 OF PLAINFIELD, UNION COUNTY, :

 RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions were timely filed by petitioner and the Board in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion that petitioner failed to prove the Board's reasons for not renewing her contract were merely pretextual, in that she was a victim of racial and religious discrimination who was subjected to harassment in her workplace. Petitioner asserts there was ample evidence adduced at trial to support these claims. Petitioner additionally excepts to the ALJ's finding that the Board did not violate her due process rights in failing to timely set the date for petitioner's informal Board appearance, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6:3-4.2. Finally, petitioner excepts to the ALJ's conclusion that the Board properly exercised its authority to terminate petitioner's employment, while she was on work-related disability leave, by giving her timely notice of nonrenewal. Inasmuch as each of these issues was fairly addressed and considered by the ALJ, the Commissioner does not further explicate the position of petitioner.

The Board urges that the ALJ's factual findings and conclusions of law be adopted by the Commissioner.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, which included the transcript of proceedings at OAL, the Commissioner concurs with and adopts as his own the initial decision of OAL ordering dismissal of the petition herein. The Commissioner accepts the credibility determinations of the ALJ, and concurs that petitioner has failed to prove that the Board's decision not to renew her contract was based on racial and religious discrimination, or that she was subjected to harassment and differential treatment in the workplace. As to the procedural deficiencies claimed by petitioner, the Commissioner agrees that the Board's actions did not constitute a violation of petitioner's due process rights.

Finally, the Commissioner determines that the Board properly exercised its authority to terminate petitioner's employment, notwithstanding that she was on disability leave, by serving her with timely notice pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, and that said determination puts to rest petitioner's claim that she is entitled to back pay pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision of OAL dismissing the petition for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners appealed action of Board Secretary to compel printing of their names on the ballot for the annual school election in the manner in which those names were listed on petitioners' voter registration forms, notwithstanding that petitioners had duly submitted valid nominating petitions using other forms of their names.

ALJ found that petitioners desired to use given, family or married names and that there was no intent to defraud or deceive the voters or otherwise engage in subterfuge. ALJ found Board Secretary exceeded his authority in attempting to compel petitioners to seek Board membership under the names appearing on their voter registration forms and enjoined action to print petitioners' names on the ballot in any manner other than that given on their nominating petitions.

Commissioner affirmed findings and determination of initial decision, clarifying ALJ's comments on the role of the Board Secretary in election matters.

This is a transcript of the administrative law judge's oral decision on motion rendered pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.2.

BEFORE JAMES A. OSPENSON, ALJ:

I have listened to arguments in support of and in opposition to petitioners' motion for immediate emergent relief or mandatory injunction, if you will, preliminarily restraining . . . machine, absentee, military ballots to be accredited for the April 18, 1995 local school board election in the names of the two respective candidates, Spinelli and Keim, in any other form or manner than the form or manner in which their respective nominating petitions were presented to the Board secretary. There were stipulations here that the desire of petitioners to have their names presented to the electorate as those names appeared on their nominating petitions involved no intent to defraud, no deception, no subterfuge, simply the desire of each of them to go before the electorate as the same ones nominated for election or who served the Board before under those names. The parties have agreed, and I agree, there is no specific statute, regulation or Commissioner's decision that requires or permits the Board secretary in turn to compel nominees to go before the electorate only as their names appear on their voter registration as opposed to those names as they appear on their nominating petitions. The record is clear that in all other respects both petitioners are qualified to stand for election as to citizenship and residency, and of course there is no question the signatories on the nominating petitions are qualified themselves. To qualify, whether they are or whether they aren't, is a question not now before me. . . . Duties of the Board secretary in receiving petitions and directing preparation of the machine ballot are basically outlined in N.J.S.A. 18A:14-10. Once the Board secretary is satisfied as to names, residency and post office address, and once the Board secretary is satisfied as to qualifications of the petitioners, once he is satisfied the nominees are legally qualified to be elected to the office they would serve in, the Board secretary's duties essentially become ministerial in nature. That is to say, he has no residual duty to meet, nor is he required to make any [subjective] judgment as to whether the difference in names that are on the nominating petition and the voter registration would foster confusion, or whether the differences of names would represent a chance there would not be a fair and impartial election. I think it would be presumptuous of the Board secretary to take upon himself, given statute, regulations and decisional authority, that sort of monitoring function. I think it represents a form of discretion that was not intended by the Legislature that he keep or possess, because the counter argument can be made that while he exercised such a subjective discretion that itself would perhaps risk the fairness, the impartiality of the election. I am impressed on this record that there is, again, no fraud, no deception, no subterfuge, no allegation of an intent to deceive the electorate or anybody else. I'm impressed that the names under which these petitioners seek to stand for election are actual names, that is to say, either given names or family names or married names. There is no alias here. I believe that each one of these petitioners has a right to stand for election under that form of their respective names as they see fit to stand before the electorate. Because I think the duties of the Board secretary are ministerial in nature, I think that any attempt to broaden his powers to make a personal inquiry as to whether or not the legitimate use of names such as here would risk or represent a danger to a fair and impartial election itself becomes an interference with the electoral process and that should not be. Counsel said no one has a constitutional right to run for office. . . . But I certainly think that it's a fundamental concept in a democracy that the citizen has a right to stand before the electorate for a particular office and that when someone does that, that someone has a right to do so as that person feels he or she is known. And so long as there is no attempt to deceive anyone, I think the choice has to be honored by the Board secretary in a case such as this. I am impressed that the effort here by these petitioners in seeking to stand for election as they want to stand for election is not an attempt to induce illegal votes to be cast and it's not an attempt to prevent legal votes from being cast. That's a familiar test in electoral matters in education law as I understand it, and it's important in one's attempting to construe what petitioners' obligations are and what their respective rights and duties are. I believe the motion to allow petitioners their emergent relief as demanded here satisfies the criteria and standards of the case of Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). I am mindful that unless this matter is cleared up immediately there may be some risk as to whether or not a judgment can be fulfilled because of the press of time and the need to have a decision entered so that the machine ballots as well as the other kinds of ballots can be printed in due season before election day. There will be judgments for the petitioners in the terms sought.

Mr. O'Donnell, did you have a chance to review the form of the order presented by Mr. Krovatin in his papers? . . .

END OF TRANSCRIPT, which has been edited as to form.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

I, Angela M. Robinson, certify that the foregoing is a true and accurate transcript, to the best of my ability, of Judge Ospenson's oral decision rendered in the above matter on April 3, 1995.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on March 20, 1995, through the filing of separate petitions of appeal, seeking, with respect to the ballot at the annual school election to be held on April 18, 1995, to have their names listed as candidates for Board membership as they had given them on their nominating petitions rather than as they are given on their voter registration records. Petitioners contend that there is no basis in law for respondents' insistence on using their names as they appear on petitioners' voter registration records, and that, even if there were, respondents' objections were raised too late to affect petitioners' candidacy.

Because the petitions involved identical questions of law and similar questions of material fact, they were consolidated for purposes of further proceedings herein. In order to obtain a decision prior to printing of ballots on or about April 5, 1995, respondents filed an expedited answer on March 27, 1995, together with a Motion to Dismiss contending that their actions were both founded in law and timely taken. Petitioners' reply to this motion was filed on March 28, 1995. Upon review of the papers filed, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing on an emergent basis, and an initial decision was issued on April 3, 1995 and filed with the Commissioner on April 4, 1995.

At hearing, it was stipulated that there was no intent on the part of petitioners to defraud, deceive or otherwise engage in subterfuge; rather, petitioners proposed to use names that were undisputedly actual names, that is, given names, family names or married names, not aliases or fictitious names. It was also stipulated that petitioners were qualified for candidacy and that such qualification was not at issue herein.

In the initial decision, the ALJ accepted petitioners' arguments as a matter of law, and having done so, did not reach to the question of whether any challenge to the form of petitioners' names was timely made, such determination being unnecessary in view of the legal conclusions drawn. In exceptions and replies to the ALJ's determination filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by respondents and petitioners, respectively, the arguments set forth in prior filings are referenced and briefly reiterated.

With respect to the central question of law raised by their claim, petitioners argue that the controlling statutes, specifically N.J.S.A. 18A:14-9 through 18A:14-12, confer on respondents no authority to make a unilateral determination as to how candidates' names will appear on the ballot when they have been duly nominated by petition under the names by which they are commonly known in their personal, civic or professional capacities, notwithstanding that such names are not those appearing on their voter registration forms.

Respondents reply that candidates must certify that they meet the qualifications of Board membership set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-1, including the requirement that they not be disqualified as voters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:4-1. That statute requires, among other things, that a person be "duly registered" in order to vote, and the court has held that a "qualified voter" is by definition a registered voter. Lesniak v. Budzash, 133 N.J. 1, 9 (1993) The official form for voter registration is found in N.J.S.A. 19:31-6.4, wherein it is required that the person's name be printed on the voter registration form, which includes a statement of the registrant's understanding that any false or fraudulent registration or attempted registration may subject the registrant to a fine, imprisonment or both. Thus, in order to register to vote, a person must certify that the name of registration is the person's true name. N.J.S.A. 19:31-3, 19:31-6 and 19:31-6.4 While petitioners argue that N.J.S.A. 18A:14-10 does not specifically require the name under which a person runs for board membership to be the same as that on the voter registration, to permit the result sought by petitioner would be contrary to common sense, and could open the nomination process to all manner of abuse in the alteration, or even fabrication, of names so as to obtain some actual or perceived advantage on the ballot. Vittoria v. West Orange Board of Education, 122 N.J. Super. 340 (1973); State v. Toland, 123 N.J. Super. 286, 289 (App. Div. 1973)

Upon consideration of this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the conclusion of the ALJ that, in a situation such as is presented herein, there is no basis in law to compel a candidate's name to appear on the ballot for membership on a board of education in the manner in which it appears on his or her voter registration form. So long as there is no allegation of fraud, intent to deceive or use of fictitious or partisan name, and no question as to the identity of the candidate and his or her voter registration status for purposes of qualifying for board membership under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-1 and 18A:14-10, the Commissioner concurs that a candidate may choose to stand for election under the legitimate name of his or her choice notwithstanding that such name is not as given on the candidate's voter registration forms.

The Commissioner would, however, clarify that the ALJ's comments regarding the ministerial role of the Board Secretary, while appropriate in the context of a matter where there is no allegation of fraud, deception, misrepresentation or use of fictitious name, should not be construed as precluding a Secretary from taking further action as appropriate in situations where such allegations have been raised.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law granting judgment to petitioners is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein as clarified above. Consequently, the Board is directed to print petitioners' names on the ballots for the 1995 annual school election in the School District of the City of Hoboken in the manner in which they appeared on petitioners' duly filed nominating petitions.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning clerk/secretary alleged that she was terminated by the Board in violation of her tenure rights.

ALJ found that nonprofessional staff protected under Title 11 in school districts which have adopted the civil service law do not acquire separate tenure rights under Title 18A. Therefore, whatever employment rights petitioner possessed existed pursuant to the civil service law, rather than the education laws. ALJ ordered the petition pending before the Commissioner of Education dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Decided: February 28, 1995

BEFORE KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of the Case

This is an appeal by a school employee who alleges that the termination of her employment as a clerk secretary on May 13, 1994 violates her tenure rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. Respondent State-Operated School District of Jersey City ("Jersey City") contends that the rights of clerical and secretarial staff in the Jersey City public school district are governed by civil service law rather than by education statutes. Accordingly, Jersey City has moved to dismiss the petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.

Procedural History

On June 27, 1994, petitioner Mary Ellen Anderson filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner"), joining both the New Jersey Department of Personnel and Jersey City as respondents. Petitioner filed an amended petition with the Commissioner on June 30, 1994. Jersey City filed its answer to the amended petition on July 13, 1994. Subsequently, on July 21, 1994, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case. Meanwhile, on or about August 27, 1994, Anderson filed a related appeal to the Merit System Board challenging her removal from the eligibility list for the title of principal clerk typist. By order entered on December 15, 1994, the OAL dismissed the Department of Personnel as not a proper party to the proceeding brought under Title 18A. On January 3, 1995, Jersey City filed the present motion to dismiss, together with a supporting affidavit and brief. Anderson filed opposing papers on January 17, 1995. The motion has been submitted for ruling on the papers.

Findings of Fact

Resolution of the jurisdictional issue is essentially a question of law. Most of the relevant information is a matter of public record. For purposes of this motion only, the facts alleged in petitioner's pleadings will be assumed true. I FIND:

Mary Ellen Anderson began her employment for Jersey City as a provisional clerk secretary on July 1, 1975. She has been employed by Jersey City for approximately twenty years serving in various clerical titles. Although she took three civil service exams, she ranked too low on the list to be appointed to a permanent position. Thus, she never achieved permanent status. In or about January 1994, she took a civil service test for the position of "principal clerk typist," but failed the typing portion of the test administered by the appointing authority. On August 26, 1994, the Department of Personnel upheld her removal from the employment list for principal clerk typist. Anderson filed a timely appeal to the Merit System Board, which matter is currently pending. Jersey City terminated Anderson from her provisional position effective June 30, 1994, "due to budgeting constraints and program adjustments."

For more than three decades, the nonprofessional staff of the Jersey City school district have been afforded civil service protection. As far back as November 1958, the electorate of Jersey City adopted a referendum that "non-instructional employees of the Board of Education are now covered by Title 11 of the New Jersey Statutes Annotated." New Jersey's highest court has taken judicial notice of the fact that "the Board of Education adopted the appropriate Civil Service Act in 1960." Parrella v. Jersey City Bd. of Educ., 51 N.J. 323, 332 (1968).

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the Commissioner of Education lacks subject matter jurisdiction over this dispute.

Local school districts are authorized to employ secretarial and clerical personnel and to fix their terms of employment. See N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1 and 18A:17-2. However, that authority is limited by N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, which provides:

The board shall . . . make, amend and repeal rules, not inconsistent with this title or with the rules of the state board, . . . for the employment, regulation of conduct and discharge of its employees, subject, where applicable, to the provisions of Title 11, Civil Service, of the Revised Statutes. (Emphasis added).

Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-2 provides that no person in the classified service pursuant to Title 11 shall be affected by the provisions of the education law concerning tenure.

Commissioner's decisions have consistently recognized that nonprofessional staff protected under Title 11 in school districts which have adopted the civil service law do not acquire separate tenure rights under Title 18A. Recently, in Harp v. Newark Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. EDU 10918-94 (July 6, 1994), adopted by silence, a case virtually identical to our own, the Commissioner declared that "employment of school clerks in Newark is governed by civil service law," and "[a]ny appeal from a controversy arising under that law should be brought to the Merit System Board." (slip op. at 6). Similarly, in Newark Attendance Counselors Ass'n v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 2 N.J.A.R. 346 (Comm'r Dec. 31, 1979), the Commissioner dismissed a layoff appeal by school attendance officers, holding that petitioners were classified civil service employees subject to competitive appointments. Accord Plessis v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 1976 S.L.D. 1006 (Comm'r Dec. 20, 1976), where the Commissioner ruled that custodial workers are not teaching staff members and their dispute did not arise under the school laws.

Like the Newark school district, Jersey City has adopted the civil service law, and its nonprofessional staff are included in the "classified" service. See Harp, supra, at 4. Clerical staff are not "teaching staff members" who are excluded from civil service coverage. N.J.S.A. 11A:3-5(g). Whatever employment rights Anderson may possess exist by virtue of the civil service law. Therefore, her remedy lies not with the Commissioner of Education, but exclusively with the Merit System Board.

Order

It is ORDERED that the appeal pending before the Commissioner of Education is dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration. This recommended decision may be adopted, Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge that whatever employment rights petitioner may possess exist pursuant to civil service law, N.J.S.A. Accordingly, the instant Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Petitioner, tenured teaching staff member in respondent's district, sought determination that the Board had violated the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3 by failing to appoint him to the position of boys head soccer coach at Woodbridge High School.

ALJ found that petitioner did ~~not put any request for the coaching position in writing until August 23, 1993, after the position had already been awarded to someone else.~~ Moreover, citing Krupp Appellate Division decision, ALJ found that even if petitioner had submitted a written application for the position in question, he would have had no absolute right to the position. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Record Closed: January 17, 1995

Decided: March 1, 1995

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

This matter commenced on October 13, 1993 when Raymond J. Perez (hereinafter petitioner) filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education seeking a determination that Woodbridge Township Board of Education (hereinafter respondent) had violated the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3 by failing to appoint him to the position boys head soccer coach at Woodbridge High School. An answer on behalf of respondent was filed on December 1, 1993 and on December 14, 1993 the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 53:14F-1 to -13. On March 29, 1994, the attorneys for respondent filed a motion for summary decision with supporting papers. Petitioner filed a response and a cross-motion for summary decision with supporting papers on April 25, 1994. A reply on behalf of respondent was received May 11, 1994. Oral argument on the cross-motions for summary decision took place June 28, 1994 by telephone conference call. Thereafter, by letter dated August 9, 1994 the undersigned wrote to counsel for petitioner as follows:

During our last telephone conference call you indicated that you would consult with Mr. Perez concerning when exactly he asserts he told Mr. Kuchtyak that he wanted to be considered for the position boys head soccer coach at Woodbridge Senior High School. Please have Mr. Perez's affidavit reciting these relevant facts on my desk no later than 5 p.m. on August 19, 1994, so that I may determine whether we need a hearing in this matter. If I do not receive anything from you by that date, I shall assume that any such conversation which may have occurred between Mr. Perez and Mr. Kuchtyak took place after August 19, 1993, and I will then decide the matter on the cross-motions.

On August 19, 1994, counsel for petitioner transmitted a letter petitioner had written to counsel setting forth various factual assertions. That letter was replaced with petitioner's sworn affidavit on September 23, 1994. By letter order dated October 3, 1994, the undersigned advised the parties that the cross-motions for summary decision were denied and a plenary hearing was scheduled for October 31, 1994.

The hearing took place as scheduled at the Trenton office of the Office of Administrative Law and the record closed at the conclusion of the hearing. By letter dated December 9, 1994 the undersigned reopened the record to provide the parties with the opportunity to comment upon the court's decision in Krupp v. Board of Educ. of Union Cty. Reg. High Sch., 278 N.J. Super. 31 (App. Div. 1994)* which had been decided on December 6, 1994. A letter memorandum on behalf of respondent was received on January 6, 1995. No reply having been received from petitioner, the record closed on January 17, 1995.

* A petition for certification was filed December 22, 1994, Docket No. 39649, pending.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Some of the facts relevant to a determination of this matter are not in dispute and I therefore FIND the following as uncontested facts. On or about June 18, 1993, respondent posted coaching positions which were available for the school year 1993-94. The notice recited, in pertinent part,

Any employee wishing to apply for any of the coaching positions listed below must send a letter of application to the Personnel Office, School Street, Woodbridge, New Jersey, 07095:

These positions are available for the school year 1993-94. All letters of application for any of these positions must be in the Personnel Office not later than July 2, 1993.

Although a letter of application for a similar position has been previously submitted, all interested personnel must reapply at this time. (J-1 in evidence)

Petitioner, a tenured teaching staff member in respondent's district, submitted written applications to the Personnel Office for the positions assistant soft ball coach at Colonia High School for the 1993-94 school year and boys head soccer coach at Colonia for the 1993-94 school year. Both applications were received in the Personnel Office on June 23, 1993. In or about mid-July 1994, petitioner, who had been the boys head soccer coach at Colonia High School for a number of years, was advised by Kenneth Kuchtyak, respondent's Assistant Superintendent for Personnel Services, that the head coach at Woodbridge High School was transferring to Colonia High School and would be assigned the positions boys head soccer coach and assistant soft-ball coach at Colonia. By letter dated July 14, 1993 petitioner wrote to the Director of Personnel stating, "Please reactivate my application for Director of Athletics at Woodbridge High School. I will be away on vacation until July 20. After that I will be available at your convenience for an interview." (J-7 in evidence) No other written application for coaching or athletic positions was submitted by petitioner. On Sunday, July 25, 1993, respondent advertised in the Newark Star Ledger the existence of various coaching vacancies in Woodbridge Township School District. Applicants were instructed to send resumes to Mr. Kuchtyak. At its regular meeting on August 19, 1993, respondent appointed Albert Magliaro to be boys head soccer coach at Woodbridge High School. Mr. Magliaro was an out-of-district certificated teacher who had applied in response to the advertisement in the Star Ledger. Notwithstanding the fact that respondent had filled the position at its August 19, 1993 board meeting, on August 23, 1993 petitioner wrote to the Director of Personnel as follows:

As per my discussion with Mr. Kuchtyak, Mr. Peterson, and Mr. D'Orsi in July 1993, I am again expressing my interest in the Head Soccer Coach position at Woodbridge High School for the 1993 season.

Petitioner then filed the petition commencing the within matter. This concludes the recitation of uncontested facts.

Petitioner testified that after respondent's July 1993 board meeting Joseph D'Orsi, vice principal at Woodbridge High School, had asked him to stop over to his house to discuss a possible transfer to Woodbridge High School to teach health and to coach soccer. Petitioner testified that Mr. D'Orsi indicated petitioner would be doing him a favor in requesting a transfer. Petitioner testified that the day he spoke with Mr. D'Orsi was the day before he left for vacation; he thought the date was July 19, 1993. (However, see J-7 in evidence, petitioner's letter dated July 14, 1993 indicating that he would be away on vacation until July 20). Before he left for vacation, petitioner said, he hand-wrote a letter to Mr. D'Orsi indicating that he would like to transfer to Woodbridge High School to teach health. Although on two occasions during his testimony he indicated that the letter also stated that he would like to be appointed head soccer coach at Woodbridge, upon further questioning he acknowledged that the letter did not mention the position head soccer coach. Petitioner explained that he had assumed since he had expressed his interest to Mr. D'Orsi that the coaching position would go along with the teaching transfer. He did not expect respondents to advertise the position since he had indicated interest, he testified, and he did not see the advertisement in the Star Ledger. Petitioner also testified that he had a subsequent conversation with Mr. Kuchtyak wherein he repeated his conversation with Mr. D'Orsi about the transfer to Woodbridge High School. Mr. Kuchtyak said he would look into it; "We'll see", petitioner quoted him as saying. Thereafter petitioner did go for an interview for the position Director of Athletics at Woodbridge High School. He acknowledged on cross-examination that he knew there was no possibility of being a coach and Director of Athletics at the same time. He did not question any one in the personnel office about the transfer to Woodbridge High School or the assignment of the boys head soccer coach position there, and he heard nothing from them until respondent took the actions complained of at its August 19, 1993 board meeting. No transfer for him was processed until September 1994, he said.

Kenneth Kuchtyak, Assistant Superintendent for Personnel Services, testified that he had searched his personnel files and had not located any letter from petitioner requesting a transfer to Woodbridge High School. He had no recollection of ever having seen such a letter. He testified that he had conducted the interview with petitioner for the Director of Athletics position and a transfer to teach at Woodbridge High School was never discussed. Mr. Kuchtyak acknowledged that petitioner had come to his office somewhere around July 15, 1993 and during that conversation petitioner had advised him that he was very upset that he was being replaced as head soccer coach at Colonia. Petitioner advised Mr. Kuchtyak that he had discussed the possibility of a transfer and coaching at Woodbridge High School with Mr. D'Orsi. Mr. Kuchtyak testified that he had requested petitioner to put his desires concerning the transfer and coaching position in writing, to which petitioner had responded that he was going on vacation and was going to go home and think about it. Mr. Kuchtyak testified that from this conversation he concluded that petitioner had not decided whether he wanted a transfer to Woodbridge High School or not. He indicated that he had had no further conversation with petitioner about a transfer or the coaching position before April 19, 1993.

With respect to the contested facts, I FIND that petitioner did not put any request to be appointed boys head soccer coach at Woodbridge High School in writing until August 23, 1993, after the position had already been awarded to someone else. Although petitioner's testimony concerning his letter to Mr. D'Orsi in mid-July was internally inconsistent, he finally acknowledged, upon direct questioning from the undersigned, that the hand-written letter he gave to Mr. D'Orsi did not include any mention of the coaching position, but rather simply requested a transfer to Woodbridge High School to teach health. Mr. D'Orsi did not testify at the hearing herein and I am unable to make any finding concerning his receipt or disposition of the letter. I further FIND, however, that Mr. Kuchtyak never received the hand-written letter concerning a transfer request and that in the conversation petitioner had with Mr. Kuchtyak during July 1993, petitioner had indicated that he was unsure whether he would apply for a transfer and/or coaching job at Woodbridge High School. Mr. Kuchtyak was a candid, sincere and credible witness. I FIND that he advised petitioner on or about July 15, 1993 that he should put in writing his desires concerning a transfer and/or a coaching position at Woodbridge High School and with respect to the coaching position, at least, petitioner never did that. I FURTHER FIND that petitioner did not indicate to Mr. Kuchtyak his unequivocal interest in the position until after the position had been awarded at the August 19, 1993 board meeting.

APPLICABLE LAW AND DISCUSSION

N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3, the regulation governing a determination of the within matter, provides:

- (a) Any person not certified as a teacher and not in the employ of a district board of education shall not be permitted to organize public school pupils during school time or during any recess in the school day for purposes of instruction, or coaching or for conducting games, events or contests in physical education or athletics.
- (b) School districts shall be permitted to employ any holder of a New Jersey teaching certificate to work in the interscholastic athletic program provided that the position has been advertised.
- (c) In the event there is no qualified and certified applicant, the holder of a county substitute certificate is authorized to serve as an athletic coach in the district in which he or she is employed for a designated sports season, provided that:

1. The district chief school administrator demonstrates to the county superintendent that:
 - i. The vacant coaching position had been advertised; and
 - ii. There was no qualified applicant based on the written standards of the district board of education;
2. The district chief school administrator will provide a letter to the county superintendent attesting to the prospective employee's knowledge and experience in the sport in which he or she will coach; and
3. Approval of the county superintendent shall be obtained prior to such employment by the district board of education. The 20-day limitation noted in N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.4(i) shall not apply to such coaching situations.

Until December 1994 the above quoted provisions had been consistently interpreted by the Commissioner and the State Board of Education to mean that if any teaching staff member within a district applied for a coaching position, then an employee of the district would have to be appointed and only if no in-district employee had applied could an out-of-district applicant be considered. See, e.g., Chambers v. Board of Education of the Township of Neptune, 1985 S.L.D. 1363; Norcross v. Board of Educ. of Hunterdon Regional High Sch. Dist., 1991 S.L.D. 1154. On December 6, 1994, however, the Appellate Division decided Krupp v. Board of Edu. of Union Cty Regional High School, 278 N.J. Super. 31 (App. Div. 1994) wherein it determined that the Commissioner and State Board had been misinterpreting the 1983 amendments to N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3 (then designated N.J.A.C. 6:29-6.3). The court in Krupp reviewed the regulatory history of the 1983 amendments to the regulation and concluded that the amendments were intended to remove the absolute preference for an in-district employee. The court noted that subsection (b) of the regulation is clear on its face and permits districts to "employ any holder of a New Jersey teaching certificate" provided that the local board has advertised the vacant position.

In the within matter, I have found as a matter of fact, that petitioner did not submit a written application for the position boys head soccer coach at Woodbridge High School until August 23, 1993 after the position had already been filled. It is further clear from the facts that the last conversation Mr. Kuchtyak had with petitioner prior to the board's August 19, 1993 actions, left Mr. Kuchtyak with the reasonable impression that petitioner had not even made up his own mind concerning whether he wanted to coach at Woodbridge High School. Accordingly, even in the absence of the Appellate Division's opinion in Krupp, supra, petitioner would not be entitled to any relief herein. Both the posted notice (J-1 in evidence) and the Star Ledger advertisement required a written application, and petitioner did not submit one for the position for which he seeks compensation. The Krupp opinion has made it clear that even if petitioner had submitted a written application for the position in question, he would have had no absolute right to the position; respondent would have been free to appoint Mr. Magliaro, in any event.

For all of the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is not entitled to the relief which he seeks. It is therefore ORDERED that the petition of appeal is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Upon a careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge that pursuant to the Appellate Division decision, Krupp v. Board of Educ. of Union Cty. Reg. High Sch., 278 N.J. Super. 31 (App. Div. 1994), petitioner has no superior rights to the position of head soccer coach in question. Consequently, petitioner is not entitled to the relief which he seeks.

Petitioning parent challenged Board's denial of her request to provide her son, C.G., with instruction at home on the basis that it was not equivalent to that provided in the public schools. Petitioner filed her petition after the Board commenced municipal court action charging violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25.

ALJ concluded that because action with respect to this matter was instituted in municipal court, the forum statutorily charged with enforcement of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, prior to the raising of claims in the instant petition, litigating the issue of "equivalent education" in this forum would violate the principles of the entire controversy doctrine. That doctrine reflects a strong policy in favor of the adjudication of all components of a legal controversy at one time in one litigation. ~~Petition~~ and counter petition were dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

Decided: March 1, 1995

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

This matter commenced on November 9, 1994, when M.G., mother of C.G., (hereinafter petitioner) filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education seeking a determination that the Board of Education of the Borough of Riverton (hereinafter respondent) had violated N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 and the law established by the courts in New Jersey by denying petitioner's request that she be permitted to provide instruction equivalent to that provided in the public school for C.G. at home. An answer and counter-claim was filed on behalf of respondent on November 21, 1994. On the same date respondent filed an application for emergent relief seeking an order from the Commissioner compelling C.G. to attend the Riverton Public School pending the outcome of the petition of appeal filed by the petitioner herein. Oral argument on respondent's application for emergent relief was conducted on November 30, 1994 and a letter order denying the request for emergent relief was issued on December 1, 1994. That order is attached hereto and made a part hereof as if set forth at length. By letter dated December 12, 1994, the undersigned directed both counsel to submit legal memoranda concerning why this matter should not be dismissed pursuant to the entire controversy doctrine because the identical issue between the same parties is currently pending in municipal court. Respondent's letter memorandum, dated January 17, 1995 was received on the same date. Petitioner's letter memorandum, dated January 17, 1995 was received on January 18, 1995 whereupon the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts relevant to a determination of this matter are not in dispute and I therefore find the following as uncontested facts.

A number of the underlying facts in this matter appear in the letter order denying respondent's request for emergent relief issued December 1, 1994 in this matter, incorporated herein by reference. In summary, petitioner advised respondent in September 1994 of her intention to educate C.G. at home. Respondent interpreted petitioner's communication as a request for permission for the parents to provide home schooling and by letter dated October 12, 1994 advised petitioner "that their request for home schooling had been denied". On October 19, 1994 respondent filed a complaint in municipal court charging C.G.'s parents with a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 which requires parents to cause their children between the ages of six and sixteen years regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school. After respondent had commenced the municipal court action, petitioner filed the within action seeking "reversal of respondent's denial of petitioner's request for home schooling.” The counter-claim filed in the within matter by respondent asks the Commissioner to determine that the education being provided to C.G. at home is not equivalent instruction and seeks an order compelling petitioner to return C.G. to the public school. Because it appears to the undersigned that the issues raised herein are identical to those issues pending before the municipal court, the parties have been asked to show cause why this matter should not be dismissed pursuant to the entire controversy doctrine.

APPLICABLE LAW AND DISCUSSION

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 provides:

Every parent, guardian or other person having custody and control of a child between the ages of six and 16 years shall cause such child regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools for children of similar grades and attainments or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-31 contains the statutory provisions for enforcement of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 and provides:

A parent, guardian or other person having charge and control of a child between the ages of 6 and 16 years, who shall fail to comply with any of the provisions of this article relating to his duties, shall be deemed to be a disorderly person and shall be subject to a fine of not more than $25.00 for a first offense and not more than $100.00 for each subsequent offense, in the discretion of the court.

Respondent commenced an action pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-31 in the Riverton Municipal Court and that case is proceeding to conclusion. There is absolutely no reason for the within matter to proceed simultaneously, and in fact, the entire controversy doctrine requires dismissal of both the petition and counter-petition in this matter.

“The entire controversy doctrine” reflects a strong policy in favor of the adjudication of all components of a legal controversy at one time in one litigation. The doctrine has been established both by case law and court rule. See Cogdell v. Hospital Center at Orange, 116 N.J. 7, 15-16 (1989) and R. 4:30A. The doctrine requires that a person assert all related claims against an adversary, including all affirmative defenses, counter claims and cross-claims or be estopped from later asserting an omitted component. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Gilchrist Brothers, Inc., 85 N.J. 550, 556-57 (1981). The entire controversy doctrine serves the aim of avoiding delay, expense and waste incident to the fragmentation of litigation. It promotes efficiency and fairness to the parties, prevents harassment, and avoids congestion in court calendars. “A disposition that reflects only a partial glimpse of the merits, . . . or that resolves only a segment of the controversy does not fully effectuate the judicial ideal of complete, not piecemeal adjudications. Cogdell, supra, at 23.

Respondent’s January 17, 1995 letter memorandum indicates that it concurs that the matter is appropriately addressed to the municipal court judge and does not object to dismissal of the pleadings in the within matter. Petitioner, however, argues that she is entitled to have the Commissioner address the issue of equivalent education under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25. In support of her argument she cites Rockaway Township Board of Education v. Oostdyk, 1981 S.L.D. 260. In Oostdyk the administrative law judge concluded that the Commissioner had jurisdiction to determine whether the parents were violating the statutory provisions by failing to send their children to the public school. The Oostdyks refused to provide any information concerning what education, if any, they were providing to their children and the ALJ therefore concluded that they were violating the statute. In reviewing the administrative law judge’s determination, the Commissioner held:

Judge Samuels concludes that the Commissioner has concurrent jurisdiction with the Municipal Court in the enforcement of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 et seq. The Commissioner cannot agree. A judgment of violation of the Compulsory Education Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-31, declares a violator to be a disorderly person with fines to be levied according to the discretion of the court. Summons or a warrant shall be issued by the court as determined by circumstances.

