then I heard it in '85. I didn't know when it was incorporated.

Q But did Larry have to report to you when he got money from those jobs too?

A As far as he told me, he never got no money from the jobs.

Q Well, that's not what you said in the affidavit?

A He didn't get no money from the jobs when I was — when he was reporting to me. Larry didn't give me any money from the jobs.

Q Well, will you look at paragraph five of this affidavit, Mr. DelGiorno, just look at it? Do you want me to read it to you again?

A No, I'm reading it.

Q Does it say in there that Lawrence Merlino — [Objection ruled on by the Court.]

[The Court admonishes the attorneys]

Q All right. I apologize, Mr. DelGiorno, but does it take a bright person to read something and understand that it's not 100 percent accurate?

A Yes. . . . (emphasis added). [R-3]

As indicated, Lawrence Merlino and the other defendants were convicted on November 19, 1988, of all charges in the above federal matter. The federal government was unwilling to release Thomas DelGiorno for testimony in this matter. Lawrence Merlino did not testify in the federal criminal trial.

Based on DelGiorno's testimony in the matter of U.S. v. Nicodemo Scarfo et al., I FIND as a matter of fact that Thomas DelGiorno spoke to Lawrence Merlino after December of 1985 and was advised by him that he used various companies in Atlantic City to obtain construction jobs. I further find that there is insufficient believable evidence to find that Lawrence Merlino specifically mentioned Bayshore Rebar in his conversations with DelGiorno and also find that there is no evidence whatsoever that Lawrence Merlino received payments from Bayshore or its principals. Bayshore initially objected to the admission of DelGiorno's affidavit on the grounds that he was a "self-proclaimed murderer, perjurer, drug-dealer, racketeer and all around criminal" (Bayshore's letter brief of June 30, 1988, at 1). Although that may be an accurate statement of DelGiorno's resume, Bayshore also offered DelGiorno's testimony on cross-examination as set forth above. In that testimony, DelGiorno, while unsure as to whether Lawrence Merlino had specifically mentioned Bayshore, did recall with sufficient clarity that Merlino had stated that he used various construction companies to get jobs in Atlantic City and that he spoke to Merlino in early 1986 after Bayshore was incorporated. I therefore FIND that DelGiorno's statements on cross-examination in the Federal matter are, read together with his affidavit, sufficiently credible to support the above finding of fact.

The current president and 75-percent owner of Bayshore is Phyllis Mistie, a former spouse of Lawrence Merlino. The couple had five children, separated approximately 14 years ago and is now divorced. Lawrence Merlino purchased the home at 15 North Decatur Avenue in Margate in response to Phyllis Mistie's request that he provide a place for her and the children to live. She stated that he sometimes visited the children at that address and she acknowledged that Nat Nat, Inc., was operated from the family home. Lawrence Merlino also obtained work for his eldest son, Joseph Merlino: first, five years ago, a summer job in construction with Scarf, Inc.; and later, regular full-time employment with Nat Nat, Inc. Ms. Mistie also testified that her daughter Kimberly worked as a secretary for Nat Nat at the 15 North Decatur Avenue address and that Lawrence Merlino transferred Nat Nat's business to that address from 28 North Georgia Avenue in Atlantic City after Kimberly had a child. Phyliis Mistie claimed that she had a difficult time at first living in Atlantic City with her former husband and that she was something of a "nervous wreck" (1T,148). She stated that Joseph Merlino decided to go into business for himself; he incorporated Bayshore Rebar, Inc., and began to operate the business out of the 15 North Decatur address. She acknowledges that Bayshore and Nat-Nat use the same insurance agent, C.J. Adams, and she conceded that Lawrence Merlino had paid phone bills for the 15 North Decatur address, including calls made for Bayshore, on several occasions (1T,153,164). Phyllis Mistie claims that prior to July 1986, she worked briefly as a secretary for Bayshore but held no office or interest (1T121, 6-25). Although Ms. Mistie appeared to understand the nature of the company's business in a general sense, she was uncertain as to details of the work and unfamiliar with the scope of the company's involvement in at least one rebar job being done on a bridge (1T 119). Ms. Mistie also claims that she had no indication that Lawrence Merlino was exercising any influence over Bayshore or Joseph Merlino, and stated that ". . . my son wouldn't listen to anything he says. His son knows more than his father" (1T151, 22-23).

Joseph Merlino concedes that his father did get him a summer and weekend job five years ago with Scarf, Inc., which is owned and operated by the nephew of Nicodemo Scarfo, Phillip Leonetti. Joseph Merlino also admits that he later worked for Nat Nat, Inc., which was operated by his father and formerly by his uncle, Salvatore Merlino, who is reputed to be the underboss of the Scarfo crime family. In the course of working for Nat

Nat, Joseph Merlino met Nat Nat foreman Rocco Bunodono and Nat Nat's bookkeeper, Joseph Golatto and both of these men later provided professional services to Bayshore. Even after Bayshore had been established in December 1985, Joseph Merlino continued to receive payments from Nat Nat. On or about March 10, 1986, he received a $15,000 check from Lawrence Merlino, president of Nat Nat, which check was characterized as a 1985 bonus check (P-40). In 1984, he had also received another bonus of approximately $37,000 from his father for work performed for Nat Nat (P-39). In March 1986, Joseph Merlino purchased a condominium in Margate from Lawrence Merlino, a condominium which Nat Nat had previously purchased from Scarf, Inc. (P-34 to P-39). Joseph Merlino discussed this purchase with his father and claims that he sought to acquire the condominium for investment and tax shelter purposes (2T 226). There is no evidence that this condominium played any part in the operation of Bayshore or that the purchase of the property was in any way improper or irregular. There is also no evidence of any further bonuses paid to Joseph Merlino from Lawrence Merlino and Nat Nat subsequent to 1986. Joseph Merlino also claimed, and the Division did not dispute, that some of the bonus monies were used by him to repay existing loans from Nat Nat (2T 239), and that part of the 1986 bonus was applied to the down payment for the condominium. After leaving employment with NatNat in 1985, Joseph Merlino worked as a general foreman in construction with the United Carpenters of Glennside, Pennsylvania, and later for G&H Steel and M&M Construction.

Bayshore Rebar, Inc., of New Jersey was incorporated on December 13, 1985, listing Joseph N. Merlino as incorporater and Director, and it was located at 15 North Decatur Avenue in Margate (P-29). Joseph Merlino's sister Kimberly also worked for Bayshore when the company was located at 15 North Decatur Avenue. Since that time, the company, as well as the family, has moved to a ventnor address which was purchased by Joseph Merlino and in which Lawrence Merlino has no proven financial interest. Joseph Merlino is also no longer president of the company but continues to serve as vice-president and part owner. He claims that this change was necessary to enable him to receive his journeyman papers. At the time of hearing, Phyllis Mistie was functioning as Bayshore's president. Rocco Bunodono, formerly a foreman for Nat Nat and a long-time friend of Lawrence Merlino, has been Bayshore's foreman since March 1986 and has played an instrumental role in the company, including filing an application for a construction contractor's license on its behalf in September 1986 after Joseph Merlino's application had been rejected because of his comparatively tender age (P-10).

Joseph Merlino testified and confirmed his mother's account of the origins and operation of Bayshore, as well as his prior experience with Scarf, Inc., and Nat Nat, Inc. Neither Phyllis Mistie nor Joseph Merlino contest the factual allegations set forth in the Division's complaint of January 6, 1987, although they claim, and the Division does not dispute, that Bayshore has since moved its operations and changed its officers, as discussed above. In a statement given to the Division on November 20, 1986, Joseph Merlino acknowledged that he had occasionally consulted with Lawrence Merlino as to Bayshore matters and, in particular, had asked him whether a contractor named Feriozzi, with whom Bayshore was doing business, was a "nice guy" who "pays his bills" and is "a good payer" (P-31 at 22, 23, 26). Joseph Merlino denies that Lawrence Merlino has gotten any jobs for Bayshore and the Division offers no direct evidence proving otherwise, with the exception of the above testimony of Thomas DelGiorno.

Phyllis Mistie further denied that the company had received any loans from Lawrence Merlino or made any payments to him. She stated that the family moved some eight months ago to a house in Ventnor which Joseph Merlino purchased and from which Bayshore now operates. Nat Nat continues to operate from the 15 North Decatur address and Kimberly Merlino is still employed in that business. Ms. Mistie testified that she became president and 75 percent owner of Bayshore approximately six months before the hearing in this matter because Joseph Merlino wanted to qualify as a journeyman and felt that he was precluded from doing this while serving as president. She stated that he was still serving as vice-president, as of the hearing (1T 115). She also claimed that an additional motive for her assuming the presidency of Bayshore was to qualify the company for minority work under affirmative action guidelines (T1 116). An insurance agent for C.J. Adams, Deborah Wehran, who handled insurance for both Bayshore and Nat Nat, testified that she had discussed Nat Nat with Phyllis Mistie whenever her daugther was absent or otherwise unavailable and noted that Phyllis was listed as a contact for Nat Nat (2T 207 - 19)(P-25). She also claimed that Phyllis Mistie had explained that she was not employed by or part of Nat Nat.

Neither Phyllis Mistie nor Joseph Merlino disputes the allegations made by the Division in its complaint. Joseph Merlino denied that the name Bayshore Rebar, Inc., which had previously been used by his father to incorporate a Florida company, was adopted at Lawrence Merlino's suggestion.

One of the first construction jobs obtained by Bayshore was from cement contractor Joseph Feriozzi, who was involved in construction of a parking garage at Resorts International Hotel and Casino in 1986. Ferriozzi was one of the two big contractors in Atlantic City at the time. Bunodono was working on the job, which was being performed by C.J.S. Co., a structural construction firm. Because C.J.S. was not a rebar company and consequently was having some difficulties adequately manning the job (1T 66; 2T 100-02), Feriozzi was unhappy with its performance on the job. Joseph Merlino claims that he became aware of C.J.S.'s problems on the job through Feriozzi's complaints to a "street man," who was responsible for recruiting workers on construction projects. Joseph Merlino asked Feriozzi if Bayshore could take over the job. Rocco Bunodono was present when this request was made. Feriozzi agreed and Merlino asked Bunodono, whom he had known from working with Nat Nat, Inc., to serve as foreman on the completion of the Resorts parking garage. Feriozzi agreed to pay Bayshore on a bi-monthly basis, which was a somewhat usual arrangements but Feriozzi consented because Bayshore was a relatively new company (2T 83,6-25). Bayshore offered a certification from Feriozzi, who also testified, which stated the following:

> 8. Bayshore Rebar has been the low bidder on a number of projects including Bally's Park Place and the Tropicana Hotel and has done sub-contracting work on these projects for L. Feriozzi Concrete. Additionally, Bayshore Rebar has sub-contracted at Resorts International Garage after the default of another contractor.
> 9. The hard work, diligence and quality of work exhibited by Joseph Merlino and Bayshore Rebar is exceptional.
>
> 10. I have found, through my dealings with Bayshore Rebar, that Joseph Merlino is a dedicated and sincere individual. He is a person of good character, honesty and integrity.
> 11. I have no perception or belief that respondent, Bayshore Rebar, or its President, Joseph Merlino, is in any way involved or associated with organized criminal activity or Lawrence Merlino.

12. Furthermore, I have no perception that respondent, Bayshore Rebar, or its President, Joseph Merlino, is a "front" for organized criminal activity or Lawrence Merlino. [R-7]

Feriozzi also certified that he has not been the subject of any charges, indictments or accusations in his forty years of doing construction business in Atlantic City. Nat Nat had been previously employed by Feriozzi on a variety of casino jobs. This working relationship was interrupted in 1979 when Lawrence Merlino was accused, along with Leonetti and Scarfo, of murdering a cement contractor named Vincent Falcone. Upon learning of the murder charges against Lawrence Merlino, Feriozzi stated that he was a "sick pup," and did notknow what to do or what he had gotten himself into (2T 95,16-20; 96). Merlino, Scarfo and Leonetti were later acquitted of the charge and Nat Nat subsequently performed more work for Feriozzi. In 1986, when Joseph Merlino asked if he could take over the C.J.S. job at the Resorts parking garage, Feriozzi asked him if Lawrence Merlino was his father. Ferriozzi testified that he felt concerned that Lawrence Merlino might become involved (2T 117, 124-25). Feriozzi also expressed to Joseph Merlino his desire that he not have anything to do with Nat Nat, but later became confident that Joseph was working on his own. Feriozzi denies having been contacted by Lawrence Merlino, or anyone else other than Joseph Merlino, concerning Bayshore's request for work. Rocco Bunodono's presence as foreman also gave confidence to Feriozzi, because of Bunodono's reputation as an effective foreman who knew how to get a job done (2T 98,11-25). After agreeing to work as foreman on the Feriozzi job, Bunodono also assisted Joseph Merlino by completing an application for a construction contractor's license on September 11, 1986, and listing himself as the company's superintendent. Joseph Merlino had previously applied but had been rejected because of his age and relative inexperience. Joseph Merlino denies having asked his father for any help in obtaining work with Feriozzi at the Resorts garage job or at any other location, but acknowledges that he asked Lawrence Merlino who Feriozzi was and that he wanted to know if he was reliable with payments (P-31 at 22 to 26, 168).

Rocco Bunodono testified that his function as foreman for Bayshore is to "see that the job runs smooth" and indicates that he has known Joseph Merlino since the latter was a small child (1T 40,6-22). Bunodono has also known Lawrence Merlino for over twenty years: they grew up in the same neighborhood, and Merlino was the best man at his wedding. He claims that he saw little of Lawrence Merlino for some ten years after he left Philadelphia and before Lawrence Merlino became active in construction in Atlantic City. When they renewed their acquaintance, Bunodono worked as foreman for Nat Nat for a least six months while completing a rebar job on the Ocean Club, and thereafter worked with G & H Construction, as well as with M & M Construction, a minority contractor. Lawrence Merlino, as president of Nat Nat, visited G & H job sites on occasion to talk to his son and a nephew employed by that company. The Division offered surveillance photographs taken by lieutenant Edward Hepburn of the Atlantic City Prosecutor's Office showing Lawrence Merlino and Rocco Bunodono together at various construction sites including the Taj Mahal Casino project (P-1). Lieutenant Hepburn testified that he conducted surveillance after receiving a report that the M & M Company (allegedly a minority outfit) was actually being run by Lawrence Merlino. The photos were taken in April 1985 and show Lawrence Merlino and Rocco Bunodono on the construction site (P-1 through P-4). The photographs also show Lawrence Merlino on the steel at a hotel/casino. Lieutenant Hepburn had no knowledge as to any involvment of Joseph Merlino in his father's reputed criminal affiliations with the Scarfo crime family. Bunodono denies that Lawrence Merlino visited him at job sites, other than those involving Nat Nat. He concedes that Lawrence Merlino visited him when he was working for M&M, but states that he has never seen Lawrence Merlino on a job with Bayshore and that he has no knowledge of any contact between him and his son's company.

The Division also offered copies of a mortgage and residential loan application in connection with the purchase of the Ventnor property from which Bayshore now does business, which states that Joseph Merlino was married at the time of application in 1987. This was not the case. Joseph Merlino denies having made such a representation in connection with the mortgage application, but concedes that he signed the loan application forms containing the false statement (3T 35,1-4).

There is no dispute as to the above facts, except as indicated, and I so FIND.

ISSUES

The issues to be resolved are:

(1) whether the Division of Gaming Enforcement has proven by a preponderance of the believable evidence that Bayshore is associated with a career offender or a career offender cartel in such a manner as to create a reasonable belief that the association is of such a nature as to be inimical to the policy of the casino control act in the gaming operations within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f so as to disqualify Bayshore from holding a vendor registration or casino service industry license;

(2) whether Bayshore Rebar, Inc., has established its eligibility by clear and convincing evidence for a casino service industry license pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2(a)2, including the requirement that it establish its reputation of good character, honesty and integrity pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c), and that of its officers pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.14.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

(1) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f (Inimical Association)

The state of New Jersey extends strict regulation through the Casino Control Act to all persons, locations, practices and associations related to the operation of licensed casino enterprises and to all related service industries. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6). The legislative findings underlying the Act also provide that:

> [l]egalized casino gambling in New Jersey can attain, maintain and retain integrity, public confidence and trust, and remain compatible with the general public interest only under such a system of control and regulation as insures, so far as practicable, the exclusion from participation therein of persons with known criminal records, habits or associations. . . . N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(7).

Moreover, participation in casino operations is deemed to be a revocable privilege conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of individual licensees or registrants. The New Jersey Legislature also declared that:

> [s]ince casino operations are especially sensitive and in need of public control and supervision, and since it is vital to the interests of the State to prevent entry, directly or indirectly, into such operations or the ancillary industries regulated by this act of persons who have pursued economic gains in an occupational manner or context which are in violation of the criminal or civil public policies of this State, the regulatory and investigatory powers and duties shall be exercised to the fullest extent consistent with the law to avoid entry of such persons into the casino operations or the ancillary industries regulated by this act . . . . N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(9).

This paramount concern with sealing off, to the extent possible, the casino industry and the vital service industries that serve it from infiltration and domination by organized crime is effectuated by the criteria established for disqualification of applicants seeking casino licenses:

> The Commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis on any of the following criteria . . . .
> > f. The identification of the applicant or any person who is required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license as a career offender or a member of a career offender cartel or an associate of a career offender or career offender cartel in such a manner which creates a reasonable belief that the association is of such a nature as to be inimical to the policy of this act and to gaming operations. For purposes of this section, career offender shall be defined as any person whose behavior is pursued in an occupational manner or context for the purpose of economic gain, ultilizing such methods as are deemed criminal violations of the public policy of this State. A career offender cartel shall be defined as any group of persons who operate together as career offenders; N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f [emphasis added].

The Casino Control Commission has defined the phrase "inimical to the interest of the State of New Jersey or of licensed gaming" to mean "adverse to the public confidence and trust in the credibility, integrity and stability of casino gaming operations and in the strict regulatory process created by the Casino Control Act." N.J.A.C. 19:48-1.1.

At issue here is whether the Division has proved that Bayshore Rebar or its officers are associated with a career offender or career offender cartel in such a manner as to create a reasonable belief that the association is of such a nature as to be inimical to the policy of the Act and to gaming operations and thereby is disqualified. The above provision concerning inimical associations was considered by the Appellate Division of the Superior Court of New Jersey in a 1985 case where a number of members of a union in Atlantic City were found to be inimically associated with Nicodemo Scarfo, within the meaning of the act. See, In the Matter of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union Local 54, 203 N.J. Super. 297 (App. Div. 1985), certif. denied 102 N.J. 352 (1985), cert. denied 475 U.S. 1085 (1986). In the Local 54 case, the Appellate Division upheld the Commission's finding of disqualification under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f, where the Division had produced evidence illustrating the association between union employees and Scarfo. That evidence consisted of:

(1) a telephone list seized from Scarfo after his arrest for the murder of Vicent Falcone which contained names and addresses of several Local 54 employees, some listed in code;

(2) a note found in Scarfo's dresser drawer on the same occasion indicating Scarfo's interests in the activities and control of Local 54;

(3) the fact that the bail for Scarfo, Leonetti and Lawrence Merlino in the Vincent Falcone murder matter was paid by union employees and their relatives;

(4) the fact that one of the union employees put his house up as property bail in connection with those arrests;

(5) the immunized testimony of Joseph Salerno in the trial of Scarfo, Leonetti and Lawrence Merlino for the murder of concrete contractor Vincent Falcone as to the fact that Salerno had overhead Scarfo say that he had control of unions and had obtained union positions for certain persons. Salerno's testimony did not refer to any conversations between Scarfo and union employees which specifically referred to Local 54 by name;

(6) evidence of connections between Local 54 business dealings and persons or firms tied to Scarfo (e.g., the same insurance broker and real estate agent; the hiring by Local 54 of a firm that had put up bail for Scarfo, Leonetti and Lawrence Merlino; use of the same car rental company). See, 203 N.J Super. at 310 to 316.

The Appellate Division rejected the argument that the Division had failed to prove the exertion of any actual influence over union affairs by Scarfo and found that ample circumstantial evidence of such influence had been introduced to support the conclusion that the association was inimical and thus disqualifying. 203 N.J. Super. at 321. The New Jersey Supreme Court has also affirmed that the Commission may act to prevent possible inimical influences on licensees or applicants and need not wait until such influence is exerted. See, In re Application of Boardwalk Regency, 90 N.J. 361,372 (1982). The Appellate Division also went on to reject the First Amendment freedom of association claim made by the Local 54 employees and upheld the "inimical" criterion against the charge that it was void for vagueness.

The Local 54 case did not involve family relationships between licensees and career offenders. That issue was dealt with by the Appellate Division in the racing case of Niglio v. New Jersey Racing Commission, 158 N.J. Super. 182 (App. Div. 1978). In Niglio, the Appellate Division upheld a decision by the Racing Commission suspending the racing license of a person married to another person who was disqualified from participating in racing because of criminal connections. Because of evidence submitted of the spouse's extensive association with the person disqualified, as well as of her financial dependence, the disqualification was based on the association and financial dependence, not on the fact of marriage. 158 N.J. Super. at 186.

Another case dealing with family ties is D'Ascenso v. Division of Gaming Enforcement, 2 N.J.A.R. 92 (1980), by the Honorable Joseph Fidler, ALJ, in which he concluded that a cocktail waitress licensed by the Commission was not disqualifed under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f by her father's status as a career offender, because she had had only infrequent and insignificant contacts with him since in her childhood. Given the nature of her cocktail waitress function at the casino, this minimal association was seen to pose no appreciable threat to the proper functioning of legalized gambling. D'Ascenso's relationship with a live-in boyfriend who was also engaged in criminal activities was found to present no bar to her licensure and in light of the fact that the boyfriend did not exercise any significant influence or control over her and, to the contrary, as it appeared that she had some beneficial and restraining effect on him, as occasionally happens in these matters. 2 N.J.A.R. at 95. There is no evidence of such a beneficial effect on Lawrence Merlino.

The Division argues in this case that it has shown an inimical association with Lawrence Merlino sufficient to disqualify Bayshore and its principals. In particular, the Division asserts that the affidavit and testimony of Thomas DelGiorno's provides direct (albeit hearsay) evidence of Merlino's intention to use Bayshore to get construction business in Atlantic City. The Division argues that DelGiorno's statements are credible, despite his background in crime, a background which rivals and probably exceeds that of Lawrence Merlino. It notes that no promises were made to DelGiorno in exchange or as a condition for this testimony.

Apart from DelGiorno's statements as to Lawrence Merlino's involvement, the Division conceded that there was "no smoking gun", to use a phrase that DAG Steven Cirillo borrowed from another context, but it argued that there is an accumulation of factors (as in the Local 54 case) adding up to an inimical association of a non-familial nature. The Division first notes that Lawrence Merlino has long been associated with the rebar field and has owned and worked with several companies, including Nat Nat and the Floridian version of Bayshore Rebar, Inc. It notes that Lawrence Merlino's interests in the New Jersey Bayshore is a natural extension of his prior activities and argues that he has been seen on various construction sites visiting Rocco Bunodono, who is foreman and superintendent for Bayshore and who was formerly a forman with Nat Nat, as well as a personal friend of Lawrence Merlino for many years. The Division notes that Bayshore initially operated rent-free from a home located at 15 North Decatur Avenue in Margate, which home was owned by Lawrence Merlino and out of which Nat Nat also operated and continues to operate. The Division notes that the family phone and utility bill for the 15 Decatur Avenue address were occasionally paid by Lawrence Merlino. The Division also emphasizes the business dealings between Joseph Merlino and Lawrence Merlino, including the purchase of a condominium formerly owned by Nat Nat and Scarf, Inc., which purchase was partly made possible through DelGiorno's bonuses provided by Merlino and Nat Nat. The Division also notes that Bayshore, in addition to adopting the same name used by Lawrence Merlino for another company, relied on the same insurance agency, C. J. Adams, and also utilized the services of the same bookkeeper and foreman, who had previously worked for Nat Nat. The Division cites evidence that Phyllis Mistie Merlino was, on some occasions, involved in the business dealings of Nat Nat while living at the 15 North Decatur address. Also noted is the fact that Joseph Merlino's sister Kimberly runs the operations of Nat Nat during her father's incarceration. The Division argues that the relocation of the Merlino family does not negate the various connections between Bayshore and Lawrence Merlino and Nat Nat in that the inimical association between Bayshore and Lawrence Merlino has not been severed, although it may have been better hidden and disguised. Considering DelGiorno's affidavit as well as and all of the circumstantial evidence, the Division contends that it has met the standard set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f for disqualification of Bayshore.

Counsel for respondents, Francis Hartman, Esq., sees the Division's case as not only lacking a smoking gun but also consisting largely of smoke. He argues that the State has, on the most tenuous of factual allegations, sought to darkly cloud the blood relationship between Joseph Merlino and his father and imply an inimical business association between them which has no basis in fact. Counsel for respondent argues, first (and the Division does not dispute), that the State has shown no de jure relationship between Bayshore and Lawrence Merlino in that the latter holds no stock or office in and has not received any payments from Bayshore. As to the rest of the underlying de facto aspects of the Division's evidence, respondent admits that Joseph Merlino worked briefly as a laborer for Scarf Inc., when he was 16 and argues that he had no further connection with that company. As to Joseph Merlino's latter job with Nat Nat, respondent claims that there is nothing unusual about a son working for his father and that the sins of the father should not fall upon his children. It is also not unusual, respondent argues, for a person to start a business from his or her home, as Joseph Merlino did at 15 North Decatur Avenue. Respondent notes that Lawrence Merlino did not at any time live in the home, and that the fact that he may have occasionally paid for the phone and utility bills is only incidental to the fact that his family and former spouse lived in the home and he chose to shoulder some of their financial obligations. Respondent notes that Nat Nat was not originally located at 15 North Decatur, but operated out of 28 North Georgia Avenue in Margate and was moved to the Margate address only for the convenience of Kimberly Merlino, who was one of its principal employees. As to Phyllis Mistie Merlino, respondent notes that she had only minimal involvement in the affairs of Nat Nat and does not have an amicable relationship with Lawrence Merlino. Concerning Joseph Merlino's efforts to get casino work, respondent argues that there is no evidence that Lawrence Merlino at any time did anything to get work for Bayshore. It characterizes Joseph Merlino's efforts to establish a business as the product of a young man's desire to succeed on his own and describes the opportunity to do so given by Joseph Ferriozzi as a legitimate business transaction in which Ferriozzi decided to give the young man a chance. Respondent also notes, and the Division does not dispute, that, beyond the criminal charges that are not dealt with in this decision, no criminal charges have ever been brought against Joseph Merlino. Joseph Merlino's purchase of property from Nat Nat, respondent argues, an arm's-length financial transaction which was in no way unlawful an improper, and which played no role in the operation of Bayshore's business. Respondent also raises and dismisses the possibility that Joseph Merlino was given bonuses and allowed to purchase property in order to shield money belonging to Lawrence Merlino or Nat Nat from possible forfeiture under RICO, the federal law pertaining to racketeer-influenced corrupt organizations. Counsel for respondent also deems DelGiorno's affidavit as unworthy of belief and argues that it is further weakened by DelGiorno's statements on cross-examination in the matter of United States v. Scarfo, et al.

As to DelGiorno's statements, I note that hearsay is admissable in this proceeding and may provide the residuum of proof required. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-107a(6); State v. Merlino, infra. DelGiorno's affidavit, as clarified by his testimony, is credible. Similiar immunized testimony was found to constitute part of the inimical association in the Local 54 case discussed above. Although DelGiorno's testimony in this case was uncertain as to whether Bayshore was specifically mentioned by Lawrence Merlino, Salerno's testimony in the Local 54 case also did not contain any recollection of a specific reference to Local 54 by name. See, 203 N.J. Super. at 318.

Beyond DelGiorno's statements, there is ample evidence of association between Lawrence Merlino and Bayshore Rebar, Inc., and its officers and foreman. Bayshore was formed shortly after a company of the same name owned by Lawrence Merlino was dissolved in Florida, and this similarity of names is more symbolic than coincidental given the rest of the connections. Joseph Merlino, who was Bayshore's initial president and owner, cut his teeth in the construction business with Scarf, Inc., which has ties to Nicodemo Scarfo through its owner Phillip Leonetti, and he later worked at his father's side at Nat Nat, Inc. While it is quite common for sons and, more recently, daughters, to follow their father's footsteps into business, the connection between Nat Nat and Bayshore was, at least at the outset of Bayshore's operation, quite close. The company shared the same residential office space, the same insurance agency, the same bookkeeper, and Bayshore relied heavily on Rocco Bunodono, who had formerly worked with Nat Nat, as its foreman. The importance of Bunodono's extensive role in this matter as a connection between Lawrence Merlino and Bayshore is further emphasized by the photographic evidence of the two men together at construction sites. Bunodono was also instrumental in obtaining Bayshore's initial license from Atlantic City, as well as one of its first substantial construction jobs from Joseph Feriozzi, who testified that Bunodono's presence reassured him that the job would run smoothly. Feriozzi also testified that he had felt fear, at least for his business if not for himself, when he had earlier learned of charges lodged against Lawrence Merlino for the murder of Vincent Falcone, an Atlantic City cement contractor. While there is no evidence that Lawrence Merlino intervened to get business for Bayshore, Feriozzi was concerned with his possible involvement. Joseph Merlino denies having generally discussed Bayshore business matters with his father, but he admits that he asked him whether Feriozzi was "a good payer." Joseph Merlino thus demonstrated that he turned to his father for advice on at least that occasion and it is not unlikely, given their prior working relationship, that he did so on other occasions. But this case does not rest on that sort of speculation. The facts show that Joseph Merlino consulted with and dealt with his father in other financial matters, such as the purchase of the Margate condominium, which was made possible by substantial bonuses given by the father to the son. Although this real estate deal was above-board and regular in all respects, it tends to establish financial dealings between Joseph Merlino and his father. The fact that Lawrence Merlino also gave his son Joseph bonuses which totaled some $50,000 also suggests that Joesph Merlino was, at least to that extent, financially dependent upon his father and Nat Nat, despite the fact that he worked for United Carpenters and G & H Construction and had started Bayshore's business operations. Was Lawrence Merlino simply trying to do right by his oldest son or were these transactions some nefarious attempt to conceal Lawrence Merlino's assets from the reach of the federal government? The proofs submitted do not supply an answer to this question but the fact of the bonuses and the real estate deal, as well as the other business connections proven, establishes an association between Joseph Merlino and his father which goes far beyond one of simple blood relation. The common business dealings of Bayshore and Nat Nat are similar to those which were found, in the case of Local 54, to constitute an inimical association.

As stated, the Division's burden in this case is to demonstrate that Bayshore, through its officers or principle employees, is associated with Lawrence Merlino, a career offender and a member of a career offender cartel, in such a manner as to create a reasonable belief that the association is of such a nature as to be inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act and gaming operations. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f. The respondents contend that the State has shown much association between themselves and Lawrence Merlino, but that none of it is inimical because it is based on the natural and constitutionally protected connection of family. They point to the absence of any evidence showing actual influence by Lawrence Merlino over Bayshore. Such an argument was also raised, and rejected, in the Local 54 case, where the Appellate Division found ample circumstantial evidence of Scarfo's influence over union employees. 203 N.J. Super. at 321. Even without DelGiorno's statements, there is, in this case, ample circumstantial evidence of the external influence of Lawrence Merlino on Bayshore

Rebar, Inc., and that evidence ranges from the choice of name of the company to payment of bills and rent for its initial location, to the selection of insurance companies, bookkeeper and foreman and also to advice given by Lawrence Merlino to Joseph Merlino as to the conduct of the business and as to the purchase of real estate (unrelated to the business) which was financed, in part, by very generous bonuses provided by the father to the son. Joseph Merlino is not merely Lawrence Merlino's son in the context of this case. Their relationship is far beyond that. Their business dealings have become inextricably linked with their familial connection. If Joseph Merlino were not Lawrence Merlino's son but merely a social or business associate, the evidence in this case would be sufficient to support a conclusion that the two men are associated and that this association is of such a nature that it suggests influence and control of Bayshore by a career offender and therefore is inimical. The fact that Lawrence Merlino is related to Joseph Merlino by blood and that he was once related to Phyllis Mistie by marriage should not be allowed to obscure the nature of the business association which has formed between them or to put it beyond the reach of State regulation in the highly sensitive area of casino operations. Family ties, without greater association, cannot provide a basis for disqualification under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f, but they do not preclude a finding of disqualification if other evidence of an inimical association, beyond that of relation by blood or marriage, is proven. See, e.g., Niglio v. New Jersey Racing Commission. Such proof is present in sufficient amount in this case. This matter is also distinguishable from the case of D'Ascenso v. Div. of Gaming Enforcement because there the contacts between the licensee and her father were infrequent and insignificant and posed no appreciable threat to the proper function of legalized gambling, especially in light of the licensee's function as a cocktail waitress. Here, Joseph Merlino's contacts with his father are substantial and on going, and while they embrace the usual aspects the relationship between a father and his son, they also are characterized by extensive business associations that go beyond the family tie and pose an appreciable threat to the operations of a casino service industry. Lawrence Merlino is now and has since July 1987 been incarcerated awaiting trial on charges of murder and racketeering does not diminish this association. It is not unknown for inmates to control enterprises far beyond the prison walls. The fact that Lawrence Merlino is in jail because he is unable to make bail also provides a most compelling incentive and motive for him to be involved in Bayshore's business affairs. As the respondent notes, there is no evidence, beyond DelGiorno's statements, that Lawrence

Merlino is directly so involved or that he has received any monies from Bayshore or from Joseph Merlino. However, such evidence is not necessary to reach a conclusion that their association is of such a nature as to create a reasonable belief that it is inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act and gaming operations. I CONCLUDE the evidence submitted, including DelGiorno's statements, as to the association between Bayshore Rebar, Inc., and Lawrence Merlino is sufficient to disqualify Bayshore under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f and that Bayshore's vendor registration issued under N.J.S.A. 5:12-104b should be revoked.

(2) Casino Service Industry Application

The remaining issue is whether Bayshore Rebar, Inc., and its officers have proven their eligibility to be licensed as a casino service industry pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3 and 1.14. The Casino Control Act provides for licensing and registration of casino service industries, including construction companies contracting with casino applicants or licensees:

> [a]ll casino service industries not included in subsection a. of this section [those providing goods or services directly relating to casino or gaming activity] shall be licensed in accordance with rules of the commission prior to commencement or continuation of any business with a casino applicant or licensee or its employees or agents. Such casino service industries, whether or not directly related to gaming operations, shall include suppliers of alcoholic beverages, food and nonalcoholic beverages; garbage handlers; vending machine providers; linen suppliers; maintenance companies; shopkeepers located within the approved hotels; limousine services and construction companies contracting with casino applicants or licensees or their employees or agents. . . . d. Licensure pursuant to subsection c. of this section of any casino service industry may be denied to any applicant disqualified in accordance with the criteria contained in section 86 of this act (emphasis added). [N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c,d]

Those grounds of disqualification include those of inimical association under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f, as discussed and concluded above. The regulations promulgated by the Casino Control Commission provide, with respect to issuance of casino service industry licenses, that:

> [n]o casino service industry license shall issue unless the individual qualification of each of the following persons shall have first been established in accordance with all provisions, including those cited, of the Act and of the regulations of the Commission. . . [i]n the case of casino service industry licenses issued in accordance with section 92c and d of the Act each such applicant in accordance with the standards of section 92d and 86 and the Act. [N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2]

The casino control regulations further provide, as to standards for qualification for a casino service industry license, that:

> The general rules relating to casino service industry standards for qualification are set forth in N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2 et seq. . . (c) Each applicant required to be licensed as a casino service industry in accordance with section 92c and d of the Act shall, prior to the issuance of any casino service industry license, produce such information and documentation, including without limitation as to the generality of the foregoing its financial books and records, and assurances to establish by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. . . [N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(a) and (c)] (emphasis added)

As to disqualification, the regulations state that:

> A casino service industry license may be denied to any applicant who has failed to prove by clear and convincing evidence that he or any of the persons required to be qualified, are in fact qualified in accordance with the act and with the provisions of these rules and regulations, or who has violated any of the provisions of the Casino Control Act or these rules and regulations, or who has violated any of the provisions of the Casino Control Act or these rules and regulations, or who disqualified under of the criteria set forth in section 86 of the Casino Control Act. [N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.5] (emphasis added)

With respect to persons who need to be qualified before a casino service industry license can be issued, the Commission has provided that, as to Casino Service Industry Licenses issued in accordance with Section 92c and d of the Act of the following persons must be qualified:

(i.) The enterprise;

(iii.) Each owner of the enterprise who directly or indirectly holds any beneficial interest or ownership in excess of five percent of the enterprise;

(v.) Each director of the enterprise except that a director who, in the opinion of the Commission, is not significantly involved in or connected with the management or ownership of the enterprise shall not be required to qualify;

(vi.) Each officer of the enterprise significantly involved in the conduct of business and each officer who the Commission may consider appropriate for qualification in order to insure the good character, honesty and integrity of the enterprise;

(viii.) The management employee supervising the regional or local office which employs the sales representative soliciting business or dealing directly with a casino licensee;

(ix.) Each employee who will act as a sales representative or otherwise regularly engage in the solicitation of business from casino licensees;

(x.) Any other person whom the chairman may consider appropriate for approval or qualification. [N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.14(a)2]

As discussed above, Joseph Merlino is currently vice-president and treasurer, as well as 25-percent owner of Bayshore Rebar, Inc. His mother, Phyllis Mistie, is the president and secretary of the company and also 75-percent owner. Rocco Bunodono functions as the Superintendent and foreman for Bayshore on various construction jobs. An application for licensure as an Casino Service Industry pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c, was filed by Bayshore Rebar, Inc., on July 29, 1988.

The Division objected to that application on August 10, 1988, maintaining that Bayshore cannot demonstrate, by the requisite clear and convincing evidence, the good character, honesty and integrity necessary for licensure. The Division also argued that Bayshore was disqualified for licensure as a casino service industry because of its association with Lawrence Merlino and due to the indictment of the applicant's principal, Joseph N. Merlino. In addition, the Division asserts disqualification on the basis N.J.S.A.

5:12-86b because of alleged misrepresentations made by Joseph N. Merlino and Phyllis Mistie at the hearing in this matter. No particular misrepresentations are cited by the Division, which nonetheless argues that the testimony of the two was "less than truthful concerning several issues of fact" (Division's objection of August 10, 1988, at 3).

As to this last claim of misrepresentation, I CONCLUDE that the Division has failed to show that Joseph N. Merlino and Phyllis Mistie supplied any information which was untrue or misleading as to any material fact pertaining to their qualifications. The Division's case, beyond the statements of Thomas DelGiorno, was largely circumstantial, and the respondent did not deny the allegations of the complaint. This case turns on the interpretation to be given to those admitted facts. The Division perceives, and I conclude that it has proven, an inimical association where the respondents see only family connections. The Division has not shown, however, that the respondent supplied untrue or misleading information as to any material facts and I CONLCUDE, on that basis, that Bayshore is not disqualified from receiving a casino service industry license under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b.

The Division also cites the criminal indictment pending against Joseph N. Merlino as an additional basis for disqualification, under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c and d.. Because the matter of this pending indictment as set forth in the amended complaint was severed in order to expedite resolution of the original complaint, as well as the casino service industry license application matter, it is not appropriate at this time to consider the indictment pending its resolution and I so CONCLUDE.

The Division also asserts Bayshore's inimical association under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f as precluding the issuance of a casino service industry license in this instance under N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2(a)2. The Casino Control Act provides that licensure for a casino service industry may be denied when the applicant is disqualified under section 86, including 86f. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-92d. The rule requiring that an applicant also establish its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence is in addition to the basic requirement that the applicant not be disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86. See, N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(a),(c). The Commission has discretion to deny a casino service industry license application if it concludes that the nature of the disqualification is such as to render issuance of the license contrary to the policy of the Act and to gaming operations. In this instance, the evidence supports the conclusion that Bayshore is disqualified by virtue of its inimical association with Lawrence Merlino, a career offender and a member of a career offender cartel. On the basis of this disqualification alone, and without reaching the issue of the reputation of Bayshore and its officers for good character, honesty and integrity, I CONCLUDE that the Bayshore Rebar, Inc., application of for a casino service industry license should be denied by the Commission.

DISPOSITION

On the basis of the above findings of fact and conclusions of law, it is ORDERED that respondent Bayshore Rebar, Inc., is ajudged to be disqualified pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f and that its vendor registration, issued pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-104b, be revoked. It is further ORDERED that the application of respondent Bayshore Rebar, Inc., for casino service industry license pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c and d is denied on the grounds of disqualification under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86f. It is further ORDERED that all casino licensee are prohibited from transacting any business — present or future, direct or indirect — with Bayshore Rebar, Inc.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 84-32

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND
PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION
OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Petitioner,
v.
DONALD A. BENNETT,
Respondent.

R. Lane Stebbins, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Alexander J. Wazeter, Jr., Esq., for respondent (Joseph D. O'Neill, attorney)

Record Closed: October 3, 1988 Decided: October 26, 1988

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The Division of Gaming Enforcement filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission on February 10, 1984, alleging that Donald A. Bennett had been arrested and charged with filing false reports to law enforcement authorities, a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4, and with attempt to commit a theft, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-1 and conspiracy to commit a theft, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2. The arrests occurred on November 17, 1983, and involved an incident which occurred on November 4, 1983, in which Mr. Bennett had filed a report with police and with the Allstate Insurance Company in which he alleged that his 1983 Ford Ranger pickup truck had been stolen. In fact, according to the allegations of the indictment which was returned against Mr. Bennett, he knew that his truck had not been stolen and had arranged instead for it to be taken by an associate so that he could reap proceeds of the insurance policy.

The complaint was forwarded for hearing before the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing was held before Administrative Law Judge Richard L. Voliva, Jr., on May 9, 1988, and Judge Voliva issued a Prehearing Order on June 6, 1988. The Prehearing Order set forth the issues for consideration at the hearing as follows:

> Whether Donald A. Bennett, respondent, violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-90 because of his conduct on November 17, 1983, as follows:
> A. Whether the respondent committed violations of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2, conspiracy, and of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3, theft of movable property in excess of $500, which are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(1), by means of section 86g.
>
> B. Whether the respondent's conduct establishes that he no longer possesses the requisite good character, honesty, and integrity, under section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference.
>
> C. In the event the Division establishes a section 86c(1) disqualifier, the respondent has the opportunity to establish his rehabilitation, pursuant to section 90h.
> D. Whether, pursuant to sections 129 and 130, disciplinary action should be taken against the respondent's casino employee license no. 31716-21.

The matter was heard before Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin on September 23, 1988, at the Glassboro Municipal Building. The record closed on October 3, 1988, following submission of additional character evidence.

EVIDENCE

The Division called Donald A. Bennett as its witness. Mr. Bennett acknowledged that in November 1983 he owned a pickup truck which he had rolled down a cliff causing $3,500 to $4,000 damage. Bennett was in a quandary as to whether to claim the damages from his insurance company or whether to fix the vehicle himself and absorb the costs. Apparently, he did not have the money available to make the repairs himself. A short time after the accident he was in conversation with a friend of his brother's who had an autobody business. This individual, a Mr. Hannah, advised Bennett that he could "take" the truck and Bennett could then file a claim with the insurance company claiming the truck to be stolen for the proceeds of the insurance policy. At that time, Bennett was 22 years old and living in his brother Leon's house in Vineland. Leon Bennett was 31. According to Bennett's testimony, he did file a claim with Allstate Insurance on the policy covering the vehicle and did file police reports indicating that the vehicle had been stolen. He was attempting to be paid for the truck. However, the scheme was uncovered and he was not paid.

Testifying on his own behalf, Mr. Bennett further explained his coming together with Hannah and Leon Bennett in the scheme to obtain the insurance proceeds. Bennett explained that after he was presented with Hannah's idea, he did not particularly like it, but agreed to the suggestion as he did not know what else to do. He had many bills and could not see how he was going to have the truck repaired. He was "looking for the cheapest way out."

When the incident was uncovered, the respondent and his brother and Mr. Hannah were all charged. Hannah was convicted at trial. Bennett confessed his involvement. At hearing he acknowledged that he knew that what he was doing was wrong, although he went along because of the pressure of the circumstances. He insisted that he would never be involved in any theft ever again.

After his indictment, he was placed on pretrial intervention (PTI) and was required to perform community service for about six months. Since successfully completing the PTI program, he has had no other arrests.

At the time of the incident in 1983, Bennett was employed at Harrah's Casino. After the situation was resolved, he left for Pheonix, Arizonia, where he worked for nine months as an electrician. He returned to the Cumberland County area and attended Cumberland County College and then transferred to Stockton State where he has a total of 60 credits in oceanography. He became employed as a seasonal dealer on a permanent part-time basis at Harrah's Casino as of June 27, 1988. He had a back injury as of May 1, 1987 and was told to take substantial time off from his employment. At the time he could not do so because he needed money for school. Eventually, the pain became excessive and he suffered from excessive absenteeism. After being let go by Harrah's he was employed at the Showboat Casino Hotel. He advised Showboat and Harrah's of the charges and the outcome of them when he applied for employment at each of the facilities.

The respondent explained that since the incident occurred five years ago, he has matured greatly. He realizes the mistake he made and would never again conduct himself in such a manner. He has a good job, has continued his education and straightened out. He has been involved in helping as a volunteer at the American Legion Post in Millville, as attested to by a character reference letter submitted on his behalf from representatives of the Nabb-Leslie Post 82 - American Legion.

On cross-examination, the witness acknowledged that at the time that he was contacted by the police concerning his allegedly stolen vehicle, he did contact Mr. Hannah to let him know that the police were on to something and advised Hannah that he should attempt to cover up whatever occurred.

Leon R. Bennett, brother of the respondent, testified on his brother's behalf. He acknowledged his involvement in the incident. Leon Bennett was also placed on pretrial intervention which he successfully completed. He is nine years older than his brother and they have always been very close. Their father was killed in 1972 and Leon has been a father figure to his brother, although he was overseas in the Navy when his father died and it was two or three years before he came home.

Leon testified that at the time of the incident his brother had just begun working in the casino and was under pressures. He is now much more focused on the future, has gone to school, has recognized his mistake, has improved his education, and has "paid a heavy price." In his view, Donald is remorseful and regretful concerning the situation and he, Leon, shares these feelings concerning his own involvement. He acknowledged that he had "steered his brother in the wrong direction."

The police reports presented as evidence by the Division essentially confirm the story explained by the Bennetts. There is no real dispute of the facts concerning the 1983 activity.

Mr. Bennett presented character reference letters on his behalf. These included the previously mentioned reference from the American Legion representatives, as well as a letter from Joseph Hibbs, Dean of Student Affairs at Cumberland County College. Mr. Hibbs indicates his awareness of Donald's involvement in the insurance fraud situation and states that "Don clearly recognizes the mistake he made and very much regrets the incident. As a result, he has grown and matured significantly over the last several years." He continues "Don Bennett is a fine individual of basically good character."

Ted Jasinski, who has worked with Bennett in the casino industry since 1982 as a co-worker and supervisor, testified that he "found him to be dependable, honest and trustworthy." Jasinski's letter also reflects his knowledge of Donald's involvement in the fraud incident and states that it was "merely an error on his part and in no way reflects the true nature of his character." . . . "He has shown remorse and in my opinion has learned well enough from this lesson to stay clear from these and any other similar situations in the future."

An additional character reference letter from Kenneth K. Cleveland, a pit boss at the Showboat Casino, reflects Mr Cleveland's view of Donald as "reliable and trustworthy."

DISCUSSION

It has been five years since Donald Bennett engaged in the attempt to obtain funds from his insurance company for a truck which was in fact not stolen. Obviously, that incident was a serious mistake on Mr. Bennett's part. It reflected an intention to obtain monies which he knew he was not entitled to. Apparently at the time, Mr. Bennett found himself in a predicament because of the damage which he had done to his vehicle and took the wrong way to attempt to resolve his difficulty. It is probably fair to say that he was guided in part in this error by his older brother, who had apparently assumed a father-figure role for the nine-year younger Donald.

Since the successful completion of his pretrial intervention program, Mr. Bennett has, from all evidence, changed his position in life considerably. He has obtained a substantial college education, he has traveled, he has again worked in the casino industry in a successful fashion, and he has generally matured.

Based upon the evidence presented by the Division pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, it appears that Mr. Bennett did engage in conduct in 1983 which constituted conspiracy and attempted theft, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-1 and 5-2, and that he had also filed false reports with law enforcement authorities, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4. His conspiracy and attempt to commit theft violations constitute automatic disqualifying offenses pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c. However, the evidence presented indicates that his criminal involvement was of a limited and aberrational nature, that it was engaged in while he was still relatively youthful, that his social situation at the time was such that he was under the substantial influence of a brother who misled him into agreeing to something which Mr. Bennett may not have been entirely certain he should have been involved in, and that as a result of the incident, while fortuitous for Mr. Bennett, no one was injured physically or financially. In addition, it appears that since the incident, Mr. Bennett has conducted himself in a proper fashion as a good citizen, has successfully completed his PTI requirements, and has achieved status as a productive citizen. Under these circumstances, I FIND that he has rehabilitated himself from the disqualifying aspects of the prior incident in accordance with the standards set forth in section 90h of the Casino Control Act. I further FIND that he has the requisite good character, honesty and integrity required by section 90b, incorporating the requirements of section 89b(2). Under the circumstances, the application by the Division for revocation of his casino employee license is denied.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission (Commission); and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of January 11, 1989,

IT IS on this 24th day of January 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

(1) to make clear that the basis for disqualification is, as the administrative law judge states on page 9, N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(1), by virtue of Berry's commission of promoting gambling, third degree, and conspiracy to promote gambling, third degree, both of which are listed offenses contained in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(1). However because Mr. Berry was not convicted of these charges in criminal proceedings, reference should also be made to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(g);

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the casino employee license held by Warner L. Berry is revoked substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision, as modified, which is incorporated herein by reference; and

Record Closed: November 17, 1988 Decided: November 28, 1988

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The Division of Gaming Enforcement filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission on October 8, 1987 seeking to have the Commission issue an order revoking the casino employee license held by Warner L. Berry. The basis of the proposed action was Mr. Berry's alleged involvement in an illegal gambling operation. The complaint specified that Mr. Berry had been indicted by the Cape May County Grand Jury in Indictment No. 87-07-0223-I, filed on July 22, 1987, for committing the offenses of conspiracy, N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2, and promoting gambling, third degree, N.J.S.A. 2C:37-2.

Mr. Berry requested a hearing on the proposed suspension. His casino employee license was suspended by the Commission on a temporary basis pending a plenary hearing. The order suspending the casino employee license was issued by the Commission on November 13, 1987. The matter was then transferred to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

Subsequent to transmittal to the OAL, a prehearing was held before Honorable Stephen W. Thompson on August 22, 1988. A Prehearing Order was issued on September 13, 1988. That document set forth the issues to be considered at the hearing as follows:

A. Whether respondent committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:37-2 and N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2.

B. Whether respondent's continued licensure is inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2) because he is alleged to have committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:37-2, and N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2, despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

C. Whether the respondent possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity required for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(b)2, as incorporated within section 90b.

D. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was held before Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin on November 17, 1988 at the Galloway Township Municipal Court. The record closed on that date following the conclusion of the hearing.

EVIDENCE

As evidence in support of its contentions, the Division of Gaming Enforcement presented the indictment returned by the Cape May County Grand Jury which charges that Warner L. Berry, a/k/a Chico, and Nicholas J. Marotta, a/k/a Nick, had between January 3, 1987 and approximately January 25, 1987 conspired together for the purpose of engaging in conduct which would promote gambling, specifically bookmaking, with respect to National Football League play-off games. The indictment asserted that Berry and Marotta received incoming telephone calls at Mr. Berry's residence which were then "call forwarded" to two other telephones located at the residence of Mr. Marotta. In addition, the indictment set forth numerous overt acts undertaken in furtherance of the conspiracy and also charged in Count Two that the defendants had engaged in the crime of promoting gambling in the third degree in that they had accepted five or more bets totaling more than $1,000 on January 25, 1987.

Detective Robert F. Walker of the New Jersey State Police Intelligence Bureau testified concerning his involvement in the investigation of the Marotta-Berry operation. Detective Walker was qualified as an expert in gambling operations. He testified that beginning on November 17, 1986 he received information from Detective Serrano of the New Jersey State Police who had received information from a confidential informant concerning illegal sports bookmaking in Cape May County. Serrano had been told by the confidential source of two telephone numbers in Cape May County which could be called for placing bets. Detective Walker investigated and determined that the telephone numbers were unpublished. He then determined through court order that the numbers were listed to W.L. Berry who lived at 106B Seaview Court in North Wildwood. This individual was also known as Chico and was a bartender at Trump's Plaza. In addition, he learned that another individual involved was Nicholas (Nick) Marotta, a bartender at Grande's Cafe in Wildwood.

Detective Walker obtained a court order for the installation of a dial recorder to record incoming and outgoing calls, the time and duration of such. This did not involve the monitoring of the conversations themselves. As a result of the installation of the dial recorder, it was learned the telephone calls incoming to the Berry telephones were being "call forwarded" to 215B West 4th Street in North Wildwood, the home of Nicholas Marotta. These telephones at Mr. Marotta's home were in fact subscribed by a Philadelphia individual named Zucotta who had been previously arrested in gambling investigations.

According to Detective Walker's expert opinion, the procedure being utilized by Messrs. Berry, Marotta and the Philadelphia individual were all in a pattern familiar to bookmaking operations where the bookmaker will get some unsuspected individual to have telephones which will then receive calls from individuals seeking to place bets and will "call forward" the calls to another location.

On January 23, 1987, the investigators obtained a search warrant from Honorable Arthur Guerrera, a Superior Court judge in Atlantic County. They searched Berry and Marotta's residences. They first searched Marotta's. When they arrived and looked into the premises they saw Mr. Marotta seated at a table with two telephones in front of him, a calculator, papers and a pot of water. Marotta appeared to be answering the phone and writing on the papers. The investigators then forced the door and at this point Mr. Marotta placed the papers into a pot of water. The paper immediate dissolved as it was apparently rice paper, a paper often used by bookmakers. Detective Walker began answering the telephone. January 23, 1987 was the date of the Super Bowl. For approximately one hour between slightly before 5:00 until slightly before 6:00, Detective Walker answered the phone. The people calling asked for Nick or then Chico. Walker advised the callers that he was the individual from Philadelphia. The callers would ask for the "line" on the Super Bowl and then would place bets. Thirty-three bets totaling $3,555 were received during that one-hour period.

Walker testified that the dial number recorder had been put in place sometime slightly after Christmas until January 26, 1987. On game days, approximately 50 to 75 calls were received during the two hours before the event began.

When the police raided Mr. Berry's home they found two telephones and instructions on how to forward calls from the phones to Mr. Marotta's residence. They also found several slips of yellow paper with notations and telephone billings which showed the letters "T", "C", and "N" next to certain long distance calls. The "N" calls were interpreted as being calls made by Marotta to Zucotta.

On January 11, 1987, prior to the raid on Super Bowl Sunday, Detective Walker listened in on telephone calls made by the confidential source to Mr. Berry's phone number. The calls were forwarded to Marotta's premises. One of the calls was taken by Nick and the other by Chico, that is Berry. Wagers were placed and the detective heard the "line" being given on the wagers made. Chico took one of the bets. The police had conducted surveillance on Berry's premises prior to the phone calls being made and seen Berry leave and go to Marotta's house. They then checked after the calls were made and found that Berry was still at Marotta's premises.

Detective Walker testified that it was the belief of the investigators that Mr. Marotta was laying off bets to Mr. Zucotta. The operation had apparently only begun during the 1986-87 NFL season.

According to the information which Detective Walker received from Detective Serrano, the confidential source had obtained the Berry telephone numbers from a casino dealer at the baccarat pit at Atlantis. This individual, Theresa D'Amore, previously had lived with Mr. Berry, although according to his testimony they were not living together at the time that Berry was involved with Marotta's gambling operation.

On cross-examination, Detective Walker acknowledged that bookies will often use bettors or some other "unknowns" to subscribe the telephones which are then forwarded to the bookie's premises. The bettors often will be used as a means of working off their debts to the bookie. The detective acknowledged that he had only overheard one bet given to Chico. However, he noted that Detective Serrano had heard others. Finally, the detective noted that he was unaware of whether or not Mr. Berry had cooperated with the authorities after the arrests had taken place.

On redirect, Walker observed that most of the callers whose calls he answered at Marotta's home had first asked for Nick and then for Chico. It was the detective's belief that Mr. Marotta controlled the Cape May portion of the Zucotta operation.

Warner L. Berry testified as a witness for the state. Mr. Berry is presently unemployed, having been laid off from a non-casino premises facility on September 8, 1988 when that nightclub closed down for renovations. He had previously been employed at Trump Plaza beginning May 7, 1985 until he was suspended. He first met Mr. Marotta when he came to New Jersey from Washington, D.C., in 1977 and Marotta befriended him.

Mr. Berry acknowledged that he had been convicted of misdemeanor offenses in Washington, D.C., in 1973 and 1977 for possession of diet pills (ludes). He also acknowledged that he had repaid New Jersey unemployment $652.49 due to an unemployment overpayment. It was stipulated by counsel that he received some monies while he was employed. According to Berry, he reported his employment by sending in a green slip as he was required to do. However, he received checks. The parties did not stipulate that the receipt of monies by Mr. Berry while receiving unemployment between march 14, 1982 and sometime in April 1982 had resulted from fraud. The deputy attorney general contended that such had occurred, however, she had no certified documentation from the Division of Unemployment, nor any witnesses, who could interpret the uncertified computer printout which she had at the hearing. It was not clear whether in fact it had ever been alleged that Mr. Berry's receipt of funds had been fraudulent. In fact, it appears that a civil judgment was entered against him and he paid that judgment. Although it may be that the Division initially contended that fraud had occurred, in the absence of a witness or the appropriate paper work, no conclusions are reached in connection with any alleged fraud.

Mr. Berry acknowledged that his phone bill did contain charges for long distance calls made by Mr. Marotta as well as by his girlfriend, Theresa (Toni) D'Amore. He received payment back for the amounts of these long distance calls.

According to Mr. Berry, he was a friend of Mr. Marotta who had helped him out with a place to stay and an introduction to Atlantic City when he, Berry, had come from Washington, D.C. Subsequently, prior to the incidents which are the subject of this proceeding, Mr. Marotta approached Berry on several occasions and advised him that he was in financial difficulty and needed some "help." Marotta had a printing business and was working as a part-time bartender. He was going through a divorce and was having serious financial difficulties. Mr. Marotta requested that Mr. Berry let him use his residence as a place for placement of telephone numbers which would be "call forwarded" to Mr. Marotta. Mr. Berry was aware that Marotta was a bookmaker. He agreed to allow Marotta to make use of his premises after Marotta had persisted in his requests. Each time that the phones were used, Berry received $20 for the use of his apartment. He claimed that he did not share in any of the proceeds or profits of the gambling enterprise. He did acknowledge however that he had taken bets on the phone at Mr. Marotta's premises and that Marotta had come to his home on occasion and answered the phones from his home. Berry acknowledged that he knew that what was going on was illegal, but he agreed to participate purely out of friendship after Marotta "kept asking." Although he was hesitant at first, he finally "gave in."

Mr. Berry received pretrial intervention with respect to his indictment in Cape May County. He successfully completed this, performing his required community service. He also agreed to cooperate with the State Police, met with them and gave a statement.

Mr. Berry is not married. Theresa D'Amore is still his girlfriend, although he does not reside with her. He has no dependents. He finds employment difficult to obtain because the type of job which he does, bartending, is a seasonal operation in the Atlantic City and Wildwood area. His father, girlfriend and unemployment benefits have helped him out during his period of unemployment.

Mr. Berry denied that any of the gambling activity in which he engaged occurred on casino premises. He never gave out the number to any casino personnel, etc. He was not living with Theresa D'Amore at the time that this operation was in effect, although he had been with her prior to that time and she was aware of Mr. Marotta's activity, although not involved in them.

The respondent is active in his church. He has never been in any difficulty with his casino employers, never having been disciplined.

DISCUSSION

The Division of Gaming Enforcement contends that the continued licensure of an individual who, by his own admission, was engaged in bookmaking operations would be inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act and the interests of the gaming industry and that the nature of Mr. Berry's conduct, although it was not the subject of criminal prosecution, indicates that he engaged in criminal activity of a nature which would constitute an automatic disqualifying offense pursuant to the Casino Control Act. On both of these counts, I CONCLUDE that the Division's suggestions are correct.

Initially, while counsel for Berry attempted to limit the significance of Berry's involvements with this bookmaking operation, suggesting that he was merely helping out a friend by allowing him to use his home as a place for telephones, it is quite clear from Mr. Berry's own admissions that he not only let the phones be in his premises, but he also took bets, allowed Mr. Marotta to take bets in his home, and went to Mr. Marotta's home where he took bets. This testimony confirms the validity of Detective Walker's testimony as to overhearing "Chico" take a bet from a confidential informant on January 11. Mr. Berry may not have been sharing in the profits of the operation to any extent, and may well have only received the limited amounts of money which he suggests. However, whether he was paid for his efforts or not, he was part and parcel of the illegal gambling operation, participating knowingly in illegal bookmaking which he must have suspected was expected to produce a profit for others, if not for himself. Mr. Berry's activities did involve the promotion of gambling and it is quite clear from the testimony of Detective Walker, which I FIND believable, that just on Super Bowl Sunday itself bets numbering more than five and well in excess of $1,000 were received by the operation.[1] Thus, Mr. Berry's activities certainly involved the promotion of gambling and he certainly conspired with Mr. Marotta to engage in this gambling operation. In fact, he does not deny his involvement, although he perhaps suggests it should not be viewed too seriously.

The New Jersey Legislature has made it quite clear that entry into and retention of the permission to participate in the legal gambling industry in New Jersey is a privilege which is limited to those who meet specific qualifications. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b.(8). The burden placed upon a licensee includes the necessity of continually establishing the necessary good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure by clear and convincing evidence. In addition, where one participates in activities which constitute criminal activity, whether prosecuted or not, where the activity is of the nature of a disqualifying offense as set forth in section 86c(1) of the Act, licensure is not permitted and must be revoked unless rehabilitation is established by clear and convincing evidence. Here, Mr. Berry's offense occurred in 1987. Although he successfully completed pretrial intervention, and while it is clear that the State in connection with criminal matters has determined that certain types of offenses where committed by first offenders should not result in a criminal record where the individual can successfully complete a PTI program, with respect to the separate issue of licensing to participate in the legal gambling industry, the nature of Mr. Berry's conduct is a most serious matter. The people of this state have legalized certain limited forms of gambling. As of this date, they have not agreed to license sports betting. Here, Messrs. Marotta, Berry, and whatever compatriots they may have had were promoting and engaging in illegal sports betting which no doubt was intended to produce profits for those who were willing to defy the law. Since the very basis of legal casino gambling is its highly regulated nature and form, it is certainly opposed to the interests of the Casino Control Act to permit those who would engage in illegal gambling to participate. Promoters of illegal gambling have no business in the legal gambling industry.

[1] N.J.S.A. 2C:37-2.6 grades this level of activity as a crime of the 3rd degree.

Mr. Berry may well have recognized the error of his ways. It is quite possible that he will never again engage in this kind of conduct. Prior to this incident, he had been licensed despite his relatively minor drug incidents in Washington, D.C. However, following this incident, I CONCLUDE that he cannot retain his license. While perhaps sometime in the future he will have proven his law-abiding nature and good character, and the passage of time will permit some security in a decision that he is rehabilitated, at this early date I cannot conclude that Mr. Berry has met the heavy burden of establishing his good character, honesty and integrity or his rehabilitation from the effects of his disqualifying conduct to the significantly high level of clear and convincing evidence required by the Legislature. As such, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Berry's casino employee license must be revoked because of his involvement in a conspiracy to promote illegal gambling and promoting gambling, disqualifying offenses pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). I CONCLUDE that he has failed to established by the requisite degree of proof either his good character, honesty and integrity and/or that he has rehabilitated himself to the extent necessary to qualify for licensure.

Therefore, it is ORDERED that Mr. Berry's casino employee license be revoked.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

THE APPLICATION OF EDWARD BERSHAD COMPANY, T/A PENN VENDING COMPANY FOR A CASINO SERVICE INDUSTRY LICENSE

Mark H. Sandson, Esq., for the petitioner Edward Bershad Company, t/a Penn Vending Company (Hankin, Sandson & Sandman, attorneys)

Richard Morrissey, Deputy Attorney General, for the respondents (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: August 15, 1988 Decided: September 29, 1988

BEFORE RICHARD MURPHY, ALJ:

The Edward Bershad Company, t/a Penn Vending Company (applicant) seeks to be licensed by the Casino Control Commission (Commission) as a casino service industry, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(c), in order to provide non-gaming services to casinos in the form of video games. As of May 1987, the applicant had provided over $300,000 in vending services to casinos without being cited for any violations of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. or regulations, N.J.A.C. 19:40-1.1 et seq. The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) objects to the issuance of a casino service industry license to the applicant because of undisputed evidence that the Edward Bershad Company made protection payments to members of the Philadelphia Police Department after officers illegally requested monies to allow the company to continue to operate at various locations in Philadelphia. The officers were subsequently indicted in a Federal Court and convicted with the assistance of the applicants immunized testimony. The issues to be resolved here are (1) whether the applicant is statutorily disqualified because of these protection payments under N.J.A.C. 5:12-86(g), 92(d); (2) whether the applicant may show rehabilitation from any such disqualification, and; (3) whether the applicant has established its qualifications under the Commission regulations, including the requirement that it establish by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3. For the reasons discussed below, this opinion CONCLUDES that the application should be GRANTED.

The Division interposed its objection to licensure on August 12, 1987, and counsel for the applicant requested a hearing on November 25, 1987. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case on December 10, 1987. The prehearing conference was held on January 22, 1988, before the Honorable Stephen W. Thompson, ALJ, and an order setting forth the procedure and issues was entered on February 8, 1988. The hearing, scheduled for April 27, 1988, was adjourned due to the unavailability of one of the applicant's witnesses. The matter proceeded to hearing on May 25, 1988, in Mt. Ephraim, New Jersey and the parties requested an opportunity to review the transcript and to submit briefs as to the legal issues. The applicant's brief was filed on August 1, 1988, and the Division submitted a letter memorandum on August 2, 1988. The applicant replied on August 15, 1988, and the record was deemed complete on that date and closed.

FACTS

There is no dispute as to the material facts necessary to decide this matter. On May 7, 1984, the Edward Bershad Company t/a Penn Vending Company, which is owned and operated by Ronald and Allan Bershad, applied for a casino service industry license under N.J.A.C. 5:12-92(c) in order to engage in the business of providing services to Atlantic City casino/hotels of a non-gaming nature. The Edward Bershad Company currently operates video arcades or game rooms in six Atlantic City casino/hotels and between June 1986 and May 1987 made approximately $370,821 in non-gaming business with the casino industry. During that time, the applicant has not been cited for any violations of the Casino Control Act for regulations and there has been no evidence submitted of any problems or complaints against the applicant in the course of its Atlantic City business. The sole basis for the Division's objections to the application is payments of approximately $33,500 made by Ronald and Allan Bershad, and a former partner, during 1981 and 1982 to members of the Philadelphia Police Department, who had approached the company and requested payments for allowing the applicants to keep their full line of vending machines, including video poker machines, at various locations throughout Philadelphia. Ronald and Allan Bershad do not dispute that these payments were made, but claim that they were made only in response to a demand and implied threat to the business's well-being by members of the Philadelphia Police Department, who were subsequently indicted for this and related offenses. The Bershads were granted immunity after voluntarily cooperating with the federal authorities and were not charged with any criminal violations.

The Bershads also offered the following background of their company, as well as the fateful payments made by them in 1981-82 to Philadelphia police officers. The Edward Bershad Company, trading as the Penn Vending Company, was formed by Edward Bershad, father of the current owners Ronald and Allan, in 1948 and initially engaged in the business of distributing cigarettes and cigarette machines. The sons, Ronald and Allan, later started working with their father and the company branched out into the area of juke boxes, and a line of food vending machines, the latter of which were later abandoned in 1977. The next year, 1978, Penn Vending merged with another company, Regal Vending, which was engaged in a similar business and run by one Allan Simons. The new company, Penn-Regal Vending, which was formed to lower operating expenses for both companies, operated video poker machines, as well as cigarette machines and juke boxes at various locations in the Philadelphia area. These video poker machines were permitted by Pennsylvania state law, but patrons were prohibited from betting on the games. Allan Bershad was aware that use of video poker machines for gambling was, at best, a "gray area" in Pennsylvania and was aware that a number of video poker machines, including some owned by Penn-Regal Vending, had been seized by the Philadelphia Police Department (R-3, 12-13, R-6, 136T102, 103).

In the late summer of 1981, Allan Simons, the Bershad's partner in Penn-Regal Vending Company, advised Allan Bershad that he had been approached by Inspector John DeBenedetto of the Philadelphia Police Department who advised that Penn-Regal would have to make payments to the police department of $100 per month for each video poker machine that the company wished to keep in operation at various locations (T98-100). Simons also advised the Bershad brothers that if payments were not made on the video poker machines, the company would not be allowed to keep any of their vending machines or amusement games at a location and thus would loose the account (T99; R-3, 15). Loss of these accounts would have caused the company a third of its business, approximately $400,000 (T104). Neither Allan nor Ronald Bershad spoke to Inspector DeBenedetto concerning this demand for payments and neither raised this matter to any other state or federal authorities. The Bershad brothers discussed DeBenedetto's demand for payment and decided, they claim with some reluctance and nervousness, to go along with the payment plan out of concern for the economic well-being of their business and other adverse consequences if they refused to cooperate. Allan Bershad gave the following testimony:

> Q: Now, you were describing the reasons that you used at the time for these payments. . . .
> A: It's just that we were nervous at the time that it happened. And it was a business decision and a selfish decision, I guess, that I was nervous for myself and my family.
>
> At that time, I think I had four children. And just being in the city of Philadelphia, with the reputation of the police department, we were nervous about it and we decided to go ahead and do it.
>
> Q: Were you afraid that you would be physically abused potentially?
> A: Yes. (T81, 8-22)

Allan Bershad conceded that his concern with physical harm was not based on any specific statements made by Inspector DeBenedetto but was part of the possible "other consequences" that would follow from failure to make payments as demanded (T101-102). Before the payments began, two of Penn-Regal's video poker machines were seized by the Philadelphia Police Department (T102-103). After Penn-Regal began to make payments to DeBenedetto, which were handled by Allan Simons, the company doubled the number of video poker machines installed from some 20-25 to 50-55 machines. Although Allan Bershad denies having discussed the matter of payments with DeBenedetto, which steadily increased during the period between November 1981 through November 1982 (R-6, 131), he did speak to the inspector on at least one occasion when he had a problem with a location that wanted a poker machine removed and stated that, after calling the inspector, he never heard from that customer again (T106, 4-13). The payments were made by Allan Simons on a monthly basis and dually recorded by Allan Bershad as non-deductible business expenses which reached a total of $33,000.

The payments to the Philadelphia police stopped in November 1982, when the Federal Bureau of Investigation advised the Bershads that the matter of the payments, among other abuses of police authority in Philadelphia, were under federal criminal investigation. Allan Bershad cooperated voluntarily with the FBI investigation, without consulting with his attorney and stated that he was grateful and relieved that the FBI had intervened (T82). He was later given testimonial immunity and no charges were filed against either him, or his brother Ronald, who was responsible for accounts outside of Philadelphia and played a more minor role in the payments to the Philadelphia police. Inspector DeBenedetto, among other officers, was indicted in federal court for obtaining $33,500 not lawfully due him from "a representative of Penn-Regal Vending Company, with the consent of this representative, which consent was induced under the color of official right" (R-5 at 23). The indictment also cited DeBenedetto and other members of the Philadelphia Police Department with shaking down a number of businesses in Philadelphia including illicit operations such as massage parlors, as well as lawful operations like Penn-Regal Vending Company. Allan Bershad also testified in the federal trial against DeBenedetto (R-6). After being contacted by the FBI, Allan Bershad dissolved his partnership with Allan Simons, and states that he had intended to do this prior to the intervention of the federal authorities (T84 at 20). At the hearing, Allan Bershad stated that there was a point in making the payments when he knew that it was not proper, but that he "didn't know who to go to for being extorted by the police department" (T82, 13-16). He also gave the following answers as to why he thought his payment of money to the police was wrong:

> A: The only reason why I thought it was wrong was, I was being approached for giving the money for something that I wasn't doing wrong.
> Q: Well, you didn't think you were bribing them, did you?
>
> A: No. I mean, for operating the video poker machines. That's what got me nervous.
>
> Q: So you felt that what you were doing was appropriate and right, in other words, appropriate in running a business.
>
> A: It was a business and personal decision. I knew that I should never have given the money, but I was afraid that if I didn't give it, what the consequences would be.

Q: Why did you think you shouldn't give them money?

A: Well, I was giving money for something to allow me to operate my business.

Q: But when you say it was wrong to give them money, do you mean that it was wrong because you were the victim?

A: Of the police asking me for money, yes, I was the victim that way. (T113-114)

The Bershads also offered the expert testimony of Norman Greenspan, an attorney who had represented Allan Bershad in the federal matter of the payments. Greenspan offered his opinion that Bershad's actions in making payments to the Philadelphia police in response to a demand for money did not violate federal or Pennsylvania law. Greenspan also testified that Allan Bershad cooperated fully and freely with the federal investigation and was offered immunity without have to request it. The Division relied on an affidavit by one Anthony J. Wzorek, an assistant district attorney in the Philadelphia District Attorney's office, concluding that Allan Bershad's actions in making payments to the Philadelphia Police Department in 1981 through 1982 constituted a violation of 18 Pa. C.S.A. §4701 - bribery of public officials. The Bershads also offered documentation establishing that the corporation is in good standing in Pennsylvania and is financially sound (P-1 to P-5). As indicated, the Division rests solely on the applicant's admitted payments to the Philadelphia police as described above and cites no complaints or violations alleged against Penn Vending during the course of its business dealings with casino/hotels since 1983.

On the issue of reputation for good character, honesty an integrity, the applicants also offered testimony of several individuals, including a rabbi, who had known them for a number of years and found them to be persons of good and honest, as well as generous character.

The issues as set forth in the prehearing order are:

(1) Whether the Edward Bershad Company t/a Penn Vending Company as well as its owners committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifyer, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c as incorporated within Section 92d despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of the state, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:2C-1 et seq., Bribery and Corrupt Influence; and

(2) Whether the Edward Bershad Company t/A Penn Vending Company is entitled as a matter of law to show rehabilitation for conduct which statutorily disqualifies it from licensure, and, if so, whether the company can affirmatively demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to the Casino Control Act;

(3) Whether the Edward Bershad Company can show by clear and convincing evidence that it possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino service industry pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92d and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c).

ARGUMENTS AND CONCLUSIONS

(1) Statutory disqualification under 86g

The applicant argues that Penn Vending is not statutorily disqualified from licensure as a casino service industry, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c and d and that, given the circumstances of this case, it should be licensed. Penn Vending claims that its conduct was not prosecutable under N.J.S.A. 2C:27-1 et seq., concerning bribery and corrupt influence, because the payments made to the Philadelphia Police were intended to keep the police from removing lawful amusement machines thus intended to prevent the police from doing an unlawful act. In addition to arguing that Penn Vending could not have been prosecuted for bribery, the applicant maintains that N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(d) provides that a casino service industry licensed "may" be denied to an applicant disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, but that this disqualification is not automatic. Thus, the applicant is entitled to licensure if it can, notwithstanding the disqualifying offense, establish reputation for good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c).

The Division argues that the conduct of the Bershad's clearly falls within the proscriptions of N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2, concerning bribery in official and political matters and that the applicant is therefore automatically disqualified from licensure under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c,g and N.J.S.A. 5:12-92c, d. The Division specifically notes that it is no defense to the charge of bribery to claim that it was the result of conduct by another constituting theft by extortion or coercion. N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2(d).

I agree with the Division that the conduct of the Bershad's, though not prosecuted, constitutes an offense under N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2 and thus comes within the reach of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, notwithstanding the absence of any prosecution, as provided in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g. The bribery statute provides that:

> [a] person is guilty of bribery of he directly or indirectly offers, confers or agrees to confer upon other, or solicits, accepts or agrees to accept from another: . . .
> [c] Any benefit as consideration for a violation of an official duty of a public servant or party official; or
> [d] Any benefit as consideration for performance of official duties. Purposes of this section 'benefit as consideration' shall be deemed to mean any benefit not authorized by law. . . In any prosecution under this Section of the act or who offered, conferred or agreed to confer, or who solicited, accepted or agreed to accept the benefit, it is no defense that he did so as a result of conduct by another constituting theft by extortion or coercion or attempt to commit either of those crimes . . . .N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2.

The applicant characterizes itself as a victim of extortion and thus argues that it is not liable to prosecution for bribery because the payments were made to prevent the police from doing an unlawful act. Although there is no question that the Bershad's were subjected to at least economic coercion in what may be fairly described as a "shake down" by Philadelphia Police Officers, this is no defense to a charge of bribery in an official matter. Money paid to the Philadelphia Police Officers by the Bershad's and Penn-Regal Company was a benefit as a consideration for violation of an official duty in the event that police officers knew that certain video poker machines were being used for gambling and also, in instances where there was not such evidence, the payment was a consideration for the performance of the officers of their official duty to not interfere with video poker machines that were being lawfully operated. Whether the money was being paid to allow lawful video poker machines to continue in place or to permit unlawful use of such games, the Bershad's engaged in conduct in violation of N.J.SA. 2C:27-2 and I so CONCLUDE. I further CONCLUDE that they are therefore subject to disqualification by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c and g.

The applicant also argues that disqualification of a non-gaming related casino service industry under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, g is not automatic, but rather is left to the discretion of the Commission which must determine whether an applicant for that category of license has established clear and convincing evidence of its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c). The Bershad's cite N.J.S.A. 5:12-92 which provides that:

> Licensure pursuant to Subsection c. of this section of any casino service industry may be denied to any applicant disqualified in accordance with the criteria contained in Section 86 of this Act. [emphasis added].

I agree with the applicant's analysis, and the Division's does not dispute it. (see Division's brief of August 2, 1988 at p.2). Casino service industries offering goods or services which directly relate to casino or gaming activity are subjected to the same standards of licensing imposed on casino key employees (N.J.S.A. 5:12-92b) The Casino Control Act provides that "[The] Commission shall deny a casino employee license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in Section 86 of this Act". N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(d). However, the Casino Control Act also clearly allows the Commission discretion as to whether to disqualify non-gaming related casino service industries, which "may" be denied a license on the basis of section 86 disqualification. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that, although the applicant is statutorily disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, g, it may receive a casino license if it can, notwithstanding that disqualification, established by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3.

(2) Rehabilitation Available to the Applicant

The Division maintains that, as a pure matter of law, rehabilitation which statutorily disqualified casino employees and casino hotel employees are entitled to affirmatively demonstrate under N.J.S.A. 5:12-90 and 91 is not available to non-gaming casino service industry applicants who are found to be disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c) and (g). The Bershad brothers do not specifically contest this legal analysis, but maintain that the Commission has discretion under N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(d) to recognize and take into account any rehabilitative factors presented in determining whether Penn Vending has satisfied the regulatory requirements for licensure as a casino service industry. I agree with the Division that rehabilitation, as set forth at N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h) and 91(d) is not available to the applicants in the sense provided for by those sections to overcome statutory disqualification. However, I also concur with the applicant's analysis that the statutory disqualification for non-gaming casino service industries under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c) and (g) is not an automatic and insurmountable barrier to licensure, but rather is a factor to be considered by the Commission, which may deny a license to an applicant disqualified under section 86. See N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(d). I thus CONCLUDE that rehabilitation as provided by N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h) and 91(d) is not available to the applicant, but further CONCLUDE that Penn Vending is not automatically disqualified by the fact that its prior conduct constituted disqualifying conduct and that the Commission has discretion under N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(d) to determine whether, considering the disqualifying conduct and all other factors, the Bershad brothers are entitled to a casino service industry license. The Commission must specifically consider whether the applicant has established by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c). See also N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2(a)(2).

(3) Good Character, Honesty and Integrity

In addition to claiming that it was the victim of an extortion attempt and did not commit any prosecutable acts, the applicant claims that it has established by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity and is therefore qualified for a casino service industry license, notwithstanding its protection payments to the Philadelphia Police Department in 1981 and 1982. The Bershads emphasize that they have carried on extensive business dealings with as many as seven casino/hotels in Atlantic City since 1983 and have not been the subject of any complaints for violation of the Casino Control Act or its regulations. They note that the Division rests its case entirely upon their acquiescence to unlawful demands for payment by Philadelphia police officers who were indicted and convicted for that conduct. The Bershads stress that they made those payments out of fear for their business and concern for their families and personal well-being and that they fully and eagerly cooperated with the FBI in prosecuting members of the Philadelphia Police Department involved in the shake-down.

The applicant acknowledges that it made a regrettable error in agreeing to make payments to police officers who had unlawfully requested them, but argues that it did so only out of fear of harm to its business or other adverse consequences and stresses that the Bershads cooperated freely and fully with the successful investigation and prosecution of these shake-down payments. The Bershads maintain that they should not be barred from holding a non-gaming casino service industry license because of this one wrongful act in an otherwise unblemished history of conducting business in Pennsylvania and also in Atlantic City. It also cites the opinion of the Commission in In the Matter of The Application of Playboy-Elsinore Associates for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission Dkt. No. 81-CL-3, as an analogous and controlling precedent. There the Commission considered whether Playboy or its principal, Hugh Hefner, should be disqualified from obtaining a casino license by virtue of the fact that they had made payments to the liquor authorities of New York in the early 1960s, after being requested to do so as a condition of obtaining a license by New York officials who were later prosecuted with Hefner and Playboy's assistance. The appellants argue that the Commission concluded in the Playboy case that though Hefner may have been guilty of conduct constituting bribery under New Jersey law, the fact that his conduct was a result of an extortion scheme by New York liquor officials, combined with his cooperation with the prosecution and in light of his subsequent good and charitable works, permitted a conclusion that the acts constituting bribery were not disqualifying. The Commission specifically noted that Hefner and his associates did not seek to corrupt a governmental regulatory process which was already undeniably corrupt (Commission's decision at page 46). The Commission distinguished this from an earlier case where disqualification was found where an individual seeking a license sought to bribe a public official and was not a mere victim of circumstances whose agreement to provide illegally requested payments was an isolated incident (Ibid. at pp. 45-47). See, In the Matter of the Application of Seymour Alter for Licensure as a Casino Key Employee, Dkt. No. 79-EA-60 (1980), affirmed by the New Jersey Superior Court, Appellate Division, Dkt. No. A-4106079T1 (June 24, 1981). The applicants argue that the circumstances of the Philadelphia shake-down, as well as their subsequent record of business dealings are analogous to the facts in Hefner's case.

The division argues that the applicants cannot show the requisite good character, honesty, and integrity because of their involvement in the Philadelphia payment scheme, which it characterizes as a reasoned business decision by the Bershads from which they reaped financial benefits. The Division rejects the contention that the Bershads were victims of an extortion scheme and characterizes them as persons who acted out of business interests and directly benefited financially from payments made to Philadelphia police officers.

This is a difficult and close case which touches on the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations and the operations of casino service industries. The actions of the applicants in making payments to members of the Philadelphia Police Department who were unlawfully demanding money, was wrong, both legally and morally, and the Bershads indicate that they knew this to be the case. They also concede that the motive for these protection payments was fear of harm to their business interests and possibly other damaging consequences. It is also evident that Penn Vending benefited financially from the arrangement with the Philadelphia police and called upon them to address at least one problem with a customer. Thus, it is somewhat misleading to characterize them merely as helpless victims of extortion; if anything, they were somewhat willing victims. It is also apparent that the pattern of payments continued over almost a year and was not interrupted until the federal probe intervened. Nonetheless, it is understandable in human terms that the Bershads would feel some fear in response to the shake-down demand of the Philadelphia police, whose past reputation is spotted by incidents of abuse of official power. One has only to read the federal indictment handed up against the officers who unlawfully requested payments from the Bershads to get a picture of the extent of the practice by some members of the Philadelphia Police Department of shaking-down payments from both illegitimate and lawful enterprises. I also note that the Bershads fully and freely, indeed one might fairly say eagerly, cooperated with the federal prosecution that brought these officers to justice.

Although the Bershads' actions in acquiescing to the demand for payments was conduct that is intolerable, especially within the highly sensitive context of casino regulation, the coercive nature of the arrangement as well as the applicant's subsequent cooperation with the prosecution are mitigating factors which must be considered in determining whether the company should be denied a casino service industry license for non-gaming services. The Commission's decision in the Playboy-Elsinore matter is closely analogous in that there, as here, there was no attempt to corrupt a governmental regulatory process. The applicant's misconduct in this case, though occurring over almost a year and not ceasing until it was stopped by the authorities, was isolated in the sense that there was no evidence that the appellants ever engaged in similar conduct or ever approached government officials for the purpose of making payments for protection or some other unlawful purpose. The record of the applicant's since its inception in 1948 is without blemish, beyond the troubling incidents of the payments in 1981 and 1982. The Bershad brothers have conducted their business in Atlantic City for several years, with a number of casinos without incurring any complaint or violation of the Casino Control Act or regulations. The Bershads also offered testimony from a variety of character witnesses attesting to their good and honest characters, as well as their generous and charitable activities, particularly in connection with their religious affiliations. I also found the Bershads to be candid, sincere and remorseful as to their conduct in 1981 and 1982 and feel that, given the circumstances of that offense as well as the absence of any other similar problems in their business dealings, that this conduct is most unlikely to be repeated.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the applicant has established by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c) and that it has otherwise established its qualifications for holding a non-gaming casino service industry license pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(c) and (d).

ORDER

On the basis of the above findings of fact and conclusions of law, it is ORDERED that the application of the Edward Bershad Company t/a Penn Vending Company for a non-gaming casino service industry license be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decisio in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

APPLICATION OF EDWARD BERSHAD COMPANY,
t/a PENN VENDING COMPANY FOR A CASINO SERVICE INDUSTRY LICENSE

DECISION

Appearances:

Richard Morrissey, Deputy Attorney General, for the Division of Gaming Enforcement

Mark Sandson, Esq. (Hankin, Sandson & Sandman) for Edward Bershad Company

On August 12, 1987, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a letter-report objecting to the application of the Edward Bershad Company, t/a Penn Vending Company, for a non-gaming casino service industry license. The Division's objection was based on periodic cash payments made by officers of the applicant company to members of the Philadelphia Police Department, purportedly to allow the company to continue to engage in its business of supplying vending machines, including video poker machines, to Philadelphia businesses. The applicant requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law.

On September 29, 1988, the Administrative Law Judge filed an initial decision finding, pursuant to N.J.S.A.

5:12-86(g), that Alan and Ronald Bershad, President and Vice President of Penn Vending, had committed bribery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2, which is listed as a disqualifying offense in section 86(c)(1) of the Casino Control Act (the Act), but that this offense did not require denial of Penn Vending's application. The ALJ ruled that while rehabilitation as provided by N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h) and 91(c) is not available to an applicant for a casino service industry license, the Commission has discretion under section 92(d) of the Act to consider disqualifying conduct as but one of many factors bearing on an applicant's fitness for licensure. Upon consideration of all the evidence, the ALJ concluded that Penn Vending had established its good character, honesty and integrity as required by N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c) and recommended that we grant its application for a casino service industry license.

The Division filed exceptions wherein it argued that the ALJ's findings and conclusions were erroneous and urged the Commission to deny Penn Vending's application for licensure. Penn Vending filed a response urging the Commission to adopt the initial decision.

The Commission heard argument in this matter at our meeting of December 21, 1988. At the conclusion of the presentations of counsel, we reserved decision to reflect on an issue of first impression, namely whether a casino service industry license may be granted notwithstanding that the applicant is disqualified under the criteria of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86. Consideration of this issue also presents this Commission with its first opportunity to interpret section 92(d) of the Act.

On February 1, 1989, we denied Penn Vending's application for a casino service industry license. In addition, we indicated that while we agreed with the ALJ's position that the Commission has discretion under 92(d) to consider disqualifying conduct as only one of the factors bearing on an applicant's fitness for licensure, we believed that, in the exercise of that discretion, it was entirely appropriate to consider such conduct in the context of the rehabilitation factors listed in sections 90(h) and 91(d) of the Act. After applying those concepts to the case at hand, we further concluded that Penn Vending had not established the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure by N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c).

During 1981 and 1982, Penn-Regal Vending, the predecessor company to Penn Vending Company, was supplying vending machines to various locations in the Philadelphia area. In the late summer of 1981, two of Penn-Regal's video poker machines were seized by the Philadelphia Police Department. Thereafter, Alan Simons, the Bershad brothers' partner in Penn-Regal, advised Alan Bershad that he had been approached by Inspector John DeBenedetto of the Philadelphia Police Department, who advised that in order to continue doing business in Philadelphia, Penn-Regal would have to make payments of $100 per month for each video machine the company had in operation. Alan and Ronald Bershad testified that after discussing the matter with Mr. Simons, they decided to make the payments out of concern for the economic well-being of their business and their personal safety. While the Bershads testified that they had little contact with the police officers other than to make the requested payments, Alan Bershad admitted that he did speak to Inspector DeBenedetto on one occasion when he had a problem with a location that wanted a poker machine removed and stated that after calling the Inspector he never heard from that customer again.

Although the applicant argues that Alan and Ronald Bershad were victims of extortion and therefore could not be prosecuted for making payments to the police, the ALJ rejected this contention and concluded that the Bershads' conduct constituted bribery pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:27.2 since neither extortion nor coercion is a defense to prosecution under that statute. The Commission believes that the judge's determination in this regard is supported by a fair preponderance of the evidence. Even if the brothers were not guilty of disqualifying conduct from the outset, there can be little doubt that when they advised the officer to whom they were paying protection money that they were having a problem with a location that wanted a poker machine removed -- a situation the officer promptly remedied -- they were then and there engaged in a criminal enterprise. It is this aspect of the Bershad's conduct, coupled with the applicant's later attempts to minimize its significance, that causes us great concern.

Having established the existence of a disqualifying offense, we must consider its effect in the context of this application for a non-gaming casino service industry license. Such a license is governed by subsections (c) and (d) of section 92 of the Act and attendant provisions of our regulations. Of the regulations, the most significant to this case is N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c), which requires applicants to establish their good character, honesty and integrity. Of the statutory provisions, the most pertinent for present purposes is N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(d), which provides:

> Licensure pursuant to subsection c. of this section of any casino service industry may be denied to any applicant disqualified in accordance with the criteria contained in section 86 of this act.

The use of the permissive "may" in section 92(d) contrasts sharply with the other licensing provisions in the Act. Those governing casino key employees and casino employees, for example, make application of the section 86 disqualifiers mandatory. Thus, sections 89(d) and 90(e) provide that the Commission "shall deny" a casino key employee license or a casino employee license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of this Act.

Casino service industries which provide gaming-related goods or services are required to meet key employee standards and are therefore subject to mandatory disqualification if a section 86 disqualification is established. The ALJ concluded that with non-gaming companies such as Penn Vending the Legislature vested discretionary authority in this Commission to determine whether to grant or deny an application where a section 86 disqualification appears. However, the ALJ further determined that, unlike casino employee applicants and casino hotel employee registrants in similar situations, CSI applicants are not entitled to demonstrate their rehabilitation from such a disqualification. We do not disagree with the ALJ on this point. Nevertheless, we do believe that, although section 92(d) of the Act does not specifically make rehabilitation pursuant to sections 90(h) and 91(d) available to CSI applicants, as a guide to the sound exercise of our discretion, it is entirely reasonable and proper to refer to the eight factors listed in these sections with but slight modification to account for the fact that the applicant is an enterprise providing goods or services to a casino licensee. Of the eight statutory factors, only the last actually relates to rehabilitative evidence in the usual sense of that phrase. The other seven criteria concern: (1) the nature of the enterprise's relationship with the casino industry; (2) the nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct; (3) the circumstances surrounding it; (4) the date it occurred; (5) the age of the persons or persons responsible; (6) whether the offense was isolated or repeated; and (7) any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct.

In our opinion, reference to these eight "rehabilitation" factors is desirable since these are precisely the concerns that we should evaluate in determining whether to grant an application for a non-gaming casino service industry license where an 86(c) disqualification is evident, and because the utilization of these factors provides a definite yet flexible structure to our analysis. In addition, we have the benefit of innumerable past decisions in which we have applied the rehabilitation criteria in a variety of circumstances. Lastly, identification of the factors pertinent to our decision will undoubtedly prove useful to the parties in the preparation of their cases and to the administrative law judges who must evaluate those presentations in the first instance.

Applying the "rehabilitation" factors to the case before us illustrates just how appropriate those factors are in assessing an applicant's fitness for licensure.

Penn Vending currently operates video arcades in six Atlantic City casino hotels. Between June 1986 and May 1987, it made approximately $370,821 from this business. Since the nature of the applicant's business requires on-site presence in several casino hotels and the volume of business is quite substantial, our concerns as to the applicant's suitability for licensure are considerable.

As to the nature of the offense, the applicant paid approximately $33,000 to Philadelphia police officers. The ALJ found that this conduct, although unprosecuted, constituted bribery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:27-2, which is a disqualifying offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(1) and 86(g). We agree and would note that few, if any, offenses are more intrinsically repugnant to the concerns of a strict regulatory process than is bribery. As this Commission observed in Alter v. Division of Gaming Enforcement, 6 N.J.A.R. 584, 629-630 (1980), "bribery is an offense which strikes at the very heart of the integrity of government regulatory processes in a manner common to few other offenses since the object of bribery is the corruption of government."

As for surrounding circumstances, Alan Bershad testified that he agreed to make payments to the Philadelphia police officers in part because he was "nervous for myself and my family." While the Division characterizes this testimony as self-serving, the ALJ found that fear in response to the demands of the Philadelphia Police to be "understandable in human terms." In this connection, however, we must note that the Bershads were not in all respects the unfortunate victims of the bullying tactics of police officers, at least not to the extent the applicant would have us believe. Nowhere was this more evident than when they sought and obtained the intervention of the renegade officers when one of their customers wanted Penn Vending's machines removed. This circumstance serves to heighten the seriousness of the offense which, in our opinion, is not ameliorated by the argument advanced that Bershad's call for help to Inspector DeBenedetto was a consequence of what counsel termed, "the extortion attempt." We are convinced from our review of this record that the more likely inference is that the Bershads wanted to obtain the protection they were paying for and thereby enhance their business interests. To this extent, at least, the claim that the Bershads' actions were motivated by fear of physical harm from the police simply lacks the ring of truth.

The offense occurred during 1981 and 1982, approximately six years ago.

Alan and Ronald Bershad were approximately 40 and 45 years of age at the time the offense was committed. Therefore the offense cannot be attributed to youth or immaturity.

The ALJ found that, although it occurred over almost a two-year period and did not cease until the authorities intervened, the applicant's misconduct was isolated in the sense that there is no evidence that Penn Vending ever engaged in similar conduct and that, other than that incident, the company's record since its founding in 1948 is "without blemish."

There is no evidence of social conditions which may have contributed to this offense.

With respect to evidence of rehabilitation, the ALJ found that the Bershads acknowledged that they had made a regrettable error in agreeing to make payments to police officers and were sincerely remorseful for their conduct. The ALJ also believed that the Bershads fully and freely cooperated with the federal prosecution that brought the police officers to justice. While we accept the ALJ's conclusion in this regard, we would note that it was not the Bershads who initiated the contact with the authorities, but rather the FBI which came to them.

Balancing all of these factors, we are compelled to conclude that the applicant has not overcome the disqualification which is a consequence of the behavior of the Bershad brothers in 1981 and 1982. Accordingly, the Commission must reject the ALJ's conclusion that Edward Bershad Company t/a Penn Vending Company has established the re ite good character, honesty and integrity and deny its ar tion for a casino service industry license.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on February 19, 1987, and a second complaint on November 17, 1987, seeking sanctions against the respondent for alleged violations of the Casino Control Act. More specifically, the Division alleges that: (1) the respondent's issuance of incentive payments to its patrons violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a); (2) the respondent's implementation of its incentive program prior to receiving Commission approval for the program violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(b) and (c); (3) the respondent's failure to submit a description of its internal procedures and controls of its incentive program violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(a); (4) the respondent's payments under its incentive program of a percentage share of money or property gambled at the casino or derived from casino activity violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1); and (5) the respondent's acceptance of various checks which the respondent issued to casino patrons violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed a complaint with the Commission on February 19, 1987, seeking sanctions against the respondent for the above-alleged violations of the Casino Control Act. By answer dated March 27, 1987, which was received by the Commission on March 30, 1987, the respondent denied the allegations and requested a hearing. On April 9, 1987, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was received on April 13, 1987, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held on the matter before Administrative Law Judge Edgar R. Holmes on June 15, 1987. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether the incentive payments made by BRC to its patrons pursuant to its Incentive Program violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a);

B. Whether BRC's failure to submit a description of its system of internal procedures, administrative and accounting controls of its Incentive Program violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(a);

C. Whether BRC adopted and implemented its Incentive Program prior to receiving approval of said program from the Casino Control Commission, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(b) and (c);

D. Whether the incentive agreements entered into between BRC and its patrons pursuant to BRC's Incentive Program provide for the payment of a percentage or share of money or property gambled at a casino or derived from casino gaming activity, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1);

E. Whether BRC's acceptance of 34 checks which BRC had issued to casino patrons during the period from March 8, 1983, through July 8, 1985, occurred in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and the Casino Control Commission's decision of May 25, 1982, as memorialized in the Commission's order of November 15, 1982;

F. Whether BRC's acceptance of 30 checks which BRC had issued to casino patrons during the period from July 9, 1985, through October 31, 1986, occurred in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25;

G. Whether the doctrines of waiver, estoppel or laches preclude the Division.

A second prehearing conference was scheduled for September 8, 1987. On September 4, 1987, both parties requested an adjournment of the second prehearing conference, as it was then unnecessary. A hearing was scheduled for September 24 and 25, 1987. On September 18, 1987, both parties requested an adjournment of the September 24 and 25 hearing dates as that was the Jewish New Year and several witnesses would be unavailable. This request was granted. Prehearing briefs were to be filed by both parties by October 30, 1987. Both parties subsequently requested that the filing date be extended to November 13, 1987. This request was granted. I received the respondent's affirmative defense brief on November 13, 1988, and the petitioner's initial brief on November 24, 1988. I received the petitioner's response brief to the respondent's affirmative defense brief on December 4, 1987, and I received the respondent's response brief to the petitioner's initial brief on December 9, 1987. A hearing was held on December 10, 1987, in the Municipal Courtroom, Borough Hall, Ventnor, New Jersey. At this hearing, both parties raised the issue of consolidation of a second complaint and consented to the consolidation.

The Division filed a second complaint with the Commission on November 17, 1987, seeking sanctions against the respondent for substantially identical violations of the Casino Control Act. By answer dated December 9, 1987, which was received by the Commission on December 11, 1987, the respondent denied the allegations and requested a hearing. On December 14, 1987, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was received on December 18, 1987, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. In its letter of transmittal, the Commission directed that, due to the commonality of factual and legal issues, Agency Docket No. 88-147 was to be consolidated with Agency Docket No. 87-290 (OAL Dkt. No. CCC 2480-87).

The hearing was continued on January 28, 1988, in the Municipal Courtroom, Buena Municipal Building, Minotola, New Jersey. Both cases were consolidated at that time for purposes of hearing. The hearing was continued on January 29, 1988, at the Office of Administrative Law, 9 Quakerbridge Plaza, Trenton, New Jersey. The hearing was continued and concluded on March 29, 1988, at the Office of Administrative Law in Trenton. The record remained open in order to afford both parties the opportunity to submit post-hearing briefs. The petitioner was afforded until April 5, 1988, to submit its brief, and the respondent was afforded until May 3, 1988, to submit a response brief. By letter dated April 8, 1988, the Division requested an extension of time until April 15, 1988, to submit its briefs. This request was granted, as there was a death in the deputy attorney general's family which necessitated his absence from work. The respondent's response brief deadline was adjusted accordingly. The petitioner submitted its penalty brief on April 29, 1988. The petitioner submitted its proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law on June 1, 1988. By letter dated June 23, 1988, the respondent requested that it be allowed to file its response by July 8, 1988. This request was granted. On July 14, 1988, the respondent requested an extension of time and indicated it would file its response brief within a week. This request was granted. The respondent's brief was received by me on July 29, 1988, at which time the record closed.

STIPULATED FACTS

The Division and the respondent have prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Addendum to Stipulation of Facts which is attached hereto. The Stipulation of Facts and Addendum to Stipulation of Facts provide:

1. Boardwalk Regency Corporation ("BRC") is a New Jersey corporation which was incorporated in 1977 and which has had its principal place of business located at the Boardwalk and Arkansas Avenue in Atlantic City, New Jersey, at all times referenced herein.

2. BRC currently holds a casino license which was originally issued by the Casino Control Commission ("Commission") effective October 25, 1980, and most recently renewed on October 25, 1987.

3. BRC is the holder of a Certificate of Operation, effective June 26, 1979, at which time BRC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Said Certificate of Operation entitles BRC to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq., and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. In the latter part of 1982, BRC adopted a marketing program wherein BRC paid to certain casino patrons an amount of cash that was calculated upon a percentage of the amount of cash placed on deposit by the patrons with BRC as a front money deposit.

5. The marketing program described in paragraph 4, supra, was adopted by BRC for the purpose of providing an incentive to certain casino customers to patronize BRC. In addition, the marketing program was implemented by BRC because of concerns regarding inadequate foreign currency exchange rates at that time, the length of check clearing times for foreign bank accounts and difficulties encountered by BRC in the collection of payments from foreign patrons. For purposes of this Stipulation, this marketing program will be referred to as the Incentive Program.

6. The Incentive Program payments were initially calculated on the basis of the patron's front money deposit.

7. During the period from March 14, 1983 [March 8, 1983], through October 31, 1983, 11 Incentive Program payments were made to BRC, patrons by BRC which payments were calculated upon a percentage of the patrons' front money deposits at BRC. Attached hereto as Exhibit A (J-30) is a sample of the Incentive Agreement prepared during each of the 11 transactions.

8. The total amount of Incentive Program payments to BRC patrons, which payments were calculated upon a percentage of the patrons' front money deposits, was $122,740.

9. The patrons who received Incentive Program payments, based upon a percentage of their front money deposits, the dates of payment and the amount of each payment, are itemized as follows:

	DATE	PATRON	AMOUNT
1.	03/08/83	K. T.	$ 3,300
2.	04/27/83	V. V. (Mr.)	10,000

10. During the period from March 8, 1983 [March 14, 1983], through May 20, 1984, 15 Incentive Program payments were made to BRC patrons by BRC, which payments were calculated upon a percentage of the patrons' outstanding credit balances at BRC. Attached hereto as Exhibit B (J-31) is a sample of the Incentive Agreement prepared during each of the 15 transactions.

11. The total amount of Incentive Program payments to BRC patrons, which [payments] were calculated upon a percentage of the patrons' outstanding credit balances, was $302,750.

12. The patrons who received Incentive Program payments based upon a percentage of their outstanding credit balances at BRC, the dates of the payments and the amount of each payment, are itemized as follows:

13. During the period from August 4, 1984, through October 29, 1986, 46 incentive Program payments were made to BRC patrons by BRC, which payments were calculated upon a percentage of the patrons' gambling losses at BRC. Attached hereto as Exhibit C (J-32) is a sample of the Incentive Agreement prepared during each of the 46 transactions.

14. The total amount of Incentive Program payments which were calculated upon a percentage of patrons' gambling losses was $1,183,040.

15. The patrons who received Incentive Program payments based upon a percentage of their gambling losses at BRC, the dates of the payments and the amount of each payment, are itemized as follows:

16. The total amount of Incentive Program payments made to BRC patrons by BRC during the period from March 8, 1983 through October 29, 1986, was $1,608,530.

17. BRC's policies and procedures for its Incentive Program require all selected patrons to agree, prior to engaging in [a] gaming activity, to satisfy certain conditions established by BRC during the patrons' visit to BRC. A patron who satisfies the conditions is then extended the Incentive Program payment.

18. Among the conditions that were required at various times to be met by BRC patrons under BRC's Incentive Program policies and procedures have been that the patron was a foreign citizen, maintained his principal residence outside the continental United States and that the patron would participate in a certain level of gaming activity at BRC.

19. During the period from on or about March 8, 1983, through on or about August 4, 1984, a patron participating in the Incentive program was required to execute, along with at least two BRC representatives, an "Authorization For Foreign Casino Customer Incentive Plan Payment" (hereinafter "Authorization"), which stated that the "preferred" or "valued casino customer. . . met the qualification criteria of this casino. . ." As referenced above, sample copies of the Authorizations utilized by BRC are attached hereto as Exhibits A and B (J-30 and J-31).

20. The Authorizations described in paragraph 19, supra, provided for the payment to the patron of an amount based on either the amount of cash placed on deposit by the patron, the patron's outstanding credit balance at the conclusion of his gambling activity, or an amount based on the patron's gaming losses at BRC at the conclusion of his gambling activity.

21. In addition to requiring the patron to deposit as front money a certain amount of cash, as described in paragraph 20, supra, the patron was also required to reach a certain level of gambling, such as having the patron's total cumulative bets equal 20 times the patron's cash deposit. In addition, the patron was required to gamble for a minimum number of hours.

22. In instances where the patron's Incentive Program payments were calculated upon a percentage of the patron's gambling losses at BRC, as described in paragraph 20, supra, the BRC patron was required to meet the other conditions of the Incentive Program policies and procedures, as described in paragraph 18 supra.

23. The incentive payments extended through the use of the Authorizations described in paragraph 19, supra, were processed in the following manner. Following the completion of the patron's gambling activity at BRC and the satisfaction of all of the conditions agreed to by the patron and BRC, BRC cage personnel, pursuant to the Incentive Program policies and procedures, prepared a BRC cage disbursement check payable to the patron. The patron was then required to endorse the cage disbursement check and apply it against the patron's outstanding credit balance at BRC.

24. Beginning on August 5, 1984, the Incentive Program policies and procedures required the participating patron and a BRC representative to sign an "Incentive Agreement" wherein BRC agreed to provide the patron with an incentive payment at the conclusion of the patron's gaming activity, provided that the patron met the agreed upon conditions as contained in the Incentive Agreement. As referenced above, a sample copy of the Incentive Agreements utilized by BRC is attached hereto as Exhibit C (J-32).

25. In each of the Incentive Agreements entered into between BRC and its patrons during the period from August 5, 1984, through October 29, 1986, the condition which the participating patron was required to satisfy was a minimum loss as a result of the patron's gaming activity.

26. The incentive payments extended through the use of the Incentive Agreements described in paragraph 24, supra, were processed in the following manner. At the conclusion of the patron's gaming activity, if the patron had satisfied the minimum loss requirement as set forth in the Incentive Agreement, BRC cage personnel calculated the amount of the Incentive Program payment and issued a cage disbursement check payable to either the patron or to BRC in the agreed upon amount.

27. After BRC cage personnel issued a check payable to the patron, the patron was then required to endorse the incentive check payable to the order of BRC for the purpose of applying the check against any outstanding balance owed by the patron to BRC.

28. After the patron endorsed the incentive check as described in paragraph 27, supra, BRC cage personnel applied the incentive check to the outstanding indebtedness of the patron; if counter checks were paid with the incentive check, the outstanding counter checks paid were returned to the patron.

29. At such times when the incentive check was made payable to BRC as described in paragraph 26, supra, the incentive check was applied directly to the patron's outstanding indebtedness to BRC, without the need for the patron's endorsement.

30. The policies and procedures employed by BRC regarding the Incentive Program were first set forth in a memorandum dated August 25, 1982, from Larry Woolf, former BRC Vice-President for Casino Operations, to the "Credit Committee File." The memorandum was read and agreed to by Robert E. Reilert, Vice-President/General Counsel for BRC. Attached hereto as Exhibit D (J-33) is a copy of Mr. Woolf's memorandum.

31. In a memorandum dated September 2, 1983, from J. Terrence Lanni, President of Caesars World International, to various employees of Caesars World International, Caesars Palace, Caesars Tahoe and Caesars Boardwalk Regency, Mr. Lanni memorialized the guidelines to be employed in the conduct of the Incentive Program at BRC. Attached hereto as Exhibit E (J-34) is a copy of Mr. Lanni's memorandum.

32. BRC's drafted in-house policies and procedures for the Incentive Program in or about May 1984. A copy of the policies and procedures dated May 22, 1984, is attached hereto as Exhibit F (J-35).

33. BRC's Incentive Program policies and procedures described in paragraph 32, supra, have been revised at least four times. The policies and procedures are dated November 21, 1984, December 18, 1984, March 21, 1985, and April 10, 1985. Copies of those policies and procedures are attached hereto as Exhibits G through J (J-36 through J-39).

34. At the time that BRC first adopted and first implemented its Incentive Program in the latter part of 1982 and early part of 1983, respectively, and continuing to the present date, BRC has not submitted to either the Commission for review and approval or the Division for review a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls of the Incentive Program.

35. On or about March 1, 1982, BRC filed with the Commission a Petition for Declaratory Ruling, PRN 060204, wherein BRC requested the Commission to amend N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 for the purpose of including Atlantic City hotels and casinos' checks in the definition of "cash equivalent." A copy of BRC's petition is attached hereto as Exhibit K (J-40).

36. On May 25, 1982, during the Commission's public meeting, the Commission considered BRC's petition and resolved to deny the petition.

37. On November 15, 1982, the Commission issued a final order to BRC's petition, which order memorialized the Commission's decision of May 25, 1982, as described in paragraph 36, supra. A copy of the Commission's order is attached hereto as Exhibit L (J-41).

38. On or about July 17, 1985, the New Jersey Legislature amended N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 (see L. 1985, c. 245) to include Section 101g, which provides as follows:

> g. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection b. of this section to the contrary, a casino licensee may accept a check from a person to enable the person to take part in gaming activity as a player, or may give cash or cash equivalents in exchange for the check, provided that:
> (1) The check is drawn by a casino licensee pursuant to the provisions of subsection k. of section 100 or P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-100k.) or upon a withdrawal of funds from an account established in accordance with the provisions of subsection b. of this section;
>
> (2) The check is identifiable in a manner approved by the commission as a check issued for a purpose listed in paragraph (1) of this subsection;
>
> (3) The check is dated, but not postdated;
> (4) The check is presented to the cashier or the cashier's representative by the original payee and its validity by the drawer; and

(5) The regulations concerning check cashing procedures are observed by the casino licensee and its employees and agents.

No casino licensee shall issue a check for the purpose of making a loan or otherwise providing or allowing any advance or credit to a person to enable the person to take part in gaming activity as a player.

39. During the period from March 8, 1983, through July 8, 1985, BRC issued 42 checks payable to patrons pursuant to its Incentive Program.

40. During the period from March 8, 1983, through July 8, 1985, BRC accepted from its patrons 34 of the 42 checks which it had issued to said patrons pursuant to its Incentive Program, as described in paragraph 39, supra. The remaining eight checks remained in the possession of the patron at the time the patron departed from the casino.

41. During the period from July 9, 1985, through October 29, 1986, BRC issued 30 checks payable to patrons pursuant to its Incentive Program.

42. During the period from July 9, 1985, through October 29, 1986, BRC accepted from its patrons 30 checks which it had issued to said patrons pursuant to its Incentive Program, as described in paragraph 41, supra.

43. At all times pertinent herein, BRC substantially complied with its internal policies and procedures relative to the Incentive Program. Monies disbursed by BRC to qualifying patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program appeared on BRC's internal financial statements as "Commission: Customer Incentives." The customer incentive payments appeared in the quarterly financial statements submitted to the Commission as part of the aggregate total for "Casino Expenses." Check disbursements were recorded in the BRC Customer Reimbursement Check log as "incentive" or "incentive payment."

44. During the period encompassed by the Complaint, the Division conducted periodic audits of various aspects of BRC's cage functions, as well as an annual Operations Report which summarized various audits conducted during the past casino license renewal period.

45. In or about April 1983, Division Agent Richard Williamson conducted three interviews with BRC personnel and obtained materials relative to an Incentive Program begun at BRC in the latter part of 1982. In 1986 and early 1987, Division Agent John McGovern conducted an investigation of BRC's Incentive Program from which the 72 incentive payments described in this Stipulation of Facts were traced through BRC's documentation and which resulted in the filing of the Division's Complaint on February 19, 1987. Attached hereto as Exhibit M (J-42) is a copy of the Division Agent Richard Williamson's Investigation Report with attached Exhibits.

46. On November 17, 1987, the Division filed a second complaint against BRC, State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation d/b/a Caesars Atlantic City, CCC Docket No. 88-147, OAL Docket No. CCC 8472-87, alleging violations of N.J.A.C. 5:12-101a and c, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a), N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3, N.J.S.A. 5:12104a(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g.

47. The allegations contained in the Division's complaint of November 17, 1987, resulted from the Division's investigation of the Incentive Program conducted by BRC during the period from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987.

48. During the period from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987, BRC entered into 18 Incentive Agreements with six selected BRC patrons and, pursuant to said Incentive Agreements, issued Incentive Program payments to said BRC patrons.

49. The total amount of Incentive Program payments by BRC to selected patrons during the period from November 1, 1986 through October 24, 1987, is $942,080 [$943,080].

50. The names of the BRC patrons who received Incentive Program payments, the dates the payments were made and the total amounts of the payments pursuant to the Incentive Agreements, during the period from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987, are as follows:

	PATRON NAME	DATE PAID	AMOUNT
1.	A. G.	11/21/86	$ 30,000
2.	A. G.	11/23/86	6,940
3.	A. C.	11/30/86	17,640

51. Each of the Incentive Agreements referred to in paragraph 50, supra, is evidenced by a document captioned "Incentive Agreement" which is authorized and signed by a casino Shift Manager [or someone in a higher position] and is signed by the casino patron. Each Incentive Agreement records the basis on which the incentive is determined. Attached hereto as Joint Exhibits 44 through 61 are true and correct copies of the 18 Incentive Agreements entered into by BRC during the period from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987.

52. Thirteen of the Incentive Program payments issued by BRC to its patrons were used in the patrons' countercheck redemption transactions or were placed on deposit with BRC as front money. The patrons who redeemed counterchecks with their Incentive Program payment and the dates of the payments are listed as follows:

PATRON NAME	DATE PAID
A. G.	11/23/86
A. C.	11/30/86
N. L.	12/12/86

L. M.	10/24/87

53. Patron K. N., who received Incentive Program payments on 1/31/87 ($210,000), 2/5/87 ($210,000) and 10/23/87 ($50,000), placed the Incentive Program payments received on those dates on deposit with BRC as front money deposits.

54. Of the total amount of $942,080 [$943,080] which was paid to the BRC patrons during the period from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987, $802,080 [$803,080] was calculated upon a percentage of the patrons' gambling losses. The balance of $140,000, which was paid to two patrons on six occasions, was not based on a percentage of the patrons' gambling losses but was provided to said patrons as an "Incentive for play." Specifically, the following patrons received the following incentive payments on the following dates which were based on an "Incentive for play":

K. N.	01/31/87	30,000
K. N.	02/05/87	30,000

L. M.	09/24/87	20,000

55. During the period from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987, BRC issued 23 cage disbursement checks pursuant to the Incentive Program to those patrons referred to in paragraph 50, supra. The patrons who received the cage disbursement checks, the check numbers and the amounts of the checks are listed as follows:

56. Attached hereto as Joint Exhibits 62 through 84 are true and correct copies of the 23 cage disbursement checks issued by BRC from November 1, 1986, through October 24, 1987, pursuant to the Incentive Program.

57. Of the 23 cage disbursement checks issued by BRC to selected patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program, as described in paragraph 55, supra, and set forth in detail below, 13 of the checks were accepted back by BRC, 7 of the checks were voided by BRC and 3 of the checks were retained by the patron:

As I FIND the above Stipulation and Addendum to Stipulation of Facts were entered into freely, knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily, I accept the Stipulation and Addendum to Stipulation of Facts and FIND all the facts contained therein as FACT.

FINDINGS OF DISPUTED FACT

The only witness who testified in this case was Mr. Michael J. Walsh, assistant vice-president and comptroller of BRC, who testified for the respondent. I have had ample opportunity to assess the witness's credibility. I listened carefully to his testimony, making judgments about internal consistency, probability and reasonability, Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-555 (1954), and during direct and cross-examination I observed the witness's demeanor, including his mannerisms, voice levels, anger, frustration and other such emotions not apparent on the written record. From the testimony, exhibits and especially my careful observations of the witness, I make the following Findings of Fact, which I believe to be true and credible without any reservation whatsoever:

1. In deciding whether or not a procedure or policy is an internal control, BRC has used as a guide the standard accounting concept of internal controls, which focuses on two main issues: (1) safeguarding the company's assets and (2) assuring that transactions occur within prescribed management directives (2T at 30; 3T at 62-63).[1] The usual process employed by BRC in reaching a decision on whether to submit any procedure or policy as an internal control is a two-step analysis. First, there is a review of N.J.A.C. 19:45 to determine if there is a specific requirement for the submission that might be implicated by the program under consideration (2T at 47; 3T at 64). Secondly, if there is no direct reference located within N.J.A.C. 19:45, then there is an analysis of whether any material component of the program under consideration would be an internal control and therefore should be submitted (2T at 47; 3T at 64-65).

[1] 2T and 3T refer to the Transcripts of Proceedings on January 28 and 29, 1988, respectively.

Due to BRC's perceived lack of guidance within the Act and the regulations in performing this analysis, Michael Walsh, the assistant vice-president and comptroller, has had to draw upon his experiences as an accountant, an audit manager and a CPA, with input from supervisors, corporate counsel and subordinates, as needed (2T at 34; 3T at 65).

2. In deciding whether or not to submit internal controls for the Incentive Program in the submission dated August 31, 1984 (R-1), which it was the responsibility of Mr. Walsh to prepare and submit (2T at 36-37, 3T at 78), Mr. Walsh followed the two-step analysis described above (2T at 46-47, 75-77 and 80-81). In particular, he initially determined that N.J.A.C. 19:45 did not require the submission of a marketing program such as the Incentive Program, which was not a complimentary program (2T at 26, 59-60; 3T at 95-98). His next step was to determine if any component of the program was material enough to require it to be submitted to the Commission, regardless of N.J.A.C. 19:45. When he analyzed the interaction between the casino cage and the program, he determined that all of the material components of that interaction were already included in his internal control submissions regarding the casino cage (2T at 47).

3. As set forth in exhibit R-4, and as explained in detail by Mr. Walsh, the Incentive Program is comprised of 20 separate steps that interact with the casino cage (2T at 47 et seq.). Several of those steps have sub-parts, depending on the individual facts that are presented at the time of the transaction. Of the 35 possible scenarios presented on exhibit R-4, N.J.A.C. 19:45 is applicable to 14 and all but one[2] of those 14 steps were addressed in the August 31, 1984 Internal Control Submissions ("I.C.S.") (R-1). An additional step on R-4 (Step 19.A.2) was not directly referred to in N.J.A.C. 19:45, but was considered sufficiently material by Mr. Walsh to be included in the 1984 I.C.S. (2T 112). The specific provisions within N.J.A.C. 19:45 and within BRC's 1984 I.C.S. for each of those steps are listed in R-4.

[2] Step 19.A.4. on R-4 was not covered in the 1984 I.C.S., even though it had been covered in the 1979 I.C.S. and also appears in the current I.C.S., as shown in R-4.

4. As indicated in R-4, 10 of these 14 steps were also covered in the 1979 I.C.S. (R-2). However, the entire 1979 I.C.S. was not available to either party in the proceeding and Mr. Walsh was unable to determine if the remaining four steps were also covered (2T at 106-107).

5. As also indicated in R-4, all 14 of these steps are included in the current I.C.S. (R-3).

6. Step 10 in R-4 indicates that casino personnel compute the incentive amount. In order to do so, casino personnel have followed two approaches: (1) they have referred to the computer record of patron ratings, which indicates wins and losses for all patrons who are rated and which has previously been submitted to and approved by the Commission; or (2) they have obtained the actual rating cards or slips which indicate wins and losses for all patrons who are rated, which forms have been submitted to and approved by the Commission. The original information contained in either the computer record or the rating slips was then transferred to the Incentive Agreement (2T at 71-72, 85-86, 91-94). The Incentive Agreement was never submitted to or approved by the Commission.

7. At various steps of the transaction (steps 15; 19.B.2; 19.C.8., and 20 on R-4) entries are made in the Main Bank Summary reflecting the transaction (R-4). The Main Bank Summary is a form which records activities within the main bank, which is part of the casino cage. In particular, the Main Bank Summary records the issuance of any disbursement check out of the cage. The Main Bank Summary form was submitted to and approved by the Commission and there was an internal control for it contained within the 1984 I.C.S. (2T 105-106; 3T 20-22). The Main Bank Summary has been utilized by BRC since the inception of its operation (June 1979) and is a standard accounting form (3T at 33-34).

8. At all times pertinent hereto, BRC substantially complied with its internal policies and procedures relative to the Incentive Program. Monies disbursed by BRC to qualifying patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program appeared on BRC's internal financial statements as "Commission: Customer Incentives." The customer incentive payments appeared in the quarterly financial statements submitted to the Commission as a part of the aggregate total for "Casino Expenses." Check disbursements were recorded in the BRC Customer Reimbursement Check log as "incentive" or "incentive payment". (J-1, para. 43; 3T at 49-50).

9. The State of New Jerrsey receives tax on the full amount of the loss sustained by the Incentive Program patron. The loss is calculated without regard to the amount of the incentive payment received by the patron (2T at 115-116).

10. During the period encompassed by the Complaints, the Division conducted both routine and periodic audits of various aspects of BRC's cage functions, including annually, an Operations Report which summarized various audits conducted during the then-current casino license renewal period (J-1, para. 44). During the routine visits by Division agents to the Casino cage, which occurred once or twice a week at a minimum, all documents that pertain to the Incentive Program and the incentive transactions were available and the agents have specifically reviewed Incentive Program documents within the casino cage. (3T at 50-52).

11. In or about April 1983, Division Agent Richard Williamson conducted three interviews with BRC personnel and obtained materials relative to an Incentive Program begun at BRC in the latter part of 1982. His Investigation Report, dated May 3, 1983, stated the following:

CONCLUSION:

The foregoing description of the program represents the procedure Caesars is currently following. Since this is a marketing tool the details are subject to change rather easily. Caesars maintains the arrangements are very flexible and no paperwork is prepared prior to the distribution of the incentive payment from the cage. This procedure should be analyzed by the Division's legal staff to determine the legality (J-1, 3T 53).

12. Prior to the filing of the Complaint, the Division had not advised Caesars of any concerns or objections regarding the Incentive Program. (3T at 52). Knowing that the program had been investigated prior to his arrival at BRC, Mr. Walsh inferred from this lack of advice that his decisions in August, 1984 as to which internal controls to submit, were appropriate. Thus, the Division's audit and subsequent inaction was inferred by BRC to be a ratification of the legitimacy of the Incentive Program (3T at 53).

13. When the Division has advised Mr. Walsh of its concerns or objections regarding other programs or practices, he has routinely informed corporate counsel of the situation and has directed an immediate investigation into the subject to determine what steps should be taken to remedy the situation or to improve the procedures in question. The results of this investigation were then turned over to corporate counsel, who wrote a letter to the Division explaining what would be done to remedy the situation (3T at 55-56). Had the Division raised a concern or objection about the Incentive Program, Mr. Walsh would have followed this same practice (3T at 57).

14. In the scenario set forth in step 19.A.4 on R-4, wherein the patron has an outstanding debt, the patron endorses the incentive check and returns it to the Cage Supervisor so it can be applied against the debt. Any countercheck paid off by the patron is then returned to the patron. (R-4; 2T at 112-113). The countercheck is only returned to the patron after BRC has received an equivalent amount from the patron consisting of the incentive check, which the patron endorsed back to BRC, and either another check or cash received from the patron (2T at 113-114).

15. In the scenario set forth in step 19B on R-4, wherein the patron has no outstanding debt and wishes to receive cash, the patron endorses the incentive check, which is then "voided" by the Cage Supervisor, who then insures that the proper notation is made in the Main Bank Summary to record the voiding of the incentive check. (R-4; 2T at 116-117). The purpose of voiding the check was to assure that there was an appropriate audit trail to show what had happened in this particular transaction, i.e., that the patron had received cash. (2T at 117; 3T at 16-18). The Main Bank Summary also shows that the check was voided and that cash was given to the patron. (2T at 121; 3T at 19-20, 23-25).

16. In the scenario set forth in step 19C on R-4, wherein the patron wishes to place the incentive check on deposit, the patron endorses the incentive check, which is then "voided" by the Cage Supervisor, who then insures that the proper notation is made in the Main Bank Summary to record the voiding of the incentive check (R-4; 3T at 35).

17. A total of seven checks were voided by BRC. On only four occasions did a patron receive cash when an incentive check was voided (J-2, 57; 3T at 5-7). On only three occasions did the patron place the incentive check on deposit (J-2, 58; 3T at 37).

18. BRC had no internal control on the disbursement of cash from the cage in general, and with regard to the Incentive Program in particular, because: (a) there is no subsection of N.J.A.C. 19:45 which deals with the procedure for the disbursement of cash (3T at 11-13), and (b) the procedure of actually disbursing the cash is so routine a part of a cashier's function (Id.).

19. From an accounting perspective, BRC's incentive check is the equivalent of cash in the redemption transaction because the check is completely under the control of BRC and there is no outside risk that the check will "go bad" (3T at 105-106). Because the incentive check is drawn on BRC's bank account, is drawn by BRC personnel, is controlled by the casino cage and there is always a balance in the BRC account, the check is, in essence, cash to BRC (3T at 107, 108). There is, therefore, a very clear distinction between a check that is written by BRC and a check that is written by a patron, whose balance may or may not be sufficient to cover the check and who may or may not be authorized to sign the check (3T at 108, 115-116).

20. BRC utilized three forms that served as the Incentive Agreement during the

a. The first form, entitled "Authorization for Foreign Casino Customer Incentive Play Payment," provided for a payment to patrons who "met the qualification criteria of [the] caisno, which included a cash deposit." The form also provided for a payment to the participating patron which was based upon a percentage of the amount of cash placed on deposit at BRC by the patron. This form was used by BRC during the period from March 8, 1983 through October 31, 1983. During that period of time, 11 Incentive Program payments were made to BRC patrons and were memorialized in the above-described form.

b. The second form used by BRC is also entitled "Authorization for Foreign Casino Customer Incentive Plan Payment," and provided for the payment to the patron of an amount based upon the patron's outstanding credit balance to BRC. The specific relevant language contained in the second form provided as follows:

> The original amount due at the time this authorization was made was $_____.
> I hereby endorse this Company's check, paid in the amount of $_____, which will be credited to the outstanding balance of my account when my check(s) is paid by my bank.

The second form was used by BRC during the period from March 8, 1983 through May 20, 1984. During that period, 15 Incentive Program payments were made to BRC patrons and were memorialized in the above-described form.

c. The third and most recent form utilized by BRC is entitled "Incentive Agreement." This form is divided into three parts. The first part sets forth the "Basis on Which [the] Incentive is Determined." The first part also contains signature lines for the patron and the BRC representative authorizing the agreement. The second part of the Incentive Agreement sets forth the results of the patron's gaming activity, including the "Cash Deposit Amount," "Credit Line/Issued," "Total Drop," "Casino Patron Win (Loss)," "Length of Play/Average Bet" and "Incentive Reimbursement." The second part of the form also contains a signature line for the BRC representative authorizing the payment. The third part of the Incentive Agreement is BRC's record of the payment to the patron including the amount paid, the check number and the signature of the BRC representative completing the payment. The Incentive Agreement was used by BRC during the period form August 4, 1984 through October 24, 1987. During that period, 64 Incentive Program payments were made to BRC patrons. Each of the payments was based upon a percentage of the patrons' gambling losses.

21. As previously stated in the stipulated facts, at no time during the conduct of Incentive Program did BRC submit any of the procedures attendant to the Incentive Program to the Commission or Division for review. Additionally, none of the forms utilized by BRC to effectuate the Incentive Agreements was ever submitted to the Commission or the Division for review, nor were any of the forms ever approved by the Commission.

DISCUSSION

I. DOES BRC'S INCENTIVE PROGRAM VIOLATE N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 a AND c AND N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)?

The Division has charged BRC with violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) in conducting the Incentive Program during the period from March 1983 through October 1987. During that period of time, BRC entered into 90 Incentive Agreements with selected preferred patrons. Each of the Incentive Agreements provided for the payment of an amount of money that was based on either the participating patron's gambling losses, the patron's outstanding debt to the casino or the patron's cash deposit. For present purposes the same legal conclusions apply to each phase of the Incentive Program.

The Division has charged BRC with violating the credit provisions of the Act and regulations arising out of the Incentive Program transactions conducted between BRC and the participating BRC patrons. Each transaction substantially followed the same pattern. Prior to the participating patron's arrival, BRC marketing personnel discussed with the patrons the terms upon which an Incentive Payment would be given to the patron. Upon the patron's arrival at BRC, an Incentive Agreement was prepared by BRC personnel and signed by the patron and a BRC representative. Following the completion of the patron's gambling activity, the patron received an Incentive Payment if he satisfied the terms set forth in the Incentive Agreement. Whether the patron satisfied the terms of agreement was based on the player's rating information, a record of the patron's gambling activity which is maintained by BRC.

If the patron met the terms of the agreement, the player rating information was then entered onto the Incentive Agreement. The Incentive Payment was then calculated based on the player rating information and the payment was authorized by BRC personnel. A BRC cage disbursement check was then prepared in the name of the patron although in some instances the check was issued to BRC. Information regarding the issuance of the check to the patron was also entered onto the Incentive Agreement.

For checks prepared in the name of the patron, the patron endorsed the check and it was then used in the redemption of the patron's outstanding counter checks. The cage disbursement checks issued to BRC did not require the patron's endorsement but were also used in the redemption of the patron's counterchecks.

As a starting point in analyzing Section 101 of the Act and the accompanying regulation and in determining whether violations occurred in this matter, it is instructive to briefly review the origins of casino credit in New Jersey. It has been recognized by the courts that "practices and procedures involved with the extension of credit by the casinos are among the most sensitive aspects of casino operations." Playboy - Elsinore Associates v. Strauss, 189 N.J. Super 185, 191 (Law Div. 1983); see also In the Matter of the Petition Of Adamar Of New Jersey, Inc., Requesting a Declaratory Ruling Concerning The Off-Site Acceptance of Payments On Non-Returned Counter Checks, Etc., 222 N.J. Super 464, 470 (App. Div. 1988). The Commission has also commented on the regulation of casino credit in State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, OAL Dkt. Nos. CCC 7452-82 and CCC 6325-81; Agency Dkt. No. 81-32, as follows:

> [t]he clear legislative purpose of §101 and the regulations promulgated thereunder is the strict regulation and control of an important part of licensed gambling activities, the extension of credit, in order to further public confidence and trust in those operations. See, Resorts International Hotel, Inc. v. Solomone, 178 N.J. Super. 598 (App. Div. 1981) . . . The regulations promulgated under §101 are equally detailed in their requirements for the extension and control of credit. See, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 to 1.30. [Final Decision, Casino Control Commission (Jan. 4, 1983) at 11]

The strict regulation of casino credit which has been recognized by the Commission and the courts finds its origin in the recommendations of two groups which advocated either an outright prohibition of casino credit, (see Report and Recommendation on Casino Gambling by the Commission of Investigation of the State of New Jersey, dated April 7, 1977 ("SCI Report")), or the extension of casino credit under tightly controlled regulations, (see Second Interim Report of the Governor's Staff Policy Group on Casino Gambling, dated February 14, 1977 ("Second Interim Report")). The Division asserts that based upon the clear intent of the legislature to require strict regulation of casino credit under the Act, it is apparent that the Incentive Program violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a).

N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)1 both provide that "[e]xcept as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee or any person licensed under the Casino Control Act . . . shall":

> [c]ash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player; . . .

The statutory and regulatory language quoted above reflects the policy making groups' concerns over the availibility of casino credit to casino patrons. The State Commission of Investigation opposed casino credit to prevent skimming, to guard against unsavory debt collection procedures and to provide player protection. See SCI Report at 2E-3E. The Governor's Staff Policy Group shared the same concerns, balanced against those concerns the advantages offered by a credit system and concluded in its recommendations, "that a system of check-cashing within verified credit limits would accommodate the legitimate interests of both casinos and players and would minimize some of the troubling features of open or 'marker' credit" (Second Interim Report at 34). As a result, the legislature adopted "particularized and extensive requirements governing credit transactions." Playboy Elsinore Associates, 189 N.J. Super at 191.

Pursuant to Incentive Program procedures, BRC issued Incentive Payments in the form of BRC cage disbursement checks to the participating patrons who met the terms of the Incentive Agreement. The check was then accepted back by BRC cage personnel and used in the redemption of the patron's outstanding counter checks or for the purpose of establishing a front money account. According to BRC's policies and procedures, the Incentive Payment check "must be applied towards any outstanding indebtedness", although as of September 25, 1987, it appears that BRC revised its policies to some extent.[3] In some instances, the Incentive Payment check was voided by BRC cage personnel and exchanged for cash. The cash was then used in the patron's redemption transaction, to establish a front money account or, in some instances, given directly to the patron.

Through the above-described transaction, BRC has advanced to participating patrons the funds which are used in the redemption of the patrons' outstanding counter checks or used in establishing front money accounts. The Incentive Payment check is in the patron's possession only long enough to obtain the patron's endorsement. BRC then accepts back the check from the patron and applies it to the patron's redemption transaction or to establish a front money account for the patron.

When the check is voided by BRC personnel, the transaction takes on the appearance of check cashing. The check is voided following acceptance by BRC and the cash is then used in the redemption transaction or to establish a front money account. Both transactions fall squarely within the language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)1, since BRC has either advanced something of value to the patron to enable the patron to pay off debts incurred through the patron's gaming activity as a player or cashed a check which the patron then used to take part in gaming activity.

[3] Under cover of memorandum dated September 25, 1987 from Michael J. Walsh, BRC revised the Incentive Program Policies and Procedures to provide that the patron was not required to apply the cage disbursement check or cash to the outstanding debt, although the patron was free to use the Incentive Payment in the redemption transaction (see J-86).

Since the check or the proceeds of the voided check are both used in the redemption of the patron's counter check, it is clear that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24(a)1 have been violated during the course of the Incentive Program transactions. The statutory and regulatory language prohibits the cashing of a check or advancing of something of value to "enable a person to engage in gaming activity as a player." BRC argues that the Incentive Payments which are issued following the patron's gambling activity do not "enable" a player to engage in gaming activity as a player. However, acceptance of BRC's position would create an artificial distinction in the law which would allow a casino to circumvent the strict regulation of casino credit.

For example, the Incentive Payment checks issued to patron K. N. on February 5, 1987 and October 23, 1987, were voided and the proceeds were deposited with BRC as front money.[4] In establishing a front money account which could have been subsequently used for gambling activity, BRC provided the funds necessary to enable Mr. N. to engage in gaming activity as a player.

Similarly, the same result occurs when a patron with an approved credit account gambles pursuant to his approved credit line, incurs an outstanding casino credit debt and is then provided with the funds used to satisfy his debt. For patrons gambling pursuant to their approved credit accounts, the phrase "engage in gaming activity as a player" necessarily includes the entire transaction, i.e. gambling at the tables pursuant to approved credit lines and subsequent settlement of the debt through the redemption transaction. The front money player, on the other hand, deposits his funds with the casino and then withdraws the funds for play at the gaming tables. As one can see, there is little or no difference in the two transactions, particularly where the patron knows that he will be receiving the funds to be used in the redemption transaction. The participating BRC patrons knew they would receive a payment that would be used to pay off their outstanding casino debts. The only difference between front money patrons and credit patrons is that credit patrons do not put their casino-provided funds to use until after completing their gambling activity at the gaming tables. There is no doubt, however, that they will be receiving an Incentive Payment to use in their redemption transaction. The Incentive Agreement entered before gambling assures the patrons that reimbursement for gambling losses is forthcoming. To recognize a distinction based upon the time that the patron receives the payment creates artificial distinctions between the two transactions and inconsistent results in the interpretation and enforcement of the credit provisions of the Act. Cf. Union County Board of Freeholders v. Union County Park Commission, 41 N.J. 333, 341 (1964) — In construing a statute, every effort should be exerted to avoid an anomalous result.

BRC also argues that the evils which the Legislature hoped to prevent in requiring strictly regulated credit practices namely, skimming, player protection and strongarm methods of debt collection, are not implicated by the Incentive Program. BRC further contends that since the Incentive Program is "not offered to the general public . . . the evil sought to be curbed by the legislature in passing credit extension limitations, namely, prevention of the incurrence of debts by those unable to afford such losses, is not present."

Although it appears that the patrons offered participation in the Incentive Program have substantial resources to satisfy their outstanding casino debts, there is nothing within the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 or N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 to suggest that the statutory and regulatory requirements for casino credit do not apply to all patrons. (Cf. N.J.S.A. 5:12-102(m).) Therefore, regardless of the patrons' preferred status, the absence of any statutory or regulatory language to the contrary establishes that the strict regulation of casino credit applies equally to any transactions with all casino patrons. Simply because a patron does not need the protection intended by the legislature in enacting Section 101, does not except a casino from adhering to the strict statutory requirements. BRC may not decide which transactions are subject to the provisions of the Act and which transactions are not. To allow a casino licensee to decide when and under what circumstances the law applies would cause havoc to the regulatory scheme of casino enforcement.

The Division has also charged that the Incentive Program violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2. N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) provides that no casino licensee shall:

> [r]elease or discharge any debt, either in whole or in part, or make any loan which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without maintaining a written record thereof in accordance with the rules of the Commission. [emphasis added].

Similarly, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2, provides that a casino licensee shall not:

> [r]elease or discharge any debt which is uncollectible, either in whole or in part, which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without maintaining a written record of the deposit, check return and collection efforts as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 and 19:45-1.29.[5] [emphasis added].

The Incentive Program provides a mechanism by which BRC provides selected patrons with an amount which is calculated as a percentage of the patrons' gaming losses and which is used to pay off outstanding casino credit debts or to deposit with BRC for future play at the gaming tables. The Division argues that by providing the patron with the funds to satisfy a portion of his outstanding casino debt BRC has, in effect, released or discharged a portion of the debt owed to the casino by the patron. Moreover, the release or discharge is agreed to prior to the gambling activity with the knowledge and participation of BRC.

It is clear from the language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) as limited by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2 that a casino cannot release or discharge any debt without first establishing that the debt is uncollectible. However, there is nothing in the record to indicate that any of the patrons participating in the Incentive Program ever had uncollectible debts. In fact, BRC states that the exact opposite is true. Also, there are no written records maintained by BRC to indicate that counter checks were deposited and returned, that "collection efforts" were undertaken and that returned checks were then "considered uncollectible." N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(a); N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.29(a) and (j). Since BRC has not established the threshold requirement of uncollectibility, the patrons' debts could not be released or discharged.

[5] N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.29 set forth extensive procedures for casino licensees to follow for the deposit of checks and collection efforts of dishonored checks.

