Data Driven Investing in America: New Tools Help Advance Regionally Focused Economic Development in Washington State and Beyond

In 2018, Brookings reported: "A central development problem is that high-quality, timely, accessible data are absent in most poor countries, where development needs are greatest. In a world of unequal distributions of income and wealth across space, age and class, gender and ethnic pay gaps, and environmental risks, data that provide only national averages conceal more than they reveal."

Texas Putting More Commercial Drivers on the Road Through EDA Support

Commercial drivers play a critical role in our nation's economy. Those with a Commercial Driver's License (CDL) operate the tractor-trailers, semi-trucks, and passenger buses that transport supplies, materials, products, and people across the country. Simply put, commercial drivers help America move forward.