In the judgment of the Commissioner, for him to enforce such a quasi-criminal proceeding simply does not conform with the express legislative scheme for the enforcement of school attendance. This does not mitigate the Commissioner's concern that children are herein forced into the role of truancy by the actions of recalcitrant parents. Such parents are not without proper recourse and due process. State v. Massa, 95 N.J. Super. 382 (Law Div. 1967) Such recourse however does not include making truants of their children.

The five named children shall be returned to school. Absent such action by their parents, the Board is directed to promptly institute proceedings in the appropriate judicial forum. Id. at 273.

The State Board of Education affirmed the Commissioner's decision "with the modification that directive (d) of the Administrative Law Judge be reinstated which reads:

"(d) that, in accordance with the authority of the Commissioner to enforce the school laws, respondents Jeanne Gandee, Robert Oostdyk and Janet Laurie Oostdyk are hereby ORDERED and directed to immediately cause their children, between the ages of 6 and 16 years, to be enrolled in and to attend the public schools of the petitioner school district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools for children of similar grades and attainments, or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school. In the event said respondents comply with this order by causing them to attend alternative schools or to receive equivalent education elsewhere than in the public schools of the district, specific and itemized proof of equivalency shall be furnished to the petitioner at the beginning of and periodically during such attendance or enrollment; such proof to be approved by and accepted as satisfactory by the petitioner." Id. at 275.

What is clear from the Oostdyk decision is that the municipal court is statutorily charged with enforcement of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25. All the Commissioner was able to do was order the school board to initiate a case against the Oostdyks in municipal court, something which has already been done in the within matter. The State Board decision, affirming the Commissioner's, ordered the Oostdyks to cause their children to be enrolled in school or an equivalent day school or to have them receive equivalent instruction elsewhere. The State Board also provided that proof of equivalent education was to be supplied to the Board of Education and if the proof of equivalency was unsatisfactory, the inescapable conclusion is that the Board would be required to file an action in municipal court, again something that they have already done in the within matter. Based upon all of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that litigating the issue of “equivalent instruction” in the present matter would be a futile gesture and would violate the principles of the entire controversy doctrine, which requires parties, having joined issue in municipal court, to litigate all related claims against each other in that forum. For these reasons, it is hereby ORDERED that the petition of appeal and the counter petition of appeal are hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE and these proceedings are concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

LETTER ORDER
Denying Request for Emergent Relief

RE: C.G. by his Parents and Legal Guardians v.
Board of Education of Riverton
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 11262-94
Agency Dkt. No. 451-11/94

Dear Counsel:

As I indicated to you on the record yesterday, I have reviewed the Petition of Appeal filed with the Commissioner on November 9, 1994, the Answer and Counter-Claim filed by respondent on November 21, 1994, respondent's motion for temporary emergent relief and supporting papers requesting an order requiring petitioners to enroll C.G. in the Riverton Public School pending the outcome of a hearing on the merits, and petitioners' papers in opposition to the motion. The motion is denied for the following reasons.

Some uncontested facts appear from the papers. At the conclusion of the 1993-94 school year respondent advised petitioners that C.G. would not be promoted and would be retained in 6th grade. In September 1994 C.G.'s parents advised respondent of their intention to educate C.G. at home. By letter dated September 14, 1994 petitioners described their plans and requested copies of the 6th and 7th grade curricula and a list of books and workbooks used for each grade. Although there is nothing in the letter written by Ms. G. which requests Board approval of their plans, respondent apparently interpreted this as a request for permission to educate C.G. at home (see Certification of Superintendent Randazzo so describing the September 14, 1994 note from Ms. G. and letter dated September 27, 1994 from Mr. Randazzo to Mr. & Ms. G. setting forth the costs for a copy of the curriculum and stating, "I will request Board approval for your request to have C. home schooled by you at their next regular meeting which will be held on October 11.") By letter dated October 12, 1994 respondent informed petitioners "that their request for home schooling had been denied." Certification of Mr. Randazzo. On October 19, 1994 respondent filed an action in municipal court charging petitioner's parents with a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25. That statute provides:

Every parent, guardian or other person having custody and control of a child between the ages of six and sixteen years shall cause such child regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools for children of similar grades and attainments or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school.

Parents who are convicted of violating these provisions are subject to penal sanctions pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-31. The procedures for the courts to follow in making a determination are set forth in State v. Vaughn, 44 N.J. 142 (1965) and State v. Massa, 95 N.J. Super. 382 (Co. 1967). The complainant must charge and substantiate that the guardians did not cause the child regularly to attend the public school; the defendants must then introduce evidence in support of either of the alternatives, i.e., that the child attends a day school in which equivalent instruction is given or that the child is receiving equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school. The burden of moving forward with the evidence and the burden of proof then shift back to the complainant to show that the education being provided is not equivalent. "Equivalent" means only that the academic program is comparable; social development, extra-curricular activities, etc., are not part of the consideration.

Respondent has brought its claims against petitioners in a court of competent jurisdiction and the municipal court judge has begun hearing the case. The parties are not entirely in agreement concerning what the judge's rulings were on November 17, 1994, the first day of hearing, but there has been no order produced transferring the issue of "equivalent education" to the Commissioner of Education. The next hearing date in municipal court is December 1, 1994.

Clearly, the municipal court has jurisdiction to enforce the statutory provisions. In State v. Massa, supra, following a trial de novo, the county court reversed the municipal magistrate's finding of guilt and found that Mrs. Massa, a high school graduate, was self-educated and was qualified to teach her daughter the basic subjects from grades one through eight and concluded: "It is the opinion of this court that defendant's daughter has received and is receiving an education equivalent to that available in the Pequannock public schools." Id. at 391.

I see no reason why respondent board, having instituted its action in municipal court prior to raising its claims herein, should not be required to litigate the issue of equivalent education in the municipal court. New Jersey has adopted a strong policy in favor of the adjudication of all components of a legal controversy at one time in one litigation. The "entire controversy doctrine" has been established both by case law and court rule. See Cogdell v. Hospital Center at Orange, 116 N.J. 7, 15-16 (1989) and R. 4:30A. The doctrine requires that a person assert all related claims against an adversary, including all affirmative defenses, counter claims and cross-claims or be estopped from later asserting an omitted component. Aetna Ins. Co. v. Gilchrist Brothers, Inc., 85 N.J. 550, 556-57 (1981). The entire controversy doctrine serves the aim of avoiding delay, expense and waste incident to the fragmentation of litigation. It promotes efficiency and fairness to the parties, prevents harassment, and avoids congestion in court calendars. "A disposition that reflects only a partial glimpse of the merits, . . . or that resolves only a segment of the controversy does not fully effectuate the judicial ideal of complete, not piecemeal adjudications. Cogdell, supra, at 23. Respondent must seek complete relief for vindication of the wrong it charges and petitioners must assert all matters which will defeat the claims against them in one action. The Malaker Corp. v. First Jersey National Bank, 163 N.J. Super. 463, 496 (App. Div. 1978), certif. denied, 79 N.J. 488 (1979).

Furthermore, even if the Commissioner were to entertain respondent's claims that petitioners are violating N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, the question of whether the education C.G. is receiving at home is equivalent to that which would be provided at the public school is not the sort of issue which could possibly be determined on a motion for temporary emergent relief; to prevail on such an application the moving party is required to demonstrate, inter alia, a strong likelihood of success on the merits and where, as here, the facts are contested, that would require a full-hearing on the merits.

In addition, the specific relief requested herein by respondent, i.e., "an order compelling petitioners to enroll C.G. in the Riverton Public School pending the outcome of the Petition of Appeal," could not be granted in any event. The Commissioner (like the municipal court judge) could only require the parents to comply with the statute by enrolling C.G. in the public school or a day school providing equivalent education or the equivalent educational program in some other setting. See Rockaway Twp. Bd. of Ed. v. Oostdyk, 1981 S.L.D. 260, 275. (The facts in that case are different from the present matter since petitioners herein assert that they are providing the equivalent educational program at home; the Oostdyks refused to provide any information concerning what education, if any, they were providing for their children). Even if the Commissioner assumed jurisdiction and found it appropriate to issue an order, respondent would still have to go to the courts for an enforcement order to obtain the assistance of the sheriff and/or local police, something which the municipal court, which has already assumed jurisdiction, can more easily accomplish.

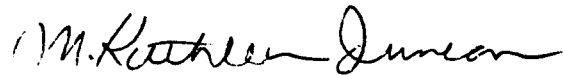

Finally, as I mentioned at oral argument yesterday, I am unaware of any legal requirement that a parent obtain the permission of a local board of education before commencing to provide an equivalent education elsewhere. If there is such a statutory or regulatory requirement, I would appreciate your promptly providing it, since as Director Blackburn stated in her November 14, 1994 letter to you, although the matter is not necessarily amicable to emergent relief, its nature demands that it be addressed expeditiously.

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that respondent's request for temporary emergent relief is denied. I will be in touch with you shortly to ascertain the progress of your municipal court case and then to determine whether any issues remain for determination on the merits herein or whether the entire controversy doctrine requires dismissal of both the petition and counter-claim.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of Education, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Very truly yours,

DECISION

_____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge that because action with respect to this matter was instituted in municipal court, the forum statutorily charged with enforcement of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, prior to the raising of claims in the instant Petition of Appeal, litigating the issue of "equivalent education" herein would violate the principles of the entire controversy doctrine.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the Office of Administrative Law is adopted for the reasons articulated therein and the within Petition of Appeal is dismissed with prejudice.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Petitioning parents disputed NJSIAA's decision declaring their son, B.B., ineligible for baseball participation. Eligibility Appeals Committee (EAC) found that B.B. transferred for athletic advantage and petitioners misrepresented B.B.'s residency and family circumstances to avoid application of the 30-day waiting period set forth in Article V, Section 4K(2). Moreover, NJSIAA found that with respect to the illegal recruitment charges against the coach, since the EAC's determination had no effect on the athletic eligibility of B.B., petitioners had no standing to challenge that determination. Thus, B.B. was ineligible to participate in baseball at any NJSIAA member school in the future, including but not limited to Mainland Regional High School.

Following relaxation of 90-day rule in the interest of fairness to the parties who filed pro se and in light of testimony of witnesses, Commissioner found NJSIAA's decision determining B.B. ineligible to participate in baseball at any NJSIAA member school to be well-grounded on the facts and neither arbitrary, capricious nor unreasonable. Commissioner dismissed petition.

For the Respondent Mainland Regional High School, Louis J. Greco, Esq.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on December 16, 1994, by the filing of a Petition of Appeal wherein petitioners disputed the decision of Respondent New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (hereinafter "NJSIAA") declaring their son, B.B., ineligible for baseball participation. Petitioners were notified by the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, in numerous letters, of procedural deficiencies in their submission, including failure to name NJSIAA as Respondent. Petitioners perfected their appeal on February 3, 1995.

FACTS

Based on a thorough review of the record, the essential facts of the matter are as follows:

- B.B. was a student-athlete at Mainland Regional High School (hereinafter "Mainland") during his freshman year. He subsequently attended Holy Spirit High School. B.B. returned to Mainland in February 1994 with the intention of playing baseball in the spring.
- B.B. did not play baseball as a starting member of the Mainland team as he expected. Petitioning parents subsequently filed charges with the NJSIAA alleging that B.B. had been improperly recruited by Mainland's baseball coach, Gary Hegh. The NJSIAA then requested that the Mainland principal, Dr. Judith Koru, conduct an investigation into this alleged recruitment matter. In her report to the NJSIAA, Dr. Koru concluded that there was no basis to the recruitment allegation.
- Petitioners requested that the matter continue to be investigated by NJSIAA. Accordingly, the NJSIAA informed the parties by letter that the NJSIAA's Eligibility Appeals Committee ("EAC") would conduct a hearing on September 21, 1994 to address two issues: 1) whether B.B. had transferred to Mainland for athletic advantage, and 2) whether he had been recruited by the Mainland coach.
- At the EAC hearing, the parties were given an opportunity to present evidence, testimony, and to cross-examine witnesses, with respect to the two issues.
- The EAC concluded that B.B. had transferred to Mainland for athletic advantage and misrepresented his residency and family circumstances so as to escape the 30-day waiting period, as set forth in Article V, Section 4K(2) of the NJSIAA Bylaws. Consequently, the EAC determined that B.B. would be ineligible to participate in baseball at any NJSIAA member school in the future, including, but not limited to, Mainland Regional High School.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

In their appeal of this NJSIAA determination, petitioners contend that such determination was a "subjective and partial credibility determination which appeared to favor Mainland Regional High School." (Amended Petition, at p. 7) Petitioners further allege that the principal "refused to interview 3 students who she was told had direct evidence of student athlete recruitment."

An answer was duly filed by the NJSIAA on February 17, 1994, together with a brief and certified transcript of the proceedings before the EAC.

Mainland filed an answer generally denying the claims made by petitioners.

The NJSIAA's answer, asserts five affirmative defenses:

1. Petitioners' amended petition was filed out-of-time since the initial determination of the NJSIAA was dated September 22, 1994 and petitioners did not join the NJSIAA as a party until February 1, 1995 which was beyond the 90-day period for filing a petition as set forth at N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c).
2. In response to petitioners' contention that NJSIAA should have been more diligent in investigating allegations against Coach Hegh, NJSIAA argues that petitioners lack standing to bring this charge since individual student-athletes only have standing to pursue matters involving their own eligibility. It asserts the actions taken by the NJSIAA regarding Coach Hegh have no effect on the athletic eligibility of B.B.
3. Petitioners were accorded due process in a hearing before the NJSIAA. NJSIAA argues that petitioners had the opportunity to be represented by counsel, present and cross-examine witnesses.
4. With respect to Petitioners' allegations that insufficient evidence regarding the recruiting charge was presented at the EAC hearing, NJSIAA asserts that as Petitioners had the opportunity at such hearing to include any and all witnesses they determined relevant to the proceeding, and, consequently, they are now estopped from complaining that insufficient evidence was presented.
5. The EAC's decision was not arbitrary or capricious in that such determination, i.e., that B.B. circumvented the rules in order to avoid the 30-day waiting period, was based on the sworn testimony of B.B. and his father.

DECISION

Initially, in considering the NJSIAA's arguments with respect to the contention that the petition was filed out-of-time, the Commissioner is mindful that petitioners are pro se and attempted to file a petition on December 16, 1994, within the 90-day filing period for appeals. The subsequent filings were made to correct procedural deficiencies. Thus, the Commissioner determines that relaxation of the 90-day rule is required in the interest of fairness to the parties.

With respect to the illegal recruitment charges, the Commissioner concurs with the NJSIAA that since the EAC's determination on this issue has no effect on the athletic eligibility of B.B., B.B. and his parents have no standing to challenge this determination.

It is important to note that in cases involving the NJSIAA, the Commissioner's scope of review is limited in that he cannot overturn the Association's decision where it is neither arbitrary, capricious nor unreasonable. B.C. v. Cumberland Reg. Sch. Dist., 220 N.J. Super. 214, 231-232

In the present case, the Commissioner finds and determines that Petitioner B.B. received a full hearing before the EAC. The record substantiates that all parties were given the opportunity to be represented by counsel, present and cross-examine witnesses, and offer evidence on their behalf. It is noted that B.B. testified, as did his father. The EAC determined that B.B. transferred for athletic advantage based on petitioners' sworn testimony that B.B. did so in order to play on a more competitive baseball team, and that petitioners misrepresented B.B.'s residency and family circumstances to avoid application of the 30-day waiting period set forth in Article V, Section 4K(2) of the NJSIAA Bylaws.

In that the NJSIAA's decision that B.B. would be ineligible to participate in baseball on any NJSIAA member school was well-grounded on the aforementioned facts, which included direct testimony of petitioners' intent to circumvent the NJSIAA rules, the Commissioner finds such decision is neither arbitrary, capricious nor unreasonable. Petition is hereby dismissed with prejudice.

For Petitioners, John C. Eastlack, Esq. (Poplar & Eastlack)

For Respondent, Raymond J. Zane, Esq. (Zane & Lozuke)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education by way of Petition of Appeal filed on February 21, 1995 and Motion for Emergent Relief filed on March 9, 1995, seeking B.L.'s immediate reinstatement as a full-time pupil at Kingsway Regional High School pending a final determination as to petitioners' claim that B.L. was improperly excluded from school. B.L. was initially excluded for an indeterminate period of time on January 13, 1995, then placed on suspension, after a February 1, 1995 hearing, for engaging in lewd, obscene and assaultive conduct, involving girls in the seventh and eighth grades. (Order, at p. 2) The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on March 10, 1995 for hearing as a contested matter. A hearing was conducted on March 16, 1995, and an Order by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) denying the requested relief was issued on March 17, 1995.

The record of this matter, together with the Order of the ALJ denying emergent relief to petitioner, have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this matter, and in consideration of the appropriate standard for granting emergent relief as set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), the Commissioner determines to affirm the ALJ's Order denying the relief requested by petitioner.

Temporary relief may be granted where necessary to prevent irreparable harm, where the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is unsettled, where material facts are not in dispute, and where the relative hardship to petitioner favors granting such relief. Crowe, supra The Commissioner rejects petitioner's argument that irreparable harm will result if he is not permitted to return to the classroom and to his varsity tennis activities. The Board is providing petitioner with home instruction from the same teachers he had in the classroom, and petitioner appears to be maintaining his grade point average. (Order, at pp. 6, 7) Petitioner has failed to demonstrate that such instructional accommodation, together with deprivation of his ability to play tennis, will cause him to suffer irreparable harm. Moreover, the Commissioner does not find that a likelihood of success on the merits has been demonstrated. Here, the equities lie on the side of the Board, as it has a legitimate interest in maintaining a safe learning environment for its students.

Accordingly, as petitioner failed to meet the criteria for grant of emergent relief, the Commissioner adopts the Order of the ALJ denying such relief, and this matter shall duly proceed to a hearing on the merits of petitioner's plenary claims at the Office of Administrative Law.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF WALDWICK, BERGEN COUNTY,

Respondent.

Robert Taylor, petitioner, pro se

Rodney T. Hara, Esq., attorney for respondent (Fogarty & Hara, attorneys)

Decided: March 7, 1995

BEFORE MARIE P. SIMONELLI, A.L.J.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Robert Taylor (Mr. Taylor), appeals the decision of respondent Board of Education of the Borough of Waldwick, Bergen County (the Board) to reappoint Terrence Byrne (Mr. Byrne) as head varsity football coach for the 1993-94 school year, contrary to N.J.A.C.

6:29-3.3. Mr. Taylor requests that Mr. Byrne's reappointment be set aside and that he be awarded the position of head varsity football coach together with back pay, other benefits and emoluments and interest.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On October 13, 1993, Mr. Taylor filed a Verified Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education (hereinafter referred to as Taylor 1993-94). On about October 28, 1993, the Board filed an Answer. The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on November 8, 1993 for a hearing as a contested case.

The Honorable Marie P. Simonelli held a telephone Prehearing Conference on January 25, 1994, at which time she stayed Taylor 1993-94 pending a final decision by the Honorable Stephen G. Weiss in the matter entitled, Robert Taylor v. Board of Education of the Borough of Waldwick, Bergen County, bearing OAL Docket No. EDU 1321-93 (hereinafter referred to as Taylor 1992-93). Taylor 1992-93 involved the same issues as those in Taylor 1993-94.

Judge Simonelli scheduled a second telephone Prehearing Conference for June 6, 1994. Prior thereto, the attorney for the Board advised Judge Simonelli that Judge Weiss had rendered a final decision in Taylor 1992-93. Thereafter, on July 25, 1994, the Board filed a motion to dismiss Taylor 1993-94 under the doctrine of res judicata.

On April 6, 1994, the Commissioner of Education adopted the findings and determination in Judge Weiss's Initial Decision and dismissed Taylor 1992-93. Mr. Taylor filed a Notice of Appeal with the State Board of Education on April 13, 1994.

By Order entered on September 8, 1994, Judge Simonelli denied the Board's motion to dismiss Taylor 1993-94 without prejudice and stayed it pending the final determination of the appeal in Taylor 1992-93. On October 5, 1994, the State Board of Education affirmed the Commissioner of Education's dismissal of Taylor 1992-93. The time period for Mr. Taylor to file an Appeal with the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division, has expired.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Having reviewed all moving and opposing papers, I FIND the following FACTS:

On August 17, 1992, Mr. Taylor filed a Verified Petition of Appeal in Taylor 1992-93. Mr. Taylor challenged the Board's decision to reappoint Mr. Byrne as the head varsity football coach for the 1992-93 school year. Mr. Taylor claimed that Mr. Byrne's reappointment violated N.J.A.C. 6:26-3.3, N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(c)(3) and N.J.S.A. 34:13A-23 because Mr. Byrne was out-of-district candidate and did not possess a New Jersey Teaching Certificate (See: Affidavit of Rodney T. Hara, Esq., dated January 20, 1995, Exhibit A).

On October 13, 1993, Mr. Taylor filed a Verified Petition of Appeal in Taylor 1993-94. Mr. Taylor again challenged the Board's decision to reappoint Mr. Byrne as the head varsity football coach for the 1993-94 school year (Hara Affidavit, Exhibit F). The allegations in Taylor 1993-94 are the same as those in Taylor 1992-93, except that the allegations in Taylor 1993-94 relate to the 1993-94 school year.

On February 18, 1994, Judge Weiss rendered an Initial Decision in Taylor 1992-93. Judge Weiss concluded that the Board properly had decided to reappoint Mr. Byrne. Judge Weiss dismissed Taylor 1992-93 (Hara Affidavit, Exhibit B).

On April 6, 1994, the Commissioner of Education adopted Judge's Weiss's findings and determination in Taylor 1992-93. The Commissioner of Education dismissed Taylor 1992-93 (Hara Affidavit, Exhibit C). Mr. Taylor filed a Notice of Appeal with the State Board of Education on April 13, 1994 (Hara Affidavit, Exhibit D).

On October 5, 1994, the State Board of Education affirmed the Commissioner of Education's dismissal of Taylor 1992-93. The State Board of Education could not conclude that Mr. Taylor had satisfied his burden of establishing that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably. The State Board of Education also could not conclude that Mr. Taylor had established that he had the prior coaching experience required by the job description, nor could it find that the Board acted in bad faith in adopting the job description (Hara Affidavit, Exhibit E).

Mr. Taylor did not file a Notice of Appeal with the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division in Taylor 1992-93. The Board, therefore, moves for dismissal of Taylor 1993-94 under the doctrine of res judicata because both cases involve the same set of facts, the same parties and the same issues. The only difference between the two cases is that one is for the 1992-93 school year and the other is for the 1993-94 school year.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

The doctrine of res judicata is applicable in administrative actions. City of Hackensack v. Winner, 82 N.J. 1, 31-33 (1980); Russell v. Tenafly Bd. of Adjustment, 31 N.J. 58, 65-66 (1959). The purpose of the doctrine is to protect litigants from repetitious litigation and to protect the public against the serious burdens of such litigation. Lubliner v. Bd. of Alcoholic Bev. Con., Paterson, 33 N.J. 429, 435. Under this doctrine, a second action must be dismissed if it involves the same cause of action, issues, parties or their privies. Eatough v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 191 N.J. Super. 166, 173.

Taylor 1992-93 and Taylor 1993-94 involve the same cause of action, issues and parties. The only difference is that the two appeals relate to two different school years. This difference is insignificant for the purposes of res judicata. What is significant is that Mr. Taylor seeks the same relief against the same party in both appeals. Since a final determination has already been made by the State Department of Education in Taylor 1992-93, that decision is binding on Taylor 1993-94.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the present appeal is barred by the doctrine of res judicata.

ORDER

Therefore, I ORDER that the Board's motion for dismissal of this matter be and hereby is GRANTED and the appeal be and hereby is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 EAST STATE STREET, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the Judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge that as the within matter involves the same set of facts, same parties and the same topics as Taylor 1992-93, supra., previously decided by the Commissioner on April 6, 1994 and affirmed by the State Board on October 5, 1994, relitigation of these matters in the instant petition is barred by the doctrine of res judicata.

Accordingly, the instant Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

Record Closed: January 30, 1995

Decided: March 8, 1995

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

The within matter was commenced on November 22, 1993 by the Board of Education of the Borough of Metuchen (hereinafter petitioner) with the filing of tenure charges in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 against Martin Felice (hereinafter respondent). Petitioner certified charges alleging unbecoming and unprofessional conduct and insubordinate conduct in that respondent fraternized and socialized with students in violation of board directives. On December 15, 1993, respondent filed an answer in which he denied any wrongdoing. On December 21, 1993 the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -13. A prehearing conference was conducted on June 24, 1994 at which time hearing dates were scheduled for October 11, 12 and 14, 1994. Prior to the scheduled hearing dates, the parties advised that because petitioner was unable to produce a number of the witnesses needed to prove the charges, the parties would be attempting to resolve this matter without the necessity for a hearing. Following several telephone status conferences, on January 30, 1995, the parties forwarded a signed Settlement Agreement and Stipulation of Settlement and Dismissal which is attached hereto and made a part hereof as if set forth herein at length.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I CONCLUDE that in view of all of the circumstances, it would not be improper for the Commissioner of Education to approve this settlement as an appropriate voluntary resolution of this matter entirely consistent with the law and the philosophy expressed in Cardonick v. Board of Education of the Borough of Brooklawn, EDU 7093-81, 7094-81 and 100-82, decided April 6, 1983 by the State Board of Education. The parties have set forth in their written settlement agreement all of the circumstances which have caused petitioner to conclude that a hearing on the merits in this matter would probably not serve the public interest. Petitioner has determined that respondent is unfit, but recognizes nonetheless that their charges must be established on the record by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence. Because one former student is currently incarcerated as the result of a murder conviction and because others are beyond the boundaries of the Commissioner's subpoena power and/or are unwilling to testify, the possibility exists that a decision following a hearing on the merits might not result in the removal which petitioner seeks. Petitioner's resumption of salary payments to respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 occurred long ago, and the attached Stipulation of Settlement provides for continuation of such payments only until June 1995, undoubtedly sooner than if this matter proceeded to a full hearing and determination on the merits. The Settlement Agreement, paragraph 9, indicates that respondent is aware of the possibility that the New Jersey State Board of Examiners might take action against his teaching certificates, and N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.5 ensures that petitioner will notify the State Board of Examiners of the circumstances concluding the within matter. Assuming respondent is eligible for the ordinary disability retirement benefits for which he has agreed to apply, he will not be able to teach in the public schools in any event. Under all of the circumstances, the proposed Settlement Agreement and Stipulation of Dismissal appears to be an appropriate resolution of the matter.

I CONCLUDE that this Agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the Settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Petitioning Board sought declaratory ruling from Commissioner that respondent, newly seated Board member, should be disqualified from membership on the Board by virtue of a conflict of interest, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, resulting from respondent's son's claim against the Board for injuries sustained on the Board's property while engaged in a game of basketball.

Following discussion of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(j), ALJ found that respondent was not in conflict of interest and, therefore, not in violation of 12-2 as his son was emancipated and, moreover, the issue of his son's insurance claim would not likely arise before the Board. ALJ directed respondent to retain his seat. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Record Closed: January 3, 1995

Decided: February 24, 1995

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Board of Education of the Township of Brick (Board) petitions the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) for a declaratory ruling that respondent, Edward Mercer, is disqualified from membership on the Board by virtue of a conflict of interest, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. Respondent denies that any conflict exists and prays that the Commissioner determine him to be qualified to serve the remainder of his term with the Board.

This matter was filed with the Commissioner on April 29, 1994, by way of Petition of Appeal, with the request that the Board's organization meeting scheduled for May 5, 1994, be stayed until the Commissioner made a determination as to Respondent Edward Mercer's capacity to take a seat on the Board. By way of letter from the Deputy Commissioner, dated May 5, 1994, the Board's request for a stay of its annual organization meeting was denied.

On May 16, 1994, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A prehearing conference was held on September 1, 1994, at which, among other things, the issues to be determined were agreed upon by the parties and the hearing date established.

The hearing was held on November 28, 1994, at the Lakewood, New Jersey, Municipal Court. The parties requested, and were granted leave, to submit posthearing briefs. The last submission was received on January 3, 1994, which constitutes the close of the hearing record. Extensions were granted in order to execute this initial decision.

ISSUES

Pursuant to the Prehearing Order, the following issues are to be determined by this administrative tribunal:

1. Whether respondent is in conflict of interest, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-1 to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2.2?

2. If a conflict is found, can it be cured?
3. Whether provisions of the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-34, obviate any conflict resulting from respondent's son's claim against the Board?

BACKGROUND FACTS

On April 19, 1994, Respondent, Edward Mercer, was duly elected to a seat on the Board at the Board's annual school election. Prior thereto, on or about December 1, 1992, respondent's son, Christopher Mercer, was injured on the Board's property while engaged in a game of basketball as a student at the Brick Township High School. On December 4, 1992, a school accident claim form was prepared by the school nurse.

Christopher Mercer graduated from Brick Township High School in June 1993, at the age of 18 years. Christopher Mercer has maintained his residence with respondent following his graduation from high school.

Subsequent to his injuries, Christopher Mercer obtained, on his own initiative, medical treatment from a dentist, a physician and a chiropractor. Edward Mercer did not agree to make any payments to the health care providers who attended to his son, nor has he done so. During this period, Respondent Edward Mercer was in the business of processing medical claims and, therefore, offered to help Christopher process his claims. Edward Mercer wrote two letters to Robert McCloskey Insurance who was the Board's insurance carrier at the time. Edward Mercer's last letter to Robert McCloskey Insurance was written in September 1993. Robert McCloskey Insurance is no longer involved with Christopher's claim. The claim is now being handled by Utica Mutual Insurance, the Board's general liability carrier.

On November 23, 1993, Christopher Mercer's attorney, Martin J. Anton, Esquire, filed a Notice of Motion requesting an Order permitting the filing of a late notice of claim. On December 17, 1993, The Honorable Francis P. Piscal, J.S.C., granted Christopher's motion. On November 2, 1994, Christopher Mercer filed his claim against the Board in the Law Division of Superior Court.

Following his graduation from high school, Christopher Mercer was enrolled in the DeVry Institute, Woodbridge, New Jersey, where he remained until November or December 1993. Respondent did not provide Christopher with financial assistance while he was enrolled at DeVry Institute. Christopher held a variety of part-time employment; i.e., with A to Z Video, Cost Cutters and Stickel Packaging Supply, Lakewood, New Jersey. After he left DeVry Institute, he has been employed full-time with Stickel Packaging Supply where he earns between $300 to $350 per week.

Respondent Edward Mercer claimed Christopher as a dependent on his 1992 and 1993 tax returns. Respondent does not intend to claim his son on his 1994 tax return. Christopher has maintained his own automobile insurance since February 1994. Prior thereto, respondent's wife carried Christopher on her automobile insurance. Respondent does not maintain health insurance for Christopher nor has he paid any of Christopher's expenses since Christopher graduated from high school in June 1993.

Respondent Edward Mercer and his wife, Susan Mercer, mother of Christopher Mercer, have each released the Board from any and all claims that they may have against the Board and its employees.

Concerning actions taken by the Board, Edward Mercer abstained to vote on two matters involving Robert McCloskey Insurance. He did, however, vote in the affirmative with respect to the reappointment of Utica Mutual as the Board's liability insurance carrier.

THE STATUTE

The statute at issue, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, reads as follows:

No member of any board of education shall be interested directly or indirectly in any contract with or claim against the board, nor, in the case of local and regional school districts, shall he hold office as mayor or as a member of the governing body of a municipality, nor, in the case of county vocational school districts, shall he hold office as a member of the governing body of a county.

A SUMMARY OF THE LEGAL ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

THE BOARD'S POSITION

POINT I

The Board argues, among other things, that since respondent is interested directly and/or indirectly in a claim against the Board, a conflict exists and respondent is therefore not qualified for board membership and should be removed. The Board concedes that a large body of decisional and case law exists which establish that a board member's claim against a board of education which he/she serves as a member, must be examined on a case by case basis and depends on the circumstances of a particular case. Aldom v. Borough of Roseland, 42 N.J. Super. 495, 503 (App. Div. 1956); Bd. of Ed. of the Twp. of Holmdel, Monmouth Cty. v. Stephen O'Connell, 1990 S.L.D. 674, 680.

In Aldom, the court held that:

The interest which disqualifies is not necessarily a direct pecuniary one, nor is the amount of such an interest of paramount importance. It may be indirect; it is such an interest as is covered by the moral rule: no man can serve two masters whose interests conflict. Basically, the question is whether the officer, by reason of a personal interest in the matter, is placed in a situation of temptation to serve his own purposes to the prejudice of those for whom the law authorizes him to act as a public official. And in the determination of the issue, too much refinement should not be engaged in by the courts in an effort to uphold the municipal action on the ground that his interest is so little or so indirect. Id. at 502.

The Aldom Court continued to state:

Such an approach gives recognition to the moral philosophy that next in importance to the duty of the officer to render a righteous judgment is that of doing it in such a manner as will beget no suspicion of the pureness and integrity of his action. Id. at 502 (citations omitted).

The Board asserts that the Holmdel matter specifically relates to a notice of tort claim against a board of education. In Holmdel the board member and his wife were plaintiffs per quod on behalf of their son who was alleged to have suffered emotional and mental distress as a result of participating in a game called “Twister” while nude in the football camp he attended. Id. at 677. The Commissioner, in Holmdel, ordered the board member to remove himself from the board of education as the tort claim notice and the resulting tort action against the board would, if successful, “result in a material gain to him personally.” Id. at 681.