BRC's contention ignores the plain language of the regulation which provides that "a casino licensee shall not release or discharge any debt which is uncollectible . . . without maintaining a written record. . ." (emphasis added). In addition, BRC's argument is flawed in that it distorts the proper sequence established in the regulations for allowing casino licensees to write-off casino debts. After counter checks have been deposited and returned, a casino is required to pursue collection efforts. Following "reasonable collection efforts," the debt may be considered uncollectible and charged to the casino's allowance for uncollectible patrons' checks. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.29(j). Thereafter, a casino is entitled to a deduction for the uncollectible checks in an amount established by the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-24. In reviewing the sequence established in the regulations it is clear that a debt may be considered uncollectible only after collection efforts have been pursued and the collection efforts have been documented by the casino. Moreover, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2 provide that a casino license has the burden of first proving uncollectibility before releasing the patron from his obligation to the casino. As the last event in the sequence, the casino avoids an additional hardship of being taxed on uncollectible revenues through the legislature's providing for an uncollectible debt deduction. See N.J.S.A. 5:12-24 and N.J.A.C. 19:40-1.2.

BRC's decision not to deduct the Incentive Payments from gross revenue does not lead to the conclusion that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2 do not apply to the instant matter. According to BRC's own statements, the debts are not uncollectible. Since the debts are not uncollectible, BRC cannot release or discharge the patrons' debts. The distinction behind the public policy in allowing a casino to release or discharge an uncollectible debt while not allowing a casino to release or discharge a collectible debt is very apparent. To allow a casino to release or discharge a collectible debt would in effect be similar to an extension of credit, and all of the concerns of the SCI, the Governor's Staff Policy Group, the court in Playboy, and the Commission in the prior BRC case would be applicable to such a transaction. Therefore, it is clear that the Incentive Payments which, in effect, serve to release or discharge patron debts, violate N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24(a)2.

In addition, BRC has violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101c in allowing the participating patrons to redeem their outstanding counter checks in amounts less than the amounts for which the checks were drawn. N.J.S.A. 5:12-101c provides in pertinent part as follows:

> . . . the drawer of the check may redeem the check by exchanging cash or chips in an amount equal to the amount for which the check is drawn;. . .

In each instance where BRC issued an Incentive Payment to a patron, BRC provided the patron with a percentage of the funds necessary to redeem counter checks. The drawer of the counter check did not need the full amount to redeem his counter checks.

For purposes of illustration, it is helpful to review the circumstances surrounding the Incentive Agreement entered into between BRC and patron N. L. on May 21, 1986. The Incentive Payment was to be calculated on the basis of 10 percent of losses over $50,000. The Incentive Agreement also indicates that Mr. L. lost $60,000 as a result of his gambling activity. The amount authorized by BRC to be paid to Mr. L. was $6,000. BRC cage disbursement check number 8484, dated June 9, 1986, was issued to Mr. L.

Mr. L. is a credit player at BRC with an approved credit line of $200,000. According to the Incentive Agreement dated May 21, 1986, Mr. L.'s gambling losses and his outstanding credit balance amounted to $60,000. The Incentive Agreement dated May 21, 1986, also contains the following statement which was signed by Mr. L.:

> I hereby authorized Caesars Atlantic City Casino to apply my Incentive Payment Check to the balance due on my markers.

Thereafter, Mr. L's Incentive Payment Check was accepted and deposited by BRC on June 9, 1988.

Although Mr. L. had incurred a gambling debt of $60,000 at BRC, he was only responsible for paying $54,000 to fully satisfy the debt. The balance of $6,000 in the form of an Incentive Payment was essentially a write-off or discharge of the debt balance. The vehicle utilized by BRC to provide the patron with the funds to redeem the full amount of his counter checks for less than the amount for which the counter checks were drawn was the Incentive Agreement between BRC and Mr. L. and the subsequent Incentive Payment. In effect, Mr. L. was able to satisfy 100 percent of his outstanding debt to BRC by presenting only 90 percent of the amount due. This arrangement violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(c).

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's Incentive Program violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) and (2) and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) 1 and 2.

II. DID BRC VIOLATE N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 AND N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 BY ADOPTING AND IMPLEMENTING THE INCENTIVE PROGRAM BY FAILING TO SUBMIT THE PROGRAM FOR REVIEW AND APPROVAL BY THE COMMISSION?

The Division has also charged BRC with violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 by adopting and implementing the Incentive Program without first submitting it to the Commission for review and approval and to the Division for review.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

> a. Each casino licensee shall submit to the commission a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls. Such submission shall be made at least 120 days before gaming operations are to commence or at least 90 days before changes in previously submitted control plans are to become effective, unless otherwise directed by the commission. Each such submission shall contain both narrative and diagrammatic representations of the internal control system to be utilized by the casino. . .

> b. The commission shall review each submission required by subsection a. hereof, and shall determine whether it conforms to the requirements of this act and to the regulations promulgated thereunder and whether the system submitted provides adequate and effective controls for the operations of the particular casino submitted it. If the Commission finds any insufficiencies, it shall specify same in writing to the casino licensee, who shall make appropriate alterations. When the Commission determines a submission to be adequate in all respects, it shall notify the casino license of same. No casino licensee shall commence gaming operations, or alter in fact its internal controls, unless and until such system of controls is approved by the commission. [emphasis added]

N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

(a) Each casino licensee shall submit to the Commission and Division a a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls as part of the requirement of Section 99 of the Casino Control Act. Such submission shall be made at least 90 days before gaming operations are to commence unless otherwise directed by the Commission. Each such submission shall contain both narrative and diagrammatic representations of the internal control system to be utilized by the licensee.

(b) The Commission shall review each submission required by (a) above and with the advice of the Division shall determine whether it conforms to the requirements of the Casino Control Act and to this regulation and whether the system submitted provides adequate and effective controls for the operations of the casino licensee. If the Commission finds any insufficiencies, it shall specify same in writing to the casino licensee, who shall make appropriate alterations. When the Commission determines a submission to be adequate in all respects, it shall notify the casino licensee of same. No casino licensee shall commence gaming operations, unless and until such system of controls is approved by the Commission.

(c) Each casino licensee shall submit to the Commission and Division any changes to the system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls previously determined by the Commission in (b) above to be adequate in all respects at least 90 days before the changes are to become effective, unless otherwise directed by the Commission. The proposed changes shall be submitted to the Commission and such changes may be approved or disapproved by the Chairman unless any Commissioner indicates the changes should be considered by the entire Commission in which case such changes shall be so considered. No casino licensee shall alter its internal controls unless and until such changes are approved.

The statutory and regulatory submission and approval requirements for internal control procedures have been recognized by the courts to be "in accordance with the provisions of the Casino Control Act requiring prior approval of all systems of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls . . ." Playboy - Elsinore Associates, v. Strauss 189 N.J. Super. at 187. The Commission has also noted the significance of the internal control review and approval process in a prior decision involving BRC. In regard to State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, et al., OAL Dkt. No. CCC 3916-80, Agency Dkt. No. 80-10, decided May 18, 1981, the > unreasonable or unfair to expect a casino applicant and temporary permittee such as Boardwalk Regency Corporation to be familiar enough with the statutory and regulatory scheme relating to internal accounting controls so as to detect minor typographical errors. Such a comprehensive understanding is veritably mandated by statute through the device of a written submission describing casino internal accounting and administrative controls which must be approved by the Commission prior to the commencement of gaming operations. [Interim Commission Decision, July 9, 1981 at 15. [emphasis added]

Commission stated that it is not:

N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 expressly provides that: "[e]ach such submission shall contain both narrative and diagrammatic representations of the internal control system to be utilized by the casino, including, but not limited to:

> (1) Accounting controls, including the standardization of forms and definition of terms to be utilized in the gaming operations;
>
> (2) Procedures, forms, and, where appropriate, formulas covering the calculation of hold percentages, revenue drop, expense and overhead schedules, complimentary services, junkets, cash equivalent transactions, salary structure and personnel practices;
>
> . . . .
>
> (4) Procedures within the cashier's cage for the receipt, storage and disbursal of chips, cash, and other cash equivalents used in gaming; the cashing of checks; the redemption of chips and other cash equivalents used in gaming; the pay-off of jackpots; and the recording of transactions pertaining to gaming operations;
>
> . . . .
> (13) Procedures for the cashing and recordation of checks exchanged by casino patrons; . . . [emphasis added]

Based on the express language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, it is clear that BRC was required to submit to the Commission the accounting and internal control procedures of the Incentive Program prior to the adoption and implementation of the program. Sensitive areas of casino operations are involved in the Incentive Program including the issuance of cage disbursement checks to patrons and the redemption of patrons' counter checks. While the vast majority of the procedures involved in the Incentive Program are covered in other internal control submissions of BRC which have been approved by the Commission, several of the steps, particularly the preliminary steps such as the three Incentive Play Payment, Plan Payment, and Agreement forms, the procedure for issuing a casino's own check and then voiding it, and the overall concept of the program were never submitted to the Commission for review or approval or the Division for review. Failure to include the regulatory authorities in the review and approval process strikes against the fundamental concepts of strict regulation and control of the casino industry as intended by the legislature. See N.J.S.A. 5:12-1(b). This is particularly true where the legislature expressly vests the Commission with final approval of all internal control procedures of casino licensees.

BRC contends that it was not required to submit the accounting and internal control procedures because the Incentive Program procedures are no different from BRC's currently approved procedures. It is BRC's position that "BRC's internal controls, as previously approved by the Commission, are effective in preventing the problems feared." In essence, BRC has decided that each aspect of the Incentive Program procedures have been previously approved by the Commission. This is not the case.

In addition, BRC argues that section 99 of the Act leaves a casino licensee with no guidance in determining what internal procedures and accounting controls should be submitted. BRC argues that there is no specific definition of what constitutes "internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls." While there are certain enumerated instances when internal control systems must be submitted (see N.J.S.A. 5:12-99(a)(1)-(17)), there is no guidance offered as to what other activities are covered. Without such guidance, therefore, the casino licensee is largely left to its own devices and experience to determine what internal procedures and accounting controls should be submitted or need not be submitted for those activities that are not precisely covered in the Act or regulation. BRC further states that the concept that has evolved in the industry and at BRC in determining whether to submit an internal control procedure for a particular event, act or program is to determine whether or not such a control is necessary to safeguard the assets of the licensee and to provide a sufficient "paper trail" to explain the event, act or program. BRC asserts that the usage of a new form in connection with a marketing program does not necessitate the submission of the procedures associated with that program to the Commission unless the program's implementation is coupled with a change in the previously submitted internal controls. As provided in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.5(a) and (c), the information required to be placed on a "form" and submitted to the Commission for approval is only that information "required by this chapter." The Incentive Agreement contains information that is gathered from ratings slips whose form has already been submitted to and approved by the Commission. The information, such as the amount of a patron's gaming losses is merely recorded on the Incentive Agreement from a form that has previously been approved by the Commission. Unfortunately, BRC's argument ignores both the express language and the intent of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 specifically lists 17 comprehensive areas of internal control procedures which must be submitted to the Commission. The areas listed involve the procedures for all accounting controls, all procedures within the cashier's cage, all check cashing procedures and all procedures for the exchange of checks (emphasis added). In addition to providing a comprehensive listing, the statute also provides that the licensee's internal control submission shall not be limited to the areas listed in Section 99. Thus, clear guidance has been provided by the legislature; namely, all procedures concerning casino operations must be submitted to the Commission for review and approval. In addition, the Act specifically requires the submission of standardized forms, procedures and forms used for items such as complimentary services and cash equivalent transactions, and cage procedures for receipt or disbursal of cash, cash equivalents, and the cashing of checks. All internal procedures and forms must be approved by the Commission. As early as September 1983, BRC had written guidelines to be employed in the conduct of the Incentive Program (J-34). In-house policies and procedures were drafted in May 1984 (J-35), and they have been revised four times since (J-36 through J-39). None of these procedures has ever been submitted to the Commission or the Division. It is clear from prior Commission decisions that BRC knew or should have known that it could not implement new programs, procedures, or forms, such as the Incentive Program, without Commission approval. See State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation; see also, N.J.S.A. 5:12-130g.

The comprehensive language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 makes it clear that the legislature intended the Commission to have final comment as to whether a licensee's internal control procedures comply with the requirements of the Act and regulations. Moreover, the all-encompassing language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, particularly subsection (b) which states that the Commission "shall determine whether [the submission] conforms to the requirements of [the] Act and to the regulations promulgated thereunder. . ." (emphasis added) clearly establishes that the Commission is to decide whether the procedures comply with the Act. Neither the express statutory or regulatory language nor BRC's prior involvement in a Commission decision involving this same issue can support BRC's contention that it was left to its own devices. What is clear is that BRC was required to seek guidance from the Commission prior to its implementing the Incentive Program.

In addition, N.J.S.A. 5:12-99b also provides that: "[n]o casino licensee shall. . . alter in fact its internal controls, unless and until such system of controls is approved by the commission." As noted above, the Incentive Program has been revised various times since its inception. The Incentive Payments were originally based upon the patron's front money play. The program was then changed so that payments were based upon the patrons' outstanding casino debts and then upon the patrons' gaming losses. Most recently, since the filing of the Division's first complaint, BRC began offering certain patrons an "Incentive for Play," which were payments made upon the patron's arrival, before the patron engaged in gaming. Despite the various changes made to the Incentive Program, BRC did not submit any of the changes to the Commission.

One aspect of the Incentive Program procedures which bears particular note is the voiding procedure utilized by BRC following acceptance of the Incentive Payment checks. In procedures described by Michael Walsh during the hearing, BRC voided the Incentive Payment check and either gave cash to the patron or used the cash for the redemption of counter checks or to establish a front money account. Prior to voiding, the check was presented to the patron. The patron then endorsed the check and returned it to the cage personnel who then voided the check. Mr. Walsh testified that it was his opinion that voiding procedures are not set forth anywhere in the Act and, for that reason, BRC did not submit the procedures to the Commission.

The voiding procedure described by Mr. Walsh must be viewed as either the exchange of a check for a front money deposit or the cashing of a check. Either procedure must be submitted for Commission review and approval pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-99(a)(4) or (a)(13). The failure to submit this aspect of the Incentive Program would alone be sufficient to impose liability under N.J.S.A. 5:12-99. While the vast majority of the procedures used by the BRC in the Incentive Program were covered by previous internal control submissions, certain aspects of the program are not covered by those submissions and the overall concept of the program was also never submitted. While BRC refers to the program as a "marketing program", the aspects of the program directly fall under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C 19:45-1.3. As such, the failure of BRC to submit all aspects of the Incentive Program and the overall concept of the program to the Commission for review and approval and to the Division for review constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3. The bottom line is in light of the strict regulatory nature of the Act—all systems of internal procedures, programs, forms, and administrative and accounting controls must be submitted to the Commission for approval. If there is any doubt. . . submit it!

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's failure to submit all aspects of the Incentive Program and the overal concept of the program to the Commisison for review and approval and to the Division for review constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3.

III. DID BRC VIOLATE N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) BY ENTERING INTO INCENTIVE AGREEMENTS WHICH PROVIDED FOR PAYMENTS BASED ON CASINO GAMING ACTIVITY?

The Division has charged BRC with violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) in entering into agreements with casino patrons which provided for payments to the patrons based upon the patrons' gambling activity at BRC. N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) provides as follows:

> a. (1) Unless otherwise provided in this subsection, no agreement which provides for the payment, however defined, of any direct or indirect interest, percentage or share of any money or property gambled at a casino or derived from casino gaming activity or of any such interest, percentage, or share of any revenues, profits or earnings of a casino shall be lawful.

Subsections 2 through 5 of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a set forth the types of agreements which are excepted from the above-quoted provision. The exceptions to the requirements of Section 104a(1) include agreements which provide for the payment of a fixed sum (subsection (2)); agreements between a casino and its employees providing for profit sharing (subsection (3)); lease agreements (subsection (4)); and agreements between a casino licensee and a holding company or intermediary company of the licensee (subsection (5)). The Incentive Agreements between BRC and the participating patrons are not within any of the exceptions of section 104. A naked reading of section 104a would at first glance appear to make BRC's Incentive Agreements unlawful.

An elementary tenet of statutory analysis is that statutory interpretation begins with a reading of the statutory language. See Hackensack Bd. of Education v. Hackensack 63 N.J. Super. 560, 569 (App. Div. 1960). In addition, "[a]ll parts of the statute must be read so that they are in alignment with the intent of the entire act" Seatrain Lines, Inc. v. Medina, 39 N.J. 222, 226-227 (1963) (citations omitted).

Section 104a(1) prohibits a sharing by the casino licensee of his license or any property interest in a casino. The legislative history and the public policy mandates of the Act reveal that the concern of the legislature in enacting 104a(1) was to guarantee that the Commission would have ultimate control over the persons to be involved in casino operations. Unlike those agreements to which the statute is directed, the agreements entered pursuant to the Incentive Program are only marketing tools between the casino and patrons and do not enable patrons to infiltrate the casino industry and reap benefits in the form of a sharing of the profits, interest or license of BRC.

To maintain the integrity of casino operations, the legislature provided that anyone seeking an interest in the casino industry, whether as a casino licensee, a casino employee or a casino service industry, would be required to meet the licensing requirements of the Act and of the Commission as set forth in the regulations. Essentially, these persons must be licensed prior to engaging in any activities connected with the casino industry. Section 104 and its subparts were enacted to insure that such licensing requirements would be complied with. This conclusion is amply supported by reading all of the provisions in section 104. As stated in section "c,": "[n]othing in this act shall be deemed to permit the transfer of any license, or any interest in any license, or any certificate of compliance or any commitment or reservation."

The other sections and subsections clarify this mandate and attempt to identify the types of agreements which are unlawful. Indeed, a reading of the entire text of section 104 reveals the legislature's concern for those persons doing business with, or seeking an interest in, the casino (emphasis added). Section 104a(2) discusses the characteristics of "receipts, rentals or charges for real property, personal property or services." Section 104a(3) deals with employee profit sharing plans. Section 104a(4) is concerned with agreements to lease an "approved hotel building or the land thereunder" and "agreements for the complete management of a casino." Section 104a(5) sets forth requirements for "agreements which provide for percentage charges between the casino licensee and a holding company or intermediary company of the casino licensee."

The legislative mandate is set forth with even more clarity in section 104b as it read prior to January 4, 1988, which requires a casino licensee to present to the Commission "any written or unwritten agreement regarding the realty of, or any business or person doing business with or on the premises of, its casino hotel facility." This section goes on to provide:

> Every agreement with a casino hotel shall be deemed to include a provision for its termination without liability on the part of the licensee, if the commission shall disapprove of the business or of any person associated therewith, by reason of a finding that said business or person is unsuitable to be associated with a casino enterprise in accordance with the regulations promulgated under this act. [emphasis added]

In short, all of the provisions of section 104 deal with issues that far transcend the concerns, if any, raised by the marketing strategy at issue in this matter. Section 104 was written to regulate transactions between casinos and businesses or other third parties doing business with the casinos, not to regulate transactions between casinos and its patrons. Other sections of the Act regulate those transactions.

Any doubt as to the meaning of section 104 and the intentions of the legislature in enacting it can be dispelled by a review of the pertinent legislative history. The Senate Judiciary Committee statement to the bill lends support to the argument that a program such as BRC's does not impinge upon the Act's prohibitions:

> provide for payment of an interest or percentage or share of [a] casino, unless (a) they provide profit-sharing for casino employees or casino key employees; (b) such contracts are part of an agreement for the leasing of a casino-hotel or the land under it and the agreement satisfies the conditions discussed in connection with section 18; (c) such contracts are for management of a casino and such contracts meet the condition discussed in connection with section 18; (d) agreements between a casino licensee and its holding company or an intermediary company. [Senate Judiciary Statement to Senate Comm. Subst. for Assembly, No. 3485 (Nov. 29, 1979)]

Clearly, patrons who receive the benefit of BRC's Incentive Program do not have percentage contracts with BRC in the form envisioned by the legislature and they do not receive a percentage, share or interest in the casino by their involvement in the program. The patrons cannot be said to have part ownership of the casino nor to be circumventing the licensing provisions of the Act, the two evils that the legislature specifically sought to curb by passing the amended version of section 104a.

A review of the public hearings on section 104 further supports the arguments advanced by BRC herein. As stated in the Public Hearing before the Assembly State Government, Federal and Interstate Relations and Verterns Affairs Committee, Sept. 27, 1978, at 4;

> Section 104 . . . requires each casino licensee to submit to the Commission every agreement with any person doing business with its casino hotel facility. By means of these provisions, the Commission obtains direct control over and can assure the integrity of all businesses dealing with the casino hotel facility [emphasis added].

These mandates may also be gleaned from the SCI Report, which discusses the concerns of the persons who drafted the Act. As recommended by the State Commission on Investigation:

> A provision should be enacted prohibiting anyone from exercising any voice, control or authority in or over a casino's operations unless individually licensed by the casino.
>
> . . . .
> Those who have the authority to affect a casino's operations in any way must also be subject to the scrutiny of a licensing process. [Id. at 15-16B, 18B]

It follows, therefore, that Section 104 was passed to insure that the licensing provisions of the Act would not be circumvented by casinos and that the Commission would retain control over all those involved in Atlantic City casino operations. These concerns do not exist in the situation at hand and the BRC program does not raise the problem sought to be addressed by section 104a. The Incentive Agreements were not business relationships affecting a casino's operations. They were agreements between BRC and patrons in order to entice patrons to gamble at BRC. These are not the type of agreements regulated by section 104.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's Incentive Program violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a.

IV. DID BRC VIOLATE N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 AND A PRIOR COMMISSION ORDER BY ACCEPTING 84 CAGE DISBURSEMENT CHECKS?

The Division has also charged BRC with violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and a prior Commission order dated November 15, 1982, which memorialized a Commission decision of March 25, 1982.

These violations arise out of the Incentive Program procedure in which the patron endorsed the Incentive Check and returned it to the BRC cage personnel for the purpose of redeeming counterchecks, or establishing a front money account or in exchange for cash. During the period of time from March 8, 1983 through October 24, 1987, BRC accepted from BRC patrons 84 cage disbursement checks that had been issued to the patrons as Incentive Payments. BRC had issued 92 cage disbursement checks as Incentive Payments during that same period of time. Eight of the cage disbursement checks were retained by the patrons. The allegations concern two sets of violations: those occurring before July 17, 1985, when N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g became effective, and those occurring after that section of the statute was enacted.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b establishes that a casino licensee may not "accept a check, other than a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player." Moreover, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g provides that a "casino licensee may accept a check from a person to enable the person to take part in gaming activity as a player . . . provided that" the check represents a refund of patron's gaming chips in an amount over $25, see, N.J.S.A. 5:12-100k, or a redemption of a patron's front money account, see, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b provides:

b. No casino licensee or any person licensed under this act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under this act, may accept a check, other than a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player, or may give cash or cash equivalents in exchange for such check unless:

(1) The check is made payable to the casino licensee;
(2) The check is dated, but not postdated;
(3) The check is presented to the cashier or his representative and is exchanged only for a credit slip or slips which total an amount equal to the amount for which the check is drawn, which slip or slips may be presented for chips at a gaming table; and
(4) The regulations concerning check cashing procedures are observed by the casino licensee and its employees and agents.

"Cash equivalent," as defined in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1, means:

1. Certified checks, cashiers checks, treasurers checks, recognized travelers checks or recognized money orders, any of which are made payable to the casino licensee, "bearer" or "cash";
2. Certified checks, cashiers checks, treasurers checks or recognized money orders, any of which are made payable to the presenting patron and endorsed in blank, provided, however, that no such instrument shall be accepted as a cash equivalent if the instrument was originally made payable to any person other than the presenting patron; and
3. Recognized credit cards presented pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(i).

The checks accepted by BRC pursuant to the Incentive Program procedures technically do not meet the statutory requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b or N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g or the regulatory requirements of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b). The checks are not "a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent" (N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b), nor do they represent a redemption of a patron's gaming chips in excess of $25 or a refund of a patron's front money deposit. In addition, of the 92 checks issued to the BRC patrons, all but eight were payable to the patron participating in the Incentive Program. The checks not made payable to the patron were payable to either "BRC," "Caesars Atlantic City," "Caesars Boardwalk Regency" or "Boardwalk Regency Corporation." Both N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(c)3 require that all checks sought to be exchanged in a casino shall be "made payable to the casino licensee." Therefore, BRC could not have accepted any of the checks from the patrons unless they were made payable to the licensee and, after July 17, 1985, unless the check satisfied the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g.

On July 17, 1985, the Legislature amended the Act to include N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g, which allowed casinos to accept any check issued by a casino which represented a redemption of $25 or more in gaming chips, see, N.J.S.A. 5:12-100k, or a refund of a front money deposit, see, N.J.S.A. 5:12-100b. Prior to July 17, 1985, a check could only be accepted if it satisfied the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, i.e., if it was "a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent" or was made payable to the casino licensee, was not post-dated and was presented to a cage cashier in exchange for a credit slip or slips. See, Committee Statement to A-2625, L. 1985, c. 245.

Following the adoption of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g, the Commission amended N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 to specifically define the term "casino check." The Commission's definition of casino check is derived from the language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g and provides as follows:

> "Casino check" means a check which is drawn by a casino licensee upon the licensee's account at any New Jersey banking institution and made payable to a person in redemption of the licensee's gaming chips, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-100(k) or in return, either in whole or in part, of a person's deposit on account with the casino licensee pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b), and which is identifiable in a manner approved by the Commission as a check issued for one of these purposes.

In addition, the Commission promulgated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(f)5 to require casinos to verify with the issuing casino that the check represented either a return of the patron's deposit money or the redemption of the casino's gaming chips prior to acceptance. The regulations promulgated by the Commission clearly support a finding that only checks which meet either of the two requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g may be accepted by a casino.

For checks issued prior to the enactment of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g, it is equally clear that only checks which satisfied the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b could be accepted by a casino. All but two of the 42 cage disbursement checks which were issued to BRC patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program prior to July 17, 1985, were made payable to the patron. Since the checks were not traveler's checks or cash equivalents and did not meet the other requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, it follows that the checks could not be accepted by BRC.

It should be noted that BRC recognized the restrictions on accepting a check issued by a casino when it requested the Commission to "amend N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 to include checks issued by Atlantic City hotel/casinos within the definition of "cash equivalent."

See, In the Matter of the Petition of Boardwalk Regency Corporation to amend N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 to Include 'Atlantic City Hotel/Casinos' Checks Within the Definition of "Cash Equivalents," Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-69c, PRN 060204. The Commission considered BRC's petition during the public meeting held on May 25, 1982. On that date, the Commission voted to deny BRC's petition. By Final Order dated November 15, 1982, the Commission memorialized its decision of May 25, 1982.

The significance of the Commission's prior order is that the Commission denied BRC's specific request to expand the definition of cash equivalents, as set forth in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1, to include checks issued by Atlantic City casinos. The effect of Commission approval of BRC's request would have been to allow BRC to accept checks issued by other Atlantic City casinos. However, the Commission's denial of BRC's request expressly represented to BRC that it could not accept checks issued by other Atlantic City casinos.

The effect of the Commission's order is further evidenced by Commission staff comments to BRC's internal control submission dated August 31, 1984, and the Commission staff's response thereto, dated August 16, 1985. In its internal control submission to the Commission, BRC included "checks issued by BRC" within its definition of cash equivalents. The Commission staff responded by stating that checks issued by Boardwalk Regency Corporation are not cash equivalents under the current definition in N.J.A.C. 19:45.

BRC's 1982 petition addressed the difficulty associated with a patron who received a casino check in redemption for his gaming chips at one casino and then desired to take that check to another casino. Prior to July 17, 1985, that patron could not submit the first casino's check to another casino. Although the Commission was unwilling to grant the petition, it did recommend that the industry lobby the Legislature for the change. Thereafter, the Legislature enacted N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g.

At no time, either when the petition to the Commission was made or during the lobbying for the bill, was the issue of a casino's acceptance of its own check ever raised. Despite this fact, the Division now attempts to include within section 101g casino checks issued and accepted by the same casino. The language of the statute and the prior Commission Order address "casino licensee checks." They do not differentiate between checks issued by other casinos and those issued by the same casino. The statute is silent regarding the issue.[6]

BRC further contends that its actions did not violate the provisions of section 101b because the payments were not made to enable patrons to engage in gaming activity. "Gaming" is defined in the Act as "[t]he dealing, operating, carrying on, conducting, maintaining or exposing for pay of any game." N.J.S.A. 5:12-22. BRC asserts that since BRC's payment to patrons of incentive monies was made at the culmination of their gaming activity, the acceptance of checks pursuant to the program was not to enable patrons to engage in gaming activity and, therefore, such conduct is not prohibited by the Act. While it is true that the vast majority of the checks were used for redeeming counterchecks, a few were used to establish front money accounts. The establishment of a front money account does enable a patron to engage in gaming activity.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 specifically identify the checks which may be accepted by casinos. The Commission was also quite specific in identifying the checks which could be accepted by casinos when it adopted the definition of "casino checks" and the accompanying regulations. In the absence of any language within the Act or regulations expressly permitting the acceptance of checks which are not "casino checks" but which have been issued by the same casino which wishes to accept the check, BRC could not accept the Incentive Program checks.

During his testimony, Michael Walsh stated that this limited reading of the Act did not make sense from an accountant's perspective. That may be true. Both the Governor's Staff Policy Group Second Interim Report and the SCI Report reflect that the check cashing restrictions were included in the Act and the regulations in order to prevent credit abuses. The SCI recognized that personal checks were "little more than an I.O.U."

[6] Having been Assistant Counsel to the Governor at the time this bill was passed, and having been responsible for reviewing this legislation, I know that the issue before the Legislature was the acceptance of checks issued by other casinos. The issue of accepting one's own check was never raised.

SCI Report at 6-E. The SCI stated that "these provisions will make the use of personal checks less vulnerable to the same abuses that can occur with casino workers or I.O.Us." SCI Report at 7-E. None of the credit concerns are present in this case. What is safer than a casino accepting its own check, drawn on its own bank, on its own account, with its own money? While the Act does not specifically address a casino accepting its own check, this appears to be an oversight because the issue was never previously raised. As the Act does not specifically provide for such a transaction, there is a technical violation of the Act; however, no harm is done by the transaction. I respectfully suggest that the Commission or the Legislature address this issue so that a casino may accept and cash a check drawn on its own account.

Based upon the foregoing, as a few of the checks were used to establish front money accounts which enabled patrons to engage in gaming activity, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent in voiding or cashing its Incentive Program checks violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25.

V. IS THE DIVISION ESTOPPED FROM PURSUING ITS COMPLAINT AGAINST BRC?

BRC asserts that the Division is barred from prosecuting this action because it had knowledge of the Incentive Program as a result of its almost daily audits of BRC's cage functions during the pendency of the program and, by its conduct, tacitly approved the program and its administration. The law is clear that when it is found that one's conduct has led another to do what he would not otherwise have done, then the former is equitably estopped from subjecting the latter to loss as a result of said reliance.

The doctrine of equitable estoppel is a doctrine designed to prevent a party's disapproval of previous conduct if such repudiation would not be responsive to the demands of justice and good conscience. Carlsen v. Masters, Mates & Pilots Pension Plan Trust, 80 N.J. 334 (1979).

> Estoppel is an equitable doctrine, founded in the fundamental duty of fair dealing imposed by the law, that prohibits a party from repudiating a previously taken position when another party has relied on that position to his detriment. Generally, its elements are a representation (or misrepresentation), knowledge that a second person is acting on the basis of that representation, and substantial detrimental reliance by the second person. See Carlsen v. Masters, Mates & Pilots Pension Plan Trust, 80 N.J. 334, 339

Atlantic City Housing Authority v. State, 188 N.J. Super. 145, 149 (Ch. Div. 1983), affirmed on other grounds 193 N.J. Super. 176 (App. Div. 1984). See also, Royal Associates v. Concannon, 200 N.J. Super 84 (App. Div. 1985).

Equitable estoppel arises from one's "conduct," which necessarily encompasses spoken or written words, positive acts and silence or an omission to act. State v. United States Steel Corp., 22 N.J. 341, 358 (1956). Estoppel is not based upon subjective intent but rather on the objective impression created by the actor's conduct. Miller v. Teachers' Pension & Annuity Fund, 179 N.J. Super. 473, 477 (App. Div. 1981) certif. den. 88 N.J. 502 (1981).

Equitable estoppel has also been defined by the New Jersey courts as "conduct, express or implied, which reasonably misleads another to his prejudice so that repudiation of such would be unjust in the eyes of the law." Marley v. Borough of Palmyra, 193 N.J. Super. 271, 299 (Law Div. 1983). The objective impression created by such conduct is the linchpin of estoppel. Ibid.

The essential elements for the doctrine of equitable estoppel are set forth in detail in Clark v. Judge, 84 N.J. Super. 35 (Ch. Div. 1964), aff'd o.b. 44 N.J. 550 (1965) as follows:

> (1) Conduct amounting to a representation or a concealment of material facts.
> (2) Facts known to the party allegedly estopped, or at least the circumstances must be such that knowledge of them can be necessarily imputed to him.
> (3) The truth concerning the facts must be unknown to the party claiming the estoppel at the time when acted upon by him.
> (4) The conduct must be done with the intention that it be acted upon by the other party.
> (5) The conduct must be relied upon by the other party, and he must be led to act upon it.
> (6) He must in fact act upon it in such a manner as to change his position for the worse.

84 N.J. Super. at 54.

The vital principle of equitable estoppel is that he who, by his language or conduct, leads another to do what he would not otherwise have done, shall not subject such person to loss or injury by disappointing the expectations upon which he acted. In Re Gravure Paper & Board Corp., 234 F. 2d 928, 932 (3d Cir. 1956).

The doctrine of equitable estoppel is not applied as readily against the State as against private parties. See, Burns v. Bd. of Trust. of Pub. Emp. Retirement System, 2 N.J.A.R. 427 (June 29, 1979). However, this general principle is tempered where there has been substantial reliance by those whose interests are affected. See, Skulski v. Nolan, 68 N.J. 179 (1975). These cases both suggest that the doctrine of equitable estoppel can be utilized against a public entity under some circumstances. However, BRC recently raised the defense of equitable estoppel in an appeal of a Commission ruling in In the Matter of the Petition of Adamar of New Jersey, Inc., Requesting a Declaratory Ruling Concerning the Off-Site Acceptance of Payments On Non-Returned Counter Checks, Etc., 222 N.J. Super. 464 (App. Div. 1988). In rejecting the appellant's defense, the court noted that "[c]ourts rarely invoke equitable estoppel against a governmental entity, particularly where estoppel interferes with essential governmental functions." 222 N.J. Super. at 475, citing Vogt v. Borough of Belmar, 14 N.J. 195, 205 (1954) and O'Malley v. Department of Energy and Department of Civil Service, 109 N.J. 309, 316 (1987).

In Adamar, the appellant sought to prevent the Commission from reopening and vacating prior-approved procedures of the licensee/appellant. The approvals concerned the "passive" collection of outstanding counterchecks at identified branch office locations. "Passive collection" was recognized by the court as "a procedure whereby a licensed casino employee is sent at the patron's request to a location other than the cashiers' cage for receipt of payment of a patron's gaming checks." 222 N.J. Super. at 468. The appellants submitted internal control procedures for branch office collections. The procedures were granted approvals by Commission staff through delegated authority which were "ratified by the Commission, on a case-by-case basis from 1983 to 1985." Ibid.

Thereafter, Adamar of New Jersey, Inc., sought approval for expanded "field" collection procedures. The Division objected and Adamar petitioned the Commission for approval of the submitted procedures. The Commission denied Adamar's request and also reopened and vacated the prior-ratified approvals "to protect the public interest and integrity of the casino industry." 222 N.J. Super. at 469. As noted, the appellate court affirmed the Commission's decision.

In the present matter, BRC contends that the Division's knowledge of the Incentive Program serves to estop the Division from bringing the instant action. The facts relied upon by BRC to assert its defenses are that the Division had knowledge of the Incentive Program since early in its inception and did not proceed with any enforcement action until February 1987. The Division does not dispute that it knew in 1983 that BRC intended to offer payments to selected patrons who brought cash to the casino for gambling. The parties have stipulated to that fact. Also entered into the record are joint exhibits which indicate that a Division agent reviewed Incentive Program procedures and documents in October or November 1985. The Division thereafter conducted an extensive investigation of the Incentive Program in 1986 which resulted in the filing of the Division's first complaint on February 19, 1987. In addition, BRC asserts that the Division had knowledge of the Incentive Program through its conduct of almost daily audits of BRC for over four years. BRC asserts that it reasonably believed that its conduct fell within the letter and the spirit of the Casino Control Act since the Division had knowledge of the Program and yet never questioned the operation of the Program.

While recognizing that the doctrine of estoppel is not applied to a government agency exercising a governmental function to the same extent as it is against an individual or private corporation, particularly when the government agency is acting to protect the health, safety and welfare of the public, BRC asserts that in this case the applicable statutes have no such public safety motivation, but rather are aimed merely at establishing accurate bookkeeping practices and procedural integrity. BRC concludes that "since no public policy issues are implicated in the instant litigation, and since the conduct of which BRC is now accused does not vitiate any of the goals of the Casino Control Act, the doctrine of estoppel should apply."

It is apparent that the Division conducted several interviews and collected various documents in April 1983 regarding the Incentive Program at BRC. The interviews conducted by the Division disclosed that BRC provided payments to patrons who brought cash to the casino for the purpose of gambling. In addition, the documentation obtained by the Division indicated that the plan was designed to encourage foreign customers to bring cash to the casino to offset losses suffered by BRC in dealings with foreign credit customers through inadequate foreign exchange rates, loss of interest due to statutory and regulatory depository requirements and the inability to collect on counterchecks issued to foreign customers. Included within the documentation were analyses prepared by BRC personnel to illustrate the "cost" to BRC of dealing with foreign credit customers, with the major portion of the cost being unearned interest to BRC as it awaited the deposit and payment of counterchecks issued to foreign patrons.

In the third phase of the Incentive Program, the Program was conducted and based upon the amount of a patron's gambling losses. The program was not based upon the amount of cash that a patron deposited with BRC to engage in gaming activity. Thus, it is inaccurate to make the broad statement that "an investigation was initiated to ascertain the specifics of the [Incentive] program and determine its legality." The "specifics" of BRC's Incentive Program have been changed at least twice by BRC. Since the Incentive Program as it existed in 1985 through 1987 was significantly different from that which was offered by BRC in April 1983, BRC cannot rely on the Division's limited awareness of the Program in 1983 as tacit approval for its subsequent programs.

Secondly, in its Statement of Facts BRC states that "the Division has conducted routine cage audits at BRC's Atlantic City casino on an almost daily basis." Although BRC does not qualify or place in any context the phrase "routine cage audits," it is clear that BRC intends to imply that the presence of Division agents within the BRC casino cage in the course of specific job assignments establishes actual knowledge of their part of each and every transaction that is occurring in the cage, or has occurred, over some particular period of time. That factual premise is inaccurate. BRC also implies that the Division's knowledge of its Incentive Program and failure to take action against BRC somehow resulted in the tacit approval of the Program. This interpretation mis-states the function of the Commission and the Division.

The Governor's Staff Policy Group recommended that:

> the quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial functions associated with the administrative gaming control process be stationed in an independent body created specially for such purposes. The enforcement responsibility, that is, the investigative and advocacy functions, should be placed under the direct authority of the Attorney General and be exercised through a Division dedicated to these responsibilities. In placing the enforcement authority in the Attorney General, this group is mindful of the resources of the Department of Law and Public Safety, and the necessity for coordinated use of > those resources. Equally important, the proposed enforcement structure would alleviate the difficulties experienced by interagency law enforcement in terms of information sharing and resource conservation. In the policy group's view, a coordinated enforcement effort will be the foundation of a well-ordered regulatory scheme. Without a unified structure under the Attorney General, under whose jurisdiction all law enforcement agencies fall, the availability of intelligence information, particularly important to the licensing function, may be curtailed. The enforcement function should not be separated from the existing law enforcement community.

Second Interim Report at 50-51. The Group therefore recommended the creation of the Casino Control Commission, whose functions would be quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial, and the creation of the Division of Gaming Enforcement, which would be affirmatively charged with the responsibilities of conducting all background and other investigations, presenting the results of such activities to the Commission, and, when appropriate, advocating denial or disqualification of an application or prosecuting violations of the Act and of Commission regulations. The Policy Group concluded that:

> The balance struck between the authority of the Commission and the enforcement responsibility of the Attorney General is constructive. The advocacy role envisioned for the Division of Gaming Enforcement should better assure that the social policies and legislative goals are implemented by providing a check on the authority of the Commission. At the same time, the independent nature of the Commission should ensure that there is an objective review of all matters involving casino gambling according to the standards created by the legislature.

Second Interim Report at 52.

Similarly the SCI also recommended that the regulatory power be divided between two bodies of agencies, one having the decision-making authority and one having the enforcement responsibility. SCI Report at 6A. The SCI recommended that the responsibilities of the two agencies be as follows:

> Decision Making Body
> 1. holds license application hearings and decides whether to grant or deny same;
>
> 2. conducts disciplinary hearings upon complaint from the enforcement body, and imposes sanctions, such as fines, suspensions, or revocations of licenses, when appropriate;
> 3. promulgates rules and regulations upon its own motion or upon application from the enforcement body or the industry.

Enforcement Body

1. investigates all license applicants;

2. appears before the decision-making body and recommends approval, disapproval or otherwise advises decision-making body with respect to all license applicants;

3. monitors and surveils all casino operations;

4. investigates possible violations of casino gaming laws, regulations or rules;

5. files and [prosecutes] complaints before decision-making body when violations found;

6. appears before decision-making body to recommend, oppose, or otherwise advise on promulgation of rules and regulations;

7. takes or defends appeals from licensing, disciplinary, and rule-making decisions of decision making body.

The primary reason that prompted the S.C.I.'s recommendation of a State regulatory power divided in this fashion is a basic concept of fair play. Historically, our system of laws has been based upon a separation of the investigatory-prosecutorial function from the adjudicative function. To place the power both to investigate possible violations of the casino gaming laws and the power to impose sanctions for such violations would violate this concept.

Other factors militate against a single body and in favor of a two-tier system. One is the need for proper checks and balances. To be effective, the S.C.I.'s insistence on a strong and independent regulatory authority must apply to both bodies in the two-tier system.

And as also noted, this recommendation is predicated upon the presence of external checks on the regulatory authorities to prevent independence from leading to abuses of power. A two-tier system would itself provide some external checks (though not all, as will be discussed later). Each body will tend to serve as a check on the other.

The decision-making body will clearly do so, since it will have to review the recommendations of the enforcement body before reaching its own decision on whether to issue or deny a license, whether a violation has occurred and if so, whether and what sanctions to impose, etc.

Another reason to separate the regulatory power into two bodies is to increase the ability of each body to perform more fully its own functions.

If the enforcement body will not have the authority to make the ultimate decisions on licensing or disciplinary matters, then it can assume an adversarial role and to appear before the decision-making body as an advocate.

> By the same token, the decision-making body—freed from investigative and enforcement functions—can make its decisions on an impartial basis without favoring one side or another.
> Closely related to this is the basis upon which those decisions will be made. While the enforcement body would be free to gather all information that may come to its attention with respect to a license applicant or licensee, a license application or disciplinary action would only be decided on matters presented to the decision-making body in open hearing (emphasis added).

SCI Report at 6A - 9A.

The SCI also recommended, as did the Governor's Staff Policy Group, that the enforcement agency be located as a division in the Department of Law and Public Safety. The SCI specifically recommended that the enforcement body should be specifically provided with its own audit capability and audit function. Based upon its own experience, the SCI believed that "in order to effectively monitor the possible infiltration of organized crime into casinos and casino-related activities, the casino law enforcement arm must be able to trace the sources of money being used by licensees and others who operate ancillary services." SCI Report at 22A. These recommendations of the Governor's Staff Policy Group and the SCI were adopted by the Legislature and were enacted in the Casino Control Act. The Division's function is investigative and prosecutorial. The Commission is charged with the quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial functions. Knowledge by the Division of any program by any casino cannot be relied upon as tacit approval of a program. Only the Commission may approve a program and BRC never presented their Incentive Program to the Commission for approval.

The Division is not empowered to approve or reject any programs or procedures contemplated or conducted by casino licensees. That authority is vested entirely with the Commission. Furthermore, N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 places a mandatory responsibility on a casino licensee to submit internal control procedures to the Commission and to refrain from implementing, or changing, those procedures until they are approved by the Commission. Section 99 of the Act does not provide nor infer any concept of effective approval by the Division as an alternative or substitute for Commission approval. The Division's role in the internal control process is expressly limited by the terms of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(b) to reviewing prospective programs and procedures that are actually submitted by a casino licensee and to provide advice to the Commission as to whether the proposed procedures conform to the Act and regulations and entail adequate and effective controls.

The record in this case reveals only the Division's knowledge of the Incentive Program and nothing more. There is nothing in the record to indicate that any Division representative ever made any representation to BRC that the Incentive Program was legal. For that reason alone the equitable defenses cannot be given any weight. In addition, there has been no showing of any misrepresentation by the Division. Moreover, the showing of mere knowledge, with nothing more, is insufficient to invoke the equitable defense of estoppel, particularly where the estoppel will interfere with essential governmental functions. 222 N.J. Super. at 475.

The purpose of the Casino Control Act is to protect the health, safety and welfare of the public. The whole concept of strict regulation goes directly to achieving this purpose. The concerns of the legislature, the Governor's Policy Group, and the S.C.I. relate directly to protecting the public. The concerns regarding casino credit are directly related to this case when BRC refunds a percentage of a patron's gambling losses which refund is then used to establish a front money account to enable the patron to further gamble. The accounting procedures and controls established and the requirement that they be reviewed and approved by the Commission are not merely ministerial, but also serve a purpose to protect the public by insuring the integrity of the gaming industry. Under such circumstances, the doctrine of equitable estoppel is inapplicable against a State agency.

VI. DO FUNDAMENTAL FAIRNESS AND DUE PROCESS REQUIRE THAT THE COMPLAINT AGAINST BRC BE DISMISSED DUE TO THE DIVISION'S FAILURE TO CHALLENGE THE INCENTIVE PROGRAM IN A TIMELY MANNER?

It is well settled that the twin principles of due process and fundamental fairness are applicable to administrative proceedings. In re Kallen, 92 N.J. 14, 26 (1983). A central element of the concept of fundamental fairness is the requirement that agencies promptly resolve matters brought before them. In re Arndt, 67 N.J. 432, 436-37 (1975); accord In re Kallen, 92 N.J. 14, 26 (1983). A central element of the concept of fundamental fairness is the requirement that acgencies promptly resolve matters brough before them. In re Arndt, 67 N.J. 432, 436-37 (1975); accord In re Kallen, 92 N.J. at 26.

Recognizing that the prompt resolution of administrative disputes is essential to the concept of fundamental fairness section 76(a) of the Casino Control Act provides:

> The Division of Gaming Enforcement shall promptly and in reasonable order investigate all applcations, enforce the provisions of this act and any regulations promulgated hereunder, and prosecute before the Commission all proceedings for violations of this act or regulations promulgated hereunder.

BRC argues that the Division's Complaint must be dismissed because "the Division's conduct in prosecuting the instant complaint, after four years of silent acceptance, is violative of due process and fundamental fairness." The Division counters that BRC has failed to show anything fundamentally unfair or violative of due process in the filing of the instant enforcement action by the Division.

Delays far shorter than that occasioned in this case have been found so violative of due process and fundamental fairness as to demand dismissal of the complaint. The case of State v. One (1) Ford Van, Econoline, 154 N.J. Super. 326 (App. Div. 1977), certif. den., 77 N.J. 474 (1978) is illustrative of this concept. Examining the prompt action requirement of N.J.S.A. 24:21-35c(4), the old forfeiture statute, the Appellate Division held that the State's fourteen-month delay in instituting forfeiture proceedings, without explanation, violated the vehcile owner's right to due process of law. Id. at 336. The complaint was therefore dismissed. Id. at 338. The court noted, however, that where the delay is unjustified, as it was in that case, "forfeiture proceedings are defeated on the reasoning that the deprivation of property during the intervening period constitutes a denial of due process." Id. at 336 (citations omitted). BRC has not been deprived of any property right in the instant matter and it is being afforded a full opportunity to defend itself on the merits of the Division's claims prior to the imposition of any sanctions.

In Arndt, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled that the Division of Motor Vehicles' failure to institute license suspension proceedings within a reasonable time following the defendant's arrest for drunk driving warranted vacatur of the lower court's order of suspension. Quoting the United States Supreme Court in Smith v. Illinois Bell Telephone Company, 270 U.S. 587 (1926), the Court opined that:

> The delays between filing of the arresting officer's report and activation of the suspension proceedings and between the hearing thereon and decision in this case . . . ."evince[d] an entire lack of that acute appreciation of justice which should characterize a tribunal charged with [such a] delicate and important duty. . ." [67 N.J. at 436, 437]

In Arndt the Court vacated an order of suspension of a driver's license on the grounds that a delay of 20 months between a driver's refusal to take a breathalyzer test and notification to him of the proposed suspension of his license violated the principles of fundamental fairness. 67 N.J. at 436-437. However, In re Arndt is distinguishable from the present situation because the applicable motor vehicle statute, N.J.S.A. 39:4-50.4, required the Director of the Division of Motor Vehicles to suspend the driver's license upon receipt of the arresting officer's sworn report, unless the driver requested a hearing. In the instant matter, N.J.S.A. 5:12-76 does not impose the same statutory requirement imposed in In re Arndt. Nor does section 76 of the Act establish any statute of limitations on actions brought by the Division in enforcement actions.

Moreover, as the Court also noted in In re Kallen, 92 N.J. 14, 27 (1983), "there are no simple answers as to what constitutes fundamental fairness in administrative hearings. Each case must be considered and evaluated on its own merits." In Kallen, the Court noted that the Appellate Division has held in In re Garber, 141 N.J. Super. 87, certif. den. 71 N.J. 94 (1976), that a delay of 12 months in suspending a driver's license did not violate the principles of fundamental procedural fairness. 92 N.J. at 27. The Court quoted directly from the Appellate Court's decision:

> Delay will not generally affect the validity of an administrative determination, particularly where no prejudice is shown. [141 N.J. Super. at 91] Id.

Thus, it is clear from a reading of the above cases that a party asserting a violation of the principle of fundamental fairness must do more than assert that the State's action amounted to an unreasonable delay. The respondent must also show that it was prejudiced by the delay.

In this case, BRC has shown no prejudice. There has been no deprivation of any rights or privileges suffered by BRC. Therefore, absent any showing of prejudice, BRC's claims that the Division's initiation of the instant action violates fundamental fairness must be rejected.

VII. DOES BRC'S INCENTIVE AGREEMENT VIOLATE THE PROVISIONS OF N.J.S.A. 5:12-100e and N.J.S.A. 5:12-70o?

While not specifically raised in its complaint, when the Division discussed the alleged violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) (see section III above), the Division raised the issue of whether or not the Incentive Agreement has the effect of changing the gaming odds, and if so, whether the Agreement therefore is violative of N.J.S.A. 5:12-100e and N.J.S.A. 5:12-70o.

When BRC entered into an Incentive Agreement with a preferred patron, it was clear that the purpose was to obtain the patronage of persons who might not otherwise gamble at BRC. In order to entice these patrons to gamble at its casino, BRC paid to those patrons an amount that was calculated upon a stated percentage of the patrons' gaming losses. By agreeing to pay the patron, BRC provided the participating patron with an advantage over the odds of the casino games that was not shared by other patrons. For example, a patron who is to receive a payment of 10 percent of his losses pursuant to the Incentive Program was increased his odds at beating the house since he knows that it will cost him only $.90 for every $1.00 wagered to win. As the New Jersey Supreme Court stated in Uston v. Resorts International Hotel, Inc., 89 N.J. 163, 168-169 (1982), the Commission has exclusive authority, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-100e and N.J.S.A. 5:12-70o, to establish the rules and regulations of all casino games including the pay-offs and odds. One of the basic tenets of the Act is that there is one set of rules for all patrons at the table games. It has been left to the Commission to promulgate the rules of the games, which it has done in N.J.A.C. 19:47-1.1 et seq.

In the present matter, BRC has given the participating patrons the ability to modify the setting of odds at the casino games. If the Incentive Program is not offered, the patrons may not patronize BRC. Therefore, it is clear that the patrons' status as high rollers has resulted in BRC's providing a mechanism by which the patrons gain a clear advantage over other patrons against the house.

If the Commisison elects to address this issue, based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's Incentive Program violates the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-100e and N.J.S.A. 5:12-70o.

VIII. CASH COMPLIMENTARIES

Another issue not raised in the Division's complaint, but which I raised at several points in the hearing, is whether or not the Incentive Payments are cash complimentaries, and if so, are cash complimentaries authorized under the Casino Control Act. Both parties indicated that they did not believe the Incentive Payments were cash complimentaries (BRC called it a marketing plan), but I must question those representations. Something just doesn't seem fair about one patron gambling, incurring gambling losses, and then receiving a certain percentage of his losses back from the casino. I dare say, most casino patrons do not receive any of their losses back from the casino in the form of a reimbursement for playing. It is possible that an Incentive Agreement player could be sitting at the same table, playing the same game, with several non-incentive agreement or regular players. Is this system fair to the regular players who are sitting at the same table, playing the same game, and who lose? They do not get any of their losses back. As indicated above in section VII, it appears that the odds are therefore changed in favor of the Incentive Agreement players. What else is this Incentive Payment if it is not a form of cash complimentary? A player is getting cash back from the casino after gambling for a certain minimum period of time, placing a certain amount of money at risk, and incurring a certain level of losses. As stated by William Shakespeare, "What's in a name? That which we call a rose By any other name would smell as sweet." Romeo and Juliet, Act II, Sc 1, line 43. I find it hard to believe that if one described the Incentive Program to the ordinary person or casino patron on the street that the person would call the Incentive Payment anything other than a cash complimentary.

The question then arises, if the incentive payment is a cash complimentary, are cash complimentaries authorized under the Casino Control Act. For many years I have been informed that it was the position of both the Commission and the Division that cash complimentaries are not authorized under the Casino Control Act. However, there is no case law interpreting N.J.S.A. 5:12-14(a) which is the statute which defines complimentary services, nor has there been any direct interpretation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9, which is the Administrative Code provision that defines complimentary services.

It is clearly permissible for a casino licensee to pay cash to its patrons under a variety of limited circumstances. However, such cash payments may be made to casino patrons only in situtations representing the reimbursement for legitimate expenses actually incurred or to be incurred by the patron, and pursuant to bus and other coupon distribution programs, which are regulated by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46.

With respect to the reimbursement of patrons' expenses, casinos may presently pay cash to a patron for the purpose of reimbursing that patron for legitimate and actual expenses, such as travel. The casino licensee's responsibilitiy in such a situation is to confirm that the expenses were actually incurred or will be incurred by the patron by obtaining supporting documentation evidencing the cost of the expense, such as a receipt, from the patron. See, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3.

Cage disbursements of cash are also permitted in the area of bus and other coupon distribution programs, which are strictly regulated by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46. Typically, these promotional programs involve the disbursement of large numbers of coupons. The coupons may be exchanged for a roll of coins, usually in the range of $5 to $10, at the cage within the casino which has sponsored the promotion.

As set forth more fully below, the Act and Commission regulations permit casino licensees to pay "cash complimentaries" only within the above-described limits. It has never been the position of the Division nor has it ever been the Commission's interpretation of the Act and the regulations to allow unrestricted disbursements of cash.

The incentive payments were not made for the purpose of reimbursing any of the Incentive Agreement patrons for any expenses incurred by them. Rather, the incentive payments were made for the purpose of reimbursing Incentive Agreement patrons for amounts they lost during their gaming activity. The plain language of the Casino Control Act and the regulations do not allow for the unrestricted disbursement of cash to casino patrons.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-14a defines a "complimentary service or item" as follows:

> "Complimentary service or item" - A service or item provided at not cost or at a reduced price. The furnishing of a complimentary service or item by a casino licensee shall be deemed to constitute the indirect payment for the service or item by the casino licensee, and shall be valued in an amont based upon the retail price normally charged by the casino licensee for the service or item. The value of a complimentary service or item not normally offered for sale by a casino licensee or provided by a third party on behalf of the casino licensee of providing the service or item, as determined in accordance with the rules of the commission.

This statute was enacted in 1983 as L. 1983, c. 41, after the passage of Assembly Bill No. 1945 (A-1945).

The regulatory counterpart to the statutory definition cited above is found in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(a), which also defines complimentary services or items as "a service or item provided directly or indirectly by a licensee at no cost or at a reduced price." This definition of complimentary service became effective in January 1983 on the same date that A-1945 was signed into law. The previous version of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 read as follows:

> Complimentary service shall be defined as the sale value of rooms, food, beverage, travel, and other services provided without charge or the cost of services paid to a third part.

The Casino Control Commission set out its reasoning for the charge in the New Jersey Register: "Finally, amendments to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 and 1.9 are being proposed which will clarify the means by which complimentary services or items provided by casino licensees are to be valued (emphasis added); 15 N.J.R. 257 at 258. Thus, the facilitation of valuation, and not a desire to expand the scope of complimentary services, was the rationale underlying the Commission's actions.

In addition to defining complimentary services or items, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 also establishes the regulatory requirements for the recording and reporting of complimentary services or items. Specifically, subsections (b) and (c) provide as follows:

> 1 A complimentary service or item provided directly to patrons in the normal course of a licensee's business shall be recorded at an amount based upon the full retail price normally charged for such service or item by the licensee;
> 2 A complimentary service or item not offered for sale to patrons in the normal course of a licensee's business but provided directly by the licensee shall be recorded at an amount based upon the actual cost to the licensee of providing such service or item;
> 3 A complimentary service or item provided directly or indirectly to a patron on behalf of a licensee by a third party not affiliated with the licensee shall be recorded at an amount based upon the actual cost to the licensee of having the third party provide such service or item;

4 A complimentary service or item provided directly or indirectly to a patron on behalf of a licensee by a third party who is affiliated with the licensee shall be recorded by the licensee in accordance with the provisions of this seciton as if the affiliated third party were the licensee.

(c) The licensee shall accumulate both the dollar amount of and number of persons provided with each category of complimentary services.

1 A quarterly report shall be filed with the Commission regarding the complimentary services provided.

2 The complimentary services shall, at a minimum, be separated into categories for rooms, food, beverage, travel and other services.

The correct starting point in addressing the issue of the permissibility and scope of cash complimentaries is found in the language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-14a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9. The plain language of both of these sections clearly indicates that unrestricted disbursements of cash to casino patrons is not permitted.

By definition, a complimentary service or item under N.J.S.A. 5:12-14a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 is a service or item provided at no cost or at a reduced price. The statutory definition further states that the furnishing of a complimentary service or item by the casino licensee "shall be valued at an amount based upon the retail price normally charged. . ." (emphasis added). For services or items provided by a third party on behalf of the casino licensee, the statute provides that "[t]he value . . . shall be the cost to the casino licensee of providing the service or item . . ." (emphasis added). The statute clearly refers to services or items that are provided by a licensee directly or by a third party on behalf of the licensee the cost of which is passed on to the licensee.

This concept is continued in the sections of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 which establish the recording and reporting requirements for complimentary services and items. Subsection (b)1 of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9 requires recording the complimentary service or item "at an amount based upon the full retail price normally charged for such service of item . . ." (emphasis added). Similarly, subsection (b)2 and 3 require recording the service or item "at an amount based upon the actual cost to the licensee," whether the service or item is provided directly by the licensee or by a third party on behalf of the licensee. The above-quoted sections of the Act and Commission regulations clearly indicate that the services or items that may be provided to casino patrons are those services or items that are purchased from a third party or which can be directly provided by a casino licensee. The unrestricted disbursements of cash from casino cage funds do not fall within the realm of services or items that are provided by licensees either in the course of its business or otherwise. Nor is cash a "service or item" that may be purchased from a third party for the purpose of providing it to a casino patron.

The inclusion of the provision "and other services and items of value" was one of the changes brought about by the 1983 amendments set forth in A-1945. No court has yet interpreted the scope of the term at this point. Thus, it is necessary to utilize rules of statutory construction so as to interpret the statue in a fashion consistent with the intention of its drafters.

N.J.S.A. 1:1-1 provides the following rule of construction for New Jersey statutes.

> In the construction of the laws and statutes of this state, both civil and criminal, words and phrases, shall be read and construed with their context, and shall, unless inconsistent with the manifest intent of the legislature or unless another or different meaning is expressly indicated, be given their generally accepted meaning, according to the approved usage of the language. Technical words and phrases, and words and phrases having a special or accepted meaning in the law, shall be construed in accordance with such technical or special and accepted meaning.

It is also well established in our case law that "statutory language should be given its ordinary meaning absent specific intent to the contrary." Mortimer v. Board of Review, 99 N.J. 393, 398, (1985) citing Levin v. Township of Parsippany - Troy Hills, 82 N.J. 174, 182 (1980); Abbotts Dairies v. Armstrong, 14 N.J. 319, 325 (1954). In the present case, the application of this rule of statutory construction does not allow for the payment of unlimited cash complimentaries. By defining complimentary services or items in terms of their retail value or cost the legislature and the Commission have expressly limited complimentaries to services or items to which a "cost" attaches. These include services or items that are provided in the course of a casino licensee's business or within the line of busiess of a third party provider of the service or item.

It is also instructive to examine N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(c)2 in determining the permissible scope of complimentaries. This subsection provides as follows: "(t)he complimentary service shall, at a minimum, be separated into categories for rooms, food, beverage, travel and other services."

The above-enumerated list sets forth the services that a casino licensee may provide to casino patrons. For services which are not covered by the major categories of rooms, food, beverage or travel, the Commission has provided the category of "other services." Further, this catchall category is intended to provide a description for those infrequent instances where the service provided does not fit squarely within the other defined areas. This catchall category was not intended and should not be interpreted to allow the unrestricted disbursement of cash.

Another principle of statutory construction which is helpful in the instant matter is the legal maxim expressio units est exclusio alterius. That principle stands for the proposition that where express mention is made of one thing, the exclusion of others is implied. Shapiro v. Essex County Freeholder Board, 177 N.J. Super. 87 (Law Div. 1980); aff'd, 183 N.J. Super. 24 (App. Div. 1982); aff'd, 91 N.J. 430 (1982). Although courts are cautioned that this maxim is only an aid in construction and not a rule of law, see e.g., Allstate Insurance Company v. Malex, 104 N.J. 1 (1986), this principle is appropriate in the instant case. Here, the Commission has duly promulgated regulations, which list the forms of complimentary services permitted to be provided by casino licensees to its patrons. The Commission did not include "cash" or "currency" within that listing. If the Commission had intended to allow the unrestricted disbursement of cash to casino patrons it would have included "cash" within the listing in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9(c)2. The absence of any mention of the word "cash" within the pertinent sections of the Act and the regulations clearly indicates that cash may not be given by casino licensees without restriction.

In addition, the entire statutory and regulatory scheme surrounding the issuance of complimentaries is designed to prevent certain types of abuses and violations from occurring. Specifically, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 requires a casino licensee to maintain "detailed supporting and subsidiary records" to ensure that the complimentary service being provided to the patron is permissible. This much has been recognized in prior decisions by the Commission and the OAL.

In State of New Jersey v. Greate Bay Hotel and Casino, Inc. et al (CCC Dkt. No. 83-17), OAL Dkt. No. CCC 5460-83, decided March 26, 1984, the Division charged Greate Bay with, inter alia, violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in failng to maintain proper supporting documentation in the issuance of a $325,000 check in payment for a group's airfare. The only documentation maintained by the casino licensee was a document prepared by Greate Bay's Director of Casino Marketing in which he computed the airfare figure based on his own estimates. There were no tickets available. The Director of Marketing estimated the first-class, round-trip airfare from Hong Kong to New York to be $4,000. He multiplied this figure by the number of people traveling in the group, which was 67, for a total amount of $268,000. The balance of $57,000 was attributed to "other players' guests and children."

Administrative Law Judge Jeff Masin, in his Initial Decision, dated March 26, 1984, wrote the following:

> The above document obviously is not a satisfactory supporting and subsidiary, detailed and accurate record concerning the complimentary services provided. Greate Bay does not contend that it is so. It admits that it failed to keep the proper records. In mitigation it indicates that it reported the complimentary travel expenditure in its monthly report of payables. As noted by the petitioner, this report hardly serves the function that is served by the daily report to the Division which enables the Division to keep tabs on who is receiving complimentary services, for what, when, in what amount and other significant facts which may play a role in the Division's overall supervisory and law enforcement posture vis-a-vis the casinos. In addition, merely listing the complimentary service as a payable on a payables report does not even highlight the expenditure to those watching the provision of complimentary services, but serves to place the expenditure in and amongst many transactions which are either less significant or of a different character than the provision of free services to casino patrons. Greate Bay's submission of the expenditure in the payables report is hardly a mitigating factor in respect to the concerns identified by this regulation, although it is clear that Greate Bay did not attempt to hide the transaction. [at 16]

Similarly, the Commission in its July 25, 1984 opinion, had the following comments with regard to Greate Bay's failure to maintain adequate documentation:

> The failure to keep accurate accounting records on complimentary services strikes at the heart of all accounting controls. The ability of the DGE to monitor complimentary practices and the Commission to audit significant expenditures is largely dependent upon completeness and accuracy of the accounting records. What records were kept concerning the $325,000 reimbursement at issue here were grossly inadequate. [at 19]

While the above discussion addresses the issue as to whether or not cash complimentaries were permissible prior to January 14, 1988, it is explicitly clear that since January 14, 1988, unrestricted cash complimentaries are prohibited under the Casino Control Act. On that date P.L. 1987, c. 426, took effect. In that bill, the Legislature amended N.J.S.A. 5:12-102m to specifically clarify that unrestricted cash complimentaries were prohibited. That section now provides:

> m. No casino licensee shall offer or provide any complimentary services, gifts, cash or other items of value to any person unless:

(1) The complimentary consists of room, food, beverage or entertainment expenses provided directly to the patron and his guests by the licensee or indirectly to the patron and his guests on behalf of a licensee by a third party; or

(2) The complimentary consists of documented transportation expenses provided directly to the patron and his guests by the licensee or indirectly to the patron and his guests on behalf of a licensee by a third party, provided that the licensee complies with regulations promulgated by the commission to ensure that a patron's and his guests' documented transportation expenses are paid for or reimbursed only once; or

(3) The complimentary consists of coins, tokens, cash or other complimentary items or services provided through a bus coupon or other complimentary distribution program approved by the commission or maintained pursuant to commission regulation; or

(4) The complimentary consists of noncash gifts, provided that such noncash gifts in excess of $2,000.00 per trip or such greater amount as the commission may establish by regulation provided directly to the patron and his guests by the licensee or indirectly to the patron and his guests on behalf of a licensee by a third party shall be supported by documentation regarding the reason the noncash gift was provided to the patron and his guests, including where applicable, a patron's player rating, to be maintained by the casino licensee. For the purposes of this paragraph, all noncash gifts presented to a patron and the patron's guests within any five-day period shall be considered a single noncash gift.

Each casino licensee shall maintain a regulated complimentary service account, for those complimentaries which are permitted pursuant to this section, and shall submit a quarterly report to the commission based upon such account and covering all complimentary services offered or engaged in by the licensee during the immediately preceding quarter. Such reports shall include identification of the regulated complimentary services and their respective costs, the number of persons by category of service who received the same, and such other information as the commission may require. [emphasis added]

If the Incentive Payments are cash complimentaries, then they are prohibited under present law.

I FIND that the Incentive Payments were cash complimentaries, and I CONCLUDE that unrestricted cash complimentaries such as the Incentive Payments in this case are prohibited under the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-14a, N.J.S.A. 5:12-102m, and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.9.

PENALTY DISCUSSION

N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 authorizes the Commission to impose a variety of sanctions for violations of the Act or the regulations promulgated thereunder. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5) empowers the Commission to "[a]ssess such civil penalties as may be necessary to punish misconduct and to deter future violations." Likewise, several other subsections of the above-cited statutory provision allow the Commission to revoke or suspend the license or registration of any person for violations of the Act or the regulations. Similarly, the Commission can, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129, order restitution of any monies or property unlawfully obtained, enter a cease and desist order or issue letters of reprimand or censure.

With regard to the imposition of the appropriate penalty, N.J.S.A. 5:12-130 sets forth the factors to be considered by the Commission when considering sanctions for a violation of the Act or Commission regulations. That provision states:

> In considering appropriate sanctions in a particular case, the Commission shall consider:
>
> a. The risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the licensee or registrant;
>
> b. The seriousness of the conduct of the licensee or registrant, and whether the conduct was purposeful and with knowledge that it was in contravention of the provisions of this Act or the regulations promulgated hereunder;
>
> c. Any justification or excuse for such conduct by the licensee or registrant;
>
> d. The prior history of the particular licensee or registrant involved with respect to gaming activity;
>
> e. The corrective action taken by the licensee or registrant to prevent future misconduct of a like nature from occurring; and
> f. In the case of a monetary penalty, the amount of the penalty in relation to the severity of the misconduct and the financial means of the licensee or registrant. The Commission may impose any schedule or terms of payment of such penalty as it may deem appropriate.
> g. It shall be no defense to disciplinary action before the Commission that an applicant, licensee, registrant, intermediary company, or holding company inadvertently, unintentionally, or unknowingly violated a provision of this act. Such factors shall only go to the degree of the penalty to be imposed by the Commission, and not to a finding of a violation itself.

During the course of the proceedings in this matter, the parties entered into a Stipulation of Facts dated December 10, 1987 ("Stipulation") and an Addendum to Stipulation of Facts dated January 28, 1988 ("Addendum"). As set forth in the Stipulation and Addendum, the following facts, which are relevant to the determination of penalty, have been stipulated:

1. During the period from March 8, 1983 through October 24, 1987, BRC made 90 payments to patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program ("Incentive Payments"). Stipulation at paras, 7, 10 and 13 and Addendum at para. 48.

2. During the period from March 8, 1983 through October 24, 1987, BRC patrons receiving Incentive Payments were required to use the Incentive Payment in settlement of their outstanding casino debts, Stipulation at paras, 23, 27-29; and during this period of time there was substantial compliance with this requirement, although on several occasions the patrons retained the cage disbursement check. Stipulation at paras. 40-42 and Addendum at paras. 52, 53 and 58.

3. During the period of time from March 8, 1983 through October 24, 1987, BRC entered into 90 Incentive Agreements with patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program. See Copies of the Incentive Agreements in Joint Exhibits 21-24 and 44-61.

4. During the period of time from March 8, 1983 through October 24, 1987, BRC accepted from BRC patrons 84 cage disbursement checks that had been issued to the patrons as Incentive Payments. Eleven cage disbursement checks that had been issued to BRC patrons as Incentive Payments were retained by the patrons. Stipulation at 40 and Addendum at 57. During this same period of time, and, specifically from November 1, 1986 through October 24, 1987, BRC voided 7 of the cage disbursement checks that had been issued to BRC patrons. The proceeds of the 7 voided checks were applied to a redemption transaction on 1 occasion, used as front money deposits on two occasions, and cash was provided to the patron on the remaining 4 occasions. Stipulation at paras. 40 and 42 and Addendum at 57 and 58.

It is the Division's position that BRC has committed 90 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a); 90 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104(a)(1), and 84 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and the prior Commission Order of May 25, 1982, as memorialized in the Commission Order dated November 15, 1982. In addition, the Division submits that BRC has committed 2 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 by: (1) failing to obtain Commission approval prior to adopting and implementing the Incentive Program, and (2) failing to submit the internal procedures and administrative accounting controls of the Incentive Program to the Commission for review and approval and to the Division for review.

As a result of the statutory and regulatory violations committed by BRC, the Division recommends to the Commission that a civil monetary penalty pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5) in the range of $1,084,000 to $1,452,000 be imposed against BRC. With respect to the individual monetary penalties sought for each of the violations, the Division proposes:

1. A civil monetary penalty in the range of $450,000-$550,000 is recommended for the 90 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a);

2. A civil monetary penalty in the range of $450,000-$550,000 is recommended for the 90 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104(a)(1);

3. A civil monetary penalty of $100,000 is recommended for the 2 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3; and

4. A civil monetary penalty in the range of $84,000-$252,000 is recommended for the 84 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and the prior Commission order.

The Division also requests that BRC be ordered to desist from any future use of the Incentive Program.

In essence, the Division alleges that 266 violations occurred. The Division alleges that three provisions of the Act were violated and that BRC violated two regulatory provisions. Despite the fact that only five provisions in total could have been violated under the Division's analysis, and the fact that there were 90 incentive transactions, the Division urges that there were 266 violations. The Division arrives at this conclusion by claiming that each and every incentive payment issued by BRC to a patron and each and every check returned by the patron to BRC constituted a separate violation of the Act and parallel regulations. Additionally, the Division contends that the 90 checks issued by BRC by way of payments to patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program also violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104(a)(1). Thus, although a total of 90 agreements were entered into with patrons pursuant to the Incentive Program, the Division asserts that these 90 agreements resulted in 264 violations of the Act and regulations. This is unwarranted.

It must be borne in mind that each transaction between BRC and an Incentive Program patron was based on a separate Incentive Agreement. Pursuant to each agreement, an Incentive Payment check was issued by BRC and sometimes resubmitted by the patron to BRC. Thus, the issuance and acceptance of the incentive checks were included acts under the agreements. In essence, the entering of an Incentive Agreement, the issuance by BRC of an incentive check and the patron's resubmission of that check to BRC were all pursuant to one transaction. While there are 90 such agreements, it seems unreasonable to find that there were 264 separate violations. I do, however, concur that BRC committed two violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3.

(A) The Risk to the Integrity of Gaming Operations

Among the declared public policies of the Act is the furtherance of "public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations." N.J.S.A. 5:12-1(b)(6). The Incentive Program adopted and implemented by BRC without the Commission's review and approval and which, in its initial form provided for a payment to a patron based on his front money deposit (11 Incentive Agreements), in its second phase paid patrons based upon the patrons' outstanding credit balances (15 Incentive Agreements), and in its final form, reimbursed to selected patrons a portion of their gambling losses, undermines the public's confidence in the integrity of gaming operations. In addition, I must question the judgment of BRC's continued use of the Incentive Program following the Division's first complaint.

The Act does not permit a casino licensee to distinguish among classes of gamblers based on gambling losses or the size of a patron's outstanding casino debt. Where a casino provides to selected patrons the funds to satisfy outstanding casino debts for less than the face value of the debts, the public confidence in the integrity of the casino industry is negatively affected.

For purposes of comparison, it should be noted that the Legislature authorized casinos to extend complimentary services and items to casino patrons. See N.J.S.A. 5:12-102(m) and (n). Legitimate complimentaries may be extended to gaming patrons, in large measure, based upon the discretionary decision-making process of each casino licensee. Based on 10 years of the casino experience in New Jersey, it is readily recognized that the preferred patrons, or "high-rollers," receive the extravagant gifts, the best seating at entertaiment events and the most lavish hotel accommodations. However, the Act and, specifically N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, does not provide for casinos to allow any patron, regardless of his status as a gaming patron or the amount of his gambling losses, to receive preferential treatment in the settlment of his outstanding casino credit debts.

As noted in Section I of the Discussion above, both the New Jersey courts and the Commission have recognized that the credit procedures of casinos are among the most sensitive and strictly regulated aspects of casino operations. As the Commission stated in its Final decision dated January 4, 1983 in State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, OAL Dkt. Nos. CCC 7452-82, CCC 6325-81 and Agency Dkt. No. 81-32 at page 11:

> [t]he clear legislative purpose of §101 and the regulations promulgated thereunder is the strict regulation and control of an important part of licensed gambling activities, the extension of credit, in order to further public confidence and trust in those operations. [emphasis added]

In addition, the New Jersey Supreme Court has ruled, in Uston v. Resorts International Hotel, Inc., 89 N.J. 163 (1982) that the Commission has exclusive authority, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-100(e) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-70(o), to establish the rules and regulations of all casino games including the pay-offs and odds. Id. at 168-169. The Court added that "[t]he ability of casino operators to determine how the games will be played would undermine (the Commission's) control and subvert the important policy of ensuring the 'credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations' N.J.S.A. 5:12-1(b)" Id. at 169.

BRC's Incentive Program provides selected patrons with an unfair advantage over BRC patrons who are not offered similar incentive disbursements. For example, if a participating patron and a non-participating patron are playing side by side at the baccarat pit and wagering and losing the same amounts, the participating patron knows that for every dollar he loses, he will only have to pay a percentage of the total amount "lost." He knows that he will receive a percentage reimbursement from BRC. If he loses $100,000 and BRC has agreed to reimburse him 10 percent of his losses, he knows that he will receive another $10,000. The non-participating patron, however, is presumably finished playing when he loses his $100,000. He will not receive an additional $10,000 which could provide him with the opportunity to either win back the amounts lost or "soften" the loss. By providing the participating patron with an opportunity for gaming that is not afforded to non-participating patrons, BRC has usurped the Commission's exclusive authority for establishing the regulations for casino games, specifically in the setting of the odds of the games. As the Court noted in Uston, the "credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations" has been subverted through BRC's adoption, implementation and continued use of the Incentive Program.

Accordingly, BRC's Incentive Payment program which allows preferred gaming patrons to satisfy their outstanding casino credit debts for less than 100 percent of the debt seriously undermines the declared goal of maintaining public confidence in the integrity of the casino industry. In addition, the issuance of a cash complimentary undermines the integrity and public confidence in the gaming industry.

(B) Seriousness of the Conduct and Whether the Conduct was Purposeful and With Knowledge that it was in Controvention of the Act or Regulations

BRC has been operating an Atlantic City casino since mid-1979. BRC was the second Atlantic City casino to open its doors to the public. At the time that it adopted and implemented the Incentive Program it had been operating under the laws of the State of New Jersey for approximately three and one-half years.

As early as 1980, the Commission expressly recognized that BRC is required "to be familiar with the actual import of the Commission's regualtory scheme" and "is assuredly not to be treated, in terms of its knowledge of the law, as if it were an ordinary layman." State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk regency Corp., et al., Agency Dkt. No. 80-10, OAL Dkt. No. CCC 3916-80, Commission Order dated September 22, 1980; Interim Commission Decision dated July 9, 1981 at pages 16-17. The Commission's comments were made in the context of the internal control review and approval process and are particularly relevant in light of the Division's charges against BRC in this matter.

Moreover, the Commission's comments regarding the strict regulations of casino credit practices, which are quoted above, were made in the Commission's Decision dated January 4, 1983, almost two months before BRC made the first Incentive Payment which is the subject of the Division's first complaint. See State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, Oal Dkt. Nos. CCC 7452-82, CCC 6325-81; Agency Dkt. No. 81-32, Final Commission Decision dated January 4, 1983.

From the institution of the Incentive Program to BRC's voluntary termination in late 1987, BRC's conduct of the Program was always open and above-board. BRC always recorded, on its books, the transactions involved in the Program as "incentives." No attempt was made to hide the Program's existence and the Division was well aware of its operation since at least May, 1983. While BRC did not believe that it was violating any statutory or regulatory provisions by operating the Program, based on BRC's prior involvement in the environment of New Jersey casino regulation, as well as prior Commission decisions involving both BRC and the statutory and regulatory sections at issue here, BRC knew or should have known that the Incentive Program did not comply with the strict credit provisions of the Act and the attendant regulations and that the Incentive Program should not have been adopted and implemented without prior Commission approval. While the vast majority of the procedures used by the BRC in the Incentive Program were covered by previous internal control submissions, certain aspects of the Program are not covered by those submissions and the overall concept of the program was also never submitted. As such, the failure of BRC to submit all aspects of the Incentive Program and the overall concept of the program to the Commission for review and approval and to the Division for review prior to implementation of the Program is a serious violation.

There is a bona fide question of fact as to whether BRC knew or should have known that it could not accept checks written on its own account and whether or not BRC knowingly violated a prior Commission Order. While I resolved this issue in favor of BRC, I did find that there was a technical violation of the Act. N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101g, and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 specifically identify the checks which may be accepted by casinos. The Commission was also quite specific in identifying the checks which could be accepted by casinos when it adopted the definition of "casino checks" and the accompanying regulations. In the absence of any language within the Act or regulations expressly permitting the acceptance of checks that are not "casino checks" but which have been issued by the same casino that wishes to accept the check, BRC could not accept the Incentive Program checks.

The check cashing restrictions were included in the Act and regulations in order to prevent credit abuses. None of the credit concerns which prompted the legislature to include these check cashing restitutions in the Act is present in this case. As I stated in section 14 of the Discussion, what is safer than a casino accepting its own check, drawn on its own bank, on its own account, with its own money. There is no extension of credit or risk of the check's not being honored. As such, I consider this violation to be a technical violation and not a serious one.

A few of the Incentive Payment checks were used to establish front money accounts. This therefore enabled patrons to engage in gaming activity. I consider this to be a serious violation of the Act. Both the issues of whether or not the Incentive Program changed the gaming odds or is a cash complimentary are serious violations; however, for the purposes of penalty they should be considered as part of the overall Incentive Program, and the penalty should be imposed based upon the 90 Incentive Agreements.

In sum, BRC knew or should have known, based on its familiarity with the statutory and regulatory requirements in New Jersey and specific rulings from the Commission in early 1982 and 1983, respectively, that the Incentive Program violated the credit provisions of the Act and that it could not have accepted the checks issued as Incentive Payments to its patrons. In addition, BRC most certainly should have known that it should not have adopted and implemented the Incentive Program without first submitting it to the Commission for review and approval, particularly in light of the Commission's express language on that same point in 1980.

(C) Justification or Excuse for the Conduct

The next factor to be considered in the determination of the appropriate sanction to be imposed is the justification or excuse offered by the licensee or registrant. N.J.S.A. 5:12-130c. BRC has offered no justification or excuse for its conduct other than asserting that the Incentive Program does not violate the sections of the Act and regulations cited by the Division. BRC has stressed its belief that neither the Incentive Program nor its operation was in violation of the Act or Commission regulations. Through its witness, Mr. Walsh, BRC explained in detail all of its reasons for not submitting the Program or some of the internal controls to the Commission for its approval. This revolved around BRC's belief that it was not necessary to submit a "marketing program" for the Commission's approval and its belief that most of the Incentive Program's procedures were already covered by previous internal control submissions.

The reasons provided by BRC for adopting the Program was to provide "an incentive to certain casino customers to patronize BRC, . . . because of concerns regarding inadequate foreign currency exchange rates at that time, the length of check clearing times for foreign bank accounts and difficulties encountered by BRC in the collection of payments from foreign patrons." Stipulation at 2. See also Joint Exhibit 85, (Memorandum from: Steve Karoul, "Caesars Atlantic City participates in an Incentive Program that was originally developed by Caesars World International to be used as a marketing tool to attract certain premium high level play that would probably go elsewhere if it were not for the availability of the incentive.") Therefore, it is clear that BRC's decision to institute the Incentive Program was a business decision intended to attract desirable casino patrons.

BRC also raised several equitable defenses which were fully discussed and rejected above. While the legal equitable defenses were rejected above, the facts underlying those defenses may be considered as part of BRC's justification and excuse in operating the Incentive Program. In light of the Division's knowledge of the Program as early as 1983, BRC honestly, albeit wrongly, believed the Program did not violate the Casino Control Act or its implementing regulations.

(D) Prior History of Casino Licensee with Respect to Gaming Activity

N.J.S.A. 5:12-130(d) provides that the Commission shall consider the prior history of the licensee with respect to gaming operations. In that regard, the Division cites five significant prior Commission decisions involving BRC. These cases all relate to sufficient violations whereby BRC made a business decision to proceed without seeking regulatory approval for the activity or conscious determinations to cater to preferred players at the expense of the regulatory process.

1. State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, et. al., Agency Dkt. No. 80-10, OAL Dkt. No. CCC 3916-80. Interim Commission Decision dated July 9, 1981; Initial Decision dated May 18, 1981; Final Order dated July 17, 1981.

In this matter, the Division charged BRC with violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24 (currently 1.25) arising out of BRC's acceptance of 597 personal checks cashed during the period of time from the date of BRC's opening, June 26, 1979, to September 1, 1979. The personal checks were cashed at the hotel front desk by patrons for the purpose of gambling in the casino. This matter was eventually settled between the parties for $45,000. The parties also agreed to dismiss the matter, with prejudice, with regard to all of the individual respondents. The settlement was included in the Initial Decision, which was adopted by the Commission in a Final Order dated July 17, 1981.

Of particular significance to the present matter from the above-cited case is the Commission's comments regarding the review and approval process of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3. The Commission clearly stated that BRC is to be held to an understanding and familiarity "with the statutory and regulatory scheme relating to internal controls . . ." Commission Interim Decision at 15.

2. State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, Agency Dkt. No. 81-32, OAL Dkt. Nos. CCC 7452-82 and CCC 6325-81. First Initial Decision dated June 8, 1982; Order of Remand dated August 2, 1982; Second Initial Decision dated October 21, 1982; Final Decision dated January 4, 1983; Final Order dated January 12, 1983.

In this matter, the Division charged BRC with, inter alia, violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b), N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25, various games violations and the failure to cooperate with Commission inspectors for transactions involving patron Gaetano Caltagirone "who was known by BRC officials to be a "high roller" and [who had a] credit line of $1.5 million at BRC." Final Decision at 3. The total amount of the fines levied against BRC by the Commission in the Caltagirone matter was $257,000, including a $105,000 penalty for the acceptance of three non-conforming instruments.

3. State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation et al., Agency Dkt. No. 84-246, OAL Dkt. No. CCC 7352-84. Initial Decision September 9, 1985, Final Order dated October 28, 1985.

In this matter, the Division charged BRC and nine individual respondents with violating the Act and regulations for transactions conducted with a "high roller" patron named Brian Molony regarding the maintenance and operation of its system of internal procedures and accounting controls, the acceptance of cash deposits and cash equivalents and the maintenance and operation of its casino gaming credit system. Initial Decision at 2. Specifically, the Division charged BRC with, inter alia, violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 for failing to seek approval of procedures for the transfer of a patron's funds to the casino, violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(b) for accepting various instruments which did not conform to the definition of cash equivalents contained in N.J.S.A. 19:45-1.1 and failing to comply with various regulatory provisions regarding customer deposits under N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24. The matter was eventually settled among the parties. Pursuant to the settlement which was adopted in the Commission's Final Order, BRC's Certificate of Operation was suspended from 10:00 a.m. on November 30, 1985 until 9:59 a.m. on December 1, 1985.

4. State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, Agency Dkt. No. 84-429. Final Order dated April 5, 1986.

In this matter, the Division charged BRC with violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-5 and N.J.S.A. 5:12-45 in its conduct of a slot player club promotion known as "The Emperors Club." The matter was settled between the parties for $60,000. The settlement was approved by the Commision by Final Order dated April 5, 1986. A stipulated fact which is relevant to the present action and included within the Stipulation of Settlement at paragraph 8 was the following:

> At no time prior to the implementation of The Emperors Club did BRC submit to the Commission or Division of Gaming Enforcement a description of the eligibility requirements for membership in The Emperors Club.

Similar to the present matter, BRC's exclusion of the Division and Commission from the review and approval process serves as an aggravating circumstance in the penalty determination.

5. State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation and Jane Haverstick, Agency Docket No. 85-376, OAL Dkt. No. CCC 578-86. Commission Decision dated January 5, 1988. 9 N.J.A.R. 274.

In this matter, the Division charged BRC with the following statutory and regulatory violations:

(i) N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(a) for failing to deposit a patron's counterchecks within the statutory and regulatory deposit period.

(ii) N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)(9), (g) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15(b)(1) for releasing a patron's personal check to a credit executive following the receipt of the check by the casino cage.

The above issues were presented to the Commisison which found violations of all charges. In addition, the Commission found violations of "N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(c), N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.26 resulting from the consolidation involving the alteration by a credit executive of the patron's check outside the casino cage." Commission Decision at 2. With regard to the issue concerning internal control procedures, the Commission's finding of a violation was based on the fact that "alteration of a patron's check submitted for consolidation of counter checks is not a procedure authorized by BRC's internal and accounting controls as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-99." Commission Decision at 9. As a result, the Commisison imposed a penalty of $50,000 agaist BRC.[7]

As the foregoing cases clearly establish, the present case is not the first time that the Division has charged BRC with violations of Sections 99 and 101 of the Act or with accepting instruments that were not cash equivalents. Although the circumstances may vary, the theme that is common to all of these cases is also present in this case. That is, a willingness to side-step the statutory and regulatory framework when it may interfere with business interests. As former Commissioner Jacobson wrote in his partial concurrence and dissent in the matter involving patron Gaetano Caltagirone, (Separate Opinion of Commissioner Jacobson at 3):

> The motivation behind Boardwalk Regency Corporation's orchestrated defiance was a conscious decision to cater to the whims of a favored patron.
>
> In accepting the patronage and responding to the crude demands of this individual—whom the Casino's legal representative has labelled "an obnoxious person"—Boardwalk Regency Corporation had a clear choice.
>
> The choice was either to halt promptly and firmly this patron's improper behavior and conform with this Commission's authority, or to fawn over this favored patron and defy this Commission's authority.
>
> The evidence before us demonstrates that Boardwalk Regency Corporation made an unfortunate, unwise choice. The "obnoxious" patron went home after four days. This Commission meets every Tuesday.

[7] The Commission's Decision has been appealed by BRC.

> I find no evidence to mitigate the casino management's conduct. It is impossible to justify a two-tier system of regulation, one for the $2 bettor and another for the million-dollar high roller.

The majority in the Caltagirone case added the following comments regarding the Commission's decision to increase the Administrative Law Judge's recommended penalty of $20,000 to $40,000 for BRC's failure to cooperate with Commission inspectors:

> The justifications for such increases are the aggravating factors present in the BRC's attempts to intimidate and interfere with Commission inspectors. Such direct interference with the Commission's functions impugns the integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations. Moreover, BRC purposely and deliberately undertook these bullying tactics at the direction of high level supervisory personnel for the expressed purpose of favoring a valued patron. The motive was simple greed. Only the absence of any similar transgression by BRC before or after this incident and the dearth of precedent in sanctioning such conduct incline us to limit our response to a monetary sanction against this corporate respondent. We choose to believe that such a sanction will be sufficient to underline the gravity of this conduct and to deter future miscreance. If we are wrong in this judgment, we will not hesitate to join our dissenting colleague in any future case involving any such impudence and disrespect to the regulatory scheme.

Despite this warning by the Commission delivered on January 4, 1983, BRC made the first unapproved Incentive Payment to a preferred BRC patron two months later on May 8, 1983.

Similarly, BRC contends in the present matter that it was not required to seek Commission approval of the Incentive Program or the procedures thereto because it was a self-described marketing program and the procedures had already been addressed in their approved internal control submission. BRC also contends that the Incentive Program does not violate Section 101 of the Act or the accompanying regulations because the full tax is paid on the patrons' losses, the Incentive Payment was made after the patron's gambling activity, and that Section 101(g) and the Commission's Order of November 15, 1982 does not apply to a casino's acceptance of its own checks.

The facts presented and the arguments raised by BRC in this matter are reminiscent of the facts and arguments raised in the five cases summarized above. That is, BRC has unilaterally decided whether its actions comply with the Act and regulations and, having made that decision, has acted in accordance with those decisions. BRC's decisions in the instant matter, like the decisions reached in the five previous decisions, were in error.

In the Caltagirone case, the Commission suggested that precedent plays an important part in any penalty determination by stating that "[o]nly the absence of any similar transgression by BRC before or after this incident and the dearth of precedent in sanctioning such conduct incline us to limit our response to a monetary sanction against this corporate respondent." Final Decision at 24. In the Molony matter, the Commission approved the settlement between the parties which called for the closing of BRC's doors to the gaming public. Both the Molony and Caltagirone cases revolved around BRC's catering to a preferred patron and involved decision making of senior management. Similarly, the instant matter involves BRC's decision to implement a "marketing" program designed to attract patrons that might not otherwise patronize BRC. In addition, the decision to adopt and implement the Incentive Program involved senior management. See e.g., Joint Exhibits 1-20 and 85 and 86.

Following the rationale of the Commission in the Caltagirone casee, a severe monetary penalty is now appropriate against BRC. BRC made a business decision to adopt and implement the Incentive Program to cater to preferred casino patrons. During the course of making that decision, the regulatory authorities were excluded. As a result of that decision, BRC has financially benefited. An indication of how financially succesful BRC's decision has been is found in the fact that the four patrons who received Incentive Payments during the period from February 9, 1987 through October 24, 1987, lost over $4,000,000 at BRC. The entire amount paid out in incentives by BRC since its inception of the program in early 1983 is $2,550,610. Stipulation at 16 and Addendum at 50. There can be no argument that from a financial standpoint BRC succeeded in making the correct decision, however, from the regulatory and integrity perspective, BRC has failed once again.

Also significant in the detemination of penalty in this matter is BRC's history of regulatory non-compliance and the circumstances underlying those instances. In the Caltagirone and Molony matters, BRC was severely penalized for the business decisions made for the benefit of high rollers. The same underlying fact is present in the instant matter. Unlike the Caltagirone matter, however, there is no "dearth of precedent" in this case.

Accordingly, a severe monetary penalty should be imposed based on BRC's prior regulatory history, particularly since three of the four issues presented in the present case are similar to issues which were previously the subject of litigation in which the Commission issued final decisions prior to the start of the Incentive Program.

(E) Corrective Measures Implemented by the Casino Licensee

Since the filing of the Division's second complaint on November 17, 1987, and Commission consideration of the Division's Request for a Cease and Desist Order on November 25, 1987, BRC voluntarily ceased the operation of its Incentive Program pending the outcome of this proceeding. Prior to that time, however, BRC continued offering Incentive Payments to patrons, even after the Division had filed the first complaint in this matter.

During the period from the filing of the Division's complaint on February 19, 1987, up to the filing of the second complaint, BRC entered into 12 Incentive Agreements with 4 different patrons. The total amount of Incentive Payments paid to those patrons was $464,300. Moreover, BRC continued to alter and modify the Incentive Program procedures during the period following the Division's first complaint. See e.g., Joint Exhibits 85 and 86. BRC began offering "Incentives for Play" to selected patrons, which "incentives" do not appear to have been offered to patrons during the period covered by the first complaint. Addendum at 54.

Technically, the continuation of the Program after the filing of the Division's first complaint did not violate any order or directive of the Commission. The Division could have sought a cease and desist order, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-109, as it had done on previous occasions. However, the Division did not do so. Rather, nine months after filing its initial complaint, the Division filed a second complaint and concurrently sought the entry of an order requiring BRC to cease the operation of the Incentive Program. This application was denied; no appeal was sought. Subsequently, BRC voluntarily terminated the Program even after the Division's petition for a cease and desist order was denied.

As indicated above, the wisdom of a casino continuing a course of conduct after the Division has filed a complaint alleging the illegality of that conduct is highly questionable.

The more prudent action in such a highly regulated industy is to immediately, voluntarily suspend the questionable program and present the issue to the Commission for resolution. BRC, however, made a business decision to continue offering the Incentive Program to selected caisno patrons, despite the filing of the Division's complaint on February 19, 1987. BRC also continued making modifications to the Incentive Program based on business considerations and "market conditions." See Joint Exhibit 85. Having made that decision, BRC must now face the consequences of that decision. Thus, BRC's continued use of the Incentive Program following the filing of the Division's first complaint can only serve as an aggravating factor to any penalty imposed.

ORDER

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that the violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1), and (2), b, and c; 5:12-100e; 5:12-70o; 5:12-14a; and 5:12-102m; and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24(a)1; 1.25(a)2, (b), and (c)3, and 1.9 are all part of and included in the Incentive Program. I further CONCLUDE that there were 90 Incentive Program transactions.

It is hereby ORDERED that the respondent, Boardwalk Regency Corporation, be hereby fined $500,000 for the above violations of the Casino Control Act.

I further CONCLUDE that Boardwalk Regency Corporation committed two violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 by (1) failing to obtain Commission approval prior to adopting and implementing the Incentive Program, and (2) failing to submit the intenal procedures and administrative accounting controls of the Incentive Program to the Commission for review and approval and the Division for review. These violations are separate and distinct from the violations involved in the operation of the Program discussed above. In light of the repsondent's extensive prior record with the Commission and particularly in light of the Commission's 1981 and 1986 decisions, these are serious violations.

It is therefore further ORDERED that the respondent, Boardwalk Regency Corporation, be hereby fined $250,000 for the above violations of the Casino Control Act.

It is further ORDERED that the respondent, Boardwalk Regency Corporation, is to pay the civil penalties imposed above upon receipt of an invoice from the Commission's Division of Financial Evaluation and Control.

It is further ORDERED that Count III of the complaint filed by the Division on February 19, 1987, and paragraphs 25, 26, and 27 of Count I of the complaint filed by the Division on November 17, 1987, (the issues relating to the alleged violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1)) be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

It is further ORDERED that the respondent, Boardwalk Regency Corporation, cease and desist from operating its Incentive Program and refrain from reinstituting the Incentive Program or any similar program without the express prior approval of the Commission.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) charges that respondent, Boardwalk Regency Corporation, which operates Caesars Casino Hotel, violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b) on various dates, by permitting Debra Kim Cohen, a minor, to gamble in it's casino.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed its complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on October 15, 1987. Boardwalk Regency Corporation (Caesars) filed an Answer to the complaint on November 9, 1987. On December 15, 1987, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was scheduled in Atlantic City, New Jersey, on February 19, 1988, before the Honroable Richard Voliva. The matter was originally scheduled for hearing on June 20, 21, 22, 23, and 24, 1988. On June 7, 1988, this matter was reassigned to the Honorable Stephen W. Thompson. The matter was subsequently adjourned until July 11, 12, 13, 14 and 15, 1988.

Prior to the hearing date, the parties agreed to a settlement and prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Settlement which arrived at the OAL on July 12, 1988. The record closed on July 15, 1988.

The matter was remanded to the OAL for further proceeding by order of the Commission on November 3, 1988. On January 3, 1989, the parties submitted another proposed settlement agreement. The record closed on January 31, 1989, upon receipt of the remanded files.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Division and Caesars have prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Settlement, which is attached hereto and made a part of this Initial Decision. I have reviewed the stipulated facts and adopt them as if the same were set forth herein at length.

Therefore, I FIND:

1. The terms of settlement in this matter have been incorporated into a settlement agreement which is attached to this Initial Decision and which is incorporated herein as it set forth at length.

2. The parties to this action have voluntarily agreed to the terms of settlement, as evidence by their execution of the settlement agreement.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

3. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and it is consistent with the law.

CONCLUSION OF LAW AND ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 1:1-17.1, the parties to a contested case may settle the matter by consent and may submit a stipulation signed by both parties which contains the terms of settlement. When the administrative law judge assigned to the matter decides that the settlement is voluntary, consistent with the law and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy, he shall enter an Initial Decision which sets forth the settlement terms.

Having found that the terms of settlement as set forth in the attached settlement agreement are satisfactory to the settling parties and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy, and having noted that the parties have consented to the attached settlement terms, I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings before the Office of Administrative Law be and are hereby concluded.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT Complainant, v. BOARDWALK REGENCY CORPORATION, Respondent.	STIPULATION OF FACTS AND SETTLEMENT

The matters in the above-captioned matters having been discussed by and among the parties involved, Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, Attorney for Complainant, State of New Jersey, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement, by Katherine A. Smith, Deputy Attorney General, and Mitchell A. Schwefel, Assistant Attorney General and Lloyd D. Levenson, Esq., Counsel for Respondent, Boardwalk Regency Corporation, it is hereby stipulated to and agreed by and among the parties as follows:

1. Complainant, by and through its Division of Gaming Enforcement (hereinafter referred to as "Division"), now and at all times referenced herein has been charged with the responsibility pursuant to the Casino Control Act (P.L. 1977, c. 110, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1, et seq., hereinafter referred to as "the Act") of enforcing said Act, and the regulations promulgated thereunder by the Casino Control Commission (hereinafter referred to as "the Commission") and of prosecuting violations thereof before the Commission.

2. Respondent Boardwalk Regency Corporation (hereinafter referred to as "BRC") is now and at all times referenced herein has been a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, and has now and at all times referenced herein has had its principal place of business located at 2100 Pacific Avenue in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic, State of New Jersey.

3. BRC is now the holder of a casino license issued by the Commission authorizing it to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. The said license was issued to BRC effective on October 25, 1980. Said casino license has been renewed on an annual basis. BRC has been conducting its casino operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein.

4. BRC is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective June 26, 1979, at which time, BRC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Said Certificate of Operation entitles BRC to operate a casino hotel (hereinafter referred to as "Caesars") in accordance with the provisions of the Act, and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

5. BRC is now, and at all times material to this matter, has been the holder of a Casino Hotel Alcoholic Beverage ("C.H.A.B.") license issued by the Commission effective October 25, 1980 and renewed annually thereafter authorizing BRC to possess, store and sell alcoholic beverages in accordance with the terms of such authorization, Section 10_ of the Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-103 and the regulations promulgated thereunder at N.J.A.C. 19:50-1.1, et seq.

6. On several occasions between Summer, 1986 and January 9, 1987, including those occasions specified below, Debra Kim Cohen, a minor 17 (seventeen) years of age, entered Caesars' casino room and gambled at blackjack. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit A is a true and correct copy of Debra Kim Cohen's birth certificate.

7. On 14 (fourteen) separate occasions, the following Caesars' floorpersons on the following dates and times observed Debra Kim Cohen gambling at blackjack and evaluated her gambling activities through the preparation of player rating forms:

(a) Carol Remaley, Lic. #17937-21; November 4, 1986; 1:20 p.m.

(b) Eleanor Dougherty, Lic. #6206-21; November 6, 1986; 6:50 p.m.

(c) Cuneo Sorrentino, Lic. #34115-21; November 7, 1986; 9:10 p.m.

(d) Dorothy Simonetti, Lic. #32344-22; November 10, 1986; (unknown).

(e) Batiyah Mathis, Lic. #992-21; November 10, 1986; 2:50 p.m.

(f) Harold Gerhardt, Lic. #3102-11; November 11, 1986; 12:00 noon.

(g) Joseph Seyfert, Lic. #42965-21; November 11, 1986; 12:20 p.m.

(h) Gene Platt, Lic. #3823-11; November 12, 1986; 1:00 p.m.

(i) Beryl L. Steel, Lic. #337-11; November 12, 1986; 6:45 p.m.

(j) Beryl L. Steel, Lic. #337-11; November 12, 1986; 11:50 p.m.

(k) Beryl L. Steel, Lic. #337-11; November 13, 1986; 1:55 a.m.

(l) Leigh Ann Carchia, Lic. #2575-11; November 13, 1986; 12:20 p.m.

(m) Catherine McCann, Lic. #4335-21; November 14, 1986; 3:00 p.m.

(n) Harold Gerhardt, Lic. #4749-40; January 9, 1987; (unknown).

Attached hereto and made part of the record hereof as Exhibit B are true and correct copies of the player rating slips for Debra Kim Cohen, a/k/a Kim Cohen.

8. On November 12, 1986, Caesars' casino host Susan Cihowski, license #25158-21, issued Debra Kim Cohen two (2) complimentary tickets to a performance by the Pointer Sisters, a singing group, as a result of Cohen's rated blackjack play in Caesars' casino. Attached hereto and made part of the record hereof as EXhibit C is a true and correct copy of the voucher authorizing the issuance of complimentary tickets to Debra Kim Cohen on November 12, 1986.

9. On or about November 13, 1986, Debra Kim Cohen was issued by Caesars' casino host, Susan Cihowski, Lic. #25158-21, complimentary overnight accommodations, a complimentary alcoholic beverage and complimentary meals as a result of the rated blackjack play in Caesars' casino. The total value of these complimentaries was approximately $245.00. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit D are true and correct copies of the Transaction Summary for the Complimentary Pass Reporting System and true and correct copies of complimentaries issued to Debra Kim Cohen on November 13, 1986.

10. On or about November 14, 1986, Debra Kim Cohen was issued by Caesars' floor personnel complimentary overnight accommodations, complimentary meals and non-alcoholic beverages as a result of her rated blackjack play in Caesars Casino. The total value of these complimentaries was approximately $160.00. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit E are true and correct copies of the Transaction Summary Complimentary Pass Reporting System and true and correct copies of complimentaries issued to Debra Kim Cohen on November 14, 1986.

11. Leonard Cohen has stated, in a sworn statement given to the Division, that during the month of August 1986, he observed his daughter, Debra Kim Cohen, gambling at blackjack in the casino room at Caesars. Leonard Cohen has further stated that upon making this observation, he informed an unidentified blackjack dealer and an unidentified floorperson at the table where he says his daughter was gambling that she was 17 (seventeen) years old, a juvenile and had no legal right to gamble; and further, Debra Kim Cohen stated, in her sworn statement to the Division, that her father did observe her gambling and removed her from the table.

12. On or about October 5, 1986, Leonard Cohen provided Respondent's Security Department with a photocopy of a photograph of his daughter, Debra Kim Cohen, upon which photograph was her date of birth, and advised the Security Department that she was a missing person, and, if located, to notify the Atlantic City Police Department. Mr. Cohen stated, in his sworn statement to the Division, that he informed Respondent's Security Department that his daughter was a minor and should not be allowed to gamble in the casino. Ms. Cohen was located on or about October 9, 1986 in another casino hotel. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit F is a true and correct copy of the photocopy of the photograph Mr. Cohen provided to Caesars'

Security Department and a newspaper article dated October 9, 1986 which appeared in The Press.

13. By letter dated November 25, 1986, and received by Caesars, Richard L. Press, Esq., attorney for Leonard Cohen, notified and informed Caesars that Debra Kim Cohen had been rated, provided complimentaries and permitted to continue gambling at Caesars and that said activities must cease. Subsequent to receipt of Mr. Press' letter, Caesars inputted the following information into its computer:

> 11-86 - Request ID (D.O.B.) prior to issuing comp (HB-11-86)
> 12-11-86 - No comps/No Credit (CRC-12-11-86)

Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit G is a true and correct copy of the letter from Mr. Press to Caesars dated November 25, 1986.

14. N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b) was effective at all times referenced herein and provides in pertinent part:

> Any licensee or employee of a casino who allows a person under the age at which a person is authorized to purchase and consume alcoholic beveages to remain in a casino is a disorderly person...

15. N.J.S.A. 5:12-103f(2) was effective at all times referenced herein and provides in pertinent part:

> It should be unlawful for any person issued a Casino Hotel Alcoholic Beverage License to expose, possess, sell, give, dispense, transfer, or otherwise dispose of alcoholic beverages, other than within the terms and conditions of the Casino Hotel Alcoholic Beverage License issued, the provisions of Title 33 of the Revised Statutes, the rules and regulations promulgated by the director of the Division of Alcoholic Beverage Control, and, when applicable, the regulations promulgated pursuant to this Act.

16. N.J.A.C. 19:50-1.6(a) was effective at all times referenced herein and provides in pertinent part with respect to casino hotel alcoholic beverage licenses:

> No licensee shall:
>
> 1. Sell, serve, or deliver or allow, permit or suffer the sale, service or delivery of any alcoholic beverage, directly or indirectly, to any person under the age at which a person is authorized to purchase or consume alcoholic beverages in New Jersey, or to any person actually or apparently intoxicated; or
> 2. Permit the consumption of any alcoholic beverage by such person on licensed premises.

17. By permitting the minor Debra Kim Cohen to enter its casino and allowing her to remain in its casino and gamble, and allowing her to consume an alcoholic beverage, as set forth more fully herein, Respondent BRC violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b); N.J.S.A. 5:12-103f(2); and N.J.A.C. 19:50-1.6(a).

18. Further, Debra Kim Cohen entered Caesars Casino and gambled therein and consumed an alcoholic beverage, notwithstanding that, prior thereto, Leonard Cohen has stated, in his sworn statement to the Division, that he notified Respondent, as set forth above, that Debra Kim Cohen was a minor, and that, as a consequence, she should not be permitted to gamble at Caesars.

19. Although, on or about November 25, 1986, Respondent was notified by Richard L. Press, Esquire, Leonard Cohen's attorney, that Mr. Cohen's daughter was a minor and as a consequence, she should not be permitted to gamble at Caesars. Debra Kim Cohen did enter its casino and gamble therein on January 9, 1987.

20. Complaint No. 88-109 is the second complaint filed by the Division charging Respondent with statutory violations stemming from the gambling activities of underage persons in Caesars' casino room. The first such complaint, State v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, CCC Docket No. 87-46 (Final Order dated December 16, 1987) charged Caesars with violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b) stemming from the gambling activities of two underage persons in Caesars' casino room in July 1986. The Commission found that Respondent had violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b), assessed a total monetary penalty of $2,000 (two thousand dollars), i.e. $1,000 (one thousand dollars) per underage person. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibits H and I, respectively, are true and correct copies of the Initial Decision and the Final Order relative to Complaint No. 87-46.

21. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof, but not stipulated to by the parties, are true and correct copies of the following exhibits:

(a) Sworn statements of Debra Kim Cohen of July 1, 1987, taken by the Division prior to the filing of Complaint No. 88-109 and taken with no representatives of Boardwalk Regency Corporation entitled to be present. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit J.

(b) Deposition upon oral examination of Debra Kim Cohen taken on July 1, 1988 with representatives of the Division and Boardwalk Regency Corporation present. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit K.

(c) Certification of Robert E. Reilert, Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary of Boardwalk Regency Corporation. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit L.

(d) Certification of Emily Wimberly, Boardwalk Regency Corporation Security Director. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit M.

IT IS THEREFORE AGREED AND STIPULATED by and between the parties that:

1. In recognition of the foregoing, the parties agree that the Commission may impose a letter of reprimand or censure against Respondent BRC, which letter of reprimand or censure shall be made a permanent part of the file of Respondent BRC, if, in its discretion, the Commission deems such action appropriate in accordance with N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 and 130;

2. The parties further agree that the Commission may impose a civil penalty of up to $100,000 (one hundred thousand dollars), against Respondent BRC if, in its discretion, the Commission deems such action appropriate in accordance with N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 and 130;

3. The parties further agree that to the extent that any civil penalty imposed by the Commission against Respondent BRC is less than $100,000 (one hundred thousand dollars), Respondent BRC shall contribute the difference between $100,000 (one hundred thousand dollars) and the amount of any civil penalty to the John F. Kennedy Medical Center in Edison, New Jersey and the New Hope facility located at the Marlboro State Hospital in Marlboro, New Jersey. Any amount of money contributed to said hospitals will be divided equally between them. The Division reserves the right to request and further recommend that Respondent's contribution to the above named facilities be utilized for a specific purpose.

5. The parties further agree that such settlement shall be in full and final settlement of the allegations contained within the Division's Report in In the Matter of the Applications of the Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Renewals of Casino Licenses for 1988-1989, filed with the Commission on September 6, 1988, insofar as those allegations concern the "Deborah Kim Cohen" matter.

6. This Stipulation shall be subject to the approval and acceptance of the Casino Control Commission and shall be null and void if it is not approved and accepted by the Casino Control Commission.

The undersigned consent to the form and entry of the above Stipulation of Settlement.

Respectfully submitted,

BOARDWALK REGENCY CORPORATION, d/b/a CAESAR'S ATLANTIC CITY AND MARGARET M. KELSCH,
Respondent.

A complaint having been filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement (DGE) against Boardwalk Regency Corporation and Margaret M. Kelsch; and the respondents having been duly served with a copy of the complaint and advised of the right to a hearing and the obligation to file a notice of defense; and the respondent Kelsch having failed to file a notice of defense; and Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the DGE having filed a stipulation of facts; and the Commission having considered at its public meetings of June 1, 1988 and June 8, 1988, whether such facts constituted one or more violations of the Casino Control Act and, if so, what sanctions, if any, were appropriate;

IT IS on this 26th day of January 1989, that the Commission makes the following findings:

(1) as stipulated by Boardwalk Regency Corporation (BRC) and the Division of Gaming Enforcement (DGE), the acceptance by BRC cage cashier Margaret M. Kelsch of six American Express travelers checks in $100 denominations without entering the serial numbers of the checks into the American Express terminal constituted a failure to perform the necessary verification of the travelers checks prior to their acceptance as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e); further, BRC, as Ms. Kelsch's employer, is liable for her conduct; State v. Greate Bay Hotel and Casino, Inc., Hoagland, Binstein, Musso and Freeland, Docket No. A-550-86T6 (1988); State v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, Docket No. A-2306-87T1 (1988).

(2) Margaret M. Kelsch, by failing to respond to the DGE's complaint, which was duly served upon her, constructively has admitted the facts as charged with respect to a violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e) as described in paragraph 1 above; and

(3) the DGE has not established that any violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(c)(4) occurred in this instance.

IT IS ORDERED that Boardwalk Regency Corporation pay a total civil penalty of $600 upon receipt of an invoice from the Commission's Division of Financial Evaluation and Control; and

ORDER NO. 88-23-18

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Margaret M. Kelsch be reprimanded.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, Plaintiff, v. BOARDWALK REGENCY CORPORATION d/b/a CAESARS ATLANTIC CITY and MARGARET KELSCH, Casino Cage Cashier, Respondents.	CIVIL ACTION STIPULATION OF FACTS

With the above-captioned matter having been discussed by and between the parties involved, W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, Attorney for Plaintiff, State of New Jersey, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement, by Joseph M. Nardi, III, Deputy Attorney General, and Lloyd D. Levenson, Esquire, of Cooper, Perskie, April, Niedelman, Wagenheim & Weiss,

Attorneys for Respondent Boardwalk Regency Corporation d/b/a Caesars Atlantic City, and said matters having been resolved, it is hereby consented to and agreed by and between the parties that:

1. On October 28, 1986, an unidentified male presented six American Express Travelers Cheques in the individual amounts of $100 to Respondent Margaret Kelsch for the purpose of receiving $600 in cash in exchange for said travelers cheques. Respondent Margaret Kelsch, was employed by BRC as a casino cage cashier in or about March, 1980 and continued to be employed by BRC as a casino cage cashier until her termination on July 28, 1987. She holds a valid casino employee license, #6985-21, which was initially issued by the Commission on or about October 3, 1979, most recently renewed on October 3, 1984 and due to expire on October 31, 1987. Margaret Kelsch has not filed a Notice of Defense within the required time period and is not a party to this Stipulation.

2. From March, 1980 through October 28, 1986, Margaret Kelsch was suspended by BRC management on 4 separate occasions because of cash shortages that occurred during her shift, received 6 written warnings because of cash shortages that occurred during her shift, received a written warning because of a cash overage that occurred during her shift and, in 1983, received a written warning for failing to obtain patron signatures on 2 Com-cheks. In addition, BRC noted in Ms. Kelsch's personnel file that on one occasion in 1983 she failed to obtain a patron's signature on a cash equivalent and on another occasion in 1983 she incorrectly posted a customer's deposit on a customer deposit voucher and customer deposit slip. It is BRC's position that Margaret Kelsch's 7½ year employment record at BRC does not form a basis for liability against BRC for the actions of Margaret Kelsch on October 28, 1986. BRC also maintains that the disciplinary actions taken against Margaret Kelsch were consistent with BRC's Shortages/Overages Policy, which policy was in effect at all times referenced herein and a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

3. The front of the travelers cheques described in paragraph 1 contained no payee, were undated and contained two signatures in the name of "David Valente." The back of the travelers cheques were stamped with the following: "For Deposit Only BRC October 28, 1986 12:36 p.m." The backs of 3 of the travelers cheques also bear a Quebec drivers license number.

4. The serial numbers of the six American Express Travelers Cheques presented for cashing as described in paragraph 1 are:

1. RD109-555-474
2. RD109-555-475
3. RD109-555-476
4. RD109-555-477
5. RD109-555-478
6. RD109-555-479

Attached hereto as Exhibit B are copies of the 6 travelers cheques.

5. As of October 28, 1986, BRC casino cage policies and procedures required BRC casino cage personnel to verify the validity of all American Express Travelers Cheques prior to the acceptance of such cheques from BRC patrons when the total amount of the travelers cheques sought to be cashed equalled or exceeded $100. Attached hereto as Exhibit C is a copy of BRC's casino cage policies and procedures for the acceptance of American Express Travelers Cheques.

6. The BRC casino cage policies and procedures described in paragraph 5 were adopted pursuant to an agreement between American Express and BRC wherein American Express agreed to guarantee payment on its travelers cheques accepted at the casino cage as long as encashments of $100 or more were authorized through the American Express computer terminal provided by American Express located in the BRC casino cage. The agreement between American Express and BRC and the procedures to be performed are summarized in a letter dated August 12, 1985 from American Express Eastern Regional Manager Carol B. Roberts to BRC Cage Manager Ellsworth Gaskill. A copy of this letter is attached hereto as Exhibit D.

7. The procedures for the acceptance of American Express Travelers Cheques which are summarized in paragraphs 5 and 6 are set forth in greater detail in brochures published by American Express which are entitled "AMERICAN EXPRESS TRAVELERS CHEQUES Encashment Assistance Service" and "It Pays To Watch and Compare". These brochures are provided to all acceptors of American Express Travelers Cheques. Copies of these brochures are attached hereto as Exhibits E and F.

8. Respondent Margaret Kelsch accepted the six American Express Travelers Cheques described in paragraphs 1 and 3 in exchange for $600 in cash which was paid to the unidentified male who represented himself to be "David Valente".

9. Respondent Margaret Kelsch did not enter the serial numbers of any one of the six American Express Travelers Cheques into the American Express Terminal prior to accepting said travelers cheques for encashment from the person purporting to be David Valente on October 28, 1986.

10. Approximately 30 minutes after the transaction described in paragraphs 8 and 9, an unidentified male presented to BRC Casino Cage Cashier Susan Mitchell, #67256-21, 5 American Express Travelers Cheques in the individual amounts of $100 for the purpose of receiving $500 in cash in exchange for said travelers cheques.

11. The travelers cheques described in paragraph 10 contained no payee, were undated and contained two signatures in the name of "David Valente". The back of the travelers cheques were stamped with the following: "For Deposit Only BRC". The back of the travelers cheques also bear the time and date. The back of 1 of the travelers cheques also bears a Quebec drivers license number.

12. The serial numbers of the five American Express Travelers Cheques presented for cashing as described in paragraph 10 are:

1. RA118-042-848
2. RA118-042-850
3. RA118-042-851
4. RA118-042-852
5. RA118-042-853

Attached hereto as Exhibit G are copies of the 5 travelers cheques.

13. Casino Cage Cashier Susan Mitchell requested identification credentials from the unidentified male and he presented her with a Quebec driver's license issued to David Valente, number V4533-191061-05.

14. Following the receipt of the 5 travelers cheques from the person purporting to be David Valente as described in paragraph 11, Cage Cashier Susan Mitchell attempted to verify the validity of said travelers cheques by entering the serial number of 1 of the 5 travelers cheques into the American Express computer terminal located in BRC's casino cage.

15. After entering the information into the American Express computer terminal as described in paragraph 14, Cage Cashier Susan Mitchell received information that the travelers cheques presented by the person purporting to be David Valente were stolen travelers cheques.

16. By the time Cage Cashier Susan Mitchell had received the information described in paragraph 15, the person purporting to be David Valente had departed from the casino cage area.

17. Following the incident described in paragraphs 14 through 16, BRC contacted American Express and notified American Express that BRC may have accepted stolen travelers cheques from a patron.

18. On October 28, 1986, Detective William Madden of the Division's Casino Enforcement Section interviewed BRC Cage Supervisor Gina Johnson, CCC #1412-11, and was informed that Respondent Margaret Kelsch had cashed 6 $100 American Express Travelers Cheques that apparently had been stolen.

19. Detective Madden interviewed Respondent Margaret Kelsh, who described the transactions as follows: The patron approached cage window #5 and cashed one cheque in the amount of $100. Respondent Kelsch did not enter the serial number of the travelers cheque into the American Express terminal. The patron took a few steps from the window and then returned to cash 2 additional travelers cheques in the individual amounts of $100. The patron then requested Respondent Kelsch to cash 3 more travelers cheques in the individual amount of $100, totalling 6 travelers cheques in the amount of $600.

20. On June 16, 1987, the Division filed the instant complaint against Respondents BRC and Margaret Kelsch.

21. The Division's complaint charged Respondents BRC and Margaret Kelsch with violating regulations of the Casino Control Commission in two respects: (1) failing to perform the necessary verification to determine the validity of the 6 American Express Travelers Cheques presented by the person purporting to be David Valente on October 28, 1986, as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e); and (2) accepting these same travelers cheques although they were undated, in violation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(c)4. BRC denies that the dating requirement contained in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(c)4 applies to cash equivalents such as the instant travelers cheques; BRC also denies that the travelers cheques were undated since they were time and date stamped on the back upon acceptance.

22. With respect to the allegation by the Division that Margaret Kelsch failed to perform the necessary verification to determine the validity of the 6 $100 American Express Travelers Cheques presented by the person purporting to be David Valente prior to their acceptance and the further allegation that BRC is responsible for the failure of Margaret Kelsch to perform the necessary verification, the Division's position is that "necessary verification" of American Express Travelers Cheques requires examining the face of the travelers cheques, watching and comparing the patron counter sign the travelers cheque and entering the serial numbers of the travelers cheques into the American Express terminal located in BRC's casino cage for the purpose of obtaining an authorization code from American Express.

23. BRC acknowledges that the acceptance of the 6 $100 American Express Travelers Cheques by BRC Cage Cashier Margaret Kelsch in exchange for $600 in cash on October 28, 1986, occurred without entering the serial numbers of the travelers cheques into the American Express Terminal which resulted in the failure to perform the necessary verification of the travelers cheques prior to their acceptance, as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(e).

24. Respondent Margaret Kelsch, as well as every cashier employed by BRC, receives at the outset of their employment on-the-job training at a cage window. Periodically, each cashier attends a re-training program in which policies and procedures relating to the duties of cage cashiers are reviewed. Such a meeting was held on October 2, 1986; a copy of a memorandum outlining the areas of discussion is attached hereto as Exhibit H. On November 30, 1985, each cage cashier was retrained at a seminar covering all aspects of their position and duties including the procedures for verifying American Express Travelers Cheques. Copies of the curriculum for the training session and the materials provided to each cashier during the training program is attached hereto as Exhibits I and J. Lastly, full and complete instructions describing the method of the entry of the serial numbers on the travelers cheques are affixed to the American Express Terminal located in BRC's cashier's cage.

Record Closed: December 6, 1988 Decided: January 20, 1989

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner seeks renewal of her casino employee license which permits her to work as a blackjack dealer in a licensed casino. By letter to the Casino Control Commission dated May 24, 1988, the Division of Gaming Enforcement objected to the renewal, based upon its allegation that the petitioner had committed the offense of theft by deception in the third degree, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4. These are the issues:

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

1. Is the petitioner disqualified from licensure pursuant to section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.), based upon her alleged commission of acts which constitute theft by deception in the third degree, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, even if such conduct was not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this state, as permitted by section 86g of the act.

2. Does the petitioner possess the good character, honesty and integrity required for casino employee licensure by sections 89b(2) and 90b of the act.

3. Has the petitioner, if she has committed an otherwise disqualifying offense, affirmatively established her rehabilitation, pursuant to section 90h of the act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner's request for a hearing on her renewal application was received by the Casino Control Commission on June 30, 1988. On July 13, 1988, the Commission transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on September 19, 1988. The hearing was thereafter held as scheduled on December 6, 1988, and the record closed on that date.

FINDINGS OF FACT

There is no dispute concerning the material facts in this matter. The petitioner is a 24-year-old resident of Mays Landing, New Jersey. She provides the sole support for her seven-year-old son. The petitioner is seeking renewal of her casino employee license, which was originally issued by the Casino Control Commission in March 1983.

The petitioner has been employed by the Claridge Casino Hotel as a blackjack dealer since October 16, 1986. She works on a full-time basis, five days per week. A letter from Pit Boss Shelley Horne was admitted into evidence as Exhibit P-2. The letter writer has been a supervisor at the Claridge for seven years and has had the opportunity to observe and supervise the petitioner. The petitioner was described as displaying a positive and professional attitude toward supervisors and fellow employees and her game knowledge and performance were described as being excellent. On the basis of her positive characteristics, the petitioner has been nominated at the Claridge for recognition as employee of the month (Exhibit P-3).

The petitioner testified that she first was employed as a blackjack dealer by the Tropicana Casino Hotel in April 1983. She earned $3.50 per hour, plus tips. On December 2, 1984, the petitioner applied for unemployment benefits. She disclosed her employment and earnings from the Tropicana and was determined to be eligible for a benefit grant. Her earnings were subtracted as an offset from her grant and the amount of the grant varied, depending on how many days per week she was working.

According to the petitioner's candid testimony, she received unemployment benefits until April 23, 1985. During that entire time, she continued to work at the Tropicana. However, although her work schedule at the Tropicana had increased to three or four days per week, the petitioner informed the Unemployment Benefits Office that she did not have any days during which she worked. On the basis of this false information, her unemployment benefits grant was increased.

The Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance subsequently discovered its overpayment to the petitioner and it filed a Certificate of Debt in the Superior Court of New Jersey which recorded the petitioner's indebtedness to the State of New Jersey for the repayment of benefits and fines totaling $5,293.75 (Exhibit R-1). The petitioner was charged with theft by deception, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, as a result of her receipt of benefits to which she was not entitled between December 1984 and April 1985 (Exhibit R-3). On July 20, 1987, the petitioner entered a guilty plea to the downgraded charge of theft by deception in the fourth degree. She was sentenced to two years probation, fined $500, and ordered to pay court costs of $25 and a Violent Crimes Compensation Board penalty of $30. In addition, the petitioner was ordered to make restitution in the amount of $4,790.

A letter from Probation Officer Katrina Bond of the Atlantic County Probation Department was admitted into evidence as Exhibit P-4. According to Ms. Bond, the petitioner was directed on August 11, 1987, to report to the Probation Office on the second Tuesday of each month and to pay her fines and restitution in the amount of $50 per week. Probation Officer Bond reports that the petitioner is currently abiding by the conditions of her probation and she has remained "arrest-free and gainfully employed." It is undisputed that the petitioner has no other record of arrests or convictions.

The petitioner testified credibly concerning the circumstances which led her to collect the unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled. She was a young single parent, and she had just moved out on her own. The petitioner had a number of monthly payments which she was required to make, including payments for housing, utilities, and transportation. Although she was working while she incurred these obligations, she was not earning enough money to pay her bills.

The petitioner was a sincere and believable witness on her own behalf. She emphasized that she has not missed a payment on her restitution obligation and she noted her good work record at the Claridge Casino. The petitioner stated credibly that her receipt of unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled was an isolated incident (see Exhibit P-5). The petitioner's father, Clinton Anderson, and her sister, Michele Stokes, testified on her behalf. It was apparent from their testimony that they respect the petitioner's integrity and sincerity.

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to section 80a of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.), it is the affirmative responsibility of each applicant and licensee to establish by clear and convincing evidence her individual qualifications for licensure. Participation in casino operations as a licensee under the act is deemed to be a revocable privilege conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual licensee. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8). It is the intention of the Casino Control Act to preclude the creation of any property right in any license permitted under the act, and to require that participation in gaming be solely conditioned upon the individual qualifications of the person seeking such privilege.

Pursuant to sections 89b(2) and 90b of the Casino Control Act, an applicant for a casino employee license must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence her good character, honesty and integrity. Section 90 also incorporates the disqualification criteria set forth in section 86 of the act. Pursuant to sections 86c(1) and 86g of the act, the Casino Control Commission shall deny licensure to any applicant who has committed an offense specifically identified in the Casino Control Act as a disqualifying offense, even if such conduct has not been or may not be prosecuted under the criminal laws of New Jersey.

It is undisputed that the petitioner received unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled during a period extending from December 2, 1984 through April 23, 1985. She received these benefits by failing to report her earnings from employment. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, a person is guilty of theft if he purposely obtains property of another by deception. The petitioner withheld from the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance the important information that she was receiving earnings from employment. Thus, her act of deception resulted in her obtaining benefits to which she was not entitled. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has committed the offense of theft by deception.

On July 20, 1987, the petitioner entered a guilty plea to a downgraded charge of theft by deception in the fourth degree. However, she has admitted receiving unemployment benefits to which she was entitled in an amount in excess of $500. The restitution ordered upon her plea of guilty was $4,235. Since theft of an amount in excess of $500 but less than $75,000 constitutes a crime of the third degree, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(2)(a), I CONCLUDE from the petitioner's admitted act of theft by deception in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 involving an amount in excess of $500 that the petitioner has committed a theft constituting a crime of the third degree. Therefore, I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner's commission of theft by deception constitutes a disqualifier from licensure as a casino employee, pursuant to sections 86c(1) and 86g of the Casino Control Act.

Section 90h of the act provides that the petitioner shall not be denied renewal of her casino employee license on the basis of her commission of an otherwise disqualifying offense, provided that she has affirmatively demonstrated her rehabilitation. In determining whether rehabilitation has been affirmatively demonstrated, the following factors under N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h shall be considered:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense occurred;

(4) The date of the offense;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense was committed;

(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counselling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendations of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

The petitioner was 20 years old when she received unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled. This occurred between December 1984 and April 1985. The petitioner was and remains the sole support of her seven-year-old child. The earnings which she failed to disclose to the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance arose from her employment in the casino industry.

The petitioner did not disclose her earnings because she needed the unemployment benefits to meet her expenses. She has candidly admitted her misconduct and has made regular payments to make restitution of the overpayment of unemployment benefits. Since her sentencing in July 1987, the petitioner has paid $50 weekly to make restitution. She is working successfully in the casino industry as a blackjack dealer. Her supervisors and peers consider her to be an excellent employee. The petitioner is now a mature, responsible woman. The likelihood of her becoming involved in illegal activity is now very remote. Based upon the foregoing discussion and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner, who has committed a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1) of the act, has established her rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence, within the meaning of section 90h of the act. I also CONCLUDE on the basis of the undisputed facts in this matter that the petitioner has sustained her burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that she presently possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino employee, within the meaning of sections 89b(2) and 90b of the act. Therefore, I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner's application for renewal of her casino employee license should be granted.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the application of Trina D. Brown for renewal of a casino employee license be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Richard E. Burnside, petitioner-respondent, pro se
Joanne Ciancimino, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent-petitioner (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: October 28, 1988 Decided: February 28, 1989

New Jersey is an Equal Opportunity Employer

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint and a letter with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on February 26, 1988 and June 6, 1988 respectively, seeking the revocation of Richard E. Burnside's casino hotel employee registration and objecting to the issuance of a casino employee license to him. The Division alleges that Mr. Burnside's criminal conduct and conviction preclude his continued employment in the casino industry.

PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Subsequent to its receipt of the Division's complaint and objection letter, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The Commission also ordered that the two matters be consolidated pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-17.1(b). On August 8, 1988, a prehearing conference was held where the issues were settled and the hearing date of October 28, 1988 was established, among other things. The hearing was held on the established date at the Absecon Municipal Court at the conclusion of which, the herein record was considered closed. Extensions were requested and granted for the execution of this initial decision.

ISSUES

The issues to be determined by this tribunal were set forth at the prehearing conference as follows:

1. Whether petitioner-respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c to wit: N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)1 which is analogous to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5?

2. With respect to the application only, whether the applicant may demonstrate his good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), which is incorporated by section 90b of the Casino Control Act (Act)?

3. Whether petitioner-respondent may demonstrate his rehabilitation pursuant to sections 90h and/or 91d of the Act?

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the testimony proffered at the hearing together with the documents marked into evidence, I make the following FINDINGS OF FACT in this matter:

Richard E. Burnside, who is now 26 years of age, was arrested by officers of the Pleasantville, New Jersey, Police Department when he was nineteen years of age on March 1, 1982. On that occasion, petitioner-respondent was a passenger in a motor vehicle which had struck a utility pole at the intersection of Routes 322 and 9. The police officers investigating the accident found in plain view in the vehicle nine cellophane bags containing vegetation which later tested to be marijuana in a quantity of over 25 grams. In addition, the police officers found a blue cloth bag in the vehicle which contained 47 white tablets and which later proved to be quualudes, a controlled dangerous substance (CDS). Mr. Burnside and the driver of the motor vehicle were arrested and placed under custody by the Pleasantville Police. Subsequent to a complaint having been issued alleging possession with the intent to distribute marijuana over 25 grams and 47 quualudes, the Atlantic County Grand Jury returned a "No Bill" and the complaint was dismissed.

Petitioner-respondent failed to disclose this arrest on his Personal History Disclosure form, however, he did admit to it during a subsequent telephone interview with Division Agent, Richard A. Clark.

Petitioner-respondent was next arrested in San Jose, California on a complaint for disturbing the peace on May 24, 1985. The California charge of disturbing the peace is similar to the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, N.J.S.A. 2C:33-2, disorderly conduct. On June 26, 1985, Burnside was found guilty of the charge and was fined $100 with an additional $70 penalty assessment. Petitioner-respondent was 23 years of age when this offense was committed.

Subsequently, on December 18, 1986, the Atlantic County Grand Jury handed up Indictment No. 86-12-2554-B-I alleging in six counts that Burnside and Michael A. DePiano a/k/a Michael Rossman had conspired to commit the crime of theft by extortion in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-5 and contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2; threatened to commit a crime of violence with a purpose to terrorize one Robert Vanzin contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:12-3a; threatening to inflict bodily injury upon Vanzin contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-5, among other things.

On July 31, 1987, after five days of trial by jury, Burnside was found guilty of Amended Counts 4 and 5 to Harassment, a petty disorderly offense, N.J.S.A. 2C:33-4. The Honorable Manuel Greenberg, J.S.C., placed Burnside on one year probation, imposed a fine of $500 and assessment of $30 to the Violent Crime Compensation Board (VCCB) for each of two counts.

The downgraded Harassment amended charge was as a consequence of Burnside and DePiano, a/k/a Michael Rossman, attempting to collect money from Vanzin for the sale of one quarter of a pound of cocaine to Vanzin by Burnside. DePiano, who used the professional name, Michael Rossman, was the former light heavyweight boxing champion of the world.

On December 4, 1986, the Atlantic County Grand Jury handed up Indictment No. 86-12-2446-C-IN alleging in four counts that Burnside and Richard Campana possessed CDS; distribution of cocaine, CDS; conspired to distribute CDS; and, possession of CDS with intent to distribute. As a consequence of a plea bargaining agreement, Burnside entered a plea of guilty to count Two of the Indictment and on November 20, 1987 was sentenced to two years probation; serve 180 days in the Atlantic County Jail and $30 to VCCB. In setting forth his reasons for the sentence, Judge Greenberg stated that:

> The sentence is within the parameters of the plea agreement. Given the great harm to society caused by persons in the business of unlawful sale of drugs, it is evidence that in general, cases of this type call for a period of incarceration so as to act as a deterrent against such conduct not only by the particular defendant involved, but also others engaged in it. The amount of drugs here, moreover, was not minute nor was the distribution merely as an accommodation but rather obviously for profit.

> Thus, it is essential that a period of incarceration of some substance be imposed as a condition of probation (P-6).

Petitioner-respondent Burnside's probation with respect to this charge and sentence continues until November 1989.

Mr. Burnside's employment history in the casino industry shows that he was first employed by the Sands Hotel and Casino on August 18, 1983 as a bus person. Burnside remained at the Sands until November 10, 1984 at which time he abandoned his employment position. Thereafter, he was hired by Caesars Boardwalk Regency Hotel/Casino on November 20, 1985 as a bus person. Burnside was terminated from the employment position because he was unable to perform the job satisfactorily during the probationary period. The employment records at Caesars revealed that Burnside had a "write-up" in his personnel file. The write-up demonstrated that Burnside was loitering in an off limits stairwell of the casino on November 20, 1985.

Thereafter, on September 8, 1986, Burnside was employed at Bally's Grand Hotel and Casino as a food server in its Greenery Restaurant. Bally's records show that although Burnside was hired, he did not appear on the appointed commencement date and, therefore, he was terminated. On October 17, 1986, Burnside was employed by the Trump Plaza Hotel/Casino as an assistant service person. Burnside remained at the Trump Plaza until September 25, 1987 at which time he quit the job without good cause. On October 12, 1987, he was employed at the Trump Castle Hotel and Casino as a food server and voluntarily resigned from the position on November 20, 1987.

Mr. Burnside has been employed by the Sands in its Rossi's Restaurant since, at least, June 1988 as a food server. While in this position Burnside has received complements from patrons about his demeanor and attentiveness.

Petitioner-respondent Burnside did not testify on his own behalf.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Section 16(8) of the Act clearly establishes that licensure under the Act is a revocable privilege which is "conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual licensee." Section 129 of the Act provides for the revocation of or other sanction against a license or registration held by a person "...for the conviction of any criminal offense....or for the commission of any other offense or violation of this Act which would disqualify such person from holding his license or registration." The Division has clearly demonstrated that Mr. Burnside was convicted of an offense enumerated under former section 86c(3) of the Act; possession of a CDS with intent to distribute, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1). There, the Act provided that the Commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of ... the conviction of the applicant ... of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be ... a violation of ... law. The record clearly shows that Burnside entered a plea of guilty to the Second Count of the Atlantic County Grand Jury Indictment No. 86-12-2446-C-IN, which states that:

> On or about the 18th day of April, 1986, in the City of Ventnor, County of Atlantic and within the jurisdiction of this Court, the said Richard Campana and Richard Burnside did unlawfully and knowingly distribute to Inv. James Pullan a controlled dangerous substance, to wit: Cocaine, contrary to the provisions of N.J.S. 24:21-19a(1), and against the peace of this State, the government and dignity of the same (P-6).

As a consequence of Burnside's entry of a guilty plea, he was placed on probation for a period of two years, incarcerated for a term of 180 days and assessed $30 for Violent Crimes Compensation Board.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the Division has established, by a preponderance of the reliable and credible evidence, that petitioner-respondent's acts constitute a violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1) (now, N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5), a disqualifying offense for licensure, pursuant to former section 86c(3) of the Act (as amended by L. 1987, c. 354 § 10, eff. January 4, 1988, now N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)).

Pursuant to Section 90b of the Act, section 89b(2) is incorporated therein and provides that:

In support of his burden, Burnside produced his probation officer and a recent employment supervisor to testify on his behalf. David Berger, Atlantic County Probation officer asserted, among other things, that Burnside had been on probation since July 31, 1987 when he was placed as a consequence of the N.J.S.A. 2C:33-4 Harassment charge. Mr. Burnside met all of his probationary obligations including reporting to Berger in a timely manner and maintaining employment. Berger opined that Burnside had benefited "somewhat" from his probation experience. As a consequence of Berger's observation of Burnside at the herein hearing, Berger's assessment of Burnside's attitude was "not very good," based upon Burnside's performance at the hearing (Tr. p. 43). Berger hoped that, as a result of his probation experience, Burnside's prognosis "would be good." (Tr. p. 44).

Mr. Kenneth Correll, steward shift supervisor at the Sands, asserted, among other things, that he had received a number of complements about Burnside's work from patrons. Mr. Correll had known Burnside from June 1988 until the present and was made aware of Burnside's criminal record when Burnside requested that Correll testify on his behalf.

Petitioner-respondent Burnside's criminal acts do not indicate the qualities of good character, honesty and integrity. Notwithstanding that the indictable offenses of terrorists threats (N.J.S.A. 2C:12-3a), theft by extortion (N.J.S.A. 2C:20-5) and conspiracy to commit theft by extortion (N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2) were downgraded to a charge and finding of guilt to the charge of harassment (N.J.S.A. 2C:33-4), such conduct does not indicate the characteristics of good character, honesty or integrity. Given the facts, as illustrated by Senior Investigator Pullen in Exhibit P-7, it is apparent that Burnside's actual character and attributes are in opposition to the characteristics of good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotels for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979). This, coupled with his subsequent conviction of the possession with intent to distribute CDS (N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1)) does not bespeak the qualities requisite for licensure.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner-respondent has failed to carry his burden to demonstrate, by clear and convincing evidence, that he possesses good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino employee. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super., 324 (App. Div. 1981).

An applicant, licensee or registrant faced with the existence of one or more Section 86c statutory disqualifiers is afforded the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his/her rehabilitation, N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and/or 91d. Therein the Legislature has set forth eight specific criteria to be considered and evaluated where a determination of rehabilitation is to be made. Those specific eight factors in Section 90h are:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense occurred;

(4) The date of the offense;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense was committed;

(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling, or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release program or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

In consideration of petitioner-respondent's claim of rehabilitation, the following has been found in this record:

First, petitioner-respondent presently holds a casino hotel employee registration No. 49167-40 and that he is applying for a casino employee license as a blackjack dealer under DGE No. 66772-21. In his past and present employment in the casino industry, he has worked in the hotel food services and has had incidental contact with casino patrons.

Second, petitioner-respondent Burnside committed the offense of the possession of a CDS with the intent to distribute, in contravention of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1) and entered a plea of guilty to the offense before the Honorable Manual Greenberg, J.S.C. This offense is serious and by its very nature, was listed as an automatic disqualifying offense to hold a casino employee license under Section 86c(3) of the former Act.

Third, the underlying circumstances which lead to Burnside's arrest, indictment, entry of a guilty plea and finding of guilt demonstrate the seriousness of the misconduct. It has been established on this record that Burnside was the subject of two Indictments handed up by the Atlantic County Grand Jury within a period of 14 days in December 1986. Both Indictments were related to illegal drugs or the distribution thereof.

Fourth, the disqualifying offense occurred on or about April 18, 1986 in the City of Ventnor, Atlantic County. Burnside was not employed within the casino industry when the arrest occurred.

Fifth, the misconduct occurred when Burnside was 24 years of age. There is no indication that respondent's misconduct was due to immaturity.

Sixth, although he had been charged, there is no finding that petitioner-respondent had more than one conviction for violation of CDS laws of this State.

Seventh, there were no social conditions which contributed to the offense.

Eighth, Burnside's rehabilitation efforts are minimal. He is currently serving his probation, which will not expire until November 1989. His probation officer qualifies Burnside's prognosis as "good" but that his attitude is "not very good." Considering the totality of the evidence, petitioner-respondent's rehabilitative efforts do not outweigh the seriousness of his misconduct.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that petitioner-respondent has not affirmatively established his rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h or 91d.

For the reasons expressed in this decision, it is clear that petitioner-respondent's misconduct constitutes sufficient grounds for the revocation of his casino employee registration. It is further clear that he has clearly committed a disqualifying offense under Section 86c(3) and that his application for a casino employee license should be denied.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that the complaint issued by the Division against Richard E. Burnside is GRANTED and that the casino hotel employee registration No. 49167-40 be REVOKED.

It is further ORDERED that the application of Richard E. Burnside for a casino employee license be and is hereby DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

APPLICATION OF JAMES C. CALLAN
FOR A CASINO EMPLOYEE LICENSE

ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and exceptions having been filed by the Division; and a reply to exceptions having been filed by the applicant; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings except the Division's exceptions at its public meeting of May 17, 1989,

IT IS on this 31st day of May 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

1. As the ALJ concluded, the applicant's conduct in collecting $2,520 in unemployment compensation to which he was not entitled constituted the offense of theft by deception in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, an offense listed in section 86(c)(1). Because this offense was committed more than ten years prior to the date on which the applicant filed his application for licensure, the burden is on the applicant to demonstrate that it should not result in his disqualification. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(2); Application of Jackie Edwards, 89-EA-92 (Commission order March 2, 1989).

   In determining whether such an offense is disqualifying the factors to be considered are the rehabilitation criteria listed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h) and 91(d). Application of Paul Goldberg for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. 87-EA-5 (Commission order June 11, 1985) and State v. Ronald J. Jones, Docket No. 86-15 (Commission order July 8, 1987). Considering the rehabilitation factors present in this case, including that the applicant's offense occurred in 1975; that his debt to the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance has been discharged; that he has been gainfully employed and has led a law-abiding existence since 1981; that the administrative law judge was impressed by his demeanor and credibility and concluded that the applicant was unlikely to repeat his criminal behavior; and that three individuals have attested to his current good character, the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated that his offense should not result in disqualification.

2. To note that the correct dates for the period during which the applicant collected unemployment benefits are September 1, 1975, through December 15, 1975, as indicated on pages 1 and 6 of the initial decision and not September 1, 1985, through December 16, 1985, as indicated on page 2; and

3. To include the fact that $2,160 of the $2,520 owed to the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance was repaid from subsequent benefits due to the applicant and that the entire amount of this debt was later discharged in bankruptcy.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the application of James C. Callan is granted substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision which, as modified, is incorporated herein by reference.

JAMES C. CALLAN,
Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

James C. Callan, petitioner, pro se

Ralph Fusco, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: March 21, 1989 Decided: April 11, 1989

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) alleges that the petitioner, James C. Callan, is statutorily disqualified from holding a casino employee license within the meaning of section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act (Act) by virtue of his improper collection of Unemployment Compensation benefits between September 1, 1975 and December 15, 1975, in the amount of $2,520, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 theft, despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted within the meaning of section 86g of the Act. The Division also alleges that the petitioner does not possess the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure pursuant to section 89b(2) of the Act as incorporated within section 90b. The petitioner asserts rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed an objection letter with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on September 26, 1988. The petitioner requested a hearing on November 8, 1988. On November 14, 1988, the Commission transmitted the within matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held before the Honorable Edgar Holmes on December 27, 1988, and the matter was scheduled for hearing before the Honorable Stephen W. Thompson on March 21, 1989, at the OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The matter was heard and the record closed on March 21, 1989.

ISSUES

A. Whether petitioner committed the disqualifying offense of theft by deception, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 within the meaning of section 86c(1), even though such conduct was not prosecuted under the criminal laws of New Jersey, within the meaning of section 86g.

B. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b.

C. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts essential to the resolution of this matter are undisputed.

A New Jersey Department of Labor and Industry certificate of debt was entered against the petitioner as a result of the petitioner improperly collecting Unemployment Compensation benefits between September 1, 1985 and December 16, 1985. The petitioner argues that the dates are incorrect; however, he acknowledges that he improperly collected benefits while he was self-employed as an insurance and real estate salesman and being paid a weekly draw against his commission. The Division contends that the improper receiving of Unemployment Compensation benefits is analogous to theft by deception in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4.

On September 9, 1981, the petitioner was arrested in South Carolina for forgery in violation of South Carolina statute §16-13-10, which is analogous to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1. The petitioner had taken an individual's checkbook and had written four checks totalling $1,050. The petitioner was convicted of the offense on January 19, 1982, and sentenced to four years in prison. The petitioner served less than six months in jail. In the state of New Jersey, forgery of a check or other like instrument is a fourth-degree offense. State v. Ott, 181 N.J. Super. 559 (Law Div. 1981). It is undisputed that the forgery conviction in South Carolina does not automatically disqualify petitioner from casino licensure. In addition, the Division has failed to establish an offense in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 which would be a statutory disqualifier under section 86c(1) of the Act.

The petitioner acknowledged his misconduct but emphasized that his criminal conduct occurred many years ago. It is undisputed that the petitioner has not been involved with the criminal justice system since early 1982.

The above is documented, believable and it is thus FOUND AS FACT.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSION

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) of the Act mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense which would be under New Jersey law at the time of application be a violation of any of the provisions in regard to Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes be disqualified from licensure. Section 86g provides that the Commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified "by any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c . . . even if such conduct has not or may not be prosecuted under the criminal laws of this State."

In the instant matter, the documentary evidence and the admissions made by petitioner establish, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that Mr. Callan committed an act comparable to theft by deception by collecting unemployment benefits while he was employed as insurance and real estate salesman between September 1, 1975 and December 15, 1975. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is statutorily disqualified from casino licensure, pursuant to section 86c(1) of the Act as incorporated within section 86g.

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b

Under section 89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b of the Act, Mr. Callan is required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, her good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 250 (1979). In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises an objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon the applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Applications of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 10 N.J.A.R. 295 (1980). In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 297.

The Commission has held that the disqualification criteria found in section 86b cannot be segregated from an applicant's burden to establish his or her qualifications for licensure under section 89b(2). In the Matter of the Application of William Gonzales for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Slot Attendant), OAL Dkt. CCC 684-80 (July 16, 1980), modified, Casino Control Commission (September 5, 1980) Final Decision at 8.

I have had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and credibility of the petitioner. After weighing and assessing the testimony presented, I am satisfied that Mr. Callan should not be precluded from casino licensure based upon his alleged lack of good character, honesty and integrity. The fact that the disqualifying offense occurred in 1975 and the fact that petitioner's last criminal conduct occurred in 1981 demonstrate that over a period of the last eight years, petitioner has led a law-abiding existence. I am persuaded, based upon petitioner's testimony, that the passage of time and change in attitude give petitioner the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has established, by clear and convincing evidence, his good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

An applicant or a licensed employee in a disciplinary proceeding faced with the existence of one or more section 86 disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against continued licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his rehabilitation.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination for rehabilitation is to be made:

1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

4) The date of the offense or conduct;

5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

7) Any social condition which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counselling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or who have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Mr. Callan is an applicant for a casino employee license as a craps dealer. As such, he will have substantial contact with patrons of casinos.

Second, the Division has established that petitioner committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception, pursuant to section 86g of the Act. Theft by deception is a statutory disqualifier. Given the circumstances, this was a serious offense.

Third, the petitioner acknowledged his misconduct. Under the facts of this case, it is unlikely that the petitioner will repeat his criminal behavior.

Fourth, petitioner's criminal behavior between September 1975 and December 1975 appears to be repeated in 1981.

Fifth, the petitioner committed the disqualifying offense at age 45. Under the facts of this case, it is unlikely that his misconduct was due to immaturity.

Sixth, the petitioner's misconduct involved his commission of offenses in 1975 and 1981. There is no indicia of any other criminal behavior subsequent to the events of 1981.

Seventh, there were no apparent social conditions which contributed to the offense.

Eighth, the petitioner has demonstrated his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. The fact that Mr. Callan has led a law-abiding existence since 1981 must be given substantial weight when assessing rehabilitation.

After considering all of the facts listed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h, including the fact that petitioner has led a law-abiding existence since 1981, and after assessing the credibility and demeanor of Mr. Callan, I am persuaded that petitioner has met his statutory burden of establishing rehabilitation.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has affirmatively established his rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

ORDER AND DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the application of James Callan for a casino employee license (DGE 70086-21) be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Jerry H. Steiner, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: April 18, 1989 Decided: May 17, 1989

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This contested case concerns two consolidated matters. The first is the complaint of the Division of Gaming Enforcement filed with the Casino Control Commission on June 8, 1988, seeking revocation of the respondent's casino hotel employee registration. The second matter concerns the respondent's application for licensure as a casino employee, which would permit his employment in a licensed casino as a craps dealer. By letter report to the Casino Control Commission dated October 4, 1988, the Division has objected to the respondent's application for licensure.

The Division alleges that the respondent has been convicted of sexual assault (a crime of the second degree), contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2(b), which is a disqualifying offense listed under section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.). As amended, the issues to be resolved in this consolidated proceeding are as follows:

1. Has the respondent been convicted of sexual assault, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2(b), which would be a disqualifier from licensure and from registration, pursuant to sections 86c(1), 90e and 91b of the Casino Control Act.

2. Has the respondent, if he has committed an otherwise disqualifying offense, affirmatively established his rehabilitation, pursuant to sections 90h and 91d of the act.

3. Has the respondent established by clear and convincing evidence that he possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino employee, pursuant to sections 89b(2) and 90b of the act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent's request for a hearing on the Division's complaint was received by the Casino Control Commission on June 24, 1988. On July 15, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on September 19, 1988.

As noted above, the Division objected to the respondent's application for licensure as a casino employee by letter to the Commission dated October 4, 1988. That matter was also transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case on November 14, 1988. An additional prehearing conference was held on January 19, 1989, and the joint application of the parties for consolidation was granted. The hearing was held as scheduled on March 28, 1989. I subsequently determined that review of the hearing transcript was necessary, and the record closed when the transcript was received on April 18, 1989.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The material facts are essentially undisputed. The respondent is a 22-year-old resident of Linwood, New Jersey, and he holds casino hotel employee registration no. 68506-40. He has also successfully completed a 240 hour course in craps dealing (Exhibit R-3). The respondent is presently employed as a skilled laborer for Tomasulo Builders.

Sergeant Steven Hadley of the Atlantic County Prosecutor's Office testified on behalf of the Division of Gaming Enforcement. On September 22, 1985, he was a sergeant with the Egg Harbor Police Department. Sergeant Hadley testified that he was assigned to investigate an alleged sexual assault. He went to the scene and spoke with the three-year-old victim, who kept saying, "he hurt me." At the hospital, the child was examined by a physician and was found to have a tear in her vaginal area and some bleeding. There also was an abrasion of the hymen and the physician reported some signs of force.

Sergeant Hadley testified that he interviewed a baby-sitter and her companion at the scene of the incident and they both identified the respondent as the perpetrator. The assault had been reported at about 10:30 p.m. and Sergeant Hadley picked up the respondent about five hours later. Sergeant Hadley could tell that the respondent had been drinking and the respondent said something to the affect that he had been "sleeping it off for the last five hours." The respondent appeared to know why he was being arrested and he was scared. He told the sergeant that he had talked it over with his girlfriend and had decided to turn himself in.

Sergeant Hadley acknowledged that he had seen the report of the examining physician which had indicated that the child was not in acute distress. Although there had been some penetration of the vagina, it was not deep and the hymen was not broken. The sexual contact may possibly have been with a finger (Exhibit R-1).

Sergeant Hadley testified that the respondent's blood alcohol concentration was measured at .034 percent following his arrest. He acknowledged that the concentration may have been about .14 percent at the time of the incident (see Exhibit R-6). The respondent told Sergeant Hadley that he had consumed half a bottle of whiskey and a couple of eight packs of beer. It was the sergeant's impression that the this alcohol had been consumed prior to the incident. The respondent told the sergeant that he had been upstairs in the home where the incident occurred and had vomited. The respondent related that he had been half asleep and he really did not know what he had done. According to Sergeant Hadley, the respondent said that he thought he had been in bed with his girlfriend and when the baby screamed, it brought him out of it. The respondent also told the sergeant that he did not think that he had removed the baby's diaper. Finally, Sergeant Hadley noted that the respondent had been 18 years old at the time of the incident and the sergeant found no prior record for the respondent. The sergeant also found no prior incident of sexual perversion or deviation.

The respondent testified on his own behalf. He stated that he had been drinking alcoholic beverages since he was about 12 years old. He had also used all kinds of drugs. Two days before the incident in September 1985, the respondent had used LSD, and on the day of the incident, he had consumed large amounts of whiskey and beer.

The respondent testified that he had no intention to touch the child. Having been drinking most of the day, the respondent was sick from it. He had also worked at a construction job and was tired. The respondent stated that he had been on the front porch of the house while his friend and his friend's girlfriend were in the living room. The respondent then went up to the bathroom on the second floor. He lay on the floor in the hallway for a while, but the light there made him feel sicker. The respondent then went into a dark bedroom and he lay down on a big queen size bed. The respondent testified credibly that he has never had any desire for sexual activity with children and he believes that he had no intent to have contact with the little girl.

Following his arrest, the respondent was in jail for 12 days, at which time he was released on bail. On October 10, 1985, the respondent was indicted by the grand jury in Atlantic County for aggravated sexual assault contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2a(1), sexual assault contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2b, endangering the welfare of a child contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:24-4(a), and theft by unlawful taking contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 (Exhibit P-1). On May 1, 1986, the respondent retracted a plea of not guilty to the indictment and entered a plea of guilty to the count of the indictment charging him with sexual assault contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2b. The remaining counts of the indictment were dismissed and the respondent was sentenced to Yardville for an indeterminate term not to exceed four years, with credit given for the 12 days served.

Prior to his incarceration, the respondent successfully completed a 35-day in-patient treatment program for substance abuse at the Seabrook House. From December 1985 until April 1986, the respondent participated in out-patient treatment in Atlantic City. He also attended Alcoholics Anonymous at least once a week from December 1985 until his incarceration in July 1986 (Exhibit R-5).

The respondent was incarcerated for 11 months and was released on June 30, 1987. Except for one minor rule infraction, the respondent had no trouble while at the Youth Correction and Reception Center in Yardville. He received his GED after six months of schooling at Yardville and the respondent also received basic machine shop training. It was the respondent's testimony that he attended alcohol rehabilitation and behavior modification classes while in jail.

The respondent was released on parole on June 30, 1987, and as a condition of his release, he has been attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings once a week. He has had no criminal activity since the incident in September 1985. The respondent also noted that he paid for all of the child's medical expenses.

Parole Officer Herman A. Rinaldi testified at the hearing that he is handling the respondent's parole case. The respondent's urine is monitored monthly and the respondent has remained drug-free. According to Mr. Rinaldi, the respondent has fully cooperated and has been honest. It was Mr. Rinaldi's testimony that he would rate the respondent rather high on a ten point scale for rehabilitation. He would give the respondent a nine out of ten rather than a ten only because the respondent candidly has acknowledged that he does have a beer once in a while. Mr. Rinaldi does not consider this a serious problem, given all of the respondent's other progress.

Mr. Rinaldi testified that a casino career would be extremely beneficial to the respondent. Not only would it be a good income, it would be something for the respondent to look forward to everyday. In view of the respondent's progress on parole, Mr. Rinaldi does not think that the respondent would be susceptible to drug trafficking as a casino employee. Mr. Rinaldi also noted that while the respondent does not really remember the details of the incident, he feels remorse and embarrassment about it. Two letters from the Atlantic Mental Health Center concerning the respondent's seven sessions at the center between November 1987 and September 1988 were admitted into evidence as Exhibits R-8 and R-9. Parole Officer Rinaldi's report concerning the respondent's progress on parole was admitted into evidence as Exhibit R-10.

The final witness for the respondent was Anne McFadden, a certified alcoholism counselor for eight years. She is director of the Intoxicated Driver Resource Center for Cape May County and is also a drug counselor. Ms. McFadden met with the respondent for nearly two hours and discussed his drug and alcohol abuse history , as well as the incident of September 1985. Her report was admitted into evidence as Exhibit R-11.

Ms. McFadden testified that she felt the respondent was no longer addicted to drugs or alcohol. At the time of the incident in September 1985, the respondent was in a state of "blackout", a serious drug and alcohol abuse situation. That is the reason why the respondent cannot remember the event. She feels that the respondent has been honest with her and that he has been successful in his drug and alcohol rehabilitation. Emphasizing his integrity, Ms. McFadden noted that the respondent is still attending Alcoholics Anonymous.

Ms. McFadden testified sincerely that she knows what a blackout is from personal experience, as she is a recovering alcoholic. She stated that she would not be able to drink a beer or two. However, some people are able to have a beer or two at some point after going through an alcohol abuse period such as the respondent because they are alcohol abusers, rather than alcoholics. Ms. McFadden does not recommend that a person have a beer or two on weekends, but some former alcohol abusers such as the respondent who don't have the disease of alcoholism are able to do that.

Finally, a psychological evaluation of the respondent dated November 27, 1985, was admitted into evidence as Exhibit R-4, and a psychiatric evaluation dated July 16, 1986 was admitted into evidence as Exhibit R-5. The former evaluation recommended the in-patient and out-patient treatments which the respondent subsequently received. The latter report found no sexual problems or tendencies to act out with small children. Rather, the respondent's problem was his substance abuse. Dr. Teitelman concluded that the incident of September 21, 1985 was unlikely to reoccur and that it was unlikely that the respondent would commit another offense. The last document admitted into evidence was a letter from Hazel A. Mueller (Exhibit R-12). Ms. Mueller has known the respondent for more than eight years and she is aware of his legal problems. She feels that the respondent has worked very hard to put his past behind him and to better his future. According to Ms. Mueller, the respondent is a person of good character, honesty and integrity, and he deserves a chance to succeed.

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to section 80a of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.), it is the affirmative responsibility of each applicant and licensee to establish by clear and convincing evidence his individual qualifications. Pursuant to sections 89b(2) and 90b of the act, an applicant for a casino employee license must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence his good character, honesty and integrity. Section 90e incorporates the disqualification criteria set forth in section 86 of the act. Pursuant to section 86c(1), the Commission shall deny a casino employee license to any applicant who has been convicted of an offense specifically identified as a disqualifier from licensure.

Participation in casino operations as a licensee or registrant under the act is deemed to be a revocable privilege conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual licensee or registrant. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8). It is the intention of the Casino Control Act to preclude the creation of any property right in any license permitted under the act, and to require that participation in gaming be solely conditioned upon the individual qualifications of the person seeking such a privilege. Pursuant to section 91b of the act, the Commission may revoke the registration of any registrant who is disqualified on the basis of his conviction of any offense which is specifically listed under section 86c of the act.

It is undisputed that the respondent was convicted upon his plea of guilty on May 1, 1986, of one count of sexual assault in the second degree, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2b. This is an offense specifically identified as a disqualifier under section 86c (1) of the act. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the respondent is subject to denial of his application for a casino employee license and to revocation of his casino hotel employee registration on the basis of his conviction of a disqualifying offense.

Section 91d of the act provides that the respondent's casino hotel employee registration should not be revoked on the basis of his conviction of an offense identified in the act as disqualification criteria, provided that he has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. Similarly, the respondent shall not be denied a casino employee license on the basis of his otherwise disqualifying conviction, provided that he has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the act. In determining whether rehabilitation has been affirmatively demonstrated, the following factors under N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h (the language of section 91d is almost identical) shall be considered:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

The respondent is now 22 years old. His conviction resulted from an isolated instance of criminal activity which occurred in September 1985, when the respondent was 18 years old. The respondent has no other record of arrests or convictions.

The crime to which the respondent pled guilty was sexual assault in the second degree, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2b. The respondent touched and caused injury to the intimate parts of a three-year-old girl. Such conduct readily engenders revulsion. The respondent is appropriately embarrassed and remorseful concerning his conduct. Most significantly, the credible evidence in the record convincingly establishes that the respondent's conduct was not the result of any pattern of sexual perversion or sexual maladjustment. Rather, the respondent's offense resulted from pathological abuse of drugs and alcohol.

The respondent began heavy use of drug and alcohol as an adolescent. All manner of drugs were abused, including hallucinogens. At the time of his crime, the respondent had been drinking very heavily and may well also have been under the influence of LSD. As a result, the respondent probably had a diminished capacity and he certainly remembers little concerning the incident.

The respondent has successfully undergone both in-patient and out-patient rehabilitative treatment for his drug and alcohol abuse. He was incarcerated for nearly a year and, while in prison, the respondent completed his high school requirements and obtained a GED. The respondent also received machine shop training. While in prison the respondent attended alcohol rehabilitation and behavior modification classes. Following his parole, the respondent has faithfully attended Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and has attended sessions at the Atlantic Mental Health Center. It was the expert testimony of a certified alcoholism counselor that the respondent has been successful in his drug and alcohol rehabilitation. She and his parole office both agree that the respondent is likely to succeed in the casino industry.

The respondent has in no way attempted to minimize the seriousness of his criminal offense. He has shown that it was an isolated incident resulting from his prior drug and alcohol abuse. The respondent has accepted the desirability of rehabilitative efforts and has pursued rehabilitation earnestly. The credible evidence in the record provides no reasonable basis to believe that any further criminal conduct would be at all likely to occur. Based upon the foregoing discussion and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the respondent, who has been convicted of a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1) of the act, has established his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence, within the meaning of sections 90h and 91d of the act. I also CONCLUDE on the basis of the credible evidence presented in this matter that the respondent has sustained his burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that he presently possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino employee, within the meaning of sections 89b(2) and 90b of the act.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement against Nicholas J. Celli be DISMISSED. It is further ORDERED that the application of Nicholas J. Celli for a casino employee license permitting him to work in a licensed casino as a craps dealer be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Charles F. Kimmel, Deputy Attorney General, for the respondent (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 23, 1989 Decided: February 28, 1989

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Joseph D. Cocuzza, applied to the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the issuance of a casino employee license (alcoholic beverage employee), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90. The respondent, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), opposed the issuance of the license by reason of its contention that the petitioner lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On September 30, 1986, the petitioner filed with the Commission an application for the issuance of a casino employee license so he could be employed as an alcoholic beverage employee in the casino industry. By letter to the Commission, dated May 18, 1988, the Division objected to the petitioner's application for licensure as an alcoholic beverage employee, asserting that the petitioner had been convicted of numerous offenses none of which are specifically enumerated by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c to automatically disqualify him from licensure as a casino employee. Based upon these numerous convictions, the Division asserts that the petitioner lacks the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference. Based upon the report, the Commission notified the petitioner on June 9, 1988, that there was a "substantial possibility" that his application would be denied and that he had the right to a hearing. By application dated September 22, 1988, which was received by the Commission on September 26, 1988, the petitioner requested a hearing. On September 26, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which was received on September 28, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held in the matter before Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin on December 22, 1988. The issue set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing was:

A. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b.

A hearing commenced on February 23, 1988, at the Municipal Courtroom, Galloway Township Municipal Building, Absecon, New Jersey, after which the record closed.

MOTION TO WITHDRAW

At the hearing, the petitioner requested to withdraw his application for licensure. The basis of his request is that on January 4, 1988, section 7 of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-7, was amended to no longer require alcoholic beverage employees to be licensed by the Commission. Section 8 of the Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-8, now only requires that alcoholic beverage employees be registered with the Commission as casino hotel employees. The Assembly Independent and Regional Authorities Committee Statement to Assembly Bill No. 3431, P.L. 1987, c. 353, provides in pertinent part:

> Currently, section 7 of the act requires any person employed in the conduct of casino gaming or whose duties require or authorize access to the casino to be licensed at a minimum as a casino employee. As a result, many persons such as bartenders, waitresses, secretaries and janitorial personnel and other persons whose duties are performed on the casino floor but whose duties are unrelated to gaming activity are required to be licensed as "casino employees."
> This bill amends section 7 to limit the requirement for licensure as a "casino employee" to those employees whose duties require or authorize access to "restricted casino areas" or whose duties are directly involved in the conduct of casino gaming.
>
> The committee adopted amendments to the bill proposed by the sponsor to require licensure as a "casino employee" for those categories of employees specified in the bill and for any other persons whose duties require or authorize access to "restricted casino areas." These amendments would include within the definition of "casino employee" appropriate maintenance personnel, waiters, waitresses and secretaries.
>
> Section 8 of the act sets forth the definition of "casino hotel employee." This bill amends section 8 to specifically categorize as casino hotel employees those persons whose employment duties or services do not involve the conduct of gaming or do not require or authorize access to "restricted casino areas." The committee adopted amendments to the bill proposed by the sponsor to make the definition of "casino hotel employee" applicable to persons whose employment services or duties are involved in the conduct of the business of an approved hotel but who are not included in the definition of "casino key employee" or "casino employee."
> The amendments adopted by the committee do not change the current requirement that casino hotel employees be registered with the Casino Control Commission rather than be licensed by the commission.

The petitioner only wants to be a bar porter at a casino. He presently has no desire to apply for any position which now requires casino licensure. On September 30, 1986, when he initially applied to be a bar porter, he was required to be licensed; however, since that time, the law has been changed, and he is no longer required to be licensed. He need only be registered as a casino hotel employee.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.6, the Division consents to the withdrawl of the petitioner's application on the following conditions:

1. The petitioner will not file a new application for licensure within one-year of the Commission's acceptance of this withdrawal;

2. The petitioner may immediately apply to the Commission to be registered as a casino hotel employee;

3. The matter is withdrawn without prejudice to instutute revocation proceedings in the Division's discretion at a later time if the petitioner should subsequently obtain a casino hotel employee registration.

The petitioner, after being informed by me as to the effect of these conditions, knowingly, intelligenly, freely, and voluntarily accepted these conditions and requested permission to withdrawn his application.

Extraordinary cicrumstances having been shown, and since the case is now moot as the petitioner no longer is required to obtain a casino employee license in order to pursue his chosen occupation in the industry, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.2, the withdrawal is granted. Therefore, I ORDER that Clerk to return this matter to the agency for appropriate disposition.[1]

1 I respectfully recommend the Commission consider informing applicant's for casino employee licensure who filed applications prior to January 4, 1988, who are no longer required to be licensed because of the change in the law, of the changes in the law, and inquire as to whether or not the applicants still desire to pursue their application for licensure or if they would like their applications converted to applications for registration as a casino hotel employee.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Conrad Copeland, respondent, pro se

Record Closed: January 19, 1989 Decided: February 10, 1989

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), Department of Law and Public Safety, petitioner, alleges that respondent, Conrad Copeland, is statutorily disqualified from holding casino employee license number 65099-21 by virtue of his plea of guilty to robbery (second degree) in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1 and forgery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1(a)(2) (third degree). The Division also alleges that respondent does not possess the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure, pursuant to section 89b(2) of the Casino Control Act (Act), as incorporated within section 90b of the Act. The respondent asserts rehabilitation pursuant to Section 90h of the Act.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on July 1, 1988. The respondent requested a hearing on July 20, 1988. On August 1, 1988, the Commission transmitted the within matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on October 28, 1988 and the matter was scheduled for hearing on January 19, 1989, at the OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The record closed on the hearing date.

ISSUES

A. Whether respondent was convicted of crimes listed as statutory disqualifiers in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1, robbery, and N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1(a)2, forgery?

B. Whether respondent possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b?

C. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act?

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts in this matter are essentially undisputed.

On or about August 29, 1986, the respondent, Conrad Copeland, cashed a check at Hummel's Liquors, Bridgeton, New Jersey. The check purportedly was signed by George R. Brewer and was drawn on the account of BHW Development Company, Inc., t/a Eden Construction Company at the Farmers and Merchants National Bank. The check for $170 was made payable to the respondent Conrad Copeland and endorsed by him on the back.

When Hummel's Liquors submitted the check to the Farmers and Merchants Bank, it was returned as having been reported stolen. At the time the check was reported stolen, Conrad Copeland worked for the BHW Development Company. After an investigation conducted by the Bridgeton City Police Department, Mr. Copeland admitted that he had cashed the check with the knowledge that it had been stolen.

Mr. Copeland was indicted on January 8, 1987, Indictment Number 87-01-0016-I, New Jersey Superior Court, Cumberland County Criminal Division, for forgery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1a(2), and for uttering a forged instrument, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1a(3) (Exhibit P-3).

On the evening of July 21, 1987, Mr. Copeland called Domino's Pizza in Bridgeton, New Jersey and ordered two large pizzas; the bill totaled $19.62. Mr. John Kaplan, Domino's delivery person, tried to deliver the pizzas to the address given and was unable to locate the address. After Mr. Kaplan drove by the intersection of Spruce and Garfield Avenues in Bridgeton, Mr. Copeland, on foot, approached Mr. Kaplan's vehicle and confirmed that he had ordered two large pizzas and discussed the bill with Mr. Kaplan. Mr. Copeland advised the driver to wait. After a short while, Mr. Copeland returned to the vehicle and told Mr. Kaplan that he had a gun and to give the pizzas to him. Mr. Kaplan gave the two pizzas to Mr. Copeland and proceeded to drive off as he had been instructed. Mr. Kaplan then reported the robbery to the Bridgeton City Police Department.

After an investigation, Mr. Copeland on July 27, 1987, was charged with robbery (second degree) on Accusation Number 87-07-0661-A/B in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division (Criminal) (Exhibit P-7).

On July 27, 1987, Mr. Copeland pled guilty to forgery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1a(2) (third degree) and robbery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1 (second degree). The charge of uttering a forged instrument in violation of N.J.S.A 2C:21-1(a)3 was dismissed on motion of the prosecutor.

On September 28, 1987, Mr. Copeland was sentenced to serve 364 days in the Cumberland County Jail with credit for time served; was placed on probation for three years; was ordered to pay restitution in the amount of $170 and was ordered to pay $60 to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board (VCCB) (Exhibit P-9). The Honorable Isaac I.

Serata, J.S.C., also provided for the jail sentence to be suspended if Mr. Copeland would enter a drug rehabilitation program.

It appears that Mr. Copeland failed to report regularly to his probation officer and failed to pay the court-ordered restitution of $170 and the VCCB penalty of $60 which led to a violation of probation charges to be filed against him on December 27, 1988 (Exhibit P-11).

Mr. Copeland was extremely evasive in his testimony when questioned about his court-ordered appearance on January 13, 1989, and upon being asked about his employment application with Bally's Grand Casino Hotel (Grand) in 1988. However, Mr. Copeland has acknowledged his criminal past, but has emphasized that he is no longer dependent on drugs. Mr. Copeland provided two letters of recommendation but was unable to produce any evidence, other than his own testimony, that he is no longer drug-dependent. Unfortunately, Mr. Copeland's lack of candor and credibility leave me with no reliable evidence to make a finding as to Mr. Copeland's claim to be totally drug-free.

The above is documented, believable and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSION

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) of the Act mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense which "would be under New Jersey law at the time of application a violation of any of the provisions" in regard to Title 2C of the New Jersey statutes be disqualified from licensure. Petitioner pled guilty on July 27, 1987 to robbery, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1 (second degree), and to forgery, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1(a)(2) (third degree). Based upon the judgments of conviction and respondent's testimony, I CONCLUDE that respondent is statutorily disqualified from casino licensure, pursuant to Section 86c(1) of the Act.

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b

Under section 89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b of the Act, Mr. Copeland is required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, his good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel for Casino License, Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979) at 8. In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon the applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In Re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Application of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, Casino Control Commission (November 13, 1980) at 5. In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 2.

It is apparent from the documentary evidence and respondent's testimony that respondent lacks the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure. Mr. Copeland was asked whether he disclosed his convictions upon applying for employment with the Grand. The respondent replied that he did not remember any questions pertaining to criminal convictions on the application. Not only does Question 7 of the application (Exhibit P-10) ask about criminal convictions, Mr. Copeland answered the question in the negative. Although the respondent dated the Grand application March 16, 1987, the preponderance of the evidence suggests that the application was actually signed on March 16, 1988, eight months after Mr. Copeland pled guilty to the statutory disqualifiers (See Exhibit P-10 at 1; R-1). While respondent's testimony alone may be the basis for a finding as to his/her attributes of good character, honesty and integrity, in this matter, the respondent has demonstrated just the opposite.

Based upon the paucity of the record and Mr. Copeland's absence of credibility, I CONCLUDE that respondent has failed to establish the good character, honesty and integrity required for casino licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

An applicant or a licensed respondent in a disciplinary proceeding faced with the existence of one or more section 86 disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition of his continued licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. These sections set forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination for rehabilitation is to be made:

1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;
2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4) The date of the offense or conduct;
5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
7) Any social condition which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counselling or pshychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or who have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Mr. Copeland has been employed as a change booth supervisor at the Grand since March 1988. As such, he has substantial contact with patrons of the casino.

Second, the respondent pled guilty on July 27, 1987, to violations of N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1, robbery, and N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1(a)(2), forgery. Under section 86c(1) of the Act, both convictions are statutory disqualifiers. Given the circumstances, these were extremely serious offenses.

Third, the respondent acknowledges his misconduct. According to the respondent, he had on-going drug problems when the offenses occurred.

Fourth, respondent committed two separate and distinct statutory disqualifiers in October 1986 and July 1987.

Fifth, the respondent committed the offense at ages 26 and 27. Under the facts of this case, it is unlikely that his misconduct was due to immaturity.

Sixth, the respondent's misconduct involved his committing of offenses both in 1986 and 1987. The convictions are too recent to make a prediction as to whether the offenses are isolated or will be repeated.

Seventh, it appears that Mr. Copeland had a serious drug problem in 1986 and 1987. Although respondent declares himself to be drug-free, there is no evidence in the record to substantiate his claim.

Eighth, the respondent has demonstrated some rehabilitation. He has been employed by the Grand since March 1988. In addition, Theresa Williams, Coin Shift Manager at the Grand, characterizes Mr. Copeland as "reliable and trustworthy" (Exhibit R-1). Detective Sergeant Greg Everingham of the Bridgeton Police Department also speaks highly of Mr. Copeland (Exhibit R-2). Prior to his employment with the Grand, respondent had been terminated from the Sands Casino Hotel for failing to show up for work. Mr. Copeland pled guilty to the charges in 1987 and accepts responsibility for his misconduct. However, it appears that Mr. Copeland has failed to comply with the terms of his probation (Exhibit P-11). Finally, one irreconcilable fact remains: Mr. Copeland lied on his application with the Grand (Exhibit P-10). Given the deception demonstrated on Mr. Copeland's application of March 16, 1988, I cannot make a finding of rehabilitation.

After considering all of the factors listed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h, including assessing the credibility and demeanor of Mr. Copeland, I am not persuaded that respondent has met his statutory burden of establishing rehabilitation.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the respondent, Conrad Copeland, has not affirmatively established his rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

ORDER AND DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the casino employee license (65099-21) held by Conrad Copeland be REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the revocation of Matthew B. Crowl's casino employee license no. 48693-21, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90 and N.J.S.A 5:12-129(1). The Division sought revocation of the respondent's license by reason of i contention that the respondent had committed a disqualifying offense under sec'

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

86c(1), by means of section 86g, and had committed a criminal offense which rendered continued licensure to be inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act (Act), pursuant to section 86c(4) (now section 86c(2)), by means of section 86g, and therefore, he lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference. The respondent contended that he was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 90h.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent had obtained a casino employee license from the Commission so he could be employed as a craps dealer in the casino industry. By complaint to the Commission, filed October 24, 1984, the Division objected to the respondent's continued licensure, asserting that the respondent had committed the offense of making false reports to law enforcement authorities, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a, which is a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by section 86g. The Division further asserted that the respondent had committed the offense of possession, use or being under the influence of a controlled dangerous substance (tuinal), in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1) (now N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10); possession, use or being under the influence of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana), in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(4) (now N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10); underage gambling, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119; and gambling by a casino employee, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n, which are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(4) (now section 86c(2)), despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by section 86g. Finally, the Division also objected pursuant to section 89b(2). Based upon the complaint, the Commission notified the respondent on November 1, 1984, that he had the right to a hearing, and that failure to respond within 15 days could result in his license being revoked. By application dated November 13, 1984, which was received by the Commission on November 16, 1984, the respondent requested a hearing. On April 15, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which received it on April 22, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference in the matter was held before me on June 20, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether respondent committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a.

B. Whether respondent's continued licensure...is inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c because he is alleged to have committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n, N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1) (now N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10), and N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(4) (now N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10) [and N.J.S.A. 5:12-119] despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

C. Whether the respondent possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) [as incorporated within section 90b].

D. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was scheduled for September 27, 1988. By letter dated September 19, 1988, the respondent's counsel requested an adjournment of the hearing as he had been recently retained. This request for an adjournment was granted, and the hearing was rescheduled. A hearing was held on December 6, 1988, in the Municipal Courtroom, Brigantine Municipal Building, Brigantine, New Jersey, after which the record was closed.

The respondent made two motions at the beginning of the hearing. First, the respondent moved that since this was a revocation case and not an initial application or reapplication case, the respondent's good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b, was not in issue, and if it was, the Division should have some minimal burden of first establishing that the respondent lacked good character, honesty and integrity. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6) provides that:

> An integral and essential element of the regulation and control of such casino facilities by the State rests in the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations. To further such public confidence and trust, the regulatory provisions of this act are designed to extend strict State regulation to all persons . . . related to the operation of licensed casino enterprises . . . .

Further, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8) provides that:

> Since the public has a vital interest in casino operations in Atlantic City and has established an exception to the general policy of the State concerning gaming for private gain, participation in casino operations as a licensee or registrant under this act shall be deemed a revocable privilege conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual licensee or registrant and upon the discharge of the affirmative responsibility of each such licensee or registrant to provide to the regulatory and investigatory authorities established by this act any assistance and information necessary to assure that the policies declared by this act are achieved. Consistent with this policy, it is the intent of this act to preclude the creation of any property right in any license, registration, certificate or reservation permitted by this act, the accrual of any value to the privilege of participation in gaming operations, or the transfer of any license, registration, certificate, or reservation, and to require that participation in gaming be solely conditioned upon the individual qualifications of the person seeking such privilege. [emphasis supplied]

The Act therefore provides that the privilege of licensure is conditioned upon the continuing qualification of the licensee. In this case, N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b requires licensees to "produce sufficient information, documentation and assurances to meet the qualification criteria, including New Jersey residency, contained in subsection b. of section 89 of this act[1] . . . ."

N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b provides that:

Since qualification for licensure is a continuing obligation, any licensee must be able to establish by clear and convincing evidence the licensee's good character, honesty and integrity at any time during licensure, not just upon initial application or renewal. The burden of proof to establish one's continued qualification for licensure is upon the licensee, and thus the Division need not first produce evidence that the licensee lacks good character, honesty and integrity. The respondent's first motion was therefore denied.

[1] N.J.S.A. 5:12-89.

The respondent's second motion was a request to address whether or not the respondent's alleged offenses were inimical to the policies of the Act if those offenses were the subject of a judicial expungement. Certain of the respondent's offenses were dismissed through his successful participation in the Pre-Trial Intervention Program. As such, the respondent is eligible to have these records expunged or sealed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:52-6. While no such motion had yet been filed as of the date of the hearing, the respondent's counsel represented that such a motion would be eminently filed with the Superior Court and an order of expungement might be final prior to the Commission's consideration of this initial decision. As N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2) provides that any "conviction which has been the subject of a judicial order of expungement or sealing" shall not be an automatic disqualification, I granted the respondent's motion to address this matter in this initial decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

On June 1, 1984, Commission Inspector Vernon Rhett, while walking past craps table no. 14 at pit no. 6 in the Tropicana Hotel and Casino, overheard one patron, the respondent, tell another patron that he was a craps dealer (P-5). Inspector Rhett telephoned the Division, and State Police Detective Martin Higgins was dispatched to the Tropicana. Inspector Rhett identified the respondent to Detective Higgins. Detective Higgins identified himself to the respondent and asked the respondent to accompany him to the Division's office.

The respondent was placed under arrest for underage gambling and was advised of his rights. The respondent admitted he was a gaming employee, identified himself as being Peter Manno and gave his age as being 19. Detective Higgins searched the respondent and found a plastic bag containing what he believed to be marijuana and two capsules in the respondent's pants pocket. The respondent was then released to the custody of the Atlantic City Police Department.

Detective Higgins determined the capsules to be the controlled dangerous substance tuinal by reference to the Physician's Desk Reference. Later that day, Detective Higgins swore out three complaints against the respondent under the name John Doe aka Peter Manno. The first charged the respondent with possession of a controlled dangerous substance, tuinal, in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1) (P-1); the second charged the respondent with possession of marijuana in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(4) (P-2); and the third charged the respondent with gambling while being underage in violation of N.J.S.A 5:12-119 (P-3).

The next day an article appeared in the Atlantic City Press regarding the arrest in a casino on drug charges of Peter Manno. The real Peter Manno's mother saw the article, telephoned an Atlantic City police officer, and established that her son was not involved in the arrest. The Atlantic City police officer then relayed this information to Detective Higgins. The respondent also saw this article. Since drug charges were involved, the respondent wanted to clear the name of Peter Manno. He contacted a local attorney, Harry Goldenberg, informed Mr. Goldenberg of his predicament, and Mr. Goldenberg contacted the police informing them that Peter Manno was really Matthew Crowl. Based upon this information, on June 5, 1984, Detective Higgins filed a complaint against the respondent charging him with knowingly giving false information with the purpose of implicating another in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a (P-4).

The first three charges were merged for purposes of trial. On February 25, 1986, the respondent was entered into the Pre-Trial Intervention Program (PTI). The respondent successfully completed this program and on March 19, 1987, the three charges were dismissed (R-1). At the hearing before me the respondent admitted that on June 1, 1984, he possessed two tuinal capsules, possessed under 25 grams of marijuana, gambled while being only 19 years old, and was under the influence of alcohol and marijuana at the time he was gambling. The respondent was not notified of any further proceedings concerning the false information charge contained in P-4.

The respondent is 23 years old and will be 24 in January. He left high school in his sophomore year at the age of 16 to go to work. He took two of four tests to earn a G.E.D. a year or two ago; however, he has never completed the remaining two tests. In February 1984, the respondent completed a three-month course of instruction at a casino school to become a casino craps dealer. The respondent needed nine months to complete the course because he was working. In April 1984, the respondent was hired as a part-time craps dealer at the Playboy Hotel and Casino. From December 1984 until September 1985, the respondent was employed as a parking attendant at Bally's Park Place. From September 1985 until May 1986, the respondent attended a bartending school at Atlantic Community College and worked as a bartender at the Clover Bar in Atlantic City. From July 1986 until February 1987, the respondent worked as a craps dealer at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. While employed at the Tropicana, the respondent received charges for lateness and excessive absenteeism. He received two warnings and was ultimately terminated from his position. Upon leaving the Tropicana, the respondent became employed as a part-time dealer at Bally's Park Place. Again the respondent received charges for lateness and excessive absenteeism. He received two warnings and was suspended for five days. The respondent resigned from this employment on December 24, 1987. In March 1988, the respondent became employed as a craps dealer at the Sands Hotel and Casino where he is currently employed.

The respondent has no prior or subsequent criminal involvement; however, since 1984, the respondent has received two traffic citations: one for speeding and one for reckless driving. Due to his reckless driving conviction, the respondent received notification of the imposition of an insurance surcharge; however, the respondent has not paid the insurance surcharge.

The respondent performed community service as a little league coach as part of his PTI program. The respondent participates in a sports league at the Sands, is a member of the Chelsea hockey team, and serves as a coach and an umpire in the Chelsea little league.

With regard to the use of the name Peter Manno, the respondent indicated that it was not his intent to get Peter Manno in trouble. Peter Manno is a friend of the respondent. The respondent had only been employed at Playboy for three months, he was scared, and he was afraid he might lose his job. He identified himself as Peter Manno because he did not think Peter Manno was licensed by the Commission and thus the criminal involvement would not affect his job.

The respondent submitted four letters of recommendation in his behalf. The first was written by Patricia Robel. Ms. Robel is a friend of the respondent's mother who has known the respondent since he was a child. Ms. Robel wrote:

> I have known Matthew Crowl all his life. He is a fine young man with good values. He is hard working, smart and I believe he will have a wonderful future in the job field he has chosen. I know him to be good to his family and friends. He is a very worthwhile person. [R-2]

The second letter was written by Francis J. Perry, Jr. Mr. Perry was the respondent's former little league coach. Mr. Perry wrote:

> I have known Matthew for fifteen years and know him to be of fine character and able ability.
>
> He was an excellent student throughout his school years. He was a sportsman who exhibited many fine qualities that one would wish to see exemplified in the workforce. He is cooperative, punctual, fair and honest.
>
> The Casino Industry would be well served by keeping Matthew Crowl employed in their service. [R-3]

The third letter was written by Robert J. Catalano. Mr. Catalano is the father of one of the respondent's friends and was another of the respondent's little league coaches. Mr. Catalano wrote:

> I've known Matthew Crowl for the past fifteen years, and have found him to be a responsible youth. In particular his devotion to sports both in playing himself and his coaching of younger players has matured Matt to a resoonsible [sic] adult. I've also known Matt's family for the same period and also find them caring people. [R-4]

The final letter was written by Edgardo Pinero, Jr. Mr. Pinero is a friend and former roommate of the respondent's brother. He was a coworker of the respondent's at Sands, and he has known the respondent for seven years. Mr. Pinero wrote:

> It has been my pleasure to have known and worked with Matthew Brian Crowl. In the seven years I have known Matthew and his family, I have seen him mature into an honest and dependable young man. In my opinion, he is able to interact with people well. On the job, he is very caring and takes the time to help out fellow employees. [R-5]

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the respondent's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident nor his current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess his credibility. Initially, his position in this matter must be recognized. As the respondent and the holder of a casino hotel employee registration, he has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the respondent's demeanor, the plausibility of his testimony, the manner in which he participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the doeuments submitted by other witnesses, it appears that the respondent testified truthfully. He candidly admitted his misconduct and described in detail, experiencing great humiliation, the underlying circumstances. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the respondent's testimony in substantial part.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On June 1, 1984, the respondent gambled at a craps table in the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. At that time the respondent was only 19 years old.

2. On June 1, 1984, the respondent was employed as a craps dealer at the Playboy Hotel and Casino.

3. On June 1, 1984, while the respondent was at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino, he was in possession of a controlled dangerous substance, tuinal, and the controlled dangerous substance, marijuana. At that time, he was also under the influence of alcohol and marijuana.

4. On June 1, 1984, the respondent was placed under arrest by a state police detective, and at that time, the respondent identified himself as Peter Manno.

5. The respondent was charged with two counts of possession of a controlled dangerous substance and one count of gambling while underage. These charges were merged for purposes of trial. The respondent entered and successfully completed the Pre-Trial Intervention Program.

6. The respondent is 23 years of age. He left high school in his sophomore year and he has not completed his G.E.D. In April 1984, the respondent was hired as a part-time craps dealer at the Playboy Hotel and Casino. From December 1984 until September 1985, the respondent was employed as a parking attendant at Bally's Park Place. From September 1985 until May 1986, the respondent attended a bartending school at Atlantic Community College and worked as a bartender at the Clover Bar in Atlantic City. From July 1986 until February 1987, the respondent worked as a craps dealer at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino.

7. While employed at the Tropicana, the respondent received charges for lateness and excessive absenteeism. He received two warnings and was ultimately terminated from his position.

8. Upon leaving the Tropicana, the respondent became employed as a part-time dealer at Bally's Park Place. Again the respondent received charges for lateness and excessive absenteeism. He received two warnings and was suspended for five days. The respondent resigned from this employment on December 24, 1987.

9. In March 1988, the respondent became employed as a craps dealer at the Sands Hotel and Casino where he is currently employed.

10. Since 1984, the respondent has received two traffic citations: one for speeding and one for reckless driving. Due to his reckless driving conviction, the respondent received notification of the imposition of an insurance surcharge; however, the respondent has not paid the insurance surcharge.

11. The respondent participates in a sports league at the Sands, is a member of the Chelsea hockey team, and serves as a coach and an umpire in the Chelsea little league.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;
>
> . . .
>
> c. The conviction of the applicant, or of any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license, of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be:
>
>
> . . . .
>
> N.J.S.A. 2C:28-1 et seq. (perjury and other falsification in official matters which constitute crimes of the second, third or fourth degree);
>
> . . . .
>
> (2) Any other offense under present New Jersey or federal law which indicates that licensure of the applicant would be inimical to the policy of this act and to casino operations; provided, however, that the automatic disqualification provisions of this subsection shall not apply with regard to any conviction which did not occur within the 10-year period immediately preceding application for licensure and which the applicant demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence does not justify automatic disqualification pursuant to this subsection and any conviction which has been the subject of a judicial order of expungement or sealing;
>
> g. The commission by the applicant or any person who is required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of this section, even if such conduct has not or may not be prosecuted under the criminal laws of this State....

N.J.S.A. 5:12-89, Licensing of casino key employees, provides in pertinent part:

> b. Each applicant must, prior to the issuance of any casino key employee license, produce information, documentation and assurances concerning the following qualification criteria:
>
> (2) Each applicant for a casino key employee license shall produce such information, documentation and assurances as may be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence the applicant's good character, honesty and integrity. Such information shall include, without limitation, data pertaining to family, habits, character, reputation, criminal and arrest record, business activities, financial affairs, and business, professional and personal associates, covering at least the 10-year period immediately preceding the filing of the application. Each applicant shall notify the commission of any civil judgments obtained against such applicant pertaining to antitrust or security regulation laws of the federal government, of this State or of any other state, jurisdiction, province or country. In addition, each applicant shall, upon request of the commission or the division, produce letters of reference from law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction in the applicant's place of residence and principal place of business, which letters of reference shall indicate that such law enforcement agencies do not have any pertinent information concerning the applicant, or if such law enforcement agency does have information pertaining to the applicant, shall specify what that information is. If the applicant has been associated with gaming or casino operations in any capacity, position or employment in a jurisdiction which permits such activity, the applicant shall, upon request of the commission or division, produce letters of reference from the gaming or casino enforcement or control agency, which shall specify the experience of such agency with the applicant, his associates and his participation in the gaming operations of that jurisdiction; provided, however, that if no such letters are received from the appropriate law enforcement agencies within 60 days of the applicant's request therefor, the applicant may submit a statement under oath that he is or was during the period such activities were conducted in good standing with such gaming or casino enforcement or control agency.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90, Licensing of casino employees, provides in pertinent part:

a. No person may commence employment as a casino employee unless he is the holder of a valid casino employee license.

b. Any applicant for a casino employee license must, prior to the issuance of any such license, produce sufficient information, documentation and assurances to meet the qualification criteria, including New Jersey residency, contained in subsection b. of section 89 of this act and any additional residency requirement imposed under subsection c. of this section; except that the standards for business ability and casino experience may be satisfied by a showing of casino job experience and knowledge of the provisions of this act and regulations pertaining to the particular position involved, or by successful completion of a course of study at a licensed school in an approved curriculum.

e. The commission shall deny a casino employee license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of this act.

. . . .

h. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection e. of this section, no applicant shall be denied a casino employee license on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria or the commission of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of section 86 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86), as specified in subsection g. of that section; provided that the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8) establishes that licensure under the Casino Control Act is a revocable privilege which is "conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual licensee." N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1) provides for the revocation of the license or registration held by a person "for the commission of any other offense or violation of this act which would disqualify such person from holding his license." The Division contends, by means of section 86g, that the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a, false reports to law enforcement authorities, which constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), and that, accordingly, he is disqualified from continued licensure. The Division further contends, by means of section 86g, that the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1) (now N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10), possession, use or being under the influence of a controlled dangerous substance (tuinal); N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(4), possession, use or being under the influence of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana); N.J.S.A. 5:12-119, underage gambling; and N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n, gambling by a casino employee, which constitute violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4) (now section 86c(2)), and that, accordingly, he is disqualified from continued licensure.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g

Section 86g provides that an applicant will be disqualified from licensure or registration because of the commission of any action which would constitute an offense under section 86c, even if there has not been a prosecution for such conduct. Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be one of certain enumerated offenses contained in Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the respondent's identification of himself as Peter Manno in response to questioning from a State Police detective constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a, which, under the circumstances, disqualifies the respondent from continued licensure.

N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4, False reports to law enforcement authorities, provides in pertinent part:

> a. Falsely incriminating another. A person who knowingly gives or causes to be given false information to any law enforcement officer with purpose to implicate another commits a crime of the fourth degree.

N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4 is the successor statute to N.J.S.A. 2A:148-22.1. N.J.S.A. 2A:148-22.1 has been interpreted regarding the giving of a false name to police. In State v. Daniels, 165 N.J. Super. 47 (App. Div. 1979), the court stated:

> While the underlying purpose of the statute is concededly to prevent "waste of investigative resources" and to prevent distraction and misleading of the police from their activity in detection and investigation of crime, see State v. Sotteriou, 132 N.J. Super. 403, 410 (App. Div. 1975), we believe the full scope of the legislative contemplation as to the prohibited conduct extends to the prophylactic purpose of the statute in preventing conduct which could mislead, deter and distract the police, even though, in the particular instance, the false information provided did not in fact have any adverse effect upon the police investigation. All that is essential is that the information given must have been false and that it might have had a relationship to the crime and to normal police activity directed toward the detection of any offenders implicated and any investigation related thereto.
> In the present case the facts and circumstances come well within the stated rationale. As the State correctly maintains, an apprehended suspect's name is invariably material to an investigation of the crime involved. In the instant case defendant's conduct caused a waste of police time and effort. On the evening of the incident an arrest sheet, apparently with fingerprints and a photograph, had been prepared using the false name. Moreover, it cannot be said that there was no need for further investigation after the apprehension of defendant. . . . Further investigative work was necessary to determine exactly what crime defendant had committed, whether there were any confederates, how the other missing property had been disposed of and who was responsible therefor. Relevant to such an investigation would be the questioning of defendant's known associates and the checking of any prior criminal record of his. Thus the relationship of defendant's identity to a full and proper investigation of this crime is apparent. . . . Specifically, we deem the making of false statements as sufficient alone to support the statutory charge of giving false information to the police if that information has a relationship to the crime and a potential of misleading, distracting or hindering a police investigation of it. [at 50, 51 & 52]

In this case, the respondent falsely identified himself as being Peter Manno after being arrested. He stated that he did not want to get Peter Manno in trouble, but he was scared and did not want to risk losing his casino employee license. If he gave the name of a person who did not hold a casino employee license, he believed his license would not be in jeopardy. In this case, the supplying of false information did mislead police and caused a waste of police time and effort. Reports were prepared and three complaints were filed against Peter Manno. In addition, further investigation was required upon discovering that the respondent was not Peter Manno. Based upon the above, the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent gave false information to law enforcement authorities and falsely incriminated Peter Manno, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the respondent is a disqualifying offense under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). The respondent is therefore disqualified from continued licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

A licensee faced with the existence of one or more section 86c disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. This section sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

1. The nature and duties of the position applied for;
2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4. The date of the offense or conduct;
5. The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional > work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

In regard to the first criterion, Matthew B. Crowl is a casino licensee and is employed as a craps dealer. As such, he does have direct responsibilities for actual gaming activities and does come in contact with casino patrons.

Second, the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4a, falsely incriminating another, while employed in the casino industry. Because the offense is a listed disqualifier under section 86c(1), it is very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the offense must be viewed in its appropriate context. After being arrested, the respondent falsely identified himself to the arresting officer. Police reports were prepared and complaints were filed against Peter Manno. The newspaper reported Peter Manno's arrest the next morning and his family became alarmed. Further investigation was required because the respondent lied to the arresting officer. The respondent lied primarily to save his casino employee license. Such conduct cannot be tolerated and is extremely serious.

Fourth, the respondent's misconduct occurred on June 1, 1984, when it ceased.

Fifth, the respondent was 19 years old at the time of the first offense. I believe immaturity was a factor in this case. The respondent was young, had not completed high school, and had just obtained his first job in the industry. He did not want to risk losing his job; he became scared, and lied to the police officer.

Sixth, the respondent's misconduct was isolated in nature. He has not committed any other violations of the criminal laws.

Seventh, the respondent was young, had not completed high school, and needed to work to support himself and help support his mother, brother and sister.

Eighth, the respondent has made few rehabilitative efforts. He has been employed in the industry; however, his employment record has been poor. He had a poor record at the Tropicana, was first disciplined and then fired. He was also given two warnings and then suspended at Bally's Park Place. The respondent was employed at the Tropicana while he was enrolled in the PTI program; however, he was not a model employee. Since 1984, the respondent has committed two motor vehicle violations — one for speeding and one for reckless driving. An insurance surcharge has been imposed; however, the respondent has failed to pay it. He took the first two tests for his G.E.D. a year or two ago; however, he has not completed the program. The respondent has been active in sport's leagues and has coached little league.

I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not established, by clear and convincing evidence, his rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g

As indicated above, section 86g provides that a licensee or registrant will be disqualified from licensure and registration because of the commission of any action which would constitute an offense under section 86c, even if there has not been a prosecution for such conduct. Section 86c(4) of the Act (now section 86c(2)) is more commonly referred to as the "inimical clause." In In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979), the Commission set forth the criteria to be applied in individual cases when a determination is made as to whether an offense is inimical to the policies of the Act. The Commission stated at page 15:

> The nature of the offense, the events surrounding it, including any mitigating or aggravating factors, the remoteness of the offense and the offender's conduct since the offense to the present are all matters to be considered. Without limiting the notion of what is 'inimical' to the Act or to gaming, it would appear to encompass those offenses which, when viewed in light of all the circumstances, indicate that participation by that person either would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the regulatory process and of gaming operations or would create or enhance the dangers of unsuitable, unfair or illegal practices, methods and activities in the conduct of gaming or the carrying on of the business or financial arrangements incidental to gaming operations.

The Legislature, when it authorized the establishment of casino gaming in Atlantic City, and provided for the licensure, regulation and taxation thereof, enumerated specific policy considerations which appear to be directly related to the intent and purpose of the inimical clause. More specifically, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6) and (7) state categorically that the successful regulation and control of state casino activities depends upon the confidence of the public "in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations," and by the exclusion from participation in casino gaming of "persons with known criminal records, habits or associations" who could threaten the integrity of the gaming and business operations.

The significance of strict regulation of all phases of the casino industry was emphasized by the Supreme Court in Knight v. City of Margate, 86 N.J. 374, 381 (1981):

> At the very heart of the public policy embraced by the new law is 'the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations.' N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6). Related directly to this purpose, the Legislature stated that 'the regulatory provisions . . . are designed to extend strict State regulation to all persons . . . practices and associations related to' casinos and that 'comprehensive law-enforcement supervision . . . is further designed to contribute to the public confidence and trust in the efficacy and integrity of the regulatory process.'

In In the Matter of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union Local 54, 203 N.J. Super. 297, 317 (App. Div. 1985), certif. den. 102 N.J. 352 (1985), the Appellate Division held that "inimical" means "adverse to the policy of the act and gaming operations," i.e., contrary to strict regulatory controls over all facets of casino activities.

The Division contends that the respondent wrongfully possessed the controlled dangerous substance tuinal, wrongfully possessed and used the controlled dangerous substance marijuana, gambled while underage, and gambled while holding a casino employee license. None of these alleged offenses are listed as disqualifiers under section 86c; as such the Division asserts that these alleged offenses are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(4) (now section 86c(2)) and section 86g, despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State.

The statutory provisions of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1) and (4) have been repealed and recodified in N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10. This successor statute provides in pertinent part:

> 2C:35-10. Possession, use or being under the influence > a. It is unlawful for any person, knowingly or purposely, to obtain, or to possess, actually or constructively, a controlled dangerous substance or controlled substance analog, unless > the substance was obtained directly, or pursuant to a valid prescription or order form from a practitioner, while acting in the course of his professional practice, or except as otherwise authorized by P.L. 1970, c. 226 (C. 24:21-1 et seq.). Any person who violates this section with respect to:

>
> > (1) A controlled dangerous substance, or its analog, classified in Schedules I, II, III or IV other than those specifically covered in this section, is guilty of a crime of the third degree except that, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection b. of N.J.S.A. 2C:43-3, a fine of up to $25,000.00 may be imposed;
> >
> >
> > (3) Possession of more than 50 grams of marijuana, including any adulterants or dilutants, or more than five grams of hashish is guilty of a crime of the fourth degree, except that, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection b. of N.J.S.A. 2C:43-3, a fine of up to $15,000.00 may be imposed; or
> >
> > (4) Possession of 50 grams or less of marijuana, including any adulterants or dilutants, or five grams or less of hashish is a disorderly person.
> >
> > . . .
> b. Any person who uses or who is under the influence of any controlled dangerous substance, or its analog, for a purpose other than the treatment of sickness or injury as lawfully prescribed or administered by a physician is a disorderly person.

The elements of the offense are: a) that the substance is a controlled dangerous substance (tuinal and marijuana); b) that the respondent knew the substances were tuinal and marijuana; and c) that the respondent possessed or used the tuinal or marijuana. In this case, the respondent admitted that the substances were tuinal and marijuana, that he knew the substances were tuinal and marijuana when he possessed them, and that he possessed the tuinal and marijuana and was under the influence of marijuana at the time of his arrest. Detective Higgins found the substances in the respondent's possession and identified the substances as tuinal and marijuana. Tuinal is the trade name for a generic barbituate which is classified as a Schedule II controlled dangerous substance in N.J.A.C. 8:65-10.2(b). Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct of possessing tuinal constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C: 35-10a(1). I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10a(1), the offense constitutes a crime of the third degree. I further CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct of possessing marijuana is a violation of either N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10a(3) or (4), depending on the quantity involved. Pursuant to these sections, if the quantity was greater than 50 grams, the offense constitutes a crime of the fourth degree while if the quantity possessed was less than 50 grams, the offense constitutes a disorderly person offense. I further CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct of being under the influence of marijuana is a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10b and constitutes a disorderly person offense.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-119, Gaming by certain persons prohibited; penalties; defenses, provides in pertinent part:

> a. No person under the age at which a person is authorized to purchase and consume alcoholic beverages, other than a person licensed under the provisions of this act in the regular course of his licensed activities, shall enter a licensed casino except by way of passage to another room.

On June 1, 1984, Commission Inspector Rhett and State Police Detective Higgins saw the respondent, and the respondent admitted, playing craps at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. At that time, the respondent was only 19 years of age as he was born on January 26, 1965. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 9:17B-1b, the age at which a person is authorized to purchase and consume alcoholic beverages in this State is 21 years of age or older.[2]

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119a. I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-122, the offense constitutes a disorderly persons offense.

[2] An exception to this law is if a person under 21 attained the age to purchase and consume alcoholic beverages legally prior to January 1, 1983. As the respondent did not turn 18 until January 26, 1983, this exception does not apply in this case.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n provides:

> It shall be unlawful for any casino key employee, other than a junket representative, or any casino employee, other than a bartender, waiter, waitress, or other casino employee who in the judgment of the commission is not directly involved with the conduct of gaming operations, to wager at any game in any casino in this State.

Again, Commission Inspector Rhett and State Police Detective Higgins saw the respondent gamble at a craps table in the Tropicana Hotel and Casino on June 1, 1984. The respondent also admitted to this activity. On that date, the respondent was the holder of a casino employee license issued by the Commission and was employed as a craps dealer at the Playboy Hotel and Casino. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-112, Unlicensed casino gambling games unlawful; penalties, provides in pertinent part, > a. Any person who violates the provisions of sections 80 or 82 or of Article 7 of this act,[3] . . . is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to a term of imprisonment of not more than three years or a fine of $25,000.00 or both, and in the case of a person other than a natural person, to a fine of not more than $100,000.00.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:43-1b, "a crime defined by any statute of this State other than this code and designated as a misdemeanor shall constitute for the purpose of sentence a crime of the fourth degree." Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-112 and N.J.S.A. 2C:43-1b, the offense of wagering at any game at any casino in this State by a casino employee constitutes a crime of the fourth degree.

[3] Sections 5:12-96 to 5:12-106.

Recently, in State of New Jersey, Dept. of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement v. Michael P. Waters, OAL DKT. No. CCC 3933-86, decided by the Commission (June 12, 1987), the Commission stated at 2-3 that:

> A distinction must be drawn between rehabilitation from a section 86(c)(1) or (3) disqualifying offense pursuant to sections 90(h) or 91(d) of the Act and rehabilitation as an aspect of the inimical analysis. In the former situation, disqualification is established once it is shown that the respondent committed an enumerated offense. The respondent is then afforded the opportunity to affirmatively demonstrate his rehabilitation from that disqualification. It is well established that, consistent with other affirmative licensing criteria, the respondent must prove his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. Application of Richard Romanishin for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. 84-EA-85 (Commission order, May 23, 1985); Application of Chester R. Brathwaite for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. A-4252-82T3 (Unpublished opinion reversing Commission decision January 23, 1984).
> However, unlike a section 86(c)(1) or (3) situation, disqualification pursuant to section 86(c)(4) is not established upon demonstrating that the respondent committed the offense in question. Such a determination can only be made after considering all the circumstances surrounding the offense: its nature, its remoteness, and the offender's conduct subsequent to the offense, i.e., essentially the same factors which bear upon rehabilitation. Application of Donna Davis, 8 N.J.A.R. 301 (Commission decision December 27, 1985); State v. Theodore Williams, Docket No. 84-288 (Commission order May 1, 1987).

The Commission concluded that if the Division establishes a case for the respondent's disqualification, it is "then incumbent upon the respondent to show that he was rehabilitated; that is, the burden of going forward with evidence (but not the ultimate burden of proof), had shifted."

In the Davis case, the Commission stated at 313-314:

> Rehabilitation under section 90(h) (casino employee license) and section 91(d) (casino hotel employee registration) does not apply to disqualifying convictions under section 86(c)(4). By their express terms, these rehabilitation provisions apply only to '. . . a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria.' Nevertheless, many of the factors that are considered upon a claim of rehabilitation are included within the inimical analysis.

The Commission indicated that "it has been generally observed that the notion of rehabilitation is subsumed in the inimical analysis . . . [and] the inimical analysis is substantially similar to the concept of rehabilitation." The Commission concluded that:

> The salient point to be made here is that we consider rehabilitation factors before concluding that the offense in question is or is not inimical under section 86(c)(4). Because the rehabilitation provisions are subsumed within the inimical analysis, it should never be necessary to determine the merits of a claim of rehabilitation after concluding that a given offense is inimical pursuant to section 86(c)(4). [Id. at 314] [footnote omitted]

As previously indicated, the eight specific criteria enumerated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made are:

1. The nature and duties of the licensee's position or the registrant's position;

2. The nature and seriousness of the offense;

3. The circumstances under which the offense occurred;

4. The date of the offense;

5. The age of the licensee or registrant when the offense was committed;

6. Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;

7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;

8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling, or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant or registrant under their supervision.

The discussion of the first criterion is included in section B of this decision and is incorporated here by reference.

Second, the respondent committed three different violations of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a (now N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10) — possession of a Schedule II controlled dangerous substance (tuinal) and possession and being under the influence of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana); one violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119a, underage gambling; and one violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n, gambling by a casino employee. As these offenses were committed by a casino employee in a licensed casino, they are very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the offenses must be viewed in their appropriate context. The respondent, a licensed casino employee, was in the possession of two different controlled dangerous substances and was under the influence of one of them while in a licensed casino. The possession and use of controlled dangerous substances in a licensed casino cannot be condoned by anyone, let alone a licensed casino employee. The respondent's status is thus an aggravating factor in this case. The respondent's gambling while underage is also aggravated by the fact that the respondent was a licensed casino employee. As a dealer, he knew that underage persons were prohibited from wagering in a licensed casino, and as a licensed employee, had a duty to prevent underage persons from wagering in a licensed casino. As such he consciously violated the provisions of the Act. Finally, gambling by a casino employee is an offense and a serious violation of the Act. The wagering by a licensed casino employee directly threatens the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process of casino operation and the public confidence and trust in that process. As such, it is a serious offense and a direct violation of the Act by a licensed casino employee.

The discussion of the fourth through eighth criteria is included in section B of this decision and is incorporated here by reference.

Based upon the foregoing, and specifically criteria one, two, three, and eight, I find that the respondent's possession and use of controlled dangerous substances in a licensed casino by a licensed casino employee, and his gambling underage and wagering by a licensed casino employee is sufficient to establish that the continued licensure of the respondent is inimical to the policies of the Act.

I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the continued licensure of the respondent would be inimical to the policies of the Act, pursuant to section 86c(4) (now section 86c(2)), by means of section 86g. If, however, the offenses of wrongful possession of the controlled dangerous substance tuinal, wrongful possession of the controlled dangerous substance marijuana, and gambling while underage are judicially expunged or sealed prior to the Commission's final consideration of this case, then pursuant to N.J.S.A 5:12-86c(2), those offenses may not be considered in determining whether or not the continued licensure of the respondent would be inimical to the policies of the Act. Notwithstanding this, the offenses of use of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana) and gambling while holding a casino employee license would still remain. As such, I further CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the continued licensure of the respondent would still be inimical to the policies of the Act, pursuant to section 86c(4) (now section 86c(2)), by means of section 86g.

(D) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b

Under section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference, Mr. Crowl was required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, his reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 248 (1979). In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon an applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Applications of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 10 N.J.A.R. 295, 297-298 (1980). In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 296.

It is apparent that the petitioner's misconduct was aberrant and that he is otherwise a person of good character, honesty and integrity. The misconduct did not involve his licensed employment, but did occur in a licensed casino and the underlying circumstances aggravated the seriousness of the misconduct. The respondent has fully accepted responsibility for his misconduct, has regained control over his behavior, has worked within the casino industry during the past four years but has had a poor work record, and is somewhat involved in his community. An examination of the whole person does not clearly and convincingly establish that Mr. Crowl is a person of good character, honesty and integrity, nor is he entirely suitable for licensure in this state. See, Boardwalk Regency Corp.

I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not established, by clear and convincing evidence, his good character, honesty and integrity under section 90b.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division against the respondent is SUSTAINED and that license no. 48693-21 be revoked.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: January 23, 1989 Decided: January 27, 1989

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The Division of Gaming Enforcement filed a complaint on July 1, 1988, with the Casino Control Commission seeking revocation of respondent's casino employee hotel registration. Mr. Crumble requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on October 28, 1988, before Honorable Stephen W. Thompson, ALJ. Judge Thompson issued a Prehearing Order on November 7, 1988. A hearing was held on January 23, 1989, before Honorable Jeff S. Masin, ALJ. The record closed following completion of the hearing on that date.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

ISSUES

The Prehearing Order established the issues for consideration at the hearing. They are:

A. Whether respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(10, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5(a)(1), possession of a controlled dangerous substance with intent to distribute.

B. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 91d of the Casino Control Act.

EVIDENCE

At the hearing, the Division of Gaming Enforcement presented evidence concerning Mr. Crumble's past criminal history. Crumble was convicted of a charge of possession of a controlled dangerous substance with intent to distribute arising out of an indictment returned against him, no. 85-08-1277-B, by the Atlantic County Grand Jury on August 13, 1985. That indictment charged Crumble and a codefendant with possession of cocaine in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(10); possession with intent to distribute the cocaine in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1); possession with intent to distribute the cocaine in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1); and conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-24. On November 1, 1985, Mr. Crumble entered a please of guilty to the charge of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute and was sentenced by Honorable Manuel H. Greenberg, JSC, to 18 months probation and 180 days in the Atlantic County Jail with credit for two days, as well as a $25 Violent Crimes Compensation Board payment payable prior to release and the forfeiture of all monies seized at the time of the arrest. The remaining counts of the indictment were dismissed.

In addition to the 1985 conviction, testimony at the hearing evidenced that on September 17, 1987, Mr. Crumble was indicated by the Atlantic County Grand Jury on charges of possession of heroin and possession of heroin with intent to distribute, in violation respectively of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10a(1) and N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5a(1) and N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5b(3). In addition, he was charged with possession of heroin within 1000 feet of school property in a quantity of less than one-half ounce, with intent to distribute it, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-7 and N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5a(1). The incident resulting in this indictment occurred on August 19, 1987. On January 21, 1988, Mr. Crumble was sentenced to five years imprisonment with credit for one day served, a $30 Violent Crimes Compensation Board penalty, a $1,000 Drug Enforcement Demand Reduction (DEDR) penalty, a $50 lab fee and a one-year revocation of his driver's license, based upon his plea of guilty to the charge of possession of the heroin with intent to distribute. The remaining counts of the indictment were dismissed. The sentence in this matter was imposed by Honorable Arthur V. Guerrera, JSC. According to Mr. Crumble's testimony at the hearing, he served three and one-half months in Bordentown Reformatory on this sentence and was then paroled under the Intensive Supervision Program (ISP), entering into that program on May 5, 1988. Crumble anticipates that he will remain under this program until September 1989 when he believes that if he satisfactorily completes the intensive supervision, the parole period will end.

The two convictions referred to above constitute the basis for the Division's allegation that Mr. Crumble has been convicted of an offense which is listed in the Casino Control Act as an automatic disqualification from licensure or registration, N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Mr. Crumble did not dispute and in fact readily admitted the convictions.

With respect to the issue of rehabilitation, which by statute is an issue where a licensee or registrant is shown to be otherwise disqualified by automatic disqualification of section 86c(1), the Division presented evidence anticipatory of the claim of rehabilitation with respect to another incident in Mr. Crumble's criminal past. Mr. Crumble was indicted on May 26, 1983, by the Atlantic County Grand Jury on a charge of possession of a hand gun without a permit, a violation of N.J.A.C. 2C:39-5(b). The indictment charged in three counts that he had possessed two 32 caliber hand guns and a 38 caliber hand gun on April 4, 1983, in Atlantic City. Crumble pled guilty to count one of the indictment on July 11, 1983, and was sentenced on July 22, 1983, by Honorable Manuel Greenberg, JSC, to 60 days in the Atlantic County Jail, with credit for two days served. In addition, a $25 penalty to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board was payable within 30 days of the sentence and the remaining counts of the indictment were dismissed. At the time, Mr. Crumble had no prior criminal record. His sentence was suspended and he was placed on probationary supervision for one year.

Mr. Crumble testified as both a State's witness, affirming the truth of the State's allegations concerning his criminal record, and as his own witness. He explained that at the time of his conviction on the gun charge, he was 22 years old. He is now 27. At the time of his arrest in August 1987, he acknowledged that he had $362 in his possession which he had accumulated for selling drugs. However, Crumble asserted that he was making no "profit" on his drug sales, as established by the repossession of an automobile and other finanacial difficulties which he contended he would not have had had he been using the proceeds of his drug sales for other than the purpose for which he asserted, which was to pay for drugs which he was using.

Mr. Crumble explained that at the time of his first conviction on the gun charges, he was a member of a street gang, acting wild. The guns were found in an automobile. After this incident, he continued to hang in the streets and "get high." The six months in jail and a year and one-half of probation did not change his ways. He came back to the streets and did the same things as he had done before, becoming hooked on drugs. He was paying no attention to anything. This resulted in his second conviction, the first of the drug offenses. That 1985 incident and the sentence imposed, that is, the 18 months probation and the six months in the county jail, was apparently insufficient to change his ways. However, following his last conviction in early 1988 and his stay for three and one-half months in prison, Crumble determined that that life was not for him and returned home changed. He found that he missed his family, his wife, his children, his mother, etc., and he did not want to continue on the path which he had been following. His wife supported him and stayed with him and this was quite meaningful to him. After his return from prison and entrance into the Intensive Supervision Program, he became a traffic controller at the Showboat Casino Hotel where he works checking machines, giving out parking lot tickets, directing cars, etc. He has been employed at the Showboat for seven and one-half months since June 5, 1988, and has been quite successful in his employment, being offered promotion on several occasions to the position of car jockey, a promotion which he has turned down pending the outcome of these revocation proceedings.

Mr. Crumble returned home and obtained an apartment for his family. Previously, he had been living in his mother's house and he explained that he believed that the additional responsibility placed on him by the necessity of supporting himself and his family in a home of their own was significant in giving him more of a sense of worth and a better outlook on the need for living a law abiding life. Mr. Crumble is required as part of the Intensive Supervision Program to provide three urines a week and to observe a curfew which was 10 o'clock, although recently extended to 11 o'clock during the week and 12 o'clock on weekends. He has had only one incident of missing the curfew, when he was five minutes late getting home as a result of a hangup at work. However, he called his Intensive Supervision Program Supervisor at that time and advised him that he was going to be late.

Crumble is engaged in community service at the local community center. He takes great interest in sports and helping with coaching, refereeing and training of youth. He has been staying away from the people he was running with on the streets prior to his last arrest and conviction, living at home with his wife and five and two-year-old children, supporting them and working. He has had no disciplinary problems at all at work.

Crumble was previously employed in 1985 as a houseman at Trump Castle Casino. He worked there for 11 months, but was terminated from his employment when he accumulated too many points against him on the union point factor system as a result of days which he missed, largely because of his heroin and cocaine use. According to Crumble, he last used drugs prior to going to prison in December 1987.

Anthony Cirillo, who is a valet parking supervisor at Showboat Casino and the immediate supervisor of Crumble, testified that Crumble's performance at work has been "great." He is always on time and most helpful. He was on probation for 90 days at the beginning of his employment and after that time received a Showboat Employee Performance Appraisal on which he received a rating of 3.1 out of a possible four, quite an acceptable rating, above the average. The comment on the document, which was prepared largely by the other supervisors who were then supervising Crumble more than Cirillo, who now has more responsibility for him then in the past, was "Mark does his job well, especially during busy periods. His extra help is appreciated." The employee improvement plan at that time indicated Mark could have better customer courtesy. He is at times too loud and too demanding. More initiative during slow periods would be appreciated."

Mr. Cirillo confirmed Crumble's testimony concerning the offer of promotions and Crumble's determination not to accept these until this matter was concluded.

Cirillo's involvement with Crumble is strictly related to business and he did not know him prior to June 1988. He was vaguely aware of Crumble's having been arrested on drug-related charges, information which he obtained from Crumble.

William H. Marsh, Crumble's sponsor in the Intensive Supervision Parole Program, testified that he has known Crumble for eight years, initially through sports activities and interests at the Uptown Community Complex. Marsh is a community coordinator employed by the Atlantic City Board of Education. He has become far more involved with Crumble on a personal basis since Crumble's release from prison under Intensive Supervision parole. Prior to that time, they would communicate largely about sports and other such matters, but since Crumble's release and Marsh's undertaking of the supervisory role, he has engaged in much conversation with Crumble concerning Crumble's life, what he is doing, where he is going, etc.

Marsh testified that Crumble has been extremely involved in community center related sports activities with various groups of persons. Crumble was very involved with the summer basketball program and volunteered his aid for this operation, which had limited funding. He has been active with preteens and adults, is now involved in an evening program and generally makes himself quite available to assist with these community services.

Marsh was familiar with Crumble's criminal history. He now meets with the rspondent three times a week and attempts to serve as a role model for him.

James D. Salvaryn, Intensive Supervision Officer assigned to supervise Mr. Crumble, testified that he has been an Intensive Supervision Officer for three years and was prior to that an Atlantic County Probation Officer for seven years. Crumble has been assigned as his charge since May 5, 1988. Salvaryn's responsibility is to supervise the respondent's adjustment. He finds that Crumble is doing very well and is a "sincere candidate." He is willing to put forth extra effort and willing to make adjustments in his schedule in order to "go the extra mile." He went out of his way to make sure that he would not miss meetings which he attends on a group basis. These meetings are held on Monday nights at one end of Atlantic City and when Crumble found that his work schedule was changed and he had to work Monday nights, he worked out a plan by which he would combine his breaks and lunch time in order to allow him to leave work, go to the meetings at the other end of Atlanti City, and return to work, so as not to miss the meetings. According to Salvaryn this was somewhat beyond the call of duty as the ISP program would be willing to make adjustments when necessary for work schedules, etc.

The witness has had 218 contacts with Crumble up to December 31, 1988. He has also taken 46 random urine samples, none of which have come back with any positives. The program tests by way of a basic screen for 12 different types of drugs, as well as THC.

As of December 31, Mr. Crumble has put in 146 hours of community service. This is beyond the required 124 hours. He has also paid $270 of the DEDR penalty, has paid off the $50 lab fee and the Violent Crimes Compensation Board fee. Based on the schedule in effect and the payments made, Salvaryn sees no reason why Crumble should not be able to pay of his entire obligation under DEDR, as well as the $500 fee charged for supervision, before the end of his ISP program.

The witness opined that Mr. Crumble was meeting the challenge of adjustment and was rehabilitating himself. He is now a family man, who Salvaryn has observed as being "great with the kids." He has his own apartment and appears to be acting in a pro-social, law abiding fashion. He seems to be internalizing the changes necessary to continue on this positive turn in his life. As a result of the postive manner in which he has responded, Salvaryn has recently agreed to a increase in the curfew hours.

The Division noted in its examination of Mr. Crumble the mitigating and aggravating factors noted by the sentencing judges in the three criminal matters which resulted in Crumble's convictions. An examination of these shows that the sentencing judge on the first indictment, that is, the gun possession charge, noted many mitigating factors quite frequently found with respect to first offenders and only one aggravating factor, that is being "the need for deterring the defendant and others from violating the law. By the time of the second conviction, Judge Greenberg found no mitigating factors and found aggravating factors "the extent of the defendant's prior criminal record and the seriousness of the offenses of which he has been convicted" and "the need for deterring the defendant and others from violating the law." At the time of the third sentence, on the second drug distribution charge in January 1988, Judge Guerrera noted no mitigating factors and such aggravating as "the risk that the defendant will commit another crime"

"the extent of the defendant's prior criminal record and the seriousness of the offenses of which he has been convicted" and "the need for deterring the defendant and others from violating the law." Judge Guerrera noted in his reasons for sentencing that "the serious nature of this offense, together with the defendant's prior criminal record, clearly dictate that a substantial state prison sentence be imposed. There are no mitigating factors in this case . . ."

DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

This case presents significant difficulties. Mr. Crumble is an individual who has demonstrated by his past criminal involvements a substantial disregard for the interest of society by engaging in an extremely heinous and despicable mode of conduct, that is, the selling of cocaine and heroin. Clearly, Judge Guerrera's comments at the time of the January 1988 sentencing were completely appropriate and Crumble deserved to be sent away to prison. The fact that, according to his testimony, he was making no profit on sales, but was instead using the drugs to buy the drugs that he was himself using constitute no real excuse for his conduct, which besides providing him with a means for purchasing his own supply of drugs endangered the health, safety and welfare of many others through his distribution of narcotics to other individuals.

As this judge noted at the time of the hearing, had Mr. Crumble only been convicted on the gun offense and the 1985 drug distribution charge and had he come to court and presented the type of rehabilitative testimony which was received from Cirillo, Marsh, Salvaryn and himself, indicating the kind of changed conduct which he has demonstrated, but over a substantially longer period of time, that is, from 1985 or so up to the present instead of only from last June, there would be little question but that a finding of rehabilitation would be absolutely appropriate. The testimony presented by the respondent's witnesses, as well as his own apparently sincere testimony, all indicate that Mr. Crumble has begun to see the light, begun to change his ways, and begun to turn his life around. The unfortunate thing in his case is that between 1985 and 1988 he continued to use drugs and sell them and was arrested and convicted for another drug sale. This complicates a determination of this matter considerably.

I am highly impressed with the nature of Mr. Crumble's rehabilitation evidence. As the Deputy Attorney General noted, and as this judge fully concurs, few individuals who have come before this judge have presented such a compelling case of one who has apparently reformed. If Crumble is to be believed, and I sincerely believe that he means it, his prison sentence woke him up, his return to society and undertaking of responsibilities for his family, his employment, his growing sense of responsibility and independence resulting from taking on his own home, etc., have all combined to fix upon him the need to straighten his life out. I believe that he is quite well on his way to doing so and suspect, as Mr. Salvaryn indicates, that he has internalized a different set of outlooks and attitudes. The conduct which he has engaged in with Mr. Marsh, his willingness to go beyond the requirements of his Intensive Supervision Program, his apparently sincere efforts to continue meeting with those assisting him and with the group which he is working with, all point in the right direction.

The ultimate question in this case is of course whether Mr. Crumble is rehabilitated. Based upon the evidence, I FIND that he did commit offenses in 1985 and 1987 which constituted crimes which are automatic disqualifications from registration pursuant to section 86c(1), that is, sale of a controlled dangerous substance in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1) and the later adopted 2C:35-5a(1) and 2C:35-5b(3). Thus, in order for him to retain his registration, it must be found that he has rehabilitated himself by clear and convincing evidence, as required by the statute.

Mr. Crumble's last criminal conviction occurred almost exactly one year ago. The offense itself occurred in August 1987, nearly one year and one-half ago. According to his testimony, he has been off drugs since December 1987, 13 months ago. He has been out of prison since May, on intensive supervision since then and working since early June. All of these have occurred within a relatively recent time. The issue is whether one can establish rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence in such a limited period.

The Casino Control Act establishes standards for determining rehabilitation. Among these are the nature of the offense involved which disqualifies from registration, in this case the quite serious offense of possession with intent to distribute heroin and cocaine. A further factor is the age of the miscreant. In this case, the last offense, that of August 1987 resulting in the January 1988 conviction, occurred when Crumble was approximately 25. Again, the last offense occurred only one year and one-half ago and a conviction only one year ago and the prior offense to that, the other disqualifying offense, occurred in 1985. There is no specific evidence of the social factors which may have played a part in Crumble's downfall, except that he did indicate that he was running with street gangs, that he was living at home without substantial employment, that he was not really responsible for his own financial wellbeing and therefore perhaps lacked some sense of responsibility and incentive, and that he eventually became involved with using and "hooked on drugs."

In addition to the above factors, the Act provides for some consideration in the nature of the employment. In this case, Mr. Crumble is employed at present time as a traffic coordinator and, if he were to continue as a registrant, it appears that he would be promoted to a car jockey, that is, one who actually parks the cars at the casino complex. This type of position is generally of a relatively low level in the casino industry hierarchy. While no doubt the ability to drive around customers automobiles could provide some sought of temptation, there is no real reason except speculation to think that this employment in any way is likely to be a problem with respect Crumble's prior criminal activities. In addition, the job is totally unrelated to the activities of the casino itself, hence the registration status as opposed to a casino employee license.

Having considered all of the factors which enter into a determination of whether or not one has rehabilitated himself including the significant standard that is established by the Casino Control Act, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Crumble, while well on the way to proving himself rehabilitated if he can continue on the present path, has not as of yet been able to have sufficient time within which to prove his rehabilitation from the most recent of his criminal involvements. Of course, it can be said that he had the opportunity to prove himself rehabilitated by leading an exemplory life since the 1985 conviction, although not then facing the revocation of his registration. Obviously, he failed to do that, whether because of drug use or not. He has been given another chance. This time it appears quite possible that he will in fact make it, that he will in fact prove himself a changed person. However, given the high standards set by the Casino Control Act with respect to the showing of rehabilitation and the limited time involved, I cannot in good conscience find at this point that the evidence so overwhelmingly establishes Crumble's change as to allow for a finding of rehabilitation. At the same time, I do not wish in the slightest to denigrate the efforts he has made, the progress he has shown, or the strong anticipation that he will succeed. For this reason, and because this decision must by law fully dispose of all issues relevant under the applicable statute to the question at bar, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), , I believe it appropriate to express strongly the opinion that despite a finding of a failure on the part of Mr. Crumble to show sufficient rehabilitation to overcome the automatic disqualification, that he should be permitted to retain his registration in the interests of justice, N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(e). Although I recognize that the ultimate determination in this matter, particularly on this subject of a waiver of disqualification, is in the hands of the Commission, so that there be no question as to this issue should for some unknown reason the Commission not review this decision, and because I feel compelled by the requirement to issue a full and complete decision considering all statutory provisions relevant to this case, I CONCLUDE that a waiver should issue and Mr. Crumble should be permitted to retain his registration. While these last comments may be viewed by the Commission more as a recommendation on a subject which has apparently been traditionally viewed as reserved for it, I feel constrained to make the recommendation clearly in this decision, so as to completely fulfill the responsibility to fully and completely dispose of this case.

SUMMARY

For the reasons expressed, I FIND that Mr. Crumble has been convicted of disqualifying offenses and has failed to establish by clear and convincing evidence at this early date his rehabilitation to a level sufficient to permit him to retain his registration. However, for the reasons expressed, I believe that a waiver of the revocation should issue and that he should be permitted to retain his registration. Obviously, this extraordinary remedy in his behalf demands from him an extraordinary effort to justify the retention of his registration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: January 4, 1989 Decided: January 11, 1989

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

Mary Barbara Cullen filed an application seeking licensure as a casino employee. The application was first filed in 1984. The Division of Gaming Enforcement objected to licensure by letter dated October 20, 1986. The applicant requested a hearing and the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case on December 23, 1986. A prehearing was held before Honorable Stephen W. Thompson on February 10, 1987, and a Prehearing Order was issued on that date. Thereafter, at the request of the petitioner, the matter was placed on the inactive list, initially on April 20, 1987, and was carried on that list until it was activated and scheduled for hearing before Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin on November 15, 1988, at the Oakland Municipal Building. Following the hearing, the record was kept open for the submission of additional documentation which was received on January 4, 1989, and the record closed on that date.

The Division objected to licensure because Ms. Cullen had allegedly failed to disclose an arrest on August 5, 1984, on her Personal History Disclosure Form and during a personal interview. In addition, she did not disclose four arrests which took place in 1968. She further failed to disclose that she had been dismissed from employment at Keystone Race Track in Pennsylvania and suspended by the Racing Commission following an incident of November 20, 1981, when certain narcotics and narcotic paraphernalia were discovered during a search conducted by race track security personnel. The Division contended that the failure to disclose disqualified Ms. Cullen pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b and that in addition she lacked the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure by N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b, incorporating 89b(2).

Mary Barbara Cullen, who is 38 years old and an eleventh grade high school dropout, testified that she began employment as a waitress and bartender in 1968. She began dating the president of the Henchman Motorcycle Club and was in his company constantly. On several occasions in 1968, she was involved with the police as a result of her involvement with this person. He, and she in his company, walked out on checks in restaurants, trespassed at a quarry, broke into a motorcycle shop and had guns on their property. As a result, Ms. Cullen was arrested on August 6, 1968, by the Vineland Police Department for theft of services, analogous to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-8; was arrested by the Vineland Police on August 16, 1968 for breaking and entering and larceny, analogous to N.J.S.A. 2C:18-1 and 2C:20-3; was arrested by the State Police for possession of a deadly weapon in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-5 and disorderly conduct, N.J.S.A. 2C:33-2. She was sentenced to 30 days in the Cumberland County Jail on the theft of services charges, was indicted by the Cumberland County Grand Jury on the B and E and larceny charges and was fined $100 and given a three-month suspended sentence, and was fined $50 and $10 costs on the disorderly persons offense after the deadly weapons charge was dismissed.

Ms. Cullen testified that she began working as a pony girl at Liberty Bell (Keystone) Race Track in 1978. She began dating the father of her son, one William Shiff. She was suspended in November 1981. She was living with Shiff in Pennsylvania and they would go to work together at 6 a.m. He would drop her off and go up to the barn. She would use the car to go to the kitchen to get coffee for Shiff, a trainer and herself. One morning the race track security people conducted a drug search and found a straw in the car. There was some white powder under the seat. She was arrested. She and Shiff were using drugs at the time, but she did not know that the items in the car had been there. She left Shiff and moved home with her mother. She told the police that the straw had been cut by her baby.

In 1984, Ms. Cullen was arrested by the Division of Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) for serving an underage person, in violation of N.J.S.A. 33:1-77. She was then tending bar at the Landing Strip in Pleasantville. She was fined $100 in Pleasantville Municipal Court, plus $25 court cost and $25 to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board.

In September 1985, Ms. Cullen filled out an application for licensure. She went over the Personal History Disclosure Form with a Kenneth Lipton, an individual who was helping casino applicants fill out PHD forms. She told Lipton about her arrests, but he told her that she did not have to put them down. She also explained that she believed that she had received an expungement of her record. This was not a correct assumption. She did disclose her 1984 arrest by the ABC. She put down nothing concerning the Keystone incident because Lipton told her she did not have to put it down. According to Cullen, she thought that the entire incident in Pennsylvania had been cleared up by an attorney who her trainer had retained for her and who she had paid out of her wages. She only met this attorney on three occasions.

On February 10, 1987, Ms. Cullen came to the Atlantic County Civil Courthouse in Atlantic City for a prehearing conference on this matter. She had worked that morning until 3 a.m. at the French Quarter on Admiral Wilson Boulevard in Camden where she was employed as a dancer. She had borrowed a pocketbook from her girlfriend. As she went through security at the courthouse, she was found to be in possession of a pipe which contained some residue and she was arrested.

Ms. Cullen eventually recognized that she had a substance abuse problem following her arrest at the courthouse on February 10, 1987. In June 1987, she entered into treatment under the care of a psychiatrist, Dr. George. She was in a hospital for approximately one month in September and continued treatment thereafter. She continues treatment with Dr. George and a counselor who she sees once every two months or as needed. She believes that she needs a chance to straighten out her life. She presently lives with her mother.

The applicant is currently employed at the French Quarter as a relief bartender and dancer. She has worked there for approximately one year on an on-and-off basis, also working at various other bars as a dancer. She claims that she has not used any drugs in the last four or five months. She acknowledged having been arrested in Absecon in November 1986 for possession of methamphetamine. She claimed that these were not her drugs but that a girlfriend "blamed it on her." She received pretrial intervention in January 1987 and was required to undergo urine testing three times in six months and perform 30 hours of community service in Vineland. She successfully completed this, although it was necessary to extend the supervision beyond its expected March 1987 end because she had not had all of the urine analyses and complete the community service. She was kept on probation until August 1987. She continues community service at the present time.

The witness explained that she started using drugs in 1977, using Quaaludes, marijuana and methamphetamines. She had given birth in 1977 and had severe complications which resulted in her being hospitalized for two and one-half months during which she nearly died due to infections. It was after this that she began her drug use. She did not at first use drugs while employed at the Atlantic City Race Track in 1978, but eventually started to use the drugs while working at the track on an on-and-off basis. These were always given to her by her son's father. She did not use cocaine because having tried it, she did not like it.

The applicant contended that when she filled out her application in September 1985, she was not then using drugs. However, when she was contacted by the Division's investigator by telephone and asked about her arrest record other than the 1984 incident which she had disclosed she lied to him and was "very rude." She "honestly thought that all of her record had been expunged." She felt that she should get an attorney because she knew that the prior record would jeopardize her chances at receiving a license. At the time of her discussion with the investigator, she had been using speed and had used it that night.

Ms. Cullen receives guidance through the Cumberland County Guidance Center. She no longer uses drugs and rarely takes any medication, even aspirin. She has been given a minor tranquilizer to induce sleep, but does not use it very often. She acknowledged that at the time of her arrest at the courthouse in 1987, she was using methamphetamine, although the pipe was not hers. She continued to use meth up until the time that she went into the hospital when she turned drugs over to her doctor. She has not used any drugs for the past year.

Dorothy Cullen, the petitioner's mother who is an employer of the Department of Military and Veteran's Affairs for the State of New Jersey, testified concerning her daughter's difficult pregnancy and subsequent illness. She testified that she and her boyfriend had worked with Mary to try to turn her around and that she would "turn her in if she thought she was on any drugs." She and her daughter do volunteer work together at the Veterans Home in Vineland and for the Vineland Developmental Center. She believes that her daughter has come a long way despite the difficulties which she has suffered from the severe illness and with her son, who has been in special education. Mrs. Cullen denied having known that her daughter was on drugs.

Several documents were received in evidence. Among these was a dismissal of the appeal which Ms. Cullen had filed with respect to her suspension by the Pennsylvania State Horse Racing Commission. This dismissal occurred on October 5, 1984, following a "failure to respond to the Rule to Show Cause" issued by the court in 1982. In addition, Ms. Cullen presented a statement of March 15, 1988, from Elizabeth Rodriguez, a therapist at the Cumberland County Guidance Center, who indicated that Mary's present condition was "improved in the ability to handle the activities of daily living, and the ability to use public transportation, and the ability to function at home, in the ability to relate to the family and others and improved in the ability to take care of her son and to maintain employment. She further indicated that Cullen is not "considered a danger to self, others, or property." Her prognosis was seen as good and she was encouraged to continue with psychotheraputic counseling on an outpatient basis.

Dr. N.J. George, staff psychiatrist at the Guidance Center, wrote on March 18, 1988 that as of that time, Ms. Cullen was not using drugs. "I feel she would stay off of them."

DISCUSSION

This case involves an applicant with a history of drug abuse which has continued up to the fairly recent past. She has undergone intensive treatment in an effort to break out of the cycle of drug involvement. It appears that she is making significant progress.

Ms. Cullen's 1968 arrests would be insignificant except for the fact that they were not disclosed on the Personal History Disclosure Form. According to her explanation, she did not disclose them because Mr. Lipton told her she did not have to. Of course, her statements as to Lipton's comments are hearsay and they are unsupported by any testimony or other evidence from him. As a matter of fact, it would have been necessary for Ms. Cullen to have disclosed these 1968 arrests, although at this late date, it is unlikely that any of them could have disqualified her from licensure. She did disclose a 1984 ABC arrest. That arrest, for selling alcohol to a minor, was of a relatively insignificant nature. It may well be that in reviewing the matter, Ms. Cullen felt that that arrest was very recent, was likely to be discovered, and was not likely to jeopardize her licensure, whereas the prior arrest, which involved such serious matters as breaking and entering and larceny and jail sentences, could hamper her licensure. She readily acknowledged that she felt that the arrests might jeopardize her ability to obtain a license.

Ms. Cullen's explanation of why she did not put down the 1968 arrests does not ring entirely true. While it is possible that she may have consulted with someone and discussed with him whether to list the arrests, she has produced no evidence to support her self-serving testimony that she was told not to put them down. Her own testimony, indicating her concern that the arrests might jeopardize her ability to obtain a license, seemed to point to the more likely explanation that regardless of what advice she was given, she determined not to put down what she thought she might otherwise be required to list in the hope that it would not be discovered and would not jeopardize her chances. Of course, Ms. Cullen's judgment on the matter may have been clouded by her drug involvement, although she denied any specific involvement at the time of filling out of the application.

Ms. Cullen agreed that she lied to the Division investigator at the time he questioned her concerning her arrest record. She only disclosed the arrests when confronted with them. At the time, she claims to have been using drugs. Perhaps this affected her, although again it is perhaps difficult to separate out the affects of the drugs on her judgment as opposed to her own non-drug induced concerns that the revelation of the arrests would result in her not receiving a license.

The Division's objections in this case are based upon the good character issue and the failure to disclose. In the view of this judge, there was an intentional failure to disclose the 1968 arrests. Ms. Cullen was aware of the arrests, had not forgotten about them, and either on her own, or in agreement with some "counselor," determined not to list the arrests for fear that they would jeopardize her chances. I do not credit her explanation if it is intended to imply that she only followed Lipton's advice and did not independently determine that it would be better not to list the arrests because they might hurt her chances.

With respect to the good character, honesty and integrity issue, Ms. Cullen's prior history up until recently certainly gives no indication that she has the necessary good character, honesty and integrity for licensure. She is an admitted former drug user, lier, and a person who failed to disclose material information. All of this may have been in some respect induced by the drug activity. It is unfortunate that Ms. Cullen's history, up to the recent past, is clouded by these misjudgments and inappropriate conduct. However, in dealing with the question of whether she has established by clear and convincing evidence the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure, I FIND that it is too soon to determine that Ms. Cullen has changed herself around so much as to overcome the unfortunate difficulties of the past. Within the past year she has purportedly stopped using drugs and has pursued a fairly intensive program of rehabilitation. Hopefully, this will continue and in the future she can point to a clear record of non-involvement with the law and no drug involvement for a period of years. However at present, I FIND that it is too soon to make the determination that good character, honesty and integrity exists to such a degree as to overcome the past problems. In judging the present existence of good character, honesty and integrity, the recent past must be looked at. That recent past cannot be limited solely to what has occurred since Ms. Cullen's hospitalization and "rehabilitation." It is simply too soon to make any judgment on whether this individual, who has been troubled for years with a drug problem, has emerged from the shadows and can go on without difficulty.

I CONCLUDE that Ms. Cullen did intentionally fail to disclose material information concerning her arrest and conviction record in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b. In addition, I FIND that she cannot at this point prove her good character, honesty and integrity by the requisite clear and convincing evidence standard set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b, incorporating 89b(2). For these reasons, I CONCLUDE that at the present time

Ms. Cullen cannot be licensed and her application must be denied. Her future ability to obtain a license will no doubt be dependent upon a continued record of a drug free and law abiding lifestyle. In the case of this applicant, there is at least hope for the future. However, at present, that hope is an insufficient ground for a finding of license qualification.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the revocation of Patricia Daisey's casino hotel employee registration no. 69732-40 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91 and N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1). The Division sought revocation of the respondent's registration by reason of its contention that the respondent had committed a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), and therefore, she is disqualified from registration, pursuant to section 91b. The respondent contended that she was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 91d.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent had obtained a casino hotel employee registration from the Commission so that she could be employed as a food and beverage cashier and, later, a cash control supervisor. By complaint to the Commission, filed January 7, 1988, the Division objected to the respondent's continued registration, asserting that the respondent had committed Theft by Deception (welfare fraud), in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, under section 86c(1). Based upon the complaint, the Commission notified the respondent on January 19, 1988, that she had the right to a hearing, and that failure to respond within 15 days could result in revocation of her registration. By application dated January 22, 1988, which was received by the Commission on February 2, 1988, the respondent requested a hearing. On February 4, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which received it on February 11, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference in the matter was held before me on April 18, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4.

B. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 91d of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was scheduled for July 29, 1988. On July 20, 1988, the respondent's attorney telephoned my office and requested an adjournment of the hearing date as he had just recently been retained by the respondent. This request was confirmed in writing on July 28, 1988, and I granted the respondent's request for an adjournment.

A hearing was held on November 10, 1988, in the Municipal Courtroom, Deptford Township Municipal Building, Deptford Township, New Jersey. The record remained open at the conclusion of the hearing in order to afford both parties the opportunity to submit additional documentary evidence and to submit additional rebuttal evidence. I received this additional documentary evidence on December 7, 1988 and the record closed at that time.

THE FACTS

In April or May 1983, the respondent and her husband applied for and were granted assistance (welfare) in the form of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), Medicaid and Food Stamps (F.S.) from the Camden County Board of Social Services (CWA). Between July 16, 1983, and April 28, 1984, the respondent worked sporadically in various positions at Underwood Memorial Hospital (P-3). Between December 9, 1983, and May 18, 1984, the respondent's husband worked for Coast Cities Student Transport Company (P-3). At no time did the respondent or her husband report this employment to the CWA. On December 15, 1983, the respondent and her husband completed a recertification application for assistance (P-2). In this application, the respondent and her husband indicated that they were both unemployed and had no source of income (P-2). Between July 16, 1983, and May 31, 1984, the respondent received over payments of $3,758 in AFDC, $4,418.83 in Medicaid and $818 in F.S., for a total overpayment of $8,994.83 to which she was not entitled (P-3).

On November 21, 1986, the respondent and her husband were indicted by the grand jury, Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division, Camden County - Criminal, in indictment number I-2736-11-86, for theft by deception (welfare fraud) in the amount of $8,994.83 in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4. On December 11, 1986, the respondent entered a plea of not guilty to the charge; however, on March 2, 1987, the respondent retracted her plea of not guilty and entered a plea of guilty to the charge. On April 3, 1987, the respondent was found guilty of the charge and was sentenced in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Camden County, to serve three years on probation, perform 150 hours of community service at the rate of 50 hours per year, make restitution and pay a $25 Violent Crimes Compensation Board Penalty (P-1).

During and just prior to the time period in question, the respondent incurred approximately $10,000 in medical bills ($4,418.83 were paid by Medicaid). Her husband had surgery to have a vein stripped, her son Michael severely fractured his leg and was hospitalized for 30 days, her son Christopher severed a finger and was hospitalized at Jefferson Hospital for microsurgery, and the respondent was hospitalized for tonsillitis.

Neither the respondent nor her husband had any medical insurance to pay these bills. In addition, the respondent was behind in paying her mortgage, gas and electric bills and often could not afford food for her children.

A friend, aware of the respondent's dire financial situation, obtained a part-time job for the respondent at Underwood Memorial Hospital. Because of her financial situation, her outstanding medical bills and her need to feed her children, the respondent did not inform the CWA of her employment.

On December 15, 1983, when the respondent recertified her application for assistance, the respondent was going to inform the CWA of her employment. However, earlier that day, her electricity was shut off for nonpayment and the respondent was scared, so she indicated that she was not employed. The respondent testified that, at that time, she did not realize the seriousness of her offense but she did realize that she had an obligation to inform the CWA of her employment.

Early in 1984, the respondent filed for bankruptcy under Chapter 13 in an attempt to consolidate and repay her debts. This application, however, was denied because the respondent's income was insufficient to repay her debts within five years. The respondent therefore filed a petition for straight bankruptcy under Chapter 7. This petition was granted on April 18, 1984.

In March 1984, the mortgage holder foreclosed on the respondent's home. The respondent lost her home and had to split up her family in order to find shelter. She, her husband and her two younger children, ages three and four, moved in with her sister, and her two older children, ages nine and eleven, moved in with her parents.

The respondent was born on February 18, 1954. She is presently 34 years old and was 29 and 30 years old at the time of the offense. She is married and has four children, ages 16, 14, 9 and 7. She had her first child at age 18 and did not work before she was employed at Underwood Hospital in 1983. Since coming off welfare, the respondent has been continuously employed. After leaving the hospital, the respondent was employed for one and one-half years by the New Jersey National Bank as a branch service representative. She processed loan applications and served as a teller. In August 1986, the respondent became employed at the Claridge Hotel and Casino as a food and beverage cashier. In June 1987, the respondent left the Claridge to accept employment in the Sands Hotel and Casino as a cash control supervisor. In this position, the respondent is the swing-shift supervisor overseeing three clerks and 21 food and beverage cashiers. She is not directly responsible for any bank but does occasionally run change to cashiers.

There were no disciplinary actions filed against the respondent at the Claridge. The respondent has had one disciplinary action - - a warning for attendance - - since she has been employed at the Sands. In that instance, the respondent was working the swing-shift. The day shift supervisor left on maternity leave and the respondent was required to cover for her. As a result, the respondent was sometimes working both the day shift and the swing shift, and thus was late several times reporting to work on the day shift. She also had the flu during this period. Since returning to the swing shift, she has experienced no other attendance or disciplinary problems.

The respondent did disclose her arrest and conviction on her Personal History Disclosure Form, which was filed with the Commission and the Division on August 11, 1986. The respondent did not, however, disclose her arrest and conviction on her Sands employment application (P-7) dated June 8, 1987. When questioned by the Division, the respondent indicated that she did not realize she was "formally arrested," but offered to redo the application. She was informed by the Division investigator that that would not be necessary. The respondent wanted to put her past behind her and was afraid that if she reported the conviction she would not get the job. The respondent has since informed all of her superiors of her conviction. The Sands could have terminated the respondent for falsifying her employment application but it elected to retain the respondent as she has proven herself to be a trusted employee and a valuable asset to the Sands.

The respondent is still on probation. She reports to her probation officer every month. She has completed her first 50 hours of community service by working at St Mary's Church in Williamstown. The respondent was originally required to pay $30 per month in restitution; however, at one point this was raised to $250 per month. The respondent was unable to pay $250 per month and a violation of probation proceeding was begun. On December 18, 1987, the petition was dismissed and the respondent's restitution was reduced to $100 per month (P-5). A second violation of probation proceeding was begun in May 1988, as the respondent had not completed paying her arrearage; however, the petitioner completed paying the arrearage and the petition was dismissed (P-5). The respondent has paid $1,853.00 in restitution and has a balance of $7,141.83 (P-8).

The respondent is active in the local PTA and youth soccer organization. She also attends church regularly.

The respondent submitted five documents in her behalf. Three are letters of recommendation (R-1, R-2 & R-5) and two are excellent semi-annual job performance evaluations (R-3 & R-4). The first letter is written by Barbara Perkins, Income Control Supervisor, Sands Hotel and Casino, and dated November 7, 1988. Ms. Perkins wrote:

> Pat Daisey has proven to be an exceptional cash control supervisor. She has consistently worked very effectively with the clerks and cashiers in her department. On numerous occasions, I have worked with Pat at the Sands, in the Copa Room or one of the restaurants. She is hard working, reliable, and a very knowledgeable supervisor. She has earned the respect and trust of all her co-workers. She is a valuable asset to the hotel accounting department at the Sands.
> On a more personal level, Pat is a compassionate and patient individual. She is always pleasant and gets along well with her fellow employees. I have observed her in several situations, and she has shown herself to be level headed, responsible, and calm. I am proud to work with her, and I'm glad that I can call her my friend. [R-1]

The second letter, written by Amy L. Herring, cash control manager, Sands Hotel and Casino, dated November 5, 1988, states:

> Patricia Daisey has been employed as a Shift Supervisor with the Sands Hotel & Casino Cash Control Department since June 1987. During that time Pat has proven herself to be an extremely valuable asset to the department. Pat is well liked and highly respected amongst her peers and co-workers.
>
> Pat has full charge of the department in my absence. She is responsible for scheduling, overseeing that cashier tasks are performed, troubleshooting all problems that arise, and verifying the clerks work along with many other duties.
>
> Pat is very enjoyable to work with. She has a positive attitude and is an excellent role model. She is always willing to help out by staying overtime or even working on her days off. Since Pat works the busiest shift, her loss would have a very negative effect on the department. [R-2].

The third letter, written by John Ciullo, hotel controller, Sands Hotel and Casino, dated November 21, 1988, states:

> Pat Daisey has been employed as a Cash Control Shift Supervisor at the Sands Hotel & Casino since June 1987. During her employment, Pat has proven to be not only an excellent supervisor, but also a trustworthy and dedicated individual. I have found that Pat possesses a high degree of integrity and dependability as well as the ability to get along with people.
> I have known Pat personally for over a year, and I can state that her reputation and moral character can not be questioned. [R-5]

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the respondent's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident nor her current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess her credibility. Initially, her position in this matter must be recognized. As the respondent and holder of a casino hotel employee registration, she has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the respondent's demeanor, the plausibility of her testimony, the manner in which she participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appears that the respondent testified truthfully in every regard. She candidly admitted her misconduct and described in detail, experiencing great humiliation, the underlying circumstances. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the respondent's testimony in all respects.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. In April or May 1983, the respondent and her husband applied for and were granted assistance (welfare) in the form of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, Medicaid and Food Stamps from the Camden County Board of Social Services.

2. Between July 16, 1983, and April 28, 1984, the respondent worked sporadically in various positions at Underwood Memorial Hospital.

3. Between December 9, 1983, and May 18, 1984, the respondent's husband worked for Coast Cities Student Transport Company.

4. At no time did the respondent or her husband report this employment to the Camden County Board of Social Services.

5. On December 15, 1983, the respondent and her husband completed a recertification application for assistance. In this application the respondent and her husband indicated that they were both unemployed and had no source of income.

6. Between July 16, 1983, and May 31, 1984, the respondent received overpayments of $3,758 in AFDC, $4,418.83 in Medicaid and $812 in F.S., for a total overpayment of $8,994.83 to which she was not entitled.

7. On November 21, 1986, the respondent and her husband were indicted by the grand jury, Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division, Camden County - Criminal, indictment number I-2736-11-86, for theft by deception (welfare fraud) in the amount of $8,994.83, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4.

8. On April 3, 1987, the respondent was found guilty of the charge and was sentenced in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Camden County, to serve three years on probation, perform 150 hours of community service at the rate of 50 hours per year, make restitution, and pay a $25 Violent Crimes Compensation Board Penalty.

9. During and just prior to the time period in question, the respondent incurred approximately $10,000 in medical bills.

10. The respondent was behind in paying her mortgage, gas and electric bills, and often could not afford food for her children.

11. On April 18, 1984, the respondent was entered into bankruptcy under the provisions of Chapter 7.

12. In March 1984, the respondent's mortgage holder foreclosed on her home.

13. The respondent had to split up her family.

14. The respondent was born on February 18, 1954. She is presently 34 years old and was 29 and 30 years of age at the time of the offense.

15. She is married and has four children, ages 16, 14, 9 and 7.

16. She had her first child at age 18 and did not work until she was employed at Underwood Hospital in 1983. Since coming off welfare, the respondent has been continuously employed.

17. The respondent is presently employed at the Sands Hotel and Casino as a cash control supervisor.

18. The respondent failed to disclose her arrest and conviction on her employment application, but she has subsequently informed her employer of her conviction.

19. The respondent has completed her first 50 hours of community service and has paid $1,853.00 in restitution.

20. The respondent is active in her local PTA and youth soccer organizations. She attends church regularly.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:

a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;

b. Failure of the applicant to provide information, documentation and assurances required by the act or requested by the commission, or failure of the applicant to reveal any fact material to qualification, or the supplying of information which is untrue or misleading as to a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria;

c. The conviction of the applicant, or of any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license, of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be:

(1) Any of the following offenses under the "New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice," P.L. 1978, c. 95 (Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes) as amended and supplemented:

. . . .

N.J.S. 2C:20-1 et seq. (theft and related offenses which constitute crimes of the second or third degree);

. . . .

N.J.S.A. 5:12-91, Registration of casino hotel employees, provides in pertinent part:

a. No person may commence employment as a casino hotel employee unless he has been registered with the commission, which registration shall be in accordance with subsection f. of this section.

b. Any applicant for casino hotel employee registration shall produce such information as the commission may require. Subsequent to the registration of a casino hotel employee, the commission may revoke, suspend, limit, or otherwise restrict the registration upon a finding that the registrant is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of P.L.1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86).

d. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection b. of this section no casino hotel employee registration shall be revoked on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria or the commission of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of section 86 of P.L.1977, c. 110 (C 5:12-86), as specified in subsection g. of that section, provided that the registrant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the registrant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8) establishes that registration under the Casino Control Act is a revocable privilege which is "conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual . . .registrant. . ." N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1) provides for the revocation of the license or registration held by a person "for the commission of any other offense or violation of this act which would disqualify such person from holding his . . . registration." The Division contends that the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, Theft by deception, which constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), and that, accordingly, she is disqualified from continued registration.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be one of certain enumerated offenses contained in Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the respondent's receipt of welfare grants in excess of $500 between July 16, 1983, and May 31, 1984, while she and her husband were employed and thus not eligible for full grants, constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, which, under the circumstances, disqualifies the respondent from continued registration.

N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, Theft by deception, provides in pertinent part:

> A person is guilty of theft if he purposely obtains property of another by deception. A person deceives if he purposely:
>
> a. Creates or reinforces a false impression, including false impressions as to law, value, intention or other state of mind; but deception as to a person's intention to perform a promise shall not be inferred from the fact alone that he did not subsequently perform the promise;
>
> b. Prevents another from acquiring information which would affect his judgment of a transaction; or
>
> c. Fails to correct a false impression which the deceiver previously created or reinforced, or which the deceiver knows to be influencing another to whom he stands in a fiduciary or confidential relationship.

The Division established, and the respondent admitted during her testimony, that she knowingly failed to inform the Camden County Board of Social Services of her or her husband's employment with the intent to deceive the CWA so as to receive welfare grants to which she was not entitled. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4. I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(2)(a), the offense constitutes a crime of the third degree.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the respondent is a disqualifying offense under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). The respondent is therefore disqualified from continued registration, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d

A registrant faced with the existence of one or more section 86c disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against continued registration by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. This section sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

In regard to the first criterion, Patrica Daisey is a casino hotel registrant employed as a cash control supervisor at the Sands Hotel and Casino. As such, she does not have direct responsibilities for actual gaming activities and rarely comes in contact with casino patrons.

Second, the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception, over a ten-month period prior to being employed in the casino industry. Because the offense is a listed disqualifier under section 86c(1), it is very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the offense must be viewed in its appropriate context. The respondent and her husband were unemployed and in dire financial need. They had large medical bills, were behind in their mortgage, gas and electric bills, and often could not afford food for their children. The respondent took a part-time job as a means of attempting to provide for her family; however, she failed to inform the CWA of this income. Most of the overpayment was for medical expenses and food. At sentencing, the court noted several mitigating factors in this case: first, that the respondent's conduct neither caused nor threatened serious harm; second, that the respondent did not contemplate that her conduct would cause or threaten serious harm; third, that the respondent will compensate the victim of her conduct for the damage it sustained and that she will participate in a program of community service; fourth, that the respondent has no prior history of delinquency or criminal activity and has led a law-abiding life for a substantial period of time before the commission of the offense; fifth, that the respondent's conduct was the result of circumstances unlikely to reoccur; sixth, that the character and the attitude of the respondent indicated that she is unlikely to commit another offense; seventh, that the respondent is particularly likely to respond affirmatively to probationary treatment; and eighth, that imprisonment would entail excessive hardship upon the respondent and her dependents. While the offense is serious, the underlying circumstances substantially mitigate the seriousness of the offense.

Fourth, the respondent's misconduct occurred between July 16, 1983, and May 31, 1984, when it ceased.

Fifth, the respondent was 29 and 30 years old at the time of the first offense. I do not believe immaturity was a factor in this case.

Sixth, the respondent's misconduct was isolated in nature. She has not committed any other violations of the criminal laws.

Seventh, there were numerous social and financial conditions which contributed to this offense. She was under financial pressure and was experiencing emotional strain. As indicated above, the respondent had large medical bills and was behind in her mortgage payments, as well as in her gas and electric bills. Her electricity was turned off on the day she recertified her eligibility in December, she lost her home in March, she was entered into bankruptcy in April, and her family had to be separated in order to find shelter. Numerous outside factors converged on her and impaired her ability to deal with this situation rationally. Her only concern was with providing food and shelter for her family.

Eighth, the respondent has made substantial rehabilitative efforts. While it has only been one and one-half years since the respondent was convicted and placed on probation, it has been four and one-half years since the misconduct terminated. Since coming off welfare, the respondent has been continuously employed in responsible positions. She was a branch service representative in a bank where she processed loan applications and also worked as a teller; she was a cashier at the Claridge and she is now a cash control supervisor at the Sands. She has performed admirably in the casino industry for the last two and one-half years, rising from a cashier to a supervisor in charge of three clerks and twenty-one cashiers. Her performance ratings are excellent. She is active in her local PTA and youth soccer organization and she regularly attends church. While she is still on probation, she has completed her first 50 hours of community service and has made restitution in the amount of $1, 853.00. She now makes regular restitution payments. She has a new home and her family has been reunited. She has admitted her misconduct and expressed sincere remorse. She has proven herself to be trustworthy and honest. She was forthright and candid. She is rehabilitated in her personal life and has grown and matured as a result of this incident.

The Commission has recently addressed the weighing of the rehabilitation factors vis-a-vis the position applied for. In the Application of Brian Stiteler, argued before the Commission at the public meeting of August 5, 1987, Commissioner Armstrong stated:

> I would note that the rehabilitation criteria are identical for registrants and casino employees, but these factors can be weighed differently depending on the nature and duties of the position of the individual who is appearing before us and whether the disqualifying offense was an isolated or repeated incident, and I > think that there are two prior Commission cases[1] in which we have given weight and emphasis to the nature and duty of the petitioner, and that's a significant factor in assessing rehabilitation.

In this case, the respondent is a cash control supervisor. She has no responsibility for any casino gaming activity, but does have some contact with casino patrons. Considering the nature of the position she holds, the respondent's work record in the industry, her demeanor and candor at the hearing, her dire financial situation at the time of the offense, the fact that she wrongfully obtained a grant from a county welfare agency, the isolated nature of her offense, her involvement in the community, her family status, her expressed remorse, her community service, her now-current payments of restitution and her overall efforts over the last four and one half years, when weighed against the eight rehabilitative criteria:

I CONCLUDE that the respondent has established, by clear and convincing evidence, her rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division against the respondent be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

George Dapper, the respondent, pro se

Record Closed: December 8, 1988 Decided: January 3, 1989

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the revocation of the respondent's vendor registration no. 17478, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-104 and N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1). The Division sought revocation of the respondent's vendor registration by reason of its contention that the respondent had committed a disqualifying offense under section

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

86c(1), by means of section 86g. The respondent did not contend that he was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 90h.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent, George Dapper, Inc., had obtained a casino vendor registration from the Commission so it could operate bus charters to Atlantic City casinos. By complaint to the Commission, filed June 21, 1988, the Division objected to the respondent's continued registration, asserting that the respondent, George Dapper, who is the president and one-third owner of George Dapper, Inc., had committed the offense of misconduct by a corporate official, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9c, and mail fraud, in violation of 18 U.S.C.A. §§1341 and 1342, which is analogous to falsifying or tampering with records, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4a, which are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(1), despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by section 86g. Based upon the complaint, the Commission notified the respondents on June 23, 1988, that they had the right to a hearing, and that failure to respond within 15 days could result in the termination of all existing casino hotel agreements with the company and the prohibition from entering into new agreements between casino hotels and the company. By application dated July 6, 1988, which was received by the Commission on July 6, 1988, the respondents requested a hearing. On July 25, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which received it on July 27, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference in the matter was held before Administrative Law Judge Stephen W. Thompson on October 6, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether respondent George Dapper was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9(c), misconduct by a corporated [sic] official (third degree).

B. Whether respondent George Dapper committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: 18 U.S.C. 1341, 1342, mail fraud.

C. Whether George Dapper, individually, has severed any and all connections with George Dapper, Inc. If not, whether George Dapper, Inc. should be disqualified from vendor registration pursuant to Section 86c(1).

A hearing was held on December 8, 1988, at the Office of Administrative Law, 9 Quakerbridge Plaza, Mercerville, New Jersey, after which the record was closed.

STIPULATED FACTS

The parties have prepared a Stipulation of Facts which is attached hereto. The Stipulation of Facts provides:

1. George I. Dapper plead guilty to Federal Information #88-134 on April 11, 1988, in U.S. District Court for mail fraud in violation of title 18 U.S.C. §§ 1341 and 1342.

2. George I. Dapper plead guilty to Accusation #122-4-88 in Middlesex County Superior Court on April 12, 1988 to Misconduct by a Corporate Official, Third Degree, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9c.

3. George I. Dapper is awaiting sentence on January 17, 1989, before U.S. District Court Judge Marianne Trump Barry. The State sentencing date has not yet been set.

4. George I. Dapper during the operative time period contained in the State and Federal Complaints was president and chief operating officer of George Dapper, Inc. George Dapper, Inc. is a New Jersey corporation founded by George I. Dapper's father in 1931. It operated until 1985 as an exclusive school bus contractor. On September 4, 1985, the corporation filed a vendor registration form and commenced doing business with casinos. George I. Dapper was a one-third owner of the corporation along with his two sisters who each owned one-third. Their ownership position came from George Dapper, Sr. who turned over his one-hundred percent ownership of the corporation to his three children in 1975.

5. George I. Dapper was responsible for the entire operation of the corporation during the operative period of time in the State and Federal complaints. He made all decisions effecting [sic] the company and was solely responsible for its conduct. The criminal activity charged to Mr. Dapper consisted of mailing fraudulent vouchers for payment to a local school board and improper conduct as a corporate officer in dealing with a public official transportation coordinator.

6. George Dapper, Inc., was not charged in the three-year long investigation and no other employee past or present has been so charged.

7. George I. Dapper is 43 years of age, married with two children. He graduated from Parsons College, Iowa in 1967. He worked in the corporation with his father until 1975 at which time his father retired and he assumed operating control. The offenses complained of took place over a seven year period of time. Mr. Dapper has cooperated fully with Federal and State prosecutors and has aided said investigations.

8. No allegations in this matter involve Atlantic City casinos and/or Charter Buses to Altantic [sic] City.

9. On May 2, 1988, George I. Dapper resigned as president and chief operating officer of the corporation. On May 4, 1988, the corporation held a reorganization meeting and elected a new board of directors eliminating George I. Dapper. On July 1, 1988, the corporation and Mr. Dapper entered into a stock purchase agreement whereby the corporation purchased all of the shares of stock owned by Mr. Dapper for $800,000.00. On July 1, 1988, the corporation caused to be issued a note in furtherance of the stock redemption agreement providing for a ten-year payment of $9,288.72 per month at 7 percent interest commencing July 1, 1988 to Mr. Dapper. On the same date, Mr. Dapper executed an unqualified stock power tendering all of his right, title and interest to his stock and George Dapper, Inc., back to the corporation, thereby retiring his shares.

10. The State of New Jersey has no evidence to present that George I. Dapper is involved in the corporation at present other than by the connection occasioned by the note and buy out arrangements.

11. The guilty pleas to these criminal offenses disqualify George I. Dapper under section 86 of the Casino Control Act. The rehabilitation factors as contained in the Act and as applies to George I. Dapper at this time make the issue of rehabilitation premature.

12. The following enclosures are provided:

    a. copy of Federal Information number 88-134
    b. copy of Accusation #122-4-88 and attached plea bargain agreement
    c. copy of stock redemption agreement
    d. copy of promissory note
    e. copy of corporate minutes
    f. copy of resolution authorizing execution of note
    g. copy of resignation of George I. Dapper
    h. copy of two stock certificates front and back, issued to George I. Dapper and endorsed to corporation
    i. copy of vendor registration form

As I FIND that the above Stipulation of Facts was entered into freely, knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily, I accept the Stipulation of Facts and FIND all facts contained therein as FACT.

DISPUTED FACTS

George I. Dapper testified that he has cooperated with federal officials since August 1986, prior to his pleading guilty to all charges. He was originally scheduled to be sentenced a year ago; however, his sentencing has been delayed because of his cooperation with the government.

The respondent believes his conduct was disgraceful and that he made a stupid mistake. He is extremely remorseful, accepts full responsibility for his misconduct, believes his misconduct was shameful and he wishes he could erase it.

The respondent has been active in several community groups and charitable ventures. The respondent has donated buses to the Special Olympics and has donated wheelchairs to handicapped children. He volunteers to help emotionally disturbed children. He has been active in both little league and a softball league as an assistant coach.

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the respondent's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident nor his current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess his credibility. Initially, his position in this matter must be recognized. As the respondent who has a now tangential interest in the respondent company, which is the holder of a casino vendor registration, he has an in direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the respondent's demeanor, the plausibility of his testimony, the manner in which he participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appears that the respondent testified truthfully in every regard. He candidly admitted his misconduct and described in detail, experiencing great humiliation, the underlying circumstances. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the respondent's testimony in all respects. As such, I FIND all of the above as FACT.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
>
> . . .
>
> c. The conviction of the applicant, or of any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license, of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be:
>
>
> . . . .
>
> N.J.S. 2C:21-1 et seq. (forgery and fraudulent practices which constitute crimes of the second or third degree);
>
> N.J.S. 2C:21-4a (falsifying or tampering with records);
>
> . . . .

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90, Licensing of casino employees, provides in pertinent part:

> h. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection e. of this section, no applicant shall be denied a casino employee license on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria or the commission of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of section 86 of P.L. 1977, c. 110

(C. 5:12-86), as specified in subsection g. of that section; provided that the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8) establishes that registration under the Casino Control Act is a revocable privilege which is "conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual ... registrant." N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1) provides for the revocation of the license or registration held by a person "for the commission of any other offense or violation of this act which would disqualify such person from holding his ... registration." The Division contends, by means of section 86g, that the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9c, misconduct by a corporate official (third degree), and a violation of 18 U.S.C.A. §§1341 and 1342, mail fraud, which is analogous to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4a, falsifying or tampering with records, which constitute violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), and that, accordingly, he is disqualified from continued registration.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g

Section 86g provides that an applicant will be disqualified from licensure or registration because of the commission of any action which would constitute an offense under section 86c, even if there has not been a prosecution for such conduct. Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be one of certain enumerated offenses contained in Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the respondent's acts of mailing fraudulent vouchers for payment to a local school board and obtaining bus parts and supplies belonging to the school board constitute violations of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9c, 18 U.S.C.A. SS 1341 and 1342, which, under the circumstances, disqualifies the respondent from continued registration.

N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9, Misconduct by corporate official, provides in pertinent part:

A person is guilty of a crime when:

> c. He purposely or knowingly uses, controls or operates a corporation for the furtherance or promotion of any criminal object.
> If the benefit derived from a violation of this section is $75,000.00, or more, the offender is guilty of a crime of the second degree. If the benefit derived exceeds $1,000.00, but is less than $75,000.00, the offender is guilty of a crime of the third degree. If the benefit derived is $1,000.00, or less, the offender is guilty of a crime of the fourth degree.

Between March 31, 1976 and June 30, 1984, George Dapper part owner of George Dapper, Inc., acting with the purpose to promote and facilitate the crime of misconduct by a corporate official and to obtain benefits for George Dapper, Inc., and himself, purposely or knowingly used, controlled and/or operated a corporation (George Dapper, Inc.) for the furtherance or promotion of a criminal object. The criminal object was that George Dapper engaged in a continuing course of conduct with James Dickinson, transportation coordinator of the Woodbridge Township Board of Education, whereby they agreed to commit theft of tires, bus parts and other merchandise from the Township of Woodbridge Board of Education.

This scheme consisted of two patterns of activity. The first was to unlawfully and directly remove tires and bus parts, for the use of George Dapper, Inc., from the inventory of those items maintained by the Township of Woodbridge Board of Education, over which James Dickinson maintained control. In return for Dickinson's complicity in this course of conduct George Dapper would direct George Dapper, Inc., to pay various monies to James Dickinson.

The second pattern of activity was for George Dapper to order bus parts and other merchandise from one of the Township of Woodbridge Board of Education suppliers, which items would then be delivered to George Dapper, Inc. The invoices, however, would be submitted by the supplier to the Township of Woodbridge Board of Education. As transportation coordinator for that entity, James Dickinson would receive and approve those false invoices. Again, in return for his complicity in the scheme, George Dapper would direct George Dapper, Inc., to pay various monies to James Dickinson.

As a result of this continuing course of conduct, various items belonging to the Township of Woodbridge Board of Education were unlawfully taken by George Dapper and George Dapper, Inc., with a benefit to George Dapper and George Dapper, Inc., in excess of $1,000.00, but less than $75,000.00.

The respondent, George Dapper, has been indicted for this misconduct and he has pleaded guilty to the indictment. Mr. Dapper is presently awaiting sentencing on this indictment.

The Division established and the respondent admitted that he knowingly operated the corporation in a manner to wrongfully obtain bus parts and supplies belonging to the Woodbridge Township Board of Education. Accordingly I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9c. I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9, the offense constitutes a crime of the third degree.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the respondent, George Dapper, is a disqualifying offense under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). The respondent, George Dapper, is therefore disqualified from continued vendor registration, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

18 U.S.C.A. §1341, Frauds and swindles, provides:

> Whoever, having devised or intending to devise any scheme or artifice to defraud, or for obtaining money or property by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, . . . or procure for unlawful use any . . . obligation, security, or other article, or anything represented to be or intimated or held out to be such counterfeit or spurious article, for the purpose of executing such scheme or artifice or attempting so to do, places in any post office or authorized depository for mail matter, any matter or thing whatever to be sent or delivered by the Postal Service, or takes or receives therefrom, any such matter or thing, or knowingly causes to be delivered by mail according to the direction thereon, or at the place at which it is directed to be delivered by the person to whom it is addressed, any such matter or thing, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

18 U.S.C.A. §1342, Fictitious name or address, provides:

> Whoever, for the purpose of conducting, promoting, or carrying on by means of the Postal Service, any scheme or device mentioned in section 1341 of this title or any other unlawful business, uses or assumes, or requests to be addressed by, any fictitious, false, or assumed title, name, or address or name other than his own proper name, or takes or receives from any post office or authorized depository of mail matter, any letter, postal card, package, or other mail matter addressed to any such fictitious, false, or assumed title, name, or address, or name other than his own proper name, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4, Falsifying or tampering with records, provides in pertinent part:

> a. Except as provided in subsection b. of this section, a person commits a crime of the fourth degree if he falsifies, destroys, removes, conceals any writing or record, or utters any writing or record knowing that it contains a false statement or information, with purpose to deceive or injure anyone or to conceal any wrongdoing.

From at least as early as 1980 up to at least December 1984, the respondent, George Dapper, together with James Dickinson, knowingly and willfully devised a scheme and artifice to defraud the Woodbridge Township Board of Education of public funds.

It was a part of that scheme and artifice that George Dapper, with the knowledge and assistance of James Dickinson, would submit to the Board of Education invoices for payment for school bus transportation services that either were never rendered or were inflated. The total value of these invoices was at least $85,000. It was a further part of the scheme and artifice that James Dickinson would use his public position to insure that the Board of Education would pay the invoices to George Dapper, Inc. George Dapper would pay part of the money generated from the false or overstated invoices to James Dickinson for his personal use.

It was a further part of the scheme and artifice to defraud that George Dapper knowingly and willfully, for the purpose of executing the scheme and artifice, did cause to be delivered by mail according to the direction thereon certain mail matter: to wit, invoices mailed to the Board of Education and checks mailed from the Board of Education to respondent George Dapper.

In U.S. v. Smothers, 435 F. 2d 209, (7th Cir. 1970) cert. den. 91 S. Ct. 2208 (1971); the court held that mailings from the National Bank in Illinois to a Missouri bank including memorandum copies of bills of lading containing false representations were incident to scheme to defraud so as to support the defendant's conviction for mail fraud. In addition, in Bronzin v. U.S., 309 F. 2d 158 (8th Cir. 1962), the court held that a scheme which contemplates the sending of bills through the mails to persons not indebted to the sender and for the purpose of inducing them to part with money they do not owe is a fraudulent scheme within section 1341.

The Division established, and the respondent admitted during his testimony, that he knowingly mailed fraudulent vouchers for payment to the Woodbridge Township Board of Education. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent's conduct constitutes violations of 18 U.S.C.A. §§1341 and 1342. I further conclude that the offenses committed by the respondent in violation of 18 U.S.C.A. §§1341 and 1342 are analogous to offenses committed in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4a. I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4, the offense constitutes a crime of the fourth degree.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the respondent is a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1). The respondent is therefore disqualified from vendor registration pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

A licensee or registrant faced with the existence of one or more section 86c disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. These sections set forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

1. The nature and duties of the position applied for;

2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

4. The date of the offense or conduct;

5. The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

Section 90 applies to casino employees and section 91 applies to casino hotel employees. There is no statutory provision for rehabilitation applicable to a casino vendor. Similarly, there is no statutory provision for rehabilitation applicable to casino service industries. The Commission, however, has recently applied the rehabilitation criteria to a disqualification case under section 86c(2) involving a casino service industry. See In the Matter of the Application of Horizon Air, Inc., for a Casino Service Industry License, dated September 1, 1988 (Agency Dkt. No. 87-CSI-10), OAL DKT. NO. CCC 2214-87. The Commission held "that the section 90h criteria are relevant in any case involving a licensee under the Act where section 86c(2) disqualification is at issue. Where the credential involved is not a license but a registration..., the nearly identical provisions of section 91d will be utilized." The Commission noted that in the initial decision, "the ALJ essentially applied the 'inimical' analysis set forth in Resorts". The Commission then stated, "[a]lthough he did not specifically delineate an analysis of the rehabilitation criteria, a review of the eight enumerated criteria of section 90(h) in the context of this case demonstrates that his conclusion was correct." Id. at 10. Implicit in this statement and in the Commission's subsequent detailed examination of each of the eight enumerated criteria is the desirability of such a specific delineation by an ALJ in any case where section 86c(2) disqualification is at issue. While I find no Commission decision on this point, I infer from the Horizon Air case that if the rehabilitation criteria are to be referenced in determining a section 86c disqualifier based upon the misconduct of an owner of a casino service industry, these criteria should also be referenced in determining a section 86c disqualifier based upon the misconduct of the owner or of a principal of a casino vendor.

In regard to the first criterion, George Dapper, Inc., is a casino vendor operating a bus service. As such, it does not have direct responsibility for actual gaming activities but does come in contact with casino patrons.

Second, the respondent, George Dapper, committed misconduct by a corporate official, a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-9c, and mail fraud, a violation of 18 U.S.C.A. §§1341 and 1342, which is analogous to falsifying or tampering with records, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4a, over an eight-year period while employed in the casino industry. Because the offenses are listed disqualifiers under section 86c(1), they are very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the offense must be viewed in its appropriate context. George Dapper, along with the transportation coordinator for a local school district, wrongfully obtained property of the school district for George Dapper, Inc.'s use, and ordered parts from various suppliers for George Dapper, Inc.'s use while he wrongfully billed the school district for the parts. Reduced to its lowest terms, this is purely theft of public funds. As such, it is extremely serious.

Fourth, the respondent's misconduct was a continuing course of conduct occurring over an eight-year period. It ceased in 1984.

Fifth, the respondent was 31 years old at the time the misconduct started and was 39 years old when it ended. I do not believe immaturity was a factor in this case.

Sixth, the respondent's misconduct was isolated in nature. He has not committed any other violations of the criminal laws.

Seventh, there were no social conditions which may have contributed to the offense.