The Board states that the issue before this administrative tribunal is whether the Tort Claim Notice and the recently filed Complaint by Christopher Mercer would disqualify Edward Mercer from membership on the Board, even though Edward Mercer has not filed a per quod claim but, rather, has assisted and will assist and be available to assist his son in the prosecuting of his son’s claim. It contends that while respondent will not directly receive a pecuniary gain, he will indirectly be benefiting since his son is a dependent living in respondent’s home. The Board further contends that respondent will have a psychological and/or personal interest in his son’s claim against the Board and, hence, an indirect interest against the Board in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2.

The Board relies, in part, upon the holding in the Aldom case where the Appellate bench held that a conflict of interest existed where a Borough Councilman voted in favor of an ordinance which favored the Councilman’s employer of twenty-three years. The Court voided the ordinance because of the employer-employee relationship and said, in part, that: “It is only natural to expect that over such a period of time a loyalty to his employer had developed and that to some extent it would pervade his general thinking.” Id. at 507. The Board contends that in the instant matter there exists a relationship with stronger ties than those between employer-employee; i.e., a father-son relationship where the son resides in the father's household and where the son relies upon his father for parental guidance and his particular expertise in insurance matters. While loyalty between a parent and child cannot and should not be measured, such is a higher form of loyalty than found between employer-employee. Consequently, respondent cannot, under any circumstances, be impartial if and when his son's matter comes before the Board.

The Board asserts that respondent has access to Board information regarding other cases before the Board: e.g., (a) the types of injuries and the amounts of settlements and discussions relevant thereto; (b) the indications of the value for settlement purposes of a case of the type and nature of Christopher Mercer's claim; (c) with this type of information, respondent would be able to relate such to his son to the disadvantage of the Board concerning settlement discussions or trying the case against the Board; and, (d) respondent has access to numerous workers' compensation cases and negligence cases against the Board which creates a material and substantial conflict.

Further, other members of the Board may be affected by a suit by Christopher Mercer. In particular, the public's perception of a conflict which, standing alone, should also serve as a bar to respondent from continuing to sit on the Board. Even if respondent abstained from any discussion regarding his son's case, respondent would have to substantiate any monetary settlement awarded to his son for a dental injury. The question arises as to how would the public perceive such a settlement? Would the public perceive that respondent had anything to do with his son's claim? The Board asserts that these consequences would seriously impair the ongoing relationship between Board members themselves and with the public

The Board contends that respondent's abstention from voting regarding his son's case is not sufficient. The statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 is a disqualifying statute. It clearly relates to factors which would disqualify an individual from membership of a board of education and does not provide for a member with a conflict of interest to abstain on issues. The express language of the statute clearly state that a board member with a conflict of interest cannot hold office as a board member.

The Board argues that the releases respondent and his wife provided the Board do not settle the claim against it. The underlying claim by Christopher Mercer is not settled and still exists. The Board asserts that the releases do not release any of the other defendants to his son's claim; i.e., the teachers and coach. Therefore, it argues, a conflict still exists.

The Board argues that the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 to -34, is not applicable to the instant matter. The Board submits that its Complaint against respondent was filed with the Commissioner, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 and was not filed before the Ethics Commission under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.

The Board contends that respondent's reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (j) is misplaced. Respondent argues that N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (j) does not operate as a bar to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, thereby overriding the statutory dictates of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 and creating authority to allow respondent to continue in a conflict situation. The Board argues, however, that the School Ethics Act should be reasonably construed in light of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (c) and the other subsections which would allow a board member, as a parent, to go to school and discuss with teacher, administrators and even attend board of education meetings, the educational setting and environment for his own child. The School Ethics Act certainly does not relate to personal claims otherwise the intent, purpose and express language of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 would be rendered invalid. As a rule of statutory construction and interpretation, if the Legislature's intent was to abrogate the strong conflict statute under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, it would clearly have done so.

The Board contends that respondent's reference to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 fails to take heed of the other subsections of the statute. It argues that subsections a. through i. of the statute are applicable so as to bar respondent serving as a member of the Board. It specifically notes subsections b., c., e. and f., which express a prohibition against respondent from using his position as a board member to use information generally not available to members of the public, which he would receive during the course of his tenure as a board member, for the financial gain of his son. Respondent's reliance upon N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (j) is, therefore, erroneous. That clause does not serve as a cure-all to remedy respondent's conflict of interest.

For all of the foregoing reasons, the Board contends that respondent is in conflict of interest and requests that he be removed as a member of the Board.

RESPONDENT'S POSITION

Respondent asserts that the seminal decision interpreting N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 is the matter in In Re Bayless, 1974 S.L.D. 595, rev'd State Board of Education, 1974 S.L.D. 603. In Bayless the issue was whether the fact that a board member's spouse was employed by the same school district would be a disqualifying interest under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. The State Board established a standard of review as follows:

In the circumstances of the instant matter we must determine whether the conflicting interest is substantially and materially sufficient to (1) disqualify Mrs. Bayless from holding her board seat; or (2) whether she may continue to serve as a duly elected member of the board, abstaining from participation in and voting on particular matters directly or indirectly affecting her husband. 1974 S.L.D. at 605. (Emphasis added).

The standard established in Bayless was adopted by the State Board from the general New Jersey Conflicts of Interest Law, which separates those conflicts which are unavoidable in a free society from those conflicts which are substantial and material or which bring government into disrepute. Jackson Twp. Board of Ed. v. Acevedo, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 163 (1992).

Respondent asserts that the instant matter is factually distinguishable from those cases decided since Bayless where conflicts were found to be substantial and material. For example, in Acevedo, supra., a board member's son was injured at school. The board member's wife brought suit on behalf of their son in which she and the board member joined in their own right, per quod. The board member and his wife stated in their complaint that they were responsible for the debts, care and maintenance of, and were entitled to the services and society of their son. 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) at 164. The Administrative Law Judge observed:

When, as in the case at bar, the board member is a party to a suit against the board seeking monetary damages, whether compensatory or punitive, the finding of a conflict of interest sufficient to disqualify the board member seems inevitable because the material and substantial benefit to the claimant-board member is clear. That the board member's claim is per quod does not erase the personal financial benefit he will reap if the underlying suit is successful. 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) at 166.

In the matter of the Hawthorne Borough Board of Education v. Taliaferro, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 197 (1993), a board of education member's wife instituted formal complaints against the board for her non-reappointment to certain coaching positions. The board member's wife sought reinstatement, as well as monetary damages for economic loss, humiliation and mental pain and suffering. The Administrative Law Judge in Taliaferro focused on the economic benefit to the board member which could result from his wife's claims. The Administrative Law Judge observed the decisions in Holmdel, supra.; Acevedo, supra.; and Woodstown-Pilesgrove Regional Board of Education v. Ketas, 1979 S.L.D. 353, rev'd State Board of Education, 1980 S.L.D. 1563, which involved suits by board members against their boards of education for injuries to a family member. The decisions in those and other cases focused upon the actual or potential financial benefit which would flow to the board member were he or she successful in a suit for damages against the board. The Administrative Law Judge observed that:

In such circumstances the specter of a conflict of interest which could interfere with the duty of loyalty owed by the member of the board was readily apparent. 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) at 201.

Respondent contends that it is uncontroverted that he will not benefit financially from his son's suit against the Board. Unlike Acevedo where a minor child was involved, in the instant matter respondent's son is and has been emancipated prior to respondent taking his seat on the Board. Under New Jersey case law, a minor is rebuttably presumed to be emancipated at age 18 years. If the child is continuing his education or has a physical or mental hardship or similar factors exists, our courts have found that this may delay emancipation beyond the age of majority. See Newburgh v. Arrigo, 88 N.J. 529 (1982). No such factors exists in the instant matter. Christopher Mercer is not continuing his education, is fully employed and making his own way through life. Christopher Mercer was 18 years of age at the time of the incident he complains of, which was December 1, 1992. Christopher Mercer has an attorney and is pursuing his own rights. Neither respondent nor his wife seek any compensation or damages from the Board and have released the Board from any possible claims.

Respondent contends that he has had no involvement in his son's matter for some time prior to his being sworn in a member of the Board. Respondent's son, while still residing in respondent's home, is financially independent earning approximately $20,000 per year. He pays his own bills, maintains his own automobile insurance, pays for his own food and clothing, among other things. Respondent has not agreed to pay any of his son's medical bills and, in fact, has not paid anything toward such bills because they are Christopher Mercer's responsibility.

Respondent argues that there is no financial impact upon the Board which will result from Christopher Mercer's claim. The claim is now being handled through an insurance contract with Utica Mutual Insurance Company. He asserts that there is little likelihood that the matter of Christopher Mercer's claims will ever be before the Board for discussion or action. While the Board does become involved with worker compensation claims it does not involve itself with Tort Claim matters handled by its general liability carrier. The real party in interest is Utica Mutual which may have to pay Christopher Mercer's claim, not the Board. Utica Mutual will determine whether to settle the claim and what to settle for, not the Board.

Respondent argues that his interest in his son's claims, if any, are tangential and immaterial. He contends that as a member of the Board, there is little likelihood he would have any ability to influence the matter. The doctrine of abstention is appropriate in this case and was invoked by respondent on two occasions involving Robert McCloskey Insurance. The only time respondent may have voted on anything bearing some possible relation to his son's claim was his vote to continue insurance coverage with Utica Mutual. The Board's School Business Administrator did not advise respondent of any possible conflict, as respondent had instructed the Business Administrator to do. Respondent asserts that the public would have no perception of a conflict. Respondent's "yes" vote for Utica Mutual followed the Business Administrator's recommendation, therefore, showing a lack of hostility toward the carrier by respondent.

Respondent raises a factor which has not been addressed in prior conflict of interest cases; namely, the relatively new School Ethics Act. N.J.S.A. 18A: 12-24 (j) states:

Nothing shall prohibit any school official or members of his immediate family from representing himself or themselves in negotiations or proceedings concerning his or their own interests. (Emphasis added)

A “school official” as defined as a board member or administrator at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23.

The School Ethics Act was intended to provide board members and administrators with the benefit of “specific standards to guide their conduct.” N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22. N.J.S.A. 18A: 12-24 sets forth a list of prohibited conduct which would heretofore have been largely covered by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. But in this very specific statute an exception is made as set forth above which by its plain language would permit members of a board member’s immediate family to engage in proceedings concerning their own interests. While this appears to be a departure from prior law, the Legislature is presumed to have been aware of its prior enactment’s and the reported decisions thereunder when the Act was passed. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (j) should, therefore, be viewed as a modification of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2.

For the reasons stated above, respondent requests the Petition seeking a declaratory ruling that Edward Mercer is ineligible to continue service as a member of the Brick Township Board of Education be denied.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

It is first necessary to address respondent’s argument that the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 to -34, somehow makes an exception to the conflicts of interest law as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. Although subsection (j) of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 provides that any school official, or members of his/her immediately family, may represent themselves in negotiations or proceedings concerning his/her own interests, this subsection of the statute does not amend nor supersede N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. Rather, the School Ethics Act supplements Chapter 12 of Title

18A by “providing standards of ethical conduct for local school officials.” (Historical and Statutory Notes, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21). The conflict of interest statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, is clear and unambiguous where it states, “No member of any board of education shall be interested directly or indirectly in any...claim against the board,...” As the Commissioner observed in Alfonsetti, et al. v. Lakewood Twp. Board of Ed., 1975 S.L.D. 297 at 299:

In every case involving the interpretation of a statute, it is the function of the court to ascertain the intention of the Legislature from the plain meaning of the statute and to apply it to the facts as it finds them, Carley v. Liberty Hat Mfg. Co., 81 N.J.L. 505, 507 (E. & A. 1910). A clear and unambiguous statute is not open to construction or interpretation, and to do so in a case where not required is to do violence to the doctrine of the separation of powers. Such a statute is clear in its meaning and no one need look beyond the literal dictates of the words and phrases used for the true intent and purpose in its creation. Watt v. Mayor and Council of Borough of Franklin, 21 N.J. 274 (1956) (at p. 277)

Where the wording of a statute is clear and explicit we are not permitted to indulge in any interpretation other than that called for by the express words set forth...Duke Power Co. v. Patten, 20 N.J. 42 (1955) (at p. 49).

The wording of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 is clear, explicit and unambiguous with respect to the prohibition of a board of education member having a claim against the board of education with which he/she serves. The Commissioner has, in fact, upheld the statute to remove board members who have been found to be in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. Taliaferro, supra.; Holmdel, supra.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that respondent’s reliance upon N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (j) as an exception to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 is misplaced and is hereby DISMISSED as a defense in this matter.

The primary issue to be resolved in this matter is whether respondent is in conflict of interest and, thus, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. The Aldom Court observed that, “The decision as to whether a particular interest is sufficient to disqualify is necessarily a factual one and depends on the circumstances of the particular case.” 42 N.J.Super., at 503 (Citations omitted). The decision is, therefore, sensitive to the unique facts of the matter.

Here, the facts demonstrate that respondent's son was involved in an accident while a student in the Board's high school. Respondent's son, Christopher Mercer, had attained his majority of 18 years of age when the accident occurred on or about December 1, 1992. He was, moreover, living at home and, therefore, was not emancipated until his graduation from high school in June 1993.

Christopher Mercer's emancipation is demonstrated by the facts that his parents did not support him while he was enrolled in DeVry Institute. Nor have they supported him financially since his graduation from high school. Christopher is presently gainfully employed and pays for his food, clothing, automobile insurance, and the necessities for living.

Christopher Mercer processed his claims against the Board's insurance carrier on his own accord and initiative. Respondent, who possesses expertise with insurance claims, assisted his son and, on two occasions, corresponded with the insurance carrier. Respondent's aid to his son occurred prior to respondent's election to a seat on the Board.

In Holmdel, the Commissioner said :

On its face, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 mandates that no board member may serve who has filed a claim against the board or education on which he sits. Case law has further established that any such claim must be examined on a case-by-case basis in arriving at a determination as to whether the circumstances in the matter demonstrate that the board member would benefit in a substantial and material way from said claim. If so, the statute should be applied and the board member disqualified from serving on said board. (Citations omitted) 1990 S.L.D. at 680.

In the instant matter, respondent Board member has no claim against the Board. In fact, he and his wife have executed releases to the Board, releasing it from any and all claims that might arise. Respondent's son, however, has a claim for an accident that occurred on school property while the son was a student under the Board's direction and control.

There has been no showing that respondent will benefit, either directly or indirectly, from his son's claims against the Board. It has been shown, moreover, that the likelihood of the Board getting involved in an insurance settlement, of the kind brought by respondent's son, is either remote or nil. Consequently, respondent will not even be placed in the situation where he will necessarily abstain from a vote because the issue of his son's insurance claim will not likely arise before the Board.

Having carefully considered the entire record in this matter, I CONCLUDE that respondent Edward Mercer is not in conflict of interest and, therefore, not in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that Edward Mercer is to retain his seat on the Brick Township Board of Education until the expiration of the term to which he was elected.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the herein Petition of Appeal be and is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Decided: March 9, 1995

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners allege that the action of the Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City (Board) to employ petitioner Barbara Lapin to fill a teaching vacancy for a long-term is in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1, among other education laws and regulations. Petitioners demands that the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner):

1. Designate her as a full-time art teacher at the high school and place her on the appropriate salary schedule of the collective bargaining agreement between the Board and the Atlantic City Education Association (ACEA);
2. Award petitioner seniority benefits received by other full-time teaching staff members, and all other emoluments to which she is entitled;
3. Award petitioner back pay in the amount of the difference between the salary paid to date and the salary designated on the appropriate salary schedule and,
4. Such other relief deemed equitable, appropriate and just.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

On July 1, 1994, counsel for petitioner advised the OAL Deputy Clerk that Barbara Lapin no longer desired to be included as a named petitioner in the instant matter. As a consequence, counsel submitted an amended verified Petition of Appeal deleting Barbara Lapin as a petitioner. The amended petition seeks the same remedies as set forth above in the original petition with one addition, i.e., petitioner seeks an order from the Commissioner compelling the Board to strictly adhere to the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement between the parties.

MOTION

As a consequence of petitioner Barbara Lapin withdrawing from the matter, the Board filed a Notice of Motion to Dismiss the entire Petition of Appeal. The ACEA opposes the Board's Motion.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

FACTS

The respondent is a local school district of the State of New Jersey, County of Atlantic and City of Atlantic City as defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:8-1 et. seq. Pursuant to said legislation the respondent employs various professional staff members to include school teachers and support staff. On November 29, 1993, the petitioner filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education titled Barbara Lapin and Atlantic City Education Association, Petitioners v. Atlantic City Board of Education, Respondent. Petitioner Atlantic City Education Association is a collective bargaining unit for collective negotiations concerning the terms and conditions for professionally certified personnel employed full time by the Board, including only classroom teachers, nurses, special service personnel, but excluding all other employees of the Board. Petitioner, Atlantic City Education Association (hereinafter referred to as "ACEA"), filed this verified petition on behalf of Barbara Lapin, a substitute school teacher in the Atlantic City School System alleging that she contracted with the Atlantic City Board of Education for a full time teaching position as a regularly employed teacher and that the respondent improperly employed as a long term substitute teacher in violation of the New Jersey Statutes.

On December 13, 1993, the petitioner, Barbara Lapin, submitted a letter to the Atlantic City High School requesting withdrawal of her grievance "and all related actions with concern to that position. I do not want the Association to continue with the grievance." Also on December 14, 1993, the petitioner, Barbara Lapin addressed a letter to Dr. Mark Harris, Superintendent of Schools, Atlantic City School System referencing a conversation dated Friday, December 10, 1993 confirming that she had submitted a letter to Mrs. Falcon requesting withdrawal of her grievance. The petitioner's letter of December 14, 1993, to the Superintendent of Schools stated in pertinent part that:

I stated the fact that I do not want the association to continue with the grievance.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

By letter dated January 31, 1994, petitioner wrote to Mr. Eugene J. Sharp, UniServe Representative, New Jersey Education Association stating the following:

Dear Mr. Sharp:

Please accept this letter as my request that you remove my name effective immediately from all suits, petitions and grievances to Dr. R. Mark Harris and the Atlantic City Board of Education.

Finally, by correspondence dated June 24, 1994, the petitioner, Barbara Lapin, addressed a memorandum to Joanne M. Restivo, Deputy Clerk, stating the following:

Kindly check the correspondence and be advised that I have documented my cancellation in this matter.

On June 28, 1994, petitioner, ACEA, filed an Amended Verified Petition restating the claims set forth in the original verified petition in this matter but deleted petitioner Barbara Lapin's name as a named petitioner. All counts of the petition remain the same as the original petition submitted to the court in this matter.

I

The petitioner lacks standing to maintain this action on behalf of the withdrawing petitioner in the face of a clear and voluntary withdrawal of the complaint by the aggrieved school teacher.

Petitioner, ACEA asserts in paragraph 2 of the First Count of the Amended Verified Petition, that it is the duly recognized collective bargaining representative of teachers and other employees within the district. The remaining components of the petitioner's Amended Verified Petition assert alleged violations by the respondent against the originally named co-petitioner, Barbara Lapin, which can essentially be characterized as a grievance. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1 boards of education:

.... shall employ and may dismiss a secretary or a school business administrator to act as secretary and may employ and dismiss a superintendent of schools, a treasure of school monies, when and as provided by section 18A:13-14 or 18A:17-31, and such principals, teachers, janitors and other officers and employees, as it shall determine, and fix and alter their compensation and the length of the terms of their employment.

The defendant is a signatory to an agreement with the remaining petitioner, ACEA, which agreement recognizes the petitioner herein as the collective bargaining unit for classroom teachers and other specified personnel in Article I, section 1.1. thereof.

Article III of the said collective bargaining agreement sets forth a grievance procedure. Article III, paragraph 3.11 defines a grievance as follows:

A grievance is a claim by a teacher that he has suffered harm by the interpretation, application or violation of policies, agreements or administrative decisions affecting her.

Article III, paragraph 3.2.4, provides pertinent part that:

The association may initiate a grievance on behalf of a group of employees

In this case, the petitioner initiated the complaint in conjunction with the named petitioner, Barbara Lapin, and instituted the action in its capacity as a collective bargaining agent of petitioner, Barbara Lapin. However, pursuant to Article III, paragraph 3.2.5.:

Any grievant may be represented at all stages of the grievance procedure by himself/herself or, at his/her option, by the association or a representative selected or approved by the association. (emphasis added).

Under the clear facts of this case, the petitioner on whose behalf the ACEA initiated the complaint has affirmatively and unequivocally communicated her withdrawal of her complaint and her wishes to cease further prosecution of this grievance. It is very clear in this case that the remaining petitioner, ACEA, has standing in this matter only in a derivative agency capacity pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement with the respondent Board of Education. The remaining petitioner, ACEA, therefore does not stand to be tangibly benefited in any way by further prosecution of this complaint. There are no group or class issues set out in the verified petition or the amended verified petition filed by the petitioner in this case sufficient to justify the ACEA's continued prosecution of this matter on behalf of its principals. Accordingly, the complaint is due to be dismissed.

THE BOARD'S CONCLUSION

Petitioner, ACEA, commenced this action on behalf of a named grievant, Barbara Lapin, who has subsequently withdrawn the complaint and has requested that all further prosecution of the complaint cease. The petitioner's standing in the initial filing of the complaint rested on its status as the collective bargaining agent for professional staff and employees in Article 1.1 of the collective bargaining agreement. The petitioner's status is predicated only upon the filing and maintenance of a grievance by an aggrieved school teacher. Since the originally aggrieved party has unequivocally withdrawn her complaint the petitioner lacks standing to maintain this action. Accordingly, the amended verified petition filed in this matter is due to be dismissed.

THE ACEA'S POSITION

FACTS

Petitioner, ACEA, is the duly recognized collective bargaining representative of teachers and other employees within the Atlantic City School District. On November 29, 1993, ACEA filed a Verified Petition in this matter with the Commissioner of Education entitled Barbara Lapin and the Atlantic City Education Association v. Atlantic City Board of Education. Barbara Lapin is employed by the respondent in the Atlantic City School District. The petition stated that beginning in 1986, Barbara Lapin was employed by respondent as a substitute teacher in the District and that in or about August, 1993, respondent offered Ms. Lapin a full time teaching position within the District to teach art beginning with the September, 1993 school year. Ms. Lapin accepted the offer and commenced her full time employment with the respondent on or about September 1, 1993. Ms. Lapin was assigned to teach five classes in art and supervise a detention period, job responsibilities and functions that accompany full time positions held by other art teachers employed by the respondent in the high school at issue.

Although Ms. Lapin was employed as a full time teaching staff member beginning in September of 1993, it was not until March 1994, that Ms. Lapin was placed on the salary schedule of the Collective Bargaining Agreement entered into between ACEA and respondent. Between September 1993 and March 1994, Ms. Lapin was only paid for a per diem rate as a substitute teacher, and did not receive any other benefits guaranteed by the Collective Bargaining Agreement as do other full time teachers. These benefits include, but are not limited to, paid health insurance, membership in the Teacher Pension and Annuity Fund, accrued time to be applied towards tenure, paid sick leave and paid public holidays.

In or about December 1993, Ms. Lapin was advised by the Atlantic City Board of Education, through its Superintendent that if she were to withdraw from the filed Verified Petition and discontinue her related grievance, the respondent would place her on the full time salary schedule of the Collective Bargaining Agreement and provide her with the other benefits guaranteed by the Collective Bargaining Agreement. Not surprisingly, and in an effort to secure her full time employment with the appropriate salary and benefits, Ms. Lapin discontinued her grievance and directed that she be withdrawn as a party to this Petition.

In effect, the respondent has "bought off" Ms. Lapin's claims that respondent violated the law in hiring her to fill a vacancy for a long term position, while paying her as a substitute teacher on a per diem rate with no benefits under the Collective Bargaining Agreement. However, the actions of the respondent are clearly in violation of the law including, but not limited to, N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1 of the education law, regulations of the State of New Jersey and in violation of the Collective Bargaining Agreement. In addition, respondent has not awarded Ms. Lapin seniority benefits received by other full time teachers or back pay in the amount of the difference between the salary paid to date and the salary designated on the appropriate salary schedule in the Collective Bargaining Agreement at issue.

An Amended Verified Petition in this matter was filed on July 7, 1994 listing the ACEA as the sole petitioner and restating the claims set forth in the Verified Petition. On August 4, 1994, the respondent filed a Motion to Dismiss alleging that the ACEA had no standing to maintain the Petition in this matter.

ARGUMENT

THE ACEA HAS STANDING AS THE NAMED PETITIONER TO MAINTAIN THIS ACTION

The ACEA is the duly recognized collective bargaining representative of teachers and other employees within the Atlantic City School District. The concern of an exclusive representative of public employees with respect to matters touching their employment is tangible and genuine; it is an interest sufficient to enable such an entity to participate as a party in proceedings before the Commissioner of Education and the State Board of Education. Winston v. Bd. of Ed. So. Plainfield, 125 N.J. Super. 131, 142 (App. Div. 1973), citing authority.

Subsequent Commissioner of Education decisions and an appellate decision have accepted and expanded upon the Winston holding, routinely permitting teachers' unions to bring actions on behalf of their members. In Manalapan-Englishtown Education Association v. Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District, 187 N.J. Super. 426, (App. Div. 1981), the Association sued the Board of Education for its failure to certify disciplinary charges against a school principal. The Association brought the action in its name only on behalf of its members who were aggrieved by the acts of the principal. The Court accepted the Association's standing as the litigating party.

Likewise, the Commissioner of Education has accepted as routine the appearance of a teacher's union on behalf of its members. See East Brunswick Education Association on Behalf of 117 East Brunswick Teaching Staff Members v. Board of Education of East Brunswick Township, 1982 S.L.D. 236 (the Association appealed the Board's refusal to permit teachers who apparently participated in a work stoppage to be granted sick leave for that day); See also Board of Education of the Sussex County Vocational School District v. Board of Chosen Freeholder, Sussex County, 1979 S.L.D. 206 (teacher's association summarily allowed to intervene in action because its members would be vitally affected by the Board's closing of a school).

In Wyckoff Education Association v. Wyckoff Board of Education and the Bergen County Superintendent of Schools, 1981 S.L.D. (October 5), aff'd St. Bd. 1981 S.L.D. (May 5), the administrative law judge specifically addressed the Wyckoff's Board's contention that the teacher association lacked standing to assert that the Board was improperly allowing clerical aides to perform the duties of a school nurse. The administrative law judge determined that the association did have standing, saying that the association had a "direct, personal interest in protecting its members" and that it had "an interest in questioning the propriety of the Board's actions as those actions intimately and directly affect its association's members." Id. at p.4, ALJ opinion.

Labor unions have been the type of organization most frequently held to have the requisite standing to assert claims that could be asserted by its members individually. This is the very purpose of an employee organization. In Allee v. Madiano, 416 U.S. 802, 819, 40 L. Ed. 2d. 566, 582-583 (1974) the United States Supreme Court disposed of arguments similar to those implied by the respondent herein. In that case a labor organization went into federal court to contest the legality of arrests and prosecution being conducted by state officials in state court against individuals represented by the Union. The State officials claimed that any judgment obtained could only apply to enjoin prosecutions of those individuals who specifically joined the Union's federal suit. The United States Supreme Court disagreed and held that "the Union has standing as a named plaintiff to raise any of the claims that a member of the Union would have standing to raise." 40 L. Ed. at 582-83 (note 20-23).

The Amended Petition in this matter, which respondent states "can easily be characterized as a grievance" (respondent's brief at page 3), seeks a disposition of claims which will have an impact transcending the personal interest of any individual teacher or claimant and will have repercussions affecting other teachers and employees represented by the ACEA. Winston at 142. As is evidenced by the respondent's failure to cite any authority in support of its Motion to Dismiss, there is no basis in law that the very real interest of the ACEA should be negated in this matter and the ACEA shorn of its status to participate as a party in this Petition.

In addressing the issue of a teacher's association's standing in a grievance proceeding, the Court in Red Bk. Reg. Ed. Assn. v. Red Bk. High Sch. Bd. of Ed., 78 N.J. 122, at 136 and 137 (1978), held that when an employee elects to have his grievance presented through his majority representative, the grievance or claim may no longer be accurately viewed as solely the employee's grievance. It is then also the grievance of his unit, brought on behalf of the entire membership of the unit in the name of their chosen collective representative. Similarly, the claims asserted by ACEA in the Amended Verified Petition in this matter are claims which are being brought on behalf of ACEA's entire membership and are not solely the complaints of Barbara Lapin. Therefore, the issue raised in the respondent's brief that Ms. Lapin has dismissed her grievance against the Board of Education and has withdrawn as a named petitioner in this matter is of no consequence and does not affect the validity of viability of the ACEA's Amended Verified Petition.

Moreover, it is significant that the ACEA, motivated as it may be by the special associational interest and the rights of its members, also seeks to vindicate the public interest. That the ACEA and its members may derive special benefits from the outcome of this proceeding does not detract from the fact that the ACEA has raised serious issues of public administration and statutory interpretation, "which should always come as swiftly as possible to the attention of those administrative officials charged with regulating or overseeing an area of governmental concern." N.J.E.A., et al. v. Essex County Ed. Services Commission, et al., 5 N.J.A.R. 29 (1981). (OAL Dkt. No. EDU 4302-81).

As the court stated in N.J.E.A., et al. vs. Essex County Ed. Services Commission, et al., the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules do not establish criteria governing standing. The Court noted that the teacher associations involved as petitioners in the proceeding had organizational rights and relationships which would be affected by the outcome of the proceedings and, "for that reason alone," the teacher associations should be accorded standing. Id. at 37. In concluding that the teacher associations had standing to petition the Commissioner of Education, the Court noted the following:

The rules of law or procedure which develop to govern the area [of governmental concern] should make it easier rather than more difficult for a matter of public interest to come before a responsible public official in a way which requires him or her to act as quickly as the need for reflective determination allows. Restrictive principals of standing developed for good reason to apply in lawsuits between private parties should be applied with greater flexibility in the field of administrative law where, unavoidably, those who render final adjudications are also policy makers in their roles as overseers and regulators. Id. at 38, citing authority; (Emphasis added).

As the above cited authority indicates, the ACEA has standing to petition the Commissioner of Education in this matter for a declaratory ruling. In the brief submitted in support of its Motion to Dismiss, the respondent fails to cite any case law or statutes which supports its position that the ACEA does not have authority to petition the Commissioner in this matter. Instead, the respondent relies entirely upon the terms of the Collective Bargaining Agreement between the ACEA and respondent and asserts that insofar as Ms. Barbara Lapin has withdrawn her Petition in this matter, the ACEA has no standing to proceed in its own capacity. However, this unsupported and self-serving conclusion is simply incorrect.

Although dealing with a grievance and not a petition, the Court in Red Bank Reg. Education Association found that the question of consensual initiation of any organizational grievance is not a legitimate matter of concern for a public employer. The public employer's obligation to accept organizational grievances is not conditioned on the organization's verification that the affected employee has consented to the filing of the grievance, or in this instance, the Petition. As far as the public employer is concerned, all organizational grievances are consensual. Red Bank Reg. Ed. Assn. at 142.

In its Motion to Dismiss the respondent argues that the ACEA does not stand to be tangibly benefited in any way by further prosecution of this complaint. Respondent's brief at p. 3. However, the respondent ignores the fact that the ACEA exists to protect the rights of its individual members, and consequently, it may seek remedies which are individual in nature.

THE ACEA'S CONCLUSION

ACEA is the duly recognized collective bargaining representative of teachers and other employees within the Atlantic City School District. As such, there is no basis in law to deny the Association standing in this matter. Therefore, it is respectfully submitted that the respondent's Motion to Dismiss is without merit and should be denied.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The primary issue for determination is whether the ACEA has standing to proceed with this litigation, under an Amended Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner, subsequent to Petitioner Barbara Lapin's voluntary withdrawal from the case. Or, in other words, whether the ACEA may maintain an action against the Board without the authority of the primary petitioner who will be affected by the outcome of the case?

There is no question that the ACEA had standing to bring the original Petition of Appeal on behalf of its member, Barbara Lapin. There exists a long list of Commissioner's decisions and case law to demonstrate the ACEA's standing and right to bring an action against the Board before the Commissioner and the courts on behalf of its membership. The cases and decisions, cited by the ACEA demonstrate that the local representative collective bargaining unit brought actions against an employer board of education on behalf of and, presumably, with the authority of its teaching staff members. Manalapan-Englishtown, supra.; Winston, supra.; Red Bank Regional Education Association, supra.; and, East Brunswick Education Association on Behalf of 117 East Brunswick Teaching Staff Members, supra. None of the above matters deal with the issue of the primary petitioner who has withdrawn from the litigation and the representative unit insists on proceeding to a final determination without the petitioner and in petitioner's behalf.

The Supreme Court, in Allee v. Madiano, 416 U.S. 802; 40 L.Ed. 2d. 566, is a civil rights class action brought by a labor union against State of Texas law enforcement officers, under 42

U.S.C.S. §§ 1983, 1985, for a declaratory judgment to invalidate certain criminal statutes under the First and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution. The Court held, among other things, that the union, as a named plaintiff, had standing to raise any of the claims that a member of the union would have standing to raise. Note, 40 L. Ed. 2d. at 582-583.

In Allee, the matter concerned a declaratory judgment class action to invalidate certain and specific Texas statutes which deprived the petitioning litigants of their rights under the United States Constitution. The instant matter, however, concerns a named petitioner who has voluntarily withdrawn from the case, and who does not wish to have the matter proceed in her name. In its Amended Petition of Appeal, the ACEA continues to seek remedies in Petitioner Lapin's behalf, which remedies she rejects. The ACEA did not seek a declaratory judgment with respect to the alleged statutory and regulatory violations, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-2.1 to -2.3. Rather, it merely modified the various counts in the Petition of Appeal while seeking the same remedies for Petitioner Lapin as appeared in the original Petition of Appeal.