Eighth, the respondent has made some rehabilitative efforts. He cooperated fully with both federal and state law enforcement agencies. He has accepted full responsibility for his misconduct and is extremely remorseful. He has severed all contacts with the corporation. He has been active in several community groups and charitable ventures. He has donated buses to the Special Olympics and has donated wheelchairs to handicapped children. He volunteers to help emotionally disturbed children, and has been active in both little league and a softball league as an assistant coach. The respondent has yet to be sentenced for his misconduct and he stipulated in the Stipulation of Facts that the issue of rehabilitation is premature at this time. Therefore, after considering the respondent's entire character with specific reference to the above eight criteria, I CONCLUDE that the respondent, George Dapper has not established by clear and convincing evidence, his rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h or N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-104b

Section 104b of the Act provides that the Commission may review written or unwritten agreements concerning the realty of, or any business or person doing business with or on the premises of a casino licensee. Section 104b goes on to state:

> Any such agreement may be reviewed by the commission on the basis of the reasonableness of its terms, including the terms of compensation, and of the qualifications of the owners, officers, and directors of any enterprise involved in the agreement, which qualifications shall be reviewed according to the standards enumerated in section 86 of this act. If the commission disapproves such an agreement or the owners, officers, or directors of any enterprise involved therein, the commission may require its termination.

The Commission has promulgated N.J.A.C. 19:41-11.2 to implement this statutory directive. In accordance with Commission regulation N.J.A.C. 19:41-11.2(a), the Commission shall review casino licensee agreements as set forth in Section 104b of the Act and thereafter make a finding as to the suitability of the business or persons to be involved or associated with the casino enterprises. Commission regulation N.J.A.C. 19:41-11.2 then provides in subsection (c) that if the Commission disapproves of an agreement with a casino licensee, the Commission may by directive require the termination of that agreement or association or pursue another remedy or combination of remedies as provided for in the Act or the regulations.

In this case, the Division alleges that George Dapper, Inc., should have its vendor registration revoked because George Dapper is disqualified from registration because he has committed disqualifying offenses under section 86 of the Act. It is well-settled that the character and responsibilty of a corporate entity can be judged only by the character and responsibility of its owners or managers — those who give it direction. Trap Rock Industries, Inc. v. Kohl, 59 N.J. 471, 482 (1971), cert. den. 405 U.S. 1065 (1972). Thus, it is proper to evaluate George Dapper, Inc.'s qualifications for vendor registration based upon the character and responsibility of its owners, officers, directors and principal employees.

Prior to May 2, 1988, George Dapper was the president and chief operating officer of George Dapper, Inc. On May 2, 1988, George I. Dapper resigned as president and chief operating officer of the corporation. On May 4, 1988, the corporation held a reorganization meeting and elected a new board of directors eliminating George I. Dapper. On July 1, 1988, the corporation and Mr. Dapper entered into a stock purchase agreement whereby the corporation purchased all the shares of stock owned by Mr. Dapper for $800,000.00. On July 1, 1988, the corporation caused to be issued a note in furtherance of the stock redemption agreement providing for a ten-year payment of $9,288.72 per month at seven percent interest commencing July 1, 1988 to Mr. Dapper. On the same date, Mr. Dapper executed an unqualified stock power tendering all of his right, title and interest to his stock and George Dapper, Inc., back to the corporation, thereby retiring his shares. The Division has no evidence to present that George I. Dapper is involved in the corporation at present other than by the connection occasioned by the note and buy out arrangements.

In the third Trap Rock case, Trap Rock Industries, Inc. v. Sagner, 133 N.J. Super. 99 (App. Div. 1975), aff'd 69 N.J. 599 (1976), the Commissioner of Transportation sought to disqualify Trap Rock Industries from a bidding list based upon a federal indictment filed against the corporation. In that case, the court found that:

> It is clear from the record developed at the hearing below that the present owners and principals of Trap Rock were not personally involved in the activities which were the basis for the federal indictment against the corporation in May 1973. . . .None of these individuals was an officer of Trap Rock in 1969, the time of the events leading to the federal indictment. Id. at 106.

Based upon this finding, the court reversed the Commissioner's determination that the corporation lacked moral integrity. The court reasoned that:

> ...where, as here, corporate derelictions can be isolated and fixed to particular persons, the corporation's lack of moral responsibility in that situation should be synonymous with the moral defects of the responsible individuals. If, as a consequence, the corporation has purged itself of the offending individuals and they are no longer in a position to dominate, manage or meaningfully influence the business and operations of the corporation, the responsibility of the corporation should then be assayed, not upon the moral infirmities of the removed malefactors, but upon the integrity of the persons who remain in ownership and control of it. Id. at 108.

In the instant case, George Dapper has sufficiently removed himself from the corporation. He is no longer in a position to dominate or influence the corporation's business activities. The alleged reasons for the corporation's disqualification can be isolated and fixed to one person. Neither the present owners and principals of George Dapper, Inc., nor any of its present employees were personally involved in the activities which were the basis for the state and federal indictments. The only connection between George Dapper and George Dapper, Inc. is the stock redemption agreement and the buy out arrangements. This is similar to the facts in Trap Rock. There the prior owner was given a promissory note as part of the buy out agreement. In case of a default, the former owner indicated he would sue on the promissory note and not try to recover his stock. The court concluded that in that case, the prior Commissioner's finding that the former owner was sufficiently removed from the corporation was substantiated by the evidence. The court further noted that the Commissioner had adequate power to take prompt remedial action in the event the prior owner attempted to reacquire ownership or control of the corporation. Similarly in this case Mr. Dapper has given up total control of and all ownership interest in the corporation. His former stock has been retired. The only possible connection with the corporation is that in case of default he may sue the corporation on the note. He does not intend to retake control of the corporation; however, if he does attempt to reacquire ownership or control of the corporation, the Commission may immediately disqualify the corporation from dealing with Atlantic City casinos.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that George Dapper has severed any and all connections with George Dapper, Inc., and that accordingly George Dapper, Inc., is not disqualified from vendor registration pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-104b.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division against the respondent, George Dapper, is SUSTAINED and that he is disqualified from entering into any agreement with any casino located in Atlantic City. It is further ORDERED that any company which should hereafter employ George Dapper is hereby disqualified from entering into any agreement with any casino located in Atlantic City and any existing agreements between any such company and any casino located in Atlantic City will be immediately terminated unless, by further order of the Commission, George Dapper is deemed to be rehabilitated and the disqualification is lifted.

It is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division against the respondent, George Dapper, Inc., be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter concerns the application of Blanca L. DeCastro for licensure as a casino employee, permitting her to work in a casino as a blackjack dealer. By letter to the Casino Control Commission dated May 26, 1987, the Division of Gaming Enforcement objected to this application. This matter also concerns the amended complaint of the Division of Gaming Enforcement filed with the Commission on June 2, 1987, seeking revocation of Ms. DeCastro's casino hotel employee registration, based upon her plea of guilty on September 5, 1985, to knowingly and willfully representing a false social security number with intent to deceive, in violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2), comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4(a), falsifying or tampering with records. These are the issues to be resolved:

1. Should Ms. DeCastro's casino hotel employee registration be revoked and her application for a casino employee license be denied as a result of her 1985 conviction upon a plea of guilty to the offense of knowingly and willfully representing a false social security number with intent to receive, in violaton of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2), an offense comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4(a), falsifying or tampering with a public record, which is a statutory disqualifier under Section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.).

2. Does Ms. DeCastro possess the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino employee, pursuant to Section 89b(2) and 90b of the Act.

3. Has Ms. DeCastro, if convicted of an otherwise disqualifying offense, affirmatively established her rehabilitation, pursuant to Sections 90h and 91d of the Act.

4. Is Ms. DeCastro disqualified from licensure as a casino employee pursuant to Section 86b of the Casino Control Act by reason of her providing false and misleading information upon her Personal History Disclosure Form.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

By letter dated June 30, 1987, Ms. DeCastro requested a hearing on all issues. On July 16, 1987, the Casino Control Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on September 18, 1987, and the hearing was held on November 16, 1987. The record closed on that date.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The material facts are undisputed. Blanca L. DeCastro is 30 years old and she is the mother of two children. She married Anibal Leon DeCastro on October 14, 1983. Her birth name was Blanca Luz Rogeles, and her surname by a previous marriage was Garcia.

Ms. DeCastro entered the United States illegally from Colombia, South America in 1982. She testified that she stayed with a friend in North Bergen, New Jersey for about two weeks before coming to live in Atlantic City. Her friend advised her that she would need a social security number in order to obtain employment. Ms. DeCastro paid her friend $100 for a social security card showing the name Gloria Martinez and the number 201-46-8196. It is undisputed that Ms. DeCastro used this false name and social security to obtain employment. She first worked at the Deauville Hotel as a housekeeper for about six months in 1982.

On December 28, 1982, Ms. DeCastro filed a Personal History Disclosure Form No. 4 with the Casino Control Commission using the name Gloria Martinez and the false social security number 201-46-8196. Ms. DeCastro testified candidly that she knew she was not using a valid social security number when she filed the Personal History Disclosure Form (Exhibit R-6) for her casino hotel employee registration. She was issued registration no. 45104-40 by the Casino Control Commission and she began employment as a kitchen utility worker at the Golden Nugget Casino Hotel on December 30, 1982.

Working as Gloria Martinez, Ms. DeCastro was considered to be an excellent employee by her supervisors at the Golden Nugget. In June 1984, she was transferred to the employee cafeteria at the Golden Nugget and she received a commendation for her performance (Exhibit P-1). Ms. DeCastro continued to work at the Golden Nugget until 1986. At that time, she found it necessary to return to Colombia when her mother was ill. Her employment at the Golden Nugget ended when her request for leave was denied. On June 8, 1987, the petitioner was hired in a kitchen utility position by the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. According to Timothy Leahy, Assistant Executive Steward, the petitioner has an excellent employment status with the Tropicana (Exhibit P-4). On April 9, 1985, while the petitioner was still employed by the Golden Nugget, a criminal complaint and warrant for arrest were against her in the United States District Court when a special agent with the Office of Inspector General of the United States Department of Health and Human Services charged the petitioner with violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2), falsely representing a social security account number to be her own (Exhibits R-1 and R-2). On May 9, 1985, the petitioner was charged in an indictment in the United States District Court with five counts in violation of the aformentioned provision of the United States Code (Exhibit R-3). The indictment alleged that the petitioner had knowingly and willfully and with intent to deceive falsely represented to Local 54 of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union, the New Jersey Division of Gaming Enforcement, the Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino, and the Internal Revenue Service that no. 201-46-8196 was the social security account number assigned to her by the Secretary of Health and Human Services, when she well knew that this was not the number assigned to her.

On September 4, 1985, the petitioner appeared with counsel in the United States District Court and entered a plea of guilty to the charge of falsely representing a social security number to be her own, on one count of the indictment (Exhibits R-4 and R-5). The petitioner was sentenced to imprisonment for a period of eight months, which sentence was suspended and she was placed on probation for a period of one year. The petitioner was also ordered to pay a fine of $3,000 at the direction of the probation department. Finally, counts 1, 2, 4 and 5 of the indictment were dismissed (Exhibit R-5).

It was the testimony of Ms. DeCastro that she was able to continue working at the Golden Nugget even after she had been arrested. She satisfactorily completed the conditions of her probationary sentence and she has paid her fine in full. It was the credible testimony of Ms. DeCastro that she has had no other arrests either before or after this incident.

In July 1986, the petitioner received her card as a legal United States resident. She subsequently applied for an obtained her own valid social security number, 141-80-4321, which appears on her Personal History Disclosure Form which she prepared pursuant to her application for a casino employee license in September 1986 (Exhibit R-9). Ms. DeCastro's husband, Anibal DeCastro, is not a United States citizen, but he is also a legal resident of the United States.

Ms. DeCastro candidly acknowledged that she had utilized the false social security number for about four years. She has subsequently given all interested parties her valid social security number. She attended and successfully completed blackjack dealer school at night, and because her spouse's schedule permitted it, she has split her child care responsibilities with him. Ms. DeCastro presently has a reputation as being a dependable person, who is honest and of excellent character (Exhibit P-3).

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to Section 80a of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.), it is the affirmative responsibility of each applicant and licensee to establish by clear and convincing evidence her individual qualifications for licensure. Pursuant to Sections 89b(2) and 90b of the Act, an applicant for a casino employee license must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence, her reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. Section 90 also incorporates the disqualification criteria set forth in Section 86 of the Act. Pursuant to Section 86c, the Casino Control Commission shall deny licensure to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of a conviction of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be under New Jersey law at the time of application a violation of certain enumerated statutes.

Pursuant to Section 1b(8) of the Casino Control Act, participation in casino operations as a registrant under the Act is deemed to be a revocable privilege conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual registrant. It is the intention of the Casino Control Act to preclude the creation of any property right in any license permitted under the Act, and to require that participation in gaming be solely conditioned upon the individual qualification of the person seeking such privilege. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8). Sections 91b and 129 of the Act authorize the revocation of the registration of any registrant who is disqualified on the basis of her conviction of any offense which is specifically listed under 86c of the Act.

On September 4, 1985, the petitioner was convicted upon her plea of guilty in the United States District Court of falsely representing a social security number to be her own, in violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2). This offense is comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4a, falsifying or tampering with records, which is an offense specifically enumerated as a disqualifier under Section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner is subject to denial of her application for a casino employee license and revocation of her casino hotel employee registration on the basis of her conviction of a disqualifying offense.

The Casino Control Commission has determined that, upon a finding that a registrant has committed an automatic disqualifying offense, pursuant to Section 86c, the appropriate sanction is revocation of the credential, in the absence of demonstration of rehabilitation, pursuant to Section 91d of the Act, or waiver, pursuant to Section 91e of the Act. See, State v. Wynette Harris, Dkt. No. 81-18, Commission Decision, June 29, 1983. Pursuant to Section 91d of the Act, the respondent's casino hotel employee registration should not be revoked on the basis of her conviction of an offense enumerated in the Act as disqualification criteria, provided that she has affirmatively demonstrated her rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. Similarly, the petitioner shall not be denied a casino employee license on the basis of the otherwise disqualifying conviction, provided that she affirmatively demonstrated her rehabilitation, pursuant to Section 90h of the Act.

In determining whether rehabilitation has been affirmatively demonstrated, the following factors under N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d (the language of Section 90h is almost identical) shall be considered:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense occurred;

(4) The date of the offense;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense was committed;

(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional or work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

The petitioner is now 30 years old. Her unlawful conduct began in 1982 when she illegally entered the United States and intentionally utilized a false social security number for purposes of obtaining employment and a casino hotel employee registration. She continued to use the false social security number for approximately four years.

The petitioner has satisfied the terms of her probationary sentence, including payment of a substantial fine. Both before and after her involvement with the United States Criminal Justice System, the petitioner was able to maintain her employment. In fact, she is considered to be an outstanding employee in the legalized gaming industry in Atlantic City.

The petitioner has married and is contributing to the support of her two children. She satisfactorily completed a course in blackjack dealing and she wishes to obtain a casino employee license to further her career. Other than the aforementioned conviction, the petitioner has no record of criminal arrests and convictions. Finally, she is now a lawful resident of the United States and she obtained a valid social security number.

Based upon the foregoing discussion and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner, who has been convicted of a disqualifying offense under Section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act, has established her rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence, within the meaning of Sections 90h and 91d of the Act. I also CONCLUDE on the basis of the undisputed facts in this matter that the petitioner has sustained her burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that she presently possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino employee, within the meaning of Sections 89b(2) and 90b of the Casino Control Act.

Notwithstanding these conclusions, the Casino Control Commission shall also deny a casino employee license application and may revoke a casino hotel employee registration on the basis of the applicant or registrant having supplied information which is untrue or misleading as to a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria, pursuant to Section 86b of the Casino Control Act. An applicant or registrant so disqualified on the basis of having provided false or misleading information is not entitled to overcome the disqualification by demonstrating her rehabilitation, within the meaning of Sections 90h and 91d. In this matter, it is undisputed that the petitioner intentionally provided a false social security number on her Personal History Disclosure Form in 1982 in order to obtain a casino hotel employee registration. This false information was provided to the Golden Nugget Casino Hotel in order to obtain employment. Consequently, I must CONCLUDE that the petitioner be disqualified from licensure as a casino employee and subject to revocation of her casino hotel employee registration as a result of her having supplied material information which is untrue or misleading, within the meaning of Section 86b of the Casino Control Act.

Section 91e of the Act permitted the waiver of any disqualification criterion for a casino hotel employee consistent with the public policy of the Casino Control Act and upon a finding that the interest of justice is so required. At Section 1b(6) of the Act, the legislature declared the public policy to be in part that "an integral and essential element of the regulation and control of such casino facilities by the State rests in the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations." Based upon the discussion of rehabilitation factors above, it is apparent that the public's confidence in the integrity of the legalized gaming industry would not justifiably be undermined by the continued registration of the petitioner. Based upon the undisputed facts in this matter, I CONCLUDE that the interest of justice require the waiver of the criterion which would otherwise disqualify the petitioner from continuing to hold her casino hotel employee registration.

There is no comparable waiver of disqualification criterion available to the petitioner in regard to her application for a casino employee license. Although she has overcome her disqualification as a result of her conviction of an enumerated offense, by establishing her rehabilitation, the petitioner is unable to overcome her disqualification for licensure as a casino employee which results from her having intentionally supplied material information which was false or misleading. Thus, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner's application for a casino employee license must be DENIED. However, although the question is not before me, it is my recommendation to the Casino Control Commission that the five year bar against reapplication which ordinarily follows a disqualification under the criteria of Section 86 of the Act, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8(a), be relaxed, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8(g) and N.J.A.C. 19:40-1.3(d). In this way, the petitioner could be permitted an early or immediate reapplication for a casino employee license, following her disqualification.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the amended complaint filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement against Blanca L. DeCastro be DISMISSED, and that the petitioner be permitted to retain her casino hotel employee registration. It is further ORDERED that the application of Blanca L. DeCastro for a casino employee license permitting her to work in a licensed casino as a blackjack dealer be DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: October 20, 1988 Decided: October 31, 1988

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Charlie DeJesus, applied to the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the issuance of a casino employee license (public area attendant-carpenter), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90. The respondent, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), opposed the issuance of the license by reason of its contention that the petitioner had committed a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), and therefore, he lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference. The petitioner contended that he was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 90h.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner filed with the Commission an application for the issuance of a casino employee license so he could be employed as a public area attendant-carpenter at Trump's Castle Hotel and Casino. By letter to the Commission, dated March 11, 1988, the Division objected to the petitioner's application for licensure as a public area attendant, asserting that the petitioner had been convicted in Pennsylvania of aggravated assault which is analogous to N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b(2), which is a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1). The Division also objected pursuant to section 89b(2). Based upon the report, the Commission notified the petitioner on April 11, 1988, that there was a "substantial possibility" that his application would be denied and that he had the right to a hearing. By application dated April 18, 1988, which was received by the Commission on April 21, 1988, the petitioner requested a hearing. On April 22, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which was received on April 27, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held in the matter before me on June 20, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether petitioner was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b(2), aggravated assault (third degree).

B. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b.

C. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was held on October 20, 1988, at the Municipal Courtroom, Absecon Municipal Building, Absecon, New Jersey, after which the record closed.

THE FACTS

In 1980, at the age of 14, the petitioner, Charlie DeJesus, began dating Sylvia Rivera. The two had a child. In November of 1983, Jose Santiago began dating Sylvia Rivera and at that time, Mr. Santiago had a fight with the petitioner. The two had another fight in March of 1984 (R-2).

At approximately 8:30 p.m. on July 12, 1984, Mr. Santiago began drinking with a group of about ten Hispanic males in front of a house in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. The group was drinking wine, Southern Comfort, and beer (R-1). Mr. Santiago admitted drinking a quart of Stroh's beer (R-2). At approximately 10:30 p.m., the petitioner drove up intending to go see his son. Mr. Santiago approached the petitioner who remained in his car. The two began to argue and Mr. Santiago threatened the petitioner with a gun. Mr. Santiago threatened to kill the petitioner because of their previous altercations. The petitioner would not get out of the car and he drove away (R-1).

Sometime later the petitioner returned with his cousin. They exited the vehicle and found Mr. Santiago. The petitioner's cousin hit Mr. Santiago on the head with a baseball bat, and the petitioner hit Mr. Santiago on the arms with a 14-inch machete. Mr. Santiago sustained two small lacerations on his left forearm and one small laceration on the right forearm (R-2). The petitioner and his cousin then fled the area (R-1).

Later, the petitioner telephoned the hospital to inquire about Mr. Santiago's condition, and he then turned himself in to the police. Mr. DeJesus was charged with aggravated assault. On November 20, 1984, the petitioner pleaded guilty to the charge in District Court, and he was sentenced to a term of not less than 11 and one-half months nor more than 23 months in the Lancaster County Prison, Pennsylvania (R-3).

The petitioner was born on May 7, 1966, and is currently 22 years old. While in prison he completed his G.E.D. He also earned the privilege of leaving the prison and enrolling in a vocational training program. He completed a 24-week, full-time training course in construction and maintenance skills (P-7). After completing this program, he was allowed to enter a work-release program (P-7). After being released from prison, the petitioner continued to work at Consolidated Construction Company, where he had been employed in the work-release program.

On April 19, 1986, the petitioner married. He and his wife now have three children together with two children from his wife's previous marriage. In August of 1986, the petitioner quit his job and moved his family to New Jersey in order to look for a better job and to get a fresh start. In October 1986, he became employed at the Claridge Casino Hotel as a public area attendant-heavy porter. He applied for and received a casino hotel employee registration from the Commission, no. 70632-40. In May 1987, the petitioner resigned his position and became employed at Trump's Castle Hotel and Casino as a carpenter. He changed jobs so he could be employed in his trade.

The petitioner has been a loyal, hardworking employee at Trump's Castle. His hard work and dedication were recognized by his selection as employee of the month for May 1988. He was the first union carpenter to ever be selected as employee of the month at Trump's Castle.

The petitioner submitted eight letters of recommendation and other documentary evidence. Patrick DeRogatis, director of facilities at Trump's Castle Hotel and Casino, in a letter dated June 17, 1988, wrote:

> Charles is a dependable, hard working employee. He has a good rapport with fellow employees. He was selected as employee of the month, for May 1988. As he has been working for this department since May of 1987, I know of no reason, at this time, why his status should change. [P-1]

James J. Mahoney, business representative of Carpenters Local 623, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, in a letter dated April 14, 1988, wrote:

> Charles DeJesus, has been a member in good standing with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, Local 623, and had demonstrated, time and again, the kind of positive attitude we look for in a member. He is a consciencious [sic], dependable person who takes pride in all that he does. I would not hesitate to send Charlie on any job, knowing he will give 110% of his time. [P-2]

John K. Kleimo, director of education and safety, Merit Shop Training and Research Center, Inc., summarized the petitioner's educational curriculum and his employment record, then wrote:

> Your performance and attendance while a trainee were exemplary, as were the reports from your instructor and supervisors during > internship and afterward. Based on our records and my personal knowledge of you, I can recommend you as an employee to any employer. [P-7]

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the petitioner's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident or his current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess his credibility. Initially, his position in this matter must be recognized. As the petitioner and the applicant for a casino employee license, he has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the petitioner's demeanor, the plausibility of his testimony, the manner in which he participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appeared that the petitioner testified truthfully in every regard. He was extremely forthright and honest. He candidly admitted his misconduct and described in detail, experiencing great humiliation, the underlying circumstances. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the petitioner's testimony in all respects.

I am persuaded that his misconduct was, in part, due to immaturity. The petitioner was 18 years old at the time of the offense. He thought and acted like an adolescent. He has since grown up and now considers himself to be a man. He learned a great deal in prison and he has learned from his mistakes. He is remorseful and accepts full responsibility for his conduct. He now has a family and is a responsible, working member of his community.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The petitioner assaulted Jose Santiago with a machete on July 12, 1984, in Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

2. The petitioner was convicted of aggravated assault in the District Court of Lancaster County Pennsylvania on November 20, 1984, and he was sentenced to serve a term of not less than 11 and one-half months nor more than 23 months in the Lancaster County Prison.

3. While in prison, the petitioner earned his G.E.D., earned the privilege of enrolling in a vocational training program which he successfully completed, and he earned the privilege of being placed in a work-release program. The petitioner was released from prison at his first eligibility.

4. The petitioner was born on May 7, 1966, and is currently 22 years old.

5. The petitioner is married and has three children and two stepchildren.

6. The petitioner resides in Brigantine, New Jersey.

7. The petitioner is a dedicated, hardworking employee at Trump's Castle Hotel and Casino, where he was the employee of the month for May 1988.

8. The petitioner is active in the Cub Scouts and is becoming active in local children's football and baseball leagues.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;
>
> ....

N.J.S. 2C:12-1b (aggravated assault which constitutes a crime of the second or third degree);

. . . .

N.J.S.A. 5:12-89, Licensing of casino key employees, provides in pertinent part:

b. Each applicant must, prior to the issuance of any casino key employee license, produce information, documentation and assurances concerning the following qualification criteria:

. . . .

(2) Each applicant for a casino key employee license shall produce such information, documentation and assurances as may be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence the applicant's good character, honesty and integrity. Such information shall include, without limitation, data pertaining to family, habits, character, reputation, criminal and arrest record, business activities, financial affairs, and business, professional and personal associates, covering at least the 10-year period immediately preceding the filing of the application. Each applicant shall notify the commission of any civil judgments obtained against such applicant pertaining to antitrust or security regulation laws of the federal government, of this State or of any other state, jurisdiction, province or country. In addition, each applicant shall, upon request of the commission or the division, produce letters of reference from law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction in the applicant's place of residence and principal place of business, which letters of reference shall indicate that such law enforcement agencies do not have any pertinent information concerning the applicant, or if such law enforcement agency does have information pertaining to the applicant, shall specify what that information is. If the applicant has been associated with gaming or casino operations in any capacity, position or employment in a jurisdiction which permits such activity, the applicant shall, upon request of the commission or division, produce letters of reference from the gaming or casino enforcement or control agency, which shall specify the experience of such agency with the applicant, his associates and his participation in the gaming operations of that jurisdiction; provided, however, that if no such letters are received from the appropriate law enforcement agencies within 60 days of the applicant's request therefor, the applicant may submit a statement under oath that he is or was during the period such activities were conducted in good standing with such gaming or casino enforcement or control agency.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90, Licensing of Casino Employees, provides in pertinent part:

a. No person may commence employment as a casino employee unless he is the holder of a valid casino employee license.

b. Any applicant for a casino employee license must, prior to the issuance of any such license, produce sufficient information, documentation and assurances to meet the qualification criteria, including New Jersey residency, contained in subsection b. of section 89 of this act and any additional residency requirement imposed under subsection c. of this section; except that the standards for business ability and casino experience may be satisfied by a showing of casino job experience and knowledge of the provisions of this act and regulations pertaining to the particular position involved, or by successful completion of a course of study at a licensed school in an approved curriculum.

e. The commission shall deny a casino employee license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of this act.

. . . .

h. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection e. of this section, no applicant shall be denied a casino employee license on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria or the commission of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of section 86 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86), as specified in subsection g. of that section; provided that the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION

The Division contends that the petitioner was convicted in Pennsylvania of aggravated assault which is analogous to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b(2), Aggravated Assault - third degree, which constitutes a violation of section 86c(1), and that, accordingly, he is disqualified from continued licensure.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be one of certain enumerated offenses contained in Title 2C of the New Jersey statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the petitioner's conviction for aggravated assault in Pennsylvania for hitting Jose Santiago with a machete, which would be a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b(2) if the offense had been committed in New Jersey, disqualifies the petitioner from licensure.

N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b, aggravated assault, provides in pertinent part:

b. Aggravated assault. A person is guilty of aggravated assault if he:

....

(2) Attempts to cause or purposely or knowingly causes bodily injury to another with a deadly weapon; or

....

Aggravated assault . . . under subsection b(2) is a crime of the third degree; . . .

The Division established, and the petitioner admitted during his testimony, that he purposely and knowingly struck Jose Santiago with a machete and that he was convicted in Pennsylvania of aggravated assault for this offense. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the petitioner's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b(2). I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1, the offense constitutes a crime of the third degree.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the petitioner is a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1). The petitioner is therefore disqualified from licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

An applicant faced with the existence of one or more section 86c disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. This section sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

1. The nature and duties of the position applied for;
2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4. The date of the offense or conduct;
5. The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling, or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Mr. DeJesus is a non-gaming casino employee and is employed as a carpenter. As such, he does not have direct responsibilities for actual gaming activities or contact with casino patrons.

Second, the petitioner committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1b(2), Aggravated Assault - third degree. Because the offense is a crime of violence and is a listed disqualifier under section 86c(1), it is very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the misconduct must be viewed in its appropriate context. The petitioner was on his way to visit his son. When he arrived, he was approached by his son's mother's then paramour, Jose Santiago, who had been drinking. Mr. Santiago threatened the petitioner with a gun. The petitioner safely departed the area but, because of his immaturity, the petitioner returned with his cousin and assaulted Mr. Santiago by hitting him with a machete, inflicting three small cuts. Because it is a crime of violence which resulted in an injury, it is extremely serious.

Fourth, the petitioner's misconduct occurred on July 12, 1984, when it ceased.

Fifth, the petitioner was 18 years old at the time of the offense. I believe that immaturity was a factor in this case. The petitioner believes he has learned and matured since then and such conduct will not occur again. He is now a responsible, productive member of society.

Sixth, the petitioner has not committed any other violation of the criminal laws either prior to or since this incident.

Seventh, the petitioner was attempting to visit his son, and he was threatened by his former paramour's new lover with whom he had had previous altercations. Due to his immaturity, he decided to return and face his rival rather than simply depart the area.

Eighth, the petitioner has made substantial rehabilitative efforts. He was a model inmate in prison; he earned his G.E.D.; he earned the privilege of enrolling in a vocational trainng program which he successfully completed; and he earned the privilege of participating in a work-release program. His performance as a trainee was exemplary. He has been gainfully employed ever since leaving prison. He has married and supports five children. The petitioner has been employed in the casino industry continuously since October 2, 1986. His job performance has been exemplary. He was the employee of the month at Trump's Castle in May 1988, the first union carpenter ever selected. He is active in the Cub Scouts and is becoming active in youth football and baseball leagues. He has demonstrated that he has matured and has accepted responsibility. He has openly and readily disclosed his misconduct to all of his employers, to the Commission, to the Division, and to myself. The petitioner has expressed remorse for, and has no intention of repeating, his misconduct. Accordingly, there is little likelihood, if any, of a repetition. Essentially, there is nothing more the petitioner could do to establish his rehabilitation.

I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has established, by clear and convincing evidence, his rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b

Under section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference, Mr. DeJesus was required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, his reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 248 (1979). In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon an applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Applications of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 10 N.J.A.R. 295, at 297-298 (1980). In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 296.

It is readily apparent that the petitioner's misconduct was aberrant and that he is otherwise a person of good character, honesty and integrity. The misconduct did not involve his licensed employment, and the underlying circumstances somewhat mitigated the seriousness of the misconduct. In addition, the petitioner has fully accepted responsibility for his misconduct, has regained control over his behavior, has served his sentence, has learned a trade, has performed admirably within the casino industry during the past two years, has married, supports five children, and has become a respected member of his community.

This is one of the most impressive petitioners who has ever appeared before me. Having previously been active in the criminal justice system and corrections system for a number of years, and having personally reviewed hundreds of applications for parole, pardons, and executive clemency, I can state that this petitioner has one of the best attitudes and best records I have seen. He epitomizes the goals of rehabilitation. He learned from his mistake and completely turned his life around. He is rehabilitated and is a productive member of society. A bright future is before him. Accordingly, the petitioner presents no risk to the public nor to the integrity of the gaming industry in this state. The petitioner has earned the privilege of licensure. An examination of the whole person clearly and convincingly establishes that Mr. DeJesus is a person of good character, honesty and integrity, and is entirely suitable for licensure in this state. See, Boardwalk Regency Corp.

I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has established, by clear and convincing evidence, his good character, honesty and integrity under section 90b.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the application of Charlie DeJesus for issuance of a casino employee license be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: November 10, 1988 Decided: December 20, 1988

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Bimal R. Dua (petitioner) seeks licensure as a casino key employee under the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.). The position in question is vice president of marketing/northeast for the Tropicana Casino Hotel. The holder of such a position is required to be licensed in accordance with the standards for a casino key employee pursuant to section 89 of the Casino Control Act and is also considered to be a qualifier of the casino licensee pursuant to section 85c.

In a letter report to the Casino Control Commission dated September 8, 1988, the Division of Gaming Enforcement neither recommended nor objected to the petitioner's licensure. Rather, the Division raised questions concerning the petitioner's suitability for licensure based upon his alleged failure to disclose material information concerning a civil judgment. The issues to be resolved in this matter are as follows:

1. Has the petitioner demonstrated by clear and convincing evidence that he possesses the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure as a casino key employee pursuant to section 89(b)(2) of the Casino Control Act, in light of his alleged failure to disclose in his applications a civil judgment entered against him.

2. Is the petitioner disqualified from licensure pursuant to section 86b of the act in light of his failure to disclose a civil judgment.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On September 22, 1988, the Casino Control Commission transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A telephone prehearing conference was held on October 13, 1988. The hearing was held as scheduled on October 25, 1988, in Pleasantville, New Jersey. At the request of the parties, the record remained open following the hearing to permit the submission of letter memoranda. The final document from the parties was received on November 10, 1988 (Exhibit P-6), and the record closed on that date.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The material facts in this matter are undisputed. The petitioner is a 36-year-old resident of New Jersey. He is married and he has two children. The petitioner was born in Faridabad Haryana, India, and he came to the United States in 1975. He was educated in India.

In 1985, the petitioner was issued a sole owner/operator junket enterprise license by the Casino Control Commission. Prior to receiving that license, the petitioner was subject to the customary investigation by the Division of Gaming Enforcement. On his Personal History Disclosure Form 2A, the petitioner had responded in the negative to questions concerning judgments against him or pending litigation. However, the Division investigation revealed that a default judgment had been entered against the petitioner in 1983. This was a judgment in favor of Playboy/Elsinore Associates in the amount of $5,298.66.

The petitioner was interviewed by a Division agent in December 1984 and he was questioned about Playboy's claim. The petitioner testified at the hearing that Playboy's claim concerned a fashion show which had been held at the casino. According to the petitioner, he had helped a church group make arrangements with the casino for the fashion show, but that was the extent of his involvement. He made no oral or written agreements with the casino for any of the expenses involved. Thus, he was very surprised some eight or nine months after the event when he received billings from the casino for the cost of bus fare and lunch for the patrons of the fashion show.

The petitioner testified credibly at the hearing that he made a few telephone calls to the collection department at Playboy in an attempt to resolve the matter. He had no contact with any attorney for the casino and he was never served with any complaint or other court papers concerning the casino's claim. The petitioner explained this information to the Division's agent in December 1984.

The petitioner testified that he participated in a sworn interview with Deputy Attorney General Stephen Cirillo in July 1985 (Exhibit R-2). At that time, the petitioner was informed that Playboy had obtained a default judgment against him. The petitioner testified at the hearing that he explained the situation to Deputy Attorney General Cirillo as he had earlier explained it to the Division agent. The petitioner stated that he subsequently contacted Playboy's collection department. He was told that they had no record of the matter. When he contacted the attorney who was named by the Playboy Collection Department, he learned that the attorney had died.

On December 23, 1987, the petitioner filed a Personal History Disclosure Form No. 1 (Exhibit R-3) with the Casino Control Commission. In response to question no. 77 which asks the applicant if he has ever been a party in a civil suit, the petitioner answered "no." The petitioner was interviewed concerning his key employee license application in May 1988 by Division Agent Robert Spisak. The agent's summary reports were admitted into evidence as Exhibits R-5, 6 and 7.

According to the petitioner, Agent Spisak went through the Personal History Disclosure Form with him, page by page. When the agent asked the petitioner if he had ever been a party to a lawsuit, the petitioner replied that he had not. The petitioner testified that he was then shown the transcript of his interview with Deputy Attorney General Cirillo (Exhibit R-2). According to the petitioner, he had not understood what a civil suit and a judgment were. Agent Spisak explained to him how a default judgment could be obtained. The petitioner testified believably that he had totally forgotten about Playboy's claim and he did not feel that he owed anything to Playboy anyway.

The petitioner testified sincerely that he understands the importance of being truthful to the Division and to the Casino Control Commission. He stated that he had no intention to lie. He now understands what a suit and a judgment are. He noted that he had disclosed on the Personal History Disclosure Form at question no. 86 (Exhibit R-3) that he had gone through a bankruptcy in February 1981. Although this was embarrassing to him, he was aware of it and knew that it had to be disclosed.

In May 1988, the petitioner satisfied the judgment against him and he obtained a release from Elsinore Shore Associates, trading as Atlantis Casino Hotel (Exhibit P-1). Steven Bolson, Esq., Vice President of Legal Affairs for Trop World Casino and Entertainment Resort, testified that the petitioner had come to him for assistance. He felt he did not owe any money and he did not understand how there could be a judgment against him. The petitioner also explained how he had never been served with any court papers and had never participated in a lawsuit. Mr. Bolson assisted the petitioner in settling the debt with Elsinore and a warrant of satisfaction was recorded.

Mr. Bolson testified that he has known the petitioner for about two years. The petitioner has been serving as Director of Marketing for the New York area. It is Mr. Bolson's opinion that the petitioner possesses the highest degree of honesty and integrity and financial responsibility. He feels that the petitioner should be licensed at the highest level. Mr. Bolson's testimony was sincere and credible in every respect. Richard W. Brewer, Vice President of Casino Games for Trop World, testified that he has known the petitioner for about eight years. He has worked closely with the petitioner and they have become good friends. In Mr. Brewer's opinion, the petitioner possesses very strong moral standards and conducts business on the highest level. Mr. Brewer feels that the petitioner's integrity is unquestioned.

The petitioner also offered into evidence several letters from individuals who attested to his good character (Exhibit P-2 through P-6). These individuals have known the petitioner both professionally and socially. Each writer expressed his view that the petitioner is a man of the highest moral character with impeccable honesty and integrity.

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to section 80a of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.), it is the affirmative responsibility of each applicant and licensee to establish by clear and convincing evidence his individual qualifications for licensure. Among these qualifications is the requirement that an applicant for a casino key employee license demonstrate that he possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure, pursuant to section 89b(2) of the act.

Section 89d of the act provides that a casino key employee license shall be denied to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of the act. Section 86b provides that the Commission shall deny licensure to an applicant disqualified for failure to provide information required by the act or requested by the Commission, or for failure of the applicant to reveal any fact material to qualification, or for the supplying of information which is untrue or misleading as to a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria. An intentional nondisclosure, premised upon the belief of the applicant that licensure would be adversely affected by disclosure, is grounds for mandatory disqualification. However, it is well settled that an inadvertent or ignorant failure to make a disclosure will not warrant disqualification.

It is undisputed in this matter that the information concerning civil suits and judgments involving the petitioner was material to his qualifications for licensure. It is further undisputed that the petitioner did not disclose in his Personal History Disclosure Form (Exhibit R-3) a default judgment entered against him in 1983. However, the undisputed facts in this matter establish that the petitioner did not understand the nature of the default judgment and its relationship to a civil suit. The petitioner had no intention of deceiving the Commission or the Division, and his failure to disclose the default judgment was not committed intentionally or in disregard of the regulatory process. I so CONCLUDE. Thus I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner is not disqualified from licensure pursuant to section 86b of the act, in light of his failure to disclose the default judgment.

Although he questions the underlying basis for the default judgment entered against him, the petitioner has satisfied that judgment and has received a release (Exhibit P-1). Substantial evidence was presented during the hearing concerning the petitioner's high moral character and honesty. On the basis of the undisputed facts in this matter, I CONCLUDE the petitioner has sustained his burden of establishing by clear and convincing evidence that he possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure as a casino key employee, within the meaning of section 89b(2) of the Casino Control Act. Therefore, I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner's application for licensure as a casino key employee/qualifier should be granted.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the application of Bimal R. Dua for licensure as a casino key employee be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

ORDER NO. 89-2-6

APPLICATION OF JACKIE EDWARDS — ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of January 11, 1989,

IT IS on this 2nd day of March 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

> (1) To reject the ALJ's conclusion that the 1972 offense of possession of CDS with intent to distribute was not a disqualifying offense in that the offense occurred more than ten years prior to the application for licensure. (Init. dec. at page 6). The mere fact that the offense happened over ten years ago is not the sole factor in determining whether the offense is, in fact, disqualifying. The Act places the burden upon the applicant to demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence that the ten or more year old offense in question should not result in his disqualification. In State v. Ronald Jones, Docket No.86-15 (Commission order July 8, 1987), the Commission held that the correct analysis in determining this issue is not unlike the analysis of the rehabilitation factors contained in sections 90h and 91d of the Act.

Because there is a more significant and recent statutory disqualifying offense (theft by deception), a determination of whether the 1972 offense of possession of CDS with intent to distribute need not be made.

(2) To reject that portion of the initial decision at page 6, wherein the ALJ concluded "by inference" that the "petitioner was convicted of an offense which is comparable to theft by deception pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4." N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g provides a statutory basis for disqualification even without a conviction, making it neither necessary nor prudent to draw such an inference. The evidence in this record which includes the applicant's admission of theft by deception warrants a conclusion that the applicant is disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and 86g.

(3) To eliminate the ALJ's erroneous reference to "section 86c(2) g." (Init. dec. page 7). The correct statutory reference for this statutory reference for this disqualification should be N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and 86g.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the application is denied substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision which, as modified, is incorporated herein by reference; and

ORDER NO. 89-2-6

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Jackie Edwards is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any other license, registration, qualification or approval required under the Casino Control Act except pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8.

DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

Jackie Edwards, petitioner, pro se
Ralph Fusco, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent, (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: July 21, 1988 Decided: November 10, 1988

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a letter with the Casino Control Commission on or about December 10, 1987, objecting to the issuance of a casino employee license to Jackie Edwards grounded upon its allegation that petitioner was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and that petitioner lacks the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2).

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Subsequent to its receipt of the Division's objection letter the Commission gave petitioner notice of same. On January 12, 1988, petitioner requested a hearing. Thereafter, on January 22, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. On April 11, 1988, a prehearing conference was conducted by Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Stephen W. Thompson at which, among other things, the issues to be determined were agreed upon and a hearing date established. The matter was assigned to ALJ Joseph Fidler and thereafter to the undersigned who held the hearing on June 30, 1987 at the Galloway, New Jersey Township Municipal Court. Petitioner requested and was granted leave to submit posthearing documents which were received by the OAL on July 21, 1988 which constituted the record closing date of the herein matter. Extensions were requested and granted for the execution of the herein initial decision.

ISSUES

The specific issues to be determined by this administrative tribunal, as agreed upon by the parties at the April 11, 1988 prehearing, are these:

A. Whether petitioner was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) to wit: N.J.S.A. 2A:111-2 which is analogous to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception.

B. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within Section 90b.

C. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to Section 90h of the Casino Control Act.

UNCONTESTED FACTS

Based upon the testimony and documents offered and marked into evidence, the following facts are neither contested nor in dispute. Therefore, the following are hereby adopted, by reference, as my FINDINGS OF FACT:

Petitioner is presently the holder of casino hotel employee registration number 76936-40. The Division does not seek revocation of petitioner's registration but, rather, it only objects to the issuance of a casino employee license to him. Petitioner has been employed by the Trump Plaza Hotel/Casino as a cook under his registration since about July 11, 1987.

Petitioner, who was born on July 26, 1952, attended high school in South Carolina and Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In or about 1969-70, petitioner moved to Jersey City, New Jersey. On October 23, 1971, he was arrested by the Jersey City police for the possession of illegal drugs (heroine). Subsequently, on March 10, 1972, petitioner was again arrested by the Jersey City police for which he was charged with the possession of illegal drugs (heroine) with intent to distribute and the possession of a dangerous weapon. On January 29, 1973, the Superior Court of New Jersey, Hudson County, accepted petitioners plea of guilty to Accusation No. 123-72 and the crime of possession of controlled dangerous substance (CDS) with the intent to dispense in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(1). The 1971 charges were dismissed together with the 1972 charge of possession of a dangerous weapon. The Court sentenced petitioner to the New Jersey youth Correctional Institution at Yardville, New Jersey on the guilty plea together with his sentence to run concurrently with a sentence petitioner was to serve at Manning Correctional Institution, Columbia, South Carolina (R-2, R-3, R-4).

The record reveals that petitioner was approximately 19 years of age when he committed the 1971 offense; approximately 20 years old when he committed the 1972 offense; and, approximately 21 years of age when sentenced to Yardville Correctional Institution.

In or about 1973, petitioner commenced employment with the Nelson Distribution Corp. in its shipping and receiving department. At divers times while employed by Nelson, petitioner was subject to lay-offs for which he was eligible and collected Unemployment Insurance Benefits (UIB). In 1979, petitioner was terminated by Nelson. Petitioner, through his union, filed to have his termination arbitrated. During the period of his termination and the arbitration, petitioner filed for UIB. Petitioner testified that he lost five weeks of wages while awaiting the arbitration award, which placed him back on six months probation with Nelson.

The record demonstrates that petitioner collected 17 weeks of UIB from February 3, 1979 to May 5, 1979 (R-5).

On March 14, 1980, the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance sent petitioner its Determination and Demand for Refund of UIB and Imposing of Penalty and Disqualification alleging that petitioner had been in receipt of UIB overpayments in the total amount of $2,420 together with fines which totaled $2,860. By way of this notice, petitioner was disqualified for benefits from May 14, 1980 to September 9, 1980 (P-5).

On or about June 10, 1980, the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance of the Department of Labor and Industry of New Jersey filed a Certificate of Debt with the Clerk of the Superior Court of New Jersey (R-7). Subsequently, the Hudson County Grand Jury handed up Indictment No. 1150 alleging that petitioner:

> .... knowingly or designedly, by means of concealing or failing to disclose a material fact which it was his duty to reveal, did obtain from the New Jersey Division of Employment Security, under the pretense that he was out of employment, benefit checks to the total amount of $2,420.00, contrary to the provisions of N.J.S.A 2A:111-2 (R-7).

In or about 1981, petitioner moved to Williamstown, Gloucester County, New Jersey. In 1985, while riding in a motor vehicle with friends in Bordentown, New Jersey, the local police caused the motor vehicle to be stopped. Thereafter, the occupants of the motor vehicle, including petitioner, were escorted to the Bordentown Police Department where they were charged with possession of CDS (marijuana). While being processed, the Bordentown Police ran a check on petitioner and discovered that there was an outstanding bench warrant for petitioner's arrest. As a consequence, petitioner was incarcerated overnight at Bordentown and escorted to Hudson County the following day.

The Superior Court Judge in Hudson County required that petitioner make restitution to the UIB which he received and for which he was not entitled during the period February-May 1979. He was also required to pay all penalties and fines through the Gloucester County Probation Department. Petitioner was admonished by the Court that he would be subject to arrest in the event he failed to make restitution within the time limits set by the Court. With regard to the Bordentown arrest and CDS charges, petitioner was found guilty, fined $550 and sentenced to the Burlington County Jail for 30 days.

Subsequently, on November 21, 1986, petitioner was arrested at his home in Williamstown for his failure to make restitution to the Unemployment and Disability Insurance program as stipulated by the Superior Court Judge in Hudson County. Petitioner testified that thereafter, he made full restitution to the outstanding debt due and owing to the UIB. The Division stipulates that petitioner has satisfied the claim against him by the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance as of January 29, 1987.

Petitioner is presently 36 years of age; married with three children, 20 months, three years and four years of age. Petitioner has not used heroine for the past ten years nor has he used marijuana since his last arrest in 1986. Petitioner has never attended a drug treatment program nor has he ever engaged in drug counseling. He has been employed in the casino industry for approximately one year at the Trump Plaza. While he has performed in his job in an exemplary manner, neither of the two individuals who wrote recommendations for petitioner indicated that they were aware of his past criminal conduct nor that they had knowledge of his drug involvement.

Petitioner is applying for licensure as a slot attendant or slot mechanic.

This concludes the recital of my FINDINGS OF FACT.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The Division contends that petitioner committed two disqualifying offenses, albeit, not automatic pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). The offense of theft by deception, N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 (N.J.S.A. 2A:111-2, repealed by L. 1978, c. 95) and possession of CDS with intent to distribute, N.J.S.A. 24:21-20(1) which is comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, are of sufficient magnitude to disqualify petitioner from licensure notwithstanding that the offenses were committed more than ten years prior to these proceedings and petitioners application N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2).

With regard to the arrest and conviction for possession of CDS with intent to distribute (N.J.S.A. 24:21-20(1)), the record demonstrates that petitioner was arrested on March 10, 1972 and convicted of the offense on January 29, 1973. The Casino Control Act (Act) provides, in pertinent part, at N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2) that:

> ...the automatic disqualification provisions of this subsection shall not apply with regard to any conviction which did not occur within the 10-year period immediately preceding application for licensure and which the applicant demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence does not justify automatic disqualification....(emphasis supplied)

Applying the clear language of this subsection to the instant matter, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not committed an automatic disqualifying offense by virtue of the age of the N.J.S.A. 24:21-20(1) offense and conviction which occurred more than ten years prior to petitioner's application for licensure. This conduct may, however, be referenced with regards to the issue of petitioners good character, honesty and integrity and his rehabilitation.

With respect to the UIB alleged theft by deception, the record demonstrates that the offense occurred in 1979; nine years prior to petitioner's application for licensure. Thus, the offense was committed within the ten year limitation as set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2). In addition, petitioner's appearance before the Superior Court occurred on or about March 1985 on an outstanding bench warrant for his arrest for failure to satisfy the UIB claim. The Division did not present proof of a conviction for the offense, however, petitioner admits that the Court ordered petitioner to make restitution of the UIB he collected and to which he was not entitled. Petitioner further admits that when he failed to comply with the Court's order to satisfy the UIB overpayment, he was again arrested; an unlikely occurrence unless petitioner was on probation and failed to comply with the terms of his court ordered probation. I CONCLUDE, therefore, by inference, that petitioner was convicted of an offense which is comparable to theft by deception pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4.

N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

> A person is guilty of theft is he purposely obtains property of another by deception. A person deceives

> if he purposely:
>
> a. Creates or reinforces a false impression, including false impressions as to law, value, intention or other state of mind; but deception as to a person's intention to perform a promise shall not be inferred from the fact alone that he did not subsequently perform the promise;

Petitioner admits that he collected and received UIB overpayments in the amount of $2,420. Pursuant to the grading of theft offenses under N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(2):

> Theft constitutes a crime of the third degree if:
> (a) The amount involved exceeds $500.00 but is less than $75,000.00.

Thus, the amount of petitioner's overpayment of UIB to which he was not entitled and which constitutes an offense comparable to theft by deception, is also comparable to a crime of the third degree; an automatic disqualifying offense for casino employee licensure. State v. Moore, 158 N.J. Super. 68 (App. Div. 1978).

Accordingly, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the offense of theft by deception in the third degree, to which petitioner admits, is a per se disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), of the Act and/or as incorporated in section 86c(2)g. Therefore, petitioner is ineligible to hold a casino employee license.

Respondent is required to establish his good character, honesty and integrity, by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to Section 90h of the Act which incorporates Section 89b(2) by reference. The Commission has held that an unfavorable reputation is not the determinative criteria for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are true key factors. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979). Therefore, when the Division places the individual applicant's good character, honesty and integrity in issue and objects to licensure under Section 89b(2) of the Act, it is the applicant's burden to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reasonably reach a conclusion as to the person's suitability for licensure. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981).

Here, petitioner produced no witnesses or sufficient documentation to demonstrate that he possessed the characteristics and attributes for a casino employee license. Rather, he testified on his own behalf and produced two letters from fellow employees complementing petitioner on his work and attendance at Trump Plaza (P-1, P-2). There is no indication that either of the two individuals who wrote the letters on petitioner's behalf had any knowledge of petitioner's extensive criminal background; including his possession and use of illegal drugs or that he had committed an act of theft by deception. Neither writer stated or opined that petitioner possessed good character, honesty or integrity.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to meet his burden of proof and affirmatively establish, by clear and convincing evidence, that he possesses the requisite characteristics and attributes prescribed by Section 89b(2).

An applicant or licensee faced with the existence of one or more Section 86c statutory disqualifiers is afforded the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his rehabilitation, N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and 91d. Therein the Legislature has set forth eight specific criteria to be considered and evaluated where a determination of rehabilitation is to be made. Those specific eight factors in Section 90h are:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense occurred;

(4) The date of the offense;

(5) The age of the applicant (licensee) when the offense was committed;

(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling, or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release program or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant (licensure) under their supervision.

In consideration of petitioner's claim of rehabilitation, the following is found in the herein record:

1. Petitioner presently holds a casino hotel registration number 76936-40, which is not at issue in these proceedings. Petitioner has applied for a casino employee license as a casino teller or, those activities in the industry having to do with computers.

2. The offense upon which the Division has placed its emphasis and reliance in this matter involves petitioner's collection of $2,420 in UIB to which he was not entitled from February 3 to May 5, 1979. Petitioner was indicted by the Hudson County Grand Jury on the charge of obtaining UIB under false pretense contrary to N.J.S.A. 2A:111-2, repealed by L. 1978, c. 95, N.J.S.A. 2C:98-2; now N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4 theft by deception. The amount of $2,420 for which petitioner was indicted and admits he collected when ineligible to do so, is defined as a crime of the third degree pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(2)(a). The offense, therefore, was a serious one.

3. The offense was committed as a consequence of petitioners having been terminated from his employment position and which petitioner appealed for arbitration. Petitioner had been unemployed for a number of weeks before he was reinstated to his employment position as a result of the arbitration award. During this period of petitioner's unemployment he had not received any UIB. Upon his reemployment petitioner commenced to receive UIB and failed to report that he had been reemployed to the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance. As a consequence of petitioner's failure to report his change in employment circumstances, he collected 17 weeks of UIB to which he was not entitled.

4. The offense was a continuous one commencing on February 3, 1979 and continuing through to May 5, 1979 on a weekly basis.

5. Petitioner's date of birth is July 26, 1952, therefore, he was 25 years of age when the UIB offense was committed. Petitioner's conduct cannot be attributable to immaturity.

6. As indicated in No. 4 above, the offense was a single continuous offense. However, subsequent to petitioner's court order to make restitution, he failed to comply with the order for a period of six years.

7. There were no social conditions advanced by petitioner which may have contributed to the offense.

8. Petitioner subsequently produced documents which demonstrated he has successfully completed: (a) a program of orientation to the Casino-Hotel Industry, Casino Cashier Skills Training; (b) Electronics Assembly; and, (c) Electronic Computer Technology (P-3). He produced no evidence of his good conduct in the community at large nor that he had engaged in any counseling with respect to his prior drug habit.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that petitioner has demonstrated some rehabilitative efforts, however, not sufficient enough to overcome the Section 86c (1) per se disqualifier. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to produce sufficient evidence to meet his burden that he is, in fact, rehabilitated.

ORDER

It is therefore ORDERED that the application of Jackie Edwards for a casino employee license be and is hereby DENIED.

days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CCC 3182-88
AGENCY DKT. NO. 88-EA-218

APPLICATION OF SHARON A. EISENBERG FOR RENEWAL OF A CASINO KEY EMPLOYEE LICENSE.

Wayne R. Rosenlicht, Esq., for the applicant (Horn, Kaplan, Goldberg, Gorny & Daniels, attorneys)

Thomas N. Auriemma, Deputy Attorney General, for the respondent (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: October 13, 1988 Decided: December 21, 1988

BEFORE RICHARD MURPHY, ALJ:

Sharon A. Eisenberg (applicant) applies for a renewal of her casino key employee license and the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) takes no position on the application. The Division does, however, note some negative information which it feels raises some question as to the applicant's qualifications under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b. At issue is whether Sharon Eisenberg has shown by clear and convincing evidence that she possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino key employee licensure under the Casino Control Act and also whether she possesses the requisite business ability in casino experience pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(3). This opinion recommends that the application be granted.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The applicant requested a hearing on April 26, 1988 and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. on May 2, 1988. A prehearing was conducted on July 14 and the hearing was held and completed in Absecon on October 13, 1988. The due date for the initial decision was extended until December 21 due to a heavy volume of other pending matters.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts are not in dispute. The negative information noted by the Division arises from three incidents or transactions involving Sharon Eisenberg in her former position as Director of Credit at Tropicana. The first matter involves the applicant's alleged failure to report her observation that an individual whose credit had been suspended was gambling with another person's chips. The other two transactions raised by the Division concern the applicant's involvement while at Tropicana in decisions affecting her spouse's business interests: namely, the purchase of wallets from a company owned by him and approval of credit for a quality player brought to the Tropicana under a "splinter" agreement by Kenneth Eisenberg, the applicant's spouse. These incidents and transactions are discussed in more detail below.

The first matter involved the applicant's issuance of $100,000 in credit to Kyung Hu Paik on or about April 3, 1987. On that date, the applicant and her supervisor, Robert James, had dinner with Ms. Paik and Harry Kim, whose credit privileges had been suspended after his checks were returned without sufficient funds. There is no question that Ms. Paik had ample proven resources to warrant the granting of a $100,000 credit line. There is also no evidence that the applicant was advised by Ms. Paik or Harry Kim that the credit being extended to Ms. Paik was to be gambled with by Mr. Kim. After dinner and approval of the credit line, Harry Kim was observed by the applicant, and Robert James, to be gambling with Ms. Paik's marker, and neither took any action to stop this activity or to advise the Casino Control Commission or higher authority at the Tropicana.

The Division argues that the applicant had a duty to do so, as discussed below. Sharon Eisenberg testified that she did not see any violation in having Harry Kim gamble with the chips of Ms. Paik, whose credit had been approved. She also stated that her supervisor, Robert James, was also present during this activity and did not view it as a violation. The Division conceded that the Commission had not, by regulation or decision, prohibited persons whose credit has been suspended from gambling with chips given to persons whose credit is approved. The Tropicana also was concerned in April of 1987 with the practice of "chip walking," whereby a person would apply for credit and then walk out the casino door without gambling. There is no evidence that there was any "chip walking" involved here and, indeed, the Division raises the matter because the applicant was gambling, not "walking" with the chips obtained on the basis of another person's credit.

The other two transactions raised by the Division involve the applicant's spouse. Sharon Altman and Kenneth Eisenberg were married on November 3, 1984, and both held casino key employee licenses. Kenneth Eisenberg had other business interests, including an import/export company then called AKI, which was on the Commission's vendor list and did approximately $200,000 business with the Tropicana. Sharon Eisenberg knew of her spouse's interest in AKI but had no direct ownership interest in it herself and was not employed by the company until after her termination by the Tropicana, when she served as a consultant before obtaining her current employment with the Showboat Hotel and Casino. Of the total of AKI business done with the Tropicana, the only matter directly involving the applicant concerned the purchase of some 1,000 eel skin wallets, which were given to casino patrons for promotional purposes. Sharon Eisenberg testified that she first saw the wallets when they were left in the possession of another Tropicana employee as a sample by Kenneth Eisenberg. She felt that this gift would be appropriate for distribution to casino patrons as part of her responsibilities as Director of Credit. She also was involved in what was known as the "comp committee,"a group of Tropicana employees who were brought together to try to cut back on comps and assess the nature and quantity of gifts being provided to patrons. The "comp committee" had no official responsibilities as to procurement. The applicant acknowledges that she learned that the wallets had been supplied by her spouse but saw no problem or conflict in urging that 1,000 be purchased by the Tropicana. This purchase was approved by the applicant's supervisor, Robert James, and later by John M. Gallaway, President of the company. The memo from Mr. Gallaway dated February 27, 1987, expressing approval of three purchase orders from AKI stated that the prices, to the extent possible, had been checked out and found to be fair, reasonable and competitive. The purchase of the wallets was later upheld and payment made after an internal investigation by Tropicana. As indicated, there is no evidence that Sharon Eisenberg was directly or indirectly involved in any other business transaction between the Tropicana and AKI beyond the matter of the wallets.

The third questionable transaction raised by the Division also involved the applicant's spouse, who had a "splinter" agreement with the Tropicana, whereby he was paid a fee based on the amounts of casino play of any patron brought in by him. The "splinter" agreement was entered into on or about January 30, 1987, after Kenneth Eisenberg had terminated his employment with another casino. Sharon Eisenberg was aware of her spouse's "splinter" agreement with the Tropicana. In the winter or early spring of 1987, Kenneth Eisenberg spoke to Sharon Eisenberg as to the possibility of bringing in one Roger King, a wealthy television syndicator, as a Tropicana patron, and the two wined and dined Mr. King in New York City with the result that he agreed to gamble at the Tropicana. On March 10, 1987, Sharon Eisenberg granted a $100,000 credit line to Roger King, which was the maximum allowed in her position of authority. She stated that, prior to approving credit, she made a check of Mr. King's financial status and determined that he had well in excess of that amount in several bank accounts, as well as very substantial real estate holdings. Mr. King is the syndicator of such shows as "Jeopardy," "Wheel of Fortune," and "Oprah Winfrey," and is estimated to earn in excess of 100 million dollars for this contribution to American culture. Later in the evening on March 10, 1987, Roger King's credit line was increased to $200,000 based on the recommendation of Sharon Eisenberg and approval of Senior Vice President Robert James. On the same gaming day (actually March 11, 1987) Sharon Eisenberg recommended a second increase in Roger King's credit limit, this time to $250,000, which was subsequently approved by a Robert James. Problems developed when Roger King, after winning a large wager, exuberantly embraced a casino dealer, who was lifted off the floor and apparently injured. The dealer later decided to file suit. Roger King reacted by declining to pay $300,000 in counterchecks drawn on his credit account, which were returned by his bank without payment. This matter was eventually resolved, and Robert King paid off his marker and is again back at the wheels of fortune in the Tropicana, with an even higher credit limit.

The applicant did not dispute that she was aware of the Tropicana's conflict of interest policy, which states, in pertinent part:

> It is Ramada's policy to have its employees give their undivided loyalty to their jobs as measured by the highest legal and ethical standards. An individual employee shall be free of any influence, interest, or relationship which might conflict with the best interests of the company . . . A conflict of interest > might arise where an employee, or a member of his or her immediate family, has an interest or relationship with any other party to a transaction with Ramada. (A-8) (emphasis added)

Sharon Eisenberg did not feel that her involvement with the AKI wallets or Roger King's credit line constituted a conflict of interest and stated that these transactions were done in an open fashion in circumstances where it was generally known that she was married to Kenneth Eisenberg. Because of questions concerning the AKI and King matters, as well as the Harry Kim incident, the applicant tendered her resignation to the Tropicana. After that, she worked as a consultant for AKI, until she found employment with the Showboat Hotel and Casino. No evidence was submitted of any similar problems involving the applicant at the Showboat. Several individuals, including Captain Peter Mucci, of the Atlantic City Police testified as to the applicant's good character based on their long social acquaintance.

ISSUE

The question presented is whether the applicant has shown by clear and convincing evidence her good character, honesty and integrity as required for licensing as a casino key employee under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(b)(2).

Also listed as an issue whether the applicant has established sufficient business ability in a casino experience to show reasonable likelihood of success and efficiency in the particular position involved as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(b)(3).

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The Casino Control Act provides that:

> [e]ach applicant for a casino key employee license shall provide such information, documentation and assurances as may be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence the applicant's good character, honesty and integrity. Such information shall include, without limitation, data pertained to family, habits, character, reputation, criminal and arrest record, business activities, financial affairs, and business, professional and personal associates, covering at least the number 10 year period immediate preceding the filing of the application.... N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) (emphases added).

Under 89b(2) the applicant must establish good character, honesty and integrity as a matter of fact and not merely as a matter of reputation. See, Application of Boardwalk Regency Corp. for a Casino License, 90 N.J. 361,369 (1982), appeal dismissed 459 U.S. 1081 (1983). Applicants have been found not to have established good character, honesty and integrity as a matter of fact where there is evidence that they have engaged in such nefarious activities as procuring prostitutes for foreign officials engaged in casino regulation or swindling casino patrons by altering dice. See, Alter v. Div. of Gaming Enforcement, 6 N.J.A.R. 584 (1979); Div. of Gaming Enforcement v. Matta, 5 N.J.A.R. 439 (1983). It should also be emphasized that the applicant must establish good character, honesty and integrity by evidence that is both clear and convincing.

In this case, the Division takes no position on the application but raises the three matters discussed above for the Commission's consideration. With respect to the incident involving Harry Kim, the Division does not argue or cite any authority to support its contention that Mr. Kim's activities were unlawful or in violation of any regulation and that the applicant was, therefore, obligated to make a report pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-80(g), which provides that:

> All licensees . . . shall have a duty to inform the Commission or Division of any action which they believe would constitute a violation of this act. . . .

The matter of whether a person whose credit is suspended can gamble on the basis of another person's credit is still an open question, as the Division concedes, and has not been decided by regulation or Commission decision. Given that, I CONCLUDE that the applicant was under no obligation to report the activities of Harry Kim in gambling with Ms. Paik's chips. I further CONCLUDE that this incident has no detrimental bearing on her good character, honesty or integrity. I also note that there was no evidence submitted that Harry Kim was engaged in the activity of "chip walking," which is problem of serious concern for casinos and the Commission. It is also apparent that there was no irregularity or impropriety in the action of the applicant in approving a $100,000 credit line for Ms. Paik, given the available financial data concerning her (A-7).

Appellant's actions and business transactions involving her spouse are more troubling in that they show a lack of sensitivity to what should have seen as, under both the Tropicana's policies and the dictates of common sense, an obvious conflict of interest. As to the eel skin wallets purchased from AKI, the applicant became involved in a purchase directly benefiting her spouse's company despite the fact that she was fully aware of his financial interest in the matter and was not generally responsible for procurement of such items in her capacity as Director of Credit. The facts that the applicant's marriage was common knowledge and that the purchase price was later deemed to be fair and competitive, do little to ameliorate what was, at best, an appearance of a conflict of interest that Sharon Eisenberg's involvement in this purchase gave reasonable rise to. By her own testimony she was oblivious to the cloud of nepotism that ultimately was seen to cast shadows on this transaction.

Nor was the applicant sufficiently sensitive to questions of impairment of judgment and favoritism in her approval of credit for Roger King, which directly rebounded to her spouse, and indirectly to her through the marriage, as a result of the "splinter" agreement. There is, however, no basis in fact to conclude that Roger King, a multimillionaire, was a bad risk and it would be unreasonable to hold the applicant accountable for failing to foresee the peculiar and almost game-show-like events that led Roger King to temporarily decline to honor his credit obligation to the Tropicana. What the applicant should have foreseen was that, notwithstanding King's seat at the summit of an unbelievably lucrative television empire, the fact that her spouse (and she) stood to financially benefit from Roger King's gambling at the Tropicana raised at least the appearance of a conflict of interest, if not the actuality. (One wonders, of course, as to whether the Roger King incident would even be raised by the Division, had he merely been another high roller who have been lured in under a "splinter" agreement and not the defaulting patron he became after being sued by a dealer who claimed to have been injured in an impulsive celebratory grasp.) Despite the unforeseeable nature of the King incident, the fact that the applicant became directly involved in credit decisions touching on her spouses and her financial interests was not consistent with the Tropicana's conflict of interest and raises doubts as to her sensitivity to those issues. However, the fact that all of the incidents and transactions cited above occurred or were undertaken openly and in forthright manner, albeit without forethought as to the appearance of conflict of interest, suggests that the applicant's bad judgment and lack of sensitivity on these issues does not implicate on her good character, honesty and integrity so as to require denial of her application. The Harry Kim incident in no way brings into question Sharon Eisenberg's good character, honesty and integrity because the activity observed was not in violation of any regulation and this created no duty for the applicant to report. There was also no evidence that she had any knowledge of any "chip walking" by Harry Kim. The transactions with AKI and Roger King may also be fairly characterized as dealings that were openly undertaken, largely at the urging of an entreprenurial spouse, which did not involve any actual conflict of interest in the sense that the applicant did not act in a way that resulted in foreseeable harm or impairment of Tropicana's interests. While these dealings did create an appearance of impropriety on the applicant's part, their nature was not such as to call into question her good character, honesty or integrity and I CONCLUDE that she has satisfactorily borne her burden of proof under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2).

I further CONCLUDE that the applicant has established by clear and convincing evidence that she has sufficient business ability and casino experience so as to establish the reasonable likelihood of success and efficiency in the particular position involved as a casino key employee pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(3). She is currently the manager of Player Development at the Showboat and has functions relating to customer development, special events, splinter agents, and gift room. Certainly she has shown that she has in-depth experience in these areas and, with greater awareness and sensitivity to apparent as well as actual conflicts of interests, is reasonably likely to function successfully and efficiently.

ORDER

On the basis of the above findings of fact and conclusions of law, it is ORDERED that the application of Sharon A. Eisenberg for a casino key employee license is GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: January 31, 1989 Decided: February 21, 1989

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) charges that respondent, which operates the Atlantis Casino Hotel, violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b) on December 30, 1986, by permitting Debra Kim Cohen, a minor, to gamble in its casino.

PROCEDURAL

The Division filed its complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on October 15, 1987. Elsinore Shore Associates (Elsinore) filed an Answer to the complaint on November 18, 1987. On December 15, 1987, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was scheduled in Atlantic City, New Jersey, on February 19, 1988, before the Honorable Richard Voliva. The matter was originally scheduled for hearing on July 1, 1988. On June 7, 1988, this matter was reassigned to the Honorable Stephen W. Thompson. The matter was subsequently adjourned until July 22, 1988.

Prior to the hearing date, the parties agreed to a settlement and prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Settlement which arrived at the OAL on July 18, 1988. The record closed on July 22, 1988.

The within matter was remanded to the OAL for further proceedings by Order of the Commission on November 3, 1988. On December 20, 1988, the parties submitted another proposed settlement agreement. The record closed on January 31, 1989, upon receipt of the remanded file.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Division and Elsinore have prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Settlement, which is attached hereto and made a part of this Initial Decision. I have reviewed the stipulated facts and adopt them as if the same were set forth herein at length.

Therefore, I FIND:

1. The terms of settlement in this matter have been incorporated into a settlement agreement which is attached to this Initial Decision and which is incorporated herein as if set forth at length.

2. The parties to this action have voluntarily agreed to the terms of settlement, as evidenced by their execution of the settlement agreement.

3. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and it is consistent with the law.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW AND ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 1:1-17.1, the parties to a contested case may settle the matter by consent and may submit a stipulation signed by both parties which contains the terms of settlement. When the administrative law judge assigned to the matter decides that the settlement is voluntary, consistent with the law and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy, he shall enter an Initial Decision which sets forth the settlement terms.

Having found that the terms of settlement as set forth in the attached settlement agreement are satisfactory to the settling parties and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy, and having noted that the parties have consented to the attached settlement terms, I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings before the OAL be and are hereby concluded.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT Complainant, vs. ELSINORE SHORE ASSOCIATES Respondent.	STIPULATION OF FACTS AND SETTLEMENT

The matters in the above-captioned matter having been discussed by and among the parties involved, Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney for Complainant, State of New Jersey, Department of Law & Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement by Katherine A. Smith, Deputy Attorney General and Mitchell A. Schwefel, Assistant Attorney General, and Harry Jay Levin, Esquire, Vice President and General Counsel for Respondent, Elsinore Shore Associates, t/a Atlantis Casino Hotel, it is hereby stipulated to and agreed by and among the parties as follows for purposes of resolving this matter:

1. Complainant, by and through its Division of Gaming Enforcement, now and at all times referenced herein has been charged with the responsibility pursuant to the Casino Control Act (P.L. 1977, c. 110, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq., hereinafter "the Act") of enforcing said Act, and the regulations promulgated thereunder by the Casino Control Commission (hereinafter "the Commission") and of prosecuting violations thereof before the Commission.

2. Respondent, Elsinore Shore Associates, t/a Atlantis Casino/Hotel (hereinafter called "Atlantis"), is now and at all times referenced herein has been a partnership organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and has now and at times referenced herein had its principal place of business located at 2500 Boardwalk in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic and State of New Jersey.

3. Atlantis is now the holder of a casino licensee issued by the Commission authorizing it to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. The said licensee was issued and became effective on April 13, 1982 and has been renewed annually. Atlantis has been conducting its casino hotel-operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time and including all times referenced hereunder.

4. Atlantis is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective April 10, 1981. Said Certificate of Operation entitles Atlantis to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

5. On December 30, 1986 Debra Kim Cohen, a minor 17 (seventeen) years of age, entered Atlantis' casino room and gambled for approximately 4 (four) hours at Blackjack Table 07 in Pit D. During this 4 hour period, Atlantis casino floor personnel observed Debra Kim Cohen playing blackjack and rated her blackjack play. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit A is a true and correct copy of Debra Kim Cohen's birth certificate. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit B is a true and correct copy of the Atlantis player rating slip, dated December 30,1 986 for Debra Kim Cohen, a/k/a Kim Cohen.

6. By letter dated November 25, 1986, and received by Atlantis, Richard L. Press, Esq., attorney for Leonard Cohen, notified and informed Atlantis that Debra Kim Cohen had gambled at the casino, and requested of Atlantis that further attempts by Ms. Cohen to gamble therein should be prevented. Enclosed in the letter from Mr. Press was a photograph of Debra Kim Cohen. Upon receipt of the letter from Mr. Press, Atlantis' Legal Department transmitted the letter to its Security, Surveillance and Casino Departments. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit C is a true and correct copy of the November 25, 1986 letter from Mr. Press to Atlantis. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof as Exhibit D is a true and correct copy of the photograph of Debra Kim Cohen which was enclosed in the letter referenced as Exhibit C.

7. N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b) was effective at all times referenced herein and provides in pertinent part:

> Any licensee or employee of a casino who allows a person under the age at which a person is authorized to purchase and consume alcoholic beverages to remain in a casino room is a disorderly person...

8. By permitting the minor Debra Kim Cohen to enter its casino and allowing her to remain in its casino to gamble on December 30, 1986, as set forth more fully herein, notwithstanding the fact that Respondent was notified by Mr. Richard Press that Debora Kim Cohen was a minor and that, as a consequence, she not be permitted to gamble at the Atlantis, Respondent Atlantis violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b).

9. Attached hereto and made a part of the record hereof, but not stipulated to by the parties, are true and correct copies of the following exhibits:

(a) Certification of Harry Jay Levin, Esq. Vice President and General Counsel of Atlantis Casino Hotel as Exhibit E.

(b) Certification of Walter Tirell, Director of Security of Atlantis Casino Hotel as Exhibit F.

IT IS THEREFORE AGREED AND STIPULATED by and between the parties:

1. In recognition of the foregoing, the parties agree that the Commission may impose a letter of reprimand or censure against Respondent Atlantis, which letter or censure shall be made a permanent part of the file of Respondent Atlantis, if, in its discretion, the Commission deems such action appropriate in accordance with N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 and 130.

2. The parties further agree that the Commission may impose a civil penalty of up to $14,562.50 against Respondent Atlantis if, in its discretion, the Commission deems such action appropriate in accordance with N.J.S.A. 5:12-129 and 130.

3. The parties further agree that to the extent that any civil penalty imposed by the Commission against Respondent Atlantis is less than $14,562.50, Respondent Atlantis shall contribute the difference between $14,562.50 and the amount of any civil penalty to the Atlantic Mental Health Center, Inc. The Director of the Division of Gaming Enforcement reserves his right to request that Respondent's contribution to the Atlantic Mental Health Center, Inc. be utilized for a specific purpose.

4. The parties agree that such settlement is just and equitable, in keeping with the provisions and underlying policies of the Casino Control Act and shall be in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in the Division's compliant.

5. This Stipulation shall be subject to the approval and acceptance of the Casino Control Commission and shall be null void if it is not approved and accepted by the Casino Control Commission.

The undersigned consent to the form and entry of this Stipulation of Fact and Settlement.

Ronald Ernst, petitioner, pro se

Norma Stancil, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 7, 1989 Decided: March 27, 1989

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Ronald Ernst (petitioner) seeks licensure as a casino employee under the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq). By letter report to the Casino Control Commission, dated March 17, 1988, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (respondent) objected to the application for licensure, based in part upon the petitioner's criminal record. The issue to be resolved is as follows:

> Whether the petitioner has established by clear and convincing evidence that he possesses the good character, honesty and integrity required for casino employee licensure by Sections 89b(2) and 90b of the Casino Control Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner's request for a hearing on his license application was received by the Casino Control Commission on May 3, 1988. On May 9, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was conducted by Administrative Law Judge Edgar R. Holmes on August 16, 1988.

The hearing in this matter was conducted by the undersigned as scheduled on October 6, 1988. Following the hearing, the record remained open to permit the Division of Gaming Enforcement to submit a letter from the Hudson County Probation Department and to permit the petitioner to submit a letter concerning his out-patient drug counseling. The petitioner had no objection to the subsequently submitted letter from the Hudson County Probation Department and it was admitted into evidence as Exhibit R-11 on December 1, 1988. However, the respondent objected to admission into evidence of an undated letter of one James Valdora (Exhibit P-4 for identification) concerning petitioner's attendance at Alcoholic's Anonymous (AA) meetings, which letter was submitted by petitioner following the hearing.

The Division asserted that the letter in question did not have evidentiary value, contending that it lacked specificity to substantiate the petitioner's attendance in an appropriate program. The Division also challenged the composition of the letter, asserting that it had been written by the petitioner himself. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.6, when a party raises a genuine question concerning the authenticity of a document, the judge may require further authentication of the questioned document by affidavit or certification. By letter dated December 1, 1988, I requested that the petitioner submit some proof of the authenticity of the Valdora letter. No such proof was submitted. By letter dated February 7, 1989, the parties were advised that the requested proof had not been submitted and that the document could not be admitted into evidence. The parties were further advised that the record in this matter was closed as of that date.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts material to disposition of this matter are essentially undisputed. The petitioner is a 23-year-old resident of Smithville, New Jersey. In February 1988, he successfully completed a 240 hour craps dealer course given by the Casino Career Institute. A letter from Sonny Merlette, Assistant Director of Gaming Instructions at the Institute was admitted into evidence as Exhibit P-1. Mr. Merlette attested to the petitioner's sound character and positive attitude.

At the time of the hearing in this matter, the petitioner had been employed as a cook at the Sands Hotel and Casino for three months. He works on the 3:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. shift five or six days per week. The petitioner has received on-the-job training at the Sands and he frequently works overtime hours. According to the petitioner, he has had no problems with anyone at the Sands.

Division of Gaming Enforcement Agent Mary Jo Bartzak testified that she conducted a personal interview of the petitioner on July 21, 1987. At that time, Ms. Bartzak questioned the petitioner concerning two arrests which he had listed on his Personal History Disclosure Form filed with the Casino Control Commission in February 1987 (Exhibit R-10). The petitioner was arrested on January 18, 1986, by the Bayonne police and charged with possession of a controlled dangerous substance (PCP), possession of marijuana under 25 grams, and possession of PCP with intent to distribute (Exhibit R-2). The police investigation report (Exhibit R-1) indicated that the petitioner was observed driving a vehicle and smoking what appeared to be a marijuana cigarette. Packets of PCP were found in the vehicle and the petitioner had on his person a manilla envelope of marijuana. One of the petitioner's passengers also had on his person a manilla envelope of marijuana.

The petitioner was subsequently indicted in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Hudson County, on charges of possession of a controlled dangerous substance, contrary to N.J.S.A. 24:21-20(a)1 and possession of a controlled dangerous substance with intent to distribute, contrary to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)1 (Exhibit R-3). On July 16, 1986, the petitioner was declared a first offender and was placed on probationary supervision for one year (Exhibit R-4).

Testifying at the hearing, the petitioner acknowledged the foregoing arrest. However, he initially stated that he had not been driving and that he had not been smoking marijuana at the time he was arrested. The police came to his house shortly after he had parked the vehicle. The petitioner acknowledged that he did have in his possession an envelope with marijuana. However, he stated that the envelopes of PCP were not his. He understood his one-year probation to require that he stay out of trouble and stay in contact with the probation department. If he so complied, the charges were to be dropped.

The petitioner admitted that he did not comply with the terms of probation. After eight or nine months, he no longer maintained contact with the probation department. The petitioner explained that it was a bad time in his life. He had "no grasp on reality" and was in and out of jobs with no career opportunities. The petitioner admitted "getting high" during that time.

The petitioner's next arrest occurred in January 1987 (Exhibit R-7) when he was stopped by the New Jersey State Police for a motor vehicle violation. The trooper's check of the petitioner's driver license revealed that it was suspended for failure to appear in Bayonne City Municipal Court and there were two active warrants for the petitioner's arrest as a result. According to the trooper's investigation report (Exhibit R-6), the petitioner's mother answered both municipal court warrants, the petitioner was released, and the case was closed. The petitioner testified at the hearing that he had no idea he had been driving on the suspended list and that he had not received notice to appear in the municipal court.

The petitioner was next arrested on June 12, 1987. He was charged by the Bayonne police with possession of a controlled dangerous substance (angel dust), in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-20(a)(1). In his investigation report (Exhibit R-8), the arresting officer stated that he observed the petitioner rolling a joint which was later determined to be PCP. The municipal court complaint against the petitioner for this offense was admitted into evidence as Exhibit R-9.

The petitioner's original first offender probation was to have been completed on July 16, 1987. When Agent Bartzak contacted the Hudson County Probation Department, she learned that the petitioner's probation had been completed unsatisfactorily, due to his failure to report and his subsequent arrest on June 12, 1987. Ms. Bartzak stated that she then contacted the Bayonne Municipal Court to inquire about this second drug possession arrest. She was told that the matter had been postponed and that there was a warrant out for the petitioner's failure to appear. Ms. Bartzak then contacted the petitioner on September 14, 1987, and asked him about the matter. According to Ms. Bartzak, the petitioner told her that she should call his drug counselor, Mr. Hartnit.

Ms. Bartzak telephone Mr. Hartnit, who advised that the possession of PCP charge of June 1987 had been downgraded to a disorderly persons offense and that the petitioner was required to go to drug rehabilitation counseling. When the petitioner had not reported as he was supposed to, Mr. Hartnit put out a warrant for his arrest. When Ms. Bartzak again contacted the petitioner, he advised her that he had recently learned about the warrant because it had led to his arrest when he was stopped for a traffic violation by the Fairfield police. The petitioner told Ms. Bartzak that he spent three days in jail on the arrest for contempt of court and was bailed out by his boss for $500.

Because the petitioner did not satisfactorily complete his original one-year probation in the suspended proceedings program arising from his 1986 indictment, he was required to return to court for resentencing on October 14, 1987. Indicating in his statement of reasons that the petitioner was being given one more chance to straighten out his life, Superior Court Judge Maurice A. Walsh, Jr., sentenced the petitioner to a term of probation of three years on condition that the petitioner attend out-patient drug counseling selected and closely monitored by the probation department. The court also indicated that a violation of probation would be dealt with sternly (Exhibit R-5).

The petitioner also was required to appear in Bayonne Municipal Court concerning the subsequent possession of CDS charge arising from his arrest on June 12, 1987. On November 2, 1987, the petitioner entered a plea of guilty to the downgraded disorderly persons charge. He was fined $150 and placed on probation for a period of six months (Exhibit R-9). This probation is to run concurrently with the three-year probation imposed in Superior Court on October 14, 1987.

The petitioner acknowledged that he is on probation until October 1990. He stated that he is required to visit the probation officer once a month and he must not have any further arrests. According to the petitioner, he also must attend out-patient drug counseling "approximately two days a week," for two hours each day. The petitioner stated that he attends these drug counseling sessions in Bayonne, New Jersey.

It was the petitioner's testimony that he used drugs for approximately three years, although not consecutively. When asked the frequency of his drug use, the petitioner answered, "at one point maybe once a month, then right before I got arrested maybe a couple times a week." The petitioner stated at the hearing that he had not used drugs for approximately a year and one-half. The petitioner testified that his group counseling sessions have improved his feelings of self-esteem. He feels more productive at his job and he now wants to get somewhere in life. The petitioner feels that he has grown up a lot in the last two years. He knows that he made bad choices at a vulnerable time in his life and he feels that he has come out of the situation a stronger person.

Debra Illing testified on behalf of the petitioner. The petitioner resides in her home. She has known him for three years and it was her testimony that he has made drastic and positive changes in his life during the past year and one-half. According to Ms. Illing, the petitioner realizes his past mistakes and is now much more responsible. She has never seen him use drugs.

Finally, a letter from Probation Officer Jack J. McCole of the Hudson County Probation Department was admitted into evidence on December 1, 1988, as Exhibit R-11. The letter notes that the petitioner was placed on probation for possession of a controlled dangerous substance for three years, beginning October 14, 1987. A probationary period of six months on another charge of possession of a controlled dangerous substance was to run concurrent with the previous term of probation, beginning November 2, 1987. Officer McCole further advised, "probationer states that he attends N.A. meetings but at the present time I have no verification of attendance even though I have asked for it." The petitioner was afforded an opportunity to object to admission of this letter and to offer any argument concerning its significance. However, no objection or argument was received from the petitioner. As noted previously, the petitioner failed to submit the required authentication for a letter purporting to be from one James Valdora (Exhibit P-4 for identification), and this letter concerning the petitioner's attendance at A.A. meetings was not admitted into evidence.

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to section 80a of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.), it is the affirmative responsibility of each applicant to establish by clear and convincing evidence his individual qualifications for licensure. Among these qualifications is the requirement that an applicant for a casino employee license must demonstrate that he possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure, pursuant to sections 89b(2) and 90b of the Act.

The undisputed facts in this matter reveal a chain of events adverse to the petitioner which stem from his involvement with drugs. His first arrest for drug possession occurred in January 1986 when he was 20 years old. In his Personal History Disclosure Form, the petitioner revealed this arrest but in an explanatory note stated that he was "not aware that drugs were in the car." The petitioner also noted his willingness to submit to a drug test. At the hearing, the petitioner acknowledged that he had marijuana in his possession at the time of that arrest. Perhaps when the petitioner included the note in his Personal History Disclosure Form he drew some distinction between marijuana and PCP, which he was also charged with possessing. In any event, the petitioner's testimony concerning the circumstances of this arrest impressed me as being less than completely candid.

The petitioner was afforded first offender status and was placed under probationary supervision for one year. However, he did not satisfactorily complete the term of probation. He failed to report as required and he was also subsequently arrested on another drug possession charge on June 12, 1987. As a result of these difficulties, the petitioner was placed on a three-year term of probation beginning October 14, 1987. He is required to attend out-patient drug counseling which is to be closely monitored by the probation department.

The petitioner's probation is not scheduled to end until October 1990. According to his probation officer, verification of the petitioner's attendance at drug counseling meetings has been requested but it has not been supplied. The petitioner testified that he has attended counseling sessions and has benefited from them. However, the petitioner has failed to provide any other admissible evidence which establishes the frequency of his attendance at any out-patient drug counseling program.

The credible evidence in the record establishes that the petitioner is well thought of by a number of individuals. He appears to be working satisfactorily as a cook in an Atlantic City casino hotel. However, given his previous problems complying with terms of probation and the present failure to verify his compliance with the terms of his probationary period which is not scheduled to end until October 1990, I must CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by clear and convincing evidence that he possesses the good character, honesty and integrity required for casino employee licensure by sections 89b(2) and 90b of the Casino Control Act. Therefore, I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner's application for licensure as a casino employee should be denied.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the application of Ronald Ernst for licensure as a casino employee be DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meetings of February 8, 1989, and March 8, 1989,

IT IS on this 28th day of April 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

> To include reference to the respondent's 1985 conviction for conspiracy to commit burglary and theft, and to include reference to the 1983 charge against respondent of receiving stolen property, which charge was later dismissed. Both of these incidents were inadvertently omitted from the initial decision; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent is found disqualified from holding a casino employee license and casino hotel employee registration substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision which is incorporated herein by reference; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent's disqualification is waived pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(e) to permit him to retain his casino hotel employee registration and he remains eligible for employment in any capacity permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-8 and 91; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, other than a casino hotel employee registration, the respondent is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any license, qualification or approval required under the Casino Control Act, except pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8.

Record Closed: November 16, 1988 Decided: December 28, 1988

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Jose Estrada, respondent, is registered with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) as a casino hotel employee pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91. On October 31, 1983 and on September 9, 1985, the respondent was convicted of burglary contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:18-2. At the sentencing hearing on one of the two offenses, accompanying theft charges were dismissed. In the other sentencing hearing, the defendant was also sentenced for a fourth degree theft. The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), by virtue of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, seeks to prove the underlying facts constituting theft which accompanied the burglary charges in order to disqualify the respondent from casino hotel registration pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, which enumerates disqualifying offenses. Burglary less than third degree is not a disqualifying offense. Theft in the third degree is a disqualifying offense. Section 91b of the Casino Control Act (Act) permits revocation of a registration for conduct or offenses described in section 86c.

The Division complaint seeking revocation was filed May 3, 1988. The respondent requested a hearing. On June 7, 1988, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held in Atlantic City on August 16, 1988 and three issues to be resolved at the hearing were identified as follows:

A. Whether respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 on July 12, 1985.

B. Whether respondent committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 on October 20, 1983.

C. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 91d of the Act.

At the hearing on November 4, 1988, the Division withdrew issue A.

The record was reopened on December 12, 1988 for 10 days because judicial notice was taken of a statute pursuant to Evid. R. 9 (1) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.2(c). The Evidence Rule mandates that notice be taken of statutes. The Administrative Code requires the judge to alert the parties when he does take judicial notice of a statute.

SUMMARY OF STATE'S EVIDENCE

The Division relied on the indictments filed against the respondent, his records of conviction, and the respondent's own testimony. The evidence adduced shows that the respondent stole the entire contents of a private residence and hid it in the woods where the police discovered it. This occurred on August 14, 1983. He was convicted of the burglary on October 31, 1983.

Five days later, on August 19, 1983, the respondent committed another burglary to which he pled guilty on September 9, 1983. This burglary included a fourth degree theft.

None of these dates coincide with the date of October 20, 1983, which is the date of the offense according to the prehearing Order. Nevertheless, the respondent knew exactly which offenses the Division was relying upon to revoke his registration. He described the factual basis of the August 14, 1983 burglary and he denied committing the August 19, 1983 burglary. In that case he claimed he was in a car with two friends and the stolen items were found in the trunk. He claimed he was surprised. Nonetheless he pled guilty to that charge.

The respondent acknowledged that he had a shoplifting charge in May of 1983 in Egg Harbor City. He also admitted a minor drug offense in August of 1984. He then submitted that he stopped smoking marijuana about a month ago. This completes the respondent's criminal history and the Division's proofs.

DISQUALIFICATION CRITERIA

The complaint and the prehearing Order both refer to the date of October 20, 1983 as the operative date for the commission of the offense (Order) or the date of the conviction for the offense (complaint). The proofs do not conform to this date. Nevertheless, it was clear that the respondent knew that burglary and theft charges were the conduct complained of by the Division.

There is no proof however, that the respondent committed a disqualifying offense. For burglary to be a disqualifying offense, it must be in the second degree. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c (1). For burglary to rise to a crime of the second degree, it must be committed while armed or the burglar must threaten, attempt, or commit bodily harm. N.J.S.A. 2C:18-2. There was no proof that respondent was armed or that he confronted a victim at the scene.

For theft to be a disqualifying offense, it must rise to the level of a second or third degree crime. Except for certain acts not relevant here, theft is graded by the value of the items stolen. N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b. Third degree theft requires a value in excess of $500. No value was proved in this case. I cannot assume that the value exceeds $500, only that the stolen items have some value. State v. Lopez, 160 N.J. Super. 30 (App. Div. 1978) 33-35.

While there is no question that the respondent was convicted of two burglaries and moreover, in the course of those two burglaries, that he committed two thefts, the proofs do not rise to the level required for a disqualification offense.

I therefore CONCLUDE, that the Division has failed to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the respondent has committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier.

REHABILITATION AND INIMICALITY

The prehearing order lists rehabilitation as an issue just in case the State was able to prove that the respondent committed a disqualifying offense. Proof of rehabilitation permits a registrant who has been convicted of a disqualifying offense or who has been shown to have committed a disqualifying offense to escape the onus of revocation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

Rehabilitation also applies where the issue of inimicality is raised. Donna Davis v. Division of Gaming Enforcement; 8 N.J.A.R. 301 (1986).

Inimicality has been defined in the cases.

> Whether an offense is "inimical" to the Act and to legalized gaming is a question which can only be resolved in the circumstances of each case. The nature of the offense, the events surrounding it, including any mitigating or aggravating factors, the remoteness of the offense and the offender's conduct since the offense to the present are all matters to be considered. Without limiting the notion of what is "inimical" to the Act or gaming, it would appear to encompass those offenses which, when viewed in light of all the circumstances, indicate that participation by that person either would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the > regulatory process and of gaming operations or would create or enhance the dangers of unsuitable, unfair or illegal practices, methods and activities in the conduct of gaming or the carrying on of the business or financial arrangements incidental to gaming operations. In re Resorts Casino Application 10 N.J.A.R. 244 (1979) 254.

The issue of inimicality was not raised in this case; not in the complaint, not in the prehearing order, not at the conclusion of the case.

However it is clear that inimicality should have been an issue in this case. Can an administrative law judge raise the issue sua sponte?

New Jersey Evid. R. 9 (1) mandates that judicial notice of statutory law be taken without request by a party. Comment 2 of this rule of evidence states that judicial notice must be taken of the enumerated sources of law. There is a presumption that a court will either know, or know where to find, the law of the jurisdiction.

In B.J.L. Leasing Corp v. Whittington, 204 N.J. Super. 314 (1985), plaintiff's attorney failed to bring to the attention of the court the full text of a statutory provision relating to leases as security interests. The court held that despite the attorney's failure to bring the provision to the attention of trial judge, the judge was nevertheless bound by Evid. R. 9(1) to apply the statute. Id. at 320-321.

In Weeks v. Newark, 62 N.J. Super. 166 (App. Div. 1960), neither party brought to the attention of the court a specific statutory provision. Despite the fact that the court stated that the particular statute "seems to have escaped the research of both sides" it took judicial notice of that provision. Id. at 181.

While the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules (UAPR) indicate that parties are not bound by New Jersey Rules of Evidence except as incorporated in the UAPR, N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.1, the Evidence Rules should be utilized when and where they contribute to a complete and just disposition of the rights, duties, and obligations of all the parties. In this case the ultimate issue is the respondent's fitness for licensure. That was clear from the complaint, the prehearing order, and the conduct of the trial. It is also abundantly clear from the declaration of policy and legislative findings enumerated at N.J.S.A. 5:12-1. Subsection b (8) thereof requires that casino employee " ... registration ... be solely conditioned upon the individual qualifications of the person seeking such privilege." Accordingly, I take judicial notice of relevant portions of the "inimicality" subsection of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c as follows:

> (2) Any other offense under present New Jersey or federal law which indicates that licensure of the applicant would be inimical to the policy of this act and to casino operations;..."

RESPONDENT'S TESTIMONY

The respondent offered little evidence of rehabilitation. He was a trustee at the Atlantic County Jail and worked on a program beautifying Atlantic City. He was unable to obtain letters from persons who supervised him. He claimed he had no friends at present and that letters from former friends would not be of any value. He did claim that he was no longer engaged in criminal activity. He said that in the past he was young and single and misspent his time. Now he is 28 years old. Now he is married. He and his wife have two children and she brought two children into the marriage. She said he supports them all. He has direct deposit of his paycheck so she has control of his money. She claims he is a good husband, father and provider. She said he has completed probation and paid his fine. It was evident from his and her demeanor that the retention of his registration was of paramount concern to them.

REHABILITATION CRITERIA

Rehabilitation factors set forth in the Act are considered as part of the inimicality analysis Davis, supra. 314. They include: (1) the nature and duties of the registrant's position; (2) the nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct; (3) the circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred; (4) the date of the offense or conduct; (5) the age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed; (6) whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident; (7) any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct; (8) any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

I FIND as follows:

(1) The respondent is a supervisor of a cleaning crew and has minimum contact with casino patrons.

(2) The offenses are burglary and theft. They are serious crimes and evidence a callous disregard for the rights of others.

(3) The circumstance of one of these burglaries is remarkable. The respondent, who had no vehicle at the time, removed the entire contents of a home to a nearby woods; no doubt intending to return for them at a later date.

(4) The burglaries and thefts occurred on August 14, 1983 and August 19, 1983.

(5) The respondent was 23 at the time of these offenses.

(6) Except for a shoplifting charge in May 1983, these are the only offenses involving dishonesty appearing on the respondent's record. He has a minor marijuana offense in 1984.

(7) There was no evidence that social conditions contributed to the offense or conduct.

(8) The respondent paid his fine, served his sentence, and was a trustee. He is presently employed in a casino hotel. He supports his wife and four children satisfactorily.

The nature of these offenses cannot be disregarded. To remove the entire contents of a private home to a nearby woods for later disposal is a continuing criminal enterprise of some duration. There is no mistaking the intent. It is to deprive another of his property. The respondent has committed thefts on three occasions. It is true he has not been convicted of a crime since October 31, 1983 more than five years ago. His marriage and family responsibilities have steadied him. He was unable, however, to obtain letters of recommendation from persons who have supervised him since that time. Based on this record and the failure of the respondent to affirmatively demonstrate rehabilitation, I reluctantly CONCLUDE that the continued registration of the respondent would be inimical to the casino control act and to gaming operations. My reluctance is occasioned by the certainty I feel that this family is only sustained by the respondent's casino hotel income. I am equally certain however that the respondent is capable of theft and thus is a danger to the casino industry or its patrons.

ORDER

I ORDER that the respondent's casino hotel registration be REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record in this matter at its public meeting on April 19, 1989,

IT IS on this 16th day of May 1989, ORDERED that the ALJ's recommendation to dismiss the Division of Gaming Enforcement's complaint for revocation of Mary L. Ferry's casino hotel employee registration on the grounds that she has overcome the disqualifying conduct alleged against her is adopted; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the initial decision is modified to permit Mary L. Ferry to withdraw her application for a casino employee license subject to the restriction that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:41-8.6(a), Ms. Ferry is not eligible to apply for or obtain any license, qualification or approval required under the Casino Control Act until one (1) year has elapsed from the date of the Commission action in this matter; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this restriction against reapplication for licensure, qualification or approval shall not affect the applicant's current status as a casino hotel employee registrant pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-8 and N.J.S.A. 5:12-91.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The New Jersey Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) seeks to revoke the casino hotel employee registration of respondent Mary Lou Ferry and also objects to her application for a casino employee license.

New Jersey is an Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

The Casino Control Commission (Commission) transmitted the herein matter, on January 25, 1988, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on April 5, 1988 at which, among other things, the issues to be determined by this tribunal were agreed upon and the hearing date of August 25, 1988 was established. The August 25, 1988 hearing was adjourned and actually was held on October 21, 1988 at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. Extensions for the execution of the herein initial decision were requested and granted.

ISSUES TO BE DETERMINED

The issues to be determined by this tribunal and as agreed upon at the prehearing conference are these:

1. Whether the registrant failed to cooperate with the Division in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-78, 89b, and 80d?

2. Whether the registrant has failed to provide complete and accurate information to the Division and, therefore, should be disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b?

3. Whether, in light of issues (1) and (2) above, the registrant/applicant has established the requisite reputation for good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2)?

MOTION

The Division moved before this administrative tribunal to withdraw its letter of objection to respondent's casino employee license and its complaint concerning respondent's registration, without prejudice, based upon two considerations; namely: (1) That respondent had cooperated with the Division and supplied it with the requested documentation and, that respondent was willing to subject herself to a sworn statement at the Division's direction; (2) That respondent no longer wishes to remain in the casino industry either as a registrant or as a licensed casino employee and voluntarily withdraws from same for a period of three years.

TESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE

Respondent, Mary Louise Ferry, testified, among other things, that she is presently employed as the office administrator and sales person at Jean Farley Realty, which constitutes a new career for her. She asserted that she voluntarily withdraws her casino hotel registration and her application for a casino employee license and further, that she will not apply for registration or licensure for a term of three (3) years from the date the Commission takes action on the herein matter.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS

Based upon the Division's application and the supporting testimony adduced by respondent Mary Lou Ferry, I FIND that respondent has cooperated with the Division to the extent that the Division's representatives requested same. I further FIND that respondent voluntarily withdraws her present casino hotel registration as well as her application for a casino employee license.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the instant matters be and hereby withdrawn and, therefore, no longer contested cases before the Office of Administrative Law.

DISPOSITION

It is hereby ORDERED that the Division of Gaming Enforcement complaint against respondent Mary Lou Ferry's casino hotel registration and its objection against her casino employee license is hereby DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of May 17, 1989,

IT IS on this 28th day of June 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

> When determining whether conduct is disqualifying, the administrative law judge should have considered, in addition to standards set forth in In re Resorts Casino Application, 10 N.J.A.R. 244 (1979), the rehabilitation factors of N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(d) and 90(h). Application of Donna Davis, 8 N.J.A.R. 301, 313 (1985).
>
> Utilization of the rehabilitation factors provides a more structured, yet flexible, framework for analyzing the facts of any case to determine whether the offender is suitable for licensure or registration under the Act. Application of Edward Bershad Company, t/a Penn Vending Company for a Casino Service Industry License, _____ N.J.A.R. _____ (Commission Decision, March 28, 1989).

Explicit delineation of the rehabilitation criteria and the application of each factor to the facts of the case ensures a thorough assessment of the pertinent evidence and enhances the Commission's ability to determine whether the recommendation contained in the initial decision is supported by a preponderance of the credible evidence in the record. DeVitis v. New Jersey Racing Commission, 202 N.J. Super. 484 (App. Div., 1985)

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent's casino employee license and casino hotel employee registration are revoked substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision, which as modified, is incorporated herein by reference; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Roger D. Ford is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any license, registration, qualification or approval under the Casino Control Act except pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8.

Record Closed: March 30, 1989 Decided: April 3, 1989

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on November 2, 1988, seeking revocation of respondent Roger D. Ford's casino employee license and his casino hotel employee registration grounded, in part, upon the Division's allegation that respondent had been arrested and charged with Theft by Unlawful Taking, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3, therefore, making respondent ineligible for continued licensure and registration in the casino industry.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 5, 1988, respondent requested a hearing. On November 27, 1988, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on January 26, 1989, Administrative Law Judge Beatrice S. Tylutki presiding, at which, among other things, the issues to be resolved at the hearing were set forth and the hearing date of March 30, 1989 established. The hearing was held on March 30, 1989 at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey, The record in this matter was considered closed on that date.

MOTION TO AMEND PREHEARING ISSUES

Upon opening the hearing record, the Division propounded an oral motion to amend the Issues as set forth in the Prehearing Order dated January 27, 1989. Respondent did not object to the motion, therefore, the motion was granted and the issues to be resolved by this tribunal, as amended, are as follows:

A. Whether respondent's continued licensure and/or registration would be inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2), as a consequence of his conviction of a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 and the circumstances surrounding that violation?

B. Whether the respondent possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90d?

FINDINGS OF FACT

The relevant and material facts in this matter are neither contested nor in dispute. Therefore, based upon the pleadings, respondent's testimony and the single document marked into evidence, I make the following FINDINGS OF FACT.

Respondent, Roger Devoy Ford, is eighteen years of age and is currently the holder of casino employee license no. 76908-21 and casino hotel employee registration no. 75577-40. On or about July 30, 1988, respondent was arrested while employed and working at the Showboat Hotel Casino in Atlantic City, New Jersey. The arrest occurred between 6:00 p.m. and 6:15 p.m. where it was alleged that respondent, who was performing the duties of a coin booth cashier, removed $60 from his cash drawer and placed the money in his street shoe. Respondent was observed by the casino's surveillance department where the act was video taped and he was subsequently charged with violating N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3, Theft by Unlawful Taking. On December 12, 1988, respondent entered a plea of guilty to a N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 offense before the Atlantic City Municipal Court for which he was fined $25, plus $25 in court costs, and a $30 penalty to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board (VCCB) (P-1).

Respondent's casino employee license and casino hotel registration is presently under suspension by Order of the Commission. His "21" license entitles respondent to be employed in the casino industry as a slot attendant, booth cashier or security guard. He is presently unemployed while living with his mother in Atlantic City. Respondent's mother is also unemployed and in receipt of welfare grants in aid for her subsistence.

TESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE

Respondent testified both for the Division and on his own behalf. In his defense, respondent asserted that on July 30, 1988, while on duty at the Showboat Hotel Casino, he had asked his supervisor if he could get his paycheck early that day. The supervisor advised respondent that he could not get his paycheck before the date and time they were transmitted to all the employees. Respondent asserted that he needed money to purchase sneakers for his brother who was serving a jail sentence on a drug conviction.

Respondent testified that he had been informed by a fellow employee as to a method to cover a shortage of money from the coin booth without immediate detection by the casino authorities. He employed the method, without success.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS
Section 86c(2)

The statutory provision at N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2) is commonly referred to as the "inimical clause" of the Casino Control Act (Act). The standards by which section 86c(2) are to be applied in individual cases where a determination is to be made as to whether an offense is inimical to the purposes and policies of the Act were set forth by the Commission in In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc., for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission No. 79-CL-1, (February 26, 1979), where it said at 15:

> ...The nature of the offense, the events surrounding it, including any mitigating or aggravating factors, the remoteness of the offense and the offender's conduct since the offense to the present are all matters to be considered. Without limiting the notion of what is "inimical" to the Act or to gaming, it would appear to encompass those offenses which, when viewed in light of all the circumstances, indicate that participation by that person either would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the regulatory process and of gaming operations or would create or enhance the dangers of unsuitable, unfair or illegal practices, methods and activities in the conduct of gaming or the carrying on of the business or financial arrangements incidental to gaming operations.

The Appellate Division of Superior Court has held that "inimical," with regards to the casino industry, means "adverse to the policy of the Act and gaming operation." In the Matter of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union Local 54, (N.J. App. Div. July 11, 1985, A-993-82T5, A-317-84T5, A-525-84T5, A-880-84T5) (unreported at 17).

The undisputed facts of the instant matter demonstrates that while employed as a coin booth cashier at the Showboat Hotel Casino on July 30, 1988, respondent knowingly and with intent, did commit the offense of Theft by Unlawful Taking contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3. Notwithstanding that the amount of money involved in the theft gives rise to only a disorderly persons offense (less than $200), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(3), the circumstances of the taking indicates that respondent's continued participation in the casino industry would undermine public confidence in the integrity of gaming operations. Respondent, although young, was aware that his act of theft was illegal and failed to produce any mitigating factors to alleviate the severity of his conduct. The reasons stated by respondent for the commission of the offense does not warrant consideration as mitigating factors but, rather, appear to be aggravating factors instead. The theft of money from his casino employer for the purchase of sneakers for his jailed brother, rather than wait for his legitimate paycheck, is not sufficient reason to absolve or exculpate respondent's behavior. Respondent knowingly committed the act of theft of his employer's property during the course of his employment. Such an act, clearly, may not be condoned.

I CONCLUDE the Division has clearly established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that respondent's conduct is inimical to the Act as a consequence of his violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 and the circumstances surrounding that event.

Section 89b(2)

The Division alleges that respondent lacks the requisite good character, honesty and integrity to possess a casino employee license. N.J.S.A. 89b(2) provides, in pertinent part, that:

In accordance with section 89b(2), the burden of proof lies with respondent by the standard of clear and convincing evidence. This standard of proof was articulated by the Commission in its decision in In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979) at pp. 5-6 where it said:

> ...The clear and convincing evidence requirement falls somewhere between the ordinary civil standard of preponderance of the evidence and the criminal standard of beyond a reasonable doubt, clear and convincing evidence should produce in the mind of the (fact finder) a firm belief or conviction as to the truth of the matters sought to be established....

In Resorts, supra., at 8, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, which raises questions which must be addressed by the applicant, is not the determinative criteria for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The Commission continued to say:

> ...A sullied reputation may well be indicative of poor character. In that respect, reputation is quite relevant. However, reputation and actual character are not the same.

In the instant matter, respondent has engaged in a course of conduct which runs counter to the accepted standards of honesty, integrity and good character. He has failed to establish his good reputation through the production of witnesses who know him and/or know of him. Respondent's only proof is his assertion that his conviction of the section 2C:20-3 offense is his first and only criminal offense. That is not sufficient to satisfy his obligation and standard of proof.

I, therefore CONCLUDE that respondent has failed to demonstrate, by the standard of proof of clear and convincing evidence, that he possesses the degree of good character, honesty and integrity required to maintain his license as a casino employee.

ORDER

For all of the reasons advanced hereinbefore, it is accordingly ORDERED that the casino employee license and the casino hotel employee registration of Roger D. Ford be and are hereby REVOKED and that the Division's complaint is hereby AFFIRMED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the administrative law judge (ALJ) having found that the respondent was convicted of the offense of possession of gambling records (third degree) in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:37-3(a), which is a disqualifying offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(1); and the ALJ having determined that the respondent failed to establish his rehabilitation and the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure; and the ALJ having filed an initial decision with the Casino Control Commission recommending revocation of respondent's casino employee license; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of March 1, 1989,

IT IS on this 16th day of May 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified for the purpose of amplifying the discussion of the rehabilitation factors contained in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h), viz.: (1) the respondent's position as a floorperson raises concern for the integrity of gaming operations; (2) because the respondent's unlawful gambling offense is related to bookmaking, it is a most serious disqualifying offense; (3) the seriousness of this offense is aggravated because it was committed under circumstances which involved the respondent's contact with a casino patron during the course of his employment as a floorperson; (4) the date of the offense, June 1986, is relatively recent; (5) the respondent was of mature age, 30 years, when the offense was committed; (6) this was not an isolated incident in that the gambling records found by the police were for a two-week period. Moreover, the respondent's testimony regarding his involvement in illegal gambling was less than candid. The fact that the police were able to obtain a search warrant for the respondent's residence indicates that they had probable cause to believe evidence of criminality would be found therein. Yet, the respondent testified that his house was searched by mistake and that he visited the house of a reputed gambler on only one occasion. Under the circumstances, his testimony strains credibility and is unworthy of belief; and (7) there are no compelling mitigating factors sufficient to overcome the respondent's disqualification. The evidence of the respondent's rehabilitation included: (a) one favorable character reference; (b) successful completion of probation; and (c) recent pursuit of a law-abiding lifestyle as evidenced by his self-employment as a house painter following the suspension of his casino employee license and his having had no further contact with the unsavory persons with whom he had been involved in his unlawful gambling activity. Although not insubstantial, this evidence is insufficient to overcome his disqualification.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, subject to this modification, the initial decision is adopted and the casino employee license of Stephen M. Gaspari is hereby revoked; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Stephen M. Gaspari is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any other license, registration, qualification or approval required unde the Casino Control Act except pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8.

Stephen M. Gaspari, respondent, pro se

Record Closed: December 23, 1988 Decided: January 9, 1989

BEFORE BEATRICE TYLUTKI, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter concerns the complaint filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on August 18, 1986, seeking the revocation of the casino employee license of the respondent, Stephen M. Gaspari, pursuant to the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

The Commission ordered the temporary suspension of the respondent's casino employee license on August 25, 1986. The respondent requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on April 8, 1988, for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held by way of a telephone conference call on June 28, 1988. At that time the parties agreed that the issues in this matter are:

1. Whether the respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

2. Whether the respondent's continued licensure is inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2).

3. Whether the respondent engaged in criminal activities for economic gain in violation of the criminal and civil public policy of New Jersey, and which would render his continued licensure inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86e.

4. Whether the respondent possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2).

5. Whether the respondent can demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

The hearing was initially scheduled for September 1, 1988, and was adjourned at the request of the Deputy Attorney General then assigned to the case, David Arrajj. The matter was rescheduled for September 19, 1988, and was again rescheduled since the respondent was confused as to the hearing location. The matter was rescheduled and heard on December 2, 1988, at the Audubon Municipal Building in Audubon, New Jersey.

During the hearing, the respondent requested additional time to submit statements from character witnesses. I agreed to keep the record open until December 23, 1988, for the receipt of such letters and for comments thereon by Deputy Attorney General Ralph L. Fusco. One letter was submitted by the respondent within this time and the record closed on December 23, 1988.

I FIND that the facts in this matter are not in dispute.

In June 1986, there was a search of the respondent's residence pursuant to a search warrant and he was arrested while at work at Bally's Park Place Hotel and Casino (Park Place). Mr. Gaspari was indicted and charged with one count of the possession of gambling records representing more than five bets totalling more than $1,000.00, contrary to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 2C:37-3a; one count of the possession of a prohibited weapon, a sawed-off shotgun, contrary to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-3b; and one count of the possession of a rifle without the requisite identification card, contrary to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-5c1 (P-1). On April 9, 1987, the respondent pled guilty to the possession of gambling records and to the possession of a prohibited weapon and the other charge was dismissed (P-2). Mr. Gaspari was placed on probation for one year, fined a total of $300.00 and was required to pay $60.00 to the VCCB (P-2). Prior to the hearing in this matter, the respondent had completed his one year probationary period and has paid all fines and the VCCB payment.

According to Mr. Gaspari, his residence was searched by mistake. The respondent stated that his former friend, Charles Sposaro, was employed in 1986 as a craps dealer at the Sands Hotel and Casino and was involved in illegal sport betting. According to the respondent, Mr. Sposaro was involved in a dispute about a wager and the person who placed the bet went to the police. The police initiated an investigation into Mr. Sposaro's gambling activities and during this investigation the police observed on one occasion that the respondent visited Mr. Sposaro. Since the police suspected that the respondent was involved in Mr. Sposaro's gambling activities, they searched his residence. The respondent denied that he was involved in Mr. Sposaro's illegal gambling activities.

When the police searched the respondent's residence, they found gambling records which the respondent stated represented his own sport bets and some bets for friends, which he had placed with a person he met while working at Park Place. This person was a patron of the casino who, during informal conversations, mentioned his personal sport bets and then indicated a willingness to handle the respondent's sport bets. Mr. Gaspari stated that he has not seen or talked to this person since his 1986 arrest. According to the respondent, he has not done any illegal gambling since his arrest and conviction.

As to the sawed-off shotgun, the respondent stated that he sawed the weapon in half sometime ago after he saw a person do this in a movie. The shotgun was disassembled and was in a tool box in his attic; Mr. Gaspari stated that the shotgun had been in this box for more than ten years and that parts of the weapon were missing. He doubted whether it would be usable if reassembled. As to the rifle, the respondent stated that he bought it while in military service and that he was not aware that it was illegal to have such a rifle in his possession without an identification card.

The respondent worked in a casino in Las Vegas for three months, and then in 1979, he started to work for Park Place as a dealer. While the respondent worked for Park Place, he held several types of positions, the last position being floorperson.

After the respondent's casino employee license was suspended and he lost his position with Park Place, Mr. Gaspari sold his home in Ventnor and moved to Blackwood, where he currently resides. Mr. Gaspari was married just prior to his arrest and he and his wife now have a nine-month-old child. Presently, the respondent is self-employed as a painter and currently he has no intention to either move back to the Atlantic City area or to seek a casino position if his license is restored. However, Mr. Gaspari would like to retain his license since it gives him the option to some day get either a full-time or part-time position within the casino industry. Mr. Gaspari also indicated that he is considering the possibility of seeking employment as a gambling instructor.

On behalf of the respondent, Gabe Staino, President of the New Atlantic Auto dealership, wrote that he has known the respondent for twelve years and considers him to be a person of good character (R-1).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Deputy Attorney General Ralph L. Fusco, on behalf of the Division, argued that the Division has established a statutory disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Based on the facts presented, I agree with Mr. Fusco. Mr. Gaspari pled guilty to the charge of the possession of gambling records, a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:37-3a, which is a violation of the third degree since more than five bets and more than $1,000.00 was involved, and I CONCLUDE that this constitutes a statutory disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

Based on the respondent's testimony and absent any proof to the contrary by the Division, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's conviction for the possession of a prohibited weapon pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:39-3b is not a statutory disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) nor is the possession of the weapons inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2).

Also, Mr. Fusco argued that the respondent has not shown by clear and convincing evidence that he has been rehabilitated pursuant to the standards set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. Again, I agree with Mr. Fusco. Although Mr. Gaspari has shown that he has undergone a life-style change since his arrest and conviction by disassociating with Mr. Sposaro and the person who used to place his illegal gambling bets, by moving out of the Atlantic City area, and by starting a family, I CONCLUDE that not enough time has passed since his release from probation to show his rehabilitation pursuant to the standards set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

Lastly, based on the same facts, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Gaspari cannot now show by clear and convincing evidence, his good character, honesty and integrity, which is required for continued licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2).

Therefore, I ORDER that the respondent's license as a casino employee be REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Petitioner,
v.
ERIC L. GELMAN,
Respondent.

R. Lane Stebbins, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Eric L. Gelman, respondent, pro se

Record Closed: October 11, 1988 Decided: December 7, 1988

BEFORE RICHARD MURPHY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on April 28, 1988 seeking to revoke respondent Eric L. Gelman's casino hotel employee registration because of his guilty plea in August of 1987 to charges of tampering with or fabricating physical evidence and distribution of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana). The issues are (1) whether respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c; (2) whether respondent has been convicted of an inimical offense which disqualifies him from registration pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c2; and (3) whether respondent may demonstrate by clear and convincing proof his rehabilitation pursuant to section 91d of the Casino Control Act. Gelman concedes his disqualification and argues rehabilitation. This opinion recommends for revocation.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondent requested a hearing on the complaint on May 12, 1988 and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case on May 20, where it was preheard on August 8 and heard to completion on October 11, at which time the record closed. The two date for submission of the initial decision was extended from November 28 until December 21 because of a backlog of decisions.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The following facts are undisputed. Respondent was indicted in Camden County on May 19, 1986 for distribution of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana) after he sold the drug to an investigator from the prosecutor's office. On July 31, 1987, respondent was again indicted for distribution of a controlled dangerous substance, possession of a controlled dangerous substance, tampering with and fabricated physical evidence, hindering apprehension or prosecution, and tampering with witnesses for enforcement. He entered a plea of guilty to the two distribution counts, as well as the tampering count on August 25, 1987. (P-1 and P-2). The Division filed its complaint on April 28 of 1988 on the basis of these two convictions.

On June 23, 1987, respondent was indicted for possession of a lost or stolen credit card and pled guilty on August 3, 1987. Although the Division did not cite this conviction in its complaint, it offered it as relevant to the issue of rehabilitation. With respect to the distribution of CDS and tampering convictions, the sentencing judge offered the following statement of reasons, which I include in full as it provides a comprehensive overview of the circumstances of the second offense:

> This defendant stands convicted of two counts of distribution of marijuana and one count of tampering with physical evidence. This is his second indictable conviction. He is 20 years of age.
> With respect to indictment 1331-5-86 the defendant was arrested as part of a highly publicized undercover investigation of drug trafficking in the Cherry Hill East High School. Actually, althouigh this defendant's name surfaced during that investigation he actually sold a small quantity of marijuana to the undercover investigator at a local pizzeria. Although the defendant initially claimed he was entrapped into making that sale I believe that the presentence report and the statements of witnesses shows that that claim is totally false. In addition, the subsequent indictment shows that this defendant was predisposed towards distributing controlled dangerous substances. He transferred marijuana to a girl at a party and also the statement of some of the witnesses in indictment 1420-7-87 make it very clear that this defendant took pills home from the drug store in which he worked and freely transferred them to others as well as perhaps other substances.

With respect to the indictment 1420-7-87 the underlying circumstances of the offense are most tragic. Evidently, the defendant went to a party in which drugs were heavily engaged in. He then left the party with a few friends and went to his home. Later that evening the host of the other party came to his home and was obviously heavily overdosed. He claimed that he did not need hospitalization and he was sent downstairs to the family room to "sleep it off". If the defendant and those who were at his home were not so heavily using drugs themselves that night it is unclear as to whether they would have ignored the victim's feeling that he did not need medical assistance and required him to get it or taken him to the hospital themselves. Unfortunately, they did not act on their own and the victim overnight died of an overdose. Then, rather than getting immediate attention for the victim the defendant selfishly began to think of his own interests. He cleaned the victim up, threw all existing drugs down the toilet and then called the police. Although it is doubtful that had the defendant thought of the victim rather than himself the victim would have survived one will actually never know.

The defendant showed no remorse for what took place on the date in question and in his statement which is part of the presentence report merely stated that he wished that the victim never came to his home because he is satisfied that he would have died at his home also.

Notwithstanding all that was going on at this time in the defendant's life, within one month after that episode, namely the death in his home by way of overdose of a friend, the defendant was arrested on a charge of credit card fraud in Atlantic County, which was an indictable conviction for which he was ultimately convicted.

Under all those circumstances, and particularly considering the attitude of the defendant the court felt that the risk that he would commit another offense was a very realistic one and weighed that aggravating factor most heavily.

In addition, the court found that the need to deter was an aggravating factor.

The court also found that the defendant's own substance abuse problems were a substantial ground tending to excuse or justify his conduct although they failed to establish a defense and also found that he will participate in a program of community service.

However, with the attitude displayed by the defendant the court was particularly satisfied that he is not likely to respond affirmatively to probationary sentence unless some period of incarceration was imposed as a condition of probation.

The court did not give the defendant the benefit of mitigating factors one and two in that substance abuse and distributing controlled dangerous substances always has the possibility of causing or threatening serious harm and the defendant must have contemplated this. This was tragically borne out of the circumstances of this case.

The court did not find the defendant's prior record to be can aggravating factor or a mitigating factor in light of the fact that offense was relatively minor and was committed at or about the same time as these offenses.

The court expressed at the time of sentencing the fact that a number of parents in Cherry Hill publicly criticized the Camden County Prosecutor for engaging in this undercover investigation. The court expressed its astonishment at that type of attitude. The court felt and wanted the parents of this defendant to know since they were present at sentencing that in its opinion, rather than criticize the prosecutor for his actions the Cherry Hill community should take note of the fact that as far as this court is concerned its children are no different than children in Camden and that all persons before this court should be treated the same. Those who are more fortunate economically are not entitled to more favored treatment due to their economic status alone. In fact, their criminal activity is less understandable to the court than the criminal activity of those who are not as well off economically.

The court felt it was important to note those facts at sentencing to let the defendant and his parents know that the court was not impressed with the argument of entrapment. It was rather obvious to this court from the statements set forth in the presentence report that this defendant was predisposed to distributing controlled dangerous substance and he was not merely picked on by this undercover investigator. Rather, it is much more reasonable to infer that this defendant's name surfaced during the course of the investigation and he was initially reluctant to distribute to one he did not know.

Particularly in light of the attitude of this defendant and his family with respect to their minimizing his criminal behavior, the court felt that the period of incarceration authorized under the plea agreement was necessary in order to deter this defendant and others in his community from violation the law in this fashion. The court felt that it was particularly important to advise the defendant of its feelings with respect to this offense so that the defendant would understand the court when it also warned the defendant at the time of sentencing that a violation of probation will be treated most seriously.

As a result, the defendant was sentenced up to the maximum authorized by the plea agreement which was the imposition > of three concurrent five year terms of probation subject to the condition that the defendant serve 364 days in the Camden County Jail and subject to the further condition that upon his release he perform community service and obtain a drug evaluation and treatment.

> For consideration of aggravating and mitigating factors see attached. (P-5)

Respondent Eric Gelman does not dispute that the above-described convictions are disqualifying within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 5:12-86c but maintains that he has been rehabilitated and offers letters of recommendation in addition to his testimony. The Division also offered evidence, which was not disputed, that respondent had in his possession, when arrested for the credit card offense, a driver's license with his photograph and the name of another person, as well as a falsified college identification card (P-10). There is no dispute as to the above facts and I so FIND.

Respondent does not dispute that he was convicted of the above offenses and concedes that he is disqualified within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c). He also acknowledges that he committed some wrongs in his early adulthood but urges that he has been rehabilitated. With respect to the offenses, he claims that he was pressured into selling drugs to an undercover officer in 1985, and only after a month of recruitment sold less than an ounce of marijuana to the officer without any financial gain. As to the second drug offense, and the tampering conviction he claims that he merely shared a marijuana cigarette with his girlfriend in his home after a party and that a friend let himself in downstairs, went to sleep and died of a drug overdose, through no fault of the respondent's. He acknowledges that he cleaned up the corpse, threw the existing drugs away (including pills that he had stolen from his father's pharmacy) and later called the police. He states that he was in shock when he found the body. He attributes the credit card offense to a state of deep emotional depression and financial ruin after his conviction and states that he had no idea what he was doing at that time. He states that he obtained the false identifications when he was 19 to be able to get into the Jersey shore bars.

Gelman states and the Division does not dispute, that he served a few months in the Camden County Jail on good behavior and obtained early release, whereupon he moved to Margate and obtained employment at the Tropicana Hotel. He states that he was engaged in community service at the Bacharach Hospital at this time, and attended a ten-week program of drug rehabilitation at Reality House. He left the Tropicana to go to a better job at the Show Boat, and states that he has had no disciplinary problems on that job. He states that he also suffers from a learning disability (dyslexia), but acknowledges that he was able to graduate from high school and has attended community college, and also has accumulated some monies from playing the stock and future's market. He offered a report from Dr. Sidney D. Segal, Clinical Psychologist, who stated that he has been seeing the respondent because of an anxiety disorder and stress connected to his arrest and trial. Dr. Segal further stated that Mr. Gelman has a history of learning disability, with perceptual impairment that he is not a drug dealer and does not suffer from a substance abuse disorder (R-11). He also offers confirming letters and references from Reality House, Bacharach Hospital, his rabbi, and a number of other persons who have known him either as a personal friend or acquaintance. (R-1 to R-10).

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Respondent does not dispute that as a matter or law that his convictions for distribution of controlled dangerous substances and tampering with or fabricating physical evidence, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)(1) and N.J.S.A. 2C:28-6.1 constitute disqualifying offenses under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c) and I CONCLUDE that he is disqualified from registration on that basis.

The remaining issue is whether the respondent has shown rehabilitation within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(d). That section provides that a registrant who has committed a disqualifying offense will not be denied registration if he or she can affirmatively demonstrate rehabilitation. In determining whether such rehabilitation has been shown, the Commission is to consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;
(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
(4) The date of the offense or conduct;
(5) The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;
(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counselling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

In applying the above factors to this case, the nature and duties of the registrant's position are not significant because he occupied a low level position without any responsibility for management of employees or money. (Factor 1). The offenses of which he was convicted are highly serious ones involving both distribution of controlled dangerous substances and tampering with evidence. (Factor 3). The circumstances under which the offenses or conduct occurred in April of 1987 reflect an extreme disregard for law and contain little or nothing in the way of mitigating circumstances. (Factors 3 and 4). The respondent, who was 19 at the time of the offenses, was indicted for two separate drug offenses occurring over two years and his offense or conduct was thus repeated and cannot be described as an isolated incident. (Factors 5 and 6). He cites no social conditions contributing to the offense, other than some perceptual impairment, which did not seem to prevent him from completing school and engaging in other activities. (Factor 7). As to rehabilitation, the respondent has shown good conduct in prison and in the community, including completion of a drug treatment program as well as compliance with the terms of probation. He offers numerous character references from family and friends. He discounts the credit card conviction as solely a product of emotional stress and financial woe following his convictions for distribution and tampering, and argues that it has no bearing on his rehabilitation.

Given the highly serious nature of the multiple offenses here, as well as the disturbing circumstances under which they were committed as well as the absence of any mitigating circumstances, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has failed to show the requisite rehabilitation under N.J.S.A. 5:12-91. Although he may have learned his lesson at this point and has demonstrated progress in rehabilitating himself, the rehabilitation shown is insufficient to overcome the serious and repeated nature of the offenses on which disqualification is based.

ORDER

On the basis of the above findings of fact and conclusions of law, it is ORDERED that the casino hotel employee registration of Eric Gelman is REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

Record Closed: October 21, 1988 Decided: November 29, 1988

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of petitioner's application to be licensed as a casino employee pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. Respondent filed a letter of objection with the Casino Control Commission, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A hearing was conducted on October 14, 1988, and the record closed on October 21, 1988, after the receipt of additional information not available at the hearing.

The questions presented are whether petitioner can establish by clear and convincing evidence that she possesses financial stability and integrity, and is a person of good character, N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b; and that should respondent establish certain disqualifying conduct - theft by deception, in the third degree -, N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, whether petitioner can demonstrate rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

The facts are undisputed. In June 1980, petitioner obtained a car loan in the amount of $8,495, and in January 1983, that car was repossessed and sold leaving a loan balance of $3,813. The amount was not paid back and the lender has written off the loss.

In November 1985, the New Jersey Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance filed a certificate of debt with the Superior Court in the amount of $945 representing unemployment overpayments and a fine. This resulted from the improper collection of benefits from January 31, 1982 through April 12, 1982, during a period of employment. To this point no payments have been made upon this debt.

In July 1986, petitioner obtained a student loan through the New Jersey Higher Education Assistance Authority in the amount of $2,600. This loan is in default, but was reduced by the seizure of a tax refund in the amount of $1,744 in March 1988. Petitioner made two $25 payments in August and September 1988, and presently, $1,192 is due.

Petitioner testified that she is 30 years old, unmarried and resides with her brother in Pleasantville. She was raised in Newark and East Orange, New Jersey, and attended Fairleigh Dickinson College from 1975 through 1979. She was unable to complete her education; however, because she had to go to work. Petitioner was raised by her grandmother and she has four siblings.

Petitioner acknowledged that she was receiving unemployment benefits in 1982 while working. She testified that she was having financial problems at the time and that she was helping to support her grandmother and brother. This is what also caused her to default on her car loan. She borrowed money in 1986 from the Higher Education Assistance Authority in order to go to beautician school in Newark. This did not work out. Petitioner testified that she intends to pay these loans off, but does not now have the money to do so; she continues to support her brother. Petitioner is presently licensed as a registrant and works in the word processing department at Ballys. She has been there for two years. This is the substance of the record.

Respondent has established conduct, which if prosecuted, would have amounted to theft by deception in the third degree, a statutory disqualifier. In addition, petitioner has a number of debts which are unsatisfied. Nevertheless, petitioner has established rehabilitation, and that she is a person of financial stability and good character. At the time that she defaulted on her car loan and improperly collected unemployment benefits, petitioner was approximately 23 years old. She was helping to support her grandmother and younger brother. No subsequent criminal behavior has been reported. The loan from the Higher Education Assistance Authority was obtained in July 1986, and has been repaid in part through the seizure of a tax refund and two small voluntary payments by petitioner in the period immediately prior to hearing. There is no indication that petitioner has had any difficulty in the course of her employment as a registrant or anywhere else. She was a credible individual and appeared to be making an honest effort to pay her debts and pursue her career.

Based on the foregoing, it is my conclusion that petitioner has established by clear and convincing evidence that she is a person of financial stability and good character, and despite disqualifying conduct in 1982, she has since been rehabilitated. It is ORDERED that petitioner's application for a casino employee license be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (CCC) on October 8, 1987, seeking revocation of the respondent's casino employee gaming license. It also sought and obtained an Order suspending respondent's casino employee license. The complaint alleged that the respondent was charged with possession of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana) contrary to the law in a casino dealer's locker room. The complaint also alleges that respondent was observed smoking a marijuana cigarette in the locker room.

The Division further alleges that these facts, if proven, render the respondent's continued licensure inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g. The alleged acts also raise questions concerning the respondent's good character, honesty and integrity. These traits are required of casino employee licensees by N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90b.

The respondent requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was conducted on July 25, 1988 at which the respondent indicted he was qualified for licensure as a result of his rehabilitation as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

A plenary hearing convened on October 14, 1988 at which time stipulations were made on the record and the matter was adjourned for the purpose of perfecting the respondent's claim that he was rehabilitated. Certain evidence, he alleged, had not been obtained by the hearing date. Accordingly, the matter was continued until December 22, 1988 at which time the evidentiary phase concluded.

STIPULATIONS OF FACT

On October 14, 1988, the respondent stipulated into evidence police reports P-1, P-2, P-3 and P-4, and a New Jersey State Police Forensic laboratory report, P-5.

These exhibits reveal that on July 31, 1987, respondent was smoking marijuana in the dealer's locker room at the Tropicana Casino/Hotel where he was employed as a blackjack dealer. A consensual search revealed additional marijuana in respondent's locker. The marijuana totaled approximately one gram.

INIMICALITY AND GOOD CHARACTER

A person convicted of a so called statutory disqualifier listed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) may avoid loss of licensure by affirmatively showing that he is rehabilitated pursuant to the criteria contained in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. The benefit of rehabilitation was extended to persons where offenders were alleged to be inimical to the Casino Control Act and is "subsumed in the inimical analysis." Davis v. Division of Gaming Enforcement, 8 N.J.A.R. 301 (1986) 314.

Licensed casino employees are required to possess good character, honesty and integrity by N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90b. The statute requires that they must establish this by clear and convincing evidence.

As evidence of rehabilitation and good character, the respondent offered a letter from a Slot Shift Manager at Bally's who said that respondent was formerly employed there and was described by "immediate supervisors as dependable and honest"

The respondent also testified that he is 22 years old, worked in the casino industry for approximately one year prior to this incident and has been underemployed since that time. He spent one week as a waiter but did not make much money. He spent 2 months at a car parts warehouse unloading trucks but left because the work was too hard. He is not currently seeking employment. He has not applied for a casino employee registration. He started classes at Associated Business Schools in Atlantic City on two occasions but dropped out because the school was slow in forwarding him checks to "pay bills". He received two loans from the school for tuition and living expenses and owes the school $900. His reason for leaving school is that the personal loan money he was to live on was slow in coming in. He had to leave because he could not pay his bills without the loan proceeds. But he has only been employed for 2 months since his suspension in 1987.

It appears he is supported by his girlfriend with whom he resides. The respondent said he was no longer using marijuana, was sorry for what he did and realizes he made a big mistake. He said he never heard of anyone losing a license for using drugs.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The testimony of the respondent was insufficient to establish his good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence. He is not only unemployed but he is not truly seeking employment. He appears to have enrolled in school solely for the benefit of loans made available to students for living expenses. When these were slow in coming, he dropped out. He did this on two occasions.

No where is it written that employment is a sine qua non of good character, honesty and integrity. But an unemployed person who aspires to possess good character, ought to pass his time in some productive or socially acceptable way. This respondent offered no such testimony or evidence.

I FIND and CONCLUDE, therefore, that respondent has failed to carry his burden, by clear and convincing evidence, that he possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for continued licensure in the casino industry. N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90b.

As stated in Davis, supra. at 313, the accepted analytical approach to inimicality was first set forth in In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc., for a Casino License, Dkt. No. 79-CL-1 (Commission decision, February 26, 1979), at 15 as follows:

> Whether an offense is "inimical" to the Act and to legalized gaming is a question which can only be resolved in the circumstances of each case. The nature of the offense, the events surrounding it, including any mitigating or aggravating factors, the remoteness of the offense and the offender's conduct since the offense to the present are all matters to be considered. Without limiting the notion of what is "inimical" to the Act or gaming, it would appear to encompass those offenses which, when viewed in light of all the circumstances, indicate that participation by that person either would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the regulatory process and of gaming operations or would create or enhance the dangers of unsuitable, unfair or illegal practices, methods and activities in the conduct of > gaming or the carrying on of the business or financial arrangements incidental to gaming operations.

The facts in this matter clearly demonstrates that respondent had in his possession a quantity of marijuana, an illegal controlled dangerous substance (CDS), while employed by the Tropicana Casino/Hotel. The facts also demonstrate that respondent used the CDS while on the premises of the Tropicana. Respondent knew that the possession of marijuana constituted an illegal act. He also knew that the use of the illegal substance on the premises of the casino was forbidden. Such conduct by respondent is inimical to the Act where it "...would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the regulatory process and gaming operations..." Resorts, at 313.

I FIND and CONCLUDE, therefore, that respondent's conduct was inimical to the Act, and further, he was unable to affirmatively demonstrate any circumstances which would mitigate the conduct.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the casino employee license, issued to Troy L. Gibson, be and is hereby REVOKED and that the Division's charges against respondent are SUSTAINED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF :
JOHN J. GILL & JOHN S. HERWICK, : Petitioners, :
v. : ORDER
STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT : OF LAW & PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION : OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, :
Respondent. :

This matter having come before the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for consideration at its open public meeting of May 3, 1989, and the Commission having considered the initial decision of, Steven L. Carnes, Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), the exceptions thereto filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), and having heard oral argument, and good cause having been shown,

IT IS on this 16th day of May 1989 hereby ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

1. The ALJ's comments regarding the professionalism and competence of the Division investigator who testified herein are rejected as unnecessary and injudicious;

2. The ALJ's reliance on matters outside the record of this case in his assessment of the credibility of George Miller is rejected as improper. We nevertheless agree that the proffered statements of George Miller were not sufficient to support a finding that Messrs. Gill and Herwick were not qualified or disqualified under the Casino Control Act. N.J.S.A. 5:12-107(a) (b).

IT IS ORDERED that, subject to these modifications, the initial decision is adopted and petitioners Herwick and Gill have thus established their qualifications pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92 and N.J.A.C. 10:43-1.1 et. seq.

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioners, John J. Gill and John S. Herwick, are former qualifiers for the Baumgardner Construction Co. Inc., which applied to the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the renewal of a casino service industry license, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92. The respondent, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), opposed the issuance of the license by reason of its contention that the petitioners lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c). Subsequent to the filing of the Division's objection but prior to the Commission's consideration of Baumgardner's application, the petitioners were removed from their employment. On June 1, 1988, the Commission renewed the Baumgardner casino service industry license; however, the Commission determined to afford both petitioners in this case the opportunity to have a hearing to establish their qualifications in the event that they might seek work in the casino industry in the future.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Baumgardner Construction Co. Inc. filed with the Commission an application for the renewal of a casino service industry license. By letter to the Commission, dated February 10, 1988, the Division objected to the application of Baumgardner Construction Co. Inc. for licensure as a casino service industry, alleging that two of Baumgardner's employees, Messrs. Gill and Herwick, both of whom must clearly and convincingly establish their individual qualification as a prerequisite to the establishment of Baumgardner's qualifications pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2(a)2 and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.14, lacked the requisite degree of good character, honesty and integrity for casino service industry licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86e, N.J.S.A. 5:12-92, and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c). In its report, the Division sets forth three distinct areas that involve questionable conduct engaged in by Messrs. Gill and Herwick. The three areas are: (1) The systematic provision of free goods and services to persons who were in a position to award contracts or other benefits to Crown-NJ or to Floor Installers, Inc.; (2) The creation of a sham joint venture in order to obtain subcontracts intended to be awarded to minority-controlled businesses; and (3) The procurement of a fraudulent performance bond in connection with an Atlantic City casino hotel project. Subsequent to the filing of the Division's objection but prior to the Commission's consideration of Baumgardner's application, the petitioners were dismissed from their employment. On June 1, 1988, the Commissioner renewed Baumgardner's casino service industry license; however, the Commission determined to afford both petitioners in this case the opportunity to have a hearing to establish their qualification in the event that they might seek work in the casino industry in the future. By letter dated June 1, 1988, and received by the Commission on June 10, 1988, the petitioner, John J. Gill, requested a hearing. By letters dated February 23, 1988, and March 19, 1988, and received by the Commission on February 26, 1988, and March 2, 1988, respectively, and by verbal request at the Commission meeting on June 1, 1988, the petitioner, John S. Herwick, requested a hearing. On June 27, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law—which received it on June 29, 1988—for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held on the matter before Administrative Law Judge Lillard E. Law on August 11, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

1. Whether John J. Gill possesses the qualifications for casino service industry licensure?

    a. Whether John J. Gill possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino service industry licensure, pursuant to [N.J.A.C.] 19:43-1.3?

    b. Whether the participation of John J. Gill in casino operations would be inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act (Act) or to legalized gaming in this State, pursuant to Section 86e of the Act?

2. Whether John S. Herwick possesses the qualifications for casino service industry licensure?

    a. Whether John S. Herwick possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino service industry licensure, pursuant to [N.J.A.C.] 19:43-1.3?

    b. Whether the participation of John S. Herwick in casino operations would be inimical to the policies of the [Casino Control] Act or to legalized gaming in this State, pursuant to Section 86e of the Act?

The hearing commenced on November 14 and 15, 1988, at the Office of Administrative Law, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. At the conclusion of the testimony on November 15, 1988, the deputy attorney general requested an adjournment because his witness was unavailable due to surgery. This request was granted and the hearing was scheduled to reconvene on January 20, 1989. On December 8, 1988, the hearing was scheduled to reconvene on February 3, 1989, as the judge was unavailable on January 20, 1989. The hearing concluded on February 3, 1989, at the Municipal Courtroom, Absecon City Hall, Absecon, New Jersey, after which the record closed.

THE FACTS

A. Corporate History

All of the Division's allegations concern the business dealings of the petitioners. The petitioners were first owners of Floor Installers, Inc., and then employees of Crown Carpet Center of New Jersey, Inc. (Crown-NJ). An analysis of the companies is helpful in understanding the Division's objections.

Floor Installers, Inc., was incorporated in Pennsylvania in 1975. The officers and owners of that firm were John Gill, Patricia Gill (John Gill's wife), John Herwick and Katherine Herwick (John Herwick's wife). Floor Installers maintained its place of business in Pleasantville, New Jersey, and was engaged primarily in the installation of carpet on behalf of retail stores. Floor Installers applied for and received a casino service industry license (#149-70) in 1979. On June 4, 1985, by letter to the Division, Floor Installers indicated its desire to relinquish its license due to its bankruptcy (this subject will be discussed below). On August 14, 1986, the Commission entered an order permitting Floor Installers to withdraw its application for relicensure.

Floor Installers' first direct business with an Atlantic City casino licensee was transacted with Resorts International Hotel, Inc. The firm subsequently did business with the Boardwalk Regency Corp., Greate Bay Hotel and Casino, Inc. ("the Sands"), and Playboy-Elsinore Associates. All of the aforesaid projects involved carpet installation and later carpet maintenance by Floor Installers.

In late 1982, Floor Installers began to experience financial difficulties that were attributed by its owners to thin capitalization, the use of poor accounting methods, and poor accounting advice. As a result of these difficulties, the company filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy petition on October 25, 1982. The Chapter 11 case was converted to a Chapter 7 (i.e., liquidation) case in January 1984 and, as noted above, Floor Installers subsequently was permitted by the Commission to withdraw its application for relicensure.

In mid-1980, an entity known as Crown Carpet Center, Inc. (Crown-Ohio), of Eastlake, Ohio, received a contract to furnish carpet on a U.S. Housing and Urban Development project in Ventnor, New Jersey, known as Shalom Towers.[1] As Crown-Ohio was unfamiliar with the New Jersey area, it asked John Holzermer, business agent of Carpenters' Union Local 623, for the name of a local firm to serve as a subcontractor on the Shalom Towers job. Holzermer recommended Floor Installers, which ultimately received the subcontract.

In 1982, Floor Installers and Crown-Ohio agreed to form a joint venture to work on a portion of the Epcot Center project in Florida. The companies again utilized the joint venture approach on a Hilton-related project in Orlando, Florida, also in 1982. In addition to the joint venture projects, Crown-Ohio and Floor Installers worked together on an Atlantic City project known as Jeffries Towers, with Floor Installers acting as a subcontractor to Crown-Ohio.

On September 14, 1983, Crown-Ohio formed Crown-NJ, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Crown-Ohio. Directors of Crown-NJ were Herman Frank and Bill Sukenik, both of whom were owners and officers of Crown-Ohio. Officers of Crown-NJ were as follows: Herman Frank, President; Bill Sukenik, Secretary; Elda Rinaldi Gerrard, Assistant Secretary; John Gill, Director of Operations; and John Herwick, Director of Marketing.

On August 20, 1984, Crown-Ohio purchased Floor Installers' assets, goodwill and service contracts for $12,000. The sale was approved by Floor Installers' trustee-in-bankruptcy.

1 Crown-Ohio was incorporated in Ohio on September 18, 1976, by Herman Frank and Bill Sukenik. It is engaged in the retail sale and installation of carpet.

Herman Frank and Bill Sukenik reside in Ohio; however, Mr. Frank had daily contact with Mr. Gill by telephone, and he would come to New Jersey every two to three weeks to review the company's books, paperwork, procedures and business practices. After the company was established, Mr. Frank's visits to New Jersey became less frequent: they occurred every five to six weeks. Messrs. Frank and Sukenik retained control of the company. Messrs. Gill and Herwick were the company's sales representatives in New Jersey. Originally, Mr. Gill could only sign checks up to $200; anything greater had to be issued from Ohio. After one year, Mr. Gill could sign checks up to $5,000 and sign local payroll checks. Messrs. Gill and Herwick, as salesmen for the company, could negotiate contracts; however, they did not have the authority to sign contracts. Only Mr. Frank or Mr. Sukenik could sign contracts and obligate the company. The petitioners had little authority to make policy in Crown-NJ.

B. Bases Of The Division's Objection

The Division sets forth three distinct areas in which it alleges questionable conduct engaged in by Messrs. Gill and Herwick, either on behalf of Crown-NJ or on behalf of its predecessor, Floor Installers, Inc. The three areas are: (1) The systematic provision of free goods and services to persons who were in a position to award contracts or other benefits to Crown-NJ or to Floor Installers, Inc.; (2) The creation of a sham joint venture in order to obtain subcontracts intended to be awarded to minority-controlled businesses; and (3) The procurement of a fraudulent performance bond in connection with an Atlantic City casino hotel project.

L

The Division alleges that the petitioners provided free carpeting and other goods and services to individuals who were responsible: (1) For awarding subcontracts for projects on which the petitioners were bidding or had bid; (2) For authorizing the payment of premium overtime for workers employed by the petitioners; (3) For approving work performed by the petitioners; and (4) For recommending the release of contract funds to the petitioners by project owners or general contractors.

(a) The Greenblatt Incident

In 1984, Crown-NJ obtained a subcontract worth $450,000 on a Philadelphia

project known as Logan Square. The owner of the Logan Square project, Daniel J. Keating, employed Mr. I.E. Greenblatt as the owner's representative. Mr. Greenblatt's function on the Logan Square project was to ensure that bid specifications were followed. With respect to Crown-NJ, Mr. Greenblatt was responsible for seeing to it that Crown-NJ used the proper grade of carpet and related materials. His responsibilities also included the reporting to the project owner of his (Greenblatt's) approval of a subcontractor's work. The project owner would then release payments to the subcontractor, relying upon the recommendation of Greenblatt.

Mr. Greenblatt had contacted Crown-NJ regarding submitting a bid on the Logan Square project and had spoken with Mr. Frank. Mr. Frank submitted a bid to Mr. Keating, which bid was accepted, and the subcontract was awarded. Subsequent to the awarding of the contract, Mr. Frank and Mr. Greenblatt held discussions regarding Mr. Greenblatt's being hired by Crown-NJ as a consultant to "keep an eye" on Crown's subcontractors in Philadelphia to ensure performance. (Since the project was located in Philadelphia, Crown-NJ hired subcontractors to perform the actual contract.) Mr. Gill told Mr. Frank that he was opposed to hiring Mr. Greenblatt, as he believed it was a conflict of interest. Mr. Frank, however, did hire Mr. Greenblatt. Mr. Greenblatt was originally supposed to be paid $25,000. Mr. Greenblatt did subsequently submit an invoice to Mr. Frank in Ohio, and Crown-NJ issued a check in the amount of $15,000 to Mr. Greenblatt from its office in Ohio for consulting services.

Mr. Herwick did not function on the Logan Square project. All of the agreements were negotiated and signed by Mr. Frank. Mr. Herwick knew that Mr. Greenblatt had approached Mr. Frank about serving as Crown-NJ's representative or as a consultant on the project. Mr. Gill discussed Mr. Greenblatt's proposal with Mr. Herwick and both petitioners agreed that Crown-NJ should not accept the proposal. Mr. Herwick felt it was a conflict of interest and possibly illegal. Mr. Herwick told Mr. Frank of his concerns; however, Mr. Frank thought it was a "good deal" and decided to accept the offer. Mr. Frank indicated that he had consulted with his son (who was the corporate counsel) and that his son had opined that the Greenblatt relationship was legal.

(b) The Hilton Project

Crown-NJ had several prior business dealings with the Tishman Construction Company. As such, the companies were known to each other. In June and July of 1985, Crown-NJ was working as a subcontractor to Tishman Construction Company on what was then the Hilton Hotel Casino project in Atlantic City. During that time, Tishman's general superintendent at the project was Joseph Victoria. Mr. Victoria was the person responsible for reviewing payment requests made by contractors and subcontractors such as Crown-NJ. He could not, however, award contracts or authorize the payment of overtime. During the summer of 1985, Mr. Victoria approached Crown-NJ and asked them if they could carpet his home in Pittsburgh. In order to keep a good customer happy, Crown-NJ arranged for the installation of 70 yards of carpeting in Mr. Victoria's residence in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Crown-NJ did not perform the work itself but instead subcontracted the job. Crown-NJ paid a total of $424.02 to Carpet Craft, an Ohio company, for the installation of the carpet, which carpet was supplied by Crown-NJ. Division investigators questioned Mr. Gill about this subject during an interview on April 25, 1986. At that time, Mr. Victoria had never been sent a bill by Crown-NJ for the installation of the aforesaid carpet. On April 30, 1986, five days after Gill had been questioned by the Division regarding the Victoria issue, Crown-NJ sent an invoice to Victoria for $1,066.81 for the furnishing and installation of carpet that occurred in July 1985. Mr. Gill stated that the company simply "forgot" to bill Mr. Victoria, yet he admitted that as of the date of a sworn interview given to the Division on March 5, 1987, Mr. Victoria still had not paid Crown-NJ for the carpet installation. Mr. Herwick had no involvement with Mr. Victoria's transaction and has no knowledge regarding the payment issue.

Robert Blackman was Tishman's project manager on the Hilton project. As such, he was the person to whom Mr. Victoria reported as well as the person responsible for the selection of contractors. During the project, Mr. Blackman approached Mr. Herwick and told him that after the job was completed he was being transferred. He was moving to a new residence and asked Mr. Herwick if he could give him a good price on carpeting. Mr. Herwick told Mr. Blackman he would take care of it, and Mr. Herwick contacted Thomas Casterelli in Wantagh, New York. Mr. Casterelli is a carpet installer in New York who Mr. Herwick had used as a subcontractor in the past. On January 13, 1986, Crown-NJ received an invoice from Classic Carpet Showroom, Inc. ("Classic"), of Wantagh, New York, in the amount of $844.40 for the installation of carpeting in Mr. Blackman's New York City home. Crown-NJ paid Classic for the work, and Crown-NJ billed Mr. Blackman on January 27, 1986; however, Mr. Blackman did not timely pay Crown-NJ. Crown-NJ sent Mr. Blackman several collection letters, both before and after the Division investigated this matter, and he finally paid $2,500 for the carpeting in August 1987.

(c) Atlantic Palace Project

Crown-NJ was awarded the carpeting subcontract for the Atlantic Palace Condominium project by Perini Corporation (No. 1406-70), the project's general contractor, and Crown-NJ commenced work on the project in November 1985.

The project manager on the Atlantic Palace job was Roger McElfresh. Mr. McElfresh approached Mr. Herwick about installing carpet in Mr. McElfresh's home. As in the prior instances mentioned above, Crown-NJ subcontracted the work, this time to an individual named William Brennan. Mr. McElfresh was billed by Crown-NJ for the work in a timely manner; however, Mr. McElfresh did not pay Crown-NJ for the carpet installation in a timely manner. Numerous phone calls were made to Mr. McElfresh by Crown-NJ in an effort to collect payment.

Mr. McElfresh was responsible for approving premium overtime. In fact, Mr. McElfresh did authorize the payment of approximately $40,000 in premium overtime to Crown-NJ. Most subcontractors on the project were authorized premium overtime on the project because there was a lucrative, incentive-basis, end-of-job bonus payable to the general contractor based upon early completion of the project. Therefore, the general contractor was authorizing premium overtime to its subcontractors in an effort to complete the job early and collect a sizable bonus.

(d) Irwin LeFevre

During July 1985, the Hilton Corporation employed an individual named Irwin LeFevre as its project manager on the Hilton Hotel/Casino job, a project on which, as noted earlier, Crown-NJ was engaged. A year earlier, on August 28, 1984, Mr. LeFevre had approved a Hilton purchase order to Crown-NJ for $339,631. On July 15, 1985, Crown-Ohio issued its check for $1,213.42 payable to Katherine Herwick, wife of John Herwick. The check represented reimbursement to Mrs. Herwick for a rifle that had been purchased with John Herwick's credit card and given to Mr. LeFevre by Mr. Herwick as a gift. The cost of the rifle had been charged to the "Promotional & Entertainment" account.

Mr. Herwick and Mr. LeFevre had become friends in Florida, and both men were hunters. When the Hilton Corporation was about to leave Atlantic City, Mr.

Herwick decided to give Mr. LeFevre a rifle as a going-away present. Mr. Herwick stated this was a personal gift rather than a company gift and that the reimbursement had been incorrectly charged to the corporate entertainment account. The cost of the rifle should have been deducted from his year-end distribution of company profits.

Upon learning of this discrepancy, Mr. Herwick immediately had the situation corrected. Within three weeks of the Herwick interview, the Division received a copy of a corrected Internal Revenue Service Form 1099 that had been issued to John Herwick for 1985. The corrected 1099 was in the amount of $1,213.42, exactly the amount of the cost of the rifle that was given to Mr. LeFevre.

(e) The Sands Incident

In 1981, Floor Installers, Inc., received a contract with the Sands Hotel Casino in Atlantic City. Floor Installers received this contract based upon the recommendation of William Clause,[2] who was then the Facility Director of the Sands. Mr. Gill was asked by Mr. Clause to give him (Clause) a price on installing ceramic tile at his residence. Even though they did not do that type of work, since the Sands was a good customer Mr. Gill told Mr. Clause that he would take care of it. Floor Installers subcontracted the job to Edward A. Filling, Inc., because Floor Installers did not do ceramic work. On August 11, 1982, $3,300 in ceramic tile work was completed at Mr. Clause's personal residence by Edward A. Filling, Inc., 216 East White Horse Pike, Absecon, New Jersey. After completing the work, the Filling Company sent an invoice to Floor Installers for the work performed. Mr. Clause was never billed by Floor Installers and he never paid for the tile work. Mr. Clause was not told the work would be performed for free; however, the work was performed just prior to Floor Installers' entering into Chapter 11. At that time, Floor Installers was in a state of disarray and was looking to collect on large obligations owed to it. They simply missed collecting on this small debt for work performed by another company.

The petitioners performed the above services as an accommodation to their customers. They took pride in their work, and when asked by a customer to perform some outside service, the petitioners would attempt to comply with the request. The petitioners were not interested in doing this type of work, but they did do a few jobs of this sort as accommodations. The petitioners usually did not perform these type of services themselves but would instead subcontract the job out to other companies.

2 Mr. Clause formerly held a casino key employee license (1804011). He resigned from the Sands on January 7, 1983, and does not now possess any casino license in this jurisdiction.

II. The Alleged Sham Joint Venture

Messrs. Gill and Herwick met George Miller through Mr. Ed Bosh in 1978 or 1979. Mr. Bosh was the owner of Action Technical Services, a company which performed janitorial services for Floor Installers' offices. Mr. Miller worked for Mr. Bosh. Mr. Bosh approached the petitioners regarding performing janitorial services in conjunction with installing carpeting. The petitioners agreed and Mr. Herwick began soliciting cleaning services in conjunction with installing carpeting. One cleaning would be performed before and after carpet was installed.

After a period of time, Mr Bosh left the industry and Mr. Miller's company, Eagle Cleaning Systems, assumed Action Technical Services' contract to clean the offices of what had become Crown-NJ. Miller continued to clean the offices of Crown-NJ until Crown-NJ closed in 1987.

In 1984, Mr. Miller wanted to become more involved in Crown-NJ's business. Mr. Miller approached Mr. Frank on several occasions about creating a joint venture to provide cleaning services. The petitioners discussed the matter with Messrs. Frank and Sukenik; however, they merely acted as advisors and did not negotiate, prepare, draft or sign the joint venture agreement.

The joint venture was officially established on November 15, 1984, when Miller and Herman Frank executed a "Joint Venture Agreement" that had been drafted by Irwin Frank, son of Herman Frank and an Ohio attorney. Miller testified that he was to be the majority owner of the joint venture. On a disclosure affidavit filed in 1985 with the Minority Entrepreneurship Development Corporation,[3] Eagle Cleaning Systems is listed as a 55-percent owner of the joint venture and Crown-NJ is listed as a 45-percent owner thereof.

3 The Minority Entrepreneurship Development Corporation ("MEDCO") was, at the time, a private corporation whose function was to certify certain qualified businesses as minority-owned or minority-controlled enterprises. The joint venture applied for and received a certificate from MEDCO that stated that Eagle-Crown was a "minority business enterprise." MEDCOs regulations provided that in order to be considered a "minority business enterprise," a business must be at least 51 percent owned by one or more minorities and the business management or daily operation must be controlled by one or more minority persons.

The joint venture was formed to bid on minority set-aside contracts. In 1984, the joint venture bid on, and was awarded, a subcontract at the Hilton project. Crown-NJ had two contracts at the Hilton site; one for tile work and one for floor covering. The joint venture involved the floor covering portion of the contract. Mr. Miller was supposed to apprentice on this job since it was his first job and he was just learning the business. As such, Crown-NJ installed all of the floor covering and Eagle Cleaning Systems performed all of the post-installation cleaning at the site.

Mr. Miller did not exercise control over the floor covering portion of the contract. Mr. Miller did very little on the project and was never available. The petitioners made numerous attempts to involve Mr. Miller in the project; however, he was never available. Meetings would be scheduled, and he would not attend. He would not show up on the job site. The petitioners would even go to Mr. Miller's house in an attempt to find him, with very little success. As a result of Mr. Miller's uncooperative attitude, Crown-NJ had to complete most of the work.

On the Hilton project, the joint venture was the general contractor with Crown-NJ and Eagle Cleaning working as subcontractors. Crown-NJ received approximately $100,000 for installing the floor covering and Eagle Cleaning received $10,600 for providing the cleaning services. Mr. Miller supervised all cleaning services and did some payroll work for the joint venture.

Mr. Miller provided two interviews with the Division. The transcripts of those interviews are in evidence (R-1 & R-2). In those interviews, Mr. Miller stated that the petitioners never intended his company to participate in a meaningful way in the contract. He stated that the joint venture was a front used by the petitioners to obtain minority set-aside contracts and that Eagle Cleaning was not expected to perform any work for the joint venture.

In 1985, the joint venture was involved in one other project. The joint venture obtained a subcontract from Tishman, the general contractor who was to build the 75-story Metropolitan Plaza Apartment Building in New York City. The petitioners and Mr. Miller attended a pre-bid meeting at Tishman's offices in New York City. Two contracts were awarded: one for $50,000 and one for $190,000.

III. Fraudulent Performance Bond

In 1980, when Floor Installers was still in existence, Messrs. Gill and Herwick learned of a subcontract that was available from Tishman on the GNAC Corporation ("Golden Nugget") project in Atlantic City. However, in order to receive the subcontract (valued at $318,000), Floor Installers had to post a performance bond for that sum. Messrs. Gill and Herwick both believed that Floor Installers would not have been awarded the Golden Nugget subcontract had they been unable to obtain such a bond. Their initial efforts to arrange for the bond were unsuccessful. Mr. Herwick spoke with Leo Spinelli of Tishman regarding Floor Installers' difficulty in obtaining a bond, and Mr. Spinelli referred him to John Rilley. Mr. Rilley was familiar with procedures to obtain bonds for companies that were having difficulty securing bonds. Mr. Rilley knew of bonding companies that took high risks.

Mr. Rilley introduced Mr. Herwick to Alex Fineman of Industrial Indemnity, Co., N.A.[4] Mr. Herwick was asked to take his company's financial statements to Mr. Fineman's office in Pomona. Mr. Herwick complied and discovered that Mr. Fineman's office was in a "swinger's club" in Pomona. Mr. Herwick went to Mr. Fineman's office and discussed the contract. Floor Installers had a poor debt-to-net-worth ratio.

Mr. Fineman contacted Floor Installers and awarded the bond. Floor Installers made two payments on the bond: the first payment was made by Mr. Herwick to Mr. Fineman; the second payment was made by Mr. Gill to Mr. Fineman and consisted of $4,000 cash delivered in a paper bag.

Mr. Herwick called the telephone number listed on the letterhead of Industrial Indemnity Co., N.A., in Philadelphia and the telephone was answered in the company's name. The petitioners provided the bond contract to Tishman. Tishman is a large national construction company headquartered in New York. Tishman forwarded the contract to their insurance and legal offices for approval. Approximately two weeks later, Tishman notified Floor Installers that the bond was acceptable.

4 Mr. Rilley was paid a finder's commission by Mr. Fineman for referring the petitioners to him.

Division investigation disclosed that Alex Fineman (a.k.a. Alex Feim, Al Davis, Alex Feinstein, Calvin York and Alex Fein) has been arrested numerous times and has been convicted of conspiracy, wire fraud and bribery of federal officials. Fineman had been convicted in August 1980 of certain federal offenses including mail fraud, wire fraud and interstate transportation of fraudulent securities.

C. Petitioner's Background

I. Mr. Gill

John J. Gill is 42 years old. He has been married for 20 years, has three children, ages 16, 17, and 19, and provides a home for a 19-year-old homeless youth. Mr. Gill is a practicing Roman Catholic. He was raised through the Catholic school system and graduated from St. Joseph's University with a B.S. degree in English with a minor in philosophy. Mr. Gill has been active in the Boy Scouts, little league, Knights of Columbus, Kiwanis Club, the Pleasantville Businessmen's Association, and the Men of Malvery (a retreat group). Mr. Gill has also contributed to his church, schools and other charitable organizations. He has donated both services and materials to various organizations, including donating carpet removed from various projects to schools.

Mr. Gill graduated from college in 1968. He then spent the next five years working for the First Pennsylvania Bank, first as a management trainee and then as a commercial loan analyst. Mr. Gill then decided to start his own business. He operated Hill Kitchen and Floor Center for the next five years. In 1975, Mr. Gill formed Floor Installers and moved from Pennsylvania to Cape May County. In 1983, Crown-NJ was formed. The Division objected to the licensure of Crown-NJ, and the company is now inactive. In November 1987, Mr. Gill became employed by Baumgardner Construction Company. Mr. Gill's job was terminated in March 1988 due to the Division's objection to Baumgardner's relicensure based upon Messrs. Gill and Herwick's employment with the company. In April 1988, Mr. Gill became employed by the Einstein-Moomjy Carpet Company as a commission salesman. Ninety days later, his position was terminated due to his casino licensing problem. Mr. Gill is now unemployed. He is looking for work in the carpet industry and is assisting his wife, who has a paper route.

Father John C. Killeen, pastor of the Catholic Church of St. Mary in Cherry Hill, testified on behalf of Mr. Gill. Father Killeen testified that he first met Mr. Gill 12 years ago, when he was the pastor of St. Joseph's Church in Sea Isle City. St. Joseph's school was in poor repair and short-funded. Mr. Gill offered to help the school cover its floors. Over a period of time, Mr. Gill carpeted the entire school with first-quality carpet that had been replaced in casinos and with carpet remnants left over from casino jobs. Various casinos had purchased new carpet, and Mr. Gill received their permission to install their old carpeting and carpet remnants in the school. Father Killeen believes Mr. Gill was a good friend to the school and the community. He has no reservations regarding Mr. Gill's good character and good name. He believes Mr. Gill is a good citizen and Mr. Gill still "rates very high in [his] book."

II. Mr. Herwick

John S. Herwick is 46 years old. He has been married for 24 years and has an 18-year-old son who is attending Valley Forge Military Academy Junior College. He has been active in the Pleasantville Businessmen's Association, the Mainland Kiwanis, the 1984 U.S. Olympic Committee Dinner Committee, the El Paso Jaycees, Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A., and has coached and umpired in both little league and Babe Ruth league. He graduated high school from the Valley Forge Military Academy, and graduated from the Pennsylvania Military College in 1965 with a degree in English. He has been an active member of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church of Ocean City and the Valley Forge Military Academy Alumni Association. He has volunteered to serve on several committees for the Academy.

From 1962 until 1968, Mr. Herwick was in the Marine Reserve. He attained the rank of E-4 and was separated with an Honorable Discharge. He was awarded the Good Conduct Medal and the Marine Corps Reserve Medal.

Mr. Herwick was first employed as a sales representative for Norcross, Inc., of St. Louis. His sales territory was in El Paso, Texas. In 1968, Mr. Herwick and his family moved east in order to care for his mother-in-law, who had sustained a broken hip. He became employed as a sales representative for Buzza Cardozo of Narbeth, Pennsylvania. In 1972, he entered the carpet business. He became the district manager for the Raymond Rosen Company of Philadelphia. In 1975, he entered into partnership with Mr. Gill to form Floor Installers, Inc., and moved to New Jersey.

Since he was unable to either hold or obtain employment in the carpet industry in this area due to these proceedings, Mr. Herwick has had to move his family to Arnold, Maryland. He is now employed as a sales representative for Contract Distributors Corp. of Bethesda, Maryland. He is a commission salesman for commercial carpet products and floor coverings.

Mr. Herwick submitted ten letters of recommendation in his own behalf. The first, dated March 30, 1988, was written by Christer Lindkrantz, vice-president of hotel operations, Tropicana Hotel and Casino. Mr. Lindkrantz wrote:

> I would like to state that I have known Mr. Herwick since approximately 1980, and it is my personal opinion that Mr. Herwick has always conducted himself in a very professional and businesslike manner. During our business relationship, he has never done anything to indicate to me that he would conduct his business in any other way except with honor and integrity.
> Mr. Read, in closing, I would like to say that in my opinion, Mr. Herwick is a man of good standing and character. [P-1]

The second, dated April 6, 1988, was written by Cliff Lucas, vice-president of operations for the Perini Corporation. Mr. Lucas wrote:

> We wish to confirm that Perini Corporation has had a number of years of contractual relationships involving Mr. Herwick. We have found that Mr. Herwick has always acted professionally and responsibly in the course of his business conduct with Perini Corporation and we [consider] him to be a man of integrity and good character. [P-2]

The third, dated March 25, 1988, was written by Charles Totoro, director of engineering at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. Mr. Totoro wrote:

> My business as well as personal relationship with Mr. Herwick dates back to 1983, and has continued to the present time. Throughout this five-year period, Mr. Herwick has had an opportunity to perform numerous work related projects through me for the Tropicana. In every case, Mr. Herwick displayed personal integrity, complete professionalism while maintaining a completely ethical relationship.
>
> Mr. Herwick's knowledge of his profession and commitment to all of our projects have been an enormous help to me personally and the Tropicana in general.
>
> Throughout the years I have developed a personal relationship with John, and his high moral character is one that I feel very comfortable with and personally attest to. [P-3]

The fourth, dated April 7, 1988, written by Nikki M. Jones, executive vice-president and chief operating officer of Atlandia Design, a Golden Nugget Company, provides:

> Atlandia Design & Furnishings, Inc. has over the past few years had various business dealings with Mr. John Herwick. I personally have found him to be a man of good character and integrity. All our business dealings have been handled in a businesslike and professional manner. [P-4]

The fifth letter, dated March 29, 1988, was written by Kitty Lloyd, a shift manager in the engineering department of the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. Mrs. Lloyd wrote:

> I have been employed by the Engineering Department of the Tropicana Hotel/Casino for the past seven (7) years and in my capacity as Shift Manager I have worked with John Herwick on many projects. During this lengthy business relationship John has always handled business honestly and I know him as a man of good character and integrity. [P-5]

The sixth letter, dated April 4, 1988, was written by Emil J. Neumann, director of facilities, engineering and maintenance, at Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino. Mr. Neumann wrote:

> As Chief Engineer for 9 years at the Claridge Hotel and Casino, and in my present position as Director of Facilities, Engineering and Maintenance at the Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino, I have done quite a substantial amount of business with Mr. John Herwick and have found his character to be above and beyond reproach. He is one of the most pleasant and professional businessmen that I have had the opportunity to deal with. [P-6]

Russell E. Preston, safety manager of the Perini Corporation, in a letter dated April 4, 1988, addressed Mr. Herwick's adherence to affirmative action policies. Mr. Preston wrote:

> I have known Mr. John Herwick for approximately three and one-half years. During the time of my association with John I held the position of Regional Manager of Safety & Affirmative Action for the Atlantic City Region.
>
> To the best of my knowledge he was employed by the Crown Carpeting Company all of that time until he joined the Baumgardner Corporation. My personal association with John was assuming his companies compliance with Affirmative Action

> Requirements & Policies. He was always very cooperative in this phase of his business. He was always honorable and responsive to my requests. [P-7]

Wayne T. Weingartner, project controller for the Perini Corporation, in a letter dated April 1, 1988, wrote:

> I am writing you to express my feelings about the accusations being made against Mr. John S. Herwick. I have known John in a business associate relationship as a very pleasant, honest, helpful businessman.
>
> While John was working with Crown Carpet he was extremely helpful in making sure I received all requisition payments on time with all necessary supporting documentation. He never requested, sought, or bagained for any special treatment on payment terms. Any extra work slips submitted to Perini Corporation were always signed by a field superintendent and processed with a fully executed Change Order to Crown Carpet's contract.
>
> John's only fault, I find, probably lies with the fact that he is such a pleasant person who always finds time to say more than just "hi." He has always been one of the friendliest people I have had business dealings with here in Atlantic City.
>
> I cannot believe that John would be involved in any business dealings that were other than honorable.
>
> Commissioner Read, I surely hope that you find the accusations against Mr. John Herwick without merit and dismiss the charges against him. I am sure you will not be sorry for such an act, and will realize in the future that your decision was the right one for all the parties concerned. [P-9]

D. Credibility

This case turns on the credibility of the witnesses. I have had ample opportunity to assess the parties' and witnesses' credibility. I listened carefully to their testimony, making judgments about internal consistency, probability and reasonability, Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-555 (1954), and, during direct and cross-examination, I observed the witnesses' demeanor, including their mannerisms, voice levels, anger, frustration and other such emotions not apparent on the written record. From the testimony, exhibits and especially my careful observations of the witnesses, I make the following observations.

The Division did attempt to refute the petitioners' testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident and their current good character, honesty and integrity. It is essential in this case to assess their credibility. Initially, their position in this matter must be recognized. As the petitioners and the applicants for casino service industry qualifications, they have a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the petitioners' demeanor, the plausibility of their testimony, the manner in which they participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appeared that the petitioners testified truthfully in every regard. They were extremely open, honest and frank. They appeared to be hardworking businessmen and good family men. The Division's investigator conceded that at no time did either of the petitioners attempt to conceal any information, files or other paperwork from her. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept their testimony in all respects.

On the other hand, the Division has been appearing before me in Commission cases for over two years, and its witnesses in this case were the worst witnesses the Division has ever presented before me. At times, the Division's investigator was very rude and obnoxious. It appeared that she had tried to impose her own personal standards and perceptions upon the petitioners as well as her own sense as to what are or are not acceptable business practices in the industry. She has been an investigator for the Division since 1981, yet she testified that she does not, and it is not her job to, evaluate the credibility of her informants. She makes no effort to investigate or determine if there is any truth to their statements. She merely reports their information. Not only did I find this information utterly incredible, but when the agent admitted her lack of investigation to determine the truth of her informants' statements, my court reporter, who is usually totally emotionless and extremely professional, dropped her mouth open and had a look of total disbelief on her face. The investigator appeared to be overly zealous and set forth every small innuendo in an attempt to disqualify the petitioners from qualification.

The investigator relied on the information of several witnesses. I must strongly question the reliability and credibility of most of these witnesses. Several of them appear to be disreputable.

a. As indicated above, Alex Fineman (a.k.a. Alex Feim, Al Davis, Alex Feinstein, Calvin York and Alex Fein) has been arrested numerous times and has been convicted of conspiracy, wire fraud and bribery of federal officials. Fineman had been convicted in August 1980 of certain federal offenses including mail fraud, wire fraud and interstate transportation of fraudulent securities. Mr. Fineman admitted to the Division that he attracted customers whose financial instability had prevented them from securing a bond through legitimate channels. Fineman would claim to be an agent of a legitimate bonding company but would, when writing the bond, change the name of the legitimate company by adding the initials "NA" to the lawful company's name. The initials "NA" stand for Netherlands Antilles, and by adding them, Fineman stated, he was able to avoid allegations that he was fraudulently misrepresenting the legitimate bonding company. In this way, a general contractor who examined Fineman's bond by looking in Best's Guide of Insurance Companies would see the name of a legitimate company and would conclude that the bond was proper. Fineman admitted to the Division that he was merely "writing paper" and that there was no bond in reality.

b. Another witness, Jim Adams, was terminated from his position at the Playboy Hotel and Casino for accepting favors from contractors. The Division investigator was unaware of a conflict between the petitioners and Mr. Adams. Floor Installers had stopped work at the Playboy because Playboy owed them money. Mr. Adams then terminated the contract between Playboy and Floor Installers.

c. The investigator also relied on information given by a former employee of Floor Installers, William Farley. Mr. Farley was the target of an FBI investigation. Mr. Farley embezzled funds from Floor Installers by opening a fraudulent bank account in the name of Floor Installers and transferring converted checks into that account. The FBI investigation found no involvement by the petitioners in the allegations Mr. Farley made to the Division.

d. George Miller and Eagle Cleaning Systems were the subject of another OAL hearing: Eagle Cleaning Systems v. Division of Gaming Enforcement, OAL DKT. CCC 1276-88 (Oct. 20, 1988). The Division requests that consideration be given to that decision.

> ". . . there are important goals to be achieved from the prudent and selective application in administrative proceedings of such doctrines as res judicata, collateral estoppel, and the single > controversy rule." Hackensack v. Winner, 82 N.J. 1, 31 (1980) . . . The findings of an administrative law judge, when fully and amply supported by substantial credible evidence in the record and amply enlarged by specific detailed findings of fact, can suffice to provide the Law Division with prima facie evidence of validity of the individual claims by a limited application of the doctrine of res judicata . . . "When an administrative agency is acting in a judicial capacity and resolves disputed issues of fact properly before it which the parties have had an adequate opportunity to litigate, the courts have not hesitated to apply res judicata to enforce repose."

[Sheeran v. Progressive Life Ins. Co., 182 N.J. Super 237, 251 (App. Div. 1981)]

Further, our Supreme Court has held that

> When a court or agency retains jurisdiction to resolve a dispute, it can take account of factfinding made in complementary proceedings . . . Though not binding, the Compensation Court's findings should be entered into evidence in the Law Division and accorded such weight as is appropriate. In evaluating the findings, the court should consider the evidence submitted; the procedures used for admitting evidence; the employee's standing to contest the issues; whether the employer represented the employee's interests; and whether the award itself was well-reasoned and intrinsically persuasive.

[Wunschel v. City of Jersey City, 96 N.J. 651, 666-67]

In Eagle Cleaning, Judge Holmes only had the personal testimony of George Miller. While finding that the Eagle Cleaning/Crown-NJ joint venture was a sham, Judge Holmes found that:

> There are discrepancies between Miller's testimony at depositions and his testimony at the hearing. At the hearing Miller tried to avoid responsibility for admissions against interest made at depositions by asserting that the transcripts were not accurate. He also claimed that he thought he was "helping" the Division prosecute Frank and his accomplices. (Apparently his motive was revenge). At the hearing Miller testified that he did administrative work, i.e., he looked at blue prints. At the depositions Miller acknowledged that he performed no services on the contracts. At the hearing he acknowledged that the joint venture was a sham but that he had been "duped." [Initial Decision at 4]

Judge Holmes concluded that Mr. Miller lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino service industry licensure.

While I acknowledge that a judge should consider the assessment of credibility made by another judge of a witness who did not appear before him in the instant case but who did appear before the other judge in another case (and I do take into consideration Judge Holmes's statements regarding Mr. Miller's credibility in the Eagle Cleaning case), I note as I did on the record that I was the original ALJ assigned to hear the Eagle Cleaning case. As such, I had occasion to make a personal observation of Mr. Miller, and I had the opportunity to make a personal assessment of Mr. Miller's credibility. I could not help but notice that many of the problems which the petitioners experienced in dealing with Mr. Miller were the same problems I experienced in dealing with Mr. Miller. Meetings would be scheduled, and Mr. Miller would not appear. Telephone conferences would be scheduled, and Mr. Miller would be unavailable. Requests for discovery were made, and Mr. Miller would not comply. Orders to compel discovery were issued, and Mr. Miller ignored them. Mr. Miller would not return phone calls and was totally uncooperative with his attorney. I found Mr. Miller to be totally unreliable, and I would not believe him if my life depended on it.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Floor Installers, Inc., was incorporated in Pennsylvania in 1975. The officers and owners of that firm were John Gill, Patricia Gill (John Gill's wife), John Herwick and Katherine Herwick (John Herwick's wife). Floor Installers was engaged primarily in the installation of carpet on behalf of retail stores. Floor Installers applied for and received a casino service industry license (#149-70) in 1979.

2. On September 14, 1983, Crown-Ohio formed Crown-NJ, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Crown-Ohio. Directors of Crown-NJ were Herman Frank and Bill Sukenik, both of whom were owners and officers of Crown-Ohio. Officers of Crown-NJ were as follows: Herman Frank, President; Bill Sukenik, Secretary; Elda Rinaldi Gerrard, Assistant Secretary; John Gill, Director of Operations; and John Herwick, Director of Marketing.

3. On August 20, 1984, Crown-Ohio purchased Floor Installers' assets, goodwill and service contracts for $12,000. The sale was approved by Floor Installers' trustee-in-bankruptcy.

4. Messrs. Frank and Sukenik retained control of Crown-NJ. Messrs. Gill and Herwick were the company's sales representatives in New Jersey. Messrs. Gill and Herwick, as salesmen for the company, could negotiate contracts; however, they did not have the authority to sign contracts. Only Mr. Frank or Mr. Sukenik could sign contracts and obligate the company. The petitioners had little authority to make policy in Crown-NJ.

5. In 1984, Crown-NJ obtained a subcontract worth $450,000 on a Philadelphia project known as Logan Square. The owner of the Logan Square project, Daniel J. Keating, employed Mr. I.E. Greenblatt as the owner's representative. Mr. Greenblatt's function on the Logan Square project was to ensure that bid specifications were followed. With respect to Crown-NJ, Mr. Greenblatt was responsible for seeing to it that Crown-NJ used the proper grade of carpet and related materials. His responsibilities also included the reporting to the project owner of his (Greenblatt's) approval of a subcontractor's work. The project owner would then release payments to the subcontractor, relying upon the recommendation of Greenblatt.

6. Subsequent to the awarding of the contract, Mr. Frank and Mr. Greenblatt held discussions regarding Mr. Greenblatt's being hired by Crown-NJ as a consultant to "keep an eye" on Crown's subcontractors in Philadelphia to ensure performance. Mr. Gill told Mr. Frank that he was opposed to hiring Mr. Greenblatt as he believed it was a conflict of interest. Mr. Frank, however, did hire Mr. Greenblatt. Mr. Greenblatt did subsequently submit an invoice to Mr. Frank in Ohio, and Crown-NJ issued a check in the amount of $15,000 to Mr. Greenblatt from its office in Ohio for consulting services.

7. Mr. Herwick did not function on the Logan Square project. All of the agreements were negotiated and signed by Mr. Frank. Mr. Gill discussed Mr. Greenblatt's proposal with Mr. Herwick and both petitioners agreed that Crown-NJ should not accept the proposal. Mr. Herwick felt it was a conflict of interest and possibly illegal. Mr. Herwick told Mr. Frank of his concerns; however, Mr. Frank thought it was a "good deal" and decided to accept the offer.

8. In June and July of 1985, Crown-NJ was working as a subcontractor to Tishman Construction Company on what was then the Hilton Hotel Casino project in Atlantic City. During that time, Tishman's general superintendent at the project was Joseph Victoria. Mr. Victoria was the person responsible for reviewing payment requests made by contractors and subcontractors such as Crown-NJ. He could not, however, award contracts or authorize the payment of overtime.

9. During the summer of 1985, Mr. Victoria approached Crown-NJ and asked them if they could carpet his home in Pittsburgh. In order to keep a good customer happy, Crown-NJ arranged for the installation of 70 yards of carpeting in Mr. Victoria's residence in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Crown-NJ did not perform the work itself but instead subcontracted the job. Crown-NJ paid a total of $424.02 to Carpet Craft, an Ohio company, for the installation of the carpet, which carpet was supplied by Crown-NJ.

10. Division investigators questioned Mr. Gill about this subject during an interview on April 25, 1986. At that time, Mr. Victoria had never been sent a bill by Crown-NJ for the installation of the aforesaid carpet. On April 30, 1986, five days after Gill had been questioned by the Division regarding the Victoria issue, Crown-NJ sent an invoice to Victoria for $1,066.81 for the furnishing and installing of carpet that occurred in July 1985. The company simply "forgot" to bill Mr. Victoria.

11. Mr. Herwick had no involvement with Mr. Victoria's transaction and has no knowledge regarding the payment issue.

12. Robert Blackman was Tishman's project manager on the Hilton project. As such, he was the person to whom Mr. Victoria reported and was the person responsible for the selection of contractors.

13. During the project, Mr. Blackman approached Mr. Herwick and told him that after the job was completed, he was being transferred. He was moving to a new residence and asked Mr. Herwick if he could give him a good price on carpeting. Mr. Herwick told Mr. Blackman he would take care of it, and Mr. Herwick contacted Thomas Casterelli in Wantagh, New York. Mr. Casterelli is a carpet installer in New York who Mr. Herwick had used as a subcontractor in the past.

14. On January 13, 1986, Crown-NJ received an invoice from Classic Carpet Showroom, Inc., of Wantagh, New York, in the amount of $844.40 for the installation of carpeting in Mr. Blackman's New York City home.

15. Crown-NJ paid Classic for the work, and Crown-NJ billed Mr. Blackman on January 27, 1986; however, Mr. Blackman did not timely pay Crown-NJ. Crown-NJ sent Mr. Blackman several collection letters, both before and after the Division investigated this matter, and he finally paid $2,500 for the carpeting in August 1987.

16. Crown-NJ was awarded the carpeting subcontract for the Atlantic Palace Condominium project by Perini Corporation, the project's general contractor, and Crown-NJ commenced work on the project in November 1985.

17. The project manager on the Atlantic Palace job was Roger McElfresh. Mr. McElfresh approached Mr. Herwick about installing carpet in Mr. McElfresh's home. As in the prior instances mentioned above, Crown-NJ subcontracted the work, this time to an individual named William Brennan.

18. Mr. McElfresh was billed by Crown-NJ for the work in a timely manner; however, Mr. McElfresh did not pay Crown-NJ for the carpet installation in a timely manner. Numerous phone calls were made to Mr. McElfresh by Crown-NJ in an effort to collect payment.

19. Mr. McElfresh was responsible for approving premium overtime. In fact, Mr. McElfresh did authorize the payment of approximately $40,000 in premium overtime to Crown-NJ. Most subcontractors on the project were authorized premium overtime on the project because there was a lucrative, incentive-basis, end-of-job bonus payable to the general contractor based upon early completion of the project. Therefore, the general contractor was authorizing premium overtime to its subcontractors in an effort to complete the job early and collect a sizable bonus.

20. During July 1985, the Hilton Corporation employed an individual named Irwin LeFevre as its project manager on the Hilton Hotel/Casino job, a project on which Crown-NJ was engaged.

21. A year earlier, on August 28, 1984, Mr. LeFevre had approved a Hilton purchase order to Crown-NJ for $339,631.

22. On July 15, 1985, Crown-Ohio issued its check for $1,213.42 payable to Katherine Herwick, wife of John Herwick. The check represented reimbursement to Mrs. Herwick for a rifle that had been purchased with John Herwick's credit card and given to Mr. LeFevre by Mr. Herwick as a gift. The cost of the rifle had been charged to the "Promotional & Entertainment" account.

23. Mr. Herwick and Mr. LeFevre had become friends in Florida, and both men were hunters. When the Hilton Corporation was about to leave Atlantic City, Mr. Herwick decided to give Mr. LeFevre a rifle as a going-away present. This was a personal gift rather than a company gift and the reimbursement had been incorrectly charged to the corporate entertainment account. The cost of the rifle should have been deducted from his year-end distribution of company profits.

24. Upon learning of this discrepancy, Mr. Herwick immediately had the situation corrected. Within three weeks of the Herwick interview, the Division received a copy of a corrected Internal Revenue Service Form 1099 that had been issued to John Herwick for 1985. The corrected 1099 was in the amount of $1,213.42, exactly the amount of the cost of the rifle that was given to Mr. LeFevre.

25. In 1981, Floor Installers, Inc., received a contract with the Sands Hotel Casino in Atlantic City. Floor Installers received this contract based upon the recommendation of William Clause, who was then the Facility Director of the Sands.

26. Mr. Gill was asked by Mr. Clause to give him (Clause) a price on installing ceramic tile at his residence. Even though they did not do that type of work, since the Sands was a good customer Mr. Gill told Mr. Clause that he would take care of it. Floor Installers subcontracted the job to Edward A. Filling, Inc., because Floor Installers did not do ceramic work.

27. On August 11, 1982, $3,300 in ceramic tile work was completed at Mr. Clause's personal residence by Edward A. Filling, Inc. After completing the work, the Filling Company sent an invoice to Floor Installers for the work performed.

28. Mr. Clause was never billed by Floor Installers and he never paid for the tile work. Mr. Clause was not told the work would be performed for free; however, the work was performed just prior to Floor Installers entering into Chapter 11. At that time, Floor Installers was in a state of disarray and was looking to collect on large obligations owed to it. They simply missed collecting on this small debt for work performed by another company.

29. The petitioners performed the above services as an accommodation to their customers. They took pride in their work, and when asked by a customer to perform some outside service, the petitioners would attempt to comply with the request. The petitioners were not interested in doing this type of work, but they did do a few jobs of this sort as accommodations. The petitioners usually did not perform these type of services themselves but would subcontract the job out to other companies.

30. In 1984, Mr. George Miller, owner of Eagle Cleaning Systems, wanted to become more involved in Crown-NJ's business. Mr. Miller approached Mr. Frank on several occasions about creating a joint venture to provide cleaning services. The petitioners discussed the matter with Messrs. Frank and Sukenik; however, they merely acted as advisors and did not negotiate, prepare, draft or sign the joint venture agreement.

31. The joint venture was officially established on November 15, 1984, when Miller and Herman Frank executed a "Joint Venture Agreement" that had been drafted by Irwin Frank, son of Herman Frank and an Ohio attorney.

32. On a disclosure affidavit filed in 1985 with the Minority Entrepreneurship Development Corporation, Eagle Cleaning Systems is listed as a 55-percent owner of the joint venture and Crown-NJ is listed as a 45-percent owner thereof.

33. The joint venture was formed to bid on minority set-aside contracts. In 1984, the joint venture bid on, and was awarded, a subcontract at the Hilton project. Crown-NJ had two contracts at the Hilton site; one for tile work and one for floor covering. The joint venture involved the floor covering portion of the contract.

34. Mr. Miller was supposed to apprentice on this job since it was his first job and he was just learning the business. As such, Crown-NJ installed all of the floor covering and Eagle Cleaning Systems performed all of the post-installation cleaning at the site.

35. Mr. Miller did not exercise control over the floor covering portion of the contract. Mr. Miller did very little on the project and was never available. The petitioners made numerous attempts to involve Mr. Miller in the project; however, he was never available. Meetings would be scheduled, and he would not attend. He would not show up on the job site. The petitioners would even go to Mr. Miller's house in an attempt to find him, with very little success. As a result of Mr. Miller's uncooperative attitude, Crown-NJ had to complete most of the work.

36. On the Hilton project, the joint venture was the general contractor with Crown-NJ and Eagle Cleaning working as subcontractors. Crown-NJ received approximately $100,000 for installing the floor covering and Eagle Cleaning received $10,600 for providing the cleaning services. Mr. Miller supervised all cleaning services and did some payroll work for the joint venture.

37. In 1985, the joint venture was involved in one other project. The joint venture obtained a subcontract from Tishman, the general contractor who was to build the 75-story Metropolitan Plaza Apartment Building in New York City. The petitioners and Mr. Miller attended a pre-bid meeting at Tishman's offices in New York City. Two contracts were awarded: one for $50,000 and one for $190,000.

38. In 1980, when Floor Installers was still in existence, Messrs. Gill and Herwick learned of a subcontract that was available from Tishman on the GNAC Corporation ("Golden Nugget") project in Atlantic City. However, in order to receive the subcontract (valued at $318,000), Floor Installers had to post a performance bond for that sum.

39. Their initial efforts to arrange for the bond were unsuccessful.

40. Mr. Herwick spoke with Leo Spinelli of Tishman regarding Floor Installers' difficulty in obtaining a bond, and Mr. Spinelli referred him to John Rilley. Mr. Rilley was familiar with procedures to obtain bonds for companies that were having difficulty securing bonds. Mr. Rilley knew of bonding companies that took high risks.

41. Mr. Rilley introduced Mr. Herwick to Alex Fineman of Industrial Indemnity, Co., N.A. Mr. Herwick was asked to take his company's financial statements to Mr. Fineman's office in Pomona. Mr. Herwick complied and discovered that Mr. Fineman's office was in a "swinger's club" in Pomona.

42. Mr. Fineman contacted Floor Installers and awarded the bond. Floor Installers made two payments on the bond: the first payment was made by Mr. Herwick to Mr. Fineman; the second payment was made by Mr. Gill to Mr. Fineman and consisted of $4,000 cash delivered in a paper bag.

43. Mr. Herwick called the telephone number listed on the letterhead of Industrial Indemnity Co., N.A., in Philadelphia and the telephone was answered in the company's name.

44. The petitioners provided the bond contract to Tishman. Tishman is a large national construction company headquartered in New York. Tishman forwarded the contract to their insurance and legal offices for approval. Approximately two weeks later, Tishman notified Floor Installers that the bond was acceptable. The petitioners relied on this information and believed the bond was genuine.

45. John J. Gill is 42 years old. He has been married for 20 years, has three children, ages 16, 17, and 19, and provides a home for a 19-year-old homeless youth.

46. Mr. Gill is a practicing Roman Catholic. He was raised through the Catholic school system and graduated from St. Joseph's University with a B.S. degree in English with a minor in philosophy.

47. Mr. Gill has been active in the Boy Scouts, little league, Knights of Columbus, Kiwanis Club, the Pleasantville Businessmen's Association, and the Men of Malvery (a retreat group). Mr. Gill has also contributed to his church, schools, and other charitable organizations. He has donated both services and materials to various organizations, including donating carpet removed from various projects to schools.

48. Mr. Gill graduated from college in 1968. He then spent the next five years working for the First Pennsylvania Bank, first as a management trainee and then as a commercial loan analyst. Mr. Gill then decided to start his own business. He operated Hill Kitchen and Floor Center for the next five years. In 1975, Mr. Gill formed Floor Installers and moved from Pennsylvania to Cape May County. In 1983, Crown-NJ was formed. In November 1987, Mr. Gill became employed by Baumgardner Construction Company. Mr. Gill's job was terminated in March 1988 due to the Division's objection to Baumgardner's relicensure based upon Messrs. Gill and Herwick's employment with the company. In April 1988, Mr. Gill became employed by Einstein-Moomjy Carpet Company as a commission salesman. Ninety days later, his position was terminated due to his casino licensing problem. Mr. Gill is now unemployed. He is looking for work in the carpet industry and is assisting his wife, who has a paper route.

49. John S. Herwick is 46 years old. He has been married for 24 years, and has an 18-year-old son who is attending Valley Forge Military Academy Junior College.

50. He has been active in the Pleasantville Businessmen's Association, the Mainland Kiwanis, the 1984 U.S. Olympic Committee Dinner Committee, the El Paso Jaycees, Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A., and has coached and umpired in both little league and Babe Ruth league.

51. He graduated high school from the Valley Forge Military Academy, and graduated from the Pennsylvania Military College in 1965 with a degree in English. He has been an active member of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church of Ocean City and the Valley Forge Military Academy Alumni Association. He has volunteered to serve on several committees for the Academy.

52. From 1962 until 1968, Mr. Herwick was in the Marine Reserve. He attained the rank of E-4 and was separated with an Honorable Discharge. He was awarded the Good Conduct Medal and the Marine Corps Reserve Medal.

53. Mr. Herwick was first employed as a sales representative for Norcross, Inc., of St. Louis. His sales territory was in El Paso, Texas. In 1968, Mr. Herwick and his family moved east in order to care for his mother-in-law, who had sustained a broken hip. He became employed as a sales representative for Buzza Cardozo of Narbeth, Pennsylvania. In 1972, he entered the carpet business. He became the district manager for the Raymond Rosen Company of Philadelphia. In 1975, he entered into partnership with Mr. Gill to form Floor Installers, Inc., and moved to New Jersey.

54. Mr. Herwick has had to move his family to Arnold, Maryland. He is now employed as a sales representative for Contract Distributors Corp. of Bethesda, Maryland. He is a commission salesman for commercial carpet products and floor coverings.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-92, Licensing and registration of casino service industries, provides in pertinent part:

> c. All casino service industries not included in subsection a. of this section shall be licensed in accordance with rules of the commission prior to commencement or continuation of any business with a casino applicant or licensee or its employees or agents. Such casino service industries, whether or not directly related to gaming operations, shall include . . . maintenance companies . . . and construction companies . . . The commission may exempt any person or field of commerce from the licensing requirements of this subsection if the person or field of commerce demonstrates (1) that it is regulated by a public agency or that it will provide goods or services in insubstantial or insignificant amounts or quantities, and (2) that licensing is not deemed necessary in order to protect the public interest or to accomplish the policies established by this act.[5]
> d. Licensure pursuant to subsection c. of this section of any casino service industry may be denied to any applicant disqualified in accordance with the criteria contained in section 86 of this act.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license-disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> . . . .
>
> e. The pursuit by the applicant or any person who is required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license of economic gain in an occupational manner or context which is in violation of the criminal or civil public policies of this State, if such pursuit creates a reasonable belief that the participation of such person in casino operations would be inimical to the policies of this act or to legalized gaming in this State. For purposes of this section, occupational manner or context shall be defined as the systematic planning, administration, management, or execution of an activity for financial gain;

---

5 N.J.S.A. 5:12-92a establishes the licensing requirements for casino service industries which offer goods or services that directly relate to casino or gaming activity. As petitioner's business does not relate to goods or services which directly relate to casino or gaming activity, section 92c, and not section 92a, is the controlling section in this case.

690

N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3, Standards for [casino service industry] qualification, provides in pertinent part:

> (c) Each applicant required to be licensed as a casino service industry in accordance with section 92c and d of the Act shall, prior to the issuance of any casino service industry license, produce such information and documentation, including without limitation as to the generality of the foregoing its financial books and records, and assurances to establish by clear and convincing evidence its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity.

DISCUSSION

The Division contends that the petitioners' alleged systematic provision of free goods and services to persons who were in a position to award contracts or other benefits to Crown-NJ or to Floor Installers, Inc., their alleged creation of a sham joint venture in order to obtain subcontracts intended to be awared to minority-controlled businesses, and their alleged procurement of a fraudulent performance bond in connection with an Atlantic City casino hotel project reflects the pursuit of economic gain in an occupational manner or context which is in violation of the criminal or civil public policies of this State, which constitutes a violation of section 86e, and that accordingly, they are disqualified from casino service industry licensure. The Division further contends, by means of N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c), that the petitioners lack the necessary reputation for good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure.

All entities that do business with casinos, but which business does not directly relate to casino or gaming activities, are required to be licensed pursuant to section 92c of the Act and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c). Each applicant is required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, its reputation for good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c), and to satisfy the standards of section 86 of the Act, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-3.2. Further, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.14(a)2, certain owners, officers and sales representatives of applicant entities are required to establish their qualifications. Accordingly, the petitioners, although not required to be licensed, are required to establish their qualifications and their good character, honesty and integrity.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86e

Section 86e is one of three "inimical clauses" contained in section 86 of the Act. Section 86c(4) of the Act (now section 86c(2)) is more commonly referred to as the "inimical clause" and is the more widely discussed section as to the meaning of the phrase "inimical." In In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244 (1979), the Commission set forth the criteria to be applied in individual cases when a determination is made as to whether an offense is inimical to the policies of the Act. The Commission stated at page 254:

> The nature of the offense, the events surrounding it, including any mitigating or aggravating factors, the remoteness of the offense and the offender's conduct since the offense to the present are all matters to be considered. Without limiting the notion of what is "inimical" to the Act or to gaming, it would appear to encompass those offenses which, when viewed in light of all the circumstances, indicate that participation by that person either would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the regulatory process and of gaming operations or would create or enhance the dangers of unsuitable, unfair or illegal practices, methods and activities in the conduct of gaming or the carrying on of the business or financial arrangements incidental to gaming operations.

After discussing the criteria to be applied in individual cases when a determination is made as to whether an offense is inimical to the policies of the Act, the Commission discussed the section 86e inimical clause. The Commission stated that the same concept discussed regarding the section 86c(4) inimical clause plays a crucial role in the section 86e disqualification criteria. The Commission stated at pages 254 and 255:

> An Applicant also may be disqualified because either the Applicant itself or any person required to qualify pursued economic gain in an occupational manner or context which is in violation of the civil or criminal public policies of this State. The statute defines "occupational manner or context" as the "systematic planning, administration, management or execution of an activity for financial gain". Thus, an isolated or incidental transgression of civil or criminal public policy is not a disqualification under this section. Rather, there must appear a regular or ongoing scheme for financial gain which has as an integral component, repeated or continuing violations of the criminal or civil policies of this State.
> With regard to whether the civil or criminal public policy of this State is violated, there must be reliable proof in the record to support a finding that such policy exists and that it was routinely violated. Without limitation, these policies would include the > criminal laws and civil requirements, infractions of which would give rise to penalties or private causes of action at law. In this respect, one must be careful not to extend the New Jersey public policy to a jurisdiction where a different policy is in force. If no such policy was violated in the places where the pursuit of gain actually occurred, then it cannot be said that this disqualification criteria applies.

692

> Such pursuit of economic gain will disqualify a person under this standard only if that pursuit creates a reasonable belief that participation of such person in casino operations would be "inimical" to the policies of the Act or to legalized gaming. The analysis must be similar to that just described with regard to offenses "inimical to casino operations". Many factors, including the nature of the systematic pursuit of economic gain, the public policies violated, the circumstances surrounding the pursuit, the person's involvement in the pursuit, termination of the pursuit and remoteness of the pursuit in time, all must be assessed to determine whether public confidence in the regulatory process will be eroded or whether an enhanced danger of improper activity will result if the person is permitted to participate in legalized gaming.

The Legislature, when it authorized the establishment of casino gaming in Atlantic City and provided for the licensure, regulation and taxation thereof, enumerated specific policy considerations that appear to be directly related to the intent and purpose of the inimical clause. More specifically, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6) and (7) state categorically that the successful regulation and control of State casino activities depends upon the confidence of the public "in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations," and by the exclusion from participation in casino gaming of "persons with known criminal records, habits or associations" who could threaten the integrity of the gaming and business operations.

The significance of strict regulation of all phases of the casino industry was emphasized by the Supreme Court in Knight v. City of Margate, 86 N.J. 374, 381 (1981):

> At the very heart of the public policy embraced by the new law is "the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations." N.J.S.A. 5:12-1(b)(6). Related directly to this purpose, the Legislature stated that "the regulatory provisions . . . are designed to extend strict State regulation to all persons . . . practices and associations related to" casinos and that "comprehensive law-enforcement supervision . . . is further designed to contribute to the public confidence and trust in the efficacy and integrity of the regulatory process."

In In the Matter of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union Local 54, 203 N.J. Super. 297, 317 (App. Div. 1985), certif. den. 102 N.J. 352 (1985), the Appellate Division held that "inimical" means "adverse to the policy of the act and gaming operations," i.e., contrary to strict regulatory controls over all facets of casino activities.

The Division contends that the petitioners' alleged systematic provision of free goods and services to persons who were in a position to award contracts or other benefits to Crown-NJ or to Floor Installers, Inc., their alleged creation of a sham joint venture in order to obtain subcontracts intended to be awarded to minority-controlled businesses, and their alleged procurement of a fraudulent performance bond in connection with an Atlantic City casino hotel project, reflect the pursuit of economic gain in an occupational manner or context which is in violation of the criminal or civil public policies of this State and thus constitutes a violation of section 86e, and that, accordingly, they are disqualified from casino service industry licensure.

With regard to the Greenblatt incident, the Division contends that the petitioners' actions are comparable to having committed commercial bribery, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10.

N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10, Commercial bribery and breach of duty to act disinterestedly, provides in pertinent part:

> a. A person commits a crime if he solicits, accepts or agrees to accept any benefit as consideration for knowingly violating or agreeing to violate a duty of fidelity to which he is subject as:
>
> (1) An agent, partner or employee of another;
>
> . . . .
>
> (2) An officer, director, manager or other participant in the direction of the affairs of an incorporated or unincorporated association;
>
> . . . .
>
> c. A person commits a crime if he confers, or offers or agrees to confer, any benefit the acceptance of which would be criminal under this section.
>
> d. If the benefit offered, conferred, agreed to be conferred, solicited, accepted or agreed to be accepted in violation of this > section is $75,000.00 or more, the offender is guilty of a crime of the second degree. If the benefit exceeds $1,000.00, but is less than $75,000.00, the offender is guilty of a crime of the third degree. If the benefit is $1,000.00 or less, the offender is guilty of a crime of the fourth degree.

In this case, Mr. Greenblatt was the owner's representative on the Logan Square project. He occupied a position of special trust vis-a-vis the owner that should have been kept free from the corrupting influence of bribery. Mr. Greenblatt was Mr. Keating's agent and employee, and thus he owed a duty to Mr. Keating to faithfully represent his interests in the project and ensure that subcontractors were performing properly under the terms of their contracts. Mr. Greenblatt knowingly violated this duty of fidelity. He approached Mr. Frank and solicited a position as a consultant or representative to ensure that Crown-NJ's subcontractors performed. Mr. Greenblatt then accepted $15,000 for performing his consulting services. Working as a consultant for a subcontractor (Crown-NJ) at the same time he was supposed to be overseeing Crown-NJ's performance on behalf of the general contractor is a conflict of interest. It is a conscious disregard of a known duty of fidelity, an act proscribed by N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10a.

As Mr. Greenblatt committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10a by soliciting and accepting a benefit for knowingly violating his duty of fidelity, Mr. Frank committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10c by agreeing to confer and then conferring the benefit upon Mr. Greenblatt. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10d, both individuals committed a crime of the fourth degree.

The petitioners were not involved in the transaction between Messrs. Greenblatt and Frank.

Mr. Herwick did not work on the Logan Square project. Mr. Gill told Mr. Frank that he was opposed to hiring Mr. Greenblatt, since he believed it was a conflict of interest. All of the agreements were negotiated and signed by Mr. Frank. Mr. Herwick knew that Mr. Greenblatt had approached Mr. Frank about serving as Crown-NJ's representative or as a consultant on the project. Mr. Gill discussed Mr. Greenblatt's proposal with Mr. Herwick and both petitioners agreed that Crown-NJ should not accept the proposal. Mr. Herwick felt it was a conflict of interest and possibly illegal. Mr. Herwick told Mr. Frank of his concerns; however, Mr. Frank thought it was a "good deal" and decided to accept the offer. Mr. Frank indicated that he had consulted his son (who was the corporate counsel) and that his son had opined that the Greenblatt relationship was legal. Finally, the check issued to Mr. Greenblatt for his services was issued by Crown-NJ out of its Ohio office. Neither Mr. Gill nor Mr. Herwick conferred, offered or agreed to confer any benefit upon Mr. Greenblatt. Any and all such activities were conducted directly between Messrs. Greenblatt and Frank. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the petitioner's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-10.

The Division further contends that the petitioners' alleged systematic provision of free goods and services to persons who were in a position to award contracts or other benefits to Crown-NJ or to Floor Installers, Inc., reflects the pursuit of economic gain in an occupational manner or context that is in violation of the criminal or civil public policies of this State. The petitioners performed these services as an accommodation to their customers. They took pride in their work, and when asked by a customer to perform some outside service, the petitioners would attempt to comply with the request. The petitioners were not interested in doing this type of work, but they did do a few jobs of this sort as accommodations. The petitioners usually did not perform these type of services themselves but would instead subcontract the job out to other companies.

Mr. Herwick had no involvement with the Victoria transaction. The installation was performed by another company that was paid by Crown-NJ. The company simply forgot to bill Mr. Victoria, since that job was not a part of their normal business. Mr. Victoria was eventually billed $1,066.81 in 1985 for this installation.

The Blackman transaction was similar. Upon being transferred, Mr. Blackman asked people he knew in the carpet industry if they could give him a good price on carpeting. Mr. Herwick contacted another company and subcontracted out the work. The subcontractor was paid and Mr. Blackman was billed; however, he did not pay his bill in a timely manner. He did not pay it until August 1987, after numerous collection attempts had been made by Crown-NJ.

Again, with Mr. McElfresh, a similar transaction occurred. Mr. McElfresh approached Mr. Herwick about installing carpet in Mr. McElfresh's home. As in the prior instances mentioned above, Crown-NJ subcontracted the work, this time to an individual named William Brennan. Mr. McElfresh was billed by Crown-NJ for the work in a timely manner; however, Mr. McElfresh did not pay Crown-NJ for the carpet installation in a timely manner. Numerous phone calls were made to Mr. McElfresh by Crown-NJ in an effort to collect payment.

A similar situation occurred with Mr. Clause. Mr. Gill was asked by Mr. Clause to give him (Clause) a price on installing ceramic tile at his residence. Even though they did not do that type of work, since the Sands was a good customer Mr. Gill told Mr. Clause that he would take care of it. Floor Installers subcontracted the job to Edward A. Filling, Inc., because Floor Installers did not do ceramic work. On August 11, 1982, $3,300 in ceramic tile work was completed at Mr. Clause's personal residence. After completing the work, the Filling Company sent an invoice to Floor Installers and never paid for the tile work. Mr. Clause was not told the work would be performed for free; however, the work was performed just prior to Floor Installers' entering into Chapter 11. At that time, Floor Installers was in a state of disarray and was looking to collect on large obligations owed to it. They simply missed collecting on this small debt for work performed by another company.

The LeFevre incident also appears to be a mistake that was corrected. Mr. Herwick and Mr. LeFevre had become personal friends in Florida, and both men were hunters. When the Hilton Corporation was about to leave Atlantic City, Mr. Herwick decided to give Mr. LeFevre a rifle as a going away present. Mr. Herwick stated that this was a personal gift rather than a company gift and that the reimbursement had been incorrectly charged to the corporate entertainment account. The cost of the rifle should have been deducted from his year-end distribution of company profits. Upon learning of this discrepancy, Mr. Herwick immediately had the situation corrected. Within three weeks of the Herwick interview, the Division received a copy of a corrected Internal Revenue Service Form 1099 that had been issued to John Herwick for 1985. The corrected 1099 was in the amount of $1,213.42, exactly the amount of the cost of the rifle that was given to Mr. LeFevre.

Almost all of the above transactions were situations where the petitioners were floor covering installers on certain projects and were approached by other persons involved in the contract asking if they could purchase carpeting for themselves at a good rate. The services were not solicited for free. They were not sought as bribes to induce the awarding of a contract. All of the incidents occurred after contracts had already been awarded. The McElfresh incident is the only incident where there is an appearance of possible impropriety in the awarding of premium overtime; however, in that case all subcontractors were awarded premium overtime in order that the project could be completed early and the general contractor could collect a sizable bonus. Thus, in that case, there was no impropriety. These services were not regularly performed by the petitioners. The services were simply provided as an accommodation to customers. The petitioners thought it was just good business practice. It is common for people to seek to purchase goods from people they already know. The Division has not established a "systematic planning" to provide free goods and services for a financial gain. There has also been no showing that a civil or criminal public policy of the State was violated. Further, there is no reliable proof in the record to support a finding that such a policy exists and that it was routinely violated. There has been no showing that either the criminal laws were violated or that civil requirements, infractions of which would give rise to penalties or private causes of action at law, were violated. There has been no showing that the petitioners' conduct creates a reasonable belief that their participation in casino operations would be inimical to casino operations.

The alleged sham joint venture, however, is another matter. If the joint venture was in fact a sham organized solely to illegally obtain minority set-aside contracts, and the petitioners organized or controlled the sham joint venture, then that would be a significant violation of public policy. The Casino Control Act (at N.J.S.A. 5:12-184 et seq.) specifically provides for minority set-aside contracts in the casino industry. To attempt to violate these provisions by establishing a sham minority business in order to obtain minority set aside contracts is the pursuit of economic gain in an occupational manner or context, an act which is in violation of the civil or criminal public policies of this State. Such a violation would create a reasonable belief that the participation of such person in casino operations would be inimical to casino operations. Such activity would substantially erode public confidence in the regulatory process and cannot be either condoned or tolerated in this State.

In 1984, Mr. Miller approached Mr. Frank on several occasions about creating a joint venture to provide cleaning services. The petitioners discussed the matter with Messrs. Frank and Sukenik; however, they merely acted as advisors and did not negotiate, prepare, draft or sign the joint venture agreement.

The joint venture was officially established on November 15, 1984, when Miller and Herman Frank executed a "Joint Venture Agreement" that had been drafted by Irwin Frank, son of Herman Frank and an Ohio attorney. Miller testified that he was to be the majority owner of the joint venture. On a disclosure affidavit filed in 1985 with the Minority Entrepreneurship Development Corporation, Eagle Cleaning Systems is listed as a 55-percent owner of the joint venture and Crown-NJ is listed as a 45-percent owner thereof.

The joint venture was formed to bid on minority set-aside contracts. In 1984, the joint venture bid on, and was awarded, a subcontract at the Hilton project. On the Hilton project, Mr. Miller was supposed to apprentice, since it was his first job and he was just learning the business. As such, Crown-NJ installed all of the floor covering and Eagle Cleaning Systems performed all of the post-installation cleaning at the site.

Mr. Miller did not exercise control over the floor covering portion of the contract. Mr. Miller did very little on the project and was never available. The petitioners made numerous attempts to involve Mr. Miller in the project; however, he was never available. Meetings would be scheduled, and he would not attend. He would not showup on the job site. The petitioners would even go to Mr. Miller's house in an attempt to find him, with very little success. As a result of Mr. Miller's uncooperative attitude, Crown-NJ had to complete most of the work. Mr. Miller supervised all cleaning services and did some payroll work for the joint venture.

Mr. Miller provided two interviews with the Division. The transcripts of those interviews are in evidence (R-1 & R-2). In those interviews, Mr. Miller stated that the petitioners never intended his company to participate in a meaningful way in the contract. He stated that the joint venture was a front used by the petitioners to obtain minority set-aside contracts and that Eagle Cleaning was not expected to perform any work for the joint venture. For the reasons stated above, I do not accept Mr. Miller's statements, and, as indicated by Judge Holmes, Mr. Miller's statements appear to be motivated by revenge.

The petitioners did not solicit the joint venture; Mr. Miller did. The petitioners did not negotiate, prepare, draft or sign the joint venture; Mr. Frank did. The petitioners were not owners of the company establishing the joint venture; Messrs. Frank, Sukenik and Miller were. The petitioners were merely employees of the company. As employees, they attempted to involve Mr. Miller in the business. Mr. Miller, however, was uncooperative and was willing to let others do the work and use his name while he collected a portion of the profits. I concur with Judge Holmes that there was a sham joint venture in this case; however, the petitioners did not participate in creating or overseeing the sham. Messrs. Miller, Frank and Sukenik should be held accountable for this action and disqualified from participating in casino operations; not Messrs. Gill and Herwick.

With regard to the fraudulent performance bond, an argument can be made that the petitioners should have known that the validity of the bond was suspect from the circumstances surrounding the transaction. On the other hand, the petitioners had never previously obtained such a bond. When they experienced difficulty in obtaining a bond, they were referred by a representative of the general contractor to a specific individual, Mr. Rilley, who was familiar with procedures to obtain bonds for companies that were having difficulty securing bonds. Mr. Rilley knew of a bonding company that took high risks. In an attempt to verify the legitimacy of the bonding company, Mr. Herwick called the telephone number listed on the letterhead of Industrial Indemnity Co., N.A., in Philadelphia and the telephone was answered in the company's name. The petitioners provided the bond contract to Tishman, a large national construction company headquartered in New York. Tishman forwarded the contract to their insurance and legal offices for approval. Approximately two weeks later, Tishman notified Floor Installers that the bond was acceptable.

During an interview with the Division, Mr. Fineman admitted that the bonds that he provided were fraudulent and worthless. Fineman stated that he attracted customers whose financial instability had prevented them from securing a bond through legitimate channels. Fineman would claim to be an agent of a legitimate bonding company but would, when writing the bond, change the name of the legitimate company by adding the initials "NA" to the lawful company's name. The initials "NA" stand for Netherlands Antilles, and by adding them, Fineman stated, he was able to avoid allegations that he was fraudulently misrepresenting the legitimate bonding company. In this way, a general contractor who examined Fineman's bond by looking in Best's Guide of Insurance Companies would see the name of a legitimate company and would conclude that the bond was proper. Mr. Fineman made a business of providing fraudulent performance bonds and deceiving major construction companies, such as Tishman, that have their own legal departments. It is no wonder that he could deceive a small business such as Floor Installers which, in 1980, was experiencing financial difficulties.

Again applying the standards established by the Commission in the Resorts decision, the Division has failed to establish that the petitioners were engaged in a systematic management of activity for financial gain in violation of the civil or criminal public policies of this State. The Commission stated that "an isolated or incidental transgression of civil or criminal public policy is not a disqualification under this section. Rather, there must appear a regular or ongoing scheme for financial gain which has as an integral component, repeated or continuing violations of the criminal or civil policies of this State." Resorts at 254-55. This was an isolated incident, not a continuing course of conduct. This was the first and only time the petitioners were required to provide a performance bond. Additionally, if the petitioners had knowingly obtained the fraudulent performance bond with the intent to deceive Tishman, then a violation of the civil public policies of this State would exist; however, it appears in this case that the petitioners were duped. Even though they had some suspicions regarding Mr. Fineman, their attempts to determine his company's legitimacy and their reliance on Tishman's legal department's review was reasonable. In addition, it was an agent of Tishman that referred the petitioners to Mr. Rilley, who then contacted Mr. Fineman. As a result, one cannot say that the petitioners knowingly obtained the performance bond with the intent to deceive Tishman.

Recently, in Division of Gaming Enforcement, Dept. of Law and Public Safety v. Michael P. Waters, OAL DKT. CCC 3933-86 (Jan. 7, 1987), mod., Casino Control Commission (June 12, 1987), the Commission stated (at 2) that:

> A distinction must be drawn between rehabilitation from a section 86(c)(1) or (3) disqualifying offense pursuant to sections 90(h) or 91(d) of the Act and rehabilitation as an aspect of the inimical analysis. In the former situation, disqualification is established once it is shown that the respondent committed an enumerated offense. The respondent is then afforded the opportunity to affirmatively demonstrate his rehabilitation from that disqualification. It is well established that, consistent with other affirmative licensing criteria, the respondent must prove his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. Application of Richard Romanishin for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. 84-RA-85 (Commission order May 23, 1985); Application of Chester R. Brathwaite for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. A-4252-82T3 (Unpublished opinion reversing Commission decision January 23, 1984).
>
> However, unlike a section 86(c)(1) or (3) situation, disqualification pursuant to section 86(c)(4) is not established upon demonstrating that the respondent committed the offense in question. Such a determination can only be made after considering all the circumstances surrounding the offense: its nature, its remoteness, and the offender's conduct subsequent to the offense, i.e., essentially the same factors which bear upon rehabilitation. Application of Donna Davis, 8 N.J.A.R. 301 (Commission decision December 27, 1985); State v. Theodore Williams, Docket No. 84-288 (Commission order May 1, 1987).

The Commission concluded that if the Division establishes a case for disqualification, it is "then incumbent upon the respondent to show that he was rehabilitated; that is, the burden of going forward with evidence (but not the ultimate burden of proof), had shifted" (at 3).

In the Davis case, the Commission stated (at 313-14):

> Rehabilitation under section 90(h) (casino employee license) and section 91(d) (casino hotel employee registration) does not apply to disqualifying convictions under section 86(c)(4). By their express terms, these rehabilitation provisions apply only to "...a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria." Nevertheless, many of the factors that are considered upon a claim of rehabilitation are included within the inimical analysis.

The Commission indicated that "it has been generally observed that the notion of rehabilitation is subsumed in the inimical analysis (and) . . . the inimical analysis is substantially similar to the concept of rehabilitation." The Commission concluded that:

> The salient point to be made here is that we consider rehabilitation factors before concluding that the offense in question is or is not inimical under section 86(c)(4). Because the rehabilitation provisions are subsumed within the inimical analysis, it should never be necessary to determine the merits of a claim of rehabilitation after concluding that a given offense is inimical pursuant to section 86(c)(4). [Id. at 314]

The eight specific criteria enumerated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made are:

1. The nature and duties of the applicant's position or the registrant's position;
2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4. The date of the offense or conduct;

5. The age of the applicant or registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant or registrant under their supervision.

First, the petitioners are applicants for qualification as employees of a casino service industry. They desire to work in the floor covering industry and to be able to work for companies that install and repair carpeting in casino hotels. As such, they will have no direct responsibilities for actual gaming activity and minimal, if any, contact with casino patrons.

Second, I found that they did not commit any criminal offense. The Division's allegations concern questionable buisness practices allegedly committed by the petitioners. The petitioners' conduct in these allegations was not serious enough to warrant disqualification and the Division failed to establish that any civil or criminal violations of public policy had been committed by the petitioners.

Third, the circumstances surrounding each incident are discussed above in this discussion.

Fourth, the alleged misconduct with regard to the fraudulent performance bond occurred in 1980, the alleged misconduct regarding Mr. Clause occurred in 1982, and the remaining alleged misconduct occurred in 1984 and 1985. No allegations of misconduct occurring after 1985 were made by the Division.

Fifth, Mr. Gill was 34 years of age when the alleged misconduct began and 39 years of age when the alleged misconduct ended. Mr. Herwick was 38 years of age when the alleged misconduct began and 43 years of age when the alleged misconduct ended.

Sixth, neither petitioner has ever committed a violation of the criminal laws. The Division alleges that the alleged questionable business practices evidence a systematic management of a business pursuing an economic gain in an occupational manner, an act which is in violation of the civil or criminal policies of this State. As indicated above, I did not so find.

Seventh, no social conditions contributed to the alleged misconduct; however, the companies' business activity (or lack thereof) and financial situations, particularly that of Floor Installers, contributed to their course of conduct.

Eighth, both petitioners are college graduates, businessmen and family men. They had both been active in their communities and are now trying to re-establish their lives; however, both are virtually barred from working in their chosen vocation in the local area due to the cloud hanging over their heads that these proceedings have caused.

When considering the petitioners' conduct as taken in context and the overall nature of their characters, I do not find that the petitioners pursued economic gain in an occupational manner or context that is in violation of the civil or criminal public policies of this State, and that the Division has failed to establish a reasonable belief that the petitioners' participation in casino operations would be inimical to casino operations and to the policies of the Casino Control Act.

I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the casino service industry licensure, registration or qualification of the petitioners would be inimical to the policies of the Act, pursuant to section 86e.

(B) N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c)

As indicated above, the petitioners are required to establish their individual good character, honesty and integrity. Companies applying for casino service industry licensure are also required to establish their good character, honesty and integrity. It is well-settled that the character and responsibility of a corporate entity can be judged only by the character and responsibility of its owners or managers, those who give it direction. Trap Rock Industries, Inc. v. Kohl, 59 N.J. 471, 482 (1971), cert. den. 405 U.S. 1065, 31 L. Ed. 2d 796, 92 S. Ct. 1500 (1972). Therefore, the fitness of any applicant business entity must be evaluated, in part, upon John J. Gill's and John S. Herwick's character, honesty and integrity if the petitioners act as owners, officers or sales representatives of the applicant business entity.

Under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c), the petitioners were required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, their reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. This standard is identical to the standard in section 89b(2) of the Act for the licensing of casino key employees. The Commission has had occasion to interpret this standard as contained in section 89b(2). In In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 248 (1979), the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions that must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon an applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Applications of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 10 N.J.A.R. 295, 297-98 (1980). In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Boardwalk Regency Corporation at 296.

The Division's original objection to the good character, honesty and integrity of Baumgardner Construction Company centers around the conduct of petitioners, who were sales representatives for Baumgardner. N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.14(a)2ix provides that no casino service industry license shall be issued pursuant to section 92c unless "each employee who will act as a sales representative or otherwise regularly engage in the solicitation of business from casino licensees" establishes his qualifications under the Act and regulations of the Commission. While no longer employed by Baumgardner, the petitioners still desire to be sales representatives for floor covering businesses that may do business with the casino industry. As such, the Commission has afforded them this opportunity to establish their qualifications and their good character, honesty and integrity.

John J. Gill is 42 years old. He has been married for 20 years, has three children, ages 16, 17, and 19, and provides a home for a 19-year-old homeless youth. Mr. Gill is practicing Roman Catholic. He was raised through the Catholic school system and graduated from St. Joseph's University with a B.S. degree in English with a minor in philosophy. Mr. Gill has been active in the Boy Scouts, little league, Knights of Columbus, Kiwanis Club, the Pleasantville Businessmen's Association, and the Men of Malvery (a retreat group). Mr. Gill has also contributed to his church, schools and other charitable organizations. He has donated both services and materials to various organizations, including donating carpet removed from various projects to schools.

John S. Herwick is 46 years old. He has been married for 24 years and has an 18-year-old son who is attending Valley Forge Military Academy Junior College. He has been active in the Pleasantville Businessmen's Association, the Mainland Kiwanis, the 1984 U.S. Olympic Committee Dinner Committee, the El Paso Jaycees, Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A., and has coached and umpired in both little league and Babe Ruth league. He graduated high school from the Valley Forge Military Academy, and graduated from the Pennsylvania Military College in 1965 with a degree in English. He has been an active member of the Holy Trinity Episcopal Church of Ocean City and the Valley Forge Military Academy Alumni Association. He has volunteered to serve on several committees for the Academy. From 1962 until 1968, Mr. Herwick was in the Marine Reserve. He attained the rank of E-4 and was separated with an Honorable Discharge. He was awarded the Good Conduct Medal and the Marine Corps Reserve Medal.

Both men's work records are detailed above. They appear to be hardworking small-businessmen and good family men. They are persons of good character, honesty and integrity. Accordingly, the petitioners present no risk to the public or to the integrity of the gaming industry in this State in the position applied for. They have earned the privilege of licensure. An examination of the whole person clearly and convincingly establishes that Mr. John J. Gill and Mr. John S. Herwick are persons of good character, honesty and integrity, and are suitable for licensure in this State as sales representatives for a casino service industry. See, Boardwalk Regency Corp.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that the petitioners have established, by clear and convincing evidence, their current good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3(c).

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), Department of Law and Public Safety, respondent, alleges that petitioner, Marie E. Gittone, is statutorily disqualified from holding casino hotel registration no. 79459-40 by virtue of her plea of guilty to official misconduct, second degree, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2a, and theft by unlawful disposition, third degree, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9. The Division also opposes petitioner's application for casino licensure based upon the statutory disqualification and the allegation that petitioner does not possess the requisite good character, honesty and integrity pursuant to section 89b(2) of the Casino Control Act (Act) as incorporated withinsection 90b of the Act. The petitioner asserts rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h and/or 91d.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed a letter with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on December 18, 1987. The petitioner requested a hearing on January 27, 1988. On February 1, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. On May 18, 1988, the Division filed a complaint with the Commission seeking the revocation of the petitioner's casino hotel registration. A prehearing conference was held before the Honorable Lillard E. Law on April 19, 1988 and the matter was scheduled for hearing on July 18, 1988 before the Honorable Jeff Masin. The matter was adjourned and an Order of Consolidation was entered on June 23, 1988. The matter was thereafter scheduled before Administrative Law Judge Masin on December 1, 1988 at the Absecon Municipal Complex, Absecon, New Jersey. On November 29, 1988, the within matter was transferred to the undersigned. The hearing was held as scheduled, however, the record remained open until December 15, 1988, to allow petitioner to submit additional documentation.

ISSUES

A. Whether petitioner was convicted of crimes listed as statutory disqualifiers in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2a, official misconduct, and N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9, theft by unlawful disposition.

B. Whether petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b.

C. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to sections 90h and/or 91b of the Act.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts in this matter are totally uncontroverted.

In June 1983, Marie E. Gittone was employed as the recreation leader for the Senior Citizens Center by the City of Vineland. In addition to being responsible for the financial activities of the Senior Center, Ms. Gittone arranged trips and social outings for the benefit of the senior citizens. Between June 1983 and February 1984 Ms. Gittone received various amounts of money from senior citizens for the trips. However, during that period, approximately $24,000 was diverted to Ms. Gittone's own personal account. Ms. Gittone also issued a number of bad checks between December 1983 and January 1984.

On February 14, 1985, an accusation was filed against Ms. Gittone in the Cumberland County Superior Court. The accusation charged Ms. Gittone with official misconduct (second degree) in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2 a and b; theft by unlawful disposition (third degree) in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9, and with issuing bad checks in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-5. On that date, Ms. Gittone pled guilty to all three counts of the accusations. On April 12, 1985, Ms. Gittone was sentenced to five years' probation, 60 days in jail, 200 hours of community service and was ordered to pay restitution in the amount of $24,265.

Ms. Gittone divided her court-ordered 200 hours of community service requirement between working at the intensive care unit at Newcomb Hospital in Vineland, New Jersey, and teaching in the Adult Literacy Program of the Vineland Board of Education. Although she satisfied her community service requirements, Ms. Gittone has been voluntarily tutoring an illiterate cook at the Showboat Casino Hotel, where she has been working since October 1987, in order that he may obtain a driver's license.

The court-ordered restitution was paid in May 1985 and an Order of Satisfaction was entered by the Honorable Isaac I. Serata on June 18, 1985 (P-1). In addition, Ms. Gittone was granted an early release from probation on September 4, 1987, since she had satisfactorily complied with all of the conditions of her probation (P-8).

It would appear at first blush that Ms. Gittone committed egregious acts by defrauding many senior citizens. Although the gravity of the offenses must not be diminished, based upon the uncontroverted testimony of Ms. Gittone, a somewhat different picture of her emerges — that of a committed, compassionate individual who cared deeply about her seniors; who tried to provide low-cost trips for all seniors (even those who could not afford them); who started borrowing money from future planned trips to pay for current trips; who was financially so far behind and in desperation gambled and lost between $6,000 and $8,000 at Atlantic City casinos in an attempt to balance her accounts. There is no dispute that Ms. Gittone did not personally benefit from the $24,000 she diverted. Rather, the monies were diverted in an effort to keep a financial house of cards from tumbling down. Ms. Gittone's attempts to keep the price of the trips affordable to the seniors and her attempts to include the less fortunate in the Center's recreational activities led to calamitous financial results. However well-meaning her intentions were, Ms. Gittone was engaged in comitting serious criminal acts.

In October 1987, Ms. Gittone began working as a supervisor of three food outlets at the Showboat Casino Hotel. She has received high performance evaluations from her supervisors (P-4). On November 23, 1987, Ms. Gittone received a certificate of achievement for completing a supervisory skills training program at the Showboat Casino Hotel (P-3). She is presently enrolled and attending an "Introduction to Computers" course in the Vineland Adult Education class (P-5).

Ms. Gittone was characterized by Dr. S. Donald Babcock as having an excellent reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. Dr. Babcock also testified as an expert witness (P-6) that Marie E. Gittone showed no signs of a compulsive gambling disorder. He testified credibly that her sole motivation for gambling was to attempt to recover the money.

The above is believable, uncontroverted and is FOUND AS FACT.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSION

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) of the Act mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense which would be under New Jersey law at the time of application a violation of any of the following provisions in regard to Title 2C of the New Jersey statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the petitioner's conviction on February 14, 1985, for violations of N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2a, official misconduct, second degree, and of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9, theft by unlawful disposition, third degree, are statutory disqualifiers listed under section 86c(1) of the Act. I agree.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that petitioner's convictions for violations of N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2a and N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9 disqualify her from being a registrant and a licensee, pursuant to section 86c(1).

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d and/or N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

An applicant or a licensed respondent in a disciplinary proceeding faced with the existence of one or more section 86 disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against continued licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91b; N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. These sections set forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination for rehabilitation is to be made:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;
(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
(4) The date of the offense or conduct;
(5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or a repeated incident;
(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counselling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Ms. Gittone supervises and manages three food outlets within the Showboat Casino Hotel. As such, she has limited contact with the patrons of the casino. In addition, the petitioner has applied for casino licensure. As such, she would have substantial contact with patrons of the casino.

Second, the petitioner was convicted on February 14, 1985, of violations of N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2a, official misconduct, second degree, and N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9, theft by deception, third degree. Under section 86c(1) of the Act, both are statutory disqualifiers. Given the circumstances involving breach of the public trust, they were extremely serious offenses.

Third, it is apparent that petitioner knew that her actions in 1983-1984 were illegal. However, there have been no other recurrences of criminal behavior.

Fourth, petitioner's criminal offenses occurred approximately five years ago. Petitioner's probation terminated early on September 4, 1987 (P-8). There were no problems with her probation.

Fifth, the petitioner committed the offenses at age 35. It is unlikely that her misconduct was due to immaturity.

Sixth, the petitioner's misconduct involved the commission of offenses in 1983-1984. Prior to that, petitioner had not been involved in the criminal justice system. However, there was apparently a pattern of misconduct in 1983-1984.

Seventh, there were no apparent social conditions which contributed to the offenses.

Eighth, the evidence provided by the petitioner in support of her claim of rehabilitation is sufficient to overcome her disqualification with regard to her casino employee hotel registration. The evidence of the petitioner's rehabilitation included: her positive employment record in the casino industry, documents establishing her satisfactory completion of the probationary term imposed for the criminal violations, the petitioner's community service which was a condition of her probation, documents establishing that the court-ordered restitution was paid, and petitioner's own testimony acknowledging her past misconduct and indications that she had learned her lesson. However, an applicant for casino licensure undergoes increased scrutiny when being assessed as to rehabilitation. Ms. Gittone's willful and knowing breach of the public trust combined with the serious nature of Ms. Gittone's criminal acts inveigh against a finding of rehabilitation with regard to her application for casino licensure.

After considering all of the factors listed in N.J.S.A 5:12-91d and/or N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h, including petitioner's work record and the positions applied for, I CONCLUDE that with regard to petitioner's casino employee hotel registration that petitioner has established, by clear and convincing evidence, her rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. However, I further CONCLUDE that with regard to the casino employee licensure, the petitioner has not established by clear and convincing evidence her rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within Section 90b

Under section 89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b, Ms. Gittone is required to demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence her good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc., for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission DKT. 79-CL-1 (February 26, 1979) at 8. In Resorts, the Commission held that the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key.

Although Dr. Babcock testified as to Ms. Gittone's good character, honesty and integrity, the proofs as to these attributes were far from overwhelming. Although it appears that Ms. Gittone is sincere to her commitment to abstain from further criminal conduct, the paucity of the character evidence leads me to CONCLUDE that Marie E. Gittone has failed to establish by clear and convincing evidence that she possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Therefore, it is ORDERED that the application of Marie E. Gittone for casino employee licensure be DENIED. It is further ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement seeking revocation of petitioner's casino hotel employee registration be DISMISSED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: May 27, 1988 Decided: October 3, 1988

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter concerns the complaint of the Division of Gaming Enforcement filed with the Casino Control Commission on February 19, 1987, charging the respondent with various violations of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.) and regulations adopted under the act (N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.1 et seq.). The charges arise from the respondent's issuance of cash payments to patron Antonio Chan on five occasions between September 28, 1985, and November 30, 1986. These are the issues:

1. Has the respondent violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 by recording cash payments to the patron without maintaining detailed, supporting, and subsidiary records to support the accumulation of the costs of the complimentaries provided to the patron.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

2. Has the respondent violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 by failing to submit to the Division a record of the costs of the complimentaries provided to the patron in the respondent's "daily comp. receiver report" on May 14 and November 30, 1986.

3. Has the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) because the cash complimentary funds used in the patron's redemption transactions provided the patron with credit or an advance of something of value to enable the patron to engage in gaming activity as a player; because the cash complimentary funds used in the patron's redemption transactions represented a release or discharge of the patron's debts to the casino; and because the cash complimentary funds allowed the patron to redeem counter checks by exchanging cash or chips in an amount less than the amount for which the checks were drawn.

4. Has the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) by entering into an agreement with a patron which provided for the payment of an amount which represented a percentage of the patron's net gaming losses.

The foregoing is a clarified restatement of the issues identified during a telephone prehearing conference in this matter conducted by Administrative Law Judge Beatrice S. Tylutki on June 29, 1987. Also identified as an issue at that time was whether cash complimentaries were permissible pursuant to the Casino Control Act and regulations, and, if so, under what conditions were they allowable. However, section 102m of the Casino Control Act was amended effective January 14, 1988 (P.L. 1987, Chapter 426), to prohibit most cash complimentaries. The Division did not allege in its complaint that the mere giving of a cash complimentary by the respondent constituted a violation. Rather, as can be seen above, the Division alleged violations surrounding the cash payments. Since resolution of the general question concerning the permissibility of cash complimentaries was neither material nor helpful, it was removed as an issue during a telephone status conference conducted by the undersigned on March 22, 1988.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division's complaint was filed with the Casino Control Commission on February 19, 1987. On April 10, 1987, the respondent filed with the Commission its notice of defense and statement of request for hearing. The Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on April 27, 1987, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

As noted previously, Administrative Law Judge Tylutki conducted a telephone prehearing conference on June 29, 1987. At that time, she scheduled the hearing in this matter to commence before her on October 5, 1987. However, as a result of a telephone conference conducted by Judge Tylutki on September 28, 1987, the parties agreed that the matter should be placed on the inactive list until the end of January 1988, in order to provide additional time for discovery and for the discussion of a possible settlement. The matter was subsequently placed on the inactive list by order dated October 7, 1987. This order also provided that the matter would subsequently be scheduled for hearing commencing on February 1, 1988.

On or about January 27, 1988, Judge Tylutki was informed that the parties had reached a settlement agreement and would be submitting a stipulation of settlement. Therefore, the hearing scheduled to commence on February 1, 1988, was adjourned. However, the parties were unable to reach a settlement agreement. By letter dated February 10, 1988, Judge Tylutki informed the parties that she had arranged with the Clerk of the Office of Administrative Law to have the matter transferred for hearing by the undersigned commencing on April 4, 1988.

In order to permit the parties sufficient time to complete a stipulation of facts, the start of the hearing was delayed for one day. The matter was then heard as scheduled on April 5, 1988. The record remained open following the hearing to permit post-hearing submissions. Shortly before the hearing date, on March 31, 1988, the respondent had submitted a motion for partial summary decision. Because the Division did not have an opportunity to respond to this motion prior to the hearing, it was deemed untimely and the brief in support of the motion was considered as a trial brief. The Division's post-hearing brief was filed on May 9, 1988. The respondent's post-hearing brief was filed on May 27, 1988, and the record closed on that date.

FINDINGS OF FACT

A. STIPULATION OF FACTS

The material facts in this matter are undisputed. The parties have agreed to a comprehensive stipulation of facts, which was admitted into evidence as exhibit J-1. Pursuant to this agreement, the following facts have been stipulated:

1. Respondent, GNOC, Corp. (hereinafter called "GNOC") owns and operates the casino hotel formerly known as the Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino. GNOC was at all times referenced herein a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey with its principal place of business located at Boston and Pacific Avenues in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic and State of New Jersey.

2. At all times referenced herein, GNOC was the holder of a plenary casino license issued to it by the Casino Control Commission ("Commission") authorizing it to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and Commission regulations promulgated thereunder. Said licensure was issued to GNOC effective May 1, 1984, and GNOC was conducting its casino hotel operation pursuant to said license at all times referenced herein.

3. At all times referenced herein, GNOC was the holder of, and operated pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective May 1, 1984 at which time GNOC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. GNOC conducted its casino operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation at all times referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitled GNOC to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq., and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. GNOC is the successor in interest to GNAC Corp. t/a The Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino. GNAC was the holder of a Certificate of Operation effective December 2, 1980, at which time GNAC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Respondent GNOC succeeded GNAC's interest as casino licensee as of May 1, 1984.

5. On April 12, 1981, GNOC initially granted patron Antonio Chan a credit account at GNOC. The initial authorized credit limit granted Mr. Chan was $200,000. On February 9, 1986, GNOC authorized an increase to Mr. Chan's credit account to $400,000. Neither the granting of the account nor its authorized limit is at issue in the instant matter. A copy of patron Chan's credit application is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit A.

6. On February 19, 1987, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (hereinafter "Division") filed the instant complaint against GNOC.

7. During the period from September 28, 1985 through November 30, 1986 GNOC personnel recorded cash payments from the casino cage in the total amount of $117,600 to patron Chan. The dates the cash payments were made and the amounts of the payments are listed as follows:

1.	September 28, 1985	$12,600
2.	February 1, 1986	$25,200
3.	May 14, 1986	$29,400
4.	August 17, 1986	$25,200
5.	November 30, 1986	$25,200

8. Contemporaneous with the issuance of the 5 payments referenced in paragraph 7, supra., GNOC Cage Personnel prepared and maintained the following documents: GNOC Guest Complimentary slips, GNOC Miscellaneous Disbursement vouchers, and GNOC Miscellaneous Disbursement Logs, copies of which are attached hereto as Joint Exhibits B through L. Each of these documents carried the notation "cash comp." On the Miscellaneous Disbursement Voucher dated May 14, 1986, which is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit G, patron Chan wrote "Plane Tickets." The Miscellaneous Disbursement Voucher dated August 17, 1986, which is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit I contains the notation "Phillippines - A.C.". The accuracy of the amounts paid to the patron and the fact that Antonio Chan received the payments are not at issue in the instant matter.

9. Patron Antonio Chan was under no obligation to repay the $117,600 cash given to him by GNOC and recorded as cash comps, as described in paragraphs 7 and 8, supra.

10. The $12,600 cash payment to patron Chan on September 28, 1985 was reported on GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" to the Division for September 28, 1985 as a travel complimentary.

11. The $25,200 cash payment to patron Chan on February 1, 1986 was reported on GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" to the Division for February 1, 1986 as a miscellaneous complimentary.

12. The $29,400 cash payment to patron Chan on May 14, 1986 was not reported on GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" to the Division for May 14, 1986.

13. The $25,200 cash payment to patron Chan on August 17, 1986 was reported on GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" to the Division for August 17, 1986 as a travel complimentary.

14. The $25,200 cash payment to patron Chan on November 30, 1986 was not reported on GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" to the Division for November 30, 1986.

15. The $29,400 cash payment to patron Chan was made on May 14, 1986 according to GNOC's Miscellaneous Disbursement Log, a copy of which is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit H. Patron Chan requested the complimentary from a GNOC Casino Shift Manager and the request was approved by the GNOC Vice President/Casino Manager. At patron Chan's request, the $29,400 in cash was then used in the partial redemption of consolidation counter check #618285 as indicated in Acknowledgement of Redemption document #4278762, a copy of which is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit M.

16. The $25,200 cash payment to patron Chan was made on November 30, 1986 (calendar day December 1, 1986) according to GNOC's Miscellaneous Disbursement Log, a copy of which is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit L. Patron Chan requested the complimentary from the

GNOC Vice President/Casino Manager, who approved the request. At patron Chan's request, the $25,200 in cash was then used in the partial redemption of consolidation counter check #691306 as indicated in Acknowledgement of Redemption document #4311613, a copy of which is attached hereto as Joint Exhibit N.

17. During the period from September 21, 1985 through December 2, 1986, patron Chan engaged in gaming activity pursuant to his approved casino credit account during 13 trips to GNOC sustaining net gaming wins on 8 trips and net gaming losses on 5 trips.

18. On the 8 trips to GNOC that patron Chan sustained net gaming wins during the period referred to in paragraph 17, supra, patron Chan did not request from GNOC a cash complimentary and no such complimentary was made to patron Chan by GNOC.

19. On the 5 trips to GNOC that patron Chan sustained net gaming losses during the period referred to in paragraph 17, supra, patron Chan requested and received cash complimentaries from GNOC in the amounts described in paragraph 7, supra.

20. GNOC's player rating information of patron Chan indicates that patron Chan sustained the following net gaming losses at GNOC during the period from September 21, 1985 through December 2, 1986:

	Dates of Trip	Net Gaming Losses
1.	9/28/85 - 9/30/85	$150,000
2.	2/1/86 - 2/3/86	$301,000
3.	5/14/86 - 5/17/86	$348,000
4.	8/16/86 - 8/20/86	$298,500
5.	11/30/86 - 12/2/86	$298,500

21. Each of the cash payments was made following a request by the patron and subsequent review and approval of the request by GNOC personnel. The 5 cash payments made to patron Chan during the period from September 21, 1985 through December 2, 1986, as described in paragraph 17 through 20, supra, establish that patron Chan received approximately 8.4% of his net gaming losses. The percentage of gaming loss calculations for the period reviewed are listed below:

	Cash Payment	Net Gaming Losses	Cash Payment as a % of Net Gaming Losses
1.	12,600	150,000	8.4% (.08400)
2.	25,200	301,000	8.4% (.08370)
3.	29,400	348,000	8.4% (.08448)
4.	25,200	298,500	8.4% (.08442)
5.	25,200	298,500	8.4% (.08442)

22. At all relevant times, GNOC's cage personnel issued a complimentary to a patron after having obtained authority from the appropriate person (the "Authorizer") within GNOC. After issuing a complimentary, GNOC utilized the following procedures to record the complimentary in its computer system. On a daily basis, GNOC's security personnel transport the Authorizer's copy of the "Disbursement Voucher" and the "Disbursement Sign-Off Log" from the casino cage to a clerk in the Accounts Receivable Department. The Disbursement Sign Off-Log lists the number of vouchers issued and their aggregate dollar value. The clerk enters the complimentary information into GNOC's computer system and generates the various reports for use by GNOC and the regulatory authorities including the "Daily Comp Receiver Report."

23. The Division's complaint alleges that GNOC violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in recording payments to the patron without maintaining detailed, supporting and subsidiary records to support the accumulation of the costs of the complimentary at the time that the 5 payments referred to in paragraph 7, supra, were made to patron Chan during the period from September 28, 1985 through November 30, 1986. The Division's allegations have been summarized and set forth in issue B of the Prehearing Order dated July 15, 1987.

GNOC contends that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 does not require supporting and subsidiary records to be maintained.

24. The Division's complaint alleges that GNOC violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 in failing to submit to the Division a record of the costs of the complimentaries in GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" which were filed with the Division on or about May 14, 1986 and November 30, 1986, as set forth in paragraphs 12 and 14, supra. The Division's allegations have been summarized and set forth in issue C of the Prehearing Conference Order dated July 15, 1987.

GNOC acknowledges that the May 14, 1986 and November 30, 1986 complimentaries were not included in GNOC's "Daily Comp. Receiver Report" for those dates. GNOC contends that the omissions were unintentional.

25. The Division's complaint alleges that GNOC violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) in that the funds used in patron Chan's redemption transactions, as set forth in paragraphs 15 and 16, supra, provided patron Chan with credit or an advance of something of value or which represented value to enable patron Chan to engage in gaming activity as a player [N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(1) and N.J. A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)(1)], to release or discharge patron Chan's debts to the casino [N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a)(2) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)(2)] and by allowing the drawer of a counter check to redeem his counter checks by exchanging cash or chips in amounts that did not equal the amounts for which the counter checks were drawn [N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(c)]. The Division's allegations have been summarized and set forth in issue D of the Prehearing Conference Order dated July 15, 1987.

GNOC contends that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) are inapplicable to the facts in the instant matter.

26. The Division's complaint alleges that GNOC violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104(a)(1) by entering into an agreement with patron Chan which provided for the payment of an amount that represented a percentage of the patron's net gaming losses at GNOC. The Division's allegations have been summarized and are set forth in issue E of the Prehearing Conference Order dated July 15, 1987.

GNOC contends that N.J.S.A. 5:12-104(a)(1) is not applicable to the instant matter. The parties stipulate that there was no written agreement to provide patron Chan with cash complimentaries. GNOC contends that there was no agreement between itself and patron Chan.

B. ADDITIONAL EVIDENCE

Leo Previti testified on behalf of the respondent. He is presently a corporate attorney with an affiliate of the respondent in New Jersey. He previously served as senior financial manager and operations controller with the respondent. According to Mr. Previti, he is thoroughly familiar with the respondent's procedures for issuance and recording of cash complimentaries.

As noted above, the cash payments made to patron Chan on May 14 and November 30, 1986, were not reported on the respondent's daily comp. receiver reports for May 14 and November 30, 1986. Mr. Previti testified that he conducted an investigation shortly before the hearing in this matter to determine why this information had not been recorded on these reports. His testimony at the hearing included an explanation of the procedures used by the respondent when a complimentary is issued.

According to Mr. Previti, when a cash complimentary was issued, the respondent's cage personnel would prepare and maintain a guest complimentary slip, a miscellaneous disbursement voucher, and a miscellaneous disbursement log. The guest complimentary slip would be completed by the casino executive giving the complimentary. It would record the date of the service, the amount and description of what was given, to whom it was given, and who authorized the complimentary. Mr. Previti stated that the miscellaneous disbursement voucher would be produced in the cage and would direct payment of cash from the cage. The information from the voucher would be recorded on the log, which is a continuous register of all cash payouts. The log is maintained in the cage and is signed by the cage shift manager. The log records the date, time, customer's name, description of the transaction, and amount.

It was the testimony of Mr. Previti that the miscellaneous disbursement log would be picked up by casino security near closing time and physically taken to the accounts receivable section. An accounts receivable clerk would then review the miscellaneous disbursement voucher and input the information into both the financial system and the complimentary system. Mr. Previti learned that the cash complimentary issued to patron Chan on May 14, 1986, did not appear on the original run of reports occurring on the morning of May 15. The information had not been entered in a timely manner because a clerk had been unable to read the authorizer's identification number. Consequently, the clerk put the voucher into a manila folder containing matters "to be researched." The next day, the clerk's supervisor would determine the authorizer's name and number and the complimentary would be input into the system. Significantly, the inputting would be subsequent to the running of the daily comp. receiver report that the Division of Gaming Enforcement had already received for the date in question. When a daily comp. receiver report for May 14, 1986 was subsequently generated as part of Mr. Previti's investigation in April 1988 (Exhibit R-1), the $29,400 cash payment to patron Chan was recorded. This information also appeared on a "History Detail Mac Log Report" maintained by the respondent (Exhibit R-2).

Mr. Previti also testified concerning the respondent's recording of the cash complimentary paid to patron Chan on November 30, 1986. According to Mr. Previti, security picked up the appropriate documentation concerning complimentaries from the cage and these were brought to the accounts receivable clerk. However, the documents did not contain the authorization number needed by the clerk to input the data. Thus, the papers went into the "to be researched" file. Mr. Previti learned that although the cage had generated the guest complimentary slip, the miscellaneous disbursement voucher, and had maintained the miscellaneous disbursement log, the required information was never entered into the daily comp. receiver report. He concluded that the information had been misfiled.

Mr. Previti testified that the respondent has rectified the problem of inaccurate daily comp. receiver reports. Now, the report has been changed to show all the information which has been posted on a particular date. Thus, matters which had been set aside "to be researched" will be entered on the report issued on the day the information is subsequently obtained.

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I. Has the respondent violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 by recording cash payments to the patron without maintaining detailed, supporting, and subsidiary records to support the accumulation of the costs of the complimentaries provided to the patron?

The Division alleges that the respondent has committed five violations of the requirements of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 arising out of the five payments to Antonio Chan which the respondent made between September 28, 1985, and December 2, 1986. It is undisputed that the respondent's cage personnel prepared and maintained the following documents at the time of the issuance of the five payments: GNOC guest complimentary slips, GNOC miscellaneous disbursement vouchers, and GNOC miscellaneous disbursement logs. The Division contends that the documents prepared by the respondent which reflect the cash payments made to Antonio Chan do not satisfy the record-keeping requirements of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3. The respondent contends that it was not under a duty to maintain any additional documentation, as the documents which it prepared fully complied with the requirements of the regulation.

N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(a) requires each casino licensee to maintain complete, accurate, and legible records of all transactions pertaining to its revenues and costs. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(b) provides that a casino licensee must also maintain detailed, supporting, subsidiary records sufficient to meet the requirements of subsection (c). Subsection (c) describes nine areas requiring such detailed, supporting, and subsidiary records. Among these is subsection (c)3, which refers to regulated complimentary services. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 provides that the detailed, supporting, and subsidiary records shall include:

> Records supporting the accumulation of the costs and number of persons, by category of service, for regulated complimentary services. Such records shall include, on a daily basis, the name of each person provided with complimentary services, the category of services provided, the retail value of the aggregate of each category of service provided to such person, and the person authorizing the receipt of such service. A copy of this record shall be submitted to the Division of Gaming Enforcement's office located on the casino premises no later than two days subsequent to its preparation. Excerpted from this requirement are the individual names of persons authorizing or receiving complimentary tickets > for theatre or other entertainment events . . . , parking [or] beverages served in bars and the casino. . . . .

Each of the aforementioned documents prepared by the respondent's cage personnel carry the notation "cash comp." However, some of these documents also contained additional information. Three of the miscellaneous disbursement vouchers have the following handwritten notation: "tickets," "plane tickets," and "six tickets." The guest complimentary slip and the miscellaneous disbursement log for August 17, 1986, contain the notation "air fare." These notations have been crossed out. Two of the five cash payments to Antonio Chan were reported to the Division as "travel" complimentaries by the respondent on its daily comp. receiver report for September 28, 1985, and August 17, 1986. One of the payments was reported to the Division as a "miscellaneous" complimentary on the respondent's daily comp. receiver report for February 1, 1986. The respondent's cash payments to patron Chan on May 14 and November 30, 1986 were not reported to the Division on the respondent's daily comp. receiver report for each of those dates.

The Division asserts that it is unable to determine the regulated complimentary service that was provided to patron Chan from its review of the documentation prepared and maintained by the respondent. There are no records which support any accumulation of travel costs by the patron. According to the Division, the only "expenses" incurred by the patron which are supported by records are the patron's gambling losses. It is the position of the Division that the respondent had an affirmative duty under N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 to provide detailed records to the Division indicating the true nature of the payments to Mr. Chan.

The Division argues that the legislative history regarding the record-keeping practices required of all casino licensees supports its position. In its report dated April 1977, the New Jersey State Commission of Investigation made several recommendations dealing with the record-keeping practices and reporting procedures to be required of casino licensees. Among the purposes to be served in regulating these practices and procedures was the need to monitor possible infiltration of undesirable elements into casinos and related activities. In regard to documentation, the SCI recommended in its report at 11,12-F:

> . . . that the regulatory body establish the minimal levels of supporting documentation that licensees must keep as evidence of their various transactions. Once again, if there are no requirements as to supporting documents, such as bills, invoices, contracts, etc., it will be difficult if not impossible to impose sanctions for failure to provide such documentation. More importantly, certain transactions > are of such importance that the form of documentation should be specified, covering check-cashing, junketeering, the purchase and destruction of casino chips and other areas where it is essential that specific controls be imposed and specific information recorded.

In its Second Interim Report, dated February 17, 1977, the Governor's Staff Policy Group on Casino Gambling also expressed its concern that minimum record-keeping requirements be imposed upon casino licensees. In support of this recommendation, the staff policy group identified a variety of illegal activities which could compound the difficulty of accurately assessing the revenue aspect of casino operation. The Casino Control Commission has also spoken concerning the need to keep accurate accounting records in regard to complimentary services. In State of New Jersey v. Greate Bay Hotel and Casino, Inc. and Patricia Jean DiGiacomo, OAL DKT. NO. CCC 5460-83, AGENCY DKT. NO. 83-17, Initial Decision dated March 26, 1984, Commission Decision dated July 25, 1984 at 19, the Commission stated, "the failure to keep accurate accounting records on complimentary services strikes at the heart of all accounting controls. The ability of the [Division] to monitor complimentary practices and the Commission to audit significant expenditures is largely dependent upon completeness and accuracy of true accounting records."

Greate Bay had been charged with failing to maintain proper supporting documentation in the issuance of a $325,000 cage disbursement check given to a group of foreign gamblers to reimburse the group for its air fare expenses. Greate Bay did not obtain any documentation from the group, such as airline tickets, to support the disbursement. Instead, the casino's director of casino marketing prepared a document in which he computed the air fare figure based on his own estimates. He estimated the round trip air fare from Hong Kong to New York and multiplied that figure by the number of people in the group. He then added another estimated figure attributed to "other players' guests and children." Commenting on the adequacy of this document, Administrative Law Judge Jeff Masin stated in his initial decision at 16:

> The above document obviously is not a satisfactory supporting and subsidiary, detailed and accurate record concerning the complimentary services provided. Greate Bay does not contend that it is so. It admits that it failed to keep the proper records. In mitigation it indicates that it reported the complimentary travel expenditure in its monthly report of payables. As noted by the petitioner, this report hardly serves the function that is served by the daily report to the Division which enables the Division to keep tabs on who is receiving complimentary services, for > what, when, in what amount and other significant facts which may play a role in the Division's overall supervisory and law enforcement posture vis-a-vis the casinos.

The Division contends that the simple inclusion of the notation "cash comp." on the documentation prepared by the respondent's personnel is inadequate for purposes of complying with N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3. Since the record-keeping regulation is intended to provide the regulatory authorities with sufficient information to monitor the flow of cash in and out of the casinos, the notation of "cash comp.," without any reference to expenses incurred by the patron, creates another avenue of skimming and kickbacks. The Division contends that it would face significant hurdles in detecting such a scheme if no additional information or documentation were required.

The essence of the Division's allegation is that the respondent failed to obtain receipts or any other documentation from patron Chan to support the recording of its cash payments to the patron. The respondent contends that it was under no duty to obtain any records from the patron prior to giving a cash complimentary. In support of this contention, the respondent relies upon N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3, which sets the casino licensee's record-keeping obligation in regard to regulated complimentary services. As noted above, this regulation provides that records supporting the accumulation of the costs and number of persons, by category of service, shall include on a daily basis the name of each person provided with complimentary services, the category of services provided, the retail value of the aggregate of each category of service provided to such a person, and the person authorizing the receipt of such service. These are the records which the casino licensee shall maintain; the regulation makes no mention of patron verification.

The information which the regulation expressly requires be maintained by the casino licensee is set forth in its guest complimentary slips, miscellaneous disbursement vouchers and the miscellaneous disbursement log. The respondent contends that neither the regulation nor the intent of the regulation, as can be ascertained from the legislative history, requires the respondent to obtain any records from a patron prior to giving a cash complimentary. The respondent asserts that it has maintained the required records and that these records enable the Division to ascertain that a complimentary was given, its amount, and which casino licensee-employee approved it. The respondent asserts that its situation is clearly distinguishable from that of Greate Bay, supra, where the documentation maintained by that licensed casino was concededly insufficient.

The respondent also contends that its position is supported by the interlocutory order of Administrative Law Judge Solomon A. Metzger in the matter of State of New Jersey v. Trump's Castle Assoc. Limited Partnership, et al, OAL DKT. NOS. CCC 825-87 and CCC 5301-87 (consolidated), AGENCY DKT. NOS. 87-214 and 87-425, Order Granting and Denying Motion for Partial Summary Decision, dated December 16, 1987. In Trump's Castle, Judge Metzger concluded that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c) does not include among its requirements that a casino licensee obtain verification of patron expenses to support issuance of complimentaries. At its public meeting of January 6, 1988, the Casino Control Commission denied the Division's request for interlocutory review of Judge Metzger's order dismissing the Division's charges under N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3.

In this matter, the respondent argues that the Division should be estopped by Judge Metzger's decision from arguing that the respondent should be found liable for failing to obtain expenses verification from patron Chan. The Division acknowledges that collateral estoppel may be applied to administrative agencies in appropriate situations. Hackensack v. Winner; 82 N.J. 1, 32 (1980). However, the Division contends that the doctrine should not be applied in the instant matter because Judge Metzger's order is interlocutory and the Casino Control Commission did not address the merits of the issue when it declined interlocutory review.

Absent a final determination by the Casino Control Commission, the Division should not be estopped from contending in this matter that the respondent was required to obtain expenses verification from patron Chan prior to giving the patron a cash complimentary. Nevertheless, Judge Metzger's reasoning in Trump's Castle is persuasive. Verification of patron expenses is not required under N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3. While consequences adverse to the casino licensee may arise from its payment of cash complimentaries to patron Chan, I nevertheless CONCLUDE that the respondent maintained the required detailed, supporting, and subsidiary records to support the recording of cash payments to the patron, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3. The Division's allegation to the contrary should be DISMISSED.

II. Has the respondent violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 by failing to submit to the Division a record of the costs of the complimentaries provided to the patron in the respondent's "daily comp. receiver report" on May 14 and November 30, 1986?

In addition to requiring casino licensees to maintain on a daily basis records supporting the accumulation of the costs for regulated complimentary services, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 requires submission of this daily record to the Division no later than two days subsequent to its preparation. The respondent normally satisfies this requirement by filing its daily comp. receiver report with the Division on a daily basis. The respondent concedes that it did not include the $29,400 cash payment to patron Chan on May 14, 1986, in its daily comp. receiver report to the Division for that date. The respondent also acknowledges that it did not include its $25,200 cash payment to patron Chan on November 30, 1986, in its daily comp. receiver report to the Division for that date.

Former operations controller Leo Previti testified on behalf of the respondent that he conducted an investigation to determine why this information had not been recorded on the appropriate reports submitted to the Division. The documentation for the issuance of these cash complimentaries had been brought from the casino cage to the accounts receivable clerk. In Mr. Previti's opinion, the accounts receivable clerk did not enter the information into the complimentary reporting system because the documentation probably lacked a readable authorization identification number. In both instances, the papers were put aside "to be researched." Thus, the cash payments to patron Chan on May 14 and November 30, 1986, did not appear on the respondent's daily comp. receiver reports submitted to the Division for those two days.

Mr. Previti learned that the information concerning the cash payment to patron Chan on May 14, 1986, was eventually entered into the respondent's complimentary reporting system. He believed that this occurred sometime prior to November 19, 1986, which was the date of a Division investigation report into the matter. As of the date of the hearing in this matter, the $25,200 payment to patron Chan on November 30, 1986, still had not been entered into the respondent's complimentary reporting system. However, Mr. Previti testified that the respondent has taken steps to rectify the problem of inaccurate daily comp. receiver reports. Now, the report has been changed to show all of the information which has been posted on a particular date. Thus, matters which had been set aside "to be researched" will be entered on the report issued on the day the information is subsequently obtained.

Based upon the foregoing discussion and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has on two occasions violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 by failing to submit to the Division a record of the costs of the complimentaries provided to the patron in the respondent's daily comp. receiver report on May 14 and November 30, 1986.

III. Has the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) because the cash complimentary funds used in the patron's redemption transactions provided the patron with credit or an advance of something of value to enable the patron to engage in gaming activity as a player; because the cash complimentary funds used in the patron's redemption transactions represented a release or discharge of the patron's debts to the casino; and because the cash complimentary funds allowed the patron to redeem counter checks by exchanging cash or chips in an amount less than the amount for which the checks were drawn?

From September 21, 1985 through December 2, 1986, patron Chan engaged in gaming activity pursuant to his approved casino credit account during 13 trips to the respondent's casino. On five of these trips, patron Chan sustained net gaming losses. On those same five trips, he requested and received cash complimentaries from the respondent.

On two of the five occasions when patron Chan received a cash complimentary, he then used the cash in the redemption of his outstanding counterchecks. On May 14, 1986, patron Chan received a payment of $29,400 at approximately 10:45 p.m. Just minutes later, patron Chan used the $29,400 in the partial redemption of his outstanding counter check. Chan received a cash payment of $25,200 on November 30, 1986. At his request, the cash was then used in the partial redemption of his counter check.

The Division contends that the provision of funds by a casino licensee to a casino patron, which funds are used to pay off the patron's outstanding gambling debts, violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-101(a) and (c) and N.J.A.C 19:45-1.25(a). Section 101a(1) of the Casino Control Act and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)1 both provide that "[e]xcept as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee, or any person licensed under the Casino Control Act . . . shall":

(1) [C]ash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to > enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player;

In State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corp., OAL DKT. NOS. CCC 7452-82 and CCC 6325-81 (October 21, 1982); Commission Final Decision dated January 4, 1983, the Casino Control Commission described the intent of the foregoing statutory and regulatory language:

> [t]he clear legislative purpose of §101 and the regulations promulgated thereunder is the strict regulation and control of an important part of licensed gambling activities, the extension of credit, in order to further public confidence and trust in these operations. See, Resorts International Hotel, Inc. v. Salomone, 178 N.J. Super. 598 (App. Div. 1981) . . . The regulations promulgated under §101 are equally detailed in their requirements for the extension and control of credit. See, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 to 1.30, [at 11 and 12]

Referring to the policy of strict regulation and control over the extension of credit to patrons, the Division argues that a casino may not simply give a patron the funds to be used in gaming activity. The Division contends that it likewise cannot be within the permissible limits of the act or regulations for a casino to give a patron the cash necessary to redeem his counter checks after the patron has completed his play at the gaming tables. To construe the statute otherwise would be to permit an anomalous result. The Division also contends that the cash payments by the respondent to Mr. Chan enabled the patron to free a portion of his credit line through the redemption transactions. The patron then had additional credit available for gaming activity.

The respondent argues that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 is inapplicable in this matter, because it merely gave patron Chan a cash complimentary. The respondent notes that the Division's theory would bar all complimentaries, since even the most minuscule complimentary, such as a meal or a drink, would "free a portion" of a patron's credit line, because the patron would not then have to expend funds for the item. The respondent did not give the complimentaries to patron Chan to allow him to gamble or to redeem his counter checks. Rather, the respondent gave Chan a cash complimentary on five occasions because he is a "very valuable patron" with a "very high credit line."

On two of the five occasions when the respondent gave patron Chan a cash complimentary, he then voluntarily asked to have the complimentary applied to his debt. The Division did not charge the respondent with violating section 101 of the act in regard to the three occasions when Chan did not ask to have the complimentary applied to his debt. According to the respondent, the lawful issuance of the cash complimentaries was not rendered unlawful by Chan's subsequent request on two occasions that the proceeds from the disbursement be applied by GNOC against Chan's outstanding counter checks.

Chan was under no obligation of repayment when the respondent gave him the cash complimentaries. He could use the money as he wished. Since the cash complimentary did not have to be repaid, the respondent argues that the payment should not be construed as a loan, credit, or advance of anything of value which enables a person to take part in gaming activity as a player.

The respondent's arguments remain plausible so long as the interaction between the respondent and patron Chan is viewed only as separate transactions. For purposes of this proceeding, the issuance of the cash complimentary was not by itself a violation. The patron could do what he wanted with the money. It did not have to be repaid. On two occasions, the patron voluntarily decided to apply the money to the redemption of his outstanding counter checks. Each of these events would appear to be permissible under the statute and regulations when viewed separately.

However, the interaction between the respondent and patron Chan must be scrutinized in its entirety. This is especially so, given the "clear legislative purpose of section 101" to require "the strict regulation and control of an important part of licensed gambling activities, the extension of credit, in order to further public confidence and trust in those operations." On two occasions, the issuance of cash complimentaries to patron Chan did constitute the provision of credit which enabled him to engage in gaming activity as a player. This occurred on May 14 and November 30, 1986, when Mr. Chan was permitted to apply cash payments from the respondent to redeem his counter checks.

Mr. Chan gambled at GNOC pursuant to his "very high credit line." The amount of credit available to him for gambling activity on May 14, 1986, was increased by $29,400; the amount of cash which patron Chan had been given by the respondent that day. The amount of credit available to him for gambling activity on November 30, 1986, was increased by $25,200; the amount of cash which patron Chan had been given by the respondent that day. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)1 when it permitted patron Chan to use cash complimentary payments from the respondent in his redemption transactions on May 14 and November 30, 1986, thereby providing the patron with additional credit to enable him to engage in gaming activity as a player.

The Division also contends that the respondent violated section 101a(2) of the act and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2 in that the cash complimentary funds used in the patron's redemption transactions represented a release or discharge of the patron's debts to the casino. Section 101a(2) of the act provides that a casino licensee shall not:

> [r]elease or discharge any debt, either in whole or in part, or make any loan which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity, without maintaining a written record thereof in accordance with the rules of the Commission.

N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)2 provides that a casino licensee shall not:

> [r]elease or discharge any debt which is uncollectable, either in whole or in part, which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without maintaining a written record of the deposit, check return and collection efforts as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 and 19:45-1.29.

On May 14, 1986, patron Antonio Chan had a debt to respondent GNOC in the amount of $350,000, as represented by his outstanding counter check. Mr. Chan asked for and received a cash payment from the respondent in the amount of $29,400. Just minutes after receiving this money, the patron then used the funds to partially redeem his counter check. A new counter check was issued in the amount of $320,600 (see Stipulation of Facts, exhibit J-1).

On November 30, 1986, patron Chan's outstanding debt to the respondent was $300,000, as represented by his counter check. On that day, the patron asked for and received a cash payment from the respondent in the amount of $25,200. Shortly after the patron received this cash payment, the respondent permitted him to apply the funds to the partial redemption of his counter check. A new counter check was then issued in the amount of $274,800.

The Division asserts that there is no evidence in the record to indicate that the patron's outstanding debts were uncollectable. The respondent does not have a written record which indicates that the patron's checks were deposited and returned, that "collection efforts" were undertaken and that returned checks were "considered uncollectable." N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(a), N.J.A.C 19:45-1.29(a) and (j). These are threshold requirements for establishing uncollectability. In their absence, the respondent would not be permitted to release or discharge a portion of the patron's debts on May 14 and November 30, 1986.

The respondent contends that it did not "release or discharge" a debt. Rather, it merely issued patron Chan a cash complimentary. As before, the respondent asserts that the patron was free to use that money in any way he desired. That the respondent subsequently complied with the patron's request to apply the cash complimentaries toward the redemption of his counter checks would not then mean that the respondent had released or discharged a debt.

Again, the respondent's arguments appear to be plausible when the interaction between the respondent and the patron is viewed as separate transactions. However, this interaction must be viewed in its entirety. It is clear that the respondent complied with the patron's request for issuance of cash complimentaries and then, shortly thereafter, complied with the patron's request to apply the funds to the partial redemption of the patron's counter checks. There is no doubt that this transaction reduced the patron's debt to the casino by the amount of the cash complimentary. The plain language of section 101a(2) of the act and N.J.A.C 19:45-1.25(a)2 prohibits the release or discharge of a patron's casino debt, either in whole or in part, until proper debt collection procedures have been pursued and recorded by the casino licensee. These procedures were not pursued and recorded by the respondent. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(2) and N.J.A.C 19:45-1.25(a)2 because the cash complimentary funds used in the patron's redemption transactions on May 14 and November 30, 1986, represented an improper release or discharge of the patron's debts to the casino.

The Division has also charged the respondent with violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-101c, alleging that the cash complimentary funds allowed the patron to redeem counter checks by exchanging cash or chips in an amount less than the amount for which the checks were drawn. Section 101c of the act provides in pertinent part:

> the drawer of the check may redeem the check by exchanging cash or chips in an amount equal to the amount for which the check is drawn; or he may redeem the check in part by exchanging cash or chips and another > check . . . for the difference between the original check and the cash or chips tendered;

The Division contends that the patron was able to redeem his counter check by exchanging cash or chips in an amount less than the amount for which the check was drawn. On May 14, 1986, $29,400 of the funds necessary to redeem patron Chan's counter check for $350,000 was provided in the form of a cash complimentary issued to the patron by the respondent. On November 30, 1986, $25,200 of the funds necessary to redeem patron Chan's outstanding counter check for $300,000 was provided in the form of a cash complimentary issued to the patron by the respondent. The Division asserts that in this way, the drawer of the counter checks was able to redeem the checks by exchanging cash in an amount less than the amount for which the checks were drawn.

The respondent argues that section 101c of the act deals only with the method by which a patron may redeem a check; it doe not address the source of those funds. According to the respondent, there was no relationship between the cash complimentaries which it issued to the patron and the patron's outstanding counter checks. The respondent gave the patron a cash complimentary whenever he lost, regardless of whether or not there were outstanding counter checks. On two occasions, patron Chan voluntarily asked the respondent to apply the cash complimentaries to his debts. The respondent asserts that its compliance with this request did not violate the method of redemption required by section 101c.

I do not accept the respondent's contentions. Viewing the entirety of the interaction between the respondent and patron Chan, it is apparent that on two occasions the respondent was the source of a significant portion of the funds used by patron Chan to redeem his outstanding counter checks. By providing funds to the patron in the form of cash complimentaries, the respondent allowed the patron to redeem counter checks by exchanging cash or chips in an amount less than the amount for which the checks were drawn. I CONCLUDE that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101c by this method of redemption on May 14 and November 30, 1986.

IV. Has the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) by entering into an agreement with a patron which provided for the payment of an amount which represented a percentage of the patron's net gaming losses?

N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) provides:

> Unless otherwise provided in this subsection, no agreement which provides for the payment, however defined, of any direct or indirect interest, percentage or share of any money or property gambled at a casino or derived from casino gaming activity or of any such interest, percentage, or share of any revenues, profits or earnings of any casino shall be lawful.

The Division alleges that a pattern of conduct existed between the respondent and patron Antonio Chan which establishes an unlawful agreement to reimburse Mr. Chan a percentage of the amounts that he lost during his gaming activity. On five different trips to the respondent's casino between September 28, 1985, and December 2, 1986, patron Chan gambled according to his credit line and sustained losses. When he lost, he requested a cash payment from the respondent.

In all five instances when the patron sustained gambling losses and requested a payment, the request for payment was reviewed and approved by the respondent's personnel. On each occasion, the payments to patron Chan amounted to approximately 8.4 percent of his net gaming losses. The losses ranged from $150,000 to $348,000. Nevertheless, in each instance the patron asked for and received a cash payment amounting to approximately 8.4 percent of his net gaming losses. The Division asserts that the pattern of conduct between patron Chan and the respondent establishes that an agreement existed, the terms of which violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1).

The respondent argues in the first instance that section 104 of the Casino Control Act is inapplicable to its issuance of cash complimentaries to patron Chan. The Legislature's purpose in enacting section 104 was to preclude organized crime and others unsuitable for licensure from circumventing the licensing criteria and infiltrating licensed casino operations. Thus, N.J.S.A. 5:12-104 serves to insure that no company could circumvent the casino license criteria embodied in section 82 of the act and obtain an ownership percentage of a casino by a contract or lease. The respondent asserts that the Casino Control Commission has always interpreted the original enactment of section 104 and its amendments to address only the danger of organized crime circumventing the licensing criteria. There is no other known legislative intent in enacting the section or its amendments. The respondent argues that to advance any other reading of section 104 could only serve to saddle the State with a misinterpretation which would thwart and trivialize the Legislature's true intent and worthwhile objective.

Assuming arguendo the applicability of section 104 to the present matter, the respondent contends that there was no agreement to provide patron Chan with a set percentage of his losses. The parties have stipulated that there was no written agreement to provide patron Chan with cash complimentaries. The respondent contends that there also was no oral agreement to provide Mr. Chan with cash complimentaries, let alone a set percentage of his gambling losses. The respondent asserts that "agreement" in the context of section 104 of the act implies a contract pursuant to which the respondent was obligated to pay patron Chan money, as opposed to its voluntarily issuing him cash complimentaries.

The respondent states that it valued Mr. Chan as a patron and voluntarily issued him cash complimentaries to secure his business because "he has a very high credit limit." The respondent's personnel conducted a "review and approval" of each request prior to the issuance of a cash complimentary to Mr. Chan. The respondent argues that there would have been no need for the "review and approval" if there were a prevailing agreement to give set percentages.

I do not accept the respondent's contention that section 104 of the Casino Control Act is inapplicable to transactions between a casino and gambling patron. Except as specifically set forth in subsections 2 through 5, section 104a(1) of the act prohibits a licensed casino from entering into any agreement which provides for the payment of any percentage of any money gambled at a casino or derived from casino gaming activity. The language of the statute is clear and unambiguous. It is a broad prohibition, and the exceptions set forth in subsections 2 through 5 of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a are inapposite to the present matter. Thus, an agreement between a casino and a patron which provided for the payment of an amount which represented a percentage of the patron's net gaming losses would be prohibited by section 104a(1).

Even if it were necessary to review the pertinent legislative history, that history is not inconsistent with the above interpretation given to the plain language of section 104. It is undisputed that a primary reason for the enactment of section 104 was to prevent the infiltration of organized crime into the casino industry. The State Commission on Investigation had recommended that the Legislature enact a provision which required that those who have the authority to affect a casino's operation in any way be subject to the scrutiny of a licensing process. SCI Report, supra.

It is the paramount intention of section 104 to prevent those who have not undergone the scrutiny attendant to qualification for licensure from expressing a voice in or control over any aspect of a casino's operations. While the primary focus of the Legislature's concern was organized crime, the plain language of the statute is not restricted to only one possible source of improper influence. There can be little doubt that a patron who can ask for and always receive a large sum of money from the casino representing a fixed percentage of the money which he has gambled and lost is exerting a significant degree of authority or control over the casino's operations. Thus, I CONCLUDE that section 104a(1) of the act is applicable to the present matter.

Did the respondent enter into an agreement with patron Chan which is prohibited under section 104? There is no written agreement. The respondent contends that there was no agreement between itself and patron Chan. However, the undisputed facts in this matter reveal a pattern of conduct between the respondent and patron Chan which establishes that the respondent entered into an agreement with the patron to provide him with cash payments of an amount which reimbursed him a percentage of his gaming losses.

On five occasions between September 28, 1985 and December 2, 1986, the patron gambled according to his credit line at the respondent's casino and he sustained gambling losses. On each occasion when he sustained a gambling loss, the patron requested a cash payment from the respondent. On all five occasions, the request for payment was reviewed and approved by the respondent's personnel. Most signficantly, the payment to patron Chan on each occasion amounted to approximately 8.4 percent of his gambling losses. Based upon the foregoing discussion, I CONCLUDE that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) by entering into an agreement with patron Chan which provided for the payment of an amount which represented a percentage of the patron's net gaming losses.

PENALTY

Section 129 of the Casino Control Act authorizes the Commission to impose a broad range of sanctions upon licensees who have violated any provisions of the act or regulations, or have committed other misconduct. Among the authorized sanctions is suspension of the operations certificate of any casino for violating any provisions of the act or regulations relating to the casino operation, including games, internal and accountancy controls and security. The Commission may also assess such civil penalties as may be necessary to punish misconduct and to deter future violations.

Section 130 of the act sets forth standards which the Commission shall consider in determining the appropriate sanction to be applied in a particular case. These standards are as follows:

a. The risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the conduct of the licensee or registrant;

b. The seriousness of the conduct of the licensee or registrant, and whether the conduct was purposeful and with knowledge that it was in contravention of the provisions of this act or regulations promulgated herein;

c. Any justification or excuse for such conduct by the licensee or registrant;

d. The prior history of the particular licensee or registrant involved with respect to gaming activity;

e. The corrective action taken by the licensee or registrant to prevent future misconduct of a like nature from occurring; and

g. It shall be no defense to disciplinary action before the Commission that an applicant, licensee, registrant, intermediary company, or holding company inadvertently, unintentionally, or unknowingly violated a provision of this act. Such factors shall only go to the degree of the penalty to be imposed by the commission and not to a finding of a violation itself.

The respondent has committed two violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 by failing to submit to the Division a record of the costs of the complimentaries provided to patron Chan in the respondent's daily comp. receiver reports for May 14 and November 30, 1986. The respondent has committed two violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) pursuant to it having permitted the patron to use cash complimentary funds in his redemption transactions on May 14 and November 30, 1986. The respondent has also committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) by entering into an agreement with patron Chan which provided for the payment of an amount which represented a percentage of the patron's net gaming losses.

In assessing the risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the respondent's violations, it is useful to first note the Legislature's finding and declaration of public policy set forth at N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6) of the act:

> An integral and essential element of the regulation and control of such casino facilities by the State rests in the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations. To further such public confidence and trust, the regulatory provisions of this act are designed to extend strict State regulation to all persons, locations, practices and associations related to the operation of licensed casino enterprises and all related service industries as herein provided.

As noted above, the Commission has stated that it is the clear legislative purpose of section 101 of the act to strictly regulate and control the extension of credit, in order to further confidence and trust. State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corp., supra, at 11. It is fair to say that the respondent's agreement to reimburse a valued patron with a fixed percentage of his gaming losses undermines the Legislature's and the Commission's declared goal of maintaining public confidence in the integrity of the casino industry. The Commission has also noted that, "the failure to keep accurate accounting records on complimentary services strikes at the heart of all accounting controls." Greate Bay, supra, at 19. Thus, it is apparent that the respondent's failure to submit a record of the complimentaries provided to patron Chan in its daily comp. receiver reports for May 14 and November 30, 1986, would also adversely affect the public confidence and trust in the integrity of gaming operations.

The respondent argues that the factors set forth in section 130 of the act militate in favor of a small penalty in this matter. Assuming arguendo that there have been any violations, the respondent urges that these be deemed inadvertent, unintentional and unknowing violations of provisions of the Casino Control Act. The respondent contends that the facts demonstrate that a minor penalty, if any, is appropriate, and asserts that, for consistent justice, the penalty should be less than the $10,000 penalty imposed in Greate Bay.

The Division's performance of its enforcement duties was hindered by the respondent's failure to record the cash complimentaries provided to patron Chan on its daily comp. receiver reports for May 14 and November 30, 1986. The patron was permitted by the respondent to use the cash complimentary funds which he received on those two days in his redemption transactions, violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). The patron's requests for payments of large amounts of cash were reviewed and approved by high level personnel. In each instance, the respondent agreed to make a cash payment to the patron which represented a fixed percentage of the patron's gaming losses, in violation of section 104a(1) of the act.

Based upon the facts in this matter, I CONCLUDE that the respondent knew or should have known that its conduct constituted a serious contravention of the provisions of the Casino Control Act and the Commission's regulatory requirements. While the respondent's failure to report complimentary cash payments to patron Chan on two daily comp. receiver reports was unintentional, the remainder of its conduct was purposeful. In essence, the respondent acted as it did in order to keep the business of a "very valuable patron" with a "very high credit line."

In regard to the prior history of the licensee with respect to gaming activity, the Division refers to the matter of State of New Jersey v. GNAC Corp. t/a Golden Nugget, et al, AGENCY DKT. NO. 84-6, Final Order dated October 2, 1984. In that matter, the Division charged GNAC (the respondent's predecessor in interest) and four individuals with violations of the conduct of the rules of the game of blackjack, including sections 99 and 100 of the act, and N.J.A.C. 19:47-2.5 and 2.6. In that matter, the respondent's personnel honored a patron's request that the dealer deal cards from a single hand-held deck, rather than from the required number of decks in the card shoe. The Commission imposed a monetary penalty against GNAC in the amount of $25,000.