The only remedy added in the Amended Petition of Appeal is the ACEA prayer to compel the Board to strictly adhere to the provisions of the collective bargaining agreement between it and the Board. This is a matter for consideration by the Public Employees Relations Commission (PERC).

Our New Jersey Supreme Court has long held that it will not render advisory opinions or function in the abstract. Nor will it entertain proceedings by plaintiffs who are more intermeddlers, interlopers or strangers to the dispute. Crescent Park Tenants Assoc. v. Realty Eq. Corp. of N.Y., 58 N.J. 98, 107 (1971). It continued to hold in Crescent Park that litigation is to be confined to those situations where the litigant's concern with the subject matter evidences sufficient stake and real adverseness, giving due weight to the interests of individual justice, along with the public interest. Id. 107-108.

In K.S.B. Tech. Sales v. No. Jersey Water Supply, 150 N.J. Super. 533, mod. & aff'd. 151 N.J. Super. 218, rev'd. 75 N.J. 272, appl. dism. 98 S. Ct. 1635, 435 U.S. 982, 56 L. Ed. 76 (1978), the Appellate bench cited, with approval, Crescent Park, supra. and stated that:

Standing requires a litigant to allege a sufficiently personal stake in the outcome of a controversy, a concrete adverseness, in order to insure effective presentation of the legal interests claimed to require judicial redress. Id. at 542.

None of these factors are extant here.

I CONCLUDE that Petitioner, Barbara Lapin, withdrew from this Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner of Education.

I CONCLUDE that the remedies sought by the ACEA are those which would, if granted, personally affect Barbara Lapin.

I CONCLUDE, due to Barbara Lapin's withdrawal from this litigation, there is no justiciable controversy before this administrative tribunal.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the ACEA does not have standing to pursue those claims against the Board on Barbara Lapin's behalf. Crescent Park, supra.; K.S.B. Tech. Sales, supra.

ORDER

Accordingly, the instant matter is hereby DISMISSED for lack of standing by the ACEA to pursue the remedies rejected by the primary petitioner, Barbara Lapin.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION
CITY OF ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC :

The exceptions advanced by the ACEA essentially recast and reiterate the arguments it proffered before the ALJ. Basically, it is the contention of the ACEA that the claims asserted herein are being brought on behalf of its entire membership and, as such, applicable Commissioner decisions and case law are clear that the ACEA has standing to independently bring such an action against the Board.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner finds the exceptions of the ACEA without merit, and he concurs with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that the ACEA lacks standing to maintain this action. The record clearly demonstrates the relief sought and the facts pled by the ACEA in this matter, with the exception of a prayer for relief with respect to the parties' collective bargaining agreement which is not properly before the Commissioner of Education, are specific to one individual, Barbara Lapin. Therefore, with the withdrawal of Barbara Lapin from this litigation, the ACEA does not have standing to pursue these claims against the Board on her behalf.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons clearly articulated therein, and the instant case is hereby dismissed for lack of standing.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Petitioner, nontenured physical education teacher, appealed termination of his contract. He contended he was terminated without sufficient notice and for pretextual reasons.

ALJ found that there was no dispute as to material facts and decided upon summary motion. ALJ concluded petitioner failed to demonstrate that his termination was unreasonable. Employment contracts of nontenured teachers which contain provisions allowing for termination by either party upon a specified number of days notice may be terminated in accordance with the terms of the contract without the need to demonstrate good or just cause. ALJ concluded Board's reasons for termination were conduct-related and were neither arbitrary nor capricious. Termination of petitioner's contract was valid and effective. Petition was dismissed.

Citing Dore and emphasizing that the ALJ examined record in a light favorable to petitioner, Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Record Closed: March 3, 1995

Decided: March 7, 1995

BEFORE EDITH KLINGER, ALJ:

Petitioner, John Kufel, Jr., filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education on August 16, 1994, appealing the termination of his employment contract by respondent, the Board of Education (Board) of the Union County Vocational-Technical School District (District). The Board filed its answer to the petition on November 4, 1994. At the same time it filed a motion for summary decision to dismiss the petition.

On November 3, 1994, the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The transmittal was made based upon the determination that sufficient controversy existed between the parties to preclude the matter from being dismissed without further proceedings. However, it was specifically stated that the transmittal was not to be construed as precluding the Board from renewing its motion for summary decision before the administrative law judge.

Both the motion of the Board and the documents of petitioner in support of his claim were included with the transmittal. In addition, the Board renewed its motion before the undersigned on January 27, 1995.

By letter dated February 7, 1995, the parties were informed that the Board's motion would be considered before any further action was taken by the undersigned in this matter. Kufel was given the opportunity to submit additional papers by February 20, 1995, in opposition to the Board's motion. The record closed on March 3, 1995 when petitioner's response was received.

The record was originally closed on February 27, 1995 when the undersigned received no response to the motion and an Initial Decision was issued on March 1, 1995. However, it was discovered that newly-retained counsel for petitioner had requested an extension of time to provide a response before the decision was transmitted to the parties, and the record was reopened to consider the documents submitted.

THE UNDISPUTED FACTS

Petitioner's response did not change the facts which are material to making a decision in this matter. The information already submitted by petitioner with respect to the incidents between himself and the Board were already considered in the light most favorable to him in rendering the prior decision. The additional documents submitted only amplified further the fact patterns of those incidents.

The material facts in this matter are undisputed.

On or about September 16, 1993, Kufel was hired by the Board as a non-tenured physical education teacher at the Union County Vocational-Technical School for the 1993-94 school year. The parties entered into an employment contract on that date which contains the following provision:

It is hereby agreed by the parties hereto that this contract may at any time be terminated by either party giving to the other sixty days' notice after September 16, 1993 in writing of intention to terminate the same, but that in the absence of any provision herein for a definite number of days' notice the contract shall run for the full term named above.

On March 7, 1994, Kufel's supervisor, Patrick Mauro, the school's Director of Curriculum and Instruction, filed an Incident Reporting Form with Vito Gagliardi, superintendent of the District. The report states that Kufel behaved in an insubordinate and menacing way during a conference with Mauro that morning.

On March 14, 1994, a conference was held concerning Mauro's incident report, among other things. The conference was attended by Kufel, Gagliardi, John Paredes, the Business Administrator and Board Secretary, and John Crowley, president of the New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) for Union County Voc-Tech, on behalf of Kufel. As a result of the conference, Gagliardi and Kufel reached an agreement, the terms of which were later memorialized in a memorandum from Jack G. Spear, UNISERV representative, NJEA, to Gagliardi, dated March 21, 1994. A copy was sent to Kufel.

The terms of the agreement were as follows:

1. Mr. Koufel [sic] will receive sixty (60) days pay through May 14, 1994;
2. He is suspended with pay through the above date;
3. As of May 15, 1994, his employment with the district is terminated;
4. Mr. Koufel has agreed to those terms, thus waiving any further right to pursue the issue through the grievance system or alternate legal avenues.

Kufel denies that he actually entered into an agreement not to appeal the Board's action and, for the purposes of this motion only, his representation will be taken as true.

On March 15, 1994, Gagliardi served notice upon Kufel by overnight mail delivery that he was suspended with pay, effective that day, and that his employment was terminated as of May 14, 1994. This provided Kufel with the sixty days notice before termination required by his contract with the Board.

The reasons for termination were discussed at the conference of March 14 and listed in Gagliardi's letter. They were:

- Disagreement with supervisor's observation
- Questioning of management by administrators
- Perceived threats by supervisor by your words and/or actions
- Dissatisfaction with working at UCVTS

On March 16, 1994, the Board, by resolution, approved the termination of Kufel, effective May 14, 1994.

Kufel feels that his contract was terminated in retaliation for his defense of a fellow teacher, Joyce Papera, whom he believed had been unjustly accused by the Director of Personnel of being out of her classroom without good reason on October 21, 1993. Later that day, when Papera told Kufel that the accusation had been made against her, he insisted upon seeing the principal, Joyce Hopper, to inform her that false accusations had been made against Papera. Hopper did not respond to Kufel's intervention in the manner he thought she should. She told him that it was none of his concern and threatened to report him to his supervisor. Some time after leaving Hopper's office, Kufel went to Gagliardi's office, without an appointment and without being announced, to bring the problem to his attention. He handed Gagliardi a memorandum discussing the accusation against Papera and his comments upon his interview that day with Hopper. The memorandum stated, among other things, that

Mrs. Hopper has difficulty relating to personalities. She seems very insecure.

On October 22, 1993, Gagliardi wrote a memorandum to Kufel complaining about the intrusion and stating that Kufel was interfering in a matter that, on its face, was none of his concern. He instructed Kufel to submit to him a detailed summary of what he wanted to say relating to the Papera matter within three days.

The preceding description is taken entirely from documents submitted by Kufel to the Commissioner of Education in support of his petition.

THE PETITION

Petitioner alleges that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A 54-20d, only the Board, not the District superintendent, has the power to employ and dismiss teachers. Kufel was given notice by Gagliardi, not the Board, that his employment would terminate in sixty days. He alleges that both the manner in which he was notified of his termination and the fact that he was terminated without cause make his termination illegal. For these reasons, he claims that his contract requires that he be paid through June 30, 1994.

He further alleges that he never received notification from the Board, rather than the superintendent, that the District did not intend to employ him during the 1994-95 school year, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10 and Long Branch Education Association and William Cook v. Board of Education of City of Long Branch, Monmouth County, 1975 S.L.D. 1029. He, therefore, seeks reemployment by the District for the 1994-95 school year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11. He also asks that the District reimburse him for the cost of benefits which he had to secure for himself from May 14, 1994.

THE BOARD'S MOTION

The Board has moved for summary decision in this matter on the grounds that the it had the right, pursuant to Kufel's employment contract, to terminate his employment with sixty days notice. It also argues that Kufel voluntarily waived his right to pursue an appeal at the conference of March 14, 1994 as evidenced by Spear's memorandum to Gagliardi, dated March 21, 1994, setting forth the agreement between the parties. This last ground will not be considered because petitioner disputes that there was ever such an agreement between the parties.

DISCUSSION OF LAW

Petitioner relies upon N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10 and Long Branch Education Association and William Cook v. Board of Education of City of Long Branch, Monmouth County, 1975 S.L.D. 1029 to support his claim that he did not receive the required notice before his contract was terminated. The case and the statute he cites, however, apply only where a non-tenured teacher's contract of employment is to be renewed or not renewed.

For purposes of deciding this matter, the distinction must be drawn between non-renewal and termination of contracts. The terms renewal and non-renewal refer to the intent of the parties to enter into a future contract. Termination reflects the intent of at least one of the parties to put an end to an existing contract before it expires by its own terms.

Employment contracts of non-tenured public school teachers which contain provisions allowing for termination by either party upon a specified number of days notice may be terminated in accordance with the terms of the contract without the need to demonstrate "good" or "just" cause. Mozier v. Board of Education of Cherry Hill Twp., Camden County, 450 F. Supp. 742, 748 (D.N.J. 1977).

Petitioner was entitled to, and received, a statement of the reasons why the Board elected to terminate his contract to ensure that it was not arbitrary and capricious or done for "impermissible reasons." Id. at 749.

However, such review merely insures that impermissible reasons are not utilized in termination decisions. It in no way limits the multitude of acceptable termination rationales which fall well short of the "just cause" standard. That schools do not make employment decisions without reasons is to be expected. However, a non-arbitrary decision-making process does not create an expectancy of continued employment. [Citation omitted.] There is a vast difference between proscribing impermissible rationales, and establishing the "exclusive conditions under which an employee could be dismissed.

I FIND that Kufel's own version of the incident, together with Gagliardi's letter of March 15, 1994, show that there is no dispute as to material facts and give a clear picture of the reasons for his termination: among other things, he intervened forcefully, in a manner which was perceived by his supervisors as threatening, to question a management decision to discipline another employee, a matter which did not concern him. His argument with respect to the incident is that he believes that he was entitled to behave this way. I FIND that petitioner cannot carry his burden to demonstrate that no reasonable school district would terminate the employment contract of a non-tenured teacher for this type of conduct. Consequently, I CONCLUDE that the Board's reasons for termination were conduct-related and were neither arbitrary nor capricious, nor was petitioner terminated for impermissible reasons. The Board's decision lay squarely within its sound management discretion.

I, therefore, CONCLUDE that, since petitioner's contract contains a clause providing for termination upon sixty days notice, it may be terminated in accord with its provisions without the need to demonstrate "just cause." Mozier, supra.

Petitioner argues that the superintendent did not have the authority to invoke the terms of his contract without a resolution of the Board. However, under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20, the superintendent is a representative of the board which employs him. Therefore, when Gagliardi notified Kufel of his suspension and gave him notice of the termination of his contract, he was acting as the agent of the Board for the purpose.

In Rockefeller v. Board of Education of the Borough of River Edge, Bergen County, 1975 S.L.D. 898, the Commissioner rejected Rockefeller's claim that the Board could not subsequently ratify the district superintendent's termination of a non-tenured teacher's contract. He stated that the superintendent's notification was valid, was a representation of the Board's decision and was authorized by the Board. Rockefeller, 1975 S.L.D., at 907. He added that the subsequent ratification by the Board was unnecessary. Id. Finally, he stated that the Board's action contravened herein was one grounded in the contractual agreement between petitioner and the Board and the contract could be terminated with "sixty days notice in writing" ... and the record provides ample proof that the decision to exercise that option was one the board made, as petitioner's employer, upon the recommendations of its Superintendent. This decision was not rendered ultra vires by procedural defects. . . .

Since the Board ratified Gagliardi's action one day after he notified Kufel, I CONCLUDE that, for all intents and purposes, it was the Board which notified, suspended and terminated petitioner on March 15, 1994. According to Rockefeller, supra, subsequent ratification was probably not even necessary.

I CONCLUDE that, as a matter of law, the termination of Kufel's employment as of May 15, 1994 was valid and effective. I further CONCLUDE that there was no obligation to notify Kufel of the Board's intent not to renew his contract for the 1994-95 school year since it severed its employment relationship with him on March 15, 1994, effective May 15, 1994. I CONCLUDE that from this date he was entitled to no other compensation, including the cost of benefits which he had to secure for himself. Based upon the foregoing I CONCLUDE that petitioner is entitled to no relief.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 and Judson v. People's Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954), summary decision should be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact in dispute and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. The materials submitted by both parties in this matter show that there is no material fact in dispute and respondent is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that it is not necessary to conduct a full evidentiary proceeding to resolve this matter. I, therefore, CONCLUDE that the Board of Education of Union County Vocational-Technical Schools is entitled to summary decision dismissing the petition.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that summary decision is hereby GRANTED to respondent and the petition of John Kufel, Jr. is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton,

New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION
 UNION COUNTY VOCATIONAL- :
 TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, : UNION COUNTY, :

 _____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner filed timely exceptions pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner primarily excepts to the ALJ's determination that there were no material facts in dispute, so as to make this matter ripe for summary decision. Instead, petitioner contends that there exists a dispute as to the reason for his termination. Petitioner asserts that while the Board maintains he was terminated pursuant to the events of March 1994 "in which they allege that he was permitting a student to eat in his class room," (Petitioner's Exceptions, at p. 1), his termination instead arose from an incident dating back to October 1993 in which he was defending another teacher who, he asserts, was being discriminated against by Mrs. Hopper, the principal. (Id.) The facts of said incident are detailed in the initial decision and incorporated herein by reference. Petitioner argues,

“That the Board of Education hired a replacement the very same night that they terminated Mr. Kufel shows that they had a premeditated agenda and supports Mr. Kufel’s version of the facts -- he was terminated in retaliations (sic) for the earlier October incident--a termination which apparently even the Board knew they could not support without being arbitrary or capricious.”

Petitioner concludes that the ALJ’s determination that the Board’s actions were not arbitrary and capricious required reliance on disputed facts. To rely on the facts which petitioner asserts were the actual reasons for his termination would, he maintains, lead to the conclusion that he was terminated for impermissible reasons.

Further, petitioner excepts to the ALJ’s characterization of his conduct, prior to termination of employment. Petitioner denies that he “intervened forcefully” on behalf of a fellow staff member in October of 1993, or, that following said incident, he appeared “unannounced” and “without an appointment” at the superintendent’s office. (Petitioner’s Exceptions, at pp. 1-2)

Finally, petitioner argues that, with respect to ending the contractual relationship between a Board and a nontenured teacher, “there is no difference between a non-renewal and a termination.” (Id., at p. 2)

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board properly acted within its managerial discretion when it terminated petitioner, a nontenured teacher, in accordance with applicable provision in his contract. Initially, the Commissioner determines that the matter herein was properly decided upon summary review. The ALJ instructs:

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 and Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954) summary decision should be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact in dispute and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. (emphasis added) (Initial Decision, at p. 9)

“Material fact’ means a fact legally consequential to a determination of an issue in the case.”

N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1 In the instant matter, the facts which petitioner asserts to be significant are, instead, without legal consequence under these circumstances. As the ALJ notes,

Employment contracts of non-tenured public school teachers which contain provisions allowing for termination by either party upon a specified number of days notice may be terminated in accordance with the terms of the contract without the need to demonstrate “good” or “just” cause. Mozier v Board of Education of Cherry Hill Twp., Camden County, 450 F. Supp. 742, 748 (D.N.J. 1977) (emphasis added) (Initial Decision, at pp. 6-7)

As to the wide discretion a board enjoys in making employment decisions which concern non-tenured employees, case law further provides, absent constitutional constraints or legislation affecting the tenure rights of teachers, local boards of education have an almost complete right to terminate the services of a teacher who has no tenure and is regarded as undesirable by the local board. Dore v. Bedminster Tp. Bd. of Ed., 185 N.J. Super. 447, 456 (App. Div. 1982)

Moreover, the Commissioner recognizes that, contrary to petitioner’s assertions, the ALJ examined representations in a light most favorable to petitioner, including incorporating petitioner’s description of the October 1993 events entirely from his petition and supporting documents. (Initial Decision, at pp. 3, 5) The ALJ’s finding as to the reasons for petitioner’s termination clearly consider said documents:

I FIND that Kufel's own version of the incident, together with Gagliardi's letter of March 15, 1994, show that there is no dispute as to material facts and give a clear picture of the reasons for termination: among other things, he intervened forcefully, in a manner which was perceived by his supervisors as threatening, to question a management decision to discipline another employee, a matter which did not concern him. (Initial Decision, at p. 7)

Finally, the Commissioner rejects petitioner's unsubstantiated claim that "*there is no difference between a non-renewal and a termination" of a contract for a nontenured teacher, and likewise finds without merit petitioner's claim that the ALJ mischaracterized his conduct in the instant matter.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts as his own the findings and conclusions of law by the Administrative Law Judge in the initial decision, for the reasons expressed therein, and dismisses the petition with prejudice.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

V. : STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE UNION : DECISION COUNTY VOCATIONAL-TECHNICAL : SCHOOL DISTRICT, UNION COUNTY, :
RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT. :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, April 19, 1995

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Kimberly Sorrentino, Esq.

For the Respondent-Respondent, Bivona, Cohen, Kunzman, Coley, Yospin, Bernstein & DiFrancesco (Judith A. Babinski, Esq., of Counsel)

John Kufel, Jr. (hereinafter "petitioner") was employed by the Board of Education of the Union County Vocational-Technical School District (hereinafter "Board") in September 1993 as a teacher of physical education and, consequently, had not yet achieved tenure at the time of the incidents resulting in this appeal. On March 7, 1994, petitioner's supervisor filed an incident report with the superintendent of schools in which he alleged that petitioner had acted in an insubordinate and menacing manner during a conference. As a result, on March 14, 1994, the superintendent met with petitioner and reached an agreement wherein petitioner would be suspended without pay through May 14 and his employment with the district terminated as of May 15. On March 15, the superintendent served petitioner with notice of such suspension and termination by overnight mail. On March 16, the Board, by resolution, approved petitioner's termination.

Petitioner thereafter filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education alleging that the Board had actually terminated his employment in retaliation for an earlier incident in which he had come to the defense of another teacher who he believed had been unjustly accused of being out of her classroom without good reason. Petitioner maintained that both the manner in which he was terminated and the fact that he was terminated without just cause invalidated the Board's action.

On March 7, 1995, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ"), concluding that there was no dispute as to the material facts, recommended granting the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissing the petition. The ALJ found that petitioner had intervened in a management decision to discipline another employee in a manner perceived by his supervisors to be threatening, and that petitioner could not carry the burden of demonstrating that no reasonable school district would have terminated the employment of a non-tenured teacher for such conduct. Consequently, she concluded that the Board's reasons for petitioner's termination were conduct-related and were neither arbitrary nor capricious. She noted, in addition, that since petitioner's contract contained a clause providing for termination upon 60 days notice, his employment could be terminated in accordance with the contract without the need to demonstrate just cause. She also found that the superintendent was acting as an agent of the Board when he gave petitioner notice of his termination and that the Board had ratified the superintendent's action one day later.

On April 19, 1995, the Commissioner adopted the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and dismissed the petition, agreeing that the Board had acted properly within its managerial discretion when it terminated petitioner.

Petitioner filed the instant appeal to the State Board of Education, contending, inter alia, that there were material facts in dispute concerning the incident leading to his termination which precluded a grant of summary decision.

After a thorough review of the record, we affirm the ultimate determination of the Commissioner to dismiss the petition. However, we modify that decision as follows.

It is now well-established that a district board has virtually unlimited discretion in hiring or renewing non-tenured teachers. Dore v. Bedminster Twp. Bd. of Ed., 185 N.J. Super. 447 (App. Div. 1982). “[A]bsent constitutional constraints or legislation affecting the tenure rights of teachers, local boards of education have an almost complete right to terminate the services of a teacher who has no tenure and is regarded as undesirable by the local board.” Id. at 456. Thus, where a non-tenured teacher challenges a district board's decision to terminate his employment on the grounds that the reasons provided by the board are not supported by the facts, he is entitled to litigate that question only if the facts he alleges, if true, would constitute a violation of constitutional or legislatively-conferred rights. Guerrero v. Board of Education of the Borough of Glen Rock, decided by the State Board, February 5, 1986, aff'd, Docket #A-3316-85T6 (App. Div. 1986). Petitioner, who was not tenured, has made no such claim. Rather, he alleges that his termination was in retaliation for his actions on behalf of another teacher. Consequently, even accepting petitioner's allegations as true, the Board was entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

We therefore affirm the ultimate determination of the Commissioner to dismiss the petition, as modified herein.

Donald C. Addison, Jr., Wendel E. Daniels and Thomas P. McGough abstained.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE :
TOWN OF MONTCLAIR, ESSEX :

RESPONDENT. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent sought to enjoin the Board from initiating a sliding scale tuition for its pre-kindergarten program. Board filed motion for summary decision contending that petitioner had no standing in the matter and, even if he did, he could not prevail upon the merits.

ALJ concluded petitioner did have standing to proceed with the appeal as his son was eligible for enrollment in the program. However, ALJ found that there is nothing in the Constitution or in the statutes which prohibits a district from charging tuition for pre-kindergarten programs, serving children under the age of five, as long as the charge is not imposed on an impermissibly discriminatory basis. Thus, there was no reason that the district could not maintain such a program. ALJ concluded that the Board was entitled to summary decision and dismissed petitioner's appeal adding if petitioner or his son are injured following his son's enrollment in the program, petitioner may bring an appeal as to his individual damages at the appropriate time. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted in part and reversed in part the initial decision of OAL. Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that petitioner had standing to proceed with this appeal and that the matter was ripe for summary judgment; but, the Commissioner could not concur with the ALJ as to the granting of summary judgment. Citing N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1, ALJ found that the record established neither express nor necessarily implied authority granting the Board the power to charge individuals tuition for the non-mandated preschool program. Absent such authorization, the Board may not charge tuition for the operation of such program. A board, however, would not be prohibited from leasing its facilities to a tuition-charging entity operating the program independent of the local school district. Summary judgment was granted to petitioner.

DAVID HERRON,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF MONTCLAIR, ESSEX COUNTY,

Respondent.

David Herron, pro se

Steven B. Hoskins, Esq., for respondent (McCarter & English, attorneys)

Decided: January 24, 1995

BEFORE EDITH KLINGER, ALJ:

On March 24, 1994, petitioner, David Herron, filed a Petition with the Commissioner of Education seeking to enjoin the Board of Education of Montclair from initiating a sliding scale tuition for its pre-kindergarten program.

In his petition, Herron alleges that if the Board charges tuition for its pre-kindergarten program,

- 1) it will undermine the integrity of the district's magnet program.
- 2) it will jeopardize Montclair's desegregation plan.
- 3) it will discourage African-American parents from participating in the program by further classifying and segregating their children.
- 4) it violates N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4.
- 5) teachers paid from private funds can't receive pension benefits from the state.
- 6) unequal treatment will polarize students based upon class, race and income.

On June 28, 1994, the Board filed its answer and on July 28, 1994, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Petitioner's application for emergent relief was denied in a decision by James Ospenson, ALJ, dated September 7, 1994, and the matter was assigned to the undersigned for plenary hearing.

On December 1, 1994, respondent filed a motion for summary decision on the grounds that petitioner has no standing to maintain this action and, even if he does, he can not prevail upon the merits. The Board alleged that:

- 1) This program does not jeopardize Montclair's desegregation plan because it, in fact, constitutes part of the Board's voluntary desegregation program.
- 2) Pre-kindergarten programs are not mandated by the state. The requirement that education be "free, public and accessible to all" does not apply to the education of children less than 5 years of age.

- 3) The tuition has, in practice, not discouraged African-American parents from enrolling their children in the program; enrollment is higher than it has ever been.
- 4) Chapter 1 students and students at risk of academic failure are already identified, in part, on the basis of their eligibility for free or reduced-price lunches. This eligibility is based upon family income.

In support of its motion the Board submitted the affidavit of Edna Harris, Board Secretary and School Business Administrator. In her affidavit, she sets forth the following facts.

1. The pre-kindergarten program is offered to all on a sliding fee basis.
2. Any household with an income of less than $50,000 a year pays no tuition.
3. Any household with a yearly income of more than $100,000 pays full tuition ($3000).
4. Households with income between the two extremes pay tuition on a sliding scale.
5. Proof of income is based upon state or federal tax returns. Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) or food stamp recipients pay no tuition automatically when they provide their case numbers.
6. There is a confidential review of income documentation. The review is limited to two employees of the district. Not even the Board itself has access to the information. All documentation is returned to the parents immediately after review.
7. No parent has complained that the district has breached confidentiality with respect to financial information provided
8. The actual per-pupil cost of the program to the district is $4041.
9. The district pays the cost of transportation for all children.

10. Funds received from tuition are treated in the same way as other funds received by the district: they go into the general district funds. The program's expenses are paid from the general funds.
11. Of the 429 pupils registered for 1994-95 school year, 220 pay full or partial tuition and 209 pay no tuition. Only about one-fourth of the students pay full tuition.
12. Of the 429 pupils enrolled, 230 are white, 169 are African-American, 16 are Hispanic, 13 are Asian/Pacific Islander and 1 is Native American.
13. Records show that the enrollment of African-American pupils was higher in the 1994-95 school year than it was in the three previous years. It increased from 27.5 to 34.6%.
14. There is no breakdown of tuition payers as opposed to non-tuition payers by racial or ethnic group.
15. The pre-kindergarten/kindergarten program was established to meet enrollment needs. Pre-kindergarten/kindergarten students in Montclair attend seven different schools. On January 31, 1994, the Board established a pre-kindergarten/kindergarten center in the Mount Hebron School for three kindergarten classes (73 students) and two pre-kindergarten classes (51 students). Mount Hebron is otherwise a middle school,
16. The decision to charge a fee for the 1994-95 pre-kindergarten program was based upon decreases in state aid, such as the anticipated loss of the annual desegregation grant, and an anticipated increase in enrollment.

The first basis of the Board's motion is that the petition does not contain a statement of petitioner's standing to bring the cause of action. He does not allege that he or any member of his family or any party whose interest he represents is a child or the parent of a child who is in or eligible for the pre-kindergarten program. He suggests a theoretical chance of harm but has not made any allegation which demonstrates the real possibility that he or anyone else, has been, or will be, injured in any way. Consequently, he has no standing to pursue this cause of action.

On December 26, 1994, petitioner filed a certification stating that his son, aged three years, will be able to enroll in the pre-kindergarten program between March and June 1995. Therefore, by the time that there is a final decision in this matter, his son will be eligible for enrollment. I CONCLUDE that his certification confers standing upon him to proceed with this appeal.

The second basis for the Board's motion is that the petition is moot because any parent who wished to enroll a child in the pre-kindergarten program has already done so and the Board has already established and implemented a method of income verification and no parental privacy rights have been violated. In particular, no rights of petitioner have yet been violated so that the allegations of the petition are premature as they pertain to him.

Alternatively, the Board seeks summary decision on the grounds that its decision to establish a pre-kindergarten program and to charge a sliding scale tuition for the pre-kindergarten program is in full compliance with the applicable law. I FIND that petitioner's certification contains no facts which show that there is a dispute as to any relevant material fact.

Based upon the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that, even if petitioner has a sufficient stake in the outcome of his appeal to confer standing, he can not, as a matter of law, prevail upon the merits of his claim.

The Constitution of the State of New Jersey, Art. 8, § 4, ¶ 1, states that

The Legislature shall provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools for the instruction of all the children in the State between the ages of five and eighteen years.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 requires a district to provide a free public education to certain persons over five and under twenty years of age.

Therefore, the district is under no constitutional or statutory obligation to provide a free pre-kindergarten education to a four year old child. However, a district may undertake to educate younger children voluntarily. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1, a board of education may establish a nursery school or nursery department and admit any child who is under the age at which children are admitted to other schools in the district.

If a pre-kindergarten program is provided, the expenses of the program are to be "paid out of any moneys available for the general fund expenses of the schools, and in the same manner and under the same restrictions as the expenses of other schools or departments are paid." N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4. The Board has complied with this requirement. Neither this nor any other statute specifies that the general fund may not seek reimbursement of the expenses of providing a service which is not mandated.

I CONCLUDE that there is nothing in the constitution or in the statutes which prohibits a district from charging tuition for pre-kindergarten programs, serving children under the age of five, as long as the charge is not imposed on an impermissibly discriminatory basis. The Constitution of the State of New Jersey, Art. 1, § 4, ¶ 5; N.J.S.A. 18A:36-20. However, there is nothing inherently discriminatory about charging for a service based upon ability to pay. Petitioner himself has referred to the fact that the children's eligibility for free or reduced-price lunches is also based upon family income.

Petitioner's allegations are purely speculative and do not demonstrate that charging tuition on a sliding scale will, in any way, conflict with Montclair's desegregation plan, discourage African-American parents from participating in the program or single out minority pupils. In fact, the undisputed, actual data from the district, set forth in the affidavit of Edna Harris, Board Secretary and School Business Administrator, submitted with its motion, indicates that exactly the opposite state of affairs is true. The program has led to increased, rather than decreased participation by African-American students. There has been no breach of confidentiality as to economic data. Students are not labeled or segregated along economic, racial or ethnic lines.

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b) provides that, when a motion for summary decision is made and supported, the adverse party must respond by affidavit to show that there are genuine issues of material fact which can only be resolved by means of an evidentiary hearing. If there is no such response, summary decision may be entered, if appropriate. In this case, petitioner's affidavit does not show that there is a dispute as to any material fact except those related to his standing to pursue the appeal and this issue was resolved in his favor.

Since there is no prohibition against the district establishing a pre-kindergarten program or charging tuition for it on a sliding scale based upon ability to pay and there is no factual dispute concerning his claim that the program violates privacy or illegally discriminates against any student or group of students, I CONCLUDE that there is no reason that the district can not maintain such a program.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that the Board is entitled to summary decision, dismissing petitioner's appeal, because he can not prevail upon the merits. If he or his son are injured following his son's enrollment in the program, petitioner may bring an appeal as to his individual damages at the appropriate time. At the present time, there are none.

It is, therefore, ORDERED that petitioner's appeal is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN: OF MONTCLAIR, ESSEX COUNTY,

 RESPONDENT.

In its exceptions, the Board urges the Commissioner to adopt the Administrative Law Judge’s determination granting its motion for summary judgment dismissing the petition based on the conclusion that neither the statutes nor the New Jersey Constitution prohibit the district from charging tuition for pre-kindergarten programs. The Board, however, excepts to the language in the initial decision specifying that in the event petitioner “or his son are injured following his son’s enrollment in the program, petitioner may bring an appeal as to his individual damages at the appropriate time” as violative of the doctrines of res judicata, collateral estoppel and entire controversy. (Initial Decision, at p. 7)

Upon a careful and independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that petitioner has standing to proceed with this appeal and that the matter is ripe for summary judgment. The Commissioner, however, cannot concur with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ as to her determination that “the Board is entitled to summary decision  because [petitioner] cannot prevail upon the merits.” (Id.)

Local boards of education are creatures of the State and, therefore, have only those powers granted to them by the Legislature, either expressly or by necessary implication. Fair Lawn Education Association v. Fair Lawn Board of Education, 79 N.J. 574, 579 (1979). The question to be resolved in this instance, therefore, is whether a local board of education has been granted the authority to charge tuition for children residing in the district for attendance in a pre-school program.