The respondent acknowledged its failure to include two of its cash payments to patron Chan on its daily comp. receiver report. Testimony was offered at the hearing to establish that omissions such as this should not occur in the future because information which is not posted on the report on a particular day because it is incomplete will now be posted on the report for the day on which the complete information is obtained. The respondent offered no other evidence concerning corrective action which it has taken, since it contested the allegations of additional violations.

The respondent benefited financially from its misconduct. Between September 1985 and December 1986, the respondent made cash payments to patron Chan totalling $117,600. During that same time, patron Chan sustained net gaming losses at the respondent's casino which totalled $1,396,000. In light of the risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the respondent's serious misconduct, it is apparent that a significant monetary penalty is warranted. A monetary penalty in the amount of $15,000 for each of the two violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.2(c)3 should be imposed. A monetary penalty in the amount of $20,000 for each of the two violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and c and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) should be imposed. Finally, a monetary penalty in the amount of $50,000 for the violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-104a(1) should be imposed, for a total monetary penalty of $120,000. I so CONCLUDE.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the respondent, GNOC Corp. t/a Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino, shall pay a civil monetary penalty in the amount of $120,000 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5).

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

The parties having entered into a stipulation of facts and having filed same with the Office of Administrative Law (OAL); and the written argument of counsel having been filed with the OAL; and the initial decision of Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of February 8, 1989,

IT IS on this 10th day of March 1989, ORDERED for the reasons stated on the record that the initial decision is modified as follows:

(1) to reject the finding of a violation as to Count Three of the Division of Gaming Enforcement's (DGE) complaint;

(2) to reject the finding of a violation of N.J.A.C. 19:41-3(b) with respect to Counts One and Two of the DGE's complaint; and

(3) to reduce the monetary penalty imposed on the respondent by the ALJ from $7500 to $6,000 to be apportioned $5,000 on Count One and $1,000 on Count Two of the DGE's complaint.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent is found to have violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-106(a) and -117(b) for employing a person who only held a casino hotel employee registration in the position of Assistant V.I.P. Services Manager, a position requiring licensure as a casino employee; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent is found to have violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-106(a) and -117(b) for employing a person, whose casino employee license had expired without renewal in the position of public area attendant, which at the time required licensure as casino employee; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent pay a civil penalty in the amount of $6,000 due and payable upon receipt of an invoice from the Commission's Division of Financial Evaluation and Control substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision which, as modified, is incorporated herein by reference.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint on November 13, 1987 with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) seeking penalties against the respondent licensee (GNOC) for various violations of the Casino Control Act concerning employment of several employees without the proper licenses or permits. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a, 106a, 117b 117c; N.J.A.C. 19:41-1.31.7. The parties have stipulated to the facts of the violations but dispute the issue of penalty. Respondent, GNOC also moves to dismiss the complaint insofar as it alleges violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a against the licensee.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

The Commission transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law on December 18, 1987 for hearing as a contested case and it was preheard on February 25, 1988. A plenary hearing was scheduled for May 17, 1988 and, at that time, the parties agreed to enter into a stipulation of facts and to brief the remaining issue of penalty. The Division filed its brief and the stipulation of facts on May 26, 1988, and GNOC responded on July 20, 1988. The Division was given until July 26th to respond but elected not to do so and the record was closed on that date. The forty-five day expired on September 9, 1988 but the due date for submission of the intial decision was extended until October 28, 1988 for a variety of reasons including the need for additional research as well as my illness.

FINDINGS OF FACT

COUNT I

The Division and GNOC have stipulated to the following facts:

1. Respondent, GNOC, Corp., (hereinafter called "GNOC") t/a Bally's Grand owns and operates the casino hotel formerly known as the Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino. GNOC was at all times referenced herein a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal place of business located at Boston and Pacific Avenues, in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic and State of New Jersey.

2. At all times referenced herein, GNOC was the holder of a plenary casino license issued to it by the Casino Control Commission ("Commission"), authorizing it to operate a casino in accordance with the Act and Commission regulations promulgated thereunder. Said license was issued to GNOC effective May 1, 1984, and GNOC was conducting its casino hotel operations pursuant to said license, at all times referenced herein.

3. At all times referenced herein, GNOC was the holder of, and operated pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective May 1, 1984, at which time, GNOC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. GNOC conducted its casino operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation at all times referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitled GNOC to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq., and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

4. GNOC is the successor in interest to GNAC, CORP., (GNAC), t/a the Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino. GNAC was the holder of a Certificate of Operation effective December 2, 1980, at which time GNAC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Respondent GNOC succeeded to GNAC's interest as casino licensee, as of May 1, 1984.

5. GNOC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of GNAC, which in turn is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bally Manufacturing Corporation ("Bally"). By Purchase Agreement dated as of January 18, 1987, as amended February 28, 1987, all of the outstanding stock of GNAC, among other property, was sold by Golden Nugget, Inc., to Bally, which thus became a holding compnay of GNOC.

6. From February 27, 1987 through May 13, 1987, Sharon Fate, casino hotel employee registration number 57339-40, was working in golden Nugget's V.I.P. Services Department as "Assistant V.I.P. Services Manager", a position designated by the Commission to require casino employee licensure. During the foregoing time period, Ms. Fate did not hold a casino employee license. A copy of the job description for the position of Assistant V.I.P. Services Manager is attached hereto, and incorporated herein as Exhibit "A".

COUNT II

1. The parties repeat paragraphs 1 through 5 of Count I of the Stipulation, as though fully set forth herein at length.

2. The casino employee license of Elijah Torrence, license #22052-22, expired on January 31, 1987.

3. From January 31, 1987 through May 14, 1987, Mr. Torrence worked at Golden Nugget as a public area attendant with access to the casino floor, a position requiring a casino employee license.

4. Duiring the period of January 31, 1987 through May 14, 1987, Mr. Torrence held no other casino employee license or hotel registration issued by the Commission. Elijah Torrence was placed on temporary leave by GNOC on May 14, 1987. A copy of the GNOC Work Permit Report dated may 3, 1987, is attached hereto, and incorporated herein as Exhibit "B".

COUNT III

1. The parties repeat paragraphs 1 through 5 of Count 1 of the Stipulation, as though fully set forth herein at length.

2. By letter dated November 21, 1985, in response to a job submission by GNOC the Commission, by its staff, advised GNOC that prior to the commencement of an in-house surveillance training course surveillance trainees are required to submit a position addition with the Commission. A copy of said letter is attached hereto, and incorporated herein as Exhibit "C".

3. Frank Kovach, casino employee license #59613-21, was hired by GNOC on June 1, 1987, and placed in an outside surveillance training course. The on-site training at the Golden Nugget, included access to the monitor room. The requisite eighty (80) training hours were completed by Mr. Kovach on June 15, 1987. The position addition and work permit delineating specific job responsibilities was not obtained from the Commission by, for or on behalf of Mr. Kovach until July 8, 1987. A copy of the June 16, 1987 license inquiry printout is attached hereto, and incorporated herein as Exhibit "D".

4. Jay Weiss, casino employee license #30055-21, was hired by GNOC on May 18, 1987, and on May 21, 1987, placed in an outside surveillance training course. The on-site training at the Golden Nugget, included access to the monitor room. The requisite eighty (80) training hours were completed by Mr. Weiss on June 3, 1987. The position addition and work permit delineating specific job responsibilities was not obtained from the Commission by, for, or on behalf of Mr. Kovach until July 8, 1987. A copy of the June 16, 1987 license inquiry printout is attached hereto, and incorporated herein as Exhibit "E".

5.A. Katherine Chudzinski, casino employee license #67062-21, was hired by GNOC on June 27, 1986 as a parking cashier, and on May 11, 1987, placed in an outside surveillance training course. The on-site training at the Golden Nugget, included access to the monitor room. The requisite eight (80) training hours were completed by Ms. Chudzinski on May 27, 1987. The position addition and work permit delineating specific job responsibilities was not obtained from the Commission by, for, or on behalf of Ms. Chudzinski until July 8, 1987. A copy of the June 16, 1987 license inquiry printout is attached hereto, and incorporated herein as Exhibit "F".

5.B. Golden Nuggett's surveillance department relied upon a procedure for surveillance positions as stated in the attached exhibits G & H, attached hereto and incorporated as the said exhibits.

ISSUES

The issues remaining to be resolved are:

(1) Whether GNOC violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a, 106a and 117b and N.J.A.C. 19:41-1.3b by employing Sharon Fate and Elijah Torrence without the appropriate casino employee licenses and, if so, what penalty or remedial action is appropriate;

(2) Whether the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-106, 117c and N.J.A.C. 19:4-1.7 by permitting Frank Kovach, Jay Weiss, and Katherine Chudzinski to work as trainees in site surveillance in the monitor room without the necessary position addition and work permit and, if so, what penalty or remedial action is appropriate.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

As part of the stipulation, the parties also agreed that the following pertinent provisions of the Casino Control Act were effective at all times referenced in the complaint:

> No person may commence employment as a casino employee unless he is the holder of a valid casino employee license. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a

> A casino licensee shall not appoint or employ any person not registered or not possessing a current and valid license permitting such appointment or employment. Prior to the effective date of such appointment or employment, the casino licensee shall apply for a work permit for such employee, which shall be granted by the commission if the employee is registered or is the holder of a current and valid license. The casino licensee shall return such work permit to the commission within 5 days of the termination or cessation of such appointment or employment for any cause whatsoever. Each work permit shall be renewed annually in accordance with rules and regulations promulgated by the Commission N.J.S.A. 5:12-106a.

> A casino licensee shall, within 24 hours of receipt of written notice thereof, terminate the appointment or employment of any person whose license or registration has been revoked or has expired. A casino licensee shall comply in all respects with any order of the Commission imposing limitations or restrictions upon the terms of employment or appointment in the course of any investigation or hearing. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1060b.

> Any person who employs or continues to employ an individual not duly licensed or registered under the provisions of this Act in a position whose duties require a license or registration under the provisions of this Act is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to no more than three years inprisonment or a fine of $10,000 or both and in the case of a person other than a natural person to a fine of not more than $50,000 N.J.S.A. 5:12-117b.
>
> Any person who employs an individual without obtaining a work permit as required by this act, is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to not more than three years' imprisonment or fine or not more than $10,000 or both, and in the case or a person other than a natural person, to a fine of not more than $50,000 N.J.S.A. 5:12-117(c).

THE VIOLATIONS

The parties do not dispute that the conduct set forth in the stipulation of facts constitutes a violation as charged and I, therefore, CONCLUDE that GNOC violated N.J.S.A. 5:12- 106a and 117b as well as N.J.A.C. 19:41-1.3b by employing Sharon Fate and Elijah Torrence without the appropriate casino employee licenses. I further CONCLUDE in light of the undisputed facts that respondent, GNOC violated N.J.A.C. 5:12-106, 117c and N.J.A.C. 19:41-1.7 by permitting Frank Kovach, J. Weiss and Katherine Chudzinski to work as trainees in the onsite surveillance in the monitoring room at the casino.

Respondent, GNOC argues that the Division has not properly pled the alleged violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a against the respondent casino licensee. The Division did not address this issue in its brief and filed no response to GNOC's statement in lieu of brief. The respondent licensee maintains that N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a prohibits individuals from commencing employment with casinos unless they hold the required license but does not impose responsibility on casinos. There is no basis, GNOC argues, for holding a casino licensee liable under the theory of respondeat superior because N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a does not proscribe conduct of the casino licensee, which is dealt with by other prohibitions contained in the act and regulations. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-106a, 117b; N.J.A.C. 19:41-1.2e. GNOC cites in support of In the Matter Department of Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement v. GNOC, Corp. t/a Golden Nuggett Hotel and Casinon, OAL DKT. NO. CCC 4727-87 (decided April 25, 1988) which was adopted by the Casino Control Commission on June 8, 1988. In that decision, ALJ Voliva concludes that N.J.A.C. 5:12-90a is not applicable to casino licensees. I agree with that conclusion and the analysis set forth in that opinion and reach a similar conclusion here. The Casino Control Act holds casinos directly liable for employing unlicensed or unregistered persons. See N.J.S.A. 5:12-106a and 117b, c. The Act also imposes a separate and distinct prohibition barring persons from working for casinos without the appropriate licenses or registrations N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a and 117a. The intent of the Act, therefore, is to separately prohibit unlicensed employees from working for casinos and to bar casinos from hiring them. On that basis, I CONCLUDE that N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a does not apply to casino licensees and that allegations of violations of this section must be dismissed as to GNOC. The licensee is liable under N.J.S.A. 5:12-106 and 117.

THE PENALTY

N.J.S.A. 5:12-129, 130 provide for various penalties and/or sanctions which can be imposed against the license or any person who has committed a violation of the Act. Here the Division seeks the imposition of a monetary penalty of $10,000.

Section 130 of the Act sets forth the following factors to be considered when a determination of a sanction is to be made:

a. The risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the conduct of the licensee;

b. The seriousness of the conduct of the licensee, and whether the conduct was purposeful and with knowledge that it was in contravention of the provisions of this Act or regulations promulgated hereunder;

c. Any justification or excuse for such conduct by the licensee;

d. The prior history of the particular licensee involved with respect to gaming activity;

e. The corrective action taken by the licensee to prevent future misconduct of a like nature from occurring.

The casino industry is subjected to strict oversight and rigorous regulation to protect the integrity of gaming operations and promote public confidence. N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6); In re Martin, 90 N.J. 295, 319-320 (1982); Knight v. City of Margate, 86 N.J. 374, 380-381 (1981); Bally Mfg. Corp. v. Casino Control Commission, 85 N.J. 325, 328 (1981), 454 U.S. 804 (1981); In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324, 341-342 (App. Div. 1981), aff'd as mod. 90 N.J. 361 (1982), app. dism. 459 U.S. 1081 (1981).

The Division argues that a $10,000 civil penalty should be imposed on GNOC due to the nature of the violations and based on the fact that respondent could have easily complied with the Act by filing for the appropriate temporary licenses and position additions. It also stresses the highly sensitive nature of the surveillance department to which GNOC allowed access to Kovach, Weiss, and Chudzinski without the necessary position additions and work permits. The Division contends that the misconduct created a significant potential for other regulatory transgressions and could have been easily corrected had GNOC not taken such a "sloppy and inattentive approach" to obtaining the required licenses and position additions. In support of the $10,000 penalty, the Division cites prior similar violations by GNOC, as well as other comparable cases and argues that the penalty is appropriate as a deterrent to ensure future compliance.

Respondent GNOC rejects the proposed penalty because the violations pose no risk to the public or to the integrity of gaming operations. Specifically, GNOC argues that the job responsibilities of the Assistant VIP Services Manager, Sharon Fate, a casino hotel registrant who functioned for eleven weeks in a position requiring a casino employee license, did not involve gaming activity or any risk to the public. The second count, concerning a public area attendant, Elijah Torrrence, who worked for approximately sixteen weeks after failing to renew his casino employee license, was, GNOC argues, an unintentional oversight by the licensing department and did not involve gaming activity. As to the three employees cited in Count 3 for having access to the in-house monitoring room without the appropriate position additions, GNOC cites "confusion" on the part of the surveillance department concerning procedures to be followed and denies that it intentionally sought to mislead the Commission or Division as to the trying of its surveillance trainees. In particular, GNOC claims that it relied on procedure approved by the staff of the Commission for in-house monitor room training. See, Exhibits G and H attached to the stipulation of facts. The respondent rejects the Division's claim that it has a track record of similar violations and distinguishes other cases relied on as involving more serious violations.

I agree with the Division that a penalty is warranted under the circumstances but recommend that the proposed assessment of $10,000 be reduced to a $7500 penalty because of respondent GNOC's reliance on procedures apparently approved by Commission staff and corrective actions. The risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the conduct of GNOC in having unlicensed employees in various positions, including ones with access to sensitive security areas of the casino, was substantial and not a mere technical or paperwork oversight. Even the position of VIP Services Manager, which was occupied by an employee without a casino employee license, involves matters touching on the fiscal integrity of the casino's operation in the area of VIP complimentaries. The conduct of the licensee was also serious in the sense that unlicensed persons were allowed access to the in-house monitor room at the casino which is the nerve center of surveillance operations. Both of these areas are sensitive and fraught with possible misconduct and damage to casino operations. It is also clear that the violations were known to (or easily known by) the company. The Division has not proved that these violations were purposeful in the sense of willful disregard of the provisions of the Act, but the element of knowledge has been established, notwithstanding GNOC's claim of innocent administrative mistake. That justification or excuse is not particularly persuasive. GNOC's excuse with respect to the purported Commission Staff approval of its procedure on surveillance employees is somewhat mitigating and has been considered in recommending a reduction in the proposed penalty from $10,000 to $7500. No further reduction is warranted, however, because of the casino's prior violations in the area of unlicensed employees as set forth above. GNOC has undertaken some corrective action to prevent these violations from recurring and that factor was also considered in mitigation as to the reduction of the proposed penalty. There is also no evidence that these violations led to other regulatory violations, although the potential for further serious violation was there.

Having considered all of the factors set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-130, I CONCLUDE that a monetary sanction is warranted and recommend that a penalty of $7500 be imposed for these infractions.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the complaint is DISMISSED insofar as it alleges violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-90a against GNOC and further ORDERED that GNOC Corp., t/a the Golden Nuggett Hotel and Casino shall pay a civil administrative penalty in the amount of $7500.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: January 3, 1989 Decided: February 16, 1989

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter concerns the complaint of the Division of Gaming Enforcement filed with the Casino Control Commission on December 8, 1987, alleging that the respondent implemented revised presumptive hearing dates for checks submitted by gaming patrons on March 13, 1986, without obtaining prior approval of the Casino Control Commission, contrary to N.J.S.A. 5:12-99a(13) and b; N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e). These are the issues:

1. Was the respondent required to obtain approval of the Casino Control Commission prior to impiementing revised presumptive clearing dates for checks submitted by gaming patrons, and has the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e), by implementing its revised presumptive clearing dates in or about March 1986, without such approval.

2. Is the petitioner's complaint barred by the doctrine of waiver.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division's complaint was filed with the Casino Control Commission on December 8, 1987. The respondent's notice of defense and request for a hearing was filed with the Commission on January 7, 1988. The Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on January 14, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A telephone prehearing conference was conducted on March 7, 1988. Thereafter, hearing sessions were held on July 18, September 2, and September 26, 1988, in the Atlantic County Civil Courthouse. At the completion of the hearing, the record remained open to permit the parties to file post-hearing submissions. The scheduled for submissions was subsequently extended at the request of the parties for good cause shown. When I determined that the parties had completed their submissions and no further replies would be received, the record in this matter was closed on January 3, 1989.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts material to the resolution of this matter are essentially undisputed. The first witness to testify was Richard Carretta, Supervising Agent for the Division of Gaming Enforcement Audit Section. He has been an employee of the Division for over nine and one-half years and he is familiar with investigations regarding the respondent. Agent Carretta has supervised field agents and has reviewed their reports and documentation.

Prior to opening for business, each casino must submit its system of internal procedures and accounting controls for approval by the Casino Control Commission. These submissions are reviewed both by the Commission and the Division.

According to Agent Carretta, if the Division staff believes that the submission in some way does not conform with the requirements of the Casino Control Act and regulations, a joint letter from the Division and Commission will be sent to the casino. Casinos usually respond to joint letters by making the necessary alterations and resubmitting the revised procedures. If the agency staffs continued to find insufficiencies, a second joint letter would be sent. Agent Carretta testified that if the Division staff feels that the casino is in compliance, the Division will send a "no objection" letter. After initial approval, changes in the casino's system of internal procedures and accounting controls can be submitted for approval on a piecemeal basis.

The respondent GNOC is the successor in interest to GNAC, Corp., t/a The Golden Nugget Hotel Casino. Agent Carretta identified page 143 of the GNAC system of internal control submitted to the Commission in November 1980 (Exhibit P-1). This page concerns the casino's procedures for handling counter checks received from gaming customers, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28. Agent Carretta recalled that he reviewed this internal control procedure when it was submitted and it was approved shortly after November 1980 and prior to the initial opening of the casino. The final paragraph on page 143 concerns presumptive clearing dates for checks submitted by patrons. It states:

> Any check deposited into a bank will not be considered clear until a reasonable time has been allowed for such check to clear the bank. See Statement of Management Policy No. Twenty-Three.

Statement of Management Policy No. Twenty-Three (Exhibit P-2) is entitled Presumptive Clearance of Checks Deposited. Agent Carretta explained the significance of the presumptive clearance dates. When the prescribed number of days have passed following deposit of the patron's check, it will be presumed that the check has cleared through the banking system and will be honored by the bank upon which it is drawn. At that point, a patron could again draw down on his line of credit at the casino by submitting another counter check, whether or not the previous counter check had actually cleared through the banking system. Thus, the shorter the presumed clearance times for patrons checks, the sooner those patrons could again draw down on their credit. The statement of management policy which was referenced on page 143 of the System of Internal Control provided for presumed clearance of checks from banks in New Jersey in seven calendar days. Checks from banks in the states of Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, and Virginia, as well as Washington, D.C., were presumed to have cleared in ten calendar days. Checks from banks in all other states were presumed to have cleared in 14 calendar days (Exhibit P-2).

According to Agent Carretta, the foregoing are the presumptive clearance dates which were actually implemented by GNAC. However, those time periods were not the presumptive clearance dates being used by the respondent at the time of Agent Carretta's testimony. Agent Carretta identified the respondent's Statement of Management Policy No. Fourteen, which was previously Statement No. Twenty-Three (Exhibit P-3). This statement reduced the presumptive clearance time for checks from banks in New Jersey from seven calendar days to 5 banking days. The presumptive clearance time for checks from banks in nearby states was reduced from ten calendar days to seven banking days. The presumptive clearance time for checks from banks in all other states was reduced from 14 calendar days to 10 banking days. The presumptive clearance time for checks from banks in foreign countries would be 25 banking days. Agent Carretta also identified a letter from Henry Hornbostel, then vice president and treasurer of GNOC, to the Casino Control Commission, dated January 31, 1985 (Exhibit P-4). Agent Carretta described this as a fairly typical cover letter for a casino's proposed internal control submission revision. This letter states in part:

> As suggested in Ms. Hetzel's letter of August 14, 1984, we have reviewed our statements of management policies and where appropriate, have incorporated the same into our internal control submission. This was accomplished by the inclusion of the necessary language directly in the internal control submission or via appendices.

Page 120 of the respondent's System of Internal Control, revised January 31, 1985, was admitted into evidence as Exhibit P-5. This page again deals with counter checks received from gaming customers pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28. The respondent continues to state that a check deposited into a bank will not be considered clear until a reasonable time has been allowed for such check to clear the bank. However, reference to Statement of Management Policy No. Twenty-Three is to be deleted and the following is added: "GNOC shall submit to the Commission and Division the time allotted for checks to clear the bank." Agent Carretta recalled that the respondent had resubmitted its entire set of internal controls to the Commission in January 1985. Page 120 of the submission (Exhibit P-5) was never approved by the Commission.

According to Agent Carretta, the respondent implemented a further revision of its presumptive clearance dates. Exhibit P-6 is a revised copy of Management Policy No. Fourteen dated March 3, 1986. This revision circulated internally by the respondent provides for presumed clearance of checks from banks in New Jersey and nearby states in three banking days. Checks from banks in all other states are presumed to have cleared in five banking days. Checks from banks in foreign countries are presumed to have cleared in 25 banking days (Exhibit P-6).

By letter dated March 3, 1986 (Exhibit P-7), the respondent submitted to the Commission the revision of the respondent's policy regarding time allotted for checks to clear the bank. The revised times for presumed clearance as submitted were 3, 5, and 25 banking days, as set forth above (Exhibit P-6). The respondent began implementing the newest revision of presumptive clearance dates in March 1986 (Exhibits P-6 and P-8). According to Agent Carretta, the revised clearance days of 3, 5, and 25 banking days were the clearance times which the respondent was utilizing at the time of his testimony. The respondent's revised presumptive clearance dates were substantially shorter than the dates utilized by other casinos in Atlantic City.

By letter to the Commission staff dated May 13, 1986 (Exhibit P-9), the respondent's senior financial manager, then Leo Previti, advised that the respondent's recent reduction in presumptive clearing dates reflected a move by the Federal Reserve Board requiring banks to make funds available and give notification of nonpayment in a more timely fashion. This letter indicated that the matter had been discussed with the respondent's depository bank, First Fidelity, prior to the respondent initiating the reduction in its clearing dates. By letter to the respondent's general counsel dated August 6, 1986 (Exhibit P-10), the Commission's deputy director for operations, Deno R. Marino, advised that the Commission and Division of Gaming Enforcement staffs had reviewed the respondent's proposal to reduce its presumed clearance dates. Agent Carretta testified that he had provided some input for Deputy Director Marino's letter. This letter stated that the availability of funds is not the determining factor to be considered when reducing presumptive clearance dates. Rather, the determining factor is "the length of time it takes to receive notification of non-payment." Geographic distance between the drawer bank and the respondent's bank of deposit, and the method of notification used by the drawer bank, will impact on the length of time it takes to receive such notification. Deputy Director Marino stated that the staffs recommended that the respondent extend its presumptive clearance times beyond three and five days, or provide evidence to indicate that notification of non-payment "is being received within such time frame."

Agent Carretta testified that he was aware of an internal study performed by GNOC to see how long it was taking to actually receive notice of returned items. He identified an internal memo (Exhibit P-13) from Leo Previti to GNOC Collections Manager Harvey Weiss dated August 19, 1986, which suggested that a sample of recent returned items be taken and which asked for Mr. Weiss' "feeling as to how often 'we get burned' by clearing a patron's line in the Presumptive Clearing Time and then using additional credit prior to receiving notice that the 'cleared' item has returned."

Agent Carretta identified a handwritten notation on the bottom of the foregoing internal memo. The note was directed to Henry Applegate, GNOC's Senior Vice President, Finance and Administration, from Henry Hornbostel, GNOC Vice President and Treasurer. It stated, "without statistics, my gut is that the average return date is substantially in excess of our clearance schedule."

Agent Carretta also identified a random sample of returned checks received by GNOC which was prepared by Harvey Weiss and Leo Previti (Exhibit P-14). Thirteen checks returned to GNOC between August 8 and August 15, 1986, were sampled. The checks were drawn by patrons residing in New York, New Jersey, Texas, Michigan, Massachusetts, Florida, Pennsylvania, Illinois, and Canada. None of the checks selected by GNOC in its random sample were returned within its three-and-five day presumptive clearance periods. In fact, the check drawn by the New Jersey patron took seven banking days to return (Exhibit P-14). Agent Carretta noted that the return dates in excess of the presumptive clearance dates allow patrons credit which they would not otherwise have.

By letter dated November 20, 1986 (Exhibit P-11), GNOC responded to the Commission's staff letter of August 6, 1986 (Exhibit P-10). Marilu Marshall, vice president regulatory administration and general counsel, stated in this letter that GNOC's decision to reduce the presumptive clearance dates was due to the "increased emphasis within the banking community placed on reducing check clearing times." She noted that the Federal Reserve Board adopted an amendment to Regulation "J" which established new notification requirements for financial institutions returning large dollar items. Institutions of first deposit now know much sooner that a large unpaid item is being returned, according to Ms. Marshall. She further stated in her letter that GNOC had requested that its depository bank, First Fidelity, provide the GNOC Collection Department with information on returned items of $2,500 or larger by telephone at the time the bank received the required Regulation "J" notification.

Agent Carretta identified a report of an interview of Freda Koernig, Assistant Vice President First Fidelity South, conducted by Division Agent Tadd Hansen on April 15, 1988 (Exhibit P-12). According to the report, the purpose of the informal interview was to determine the return item notification policy of First Fidelity South as it relates to GNOC. Ms. Koernig stated to Agent Hansen that there is no written or verbal agreement between the bank and GNOC which addresses notification of returns. The bank's casino services department on occasion receives notification by telephone from an outside bank that an item will be returning. When such telephone notification is received, the bank will call the casino's collections department. Agent Hansen reported that Ms. Koernig stated telephone notification is not received very often and that when it is, it is usually from smaller banks that are not familiar with casino counter checks (Exhibit P-12).

By letter to Casino Control Commission Chairman Walter N. Read dated September 18, 1987 (Exhibit P-15), the Division of Gaming Enforcement restated its position that the respondent had not yet established proof that its presumed clearing dates were justified. By letter to respondent's counsel dated September 28, 1987 (Exhibit P-16), Commission Deputy Director Marino advised that it was the opinion of the Commission and Division staffs that the respondent had not adequately addressed and supported the reasonableness of its proposed clearance times for checks deposited. The letter further stated:

> . . . It is the opinion of staffs that the proposed clearance times of three or five banking days for their respective geographical locations does not allow sufficient time for the following:
>
> 1. The patron's check to reach the drawer bank, due to geographical distance between the bank of deposit and drawer bank; and
>
> 2. The bank of deposit to receive notification of non-payment from the drawer bank due to the different methods of notification used by drawer banks.
>
> For the reasons listed above, GNOC, CORP.'s proposed presumptive clearance times of three and five days are unacceptable and GNOC, CORP. must, therefore, remain in compliance with its previously approved Submission.

A document entitled Table of Contents, Statement of Management Policies, was admitted into evidence as Exhibit P-17. Agent Carretta testified that many of the topics listed in the respondent's Statement of Management Policies fell under N.J.A.C. 19:45, accounting and internal controls. He believes that the respondent contemporaneously submitted its Statement of Management Policies with its initial internal control submission to the Casino Control Commission in November 1980. Agent Carretta also identified a letter to the Commission's Division of Financial Evaluation and Control from Alfred J. Luciani, GNAC's Executive Vice President and Managing Director, dated April 6, 1983 (Exhibit P-18). This letter bears the reference, "GNAC System of Internal Control -- Volume III Statement of Management Policies." This letter states:

> Enclosed please find a copy of GNAC System of Internal Control -- Volume III - Statement of Management Policies.
> Please be advised that policies no. 5 and no. 35 are in the process of being revised, and will be forwarded upon completion.
> I would appreciate your reviewing the enclosed, except for policies no. 5 and no. 35, and provide me with your comments.

Agent Carretta testified concerning an example of the over extension of credit to a gaming patron when presumptive clearing dates are too short. As of March 19, 1988, Patron Sonny Homasi had a $20,000 line of credit with the respondent. The Division investigation revealed that Mr. Homasi drew three counter checks totalling $15,000 at Bally's Grand on March 19, 1988. The credit available on his approved credit limit of $20,000 was thus $5,000 (Exhibits P-19 and P-20). The three counter checks drawn by the patron were deposited on March 21, 1988. Three days later, the respondent casino "presumed" that the checks were clear in accordance with its presumptive clearing dates, as if the items had been paid.

As a result of presuming that the three counter checks had cleared, the respondent reduced Mr. Homasi's outstanding balance to zero, returning his available credit to $20,000. On March 26, 1988, Mr. Homasi drew three more counter checks totalling $20,000. However, on April 5, 1988, the three counter checks drawn by the patron on March 19, 1988, as well as the three counter checks drawn on March 26, 1988, were returned unpaid, for insufficient funds (Exhibits P-21, 22 and 23). As a result, Mr. Homasi had a credit debt of $35,000 at Bally's Grand on April 5, 1988, although his approved credit limit was only $20,000.

Bally's Grand Senior Vice President and Chief Operating Officer Henry M. Applegate, III testified that he was involved in the preparation of the respondent's initial internal control system and that he is familiar with the Statement of Management Policies. According to Mr. Applegate, the Statement of Management Policies was developed on the advice of counsel, Alfred Luciani. Its purpose was to permit changes in policy without having to wait up to 90 days for the Division and Commission to make a determination concerning proposed changes, as would be required with alterations to the respondent's System of Internal Control. He noted that several binders had initially been sent to the Casino Control Commission. One contained the System of Internal Control and a separate binder contained the Statement of Management Polices.

Mr. Applegate identified a letter dated August 14, 1984 (Exhibit R-1) which he received from Patricia Hetzel, manager of the Commission's Casino Accounting and Operations Unit. The letter confirms a conversation in regard to a recommendation from outside accountants that the respondent "file appropriate amendments to its internal control submission to reflect current GNOC practices which were not accurately reflected in the submission on file with the Commission." Ms. Hetzel confirmed the representation of Mr. Applegate and Mr. Hornbostel that they were aware that the respondent's internal control submission and accompanying statements of management policies were in need of revision. Ms. Hetzel further stated:

> In order to expedite the review of the Submission, I would like to reiterate that a cursory review of the Management Policies leads me to conclude that a substantial portion of that material need not be formally included in your revised Submission. As I indicated, my staff will complete its review of the most recent Management Policies and supply you with our determination of what material is extraneous. Any material which is deemed appropriate for formal submissions should then be incorporated into the Internal Control Submission per se, effectively eliminating the Statements of Management Policies.

Mr. Applegate testified concerning his understanding of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e), which was referenced by page 143 of the respondent's initial System of Internal Control dated November 24, 1980 (Exhibit P-1). Mr. Applegate felt that the regulation required a casino to submit a letter to the Commission and Division stating its presumptive clearance dates. However, he believed that the dates were not required to be set forth in the Internal Control Submission, but could be set forth in the Statement of Management Policies. A revision to the Statement of Management Policies would not require comment, review, or approval by the Commission prior to implementation, in Mr. Applegate's opinion. He acknowledged that some of the matters set forth in the Statement of Management Policies may have required Commission approval before implementation, while maintaining that some other matters may not have required such approval.

Vice President of Finance and Administration Henry W. Hornbostel testified that he understood the Statement of Management Policies to be a separate elaboration of the formal N.J.A.C. 19:45 Internal Accounting Control submission. The Statement of Management Policies were physically in a separate binder and Mr. Hornbostel was informed that they were not part of the internal control submission to allow management flexibility for implementing changes. This understanding was not based on any discussion with the Casino Control Commission or Division of Gaming Enforcement staffs; rather, it was based on internal discussions.

Mr. Hornbostel testified that he believed the presumptive clearance dates of three and five banking days (Exhibit P-6) implemented by the respondent in March 1986 were generally reasonable. He explained that the assignment of presumptive clearing dates is somewhat arbitrary and that he considered the factors for determining reasonableness to include the amount of past returns, the banking relationship, and the uncollectability ratio, compared with other casinos. He described setting presumptive clearance dates as a business decision; part of the credit decision a casino makes. Mr. Hornbostel acknowledged that the respondent has no written agreement with First Fidelity which requires it to give notification to the respondent for a returned item. However, it is his belief that First Fidelity does call the casino many times when it receives such notification.

Collections Department Manager Harvey Weiss testified that he is familiar with the presumptive clearing times assigned to patron's checks. He acknowledged that he conducted a random sample of selected returned counter checks (Exhibits P-13 and P-14). According to Mr. Weiss, in August 1986 the respondent's depository bank always called with notification of a returned item of a substantial nature. This would be a returned check in an amount over $15,000 or $20,000. He acknowledged that no log of these calls was maintained.

Bally's Grand Credit Manager Sandra Washuta testified that she is familiar with changes which the respondent has made in its presumptive clearing dates. In January 1988 Ms. Washuta sent a memo to respondent's information services department directing necessary changes in computer programming to implement a revision of presumptive clearing dates back to 5, 7, 10 and 25 banking days, depending on geographic location (Exhibit R-2). According to Ms. Washuta, the changes were being made because Mr. Applegate had said there was a problem with the state and the casino should go back to the old dates voluntarily. Because of difficulties with the program change, it was not completed until May 12, 1988.

Ms. Washuta also testified concerning a random study of returned items between January and May 1988 (Exhibit R-3). Although the survey spanned 91 deposit days, records for 23 of those days were not readable. Of 5,719 items deposited, 346 items were returned unpaid. In regard to the returned items, 17 patrons were allowed on 25 occasions to again draw on their lines of credit before their checks had returned unpaid.

John Licciardello and Julie Lear Ingraldi also testified on behalf of the respondent. He is computer operations manager at Bally's Grand and she is the user representative in information services. Ms. Ingraldi acts as a liaison between the programming staff and computer users throughout the casino and hotel. Both witnesses testified that it took from January to May 1988 to implement the increase in presumptive clearance dates because of a limited programming staff and a desire to be sure the program was working correctly before it was implemented. Both witnesses testified that a good faith effort had been made to bring about the changes as quickly as possible.

All of the preceding evidence is essentially undisputed and believable, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The primary issue in this matter is whether the respondent has violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e) by implementing in March 1986 its revised presumptive clearing dates for checks submitted by gaming patrons, without first obtaining Casino Control Commission approval. The Division of Gaming Enforcement contends that any changes to the respondent's presumptive clearing date schedule were required to be submitted to the Commission and Division and approved by the Commission prior to implementation of the changes. The Division argues that its position is supported by a plain reading of the Casino Control Act and implementing regulations, by analysis of legislative intent, and by established legal precedent.

It is the respondent's position that its schedule of presumptive clearing times for checks submitted by gaming patrons was maintained in its Statement of Management Policies, separate and apart from its internal control submission. The respondent contends that it was free to implement changes in its Statement of Management Policies without first obtaining Commission approval. The respondent argues that it was only required to submit its schedule of presumptive clearing dates to the Commission and Division, and that having done so, it was not in violation of the act or regulations.

The respondent also argues that the Division's complaint is barred by the doctrine of waiver. According to the respondent, the Commission and the Division had full knowledge that the respondent maintained its Statement of Management Policies separate and apart from its internal control submission. The Commission and Division also knew that the respondent sets forth its schedule of presumptive clearing times for patron's checks in its Statement of Management Policies. Nevertheless, neither the Commission nor the Division ever advised the respondent that the Statement of Management Policy concerning presumptive clearing times for patron checks should be included as part of the respondent's system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls. The Division contends that the respondent's claim of waiver is factually unsubstantiated and is legally unsupportable. Thus, it argues that there has been no waiver and that its complaint should not be barred.

Section 99 of the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.) provides in pertinent part:

> a. Each casino licensee shall submit to the commission a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls. Such submissions shall be made at least 120 days before gaming operations are to commence or at least 90 days before changes in previously submitted control plans are to become effective, unless otherwise directed by the commisison. Each such submission shall contain both narrative and diagrammatic representations of the internal control system to be utilized by the casino, including, but not limited to:

> (13) Procedures for the cashing and recordation of checks exchanged by casino patrons. . . .

N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3 further describes the procedures for a casino licensee submitting to the Commission and Division a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls as part of its requirement under section 99. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c) provides that any changes to the system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls shall be submitted to the Commission and Division at least 90 days before the changes are to become effective, unless otherwise directed by the Commission. This regulation further states, "no casino licensee shall alter its internal controls unless and until such changes are approved."

N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 sets forth the required procedures for depositing checks received by a casino from its gaming patrons. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e) states:

> Any check deposited into a bank will not be considered clear until a reasonable time has been allowed for such check to clear the bank. The licensee must submit to the Commission and Division the time allotted for checks to clear the bank.

The inclusive nature of the submission and approval process for a casino's system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls should be apparent on the face of the foregoing statutory and regulatory provisions. Section 99 of the act describes no less than 17 broad categories of internal procedures and controls which must be set forth in a casino licensee's submission. If its internal control system includes other procedures, these must be submitted for approval as well.

The setting of presumptive clearing dates is not an insignificant matter. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e) requires that any check deposited into a bank by the casino licensee not be considered clear until a reasonable time has been allowed for such check to clear the bank. As demonstrated by the undisputed evidence in the record, the presumptive clearing dates employed by a casino impact directly upon the issuance of casino credit, since presumptive clearing of a dishonored check prior to its actual return has resulted in patrons being able to draw additional counter checks in access of their approved credit limits. Casino credit may be issued to a gaming patron only under a limited set of circumstances described in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and the regulations adopted thereunder. In State of New Jersey v. Boardwalk Regency Corp., OAL DKT. NOS. CCC 7452-82 and CCC 6325-81 (October 21, 1982);

Commission Final Decision dated January 4, 1983, the Casino Control Commission described the intent of the statutory and regulatory language concerning the extension of credit to gaming patrons:

> [T]he clear legislative purpose of §101 and the regulations promulgated thereunder is the strict regulation and control of an important part of licensed gambling activities, the extension of credit, in order to further public confidence and trust in these operations. See, Resorts International Hotel, Inc. v. Salomone, 78 N.J. Super. 598 (App. Div. 1981). . . The regulations promulgated under section 101 are equally detailed in their requirements for the extension and control of credit. See, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 to 1.30, [at 11 and 12].

The material connection between the setting of presumptive clearance dates and the extension of credit to gaming patrons is undeniable. Thus, the setting of presumptive clearance dates must be undertaken in furtherance of the clear legislative purpose to impose strict regulation and control over the extension of credit. This legislative purpose would be defeated if the reasonableness of the presumptive clearance dates selected by a licensed casino were not subject to review and approval by the Casino Control Commission. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e) requires the respondent to submit to the Commission for review and approval the times which the respondent has allotted for patron checks to clear the bank.

The submission and approval procedures which N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 must be read to require are in accordance with the comprehensive and inclusive requirements of section 99 of the act. Under this section each casino licensee must submit to the Commission for its review and approval the licensee's description of all of its internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls. Alterations in these internal procedures and controls may not be implemented unless the alteration is approved by the Commission. As noted above, these requirements are set forth in the detailed regulations adopted by the Commission. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c). Based upon the foregoing discussion, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e) by implementing in March 1986 its revised presumptive clearing dates for checks submitted by gaming patrons, without first obtaining approval of the Casino Control Commission.

The respondent argues that the Division's complaint in this matter is barred by application of the doctrine of waiver. According to the respondent, it and its predecessor corporation maintained the Statement of Management Polices separate and apart from its internal control submission since November 1980, and that this was done "with the full knowledge and acknowledgment of the Casino Control Commission, as well as the Complainant, Division of Gaming Enforcement." The respondent asserts that its presumptive clearing times for patron's checks at all relevant times were maintained, with the knowledge of the Commission and Division, in the respondent's Statement of Management Policies. The respondent contends that it was never advised by the Commission or the Division that its Statement of Management Policy concerning presumptive clearing times for patron checks should be included as part of its internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls and submitted to the Commission for approval. The respondent argues that as a consequence, the Division has intentionally relinquished its right to bring a complaint.

I do not accept the respondent's contentions. The Division commenced its investigation in this matter upon learning that the respondent had implemented its revised presumptive clearing dates (Exhibit P-24). By joint staff letters dated August 6, 1986 and September 28, 1987 (Exhibits P-10 and P-16), the respondent was informed that its "proposed" presumptive clearance times of three and five days were unacceptable and that the respondent "must, therefore, remain in compliance with its previously approved Submission."

In addition, the facts in this matter do not support the contention that the Division and Commission treated the respondent's Statement of Management Policies as existing separate and apart from its internal control submission. As illustrated by the letter of respondent's Executive Vice President and Managing Director Alfred J. Luciani to the Commission staff dated April 6, 1983 (Exhibit P-18), the respondent identified its Statement of Management Policies as Volume III of its System of Internal Control. The respondent's initial internal control submission cross-references the Statement of Management Policies and they were submitted simultaneously to the Commission.

Waiver is an intentional relinquishment of a known right. West Jersey Title and Guarantee Co., v. Industrial Trust Co., 27 N.J. 144, 152 (1958). The undisputed facts in this matter do not demonstrate that the Division of Gaming Enforcement has in any way relinquished its rights concerning the respondent's implementation of revised presumptive clearance dates. Thus, I CONCLUDE that the Division's complaint in this matter is not barred by application of the doctrine of waiver.

PENALTY

Section 129 of the Casino Control Act authorizes the Commission to impose a broad range of sanctions upon licensees who have violated any provisions of the act or regulations, or have committed other misconduct. Among the authorized sanctions is suspension of the operations certificate of any casino for violating any provisions of the act or regulations relating to the casino operation, including gaming, internal and accountancy controls and security. The Commission may also assess such civil penalties as may be necessary to punish misconduct and to deter future violations.

Section 130 of the act sets forth standards which the Commission shall consider in determining the appropriate sanction to be applied in a particular case. These standards are as follows:

a. The risk to the public and to the integrity of gaming operations created by the conduct of the licensee or registrant;

b. The seriousness of the conduct of the licensee or registrant, and whether the conduct was purposeful and with knowledge that it was in contravention of the provisions of this act or regulations promulgated herein;

c. Any justification or excuse for such conduct by the licensee or registrant;

d. The prior history of the particular licensee or registrant involved with respect to gaming activity;

e. The corrective action taken by the licensee or registrant to prevent future misconduct of a like nature from occurring; and

f. In the case of a monetary penalty, the amount of the penalty in relation to the severity of the misconduct and the financial means of the licensee or registrant. The commission may impose any schedule or terms of payment of such penalty as it may deem appropriate.

g. It shall be no defense to disciplinary action before the Commission that an applicant, licensee, registrant, intermediary company, or holding company inadvertently, unintentionally, or unknowingly violated a provision of this act. Such factors shall only go to the degree of the penalty to be imposed by the commission and not to a finding of a violation itself.

The respondent argues that application of the foregoing criteria should not result in the imposition of any penalty. The respondent contends that its implementation of revised presumptive clearing times in March 1986 created no risk to the public or to the integrity of gaming operations. In addition, the respondent argues that its implementation of the revisions without Commission approval was not taken with knowledge that the respondent was violating the act or regulations. Rather, the respondent relied upon advice of counsel and belief that its Statement of Management Policies did not require the Commission's approval and that modifications in the respondent's presumptive clearing times only required notice to the Commission and Division. According to the respondent, its voluntary return to presumptive clearing times in effect prior to March 13, 1986, displayed its intention to fully comply with the requirements of the act and regulations.

The Division argues that a significant monetary penalty is appropriate, in recognition of the seriousness of the violations committed and the potential risks to the public and to casino operations occasioned by the use of unapproved clearing times. The respondent implemented its revised and unapproved presumptive clearing dates between March 13, 1986, and May 12, 1988, notwithstanding that it had twice been advised by Division and Commission staffs that its revision was inadequate.

The respondent's implementation of revised presumptive clearing times without Commission approval did create a risk to the public. Some gaming patrons were stripped of the protections afforded by a credit limit and were allowed to gamble beyond their apparent means. In addition, the Commission was denied its opportunity to review and determine the reasonableness of the presumptive clearance times. The failure to receive Commission approval is "in and of itself serious." State v. Resorts International Hotel, Inc., Agency Dkt. No. 83-5 (Commission Decision dated October 4, 1983). Resorts was assessed a civil monetary penalty of $10,000 by the Commission for transferring documents to an off-site location for storage prior to obtaining Commission approval for the removal of the documents, even though the Commission noted that the records had been maintained by Resorts in a reasonably safe facility with an indexing system and in a legible form. The Commission thus made clear that the approval process is crucial to maintaining the public confidence and trust in the integrity of the regulatory process, even when the unapproved procedure is safe.

The respondent actually revised its presumptive clearance dates on two occasions (Exhibit P-2 and P-8). The first revision was not even submitted to the Commission and Division, and was thus not approved by the Commission prior to the implementation. The second revision was implemented in March 1986 after submission to the Commission and Division, but without approval by the Commission. Despite correspondence from the Commission staff in August 1986 and September 1987 (Exhibits P-10 and P-16) which informed the respondent that its revised dates were "unacceptable," the respondent continued to utilize its revised and unapproved presumptive clearing dates until May 13, 1988.

The respondent should have known that its revised dates were unreasonable as a result of the survey conducted by its collections manager in September 1986 (Exhibit P-14). A random sample of 13 returned checks revealed that not one check actually returned unpaid within the time frames established by the respondent's revised presumptive clearing dates. The respondent's vice president and treasurer informed the senior vice president, finance and administration, that he felt the average return date was substantially in excess of the respondent's clearance schedule. In addition, the respondent had no formal agreement with its depository bank requiring the bank to immediately notify the respondent of a pending returned check. In the absence of such notification, a patron would be able to draw credit in excess of his approved credit limit prior to the actual return of a dishonored check.

The foregoing analysis of the sanction considerations under N.J.S.A. 5:12-130 establishes the seriousness of the respondent's violation of the act and regulations and demonstrates that a significant monetary penalty is warranted. For the respondent's violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.3(c), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28(e), by implementing its revised presumptive clearing dates prior to obtaining approval of the Casino Control Commission, a monetary penalty in the amount of $50,000 should be imposed. I so CONCLUDE.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the respondent GNOC Corp. t/a Bally's Grand Hotel and Casino, shall pay a civil monetary penalty in the amount of $50,000, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5) and 130.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint on February 26, 1988 with the Casino Control

New Jersey is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Commission (Commission) alleging that respondent GNOC Corporation t/a The Golden Nugget Hotel Casino had violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 a. (1) and b., and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46 (b). The Division, therefore, seeks sanctions by way of penalty against respondent.

The matter was transmitted from the Commission to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

On January 31, 1989, the undersigned was in receipt of a duly executed Stipulation of Facts and Settlement which resolves all issues in controversy and which provides in toto, as follows:

The above captioned matter having been discussed by and among the parties involved, Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, Attorney for Complainant, State of New Jersey, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (hereinafter "Division"), by Nancy P. Scharff, Deputy Attorney General, and Kenneth F. Oettle, Esq. of Sills, Cummis, Zuckerman, Radin, Tischmann, Epstein & Gross, P.A., attorneys for respondent GNOC, Corp., t/a Bally's Grand, and certain factual matters having been agreed upon, it is hereby consented to and agreed by and among the parties as follows:

1. Complainant, by and through its Division of Gaming Enforcement, is now and at all times referenced herein has been charged with the responsibility pursuant to the Casino Control Act (P.L. 1977, c. 110, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. (hereinafter "the Act") of enforcing said Act, and the regulations promulgated thereunder by the Casino Control Commission (hereinafter "the Commission") and of prosecuting violations thereof before the Commission.

2. Respondent, GNOC, Corp. (hereinafter "GNOC") t/a Bally's Grand is now and at all times referenced herein has been a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and has now and at all times referenced herein had its principal place of business located at Boston and Pacific Avenues in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic and State of New Jersey.

3. Respondent GNOC is the holder of a plenary casino license issued to it by the Commission, authorizing it to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Said license was issued to GNOC effective May 1, 1984 and GNOC conducted its casino operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein.

4. GNOC is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective May 1, 1984. GNOC has conducted its casino operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation continually to date including all times referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitled GNOC to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1, et seq., and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

5. Respondent GNOC is the successor in interest to GNAC, Corp. (hereinafter "GNAC"), which formerly traded as The Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino. GNAC was the holder of a Certificate of Operation effective December 2, 1980, at which time GNAC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Respondent GNOC succeeded to GNAC's interest as casino licensee as of May 1, 1984.

6. GNOC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of GNAC, which in turn is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bally Manufacturing Corporation (hereinafter "Bally"). By means of a Purchase Agreement dated as of January 18, 1987, as amended February 28, 1987, all the outstanding stock of GNAC, among other property, was sold by Golden Nugget, Inc. to Bally, which thus became a holding company of GNOC.

7. On or about April 23, 1987, GNOC tendered a submission to the Division and Commission for approval of a proposed June 1987 "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion.

8. By formal letter dated May 12, 1987, the Commission, through its staff, informed GNOC that the April 23, 1987 submission pertaining to the proposed June 1987 "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" required certain revisions. GNOC was advised to submit the revisions in writing to the Division and Commission. A copy of the May 12, 1987 Commission staff letter is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "A".

9. On or about May 14, 1987, prior to receipt of the Commission's letter dated May 12, 1987, GNOC commenced its "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion with the distribution and mailing of promotional literature. The program concluded on June 17, 1987, with a grand prize drawing.

10. By letters dated June 3 and June 5, 1987, GNOC amended its April 23, 1987 submission in response to the Commission's May 12, 1987 letter. Copies of the June 3 and June 5, 1987 submissions are attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibits "b" and "c", respectively.

11. By letter dated June 12, 1987, the Commission informed GNOC that no further review of the June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotional submission would be undertaken due to the fact that the promotion commenced in May 1987, prior to receipt of GNOC of any approval from the Commission. A copy of the June 12, 1987 Commission letter is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "D".

12. By reason of distributing and mailing promotional literature for the "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" before receiving Commission comments on the program, GNOC conducted its June 1987 "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion without the required approval of the Commission, and without the approval of the internal controls applicable to said promotion.

13. N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 (a) (1) states in pertinent part, as follows:

> Each casino licensee shall submit to the commission a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls. Such submission shall be made at least 120 days before gaming operations are to commence or at least 90 days before changes in previously submitted control plans are to become effective, unless otherwise directed by the commission. Each such submission shall contain both narrative and diagrammatic representations of the internal control system to be utilized by the casino, including, but not limited to:
> (1) Accounting controls, including the standardization of forms and definition of terms to be utilized in the gaming operations;

14. N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 (b) provides for Commission review of all submissions required by the foregoing subsection (a) for a determination as to the sufficiency and adequacy of controls, and further provides... "No casino licensee shall commence gaming operations, or alter in fact its internal controls, unless and until such system of controls is approved by the commission."

15. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46 provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

> b. Detailed procedures controlling all programs entitling patrons to complimentary cash or slot tokens not regulated by (a) above shall be submitted by the casino licensee to Commission and Division at least fifteen days prior to implementing the program. The procedures for all such programs shall be deemed acceptable by the Commission unless the casino licensee is notified in writing to the contrary. Detailed procedures controlling all programs entitling patrons to complementary items or services other than cash or slot tokens shall be prepared prior to implementation of the programs and shall be maintained as an accounting record by the casino licensee.

16. By commencing the June 1987 "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion prior to the receipt of Commission approval, as more fully described in paragraphs #7 through #11, GNOC committed violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99(a)(1) and (b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46(b) which impose an affirmative obligation upon the respondent to submit procedures regarding promotions to the Commission and the Division fifteen days prior to implementing a promotion and to receive Commission approval prior to commencement of the promotion.

17. On June 10, 1987 the Division filed a complaint against GNOC (Docket No. 87-421) with the Commission, alleging that GNOC's March 1987 "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotional submission was submitted to the Commission four days after the promotion commenced and was therefore violative of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99 (a) and (b) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46. A Stipulation of Facts and Settlement was entered by the parties and adopted by the Commission on June 21, 1988. Copies of the Commission's June 21, 1988 Order and the aforementioned Stipulation of Facts and Settlement are attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibits E and F, respectively.

IT IS THEREFORE AGREED AND STIPULATED by and between the parties that:

1. The facts stated herein are true and did, in fact, occur;

2. In recognition of the above, GNOC will take corrective action to ensure that all future promotions are carefully monitored to ensure that all necessary written approvals have been secured prior to the mailing or other dissemination of any promotional materials by GNOC;

3. In consideration of the foregoing violations and corrective action to be taken by the respondent, the parties agree that the respondent shall pay $18,000.00 to the New Jersey Casino Control Fund as a civil penalty pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5);

4. The parties agree that such penalty is just and equitable in accordance with the criteria set forth at N.J.S.A. 5:12-130 and shall be in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in the Division's complaint;

5. This stipulation shall be subject to the approval and acceptance of the Commission;

The undersigned consent to the form and entry of this Stipulation of Facts and Settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the facts, settlement terms and conditions as evidenced by their respective representative signatures.

2. The settlement is fair.

3. The settlement disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore, ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Dear Ms. Marshall:

The staffs of the Casino Control Commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement have received your Submission dated April 23, 1987 concerning the June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" Promotion. The drawing will be conducted in three phases: the "Early Bird", "Major" and "Late Bird" Drawings. The Early Bird and Late Bird Drawings involve the distribution of non-cash prizes only, while the Major Drawing will involve both cash and non-cash prizes. Our review indicates that additional revisions to the narrative are needed. Attached is a summary of our findings with recommendations for revisions to various sections of the Submission.

In addition, the Division is concerned that the participation rules regarding the promotion offers a distinct and unfair advantage to 24 karat club members over non-members. The Submission indicates that the 24 karat club member may obtain an unlimited number of Official Promotion Drawing Entry Forms by way of their slot play during the period of May 15, 1987 through June 15, 1987, while individuals who do not wish to gamble are limited to one, and only one, entry. Therefore, it is the Division's position that the bulk of the participants are paying consideration for a chance to win a prize of value. In circumstances such as these where opportunity for free entry is so greatly limited, the entire promotion must be viewed as one of and for a closed class of participants. As a result, the Division recommends this promotion be revised to provide for equal participation opportunities by all individuals.

Please make the necessary corrections by bracketing [ ] deletions and underlining additions and submit this Submission in its entirety to both staffs for review as soon as possible.

CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION
DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT
JUNE "GLITTER OF GOLD GIVEAWAY" PROMOTION
GNOC, CORP.

Item Number	Submission Page Ref.	Description
1.	p. 2, para. 1	The Submission should be revised to indicate that lost or stolen entries shall be voided and not subject to prizes or their cash equivalent.
2.	p. 2, para. 2	The Submission should be revised to indicate that the rules of the drawing shall be handed out along with the entry at the South Providence Avenue Office.
3.	p. 2, para. 3	The Submission should specify the name of the ballroom in which the drum will be moved at 5:30 p.m. on the day of the drawing.
4.	p. 3, para. 1	The Submission should specify how many keys will be employed and who will have authorized access to them. In addition, the Submission should include a key sign In/Out Control Log.
5.	p. 3, para. 2	Revise the Submission to include who will draw the five preliminary tickets from the drum. In addition, please specify who shall redeposit the winning entries from the preliminary drawing back into the drum and who will confirm same.
6.	p. 3, para. 2	The Submission should specify that the winning numbers of the preliminary drawing shall be verified by comparing the number on the stub to the "entry" and the comparison of the individual's physical appearance and/or signature on the "entry" to identification credentials presented. In addition, how will the five selected preliminary drawing tickets be delivered to the 24 karat club booth for posting?

Item Number	Submission Page Ref.	Description
7.	p. 5, para. 1	There appears to be an inconsistency on who will verify the winning numbers of the Late Bird Drawing. The Submission initially indicates that a Slot Marketing Representative shall verify the winning numbers. This is not consistent with the subsequent statement which indicates that a member of the Slot Marketing and Security Departments shall verify the winning numbers. Please clarify.
8.	p. 6, para. 2	The Submission should be revised to indicate that the written approvals of cash prizes of $1,000 or less shall be done in accordance with GNOC's System of Ancillary Services Industry Internal Control.
9.	p. 8, Item 1	Revise the time in which a patron can deposit his/her entry into the drum from 12:00 noon to 10:00 a.m. as previously stated in the Submission.
10.	p. 9, Item 19	Item 19 of the "Rules and Regulations" contradicts the promotion policy of allowing an entry form for every 30 bonus tickets redeemed by a 24 karat club member between May 15, 1987 through June 15, 1987. The rules and regulations should be revised accordingly.
11.	p. 10 Prize List	The times shown for the Early Bird Drawings should be revised to agree with the Submission.
12.	Exhibit C	There are two discrepancies between Exhibit C (Prize Payment Form) and the corresponding section of the Submission. The first discrepancy deals with the distribution of the triplicate and quadruplicate copies of the Prize Payment Form. Specifically, the Submission states that the triplicate copy will be forwarded to Accounting and the quadruplicate will be given to the customer. This is not consistent with Exhibit C which indicates that the triplicate copy will be

Item Number	Submission Page Ref.	Description
12.	(con't)	given to the customer and the quadruplicate will be sent to the Accounting Department. Please revise as to the proper distribution. The second discrepancy relates to the winner's address being included on the Prize Payment Form. Upon our review, we find no address space on such form and therefore, recommend that the form be revised to include such.
13.	Exhibit C	The Prize Payment Form should be revised to include the winning entry's serial number.
14.	General	The pages of the Submission should be sequentially numbered with the exception of the exhibits.

June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" Promotion

Dear Mr. Marino:

Enclosed please find revisions to GNOC, Corp.'s June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" Promotion, which revisions have been made in accordance with the findings noted in your May 12, 1987 letter.

Please note that the rules of participation have been revised to eliminate the restriction on one entry per person, thereby addressing the Division's concern as to equal participation opportunites for all individuals.

Should you have any additional questions, please contact Larry Buck at 609-340-7435.

INTERNAL CONTROL PROCEDURES FOR PROMOTIONAL DRAWING

CASH & NON-CASH PRIZES

Golden Nugget ("GNOC") shall hold a promotional drawing for cash and non-cash prizes open to members of the 24 Karat Club, as well as to members of the general public. Winners in the drawing shall receive prizes as specified below, and included in promotional literature distributed by GNOC. The odds of winning the available prizes will be determined by the number of entries received.

Participation in the drawing may be obtained by completing an Official Promotional Drawing Entry Form ("Entry Form"). (See Exhibit A attached hereto). The Entry Form shall be a one-part, serially prenumbered form which shall be perforated and divisible into two portions. The first portion shall contain, but not be limited to, serial number, date, time and location of the drawing, spaces for the customer to print and sign their name and shall be referred to as the "Entry". The second portion shall be referred to as the "Stub" and shall contain, but not be limited to, the serial number. Entry forms and rules shall be available at the 24 Karat Club Booth on the casino floor. Entry forms shall be received and controlled by the Income Control section of the Accounting Department and shall be distributed to the Slot Marketing Department and 24 Karat Redemption Booth by using the same procedures and forms as described in GNOC Statement of Management Policy #34, Twenty-Four Karat Club. (See Exhibit B attached hereto). Official Promotion Drawing Entry Forms shall be distributed as follows:

1. By mail to 24 Karat Club members who have redeemed 100 or more 24 Karat Club Bonus Tickets since July 1, 1986.
2. To all members of the 24 Karat Club (including those described in #1 above) for each (30) bonus tickets redeemed during any casino day between May 15, 1987 and June 16, 1987. (Casino day is defined by the hours of the casino (10:00 A.M. to 4:00 A.M. or 10:00 A.M. to 6:00 A.M.).
3. Entries and the rules of the drawing may be obtained in person at 5 South Providence Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey, between Monday and Friday, from 9:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M.

All participants must be 21 years of age or older. Employees of GNOC, Bally Manufacturing, Inc., and subsidiaries and members of their immediate families are ineligible to participate or win prizes. "Entries" are not replaceable in the event of loss or theft. Lost or stolen entries shall be void and not subject to prizes or their cash equivalent. Rules of the drawing shall be mailed to individuals described in #1 and #2 above and shall be available upon request at the 24 Karat Club Redemption Booth on the casino floor.

Completed "Entries" shall be dropped by the participant in a drum which will be open at 10:00 A.M., at the drawing location and will remain open until five minutes prior to the drawing on the date of the drawing. The drum shall be located in the foyer of the Cambridge Ballroom until 5:30 P.M. on the date of the drawing, when it shall be moved into the Ballroom. A 24 Karat Club attendant shall be posted at the drum until the final drawing is completed. The drum shall be locked by one lock with the keys being controlled [at the security podium on the casino floor] by the Income Control Department until the day of the drawing. Income Control shall maintain two keys to the drum in the Department's locked key control cabinet. Only members of Income Control have access to the contents of the key cabinet. On the day of the drawing Income Control will forward one key to a member of Security who shall maintain the key during the event. If the door to the drum is required to be opened prior to the drawing, a security officer shall bring the key to the drawing location and unlock the door. The door shall be locked again in the presence of security. Closed circuit television cameras shall be posted on the drum while the door is open. Security shall bring the key to the drawing location at the time of the drawing and open the door to the drum. The participant shall retain the Stub to be used in claiming prizes.

A preliminary drawing ("Early Bird") shall be held at 1:45 P.M. at the drawing location, following the procedures described below. All five preliminary drawing tickets shall be drawn at once by an independent patron in the presence of a 24 Karat Shift Manager or above and a member of the Security Department. The winning ticket numbers shall be transported to and posted at the 24 Karat Club Booth on the casino floor at 2:00 P.M. by a 24 Karat Shift Manager or above and the member of Security. Winners of the preliminary drawing must present their ticket stubs at the 24 Karat Club Booth before 3:00 P.M. in order to claim their prizes. Prizes shall be awarded at the Booth whenever possible after the winner has presented two forms of identification credentials to the Booth personnel. Such credentials shall be used to verify the individual's physical appearance and/or signature on the entry. The serial number of the ticket stub presented by the winner shall be compared to the serial number of the ticket posted. Booth personnel verifying the numbers shall sign the back of the winning entry. Prizes not claimed by 3:00 P.M. shall be forfeited and not awarded. All Entries drawn for the preliminary drawing shall be redeposited to the drum for later drawings by a 24 Karat Shift Manager or above and the member of Security. Participants must be present at the drawing location at the time of the drawing to win. Seven winning "Entries" shall initially be drawn from the drum by a member of the audience. The back of the "Entry" shall be signed by the individual drawing the "Entry" to prevent substitution. The winning participant's name and "Entry" number shall be announced. The participant holding the winning "Entry" number shall have ten minutes to present their Stub to GNOC representatives in charge of the drawing. If the participant does not present the "Stub" within ten minutes, another "Entry" shall be drawn from the drum. A GNOC representative will be responsible for timing the ten minutes via their watch. Each holder of a Winning Entry shall be given an opportunity to spin a wheel in order to determine what prize shall be awarded. Immediately prior to spinning the wheel the holder of each winning entry shall be asked to predict which stop on the wheel his/her spin will land. Such prediction shall be made in full view of all participants while utilizing a microphone. Should the spin land on the stop which was predicted by the participant, the participant shall be awarded $5,000 in addition to the prize indicated on the wheel. After the sixth (out of seven) holder of the Winning Entries spins the wheel, an eigth Entry shall be drawn from the drum as a bonus to the participants. The internal controls pertaining to the eigth entry shall be equivalent to those of the previous seven entries as outlined previously. Each stop on the wheel shall indicate one prize or a free spin. The wheel(s) shall be standard "Big Six" wheel(s) on which prizes shall be inserted in place of numbers. All prizes available on the wheel(s) shall be listed on the prize schedule contained in promotional literature.

The "Entry" of prize winners from the major drawing, as well as entries of participants not present to claim their prize relating to the major drawing shall not be placed in the drum for the "Late Bird" drawings. Seventeen entries will be drawn as "Late Bird" winners and shall be posted at the 24 Karat Club Booth on the casino floor at 15 minute intervals beginning at 9:00 P.M. and ending at 1:00 A.M. Winners of "Late Bird" drawings must claim their prizes at the 24 Karat Club Booth by 1:30 A.M., following procedures described for "Early Bird" Winners. Participants must have their Stub and two forms of identification credentials which shall include picture and/or signature for verification purposes. [Winning numbers shall be verified by a member of Slot Marketing who shall compare the number of the stub to the "Entry" to identification credentials presented.] The Stub and the "Entry" shall be shown on screens via closed circuit television which shall be visible to all individuals present at the drawing. Winning numbers shall be verified by a member of the Slot Marketing and Security Departments by comparing the number on the stub to the "Entry" and comparison of the individuals physical appearance and/or signature on "Entry" to identification credentials presented. Such comparisons shall be evidenced by the signatures of the two representatives on the back of the "Entry". Slot Marketing shall be represented by the Slot Marketing Director and/or 24 Karat Club Managers who shall be responsible for conducting the drawing and awarding of prizes as described in this document. Entry Forms shall be destroyed by shredding subsequent to the drawing. The destruction shall be performed by a representative of the Income Control Department. Winners stubs and "Entries" shall be retained in the Slot Marketing Department files. Prizes shall be awarded at the drawing location when possible.

All local and federal taxes are the sole responsibility of the prize winners. Prize winners shall complete an IRS Form 1099. Individuals winning more than $10,000 in cash shall complete an IRS Form 8362.

Cash prizes of $1,000 or less may be paid in cash from funds derived from the Satellite Bank and maintained at the drawing location in the Cambridge Ballroom or from funds derived from the cage and maintained at the Casino Cage at the winner's preference by a Casino or Satellite Cage Supervisor or Cashier. A prize payment form (see Exhibit C attached hereto) will be completed by a Slot Marketing representative to include, but not be limited to, date, amount, winning entry's serial number and winner's name. [and address.] The prize payment form shall require the written approval of the Director of Slot Marketing and/or a Golden Nugget executive in accordance with GNOC's System of Ancillary Services Industry Internal Control. The prize payment form shall be a four-part form; the original shall be presented to a satellite cage supervisor or cashier for disbursement of funds; the duplicate shall be retained and filed by Slot Marketing; the triplicate will be given to the customer [forwarded to accounting]; and the quadruplicate will be forwarded to Accounting [given to the customer]. The prize payment form shall be signed by the Satellite Cage representative, the Slot Marketing representative, the director of Slot Marketing and/or a GNOC executive, and the customer as receipt of funds received. The original copy of the prize payment form shall be retained by the Satellite Cage representative to be used in the end of shift settlement of Satellite Cage funds.

Cash prizes greater than $5,000 will be disbursed as follows:

- A GNOC check requisition (See Exhibit D attached hereto) shall be completed to include, but not be limited to, the date, amount, and winner's name and address. The check requisition shall require written approval by the Director of Slot Marketing and/or an executive as required by GNOC's System of Ancillary Services Industry Internal Control. (See Exhibit E attached hereto). The Check Requisition is a two-part form; the original shall be presented to the cage for disbursement of funds, and the duplicate shall be retained and filed by Slot Marketing.
- The check requisition shall be presented to a cage cashier who shall disburse funds in accordance with procedures described in GNOC's System of Internal Control - Appendix Section A, "Checks Issued to Customer's On behalf of the Casino Cage". (See Exhibit F attached hereto).

JUNE "GLITTER OF GOLD GIVEAWAY" PROMOTION

Dear Mr. Marino:

Enclosed please find revisions to GNOC, Corp.'s June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" Rules and Regulations which have been made as requested by Mr. Dudley Washington of your staff. The rules have been revised to eliminate the restriction on one entry per person to insure equal participation opportunities for all individuals. In order to prevent abuse by the general public, GNOC shall limit the number of free Entries given to individuals who do not wish to gamble to three per day. Please see the attached Entry Ticket Count and calculations from the March 18, 1987 Glitter of Gold.

Should you have any questions, please contact Larry Buck at 609-340-7242.

Dear Ms. Marshall:

The staffs of the Casino Control Commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement reviewed GNOC, CORP.'s June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion submitted by letter dated April 23, 1987. Upon review, the staffs determined that additional information and clarification was required. The necessary revisions to the Submission were requested by letter dated May 12, 1987. In response to this request, GNOC, CORP. amended its Submission by letters dated June 3, 1987 and June 5, 1987.

It has come to the staffs attention that GNOC, CORP.'s June "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion commenced in May, 1987, prior to any approval given by the Commission.

Based on the facts noted above, the staffs will not do any further review of this Submission. By copy of this letter, I am informing the Division of this situation.

If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact Dudley Washington of my staff.

Sincerely,

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, Plaintiff, vs. GNOC CORPORATION t/a THE GOLDEN NUGGET HOTEL AND CASINO, Respondent.	STIPULATION OF FACTS AND SETTLEMENT

MAY 1 2 29 PM '88

The above-captioned matter having been discussed by and among the parties involved, W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney for Plaintiff, State of New Jersey, Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (hereinafter called "Division"), by Frances I. Sundheim, Deputy Attorney General, and Kenneth F. Oettle, Esq. of Sills, Cummis, Zuckerman, Radin, Tischmann, Epstein & Gross P.A. attorneys for Respondent, GNOC, CORP., t/a Bally's Grand, and certain factual matters having been agreed upon, it is hereby consented to and agreed by and among the parties as follows:

COUNT ONE

1. Plaintiff, by and through its Division of Gaming Enforcement, is now and at all times referenced herein has been charged with the responsibility pursuant to the Casino Control Act (P.L. 1977, c. 110, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. (hereinafter called "the Act") of enforcing said Act, and the regulations promulgated thereunder by the Casino Control Commission (hereinafter called "the Commission") and of prosecuting violations thereof before the Commission.

2. Respondent, GNOC, CORP. (hereinafter called "GNOC") t/a Bally's Grand is now and at all times referenced herein has been a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and has now and at all times referenced herein had its principal place of business located at Boston and Pacific Avenues in the City of Atlantic City, County of Atlantic and State of New Jersey.

3. Respondent GNOC is the holder of a plenary casino license issued to it by the Commission, authorizing it to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the Act and the regulations promulgated thereunder. Said license was issued to GNOC effective May 1, 1984 and GNOC has been conducting its casino operations pursuant to said license continually to date since that time including all times referenced herein.

4. GNOC is the holder of, and operates pursuant to, a Certificate of Operation effective May 1, 1984. GNOC has conducted its casino operations pursuant to said Certificate of Operation continually to date including all times referenced herein. Said Certificate of Operation entitles GNOC to operate a casino hotel in accordance with the provisions of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1, et seq., and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

5. Respondent GNOC is the successor in interest to GNAC, CORP. (hereinafter referred to "GNAC"), which formerly traded as The Golden Nugget Hotel and Casino. GNAC was the holder of a Certificate of Operation effective December 2, 1980, at which time GNAC was the holder of a temporary casino permit. Respondent GNOC succeeded to GNAC's interest as casino licensee as of May 1, 1984.

6. GNOC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of GNAC, which in turn is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Bally Manufacturing Corporation ("Bally"). By means of a Purchase Agreement dated as of January 18, 1987, as amended February 28, 1987, all the outstanding stock of GNAC, among other property, was sold by Golden Nugget, Inc. to Bally, which thus became a holding company of GNOC.

7. By letter dated January 6, 1986, the Casino Control Commission (hereinafter "Commission") informed GNOC that the December 1985 Glitter of Gold Giveaway, which began December 1, 1985, had been submitted for approval four days after the scheduled date of implementation. This letter warned that future promotional procedures submitted after implementation would not be approved and would be forwarded to the Division for appropriate action. A copy of the January 6, 1986 Commission letter is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "A".

8. On or about February 26, 1987, GNOC advised the Commission and the Division of its March "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion which began February 11, 1987, with the mailing of promotional literature to patrons. The drawing for the March "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" was held March 18, 1987.

9. By letter dated March 6, 1987, the Commission informed GNOC that it would not review the March "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotional submission because it was submitted after implementation of the promotion, in contravention of the January 6, 1986 Commission warning referred to in paragraph 6. A copy of the March 6, 1987 Commission letter is attached hereto and incorporated herein as Exhibit "B".

10. N.J.S.A. 5:12-99(a)(1) states, in pertinent part, as follows:

> Each casino licensee shall submit to the Commission a description of its system of internal procedures and administrative and accounting controls. Such submission shall be made at least 90 days before gaming operations are to commence or before changes in previously submitted control plans are to become effective, unless otherwise directed the Commission. Each such submission shall contain both narrative and diagrammatic representations of the internal control system to be utilized by the casino, including, but not limited to:
> (1) Accounting controls, including the standardization of forms and definition of terms to be utilized in the gaming operations;

11. N.J.S.A. 5:12-99(b) provides for Commission review of all submissions required by the foregoing subsection (a) for determination as to the sufficiency and adequacy of controls, and further provides... "No casino licensee shall commence gaming operations, or alter in fact it internal controls, unless and until such system of its controls is approved by the Commission."

12. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46 sets forth the minimum time periods for promotional submissions and requires, in pertinent part, as follows:

> b. Detailed procedures controlling all programs entitling patrons to complimentary cash or slot tokens not regulated by (a) above shall be submitted by the casino licensee to Commission and Division at least fifteen days prior to implementing the program. The procedures for all such programs shall be deemed acceptable by the Commission unless the casino licensee is notified in writing to the contrary. Detailed procedures controlling all programs entitling patrons to complimentary items or services other than cash or slot tokens shall be prepared prior to implementation of the programs and shall be maintained as an accounting record by the casino licensee. (Emphasis added)

13. By submitting the March "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion four days after the scheduled date of implementation, as more fully described in paragraphs number 6 to 8, GNOC committed violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-99(a)(1) and (b), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46(b), which imposes an affirmative obligation upon the Respondent to submit promotional procedures fifteen days prior to the scheduled date of implementation.

IT IS THEREFORE AGREED AND STIPULATED by and between the parties that:

1. The facts stated herein are true and did, in fact, occur;

2. In recognition of the above, GNOC will take corrective action to ensure that all future promotions are carefully monitored to ensure that all necessary written approvals have been secured prior to the mailing or other dissemination of any promotional materials by GNOC;

3. In consideration of the foregoing violations and corrective action to be taken by the Respondent, the parties agree that the Respondent shall pay $9,500.00 to the New Jersey Casino Control Fund as a civil penalty pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5);

4. The parties agree that such penalty is just and equitable in accordance with the criteria set forth at N.J.S.A. 5:12-130 and shall be in full and final settlement of the allegations set forth in the Division's complaint;

5. This stipulation shall be subject to the approval and acceptance of the Commission;

The undersigned consent to the form and entry of this Stipulation of Facts and Settlement.

Dear Ms. Marshall:

The staffs of the Casino Control Commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement have received your December 5, 1985 letter concerning the December "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion which began December 1, 1985. Under this program, a drawing was held on December 18, 1985 to award various prizes ranging from the Grand prize of a trip to London or Paris including airfare, accommodations and $10,000 in American Express Travelers checks, to the fourth prize of a video cassette recorder and camcorder.

It should be noted that these procedures were submitted four days after the scheduled date of implementation. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46(b) these procedures should have been submitted 15 days prior to the scheduled date of implementation. In addition, your letter indicated that this promotion "will be conducted in exactly the same fashion as the September drawing in accordance with the rules and regulations that were previously approved. The only difference will be the prizes awarded and, therefore, the internal controls have been amended accordingly." Upon review, it was determined in fact that the procedures were not exactly the same as you indicated and revisions to these procedures were necessary. Please be advised that in the future, procedures which are submitted after implementation will not be approved and will be forwarded to the Division for any action they deem necessary.

Based on your verbal representations which are included as an attachment to this letter, verbal approval was granted on December 18, 1985 to hold the drawing. This letter will confirm the verbal approval given on December 18, 1985.

Dear Ms. Marshall:

The staffs of the Casino Control Commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement have received your February 26, 1987 letter concerning the March "Glitter of Gold Giveaway" promotion which began February 11, 1987.

Upon reviewing the history of this promotion, it was noted that GNOC, CORP. was advised in the Commission's January 6, 1986 letter that its December 1985 promotion was submitted four days after the scheduled date of implementation and was not in compliance with N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.46(b) which states that procedures must be submitted fifteen days prior to the scheduled date of implementation. In addition, that letter warned that any future Submissions which were forwarded in the same manner would not be approved and would be forwarded to the Division for any action they deemed necessary. I have attached a copy for your reference.

Since GNOC, CORP. has ignored this warning and has submitted the March 1987 promotion after its scheduled date of implementation, the staffs will not review this Submission. By copy of this letter, I am informing the Division of this situation.

ORDER NO. 88-50-6

APPLICATION OF CLIFFORD GRANT

FOR A CASINO EMPLOYEE LICENSE — ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of December 21, 1988,

IT IS on this 26th day of January 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

(1) At page 6 of the initial decision the ALJ observed: "It is difficult to make a judgment, in the absence of testimony from both sides and in light of the scant and unreliable nature of the documentary evidence presented, whether Grant would have been convicted of these offenses had they been subject to a trial in municipal court rather than the dismissal which occurred when the complainants failed to appear. On the whole, I believe it better not to draw a conclusion as to whether or not Grant would have been convicted but instead to consider them in a more general sense as to the good character, honesty and integrity issue."

> While the ALJ was correct in addressing the ultimate question in this case solely in terms of whether Mr. Grant had established his good character, honesty and integrity, the judge erred in suggesting that it would be appropriate to determine whether or not Grant would have been convicted in municipal court. A conviction requires proof beyond a reasonable doubt. The operative standard in this administrative proceeding is the civil or preponderance of the evidence standard. Thus, although the Division neither alleged nor sought to establish that one or more of Mr. Grant's unprosecuted assault charges was disqualifying pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c) and (g), had it done so, the disqualification would have had to appear by a preponderance of the evidence in the record as a whole. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 257 (1979).

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the application of Clifford Grant is denied substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision which, as modified, is incorporated herein by reference; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the applicant is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any other license, registration, qualification or approval required under the Casino Control Act except pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8; and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that this denial shall not affect Clifford Grant's current status as a casino hotel employee registrant pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-8 and 91.

CLIFFORD GRANT,
Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND
PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION
OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

Clifford Grant, petitioner, pro se

R. Lane Stebbins, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: October 11, 1988 Decided: November 3, 1988

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

Clifford Grant applied to the Casino Control Commission ("Commission") for licensure as a casino employee, designating the position which he sought as security employee. The Division of Gaming Enforcement ("Division") objected to licensure. Mr. Grant requested a hearing on the proposed denial and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held on June 3, 1988. A Prehearing Order, incorporating issues for consideration at the hearing, was issued on June 17, 1988, by Honorable Jeff S. Masin, ALJ. The issues set forth were as follows:

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

A. Does the petitioner have the requisite good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b, incorporating the standards of N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2)?

The Division originally set forth in its letter to the Commission of December 22, 1987, the incidents which it believed raised significant questions about Mr. Grant's good character, honesty and integrity. Mr. Grant addressed these at the hearing and the Division offered documentary evidence concerning the matters, although it presented no live witnesses.

The first incident addressed by Mr. Grant was a 1971 arrest and conviction for a misdemeanor offense of possession of marijuana. This arrest occurred in New York City. At the time of his arrest, Grant acknowledged that he identified himself to the police as Michael Rivera, a false name. He claimed that he told the police his real name "after awhile." The amount of marijuana was less than an ounce which at the time constituted a misdemeanor offense in New York. The petitioner served 18 days in jail for this offense.

On March 11, 1975, Grant acknowledged that he was involved in the robbery of a bar which occurred during the evening hours. Grant pled guilty to the robbery charge and was sentenced to three years in prison, serving 18 months at Auburn Penitentiary. According to the petitioner, he was apprehended shortly after the robbery. The weapon involved was a pistol and it was found on the street. Grant had two accomplices in the robbery, which occurred at a time when the bar was occupied by three patrons and the bartender.

The next incident noted in the letter was a February 19, 1981 arrest in Atlantic City for assault, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1 and terroristic threats, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-3. According to Grant, this incident was a domestic dispute with his wife Mary Kay. She called the police and filed a charge. He left the residence and she never showed up in court. According to the Division's letter, that matter was dismissed by the Atlantic City Municipal Court on February 24, 1981, apparently for lack of prosecution. Grant acknowledged that he did hit his wife, although he initially pled not guilty before the matter was dismissed.

On March 15, 1983, Grant was arrested in Atlantic City and charged with aggravated assault, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1B and terroristic threats, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-3.

According to the petitioner, he did not hit the victim in this incident. He claimed that he came to her house and another man was there who was arguing with her. The lady was hit by the other man who had a knife. Grant ran outside and left and was later charged. The "vicitim" did not show up in court and the matter was dismissed by the Atlantic City Municipal Court on June 7, 1983.

On December 11, 1984, Mr. Grant was arrested for assault, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1a. The charges were dismissed by the municipal court on December 21, 1984, when the alleged victim did not appear in court. In this incident, Grant explained that he was living in a building with Mr. Beverly, the alleged victim, and Beverly's girlfriend. Grant explained that this was a "domestic" dispute which arose because Beverly's girlfriend frequently came down to Grant's apartment to borrow things. Apparently, Beverly became jealous and confronted Grant. Some name calling ensued and then Beverly made some comments about whether anything was going on between Grant and the female. Beverly then raised a weapon and hit Grant, who "retaliated." As Grant explained the results "He went to the police. I didn't." As noted, no one appeared in court and the matter was dismissed.

On August 14, 1985, the petitioner was arrested in Atlantic City and charged with assault on Victoria Jenkins. Grant and Jenkins were the parents of a son. Grant testified that he threatened to leave and take his son with him and take care of him "at a distance" from Jenkins. An argument ensued and Jenkins called the police. She claimed that he hit her, but he denies that he did so. Ms. Jenkins failed to appear in court and the matter was dismissed on August 23, 1985.

On November 16, 1985, Jenkins was arrested and charged with simple assault, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1(a). He described this incident as involving he and his landlord, Myrtle Ross. He had been paying her rent, but she wanted him to leave. He felt that she could not just throw him out after having taken his money and he said he wanted his money back. He would not leave without the money so Ms. Ross filed a "harassment" charge in an attempt to get him removed. She never appeared in court at the hearing and the matter was dimissed on January 9, 1986.

On November 16, 1985, Grant was arrested on a charge of harassment, N.J.S.A. 2C:33-4. According to Grant, this incident arose because of some problems between Grant and William Johnson, a fellow security officer for the Atlantic City Housing Authority. Grant testified that he was being "intimidated" by Johnson and that he had repeatedly warned him not to do so. This continued and Johnson was writing "false reports as to my work performance. . . . It was seen very clear to me that he was either trying to get me fired or some sort of disciplinary action to be taken against me." Grant "ran into" Johnson one night on the street and confronted him. Johnson raised his hand, Grant punched him in the mouth and Johnson called the police. Grant entered a plea of guilty to the charges and was fined $500.

In addition to the above matters, on June 2, 1987, the Atlantic County Prosecutors Officer charged Grant with two counts of forgery, N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1, and theft by deception in the fourth degree, N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4. According to the petitioner, the matter was ultimately dismissed on the condition that he pay $200 to a bank. According to Grant, he found a blank money order in the street which had been really made out for $30, but which appeared to be made out for $300. The bank apparently caught the error and demanded the money back from him after it had paid him $300. He denied altering the document and was surprised that the bank was asking him for the money back because they had paid him the $300.

Mr. Grant is 44 years old and supports two children, one of whom lives with him. He has been employed at several Atlantic City casino hotels since approximately 1980. He presently works as a bus greeter at the bus operations department at the Sands Hotel, holding this position since January 1988. He presented a good character reference from Michael Trageser, manager of Day Tour Sales at the Sands, who indicated that Mr. Grant is "considered to be one of our best employees. He is reliable, trustworthy, and of the highest moral character."

Before his employment at the Sands, the petitioner was employed at the Showboat as a houseman for six months from May through November 1987. He left that position because of a dispute with another employee. He worked as a security officer at Atlantic County Community College prior the Showboat employment, leaving the college for the better paying position at the Showboat. He has also been employed at the Tropicana, Golden Nugget and Atlantis as either a houseman, room service or at the front desk. He left the Golden Nugget, where he worked from 1980 to 1981, seeking "upward mobility." Several of the jobs which he had he left, and he was fired from others. He was fired from the Tropicana, where he was employed from December 1981 to June 1982, as a result of a situation in which it was alleged that he had misappropriated food. Actually, according to Grant, a guest in the hotel had been barred from the facility, but the information was not placed in the computer. Security was watching his room and Grant came up with a check for some food which he had delivered.

The Division presented documentary evidence with respect to the various arrests. As noted, in many of these incidents, the matters were dismissed in municipal court for lack of prosecution. There are therefore no convictions with respect to those matters. The Division's evidence consists of police reports which contain hearsay as to what occurred, as well as the muncipal court records. In some instances, the reports contained statements purportedly taking from the "victim." This evidence is of course of little if any value in connection with this case since the alleged victims were not produced in the administrative hearing, let alone bothering to appear at the municipal court level. In some instances, Mr. Grant acknowledged his actions, giving some defense of why he acted as he did. Under the circumstances of this case, I CONCLUDE that the reports do not prove anything with respect to Mr. Grant's conduct other than what he himself already acknowledges. They cannot be relied upon in any way to prove the truth of the allegations against Grant.

DISCUSSION

The difficulty in a case of this nature is of course that Mr. Grant is required to prove his good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence. In this case, initially, his activities in New York in the early 1970s involving the possession of marijuana and involvement in an armed robbery were obviously significant and, if fresher in time, would most certainly have a significant negative impact on his good character, honesty and integrity. Particularly in the case of the 1975 robbery, an incident which Grant acknowledges resulted from "bad judgment," it would be difficult to grant the license to an armed robber. However, that incident occurred over 13 years ago. There is no further indication in Mr. Grant's history of any similar type of activity such as to indicate that he is likely to engage in robberies or armed robberies. As such, in order to make a judgment of Grant's qualifications for licensure, it is necessary to turn to the more recent past.

A further difficulty in this case is the fact that while Grant has been arrested on numerous occasions, he has only suffered a few relatively minor convictions for these incidents. He was convicted in February 1986 of the November 1985 simple assault upon his fellow worker Johnson. Although he provided some indication of the differences which he was having with Johnson and the fact that he felt that Johnson was harassing and intimidating him, this does not seem to have been sufficient to establish any kind of self defense before the municipal court, which found him guilty. As such, I FIND that he was convicted of simple assault, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1a. This is not an automatic disqualifying offense, but it has some relation to the good character, honesty and integrity determination.

In addition, to the above conviction, the respondent was convicted in 1984 of an assault upon his female friend in Egg Harbor Township. While he indicated that there was no physical proof of any injury, he was nevertheless convicted, fined $100 and ordered to make restitution of $60.

Except for these convictions, it appears that Grant has no other recent criminal or quasi-criminal convictions. The Division offered no documentary evidence concerning the money order incident of June 1987 in which Grant claims the matter was dismissed upon his payment of $200 to the bank. From the evidence presented, it is impossible to determine whether he actually did anything illegal in connection with that incident. The matter may well have been more in the nature of a civil dispute over the document in question and it appears to have been settled.

As for the various dismissed municipal court matters, I CONCLUDE that the evidence does establish that on occasion Mr. Grant has been willing to use his hands in a apparently inappropriate assaultive manner upon his girlfriends, wife, etc. While for the most part, he has not been convicted of these assaults, he nevertheless acknowledged hitting several of the persons involved. It is difficult to make a judgment, in the absence of testimony from both sides and in light of the scant and unreliable nature of the documentary evidence presented, whether Grant would have been convicted of these offenses had they been subject to a trial in municipal court rather than the dismissal which occurred when the complainants failed to appear. On the whole, I believe it better not to draw a conclusion as to whether or not Grant would have been convicted but instead to consider them in a more general sense as to the good character, honesty and integrity issue.

Finally, of some interest is Grant's termination from the Tropicana Hotel for alleged dishonesty in 1983. Exhibit R-12, which is the memorandum and documentation of the hotel concerning that matter, indicates an "apparent(ly) misappropriation of food. Apparently, the guest, a Mr. Wrangler, had been asked to vacate the room. A steak dinner with Coca Cola and a cheese cake were delivered to the room by Grant. Wrangler claimed that the food was a gift from his family and that it was not a "comp," but it had not been charged to his room because of its "gift" nature. Apparently, the hotel believed that Grant had taken the food to the room for the patron without any intention of charging him. However. the documentation does not clearly define the theory of management as to what exactly was occurring. No witnesses were presented on the matter. Grant testified explaining his side of the story. At any rate, Grant was terminated.

Based upon all of the evidence presented, and keeping clearly in mind the fact that good character, honesty and integrity must be proven by clear and convincing evidence, I find it difficult to conclude that Mr. Grant has met his burden. Without for the moment considering his history in New York, his Atlantic City history is at best spotty. While he has avoided conviction on a number of occasions for incidents which might well have resulted in convictions for assault, he has been convicted of the assault on Mr. Johnson, and has also been convicted of the assault in Egg Harbor City. These incidents occurred in 1984 and 1985 respectively. In addition, on other occasions, Grant has shown some willingness to strike his acquaintances. When one combines this with the somewhat unsatisfactory answer which Grant provided as to exactly what was occurring in connection with the food at the Tropicana in 1983, one is left with the impression of an individual who, while he may walk the line between the legitimate and illegitimate, the licit and illicit, is not clearly above that line characterwise. His history does not display a clear and convincing record of proper conduct. If the burden in this case were preponderance of the evidence, perhaps there might be more of a likelihood of finding in Mr. Grant's favor. However, the legislature sought fit to set the burden upon a casino employee attempting to establish qualification for licensure at the significantly higher level of clear and convincing. Particularly where an individual wishes to be a security guard, with reponsibilities that involve necessity for care, discretion, tact, a high degree of honesty and integrity, etc., any reasonable questions about an individual's background which raise doubts about whether he is of good character, must be resolved against the applicant in the absence of clearly satisfactory explanations.

Based on all of the above, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Grant has failed to establish by the requisite level of proof that he has the necessary good character, honesty and integrity required of a candidate for licensure as a casino employee under the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b, incorporating the standards established in section 89b(2). Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Grant's application for licensure as a casino employee must be DENIED. It is so ORDERED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on January 19, 1988 and an amended complaint dated May 17, 1988 seeking sanctions against the casino license held by the Sands Hotel and Casino (Sands) and the junket enterprise license held by Ronald A. Zoby.

The instant matter was transmitted from the Commission to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 17, 1988 for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. On May 2, 1988, a prehearing conference was conducted with the parties by Administrative Law Judge Steven L. Carnes, where the issues to be determined were agreed upon. Thereafter, on June 10, 1988, respondent Sands, joined by respondent Zoby, propounded and served its Notice of Motion to Dismiss or, in the alternative, for Summary Disposition. On July 10, 1988, the Division filed its Cross-Motion for Summary Decision. Thereafter, on September 1, 1988, a telephone conference was held at which, among other things, it was determined that the matter was ripe for summary decision and it was agreed between the parties that the matter was to be bifurcated with the issues of liability to be settled in the first instance, followed by a determination as to penalty, if any.

Subsequently, respondents propounded Motions to Reopen the herein matter after it had been declared closed on September 1988. The motion was denied by the undersigned by way of Decision on Motion dated December 6, 1988. The instant matter was, therefore, considered closed as of November 9, 1988. Extensions were requested and granted for the execution of the herein partial summary decision.

CROSS MOTIONS FOR SUMMARY DECISION

The parties, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, filed cross-motions for summary decision stating, in part, that no issues of material facts are in dispute. The matter is, therefore, submitted on the pleadings, exhibits, affidavits and briefs of counsel. In accordance with the criteria set forth by our Supreme Court in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954), I determine that the herein matter is ripe for summary decision and shall proceed accordingly.

ISSUES

This matter having been preheard by the Honorable Steven Carnes, Administrative Law Judge, the following issues to be determined by this tribunal were agreed upon and set forth in the prehearing order as follows:

A. Did the respondent, Ronald A. Zoby, violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 on at least 44 occasions by cashing counter checks to be issued on his approved casino credit account, not for his own personal use, but for the purpose of obtaining gaming chips for various junket participants and which gaming chips were then provided directly to the various junket participants named in count one of the complaint who were gambling and who used said gaming chips while gambling at the gaming tables where the counter checks were issued by Mr. Zoby?

B. Did the respondent Sands violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25, and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 by allowing, permitting and facilitating Ronald A. Zoby's use of his approved casino credit account to provide gaming chips to various persons at the gaming tables who were participants on junkets organized and coordinated by Mr. Zoby to enable said persons to use the gaming chips provided to them by Mr. Zoby to engage in gaming activity?

C. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:102g, did the respondent Sands violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 by Ronald A. Zoby's use of his approved casino credit account to provide gaming chips to various persons at the gaming tables who were participants on junkets organized and coordinated by Mr. Zoby to enable said persons to use the gaming chips provided to them by Mr. Zoby to engage in gaming activity while at all times referenced herein, Ronald A.

Zoby was acting in furtherance of his junket representative arrangement with an agency of the Sands?

D. Did the conduct of respondent Ronald A. Zoby of providing gaming chips to various junket participants at the gaming tables of the Sands constitute the exercise of approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of casino credit to those junket participants, some of whom had been denied casino credit accounts on their own behalf, through the subterfuge of processing counter checks on his own approved casino credit account, violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2)?

E. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g, did respondent Sands violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) by virtue of the conduct of Ronald A. Zoby of providing gaming chips to various junket participants at the gaming tables of the Sands thereby constitute the exercise of approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of casino credit to said junket participants, some of whom had been denied casino credit accounts on their own behalf, through the subterfuge of processing counter checks on his own approved casino credit account, when Ronald A. Zoby, at all times referenced herein, was acting in furtherance of his junket representative arrangement with and agency of the Sands?

F. Did the conduct of respondent Ronald A. Zoby violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 by the cashing of personal and business checks presented by junket participant Albert Miller thus enabling Mr. Miller to take part in gaming activity as a player without complying with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25?

G. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g, did the respondent Sands violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 by virtue of the conduct of Ronald A. Zoby cashing personal and business checks presented by junket participant Albert Miller which thereby enabled Mr. Miller to take part in gaming activity as a player without complying with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25, while Ronald A. Zoby, at all times referenced herein, was acting in furtherance of his junket representative arrangement with an agency of the Sands?

H. Did the conduct of Ronald A. Zoby of regularly and routinely receiving cash given to him by junket participant Albert Miller at the beginning of the various junkets organized and coordinated by Mr. Zoby, and Mr. Zoby maintaining custody of the cash given to him by Mr. Miller and periodically returning the funds to Mr. Miller in various increments by providing Mr. Miller with gaming chips at the gaming tables, constitute violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)9 and (g), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 in that Ronald A. Zoby, as a licensed junket representative, and the Ronald A. Zoby Company, as a licensed junket enterprise, performed the duties and functions of a general cashier with respect to the receipt of cash deposits from patrons and the refunding of such deposits to said patrons?

I. Did the conduct of Ronald A. Zoby of regularly and routinely receiving cash given to him by junket participant Albert Miller at the beginning of the various junkets organized and coordinated by Mr. Zoby, and Mr. Zoby maintaining custody of the cash given to him by Mr. Miller and periodically returning the funds to Mr. Miller in various increments by providing Mr. Miller with gaming chips at the gaming tables, constitute violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24 in that Ronald A. Zoby failed to prepare the required documentation and perform the required procedures to account for the receipt of cash deposits from patron Albert Miller and the refunding of such deposits to said patron?

J. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g, did the respondent Sands violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)9 and (g), N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15, and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24 by virtue of the conduct of Ronald A. Zoby who regularly and routinely received cash given to him by junket participant Albert Miller at the beginning of the various junkets organized and coordinated by Mr. Zoby, and Mr. Zoby thereafter maintained custody of the cash given to him by Mr. Miller and periodically returned the funds to Mr. Miller in various increments by providing Mr. Miller with gaming chips at the gaming tables, while Ronald A. Zoby, at all times referenced herein, was acting in furtherance of his junket representative arrangement with an agency of the Sands?

K. If any statutory or regulatory violation is proven, what is the appropriate penalty or sanction for such violation?

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Sands is a corporation duly organized and existing under the laws of the State of New Jersey and licensed by the Commission to own and operate a legalized casino hotel.

Ronald A. Zoby is a resident of the Commonwealth of Virginia, residing at 1604 Bay Breeze Driver, Virginia Beach, Virginia. He has been licensed by the Commission as a Junket Representative under license # 44316-21. Zoby is also the sole proprietor of a licensed Junket Enterprise trading as the Ronald A. Zoby Company which holds Junket Enterprise #1015-70 and maintains vendor registration # 06004. Zoby employs other junket representatives in connection with the promotion and arrangement of gambling excursions to Atlantic City, New Jersey and other locations. He presently employs Leo Thomas, license # 4624-21, and Pacific Romeo, Jr., license # 50919-21.

Commencing in or about 1981, Zoby began an employment relationship with the Sands in the capacity of Junket Representative to bring gaming patrons to the Sands. Until December 1, 1985, Zoby was compensated by the Sands for his junket activities on a commission basis. The compensated commission depended upon the type of junket Zoby brought to the Sands and was calculated as a percentage of the "theoretical win" to the Sands based upon the extent of the gaming activity engaged in by the junket participants.

On or about December 1, 1985, the Sands and Zoby formalized the employment relationship by entering into a written "Junket Representative Agreement" for a period of two years from December 1, 1985 through November 30, 1987. On or about October 1, 1987, Zoby and the Sands entered into a new "Junket Representative Agreement" extending Zoby's employment with the Sands to September 30, 1988. The two Agreements required Zoby to provide patrons to the Sands who generate gambling play yielding $1.5 million per year in "Gross Statistical Win" for the Sands. The gross statistical win is a calculation of the number of times an individual plays multiplied by the amount of the bet, times the number of opportunities to play. This calculation is used by casino personnel to determine how much of the gross statistical win is generated by the patrons of a junket toward the $1.5 million per year quota ascribed to the Junket Representative. Zoby has met his quota within the first seven months of each year during the terms of the Agreements.

On or about June 22, 1984, Zoby applied for and received a casino credit account with the Sands in the amount of a $5,000 limit. Subsequently, Zoby has applied for increased credit limits, all of which have been approved. Zoby's present approved casino credit limit is $85,000. Zoby utilizes his casino credit account for his own use and for the purposes of engaging in gaming activities with patrons at the casino. Respondent Zoby also utilizes his casino credit account for the purpose of obtaining gaming chips for use by his junket participants.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27, all credit players must have their gaming activity rated. The player rating information is recorded on "player rating cards" by casino floorpersons or pit bosses.

By way of an investigation conducted by the Division, 44 occasions were initially identified whereby Zoby had caused counter checks to be issued against his approved casino credit account for the purpose of obtaining and providing gaming chips to various junket patrons. The investigation identified 12 of Zoby's junket patrons who received $208,000 in gaming chips directly from Zoby, rather than from the dealer of the games, for the purpose of engaging in gambling activities at the Sands. A subsequent investigation identified 18 transactions between February 23, 1986 and December 31, 1987 which demonstrated that Zoby had executed counter checks on his casino credit account to obtain gaming chips and then transferred the gaming chips to a variety of junket patrons. Zoby does not deny that he engaged in such activity.

A frequent patron of Zoby's junkets was the late Albert Miller of Norfolk, Virginia. Mr. Miller, a widower, died on September 14, 1986, at the age 79 years. Miller's last junket to the Sands with Zoby took place on August 22 and 23, 1986, less than a month prior to his death. Albert Miller was denied a casino credit account at the Sands and, moreover, was the recipient of the Zoby gaming chip transfers. The purpose of the gaming chip transfers was to provide Zoby's patrons with gaming chips when the patron ran low and, therefore, not interrupt the flow of play by the patron.

The Division's investigation disclosed that Albert Miller borrowed money from other individuals who had come to the Sands on the same junket organized by Zoby. Zoby would routinely cash personal and business checks presented to him by Miller with the express knowledge that the cashing of Miller's checks were to enable Miller to pay his gaming debts with the other junket participants. This check cashing practice between Zoby and Miller occurred frequently over a period of three and one-half years, until the death of Miller in September 1986.

Mr. Zoby also made it a practice to take custody of large sums of currency from Miller and other patrons at the beginning of a junket trip to the Sands. Zoby understood that Miller did not wish to experience any delays in his gambling activity that would be occasioned by cash deposit-withdrawal procedures. Zoby, therefore, had an electronic paging device on his person in order that he could be paged and summoned by one or more of his junket patrons to provide them with gaming chips. It was under these circumstances that Zoby would process a withdrawal of the funds given to him by Miller and others by executing a counter check on his personal credit account.

Zoby did not maintain records or accounts on those occasions when Miller or other patrons gave him cash at the commencement of a junket trip. Similarly, Zoby did not maintain records accounting for the gaming chip transfers to Miller or other junket participants which constituted the reimbursements of the cash previously received by Zoby.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

By way of briefs of law, the parties have set forth their respective legal arguments as it relates to the various issues to be resolved by this tribunal. The following is a summary of their respective legal positions.

RESPONDENT ZOBY'S POSITION

In support of his arguments, respondent Zoby relies upon affidavits submitted by various junket participants who patronized Zoby's junket tours to gamble at the Sands in Atlantic City.

At his Point I, Zoby refers to the Division's Counts I and V of its Complaint (The "Chip Transfer" counts) and observes that the Division alleges that Zoby's action violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and the regulatory provision at N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). Those pertinent sections are set forth as follows:

> N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a provides:
>
> a. Except as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee or any person licensed under this act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under this act, shall:
>
> (1) Cash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player; or
>
> (2) Release or discharge any debt, either in whole or in part, or make any loan which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without maintaining a written record thereof in accordance with the rules of the commission.
>
> N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a) provides:
>
> a. Except as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee, or any person licensed under the Casino Control Act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under the Casino Control Act, shall:
>
> (1) Cash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player; or
>
> (2) Release or discharge any debt which is uncollectible, either in whole or in part, which represents any losses incurred by any player in > gaming activity without maintaining a written record of the deposit, check return and collection efforts as required by N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.28 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.29; or

> (3) Make any loan which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without receiving from said player in exchange therefore, a check in the amount of said loan, which check shall conform with the Casino Control Act and these regulations.

Zoby asserts that neither by their respective terms nor their spirit, do the statute and regulation prohibit his conduct in this matter. More specifically, Zoby argues, in order to establish a violation of the statute or the regulation, the Division must demonstrate that: (1) a person licensed under the act (2) has provided a "loan," "credit" or "advance" (3) of "anything of value" (4) to "enable any person" (5) to take part in gaming activity as a player. Zoby argues that the critical focus of the pertinent inquiry is whether he has provided a "loan," "credit" or "advance" within the meaning of the statute and regulation by "giving" gaming chips to various junket participants.

Zoby contends that the Act lacks statutory definitions for the terms "loan," "advance" and "credit" which might give some special or technical meaning to the respective terms as they are utilized in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). Therefore, he argues, the basic rule of statutory construction should be applied here where the terms in a statute are not defined therein, they are to be given their ordinary, plain and generally accepted meaning. Levin v. Twp. of Parsippany-Troy Hills, 82 N.J. 174, 182 (1980). Accordingly, he observes that the word "credit" as it is ordinarily used, indicates the existence of some "unpaid balance" on the part of one party to another. Altshul v. Astor Coal Distributors, Inc., 125 N.J.L. 143, 145 (1940). Similarly, the term "loan," as defined by Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary (1980), means "a sum of money lent at interest." Closely akin in meaning is that ascribed to the term "advance" which, also defined by Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, means "a provision of something before a return is received." Zoby contends that these terms have analogous meanings which contemplate a period of forbearance on the part of the party providing the "something of value" to another prior to being repaid. He contends that simply stated, the statute N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a prohibits the act of lending to a patron "something of value" to enable him to gamble at a casino facility. (Emphasis in the brief).

Zoby argues that his encashment of counter checks issued on his casino credit account to obtain gaming chips "for" junket participants can hardly be characterized as either a "loan," "credit" or "advance" within the meaning of the statute or regulation. He contends that the Division bases its misplaced allegations on nothing more than a series of gaming chip exchanges between himself and some of his junket patrons. By focusing on this singular aspect of the transaction, he contends that the Division ignores that these transactions represent contemporaneous exchanges between Zoby and the respective junket participant.

Zoby argues that the undisputed facts demonstrate that he routinely held the gaming funds of some of his junket patrons. These monies would be returned to the junket participant upon request. He contends that a typical transaction occurred when a customer was involved in gaming play and requested reimbursement of his funds from Zoby. When Zoby lacked sufficient cash immediately on his person to return the junket patron's money, Zoby would draw down his own marker to reimburse the customer. A "gaming chip exchange" between Zoby and the junket participant, as cited by the Division, would thus result. Absent from the transaction, however, was any sort of forbearance on the part of Zoby prior to repayment suggestions of a "loan," "credit" or "advance" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). Zoby contends that he merely made an appropriate offset from the respective junket participant's cash which Zoby was holding, but which was not immediately available on Zoby's person at the moment of the request.

Zoby further contends that he routinely entered into gambling partnerships with junket patrons who were close friends of his to satisfy his penchant for gambling. Under such partnerships, their money was co-mingled in the form of cash and gaming chips. Zoby asserts that he passed gaming chips to his partners without the expectation of repayment other than a proportionate division of the winnings or losses resulting from the partnership. He declares that this passing of gaming chips to his partner or partners was not for the purpose of providing a "loan," "credit" or "advance" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a or N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a).

Zoby asserts that the Division's allegation that his conduct was in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) lacks substance. The statute and regulation provides as follows:

> N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b provides:
>
> b. No casino licensee or any person licensed under this act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under this act, may accept a check, other than a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent, from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player...
>
> N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) provides:
> b. No casino licensee or any person licensed under the Casino Control Act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under the Casino Control Act, may accept a check other than a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent, from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player, or may give cash or cash equivalents in exchange for such check unless the requirements of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.26, 19:45-1.27, 19:45-1.28, and 19:45-1.29 concerning check cashing, redeeming, consolidating, collecting and recording procedures are observed by the casino licensee and its employees and agents.

Zoby contends that for the Division to establish a violation of either N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b or N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) it must demonstrate that; (1) a person licensed under the Act (2) has encashed a check (3) from a person (4) to enable that person to participate in gaming activities. He asserts that his conduct would be violative of the applicable statute and regulation only if he cashed a check from one of his junket participants to enable that person to gamble. Here, Zoby argues, the conduct cited by the Division in Counts I and V of its Complaint pertains to the Sand's cashing of Zoby's counter checks drawn on his casino credit account, rather than Zoby's encashment of junket participant's checks. He contends that the Division has failed to set forth any statement of facts to indicate that Zoby cashed even a single check from any of his junket participants. Therefore, he asserts, the Division's allegations lack a most basic element required to establish a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b or N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b). Zoby argues that there are no genuine issues of the material facts, therefore, he is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

Zoby further argues that, as a matter of law, he is entitled to summary decision with regard to the allegation that he was in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a), because the Division has failed to demonstrate that his use of his casino credit account amounts to the providing of a "loan," "credit" or "advance" within the meaning of the statute and regulation.

At Point II in his brief, Zoby asserts that a summary decision should be entered in his favor as a matter of law for the reason that he never exercised any approval authority with regard to the issuance of casino credit by the Sands, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a and b. The Division alleges in Counts II and VI of it's complaint that Zoby's practice of utilizing his casino credit account to obtain gaming chips and provide same to his junket patrons, amounts to the exercise of authorizing the issuance of casino credit. The pertinent statute, N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) provides, in part, that:

>
> ...
> (2) Exercise approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of credit pursuant to section 101 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-101);

Zoby asserts that this tribunal must look to the basic rules of statutory construction for guidance in seeking the true import of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2). In so doing, this court must review the legislative history to ascertain the legislative intent of the statute. He contends that this portion of the Act is the product of the Legislature's deep concern for the possibility of "loan sharking" and other improprieties which might result if casino licensees were permitted to freely issue credit. Second Interim Report, New Jersey Governor's Staff Policy Group on Casino Gambling, p. 34-36 (1977). Accordingly, a system of check cashing by casino licensees, with deposit within a few days after patron presentation, was adopted as the form of credit which casino licensees may permissibly extend to patrons. N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and c. The authority to approve such credit was vested in a specific department of the casino licensee's business organization. Report and Recommendation On Casino Gambling by the Commission of Investigation of the State of New Jersey, 6E to 8E (1977). This limitation was suggested to the legislature in order to clearly fix responsibility for the issuance of credit. Id. at 8E. Consequently, the legislature promulgated N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) to address those concerns and remove, among others, junket representatives from the casino credit decisional process.

Zoby contends that N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) simply prohibits the participation of junket representatives in the decisions of casino licensees to either authorize or issue credit pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 b and c. Accordingly, Zoby argues, N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) is not concerned with whether a junket representative has extended credit on his own behalf to enable a person to gamble. A contrary finding would, he asserts, reduce the terms of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a to a legal nullity, contrary to a basic tenet of statutory construction. In other words, a finding that N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) prohibits identical conduct as in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a would render the prohibitions in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a mere surplusage in so far as the conduct of junket representative is concerned. Thus, the only rational interpretation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) is that its provisions are wholly unconcerned with whether a junket representative has extended credit on his own behalf to casino patrons since such conduct is fully regulated by N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a. Rather, N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) centers on whether a casino licensee, in extending credit to its patrons, has permitted a junket representative to exercise approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of casino credit on behalf of the casino licensee.

Zoby requests that summary decision be entered in his favor with respect to the allegations set forth in Counts II and VI and that the Division's complaint should be dismissed.

At Point III, Zoby contends the statutes and regulations cited by the Division in its allegations, as set forth in Count IV of its complaint, are inapplicable to Zoby's conduct with regard to his practice of maintaining junket participant Albert Miller's cash and providing Miller with gaming chips in return for the cash. The Division alleges that Zoby was in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c) and (g), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 with respect to this activity which, Zoby again contends, the canons of statutory construction should be applied (citations omitted).

Zoby argues that the Division has selectively taken particular provisions of the statute and regulations, as cited in Count IV, to artificially manufacture an alleged violation of the Act. In so doing, the Division commences this exercise by citing, out of context, a proviso within N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, which provides as follows:

> Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to preclude the establishment of an account by any person with a casino licensee by a deposit of cash or recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent, or to preclude the withdrawal either in whole or in part, of any amount contained in such account.

Zoby observes that the Division asks this tribunal to incorrectly believe that his conduct, in accepting Miller's gaming monies, is violative of this proviso. Zoby asserts that a reading of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b in its entirety, however, produces a more rational construction.

Zoby refers to his discussion in Point II where he observed that the legislature was concerned with possible abuses resulting from casino licensees freely granting credit when it established a scheme of regulation for the casino industry. The provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 are a direct product of the legislature's concern. As pertinent here, the legislature set forth, within the operative language of subsection b of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, strict requirements for the encashment of checks by casino licensees and other persons licensed under the Act. Recognizing that broad statutory enactments are susceptible to sweeping interpretations beyond which even the legislature had intended, Zoby contends that the proviso found in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b was inserted to clarify the scope and meaning of the operative language of the statute. He argues that the proviso makes expressly clear that the terms of this statute are in no manner intended to prohibit the establishment of front money deposit accounts by casino patrons. The conduct of junket representatives is simply not implicated. Ignoring this rational and sensible construction of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, he asserts, the Division further cites equally inapplicable authorities in its futile attempt to find support for its groundless allegations.

By way of example, Zoby points to the Division's citation of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(g), and maintains that the Division's reliance thereon is misplaced. He claims that the conduct of licensed junket representatives is not within the contemplation of the regulatory mandate of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11, which is entitled "Casino Licensees Organization" and is directed solely at the functional structure of a casino licensee's business organization and the activities regulated by its provisions. Respondent sets forth a litany of the regulatory subsections, in summary form, which shall not be recited here.

Zoby argues that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11 lacks even a single reference, either express or implied, to licensed junket representatives and is at a loss as to how the regulation is applicable to his conduct. He contends that he is a licensed junket representative, not a casino licensee to which the regulation is directed.

Zoby contends that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11 neither requires him, as a licensed junket representative, to institute a "system of internal controls", establish certain departments within his junket enterprise, institute training programs, nor do any of the other acts required of casino licensees. In this light, the Division's attempt to take N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(g) completely out of context to selectively apply its terms to Zoby's conduct becomes abundantly clear. More pointedly, subsection (g) provides as follows:

> Functions described in this section shall be performed only by persons bearing the particular title and licensed to the particular position, or persons licensed to supervise that particular position appropriate to such functions, under the Casino Control Act.

Zoby maintains that the Division has conveniently ignored the fact that the term "functions" found within subsection (g) exclusively relates to the organizational structure of casino licensees, not junket representatives. Similarly, the terms of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15, also incorrectly cited by Division, deal solely with the operation of a casino licensee's cashier cage, rather than the conduct of junket representatives.

Zoby argues that a summary decision in his favor with respect to Count IV pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 is fully warranted. The fact Zoby maintained custody of cash given to him by junket participant Albert Miller to be returned to him, in various increments, by providing Miller with gaming chips at the Sands' gaming tables is not in dispute. Thus, this matter lacks any genuine issue as to any material fact. The only question presented is whether, as a matter of law, certain provisions of N.J.A.C. 5:12-101b, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 may permissibly be taken out of the legislative context in which they were intended and applied to Zoby's conduct. This question, he contends, is most properly answered in the negative.

The Sand's Position

At its first point, the Sands contends that no cause of action exists under the "chip transfer" counts.

Respondent Sands observes that the Division's complaint, Counts I and V allege that Zoby would draw down on his own casino credit account and then transfer the chips received therefrom to another, who used such chips for the purpose of engaging in gaming. Based upon these allegations, the Division further alleges that the Sands is both substantively liable, essentially because it knew of these actions by Zoby and did not stop them, and vicariously liable for the actions of Zoby. The Sands maintains that no cause of action has been made out by the Division here and, hence, no liability can flow from either of the Division's theories against the Sands.

The Sands submits that the lynchpin used by the Division in asserting that Zoby's actions were unlawful is three-fold: (1) section 101 of the Act; (2) the regulations N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25, governing counter check issuance which are in para materia with the provisions of section 101 of the Act; and, (3) the regulations, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27, which implement section 101 of the Act concerning the issuance of casino credit. The Sands argues that the statutory and regulatory provisions stand for propositions different from those advanced by the Division.

The Sands observes that Zoby maintained his own credit account with the Sands and, just as with any other patron who maintained a casino credit account, it was powerless to determine what a credit player will do with the funds drawn from a casino credit account once the patron draws the funds. By way of illustration, the Sands asserts that it has no authority to prevent a patron from using sums drawn from his casino credit account to tip a casino employee, i.e., a cocktail waitress.

Further, that there would be no violation of the Act, as alleged by the Division, where a patron draws down on his casino credit account and then passes the chips to his wife for play.

The Sands, in anticipation of the Division's response to its illustrations, suggests that the Division will contend that (1) Zoby is a person licensed under the Act, therefore, a different set of rules are to be applied to him and, (2) Zoby drew upon his credit account for patrons who had either been denied credit at the Sands or had their credit lines suspended by the Sands. The Sands claims that it would still not be a violation of the Act if Zoby were to draw down on his casino credit account and give his wife chips for play in the event that Zoby's wife had been denied credit or had her credit line been suspended at the Sands at the time of this transaction.

The Sands submits that nothing in Counts I and V of the Division's complaint even leads to the inference that Zoby's actions constituted anything which resembles the unlawful issuance of casino credit. In the absence of any allegation by the Division that Zoby drew down on his casino credit account with the intent to circumvent or subvert the Act and regulations, many different or innocent scenarios could provide a basis for Zoby's actions; i.e., he could have been "holding" a patrons funds or he could have been "partners" with a patron, given the fact that Zoby is not prohibited from engaging in gaming activity.

The fact that the Sands casino employees noted on player rating slips that Zoby "passed" gaming chips to a patron is proof of nothing more than that the "chip transfer" occurred. The rating slips, moreover, shed no light on what the provenance of funds represented by the chips might have been. Consequently, the Sands argues, the Division's allegations that the Sands is substantively liable under Counts I and IV of the complaint must fail for two separate reasons: First, the actions complained of are not unlawful and; second, the allegations regarding the Sands' knowledge of Zoby's actions are proof of nothing more than that the transfers were observed and recorded.

The Sands, as all other casino hotels in Atlantic City, maintains a player rating system, the purpose of which is to gauge a patron's play for marketing and credit issuance purposes. In the event Zoby were to draw down on his casino credit line and not place the funds into play, the system would show funds being drawn but no gaming action occurring. Under such circumstances, the Sands would re-examine the credit account to determine whether the patron was merely using his casino credit account as a source of no-interest loans. By noting Zoby's transfers, it became clear that this was not the case and that the funds were being placed into play, albeit, not by Zoby who drew the funds.

The Sands argues that since the acts performed by Zoby were not unlawful and since it could not stop Zoby from dispensing his chips once he acquired them, no substantive liability can flow to the Sands. By the same token, it contends, no vicarious liability can flow to it even if Zoby's actions were unlawful.

The Sands asserts that N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 g. and h. were enacted by the Legislature as a consequence of the Second Interim Report of the New Jersey Governor's Staff Policy Group on Casino Gambling (Second Interim Report) at 37-39, where it was recommended, at 38, that:

> Junket operators, who will be representing a reconstructed Atlantic City to potential visitors around the world, should be subject to the same licensing standards applied to other casino employees, and indeed, should be legally considered the casino's agent. State authorities must be authorized to require disclosure of the terms of the junket operator's employment and the terms of each proposed junket. A violation of the rules on disclosure or conduct of junkets should subject the operator (or casino licensee) to an order of restitution or possible license suspension or revocation. (emphasis supplied)

The subsections of the Act, i.e, sections 102 g. and h. provide as follows:

> g. A casino licensee shall be responsible for the conduct of any junket representative or junket enterprise associated with it and for the terms and conditions of any junket engaged in on its premises, regardless of the fact that the junket may involve persons not employed by such a casino licensee.
>
> h. A casino licensee shall be responsible for any violation or deviation from the terms of a junket. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this act, the commission may, after hearings in accordance with this act, order restitution to junket participants, assess penalties for such violations or deviations, prohibit future junkets by the casino licensee, junket enterprise > or junket representative, and order such further relief as it deems appropriate.

> ....

The Sands asserts that section 102 g. of the Act was enacted to insure that "[J]unket operators .... be legally considered the casino's agent." Second Interim Report at 38. Consequently, the Sands argues, the full panoply of agency law applies to the statutorily defined relationship between a casino licensee and a junket representative. It contends, therefore, that in order for the principal [casino] to be vicariously liable for the acts of the agent [junket representative], such acts must be performed by the agent in the course and scope of his agency. It observes that our Supreme Court adopted the definitions of agency as set forth at 1 Restatement, Agency 2d, section 228 at 504 (1958) in the matter of Comm'l Union Ins. Co. v. Burt Thomas-Aitken Const. Co., 49 N.J. 389, f.n. at 392 (1967), [1] which states as follows:

> (1) Conduct of a servant is within the scope of employment if, but only if:
>
> (a) it is of the kind he is employed to perform;
>
> (b) it occurs substantially within the authorized time and space limits;
>
> (c) it is actuated, at least in part, by a purpose to serve the master; and
>
> (d) if force is intentionally used by the servant against another, the use is not unexpectable by the master.
> (2) Conduct of a servant is not within the scope of employment if it is different in kind from that authorized, far beyond the authorized time or space limits, or too little actuated by a purpose to serve the master.

1. It is noted here that the Supreme Court in Burt Thomas did not adopt the definitions of agency as set forth above and as found in its footnote at 392. Rather, the Court recited the Appellant Division's reliance upon the Restatement definitions in reaching its conclusions, 91 N.J. Super. 13, 16 (App. Div. 1966), wherein the Appellant Court reversed the trial court's entry of summary judgment. 87 N.J. Super. 287 (Law Div. 1965). It is further noted that the Supreme Court reversed the Appellate Division and affirmed the trial court's summary judgment, subject to leave to plaintiff to file an amended complaint as provided by the Court's discussion. (49 N.J. 389, 396).

The Sands argues, among other things, that Zoby did not act as its agent by engaging in "chip transfers." In order for vicarious liability to flow to the Sands, there must be a finding that Zoby's acts were in the course and scope of Zoby's agency to perform the alleged illegal acts.

The Sands contends that the Act and its regulatory enforcement provisions must be considered penal in nature. Therefore, since the federal courts have been at the vanguard of determining the extent of corporate criminal liability on agency principals, the Sands suggests that a review of the standards would be instructive. It notes that a corporation will be held criminally liable for the acts of its agents if those acts were performed within the course and scope of the agency or within his/her apparent authority. United States v. American Radiator & Standard Corp., 433 F. 2d. 174, 204 (3d Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 401 U.S. 948 (1971); United States v. Armour & Co., 168 F. 2d 342, 344 (3d Cir. 1948). Acts within the course and scope of the agency are acts which are directly related to the performance of the type of duties the agent has general authority to perform and which are motivated by an intent to benefit the corporation. See: United States v. American Radiator & Standard, supra. at 204-205; see also: United States v. Gold, 743 F. 2d. 800, 823 (11th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 1217 (1985). The Sands asserts that since these standards are identical to those as set forth by the New Jersey Supreme Court for the imposition of vicarious liability, those standards apply to the instant matter which requires a finding that, if Zoby's actions were unlawful, then, by definition, it cannot be vicariously liable.

At its second point, the Sands claims that no cause of action exists under the "credit issuance" Counts II and VI. In sum, the Sands relies upon its position and arguments set forth before with respect to Counts I and V to assert that no liability can flow to it as a result of Zoby's acts which were not unlawful. It argues that even if Zoby's acts were unlawful, the Sands cannot be held vicariously liable on agency principles inasmuch as the very unlawfulness of the actions take them beyond the proper course and scope of Zoby's agency as a junket representative of the Sands.

Similarly, the Sands asserts that no cause of action exists under the "check cashing" Count III. The Division's complaint alleges that, at various times, Zoby cashed a series of personal and/or business checks for the late Albert Miller, a Sands gaming patron. Zoby knew that the proceeds of his check cashing would be used by Miller for the purpose of gaming at the Sands. Based upon these facts, the Division alleges that Zoby violated the credit issuance provisions of the Act and the check cashing regulations and, therefore, the Sands is vicariously liable for Zoby's acts. The Sands maintains that common sense and reason constitutes the underlying purpose of the restrictions in the Act and regulations governing the cashing of checks. It cites the Second Interim Report where it was recommended at p. 36 that, "...employees of the casino/hotel are prohibited from personally cashing patron's checks." It argues that the genesis of the prohibitions set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 lies not in the blanket prohibition the Division seeks to impose here but, rather, on prohibition based on reason.

The Sands argues, among other things, that the time frame with which the Division seeks to impose vicarious liability on the Sands fails to set forth the places and dates of the alleged encashment of the checks. It contends that none of the checks cashed were cashed on the Sands premises or as part of a junket organized and conducted by Zoby. Too the contrary, the Sands claims that such encashments occurred away from the Sands and separate and apart from the junket proper. Therefore, it argues, even assuming any impropriety on the part of Zoby, vicarious liability cannot be imposed on the Sands.

In its fourth point, the Sands maintains that no cause of action exists with respect to Zoby's "cash holding" of Miller's cash and at Miller's request. There is no dispute that Zoby did hold Miller's cash and did dole out cash or chips to Miller in order for Miller to continue his play at the Sands. Based upon these facts, the Sands observes, the Division alleges that Zoby; (1) violated the cash deposit account provisions of the Act and regulations, (2) violated the segmentation of duties provisions of the regulations, and (3) the Sands is vicariously liable for Zoby's acts. The Sands argues, among other things, that the Division fails to point to any one or more of the provisions in the Act or regulations which state that a junket representative is barred from holding a patron's funds.

The Sands contends that when N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b is properly read, this section of the statute acts as a grant of authority to a casino licensee to authorize the creation of cash accounts in addition to credit accounts. It argues that there is nothing in that section of the statute or any other provisions of the Act which prohibits one person from holding funds for another gratuitously. The Sands argues further, as it did earlier, that it cannot be held vicariously liable for Zoby's acts if they are determined to be unlawful, because such acts would take themselves out of the ambit of the agency, thereby rendering the principal immune.

In conclusion, the Sands requests that the Division's complaints against it be dismissed with prejudice or, in the alternative, that summary disposition be entered in its favor.

THE DIVISION'S POSITION

The Division asserts that Zoby's advancement of gaming chips to junket participants at the gaming tables of the Sands with the use of his approved casino credit account violates N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27. It asserts that the conduct of Zoby with respect to Counts I and V are undisputed. It contends that respondent Zoby admits that he engaged in "gaming chip transfers" and that the Division has identified 62 such transfers over a period of 4 years. Further, respondent Zoby admits that the "gaming chip transfers" occurred at the gaming tables at the Sands and occurred as a result of Zoby's cashing counter checks at those gaming tables utilizing his own personal casino credit account to obtain the gaming chips. Zoby admits that the "gaming chip transfers" occurred for the express purpose of providing gaming chips to his junket participants so that said junket participants could engage in gaming activities at the gaming tables at the Sands. In some, if not all instances, the gaming chips were passed to the junket participants so that they could continue to gamble uninterrupted without any "delays" that could have been occasioned had the patrons been withdrawing their own credit or cash deposit funds.

It is further undisputed that Zoby is an individual who is licensed under the Act. The license that Zoby holds is a casino employee license issued by the Commission pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90 with an endorsement as a junket representative. The recipients of the gaming chips obtained from respondent Zoby through the use of his casino credit account were all participants on Zoby's junkets and they were present at the Sands pursuant to specifically identified junkets.

The Division asserts that liability on Counts I and V of its Amended Complaint focuses on the proper scope and meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 a(1), which states:

> Except as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee or any person licensed under this Act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or any person licensed under this Act, shall:
> (1) Cash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any player to take part in gaming activity as a player;

The Division observes that provisions of a statute or regulation are to be read in pari materia and interpreted harmoniously to effectuate Legislative intent. It is a declared policy of this State that the public confidence and trust and the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations is to be preserved. N.J.S.A 5:12-1b(6). Toward that end, the legislature declared that "... the regulatory provisions of this Act are designed to extend strict State regulation of all persons, locations, practices and associations related to the operation of licensed casino enterprises and all related service industries as herein provided." (emphasis supplied). Id. To effectuate that declared public policy, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) establishes a broad prohibition against any credit related conduct engaged by licensees, either casino licensees or individual licensees, that does not occur within a specifically enumerated exceptions controlled by the requirements contained in the Act or Commission regulations.

The Division submits that "gaming chip transfers" between two individuals at the gaming tables of a licensed casino in Atlantic City constitutes unlawful credit or advance of something of value or which represents value when the transferor of the gaming chips holds the special status of the person licensed under the Act and is acting on behalf of a casino licensee in the capacity of a junket representative. The broad prohibitory language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a (1) applies to the situation where, as here, the licensed junket representative transfers gaming chips to other persons through the cashing of counter checks on the junket representative's casino credit account.

The Division contends that the conduct of Zoby in the instant matter completely distorts the proper operation and control of legalized gaming. An integral part of the operation and control of casino operations is the exchange of gaming chips with patrons at the gaming tables. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.20 controls those situations where patrons may obtain gaming chips at the gaming tables from employees or agents of the casino licensee in order to gamble. Said regulation does not include a patron obtaining gaming chips from a licensed junket representative under any circumstances. Rather, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.20(a) provides that a patron may obtain gaming chips at the gaming tables "(i) n exchange for cash, or issuance copies of Counter Checks presented by casino patrons in conformity with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.18 and 1.25."

The Division maintains that under no circumstances are licensed junket representatives an authorized source for obtaining gaming chips for casino play at the gaming tables of the casino licensee.

The Division asserts that the explanations provided by respondent Zoby to misgauge his conduct do not alter the legal analysis nor do they obviate culpability for his conduct. Zoby provides two explanations for the "gaming chip transfers", i.e., (1) that the gaming chip transfers occurred in order for Zoby to reimburse or refund cash previously given to him and hold by junket participants, (2) that the "gaming chips transfers" occurred in order to pool resources with other junket participants with whom Zoby engaged in a "gambling partnership" to satisfy his penchant for gambling. Respondent Zoby's position that both factual matters where "gaming chip transfers" occur are lawful and appropriate are premised on two representations: First, that the "gaming chip transfers" described in either matter did not consist of a "loan," "credit," or "advance" of anything of value or which represents value if there is no obligation to repay on the part of the junket participant and there is no act of forbearance on the part of Zoby; and second, that the "gaming chip transfers" did not include the acceptance of checks by Zoby from any of the junket participants.

The Division observes that the legal conclusion drawn by Zoby is arrived at by application of the statutory rule of construction that where words or terms are not defined in the statute they should be accorded their plain meaning. Respondent Zoby's application of the plain meaning rule to the words "loan," "credit," and

"advance" result in his conclusion that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) precludes only lending relationships where there is a duty to repay a debt on the part of a borrower to the lender. Zoby's application of the plain meaning rule ignores the overall regulatory framework established to extend strict State regulation to all aspects of casino operations. The plain meaning rule, like all rules of statutory construction, is to be used only as a guide. Courts are often cautioned that such rules are only aids in construction and are not rules of law. Allstate Insurance Company v. Malec, 104 N.J. 1(1986). Courts are not to permit the intent of the Legislature to be subverted by language which, read literally, would appear to contravene that which the legislature actually intended. In the Matter of Boardwalk Regency, 108 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981), Aff. and Mod. 90 N.J. 361 (1982), (App. Dism.) 459 U.S. 1081(1982). The Court in Boardwalk Regency, citing Continental Cas. Co. v. Knuckles, 142 N.J. Super. 162 (App. Div.) 1976, stated:

> First the attention should go to the purpose of the legislation. "Where a literal rendering will lead to a result not in accord with the essential purpose and design of the act, the spirit of the law will control the letter." N.J Builders Etc., Ass'n. v. Blair, 60 N.J. 330, 338 (1972). It cannot be better put than by Justice Heher in San-Lan Builders, Inc. v. Baxendale, 28 N.J. 148, 155 (1958). 'Reason is the sole of law.' [at 167]. [180 N.J. Super. at 343-344].

The Division asserts that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) is intended to be a broad prohibitory clause. It precludes a person licensed under the Act from cashing a check, making any loan, or otherwise providing or allowing any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any person to take part in gaming activities as a player. The language of the statute includes not only lending relationships where there is an obligation to repay but also credit transactions that do not involve a "repayment" obligation. For example, respondent Zoby relies on a judicial definition of the term "credit" that narrowly circumscribes its scope. The Division contends that in fact, the term "credit" is defined quite broadly and includes reimbursement situations as well as lending relationships. The Random House College Dictionary revised edition (1980), includes the following definition of the word "credit": "Any deposit or sum of money against which a person may draw."

Furthermore, the Division contends, the definition of "advance" from Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, copyright 1980, includes "a provision of something before a return is received." Respondent Zoby's own description of his gaming chip transfer activity fits squarely within the plain meaning of the terms "credit" and "advance" as defined in the dictionary. Respondent Zoby provides or allows his junket participants to establish "credit" or an "advance" with him by accepting the cash deposits and then effectuates draws against those deposits by returning gaming chips at the gaming tables to the patrons. As discussed by the Division in its brief but not recited here, the legislative history and the essential purposes and design of the Act, precludes such "credit" in the form of gaming chip transfers at the gaming tables of a licensed casino when the transferor of the gaming chips holds a special status of a person licensed under the Act and is acting on behalf of the casino licensee in the capacity of a junket representative.

The Division asserts that the legislative history of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and 102 supports its position that a junket representative may not provide gaming chips to junket participants through the use of the junket representatives personal credit account at the casino. Therein, the Division observes two aspects of casino operations in Atlantic City that bear the strictest of regulation is casino credit and junket activity. The means by which the legislature sought to impose strict control over junket activity, as it relates to the issue of casino credit, is two fold. First, the legislature adopted a check cashing system of credit rather than the Nevada "marker" system. (The Nevada "marker" system of credit was premised on a gentlemen's agreement to create an "IOU" between the casino and the patron). (See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b). Second, the Legislature chose to statutorily bar junket representatives from participating in any aspect of the credit approval or credit issuance process (See N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2)).

The means by which the Legislature sought to accomplish the goal of strict control over casino credit was to specify, through detailed and uniform procedures, all facets of the credit process, including the actual issuance of the credit at the gaming tables in the form of gaming chips. See: N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.20(a) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a). Implementation of an approved credit line is effectuated by the execution of a properly prepared counter check which is a negotiable instrument signed by the patron payable to the casino licensee, and drawn on the patron's verified personal checking account. A counter check fully executed at the time of the patron's signature which occurs immediately prior to the patron's receipt of an equal value of gaming chips.

The clear legislative import regarding casino credit, junket activity, and the interplay between the two mandates strict relationships of the conduct of licensed junket representatives. To accomplish this legislative mandate, all conduct of a junket representative related to gaming must fall within the purview of the Commission's oversight. To suppose that a licensed junket representative can act as the source of gaming chips at the gaming tables for his junket participants under any circumstances undermines the legislative goal in New Jersey to strictly control and monitor all credit and junket activity. Therefore, the prohibitory language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) must be given its broadest possible interpretation such that even arguably impermissible conduct must be precluded, unless otherwise expressly provided for by the Act or regulations.

The Division contends that a "gambling partnership" arrangement, even if lawful between two private individuals, does not authorize junket representatives to advance gaming chips to junket participants. Notwithstanding Zoby's explanation, in part, that his "gaming chip transfer" activity was a mechanism whereby he satisfied his penchant for gambling by pooling the resources of junket participants who Zoby represents he engaged in a "gambling partnership", such activity is not expressly authorized under the Act. N.J.S.A. 5:12-100n permits a junket representative "to wager at any game in any casino in this State." The Division submits, however, that such section 100n of the Act does not authorize a junket representative to "gamble" vicariously through his junket participants in a so-called "gambling partnership " arrangement. This is especially evident when consideration is given the language of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b authorizes a casino licensee to accept a check "from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player." When Zoby executes a counter check at the gaming tables at the Sands and the Sands accepts such checks for gaming chips, the intent of the statute which authorizes such "credit" is to enable Zoby individually to take part in gaming activity as a player - not to enable his junket participants to do so whether in the context of a "gaming partnership" or otherwise.

A recent case, relevant as to its reasoning, is Gottlob v. Lopez, 205 N.J. Super. 417(App. Div. 1985). cert. den. 104 N.J. 373 (1986), wherein the Appellant Division upheld the validity of a gambling debt of two private individuals. The parties to that action appear to have engaged in some type of "gambling partnership" and involved the passing of gaming chips from one person to another.

More specifically, Retta Gottlob executed a counter check at a gaming table of the Tropicana. After signing the counter check the dealer provided gaming chips of equal value. In total, $5,500 in gaming chips were obtained by Ms. Gottlob on her approved casino credit account at the Tropicana were given by her to Norma Lopez to enable Ms. Lopez to engage in gaming activity as a player. The issue presented in Gottlob v. Lopez, supra., was whether N.J.S.A. 5:12-101f rendered the debt owed by Ms. Lopez to Ms. Gottlob unenforceable since Ms. Gottlob admittedly did not issue such credit in accordance with N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and the Commission regulations. The Court recognized that N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 was enacted to maintain public confidence and trust in the integrity of casino gambling, (N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b(6)) by making unforceable unregulated loans made between casino operators and gamblers. 205 N.J. Super. at 420. The Court concluded "the Casino Control Act does not purport to regulate the extension of non-licensees to gamblers." Id. Accordingly, the private chip passing arrangement between Ms. Gottlob and Ms. Lopez under circumstances not involving the casino licensee or any other person licensed under the Act, was held not to be governed by the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101.

In the instant matter, on the other hand, the "gambling partnerships" described in the affidavits submitted in support of respondent Zoby's Motion for Summary Decision do involve a licensee. It is undisputed that Zoby is a person licensed under the Act as a junket representative. By applying the rationale advocated at Gottlob v. Lopez, supra. , the obligations and responsibilities intendant to the issuance of credit and the practices and procedures regarding check cashing for gaming purposes pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 do regulate the conduct of respondent Zoby. The process by which Zoby provided his "gambling partners" with gaming chips occurred in violation of the statutory regulatory mandates of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and Commission regulations. The authority of a junket representative "to wager at the gaming tables" vested by N.J.S.A. 5:12-101n does not constitute a grant of authority to a junket representative to set himself up as a source of gaming chips for his junket participants.

The Division argues, therefore, that a "gambling partnership" arrangement, even if lawful between two private individuals, does not authorize a licensed junket representative to advance gaming chips to junket participants without complying with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and Commission regulations.

As a consequence of Zoby's "gaming chip transfers" the Division alleges that the Sands was in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 AND N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 by failing to take any action to stop or prevent Zoby from utilizing his personal casino credit account at the Sands and provide gaming chips to various junket participants at the gaming tables where the counter checks were issued by Zoby. The Division contends that the Sands is substantively liable for these violations and rejects its defense that it was powerless to determine what a credit player will do with funds drawn from a casino credit account once the patron draws the funds.

The Division observes that the Sands admits that the gaming chip transfers were observed and recorded by its games supervisory personnel at the gaming tables and that there were prepared player rating cards with respect thereto.The Division further observes that the Sands attempts to absolve itself from substantive liability by simply stating the conduct of Zoby was not unlawful. The Sands contends that its inaction in not taking steps to stop or prevent a known junket representative from acting as a source of gaming chips for junket participants was justified and not a basis for corporate liability.

The Division does not accept the proposition that the Sands could not have stopped Zoby from dispensing his gaming chips once he acquired them. Over the four year period that this activity occurred, it is incredulous to suppose that Zoby could not have been instructed or counseled by the Sands management that acting as a source for gaming chips at the gaming tables for his junket participants was not in accord with the Act and the Commission regulations. If the Sands had any doubt about the lawfulness of Mr. Zoby's conduct, witnessed and facilitated by its own supervisory personnel at the gaming tables, then it had an affirmative responsibility to make an appropriate inquiry with the regulatory authorities or to submit appropriate changes to its internal control submission to reflect the conduct of its agent at the gaming tables. No such inquiry or submission was made for the obvious reason that the Sands was benefiting from its feigned ignorance or powerlessness.

The Division, therefore, requests that this tribunal find respondent Sands directly liable for the conduct of junket representative Ronald Zoby regarding Zoby's gaming chip transfers at the gaming tables to various junket participants which were witnessed, facilitated and permitted by Sands games supervisory personnel.

At Point II of its argument, the Division asserts that the passing of gaming chips by Zoby, a licensed junket representative, to various participants constitutes exercising approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of credit in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2). Counts II and VI of the Division's Amended Complaint raises N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2) as the legal basis for liability against Zoby. Despite, and notwithstanding, the authorization to accept checks for gambling under the exceptions of the general rule, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a, certain specified entities and individuals have been expressly barred from engaging in any aspect of the credit approval or credit issuance process. One such class of entities and individuals statutorily barred from any aspect of the credit approval or credit issuance process is junket enterprises and junket representatives. N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 l.(2) provides:

> (2) exercise approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of credit pursuant to section 101 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-101).

The Division observes that it is neither disputed nor contested that on at least 62 occasions over a four year period Zoby provided to various junket participants gaming chips at the gaming tables for the express purpose of enabling said persons to take part in gaming activity as players. It asserts that by this activity, Zoby was exercising approval authority with regard to the authorization of casino credit as well as approval authority with regard to the issuance of casino credit. Through the subterfuge of processing counterchecks on his own approved casino credit account, Zoby was able to funnel gaming chips to several persons who had been denied casino credit, to one person who had suspended credit privileges, and to several other persons who did not possess an approved casino credit account on their own behalf.

The Division maintains that the seriousness of the credit abuse practices evidenced by the conduct of Zoby is illustrated not only by the expressed legislative prohibition cited above which bars any involvement of a junket enterprise or junket representative in the credit authorization or credit issuance process, but by the entire regulatory framework pertaining to casino credit. The credit process is specific to a particular intended beneficiary - the patron who has applied for casino credit. It is that specific individual who has provided extensive personal and banking information to the casino [N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27(a) & (b)], who has had that information verified by the casino [N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27(c) & (b)], and who had obtained an approved credit account [N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27(f)].

The credit relationship is unique to the specific credit applicant. This is evident by the interplay between the various subsections of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101. Since subsection a. is worded in the negative, it is clear that, except within the limits of any statutorily described exception, the described activity is unlawful. The statutory exception provided by subsection b. states:

> No casino licensee or any other person licensed under this Act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under this Act, may accept a check, other than a recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent, from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player, or may give cash or cash equivalents in exchange for such check.... (emphasis added).

The remaining provisions of subsection b. provide the technical requirements for cashing counterchecks, including N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b(4) which requires that "(t)he regulations concerning check cashing procedures are observed by the casino licensee and its employees and agents." Thus, it is clear that the legislature intended no check cashing procedures be implemented unless the purpose was "to enable such persons to take part in the gaming activity as a player." (emphasis supplied). For these reasons the Division requests that this tribunal find judgment of liability on the undisputed facts of Counts II and VI of the Division's Amended Complaint for violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2).

At Point III of its brief and argument, the Division asserts that Zoby violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 by cashing personal and business checks of Albert Miller, which checks did not conform to the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25. In Count III of the Division's Amended Complaint it seeks judgment that respondent Zoby violated the above statute and administrative regulation by cashing personal and business checks of junket participant Albert Miller on numerous occasions between November 1983 and the time of Mr. Miller's death in September 1986. The purpose of cashing such checks was to provide Albert Miller with cash so that he could repay casino gaming loans he had incurred with other junket participants, which loans had enabled Albert Miller to gamble beyond his immediate cash resources and beyond the funds that he had entrusted with respondent Zoby.

The Division asserts that Zoby knew that Albert Miller would borrow money from other junket participants when his own resources were exhausted from gaming activities during the course of the junket. At or about the time that the junket was to return to Virginia, Albert Miller would prepare a personal or business check payable to either cash or Ronald Zoby. The check would be presented to Zoby who would accept the check and provide cash to Miller. Mr. Miller would then distribute the cash to the various other junket participants who had loaned him money to gamble.

The Division contends that Zoby's check cashing practices for gaming patron Albert Miller presents a clear circumvention of the expressed language of the Act and Commission regulations as well as the purposes underlying those controls. Several statutory and regulatory provisions preclude junket representative Zoby from cashing a patron's checks for gambling purposes. N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)1 state that: "no...person licensed under this Act...shall...(c)ash any check ... to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player..." unless otherwise provided in section 101 of the Act. (emphasis supplied). N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(b) then provide the exception to the general rule which states that: "no... person licensed under this Act ... may accept a check ... from any person to enable such person to take part in gaming activity as a player, or may give cash or cash equivalents in exchange for such check ..." unless the requirements of subsection b (1) through b (4) are complied with (emphasis supplied).

The Division asserts that the cashing of Albert Miller's personal and business checks occurred after he was engaged in gaming activity and incurred gaming losses. Further legal support for the unlawfulness of Zoby's check cashing activity is found in the regulation N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)3, which states:

> (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, no casino licensee, or any person licensed under the Casino Control Act, and no person acting on behalf of or under any arrangement with a casino licensee or other person licensed under the Casino Control Act, shall:
> 3. Make any loan which represents any losses incurred by any player in gaming activity without receiving from said player in exchange therefore, a check in the amount of said loan, which check shall conform with the Casino Control Act and these regulations (emphasis supplied).

The Division observes that Zoby admits that he cashed at least 18 personal and business for Albert Miller and he was fully aware that these checks represented losses Mr. Miller had incurred at the gaming tables at the Sands from funds he had borrowed from other junket participants. Despite Zoby's statement that he never "loaned" money to Albert Miller, the acceptance of the 18 checks in exchange for cash constituted loans to Albert Miller. Mr. Zoby's payment of cash to Albert Miller in exchange for Mr. Miller's checks constituted a loan as that term is used in N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)3. The loan lasted for the period of time of the acceptance of the check until Albert Miller's bank or the Delmar Company's bank paid Zoby on the instrument upon presentation. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)3 squarely addressed the "after the fact" situation where a person licensed under the Act, cashes checks for a player which represent gambling losses already incurred.

The personal and business checks accepted by respondent Zoby from patron Albert Miller did not conform with the Act and Commission regulations so the acceptance by Zoby violated N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(a)3. The checks were not made payable to the casino licensee as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b(1) and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(c)3, they were not processed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25(c) and (b), and they were not accepted at the cashiers cage as required by N..J.A.C. 19:45-1.13 and 1.25. Under such circumstances, the Division contends, Zoby could not lawfully accept from a junket participant personal or business checks for the purpose of cashing such checks to enable the patron to repay previous loans obtained for the purpose of engaging in gaming activity as a player. The Division maintains, therefore, that liability should be found against respondent Zoby for 18 violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25.

At Point IV of its brief the Division cites its Count IV Amended Complaint wherein it seeks judgment against junket representative Ronald Zoby for performing the functions of a general cashier with respect to the receipt of funds from Albert Miller for safe keeping deposit purposes, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and Commission regulations. The facts of Count IV are also not in dispute. Mr. Zoby has represented that he regularly received cash given to him by Albert Miller at the beginning of the various junkets organized and coordinated by Zoby to which Miller was a junket participant. Mr. Zoby further represents that he maintained custody of the cash given to him by Albert Miller and periodically returned the funds to Miller in various increments by transferring gaming chips obtained by Zoby through his credit account to Miller while at the gaming tables. Mr. Zoby further represents that this "service" was provided to Miller as was such service accorded to other junket participants namely; Will Walker and Willard Edwards. To refund the cash received from the gaming patrons at the commencement of the junket trip, Zoby admits that he utilized his approved casino credit account at the Sands to obtain gaming chips to give to the patrons as the reimbursements for the funds previously received.

The Division submits that a licensed junket representative may not lawfully act as the custodian of a gaming patron's funds held by the junket representative for the subsequent use of the gaming patron at a licensed casino in Atlantic City. The legal analysis pertinent to Count IV of the Division's Amended Complaint begins with N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, which states in pertinent part:

> Nothing in this subsection shall be deemed to preclude the establishment of an account by any person with a casino licensee by a deposit of cash or recognized traveler's check or other cash equivalent, or to preclude the withdrawal, either in whole, or in part, of any amount contained in such account.

The Division observes that Zoby argues that the above cited portion of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b regarding the establishment of patron cash deposit accounts by casino patrons is inapplicable to his conduct. Mr. Zoby states that the "conduct of junket representatives is simply not implicated" in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b. (Zoby brief, at 21). On the contrary the Division argues, the undisputed conduct of respondent Zoby in accepting cash deposits for subsequent gaming activity by junket patrons is implicated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b by the absence of any reference to persons or entities other than "casino licensees." Stated differently, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and Commission regulations at N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11 and 1.15 establish exclusive authority in the casino licensees to receive cash deposits from patrons or subsequent use at the gaming tables and to refund such deposits.

The Division contends that had the legislature intended to permit junket representatives to hold patron cash deposits and to return the funds at the gaming tables in the form of gaming chips, it would have expressly included it in the relevant portion of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b after "casino licensee" express mention of junket representatives or other persons licensed under the Act. Limiting the exception of permitting the deposit of cash by any person with a casino license is consistent with the legislative history, the declared public policies of the Act and the implementing regulations promulgated by the Commission.

The Division maintains that the conduct of respondent Zoby in this matter poses a grave threat to the integrity of the regulatory process. That regulatory process has consistently maintained both physical and functional restrictions on casino operations. As to physical restrictions, certain transactions are limited to occurring at the highly secured casino cage area. See, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.14; In Re Petition of Adamar of New Jersey, 222 N.J. Super. 464 (App. Div. 1988). The purpose of physical restrictions is to permit both the casino licensee and the regulators to monitor certain sensitive transactions, including the deposit of cash by patrons for their subsequent use at the gaming tables. As to functional restrictions, the Commission has mandated that certain positions are to perform specific functions. With respect to the receipt of cash from patrons for front money deposit that function is exclusively maintained in the general cashiers position. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 (b) l. b and vii. In the recent Adamar case, the Appellant Division upheld the Commission's determination that N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 (b) 1 i established in general cashiers have the exclusive function of receiving cash from gaming patrons for counter check redemptions. Similarly, the Commission properly implemented N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b by specifying that general cashiers working within the highly secure and highly monitored casino cage area are the exclusive representatives of the casino licensee permitted to receive cash from patrons for subsequent use at the gaming tables. Adamar supra. at 471-472. In viewing the overall regulatory scheme to arrive at a proper interpretation of the credit provisions of the Act, Adamar also relied on N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c) recognizing that the cashiers cage has the responsibility to maintain custody of patron funds normally associated with the operation of a cashier's cage. Id. at 471. This identical reliance was evident in Playboy - Elsinore Associates v. Strauss, 189 N.J. Super. 185 (Law Div. 1983), "it is clear that the thrust of the regulatory scheme is to require all credit transactions to be administered through the cashier's cage." 189 N.J. Super. at 193. The thrust of that same regulatory scheme requires all patron cash deposit transactions to be administered through the cashier's cage and not through a licensed junket representative. See also: N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24.

The Division contends that further support for its position can be gleaned from the Legislature's definition of the position "junket representative" and the Commission's regulation controlling junket activity. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 5:12-29.2 and the corresponding regulation at N.J.A.C. 19:49-2.1 define the position "junket representative," in pertinent part as follows:

> Any natural person who negotiates the terms of, engages in the referral, procurement or selection of persons who may participate in, or accompanies for purposes of monitoring or evaluating the participating, in any junket to a licensed casino, regardless of whether or not those activities occur in the State of New Jersey.

Had the Legislature or the Commission deemed it permissible for a junket representative to act as a recipient of patron cash deposits funds for subsequent use at the gaming tables, it would have specified such conduct within N.J.S.A. 5:12-29.2 and N.J.A.C. 19:49-2.1.

The Division, therefore, requests that judgment of liability against respondent Zoby on the undisputed facts in Count IV of the Division's Amended Complaint for violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b , N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c), and N.J.A.C.

19:45-1.15(b) as a consequence of Zoby's performing functions exclusively delegated to general cashiers and for violating N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24 by failing to prepare or maintain any documents or records to evidence the cash deposits and reimbursements.

At Point V of its brief and argument the Division contends that respondent Sands is vicariously liable for the conduct of junket representative Ronald Zoby pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g and the doctrine of respondeat superior. The Division observes that the Commission has consistently applied the theory of corporate or vicarious liability to casino licensees in its oversight of the casino industry. State v. Boardwalk Regency Corporation, OAL Dkt. No. CCC 6325-81, Agency Dkt. No. 81-32 (Initial Decision, dated June 8, 1982: Final Commission Decision, dated January 3, 1983); State v. Greate Bay and Casino, Inc. ,Mervin Hoagland, Robert Dinstein, William Musso, and Roseland Freeland, OAL Dkt. No. CCC 4105-85, Agency Dkt. No. 84-286 (Commission Opinion, dated November 12, 1986; Aff'd. App. Div. Dkt. No. A-550-86T6, Decided July 8, 1988).

The Division observes that even more significant is the Legislature's express application of the vicarious liability concept to casino licensee's for the conduct of junket representatives through the enactment of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g, which states:

> A casino licensee shall be responsible for the conduct of any junket representative or junket enterprise associated with it and for the term and conditions of any junket engaged in on its premises, regardless of the fact that the junket may involve persons not employed by such a casino licensee.

The Division observes that it is undisputed that junket operators are legally considered the casino's agent. See, N.J.A.C. 19:49-1.1 ("agent" is defined as any person, including a junket representative or junket enterprise, acting directly or indirectly on behalf of the casino licensee). Accordingly, the full panoply of agency law applies to the statutorily defined relationship between a casino licensee and a junket representative.

The Division observes a series of significant and long established cases wherein the New Jersey Courts have held that an employer is liable for the acts of the employee where the employee is acting within the scope of his employment.

See, Dan Horn v. Gibson, 133 N.J.L. 406, 410 (Sup. Ct. 1945). In harmony with this holding, it is also well established that a principal will be held liable for the acts of his agent if the acts are within the scope of the agent's duties or employment. See, 53 Am Jur 2d, Master and Servant Section 4 through 6 at 441. The Doctrine of respondeat superior has consistently been applied to corporations, and New Jersey courts have held that a corporation is liable for the torts, wrongful acts or omissions of its officers, agents or employees acting within the actual or apparent scope of their authority or employment. See, Brokow v. N.J.R. and Transportation Co. and Campbell, 32, N.J.L. 328, 330 (Sup. Ct. 1867). Moreover, the term, "scope of authority" has been interpreted to mean that a master is liable if a servant acts in a manner that is even contrary to the master's orders. Klitch v. Betts, 89 N.J. 348, 351 (E. & A. 1916); DiCosala v. Key, 91 N.J. 159, 168-169 (1982).

The Division contends that New Jersey law and long standing policy holds an employer liable for the acts of his employees within the scope of employment - even if such person acts in direct opposition to the proper performance of their duties. Respondent Zoby's scope of employment is defined in its "Junket Representative Agreement" with the Sands. Zoby's scope of employment, as defined in those Agreements, provides for the following.:

> Transportation by bus and plane of gambling patrons to the Sands; paid for by the Sands and arranged by Mr. Zoby.
> Mr. Zoby's maintenance of the Sands marketing location in Virginia including the specification that all phone lines be answered "Sands."
>
> Sands payment of Mr. Zoby's junket license fees.
>
> Mr. Zoby's responsibility to provide gambling patrons to the Sands.
>
> Mr. Zoby's, responsibility to generate gambling at the Sands, through these patrons, amounting to $1.5 million dollars in gross statistical wins per year.
>
> Payment by the Sands to Zoby of $400,000 per year for his performance of the contract based on providing the gross statistical win.
>
> An exclusive contract which specifies that Mr. Zoby arrange junkets for the Sands and which bars him from > junket work for any other hotels/casino during the contract term.

The Division refers to Mr. Zoby's sworn interview to describe some methods Zoby employed to facilitate and encourage the gambling play of Albert Miller and other junket participants during a junket are as follows:

> Taking patrons' suitcases to their hotel rooms so they can go directly to the gambling table upon arrival at the casino.
>
> Checking in and out of the hotel for them so patrons have maximum time at the casino games.
>
> Remaining on the casino floor with his patrons to enable him to fulfill the requests for service with the patron having to leave the gaming table.
>
> Zoby sworn interview, at 22-23, 73-74.

The Division asserts that it is clear from the Agreements and the sworn investigation interview of Zoby that his scope of employment includes engaging in activities to encourage and facilitate the amount of gambling by his junket patrons. This general kind of activity was envisioned by the legislature in defining legal junket activity. N.J.S.A. 5:12-29 states that a junket is:

> An arrangement the primary purpose is to induce any person, selected or approved for participation therein on the basis of his ability to satisfy a financial qualification obligation related to his ability or willingness to gamble or on any other basis related to his propensity to gamble, to come to a licensed casino hotel for any purpose of gambling and pursuant to which, and as a consideration for which any or all of the costs of transportation, food, lodging and entertainment and other services and items of value for said person is directly or indirectly paid by a casino licensee or employee or agent thereof.

The Division asserts that to determine whether acts are within the scope of employment, the activity must be so closely connected with what the servant is employed to do that the acts may be regarded as methods, even though improper ones, of carrying out the objectives of the employment. Clearly the Division asserts, supplying gaming chips to patrons at the gaming tables by utilizing one's personal casino credit account; cashing personal and business checks for junket patron Albert Miller to provide him with cash to pay gambling loans from other junket patrons, and holding patron cash deposits for subsequent gaming use are all activities which serves as methods to facilitate and encourage gambling. Therefore, although unlawful, such conduct is "of the kind" that Zoby is contracted to perform for his principal, the Sands. Further, these activities were carried on by Zoby either at the gambling casino or within the context of his junket trips. Mr. Zoby's purpose in engaging in such activity was to facilitate the scope and extent of his clients activity to the benefit of the Sands as well as to himself.

The Division contends that respondent Zoby's conduct, which served to assist in meeting the gross statistical win criteria, is well within the scope of his employment under his Junket Representative Agreements with the Sands. Therefore, the methods he used, even though improper, to generate that win are also within the scope of the Agreements, rendering Sands vicariously liable for Zoby's unlawful acts.

The Division observes that the Sands argues that if the activity of Zoby is illegal it cannot be within the scope of employment. The Sands, therefore, concludes that all of the time of these actions Zoby was not an agent of the Sands. The Division notes further that the cases cited by the Sands in support of the Sands contention, do not support its position but rather supports the Division's position. (citations omitted).

The Division asserts that the Legislature unequivocally intended that casino licensees, whether they be corporations, partnerships, or sole proprietorships, are to be held liable for the acts of their officers, employees and agents. To this end, N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(5)provides that the Commission may:

> assess such civil penalties as may be necessary to punish misconduct and to deter future violations which penalties may not exceed $10,000 in the case of any individual licensee or registrant except that in the case of a casino licensee the penalty may not exceed $50,000.

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Division requests that this tribunal find respondent Sands vicariously liable for the unlawful acts of junket representative

Ronald Zoby performed in the course of his junket activities as described in Counts I through VI of the Division's Amended Complaint.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The parties subsequently submitted supplemental memoranda of law which will not be considered here.

In order to place the issues of this matter into proper perspective, it is here observed that in order to further the public confidence in the integrity of casino operations, the regulatory provisions of the Act were designed to extend "strict State regulation to all persons, locations, practices and associations related to the operation of licensed casino enterprises and all related service industries..." N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6). As the Appellate bench stated in In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324, 341 (App. Div. 1981):

> There is nothing inherently wrong with sensitive, strict regulation. It has for many years been exercised in this State in certain industries. Liquor, with "its inherent evils," has been dealt with as "a subject apart." Grand Union Co. v. Sills, 43 N.J. 390, 398 (1964). The legislative power to regulate such a "nonessential and inherently dangerous commodity," as a wholly constitutional expression of concern for public health, safety, morals or general welfare, has been said to be almost without limit. Id. at 403-404. Horse racing, with attendant legalized gambling, "strongly affected by a public interest," has been held to be a "highly appropriate" subject for close regulatory supervision, Jersey Downs, Inc. v. N.J. Racing Comm'n, 102 N.J. Super. 451, 457 (App. Div. 1968), a condition recognized as desirable for many years, Niglio v. N.J. Racing Comm'n, 158 N.J. Super. 182, 188 (App. Div. 1978). We see every reason, including those expressed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b, for legalized casino gaming to take its deserved place among those industries. See Bally Mfg. Corp. v. N.J. Casino Control Comm'n, supra, 85 N.J. at 331. ...

This principle of "strict" regulation and control of licensed gambling activities is reenforced in the Act where, at N.J.S.A. 5:12b (13), the Legislature provided that:

> It is in the public interest that the institution of licensed casino establishments in New Jersey be strictly regulated and controlled pursuant to the above findings and > pursuant to the provisions of this Act, which provisions are designed to engender and maintain public confidence and trust in the regulation of the licensed enterprises, ...

The Legislature also provided, among other things, that "... participation in casino operations .... shall be deemed a revocable privilege .... N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b (8).

The Division first contends that respondent Zoby violated section 101 of the Act and sections 19:45-1.25 and 1.27 of the regulations by the advancement of gaming chips to junket participants at the gambling tables of the Sands through the use of his approved casino credit account. As a consequence of Zoby's conduct, the Division contends that the Sands was in violation of sections 101 and 102 of the Act, and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 of the regulations when it permitted, allowed and facilitated Zoby's use of his approved casino credit account to provide the gaming chips to the junket participants. Neither Zoby nor the Sands dispute the fact that Zoby engaged in gaming chip transfers which were observed by employees of the Sands. Respondents Zoby and the Sands contend that neither of them committed a violation of the statutes or regulations, as alleged.

It is first necessary to consider N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27, the regulation which controls the procedures for granting credit to a casino patron, among other things. This comprehensive regulation provides for the issuance of casino credit to an individual patron only, rather than to a group or corporate entity. The regulation is specific with regards to the identity and verification of the patron; the patron's financial status including but not limited to personal and business bank accounts, income and assets, outstanding indebtedness, other casino credit limits, and; the patrons player rating, among other things. The purpose of this regulation is to provide credit to a qualified patron and to facilitate and enable said patron to participate in casino gaming activity. The credit is extended to the patron, through strict controls, and is interest free.

Thus, upon a close examination of N.J.S.A. 45:19-1.27, it is clear that the regulation was promulgated by the Commission, pursuant to section 101a(2) of the Act, to provide and extend credit to individual qualified casino patrons. There is nothing in the regulation which even implies that a patron may use his approved credit line as a "bank" for other gaming patrons. Rather, the regulation dictates that the patron's credit limit is determined, in part, upon a consideration of "... the patron's player rating based on a continuing evaluation of the amount of frequency of play subsequent to the patron's initial receipt of credit. ..." N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27(g)4.

The Appellate Court in Adamar recognized that the Act and regulations promulgated thereunder must be read so as to implement the legislative intent. It further observed that our Supreme Court has recognized "the strong state interest in promoting scrupulous conduct by the casino industry and regulatory officials." (citation omitted). The Court cites the Law Division in Playboy-Elsinore Assocs. v. Strauss, 189 N.J. Super. 185, 191 (Law Div. 1983), wherein it noted that "practices and procedures involved with the extension of credit by the casinos are among the most sensitive aspects of casino operations." Id. at 470. The Adamar Court continues to observe, as follows, that:

> Prior to the passage of the Act, there was strong resistance to allowing credit to patrons at all. See, Report and Recommendations of Casino Gambling by the Commission of Investigation of the State of New Jersey, (April 1977). The SCI was concerned with the potential for illegal diversion of funds and "strong arm" methods of debt collection. Id. at 2-E to 3-E. The particularized sections of the act governing credit obviously responded to this opposition and must be read as intending to accomplish several purposes: to provide for a traceable, efficient "paper trail" of credit transactions; to prevent "skimming," and to require prompt deposits of credit checks thereby allowing regulators to monitor the collection of debts. See: Playboy Elsinore Assoc., supra, 189 N.J. Super. at 191-192.

Thus, the Act's credit provision, N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and the regulation which flows therefrom, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27, circumscribes the manner by which credit shall be offered to the individual patron. Respondent Zoby's use of his casino credit account disrupts the "paper trail" of credit transactions to the extent that there is no identification of the user of the "chip transfer" once Zoby transmits the chips to the junket participant with those drawn from his account. Nor is Zoby credited with a player rating as a consequence of this transaction. The casino credit account to which Zoby puts his to use; i.e., to provide a "bank" for his junket patrons, was neither contemplated nor condoned by the Legislature or the Commission.

I FIND and CONCLUDE, that respondent Zoby's use of his casino credit account to draw against for the purpose of transferring gaming chips to junket participants is not a recognized use of such casino credit and, therefore, violates the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27.

The Sands sets forth a variety of arguments to exculpate itself from Zoby's "chip transfers." It argues, among other things, that it is absolved from any liability for Zoby's conduct under agency law because Zoby's acts were not performed in the course of or within the scope of his agency. The regulations promulgated by the Commission through its authority at N.J.S.A. 5:12-63c and N.J.S.A. 5:12-69 as found in N.J.S.A. 19:49-1.1 defines "agent" to mean "any person, including a junket representative or junket enterprise, acting directly or indirectly on behalf of a casino license."

The undisputed facts demonstrate that Zoby acted on behalf of the Sands by providing junket participants with gaming chips charged against Zoby's casino credit account. It is further undisputed that employees of the Sands were aware and had knowledge of Zoby's actions of transferring gaming chips to his junket participants by recording such transactions on Zoby's player rating form. With this knowledge, the Sands, its employees and/or agents neither advised Zoby of the limitations on the use of his casino credit account, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27, nor dissuaded him in any manner from the use of the credit account.

I FIND that the facts in this matter clearly demonstrate that Zoby performed as an agent of the Sands as defined in Comm'l Union Ins. Co. v. Burt Thomas-Aitken Const. Co, 49 N.J. 389, 392 (1967).

I CONCLUDE that by its conduct of commission and/or omission, the Sands did permit, allow and facilitate Zoby's violations of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27 and, therefore, was negligent in its duty to enforce the conditions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101, as incorporated under N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g. The Sands, therefore, is strictly liable for Zoby's violations.

With respect to the Division's allegations that Zoby and the Sands were in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101 and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25, the undisputed facts in this matter clearly show that respondent Zoby did receive and cash checks from the late Albert Miller, a frequent participant in Zoby's organized junkets to Atlantic City. Respondent Zoby cashed Miller's checks in order for Miller to repay money he had borrowed from junket participants. Miller borrowed the money from the junket patrons in order to continue to gamble at the Sands after he had lost the sums he had arrived with; generally $20,000 to $30,000 per junket. On other occasions, Zoby and Miller had borrowed money from each other for circumstances purported not related to the junkets or gaming activities.

The regulation here is explicit and unambiguous. N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 clearly states that:

> 1. Cash any check, make any loan, or otherwise provide or allow to any person any credit or advance of anything of value or which represents value to enable any person to take part in gaming activity as a player; ... (emphasis supplied)

Respondent Zoby's cashing of Albert Miller's checks for the repayment of debts incurred as a consequence of Miller's gaming activity flies in the face of the regulation which prohibits such conduct. Notwithstanding that Zoby's cashing of Miller's checks occurred after Miller had borrowed money from other junket participants, the fact remains that Zoby's conduct enabled and encouraged Miller to gamble away monies beyond Miller's expected losses. This regulation, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 does not contain any exception to the proscribed conduct evidenced by Zoby, a licensed agent employed by the Sands.

I CONCLUDE that, by its clear and unambiguous language, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25 was violated by respondent Zoby on one or more occasions when Zoby cashed the late Albert Miller's personal and business checks for the purpose of repaying debts incurred as a consequence of Miller's gaming activity as a player at the Sands.

I CONCLUDE that respondent Sands is vicariously liable for Zoby's conduct where, as here, Zoby was performing as an agent of and in the Sands behalf when he violated the terms of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.25. Division of Gaming Enforcement v. Greate Bay Hotel and Casino, Inc. and Mervin E. Hoagland, et al (App. Div.) Dkt. No. A-550-86T6, decided July 8, 1988 (unpublished) See also: Resorts International Hotel, Inc. v. Salomone, 178 N.J. Super. 598, 606 (App. Div. 1981).

I further CONCLUDE that Zoby's conduct in cashing Miller's personal and business checks constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101a. and b., to which flows vicarious liability of respondent Sands under the doctrine of respondeat superior. DiCosala v. Kay, 91 N.J. 159, 172 (1982).

Based upon the uncontested fact that respondent Zoby provided gaming chips to various junket participants at the gaming tables of the Sands, the Division alleges that Zoby and, thus, the Sands stand in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2). The statute, in pertinent part, provides that:

> 1. No junket .... representative ... may:
> (2) Exercise approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of credit pursuant to section 101 of P.L. 1977, c.110 (c. 5:12-101) ...

The Division contends, among other things, that by virtue of Zoby's providing the junket participants with gaming chips at the gaming tables, such conduct constitutes the exercise of approval authority with regard to the authorization or issuance of casino credit to those junket participants, some of whom had been denied casino credit accounts on their behalf. The Division alleges that through the subterfuge of processing counter checks on his own approved credit account, Zoby and the Sands violated the above cited statute.

Respondent Zoby asserts that he neither extended credit to his junket participants nor did he authorize the approval of casino credit to such participants. He contends that he collected certain patrons money prior to their gambling activity, at their request, and returned their money upon request in the form of chips he acquired through his casino credit account.

The Legislature, through the enactment of section 101 of the Act, established the limitation of casino patron credit with the Commission subsequently promulgating explicit and precise rules for the execution and extension of casino patron credit by way of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.27. The limitation on casino patron credit serves a salutary purpose. As noted in the Second Interim Report at 34-35, the availability of ready, unlimited credit can have a "pernicious effect" upon the compulsive or imprudent player. Resorts International Hotel, Inc. v. Salomone, 178 N.J. Super. 598, 606 (App. Div. 1981).

The facts in this matter demonstrate that some of Zoby's junket participants had been denied casino credit accounts while other participants simply had not applied for such credit. Respondent Zoby collected and maintained large sums of money transmitted to him from junket patrons, as much as $30,000 at a time from Albert Miller, prior to the junkets arrival at the Sands. While at the Sands, Zoby was, in effect, the junket participant's "bank" while the participant gambled. Respondent Zoby kept no records or accounting of the amounts transmitted to him or transferred from him to the gaming junket patron. By this conduct, respondent Zoby circumvented the strict regulation governing casino credit and substituted himself as the approving authority for the issuance of casino credit. Respondent Zoby's explanation of his acts as an accommodation to his junket patrons and his attempt to equate this "banking" activity with his "checking the junket participants suitcases" upon arrival at the Sands simply strains credulity. The distinction between these two activities are obvious; i.e., there exists a strict regulatory scheme concerning the approval and issuance of casino credit, while none exists with respect to "checking junket participants suitcases."

I FIND and CONCLUDE, therefore, that by his conduct, as described above, respondent Zoby violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2).

Consequently, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Sands, by allowing and permitting respondent Zoby's conduct as described above, is also in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-102 l. (2), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-102g.

It is clear that respondent Zoby acted in a manner inconsistent with the legislative intent of "... strict State regulation to all persons, locations, practices .... related to the operation of licensed casino enterprises .... N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b (6). Respondent Zoby completely ignored the explicit statutory provision at N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b and the controlling regulations under N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)9 and (g) and

N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 when he received and maintained cash deposits from Albert Miller. By his conduct, Zoby performed the duties and functions of a general cashier with respect to his receipt of cash deposits from Miller and the refunding of such deposits in the form of gaming chips. The statutes and regulations have no provision for an independent depository. Rather, the regulations specifically sets aside the cashiers cage in which general cashiers shall operate for, among other things, the receipt of customer deposits N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15(b). There is no provision, either statutory or regulatory, which permits a junket representative to act as or substitute for, a general cashier.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that respondent Zoby violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-101b, N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.11(c)9 and (g), and N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.15 for the reasons set forth above. I also CONCLUDE that respondent violated the provisions of N.J.A.C. 19:45-1.24 wherein he failed to prepare the required documentation and perform the required procedures to account for the receipt of cash deposits from the late Albert Miller.

It is apparent that respondent Ronald A. Zoby committed the violations of the Casino Control Act and the attendant regulations as alleged and charged by the Division. As a consequence of Zoby's violations and his employment by the Sands Hotel/Casino, it also is held to be in violation of the same statutes and regulations. I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the partial summary decision as requested by respondent's Zoby and the Sands is without merit and, accordingly DENIED. I further CONCLUDE that the Division of Gaming Enforcement has prevailed on the facts and law and, therefore, partial summary decision is hereby ENTERED in its favor with respect to the issues of liability for the violations.

Subsequent to review of this partial summary decision by the Casino Control Commission, the Division shall submit its application with respect to the penalty to be imposed upon respondents. Respondents shall submit their respective defenses to the Division's application with ten (10) days of receipt thereof.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW & PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, Complainant,

v.

MARIA NYDIA GUERRERO a/k/a MARIA MUNOZ DEMARTINEZ,

Respondent.

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) having been filed with the Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meetings of April 29, 1987, and May 6, 1987,

IT IS on this 16th day of May 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

1. In considering whether the respondent's conviction for a federal offense is analogous to the disqualifying offense of "tampering with public records or information," proscribed by N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2), the ALJ erred in concluding that the Division had failed to prove a "purpose to defraud or injure." Respondent pled guilty and was convicted of one count of falsely representing her social security number in violation of 42 U.S.C.A. §408(g)(2). An essential element of the federal offense is an intent to deceive. The respondent's conviction of the federal offense satisfies the culpability requirement for a third degree violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2).

Nevertheless, the offense to which the respondent pled guilty, falsely representing her social security number on a Claridge employment application form, is not comparable to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2) because such a form is not a public record. As to the alleged false representations on other forms which were the subject of the indictment, the charges were dismissed and the record does not support a finding that the respondent's conduct would constitute a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7.

2. The ALJ erred in concluding that the respondent had established her rehabilitation because, in the context of his other findings, such a conclusion was unnecessary. Absent disqualification under section 86(c), rehabilitation under sections 90(h) or 91(d) is not an issue that need be decided.

3. The ALJ erred in holding that disqualification pursuant to section 86(c)(4) must be predicated upon a disqualifying offense listed in section 86(c)(1) or (3). To the contrary, "inimical offenses" pursuant to section 86(c)(4) are precisely those offenses which are not "automatic" disqualifiers listed in sections 86(c)(1) or (3), but which indicate, due primarily to circumstances surrounding the offense, that participation by that individual would be contrary to the public interests underlying the Casino Control Act. See In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc., for a Casino License, Docket No. 79-CL-1 (Commission decision February 26, 1979).

4. The ALJ erred in interpreting the Commission's holding in State v. Ospina-Lopez, Docket No. 84-51 (Commission order January 14, 1985). Ospina-Lopez does not stand for the proposition that a disorderly persons offense cannot be an "inimical offense." The ALJ in Ospina-Lopez had failed to identify the specific offense, criminal or disorderly, which purportedly disqualified the respondent under section 86(c)(4). Absent identification of a specific offense, there was no basis for disqualification under section 86(c). The Commission went on to hold under the facts of that case that the respondent's provision of a fraudulent social security number warranted his disqualification pursuant to section 86(b).

5. The ALJ erred in finding that the respondent had violated section 86(b) by her use of untrue or misleading information and further finding that the respondent failed to comport with the continuing duty to provide information under section 80(d) and thereafter failing to recommend any action in light of such violations, but instead recommending dismissal of the complaint. A finding of a violation of section 86(b) ordinarily results in a determination that the violator is disqualified. Accordingly, some disposition other than dismissal of the complaint is warranted.

6. The ALJ erred in failing to determine whether the respondent's provision of a false social security number on her PHDF-4 was intentional or in conscious disregard of the regulatory process.

7. Considering the record in its entirety, the respondent's conviction for misrepresenting her social security number in violation of 42 U.S.C.A. §408(g)(2) is analogous to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-4(a), a fourth degree offense and a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(1).

8. Considering the nature, seriousness and date of the respondent's disqualifying offense, i.e., misrepresenting her social security number to the Claridge Casino Hotel in 1982; the circumstances surrounding the offense, particularly her then recent, legal immigration into this country; the fact that there are no other allegations of criminal activity before or since in either the respondent's place of birth or in this country; and with particular reference to the respondent's exemplary record of employment in the industry, which indicates a remarkable rise from diswasher to blackjack dealer in approximately two years time, the respondent has established clearly and convincingly that she is rehabilitated from her disqualifying conviction pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h) and -91(d).

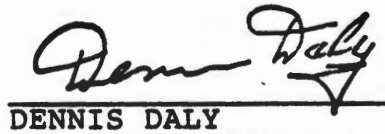
9. Considering the entire record, including the respondent's admission that she invented the social security number provided on her PHDF-4 in 1982, other apparent fabrications on the PHDF-4 and her plea of guilty to essentially the same kind of intentional misrepresentations to the Claridge at approximately the same time, the respondent is disqualified for providing a false social security number on her PHDF-4 in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(b).



10. Considering that the respondent provided the false social security number on her PHDF-4 in 1982, and that she provided her correct social security number on the PHDF-2A filed in 1984, which filing occurred prior to her indictment on federal charges, and further considering the respondent's exemplary record in the industry subsequent to her violation of section 86(b), the disqualification is waived pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(e) and the respondent is permitted to retain her casino hotel employee registration.

11. Given the unique circumstances of this case, the reasons cited above for a section 91(e) waiver constitute sufficient good cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:40-1.3(d) to relax the five-year bar against reapplication which ordinarily follows a finding of disqualification pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8(a), and the respondent is permitted to retain her casino employee license.

12. For the reasons cited in support of both waiver pursuant to section 91(e) and relaxation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 19:40-1.3(d), and for the further reasons cited in support of a finding of respondent's rehabilitation from her disqualifying conviction, the respondent has established her good character, honesty and integrity required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(b)(2) and 90(b).

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint for revocation of the casino employee license and the casino hotel employee registration of Maria Guerrero is dismissed for the reasons stated in the initial decision, as modified, which is incorporated herein by reference.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 85-296

STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT, Petitioner,

v.

MARIA N. GUERRERO, A/K/A MARIA NYDIA GUERRERO, A/K/A MARIA MUNOZ DE MARTINEZ,

Respondent.

William E. Mountford, Jr., Esq., Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: December 9, 1986 Decided: February 3, 1987

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint before the Casino Control Commission (Commission), dated June 19, 1986, seeking an Order to revoke the casino employee registration and the casino employee license issued to respondent Maria N. Guerrero. The complaint alleges, among other things, that respondent Guerrero committed offenses which disqualify her from

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

continued registration and licensure, and were inimical to the Casino Control Act (Act). The complaint also alleges that respondent lacks the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for continued registration and licensure.

PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

The Division filed its complaint in the instant matter with the Commission on or about June 19, 1986. Thereafter, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing was conducted on July 24, 1986, followed by a Prehearing Order, dated July 31, 1986. A hearing was held on September 30, 1986, at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The parties requested and were granted leave to submit posthearing memoranda. The last submission was received by the undersigned on December 9, 1986, which constitutes the closing date of this record.

ISSUES

As agreed upon and set forth in the prehearing order, the issues for determination by this tribunal are:

A. Whether the respondent's conduct which led to her indictment by the Grand Jury of the United States District Court, District of New Jersey, alleging a violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2) and her subsequent entry of a plea of guilty thereto, constitutes a statutory disqualifying offense under one or more of those statutes enumerated at N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) (N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1 et seq. (fraud); N.J.S.A. 2C:28-1 et seq. (falsification)).

B. Whether respondent is disqualified from licensure and registration under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, by reason of her purported failure to disclose and/or supply information which was untrue or misleading by virtue of her representing an alleged fraudulent Social Security account number on her Personal History Disclosure Form-4, by way of N.J.S.A. 5:12-80d.

C. Whether respondent's conduct, as alleged, is inimical to the Casino Control Act under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)4, which constitutes an automatic disqualification to her licensure and registration.

D. Whether respondent's conduct, as alleged, establishes that she no longer possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2).

E. In the event the Division establishes a section 86c(1) disqualifier, the respondent has the opportunity to establish her rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and/or N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

UNDISPUTED FACTS

The following facts are neither disputed nor contested and, therefore, are hereby adopted as FINDINGS OF FACT in this matter:

In or about May or June 1982, respondent completed an employment application with the Claridge Hotel/Casino (Claridge) and, subsequent thereto, completed an Internal Revenue Service Form W-4 (Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate) together with a membership form for Local 54 of the Hotel Employees and Restaurant Employees International Union, all of which falsely represented respondent's Social Security account number to be 582-96-9707.

Respondent, who is a legal alien from Colombia, South America, and speaks no English, was subsequently issued a casino employee registration number 42552-40 and employed by the Claridge on or about July 1, 1982. Under her registration, respondent was employed at the Claridge as a dishwasher, busperson and floor sweeper in its Hotel/Casino restaurant, but did not possess a valid Social Security account number.

During her employment with the Claridge under her registration, respondent attended school and became qualified as a blackjack dealer in the casino industry. At a point not specified on the record, immigration officials advised respondent of the need and necessity to acquire a Social Security account number in order to be gainfully employed in this country. Respondent complied and was issued Social Security Account Number 136-76-0537.

On or about February 25, 1983, respondent was married to a citizen of the United States. Respondent's husband, who speaks English and Spanish, aided respondent in her completion of an application for a casino employee license. Respondent indicated her proper Social Security number on her Personal History Disclosure Form-2A for the casino employee license (P-2).

Subsequent to an investigation by a special agent with the Office of Inspector General of the United States Department of Health and Human Services, upon information supplied by a criminal investigator of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, it was determined that the Social Security Number 582-96-9707 had been issued to an individual other than respondent. As a consequence of the investigation, the Grand Jury for the District of New Jersey handed up a True Bill, four-count indictment alleging respondent to be in violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2), entitled "Penalties," which provides, in pertinent part, that it is a felony for:

>
> . . .
>
> (g) for the purpose of causing an increase in any payment authorized under the subchapter (or any other program financed in whole or in part from Federal funds), or for the purpose of causing a payment under this subchapter (or any such other program) to be made when no payment is authorized thereunder, or for the purpose of obtaining (for himself or any other person) any payment or any other benefit to which he (or such other person) is not entitled, or for the purpose of obtaining anything of value from any person, or for any other purpose—
> (2) with intent to deceive, falsely represents a number to be the social security account number assigned by the Secretary to him or to such other person; . . .

On September 11, 1985, respondent, with legal counsel, entered a plea of guilty to Count 1 of the Indictment before the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. The Judgment and Probation/Commitment Order demonstrates that as the consequence of respondent's entry of a guilty plea to Count 1 (making false representations as to Social Security Number in violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2)), she was ordered to serve eleven (11) months in prison, which was suspended. Respondent was therefore placed on probation for a period of one year and ordered to pay a fine of $2,000. Counts 2, 3 and 4 of the Indictment were dismissed with the admonition that respondent would not be accorded a recommendation by the Court against deportation (P-1).

Respondent is currently employed at the Claridge as a blackjack dealer with exemplary performance evaluations and recommendation by her immediate supervisor (R-2, R-3, R-4).

Respondent is and has been employed as blackjack dealer with the Claridge since in or about February 1984. There has been no action by the Commission to suspend respondent's casino employee registration or license pending the outcome of the instant matter.

This completes a recital of the undisputed facts in this matter.

TESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE

Respondent, who understands some English but does not speak the language, testified through an interpreter and asserted, among other things, that she was not married and was living alone when she applied for employment at the Claridge. Subsequent to receiving the various application and disclosure forms, respondent sought out strangers who spoke and wrote in the Spanish and English languages to aid her in completing the forms. An individual, whom respondent does not now recall, helped respondent with the forms and advised respondent to indicate a Social Security number on the forms, although respondent had not been issued nor assigned a Social Security account number.

Respondent testified that it was at about the time she met the individual who is now her husband that she understood the need for a Social Security number. She was advised, through agents of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, of the procedure, and respondent then applied for and was granted Social Security Account Number 136-76-0537. Respondent, with the aid of her English-speaking husband, completed the Personal History Disclosure Form-2A in or about February 1984, which indicated her valid Social Security number (P-2).

Subsequent to respondent's completion of the Personal History Disclosure Form, she was issued casino employee license number 52240-21 and commenced employment as a blackjack dealer with the Claridge.

LEGAL ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

The Division perceives the issues to be determined as to whether the respondent possesses the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated by N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b; whether the respondent is disqualified from licensure and registration by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b due to failure to comply with N.J.S.A. 5:12-80d and the federal conviction of making false representations as to Social Security number; and whether the respondent is disqualified from licensure and registration by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, by virtue of the Division's assertion that respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2), third degree, or in the alternative, whether respondent's conduct is inimical pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4).

As to disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, the Division cites that in State v. Orlando Ospina-Lopez, OAL Docket No. CCC 3131-84, decided by Commission (January 14, 1985), the Commission determined that a Social Security number is a material fact pertaining to qualification criteria within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b. State v. Conrado Berrio and Carlos Berrio, OAL Docket Nos. CCC 9931-83 and CCC 9692-83 (February 5, 1985), Comm. Order of Remand (October 31, 1985).

As to disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4), the Division relies upon the matter in State v. Orlando Ospina-Lopez, which states that disqualification may be found where there is a criminal or disorderly persons offense identified that would warrant disqualification under section 86c(4), and that such a conclusion is not necessary where disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b is demonstrated.

Respondent contends that the issues now ripe for legal argument are those identified as A. and B., pursuant to the Prehearing Order.

Respondent asserts that Issue A. deals with whether or not her conviction of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2) constitutes a statutory disqualifier under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Obviously, it would be respondent's position that it does not.

Respondent observes that the Division believes the violation is akin to N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2), tampering with public records. Further, it is the Division's position that said violation would be a third-degree crime.

If we are to assume that the federal violation is, in fact, akin to the above-mentioned State statute, respondent requests the Court to note that a violation of this statute is, in fact, a disorderly persons offense unless the actor's purpose is to defraud or injure anyone. Obviously, the State cannot show that was, in fact, the situation and hence, had respondent been charged with the State crime, at best, she would have received a conviction in regards to a disorderly persons offense. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), a disorderly persons conviction of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7 would not be a statutory disqualifier. It would have to be a conviction as a third-degree crime.

Again, it is respondent's position that using the Social Security number is not in itself a crime that is listed under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), and for the reasons stated above, would not be a disqualifier even under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4).

In regards to issue B., it is respondent's position that she should not be disqualified for licensure due to her supplying a false Social Security number on her Personal History Disclosure Form. Respondent had only been in the country for a short period of time and could not read, write or understand English when she filled out the form. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b states that an applicant should be disqualified for failure to provide information, documentation and assurances required by the Act or requested by the Commission, or failure to reveal any fact material to qualification, or the supplying of information which is untrue or misleading as to a material fact pertaining to qualification criteria.

Respondent contends that the Social Security number is not required by the Commission, but rather, it is requested by the Division of Gaming Enforcement and, further, this is not a material fact. Obviously, if the number is not requested by the Commission and it is not a material fact, then respondent cannot be found to have violated N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b. The Division cites State v. Orlando Ospina-Lopez in stating that the Commission has determined that a Social Security number is, in fact, a material fact pertaining to qualification criteria. It is respondent's understanding that this stood for the proposition that supplying a false Social Security number is not a disqualifier. Further, it is respondent's understanding that various administrative law judges have decided this same issue both ways, depending upon the specific fact pattern before them. In this particular situation, respondent claims that she was not aware of exactly what a Social Security number represented when she, in fact, supplied a phony number. As soon as she realized the importance of a number, she obtained a valid Social Security number and reported that to her employer. Respondent suggests that this fact alone distinguishes this fact pattern from that of the Ospina-Lopez case.

Respondent contends that the supplying of a phony Social Security number was an unintentional act not done knowingly, and that the Casino Control Commission does not require the number to be on the application for licensure, nor is it a material fact. Respondent requests that she not be disqualified and that she be allowed to continue working in the casino industry.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

There is no doubt nor dispute that respondent used a fraudulent Social Security account number on her original Personal History Disclosure Form - 4 (PHDF) to obtain her registration and employment in the casino industry. The record clearly demonstrates that as a consequence of her conduct, respondent was subject to a criminal complaint and indictment before the Federal District Court of New Jersey, to which she entered a guilty plea to one of four counts of violating 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2). Respondent's conviction on the one-count indictment resulted in a substantial monetary fine and lengthy probation without incarceration. The question now for determination is whether, under the facts and circumstances of this case, respondent is disqualified from continuing to hold the casino employee registration and license issued to her by the Commission.

The Division contends that respondent's conviction of a violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2) is equivalent to a third-degree offense under N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2), one of the enumerated disqualifying offenses pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7 is entitled "Tampering with public records or information," and section a. states that "A person commits an offense if he:

(2) Makes, presents, offers for filing, or uses any record, document or thing knowing it to be false, and with purpose that it be taken as a genuine part of information or referred to in paragraph (1). . .

Paragraph (1) provides that an offense is committed if a person:

(1) Knowingly makes a false entry in, or false alteration of, any record, document or thing belonging to, or received or kept by, the government for information or record, or required by law to be kept by others for information of the government.

Granting the Division all favorable inferences, it has shown that respondent is guilty of violating N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7a(2). However, section b. of this statute defines a grading offense as follows:

> b. Grading. An offense under this section is a disorderly persons offense unless the actor's purpose is to defraud or injure anyone, in which case the offense is a crime of the third degree.

The Division has failed to establish affirmatively that respondent's purpose in committing the offense was "to defraud or injure anyone." The record shows that respondent committed the violation out of ignorance of the English language with the aid of another and for the purpose of obtaining employment in a foreign country. Notwithstanding her conviction of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2), the Division has failed to demonstrate that respondent's purpose was to defraud or to injure anyone. Absent these elements of purpose, the offense is not one of the third degree; rather, it is a disorderly persons offense.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that respondent's violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7 is a disorderly persons offense, rather than a crime of the third degree and, accordingly, is not an automatic disqualifying offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

Pursuant to Issue B. in the Prehearing Order, the Division has shown that respondent failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, by way of N.J.S.A. 5:12-80d, where respondent supplied information which was untrue and misleading for her casino employee registration on the occasion of her false representation of a Social Security account number on the PHDF-4. The record demonstrates, however, that no such misleadings or misrepresentations occurred upon respondent's completion of the PHDF-2A for her casino employee license (P-2). In the matter of State v. Conrado Berrio and Carlos Berrio, OAL DKT. Nos. CCC 9692-83 and CCC 9931-83, Comm. Order of Remand (October 31, 1985), the Commission "determined that a social security number is a material fact pertaining to qualification criteria within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b." (Id. at 3.) The Commission in Berrio effectively overruled its holding in State v. Orlando Ospina-Lopez, where the Commission held, among other things, that "A social security number is not included among the information that the Commission requires applicants to provide on a PHDF-4." (Id. at 2.)

Here, respondent is guilty of violating N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, by her use of information which was untrue or misleading as to a material fact on the PHDF-4 for her casino employee registration. Moreover, respondent failed to comport with her "continuing duty" to supply the Commission with the true information concerning her valid Social Security account number when it became known to her, as required under N.J.S.A. 5:12-80d. It is not enough that respondent reported such true information on the PHDF-2A when she applied for her casino emplovee license. Respondent advanced untrue and misleading information in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, and failed in her continuing duty to disclose to the Commission that the information was not true when it became known to her, in violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-80d. I so FIND and CONCLUDE.

The Division alleges that respondent's conduct is inimical to the Casino Control Act, under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4), by virtue of respondent's violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7, as incorporated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). Therefore, she is automatically disqualified to continue to hold her casino employee registration and license. Although respondent's violations of the Act are not to be treated lightly, the Division's allegations and assertions are rejected here, for the reason that it was unable to establish affirmatively that respondent committed a crime of the third degree. Rather, in an analysis of the elements of the offense under N.J.S.A. 2C:28-7, this tribunal found and concluded that respondent's violation rose only to a disorderly persons offense, conduct which falls below automatic disqualification to hold and continue registration and licensure. Orlando Ospina-Lopez.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that respondent's conduct, albeit an infraction, was not inimical to the Casino Control Act under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4). Accordingly, the Division's charge and allegation with respect to Issue C., as found in the Prehearing Order, is hereby DISMISSED.

Similarly, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Division's charge and allegation of respondent's lack of good character, honesty and integrity is without merit and, therefore, must be DISMISSED.

Respondent's violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2) is the only offense for which she has a conviction, either criminal or civil. Respondent testified credibly that she has never been in trouble (with law enforcement officials) in her native Colombia. Nor was any evidence proffered at this hearing of an arrest record prior to or subsequent to the violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2).

Respondent arrived in the United States from Bogota, Colombia, as a legal alien on or about May 15, 1982, when she was approximately 24 years of age. She had taken courses in the English language while in school in Colombia; however, she was inattentive during her studies because she did not believe she would have a need for the second language in the future. In any event, respondent has some understanding of spoken English language but neither speaks, writes or reads it with any degree of proficiency.

Even with her limited use and understanding of the English language, respondent has been able to improve her status in the workplace. Starting with menial jobs in the casino industry—i.e., dishwasher, floor sweeper, busperson—respondent availed herself of the opportunity for further schooling and instruction to become qualified as a blackjack dealer. Respondent now holds such a position and performs her duties in a commendable manner (R-2, R-3, R-4).

Although this tribunal has found and concluded that respondent's violation of 42 U.S.C. §408(g)(2) is less than an automatic disqualifying offense under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and (4), it has carefully considered the eight rehabilitation factors pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d to FIND and CONCLUDE that respondent has demonstrated, by clear and convincing evidence, that she is rehabilitated.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that no penalty or sanction shall be assessed against respondent; therefore, I ORDER that the complaint against Maria N. Guerrero be and is hereby DISMISSED.

This recommended decision may be affirmed, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

ORDER OF REMAND

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the Administrative Law Judge having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of June 7, 1989,

IT IS on this 21st day of June 1989, ORDERED that this matter is remanded to the OAL for consideration of the following issues:

(1) The DGE is directed to produce the municipal court disposition of the complaint filed on December 3, 1982, against the applicant for theft in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3 (R1 in evid).

(2) Consistent with the N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.1(b), the ALJ should have considered all of the issues raised in the prehearing conference order. Accordingly, it is appropriate to determine whether the applicant committed a theft offense which would warrant disqualification under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86 and if so, whether she may, nevertheless, demonstrate her rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90(h), and

(3) The applicant is directed to product additional evidence of her good character, honesty and integrity.

IN THE APPLICATION OF SHERRI L. HARRIS FOR A CASINO EMPLOYEE LICENSE

Ralph Fusco, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner, Casino Control Commission (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Sherri L. Harris, appellant, pro se

Record Closed: March 9, 1989 Decided: April 24, 1989

BEFORE RICHARD J. MURPHY, ALJ:

Sherri L. Harris (applicant) applies to the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for a casino employee license pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) objects to this license because of Ms. Harris's arrest record and employment history in the casino industry. The issues are whether Ms. Harris is: (1) disqualified from licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g; (2) whether she can show rehabilitation under N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d; and (3) whether she can establish her good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90h. For the reasons set forth, this opinion recommends that the Commission deny the application.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division and applicant Sherri Harris requested a hearing on her license application on December 1, 1988, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 12, 1988, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on February 17, 1989, to settle the issues and procedures and the matter was heard on March 9, 1989, in Atlantic City, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The material facts are not in dispute. The applicant disclosed to the Division that she had been arrested on September 6, 1982, for theft of over $500 contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-3, in connection with her work as a salesperson at Steinbach's Department Store (R-1). She was prosecuted in Egg Harbor Municipal Court on January 31, 1983, as a disorderly person and she pled guilty to that charge and received a fine of $500 plus court costs and payment to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board. Ms. Harris admits that she took some money out of the cash register at Steinbach's (she can recall taking at least $100 in cash) and she claims that she did so because she was "just a kid" (she was 21 at the time) and she needed the money to pay her rent. She does not believe that she took $550 from the cash register, but she is unsure as to the exact amount. She is certain that on at least two or three occasions as a cashier at Steinbach's she allowed friends to take goods from the store without paying. She claims that one of her friends whom she allowed to steal clothing had an infant baby, but also was employed.

The second matter raised by the Division concerns the applicant's arrest in November of 1981 by the Norfolk Virginia Police Department for issuing a worthless check, which is argued an allegance to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:21-5. She was convicted of the offense and given a 12-month suspended sentence and a fine of $25. She explains that her roommate actually wrote the check on her account. She did not dispute the fact of her conviction for this offense.

The Division also raises what it views as unsatisfactory information concerning an applicant's employment history in the casino industry. The Division notes that the applicant was terminated by Trump's Castle in September of 1988 for absenteeism, which she attributes to problems in caring for her infant son. Documents submitted by the Division establish that the applicant was terminated by Trump's Castle because of various violations of employee rules, including absenteeism, as well as for going on break without permission and for failing to punch in and out. She was also cited for being abusive to patrons. Ms. Harris explains her absenteeism by citing sickness of her son, and she explains that the stresses of serving as a cocktail waitress occasionally led her to talk "hard" to customers.[1] Ms. Harris states that the arrest occurred when she was considerably younger and she states that she is now in a more mature frame of mind and would never commit such acts again.

There is no dispute as to the above facts and I so FIND.

ISSUE

The prehearing order sets forth three issues, including disqualification under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and rehabilitation under N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. The third issue on this application for a casino employee license is whether Sherri Harris can establish by clear and convincing evidence her good character, honesty and integrity under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90h. The third issue will be discussed first because it is the ultimate burden the applicant must bear.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

In order to qualify for a casino employee license, an applicant must "produce such information, documentation and assurances as may be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence the applicant's good character, honesty and integrity." See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90b.

[1] The Division's objection also stated that the applicant had been terminated from the Trump Plaza Hotel on June 26, 1988, for sleeping on the job, but the parties agreed at the hearing that this part of the objection was not factually accurate and it was not considered as part of the hearing.

Under N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) the applicant must establish good character, honesty and integrity as a matter of fact and not merely as a matter of reputation. See, Application of Boardwalk Regency Corp. for a Casino License, 90 N.J. 361, 369 (1982), appeal dismissed, 459 U.S. 1081 (1982). The applicant must establish good character, honesty and integrity by evidence that is both clear and convincing. Applicants have been found not to have established good character, honesty and integrity as a matter of fact where there is evidence that they have engaged in such nefarious activities as procuring prostitutes for foreign officials engaged in casino regulation or swindling casino patrons by altering dice. See, Alter v. Div. of Gaming Enforcement, 6 N.J.A.R. 584 (1979); Div. of Gaming Enforcement v. Matta, 5 N.J.A.R. 439 (1983).

In this case, the applicant admits her arrest and conviction for offenses of theft and issuing a worthless check. She freely admits that the theft offense was deliberate and she exhibited no evident remorse concerning stealing from Steinbach's cash register in 1982, or for allowing her friends to steal clothing. She dismisses the bad check offense as something her friend did, notwithstanding the fact that she was convicted for it, and she also cites her young age at the time. Given the intentional and deliberate nature of these offenses, I CONCLUDE that the applicant has failed to establish her good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence. These offenses go to the heart of her function as a cocktail waitress responsible for making change and dealing with customers. She has presented no persuasive evidence to explain the offenses or to even present them in a more sympathetic way, other than to dismiss them as a discretion of youth, despite the fact that she was 20 years of age when she committed the theft in 1982. Given the nature of the offenses, she has not produced sufficient evidence of her good character, honesty and integrity to qualify for licensure.

In light of the above conclusion as to the applicant's failure to demonstrate her good character, honesty and integrity, it is not necessary to reach and resolve the other issues in the prehearing order as to disqualification and rehabilitation and I so CONCLUDE.

DISPOSITION

On the basis of the above findings of fact and conclusions of law it is ORDERED that the application of Sherri L. Harris for a casino employee license be denied.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

Historical Developers of Pennsylvania, Inc., seeks a casino service industry license from the Casino Control Commission. In a letter dated May 26, 1988, the Division of Gaming Enforcement called to the attention of the Commission certain circumstances surrounding the applicant and its president, Thomas Scannapieco. These circumstances specifically involved an extortion of monies from Historical Developers, Inc., ("HD") a corporation in which Scannapieco was 50 percent owner prior to the formation of Historical Developers of Pennsylvania, Inc. The Division reported that it did not object to the application for licensure, however, it recommended that a hearing be held for the creation of a full record to determine the qualifications of the applicant for licensure. The Casino Control concurred in this recommendation and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

A prehearing was held before Honorable Stephen W. Thompson, ALJ, on August 1, 1988, and a Prehearing Order was issued on August 5, 1988. A hearing was then held before Honorable Jeff S. Masin, ALJ, on October 27, 1988, at the Haddonfield Municipal Court. Following completion of the hearing, additional time was provided to allow the applicant to submit character references. These were received and the record closed on November 16, 1988.

ISSUES

The Prehearing Order established the issues for consideration at the hearing as:

A. Whether petitioner's sole stockholder committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C-27-2, bribery of a public official.

B. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino service industry licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(c) and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3c.

C. If applicable, whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation.

CONCLUSION

Having considered the evidence presented, which includes both the testimony of Mr. Scannapieco and Bruce R. Lesser, Esq., counsel for the corporation who also was involved in representing Historical Developers, Inc., and Mr. Scannapieco's interests therein, the testimony of Barbara K. Friese of the Division of Gaming Enforcement, the documentary evidence, and the transcripts of testimony from the criminal trial of United States of America v. Leland Beloff and Robert Rego, held in the United States District for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in March and June 1987, as well as the character references, I CONCLUDE that Historical Developers of Pennsylvania, Inc., has established by the requisite level of proof that it is qualified for licensure as a casino service industry. More specifically, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Scannapieco did not commit acts constituting a statutory disqualifer pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and that he has the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino service industry licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-92(c) and N.J.A.C. 19:43-1.3c.

In arriving at the above-stated conclusions, I have determined that Mr. Scannapieco did not know that his business partner in Historical Developers, Inc., John Bennett, had actually made payments of bribes to Philadelphia City Councilman Leland Beloff and his Administrative Assistant, Robert Rego. I FIND that Mr. Scannapieco did believe that he was being "ripped off" by his business partner, Mr. Bennett, and that although he was perhaps naive as to the possibility that Bennett's story of being solicited for a bribe was in fact true rather than a ploy and a scheme for Bennett to steal money from the company, there is no evidence at all of a credible nature to support any conclusion that Mr. Scannapieco agreed to the payment of bribes. While he can be properly criticized for not having called to the attention of law enforcement authorities the possibility that Bennett's story of a bribe solicitation was true, I CONCLUDE that given his mind set that Bennett was stealing from him and the financial situation in which he found himself, his actions, while not completely appropriate, were not sufficiently inappropriate as to constitute a significant mark against him. While Mr. Scannapieco cannot be considered to be wholly free from criticism for not having more assertively investigated the exact nature of Bennett's actions and not having called them to the attention of the authorities, I cannot find that his failure to do so was motivated by anything other than concern for his precarious financial situation and his belief that his ability to do anything about Bennett's apparent thievery was greatly limited or perhaps only persuable through civil proceedings. I FIND that Mr. Bennett's testimony was on the whole credible and that more specifically, his testimony as to his lack of belief of Bennett's story of being solicited for a bribe was truthful.

EVIDENCE

Thomas Scannapieco was the chief witness for the petitioner. Mr. Scannapieco graduated from St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia with a degree in physics in 1971 and then worked in a cooperative program involving engineering and physics, performing classified work for the United States military. He held a confidential and secret level clearance and continued to work under this authority with General Electric. Eventually, GE determined to consolidate its anti-submarine warfare work in Syracuse and Mr. Scannapieco was given an option to move there or transfer to a different technology.

Since there were no other opportunities which interested him in the Philadelphia area and he did not wish to relocate, he remained in the Philadelphia area and purchased some "shells" in the area near the art museum. He became involved in renovating these vacant townhouses during evenings and weekends and ultimately decided to work full time on these projects. Although he had no experience, he did the work himself and apparently enjoyed it. In 1975, he left GE and completed his first renovation in mid 1976. He then moved into it and purchased another building. Ultimately, as a result of contacts which he made with an architect through the purchase of one of the renovated homes by the architect's relative, he became involved in restaurant architecture and became a general contractor, as opposed to a renovator. He continued this work until about 1979.

Mr. Scannapieco had made the acquaintance of John Bennett while at St. Joseph's. Bennett was a classmate who had transferred to premedicine and had become a medical doctor. In 1979, Bennett was the head of an emergency room at a hospital in the Philadelphia area. The men's wives were close friends. In 1979, Bennett advised Scannapieco that he wished to become involved in a real estate investment. Scannapieco was aware of several possible "tax credit" projects in the Spring Garden area and, because he wanted to get out of the general contracting business and go into development, he joined with Bennett, found a building and structured a certified historic rehabilitation. Bennett invested and supplied other investors. Scannapieco and Bennett formed a corporation known as Historical Developers, Inc., each owning 50 percent of the stock. Scannapieco operated the company and served as its president. Bennnett remained a full-time doctor while Scannapieco used the company as his only means of support. The business grew to become one of the largest firms doing historical renovation work. Bennett became convinced in early 1983 that he could make more money from the development business than from his hospital salary and he went full time with the company, although he retained his medical license.

According to Scannapieco when Bennett became involved full time, problems began to develop. Bennett believed that he was fully qualified to run a development business. Major problems and arguments arose over the men's different ways of dealing with clients. According to Scannapieco, he took the "long-term view" fostering long term relationships with contractors, suppliers, etc., extending them credit, attempting to avoid litigation. Bennett, on the other hand, took a "short term attitude" "burning his bridges behind him" holding contractors to the lowest price, even where they had underestimated, holding the retainage as damages, and adopting a generally litigious, confrontational attitude. Bennett did not see quality as the primary concern while Scannapieco did.

Approximately one year after Bennett's arrival as a full time participant in the business, Scannapieco realized that the situation was "not going to work." In mid 1984, he determined that he had to get out of the business. He discussed his concerns with his attorney, Bruce Lesser. Bennett and Scannapieco had no written agreements and a single signature checking account. In the course of operations, Scannapieco determined that Bennett was "dishonest." He learned that Bennett was using the corporation and its money to promote his own schemes. He was expanding into the medical building business, developing medically oriented projects such as free standing testing facilities, etc. Scannapieco had gone along with this devleopment, but he learned that Bennett was diverting time from other projects to the establishment of these medical businesses. While the arrangement was supposed to be 50-50, in fact he learned that Bennett had started a free standing CAT scan facility and was working on it on his own without conferring with Scannapieco. Scannapieco began reviewing the company's files and learned that the development of this CAT scan center was set up as a 50-50 deal between Bennett and Bennett's wife, cutting Scannapieco out completely.

In addition to the medical building issue, Scannapieco learned that Bennett had been involved with Bennett's father in supplying certain carpet to the historic developments which was not as represented to be. Bennett's father was involved in the carpeting business, but according to Scannapieco, his carpet was not up to snuff and as a result most of the carpet bought by the business came from Wilton Carpet in New Jersey. On one particular project, Bennett came to Scannapieco with dense, high quality carpet which was of comparable price and quality to that which was being supplied by Wilton. Scannapieco agreed to the purchase of this carpet from Bennett's father and it was purportedly installed. Approximately six months later, Scannapieco had occasion to take a sample of this carpet to show to a client and noticed that it was of the same color but clearly not of the same depth of pile as that which had been presented as the sample by Bennett. Scannapieco felt that this was the result of a scheme on the part of Bennett to divert corporate funds for his own use.

Another instance of Bennett's scheming arose as a result of fees paid to interior designers. Bennett's wife was one as was Scannapieco's sister. The company was attempting to give them essentially equal amounts of work. Scannapieco learned that Bennett had written approximately $50,000 worth of checks to his wife without Scannapieco knowing it and that in the same period his sister had received only about $10,000 or $15,000. Apparently two different fee schedules were being used.

Although Scannapieco determined that he had to get out of the business arrangement with Bennett, he felt quite "vulnerable." He had all of his assets tied up in the business and when he went to speak to Bruce Lesser and told him the situation, he explained that he was "scared to death," that he had no unencumbered assets and that he could not even pay legal fees. He had determined that Bennett had approximately $100,000 in stocks which were not involved in any of the company's business. During this time, which was the spring and summer of 1984, Scannapieco did not feel that he was in a position to separate himself totally from Bennett. Initially, he did arrange with Bennett to separate different types of responsbilities between the two partners. This did not work out very well and in January 1985, they signed a non-overlap agreement.

The company had become involved in the development of a property at 328 Spruce Street in Philadelphia. This was a "private transaction," not involving government. The property was purchased for tax credits and was to be sold to investors. A building permit was obtained which permitted the developer to take down a brick wall in the rear of the property which would allow for the placement of two parking spaces. After the work was done, there was a good deal of community opposition to the removal of the wall, which apparently had some historic value. Scannapieco was asked to come to a neighborhood meeting to discuss the concern. When he arrived, he found 30 or 40 people in the yard who were quite adamant that wall be put back up. After the meeting, he was approached by Robert Rego, who was identified as the administrative assistant to Councilman Leland Beloff, who was the Philadelphia City Councilman for the councilmanic district within which the property lay. Rego explained that if Historical Developers did not put back up the wall, it would receive no work within the district or any other work within Center City. Although Scannapieco argued against rebuilding the wall, the councilman and neighbors would not back down. The wall was ultimately put up at a loss to the developer of many thousands of dollars resulting from both the cost of the work and the loss of the parking spots, which diminished the value of the property.

In August 1984, the company was trying to gain approval as developer for the Charles Building. This project was to be undertaken at the request of the Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority, which had advertised for proposals. On December 6, 1984, the Redevelopment Authority approved Historical Developers as the Developer. Dr. Bennett was responsible for this project, since the partners had by that time separated their tasks to a considerable extent. Bennett filled out the application for approval, which Scannapieco signed as president of the corporation. In addition, Scannapieco participated in strategy sessions concerning the application.

According to Scannapieco, he had no involvement with the Charles Building Project after approximately December 6, 1984 and certainly after January 8, 1985, when a non-overlap agreement was signed which completely separated and distinguished the projects upon which the men were working. The Charles Building was assigned to Dr. Bennett. Bennett was aware by this point that Scannapieco wished to get out of the business, but Lesser had advised Scannapieco that he would have to "work his way out." It would be necessary to wait until the company's credit lines were paid back at the end of the year, at which point a break would be more feasible. A new corporation was actually formed with a separate checking account as of March 31, 1985. An agreement for the sale of Scannapieco's interest in the company to Bennett was signed on June 30, 1985.

In late February or early March 1985, Bennett advised Scannapieco that he had been approached by Robert Rego with a demand for $25,000 to be paid in order to introduce legislation in Philadelphia City Council authorizing the development of the Charles Building by Historical Developers. According to Scannapieco he found this story "incredible." He had previously done four redevelopment projects of up to $350,000 purchase price which was considerably more than $100,000 involved in the Charles Building purchase price. He had never been solicted for a bribe before and did not see why Rego would make such a request of Bennett when Scannapieco was president of the company. Scannapieco believed that Bennett was scheming to obtain the $25,000 for himself. He did not believe Bennett's story that Rego had told him to have a $25,000 check drawn to a New Jersey carpet company (not Wilton Carpets) as a method of transfer. Scannapieco saw this as a "nice and cozy" arrangement because of Bennett's father's involvement in the carpet business. He thought it was an obvious attempt by Bennett to divert corporate funds which would then either go to the father or to an affiliate. He did not authorize the writing of the checks and told Bennett he would not approve it. Ultimately, in late March or early April he learned that Bennett had two checks drawn totalling $25,000 to a carpet company in Haddonfield. The timing of the checks for the purchase of carpet was inappropriate in that it was much too early in the job for such a purchase. There was no need for the company to be placing deposits on carpet and it had never had to do so before. Eventually, he learned that a resolution had been approved by City Council naming HD as the developer on February 28, 1985.

John Bennett testified in the two trials held in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania in the prosecution of Leland Beloff and Robert Rego for, among other things, extortion by public officials. Beloff and Rego were convicted on July 2, 1987, of all charges against them. During his testimony at the two trials, Bennett was asked if he had discussed the payment of the bribes with his partner Scannapieco. He said that he did report the bribe request to his partner and they discussed whether or not to make the payments and originally decided not to do so. However, the money was ultimately paid and according to Bennett's testimony at page 588 of the transcript of June 26, 1987, he discussed the demand with Scannapieco, who authorized payment out of the HD account of one check for $5,000 and another for $20,000. According to Bennett, he later had these changed on the books to show payments from his personal account.

Mr. Scannapieco adamantly denied that he ever authoized a payment of $25,000 for carpet from the New Jersey company involved or that he ever authorized payment of any bribes to Beloff and Rego. Scannapieco was not charged in the Beloff matter. Bennett testified under a grant of immunity. Scannapieco was never contacted concerning the matter and first learned of Beloff's involvement from news reports of the trial. He also learned that other payments had been made by Bennett for other projects which did not involve him. These projects came at a time when he was no longer associated with Scannapieco, except for some passive involvement in certain passive investments in buildings which were not completed, in the process of being rented or in the early stages of projects where the partners could not agree on the exact details of the separation.

Specifically, with respect to the Charles Building, Mr. Scannapieco explained that he believed that Dr. Bennett had been involved in a major breach of confidence with respect to this property. The agreement worked out with the Redevelopment Authority had called for below market rate rentals for relocatees from the site of the proposed Philadelphia Convention Center. It appeared that with the favorable responses received for these low rates, rentals would be easily arranged. However, no space was rented and Bennett was telling the Redevelopment Authority that no deals were being worked out. Scannapieco believed that Bennett was attempting to rent the sites for market rates which he felt was improper. Scannapieco had put up $4,500 in capital for this project and upon his demand, this was returned to him on September 1, 1985.

After the separation, Mr. Scannapieco formed Historical Developers of Pennsylvania, Inc., of which he is 100 percent owner. Originally, he intended to continue rehabilitation of properties on the certified list of historical sites. However, because of a change in the tax code, this became financially less practical and as a result he began to pursue "non-tax break" properties. He is now "just a plain developer of economic projects."

The witness explained that in the performance of his work, he seeks to meet the highest standards of integrity and foster the highest reputation for his honesty and the quality of his work. He has been involved in many regionally significant projects, receiving awards for a number of his developments, and has been involved in community service fighting the drug problem in his neighborhood and donating property to be used by the police department as a mini-precinct. Among other awards he received the Governor's Award for Crime Prevention.

On cross-examination, the witness denied any involvement with 925 Pine Street, another project which he claimed was Bennett's throughout. He denied that he ever spoke or corresponded with Bennett or Rego concerning this project. In addition, with respect to testimony given during the second Beloff trial at page 523, he testified that Bennett was "entirely incorrect" concerning his having had contact with Beloff or Rego concerning 925 Pine Street.

Scannapieco did tell Lesser Bennett's story of the extortion demand after he found out about the checks which had been written to the carpet company in New Jersey. Scannapieco is not sure how quickly he advised Lesser of this, but he indicated that he felt no urgency because of his belief that it was merely a fund diversion. The contact with Lesser may have been within four to eight weeks after the checks were written.

Scannapieco never believed that the money was actually paid for a bribe and, despite Bennett's testimony and the conviction of Beloff and Rego, he is still of the opinion that Bennett was merely diverting money from the corporation.

The witness explained that he felt that the alleged bribe demand made no sense. The coincidence of the fact that payment was supposed to be made to a carpet company, when Bennett's father had such a company, the fact that Rego had not come to him as president of the company demanding the bribe, the fact that there had been other approvals received without bribe demands and the fact that he and Bennett were in the process of separating their accounts, all seemed suspicious to him. He did not recall having told Rego or Beloff about the separation. He considered the information given to him by Bennett, but decided that it was just another scheme to divert money.

When questioned concerning his reasons for not going to the authorities or taking some other action concerning the apparent diversion of funds, he again stressed his economic vulnerability at the time and his belief that he had to get economically stable in order to take any action. His priority was to separate from Bennett without getting involved in any protracted litigation which would tie up his assets and catch him in a day-to-day relationship with Bennett, a situation which he described as totally unattenable. He made a "practical business decision to get out as soon as he could reasonably do so." Mr. Scannapieco himself would not break the law and it would be "a pleasure to report law breakers."

The witness was questioned concerning his conversations with Division Investigator Barbara Friese. He could not clearly recall whether he had discussed with her his meeting with Beloff and Rego and Bennett's having come to him and reported Rego's bribe demand.

The witness met Rego twice, once after the neighborhood meeting concerning the wall and the other time in Beloff's office when he had gone there to advise the councilman that the wall had been put back on the property and to ask that HD's name not be removed from consideration for the Charles Building project. Rego's comments at the time of the meeting concerning the wall had "shocked him." He expected a "more professional approach." He listened to Rego and did not say whether he would or would not replace the wall, but said that he would consider it. He probably told Bennett of this conversation. He believed that Rego's statements of a threatening nature were uncalled for, both in tenor and personality. However, he did not think that Rego had the capacity to carry out his threats. Scannapieco described himself at the time as "apolitical and perhaps naive" and he did not see Rego's comments as all that significant. However, he did believe that Reg and/or Beloff might have some influence on the unions for the Redevelopment Authority and could have made life more "difficult" in Center City.

At the meeting which he attended in Beloff's office with the Councilman and Rego, Mr. Scannapieco did not tell Beloff about Rego's threats following the community meeting. He did not do so because he believed that any threat by Rego was a threat by Beloff. At the time of the meeting, to which Scannapieco had gone prepared to advise that the wall had been put back up, Beloff seemed "overly friendly" and "seemed to push aside technical things." There was nothing about this meeting which gave a signal to Scannapieco that any further demands, extortionate or otherwise, would be coming from the councilman or his assistant.

On October 12, 1984, Michael R. Arno, Executive Director of the Redevelopment Authority, wrote to Rita M. Cannavo, an attorney for HD, concerning the problem which had been raised by Councilman Beloff who had "refused to introduce this Resolution (for 925 Pine Street) until a satisfactory solution is reached concerning the property at 328 Spruce Street." He indicated that an attempt was being made to arrange a meeting for October 24, 1984, at the Redevelopment Authority Board Room to try to work out the problem concerning the 925 Pine Street project. He does believe that the meeting occurred, but he does not recall attending and cannot recall who did appear for the company.

Bruce R. Lesser, an attorney licensed in Pennsylvania and a partner in the law firm of Lesser & Kaplan of BlueBell, Pennsylvania, testified that he represented a purchaser of one of Scannapieco's rehabilitated buildings in 1982-82. At that time, his understanding was that Bennett was not fully active in the business. In June of 1982, Lesser became counsel for HD and sometime thereafter Bennett became a full-time partner. There were no written contracts between the men to the best of Lesser's knowledge.

Lesser agreed with Scannapieco's descriptions of the different attitudes and views of the two partners. He described Bennett's attitude as "just get it done."

In early 1984, Scannapieco indicated to Lesser his disenchantment with the partnership and his belief that he had to terminate and that he wanted out immediately. In Pennsylvania there is no shareholders agreement providing for a put and call. It would therefore be necessary for a receiver to be appointed if the partnership broke up without some kind of agreement. This would destroy the existing business, which was totally dependent upon the reputation of the owners. Litigation would destroy confidence in the business. In early Spring, when the discussions were held, it would have been the worst time for a real estate project to become engaged in these kinds of difficulties because of the financial arrangements which existed. It was necessary to finish the projects, run out the year's projects, thus releasing personal property from pledges of collateral for loans and also providing some profit to the partners which could be used as needed in any litigation.

Mr. Lesser describes Scannapieco's reputation as of the highest quality. Lesser is very active in the real estate community and has learned of Scannapieco's reputation from customers, contractors and other leaders in the real estate business.

According to Lesser, he did direct the comptroller of HD to take a look for any checks which seemed unusual and it was during this process that the checks to the carpet company were discovered. The purpose of this review was to attempt to look for any monies which had been diverted or taken out in order to reduce monies that would be needed for a buy out. Lesser described he and Scannapieco as "a little naive" in connection with this review.

When they learned of the $25,000 drawn for carpets, Scannapieco and he discussed the matter and Tom indicated that he wanted this money taken out, that is, he wanted credit for it in the financial dissolution of the company. Sometime before June of 1985, Scannapieco told Lesser the story concerning Bennett's alleged solicitation by Rego.

According to the witness, when he learned of the diversion of the monies, he concluded that no criminal actions were available. There were no actual written agreements between the corporate owners. Any attempt to obtain a civil remedy by threatening criminal action would constitute extortion under Pennsylvania Law. Lesser believed that the best situation was to find out the financial details of any diversions and then attempt to work them into the arrangements for the dissolution.

Barbara Friese, an employee of the Division of Gaming Enforcement for eight and one-half years in the service industry licensing area who has headed the real estate and construction section for two and one-half years and who was involved in investigating this application, interviewed Mr. Scannapieco in March 1986 and on several occasions thereafter. She was also present when Deputy Attorney General McDonough interviewed the applicant. She testified that in their conversations, Scannapieco did not speak of a bribe attempt. He brought up the incident concerning the wall and his subsequent meeting with Rego and Beloff in Beloff's chambers which he described as a very formal meeting in which he advised that the wall had been reconstructed, mentioned other projects, but not the Charles project specifically.

In addition to the testimony presented and the documents, which by and large are the various agreements between the owners involved in the separation of the duties and ultimately of the business, the transcripts of the testimony of Dr. John A. Bennett in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania on March 25, 1985 and June 26, 1987, in the two trials of the criminal charges against Leland Beloff and Robert Rego were presented in evidence. These have been read fully by the Administrative Law Judge. In them, Bennett describes the circumstances which surrounded the alleged bribe solicitation made by Rego at the Vesper Club in Philadelphia, which ultimately resulted in the payment by HD through Bennett of two checks, one for $5,000 and one for $20,000, drawn to a Haddonfield, New Jersey, carpet company, but actually payments made at the demand of Rego. Scannapieco's name came up in the testimony in a very limited fashion. On cross-examination by counsel for the defendants, Bennett was asked whether he had discussed the $25,000 demand with his partner. He indicated that he did and also that Scannapieco authorized payment. In addition, Bennett said that when they first discussed the matter, "we decided to play his bluff and not make any payments" (March 25, 1987 at page 122). Of course, according to the testimony and the evidence presented, the checks were ultimately drawn, first on the HD accounts and then, according to Bennett's testimony at page 588 and 89 of the June 26, 1987 transcript, the checks were then reclassified to his own account. There is no other real discussion of Scannapieco's role or activities in connection with these matters in the transcripts.

Following the hearing, affidavits were submitted by five individuals on behalf of Scannapieco, each attesting to his reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. These documents were provided by Alfred Cade, Retired United States Army General and now Senior Vice President of Ceasar's Hotel and Casino, Dr. Peter Constantini, a physician in South Jersey, John Marcow, a personal friend of Scannapieco for "almost my entirely life," Michael Spada, Comptroller for Historical Developers of Pennsylvania, Inc., since 1986, and Rodney A. Werner, a licensed architect in the Philadelphia area who is also associated with Scannapieco in connection with certain civic activities of the Spring Garden Civic Association.

DISCUSSION

The evidence presented by the petitioner in this case concerning the matters raised in the Division's letter, specifically those involving the bribe purportedly paid to Councilman Beloff, consists of Scannapieco's absolute denial that he authorized the payment of the bribes, believed that bribes had been paid, or would have paid bribes had he actually felt that Beloff and Rego were trying to extort monies from the company. Scannapieco's position throughout was that he doubted that any bribe requests had been made and that he felt that Bennett was merely stealing monies from him by diverting them from HD. In fact, Beloff and Rego were convicted of extortion and Bennett testified under a grant of immunity in the federal trials. Based upon the evidence presented, I FIND that Bennett did receive a bribe demand from Rego on behalf of he and Beloff and that the monies were paid through the subterfuge of payments to the carpet company in Haddonfield.

In response to Mr. Scannapieco's strong denial that he authorized the payment of bribes or knew that bribes were actually being paid or believed that they had actually been demanded, the Division has presented the testimony of its investigator who indicates some question as to whether Scannapieco mentioned the purported bribe request and the testimony of Bennett in the form of the transcript of Bennett's testimony at the criminal trials. Bennett did not testify in these proceedings, apparently was unwilling to do so, and quite probably was not subject to subpoena as I believe he does not reside in New Jersey. Be that as it may, all we have of direct evidence concerning the purported involvement of Scannapieco in authorizing the payment of the bribes is the transcribed testimony of Bennett. This testimony is hearsay in connection with this matter. While the transcripts are admissible under the terms of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-106, the significant question is whether, despite the fact that reasonable men might review them in connection with this serious matter, whether reasonable men would put any reliance on this testimony in the form of which it is presented.

Although he received immunity, Dr. Bennett is hardly a stellar individual. The testimony concerning him by Scannapieco, as affirmed by Lesser, indicates that this gentleman was interested in "getting the job done," apparently without worrying too much about the ethics of the matter. By his own admission, he paid bribes on several occasions. While it is not impossible by any means that he could be telling the truth when he asserts Scannapieco knew of and approved the payment of bribes, the difficulty with accepting his transcribed testimony as significant and trustworthy evidence is apparent. He was not subject to cross-examination by counsel for Scannapieco, he was not subject to examination by this judge, he was not subject to the normal scrutiny which one called upon to make determinations of credibility is afforded by live presentation of testimony. In short, as where the credibility of a witness's testimony is absolutely and essentially crucial, as here in connection with Bennett's proferred accusations concerning Scannapieco, reliance upon transcripts of testimony provided in another proceeding in which this applicant was not involved is of extremely limited value and merit. I FIND that Dr. Bennett's testimony, while admissible, cannot be afforded any significant weight whatsoever in the circumstances of its presentation.

I considered the testimony of Mr. Scannapieco carefully. While he can be faulted for not having taken some more direct steps to attempt to prevent his business partner from ripping him off, while he might also be criticized for not having contacted law enforcement authorities to report what his partner was telling him concerning a purported bribe offer even if he did not believe his partner, on the whole, I found that Scannapieco gave every appearance of credibility in his denials of actual knowledge and belief concerning the bribes and I FIND that he did not authorize the payment of bribes and did not believe that Bennett had actually been solicited for a bribe. Whether he was naive in this lack of belief is another matter. It is not at all inconceivable that as a developer in a major city, particularly one with an unfortunate reputation for councilmanic mischief, that Scannapieco should have been alerted to the possibility that Bennett was telling him the truth that an unscrupulous city councilman and his administrative assistant were seeking to extort monies. However, despite these limitations, under all of the circumstances I believe that Scannapieco's distrust in Bennett was understandable, his lack of belief was explainable, and his failure to take any action with respect to contacting law enforcement authorities was at least somewhat defensible under the circumstances. As such, I can find no basis for concluding that Mr. Scannapieco engaged in any activities in connection with these matters which would substantially and signficantly limit a finding that he has the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure. In addition, the evidence presented, including the character references and the testimony of Mr. Lesser, as well as the evidence concerning the high regard that Scannapieco is held in with respect to his operations at HD of Pennsylvania, Inc., indicate that by and large Mr. Scannapieco is an honest, upright, law abiding and highly reputable citizen. I believe that he found himself involved in an unfortunate and difficult business situation which colored his view of his partner considerably and perhaps caused him to have a certain degree of tunnel vision and blindness with respect to the possibility that the company was being subjected to illegal demands by politicians.

Based upon the above, and for the reasons expressed in the conclusions set forth earlier in this decision, I CONCLUDE that the applicant is qualified for licensure as a casino service industry.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on July 14, 1988 seeking revocation of the respondent's casino hotel employee registration. The respondent requested a hearing on August 2, 1988. On August 15, 1988, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case. A prehearing conference was conducted on October 11, 1988. A plenary hearing convened on February 28, 1989.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division alleges that the respondent is disqualified from casino hotel employee registration because she was convicted on December 8, 1986 of selling cocaine. The Casino Control Act (Act) lists such a crime as a disqualification from casino employee registration. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c and 91b. The Division further alleges that the respondent failed to disclose her conviction on her application for casino hotel employee registration. The Act lists such a failure to disclose as an additional disqualification from casino hotel employee registration. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b and 91b. The respondent alleges that she is rehabilitated. The Act permits rehabilitated offenders to avoid disqualification from casino hotel employee registration. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

SUMMARY OF STATE'S EVIDENCE

The Division introduced into evidence a certified copy of respondent's conviction of December 8, 1986 (P-4). On that date, the respondent pled guilty in New Jersey Superior Court to an indictment charging her with distribution of a controlled dangerous substance contrary to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1). That statute has been recodified as N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. The supporting documents and the testimony of the respondent establish that the controlled dangerous substance was "crack," a form of cocaine.

The Division also introduced as exhibit P-5 the respondent's application form for casino hotel employee registration, which is called a Personal History Disclosure Form 4A (PHDF). It reveals that respondent answered "No" to the question "Have you ever been arrested or charged, even if not convicted, with any felony, crime, misdemeanor, disorderly persons offense, juvenile offense or other offense (other than a traffic violation) in New Jersey or anywhere else?"

The PHDF is signed and dated on April 1, 1987, subsequent to respondent's arrest and conviction.

The respondent admitted to a Division investigator that she purposefully concealed her arrest and conviction on the PHDF because she "needed a job pretty bad." At the hearing she admitted that she also concealed her arrest and conviction on her application of employment to Trump Castle, a licensed casino.

LAW

The Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq., at section 86c(1), lists certain crimes for the conviction of which an applicant will be disqualified for casino licensure. This section is made applicable to applicants for registration by section 91b. The crime of distribution of a controlled dangerous substance contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 is a listed disqualifier. Formerly N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1) was a listed disqualifier. It is the predecessor statute to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5.

The Act also provides for disqualification for failure to provide material information or for supplying untrue or misleading material facts pertaining to qualification criteria at section 86b.

Despite the existence of disqualification criteria as described in subsection c of section 86 (offenses), an applicant for registration may still be registered provided she can affirmatively establish her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. This exception, however, is inapplicable to disqualification criteria listed under subsection b of section 86 (failure to provide information).

FINDINGS OF FACT

I FIND that respondent was convicted of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1), distribution of a controlled dangerous substance, to wit: cocaine. This is the equivalent to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, a statutory disqualifier as defined in the Act at section 86c.

I FIND that the respondent failed to reveal a fact material to qualification as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b and 91b, to wit: a conviction for distribution of a controlled dangerous substance.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I CONCLUDE that the respondent is disqualified for casino hotel employee registration on the basis of a conviction for a disqualifying offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c and 91b.

I further CONCLUDE that the respondent is disqualified from casino hotel employee registration on the basis of a failure to provide facts material to qualification for registration pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b and 91b.

REHABILITATION

If the respondent was rehabilitated, she would not be eligible for registration. Rehabilitation is applicable only where the sole ground of disqualification was for an enumerated offense. Here the respondent is disqualified on two grounds, conviction for an offense and failure to provide material information to the Commission. Nevertheless, the applicant failed to satisfactorily address the issue of rehabilitation at the hearing. She was unable to obtain for example, in the four months which elapsed between the prehearing conference and the plenary hearing, a single letter of recommendation. She testified that she did not have time to obtain such a letter, even though she was unemployed during the entire time. In the two years since she was released from jail she has had no regular employment; nor has she acquired any academic or vocational schooling in that time. Her only adult employment was at Trump's Castle from which she was terminated for absenteeism.

ORDER

I ORDER that the respondent's casino hotel employee registration be REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: October 24, 1988 Decided: December 8, 1988

BEFORE RICHARD J. MURPHY, ALJ:

This is a violation proceeding brought by the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) under the Casino Control Act (N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq.) against Loyal Hyatt, who holds a casino hotel employee registration. Hyatt was charged with drug-related offenses. The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on June 4, 1985, and the Commission suspended Hyatt's registration on June 21, 1985. That suspension order was revoked on December 17, 1987, after the charges were conditionally discharged, and the matter was referred to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case on December 21, 1987. The hearing was conducted on May 17, 1988.[1] The matter was heard to completion on May 17, but the record was left open

[1] The matter was originally scheduled for hearing on February 25, 1988, but adjourned due to illness. Subsequent dates for April 19 and April 28 were adjourned because counsel were unavailable and discovery incomplete.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

until June 6 for submission of additional documentation and an opportunity for reply to it. After reviewing additional documentation submitted and providing an opportunity for response to it, I ordered on July 20 that the Division produce Peter Aiutto, a confidential informant in this matter. The Division made an extended effort to locate Mr. Aiutto, but on September 22, advised that he could not be found. The Division also offered additional documentary evidence on that date. The respondent replied to that evidence and made a further argument on October 13 and the record was closed on October 24 after the Division was given an opportunity to respond.

The issues presented are (1) statutory disqualification under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g; (2) inimicality, N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(2); (3) rehabilitation, N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d; and (4) waiver, N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(e). For the reasons set forth, this opinion recommends that respondent's registration be revoked.

FACTS

The material facts are not in dispute. Loyal Hyatt holds casino employee registration no. 26536-40 and was formerly employed by the Tropicana Hotel/Casino as a banquet manager until terminated on May 16, 1985, following his arrest at the Tropicana for possession of a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine). The Atlantic County Grand Jury handed up an indictment against Hyatt on January 15, 1986, charging him with possession of a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine) contrary to N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1) and possession of controlled dangerous substances (again cocaine) with intent to distribute in violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19a(1). Hyatt plead guilty to the possession count in October 1986, and the charge was conditionally discharged on September 8, 1987, after a year of probation during which his conduct was satisfactory and all drug tests were negative.

The two counts of the indictment arose out of one incident on May 16, 1985, in the banquet manager's office at the Tropicana Hotel/Casino. Division Agent John Lugo testified that he was called to the Tropicana on that date and there met Detective Sergeant William Smith, who detailed him to search the banquet manager's office. Detective Smith, who did not testify, arrested Hyatt and interviewed him. Lugo was not present during the interview, although he did hear Hyatt acknowledging his Miranda rights. While Smith interviewed Hyatt, Lugo searched the office and found a valise under the desk, which contained a small beige plastic container with a white powder residue, which later proved to be a trace amount of cocaine. The valise, plastic container belonged to Loyal Hyatt.

According to a New Jersey State Police Report prepared by Detective Sergeant William Smith and admitted into evidence (P-1), a confidential source at the casino, later identified as one Peter Aiutto, allegedly reported that he had observed Loyal Hyatt at his desk in the Tropicana with several glassine envelopes in his hands containing a white powder suspected to be cocaine. (P-1). As indicated, the Division is unable to locate Peter Aiutto. Detective Sgt. Smith's police report notes that members of the Tropicana Investigations Unit, Lt. Roger Brown and Investigator Sheldon Zuker, advised Smith of the following:

> . . .They responded to Loyal Hyatt's office via instructions of Mr. Babbick. Upon entering they informed Hyatt of the above allegation and informed him that they would conduct a search of his office. While conducting search, Inv. Zuker found a brown leather pouch (4 inches x 3 inches) in the upper left hand desk drawer. He opened the pouch zipper and pulled out several glassine envelopes which contained a white powder and a note which upon examination, was written to Hyatt and contained statements in reference to when Hyatt should pay for the substance within the pouch and the amount of money for the transaction. According to Inv. Zuker, Hyatt denied seeing the brown pouch before or the substance within. This writer immediately took possession of the brown pouch which contained the suspected narcotics. Upon examination of the pouch it revealed 13 glassine bags containing white powder, suspected CDS (cocaine). The same submitted to FBI lab for examination . . . A further search of the accused office was conducted by DGE personnel, Agt. Lugo and Det. Higgens, which revealed other narcotic paraphernalia and a small amount of CDS marijuana (U/ 25 gms). . . Upon questioning the accused, he stated that he was 'set up' and denied having any knowledge of the found narcotics contained within his desk. (P-1).

The note referred to above, which was found in the brown pouch in the office used by the banquest manager and others at Tropicana, states:

> Loyal,
> There are
> 3 (grams)
> 10 (one half) grams = $800
> P.S. Don't give anyone any breaks I'd rather (over) give it to you. If any problems give me a call over Hugh's or my house. I'll take care of you again after this batch. I'll need the money you owe me on Monday. Let me know if your stuck ($218).

The author of the note is not identified on its face and the state has offered no evidence to supply such identification. Hyatt denies any knowledge of the note. A gaming enforcement agent, John Lugo, who was present at the search, testified that he found a valise under a desk being used by Hyatt and further found inside the valise a small beige container with a white powder residue. Lugo also found marijuana cigarette butts on the floor next to the heating ducts in the office. The amount of cocaine found was described as a trace amount. A Request for Examination of Evidence specified laboratory findings as to items which were found in the desk at the Tropicana banquet manager's office on the fourth floor:

1. (1) brown leather pouch containing 13 glassine bags containing white powder (cocaine).

2. (1) round plastic container, brown, with white powder residue around the edge.

3. (1) green glass vial w/ attached spoon, containing white powdery residue.

4. (3) brown paper envelopes containing residue of MJ (marijuana) cigarettes. (P-2).

The laboratory report performed on these items found that Item (1) contained 6.6 grams of cocaine, Item (3) contained a trace amount of the drug and Item (4) contained .67 grams. Item (2) also contained a trace amount of cocaine. (P-2).

The indictment handed up by the Atlantic County Grand Jury charged Hyatt with possession of cocaine and possession with intent to distribute. (P-3). The complaint filed by the Division states that respondent was also charged with possession of marijuana under 25 grams, but this charge was not made by the Atlantic County Grand Jury. (P-3). The charges against Hyatt were later conditionally discharged after he plead guilty to the possession count.

Respondent, who is now 46 years old and had worked in Atlantic City for 17 years, admitted that the brown vial found in the banquet manager's office containing a trace amount of cocaine belonged to him, but denied ownership or any knowledge of the 13 glassine bags of cocaine found in a brown leather pouch, as well as the butts of marijuana cigarettes found around the office. He claims that he was "set up" by other employees who wished to take over his banquet manager position. Hyatt acknowledges that he had used cocaine on a casual basis over a very short period of time but was hospitalized in 1984 after having a cardiac reaction to the drug. (R-10). He claims that he never used it again. Concerning his arrest on May 16, 1985, Hyatt states that he never used or knowingly possessed drugs at work, and didn't realize that the vial containing trace amounts of cocaine was in his valise. He denies knowing of the unsigned note addressed to him and denies owning the brown leather pouch containing the glassine bags of cocaine. He stated that the banquet manager's office was in fact a storeroom containing a desk that was being used by him, and other employees, in connection with banquet matters. As banquet showroom manager, Hyatt was responsible for setting up for banquets, as well as working with shows, convention services, servers and performing various functions incidental to banquets. Other employees designated as banquet captains reported to him and the office was used by the captains to perform their duties. The door to the office had a lock, and several of the other banquet captains had keys. As indicated, Hyatt speculates that he was "set up" by another employee and suspects that the drugs and note may have been planted by Peter Aiutto, who was named banquet manager after the respondent's arrest and termination.

Respondent has no arrest record prior to or after the May 1985 incidents. He presented various letters or references from employees at the Tropicana as to his exceptional job performance. His overall job rating as of March of 1984 was stated as superior. (R-1). The catering manager at Tropicana describes him as "highly qualified and very knowledgeable in all aspects of banquet service. He is a dedicated employee, very efficient, personable and dependable". (R-1). Hyatt also presented character references from a variety of friends and business associates attesting to his honesty and dependability. (R-1 through R-8).

There is no dispute that Loyal Hyatt was in possession of a trace amount of cocaine at the banquet manager's office of the Tropicana Hotel and Casino on May 16, 1985. He plead guilty to the possession count, which was conditionally discharged. (P-3). He denies ownership or any knowledge of 13 glassine containers of cocaine and an incriminating note found in a brown pouch in the desk used by him as banquet manager, as well as by other employees. The note addressed to "Loyal" has been admitted into evidence, as has Detective Sgt. Smith's report in which he states that he was told by Tropicana investigators that they were told by Peter Aiuttio that he had seen Loyal Hyatt in possession of the glassine envelopes of cocaine. The Division was unable to produce Peter Aiutto and has offered no evidence as to the identity of the author of the note. Given the fact that the note was addressed to Hyatt and found in a desk that he used as banquet manager, I concluded that the note was sufficiently authentic to be allowed into evidence. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.6. The police report was allowed in because hearsay is admissible in OAL proceedings (N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5, and need not be supported by residuum of competent evidence. See, Div. of Gaming Enforcement v. Merlino, 216 N.J. Super. 574 (App. Div. 1987), aff'd 109 N.J. 134 (1987). I FIND, however, that the Division has failed to prove by a preponderance of the believable evidence that Loyal Hyatt was in possession of the glassine envelopes of cocaine. He vehemently denies this and did so when questioned by officers at the scene. He later plead guilty to possession based on the trace amount of cocaine in the vial, but declined to plead guilty as to the count of possession with intent to distribute arising from the glassine envelopes of cocaine. Further, the note is unsigned and the Division has offered no evidence of its source and has not proven that the respondent owned or even knew of the brown pouch in which the note and cocaine was found. Hyatt was arrested following a tip from Peter Aiuttio, who was not produced at the hearing and was thus not available for cross-examination. On the day of his arrest, the respondent was called in to the Tropicana unexpectedly and confronted with the cocaine found in the desk. I note that Hyatt did not have sole access to the office or the desk, and that it was used by other employees who had keys, including Peter Aiuttio. Considering all of the circumstances and gaps in the evidence, I am unable to find that the Division has proved that Hyatt was in possession of the glassine bags of cocaine.

ISSUES

The issues to be resolved are:

(1) Whether the respondent Loyal Hyatt is statutorily disqualified from registration under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g notwithstanding the fact that the drug charge was conditionally discharged and not fully prosecuted;

(2) Whether respondent committed offenses indicating that his registration would be inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act and to casino operations under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(2);

(3) Whether respondent can affirmatively demonstrate rehabilitation under N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d;

(4) Whether respondent is entitled to a waiver of disqualification in the interest of justice under N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(e).

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

(1) DISQUALIFICATION UNDER 86g.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86 g provides that an applicant may be disqualified on the basis of:

> The commission by the applicant or any person who is required to be qualified under this act of a condition of a casino license of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of this section, even if such conduct has not or may not be prosecuted under the penal laws of this state . . . .

The offenses enumerated under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(1) include manufacturing, distributing or dispensing a controlled dangerous substance in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. The possession offense to which respondent plead guilty and which was subsequently discharged is not among the offenses that are referred to. See, N.J.S.A. 24:21-20a(1), (4). I CONCLUDE on that basis that the respondent is not a subject to disqualification on the basis of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g concerning offenses set forth in Section 86(c)(1).

(2) INIMICALITY (REHABILITATION)

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(2) provides for disqualification on the basis of any other offense beyond those specified in 86(c)(1) which indicate that licensure would be inimical to the policy of the Act and to casino operations. Registrant may be disqualified even when such conduct has been conditionally discharged and thus is not fully prosecuted. In assessing inimicality, the concept of rehabilitation is a relevant and necessary part of the determination. See, DGE v. Davis, 8 N.J.A.R. 301, 314 (1985). The facts to be considered by the Commission in reviewing rehabilitation as part of the inimicality determination are set forth in N.J.S.A. 5:12-91h and include:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

The nature of the duties of the respondent's former position as banquet manager, involve considerable responsibility for the management of employees and conduct of functions that play an important role in casino operations. (Factor 1).The offense of possession of a controlled dangerous substance on casino premises is a highly serious one, even if the amount in question is minimal. There is evidence that respondent had previously engaged in cocaine use away from casino premises, although his use of the drug was casual and was terminated after an adverse reaction. (Factors 2-6). Hyatt cites no social conditions contributing to his conduct. (Factor 7). As to evidence of rehabilitation, he refers to his conditional discharge and completion of all successful terms thereof, including drug testing and submits evidence of his outstanding performance as a banquet manager prior to is arrest. (Factor 8).

Hyatt argues that he is, at most, guilty of casual cocaine use over a short period of time, not involving use of the drug on the job, and inadvertantly possessed a trace amount of drug on the job. He claims that he discontinued even casual use of cocaine after having a near heart attack reaction to it. He continues to claim that he was "set up" by other employees who were after his job and cites his exceptional performance on the job as evidence that his presence in the casino industry is not inimical within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c)(2).

Given the seriousness of respondent's conduct in having cocaine in his possession on casino premises, I CONCLUDE that respondent's registration would be inimical to the policies of the Act and to casino operation under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86 and that he is therefore disqualified.

This is an unfortunate case in the sense that respondent has amply demonstrated that he was an exceptional employee whose services as banquet manager were much praised and highly valued. But notwithstanding the outstanding nature of respondent's work record, I CONCLUDE that he must be disqualified on grounds of inimicality.

(3) WAIVER

The Commission may waive any disqualification consistent with the public policy of the Act and upon a finding that the interests of justice so require. See, N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(e). Any such finding must be supported by substantial evidence and specific findings. State v. Hannah, 22 N.J. Super. 98 (App. Div. 1976). Given the nature of the offense committed by respondent and the absence of any mitigating factors, I am unable to recommend that the interests of justice require a waiver in this instance.

ORDER

On the basis of the above Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, it is ORDERED that the Casino Hotel Employee Registration is REVOKED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

I. INTRODUCTION

In a Schedule 13D filing dated July 21, 1987, Industrial Equity (Pacific) Limited (IEP) and its wholly-owned subsidiary, Auckland Pension Funds Limited (APF), indicated that they had purchased 9.3% of the common stock of Del Webb Corporation (Webb), a publicly traded holding company of casino licensees, The Claridge at Park Place, Incorporated (CPP) and Del E. Webb New Jersey, Inc. (DEWNJ). Because IEP and APF held more than five percent of Webb's stock, they were presumed to be influential shareholders and were requested to submit for qualification. See sections 105(d) and -85(d) of the Casino Control Act, N.J.S.A. 5:12-1, et seq. (the Act).[1]

By petition no. 281704 submitted October 8, 1987, IEP and APF, whose holdings had increased to 9.8% of Webb's common stock, requested a waiver of qualification. This petition was subsequently withdrawn when the Director of the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) indicated that he would not concur in a waiver, as required by section 85(d)(1) of the Act.

On October 27, 1987, in connection with the 1987-88 CPP and DEWNJ license renewal hearing, with the concurrence of the Director of the Division, IEP and APF received a temporary and conditional waiver of qualification. Under the waiver, IEP and APF were directed to file a stock proxy agreement neutralizing voting, prohibiting IEP or APF from exercising control over Webb, and requiring approval from a designated commissioner prior to any communications between Webb and IEP or APF.

By petition no. 277801 submitted October 3, 1988, IEP and APF requested a rehearing of their petition for a waiver of qualification. On October 24, 1988, the Commission denied the request and ordered IEP and APF to file, by November 23, 1988, a completed application for interim casino authorization (ICA), pursuant to section 95.12(b) of the Act.

IEP and APF never applied for an ICA, as required by the Act and as ordered by the Commission. On December 9, 1988, the Division filed a complaint against IEP, APF, CPP, DEWNJ, Webb, and The Claridge Hotel and Casino Corporation (CHC), an intermediary company of Webb and CPP. In its complaint, the Division requested the entry of an order finding IEP and APF to be per se disqualified for their failure to file a completed ICA application pursuant to section 95.12(b) of the Act, and compelling IEP and APF to divest their Webb securities by a date certain. The Division also requested, pursuant to section 105(e) of the Act, that CPP, DEWNJ, and Webb be ordered not to pay any dividends, interest, or remuneration in any form to IEP or APF, and also be ordered to prevent IEP and APF from exercising, directly or through any trustee or nominee, any rights conferred by the securities in question. Finally, the Division requested that, in the event IEP and APF did not divest the securities in question by a date certain, Webb immediately cause the divestiture of all Webb securities held by IEP and APF.

By letter submitted January 9, 1989, CPP, CHC, DEWNJ and Webb responded to the Division's complaint, agreeing only that Webb would make a good faith effort, including the prosecution of all legal remedies, to comply with any divestiture order of the Commission if IEP and APF were ordered to divest their Webb stock but failed to do so. These respondents also contended that the Commission need not take any further action against them at that time.

Pursuant to section 108(c) of the Act, IEP and APF were required to file a Notice of Defense by January 17, 1989. IEP and APF responded to the Division's complaint on January 19, 1989, by filing an untimely request for an extension of time to file an ICA application.

On January 25, 1989, the Commission, sitting with one vacant position, voted three to one in favor of a motion to grant a 30-day extension. Counsel for the parties were then offered the opportunity to brief the question of whether three or four votes were required to carry the motion for the 30-day extension.

On January 26, 1989, IEP submitted a petition for a declaratory ruling that three votes were sufficient to carry the January 25, 1989, motion, or alternatively, for a rehearing of the petition requesting an extension. The Division objected to the rehearing request and also recommended that the Commission find that four votes were required to carry the January 25, 1989, motion to extend.

II. REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE AN ICA APPLICATION

The ICA provisions, which became effective on January 14, 1988, establish a mechanism to permit continuous casino operations when property or other interests relating to an operating casino have been transferred and the transferee has not been fully licensed or qualified. Where, as in the instant matter, a transfer occurs through the purchase of publicly-traded securities, section 95.12(b) requires that the purchaser file a completed ICA application within 30 days after the Commission determines that qualification is required under section 84, or that qualification should not be waived under section 85(d)(1). The Commission may extend the 30 day filing period, but prerequisites of any such extension are the submission of a written acknowledgement of the Commission's jurisdiction and a demonstration of good cause. Failure to file an ICA application in a timely manner constitutes a per se disqualification under the Act.

Section 95.12(a) provides an interim authorization procedure for transfers of all property other than publicly traded securities. It is worth noting that no such transfer may take place until the complete ICA application has been submitted and a favorable ICA ruling obtained. Thus, section 95.12(b) constitutes an exception for publicly-traded securities whereby, in order to accommodate the demands of the public market, the interest is obtained by the transferee before the ICA process is begun. In this respect, public security acquisitions create a potential vulnerability of the regulatory system to entry and influence by untested investors. As will be seen, this vulnerability is most acute before the ICA application is filed.

A mandatory part of any ICA application is a trust agreement which conveys to a trustee all right, title and interest, including any voting rights, to the property being transferred. See section 95.14(a). The trustee must sell the property if the ICA applicant is denied interim authorization or is found unqualified. The unsuccessful ICA applicant also may not obtain any profit from the sale, receiving only its actual cost of the property sold. See section 95.14(e). Moreover, even if interim authorization is granted, an ICA applicant may not participate in the earnings of a casino hotel or receive any returns on its investment until it is ultimately found qualified by the Commission. See section 95.14(c).

The ICA procedure promotes stability and continuity in casino gaming operations in the event of property transfers, and provides an orderly method of permitting such transfers while satisfying vital law enforcement concerns. See section 1(b)(16). The ICA procedure was also designed to deal with the effects of significant changes in the ownership of the securities of casino licensees and their publicly-traded holding companies. By precluding any profit on its investment until an ICA applicant has been found qualified, and precluding any profit on the sale of its investment if it is disqualified, the ICA procedure deters potential investors who would otherwise disrupt casino operations by dabbling in the publicly traded stock of casino holding companies in the hopes of a short-term profit without undergoing regulatory scrutiny for qualification and licensure. With this background, we may proceed to the question of the number of votes needed for an extension of time to file an ICA application with respect to publicly traded securities.

Two different provisions of the Act govern the question of how many votes are required to grant such an extension. As noted, Section 95.12(b) provides in part that, in cases relating to the acquisition of publicly-traded securities of a holding or intermediary company, an ICA must be filed "within 30 days after the Commission...declines to waive qualification under [Section 85(d)(1) of the Act] or within such additional time as the commission may for good cause allow...." Section 73(d) of the Act provides in part that: "[a] majority of the full commission shall determine any action of the commission, except that no casino license or interim casino authorization may be issued without the approval of four members...."

Although the provisions of the Act concerning an ICA are relatively new, there is ample precedent concerning voting procedures and requirements for a casino license and investor qualification, to which an ICA is closely related and for which it effectively substitutes. Consistent with general rules of statutory construction, we have construed the four-vote casino license requirement in connection with the other sections of the Act relating to casino licensure, so as to produce a harmonious whole. Wager v. Burlington Elevators, Inc., 116 N.J. Super. 390, 395 (Law Div. 1971). It would be illogical to construe the Act as permitting all the various requirements for a casino license to be approved by three-vote decisions, and then, when nothing further remains to be approved except the issuance of the license itself, requiring a four-vote approval for what would be essentially a mere ministerial act. By requiring four votes for all integral components of a casino license, we have avoided rendering any part of the statute superfluous or meaningless. Hoffman v. Hock, 8 N.J. 397 (1952).

Thus, we have always required four votes for the approval of any integral components of a casino license, such as a lease involving a casino hotel or the land thereunder, see section 82(b)(2), an agreement for the management of a casino, see section 82(b)(3), and the qualifiers of a casino licensee or its holding companies, see sections 82(b)(4) and 85(c) and (d).

For example, in connection with our consideration of the application of Playboy-Elsinore Associates (PEA) for a casino license in 1982, we were required to determine the qualifications of Hugh M. Hefner, the president and a major shareholder of Playboy Enterprises, Inc. (PEI), a general partner of PEA. See section 85(d). At the conclusion of the PEA hearing, three of the five commissioners found that Mr. Hefner had established, by clear and convincing evidence, his good character, honesty and integrity to participate in casino operations That is, they found he had met the requirements applicable to a casino key licensee. See section 89. However, on the basis of the four-vote requirement in section 73(d), Mr. Hefner was not found qualified. See In the Matter of the Application of Playboy-Elsinore Associates for a Casino License, Docket No. 81-CL-3, pp. 136-138.[2] As a result, PEA's license application would have been denied if PEI and Hefner had not divested themselves of their interest. See Resolution No. 82-246, pp. 37-38.

2. The decision finding Hefner unqualified despite the three to two vote in his favor was affirmed in an unreported decision of the Appellate Division. App. Div. Docket No. A-4188-81T1 (August 31, 1983).

Like a casino license, an ICA also requires four votes. Because an ICA actually substitutes, on an interim basis, for a casino license or a finding of qualification, see section 1(b)(16) and section 95.12, the same reasoning concerning voting requirements should apply to an ICA. That timely filing of the ICA application was viewed by the Legislature as a crucial aspect of the process is demonstrated by the fact that an applicant is per se disqualified for failure to so file. See section 95.12(b). Thus, in this case the failure of IEP and APF to meet their obligations of timely compliance in order to maintain their privileged status under section 95.12(b), results in denial of their application.

As previously noted, the ICA procedure permits persons who have not yet been found qualified to become involved in casino operations on an expedited basis, provided that they perform in a responsible and expeditious manner as well. Recognizing that the regulatory system is at its most vulnerable point after the purchaser of publicly-held securities has become a significant holder and before a completed ICA application and trust agreement have been submitted, section 95.12(b) requires an ICA application to be submitted within thirty days. Time is of the essence in ICA matters if the goals of the ICA provisions are to be accomplished. Therefore, an extension of time, and particularly the necessary good cause showing, are tantamount to affirmative authorization criteria which IEP and APF must demonstrate by clear and convincing evidence.

Like any request for a finding of compliance with a critical element of ICA approval, the extension request must obtain four votes, unless a vacancy has existed on the Commission for more than 60 days. Stated differently, if four votes are required for a finding of qualification for an ICA, as the Act expressly provides, then a lesser number of votes cannot be permitted to allow an applicant to enjoy indefinitely the benefits of the ICA provisions. It is the burden of the applicant to prove its suitability for ICA, including its timely compliance. It is not the burden of the State to prove otherwise. Hence, the extension of the period in which to file the ICA application, itself a component of ICA qualification, demands four votes. The three-to-one vote decision of January 25, 1989, was not sufficient to grant the extension of time that IEP and APF had requested. For that reason, the extension was denied and IEP and APF were unqualified to obtain an ICA with respect to their Webb holdings.

III. REQUEST FOR RECONSIDERATION

IEP and APF point out that there was a change in the Commission's voting requirements as of February 1, 1989, and contend that this change in circumstances merits a rehearing of their extension request. IEP and APF also argue that the "coincidence" of this change in voting requirements and the scheduling of their extension request immediately prior to that change present an extraordinary situation that justifies a rehearing of the matter.

Section 73(d) of the Act provides that:

> A majority of the full commission shall determine any action of the commission, except that no casino license or interim casino authorization may be issued without the approval of four members. In the event that a vacancy has existed in the commission for more than 60 days, a majority of the full commission may act with respect to any matter, including the issuance of a casino license or interim casino authorization.

The Commission's voting requirements did change on February 1, 1989, because of the time elapsed since Commissioner Carl Zeitz's departure from the Commission. His term ended on August 4, 1988, as permitted by Section 52(h) of the Act, he served an additional 120 days until December 2, 1988, because his successor had not been appointed and qualified.

Since a fifth commissioner had not been qualified by February 1, 1989, a vacancy existed in the Commission for more than 60 days as of February 1, 1989. Thus, on February 1, 1989, a three-vote majority was sufficient to determine any matter brought before the Commission. Accordingly, the three-to-one vote which failed to grant the requested extension of time on January 25 would have succeeded on February 1.

IEP contends that this circumstance justifies a rehearing, arguing that the result in this matter should turn on its merits, and not on when the matter was heard.

Section 107(d) of the Act addresses rehearing and, in relevant part, states that:

> (1) The commission may, upon motion therefor made within 10 days after the service of the decision and order, order a rehearing before the commission upon such terms and conditions as it may deem just and proper when the commission finds cause to believe that the decision and order should be reconsidered in view of the legal, policy or factual matters advanced by the moving party or raised by the commission on its own motion.
>
> (3) A motion for relief from a decision and order which is based on any ground other than the presentation of newly discovered evidence shall be governed as to both timeliness and sufficiency by the regulations of the commission which shall be modeled, to the extent practical, upon the rules then governing similar motions before the courts of this State.

Rule 4:50-1(a)-(e) of the New Jersey Court Rules permits matters to be reopened for various reasons, including mistake, newly discovered evidence and fraud. Additionally, subsection (f) of this court rule provides that "[o]n motion, with briefs, and upon such terms that are just, the court may relieve a party or his legal representative from a final judgment or order for ... any other reason justifying relief from the operation of the judgment or order." As noted by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Court Investment Company v. Perillo, 48 N.J. 334, 341 (1966), "No categorization can be made of the situations which would warrant redress under subsection (f). [T]he very essence of (f) is its capacity for relief in exceptional situations. And in such exceptional cases its boundaries are as expansive as the need to achieve equity and justice."

However, we fail to see anything exceptional or extraordinary about this situation. As counsel for IEP and APF conceded at the February 1 hearing, there were no changes in the facts or the substantive law applicable to this matter in the week since the January 25 hearing. The only difference was the above-mentioned change in voting requirements occasioned by the 60-day vacancy on the Commission. In our opinion, this change does not constitute the type of change in circumstances which would justify a rehearing in this matter. To hold otherwise would require the rehearing of all matters decided by three-to-one votes during the sixty-day period after a vacancy occurs. In effect, this would cancel the 60 day period and result in all matters being decided by three votes immediately after a vacancy. We cannot conceive that the Legislature intended such a result.

We agree that, as a general principle, the decision in this or any matter should not hinge upon when it is heard. However, rehearing this matter on a later date so as to produce a certain preconceived result or to alter a prior result, does nothing to advance that principle, and in fact appears to be completely contrary to that idea. Moreover, it was no coincidence that the extension request was heard toward the end of the 60 day post-vacancy period. It was IEP which failed either to file a completed ICA application or to request an extension by the statutory 30 day deadline which fell on November 23, 1988, well before Commissioner Zeitz left the Commission on December 2. Thus, five votes would have been available if IEP acted promptly. Further, it was IEP's continued inaction, until the Division lodged a complaint, and indeed beyond the time for answering the complaint under section 108, which brought the extension request before the Commission near the close of the 60 day period. Even if an appropriate case for rehearing after the 60 day period could be imagined, the equities argue strongly against rehearing in this matter. For all of the above reasons, the rehearing request is denied.

Since IEP and APF have failed to file a completed ICA application in a timely manner, as required by the Act and our previous Order No. 88-298, IEP and APF are per se disqualified pursuant to section 95.12(b) of the Act. Accordingly, we order that notice of the disqualification of IEP and APF be served upon CPP, DEWNJ, and Webb as well as IEP and APF, and we further order that:

1. IEP and APF shall, within 120 days, divest all of their Webb securities, subject to the prior approval of the Commission, except in the case of open market sales;

2. No dividends or interest shall be paid by CPP, CHC, DEWNJ or Webb, or be received by IEP or APF, with respect to the Webb securities held by IEP and APF;

3. IEP and APF shall not exercise, directly or through any trustee or nominee or otherwise, any rights conferred by such Webb securities, and CPP, CHC, DEWNJ, and Webb shall not allow or permit IEP or APF to exercise any such rights;

4. No remuneration in any form, for services rendered or otherwise, shall be paid by CPP, CHC, DEWNJ, or Webb, or be received by IEP or APF, with respect to such securities.

SUPPLEMENTAL OPINION - PUBLIC MEETING OF MAY 24, 1989

FACTS

On March 22, 1989, IEP and APF appealed the Commission's February 6, 1989, Order denying reconsideration of its January 25, 1989, decision to the Appellate Division. They also filed a motion with the Appellate Division for a limited remand, in order to enable them to petition the Commission for a reconsideration of its decision to deny an extension. Neither the Division nor the Commission opposed the motion, and on April 10, 1989, the Appellate Division remanded the matter. On April 25, 1989, IEP and APF filed a motion for a rehearing which was accompanied by an executed trust agreement, a Personal History Disclosure form for an IEP officer, and incomplete Business Entity Disclosure forms for IEP and Brierley Investments Limited (BIL), which allegedly now owns approximately 70% of IEP. IEP also requested that the Commission vacate its disqualification order of February 6, 1989, deem IEP's ICA application complete, and dissolve the January 10, 1988, voting proxy agreement.

By letter dated May 17, 1989, the Division indicated that it opposed a reconsideration of the matter, and also opposed the granting of any extension of time if the matter was, in fact, reconsidered.

ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

The Commission did not oppose IEP and APF's motion for a remand because this second reconsideration request relies upon a different theory than the first one. Unlike the first reconsideration, which was based upon sections 107(d)(1) and (3) of the Act, the present reconsideration request relies upon section 107(d)(2) of the Act, which provides that > [u]pon motion made within a reasonable time, but in no event later than one year from the service of the decision and order, the commission may relieve a party from the decision and order upon a showing that there is additional evidence which is material and necessary and which would be reasonably likely to change the decision of the commission, and that sufficient reason existed for failure to present such evidence at the hearing of the commission or on a motion under paragraph (1) of this subsection. The motion shall be supported by an affidavit of the moving party or his counsel showing with particularity the materiality and necessity of the additional evidence and the reason why it was not presented at the hearing or on a motion under paragraph (1) of this subsection. Upon rehearing, rebuttal evidence to the additional evidence shall be admitted. After rehearing, the commission may modify its decision and order as the additional evidence may warrant.

IEP and APF contend that the proposed trust agreement which they have now submitted constitutes new evidence, and is sufficient for a rehearing under section 107(d)(2) of the Act. We disagree. The trust agreement is a required part of the ICA application which the Commission initially ordered IEP and APF to file by November 23, 1988. In our view, the term "additional evidence", however broadly defined, does not include a trust agreement which is statutorily required to be filed with the Commission. See section 95.14 of the Act. Additional evidence is not something which parties may create at their pleasure when it is deemed necessary.

Even assuming that the trust agreement is "additional evidence," we question whether it meets the remaining requirements of Section 107(d)(2) of the Act, and particularly, whether it is "reasonably likely to change the decision of the commission," and whether "sufficient reason existed for failure to present such evidence" at the January 25th or the February 1st hearings.

In the Matter of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union Local 54, 203 N.J. Super. 297 (A.D. 1985), certif. den. 102 N.J. 352 (1985), cert. den. 475 U.S. 1085 (1986), Frank Gerace requested a rehearing of a Commission ruling finding him disqualified. Relying on his constitutional right to avoid self-incrimination, Mr. Gerace had not testified at the original hearing because he was the subject of a federal grand jury investigation at the time. He was later willing to testify and wished to reopen the hearing for the purpose of offering his testimony, which he claimed was necessary, material, and would provide new evidence. The Court upheld the Commission's finding that Gerace's explanation for his failure to testify at the first hearing did not meet the statutory requirement of "sufficient reason." The Court stated that "[Gerace's] decision not to testify was a tactical one. The Commission is not obligated to relieve him of the consequences of that choice because of a change of mind two years later. The Commission did not abuse its discretion in refusing to reopen the record to elicit Gerace's testimony." Local 54, id., at p. 344.

In our view, there are obvious parallels between the Local 54 case and the instant matter. IEP and APF chose to ignore the Commission's Order of October 24, 1988, the ICA application filing deadline of November 23, 1988, and the Division's Complaint of December 9, 1988. The allegation that there was a corporate "change of heart" in early January 1989 does not obligate the Commission to relieve IEP and APF from the consequences of their previous decisions. In any event, even if there had been such a change in corporate policy, it did not result in the filing of a completed ICA application by January 25 or February 1, 1989.

IEP and APF also contend that they "deserve another chance before a full five-member Commission as a matter of fairness." In the Local 54 case, supra, Mr. Gerace had also contended that a change in the composition of the Commission warranted a rehearing, so that any new members could express their views. The Court stated that such a contention was "without merit," and that, if anything, any change in the Commission's composition rendered a rehearing inappropriate because the new members would not have heard the original evidence. See Local 54, supra, at p. 344. Thus, the fact that the Commission now has five members rather than four does not merit a reconsideration of this matter.

Lastly, IEP and APF renew their argument, which was advanced at the February 1, 1989, hearing, that this is an exceptional case because of the sequence of events which led to the initial denial. IEP and APF again argue that the denial was "a result of an accident of timing" and that "[t]he same vote total would have succeeded just days later." Accordingly, they contend that under section 107(d)(3) of the Act, which incorporates by reference R. 4:50-1(f), the Commission can and should reopen this matter. This argument was heard and rejected on February 1, 1989, and is rejected for the same reasons at this time.

The broad power of the Commission to reconsider matters is undisputed. See Petition of Hilton New Jersey Corporation for a Rehearing, public meeting of March 26, 1985. However, in our view, a sufficient showing has not been made for a rehearing of this matter. No "additional evidence" has been submitted, as required under section 107(d)(2) of the Act. No claims have been made that the Commission decided the matter incorrectly, misconstrued key testimony or overlooked crucial evidence. The only claim is that the Commission decided the matter at the "wrong" public meeting (January 25 instead of February 1, when a three-to-one vote would have carried the motion to extend, assuming that the vote would have been three-to-one). We fail to see that such a circumstance is extraordinary or unfair, or that it otherwise merits a rehearing under any of the various provisions of section 107 of the Act. For these reasons, the rehearing request is denied.

Although our decision makes it unnecessary to consider IEP and APF's request to deem their ICA application complete, we note for the record that it is not. Both IEP and BIL have refused to disclose certain information in their respective BED's, and there are apparent and significant discrepancies in the materials submitted. No PHD was submitted for Bruce Hancox, although the Commission had ordered in October 1987 and again in October 1988 that one be filed. Lastly, the executed trust agreement which was submitted does not comply in all respects with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 5:12-95.14 and a form of trust agreement previously approved by the Commission. For all of the above reasons, the ICA application is not, and could not be deemed complete.

HENRY JACKSON, JR.,
Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF NEW JERSEY, DEPARTMENT OF LAW & PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

Henry Jackson, Jr., petitioner, pro se

Norma Stancil, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: August 29, 1988 Decided: October 5, 1988

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter concerns the application by the petitioner, Henry Jackson, Jr., for casino employee license number 70196-22 in maintenance and cleaning. The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) takes no position with regard to a recommendation of licensure, however, it states that the petitioner is statutorily disqualified from licensure by reason of certain criminal convictions in 1978 and 1979. The Division seeks revocation of Mr. Jackson's casino employee registration number 73034-40, pursuant to Section 129 of the Casino Control Act (Act).

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

The Division also questions whether petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-98(b)2 as incorporated within Section 90b of the Act. Mr. Jackson asserts rehabilitaiton pursuant to Section 90h and 91d of the Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed a letter with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) taking no position with regard to petitioner's application for licensure on October 9, 1987. The petitioner requested a hearing on February 23, 1988. On April 4, 1988, the Division filed a complaint with the Commission seeking revocation of Mr. Jackson's casino hotel employee registration. On March 1, 1988, the Commmission transmitted the within matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on April 22, 1988, and the matters were consolidated and scheduled for a hearing. The matter was heard on August 29, 1988, at the Brigantine Municipal Building, Brigantine, New Jersey. The record closed on the hearing date.

ISSUES

A. Whether the petitioner is disqualified from licensure and continued registration pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), based upon his 1977 and 1979 convictions for robbery, conspiracy and related offenses.

B. Whether the petitioner possess the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within Section 90b.

C. Whether petitioner may be demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to Sections 90h and 91d of the Casino Control Act.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts in this matter are totally undisputed. Mr. Jackson's egregious criminal behavior prior to December 1978, is extensively documented and acknowledged:

The petitioner was arrested on December 14, 1971 by the Crisfield, Marlyand Police and charged with Larceny, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-1. The petitioner received a six-

The petitioner was arrested on July 8, 1977 by the Vineland Police and charged with Possession of Stolen Property, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-7 and Uttering a Forged Document, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:21-1. On November 30, 1977, the petitioner was charged with Uttering a Forged Instrument and Receiving a Stolen Check in Cumberland County Accusation No. A-180-77. The petitioner was found guilty of the charges and on December 19, 1977, was sentenced to the Cumberland County Jail for three months.

Mr. Jackson was arrested on January 10, 1979, by the Millville Police and charged with Armed Robbery, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1 for the offense which occurred on December 15, 1978. On March 27, 1979, the petiioner was indicted in Cumberland County Indictment No. 453-78 which charged Robbery and Robbery While Armed, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1. The petitioner subsequently entered a plea of guilty to the indictment. On July 9, 1979, Mr. Jackson was sentenced to a seven to fifteen- year prison term. The petitioner was also charged on this date with the commission of an Armed Robbery on December 12, 1978 in Vineland. On March 6, 1978, the petitioner was indicted in a fifty-three count Cumberland County Indictment which charged Armed Robbery, Assault and Weapons Offenses. On July 9, 1979, the petitioner was sentenced on the charges to a maximum term of ten years imprisonment, to run concurrent with the sentence imposed on Indictment No. 453-78.

By way of mitigation, Mr. Jackson states that he has been successfully employed by the Showboat Hotel, Casino and Bowling Center since March 2, 1987. He acknowledges his less than savory past; however, he stresses that his criminal conduct occurred along time ago and that he is a different person today. Mr. Jackson appears to have led a law-abiding existence since his release from prison in 1985.

The above is uncontroverted, documented, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

Section 86c(1) of the Act mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense which "would be under New Jersey Law at the time of application a violaton of any of the following provisions" in regard to Title 2C of the New Jersey statutes be disqualified from licensure. Petitioner pled guilty on June 7, 1979 to Armed Robbery in violation of N.J.S.A. 2A:151-5, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1 and Robbery, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2A:141-1. Based upon the Judgment of Conviction (R-5) and petitioner's testimony, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is statutorily disqualified from casino licesnure, pursuant to Section 86c(1) of the Act. The 1977 conviction occurred more than ten years ago and as such, is not an automatic disqualifying offense.

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and 91d

An applicant or a licensed petitioner in a disciplinary proceeding faced with the existence of one or more Section 86 disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against continued licensure by a affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. This section sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

(1) The nature of the duties of the position applied for;
(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;
(3) The circumstances under which the offense occurred;
(4) The date of the offense;
(5) The age of the applicant when the offense was committed;
(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;
(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;
(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Mr. Jackson is an applicant for a casino employee license in maintenance and cleaning. As such, he would have no responsibilities for actual gaming activities and would have limited contact with patrons of the casino.

Second, the petitioner was convicted of the following disqualifying offense:

On June 7, 1979, a violation of N.J.S.A. 2A:151-5, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:15-1, Robbery.

Under Section 86c(1) of the Act, Robbery is a statutory disqualifier. Armed Robbery is a crime of the first degree.

Third, the petitioner's misconduct has been subsequently mitigated by the fact that almost ten years elapsed since petitioner's last offense. Since the petitioner's release from prison in 1985, he has led a law-abiding existence.

Fourth, the petitioner committed his last offense in December 1978, almost ten years ago.

Fifth, the petitioner committed offenses until he was 24 years of age. It is likely that part of his past misconduct was due to immaturity.

Sixth, the petitioner's misconduct involved the commission of various offenses over a period of seven years.

Seventh, there were no apparent social conditions which contributed to the offenses.

Eighth, Mr. Jackson is successfully employed by the Showboat Hotel, Casino and Bowling Center. His obvious commitment toward staying "out of trouble" and his willingness to accept responsibility for his previous criminal conduct persuade me that Mr. Jackson has made substantial efforts toward rehabilitation. It is significant the petitioner's last criminal act occurred almost ten years ago, a marked improvement over his egregious criminal past. While in prison, Mr. Jackson earned approximately 17 college credits while taking courses through Mercer and Cumberland County Colleges.

For the above reasons, I am persuaded that the petitioner has met his statutory burden to establish his rehabilitation by clear and convicning evidence. It is apparent that petitioner has a commitment to a total abstinence from misconduct. Furthermore, the petitioner's demeanor and credible testimony are positive factors when assessing rehabilitation.

I CONCLUDE from the totality of the circumstances that the petitioner has established, by clear and convicing evidence, his rehabilitation pursuant to Sections 90h and 91d of the Act.

(C) N.J.S.A. 12:98(b)2 as incorporated within Section 90b

Under Section 89b(2) as incorported within Section 90b, Mr. Jackson is required to demonstrate by clear and convicing evidence his good character, honesty, and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission (Februay 26, 1979) at 8. In Resorts, the Commission held that the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key.

Although Mr. Jackson's proofs were far from overwhelming, it appears the Mr. Jackson is sincere in his commitment to an abstinence from further criminal conduct. Mr. Jackson's conduct since being released from prison is the best indicia of good character, honesty and integrity that Mr. Jackson can present to the trier of fact.

I CONCLUDE that Henry Jackson, Jr. possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, prusuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as in corporated within Section 90b.

ORDER OF DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the application of Henry Jackson, Jr., for a casino employee license (#70916-22) be GRANTED. It is also ORDERED that the petition of the Division to revoke the casino hotel employee registration of Henry Jackson, Jr. (#73034-40) be DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Norma L. Stancil, Deputy Attorney General, for the petitioner (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Sylvia Jackson, respondent, pro se

Record Closed: April 17, 1989 Decided: April 21, 1989

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the revocation of Sylvia Jackson's casino hotel employee registration no. 74178-40, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91 and N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1). The Division sought revocation of the respondent's registration by reason of its contention that the respondent had been convicted of a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), that the respondent had failed to disclose material information pursuant to section 86b, and therefore, she is disqualified from registration, pursuant to section 91b. The respondent contended that she was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 91d.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent had obtained a casino hotel employee registration from the Commission so she could be employed in the casino services' wardrobe section at Caesar's Boardwalk Regency Hotel and Casino. By complaint to the Commission, filed July 14, 1988, the Division objected to the respondent's continued registration, asserting that the respondent had been convicted of hindering her own prosecution, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:29-3b(4); arson, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2); and arson, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(3), two of which are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(1). The Division also objected to the respondent's continued registration pursuant to section 86b, alleging that the respondent failed to disclose material information on her application for registration regarding a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria. Based upon the complaint, the Commission notified the respondent on July 20, 1988, that she had the right to a hearing, and that failure to respond within 15 days could result in her registration being revoked. By application dated October 19, 1988, which was received by the Commission on October 19, 1988, the respondent requested a hearing. On October 25, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which received it on November 7, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference in the matter was held before Administrative Law Judge Edgar R. Holmes on January 20, 1989. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether respondent was convicted of a crime listed as a statutory disqualifier in N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2) Arson Third Degree, 2C:17-1b(3) Arson Third Degree.

B. Whether the respondent, with specific reference to her record of arrests, has failed to reveal any facts material to qualification, or has supplied information which is untrue or misleading as to material facts pertaining to the qualification criteria for her casino hotel registration within the meaning of section 86b.

C. Whether respondent may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 91d of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was held on April 17, 1989, in the Municipal Courtroom, Absecon Municipal Building, Absecon, New Jersey, after which the record was closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

On March 29, 1984, there was a fire in a house owned by the respondent. Fire investigators determined that the origin of the fire was suspicious so the Atlantic County prosecutor's office criminal investigation section investigated the incident. Investigator John Fredericks interviewed the respondent. She informed him that she had moved out of the house because it had no utilities or heat. Investigator Fredericks indicated that the utilities and heat had been disconnected for nonpayment while the respondent testified that she had had the electricity turned off three days prior to the fire due to old, unsafe wiring which was "spitting fire." Investigator Fredericks determined that the respondent did not have any insurance on the house until three weeks before the fire. He determined that the fire had been started by kerosene or some other flammable liquid being placed on a sofa in the front room and lit by a cigarette. The respondent, on the other hand, indicated that there had been fire insurance throughout except for a brief two-month lapse in the policy which had occurred just prior to the fire. She testified that she had been barbecuing on the front porch of the house when the grill turned over and started a fire in the front of the house.

The respondent admitted to a neighbor, Florence Dickson, that she had placed clothes on the couch, placed kerosene on the clothes and had set the fire (P-1). The respondent first told investigators that she "may have or may not have" started the fire. Upon further questioning, the respondent told investigators that she "may have set the fire." Finally, while on her way to her arraignment on April 6, 1984, she told Investigator Fredericks, "I did it."

The respondent was arrested and charged with arson on April 5, 1984 (P-1, P-2 & P-3). On April 10, 1984, she was indicted by the Atlantic County grand jury in indictment number 0492-4-84-INV(B) and she was charged with hindering her own apprehension, prosecution, conviction, or punishment by volunteering false information to a law enforcement officer in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:29-3b(4); arson, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2); and arson for the purpose of collecting insurance, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(3) (P-4). On April 23, 1984, the respondent entered a plea of not guilty to the charges. She was tried without a jury on August 6, 7 and 8, 1984, and was found guilty by the court. On September 28, 1984, the respondent was sentenced to serve 18 months probation on each count to be served concurrently and she was ordered to pay a $75 Violent Crimes Compensation Board penalty (P-5).