The Legislature has granted districts authority to charge tuition or fees for certain types of programs. For example, N.J.S.A. 18A:50-2 permits a local board of education to “ charge and collect from persons taking such courses  for tuition a sum not exceeding the actual cost per pupil as determined according to rules prescribed by the commissioner and approved by the state board.” (See N.J.A.C.6:30-1.1 et seq.) A local board may also charge tuition for summer enrichment programs, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:54B-2, “ subject to rules and regulations promulgated by the State board.” (See N.J.A.C. 6:8-8.1(c))

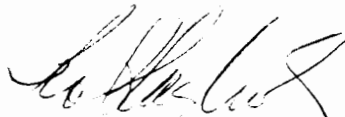

A local board of education is statutorily authorized to create a pre-kindergarten program pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:44-1. This section provides that a district may “establish a nursery school or a nursery department in any school under its control, and shall admit to such nursery school or department any child who is under the age at which children are admitted to other schools or classes in such district.” Once a program has been established, N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4 requires that “[t]he expenses of nursery schools or departments  shall be paid out of any moneys available for the general fund expenses of the schools, and in the same manner and under the same restrictions as the expenses of other schools or departments are paid.”

The ALJ determined that the Board had complied with the requirement of 44-4 because “[n]either this nor any other statute specifies that the general fund may not seek reimbursement of the expenses of providing a service which is not mandated.” (Initial Decision, at p. 6) The record has established, however, neither express nor necessarily implied authority granting the Board the power to charge individuals tuition for this type of nonmandated program. “Moneys available for the general fund of the schools,” consequently, must be read to refer to money obtained from local taxes, state and/or federal aid or other nontuition sources in the absence of a specific statute authorizing tuition to be charged for these purposes. Absent such authorization, the Board may not charge tuition for the operation of its preschool program. This does not, however, preclude a district from permitting its facilities to be utilized for the operation of a preschool program. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:20-8.2(a) a local board of education may resolve to lease its facilities to outside entities under certain conditions articulated therein. A board would not be prohibited from leasing its facilities to a nonprofit organization, independent of the local board of education, for the entity to operate a preschool program on school grounds subject to the availability of facilities within the district. The tuition-charging entity would have to actually be operating the program independent of the local school district.

Consequently, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law is adopted, in part, and reversed, in part, and summary judgment is granted to petitioner, as articulated herein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

For the Respondent-Appellant, McCarter & English (Steven B. Hoskins, Esq., of Counsel)

The central issue in this appeal is whether the Board of Education of the Town of Montclair (hereinafter "Board" or "Montclair Board") may charge tuition for four-year-olds enrolled in its Primary Unit Program.¹ As follows, although we agree with the Commissioner that it may not charge tuition, our conclusion is predicated on entirely different grounds.

There has been no dispute concerning the facts in this matter. From the mid-1970's, the Montclair Board has offered the Primary Unit Program. This program was developed as part of the District's voluntary desegregation plan. Until 1994-95, the program was offered free of charge to all four-year-olds who lived in Montclair. Effective September 1994, the Board determined to charge tuition on a sliding scale basis to those families whose income exceeded $50,000 per year. While the per pupil cost to the Board for 1994-95 was $4,041, the maximum that it charged under its sliding scale was $3,000 in those cases where a family's annual income exceeded $100,000.² Tuition payments were applied to the Board's general fund,³ from which the expenses of the program were paid in the same manner as all other expenses incurred by the District.

Petitioner is a Montclair resident and the father of three children, one of whom was to turn four in September 1995. He challenged the Board's determination to charge for the program by filing a petition of appeal to the Commissioner of Education in March 1994, alleging that the Board's tuition charge was contrary to law and the fundamental tenets of public education, and that the charge constituted illegal discrimination.

In response, the Board filed a motion to dismiss the petition, asserting that petitioner lacked the standing to bring such action because his child was not registered for the program. In the alternative, the Board sought summary decision in the matter, contending that its program was in compliance with the law.

The Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") rejected the Board's assertion that petitioner lacked the standing to bring the action, reasoning that the fact that petitioner's son was to turn four and would be eligible for the program in 1995-96 was sufficient to confer standing. Accordingly, she denied the Board's motion for dismissal. The ALJ however granted summary decision in favor of the Board, finding that its actions were in compliance with law.

² We note that the Board represents in its brief in support of this appeal that 200 students out of a total enrollment of 429 in 1994-95 paid tuition and that 122 of the total were charged the $3,000 maximum.

The Commissioner adopted the ALJ's determination that petitioner had standing, but rejected her determination that the Board's program was in compliance with law. Rather, the Commissioner concluded that the Board was without the authority to charge tuition for this program. In support of his conclusion, the Commissioner pointed to N.J.S.A. 18A:50-2, which authorizes district boards of education to charge tuition for adult education courses not in excess of actual per pupil cost and N.J.S.A. 18A:54B-2, which expressly authorizes school districts to charge for non-credit summer enrichment courses.

The Commissioner then made the assumption that the Board had established the program at issue pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1, which authorizes school districts to establish nursery schools.⁴ Based on this assumption, the Commissioner reasoned that because that statute does not include the express authority to charge tuition, and because N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4 requires that the costs must be paid from "moneys available for the general fund expenses of the schools" once such a program is established, in the absence of a specific statute authorizing tuition to be charged for these purposes, the term "moneys available for the general fund" had to be read to refer to nontuition sources. Therefore, finding that a district board had the option of leasing its facilities to a non-profit organization under certain circumstances and that such an entity could in turn charge tuition, the Commissioner rejected the ALJ's determination and granted summary decision to the petitioner.

⁴ We note that while counsel for the Montclair Board referred to the program as a "pre-kindergarten" program as it pertained to the four-year-olds enrolled therein, he did not assert that it was a nursery school or that it had been established pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1. See, e.g., the Board's brief in support of this appeal and its answer to the Petition of Appeal to the Commissioner.

The Montclair Board appealed both aspects of the Commissioner's decision to the State Board. It renewed its claim that petitioner did not have the requisite standing to bring this action because his child was neither enrolled nor eligible to enroll in the program at the time he filed his petition. The Board also argued that any standing petitioner may have had was in any event vitiated by the fact that he had not enrolled his son in the program for 1995-96 when he became eligible. The Board further contended that the program involved here was not within the mandate for the provision of a thorough and efficient system of free public education, and asserted that its general enabling legislation provided authority for its action in the absence of any legal prohibition against charging tuition for what the Board characterizes as a "pre-kindergarten" program. The Board also argues that, in the event that the State Board finds to the contrary, the ruling should apply prospectively because the issue is a novel one.

Before we turn to the merits of this matter, we are compelled to reject the Board's contention that petitioner did not have the requisite standing to bring this action. Ridgewood Educ. v. Ridgewood Bd., 284 N.J. Super. 427 (App. Div. 1995).

Accordingly, we now consider the merits of the Board's appeal. Initially, we agree with the Board that the Commissioner erred in his reading of N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4. However, as follows, this does not change the ultimate outcome because N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4 does not provide any resolution to this controversy.

N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4 provides that:

The expenses of nursery schools or departments or of kindergarten schools or departments shall be paid out of any moneys available for the general fund expenses of the schools, and in the same manner and under the same restrictions as the expenses of other schools or departments are paid.

As the Board argued in its brief to us, the Commissioner did not provide any authority to support his legal conclusion that:

[the phrase] “moneys available from the general fund of the schools” must be read to refer to money obtained from local taxes, state and/or federal aid or other nontuition sources....

Exhaustive review of the education statutes has failed to reveal any basis to support this conclusion. In 1993, those statutes specifying the budget adoption process, State education aid, and various statutes pertaining to expenditures, such as the one involved here, were amended to replace the term “current expense” with the term “general fund.” L. 1993, c. 83. Although the statutes do not define that term, N.J.A.C. 6:20-2.A(c)(1)(i) provides that the general fund shall include general current expenses, capital outlay, and any other current expense categories which the Commissioner may designate. Simply put, the general fund is used to account for all of a district’s current expenses and capital outlay, and there is nothing that would limit the resources that must be accounted for by the general fund to amounts raised from local taxes and State and/or federal aid. N.J.A.C. 6:20-2A.2.⁵

⁵ We note that prior to the enactment of the Quality Education Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-1 et seq., our system of school finance used the concept of “net current expense budget” in determining State aid to be given to the districts, and that such amounts were limited to revenues raised by local taxation and State aid. While this might account for the confusion, this concept was eliminated from the statutory framework by the Quality Education Act. Compare N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-3 (repealed L. 1990 c. 52, effective July 1, 1990) with N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-3.

Without anything more, we find that N.J.S.A. 18A:44-4 merely prescribes the manner in which the expenses of both nursery and kindergarten programs must be paid. Hence, our conclusions in this respect do not resolve the question of whether the Montclair Board may charge tuition for the program at issue herein.

As the ALJ found, the starting point for resolving this question is our Constitution's mandate that the State establish and maintain a thorough and efficient system of free public schools for children between the ages of five and eighteen. N.J. Const., Art. 8, Sec. 4, Para. 1. Consistent with this obligation, the Legislature has mandated by statute that a district's public schools must be free to all people over five and under eighteen who meet residency requirements. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. At the same time, the Legislature has provided that no child under the age of five may be admitted to any public school, except as may be provided by law. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-5.

Chapter 44 of the New Jersey Statutes provides two exceptions to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-5. N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1, which the Commissioner presumed had provided the Montclair Board with the authority to establish the program at issue, permits district boards to establish nursery school programs in any school under their control and provides the authority for them to admit children who are "under the age at which children are admitted to other schools or classes in such district." However, in providing district boards with the authority to establish kindergarten schools or departments, N.J.S.A. 18A:44-2 provides another exception which permits such districts to admit children between the ages of four and five.

Our review of prior Commissioner decisions has revealed that, contrary to the Commissioner's conclusion, the program at issue in this case is a kindergarten program operated under authority of N.J.S.A. 18A:44-2, rather than a nursery school program. In fact, this very question was litigated in Lundy v. Board of Education of the Township of Montclair, decided by the Commissioner on December 31, 1984, to which the Montclair Board was a party. In Lundy, a resident of the district, who also was a teacher employed by the Montclair Board, alleged that the Montclair program was being conducted in violation of the law because the District was employing teachers who did not have nursery school endorsements. The sole question involved in that litigation was whether the Board's program necessarily included a nursery program, and the Montclair Board presented extensive documentary evidence and testimony at hearing to establish that the program was a two-year kindergarten program operated under N.J.S.A. 18A:44-2 rather than a nursery school program under N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1.

That evidence included the testimony of Dr. Mary Lee Fitzgerald, who was then the Superintendent of the Montclair District. She testified as to the nature of the program, recounting that it was:

...an early childhood program for 4, 5 and 6 year old children...developed as part of the district's desegregation plan. It was a magnet program to draw children out of their natural neighborhoods to two or three elementary schools....It was designed as a developmental program, non-graded, so that children could pass through it at their own developmental rate. The program...[was] designed to accommodate, for example, early readers to [sic] progress faster than slower children....The curriculum was developed by specialists in the central district office....The district has no definition generally of "kindergarten." For identification purposes, the term "Primary Unit," signifying a two-year program allowing children to pass through more or less rapidly, as the case may be, is of common usage. To petitioner's question whether there is in the district an established "nursery school"...there is no nursery school incorporated as such in the Primary Unit Program....The district program is an academic one with a written curriculum, which differentiates it, commonly, from many private nursery school programs....

Lundy, supra, slip op. at 5.

The ALJ in that case found that the evidence did not show the establishment of a nursery program under N.J.S.A. 18A:44-1, but rather of a kindergarten school or department under N.J.S.A. 18A:44-2 for the education of children over the age of four and under the age of five. The Commissioner adopted the ALJ's determination. See also Lucia C. Miller v. Hoboken Board of Education, decided by the Commissioner, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 21 (1991).

The Board's submissions in this case show that the program involved herein is the same program that was challenged in Lundy. See, e.g., Board's brief in support of appeal, appendix at A-27. While we grant the Board's motion to supplement the record with the certification of William L. Libera, Montclair's current superintendent, nothing in that certification or in the Board's exceptions to our Legal Committee's report call into question our conclusion that the Montclair Board has not acted to change the character of the program since the Lundy decision was rendered. In this respect, we stress that although the Board points to changes in the delivery of its program, such as teaching four- and five-year-olds in separate classes in some cases, it states clearly that both the curriculum and the philosophy of the program have remained the same. Board's Exceptions, at 3. See also Miller v. Hoboken, supra (relying on Lundy to conclude that the petitioner in that case was not required to hold nursery school certification since Hoboken's "pre-kindergarten" program, like the Montclair program, appeared to be an academic program with a written curriculum).

That being the case, and in the absence of any express authority to charge tuition, it is clear that the District may not charge tuition to those four-year-olds enrolled in the program.

Examination of the current funding statutes supports this conclusion. N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-6, which specifies the program and grade categories for purposes of determining the foundation aid to which a district may be entitled, provides for a foundation weight of 1.00 for the grade category of "Full Day Kindergarten or preschool" and a foundation weight of 0.50 for the grade category of "Half Day Kindergarten or preschool." The State Board's regulations requiring the Commissioner to prepare a school register for recording pupil attendance at all of the public schools in New Jersey operated by district boards except adult high schools, and which provide the basis for calculating State foundation aid under the current system, provide that registers must be kept for AM kindergarten, PM kindergarten and Full day kindergarten. N.J.A.C. 6:20-1.1. They further specify that kindergarten is "over four years and less than six years." N.J.A.C. 6:20-1.2 (c). Hence, under our current system of school funding, children enrolled in programs like that in Montclair are counted for purposes of State aid to the district.

We recognize that the Legislature has not extended the scope of the constitutional mandate for the provision of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools to include all early childhood programs. However, by enacting N.J.S.A. 18A:44-2, the Legislature recognized the importance of kindergarten programs for four-year-olds and, by adopting N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-6, it has assured that where a district establishes such a program, it will be supported by State aid as part of the system of public education provided by the district. We believe that sound education policy supports this result. Further, given the terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:44-2, which provides the authority for establishing kindergartens generally, we can find no educationally sound basis to distinguish between programs such as Montclair's Primary Unit Program and other kindergarten programs operated by district boards of education so as to permit the Montclair Board to charge tuition for its program.

Therefore, for the reasons we have expressed, we affirm the Commissioner's ultimate conclusion as modified herein. We also reject the District's argument that the ruling should only apply prospectively. As a party to the prior litigation involving this specific program, the District has long had notice that its Primary Unit Program was a kindergarten program.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

IN THE MATTER OF THE BRANCHBURG :
TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL OF : DECISION
LEASE PURCHASE AGREEMENT, :
SOMERSET COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning citizen contended proposed lease purchase agreement was a "financing" requiring voter approval under N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2 and that the specific terms of the agreement further violated state education law and the Constitution.

ALJ concluded that the proposed lease purchase transaction was a valid exercise of authority granted it by statute, that the controlling agreement did not create a "debt" requiring voter approval, and that this agreement was not otherwise contrary to statutory or constitutional law.

Subsequent to issuance of the initial decision, petitioner advised that the lease purchase application in dispute had been rendered moot by passage of a building referendum at the annual school election on April 18, 1995. Accordingly, the Commissioner made no determination with respect to the initial decision and dismissed the appeal as moot.

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ t/a:

INTRODUCTION

This matter is before the Office of Administrative Law on remand to the Commissioner of Education from the State Board of Education. The Branchburg Township Board of Education (Board) operates a Type II K-8 school district with three school buildings. The Old York school houses grades kindergarten through second, the Stony Brook school has grades three through five, and the Central school houses grades six through eight. Branchburg pupils attend high school on a tuition basis at the Somerville High School. Thomas Christensen (petitioner) is a parent, resident and taxpayer of the Township of Branchburg. He claims that the lease purchase transaction intended to be entered by the Board and as already approved by the Commissioner of Education and the Local Finance Board of the Department of Community Affairs is a transaction not authorized by law.¹ The Board maintains that it is fully authorized by legislative authority to enter the controverted lease purchase transaction.

The following procedural history of the matter is not in dispute between the parties² and is based upon, if not directly taken from, their respective submissions.

Between 1990 and 1992 three referenda presented by the Board to its electorate which addressed the issues of present and future overcrowding of its three existing school buildings and the respective needs of each facility were defeated. It is inferred that after the last defeat and into and through 1993 the Board began to seriously consider a lease purchase agreement as a solution to its facility needs. During January and again in February 1994, the Board held public hearings on the issue of construction of a fourth school building on land it already owns and to make additions and modifications to its three existing buildings through lease purchase under N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(f).

On February 22, 1994, the Board adopted a resolution to seek approval from the Local Finance Board of the Department of Community Affairs for the issuance of Certificates of Participation (COPs) in the amount of $24.75 million to address its facility needs through lease purchase. It planned one new school building on vacant land it already owns and additions and modifications to the three existing buildings. On March 15, 1994, the Board submitted an application (J-1) for approval of the lease purchase agreement to the Commissioner of Education and, on March 22, 1994, it submitted an application for approval of the proposed agreement's financial terms to the Local Finance Board at the Department of Community Affairs.

On April 8, 1994, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal³ before the Commissioner of Education seeking to be heard on his claim that the agreement as submitted for approval by the Board was not an agreement authorized by law.

The Petition was returned to petitioner by the Acting Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the Department of Education with a cover letter dated April 20, 1994, who advised that no mechanism existed under N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(f) nor the regulations, N.J.A.C. 6:22A-1.1 et seq., for the Commissioner to entertain a challenge to the Board's proposed lease purchase agreement, nor for a public hearing before the Commissioner on the Board's application then pending. Finally, the Department took the position that because the Commissioner had not yet ruled on the Board's application for approval of its proposed lease purchase transaction no "final agency" action had occurred under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 which would be reviewable by the Commissioner. In short, petitioner was advised that his opportunity to be heard on the Board's application for approval would arise when the Commissioner issued a final decision and an appeal of that decision was taken to the State Board of Education. Petitioner appealed the Commissioner's denial to be heard before the approval decision was reached to the State Board of Education.

In the meantime, the Commissioner determined on April 20, 1994, to approve the Board's proposed lease purchase transaction.⁴ On May 10, 1994, the Local Finance Board (see J-2) of the Department of Community Affairs also approved the financial proposals contained within the lease purchase transaction. The Commissioner, through his Deputy Commissioner, denied petitioner's application to stay the approval granted the Board's lease purchase transaction.⁵ Petitioner appealed the denial of the requested stay to the State Board of Education which denied this appeal on June 1, 1994. On June 6, 1994, a three-judge panel of New Jersey Superior Court, Appellate Division, summarily reversed the State Board and granted petitioner's application for a temporary restraint against the Board from closing on the lease purchase transaction as approved by the Commissioner on April 20 pending final decision by the State Board on petitioner's challenges.⁶

Thereafter the State Board of Education entertained arguments on petitioner's original appeal to it challenging the Department of Education's refusal to allow him to be heard prior to the Commissioner granting approval to the then pending application of the Board. On October 5, 1994, the State Board, in addition to dismissing the Township Committee as a party, held as follows:

The Acting Director [of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes] erred both in "returning" the petition and in her conclusion as to the scope of the Commissioner's jurisdiction. The substantive determination to refuse to entertain a petition made to the Commissioner of Education pursuant to his authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 is such that the responsibility entrusted to him requires that he render a final decision in the matter. In re Masiello, 25 N.J. 590 (1958); Laba v. Newark Board of Education, 23 N.J. 363 (1957). Hence, the Commissioner was required to render a decision with respect to the petition at issue here even if he had agreed that the petition should be dismissed. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

In this case, [petitioner] challenged the district Board's action in seeking approval of the proposed lease purchase transaction, as well as to the validity of the transaction. In doing so, he presented a controversy under the education laws, which must now be heard and decided [citation omitted].

We reiterate that the approval process before the Commissioner of Education is specifically designed to focus on the educational necessity of a proposed lease purchase transaction. Consequently, the current process does not guarantee that there is no legal impediment to the transaction.

We have no doubt that our adjudicative responsibility requires that we resolve any questions as to whether the transaction proposed by a district board conforms with the requirements of the education laws. [In a footnote the State Board observes that under N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(f) the Local Finance Board determines issues of fiscal reasonableness of the transaction and that in this case that board approved the lease purchase.] [Petitioner] attempted to invoke the Commissioner's jurisdiction under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 to hear such questions before the Commissioner approved the project pursuant [to] N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(f). Given that those questions have not yet been heard, the proper recourse is to remand the matter.

Finally, we reiterate that we are remanding this matter for resolution of [petitioner's] claim that the proposed project would contravene the education laws. This requires examination of the terms of the agreement, including those providing for remedy in case of default by the school district, in order to assure that the District's ability to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students is not placed in jeopardy. [Citing Citizens Advocating referendum for Education ("CARE") v. Board of Education of the Township of Passaic, decided by the Commissioner, March 2, 1989, appeal dismissed, State Board, July 5, 1990.]⁷

On November 3, 1994, the Commissioner of Education transferred the matter on remand to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. On December 26, 1994, this administrative law judge was assigned the matter, on a temporarily assigned basis (t/a), and a telephone prehearing conference was conducted January 4, 1995. A prehearing order was entered the same day, and amended by consent the following day, which lists among other items certain agreed upon legal and factual issues to be decided regarding the $24.75 million lease purchase transaction. It was also agreed that the legal issues would be decided on cross-motions for summary decision, that a burden of proof issue presented by petitioner would be decided before hearing, and that the factual issues would be heard February 14 through 17 at the Office of Administrative Law in Mercerville.

⁷ It is noted that petitioner had also sought an Order from the State Board that the Commissioner recuse himself from deciding this appeal. The State Board remanded that issue directly to the Commissioner for determination in the first instance, but petitioner subsequently withdrew that motion.

During January 1995 counsel filed briefs in support of their respective positions on the agreed upon legal issues. Eventually the scheduled hearing was canceled and the burden of proof issue became moot due to the following circumstances.

On January 26, 1995, the Board adopted a resolution by which it acknowledges its proposed lease purchase transaction, already approved by the Commissioner and the Local Finance Board in the total amount of $24.75 million, was based on pupil enrollment projections prepared by a professional consultant it engaged and whose projections it relied upon, but that actual enrollments in 1994-95 were significantly lower than predicted. The Board, because of the lower than projected 1994-95 enrollments, directed the consultant to prepare revised projections which incorporate actual 1994-95 enrollment data. The revised projections became available during January 1995 which, the Board says, supports the need for new facilities due to enrollment growth "but at a slower rate than predicted in April 1994." Therefore, the Board resolved to modify its school facility needs with respect to the lease purchase transaction and reduce the total amount of anticipated necessary financing from $24.75 million to $14.175 million. Rather than constructing one new school together with additions and modifications to all three existing schoolhouses, the Board now plans to construct the one new school building and to make additions and modifications to one of the three existing schoolhouses. Board counsel represents that the modified plan and lower financing has been submitted to the Commissioner for approval.⁸

As a consequence of the modification of the proposed transaction, petitioner takes the position that while the legal issues already briefed by the parties during January need to be resolved all factual issues are rendered moot and, therefore, a plenary hearing is not necessary. Furthermore, petitioner voluntarily waives with prejudice any factual challenges he may otherwise make with respect to the modified proposal. Petitioner writes as follows:

As I indicated in my earlier correspondence, it appears that the Branchburg Township Board of Education is in the process of modifying the $24.75 million lease purchase plan and that after modification, the cost of the project will be reduced by at least $10 million. As a consequence, it is the position of this office that all of the factual issues (issue #3) related to the initial plan are now moot. Therefore, there is no need for a hearing on these issues.

As to the modified plan, and after further consideration of the matter, [petitioner] will not be raising any factual challenges other than the legality of the modified lease purchase plan (the issues of legality are the same as issues #1 and #2 as specified in the Pre-Hearing Order). This waiver is to be deemed to be with prejudice. ([Petitioner], however, is retaining the right to make written submissions directly to the Department of Education relative to the modified plan.)⁹

Board counsel agrees¹⁰ a hearing is not necessary in light of petitioner's voluntary waiver with prejudice of any factual claims he may otherwise make regarding the proposed modified lease purchase transaction. He also agrees, however, that the legal issues need to be determined.

It is noted that the record of the case through its transfer to the Office of Administrative Law is as stated on the attached Exhibit A and as presumably prepared by the Department of Education on behalf of the State Board of Education. Documents which are notated in that Exhibit but specifically relied upon in this initial decision are, where and when appropriate, referenced as "J" exhibits in the text or in the specific associated footnote despite the reference number in the attached Exhibit A. LEGAL ISSUES

The agreed upon legal issues as stated in the Prehearing Order, numbers one and two, and as amended by consent, are these:

1. Is the proposed lease purchase agreement a “financing” which requires voter approval under N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(d), and
2. Do any of the specific terms of the proposed lease purchase agreement violate the education laws (N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1, et seq.) or either the state or federal constitution. This issue, the parties agree, includes the concern of the State Board of Education as stated in its decision with respect to the remedy section of the Agreement.

Petitioner’s major legal arguments as presented in his brief are that the controverted lease purchase transaction, either under the original $24.75 million plan or the modified plan, is a borrowing transaction not authorized by statute without voter approval; that the lease purchase transaction is a source or tax exempt borrowing without voter approval and that as such it is “redundant”; and, that the lease purchase transaction contains provisions which violate certain education laws and the New Jersey Constitution.

The parties agree that the facts necessary to resolve the stated issues are these.¹¹ The Board currently holds title to certain property in Branchburg Township. One parcel is vacant upon which the new school would be constructed, while additions and modifications would have been made to the three existing school buildings. Under the modified plan, the new school is still to be constructed on the vacant parcel and an addition is to be added to one schoolhouse. Barring a default on the lease purchase agreement (see J-4), title to the properties would remain with the Board at all times. In order to facilitate the transaction, a for-profit corporation known as the Lamington Funding Corporation has been retained to serve as the nominal lessor. Lamington and the agent, which is First Fidelity Bank, National Association, New Jersey (or agent), are third party lease purchase financing sources without any title to the Project, but subject only to the security interest set forth in the lease.

The Board is to enter a ground lease (J-5) pursuant to which the Board will demise and lease to the lessor its vacant land and the three existing school building properties. The purpose of the ground lease is to provide security to lessor, its assignees and to the owners of the Certificates of Participation “for the payment of principal and interest on the aforesaid Certificates. . .” (J-5).

Simultaneous to the execution of the ground lease, the Board and lessor will enter a lease purchase agreement (J-4) through which the Board will lease from lessor for a maximum 30 years, with an Option to Purchase, the new school building to be constructed, as well as leasing the three existing school buildings to which additions and modifications are to be made as the result of the result of the lease purchase transaction. As pointed out by petitioner, the Board shall retain title to the real property; it will repay the amounts advanced by the COP holders with interest; it will arrange for and is solely responsible under the entire lease purchase agreement for all construction; and, it will indemnify lessor from all actions and liability.

The lessor, simultaneous to the execution of the ground lease and the lease purchase agreement, will enter an agent agreement (J-6) with the designated agent, First Fidelity Bank, and will assign its right, title and interest to First Fidelity on behalf of the COP holders. The agent shall be indemnified for any liability other than that arising from the transfer of funds.

First Fidelity and the underwriters will sell the Certificates of Participation in the public market. The underwriters are senior underwriting manager Printon, Kane Group, Inc. and co-manager Ferris, Baker Watts. They were recommended by the Board's financial advisor for the entire transaction, Municipal Advisory Partners, Inc. from among six inquiries received following the Board's public solicitation for Request for Proposal to provide underwriting services. The Board accepted the recommendation of its financial advisor and made the appointments.

The agent, First Fidelity, will facilitate the flow of funds between COP holders and the Board. The agent will hold the proceeds from the sale of the COPs in escrow, establish the required reserves, and make funds available to the Board for, under the modified plan, the construction of the new school building and modifications to the existing school building.¹² The Board will pay the holders of the COPs "rent" on a semi-annual basis, comprised of principal and interest, which begins to accrue upon closing. Bond counsel for the transaction is of the legal opinion that the interest portion is exempt from federal income taxation under the Internal Revenue Code, Section 103, 26 U.S.C.A. 103. The Municipal Bond Investors Assurance Corporation provided the Board with a Commitment to provide it insurance for the total transaction (J-9).

The Board shall provide funds for the semi-annual payments out of each annual budget adopted for the operation of the school district. Thus, the payment of the “rent” is subject to an annual appropriation by the Board as approved by its electorate or as established by the governing body, subject to appeal to the Commissioner, if the electorate defeats the proposed budget. Under Section 303 of the Agreement, the Board has the right to cancel the lease at the end of any fiscal year if for any reason it does not or is not authorized to appropriate sufficient funds to make the “rent” payment.

Should the lease be terminated for nonappropriation or in the event of default, paragraph (b) of Section 303 provides that the Board will not “. . . to the extent permitted by law . . . (i) purchase, lease, rent or procure other functionally similar real or personal property from any third party or (ii) procure services from a third party, which services are functionally similar to the utilization of the Project by the [Board]. . . .” Upon termination of the lease by the Board through default or nonappropriation, it shall surrender possession of property subject to the lease. Finally, an acceleration clause of the Agent Agreement at Article VII, Section 7.02, provides for the payment of the balance of principal which remains outstanding and interest accrued thereon to the date of such acceleration.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

Petitioner’s Arguments

Petitioner argues that the financial essence of the contested lease purchase transaction constitutes a “borrowing” of monies by the Board not authorized by law without voter approval. Petitioner asserts that the statute authorizing lease purchase transactions, N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2, provides only for a board of education to make present rental payments to an owner of property to occupy that property with the goal of acquiring title at some future time. Petitioner contends that because the “borrowing” in this transaction requires voter approval pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:24-12(b), the proposal the Board successfully put to the Commissioner of Education for approval is invalid and, therefore, the approval given by the Commissioner is also invalid. Petitioner argues that the lease purchase agreement is not as authorized at N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(f) and cites Bulman v. McCrane, 64 N.J. 105 (1973). Petitioner, relying upon Bulman, is of the view that for this lease purchase agreement to be valid the Board would be required to solicit bids from contractors to accomplish the construction and modifications contemplated here. The contractor would obtain his/her own financing for the total project, complete the project and then enter a lease with the Board for a definite period of time - as an example for 25 years. At the end of that time, the Board would then have the right to take title of all the property upon the payment of a nominal consideration to the contractor.

Petitioner argues that if the sole purpose of the lease purchase statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2, is to provide a means to boards of education for capital financing without voter approval then the statute would be "redundant" for this reason. The New Jersey Supreme Court, in Upper Freehold Regional School District, 86 N.J. 265 (1981), confronted a school building with a roof in serious disrepair, but the electorate defeated three referenda to raise the funds necessary for repair. The Court, despite the defeat of the referenda, found that the Commissioner had the implied power to approve the issuance of bonds, despite the respective defeats, where the purpose was to insure that the district's pupils would have the opportunity to receive a thorough and efficient program of education. Petitioner notes that the Commissioner has since exercised that authority to authorize the issuance of bonds without voter approval, when necessary, and cites Contini v. Board of Education of the Southern Gloucester Regional School District, 1986 S.L.D. 62, 86.

In addition to his other arguments addressed or soon to be addressed, petitioner also argues that because the ground lease is to provide security for the payment of principal and interest it creates a security interest in the real property. Consequently, petitioner asserts the ground lease, despite the use of the term "lease," is a mortgage at law or an equitable mortgage which lessor may foreclose upon in the event of default or nonappropriation. This feature, petitioner contends, shows that the instant lease purchase transaction is a "borrowing" which requires voter approval and, he reasons further, that this entire disputed transaction must be governed by N.J.S.A. 18A:20-4.2(d).

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioner, as was a reply by the Board.

Subsequent to expiration of the exception period but prior to the due date for issuance of the Commissioner's decision, petitioner requested dismissal of the within appeal on grounds that passage of a referendum at the annual school election on April 18, 1995 had rendered moot all questions relating to the lease purchase application in dispute herein.

Upon review and consideration, the Commissioner concurs that this matter no longer constitutes a controversy before him pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Accordingly, the Commissioner makes no determination with respect to the findings and conclusions of the initial decision and dismisses the appeal for reason of mootness.

The announced results of the balloting for the General Fund question of the Board of Education at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the Hillsborough Township School District were as follows:

Pursuant to a letter request from Thomas J. Rebbin, dated and filed on April 19, 1995, and a letter request from twelve qualified voters, also dated and filed on April 19, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Somerset County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2 and for the General Fund question pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.3. The recount was conducted on April 24, 1995 at the Somerset County Board of Elections Voting Machine Warehouse in Hillsborough and at the Office of the Somerset County Superintendent of Schools in Somerville. Absentee ballot counts were provided by the Somerset County Board of Elections.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tallies stood as follows:

For Members of the Board for Full Terms of Three Years Each

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Aletia H. Morgan	1191	1	1192

#6 - Hillsborough Municipal Building	147	131
#7 - Amsterdam Elementary School	168	120
TOTAL:	1003	977

As indicated above, there was no change in tally for three-year terms and a minor change in tally for the one-year term, which did not affect the outcome of the election.

However, on the General Fund question, workers at Polling District #1 reversed the votes For and Against, recording 194 votes For, instead of 182, and 182 votes Against, instead of 194; workers at Polling District #7 incorrectly read the total votes For as 100 rather than 168. Consequently, the tally of votes For was increased on recount by 56, and the tally of votes Against by 12, bringing the total tallies to 1003 For and 977 Against, thereby altering the announced result of the balloting.

At the time of the recount, the sealed election packets received from the school district were individually opened for the purpose of comparing, for each polling place, the number of ballots cast (public and protective counters) to the number of voter authorities issued and voter names on the poll list. The results of this comparison, covering 2,410 votes cast, revealed no discrepancies of any significance and were specifically as follows:

POLLING PLACE	PUBLIC COUNTERS	PROTECTIVE COUNTERS	POLL LIST	VOTING AUTHORITIES	VOIDED AUTHORITIES

#7	356	356	356	355	0

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

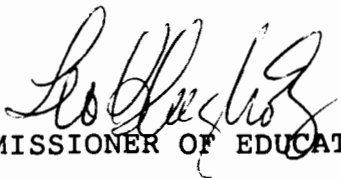

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that, as originally announced at the conclusion of the election, Aletia H. Morgan, Elizabeth R. Callahan and Edward Plaskon were elected to full terms of three years each, and that Michael D. Nee to an unexpired term of one year, on the Board of Education of the Township of Hillsborough.

However, the Commissioner further finds and determines that the announced results of the voting for the General Fund question of the Board were in error, and that, in actuality, the General Fund question of the Board of Education of the Township of Hillsborough was approved by the voters.

The announced results of the balloting for three members of the Board of Education for full terms of three years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the School District of the City of Millville were as follows:

Glenn R. Nickerson	767	57	824
Dale L. Finch	534	41	575
Michael Whilden	351	38	389
Robbin Hargrove	369	19	388
Barbara R. Boyle	364	17	381
C. Paul Briada	235	11	246

Pursuant to a letter request from Robbin Hargrove dated April 20, 1995 and filed on April 24, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Cumberland County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2. The recount was conducted on April 25, 1995 at the fourteen polling districts used during the election. Absentee ballots were recounted on the same date by the Cumberland County Board of Elections.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood as follows:

Glenn R. Nickerson	767	57	824
Dale L. Finch	534	42	576
Michael Whilden	351	38	389
Robbin Hargrove	369	20	389
Barbara R. Boyle	364	17	381
C. Paul Briada	235	11	246

There were two absentee ballots that were not counted in the announced results of the election. The County Board of Elections and the representatives of the Board appeared before a Judge of the Superior Court in Bridgeton on April 25, 1995, to determine disposition of the two absentee ballots. The judge rejected one ballot, since it was received by the County Board of Elections on April 19, 1995, but counted the other, since it was delivered to a polling place during the election on April 18, 1995. The ballot which was counted included one additional vote for Robbin Hargrove. Thus, on recount, in addition to other minor changes in tally, a tie has resulted between Robin Hargrove and Michael Whilden. The Commissioner's representative, therefore, recommends that a special election be ordered as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(c).

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that Glenn R. Nickerson and Dale L. Finch were elected to full terms of three years each on the Board of Education of the City of Millville and that a tie vote exists for the remaining term.

Therefore, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(c), the Commissioner directs that a special election shall be held to fill the resultant vacancy, such election to be limited to candidates Robbin Hargrove and Michael Whilden and to be held on the earliest date possible in view of the prohibition on special elections within 20 days before or after the June 1995 primary election pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-3 and the need to accommodate absentee ballot notices pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-25.

Petitioning grandparent, a resident of Woodbury Heights, challenged Board's determination that his grandson, J.S., was not domiciled in the district. Board sought reimbursement for tuition.

Having reviewed testimony of investigators and documents submitted, ALJ found that although petitioner was a resident of the district, his grandson was not. ALJ concluded Board could pursue appropriate action to recover tuition funds.

Commissioner concurred with ALJ's findings and determination that J.S. was not domiciled in respondent's district and directed petitioner to remit to the Board tuition for J.S., pro-rated to the time of his ineligible attendance in the district.

INITIAL DECISION

AGENCY DOCKET NO. 385-9/94

S.J.S. ON BEHALF OF HIS MINOR

GRANDCHILD, J.S.,

Petitioner,

v.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF WOODBURY HEIGHTS, GLOUCESTER COUNTY,

Respondent.

S.J.S., petitioner, pro se

Russell J. Paul, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: January 30, 1995

Decided: March 10, 1995

BEFORE KATHRYN A. CLARK, ALJ:

At the start of the hearing, petitioner asked for a continuance because his attorney could not be present. As neither this tribunal nor respondent had been given any indication prior to the commencement of the hearing of an appearance by counsel for petitioner, and as petitioner could not produce any documentation, such as a business card or a note, from the purported counsel, this request for a continuance was denied.

Petitioner said that he was the grandfather and legal guardian of J.S., but had no court order or other proof of guardianship, other than petitioner's Natural Parent/Guardian Affidavit (R-1), which was not notarized, as required.

Counsel for respondent moved for summary decision, which was not granted. The respondent proceeded by calling Mary Smith, Superintendent of Woodbury Heights School, who said that she had been advised that three students possibly were not living in the Woodbury Heights school district. She said that she asked for verification from the parents of these three children, and that the parents of two of these children provided the necessary verification within the time required.

The verification for the third student, J.S., was not provided by the due date (June 1, 1994). The afore-mentioned affidavit (R-1) of petitioner was sent to the school district on June 7, 1994. No documentation accompanied the affidavit.

Ms. Smith said that she then sent a further request for the information to J.S.'s mother, C.S.S., the daughter of petitioner, at 108 C. Avenue, Woodbury Heights, dated July 15, 1994, asking for proof of residency, such as a driver's license, credit card bills, income tax documents, etc. (P-1 at page 9). Ms. Smith received a telephone call from petitioner who offered her the opportunity to view J.S.'s bedroom at the 108 C. Avenue residence. On September 22, 1994, when Ms. Smith called petitioner to take advantage of the opportunity offered to her to view the child's bedroom, petitioner declined.

After not receiving the requested documentation, Ms. Smith sent C.S.S. a letter on August 25, 1994, advising her that the matter would be discussed at the September 1, 1994 meeting of the Woodbury Heights Board of Education. Ms. Smith again requested documentation, and offered an opportunity to appear to discuss the matter (P-1 at page 9).

At its September 1, 1994 meeting, the Woodbury Heights Board of Education voted to exclude J.S. from Woodbury Heights School. C.S.S. was sent a certified letter notifying her of this, and she and petitioner appealed (P-1 at page 5). The Board decided to allow J.S. to remain in Woodbury Heights School until the matter was ultimately resolved (P-1 at page 2).

C.S.S. claimed that since the letters sent to her by Ms. Smith asking for information and advising her of the September 1, 1994 meeting were not certified, she did not receive them. C.S.S. said that is why she and petitioner (her father) did not attend the meeting at which her son was excluded from Woodbury Heights school. C.S.S. said that when she told Ms. Smith that "she had (her) number", she did not mean it in a threatening way. Ms. Smith reported the comment to the police.

In September, Ms. Smith received a copy of J.S.'s mother's (C.S.S.'s) driver's license with the address of 108 C. Avenue (R-3), and a copy of a joint bank statement of C.S.S. and S.J.S., also giving the address of 108 C. Avenue (R-2). Also, J.S.'s mother, C.S.S., said that she had been a registered voter in Woodbury Heights since 1994 (no proof was offered of this). C.S.S. provided an affidavit, signed June 7, 1994, saying that she was living at 108 C. Avenue (S.J.S.'s address) and that she was the sole support of J.S (R-5). The affidavit of C.S.S. was notarized by her sister, M.A.S. Additionally, a copy of S.J.S.'s 1992 tax return (R-4) was provided, which listed both J.S. and C.S.S. as dependents of petitioner. No tax returns for 1993 or 1994 for either petitioner or C.S.S. were provided. No evidence of the provision of the necessities of life for J.S. by either petitioner or by C.S.S. were provided.

C.S.S. said that she stayed in an apartment in Knightsbridge Apartments in Westville anywhere from two to five nights a week. C.S.S. said that J.S. stayed at S.J.S.'s house in Woodbury Heights except on weekends when he stayed with her at Knightsbridge Apartments, or except when he was on visits with his father. Petitioner said that J.S. had a fever and stayed with his mother for a few days during the last two weeks, but his mother could not recall this.

Respondent next called Jane McKinney, who said she was J.S.'s teacher in the second and third grades. She said that when she was teaching the children to memorize their addresses and telephone numbers, in case of emergency, J.S. gave his address as Knightsbridge Apartments. She said that she asked him again, and he said he was sure he lived at Knightsbridge Apartments. Later, J.S. got a dog, and told Ms. McKinney that he knew the exact number of steps from his second floor apartment to take the dog out for a walk. J.S. also told Ms. McKinney that he had a pool, and that his baby-sitter took him to the pool. Petitioner said that the steps J.S. recalled, and the dog, were at his (S.J.S.'s) house. Petitioner offered no response regarding J.S.'s comments about the second floor apartment, or the baby-sitter, or the pool.

Respondent next called Patricia Borelli, who said that her investigation firm had been hired by the Woodbury Heights School District to verify the residence of J.S. Ms. Borelli said that she placed C.S.S.'s apartment at Knightsbridge Apartments in Westville under surveillance. Her report was admitted as R-7, and a photograph of J.S., which Ms. Borelli used to identify the child, was admitted as R-8. Ms. Borelli began her surveillance on January 17, 1995, at 6:12 a.m. Ms. Borelli observed C.S.S. and J.S. leave the apartment at 8:00 a.m., and observed C.S.S. and J.S. drive away in the direction of Woodbury Heights. Again, on January 19, 1995, at 6:28 a.m., Ms. Borelli arrived and observed C.S.S. and J.S. leave the apartment at 8:09 a.m., and observed C.S.S. and J.S. drive away in the direction of Woodbury Heights. Further, on January 20, 1995, at 6:25 a.m., Ms. Borelli arrived and observed C.S.S. leave the apartment at 8:11 a.m., and pull up to the door of the apartment, and pick up J.S. Ms. Borelli then observed C.S.S. and J.S. drive away in the direction of Woodbury Heights. Lastly, on January 26, 1995, at 8:10 a.m., Ms. Borelli observed C.S.S. leave the apartment at 8:10 a.m., and observed C.S.S. pull up to the door of the apartment, and pick up J.S.

The next to testify for respondent was Willard Brown, head of the investigation firm. Mr. Brown said that he did not wish to have Ms. Borelli follow C.S.S. from Knightsbridge every day, so he placed a second investigator at 108 C. Avenue (petitioner's address), on January 17, 18, 20, and 26. Mr. Brown himself was present surveilling the Knightsbridge Apartments on January 26, 1995, and arrived at the Knightsbridge Apartments at 7:28 a.m. At 8:09 a.m., he observed C.S.S. leave the apartment and drive up to the door of the apartment, and pick up J.S. Following that, Mr. Brown followed C.S.S. and J.S. to a convenience store. C.S.S. went into the store, returned to the car, and drove to Redbank Avenue, where she picked up another passenger. After that, C.S.S., the passenger and J.S. drove to Woodbury Heights School, arriving at 8:27 a.m. Mr. Brown said that he identified by J.S. by J.S.'s picture (R-8.)

Randy Schwartz, another investigator for the same firm, said that he was the investigator assigned to watch for J.S. at 108 C. Avenue. Mr. Schwartz, who had seen the picture of J.S. (R-8), saw no boy being dropped off or leaving that building between 6:15 a.m. to 8:40 a.m. on January 17, although he saw petitioner put out the trash. On January 19, Mr. Schwartz saw no boy being dropped off or leaving that building between 6:15 a.m. to 8:40 a.m., although he again saw petitioner put out the trash. On January 26, Mr. Schwartz saw no boy being dropped off or leaving that building between 6:50 a.m. to 8:45 a.m., although he saw petitioner make two short trips in his gray Lincoln. Mr. Schwartz denied being in a county vehicle while making these observations, although petitioner said he observed a county vehicle apparently watching his home at this time. Any surveillance the county government might have undertaken regarding petitioner is irrelevant to these proceedings.

Ms. Smith was recalled to testify that J.S. had been present in Woodbury Heights school on January 17, 19, 20, and 26, 1995.

As of the time of the hearing, no evidence of who provides the necessities of life for J.S. was ever provided, other than petitioner saying he paid all his bills in cash. Petitioner claimed that Ms. Smith has a vendetta against him. Petitioner also said that he owned all the cars driven by C.S.S. on the days she was under surveillance. Petitioner said that the residence at 108 C. Avenue was owned by his daughter, C.S.S. Petitioner offered no proof of any of these statements.

J.S. has been at Woodbury Heights School throughout the second grade and the third grade and, to date, the fourth grade. Respondent said that the actual tuition for J.S.'s education during 1992-1993 was $6,190, and that the actual tuition for J.S.'s education during 1993-1994 was $6,190, and that the estimated tuition for J.S.'s education during 1994-1995 was $3,095, for an approximate total due to the district of $15,475. Respondent said that the district is seeking reimbursement for tuition, in the event that J.S. is found not to be a domiciliary.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. No evidence of the provision of the necessities of life for J.S. by either petitioner or by C.S.S. was provided.
2. The Natural Parent/Guardian Affidavit (R-1) signed by petitioner, was not notarized, as required, and was delivered to Woodbury Heights School at least eight days after the deadline for submission.
3. No tax returns for 1993 or 1994 for either petitioner or C.S.S. were provided..
4. J.S. gave his address to Ms. McKinney as Knightsbridge Apartments. Ms. McKinney said that she asked him twice, and he said he was sure he lived at Knightsbridge Apartments. Later, J.S. told Ms. McKinney that he knew the exact number of steps from his second floor apartment to take his dog out for a walk. J.S. also told Ms. McKinney that he had a pool, and that his baby-sitter took him to the pool. No proof was offered that the dog or the pool or the baby-sitter were anywhere else but at the Knightsbridge Apartments.
5. The combined testimony of three private investigators confirmed that J.S. left from the Knightsbridge Apartments in the mornings on four separate occasions to go to school, and that he did not leave from the 108 C. Avenue address.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

The assertions that Ms. Smith acted from an improper motive in ascertaining the residence of J.S. were completely without foundation or proof. Indeed, it is part of her responsibility to the Woodbury Heights School District to make sure that the funds collected from the taxpayers of the Woodbury Heights School District are spent appropriately on the education of the children who reside in the district. Petitioner does reside in the district and is a domiciliary thereof, but his grandson J.S. is not.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that not only is J. S. not a domiciliary of Woodbury Heights, he is not even a resident of Woodbury Heights.

Respondent may now pursue an appropriate action before the Superior Court for the recovery of the tuition funds due to it.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's finding that petitioner's grandson, J.S., is not domiciled in respondent's district, and is, therefore, not entitled to a free public education in that district.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the ALJ is adopted for the reasons expressed therein, and, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b(1), the Commissioner directs that petitioner remit to the Board tuition for J.S., pro-rated to the time of his ineligible attendance in the district.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE

DECISION ON MOTION

RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT.

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, April 28, 1995

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Christopher C. Cona, Esq.

For the Respondent-Respondent, Russell Paul, Esq.

On April 28, 1995, the Commissioner of Education determined that petitioner's grandson was not domiciled in the School District of the Borough of Woodbury Heights and directed that petitioner remit payment for his grandson's tuition to the Woodbury Heights Board of Education (hereinafter "Board").

On May 8, 1995, petitioner, acting pro se, wrote to the Commissioner of Education. This letter states that petitioner had previously sent an "appeal" in writing to the Department of Education and that he hadn't received any response. He indicated that he was appealing again and that he had contacted a lawyer for this appeal.

Dec. 6, 1995

However, it was not until September 1, 1995, that the State Board Appeals Office was notified that petitioner was attempting to appeal. At that point, the time limit for filing an appeal from the Commissioner's decision had long passed. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-28. Accordingly, Counsel to the State Board notified the parties that petitioner's correspondence to the Commissioner was being referred to the State Board's Legal Committee for an assessment of whether petitioner had made a timely appeal. The briefing schedule was placed in abeyance.

By letter of September 21, 1995, Counsel to the State Board notified the parties that petitioner's correspondence did constitute notice of appeal for purposes of establishing the timeliness of the appeal, and, hence, the appeal was timely. The briefing schedule was reestablished.

By correspondence dated September 26, 1995, counsel for the Woodbury Heights Board communicated his vehement objection to the "recommendation" of the Legal Committee that was allowing petitioner's appeal.

By letter of October 5, 1995, Counsel to the State Board notified the parties that the correspondence from the Board's counsel was being considered as a motion to dismiss the appeal. The briefing schedule was once again placed in abeyance, this time pending disposition of the motion to dismiss.

On October 6, 1995, Christopher C. Cona, Esquire filed notice with the State Board that he was representing petitioner, who, until that point, had been acting on his own behalf. Petitioner's counsel did not, however, file an answer to the Board's motion to dismiss.¹

The thrust of the Board's motion is that petitioner's appeal should not be considered timely because his filing consisted of letters directed to the Commissioner rather than the filing of a notice of appeal addressed to the Legal Committee as specified by N.J.A.C. 6:2-1 et seq. He further contends that the appeal should be dismissed because petitioner did not serve him with notice and that because of the length of time that has passed, it is unfair to the Board to allow the appeal to proceed. Additionally, the Board's counsel urges that the decision to allow the appeal to proceed should have been made by the State Board of Education en banc.

Initially, we take cognizance of the fact that the materials which petitioner submitted included a Receipt for Certified Mail indicating that his letter of May 8, 1995, to the Commissioner was in fact received by the Department of Education on May 10, 1995. This was sufficient to establish that petitioner had made a timely appeal. The fact that petitioner directed his letter to the Commissioner, who is also secretary of the State Board, see N.J.S.A. 18A:4-9, was not a fatal defect, and the contents of the petitioner's May 8 letter clearly reflect that he was attempting to appeal from the Commissioner's decision in the case. Nor does the fact that petitioner failed to provide proof of service on the Board's counsel dictate dismissal. N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.17.

Any prejudice to the Board is the result of the fact that petitioner's letter of May 8 was not referred to the State Board Appeals Office. Petitioner was in no way responsible for this delay, and we decline to be party to the injustice that would occur were we to dismiss petitioner's appeal without considering the merits. N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.19.

Additionally, we stress that it was entirely appropriate for our Legal Committee to examine the circumstances of petitioner's filing and to direct that briefing on the merits of the appeal commence. The determination that petitioner's appeal was timely filed in no way constituted a final resolution of the appeal so as to require that action be taken by the State Board in open public meeting. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-28 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-29; N.J.A.C. 6:2-3.4(a).

For the reasons stated, we deny the motion to dismiss. Consistent with our determination, we direct that the briefing schedule be reestablished so as to permit us to consider the merits of petitioner's appeal and that petitioner file his appeal brief within twenty days of this decision.

DECISION ON MOTION

RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT. :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, April 28, 1995

Decision on motion by the State Board of Education, December 6, 1995

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Christopher C. Cona, Esq.

For the Respondent-Respondent, Russell Paul, Esq.

On December 6, 1995, we denied the Board's motion to dismiss this appeal as untimely and directed that petitioner file his appeal brief within twenty days so that we could consider the merits of his appeal. In making this decision, we were sensitive to the fact that petitioner had been acting on his own behalf when he first attempted to appeal from the Commissioner's determination directing him to remit payment for his grandson's tuition to the Board because his grandson was not domiciled in the district.

By the time we acted to deny the Board's motion, petitioner was represented by counsel. Following receipt of our decision, petitioner's counsel requested an extension of time in which to file his appeal brief. As petitioner's counsel confirmed in his letter of January 2, 1996, the Board's attorney consented to an extension until January 17, 1996. Petitioner's counsel committed himself to submit his brief by January 17, and on that basis, we extended the time for filing until that date. However, petitioner's counsel did not file a brief by that date or otherwise communicate with us.

On January 25, 1996, counsel for the Board renewed his motion to dismiss the appeal. Petitioner's counsel did not respond to the motion. Consequently, we advised petitioner's counsel by letter of February 13, 1996, that his failure to perfect the appeal by filing his appeal brief would be reviewed by the Legal Committee at its meeting on February 21 when it considered the Board's motion to dismiss the appeal. Petitioner's counsel did not respond to our letter.

The State Board of Education therefore grants the Board's motion, and we dismiss the appeal in this matter for failure to perfect. N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.12(a).

Decided: March 16, 1995

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

This is an appeal by the respondent, Norma McAfee, from her removal from her tenured position as a secretary with the Collingswood Board of Education on charges. Tenure charges were filed against the respondent by the respondent (Board) on May 25, 1994, alleging inefficiency. Her answer was filed on June 24, 1995, denying all of the charges.

On June 28, 1994, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Commissioner of Education as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. Thereafter, on September 21, 1994, a prehearing conference was conducted in the matter and, on September 23, 1994, the matter was scheduled to proceed to hearing. The scheduled hearing was cancelled at the joint request of counsel. On March 9, 1995, my office received a motion submitted by Mr. Damm on behalf of Ms. McAfee to dismiss the matter as moot. He bases his motion on a certification which he submitted dated March 3, 1995. Mr. McAfee represents that on January 20, 1995, Ms. McAfee voluntarily resigned from her position as a secretary, effective January 23, 1995. He then notes that as a consequence of her voluntary resignation from the position, which is the subject matter of her appeal, and the institution of tenure charges, her employment is no longer at issue and therefore seeks that the matter be dismissed as moot. He notes at paragraph 7 of the certification that he has spoken with Mr. Malachi J. Kenny, Esq., counsel to the Board, who advises that he does not oppose the motion "but in fact joins with McAfee in requesting that the matter be dismissed" (Certification of Michael C. Damm, paragraph 7).

Based upon the representations of Mr. Damm in his certification that the respondent is no longer in the employ of the petitioner's school district and based further upon the representation that he is joined in the motion to dismiss with counsel for the school district, I CONCLUDE that the matter sub judice be and is hereby moot.

It is therefore ORDERED that the matter be and is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE AS MOOT.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The announced results of the balloting for two members of the Board of Education for full terms of three years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the School District of the Borough of Woodcliff Lake were as follows:

Nancyellen Strobel	502	7	509
Joseph T. LaPaglia	471	24	495
Raymond J. Mitchell	454	24	478

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(c), which requires the Commissioner to conduct a recount where two or more candidates qualified by law receive an equal number of votes, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Bergen County Superintendent of Schools duly conducted a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board. The recount was conducted on April 25, 1995 at the County Voting Machine Warehouse in Carlstadt.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood unchanged, remaining as follows:

Nancyellen Strobel	502	7	509
Joseph T. LaPaglia	471	24	495
Raymond J. Mitchell	454	24	478

Absentee tallies on recount are as reported by the Bergen County Board of Elections. No application for a recount of absentee ballots had been made to Superior Court as of the date of the Commissioner's recheck of the voting machines. Thus, a tie remains between candidates LaPaglia and Star.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that a tie remains between candidates Joseph T. LaPaglia and Paula Star, and, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(c), directs that a special election be held to fill the resultant vacancy, limited to candidates LaPaglia and Star and to be held on the earliest date possible in view of the prohibition on special elections within 20 days before or after the June 1995 primary election pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-3 and the need to accommodate absentee ballot notices pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-25.

Petitioner, former tenured Assistant Manager for Safety/Loss Control and Custodians, alleged his subsequent position of Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds was unlawfully abolished by the State Fiscal Monitor.

ALJ concluded that the Commissioner had ample authority to appoint the Fiscal Monitor and the Fiscal Monitor has the authority to "terminate or promote any of those Board of Education employees under the supervision of the Board secretary or school business administrator without approval of the Board of Education, but in accordance with the applicable contractual or statutory procedures." (Administrative Consent Order) Moreover, the Board authorized the Fiscal Monitor's action by adopting the Deloitte and Touche report on the Business Office and the Buildings and Grounds Department. Also, the ALJ found that the requirements of the Veterans' Tenure Act did not apply since petitioner's position was terminated for reasons of efficiency not conduct.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Record Closed: March 1, 1995

Decided: March 17, 1995

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

This matter was initiated by the petitioner, Donald Wollman, by the filing before the Commissioner of Education of a petition of appeal on November 3, 1993. Mr. Wollman alleges that respondent, Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County ("Board" or "Trenton") unlawfully abolished his tenured position of Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds on or about October 15, 1993, following various actions taken shortly before that date, by both respondent Board as well as the State Fiscal Monitor appointed by the Commissioner of Education to oversee various aspects of respondent's business office and business affairs. Mr. Wollman contends that the action which abolished his position contravened N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 and was in violation of N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 -16-6, the Veterans Tenure Act. More specifically, Mr. Wollman argues that the abolition of his position was inconsistent with the statutory authority conferred upon boards of education under the former statute to abolish positions for reasons of economy and other good cause, and essentially argues that such statutory authority is not conferred upon the State Fiscal Monitor who purportedly acted in lieu of authority exercised by the Trenton Board of Education to abolish his position.

On November 23, 1993, respondent filed its answer before the Commission of Education essentially denying that the action undertaken by respondent directly, or indirectly, through the State Fiscal Monitor was improper or contravened applicable statutory education law or regulations.

Thereafter, on or about December 14, 1993, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 14F-1 to 13.

On May 4, 1994, a telephone prehearing conference was conducted with counsel and a prehearing order was issued on May 27, 1994. The reason for the delay in the issuance of the prehearing order was that counsel, at the time of the conference, were not in a position to schedule the matter for hearing and thus my office waited until they could provide scheduling dates which would be consistent with my calendar. The matter was then scheduled to proceed to hearing to July 22 and July 25, 1994 at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville, New Jersey. The matter did proceed as scheduled; however, the factual record remained open because the parties desired to execute a stipulation of facts and attachments but had been unable to do so as of that date. Accordingly, it was also agreed that a telephone conference be conducted, which was held on September 1, 1994 in respect to scheduling the submission of the stipulation of facts as well as scheduling the submission of post-hearing legal argument. On September 23, 1994, my office received by cover letter from Mr. Schwartz, an executed and signed stipulation of facts with attachments, which I thereafter entered into evidence as joint exhibit one (J-1). The document was received by my office on September 28, 1994, and on that date the evidential record in these proceedings closed.

Thereafter, on September 10, 1994, Mr. Schwartz submitted his initial brief and on December 5, 1994, Mr. Sumners submitted his brief on behalf of respondent. On December 16, 1994, Mr. Schwartz executed a reply brief which was received by office on December 19, 1994. By telephone call placed to his office on December 23, 1994, Mr. Sumners advised that he had nothing further to submit by way of legal argument.

After making an initial assessment of the post-hearing legal arguments submitted in these matters, it was my judgment that in Mr. Schwartz's reply brief of December 15, 1994, he ostensibly raised an issue which had not been raised either during the course of prehearing discussions or in the course of discussing the initial post-hearing submissions. That issue appeared to engender an argument that under the applicable statutes, the Commissioner of Education lacked the authority to create the title of Fiscal Monitor or to allow the Monitor to exercise the statutory authority normally attributed to local school boards. Having read that brief, I recontacted counsel and after bringing it to Mr. Sumners's attention he indicated an inclination to provide legal argument addressing itself specifically to the appointment and the authority of the Fiscal Monitor. Thereafter, on January 30, 1995, I received the respondent's letter brief in reply to Mr. Schwartz's response.

After receiving Mr. Sumners's brief, and after being advised by Mr. Schwartz that he had nothing further to offer, I again made a second review of the legal arguments and again addressed myself to the letter brief submitted by Mr. Schwartz by way of response dated December 15, 1994. After perusing the document for a second time, I discerned that pages of the document may have been missing although the letter was correctly paginated. I placed a telephone call to Mr. Schwartz and, after his own review of the document, he agreed that several pages were indeed missing. As a result, he faxed to me the completed responsive brief which I received on March 1, 1995. The record therefore closed on the latter date, March 1, 1995.

ISSUES AND BURDEN OF PROOF

The fundamental issue to be addressed in these proceedings is whether the abolition of Mr. Wollman's position with respondent, Assistant Director for Buildings and Grounds, which was effected on or about October 15, 1993, was consistent with statute and regulation, specifically N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. In respect to this issue, the burden rests exclusively upon the petitioner: Mr. Wollman must demonstrate by a preponderance of the relevant credible evidence that the abolition of his position was in contravention of law. More specifically, the petitioner must demonstrate the action undertaken by the respondent Board, in conjunction with the State Fiscal Monitor was unauthorized under statute. As a corollary petitioner must also establish that the abolition of his position was arbitrary and capricious and not undertaken for reasons of economy, efficiency or for other good cause.

In addition to the fundamental issue presented in this matter, addressing itself to whether the abolition of Mr. Wollman's position was effectuated for good cause and for reasons of economy or efficiency by the Trenton Board of Education, which is a mixed question of law and fact, there are also several issues that may be described as exclusively legal raised by Mr. Schwartz which also are addressed in this decision:

(1) Does the Commissioner of Education have the legal authority to create a Fiscal Monitor?

(2) Assuming arguendo that he does, does the fiscal monitor have the authority to unilaterally remove an employee, absent Board authorization?

(3) Does the Fiscal Monitor have the authority to abolish a position absent Board authorization?

(4) Did the Board of Education ratify the action undertaken by the Fiscal Monitor to either abolish a position or to remove the employee if arguendo the Fiscal Monitor could not act unilaterally?

(5) Were the actions undertaken by the Trenton Board of Education in this matter in violation of the petitioner's rights under the Veteran's Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 - 16-6.

In respect to all of these additional issues as well, the burden rests exclusively upon Mr. Wollman to establish the propriety of his position by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence.

THE FACTS

Unless otherwise indicated, the following is a substantially uncontradicted narrative of the operative facts in these proceedings. Where a factual issue is presented, I shall set forth its adversarial basis, arrive at an explicit finding of fact, and provide reasons to support that finding. Accordingly, I FIND:

The petitioner, Donald Wollman, has been employed by the Board since 1987, initially commencing his employment in the title, Assistant Manager of Safety and Loss Control and Custodians. Effective July of 1992, Mr. Wollman's title was changed to Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds. The basic responsibilities of that position are set forth as exhibit A of joint exhibit 1 (J-1). They cover a broad range of undertakings with the supervision of custodial services, maintenance employees, security staff, administrative responsibilities, and other duties under the general umbrella of assisting the Administrator of Buildings and Grounds. The various responsibilities that are delegated to Mr. Wollman in his capacity of Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds, were presumably identical to those conferred upon him when he served under the title of Assistant Manager of Safety and Loss.

Following a variety of administrative title changes, which have no direct bearing on these proceedings, Mr. Wollman was eventually reassigned to the title Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds and continued to serve in that capacity until October 15, 1993 when the title was eliminated, such action serving as the gravamen of the current appeal.

On April 7, 1993, the Commissioner of Education issued an order to show cause (R-2) against the Board of Education of the City of Trenton accompanied by a verified petition of appeal directing respondent to show cause why the Commissioner should not appoint a Fiscal Monitor. Following the issuance of the order to show cause and certain interim actions, on May 7, 1993, the City of Trenton and the Commissioner of Education entered into an administrative consent order (J-1 exhibit E) appointing Ms. Elizabeth E. De Matteo as Fiscal Monitor. The order, which was adopted by Board resolution, provided that the Office of Fiscal Monitor for the City of Trenton be established to “oversee and control the fiscal operations of respondent Board of Education . . .” The Fiscal Monitor was given the authority to, among other things, order respondent Board and its agents and officers to make appropriate budgetary changes as deemed necessary by her, to assure that the district has adequate fiscal and technical services to address a variety of deficiencies which had been identified. She was given the authority to order modification, development, and implementation of any changes in the procedures and operations of the fiscal affairs of Trenton which she deemed to create “an efficient fiscal administration . . .” J-1 exhibit E at 3.

The Fiscal Monitor was conferred with the authority to appoint or reassign permanent personnel to make the district more efficient and to order the appointment or reassignment of employees under the supervision of either the Board secretary or the school business administrator. She was also conferred with the authority to contract with outside auditors or accountants to assist her in making the decisions that she was charged with making. She was also given the authority to “terminate or promote any of those Board of Education employees under the supervision of the Board secretary or school business administrator without approval of the Board of Education, but in accordance with the applicable contractual or statutory procedures.” Id at paragraph I The full plenary powers of the Fiscal Monitor as set forth in the administrative order, are incorporated by reference into this opinion.

On March 10, 1993, Ms. De Matteo began serving as Fiscal Monitor in the District. (She terminated her responsibilities in that position one year later on May 10, 1994). The first six months on the job, Ms. De Matteo worked in the business office on a daily basis she found the office “to be in crisis” and saw as her first and primary responsibility its reorganization. Pursuant to her authority under the administrative order to reach out for outside assistance, Ms. De Matteo retained the services of the public accounting firm of Deloitte and Touche. The firm's first involvement with the district occurred in May 1993 when approximately eight people came into the district to assess the business office. Eventually, up to some 20 staff personnel from Deloitte and Touche were involved in the on-hands assessment of the office. Their work concluded in or about September of 1993, with some follow-up.

Ms. Kathleen Meyerhoff supervised the Deloitte and Touche study of the Trenton Board of Education's business office as well as the Buildings and Grounds Department. Ms. Meyerhoff testified on behalf of the Board of Education. She has undergraduate degree in economics as well as an MBA degree in finance. She has been employed with Deloitte and Touche for some six years and at the time of her testimony indicated that she was about to be promoted to senior manager.

Ms. Meyerhoff specializes in educational consulting within the management consulting division of Deloitte and Touche. She has served as a consultant on behalf of Deloitte and Touche for approximately one dozen school districts, several of which are located in New Jersey. She was qualified as an expert in educational operations.

Ms. Meyerhoff estimated that Deloitte and Touche expended 1300 hours in reviewing the Buildings and Grounds Department with a view towards its efficiency and operation. On November 1, 1993, the firm issued its report on the Buildings and Grounds Department (R-1) a six-part document containing approximately 114 pages and 19 pages of appendices. The report, among other things, concluded that the petitioner's position should be abolished and that his employment be terminated. The report concluded specifically that the position of Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds be abolished and that two coordinator positions be created in its place. The report gives as a rationale for this decision the following:

Improve efficiency and control of daily operations (standardization of practices, accessible management for crisis prevention/intervention, coordination of technical training, budget development/administration, supplies/product performance monitoring, site inspection program monitoring, attendance incentive program, etc.)