On September 17, 1985, a hearing was held in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Atlantic County, in the matter of Division of Youth and Family Services v. Shirley Jackson. This was a petition brought by the Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS) for custody of the respondent's children. During the course of the proceedings, the respondent became unruly and abusive (P-6). At one point she stated to Judge Braithwaite, "maybe I'll write to the KuKluxKlan and ask them to blow your goddamn brains out . . . I can't do it myself . . . But they can. And they know a nigger like you . . . they know your kind. They know who you are . . . They get rid of Judges like you . . . " (P-6, at 16).

After the hearing, the respondent was arrested by Officer Donald M. Tullio, and she was charged with making terroristic threats towards the judge.[1] She was taken to the Atlantic City Police Department and her arrest was processed (P-7). A complaint was thereafter filed charging the respondent with making terroristic threats and the matter was referred to the Atlantic County Prosecutor's Office (P-8). On October 31, 1985, the Atlantic County grand jury returned an indictment against the respondent, indictment no. 85-10-1855-B, charging her with terroristic threats made against Honorable Dennis J. Braithwaite, J.S.C. in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-3b.

At the hearing, the respondent admitted also being arrested in 1985 for beating a social worker. There is discussion in the transcript of the DYFS matter (P-6) that the respondent was convicted in Galloway Township of assaulting Christine Brock, a DYFS employee. The respondent, however, asserted that the certified copy of the judgment of conviction was a forgery and that the judge had dismissed the case.

1 The respondent asserted that Officer Tullio was not the bailiff at the DYFS proceeding as she had punched the bailiff and she did not recognize Officer Tullio.

On April 20, 1987, the respondent completed a Personal History Disclosure Form 4A which she filed with the Commission on April 28, 1987 (P-10). She indicated in response to question number nine that she had not "ever been arrested or charged, even if not convicted, with any felony, crime, misdemeanor, disorderly persons offense, juvenile offense or other offense . . . in New Jersey or anywhere else." Division Agent John Lugo was assigned to investigate the respondent's application. Upon conducting a Federal Bureau of Investigation and State Bureau of Investigation criminal history background check of the respondent, Agent Lugo learned of her arrest and conviction for arson and her arrest for communicating terroristic threats. Agent Lugo interviewed the respondent by telephone sometime in 1988. At that time, Agent Lugo read the respondent question nine in its entirety, including the definitional section. This question asks:

> For the purpose of this question, the word "arrest" includes any detaining, holding or taking into custody by any police or other law enforcement authorities in order to answer for the alleged performance of any "offense" in this or any other state or foreign country; the word "charge" includes any indictment, complaint, information, summons, or other notice of the alleged commission of any "offense" in this or any other state or foreign country; and the word "offense" includes all high misdemeanors, disorderly persons offenses and juvenile violations.
> Have you ever been arrested or charged, even if not convicted, with any felony, crime misdemeanor, disorderly persons offense, juvenile offense or other offense (other than a traffic violation) in New Jersey or anywhere else?

The respondent indicated that she understood the question. Agent Lugo then asked her if she had ever been arrested; she responded, "No." Agent Lugo then asked the respondent about her 1984 and 1985 arrests and the respondent again answered that she had not been arrested. Agent Lugo again questioned the respondent regarding the 1984 and 1985 arrests and this time the respondent responded that the arrests were false arrests.

The respondent is 40 years old. She earned 96 credits in three years of college at Rutgers University majoring in English. She is not a member of or participant in any charitable, fraternal, community or social organizations and she does not usually attend or participate in her church.

The respondent now is a self-employed writer. In 1986, the respondent worked in a Kentucky Fried Chicken store. From 1971 through 1977, the respondent worked as a biller for Public Service Electric and Gas. From mid-1979 through 1981, the respondent worked as a waitress at the Vienna Inn Restaurant in Cologne, New Jersey. Finally, the respondent worked for one week in 1987 at Caesar's Boardwalk Regency Hotel and Casino in the casino services' wardrobe section. She was terminated from this position due to unsatisfactory performance during her probationary period. The respondent testified that other employees were using drugs in a ladies' room in which she discovered an overflowed toilet. She reported the overflowed toilet to maintenance, and she testified that her position was terminated because she did not follow the proper chain of command.

The Division did attempt to refute the respondent's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident and her current good character, honesty and integrity. As such, it is necessary to assess her credibility. Initially, her position in this matter must be recognized. As the respondent and the holder of a casino hotel employee registration, she has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. During both hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the respondent's demeanor, the plausibility of her testimony, the manner in which she participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, I must view the respondent's testimony with skepticism.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On April 5, 1984, Sylvia Jackson was arrested and was charged with arson in Galloway Township, New Jersey.

2. On April 10, 1984, she was indicted by the Atlantic County grand jury in indictment number 0492-4-84-INV(B) and she was charged with hindering her own apprehension, prosecution, conviction, or punishment by volunteering false information to a law enforcement officer in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:29-3b(4); arson, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2); and arson for the purpose of collecting insurance, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(3).

3. On April 23, 1984, the respondent entered a plea of not guilty to the above charges. She was tried without a jury on August 6, 7 and 8, 1984, and was found guilty by the court. On September 28, 1984, the respondent was sentenced to serve 18 months probation on each count to be served concurrently and she was ordered to pay a $75 Violent Crimes Compensation Board penalty (P-5).

4. On September 17, 1985, the respondent was arrested in Atlantic City, New Jersey and was charged with making terroristic threats towards Honorable Dennis J. Braithwaite, J.S.C., in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-3b.

5. In 1985, the respondent was arrested in Galloway Township and was charged with and subsequently convicted of assaulting Christine Brock, a DYFS employee.

6. On April 20, 1987, the respondent completed a Personal History Disclosure Form 4A which she filed with the Commission on April 28, 1987. She indicated in response to question number nine that she had not "ever been arrested or charged, even if not convicted, with any felony, crime, misdemeanor, disorderly persons offense, juvenile offense or other offense . . . in New Jersey or anywhere else."

7. The respondent is 40 years old. She earned 96 credits in three years of college at Rutgers University majoring in English. She is not a member of or participant in any charitable, fraternal, community or social organizations and she does not ussually attend or participate in her church.

8. The respondent now is a self-employed writer. In 1986, the respondent worked in a Kentucky Fried Chicken store. From 1971 through 1977, the respondent worked as a biller for Public Service Electric and Gas. From mid-1979 through 1981, the respondent worked as a waitress at the Vienna Inn Restaurant in Cologne, New Jersey.

9. The respondent worked for one week in 1987 at Caesar's Boardwalk Regency Hotel and Casino in the casino services' wardrobe section. She was terminated from this position due to unsatisfactory performance during her probationary period.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;
>
> b. Failure of the applicant to provide information, documentation and assurances required by the act or requested by the commission, or failure of the applicant to reveal any fact material to qualification, or the supplying of information which is untrue or misleading as to a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria;
>
> c. The conviction of the applicant, or of any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license, of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be:
>
> (1) Any of the following offenses under the "New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice," P.L. 1978, c. 95 (Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes) as amended and supplemented:
>
> . . . .
>
> N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1a. and b. (crimes involving arson and related offenses);
>
> . . . .

N.J.S.A. 5:12-91, Registration of casino hotel employees, provides in pertinent part:

> a. No person may commence employment as a casino hotel employee unless he has been registered with the commission, which registration shall be in accordance with subsection f. of this section.
>
> b. Any applicant for casino hotel employee registration shall produce such information as the commission may require. Subsequent to the registration of a casino hotel employee, the commission may revoke, suspend, limit, or otherwise restrict the registration upon a finding that the registrant is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of P.L.1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86).

d. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection b. of this section no casino hotel employee registration shall be revoked on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria or the commission of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of section 86 of P.L.1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86), as specified in subsection g. of that section, provided that the registrant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the registrant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8) establishes that registration under the Casino Control Act is a revocable privilege which is "conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual . . . registrant." N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1) provides for the revocation of the license or registration held by a person "for the commission of any other offense or violation of this act which would disqualify such person from holding his . . . registration." The Division contends, first, that the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2), arson - recklessly placing a building or structure in danger of damage or destruction and N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(3), arson - with the purpose of collecting insurance for the destruction or damage to the property, which constitutes violations of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), and, second, that the respondent's nondisclosure of her arrests and convictions on her Personal History Disclosure Form - 4A constitutues a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, and that, accordingly, she is disqualified from continued registration.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be one of certain enumerated offenses contained in Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the respondent's conviction for burning of her house for the purpose of collecting insurance constitutes a conviction of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2) and (3), which, under the circumstances, disqualifies the respondent from continued registration.

N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1, Arson and related offenses, provides in pertinent part:

> b. Arson. A person is guilty of arson, a crime of the third degree, if he purposely starts a fire or causes an explosion, whether on his own property or another's:
>
> . . .
>
> (2) Thereby recklessly placing a building or structure of another in danger of damage or destruction; or
> (3) With the purpose of collecting insurance for the destruction or damage to such property.

The Division established, and the respondent admitted during her testimony, that she had been convicted in Superior Court, Atlantic County, Law Division (Criminal) of two counts of arson in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1b(2) and (3). Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent was convicted of a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the respondent is a disqualifying offense under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). The respondent is therefore disqualified from continued registration, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1).

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d

A registrant faced with the existence of one or more section 86c disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against continued registration by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d. This section sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

In regard to the first criterion, Ms. Jackson is a casino hotel registrant and was employed in a casino services' wardrobe section. As such, she does not have direct responsibilities for actual gaming activities and does not come in contact with casino patrons.

Second, the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:17-1, arson, prior to becoming employed in the casino industry. Because the offense is a listed disqualifier under section 86c(1), it is very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the offense must be viewed in its appropriate context. The respondent was convicted of soaking clothes with kerosene and setting them on fire in order to burn down her house and collect on an insurance policy which she had recently reinstated. This is an extremely serious offense.

Fourth, the respondent's misconduct occurred in 1984. She was arrested twice again in 1985; once for assault upon a social worker and once for communicating terroristic threats against a superior court judge.

Fifth, the respondent was 34 years old at the time of the first offense. I do not believe immaturity was a factor in this case.

Sixth, the respondent's misconduct was not isolated in nature. As indicated above, she committed two other violations of the criminal laws in 1985.

Seventh, two superior court judges have questioned the respondent's mental state. Judge Greenberg, as part of his sentence in the arson case, directed that the respondent be interviewed for possible mental health treatment. In the DYFS matter, Judge Braithwaite ordered the respondent to undergo a psychiatric evaluation. In both cases, the respondent failed to comply with these directives as she is happy with her life and her person.

Eighth, the respondent has made no rehabilitative efforts. In fact, she asserts that she need not make any rehabilitative efforts as she is pleased with herself. At times she admitted her misconduct and yet she believes the arrests are false arrests and that the certified copy of her conviction and other police records were fabricated by the deputy attorney general and are fraudulent. She has twice refused to undergo court-ordered psychiatric counseling as she does not believe she needs it. She is not active in any community, social, charitable, fraternal, or religious organization. The transcript of the DYFS matter (P-6) and the respondent's testimony at this proceeding do not reflect a person who is rehabilitated from her misconduct.

The Commission has recently addressed the weighing of the rehabilitation factors vis-a-vis the position applied for. In the Application of Brian Stiteler, argued before the Commission at the public meeting of August 5, 1987, Commissioner Armstrong stated:

> I would note that the rehabilitation criteria are identical for registrants and casino employees, but these factors can be weighed differently depending on the nature and duties of the position of the individual who is appearing before us and whether the disqualifying offense was an isolated or repeated incident, and I think that there are two prior Commission cases[2] in which we have given weight and emphasis to the nature and duty of the petitioner, and that's a significant factor in assessing rehabilitation.

In this case, the respondent was a casino employee wardrober. She had no responsibility for any casino gaming activity and no contact with casino patrons. Considering the nature of the position she held, the respondent's brief work record in the industry, her demeanor and candor at the hearing, the seriousness of her offense, her subsequent misconduct, her lack of involvement in the community, and her refusal to accept psychiatric counseling, when weighed against the eight rehabilitative criteria:

I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not established, by clear and convincing evidence, her rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b

The Commission has succinctly described the purposes for the inclusion of section 86b within the Act and its application in In the Matter of the Application of Harl Lee Cooper for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Maintenance and Cleaning), OAL DKT. CCC 1276-79 (Aug. 29, 1979), modified, Casino Control Commission (Feb. 7, 1980), when it stated, at pages 15-16 of its Final Decision:

> So that fully informed decisions may be made regarding whether applicants for licensure have satisfied the qualification criteria set

2 I believe the decisions referred to by Commissioner Armstrong are: Benjamin Waters, OAL DKT. NO. CCC 7470-86 (April 30, 1987), and Mark Bisciotti, OAL DKT. NO. CCC 5240-86 (April 9, 1987), both matters having been decided at the Commission's public meeting of June 3, 1987.

> forth in the Act, the [L]egislature empowered the Commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement to gather information concerning applicants by various means. The application process is initiated by the completion and filing of a Personal History Disclosure Form in accordance with N.J.A.C. 19:41-7.1 et seq. The Commission may also require the production of information by means of other formal requests. N.J.S.A. 5:12-80(d). The Division is empowered, in fulfilling its investigative duties, to request information, documentary materials or other data from any applicant for licensure. N.J.S.A. 5:12-76(b)(8).
> Most importantly, the Legislature has explicitly placed upon applicants for licensure the affirmative responsibility to produce information to establish their qualifications under the Act, the burden of demonstrating such qualifications, and the continuing duty to provide requested information and cooperate in any investigation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-7(b)(8); 80(a), (b) and (c); 89(b); 90(b) and 91(b). But not only has the Legislature imposed these duties and burdens with regard to the production of information, it has also, as noted above, mandated that an applicant's failure to provide the same shall result in disqualification. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(b).

The failure to disclose material information will disqualify an applicant. In the Matter of the Application of Robert J. Alois for a Gaming School Resident Director License, Casino Control Commission, 78-EA-8 (Jan. 30, 1980) Final Order at 19. Although an inadvertent or ignorant failure to make a disclosure will not warrant disqualification, an intentional nondisclosure, premised upon the belief that an application for licensure would have been adversely affected, is grounds for mandatory disqualification from licensure. Harl Lee Cooper, Final Decision at 16; In the Matter of the Application of Steven M. Cohen for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Dealer), OAL DKT. CCC 3133-79 (Dec. 6, 1979), affirmed, Casino Control Commission (Jan. 30, 1980); In the Matter of the Application of William Gonzales for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Slot Attendant), OAL DKT. CCC 684-80 (July 16, 1980), modified, Casino Control Commission (Sept. 5, 1980). For a nondisclosure to result in a disqualification it must have been committed intentionally or in disregard of the regulatory process. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 253 (1979).

An applicant is required to provide all material facts when his or her application for licensure is submitted. "Material" includes both positive and negative information. Section 86b penalizes for the mere failure to provide any fact material to qualification. The weight and significance of the information provided are thereafter evaluated by the Commission under section 91 of the Act. To excuse an intentional failure to disclose or the provision of misleading statements by an applicant would usurp the responsibility and the ability of the Commission to evaluate an applicant's qualifications for licensure. An applicant has the affirmative burden to establish his or her qualifications to the satisfaction of the Commission. There is no doubt that arrests, charges and convictions of crimes are facts material to qualification.

In this case, the respondent at times admitted her underlying misconduct, her arrests, her court appearances, and her convictions. At other times, however, she asserted that the arrests were false arrests and that the deputy attorney general had fabricated the certified copy of the judgment of conviction, the arrest reports, the police reports, and other documentation. She admits the conduct, arrests, and convictions did occur but asserts that they are false arrests and therefore she does not accept them. Since she does not accept their validity, she did not disclose them on her Personal History Disclosure Form. The fact that the respondent does not accept the validity of the arrests does not change her affirmative responsibility to disclose the arrests. She made a conscious decision not to disclose her arrests because she does not accept their validity. This was not an inadvertent or ignorant failure to make a disclosure but an intentional nondisclosure, which was made in disregard of the regulatory process.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the respondent committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, which disqualifies her from continued registration.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division against the respondent is SUSTAINED and that registration no. 74178-40 be revoked.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On February 25, 1987, the Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) demanding that the respondent's casino hotel employee registration be revoked.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

On April 8, 1987, the Division filed a letter with the Commission recommending that the Commission deny casino employee licensure as a slot attendant to the respondent.

The gravamen of both the complaint and letter is respondent's alleged embezzlement from Thom McCann Shoe Stores in 1985. Respondent was diverted from the criminal justice system by way of a pretrial intervention program in that case.

The respondent requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was conducted on May 26, 1987. The matter was scheduled for hearing on September 17, 1987 and continued to December 21, 1987 at respondent's request. On that date, respondent failed to appear and an initial decision was filed with the Commission indicating that the respondent had abandoned her request for a hearing.

Respondent satisfied the Commission of her desire to pursue the matter and on April 15, 1988 it was remanded to the OAL for hearing. A second prehearing order was issued June 17, 1988 and the plenary hearing was conducted on September 27, 1988. The record was held open until October 12, 1988 in order for respondent to submit letters from persons who might wish to comment upon her good character or fitness for licensure.

SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY

The respondent was born and raised in Atlantic City. She graduated from Holy Spirit High School and entered the United States Army. While in the Army she married, had one child, divorced, and earned 62 credits at the University of Maryland. She decided to leave the Army after eight years in order to pursue a civilian career and finish college. She received an honorable discharge. But her expectations of civilian life were not fulfilled.

Respondent was unable to obtain employment for almost a year after she left the army. When she did obtain employment she created an impediment to future casino employment by committing a crime. Respondent was hired by Thom McCann Shoe Stores. Within one month she was promoted to assistant manager. As assistant manager she made bank deposits. Some of the bank deposits she was to make were used by her to pay her debts. She was discovered, apprehended, charged, and diverted to pretrial intervention. She reimbursed the store more than $2,500.00. She borrowed the money from her mother who borrowed the money from a finance company. Her mother already had an outstanding loan at the finance company. The respondent agreed to repay both loans as a condition of receiving the loan from the mother. She is still repaying them.

The respondent is presently working both as a waitress in a casino hotel restaurant and as a post office employee in Absecon. She has two full time jobs. She is proud of the fact that her daughter attends the Christian School in Linwood. The child's father pays tuition for the child and has visitation every weekend. Respondent's mother and ex-mother-in-law help her with her daughter. These arrangements permit the respondent to work two full time jobs. At both places of employment the respondent has many friends and supporters,who wrote letters on her behalf.

The respondent never denied that she embezzled money from Thom McCann's Shoe Store. She acknowledged that she did so. At the same time, she was less than candid in describing the theft. She used qualifiers at every opportunity, and did not "remember" some of the transactions. This was apparently a multiple theft aggregating over $2,500. It began on February 9, 1985 and continued until May 17, 1985.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Casino Control Act lists certain crimes, conviction of which disqualifies an applicant for casino employee licensure and may disqualify one for casino hotel registration. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c, 90e and 91b. In addition, whenever conduct is not prosecuted under the laws of this State, the Division of Gaming Enforcement may nevertheless prove the conduct constitutes an offense under the laws of this State for the purpose of showing a disqualification. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g. Here the State did not prosecute the crime but diverted it into the Pre Trial Intervention Program (PTI).

The crime sought to be proved here, N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9, theft in the third degree, is a disqualifier. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1). It was at common law the crime of embezzlement. Under common law embezzlement always meant that a breach of a trust relationship occurred. State v. Palumbo 137 N.J. Super. 13, (App. Div.) 347 A.2d. 535 (1975). It is now considered to be the failure to properly dispose of property which is "subject to a known legal obligation to make specified payment or other disposition..." and treating the property as the perpetrators own. It is a crime of the third degree if the amount involved exceeds $500. N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2 b(3). The individual amount embezzled from time to time may be aggregated to determine the degree of the crime. N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(4).

DISQUALIFICATION

There is no question this respondent committed the third degree crime of theft contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9. The amount of her embezzlement exceeds $500. The property (in this case, money) was to be disposed of by her by making a deposit in her employer's bank. She failed to make that deposit and used the money to pay her own debts. I FIND that the respondent committed acts which constitute third degree theft contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-9. I CONCLUDE that the respondent is disqualified from casino employee licensure and should be disqualified from casino/hotel registration unless saved from disqualification by virtue of an affirmative showing that she is rehabilitated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and/or 91d.

REHABILITATION

The Casino Control Act permits lower level employees to save their gaming licenses and registrations from revocation if they can affirmatively show that they are rehabilitated, sections 90h and 91d.These provisions of the statute are basically the same and require that the following factors be considered in discussing rehabilitation:

1. The nature and duties of the position applied for;

2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4. The date of the offense or conduct;
5. The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

I FIND as follows:

1. As a registrant the respondent is a waitress in a casino hotel restaurant. She seeks licensure as a slot attendant. In both positions she will have access to casino patrons and to money.

2. The conduct complained of is a serious crime. The respondent breached a trust imposed upon her by the terms of her employment.

3. The conduct was committed by the respondent in her capacity as assistant manager of a shoe store responsible for making bank deposits. She kept some of the deposits for her own use.

4. The conduct occurred throughout the period February 9, 1985 to May 17, 1985.

5. The respondent was 26 years old when she committed the offense.

6. This conduct has not been repeated but did continue for a period of three months in 1985.

7. No social conditions contributed to this conduct.

8. The respondent was granted PTI. She is fully employed and is well motivated and responsible. Her supervisors and co-workers hold her in high regard.

Because of the sensitive nature of casino gambling, the industry can ill afford the perception that it is staffed by criminal offenders. The purpose of the rehabilitation analysis is to aid in the assessment of the respondent's propensity, if any, to commit an offense in the future.

The statute does not permit even one mistake. First time offenders are disqualified as well as multiple offenders. Nevertheless rehabilitation from criminal conduct is a concept that has received legislative approval.

But rehabilitation cannot be invoked precipitately. Although this respondent is making satisfactory progress towards rehabilitation by reason of her good employment record and her payments of restitution, only three years have elapsed since she committed a crime which included a breach of an employer's trust. This respondent was a mature woman at the time. She was an honorably discharged veteran of eight years in the United States Army and must have known better.

The offense was a continuing one for a period of three months, not the careless act of a moment. These factors lead me to CONCLUDE that the respondent has not affirmatively proved that she is rehabilitated within the intention of N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h and 91d.

GOOD CHARACTER, HONESTY AND INTEGRITY

Applicants for casino employee licensure, unlike applicants for casino hotel registration, must prove by clear and convincing evidence that they possess good character, honesty and integrity in addition to possessing other indicia of qualification. N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90b.

The purpose of this test is also to aid in predicting the future conduct of the licensee vis a vis the regulatory scheme. But it is a sharper test and more difficult than a mere affirmative showing of rehabilitation. This is necessary because licensees will have contact with casino patrons and with relatively large sums of money. The nature of the licensee's work places him or her in a position of trust over money belonging either to patrons or to the casinos. This trust cannot be violated.

Because the respondent violated a trust for a period of three months only three years ago, because she was not completely candid regarding her conduct during that period of time and for the further reasons elaborated above under the rehabilitation analysis, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not proved by clear and convincing evidence that she possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure. N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) and 90b.

ORDER AND DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the respondent's casino employee registration be REVOKED and it is FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent's application for casino employee licensure be DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION who by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: January 27, 1989 Decided: February 7, 1989

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Marva M. Johnson, applied to the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the renewal of a casino employee license (blackjack floorperson and craps dealer), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90. The respondent, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), opposed the renewal of the license by reason of its contention that the petitioner had committed a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), by means of section 86g, and therefore, she lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference. The petitioner contended that she was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 90h.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner filed with the Commission an application for the renewal of a casino employee license so she could be employed as a blackjack dealer and floorperson and a craps dealer in the casino industry. By letter to the Commission, dated December 8, 1987, the Division objected to the petitioner's application for licensure as a blackjack floorperson and craps dealer, asserting that the petitioner had committed the offense of theft by deception (third degree), in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, which is a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by section 86g. The Division further objected asserting that the petitioner lacked the necessary financial responsibility for licensure as provided in section 89b(1), as incorporated in section 90b. The Division also objected pursuant to section 89b(2). Based upon the report, the Commission notified the petitioner on February 1, 1988, that there was a "substantial possibility" that her application would be denied and that she had the right to a hearing. By application dated April 6, 1988 [sic], which was received by the Commission on March 6, 1988, the petitioner requested a hearing. On April 11, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which received it on April 15, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference in the matter was held before me on June 20, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether petitioner committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception.

B. Whether petitioner possesses the requisite financial stability for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(1) as incorporated in section 90b.

C. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b.

D. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was scheduled for October 28, 1988. By notification dated September 26, 1988, the petitioner was informed of the time and location of the hearing. On the date of the scheduled hearing, the petitioner failed to appear. On October 31, 1988, the petitioner notified my office that she had been in New York on the hearing date and requested that the hearing be rescheduled. This request was granted, and the hearing was rescheduled.

A hearing was held on January 27, 1989, at the Municipal Courtroom, Pleasantville Police Building, Pleasantville, New Jersey, after which the record closed.

At the hearing, the respondent made a motion to withdraw the section 89b(1) issue which was contained in issue B of the prehearing order. Counsel indicated that it was not the Division's usual practice to include section 89b(1) issues in licensing objection cases which are based upon the petitioner's alleged wrongful receipt of unemployment benefits. The respondent's motion was granted, and the financial stability issue was not considered at the hearing.

THE FACTS

In 1982, the petitioner became employed as a security guard at the Playboy Hotel and Casino. This was a temporary position which she remained in for only six months. As she had already obtained a casino employee license as a blackjack dealer, the petitioner sought other employment. Later in 1982, the petitioner was hired by Bally's Park Place as a blackjack dealer. She remained employed at Bally's for two and one-half years, until December 1984.

On January 20, 1985, the petitioner filed a claim for unemployment benefits at the Atlantic City office of the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance (R-5a). Upon application, the petitioner was informed that it was her obligation to inform her local unemployment office of any changes in her employment status. The petitioner was determined to be eligible for benefits in the amount of $203.00 per week (R-5a). An eight-week penalty was imposed, and the petitioner did not begin receiving any unemployment benefits until March 29, 1985 for the week ending February 23, 1985 (R-5a).

In June 1985, the petitioner became employed at Trump's Castle Hotel and Casino as a blackjack dealer. The petitioner did not report this employment to her local unemployment office. Her unemployment claim terminated when she exhausted her benefits on August 17, 1985 (R-5a). During this period, the petitioner earned $4,680.79 (R-3c & R-6a). Because the petitioner failed to notify her local unemployment office of her employment, she received unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled in the amount of $2,233.00 (R-3c & R-6a). The petitioner remained employed at Trump's Castle for approximately one year.

In late 1985, the petitioner had a car accident and went on disability. The petitioner testified that after recuperating, she returned to work at Trump's Castle until she was terminated in May or June 1986.

On July 27, 1986, the petitioner filed a second claim for unemployment benefits at the Atlantic City office of the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance (R-5b). Upon application, the petitioner was again informed that it was her obligation to inform her local unemployment office of any changes in her employment status. The petitioner was determined to be eligible for benefits in the amount of $214.00 per week (R-5b).

Payroll records at Trump's Castle indicate that the petitioner was employed at Trump's Castle at the time she filed the unemployment claim. These records indicate that she was not terminated at Trump's Castle until September 14, 1986 (R-3a).

On October 17, 1986, the petitioner became employed as a pit clerk at Harrah's Marina Hotel and Casino. She retained this employment until December 6, 1986 (R-3b). The petitioner did not report her employment at either Trump's Castle or Harrah's Marina to her local unemployment office, and she continued to receive unemployment benefits into February 1987 (R-5b). During this period, the petitioner earned $2,497.55 while employed at Trump's Castle (R-3a) and $2,000.63 while employed at Harrah's Marina (R-3b). Because the petitioner failed to notify her local unemployment office of her employment, she received unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled in the amount of $1,475.00 (R-3a, R-3b & R-6b).

The petitioner did not work in 1987 until the opening of the Showboat Hotel and Casino. She became employed as a blackjack and craps dealer. She was terminated after her 90-day probationary period based upon her overall performance.

The petitioner was then employed for two months as a pit clerk at the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. She was terminated during her probationary period for excessive absenteeism. (She had four unexcused absences.)

On March 2, 1987, the Department of Labor (Department) notified the petitioner that it would be conducting a hearing on March 9, 1987, concerning the unemployment benefits she had received between June 2, 1985 and December 6, 1986, while the petitioner had been employed (R-4). The petitioner failed to attend the hearing. The Department thereafter made a determination in the case based on the record. On April 2, 1987, the Department determined that the petitioner had received unemployment benefits in benefit year 1985 in the amount of $2233.00, which she was not entitled to receive, and it imposed a fine of $558.25 for a total claim of $2,791.25 (R-2b). The Department further determined that the petitioner had received unemployment benefits in benefit year 1986 in the amount of $1,414.00, which she was not entitled to receive, and it imposed a fine of $352.25 for a total claim of $1,766.25 (R-2a & R-2c). The Department then filed a certificate of debt for $5,413.50 in the Superior Court of New Jersey on June 26, 1987, and a judgment was entered and docketed on July 29, 1987 (R-1). The petitioner was never charged with any criminal offense arising out of this incident.

The petitioner offered to enter into a repayment agreement with the Department at a rate of $25.00 per month; however, that offer was rejected as being insufficient. The petitioner has been unemployed and unable to repay the debt. Her state income tax refund has been withheld and applied to her New Jersey Higher Education Assistance Fund loan and to this debt.

At age 14, the petitioner entered into a relationship with a man. At 17 she had a son. At 19 she became employed at Bally's. The petitioner is presently 25 years of age. After working at Bally's, her boyfriend left her with her son and all the bills. She exhausted her funds. She was in school at the time and her son was in private school. She fell behind in her rent and car insurance, had to withdraw from school, and had to enroll her son in public school. Due to these debts, she did not report her new employment to her local unemployment office. Her income was insufficient and she continued to look for a second job. The petitioner felt like the money was hers and she needed it.

The petitioner is presently on public assistance and is enrolled in the ACE program in Atlantic County. This program is going to fund a training program in cosmetology for the petitioner which is scheduled to begin February 6, 1989, at the Atlantic County Vocational School. She is a high school graduate. She enrolled in Atlantic County Community College last fall; however, when she was evicted from her apartment, she lost her books and had to withdraw from school. Her son's father is in jail and does not contribute to his support.

She has worked for Eastern Service Workers in the past, is a member of St. Pauls A.M.E. Church, and attends the Faith Baptist Church with her son. She has also sold candy to help support her local little league. The petitioner is presently in debt for approximately $20,000.00.

The petitioner regrets her misconduct and partially blames it on her immaturity. She feels terrible about her misconduct, but she has no funds with which to make restitution. She has no education and her only work experience is in the casino industry.

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the petitioner's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident and her current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess her credibility. Initially, her position in this matter must be recognized. As the petitioner and the applicant for a casino employee license, she has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the petitioner's demeanor, the plausibility of her testimony, the manner in which she participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appears that the petitioner testified truthfully in every regard. She candidly admitted her misconduct and described in detail, experiencing great humiliation, the underlying circumstances. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the petitioner's testimony in all respects.

I am persuaded that her misconduct was, in part, due to immaturity. I am also inclined to believe that it was the result of inexperience and the difficulty in dealing with her financial and family affairs. At the time the petitioner obtained a job and failed to disclose this fact to her local unemployment office, she was in a difficult living arrangement. Her boyfriend had deserted her family and the petitioner was only concerned with providing a home for her son. She was in debt, working, and attending school in order to attempt to better her life. Although her actions were clearly and admittedly wrong, the underlying circumstances do mitigate somewhat the seriousness of the misconduct. In addition, the absence of any other criminal misconduct supports this finding.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The petitioner first received unemployment benefits from March 23, 1985, through August 17, 1985.

2. On or about June 3, 1985, the petitioner became employed at Trump's Castle Hotel and Casino.

3. Between June 3, 1985, and August 17, 1985, the petitioner failed to disclose her employment to her unemployment office and she wrongfully received unemployment benefits in the amount of $2,233.00 to which she was not entitled.

4. The petitioner received unemployment benefits a second time from July 27, 1986, through February 1987.

5. The petitioner was employed at Trump's Castle at the time she filed for unemployment benefits. She terminated her employment at Trump's Castle on September 14, 1986, was hired at Harrah's Marina on October 17, 1986, and left Harrah's Marina on December 6, 1986.

6. Between July 27, 1986, and December 6, 1986, the petitioner failed to disclose her employment to her unemployment office and she wrongfully received unemployment benefits in the amount of $1,475.00 to which she was not entitled.

7. The Department of Labor determined that the petitioner had received unemployment benefits in benefit year 1985 in the amount of $2233.00, which she was not entitled to receive, and it imposed a fine of $558.25 for a total claim of $2,791.25. The Department further determined that the petitioner had received unemployment benefits in benefit year 1986 in the amount of $1,414.00, which she was not entitled to receive, and it imposed a fine of $352.25 for a total claim of $1,766.25.

8. On June 26, 1987, the Department of Labor filed in the Superior Court of New Jersey a certificate of debt against the petitioner. On July 29, 1987, a judgment was entered and docketed against the petitioner in the amount of $5,413.50.

9. The only restitution made by the petitioner has been the withholding of her state income tax refund.

10. At the time of the first false claim, the petitioner was 21 years of age, had been deserted by her boyfriend, was raising her son, was attending school, and was in debt. At the time of the second false claim, the petitioner was 22 years of age.

11. The petitioner is currently 25 years of age and is unemployed.

12. The petitioner is presently on public assistance and is enrolled in the ACE program in Atlantic County. This program is going to fund a training program in cosmetology for the petitioner which is scheduled to begin February 6, 1989 at the Atlantic County Vocational School.

13. The petitioner has worked for Eastern Service Workers, attends church, and sells candy for her local little league.

14. The petitioner is remorseful and has not been involved in any other criminal conduct.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;
>
> ...
>
> c. The conviction of the applicant, or of any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license, of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be:
>
> (1) Any of the following offenses under the "New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice," P.L. 1978, c. 95 (Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes) as amended and supplemented:
>
> ...
>
> N.J.S. 2C:20-1 et seq. (theft and related offenses which constitute crimes of the second or third degree);
>
> ....
>
> g. The commission by the applicant or any person who is required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of this section, even if such conduct has not or may not be prosecuted under the criminal laws of this State....

N.J.S.A. 5:12-89, Licensing of casino key employees, provides in pertinent part:

> b. Each applicant must, prior to the issuance of any casino key employee license, produce information, documentation and assurances concerning the following qualification criteria:
>
> ....

convincing evidence the applicant's good character, honesty and integrity. Such information shall include, without limitation, data pertaining to family, habits, character, reputation, criminal and arrest record, business activities, financial affairs, and business, professional and personal associates, covering at least the 10-year period immediately preceding the filing of the application. Each applicant shall notify the commission of any civil judgments obtained against such applicant pertaining to antitrust or security regulation laws of the federal government, of this State or of any other state, jurisdiction, province or country. In addition, each applicant shall, upon request of the commission or the division, produce letters of reference from law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction in the applicant's place of residence and principal place of business, which letters of reference shall indicate that such law enforcement agencies do not have any pertinent information concerning the applicant, or if such law enforcement agency does have information pertaining to the applicant, shall specify what that information is. If the applicant has been associated with gaming or casino operations in any capacity, position or employment in a jurisdiction which permits such activity, the applicant shall, upon request of the commission or division, produce letters of reference from the gaming or casino enforcement or control agency, which shall specify the experience of such agency with the applicant, his associates and his participation in the gaming operations of that jurisdiction; provided, however, that if no such letters are received from the appropriate law enforcement agencies within 60 days of the applicant's request therefor, the applicant may submit a statement under oath that he is or was during the period such activities were conducted in good standing with such gaming or casino enforcement or control agency.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90, Licensing of casino employees, provides in pertinent part:

a. No person may commence employment as a casino employee unless he is the holder of a valid casino employee license.

b. Any applicant for a casino employee license must, prior to the issuance of any such license, produce sufficient information, documentation and assurances to meet the qualification criteria, including New Jersey residency, contained in subsection b. of section 89 of this act and any additional residency requirement imposed under subsection c. of this section; except that the standards for business ability and casino experience may be satisfied by a showing of casino job experience and knowledge of the provisions of this act and regulations pertaining to the particular position involved, or by successful completion of a course of study at a licensed school in an approved curriculum.

e. The commission shall deny a casino employee license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of this act.

h. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection e. of this section, no applicant shall be denied a casino employee license on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria or the commission of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of section 86 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86), as specified in subsection g. of that section; provided that the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the applicant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;

(4) The date of the offense or conduct;

(5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;

(6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION

The Division contends, by means of section 86g, that the petitioner committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception - third degree, which constitutes a violation of section 86c(1), and that, accordingly, she is disqualified from continued licensure.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g

Section 86g provides that an applicant will be disqualified from licensure because of the commission of any action which would constitute an offense under section 86c, even if there has not been a prosecution for such conduct. Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be one of certain enumerated offenses contained in Title 2C of the New Jersey statutes be disqualified from licensure. The Division contends that the petitioner's receipt of unemployment benefits in excess of $500 between March 23, 1985 and August 17, 1985, while she was employed by Trump's Castle and her receipt of unemployment benefits in excess of $500 between July 27, 1986, and December 6, 1986, while she was employed at Trump's Castle and Harrah's Marina constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, which under the circumstances disqualifies the petitioner from continued licensure.

N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, Theft by deception, provides:

> A person is guilty of theft if he purposely obtains property of another by deception. A person deceives if he purposely:
>
> a. Creates or reinforces a false impression, including false impressions as to law, value, intention or other state of mind; but deception as to a person's intention to perform a promise shall not be inferred from the fact alone that he did not subsequently perform the promise;
>
> b. Prevents another from acquiring information which would affect his judgment of a transaction; or
>
> c. Fails to correct a false impression which the deceiver previously created or reinforced, or which the deceiver knows to be influencing another to whom he stands in a fiduciary or confidential relationship.
>
> The term "deceive" does not, however, include falsity as to matters having no pecuniary significance, or puffing or exaggeration by > statements unlikely to deceive ordinary persons in the group addressed.

This statute has been held applicable where one wrongfully receives unemployment benefits. In State v. Moore, 158 N.J. Super. 68, 85-86 (App. Div. 1978), the court stated:

> As we read the trial judge's findings, defendant knowingly misrepresented his employment status to obtain money "under pretense that he is . . . out of employment." These findings establish a violation of N.J.S.A. 2A:111-2.[1] It is not necessary to prove a "corrupt intent," so long as the evidence establishes a criminal intent. See State v. Lambertson, 110 N.J. Super. 137, 141-143 (App. Div.), certif. den. 56 N.J. 479 (1970). It is immaterial that defendant may have felt entitled to some unemployment benefits and, therefore, did not have a "conscious" intent to defraud or to commit a criminal or immoral act. It is not necessary to show that defendant was "conscious that his acts were unlawful." Id. Defendant himself testified, in effect, that he received more benefits than he thought he should receive, based upon the hours he allegedly worked — or did not work. It was unnecessary to determine the exact amount of overpayment, so long as the wrongful acts inducing such payment have been established. State v. Harris, 70 N.J. 586, 589 (1976).

The Division established, and the petitioner admitted during her testimony, that she knowingly received unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled from the Department of Labor. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the petitioner's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4. I further CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-2b(2)a, the offense constitutes a crime of the third degree.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offense committed by the petitioner is a disqualifying offense under sections 86c(1) and 86g. The petitioner is therefore disqualified from licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

---

[1] N.J.S.A. 2A:111-2 is now repealed, but was the predecessor to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4.

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

An applicant faced with the existence of one or more section 86c disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against licensure by affirmatively demonstrating his or her rehabilitation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h. This section sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made:

1. The nature and duties of the position applied for;
2. The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3. The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4. The date of the offense or conduct;
5. The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
6. Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Ms. Johnson is a gaming casino employee and works as a blackjack dealer and floorperson and a craps dealer. As such, she does have direct responsibilities for actual gaming activities and does have contact with casino patrons.

Second, the petitioner committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception - third degree, over eleven and thirteen-week periods during which she was employed in the industry. Because the offense is a listed disqualifier under section 86c(1), it is very serious.

Third, the seriousness of the misconduct must be viewed in its appropriate context. The petitioner's boyfriend, the father of her child, deserted the family and did not contribute any further to the support of the family. The petitioner was a young mother, and she was simply concerned with providing for her family in a time of crisis. She exhausted her funds. She was in school and her son was in private school. She fell behind in her rent and car insurance, had to withdraw from school, and had to enroll her son in public school. Due to these debts, she did not report her new employment to her local unemployment office. Her income was insufficient and she continued to look for a second job. The petitioner felt like the money was hers and she needed it. These circumstances converged upon the petitioner and impaired her judgment. Accordingly, the totality of the circumstances underlying the incident tends to mitigate somewhat the seriousness of her offense.

Fourth, the petitioner's misconduct occurred from June 3, 1985, until August 17, 1985, when it ceased. The petitioner's misconduct reoccurred from July 27, 1986, until December 6, 1986, when it ceased.

Fifth, the petitioner was 21 or 22 years of age at the time of the offense. I believe that immaturity was a factor in this case. The petitioner believes she has learned with maturity and such conduct will not occur again. In addition, it is clear that the underlying circumstances affected the petitioner's ability to deal reasonably with her problems at that time. While this factor can mitigate the offense, it cannot excuse it.

Sixth, petitioner has not committed any other violation of the criminal laws since 1986.

Seventh, because of the underlying circumstances, the petitioner was only concerned with raising and providing for her family. Her family's security and her financial situation were major concerns. Because of her youth, she was unaware of other alternatives which she could have pursued.

Eighth, the petitioner has made few rehabilitative efforts. She has made hardly any restitution. The petitioner has been employed in the casino industry sporadically since 1982. Her performance has been average to poor. She claims she has matured and has accepted responsibility. The petitioner is presently on public assistance and is enrolled in the ACE program in Atlantic County. This program is going to fund a training program in cosmetology for the petitioner which is scheduled to begin February 6, 1989, at the Atlantic County Vocational School. She is a high school graduate. She enrolled in Atlantic County Community College last fall; however, when she was evicted from her apartment, she lost her books and had to withdraw from school. Her son's father is in jail and does not contribute to his support. She has worked for Eastern Service Workers in the past, is a member of St. Paul's A.M.E. Church, and attends the Faith Baptist Church with her son. She has also sold candy to help support her local little league. The petitioner is presently in debt for approximately $20,000.00. The petitioner has expressed remorse for, and has no intention of repeating, her misconduct.

Given the petitioner's current situation and after considering the above factors, particularly factors one, two, four and eight, I am not convinced that the petitioner has affirmatively established, by clear and convincing evidence, her rehabilitation. The petitioner introduced no letters of recommendation or testimony from other witnesses to attest to her rehabilitation, good character, honesty or integrity. All she submitted was her own testimony and this was after being informed by me at the prehearing conference that she had the burden of proof and needed to produce such evidence. Private counsel also informed her of this. The petitioner has done little to establish her claim of rehabilitation. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has not established, by clear and convincing evidence, her rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b

Under section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference, Ms. Johnson was required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, her reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 248 (1979). In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon an applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Applications of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 10 N.J.A.R. 295, 297-298 (1980). In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 296.

It appears that the petitioner's misconduct was aberrant and that she is normally a person of good character, honesty and integrity. The misconduct did not involve her licensed employment, and the underlying circumstances somewhat mitigated the seriousness of the misconduct. In addition, the petitioner has fully accepted responsibility for her misconduct. The petitioner, however, has not performed admirably within the casino industry during the past six years, nor has she established that she has become a respected member of her community. She is presently unemployed but about to enter a job-training program. In light of her current situation, and her indication that she felt the unemployment benefits were hers, I am not convinced that the petitioner presents no risk to the public nor to the integrity of the gaming industry in this state. The petitioner has not earned the privilege of licensure. An examination of the whole person does not clearly and convincingly establish that Ms. Johnson is a person of good character, honesty and integrity, and is entirely suitable for licensure in this state. See, Boardwalk Regency Corp.

I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has not established, by clear and convincing evidence, her good character, honesty and integrity under section 90b.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the application of Marva M. Johnson for the renewal of a casino employee license be DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Norma L. Stancil, Deputy Attorney General, for the respondent (Peter N. Perretti, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 3, 1989 Decided: March 8, 1989

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), alleges that petitioner, Sahdina L. Johnson, is statutorily disqualified from holding a casino employee license within the meaning of section 86c(1) of the Casino Control Act (Act) N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. because she committed an offense comparable to theft by deception in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4. The offense was not prosecuted within the meaning of section 86g of the Act. The Division also alleges that petitioner does not possess the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure, pursuant to section 89b(2) of the Act as incorporated within section 90b of the Act. The petitioner asserts rehabilitation pursuant to Section 90h of the Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed an objection letter with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on July 27, 1988, opposing the renewal of petitioner's casino license. The petitioner requested a hearing on August 22, 1988. On August 29, 1988, the Commission transmitted the within matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on December 8, 1988 and the matter was scheduled for hearing on February 3, 1989, at the OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The matter was heard and the record closed on February 3, 1989.

ISSUES

A. Whether petitioner committed the disqualifying offense of theft by deception, contrary to N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, within the meaning of section 86c(1), even if such conduct was not prosecuted under the criminal laws of New Jersey, within the meaning of section 86g?

B. Whether petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b?

C. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to section 90h of the Casino Control Act?

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts in this matter are totally undisputed.

The petitioner, Sahdina L. Johnson, received a license as a casino employee on June 22, 1983. The license authorized Ms. Johnson to be a craps dealer. Ms. Johnson has been employed by Cesaers Casino Hotel since July 3, 1985, in the position of craps dealer.

On March 19, 1986, the New Jersey Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance sent a determination and demand for refund of unemployment benefits to Ms. Johnson requiring the refund of unemployment benefits received by Ms. Johnson in the amount of $2,660.00 (Exhibit R-6). Ms. Priscilla Carrano, Investigator, Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance testified and offered documentary evidence that Ms. Johnson collected unemployment benefits while she was employed by Steel's Fudge between May 26, 1984 and September 15, 1984. The result of petitioner's misrepresentation was the receipt of unemployment benefits to which she was not entitled.

Patrolman Edward T. Brady of the Atlantic City Police Department testified that he arrested the petitioner, Sahdina L. Johnson, on February 8, 1988 and charged her with disorderly conduct in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:33-2b and resisting arrest, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:29-2a. He testified that he and his partner had been called to the Silver Dollar Saloon in Atlantic City, New Jersey. It appears that Ms. Johnson had become loud and abusive. After being asked to leave the premises, Ms. Johnson allegedly refused to leave the bar. She became embroiled in a dispute with the police officers and at which time they charged her. At the municipal court hearing, Ms. Johnson pled guilty to a lesser violation of a municipal ordinance (Exhibit R-11).

In addition, the petitioner defaulted on a student loan with the New Jersey Higher Education Assistance Authority in the amount of $1,171.91. The petitioner has repaid over $1,000.00 of the principal and is making monthly payments of $40.00.

As of July 1988, the petitioner had repaid in excess of $2,000.00 on the principal amount of the unemployment benefits overpayment and as of January 31, 1989, the entire overpayment of unemployment benefits (including interest and penalties) had been repaid to the Division of Unemployment and Disability Insurance. Ms. Johnson acknowledged that her receipt of unemployment benefits while employed at Steel's Fudge was improper. She credibly testified that she has been employed by Caesars Hotel since July 1985 and that there have been no problems with her employment. She further testified that she had been terminated from the Atlantis Casino Hotel as the result of a confrontation with a patron who was demanding change.

Petitioner produced Ms. Doris Johnson (no relation) who testified that she has known the petitioner for three and one-half years as a fellow craps dealer. Doris Johnson testified credibly that she has observed Sahdina Johnson and she is of the opinion that Ms. Johnson has the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure. Petitioner's husband, Darryl A. Loveland also testified as to his wife's reputation for good character, honesty and integrity.

The above is credible, documented, and is thus FOUND AS FACT.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSION

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1)

Section 86c(1) of the Act mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense which would be under New Jersey law at the time of application be a violation of any of the provisions in regard to Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes be disqualified from licensure. Section 86g provides that the Commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified "by any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. . . . even if such conduct has not or may not be prosecuted under the criminal laws of this State."

In the instant matter, the testimony of Priscilla Carrano, Investigator, with the New Jersey Division of Unemployment and Disability along with the documentary evidence and the admissions made by petitioner establish, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that Ms. Johnson committed an act comparable to theft by deception by collecting unemployment benefits while she was employed by Steel's Fudge between May 26, 1984 and September 15, 1984. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is statutorily disqualified from casino licensure, pursuant to section 86c(1) of the Act as incorporated within section 86g.

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b

Under section 89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b of the Act, Ms. Johnson is required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, her good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244, 250 (1988). In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises an objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon the applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In Re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Application of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 10 N.J.A.R. 295 (1988). In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 297.

The Commission has held that the disqualification criteria found in section 86b cannot be seperated from an applicant's burden to establish his or her qualifications for licensure under section 89b(2). In the Matter of the Application of William Gonzales for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Slot Attendant), OAL DKT. NO. CCC 684-80 (July 16, 1980), modified, Casino Control Commission (September 5, 1980) at 8.

I have had the opportunity to observe the witnesses on behalf of the State, the witnesses on behalf of the petitioner and the petitioner herself. After weighing and assessing the testimony presented, I am satisfied that Ms. Johnson should not be precluded from casino licensure based upon her alleged lack of good character, honesty and integrity. The fact that she has made full restitution, has been successfully employed in the industry for four years and has admitted to her wrongful misconduct persaude me that Ms. Johnson has learned from her mistakes and will continue to be an asset to the casino industry.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has established, by clear and convincing evidence, her good character, honesty and integrity for casino licensure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2), as incorporated within section 90b.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h

An applicant or a licensed employee in a disciplinary proceeding faced with the existence of one or more section 86 disqualifiers has the opportunity to overcome the prohibition against continued licensure by affirmatively demonstrating her rehabilitation.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h sets forth the following eight specific criteria to be evaluated when a determination for rehabilitation is to be made:

1) The nature and duties of the position applied for;
2) The nature and seriousness of the offense or conduct;
3) The circumstances under which the offense or conduct occurred;
4) The date of the offense or conduct;
5) The age of the applicant when the offense or conduct was committed;
6) Whether the offense or conduct was an isolated or repeated incident;
7) Any social condition which may have contributed to the offense or conduct;
8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counselling or pshychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or who have had the applicant under their supervision.

First, Ms. Johnson is an applicant for a renewal of her casino employee license as a craps dealer. As such, she will have substantial contact with patrons of casinos.

Second, the Division has established that petitioner committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:20-4, theft by deception, pursuant to section 86g of the Act. Theft by deception is a statutory disqualifier. Given the circumstances, this was a serious offense.

Third, the respondent acknowledged her misconduct. Under the facts of this case, it is unlikely that the petitioner will ever repeat her criminal behavior.

Fourth, petitioner's behavior between May and September 1984, appears to be aberrational.

Fifth, the petitioner committed the offense at age 22. Under the facts of this case, it is unlikely that her misconduct was due to immaturity.

Sixth, the petitioner's misconduct involved her commission of offenses in 1984. There is no indicia of any other criminal behavior either prior to or subsequent to the events of May to September 1984.

Seventh, there were no apparent social conditions which contributed to the offense.

Eighth, the petitioner has demonstrated her rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. Ms. Johnson has repaid the entire unemployment benefit overpayment of $2,740.00 (including interest and penalties) and has been successfully employed as a craps dealer with Caesars Casino Hotel since July 1985. The fact that Ms. Johnson has led a law-abiding existence since 1984 (with the minor exception of the February 8, 1988 incident) must be given substantial weight when assessing rehabilitation.

After considering all of the factors listed in N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h, including the fact that the petitioner has repaid the entire unemployment overpayment and has been successfully employed in the industry since July 1985 and after assessing the credibility and demeanor of Ms. Johnson and her witnesses, I am persuaded that petitioner has met her statutory burden of establishing rehabilitation.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has affirmatively established her rehabilitation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90h.

ORDER AND DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the application of Sahdina L. Johnson for a casino employee license renewal (DGE 46273-21) be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

APPLICATION OF STANLEY M. KALLMAN :

FOR A CASINO EMPLOYEE LICENSE :

ORDER

A hearing in this matter having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge (ALJ) recommending that the application for licensure be granted having been filed with the Casino Control Commission; and exceptions having been filed by the Division of Gaming Enforcement; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of March 29, 1989,

IT IS on this 21st day of April 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is rejected for the following reasons:

> The Commission finds that the applicant failed to establish by clear and convincing evidence the financial stability, integrity and responsibility and the good character, honesty and integrity as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(b)(1) and (2) and -90(b). The question is whether the legitimate concerns of public confidence and trust in the integrity of the regulatory process are served by conferring upon the applicant the privilege of licensure under the Casino Control Act and not, as the ALJ termed it -- "whether the State should protect petitioner [Mr. Kallman] from imprudence." Init. dec. at 3.

The evidence presented by Mr. Kallman consisted of his own testimony and five letters. Three of these letters, purportedly authored by members of Gambler's Anonymous, indicate that Mr. Kallman is an active and contributing member. It is unclear whether these letters were written for the purpose of assisting Mr. Kallman in obtaining a casino employee license, as opposed to employment outside the gaming field. Moreover, as befits the purpose of the organization, the last names of the authors of these letters were not provided. Nevertheless, these letters, coupled with Mr. Kallman's admission and the absence of any evidence to the contrary, establish that Kallman is a compulsive gambler who actively participates in Gambler's Anonymous. That organization as Mr. Kallman also advises, does not condone his action in seeking licensure here, since it is contrary to the policy of avoiding entry into a casino for any purpose.

The other two letters produced by Mr. Kallman are from his State Assemblyman and his State Senator. Both are devoid of any information respecting Mr. Kallman's qualifications for licensure or any other issue involved in this case. The letters are merely requests directed to the Division of Gaming Enforcement that it provide whatever assistance it can to Mr. Kallman regarding his application for licensure.

In his testimony Mr. Kallman admitted that his overwhelming financial problems which have caused him to seek a discharge in bankruptcy stem largely from the fact that he is a compulsive gambler. He has incurred unpaid debts in the amount of $480,000; $100,000 of which are owed to casino licensees and have not as yet been satisfied or discharged. Mr. Kallman testified that, after the casinos denied him any more credit, he turned to betting on sporting events through bookmakers. In his presentation before this Commission he advised that one is always a "recovering" compulsive gambler. Yet, he stated that he does not have the urge to gamble. He further advised that he has turned his life over to a higher power. Mr. Kallman testified that he was previously employed as a car salesman and a telephone hardware consultant. Mr. Kallman also stated that he is 100% disabled and because of this receives Social Security Disability Benefits.

Mr. Kallman has gambled extensively, and compulsively, in both lawful and illicit venues. As a consequence he has incurred substantial ruinous debt. He is seeking help to control his gambling by his frequent attendance at Gambler's Anonymous meetings, but, as witnessed by his refusal to avoid casinos altogether, he has not embraced the program in its entirety.

The evidence presented by the applicant is not so direct and weighty and convincing as to enable this Commission to come to a clear conviction, without hesitancy, that he meets the exacting standards for a casino employee license. Serious concerns are raised and have not been overcome by the proofs offered by Mr. Kallman. Substantial doubts concerning his application remain, which require the denial of the application. We therefore adopt the ALJ's factual findings, but reject his conclusions that Mr. Kallman established the good character, honesty and integrity and the financial stability, integrity and responsibility required for licensure.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the application of Stanley M. Kallman for a casino employee license is denied because the applicant has failed to establish his qualifications as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the respondent is prohibited from reapplying for or obtaining any license, registration, qualification or approval required under the Casino Control Act except pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 19:41-8.8.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CCC 4660-88

STANLEY M. KALLMAN, Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND
PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION
OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

Stanley M. Kallman, petitioner, pro se

Ralph Fusco, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: November 1, 1988 Decided: November 10, 1988

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of petitioner's application for a casino employee license pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-1 et seq. Respondent undertook an investigation and forwarded the matter, without taking a position, to the Casino Control Commission for disposition. The Commission determined to transmit the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq., in order to develop a more clear record. A hearing was conducted on November 1, 1988, after which the record closed.

The questions presented are whether petitioner can establish by clear and convincing evidence that he is a person of good character and that he has the financial stability to be licensed as a casino employee. N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(1)(2) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

The only testimony was presented by petitioner and it is undisputed. Petitioner admits that he is a compulsive gambler. Sometime in 1979 he began gambling in Atlantic City. At the time he was a car salesman and was developing his own business as a telephone hardware consultant. He slowly fell into debt and by 1983 he owed the Sands Hotel and Casino approximately $42,000; Resorts — $5,000; Tropicana — $7,500; Atlantis — $4,900; Trump Plaza — $10,000, Bally's Park Place — $10,000, and the Claridge — $15,000. (The exact amounts due are not entirely clear from the record but these amounts are close approximations.) It was at this point that the casinos began to cut off his credit, and he turned to sports betting with bookmakers in an effort to recoup.

In August 1983, petitioner was also involved in an automobile accident, and has not worked since that time. He filed suit and the case went to trial however, he received no award. The Social Security Administration has determined that petitioner is 100 percent disabled, although it appears that this determination is not based on injuries sustained during the car accident, but was granted on a psychiatric basis. These benefits are now his sole source of income. Petitioner testified that although he earned approximately $100,000 in the first half of 1983 before the automobile accident, he has no desire to return to car sales, or consulting, and in any event he has no capital by which to get started.

Petitioner has attended Gamblers Anonymous (GA) since November 1985. He continues to be active in that organization and testified that he has not gambled since he first entered the program. He acknowledged that GA advises program participants not to tempt themselves by going to the casinos; yet he believes that the prohibition on gambling for casino employees and his own change of attitude will prevent a return to his former lifestyle.

In January 1988, he applied for personal bankruptcy seeking to have approximately $480,000 in debts discharged. He seeks to be licensed as a casino host and testified that if granted this license would be a lifeline; with it he might convince the trustee in bankruptcy not to take his house. Petitioner sees a therapist for treatment of depression.

Petitioner also submitted a series of character letters. This is the substance of the record.

The case is a difficult one. Petitioner was a credible individual, he has committed no crime, and personal bankruptcy is not alone a basis for excluding him. Applicants entirely without means are routinely licensed as casino employees, and the position which he seeks is well removed from financial dealings. Having said this, it is apparent that petitioner should not want to work in the casinos. No therapist or representative of GA appeared to say that petitioner could safely return to the atmosphere which not so long ago overwhelmed him. To the contrary, his own testimony is that this is contraindicated. Reduced then to its essence, the question is whether the State should protect petitioner from imprudence. I CONCLUDE that it should not. Petitioner is attempting to come back from financial ruin. Once his debts are released, he will have a fresh start. He poses no danger to the casino industry, and we ought not to prevent him from making his own way.

Based on the foregoing, it is my conclusion that petitioner is entitled to a casino employee license, and it is ORDERED that his application be approved.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

APPLICATION OF RUTH C. KAYTE
FOR A CASINO EMPLOYEE LICENSE

ORDER

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) having found that the applicant failed to prove her qualifications for a casino employee license pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89(b)(2); and the ALJ having filed an initial decision with the Casino Control Commission recommending denial of the application; and exceptions to the initial decision having been filed with the Commission by the Division of Gaming Enforcement which asserted that the applicant's failure to disclose her arrest record provided additional grounds pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(b) for denial of the application; and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of February 15, 1989,

IT IS on this 14th day of March 1989, ORDERED that the ALJ's recommendation to deny the application is rejected for the following reason:

The Commission concurs with the ALJ's finding that the applicant's failure to disclose her arrest record was unintentional and therefore, no violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(b) was established. However, the applicant having demonstrated her truthfulness by her credible testimony, thereby refuting the only negative information raised as an impediment to her licensure, the applicant was not, in the circumstances of this case, required to introduce testimony of or documentary evidence from other persons to establish her good character, honesty and integrity. While evidence of this nature is sometimes utilized to establish an applicant's good character, it is not a requirement in every case. The Commission finds that, in the absence of any significant negative information, the applicant's employment record, combined with her candid and credible testimony, established the good character, honesty and integrity required for licensure.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the application of Ruth C. Kayte for a casino employee license be granted.

Ruth C. Kayte, the petitioner, pro se

Charles Kimmel, Deputy Attorney General, for the respondent (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: December 13, 1988 Decided: December 23, 1988

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Ruth C. Kayte, applied to the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the issuance of a casino employee license (maintenance and cleaning), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-90. The respondent, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), opposed the issuance of the license by reason of its contention that the petitioner is disqualified pursuant to section 86b for failure to disclose material information, and therefore, she lacked the requisite good character, honesty and integrity, pursuant to section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner filed with the Commission an application for the issuance of a casino employee license so she could be employed as a cleaning person at the Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino. By letter to the Commission, dated February 23, 1988, the Division objected to the application of the petitioner for licensure as a maintenance and cleaning person pursuant to section 86b, alleging that the petitioner failed to disclose material information on her appliclation for licensure regarding a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria. The Division also objected pursuant to section 89(b)2. Based upon the report, the Commission notified the petitioner on March 14, 1988, and again on June 21, 1988, that there was a "substantial possibility" that her application would be denied and that she had the right to a hearing. By application dated June 29, 1988, which was received by the Commission on July 6, 1988, the petitioner requested a hearing. On July 6, 1988, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which was received on July 13, 1988, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was held in the matter before Administrative Law Judge Lillard E. Law on September 6, 1988. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether the petitioner, with specific reference to her record of arrests, has failed to reveal any facts material to qualification, or has supplied information which is untrue or misleading as to the material facts pertaining to the qualification criteria for her casino employee license within the meaning of section 86b and/or 90e.

B. Whether the petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2) as incorporated within section 90b.

A hearing was held on December 13, 1988, at the Municipal Courtroom, Galloway Township Municipal Building, Absecon, New Jersey, after which the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

On December 29, 1986, the petitioner filed with the Commission a Personal History Disclosure Form — 2A applying for a casino employee license so she could be employed as a cleaning person in the casino industry (R-1). In response to question 16 of this form, the petitioner responded that she had never been arrested or charged with any felony, crime or other offense.

Division Investigator Charles M. Bergman was assigned to investigate the petitioner's application. In addition to reveiwing the petitioner's Personal History Disclosure Form, the agent obtained copies of the petitioner's Federal Bureau of Investigation Criminal History Record (FBI rap sheet), New Jersey State Police, State Bureau of Investigation Criminal History Record, (SBI rap sheet) and Credit Bureau Association Financial Disclosure. The petitioner's FBI and SBI rap sheets indicated that she had been arrested several times for a variety of reasons. Agent Bergman then obtained copies of various police reports or court records which substantiated the entries on the rap sheets.

On December 21, 1987, Agent Bergman contacted the petitioner by telephone. He read the petitioner question 16 two times. Both times she indicated that she understood the question and that she had never been arrested. Question 16 asks:

> For the purpose of this question the word "arrest" includes any detaining, holding, or taking into custody of any police or other law enforcement authorities in order to answer for the alleged performance of any "offense" in this or any other state or foreign county: The word "charge" includes any indictment, complaint, information, summons, or other notice of the alleged commission of any "offense" in this or any other state or foreign country; and the word "offense" includes all high misdemeanors, felonies, misdemeanors, disorderly persons offenses and juvenile violations.
> Have you ever been arrested or charged, even if not convicted, with any felony, crime, misdemeanor, disorderly persons offense, juvenile offense or other offense (other than a traffic violation) in New Jersey or anywhere else?

Agent Bergman then read the question to the petitioner a third time, at which point she admitted that she had been arrested as a juvenile for being a "wayward kid."

On June 19, 1946, the petitioner was arrested for violation of parole by the Sheriff's Office in Buffalo, New York. On June 26, 1946, the applicant was sent to the Westfield State Farm, Bedford Hills, New York, for a parole violation - wayward minor (R-2). The petitioner stated that she was arrested as a juvenile for being wayward and that she kept running away, even after being placed on probation. The petitioner further stated that she did not disclose the arrest because she had forgetten about it.

Agent Bergman then confronted the petitioner with the next arrest listed on her FBI rap sheet. On February 21, 1962, the petitioner was arrested in New York City and charged with Grand Larceny (diamond ring) (R-2 & R-3). On March 20, 1962, the case was dismissed in court (R-3). Division investigation was unable to locate any additional records with regard to this arrest. When questioned about the arrest during her interview, the petitioner stated that she had no knowledge of the arrest and, therefore, could not disclose the same. The FBI rap sheet and the State of New York Division of Criminal Justice rap sheet identifies the accused in this arrest as being Barbara Cooper (R-2 and R-3). These documents indicate that Barbara Cooper was an alias used by the petitioner and identification of the petitioner as Barbara Cooper was made by reference to fingerprints.

Detective Bergman then questioned the petitioner regarding the next arrest listed on her FBI rap sheet. On December 26, 1983, the petitioner was arrested by the New York Police Department and charged with Possession of Gambling Records - second degree (similar to N.J.S.A. 2C:37-3), Promoting Gambling — second degree (similar to N.J.S.A. 2C:37-2) and Loitering - Remaining in a Public Place - Gambling (similar to N.J.S.A. 2C:33-2) (R-2 and R-3). Division investigation disclosed that the case was not documented and there was no disposition (R-3). The petitioner only admitted to the arrest after being confronted with her criminal record sheet. She stated that she was in a house making a numbers play, the house was raided by the police and everyone in the house was arrested and taken into custody. The petitioner stated that she was just a player. She also stated that it happened a long time ago and that she just forgot about it.

Agent Bergman then questioned the peititoner regarding the next arrest listed on her FBI rap sheet. On January 17, 1986, the petitioner was arrested by the New Jersey State Police for Theft of Property which was Lost or Mislaid, N.J.S.A. 2C:20-6, as a result of a criminal complaint filed by the victim who was a patron at the Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino (R-2, R-4 and R-5). At the time in question, the petitioner was working as a cleaning person in a ladies room when the victim came in and set down a money clip containing $300. The victim then left the ladies room forgetting that she had set down the $300 and, when she returned, the money was missing. The victim stated that the petitioner was one of the occupants of the ladies room when the victim had placed her money on the shelf. As a result, the victim signed the criminal complaint against the petitioner. The petitioner told the Trump Plaza Security Officer that there was also another casino employee as well as a patron in the restroom when the victim alleged that her money was taken and she denied taking the money (R-4). On March 5, 1986, the Casino Prosecutions Section administratively dismissed the case against the petitioner (R-5). The petitioner failed to disclose this arrest and continued to fail to disclose until such time as the facts leading up to the arrest were read to the petitioner by the Division investigator from the investigation report. At that time, the petitioner did admit to the arrest and stated that she was taken into investigation because a patron accused her of taking $300 from the ladies room. The petitioner again denied the theft stating the charges against her were dismissed and that the money on her person was returned to her. The petitioner stated she did not disclose this arrest because it happened in the casino and she did not understand what the question meant.

After Agent Bergman discussed the arrest of the petitioner during the course of her employment at Trump Plaza as previously noted, the petitioner was again asked if she had any other arrests which she failed to disclose. The petitioner stated she was arrested a long time ago in New York for playing the numbers. At this point in time, Agent Bergman then read to the petitioner the fact that she was arrested on March 24, 1986, by the Atlantic City Police Department and charged with Shoplifting (N.J.S.A. 2C:20-11) of a $4.19 box of Nuprin from the Rite-Aid Drug Store in Atlantic City (R-2 and R-6). On April 3, 1986, the petitioner pled guilty in the Atlantic City Municipal Court and was fined $25, $25 court costs and $30 to the Violent Crimes Compensation Board (R-7). At this juncture, the petitioner did admit to being arrested, stating that she did take the box of Nuprin and had entered a guilty plea. She further stated that she did not disclose the arrest because she though Question #16 and the instructions thereto meant that she only had to disclose if she had gone to jail.

The petitioner testified that the reason that she did not disclose her arrests on the Personal History Disclosure Form - 2A (R-1) was that she had never been sent to jail so she thought she did not have to disclose the arrests. The petitioner indicated that she had previously completed a nursing school application which asked her to disclose her arrest record. When she questioned whether or not she should include her arrest, she was told that she did not have to disclose any arrests for which she had not been convicted and served a jail sentence. When she completed R-1, the petitioner believed "that it was all the same" and that she did not have to disclose the arrests if she did not serve a jail sentence for the arrest. The petitioner did not fear that she would be denied a license if she disclosed her arrests. She thought that she had completed the form correctly.

The petitioner was born on May 22, 1926 in Buffalo, New York. She has received no education past the eighth grade. The petitioner worked in defense plants in the 1940's. When she ran away from home in 1946, she was sent to a reform school. In the 1950's she worked in restaurants in New York. In 1963, the petitioner moved to Virginia and worked in the pantry of the Williamsburg Inn for five years. In 1968, the petitioner moved to Atlantic City. She worked as a chambermaid in various hotels until 1978. In 1969, she received the best maid in Atlantic City award. In 1978, the petitioner became employed as a cleaning person at Resorts International Hotel and Casino. She worked there for four years. In 1983 and 1984, the petitioner was unemployed. Since 1985, the petitioner had been employed as a cleaning person at the Trump Plaza Hotel and Casino. The petitioner has received no disciplinary actions arising out of her employment. The petitioner is single, lives alone, and has two grown sons. She contributes to the United Way and occasionally attends church.

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the petitioner's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying her completion of her Personal History Disclosure Form - 2A and her current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess her credibility. Initially, her position in this matter must be recognized. As the petitioner and the applicant for a casino employee license, she has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the petitioner's demeanor, the plausibility of her testimony, the manner in which she participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appeared that the petitioner testified truthfully in every regard. She candidly admitted her misconduct and described the underlying circumstances of her failure to complete question 16. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the petitioner's testimony in all respects.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. On January 6, 1987, the petitioner filed an application for licensure as a casino employee so she could be employed as a cleaning person in the casino industry.

2. On this application, she indicated that she had never been arrested.

3. On June 19, 1946, the petitioner was arrested in Buffalo, New York for violation of parole. The petitioner forgot about this arrest.

4. On June 26, 1946, the petitioner was arrested as a wayward minor. The petitioner forgot about this arrest.

5. On February 21, 1962, the petitioner was arrested in New York City for grand larceny. This case was dismissed. The petitioner stated she had no knowledge of the arrest.

6. On December 26, 1973, the petitioner was arrested in New York and was charged with various gambling offenses. There was no disposition of these charges. The petitioner forgot about this arrest.

7. On January 17, 1986, the petitioner was arrested for theft of lost or mislaid property in a casino. The charge was administratively dismissed. The petitioner thought that since this occurred in a casino that it was not an arrest and she did not understand the question.

8. On March 24, 1986, the petitioner was arrested in Atlantic City and was charged with shoplifting a box of Nuprin valued at $4.19. The petitioner was convicted of this offense. She failed to disclose this offense as she had not received a jail sentence.

9. The petitioner believed that she did not have to disclose arrests if they did not result in a jail sentence. She did not fear that she would be denied a license if she disclosed her arrests. She thought she completed the application correctly.

10. The petitioner is 52 years of age, single, lives alone, has two grown sons, and has no education beyond the eighth grade. She has worked most of her life in restaurants or as a maid in hotels. She was cited as the best maid in Atlantic City in 1969.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;
>
> b. Failure of the applicant to provide information, documentation and assurances required by the act or requested by the commission, or failure of the applicant to reveal any fact material to qualification, or the supplying of information which is untrue or misleading as to a material fact pertaining to the qualification criteria;

N.J.S.A. 5:12-89, Licensing of casino key employees, provides in pertinent part:

> ....
>
> b. Each applicant must, prior to the issuance of any casino key employee license, produce information, documentation and assurances concerning the following qualification criteria:
>
> ....

1077

(2) Each applicant for a casino key employee license shall produce such information, documentation and assurances as may be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence the applicant's good character, honesty and integrity. Such information shall include, without limitation, data pertaining to family, habits, character, reputation, criminal and arrest record, business activities, financial affairs, and business, professional and personal associates, covering at least the 10-year period immediately preceding the filing of the application. Each applicant shall notify the commission of any civil judgments obtained against such applicant pertaining to antitrust or security regulation laws of the Federal Government, of this State or of any other state, jurisdiction, province or country. In addition, each applicant shall, upon request of the commission or the division, produce letters of reference from law enforcement agencies having jurisdiction in the applicant's place of residence and principal place of business, which letters of reference shall indicate that such law enforcement agencies do not have any pertinent information concerning the applicant, or if such law enforcement agency does have information pertaining to the applicant, shall specify what that information is. If the applicant has been associated with gaming or casino operations in any capacity, position or employment in a jurisdiction which permits such activity, the applicant shall, upon request of the commission or division, produce letters of reference from the gaming or casino enforcement or control agency, which shall specify the experience of such agency with the applicant, his associates and his participation in the gaming operations of that jurisdiction; provided, however, that if no such letters are received from the appropriate law enforcement agencies within 60 days of the applicant's request therefor, the applicant may submit a statement under oath that he is or was during the period such activities were conducted in good standing with such gaming or casino enforcement or control agency.

N.J.S.A. 5:12-90, Licensing of casino employees, provides in pertinent part:

a. No person may commence employment as a casino employee unless he is the holder of a valid casino employee license.

b. Any applicant for a casino employee license must, prior to the issuance of any such license, produce sufficient information, documentation and assurances to meet the qualification criteria, including New Jersey residency, contained in subsection b. of section 89 of this act [footnote omitted] and any additional residency requirement imposed under > subsection c. of this section; except that the standards for business ability and casino experience may be satisfied by a showing of casino job experience and knowledge of the provisions of this act and regulations pertaining to the particular position involved, or by successful completion of a course of study at a licensed school in an approved curriculum.

>
> . . . .
>
> e. The commission shall deny a casino employee license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of this act [footnote omitted].

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

The Division contends that the petitioner's nondisclosure on her Personal History Disclosure Form-2A constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, and that, accordingly, she is disqualified from licensure.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b

The Commission has succinctly described the purposes for the inclusion of section 86b within the Act and its application in In the Matter of the Application of Harl Lee Cooper for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Maintenance and Cleaning), OAL DKT. CCC 1276-79 (Aug. 29, 1979), modified, Casino Control Commission (Feb. 7, 1980), when it stated, at pages 15-16 of its Final Decision:

> So that fully informed decisions may be made regarding whether applicants for licensure have satisfied the qualification criteria set forth in the Act, the [L]egislature empowered the Commission and the Division of Gaming Enforcement to gather information concerning applicants by various means. The application process is initiated by the completion and filing of a Personal History Disclosure Form in accordance with N.J.A.C. 19:41-7.1 et seq. The Commission may also require the production of information by means of other formal requests. N.J.S.A. 5:12-80(d). The Division is empowered, in fulfilling its investigative duties, to request information, documentary materials or other data from any applicant for licensure. N.J.S.A. 5:12-76(b)(8).
> Most importantly, the Legislature has explicitly placed upon applicants for licensure the affirmative responsibility to produce information to establish their qualifications under the Act, the burden of demonstrating such qualifications, and the continuing duty to provide requested information and cooperate in any investigation. N.J.S.A. 5:12-7(b)(8); 80(a), (b) and (c); 89(b); 90(b) > and 91(b). But not only has the Legislature imposed these duties and burdens with regard to the production of information, it has also, as noted above, mandated that an applicant's failure to provide the same shall result in disqualification. N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(b).

The failure to disclose material information will disqualify an applicant. In the Matter of the Application of Robert J. Alois for a Gaming School Resident Director License, Casino Control Commission, 78-EA-8 (Jan. 30, 1980) Final Order at 19. Although an inadvertent or ignorant failure to make a disclosure will not warrant disqualification, an intentional nondisclosure, premised upon the belief that an application for licensure would have been adversely affected, is grounds for mandatory disqualification from licensure. Harl Lee Cooper, Final Decision at 16; In the Matter of the Application of Steven M. Cohen for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Dealer), OAL DKT. CCC 3133-79 (Dec. 6, 1979), affirmed, Casino Control Commission (Jan. 30, 1980); In the Matter of the Application of William Gonzales for Licensure as a Casino Employee (Slot Attendant), OAL DKT. CCC 684-80 (July 16, 1980), modified, Casino Control Commission (Sept. 5, 1980). For a nondisclosure to result in a disqualification it must have been committed intentionally or in disregard of the regulatory process. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, 10 N.J.A.R. 244 at 253 (1979).

An applicant is required to provide all material facts when his or her application for licensure is submitted. "Material" includes both positive and negative information. Section 86b penalizes for the mere failure to provide any fact material to qualification. The weight and significance of the information provided are thereafter evaluated by the Commission under section 91 of the Act. To excuse an intentional failure to disclose or the provision of misleading statements by an applicant would usurp the responsibility and the ability of the Commission to evaluate an applicant's qualifications for licensure. An applicant has the affirmative burden to establish his or her qualifications to the satisfaction of the Commission. There is no doubt that arrests, charges and convictions of crimes are facts material to qualification.

In this case, the Division accepts the petitioner's assertion that the first four arrests were so old that she merely forgot about them. The Division only contests the petitioner's failure to disclose her last two arrests. Rightly or wrongly, the petitioner believed that she did not have to disclose arrests which did not result in the imposition of a jail sentence. She did not believe that her disclosure of her arrests would adversely affect her application for licensure. She believed that she was completing the application correctly. The petitioner's nondisclosure was not intentional or in disregard to the regulatory process.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the petitioner committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86b, which disqualifies her from licensure.

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-90b

Under section 90b, which incorporates section 89b(2) by reference, Ms. Kayte was required to establish, by clear and convincing evidence, her reputation for good character, honesty and integrity. In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel for a Casino License, 79-CL-1 Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979) Opinion at 8. In Resorts, the Commission held that an unfavorable reputation, although it raises questions which must be addressed by an applicant, is not the determinative criterion for licensure. Rather, the individual's actual character and attributes of good character, honesty and integrity are the key. The reverse must also be said to be true: a good reputation may be undeserved by the existence of proof of bad character. In any event, when the Division raises objection to licensure under section 89b(2) of the Act, it is incumbent upon an applicant to present clear and convincing proof of facts upon which the trier may reach a reasonable conclusion as to suitability. In re Boardwalk Regency Casino License Application, 180 N.J. Super. 324 (App. Div. 1981); In the Matter of the Applications of Boardwalk Regency Corporation and the Jemm Company for Casino Licenses, 80-CL-1 Casino Control Commission (November 13, 1980) Opinion at 5. In accordance with the regulatory strictness intended by the Legislature, it is imperative that the character and background of an applicant be scrutinized closely. Id. at 2.

While the petitioner has been employed in the casino industry for eight years, she introduced very little evidence to establish her good character, honesty and integrity. She has an arrest record of eight arrests spanning over 42 years; however, she has only one conviction for shoplifting a $4.19 box of Nuprin in 1986. Her other arrest in 1986 did involve her employment in the casino industry; however, that change was administratively dismissed. She has worked in restaurants and as a maid in hotels for most of her adult life. The petitioner did not introduce any letters of recommendation or any character testimony from any witnesses. She testified very briefly concerning her character. The petitioner has the burden of establishing her good character, honesty and integrity by clear and convincing evidence, yet she has failed to do so. An examination of the whole person and the scant evidence submitted in the record does not clearly and convincingly establish that Ms. Kayte is a person of good character, honesty and integrity, and that she is entirely suitable for licensure in this state. See, Boardwalk Regency Corp.

I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has not established, by clear and convincing evidence, her good character, honesty and integrity under section 90b.

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the application of Ruth C. Kayte for issuance of a casino employee license be DENIED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

A hearing having been held before the Office of Administrative Law; and the initial decision of the administrative law judge having been filed with the New Jersey Casino Control Commission (Commission); and the Commission having considered the entire record of these proceedings at its public meeting of February 17, 1988,

IT IS on this 8th day of February 1989, ORDERED that the initial decision is modified as follows:

> The Commission cannot adopt the ALJ's conclusion that respondent's conduct was not an automatic disqualifier under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c) for these reasons: (1) the ALJ failed to consider whether respondent's conduct amounted to complicity (N.J.S.A. 2C:2-6) in the distribution of cocaine; (2) the Commission disagrees with the ALJ's finding that the ex post facto clauses of the State and federal constitutions prohibited the application of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 to respondent's conduct in this administrative proceeding; and (3) the ALJ compared the penalty provisions of the pertinent federal and State offenses instead of on the elements of those offenses; and

Although a remand would normally be required to resolve these matters, the record reveals a showing of rehabilitation on the part of respondent, as thoroughly developed in the initial decision's analysis of whether respondent's conduct was inimical; and

Even if the Commission were ultimately to find that respondent should be disqualified under N.J.S.A. 5:12-86(c), the record supports a finding that he has been rehabilitated by clear and convincing evidence, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91(d); and

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the complaint is dismissed substantially for the reasons stated in the initial decision, as modified, which is incorporated herein by reference.

Carlos B. Lumbre, respondent, pro se

Record Closed: December 14, 1987 Decided: December 24, 1987

BEFORE STEVEN L. CARNES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division), filed a complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) for the revocation of Carlos B. Lumbre's casino hotel employee registration no. 65781-40, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-91 and N.J.S.A. 5:12-129(1). The Division sought revocation of the respondent's registration by reason of its contention that the respondent had committed a disqualifying offense under section 86c(1), by means of section 86g, and that the respondent had been convicted of a criminal offense which rendered continued registration to be inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act (Act), pursuant to section 86c(4). The respondent contended that he was rehabilitated, pursuant to section 91d, that his actions were not inimical to the policies of the Act and were not of sufficient degree to warrant revocation of his registration.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent had obtained a casino hotel employee registration from the Commission. By complaint to the Commission, filed July 22, 1987, the Division objected to the respondent's continued registration, asserting that the respondent had been convicted of using a communication facility (telephone) in facilitating the knowing and intentional distribution of a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine) and Principals, which are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(4). Based upon the complaint, the Commission notified the respondent on July 24, 1987, that he had the right to a hearing, and that failure to respond within 15 days could result in his registration being revoked. By application dated August 5, 1987, which was received by the Commission on August 5, 1987, the respondent requested a hearing. On August 10, 1987, the Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, which was received on August 13, 1987, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference in the matter was held before Administrative Law Judge Stephen W. Thompson on September 25, 1987. The issues set forth at the prehearing conference to be resolved at the hearing were:

A. Whether respondent's continued casino hotel employee registration is inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4), because he is alleged to have committed a violation of 21 U.S.C. § 843(b), which is comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5.

B. Whether respondent's continued casino hotel employee registration is inimical to the policy of the Casino Control Act pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4), because he is alleged to have committed a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2, conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this States as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g.

A hearing was held on September 14, 1987, in the Municipal Courtroom, Hammonton, Hammonton Municipal Building, Hammonton, New Jersey, after which the record closed.

In addition to the above two issues, the Division sought to establish that the conduct of the respondent was also a statutory disqualifier pursuant to section 86c(1), which if established, would also raise the issue of the respondent's rehabilitation pursuant to section 91d.

THE FACTS

The respondent, Carlos B. Lumbre, is a Peruvian citizen who speaks little English. In August 1985, the respondent emigrated to the United States with his first wife as his wife's family was already living in the United States. After being in the United States for only two weeks, the respondent began having marital problems. At this time, he met his brother-in-law, Jairo Alzate, who was married to the respondent's wife's sister. The respondent's marital problems continued until he and his wife separated in March 1986, when the respondent wife's parents evicted him from their house.

The respondent had no family in the United States, few friends, and could not speak English. He was confused and did not know what to do. At this point Jairo Alzate offered to help the respondent. In April 1986, Mr. Alzate offered the respondent the use of an apartment. The only condition on the use of the apartment was that Mr. Alzate would occasionaly store some packages in the closet which the respondent were never to touch. Because he was in a strange country without a place to live, the respondent accepted Mr. Alzate's offer.

At the hearing, the respondent testified that he did not know how Mr. Alzate was employed. Mr. Alzate had told the respondent that he worked but had never told the respondent what he did. He testified that he did not know Mr. Alzate was involved in dealing drugs. In a prior statement given to Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) agents; however, the respondent indicated that he knew Mr. Alzate was a cocaine dealer based on past experience (P-1).

On April 29, 1986, Mr. Alzate telephoned the respondent and asked the respondent to accompany him to New York. The respondent agreed to go. Later on April 29, 1986, Mr. Alzate took two packages to the respondent's apartment and asked the respondent to keep them for him. Mr. Alzate also informed the respondent that he would explain the trip to New York the next day.

On April 30, 1986, Mr. Alzate telephoned the respondent in order to make arrangements to pick him up to go to New York. It was during this conversation that respondent became aware for the first time that the purpose of their trip was to pick up cocaine. Mr. Alzate picked up the respondent at his place of work at approximately 7:30 a.m. (P-1). While on the way to New York, Mr. Alzate made it clear to the respondent that the purpose of the trip was to pick up drugs. The respondent told Mr. Alzate, "You have helped me in the past, but when we go back, I don't want anything to do with you."

The two arrived in New York at approximately 11:30 a.m. They parked in a Dunkin' Donuts parking lot. Mr. Alzate departed the area, and the respondent entered Dunkin' Donuts to eat. Mr. Alzate returned at approximately 1:30 p.m., carrying a small package in a shopping bag which he placed in the trunk of the car. The two men then returned to New Jersey (P-1). During the return trip, the respondent again told Mr. Alzate that he did not want anything further to do with him.

At approximately 4:30 p.m. the two men returned to Mr. Alzate's apartment in Pleasantville, which was under surveillance by DEA agents. Shortly thereafter, Mr. Alzate departed with the packages (P-1). Mr. Alzate then attempted to sell the package containing one kilogram of cocaine to special agents of the DEA in Cardiff, New Jersey. Mr. Alzate was arrested at that time (P-1). The DEA agents returned to Mr. Alzate's apartment. The respondent was taken into custody and the respondent then fully cooperated with the DEA agents. The respondent consented to a search of his residence so the DEA agents could obtain the two packages which had been left there by Mr. Alzate the previous day (P-1).

The respondent was then transported to his residence. During the course of the search of the respondent's residence, the DEA agents obtained a black briefcase and a brown zipper bag. The briefcase contained plastic zip-lock bags, one of which contained a white powder substance that field-tested positive for cocaine (P-2). The brown zipper bag contained an Ohaus triple beam scale (P-2). These items were identified by the respondent as belonging to Mr. Alzate (P-2). The respondent testified that he did not know what was inside the two packages until the DEA agents opened them.

The respondent was indicted in United States District Court for the District of New Jersey Indictment No. 86-188 for one count of Attempt and Conspiracy to Distribute a Controlled Dangeorus Substance (Cocaine), contrary to 21 U.S.C. § 846 comparable to N.J.S.A. 24:21-24, and two counts of Distribution of a Controlled Dangeorus Substance (Cocaine), contrary to 21 U.S.C. § 841(a)(1), comparable to N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)(1) and Principals, contrary to 18 U.S.C. § 2, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:2-6b(3) (P-4 and P-7). On June 19, 1986, a Superseding Information was filed against the respondent for two counts of Prohibited Acts C, "Using a Communication Facility (telephone) In Facilitating the Knowing and Intentional Distribution of a Controlled Dangerorus Substance" (cocaine), contrary to 21 U.S.C. § 843(b), comparable to N.J.S.A. 24:21-24 and Principals, contrary to 18 U.S.C. § 2, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:6b(3) (P-5 and P-8). On June 19, 1986, the respondent pleaded guilty to the Superseding Information (P-5). The charges under the Indictment were dismissed at the respondent's sentencing hearing. The respondent appeared for the sentencing hearing on July 30, 1986, and on August 15, 1986 the Honorable Anne E. Thompson, U.S. District Court Judge, sentenced the respondent to serve three years imprisonment for count one of the information and four years imprisonment for count two of the information. Both sentences were suspended and the respondent was placed on probation for a period of five years on both counts, and the sentences were ordered to run concurrently. The respondent was also ordered to pay $1,000.00 fine and $100.00 Violent Crimes Compensation Board penalty (P-6 and P-9). At the sentencing hearing, Judge Thompson recommended that the respondent be permitted to retain his casino hotel employee registration.

Carlos B. Lumbre (y Condor) is currently 30 years old and was 28 years old at the time of the offense. He was born in Lima, Peru, and he graduated our equivalent of high school in Peru. As indicated above, he came to the United States in August 1985, because his then wife's family had previously immigrated to the United States. He divorced his first wife, but has remarried, and he and his present wife are expecting their first child.

The respondent first became employed in the United States on January 18, 1986. He became employed as a steward at Harrah's Marina Hotel and Casino. He remained in that position until August 2, 1987. On August 3, 1987, the petitioner became a buffet dining room attendant at Harrah's, and he continues to be employed in that position. The respondent transferred between positions because his current job is a better job, a cleaner job, and he perceives it as a career betterment opportunity.

The respondent is enrolled in the "English as a second language" program at Atlantic Community College. He is a member of the International Club at Atlantic Community College. He regularly attends church and participates in church events and church-sponsored charitable campaigns.

The respondent indicated that he is trying to rehabilitate himself. He admits that his actions of April 30, 1986, in accompanying Mr. Alzate to New York after learning that Mr. Alzate was a drug dealer and that the purpose of the trip was to obtain drugs for distribution was wrong. He is remorseful and feels sorry for his actions.

Sonia M. Santiago, president of Para-Plus Translating Inc., testified on behalf of the respondent. She has known the respondent since the date of his arrest because she served as the respondent's court-appointed translator. She has spoken with the respondent's supervisors, who indicate that the respondent is always on time, courteous, a good employee, and is being considered for promotion. With regards to his schooling, he regularly attends class, seeks special assistance, and is trying to better himself. It is Ms. Santiago's opinion that the respondent is trying very hard. He admits his mistakes and he wants to be part of his community. Ms. Santiago believes the respondent is a person who can be trusted and who can be a productive member of society.

The respondent submitted ten letters into evidence. The first, written by Jerome Robinson, buffet restaurant manager, dated December 14, 1987, indicates:

> As the Restaurant Manager of Harrah's Buffet, I directly supervise Mr. Carlos Lumbre in his normal job functions.
>
> Mr. Lumbre has, to the present date, demonstrated an amicable persona. Carlos' job function requires interaction with our clientele, as well as a sizeable peer group and several supervisors. Carlos has maintained a poised and well-mannered presentation with guests and peers. Carlos displays a deeply rooted and well appreciated respect for authority in his interaction with our team of supervisors.

> On the strength of these observations, Carlos can be said to be an asset to our operation. Carlos' ability to maintain his present level of acceptance may lead to future promotianal [sic] opportunities. [R-1]

Reverand Ronald S. Falotico, pastor, Church of the Holy Spirit, in a letter dated November 25, 1987, writes:

> Mr. Carlos Lumbre along with his wife Olga Flores...are members in good standing of Holy Spirit Parish. Carlos seems to be a good worker and sincere in becoming a good family man. He is courteous and respected by both the Hispanic as well as the English speaking community. I am sure he would be a positive asset to your service of employ. [R-2]

In a letter dated July 29, 1986, which was submitted at the time of sentencing to Judge Thompson, Assistant U.S. Attorney Joel B. Rosen wrote about respondent's character (identifying him as Carlos B. Lumbre y Condor):

> Pursuant to a plea agreement entered into between this Office and Mr. [Lumbre] let this letter indicate the nature and extent of Mr. [Lumbre's] cooperation with the United States. Immediately upon his arrest, Mr. [Lumbre] commenced cooperating with Federal authorities. Specifically he indicated what his role was, as well as the involvement of the codefendant Alzate-Patino with regard to the distribution of cocaine. Since Mr. Alzate-Patino pled guilty, Mr. [Lumbre's] testimony was not necessary. However, he was willing and available to testify should that have become necessary. In short, the United States was totally satisfied with Mr. [Lumbre's] cooperation.
>
> Additionally, with regard to the other defendant in this case, Mr. [Lumbre's] role was extremely limited. There is no evidence that Mr. [Lumbre] made any money from the sale of cocaine. Rather, the only evidence that the United States has in regard to Mr. [Lumbre] was that he permitted the defendant Alzate-Patino to utilize his apartment to store drugs. To our knowledge, [Lumbre] was not in any way connected with the sale or distribution of these drugs. [R-3]

In a letter dated November 1987, the respondent's immediate supervisor at Harrah's, Linda Figueroa, wrote:

> Carlos Lumbre has been working in the buffet for about three months. I feel he could not have started at a better time. The summer is our busiest season and Carlos is a great asset. His work is exceptional. He works very hard and does very well. Carlos is always available to work overtime for us, even at last minute notice. He has a good attendance record and he works well with the other employees.

As Carlos' direct supervisor, I feel confident the work will be done when Carlos is here. [R-6]

In a letter dated November 9, 1987, Dominick Carides, steward supervisor, wrote:

This is to inform that Carlos worked under my supervision for five months; in that period of time Carlos' behavior was excellent, he never mist [sic] a day in those five months. He always had a good rapport with his fellow co-workers. He did what he as asked to do according to our job expectation. [R-7]

In a letter dated November 9, 1987, Domenic F. Berducci, assistant professor of English as a second language, Atlantic Community College, wrote:

I have known Mr. Carlos Lumbre for about one year now both as my student in English class and outside of the classroom. He has worked hard in class and has proven himself to be very responsible. His class attendance record was excellent. As I look at my records from the past I notice he was fifth in class attendance and punctuality out of a class of 23. Also in the past year I have come to know Carlos is social situations, usually at lunch in the college cafeteria and judge him to be of fine character.

I would recommend that the Casino Gaming Commission allow Carlos to retain his license. [R-8]

In a letter dated November 5, 1986, Luis A. Tavarez, director of financial aid, Atlantic Community College, wrote:

Carlos Lumbre has been a student at Atlantic Community College (ACC) since the fall of 1985. He has been studying English as a second language. To the best of my knowledge he has been doing well.

I have known Carlos since he entered ACC. Our relationship has been one at a professional level. It has been my observation that Mr. Lumbre is a humble person and nothing short of a gentleman. He shows dedication to his school work, as he is diligently trying to better himself by studying. [R-9]

Although the Division did not attempt to refute the respondent's testimony concerning the circumstances underlying the incident and his current good character, honesty and integrity, it is necessary to assess his credibility. Initially, his position in this matter must be recognized. As the respondent and the holder of a casino hotel employee registration, he has a direct interest in the outcome and a bias in these proceedings. However, during both the hearing and my review of the record, and from my observations of the respondent's demeanor, the plausibility of his testimony, the manner in which he participated in the proceedings and my examination of the documentary evidence and the documents submitted by other witnesses, it appeared that the respondent testified truthfully in every regard. He candidly admitted his misconduct and described in detail, experiencing great humiliation, the underlying circumstances. Accordingly, I am persuaded to accept the respondent's testimony in all respects.

APPLICABLE LAW

N.J.S.A. 5:12-86, Casino license - - disqualification criteria, provides in pertinent part:

> The commission shall deny a casino license to any applicant who is disqualified on the basis of any of the following criteria:
>
> a. Failure of the applicant to prove by clear and convincing evidence that the applicant is qualified in accordance with the provisions of this act;
>
> ....
>
> c. The conviction of the applicant, or of any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license, of any offense in any jurisdiction which would be under New Jersey law at the time of application a violation of any of the following provisions of law:
>
> (1) With respect to convictions obtained pursuant to the "New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice," P.L. 1978, C. 95 (Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes) as amended and supplemented:
>
> all crimes of the first degree;
>
> ....
>
> (3) any high misdemeanor under section 19 of P.L. 1970, c. 226 (C. 24:21-9) or

1094

(4) any other offense which indicates that licensure of the applicant would be inimical to the policy of this act and to casino operations; provided, however, that the automatic disqualification provisions of this subsection shall not apply with regard to any conviction which did not occur within the 10-year period immediately preceding application for licensure and which the applicant demonstrates by clear and convincing evidence does not justify automoatic disqualification pursuant to this subsection and any conviction which has been the subject of a judicial order of expungement or sealing and provided, further however, that, any applicant or any person required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license who is disqualified on the basis of paragraph (2) herein shall not be so disqualified if such applicant or person demonstrates to the commission by clear and convincing evidence that the act or acts which constitute the offense which forms the basis for such disqualification would not form the basis for disqualification pursuant to paragraph (1) of this section.

g. The commission by the applicant or any person who is required to be qualified under this act as a condition of a casino license of any act or acts which would constitute any offense under subsection c. of this section, even if such conduct has not or may not be prosecuted under the criminal laws of this State; and...

N.J.S.A. 5:12-91, Registration of casino hotel employees, provides in pertinent part:

a. No person may commence employment as a casino hotel employee unless he has been registered with the commission, which registration shall be in accordance with subsection f. of this section.

b. Any applicant for a casino hotel employee registration shall produce such information as the commission may require. Subsequent to the registration of a casino hotel employee, the commission may revoke, suspend, limit, or otherwise restrict the registration upon a finding that the registrant is disqualified on the basis of the criteria contained in section 86 of P.L. 1977, c. 110 (C. 5:12-86).

d. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection b. of this section no casino hotel employee registration shall be revoked on the basis of a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria, provided that the registrant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation. In determining whether the registrant has affirmatively demonstrated his rehabilitation the commission shall consider the following factors:

(1) The nature and duties of the registrant's position;

(2) The nature and seriousness of the offense;

(3) The circumstances under which the offense occurred;

(4) The date of the offense;

(5) The age of the registrant when the offense was committed;

(6) Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;

(7) Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;

(8) Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs, or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(8) establishes that registration under the Act is a revocable privilege which is "conditioned upon the proper and continued qualification of the individual . . . registrant." Section 129(1) provides for the revocation of or other sanction against the license or registration held by a person "for the commission of any other offense or violation of this Act which would disqualify such person from holding his . . . registration." The Division contends that the respondent's criminal misconduct constitutes a disqualifying offense under either section 86c(1), by means of section 86g, or section 86c(4) and, therefore, he cannot continue to hold a registration.

(A) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1) and N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g

Section 86g provides that an applicant will be disqualified from licensure because of the commission of any action which would constitute an offense under section 86c, even if there has not been a prosectuion for such conduct. Section 86c(1) mandates that a person who has been convicted of any offense which "would be under New Jersey law at the time of application a violation of any of the following provisions of law" in regard to Title 2C of the New Jersey statutes be disqualified from licensure.

The Division first contends that the respondent's conviction for two counts of Prohibited Acts C, "Using a Communication Facility (telephone) in Facilitating the Knowing and Intentional Distribution of a Controlled Dangerous Substance" (cocaine) contrary to 21 U.S.C. § 843(b), is comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. The Division asserts that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, the offense in this case would be one of the first degree, and therefore would be a statutory disqualifier pursuant to section 86c(1).

21 U.S.C. § 843 provides in pertinent part:

§ 843 Prohibited Acts C

Communication Facility

> (b) It shall be unlawful for any person knowingly or intentionally to use any communication facility in committing or in causing or facilitating the commission of any act or acts constituting a felony under any provision of this subchapter or subchapter II of this chapter. Each separate use of a communication facility shall be a separate offense under this subsection. For purposes of this subsection, the term "communication facility" means any and all public and private instrumentalities used or useful in the transmission of writing, signs, signals, pictures, or sounds of all kinds and includes mail, telephone, wire, radio, and all other means of communication.

21 U.S.C. § 843(c) provides that "any person who violates this section shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not more than 4 years, a fine of not more than $30,000, or both . . ."

N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, Manufacturing, Distributing or Dispensing, provides in pertinent part:

> a. Except as authorized by P.L. 1970, c. 226 (C. 24:21-1 et seq.), it shall be unlawful for any person knowingly or purposely:
>
> (1) To manufacture, distribute or dispense, or to possess or have under his control with intent to manufacture, distribute or dispense, a controlled dangerous substance or controlled substance analog; or
>
> (2) To create, distribute, or possess or have under his control with intent to distribute, a counterfiet controlled dangerous substance.
>
> b. Any person who violates subsection a. with respect to:
> (1) Heroin, or its analog, or coca leaves and any salt, compound, derivative, or preparation of coca leaves, and any salt, compound, derivative, or preparation thereof which is chemically equivalent or identical with any of these substances, . . . in a quantity of five ounces or more including any adulterants or dilutants, provided there are included at least 3.5 grams of the pure free base durg, is guilty of a crime of the first degree. The defendant shall, except as provided in N.J.S. 2C:35-12, be sentenced to a term of imprisonment by the court. The term of imprisonment shall include the imposition of a minimum term which shall be fixed at, or between, one-third and one-half of the sentence imposed, during which the defendant shall be ineligible for parole. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection a. of N.J.S. 2C:43-3, a fine of up to $300,000.00 may be imposed;...

A crime of the first degree is punishable by ordinary term of 10-20 years with a presumptive term of 15 years and an extended term of 20 years to life.[1] A fine up to $100,000.00 may also be imposed. See N.J.S.A. 2C:43-3, N.J.S.A. 2C:43-6, N.J.S.A. 2C:43-7, N.J.S.A. 2C:44-1f(1).

[1] The presumptive term is the term of imprisonment to be imposed unless a preponderance of the aggravating factors or a preponderance of the mitigating factors weigh in favor of higher or lower terms. See, N.J.S.A. 2C:44-1f(1).

1098

21 U.S.C. § 841, Prohibited Acts A, provides in pertinent part:

Unlawful acts

(a) Except as authorized by this subchapter, it shall be unlawful for any person knowingly or intentionally—

(1) to manufacture, distribute, or dispense, or possess with intent to manufacture, distribute, or dispense, a controlled substance; or

(2) to create, distribute, or dispense, or possess with intent to distribute or dispense, a counterfeit substance.

Penalties

(b) Except as otherwise provided in section 845 of this title, any person who violates subsection (a) of this section shall be sentenced as follows:

(1)(A) In the case of a controlled substance in schedule I or II which is a narcotic drug, such person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not more than 15 years, a fine of not more than $25,000, or both.[2] If any person commits such a violation after one or more prior convictions of him for an offense punishable under this paragraph, or for a felony under any other provision of this subchapter or subchapter II of this chapter or other law of the United States relating to narcotic drugs marijuana, or depressant or stimulant substances, have become final, such person shall be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not more than 30 years, a fine of not more than $50,000, or both.[2] Any sentence imposing a term of imprisonment under this paragraph shall, in the absence of such a prior conviction, impose a special parole term of at least 3 years in addition to such term of imprisonment and shall, if there was such a prior conviction, impose a special parole term of at least 6 years in addition to such term of imprisonment.

Based upon the above statutory language, I CONCLUDE that 21 U.S.C. § 843 (b) is not substantially similar to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 is not only substantially similar to, but is almost word for word identical to 21 U.S.C. § 841. Not only are the offenses identical, but the sentences which may be imposed for a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 or 21 U.S.C. § 841 are identical (using the Title 2C presumptive sentence). An offense committed in violation of 21 U.S.C. § 843 (b) is a substantially lesser offense than an offense committed under either 21 U.S.C. § 841 or N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. The maximum term of imprisonment which may be imposed for a violation of 21 U.S.C. § 843(b) is only a term of four years. A term of four years is the presumptive term for a crime of the third degree in New Jersey. See, N.J.S.A. 2C:44-1f(1). A violation of 21 U.S.C. § 843(b) would thus be equivalent of committing a crime of the third degree in New Jersey, not a crime of the first degree.

In addition, I believe it is incorrect to equate the respondent's conduct to the conduct prohibited by N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 was enacted as part of the Comprehensive Drug Reform Act of 1986, P.L. 1987, c. 106 (C. 2C:35-1 et seq.). Section 26 of this act provides, "(T)his act shall take effect on the 60th day following enactment but shall remain inoperative until the enactment into law of Assembly Bill No. 3209 of 1986." The Comprehensive Drug Control Act of 1986 was signed into law by the governor on April 23, 1987. Assembly Bill No. 3209 was a bond act authorizing a $198,000,000 bond issue to finance prison construction. The Legislature wanted to ensure that the new drug law would not go into effect unless funds were approved to provide increased prison space to accommodate prisoners who would receive longer sentences under the new law for the commission of drug offenses than they would have received under the prior law. Assembly Bill No.3209 was substituted by Senate Bill No. 2555 on May 18, 1987. Senate Bill No. 2555 passed both houses of the Legislature. Governor Kean enacted Senate Bill No. 2555 into law on July 9, 1987, P.L. 1987, c. 178. All of the alleged offenses in this case were committed prior to July 9, 1987. Thus, to apply the provisions of and the gradation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 to the alleged offenses in this case would be violative of the Ex Post Facto Clauses of both the federal and state constitutions. See, N.J. Const. Act 4, sec. 7, para. 3; Lindsley v. Board of Managers, 107 N.J.L. 51 (1930), affirmed 108 N.J.L. 415.

The Division next asserted that the alleged conspiracy committed in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2 was a section 86c(1) statutory disqualifier on the theory that the alleged conspiracy was to commit an offense in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, which was listed as a statutory disqualifier in section 86c(1) and was a crime of the first degree. As I have already concluded that the offense committed was not a crime of the first degree, and also that N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 was inapplicable to the facts in this case, I CONCLUDE that the alleged conspiracy was not a crime of the first degree.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offenses committed by the respondent are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(1).

(B) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(3)

While not raised at the hearing, in light of the above discussion of N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(1), I feel it is necessary to comment on a possible violation of section 86c (3). Section 86c(3) provides a statutory disqualifier for "any high misdemeanor under section 19 of P.L. 1970, c. 226 (C. 24:21-19)." N.J.S.A. 24:21-19 is the predecessor statute of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5. It is the drug law that was in effect at the time the alleged offenses were committed in this case and is the proper statute to consider in determining whether or not the respondent's crimes were equivalent to or comparable to a statutory disqualifier.

N.J.S.A. 24:21-19 provides in pertinent part:

> a. Except as authorized by this act, it shall be unlawful for any person knowingly or intentionally:
>
> (1) To manufacture, distribute, or dispense, or to possess or have under his control with intent to manufacture, distribute, or dispense, a controlled dangerous substance; or
>
> (2) To create, distribute, or possess or have under his control with intent to distribute, a counterfeit controlled dangerous substance.
>
> b. Any person who violates subsection a. with respect to:
>
> (1) A substance . . . in a quantity of 1 ounce or more with there being included less than 3.5 grams of the pure free base Schedule I or II narcotic drug, is guilty of a high misdemeanor and shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than 12 years, a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or both; or:
> (2) A substance, in a quantity of one ounce or more including any adulterants or dilutants, classified in Schedules I or II which is a narcotic drug, provided that there are included a least 3.5 grams of the pure free base Schedule I or II narcotic drug, is guilty of a high misdemeanor and shall be punished by imprisonment for up to life, a fine of not more than $25,000.00, or both...

The offense prohibited in N.J.S.A. 24:21-19 is substantially identical to the offense prohibited in both N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5 and 21 U.S.C. § 841. The penalty which could have been imposed for a violation of N.J.S.A. 24:21-19 in this case could have been life imprisonment. For the same reasons that I concluded above that an offense committed under 21 U.S.C. § 843(b) is not comparable to an offense committed under N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, I CONCLUDE that an offense committed unter 21 U.S.C. § 843(b) is not comparable to an offense commited under N.J.S.A. 24:21-19.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the offenses committed by the respondent are disqualifying offenses under section 86c(3).

(C) N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c(4)

Section 86c(4) of the Act is more commonly referred to as the "inimical clause." In In the Matter of the Application of Resorts International Hotel, Inc. for a Casino License, Casino Control Commission (February 26, 1979), the Commission set forth the criteria to be applied in individual cases when a determination is made as to whether an offense is inimical to the policies of the Act. The Commission stated at page 15:

> The nature of the offesne, the events surrounding it, including any mitigating or aggravating factors, the remoteness of the offense and the offender's conduct since the offense to the present are all matters to be considered. Without limiting the notion of what is "inimical" to the Act or to gaming, it would appear to encompass those offenses which, when viewed in light of all the circumstances, indicate that participation by that person either would justifiably undermine public confidence in the integrity of the regulatory process and of gaming operations or would create or enhance the dangers of unsuitable, unfair or illegal practices, methods and activities in the conduct of gaming or the carrying on of the business or financial arrangements incidental to gaming operations.

The Legislature, when it authorized the establishment of casino gaming in Atlantic City, and provided for the licensure regulation and taxation thereof, enumerated specific policy considerations which appear to be directly related to the intent and purpose of the inimcal clause. More specifically N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6) and (7) state categorically that the successful regulation and control of state casino activities depends upon the confidence of the public "in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process of a casino operation," and by the exclusion from participation in casino gaming of "persons with known criminal records, habits or associations" who could threaten the integrity of the gaming and business operations.

The significance of strict regulation of all phases of the casino industry was emphasized by the Supreme Court in Knight v. City of Margate, 86 N.J. 374, 381 (1981):

> At the very heart of the public policy embraced by the new law is "the public confidence and trust in the credibility and integrity of the regulatory process and of casino operations." N.J.S.A. 5:12-1b(6). Related directly to this purpose, the Legislature stated that "the regulatory provisions . . . are designed to extend strict State regulation to all persons . . . practices and associations related to" casinos and that "comprehensive law-enforcement supervision . . . is further designed to contribute to the public confidence and trust in the efficancy and integrity of the regulatory process."

In In the Matter of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union Local 54, 203 N.J. Super. 297, 317 (App. Div. 1985), certif. den. 102 N.J. 352 (1985), the Appellate Division held that "inimical" means "adverse to the policy of the act and gaming operations," i.e., contrary to strict regulatory controls over all facets of casino activities.

The Division established that the respondent was convicted of using a communication facility (telephone) in facilitating the knowing and intentional distribution of a controlled dangerous substance and for being a principal. Although the respondent's convictions for using a communication facility (telephone) in facilitating the knowing and intentional distribution of a controlled dangerous substance and for being a principal are not listed as disqualifiers under section 86c, such conduct, when committed by a registrant, raises serious concerns. Normally, a conviction for a drug offense involving the distribution of cocaine would render continued registration to be inimical to the Act. The court conviction, along with the documentary evidence submitted by the Division, establishes the charged misconduct; however, the circumstances surrounding the offense substantially mitigate the seriousness of the offense.

Recently, in State of New Jersey, Dept. of Law and Public Safety, Division of Gaming Enforcement v. Michael P. Waters, OAL DKT. NO. CCC 3933-86, decided by the Commission, (June 12, 1987), the Commission stated at 2-3 that:

> A distinction must be drawn between the rehabilitation from a section 86(c)(1) or (3) disqualifying offense pursuant to sections 90(h) or 91(d) of the Act and rehabilitation as an aspect of the inimical analysis. In the former situation, disqualification is established once it is shown that the respondent committed an enumerated offense. The respondent is then afforded the opportunity to affirmatively demonstrate his rehabilitation from that disqualaification. It is well established that, consistent with other affirmative licensing criteria, the respondent must prove his rehabilitation by clear and convincing evidence. Application of Richard Romanishin for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. 84-EA-85 (Commission order, May 23, 1985); Application of Chester R. Brathwaite for a Casino Employee License, Docket No. A-4252-82T3 (Unpublished opinion reversing Commission decision, January 23, 1984).
> However, unlike a section 86(c)(1) or (3) situation, disqualification pursuant to section 86(c)(4) is not established upon demonstrating that the respondent committed the offense in question. Such a determination can only be made after considering all the circumstances surrounding the offense: its nature, its remoteness, and the offender's conduct subsequent to the offense, i.e., essentially the same factors which bear upon rehabilitation. Application of Donna Davis, 8 N.J.A.R. 301 (Commission decision, December 27, 1985); State v. Theodore Williams, Docket No. 84-288 (Commission order, May 1, 1987).

The Commission concluded that if the Division establishes a case for the respondent's disqualification, it is "then incumbent upon the respondent to show that he was rehabilitated; that is, the burden of going forward with evidence (but not the ultimate burden of proof) had shifted."

> In the Davis case, the Commission stated at 313, 314:
> Rehabilitation under section 90(h) (casino employee license) and section 91(d) (casino hotel employee registration) does not apply to disqualifying convictions under section 86(c)(4). By their express terms, these rehabilitation provisions apply only to '...a conviction of any of the offenses enumerated in this act as disqualification criteria.' Nevertheless, many of the factors that are considered upon a claim of rehabilitation are included within the inimical analysis.

The Commission indicated that "it has been generally observed that the notion of rehabilitation is subsumed in the inimical analysis (and) . . . the inimical analysis is substantially similar to the concept of rehabilitation." The Commission concluded that:

> The salient point to be made here is that we consider rehabiltation factors before concluding that the offense in question is or is not inimical under section 86(c)(4). Because the rehabilitation provisions are subsumed within the inimical analysis, it should never be necessary to determine the merits of a claim of rehabilitation after concluding that a given offense is inimical pursuant to section 86(c)(4). [Id. at 314.] [Footnote omitted.]

The eight specific criteria enumerated in N.J.S.A. 5:12-91d to be evaluated when a determination of rehabilitation is to be made are:

1. The nature and duties of the registrant's position;
2. The nature and seriousness of the offense;
3. The circumstances under which the offense occurred;
4. The date of the offense;
5. The age of the registrant when the offense was committed;
6. Whether the offense was an isolated or repeated incident;
7. Any social conditions which may have contributed to the offense;
8. Any evidence of rehabilitation, including good conduct in prison or in the community, counseling, or psychiatric treatment received, acquisition of additional academic or vocational schooling, successful participation in correctional work-release programs or the recommendation of persons who have or have had the registrant under their supervision.

First, Mr. Lumbre is a casino hotel registrant and is employed as a buffet dining room attendant in a restaurant at Harrah's. As such, he does not have direct reponsibilities for actual gaming activities and has minimal contact with casino patrons.

Second, the respondent committed violations of 21 U.S.C. § 843(b), using a communication facility (telephone) in facilitating the knowing and intentional distribution of a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine). The distribution of cocaine is an extremely serious offense; however, the offense which the respondent was convicted of, while serious, is a less serious offense.

Third, the circumstances surrounding the offense substantially mitigate the seriousness of the offense. While accompanying his brother-in-law to New York, the respondent affirmatively learned that the purpose of their trip was to purchase cocaine. The respondent immediately repudiated the action and indicated that upon their return to New Jersey, he did not want anything further to do with his brother-inlaw. The respondent did not participate in the purchase of the sale of the drugs and was not present at either transaction. As stated by the assistant United States attorney who prosecuted this case:

> [W]ith regard to the other defendants in this case, Mr. [Lumbre's] role was extremely limited. There is no evidence that Mr. [Lumbre] made any money from the sale of cocaine. Rather, the only evidence that the United States has in regard to Mr. Condor [Lumbre] was that he permitted the defendant Alzate-Patino to utilize his apartment to store drugs. To our knowledge, [Lumbre] was not in any way connected with the sale or distribution of these drugs (R-3).

Fourth, the respondent's misconduct occurred on April 29 and 30, 1986, approximately one and one-half years ago.

Fifth, the respondent was 28 years of age at the time of the offense. I do not believe that his age at the time of the offense was a contributing or mitigating factor in this case.

Sixth, the respondent's conduct was isolated in nature. He has not committed any other prior or subsequent violations of the criminal laws.

Seventh, the respondent is a Peruvian national who speaks very little English. He came to this country in August 1985, with his wife, to live with his wife's family. He experienced marital difficulties and was evicted from his wife's parents' house in March 1986. The respondent had no family in the United States and few friends. He was confused and did not know what to do. At this point, his brother-in-law, whom he knew only casually, offered the respondent the use of an apartment. The only condition was that the brother-in-law would occasionally store packages there which the respondent was not to touch nor ask questions about. Being a stranger in this country with no place to live, the respondent accepted his brother-in-law's offer. It appears that Mr. Alzate took advantage of the respondent's extremely vulnerable position and used the respondent to unknowingly store some of Mr. Alzate's drug paraphenalia. The respondent trusted Mr. Alzate, and thought that his brother-in-law was just being a good friend assisting him in his time of dire need. The respondent actually appears to have been a victim in this case.

Eighth, the respondent fully cooperated with the authorities immediately upon being questioned. Again, as indicated by the assistant United States attorney who prosecuted the respondent:

> Immediately upon his arrest, Mr. [Lumbre] commenced cooperating with federal authorities. Specifically, he indicated what his role was, as well as the involvement of the codefendant Alzate-Patino with regard to the distribution of cocaine. Since Mr. Alzate-Patino pled guilty, Mr. Condor's testimony was not necessary. However, he was willing and available to testify should that have become necessary. In short, the United States was totally satisfied with Mr. [Lumbre's] cooperation (R-3).

The respondent has remarried, and his wife is expecting their first child. He is enrolled in the English as a Second Language program at Atlantic Community College and is highly regarded by his teachers. He is gainfully employed, and he is a very hard worker. He is very courteous and well-liked by his employers. He is a member of the International Club at Atlantic Community College. He regularly attends church and participates in church events and church-sponsored charitable campaigns. The respondent is trying to rehabilitate himself. He admits his actions were wrong, and he is remorseful for his actions. At his sentencing hearing, Judge Thompson recommended that the respondent to permitted to retain his casino hotel employee registration.

When considering the respondent's conduct as taken in context and the overall nature of his character, weighing the above eight criteria, I do not find that his continued registration is inimical to the policies of the Casino Control Act.

I CONCLUDE that the Division has not established, by the preponderance of the credible evidence, that the continued registration of the respondent would be inimical to the policies of the Act, pursuant to section 86c(4).

DISPOSITION

It is ORDERED that the complaint filed by the Division against the respondent be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Commission does not so act in forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CCC 4662-88
AGENCY DKT. NO. 88-EA-270

JOHN R. MARCUCCI, Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF NEW JERSEY,
DEPARTMENT OF LAW & PUBLIC SAFETY,
DIVISION OF GAMING ENFORCEMENT,
Respondent.

Michael D. Miller, Esq., for petitioner

Norma L. Stancil, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (W. Cary Edwards, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: November 7, 1988 Decided: November 28, 1988

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

John R. Marcucci seeks renewal of a casino employee license which was previously issued to him by the Casino Control Commission ("Commission"). The Division of Gaming Enforcement ("Division") reviewed Mr. Marcucci's renewal application and in a letter to the Commission dated April 28, 1988 indicated that it recommended that the license renewal be granted. However, the Division's letter referenced a January 24, 1986 arrest by the Winslow Township Police Department which had resulted in charges of distribution of a controlled dangerous substance (cocaine), N.J.S.A. 24:21-19, comparable to N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5, and conspiracy to distribute a controlled dangerous substance, N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2. Although the letter advised that Mr. Marcucci had been accepted into and successfully completed the Pre-Trial Intervention Program and further advised that the Division would not object to renewal on the basis of this incident, the Commission chose to transmit the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for a full hearing.

Following receipt of the matter by the OAL, the case was preheard before Honorable Edgar R. Holmes, ALJ on September 1, 1988. Judge Holmes issued a prehearing order which identified the issues for consideration at the hearing as follows:

A. Whether petitioner committed acts which constitute a statutory disqualifier pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-86c despite the fact that such acts were not prosecuted in the criminal courts of this State, as permitted by N.J.S.A. 5:12-86g, to wit: N.J.S.A. 24:21-19(a)1 or N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5.

B. Whether petitioner possesses the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2).

C. Whether petitioner may demonstrate rehabilitation pursuant to sections 90h and/or 91d of the Casino Control Act.

A hearing was held before Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin on November 7, 1988 at the Gloucester City Municipal Court. The record closed following the completion of the hearing on that date.

ISSUES

Since the matter involved an application for renewal of licensure, the burden of establishing the necessary qualifications for renewal was on the petitioner. The petitioner testified that he has been employed in Atlantic City casinos since June of 1980 having worked as a dealer at Bally's Park Place and then in June of 1982 becoming employed at the then Brighton, now Sands, Casino Hotel serving as a dealer and as a blackjack and roulette supervisor. According to the petitioner, he has never been convicted of any criminal offenses.

With respect to the June 24, 1986 incident which resulted in his indictment, Mr. Marcucci explained that he was then a working acquaintance of one John Itri, who was then and is now employed at the Sands as a supervisor and who had served as Marcucci's supervisor on some occasions. Itri and Marcucci both lived in Sicklerville and car pooled together. They would alternate their vehicles. On January 24, 1986 it was Mr. Marcucci's turn to drive his pickup. He picked up Itri at approximately 10:20 a.m. to proceed to Atlantic City for the start of his job at 12:00. On the way out of the development, Marcucci felt it necessary to stop for gasoline. Itri indicated that he had to speak to an attendant at the Exxon station located at the Winslow exit for the Atlantic City Expressway. When they arrived, Marcucci decided that he had enough gas. Itri stuck his head outside the truck on the passenger side and had a conversation with an attendant named George. Marcucci did not overhear this discussion, which lasted for approximately three minutes. He assumed that Itri, who had just purchased two used automobiles, was speaking to George about having some work done on the cars. When Itri put his head back into the car, Marcucci heard Itri say something to George about seeing him later in the evening about some money. The two men then proceeded to work and worked their full shift until approximately 7:45 or 8:45 p.m. They then proceeded back from Atlantic City toward Sicklerville. They arrived at the Exxon station at 9:20 p.m. At this point, Marcucci definitely needed gas. Itri had indicated that he had to go back to the station to see George. Another attendant was present and he advised Marcucci that the station was out of unleaded gasoline. Itri told this attendant that he had to speak to George but since George was not there they left and proceeded to a nearby Sunoco station. Marcucci produced a credit card slip indicating he had in fact purchased gasoline at the Sunoco station that evening.

After buying the gasoline, the men proceeded back to the Exxon station. George was still not there and so Marcucci indicated that he would take Itri home. However Itri suggested that he would then have to come right back and he suggested that they go for a beer at a nearby bar. They proceeded to the bar and purchased a six pack and headed back toward the Exxon station. By this time George was at the station. He went to the passenger side of the car and Itri again stuck his head out of the vehicle. Marcucci could not hear the conversation until he heard Itri say "your kidding" and then he produced a piece of paper which George had given him which showed that George had been arrested. As they left the station, Itri made some comment about "some sort of transaction." George had asked him what they were going to do. At this point, Marcucci told Itri that he wanted to leave and whatever was going on was Itri's business and Marcucci did not want to be involved. The men proceeded toward Itri's home and as they arrived the police followed them and they were arrested.

From evidence presented later in the hearing by Detective Guy Wiegand of the Winslow Township Police Department, it was determined that George was actually an informant for the police. The transaction involved cocaine. As a result of the police surveillance which was occurring at the time of the contacts at the Exxon station and the information received from the informant, Marcucci and Itri were ultimately indicted in Indictment 0799-04-86 returned by the Camden County Grand Jury. The indictment charged that on December 19, 1985 Itri had distributed cocaine to George Snyder and charged that on January 24, 1986 Itri and Marcucci had distributed cocaine to Snyder. In addition, it charged Itri and Marcucci with conspiring to commit the crime of distribution of a controlled dangerous substance on January 24, 1986.

Mr. Marcucci was granted admission into the Pre-Trial Intervention Program and successfully completed it. As part of his program, he was required to perform 200 hours of community service as well as submit to urine analyses. He also was required to give a statement to the prosecutor concerning his activities.

During Mr. Marcucci's PTI period, his urine samples showed certain positive results. Specifically, a positive result for benzodiazepin was detected on a specimen which was obtained on November 18, 1986. In addition, a positive result was obtained for cocaine and amphetamine on September 18, 1986. The positive results for these drugs were disturbing to Mr. Marcucci as he denied using any illegal substances during his PTI period. With respect to the finding of a positive for benzodiazepin on December 16, 1986, Mr. Marcucci's family physician, Thomas G. Del Giorno, Jr., D.O. of Philadelphia, submitted a letter indicating that he had examined Marcucci on October 22, November 18 and December 15, 1986 and observed no signs or symptoms of drug abuse. With respect to the November 18, 1986 positive for benzodiazepin, Dr. Del Giorno explained that:

> This class of drugs includes notably Ativan, Xanax, Librium and Valium. A phone call to the laboratory was made after John denied having used any of these substances. What was discovered that a medicine that John was taking for his ulcer, Zantac, could produce a false positive for "benzodiazepins."

The prosecutor's office brought an action to terminate Mr. Marcucci from the PTI program as a result of the positive urine sample received from the MetPath Laboratory in a report of December 30, 1986 for a sample received on September 18, 1986, which showed positive for amphetamines and cocaine. On January 13, 1987, William Johnson, Legal Administrator for MetPath, Inc., advised counsel for Marcucci by letter that:

> . . . the drug testing request on Mr. Marcucci did not include a request for confirmation of the original drug screen result.

> MetPath recommends the use of an alternate methodology, primarily Gas Chromatography with Mass Spepectrophotometry (GC/MS), to confirm all positive results from initial drug screening. As you understand, I am not in a position to cite specific scientific reasoning for confirmation. There is, however, an abundance of literature on this subject given the current interest in drug testing.
>
> The methodology used for the testing on Mr. Marcucci's specimen was the EMT assay by Syva Corporation.

On January 16, 1987, Mr. Marcucci went before Honorable A. Donald Bigley, J.S.C. for the State's application to remove him from the PTI program because of the positive screening. In the course of that proceeding, which is the subject of Exhibit J-1, the transcript of the proceedings, counsel for Mr. Marcucci made an offer to the court that Mr. Marcucci be tested that day, an offer which was made completely unbeknownst to Mr. Marcucci prior to it being suggested to the court. This was done in light of Marcucci's position that he had not used any illegal substance and that there was a false reading on the MetPath Laboratory Report. Judge Bigley then addressed himself to the prosecutor stating:

> What's your position on this, gentlemen, for -- that you're coming in here with all these terminations and now he says you need two tests -- or allegedly says it.

> -- if you are going to ask me to terminate these people on these tests, don't you think you're going to have to come in with some positive testimony then.
>
> . . we're now getting somebody in saying that all these people were terminated, they ought to have two tests.

The prosecutor then noted that Mr. Marcucci's was an unusual case in that in most situations where persons have been terminated from the PTI program in Camden County, they have "admitted that they have in fact used the drugs. This is one of the rare instances where the defendant has come in and actually contested the fact he was using drugs."

Judge Bigley concluded:

> Well I'm going to give this gentlemen the benefit of the doubt based on Mr. Miller -- I'm sure -- I have great respect for him, he would not mislead this court in his conversation (the letter from Mr. Johnson had not yet been received and Miller was making representations to the court as to its anticipated contents).

The prosecutor then went on to note that "the testing procedures within this County are lacking to say -- to say the very least . . ."

As a result of all of the above, the application to remove Mr. Marcucci from the PTI program was rejected and he then proceeded to successfully complete the program. Following his completion of the PTI process, the indictment against him was dismissed and ultimately an order expunging his record was signed by Judge Bigley on June 24, 1988. Mr. Itri entered a plea bargain and received probation.

Mr. Marcucci is 38 years old. He has lived at his present address in Sicklerville for two-and-a-half years and before that lived for six months in Sewell. Prior to that residence, he lived in Sicklerville for two years. He is now married for the third time and has a nine-month-old son by this marriage. He has another child by his first marriage who does not reside with him.

The petitioner was one of the founders of a community association in his neighborhood, which was formed approximately nine months ago and has been working to better the area. He previously owned his own service station before getting into the casino industry.

The petitioner presented a number of character references. These are contained in Exhibits P-12 and 13 and consist of letters from friends and associates who generally have described him as a "trustworthy and reliable friend" "an excellent father, and a caring human being," a person with "honesty and integrity . . . beyond reproach," "attitude toward work is always professional," etc.

On cross-examination, the witness was asked whether he had had any conversation with Mr. Itri concerning what had gone on at the Exxon station while the men were on their way to Atlantic City. He testified that Itri said something regarding drugs and he, Marcucci, told him that that was Itri's business. When they returned from Atlantic City, Marcucci was aware that they had to stop at the Exxon station in order for Itri to get some money. Itri did not say what kind of drugs were involved. The three stops at the Exxon station all occurred within 10 or 15 minutes. Marcucci explained that he assumed that something "shady" was going on, but he was not specifically told that it had to do with drugs up until the point of George's comment concerning his arrest.

Mr. Marcucci denied that he knew Mr. Itri from his old neighborhood in Philadelphia. He also vigorously denied that he had ever been arrested in Cherry Hill in the 1976 on a possession of marijuana charge. No evidence of any kind was produced to substantiate this information which was contained in a question asked by the deputy attorney general. No criminal record sheet, no fingerprints, or any other evidence was produced concerning Mr. Marcucci's alleged arrest.

The Division's case involved the testimony of Detective Weigand of the Winslow Township Police Department. He testified concerning his surveillance of the Exxon station and the information which had been received from George Snyder who was informing for the police. According to Weigand, when he went to the station on January 24, 1986 he had some information from the informant as to who was involved in the drug transactions. Itri had previously gone to the Exxon station and offered the informant a "taste" of cocaine in December 1985 and this was the incident which was the subject of the first count of the indictment, which only charged Mr. Itri. The sale which occurred on January 24 involved a "eightball" that is, one-eighth ounce of cocaine. According to Weigand, Itri fronted the drugs, that is gave them to Snyder without receiving payment for them with the understanding that he would return the "following day." Actually he came back that night. The informant advised the police that Itri would be returning and the police were at the station, with Weigand parked 25 to 30 yards from where Itri was in the truck when it stopped at the station. Itri was supposed to have returned at 9:30, but the truck arrived at 9:10 and drove up to the station. It left and returned at 9:20, just driving through the lot without stopping. At 9:30 the truck arrived again and at this time Snyder was present. Weigand was able to observe what went on. The truck pulled up to the office area and Snyder went to the passenger side. The truck then left in the direction of Itri's home. While Snyder was speaking to Itri, he made a prearranged signal to the officer. This signal was to have indicated that there was additional drugs in the vehicle. However, Snyder gave the signal because he was concerned that he might be assaulted because he had told Itri that he had lost the "eightball" and did not have the money to pay for it. When the vehicle was stopped and searched no additional drugs were found.

Mr. Marcucci gave a statement to the police following his arrest. In that statement he indicated that he had bought gas at the Exxon station during the morning, although at the hearing he testified that he did not. In addition, Marcucci gave a statement to the prosecutor's office on June 25, 1986, which was quite similar to his trial testimony.

The officer was unable to testify as to whether or not Mr. Itri had in fact had his head and shoulders out of the passenger side of the vehicle while he had his conversation with George. However, George was standing right next to the truck which was a King Cab type vehicle.

In addition to the testimony and previously noted exhibits, the transcript of Mr. Itri's plea to the indictment returned against him given in Superior Court in Camden County on October 6, 1986 before Honorable Isaiah Steinberg, J.S.C. was also introduced. In that statement, Mr. Itri was asked about whether Mr. Marcucci was aware of the drug transaction. He indicated that the cocaine was only his, that is Itri's, that he did not tell Marcucci about the drugs or transaction before the transaction occurred and that it was "strictly my doing . . . ." He did indicate that he told Marcucci about the matter "afterwards" "on the way to work."

DISCUSSION

Mr. Marcucci's license renewal is dependent upon a determination as to the events occurring on January 24, 1986. According to Marcucci's version, he was an innocent bystander who just happened to be driving the car pool on the day that Itri engaged in the transaction with George Snyder, a transaction which involved the sale of cocaine, a transaction which Marcucci knew nothing about before it occurred and which, according to his testimony, he really knew nothing about until after George advised Itri that he, George, had been served with an arrest warrant. According to Mr. Itri's testimony at his retraxit plea proceeding on October 6, 1986, Marcucci did not know of the transaction before it occurred and had no part in it, although he was told about it on the way to work. Presumably, if Itri's testimony is believed, then Marcucci full well knew when taking Itri back to the Exxon station that it was at Itri's intention to collect the proceeds of the sale of the cocaine. Clearly Marcucci knew that this sale was illegal. The question then is whether in fact Marcucci did know prior to his arrest that a drug sale had occurred, when he knew it, and what if anything it means with respect to his receiving a renewed license.

Initially, I FIND that Mr. Marcucci went to the Exxon station on the morning of January 24 in the company of Mr. Itri and had no knowledge whatsoever that Itri was engaging in drug sales or that he intended to engage in a drug sale that morning. Mr. Marcucci was an innocent bystander in the sense that he was merely driving a vehicle to work with a passenger who he did not know had cocaine in his possession nor did he know had the intention of selling any illegal drugs that morning. In addition, I FIND that Mr. Marcucci's testimony that he did not overhear the details of the discussion between Itri and Snyder that morning was truthful. I FIND that Marcucci left the Exxon station with no knowledge that a drug sale had occurred. There was no evidence to indicate that he should have been alerted by anything which occurred nor do I believe that he overheard anything significant in the discussions taking place on the passenger side of the vehicle out the window which would have led him to believe that some illicit activity was occurring.

The most troubling part of the testimony in the case is Mr. Marcucci's apparent denial that he was told the nature of the business between Itri and Snyder until the very last moment. If Itri is believed he told Marcucci that a drug transaction had occurred while they drove to work. Having considered the testimony, including certain apparently confusing statements made by Marcucci in his testimony, I FIND that sometime during the trip to Atlantic City Mr. Itri, at least to some degree, revealed to Marcucci that a drug sale had occurred. It is not at all clear, and I do not FIND, that Marcucci knew what drug was involved, how much, how much the sale was for, or anything else of that nature. That he did know that Itri had engaged in a drug transaction with Snyder prior to their returning to the Exxon station that evening, I do FIND to be fact. Therefore, Mr. Marcucci knew that he was taking Itri back to the station to collect the proceeds of the sale. At the same time, I FIND Mr. Marcucci's testimony that he did need gas that evening to be accurate. He did purchase gas at the Sunoco station and there is no reason to disbelieve his testimony that he went to the Exxon station intending to purchase gas and could not do so because he was advised by the attendant on the scene at 9:10 p.m. that there was no unleaded gas at the station. Thus, Marcucci had his own reasons for going to the Exxon station which, according to the testimony, was the conveniently located station directly off the Winslow exit. The fact that he knew that Itri would be collecting proceeds of the drug sale, while perhaps information which should have indicated to Marcucci that he should just drop Itri home and get out of the way rather than go to the station, was, I FIND, not the significant motivating factor for Marcucci's return to the Exxon station. However, Mr. Marcucci allowed himself to remain in Itri's company and returned Itri to the Exxon station on two occasions shortly after the first visit at 9:10. This was a mistake in judgment on Marcucci's part, but one which I do not FIND indicative of any intention by Marcucci to become involved in any way, shape or form with Itri's illegal activities. As Marcucci put it at the hearing, it was "Itri's business." Of course, it would have been more satisfactory, it would have been more sensible, it would have been less suspicious, had Marcucci removed himself from the scene entirely and separated from Itri. He did not do so, and yet I FIND no evidence indicative of any suggestion that Marcucci really intended to play any part in Itri's business. In the sense that he drove the drug dealer to the scene of the sale in the morning, I FIND that he was totally oblivious of what was about to occur. In the sense that he drove the drug dealer to the scene of the sale in the evening so that the financial end of the deal could be completed, I FIND that he acted with something less than Solomonic wisdom. However, despite this lapse of judgment, I FIND that Marcucci was not in any manner a conspirator with Itri and that he had absolutely no intention of engaging in a drug sale, profiting from such, or for that matter, really desiring to help Itri conduct his business.

The Superior Court considered Mr. Marcucci's positive urine samples in the context of the attempt of the prosecutor's office to remove Marcucci from the PTI program. Judge Bigley was apparently satisfied from the information conveyed to him by counsel that there was insufficient certainty from the one test performed by MetPath to assure that in fact the positives were not false. Given the fact that he chose to dismiss the application for removal, and given the information provided in the letter from Mr. Johnson, I CONCLUDE that even under the less stringent standard of proof applicable in administrative proceedings, that is preponderance of the evidence as opposed to beyond a reasonable doubt, there is not sufficient evidence to allow a conclusion that Mr. Marcucci actually had urine which tested positive for cocaine and amphetamines. In the highly technical area of drug testing, and the particularly technical matter of test accuracy, confirmation, etc. proof that the urines were in fact positive such as to condemn Marcucci even civilly must be more persuasive than the mere report of the laboratory of its initial drug screening. The laboratory representatives themselves have indicated by the letter from Mr. Johnson their belief in the necessity of a confirmatory test. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Marcucci has not been shown to have violated the terms and conditions of his Pre-Trial Intervention Program nor has it been shown that he was using amphetamines or cocaine or any other illegal substances during the period he was involved in the PTI program.

The burden of establishing the requisite licensing qualifications is on the petitioner. In this case, the evidence does not establish that Mr. Marcucci committed any acts constituting statutory disqualifiers. In addition, I CONCLUDE that although Mr. Marcucci may have been slightly less than completely candid concerning exactly when he may have learned that a drug transaction had taken place he has as a matter of proof established by clear and convincing evidence that he has the requisite good character, honesty and integrity for casino employee licensure as required by N.J.S.A. 5:12-89b(2). I CONCLUDE that Mr. Marcucci's extremely limited "role" as the person who drove his car pool colleague to the site where Itri was to collect his drug proceeds is under the circumstances an insufficient basis for determining that Marcucci either is not of extremely good character or that there is any other reason to prevent him from being licensed. For these reasons, it is ORDERED that the renewal application of John R. Marcucci for licensure as a casino employee be GRANTED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.

Record Closed: January 31, 1989 Decided: February 21, 1989

BEFORE STEPHEN W. THOMPSON, ALJ

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Division of Gaming Enforcement (Division) charges the respondent, which operates the Harrah's Marina Casino Hotel, violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 5:12-119(b) on various dates, by permitting Debra Kim Cohen, a minor, to gamble in it's casino.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Division filed its complaint with the Casino Control Commission (Commission) on October 15, 1987. Marina Associates (Marina) filed an Answer to the complaint on November 20, 1987. On December 15, 1987, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was scheduled in Atlantic City, New Jersey, on February 19, 1988, before the Honorable Richard Voliva. The matter was originally scheduled for hearing on June 27 and 28, 1988. On June 7, 1988, this matter was reassigned to the Honorable Stephen W.Thompson. The matter was subsequently adjourned until July 18 and 19, 1988.

Prior to the hearing date, the parties agreed to a settlement and prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Settlement which arrived at the OAL on July 18, 1988. The record closed on July 19, 1988.

The within matter was remanded to the OAL for further proceedings by order of the Commission on November 3, 1988. On December 14, 1988 the parties submitted another proposed settlement agreement The record closed on January 31, 1989 with receipt of the remanded file.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Division and Marina have prepared a Stipulation of Facts and Settlement, which is attached hereto and made a part of this Initial Decision. I have reviewed the stipulated facts and adopt them as if the same were set forth herein at length.

Therefore, I FIND:

1. The terms of settlement in this matter have been incorporated into a settlement agreement which is attached to this Initial Decision and which is incorporated herein as set forth at length.

2. The parties to this action have voluntarily agreed to the terms of settlement, as evidenced by their execution of the settlement agreement.

3. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and it is consistent with the law.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW AND ORDER OF DISPOSITION

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 1:1-17.1, the parties to a contested case may settle the matter by consent and may submit a stipulation signed by both parties which contains the terms of settlement. When the administrative law judge assigned to the matter decides that the settlement is voluntary, consistent with the law and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy, he shall enter an Initial Decision which sets forth the settlement terms.

Having found that the terms of settlement as set forth in the attached settlement agreement are satisfactory to the settling parties and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy, and having noted that the parties have consented to the attached settlement terms, I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings before the Office of Administrative Law be and are hereby concluded.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION, which by law is empowered to make a final decision in this matter. However, if the Casino Control Commission does not so act in forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the CASINO CONTROL COMMISSION for consideration.