Improve lines of communication by clearly defining responsibilities

Lower operational spans of control to more appropriate levels

Support direct accountability for all major functional responsibilities of the department

Enhance the department's capacity for conducting strategic initiatives (planned preventive maintenance programs, Facilities Master Plan development, capital improvement project planning, resource utilization planning, etc.).

No evidence was offered by Mr. Wollman by way of testimony or documents which even attempted to demonstrate that the report of Deloitte and Touche was any fashion undertaken for reasons other than this well respected firm's objective of proposing to make the Department of Buildings and Grounds more efficient and organizationally sound. Additionally, no evidence or testimony was offered to suggest or even attempt to demonstrate that the Fiscal Monitor's actions in both appointing Deloitte and Touche to undertake its study or to follow-up on Deloitte and Touche's recommendations was in any way motivated by bad faith or was arbitrary or capricious. As was noted, the report recommended that in addition to abolishing the position that Mr. Wollman had occupied, Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds, the two new positions, "Coordinator, maintenance and capital projects," and "Coordinator, custodial and grounds," be created.

On October 1, 1993, prior to any official action undertaken by the Trenton Board of Education, Ms. De Matteo implemented these recommendations. She notified Mr. Wollman that as a consequence of the recommendation of Deloitte and Touche with respect to reorganizing the Department of Buildings and Grounds, his position was being abolished effective October 15, 1993. Because Mr. Wollman retained keys to a variety of facilities and offices within the Trenton School District, Ms. De Matteo advised him that he would be terminated effective October 1, 1993 so that he would be relinquishing those keys but that his salary would be continued through October 15th.

On October 5, 1993, Ms. De Matteo submitted a resolution to the Board abolishing Mr. Wollman's position and terminating him from employment. The Board did not move and vote on the resolution; however, the Fiscal Monitor, under her authority pursuant to the administrative order, read the resolution into the record and declared that Mr. Wollman's position was abolished and his employment terminated.

On November 18, 1993, the Trenton Board accepted the Deloitte and Touche report (R-1) addressing itself to the Buildings and Grounds Department and containing the recommendations at issue without exceptions. The Board adopted a resolution stating: "resolved, the Trenton Board of Education accepts the proposal as prepared by Deloitte and Touche and supports the implementation of same in the District by the State Fiscal Monitor." (R-1)

I shall address first the issue of whether the decisions to abolish Mr. Wollman's position and terminate him were done in good faith. I shall reserve for subsequent discussion the legal issues with respect to the authority of the Fiscal Monitor to act and the circumstances under which such action was effected.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 a Board of Education may reduce the number of its employees if it can be demonstrated that in the judgment of the Board it is "advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the District or for good cause" See Klinger v. Board of Education of Cranbury Township, 190 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1982), cert. denied 93 N.J. 277 (1982); In re Maywood Board of Education, 168 N.J. Super. 45, 51-52 (App. Div. 1979). The courts, as Mr. Sumners notes in his post-hearing briefs, have also acknowledged a presumption of correctness and propriety of the action of a local board in respect to decisions reducing staff. Thus, in order for an aggrieved party to prevail where there has been a reduction in force, it is necessary that he or she demonstrate that the decision is clearly improper, arbitrary and capricious and he will be generally not prevail in situations where there exists any reasonable justification for the reduction of force absent such proof of bad faith. See Klig v. Board of Education of the Borough of Palisades Park, Bergen County, 1975 S.L.D. 168, 173-174. In re Maywood Board of Education, Supra.

In the current matter, in my judgment, no demonstrable proof has been elicited from the petitioner, upon whom the burden rests, to demonstrate that the actions, either of the Fiscal Monitor, the Trenton Board of Education or, the accounting firm of Deloitte and Touche upon whom both the Fiscal Monitor and the Board reasonably relied, which recommended the abolition of Mr. Wollman's position and his termination was anything but reasonable, couched in expertise and ostensibly directed towards making the Department of Buildings and Grounds more efficient and economically sound. Whether in the long term the recommendations adopted by the school district to abolish the position of Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds and to redistribute any or all the responsibilities under that title to two separate positions fulfills the objective of the Fiscal Monitor remains to be seen; however, for purposes of the current appeal, the issue before me is not whether the result of the actions taken by the local school board and the Fiscal Monitor make Trenton a more efficient entity and place it on economically more stable ground. The issue rather is whether the determinations which were made resulting the termination of Mr. Wollman and the abolition of his position were grounded upon reasonable considerations rather than motivated by bad faith, arbitrariness and capricious.

In the current matter, based upon the totality of facts it is clear that the petitioner has been unable to even remotely demonstrate that the actions of the respondent in abolishing his position and terminating him were grounded in anything other than good faith, prompted by reasons of economy and efficiency, and thus conferred upon the Board good cause to take the action that it did. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to demonstrate by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that the abolition of his position, Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds and his termination from employment with the respondent was undertaken in bad faith, or was arbitrary and capricious or were in any fashion contrary to the dictates of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.

I shall now address the other legal issues raised by petitioner essentially by way of his post-hearing arguments.

The Commissioner's authority to appoint a fiscal monitor.

Petitioner's argument in respect to this issues is somewhat ambiguous. In his post-hearing reply brief, petitioner notes that "[n]othing in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. . . . authorizes the creation of the title of the fiscal monitor" but also acknowledges that the statute creates an implied authority in the Commissioner to create a Fiscal Monitor. Petitioner's central point appears to be that a Fiscal Monitor may not act in the place of a board of education.

Nevertheless, the reply brief gives some indication that petitioner is challenging the very appointment of a Fiscal Monitor. To the extent that petitioner argues that the appointment of a fiscal monitor is in and of itself impermissible, he is incorrect. The appellate division and Supreme Court have decided that the appointment of a monitor with general supervisory powers is valid under Title 18A. In the Matter of the Board of Education of Trenton, 176 N.J. Super. 553 (App. Div. 1980), aff'd per curiam 86 N.J. 327 (1981). The ALJ relied in part on that case when he ordered that the Commissioner recommend to the State Board the appointment of a fiscal monitor. McCarroll v. Bd. of Education of E. Orange, OAL Dkt. No. 7777-84 (Oct. 31, 1984), adopted Commissioner of Education (Nov. 7, 1984).

If petitioner is arguing that the appointment of a Fiscal Monitor must conform to the procedural requirements necessary to establish a state-operated school system. Those procedural requirements were followed insofar as the Commissioner issued an order to show cause and gave the Trenton Board of Education an opportunity for a hearing at OAL (the hearing never took place because the Commissioner and the Board entered into the consent agreement). The procedural requirement for establishment of a state-operated school system that was not followed was approval by the State Board. Here, the State Board apparently did not approve the administrative order establishing the fiscal monitor. The question thus is whether the requirement that the State Board approve a state takeover of a school system applies to the appointment of a fiscal monitor.

Petitioner asserts that, given the authority of a Fiscal Monitor to control the school system's financial affairs, the appointment of a fiscal monitor is tantamount to a state takeover. This argument is also rejected. Respondent correctly notes that the appointment of a monitor differs from a state takeover in a variety of ways. For example, when the Fiscal Monitor is appointed, the board and administration remain in their positions and the board retains control over non-fiscal matters. See N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15.1; N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34.

Furthermore, the terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 preclude petitioner from arguing that orders of the Commissioner that do not establish a state-operated school system must be approved by the State Board. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 provides that:

If, after a plenary hearing, the commissioner determines that it is necessary to take corrective action, the commissioner shall have the power to order necessary budgetary changes within the district or other measures the commissioner deems appropriate to establish a thorough and efficient system of education with the exception of the creation of a state-operated school district. . . . If the commissioner determines that the district has failed to take or is unable to take the corrective actions necessary to establish a thorough and efficient system of education, the commissioner shall recommend to the State board that it issue an administrative order creating a State-operated school district.

The statute sets up two scenarios. In an order to effectuate a state takeover of a school system, the State Board must issue the order. In all other cases, the Commissioner has the power to act on his or her own initiative.¹

¹ In In the Matter of the Board of Education of Trenton, supra, the corrective action plan, which included appointment of a monitor, was approved by the State Board. Likewise, in McConnell, supra, the Commissioner's decision merely recommended to the State Board the appointment of a Fiscal Monitor. This may be because, prior to 1988, the language of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 provided the Commissioner with less latitude. ("If, after a plenary hearing, the commissioner determines that it is necessary to take corrective action, he shall have the power to order necessary budgetary changes within the school district, to order in-service training programs for teachers and other school personnel, or both. If he determines that such corrective actions are insufficient, he shall have the power to recommend to the State board that it take appropriate action [including issuance of] an administrative order specifying a remedial plan to the local board

The Fiscal Monitor's authority to abolish Mr. Wollman's position and to terminate him.

- a. Authority under the administrative order.

Petitioner grounds his argument that the Fiscal Monitor is acting beyond the scope of the order on the following language in the order:

The Fiscal Monitor's powers shall include the authority to

- ...
i. terminate or promote any of those Board of Education employees under the supervision of the Board Secretary or School Business Administrator without approval of the Board of Education but in accordance with applicable contractual or statutory procedures. [Administrative Order at 4.]

Petitioner argues that the Fiscal Monitor did not act in accordance with applicable statutory procedures because N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 allows only the local board to terminate employees for reasons of economy or efficiency.²

The difficulty with this interpretation is manifest. It disregards the language of the order stating that termination may occur "without the approval of the Board of Education."³ Further, the intent of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 is not to exclude a Fiscal Monitor from making decisions a board would ordinarily make. The statute likely does not even contemplate a Fiscal Monitor acting in lieu of a board because Fiscal Monitors are rare and because the statute was adopted in 1967, of education, which plan may include budgetary changes or other measures the State board determines to be appropriate.") long before the appointment of any monitor. A more reasonable interpretation of the language of the order is to infer that a Fiscal Monitor, like a board, cannot disregard the tenure laws if he or she wishes to terminate an employee (e.g., she cannot fire a tenured employee without a reason).

² None of petitioner's written submissions advances the argument that Mr. Wollman's dismissal would have been illegitimate had the Board acted rather than the monitor, with the exception of the Veterans' Tenure Act claim. "[R]education in force is entirely within the authority of the board if done for reasons of economy." Klinger v. Bd. of Education of Cranbury, 190 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1982).

Pursuant to this analysis, the administrative order clearly authorized the Fiscal Monitor to terminate Wollman. The order, however, does not specifically confer the power to abolish positions. Given the scope of powers conferred by the order and the existence of the power to terminate, it must reasonably be inferred that such power exists. See, e.g., Administrative Order at 2 (“The Fiscal Monitor . . . is to assume control and supervision over all fiscal operations” Fiscal operations include supervision of buildings and grounds. Id. at 5). The list of powers includes the authority to order the Board to make budgetary changes, to veto any expenditure of funds or any personnel action, to order changes in the operations of the fiscal affairs of the district, and to appoint auditors (pursuant to whose recommendation Wollman’s position was abolished). All of these provisions provide support for the Monitor’s authority to abolish a position for efficiency reasons.

b. Authority under the statute

Petitioner also appears to be arguing that the order itself is defective insofar as the Commissioner lacks the authority to appoint a fiscal monitor who can terminate employees. This is distinct from the argument discussed, supra, which considered whether the Commissioner could appoint a fiscal monitor at all.

No legal authority was discovered that squarely addresses the issue of whether a Fiscal Monitor can or cannot terminate an employee. There is however, considerable authority affirming the Commissioner’s authority to insure a thorough and efficient education by whatever means he or she deems appropriate.

The Commissioner has broad remedial powers. See, e.g., Bd. of Education of Elizabeth v. City Council of Elizabeth, 55 N.J. 501 (1970); In the Matter of the Application of the Bd. of Education of Upper Freehold Regional School Dist., 86 N.J. 265, 274-275 (1981)

(Commissioner and State Board have the authority to direct a local board to issue bonds for a capital project, even though the local voters had rejected referenda to finance the project.) The Commissioner also has a responsibility to effectuate a thorough and efficient system of education. Robinson v. Cahill, 69 N.J. 449, 459-60 (1976).

The need for the Commissioner to exercise broad authority increases when a monitor is appointed. The appointment of a monitor occurs only under extraordinary circumstances. In the Matter of the Bd. of Education of Trenton, supra, 86 N.J. at 329; McCarroll v. Bd. of Education of E. Orange, OAL Dkt. No. 7777-84 at 5 (ALJ approves appointment of a Fiscal Monitor based on the existence of “fundamental problems and irregularities regarding . . . fiscal operation and management.”) Presumably, the greater the plight of the school system, the greater the discretion needed by the Commissioner to implement solutions to the problems. This explains the broad discretion conferred by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15:

If, after a plenary hearing, the commissioner determines that it is necessary to take corrective action, the commissioner shall have the power to order necessary budgetary changes within the district or other measures the commissioner deems appropriate to establish a thorough and efficient system of education with the exception of the creation of a State-operated school district. [Emphasis added.]

It is compelling therefore to conclude that the Commissioner’s authority is sufficiently broad to encompass the appointment of a Fiscal Monitor with the power to abolish a position and terminate an employee.

4. Board ratification of the Fiscal Monitor’s act.

Since I have concluded the Fiscal Monitor had the authority to terminate Mr. Wollman, the question of the Board’s ability to ratify is moot; however, assuming that the Fiscal Monitor was not authorized to terminate Wollman, the question becomes whether either 1) the Board’s silence during the Fiscal Monitor’s reading of the resolution or 2) the Board’s adoption of the Deloitte & Touche report constitutes ratification.

a. The Board’s silence as ratification

In general, ratification requires full knowledge of material facts on the part of ratifying entity. Capano v. Stone Harbor, 530 F.Supp. 1254 (D.N.J. 1982). Since the relevant discussion was carried on before the Board, the Board presumably had full knowledge. A municipality can ratify a contract entered into by an authorized agent, and the intent to ratify an unauthorized transaction may be inferred from a failure to repudiate it. Johnson v. Hospital Service Plan of N.J., 25 N.J. 134 (1957).

Nevertheless, implying ratification in this case poses two problems. First, it is unclear whether the Board's silence was intended as a ratification. Petitioner's case implied that the Board refused to abolish Wollman's position at the October 5th meeting, which cuts against an inference that the Board intended to ratify the Fiscal Monitor's action.

Second, although no law directly on point was found, there is reason to believe that a board of education may not abolish a position merely by remaining silent as an unauthorized person reads a resolution into the record. The ratification of the termination of an employee pursuant to a statute requiring board action may differ from the implied ratification of a contract. It might, for example, be inappropriate for a board's meeting to consist of the superintendent reading resolutions which the board adopts by virtue of its silence. In Bond v. Bd. of Education of Camden, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 577, a plan reassigning students was not voted on by the board because the board had given the superintendent authority to effect reassignments after only discussion with the board. The ALJ held that this arrangement was illegitimate. Although Bond poses an issue of improper delegation rather than the scope of ratification, the ALJ's rationale applies here. "[A] final decision should provide for public participation and a vote by the board." Id. at 579. Ratification without a vote may decrease the accountability of board members, who would not be required to answer for their position on the issue.⁴

b. Ratification at the November 18th meeting

Respondent argues that even if the October 5th termination is invalid, the November 18th resolution by the Board accepting the Deloitte & Touche report ratified petitioner's termination. The Board resolution accepted the Deloitte & Touche report (which had recommended abolition of Wollman's position) and supported the implementation of it by the Fiscal Monitor. Petitioner has in my view presented no argument as to why this action by the Board, as opposed to the purported ratification by silence, is invalid.

Assuming that the Board could and did ratify the Fiscal Monitor's action, that resolution validates Wollman's termination. Wollman has not argued in the written submissions that his termination would have been invalid had it been done by the Board, with the exception of the Veterans' Tenure Act claim that shall next be addressed.

5. Veterans' Tenure Act

Count Two of Wollman's petition alleges 1) that Wollman, a veteran, was denied a hearing prior to his termination in violation of N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 - N.J.S.A. 38:16-6 and 2) that the abolition of Wollman's position was made for the express purpose of terminating him, in violation of N.J.S.A. 38:16-3.

The issue posed by petitioner is whether N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 requires a hearing prior to termination, even if termination occurs pursuant to the abolition of petitioner's position. N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 provides that a veteran employed by the government (including a board of education) shall not "be removed from such employment . . . except for good cause shown after a fair and impartial hearing, but such person shall hold his employment . . . during good behavior, and shall not be removed for political reasons." The statute does not protect the employment of veterans when their positions are abolished, Dobbs v. Pierce, 76 N.J. Super. 64 (Law Div. 1962), but abolition may not be used as a pretext for terminating a veteran. N.J.S.A. 38:16-3.

There are two arguments militating against petitioner's conclusion that although abolition does not trigger the protections of the Act, the statute still requires a hearing prior to termination. First, N.J.S.A. 38:16-2 provides that prior to dismissal of a veteran covered by N.J.S.A. 38:16-1, "charges shall be preferred against him, a copy of which shall be served upon him and a time set for the hearing of same.” If a veteran’s position is abolished, there is obviously no need for charges to be preferred. The statute, in my view, contemplates a hearing only when the employee’s conduct is at issue.

Second, long-standing precedent holds that a hearing is not required prior to the abolition of a veteran’s position. See Burney v. Paterson, 3 N.J. Misc. 1197 (S. Ct. 1925) (answering yes to the question of whether a position held by a veteran can be abolished by a municipality, acting in good faith and for the purpose of economy, without notice and hearing to the occupant thereof); Ziegler v. City Council of Hackensack, 113 N.J.L. 215 (S. Ct. 1934), aff’d 114 N.J.L. 186 (Ct. Err. 1935). (Fire chief’s position abolished without a hearing and pursuant to reorganization. Dismissal upheld). For cases in which abolition of a veteran’s position occurred and the procedural history makes no mention of a hearing having taken place prior to abolition, see Dobbs v. Pierce, 76 N.J. Super. 64 (Law Div. 1962) (Camden board of assessors abolished); Moresch v. Bd. of Education of Bayonne, 52 N.J. Super. 105 (App. Div. 1958) (elimination of vice-principalships by reason of the Board); Barringer v. Miele, 6 N.J. 139 (1951) (veterans who were employees of the Superintendent of Elections and the Commissioner of Registration terminated after the offices were combined); Greco v. Smith, 40 N.J. Super. 182 (App. Div. 1956) (Belleville building inspector proved that bad faith rather than economy motivated his termination. The court did not criticize or even mention the absence of a hearing prior to Greco’s termination.). Of course, an unauthorized termination can take place in the guise of abolition of a position, and a pre-termination hearing could presumably prevent that. Nevertheless, the precedent indicates that a municipality’s right to control the structure and size of its government enables it to abolish positions without a preliminary hearing. I have, of course, concluded that Wollman’s termination and the abolition of his position were not undertaken in bad faith. The legal arguments raised by petitioner post-hearing are without merit.

CONCLUSION:

The Commissioner had ample authority to appoint the Fiscal Monitor and the Fiscal Monitor had the authority to abolish petitioner’s position and terminate his employment. The Board authorized the Fiscal Monitor’s action by adopting the Deloitte & Touche recommendations. The requirements of the Veterans' Tenure Act do not apply since Wollman was terminated for reasons of efficiency.

Accordingly, and based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the appeal of the petitioner be and is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 _____ :

Petitioner's exceptions essentially recast and reiterate his arguments advanced before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), again contending, inter alia, that the Trenton Board of Education unlawfully abolished petitioner's tenured position of Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds following action of a State Fiscal Monitor appointed by the Commissioner. Petitioner argues that the Commissioner's administrative order appointing the Fiscal Monitor did not provide the Fiscal Monitor with the authority to effectuate reorganizations or reductions in force. Alternatively, petitioner argues that he is entitled to back pay from the date that he was fired until the date that the Board took action adopting an auditor's report which suggested the elimination of his position.

Respondent's reply exceptions urge the Commissioner to adopt the findings of the ALJ as they are correctly based upon applicable law and supported by the factual testimony presented at the hearing.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner agrees with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ as articulated in the initial decision. The Commissioner finds that petitioner's exception arguments were fully and fairly considered and addressed at length by the ALJ in his initial decision and need not be herein reviewed. The ALJ concluded, and the Commissioner concurs, that the Fiscal Monitor was duly appointed for the purpose of overseeing the fiscal operations of the Board, making appropriate budget changes as deemed necessary by her and appointing or reassigning permanent personnel to make the district more effective. The Commissioner finds and determines that the Fiscal Monitor acted in accordance with this authority in eliminating petitioner's position, thereby terminating his employment. The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ that petitioner failed to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that abolition of his position was arbitrary, capricious or improper or taken in bad faith.

The Commissioner expresses no opinion on the alternatives raised in petitioner's exceptions since he agrees with the ALJ's determination that the Fiscal Monitor had the authority to abolish petitioner's position.

Accordingly, for the reasons well-expressed therein, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the within Petition of Appeal.

V. : STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY : DECISION OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT. :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 3, 1995

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Robert M. Schwartz, Esq.

For the Respondent-Respondent, Sumners, Council, George & Dortch
(Thomas W. Sumners, Jr., Esq., of Counsel)

The basic facts herein are not in dispute. Donald Wollman (hereinafter "petitioner") began his employment with the Board of Education of the City of Trenton (hereinafter "Board" or "Trenton Board") in January 1987 as the Assistant Manager of Safety and Loss Control and Custodians. In July 1992, petitioner's title was changed to Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds.

On May 7, 1993, the Board consented to an administrative order issued by the Commissioner of Education appointing a Fiscal Monitor "to oversee and control the fiscal operations" of the Board. That order provided the Fiscal Monitor with the authority, in consultation with the County Superintendent and the Assistant Commissioners of Finance and Urban and Field Services, to make budgetary changes as deemed necessary in order to assure that the district had adequate fiscal and technical resources to address the deficiencies identified in Level II monitoring; veto any expenditure of funds submitted to the Board for approval; veto personnel actions; contract with outside auditors or accounting firms; order the training, evaluation, appointment or reassignment of Board employees under the supervision of the Board secretary or school business administrator; direct and supervise Board employees under the supervision of the Board secretary or school business administrator; and terminate or promote such employees without approval of the Board but in accordance with applicable contractual or statutory procedures.

On October 5, 1993, the Fiscal Monitor, acting on the basis of a proposal by a public accounting firm she had retained, submitted a resolution to the Board recommending that the Buildings and Grounds Department be reorganized and that petitioner's position as Assistant Director of Buildings and Grounds be abolished effective October 15. The resolution was presented to the Board as a recommendation from the Fiscal Monitor, and included signature lines for the president of the Board and the Board's acting secretary. The Board, however, neither moved to adopt that resolution nor passed a resolution approving such action. Nor did it take independent action to abolish petitioner's position. Nonetheless, his position was, in fact, eliminated on October 15.

On November 1, 1993, the public accounting firm retained by the Fiscal Monitor issued a written report, "Review of the Building & Grounds Department," in which it proposed, inter alia, that petitioner's position be abolished and replaced with two new coordinator positions in order to improve efficiency and control of daily operations. On November 18, 1993, the Board adopted a resolution accepting the accounting firm's proposal and supporting the implementation of that proposal by the Fiscal Monitor.

On November 3, 1993, petitioner filed the instant petition with the Commissioner alleging that his position had been improperly abolished. Petitioner contended that the Board's failure to adopt a formal resolution abolishing his position pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 had rendered the Fiscal Monitor's action ultra vires. Petitioner further contended that, as a veteran, he was entitled to a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 before his employment could be terminated.

On March 17, 1995, following a hearing, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") concluded that petitioner had failed to demonstrate that the abolishment of his position was arbitrary, capricious or taken in bad faith. The ALJ found that the Commissioner had not acted improperly in appointing a Fiscal Monitor, and that the Fiscal Monitor's authority to abolish positions for reasons of efficiency could reasonably be inferred from the "scope of powers conferred by the order and the existence of the power to terminate." Initial Decision, slip op. at 14. He further found that the Commissioner's authority was sufficiently broad to encompass the appointment of a Fiscal Monitor with the power to abolish positions and terminate employees. He noted that, while not necessary, the Board had authorized the Fiscal Monitor's action by formally adopting the accounting firm's recommendation.

The ALJ also rejected petitioner's contention that, as a veteran, he had been entitled to a hearing. The ALJ observed that N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 contemplated a hearing only when the employee's conduct was at issue, and not prior to the abolishment of a position. He therefore recommended dismissing the petition.

On May 3, 1995, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's recommended decision and dismissed the petition. The Commissioner agreed that the Fiscal Monitor had acted in accordance with her authority when she eliminated petitioner's position, and that petitioner had failed to demonstrate that the abolishment of his position was arbitrary, capricious or taken in bad faith.

Petitioner filed the instant appeal to the State Board.

After a thorough review of the record, we reverse the determination of the Commissioner to dismiss the petition. Unlike the Commissioner, we conclude that the authority of the Fiscal Monitor to abolish positions without the approval of the Trenton Board cannot reasonably be inferred from the terms of the administrative order. However, we find that petitioner's entitlement to back pay as the result of the improper abolishment of his position by the Fiscal Monitor is limited to the period between October 15, 1993 and November 18, 1993.

A review of the petition of appeal which resulted in the administrative order at issue herein is instructive. That petition, which was filed against the Trenton Board in April 1993 by the Assistant Commissioners of Finance and Urban and Field Services, indicated that an External Review Team had identified multiple deficiencies in the fiscal management of the district. The petitioners therein alleged that the Board's 1992-93 budget was lacking in detail, frustrating any attempt to determine whether the sums appropriated therein were sufficient to enable the Board to carry out its Level II Corrective Action Plan, and that its 1993-94 budget could not be approved because the documentation provided in support thereof was insufficient to provide a basis for evaluation. The petitioners further alleged that an External Auditor had found that the purchasing system utilized by the Board was archaic, cumbersome and in violation of statute, code and good school management practice. The External Auditor also found that the Board's payroll system was rife with errors. Nor had the Board made provision to switch its accounting procedures to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles in 1993-94 as required by statute. The External Auditor also indicated that the district lacked adequate supervision of several departments, including Buildings and Grounds. Petitioners alleged that without immediate implementation of processes to establish a sound fiscal management system, the Board would not be able to implement its Corrective Action Plan and provide a thorough and efficient education for its students. They therefore sought an order appointing a Fiscal Monitor to assume control and supervision of all fiscal operations of the district.

Our review of the petition and resultant order leads us to conclude that the authority to abolish positions without Board approval cannot reasonably be inferred from the scope of powers conferred on the Fiscal Monitor. The intent of the administrative order, as set forth in the petition of appeal, was to assume control of the district's fiscal operations, thereby addressing deficiencies in the fiscal management of the district and implementing processes for the establishment of a sound fiscal management system. In furtherance of that objective, and in view of the allegation that the district lacked adequate supervision of its Buildings and Grounds department, the order provided the Fiscal Monitor with the authority to direct and supervise employees in that department and to terminate or promote such employees without approval from the Board. The petition did not seek and the order did not provide the Fiscal Monitor with unrestricted control over the district's operations and structure.

Nor do we find that such authority can reasonably be inferred from the provision in the order authorizing the Fiscal Monitor to “terminate or promote any board of education employees under the supervision of the board secretary or school business administrator without approval of the board of education....” The authority to “terminate or promote” expressly involves individual employees under the Fiscal Monitor’s supervision; the authority to abolish positions involves control of the district’s organizational structure. This is not a distinction without a difference. The Fiscal Monitor’s authority to terminate or promote individual employees under her supervision without the approval of the Board cannot, in itself, be read to abrogate the Board’s jurisdiction over the district’s general organization. Moreover, the use of the word “promote” in conjunction with “terminate” reinforces our belief that the intent of such provision was to permit the Fiscal Monitor to take appropriate personnel action with regard to those employees under her supervision without the necessity for seeking approval from the Board, rather than to eliminate entire positions without approval.

Thus, while the Fiscal Monitor had express authority under the terms of the administrative order to terminate petitioner’s employment without the approval of the Board, we agree with petitioner that the Fiscal Monitor did not have authority, express or implied, to abolish his position without approval. As a result, such action was ultra vires.¹

We turn therefore to consideration of the remedy to which petitioner is entitled as a result of such action. Although petitioner's position was improperly abolished without Board approval on October 15, 1993, the Board, as previously noted, formally adopted a resolution on November 18, 1993 accepting the accounting firm's proposal, which included a recommendation that petitioner's position be abolished. Thus, while we find that the October 15 abolishment of petitioner's position was ultra vires, the Board did thereafter take action to ratify a proposal to abolish that position.

Consequently, we reverse the Commissioner's determination to dismiss the petition and direct the Board to compensate petitioner for his back pay and other emoluments, less mitigation, for the period between October 15, 1993, the effective date of the abolishment of his position by the Fiscal Monitor, and November 18, 1993, when the Board formally acted to abolish his position. In so doing, we reject, for the reasons well expressed by the ALJ and adopted by the Commissioner, petitioner's contention that, as a veteran, he was entitled to a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 38:16-1 et seq. before his position could be abolished. Nor has petitioner demonstrated that the Board abolished his position for the purpose of terminating his services. N.J.S.A. 38:16-3.

Donald C. Addison, Jr., abstained.

The announced results of the balloting for two members of the Board of Education for full terms of three years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the School District of the Borough of Bellmawr were as follows:

Bill Evans	394	4	398
Betty Sheppard	325	7	332

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(c), which requires the Commissioner to conduct a recount where two or more candidates qualified by law receive an equal number of votes, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Camden County Superintendent of Schools duly conducted a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board. The recount was conducted on May 5, 1995 at the Voting Machine Warehouse, South Port Corporation, Camden. Absentee ballots were recounted by the Camden County Board of Elections on the same date.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood unchanged, remaining as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Bill Evans	394	4	398
Betty Sheppard	325	7	332

It is noted that, both in the original tally and on recount, candidate Ken Murray received one write-in vote which was not counted because Murray's name appeared on the official ballot. Thus, a tie remains between candidates Murray and Sheppard.

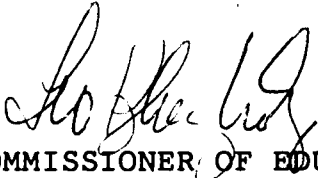

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that a tie remains between candidates Ken Murray and Betty Sheppard, and, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(c), directs that a special election be held to fill the resultant vacancy, limited to candidates Murray and Sheppard, and to be held on the earliest date possible in view of the prohibition on special elections within 20 days before or after the June 1995 primary election pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-3 and the need to accommodate absentee ballot notices pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-25.

Petitioner, tenured teacher reemployed on the occurrence of a job vacancy, challenged Board's placement of him on the salary guide. Petitioner contended he was entitled to full recognition of his prior years of service. Matter was submitted to arbitration. Arbitrator found for petitioner. When the Board declined to accept arbitrator's recommendation of salary award of $43,843, petitioner filed this appeal with the Commissioner of Education for enforcement.

ALJ concluded that the arbitrator's determination of the appropriate salary amount represented full recognition of petitioner's previous years of service. However, primary jurisdiction for enforcement rests with the courts rather than the Commissioner. Petition was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, without prejudice to petitioner's right to relief in an appropriate judicial forum.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Decided: March 29, 1995

BEFORE: KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of the Case

This is an appeal by a tenured teacher who contends that the board of education failed to reinstate him to the appropriate salary level in connection with his statutory reemployment rights. Under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, a tenured teacher previously dismissed for reasons of economy and thereafter reemployed on the occurrence of a job vacancy is entitled to "full recognition" of prior years of service. Petitioner Donald Picot ("Picot") alleges that his 1993-94 salary, including accumulated "off-guide" salary increases, should be $45,322.¹ But the Board of Education of the Warren County Vocational-Technical School District ("Board") put him at the top of the guide, commensurate with his educational qualifications and years of service, at a salary of $39,103.

Procedural History

Before the bringing of this appeal, the teachers' majority representative and the Board had submitted the identical question to nonbinding arbitration by the American Arbitration Association. On August 4, 1993, the arbitrator issued a written opinion in which he sustained the grievance and recommended a salary award of $43,843. When the Board declined to accept this recommendation, Picot filed this appeal with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") on November 1, 1993. The Board filed its answer on November 23, 1993. Subsequently, on December 1, 1993, the Commissioner transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case. The OAL held a hearing on September 12, 1994. Witnesses and exhibits are listed in the appendix. Petitioner submitted a brief on the jurisdictional issue on March 25, 1995.

All of the relevant facts are undisputed. I FIND:

Donald C. Picot began working for the district as a machine shop instructor in September 1969. At the time of initial hire, he received credit for four years of prior industrial experience and, thus, began on the fifth step of the salary guide.² Over the years, Picot progressed up the salary guide. In 1980-81, Picot reached the top of the ¹Both parties agree that Picot is entitled to a 1993-94 longevity allowance of $559. For clarity, comparisons of salary amounts will be made in terms of base salary, exclusive of the longevity allowance.

²Although the Board initially denied that Picot should receive salary credit for work experience, it actually gave him credit for these four extra years. Both sides now agree that Picot should receive credit for twenty-one years of past service.

guide, which at that time consisted of sixteen steps. Later, in 1982-83, the collective agreement added an additional step and Picot reached step seventeen. For the next two years, he remained at the maximum step of the seventeen-step guide. As of 1985-86, the last full year in which Picot worked for the Board, the district restructured the guide into only twelve steps by collapsing the first five steps into a single first step and consolidating the last two steps into a final twelfth step.³ Accordingly, Picot was placed on the top of the guide at step "L" or twelve. By the end of June 1986, Picot had accrued twenty-one years of service in the district, including his four-years credit for work experience.

At the start of 1986-87, Picot stayed at the top of the guide, which had been redesignated step "M" or thirteen. Picot's salary was $30,478 plus a longevity allowance of $100 or a total of $30,578. Shortly thereafter, however, the Board abolished his position, effective December 31, 1986, for reasons of economy and efficiency.⁴ Meanwhile, the Board put Picot on a preferred eligibility list for reemployment in the event that any position for which he was qualified should become available. In exchange for obtaining Picot's release, the Board promised that any future offer of reemployment would be "without loss of years of service, step on the salary guide or accumulated sick leave."

After Picot left the Board's employ, the top of the guide continued at step "M" or thirteen until 1990-91, when it again reverted to a maximum twelve-step guide. Although salaries for each step rose regularly every year, teachers at the maximum level could not advance to a higher step (there being none.) Starting in 1988-89, however, the Board initiated "off guide" increases for teachers already at or above the maximum. That year, for example, anyone at the top of the guide during the preceding year received an "off guide" increase of $2,200. In every year which followed, the Board granted cumulative "off guide" increases, each added to the increase from the year before.

⁴Under the collective agreement, a teacher must work at least half the school year in order to receive any credit towards a salary increment. Since Picot only worked four months in 1986-87, both parties agree that he is not entitled to any credit for that year.

On August 4, 1993, the Board notified Picot that a job as a machine shop instructor was about to open and offered him employment for 1993-94 at a salary of $39,103, corresponding to step twelve on a twelve-step guide, plus a longevity allowance of $559, "bringing the total to $39,662." While Picot accepted the employment offer, he contends that he is legally entitled to a larger salary. Picot maintains that he should be treated equally with other teachers who have twenty-one years of continuous service. Significantly, he is not seeking credit for the seven-year gap in his employment by the district. In other words, he is not claiming credit for twenty-eight years of service, but only for the twenty-one years which he had at the time of the reduction in force.

Meaningful comparisons of salaries paid to various teachers are difficult, due to different starting dates, qualifications and other variables. It is not particularly helpful to compare Picot's salary to that of newly-hired teachers, since the law authorizes local school districts to place new teachers at any initial starting point on the salary guide.⁵ Both parties point to other long-time teachers whose situations are said to be sufficiently analogous to aid in ascertaining Picot's appropriate salary for 1993-94. Picot refers to special education teacher Alan J. Kares, who began working for the district in September 1973 and, as of September 1993, had twenty years of service. Despite the fact that he had one year less service than Picot, Kares earned a 1993-94 "off guide" salary of $43,022, excluding the amount of any longevity allowance. Originally, Picot urged that he should get the same salary as Kares plus the 1993-94 "off-guide" increase of $2,300, amounting to $45,322.⁶ On the other hand, the Board refers to Louis Oravec, a food service instructor who, like Picot, was hired in September 1969 and also received four years credit for work experience. Unlike Picot, however, Oravec has worked uninterruptedly for the district and has a total of twenty-eight years of service (compared to Picot's twenty-one years). Oravec's "off guide" salary for 1993-94 was $47,578. According to the Board, Oravec's seven most recent annual increases must be deducted from Picot's salary, which would put Picot at the top of the guide with a 1993-94 salary of $39,103. In practical effect, this approach would deprive Picot of the benefit of all "off guide" increases awarded over the last six years.

Rejecting both comparisons, the arbitrator adopted a middle ground. He declined to follow the Kares example in order to avoid giving Picot two "off-guide" increases of $2,300 in 1993-94. Similarly, he distinguished the Board's reliance on the Oravec example by noting that "it fails to take into consideration the fact that there were years when the teachers were at the top of the salary guide and there were no 'off guide' increases." (Arbitrator Award, at 12). Instead, the arbitrator awarded Picot the same salary as a teacher who was beginning his twenty-second year of service in the district in 1993. Using a chart prepared by the Board, the arbitrator ascertained that a teacher who commenced employment in the district in 1972-73 would have earned $43,843 in 1993-94. Accordingly, the arbitrator concluded that $43,843 represents "full recognition" of the previous years of service to which Picot is contractually entitled. Id.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the well-reasoned opinion of the arbitrator is fully consistent with the school laws, but that primary jurisdiction for enforcement rests with the courts rather than the Commissioner.

N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 provides that any teaching staff member dismissed as the result of a reduction in force shall . . . remain upon a preferred eligibility list in the order of seniority for reemployment whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which such person shall be qualified and shall be reemployed by the body causing dismissal, if and when such vacancy occurs and in determining seniority, and in computing length of service for reemployment, full recognition shall be given to previous years of service. (Emphasis Added).

Generally, disputes concerning a teacher's appropriate placement on the salary guide are governed by contract rather than statute. Initial placement on the salary guide is not a managerial prerogative, but rather a term and condition of employment within the scope of negotiability. Belleville Educ. Ass'n v. Belleville Bd. of Educ., 209 N.J. Super. 93 (App. Div. 1986). Picot tries to bring himself within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner by seeking protection of the statutory rights conferred by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12. However, the Appellate Division has limited the "full recognition" provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 to seniority for reemployment purposes and has refused to extend its coverage to salary disputes. Thus, in Whalen v. Sayreville Bd. of Educ., 192 N.J. Super. 453, (App. Div. 1983), certif. den. 96 N.J. 312 (1984), a case on which petitioner relies, the Appellate Division decided that a teacher recalled after dismissal has no statutory entitlement to salary credit for two years of teaching in another district. Emphasizing that the issue in Whalen concerned salary and not seniority, the Appellate Division expressed the view that N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 "only specifies a rule to determine seniority for hiring purposes." Consequently, "a local board is free to negotiate salary guides which are not less than those required by State law." Whalen, at 457. In light of the fact that the statutory minimum teacher salary schedule has since been repealed, see L. 1985, c. 321, §16, Picot's rights in the matter under review are purely a question of contractual construction.

Other cases cited by petitioner in support of the Commissioner's jurisdiction relate to priority of reemployment as distinguished from computation of salary. In re Maywood Board of Education, 168 N.J. Super. 45 (App. Div. 1979), certif. den. 81 N.J. 292 (1979), for instance, held that the Commissioner has exclusive statutory authority to establish seniority standards for reemployment lists and, consequently, that the criteria and procedures for reemployment are nonnegotiable. It does not, however, speak to the separate issue of what salary must be paid to a teacher who properly exercises reemployment rights. Likewise, Kaprow v. Berkeley Twp. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 572 (1993) involves the Commissioner's jurisdiction to ascertain whether a former school employee has rehiring rights to particular position and does not deal with salary guide placement. Lammers v. Point Pleasant Bd of Educ., 134 N.J. 264 (1993) involves the question of what constitutes a "vacancy" triggering a laid-off teacher's reemployment rights. Again, it has nothing to do with a recalled teacher's salary. Here, of course, Picot's right to reemployment is unquestioned. The Board itself recognized his preferred claim to the job and invited him back.

It is noteworthy, however, that Commissioner's decisions, insofar as they have bearing on the salary issue, are fully supportive of the arbitrator's reasoning. Indeed, one earlier school law decision interpreted N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 as giving a returning teacher the same salary rights as a teacher "who uninterruptedly continued with the school system." Scavelli v. Clayton Bd. of Educ., 1978 S.L.D. 440, 441 (Comm'r April 28, 1978). In Scavelli, the Commissioner found that a reemployed teacher should receive the same "off guide" salary increases that are payable to any other teachers with equivalent service in the district. In reaching that conclusion, the Commissioner held that N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 requires full recognition of previous service which "had clearly been performed and which the Board [had] recognized at the time of petitioner's separation[.]" 1978 S.L.D. at 442. Applied to the present facts, the Commissioner's rationale provides strong support for the arbitrator's decision that Picot should receive the same salary as other teachers entering their twenty-second year of employment in the district.

In conclusion, if the Commissioner did possess proper jurisdiction, the precedent clearly favors the result reached by the arbitrator. Nevertheless, where a board of education refuses to comply with nonbinding arbitration in an area not considered a managerial prerogative, "the forum for enforcement is in the courts, not before the Commissioner of Education." Belleville Educ. Ass'n, at 98. "That arbitration is nonbinding does not convert a dispute within the scope of arbitrability into a school law dispute subject to the Commissioner's primary jurisdiction." Id.

Order

It is ORDERED that the petition is dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, without prejudice to Picot's right to relief in an appropriate judicial forum.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

Petitioning parent and two sons challenged Board's determination that they were not domiciled in the district and, thus, were not entitled to attend schools in respondent's district free of charge. The Board cross-claimed for tuition due and owing. Petitioners contended that the Board should be equitably estopped from removing the Lee students and from asserting its tuition claim.

ALJ found, in light of the representations made by the superintendent that owning real estate and paying taxes in Holmdel was sufficient to entitle the Lees to attend school in the district, the Lees re-enrolled their children in the Holmdel school in October 1987. Therefore, ALJ concluded that equitable principles prevented respondent from requiring tuition payments for the period of time October 1987 up to the date of the sale of the Holmdel residence in 1989. ALJ did order petitioners to compensate the Board in an amount equal to the tuition due and owing for the attendance of Albert Lee and V.L. commencing with the date of sale of the Holmdel residence, through and including December 1993, as ALJ found that in January 1994 the Lees started to use as a residence the condominium they owned in Holmdel, but previously rented. ALJ found that tuition was not due after January 1994, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d.

Commissioner adopted in part, and modified in part, the initial decision. Commissioner determined that no tuition was due from October 1987 through December 1989 as the Board and the ALJ agreed to this for reasons of equity. Citing Rowley and In re Morrison (no obligation arises for the Commissioner to review transcripts not provided to him), Commissioner determined that petitioners were obligated to pay respondent tuition for January 1990 through December 1993. Commissioner, however, modified ALJ's finding as to period commencing January 1994. Since the ALJ found that the Holmdel condominium was not the Lees' true, fixed and permanent home and it was not their domicile, petitioners owed tuition from January 1990 to date. Commissioner ordered petitioners to compensate the Board.

Decided: March 24, 1995

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

This matter commenced on April 11, 1994, when Whasun Lee, as parent and guardian of V.L., and Albert Lee, individually (hereinafter petitioners) filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education contesting the March 23, 1994 determination of the Holmdel Township Board of Education (hereinafter respondent) pursuant to P.L. 1993, Chapter 380, that Albert Lee and V.L., his brother, were not entitled to attend the public schools of the district free of charge. An answer and counterclaim were filed on behalf of respondent on April 18, 1994. On April 27, 1994, petitioners filed an answer to the counterclaim, and on May 2, 1994 the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A prehearing conference was conducted on July 5, 1994 at which time the following were identified as issues for determination at hearing:

1. Have Albert Lee and V.L. been domiciled continuously in respondent's school district from 1979 to the present?
2. If the answer to the previous question is no, were A.L. and V.L. nevertheless entitled to attend the schools in respondent's district free of charge pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d?
3. If the answers to questions 1 and 2 are no, is respondent equitably estopped from collecting retroactive tuition payments from petitioners?
4. If the answer to issue question 3 is no, what is the amount of tuition payments owed by petitioners for the time of the students' ineligible attendance in the schools?

With the consent of his adversary and permission from the undersigned, on October 18, 1994 counsel for petitioners filed an amended answer to the counterclaim; the amendment added a fourth affirmative defense asserting that the counterclaim was untimely pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2. The hearing took place as scheduled on November 2, 3, and 4, 1994. Following the close of testimony, the record remained open for the receipt of written submissions. A post-hearing brief on behalf of petitioners was received on January 24, 1995. Respondent's written summation was received on January 25, 1995. A reply on behalf of petitioners was received on February 7, 1995, and a reply memorandum on behalf of respondents was received on February 8, 1995, whereupon the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Some of the facts relevant to a determination of the within matter are not in dispute and I therefore find the following as uncontested facts.

Until October 1987 Whasun Lee and her husband Dr. Chi L. Lee and their three minor children resided at 23 Rambling Brook Drive, Holmdel, New Jersey. All three boys attended the public schools in respondent's district. In October 1987 the family moved to Colts Neck, New Jersey, and the children were enrolled in the Colts Neck public schools. Two days later, petitioner Whasun Lee, had a conversation with Dr. Timothy C. Brennan, Jr., then superintendent of schools for respondent's district, wherein she informed Dr. Brennan that she was dissatisfied with the Colts Neck schools, and when he learned that the house at 23 Rambling Brook Drive in Holmdel had not been sold, he indicated to petitioner that she could re-enroll her children. Thereafter, the oldest son, Mark, and the youngest son, V. were re-enrolled immediately; Albert Lee attended a private school, St. Leo's, until January 1988 when he was re-registered in respondent's district. The oldest son, Mark, thereafter attended respondent's schools continuously until he graduated from high school in 1990. His attendance in respondent's district is not the subject of the within proceeding. Albert and his brother, V.L., have also continuously attended school in respondent's district. Albert graduated from high school in 1994 and is currently a student at Harvard University. V.L. is a senior who will graduate in June 1995.*

After petitioners moved to Colts Neck in 1987, they did nothing to hide their Colts Neck address from school personnel. Their home in Colts Neck was common knowledge among faculty; members of the faculty mentioned the fact that petitioners were living in Colts Neck to Dr. Brennan, the person responsible for implementing respondent's residency/domicile policies. In fact, the address and telephone number listed in school records for the family were those in

* Respondent indicated at the prehearing conference in July 1994 that there was no need to expedite the hearing in this matter; since V.L. was a senior they would not press to remove him from the district, but would seek tuition payments only.

Colts Neck. In the fall of 1989 Ralph Blumenthal, a member of respondent's school board who later became its president, told Dr. Brennan that petitioners were living in Colts Neck; he learned this because his son, P.B., had visited in the Colts Neck home with Albert and Dr. Blumenthal's wife had picked up their son there.

In 1989 petitioners sold their house at 23 Rambling Brook Drive and shortly thereafter received a letter from respondent indicating that the boys could no longer attend the Holmdel public schools. No copy of this letter is currently available. In response to the letter, petitioner Whasun Lee contacted Dr. Brennan, who advised her to come to his office and discuss the matter and to bring with her a person who was fluent in English. Mrs. Lee's native language is Korean and she speaks English with a heavy accent. The specifics of the discussion which took place in Dr. Brennan's office among Dr. Brennan, Mrs. Lee and her friend, Mrs. Chu, on December 12, 1989 are in dispute; however, directly following the discussion, Mrs. Lee and Mrs. Chu, who happens to be a real estate agent, went to look at a new town house condominium complex which had just been built in Holmdel and thereafter returned to Dr. Brennan's office with a signed contract of sale on a two-bedroom unit located at 156 Northhampton Drive, Holmdel, New Jersey. Dr. Brennan took a copy of the contract of sale and indicated to Mrs. Lee that the children could continue to attend school in Holmdel.

In July 1993, Dr. Susan Steadman LaGlise, became the new superintendent of schools in respondent's district. At her direction, in December 1993 counsel for respondent advised petitioners that since they were not domiciled in Holmdel, they would be required to remove the children from the Holmdel school system. In early January 1994, petitioners spoke with Dr. LaGlise in her office and Dr. LaGlise explained to them that "domicile" meant more than owning property and paying taxes in Holmdel. She explained to them that they had to actually live in Holmdel, sleep in Holmdel, take their meals in Holmdel, etc.

From the time petitioners purchased the townhouse at 156 Northhampton Drive in February 1990 until December 1993, the unit was occupied by tenants. The last tenants moved out in December 1993, and following the conversation with Dr. LaGlise in early January 1994, petitioners began to occupy the unit themselves. On March 10, 1994, respondent forwarded a letter to petitioners advising them of the board's position that the boys were not residing at the condominium in Holmdel and that a hearing would be conducted before the full board on Wednesday, March 23, 1994 in this regard. Petitioners chose not to attend the hearing. On March 23, 1994, respondent determined that Albert Lee and V.L. were not entitled to attend the schools of the district free of charge and advised petitioners of their rights to contest the determination by filing a petition with the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). The within matter followed. This concludes the recitation of the uncontested facts.

Whasun Lee testified that when her family moved to Colts Neck in October 1987, they had retained the house at 23 Rambling Brook Drive in Holmdel for sentimental reasons; this had been the first house they had purchased after coming to the United States from Korea; her children had been babies in the house and had grown up there and she had an oriental garden which she had made on the premises. She testified that a letter had come when she had finally sold the house in Holmdel which said that the children could no longer attend the Holmdel schools. She indicated that she had called Dr. Brennan and that later she and Mrs. Chu had gone to see him. She took Mrs. Chu with her because Mrs. Chu was better at speaking English, she indicated. According to petitioner, Dr. Brennan said, "You sold the house; you have to buy something right away." Petitioner said that she was upset, but that she and Mrs. Chu had gone directly to look at a new development of townhouse condominiums. There was no choice, she indicated; there was only one and she had signed the contract of sale right away. She testified that she had then gone back to Dr. Brennan's office and had showed him the contract and he had said, O.K. According to petitioner, Mrs. Chu who is in real estate, suggested that "she knew what to do in this situation," and Mrs. Chu had promptly rented the condo out for her.

Mrs. Chu took care of the condo and petitioner did not even go to the address again until January 1994 after her conversation with Dr. LaGlise. Since that time, she testified, she has kept her clothes in the condo. She has two telephones at the condo. She receives her mail at the condo. The address on her driver's license is 156 Northhampton Drive, Holmdel, and she has registered to vote from that address and, in fact, she voted in the last school board election from that address. In addition, she testified, commencing in January 1994, she and Albert (before he went off to Harvard) and V.L. have slept at 156 Northhampton Drive four or five nights a week. Daily, after school they go to the Colts Neck address so that the boys can practice their musical instruments; one plays a piano and the other a cello and the condominium is not an appropriate place for practicing either of these instruments, she indicated. Frequently it is 10 p.m. or later when the three of them return to the condominium to spend the night. There were nights, for example during snow storms or other bad weather, when they did not sleep at the condominium, she acknowledged. On the mornings following the four or five nights per week when petitioners sleep in the condominium, they eat breakfast at that address. Lunch is almost always taken elsewhere since they are all out during the day. Occasionally they eat dinner at the condominium although many nights dinner is eaten at a fast food restaurant or in the car. Occasionally they eat dinner, even during the week, at the Colts Neck address. Weekends are always spent at the Colts Neck address, where her husband, Dr. Lee resides. Occasionally Dr. Lee has spent the night in the condominium with them, she testified.

Dr. Brennan testified that he was aware that petitioners had moved in October 1987 to a house in Colts Neck. He nevertheless thought that petitioners were entitled to attend the Holmdel schools free of charge, he said, because they had retained their house at 23 Rambling Brook Drive and it was his impression that they still occupied the house in some significant way. When he was asked upon what facts this impression was based, he indicated that from conversations he had with Mrs. Lee he believed there was still furniture in the house, that she had told him there was a popcorn maker there and he believed that they practiced their instruments there sometimes. Upon further questioning, he acknowledged that he did not think there was a piano in the house at Holmdel; for some reason he thought that the instrument involved was a flute, he said. He further testified that he had a great deal of difficulty understanding Mrs. Lee. He estimated that approximately 75% of the time he could not understand what she saying. This was why he had asked her in December of 1989 to bring with her someone who was fluent in English. Mrs. Chu spoke and understood English very well, he said, and he was certain she had understood when he indicated to her on or about December 12, 1989 that "proof positive" that petitioners were not living in Holmdel would be if they rented the condominium to someone else. Dr. Brennan further testified that he was virtually certain that Mrs. Lee also understood that the condominium could not be rented out to someone else, although at one point during cross-examination he agreed that it was conceivable that she had left thinking that owning property was sufficient.

He explained that the procedures which he used to identify "angle shooters," parents who do not live in Holmdel and send their children to the Holmdel schools notwithstanding the fact that they are not entitled to do so, consisted of checking the tax records for the address in question to see whether the parent was the taxpayer at that address and checking with the transportation coordinator to see whether anyone else was boarding the bus at the address in question. Apparently, these procedures failed to disclose to Dr. Brennan that the premises at 156 Northhampton were rented out almost immediately after they were purchased in February 1990; he testified that he was upset and disappointed when he learned of the rental a few days before his testimony. On several occasions he denied that he had ever indicated to petitioners that merely owning real estate and paying taxes in Holmdel was sufficient to qualify for free public education; he maintained consistently that in addition it was necessary for them to personally use the property as a residence in some meaningful way.

V.L. testified and confirmed the facts offered by his mother concerning use of 156 Northhampton Drive. Most of the other witnesses offered testimony to indicate that Dr. Brennan was aware the petitioners were living in Colts Neck; since Dr. Brennan did not deny this, their testimony is not particularly relevant to determination of any of the issues, with the exception of the following testimony offered by Dr. Richard White, former principal of the high school, now retired, wherein he was describing a conversation he had with Dr. Brennan in 1987 concerning domicile and whether petitioners should be entitled to attend the Holmdel schools free of charge:

The reason I happened to remember this conversation is because it was essentially what I had learned in my school law course. He called me up to tell me that the Lees were coming back, and to just re-register Mark or whatever, no questions asked. I said, wait a minute. I thought they just moved to Colts Neck. He said, they did. And I said, but don't you have to live in the same community where you go to school. And he said, well, not exactly. And I said, well, that's always been my understanding. He said, "well, if you own property and you don't use that property as income property, it remains vacant, you pay taxes on it, you're allowed to send your children to school in that community."

Dr. Brennan insisted that he applied the same residency/domiciliary criteria to everyone, although he readily acknowledged, when asked, that he had wished to keep petitioners in the Holmdel school system because the boys were extraordinary students who excelled both academically and in extracurricular activities; they were a credit to the school system.

On rebuttal, Mrs. Lee testified that all of the furniture had been moved out of 23 Rambling Brook Drive to the Colts Neck residence when the family moved in October of 1987. She also testified that she has never owned a popcorn maker.

With respect to the facts in dispute, I am persuaded that Dr. Brennan clearly articulated to Mrs. Chu and Mrs. Lee on December 12, 1989, his position that petitioners had to use the condominium at 156 Northhampton Drive as a residence in some meaningful fashion; specifically, I FIND that he told them that it would be "proof positive" that they were not living there if he were to find out that the property was rented to someone else. Dr. Brennan's testimony in this regard was internally consistent; he never wavered from his version of the conversation. On one occasion during cross-examination he did say that it was conceivable that Mrs. Lee walked away from the conversation thinking that purchase and ownership was enough. I do not believe that this was the case; however, even if Mrs. Lee did walk away with that impression, the fault for the misimpression was her own and not Dr. Brennan's. He had asked her to bring with her someone who was fluent in English. Curiously, although Mrs. Chu was fluent in English, she did not speak Korean, so how she was to interpret for Mrs. Lee what Dr. Brennan was saying is not clear. I do not view Dr. Brennan's testimony that Mrs. Chu and Mrs. Lee spoke to one another in a foreign language as diminishing Dr. Brennan's credibility; Mrs. Lee's accent is so heavy that when she speaks quickly it can sound like a foreign language. This finding concerning what Dr. Brennan said at the December 12, 1989 meeting is further supported by Dr. White's testimony, quoted hereinabove, that Dr. Brennan had told him that taxpayers in Holmdel who do not rent out their properties to someone else were entitled to send their children to the Holmdel schools free of charge. The fact that petitioners did not call Mrs. Chu as a witness also supports this finding; her unexplained absence as a witness indicates to me that she would have been unable to testify truthfully that Dr. Brennan did not warn them not to rent the property.

With respect to the other areas which are in dispute, I FIND that commencing in January 1994, petitioners personally used the property at 156 Northhampton Drive during four or five days of the week as they described in their testimony. None of the evidence offered by respondent in opposition to these assertions disproves the direct testimony of Mrs. Lee or V.L. in any way. The fact that respondent's investigators observed petitioners coming and going from the house in Colts Neck upon occasion, is not inconsistent with the finding that petitioners used 156 Northhampton Drive as a residence.

With respect to the other issues in dispute, I do not believe that Dr. Brennan falsified his testimony concerning the "popcorn machine" or the furniture at the house located at 23 Rambling Brook Drive. I think the likely explanation for this testimony is that he simply misunderstood something which Mrs. Lee said to him. By his own testimony he had difficulty understanding her 75% of the time. During the hearing in this matter the undersigned misunderstood her to say that she had come to this country from Taiwan. Even after listening to the hearing tape several times since then, the word still sounds like Taiwan although Mrs. Lee assured that it was not and that she had lived in Seoul, Korea prior to coming to this country.

APPLICABLE LAW AND DISCUSSION

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, the statute relevant to a determination in this matter, provides in pertinent part:

Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:

- a. Any person who is domiciled within the school district;
- d. Any person whose parent or guardian, even though not domiciled within the district, is residing temporarily therein, but any person who has had or shall have his all-year-round dwelling place within the district for one year or longer shall be deemed to be domiciled within the district for the purposes of this section;

An individual may have many residences, if he or she is financially able to do so, but can have only one domicile. Miller vs. U.S. Fidel. & Guar. Co., 127 N.J. Super. 37, 42 (App. Div. 1974); Continos v. Parsekian, 68 N.J. Super. 54, 58-59 (App. Div. 1961); DiFiore v. Erie-Lackawanna R.R. Co., 67 N.J. Super. 267 (Law Div. 1961).

“The domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving. . . . Home is the place where a person dwells and which is the center of his domestic, social and civil life. . . . Thus, the concepts of home and domicile mean more than physical residence. They also embody the subject’s objective and subjective relationship to that residence.” Matter of Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374-5 (Law Div. 1991); See also, In re Jaffe, 74 N.J. 86, 90-91 (1977).

With respect to issue number one articulated in the prehearing order - - Have Albert Lee and V.L. been domiciled continuously in respondent’s school district from 1979 to the present? - - I CONCLUDE that commencing in October 1987, when the family moved to the house in Colts Neck, the domicile of all family members has been Colts Neck. Although I have found as a matter of fact that Mrs. Lee and Albert and V.L. have used 156 Northhampton Drive in Holmdel as a residence on a regular basis four or five days per week, the Holmdel condo cannot be described as a true, fixed, or permanent home. Every day of the week the Colts Neck home is used for practicing musical instruments; it is used every weekend; it is where Dr. Lee, husband and father of petitioners, lives year round. It is the family's true, fixed, and permanent home. Accordingly, Albert and V.L. are not entitled to attend the public schools in respondent's district free of charge, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a).

With respect to issue number two articulated in the prehearing order - - If the answer to the previous question is no, were A.L. and V.L. nevertheless entitled to attend the schools in respondent's district free of charge, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d) - - I CONCLUDE that the answer is "yes" commencing with January 1994, when Mrs. Lee and the boys began to use 156 Northhampton Drive as a residence. (Perhaps sub-paragraph d. of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 was the source of Dr. Brennan's somewhat flexible concept concerning those who were entitled to attend the Holmdel schools free of charge.) Commencing with January 1994, after Dr. LaGlise explained the concept of "domicile" to petitioners, I CONCLUDE that their use of 156 Northhampton Drive qualified as a residence even though they were domiciled elsewhere.

"Residence, on the other hand, though parallel in many respects to domicile, is something quite different in that the elements of permanency, continuity and kinship with the physical, cultural, social and political attributes which inhere in a 'home' according to our accepted understanding, are missing. Intention adequately manifested is the catalyst which converts a residence from a mere place in which a person lives to a domicile. Where a person has two homes in which he lives and between which he divides his time, it is still his intention which creates one or the other as his domicile." State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 251 (1955).

With respect to the period of time commencing in October 1987 through and including December 1993, the third issue articulated in the prehearing order - - If the answers to questions number one and two are no, is respondent equitably estopped from collecting retroactive tuition payments from petitioners? - - must be addressed.

Estoppel is an equitable principle requiring good faith reliance on an official action or inaction to the detriment of the person seeking to invoke the principle. In Tubridy v. Consolidated, etc., Pension Com., 84 N.J. Super. 257, 264 (App. Div. 1964), the court stated:

The applicability of the doctrine of estoppel against public agencies and officials is quite limited, to guard against use thereof to injure the public interest. Although there is growing liberality in entertaining the rule in certain areas, see Gruber v. Mayor and Tp. Com. of Raritan Tp., 39 N.J. 1, 18 (1962), each case stands on its own facts. "The precise nature and extent" of the plaintiff's "good faith reliance" on the official action or inaction relied on must be weighed against the public interests involved.

Petitioners assert that they relied upon the representations of Dr. Brennan, that owning real estate and paying taxes in Holmdel was sufficient to entitle them to attend the schools in the district. I have found as a matter of fact that Dr. Brennan made clear to petitioners in December 1989 his position that the property could not be rented to someone else and the petitioners must in fact use it themselves in some meaningful way. With respect to the time period October 1987 up until the house at 23 Rambling Brook Drive was sold, however, it appears that Dr. Brennan simply made certain assumptions concerning actual use of the house by petitioners and advised petitioners upon their inquiry concerning return to the system that since they had not sold their residence at 23 Rambling Brook Drive, it would be "no problem" to re-register. Petitioners relied upon this representation by re-enrolling their children in the district and did not explore other possibilities as alternatives to the Colts Neck system with which they were unhappy. If Dr. Brennan had advised petitioners correctly in October 1987, they could have made informed decisions concerning expenditure of tuition dollars. Although there is no indication in the record that board of education members during the period of time October 1987 until the house was sold in 1989, were aware that petitioners were actually living in Colts Neck, there is also no evidence in the record that the board members did not know. Testimony from various individuals during the hearing indicated that it was "common knowledge" that the petitioners were living in Colts Neck. If that were the case, the likelihood is that board members were aware of the situation and acquiesced. Clearly, commencing sometime during 1989 Dr. Blumenthal, a member of the board who ultimately became its president, was aware of the situation. He apparently took no action either then or later to correct it. Since Dr. Brennan was the chief school administrator and had actual authority to act on behalf of the board in many matters, it was not unreasonable for petitioners to rely upon his representations and to assume that he had the authority of the board behind him. Accordingly, for these reasons I CONCLUDE that equitable principles prevent respondent from requiring tuition payments for the period of time October 1987 up to the date of sale of the residence at 23 Rambling Brook Drive*

Other equitable principles, however, preclude the invocation by petitioners of the doctrine of equitable estoppel with respect to the period of time commencing with the sale of the 23 Rambling Brook Drive residence and continuing through to January 1994. The basic equitable maxim of unclean hands “gives expression to the equitable principle that a court should not grant relief to one who is a wrongdoer with respect to the subject matter in suit.” Faustin v. Lewis, 85 N.J. 507, 511 (1981); Rolnick v. Rolnick, 262 N.J. Super. 343, 361 (App. Div. 1993). When petitioners sold the house at 23 Rambling Brook Drive in Holmdel in 1989 they were fully aware that even under Dr. Brennan’s flexible concepts, they were no longer entitled to attend the schools in Holmdel free of charge. Petitioners did not contact respondent to advise it of the sale; they did not remove their students from the school system as they ought to have done. Instead, they simply waited for respondent to discover that they had sold the house, and only when they received the letter from respondent advising them that the children could no longer attend the schools, did they take some measures to attempt to comply with Dr. Brennan’s directives. Then, instead of making an effort to use the townhouse at 156 Northhampton Drive in some meaningful way as Dr. Brennan had instructed, they rented it to someone else, notwithstanding the fact that Dr. Brennan had specifically instructed them not to do this. Those who seek equity must do equity and permitting petitioners to escape payment for the education they have received contrary to the law and at the expense of Holmdel taxpayers, particularly since they were receiving rental income on the property for the entire period of time, would be inequitable.

* This sale apparently occurred sometime during 1989; although the specific date of sale was requested at the hearing, it has not been provided.

Petitioners argument that respondent may not collect any tuition monies because the counterclaim in this matter seeking payment for the services rendered was filed beyond the ninety day limitation period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 is likewise without merit. Although N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2, which requires a petition of appeal to be filed no later than the ninetieth day from receipt of notice of the action contested, has been held to apply to counterclaims as well, in the instant matter the entitlement to reimbursement for the cost of petitioners' education arises not from the counterclaim which was filed but rather from the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b(2), which provides in pertinent part:

... The parent or guardian may contest the board's decision before the commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner and shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection. The board of education shall, at the time of its decision, notify the parent or guardian in writing of his right to contest the decision within 21 days. No child shall be removed from school during the 21-day period in which the parent may contest the board's decision or during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. If in the judgment of the commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the parent or guardian, the commissioner shall assess the parent or guardian tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the schools of the district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner in which orders of the commissioner are enforced.

Because of the provisions of the statute, respondent was not really even required to file a counterclaim for tuition. Even if the statutory limitation period applied, the counterclaim would not be out of time since petitioners' violation with respect to the attendance of Albert and V.L. is and has been a continuing one; the requirement for filing not later than the ninetieth day after notice of the act challenged is not a restriction on damages, and respondent may be compensated for the entire period of ineligible attendance. See, e.g., Terry v. Mercer County Board of Chosen Freeholders, 173 N.J. Super. 249 (App. Div. 1980), modified on other grounds 86 N.J. 141 (1981).

Petitioners' argument concerning an alleged violation of the Open Public Meetings Act, N.J.S.A. 10:4-6 to 4-21, was raised for the first time in these proceedings in their post-hearing written submission. Accordingly, the issue is not properly before this forum; the assertion would be untimely, in any event. See N.J.S.A. 10:4-15 which requires challenges to actions allegedly in violation of the act to be brought within forty-five days after the action sought to be avoided.

For all of the foregoing reasons, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioners compensate respondent in an amount equal to the tuition due and owing for the attendance of Albert Lee and V.L. in respondent's school district commencing with the date of sale of the residence at 23 Rambling Brook Drive, Holmdel, through and including December 1993. I am unable to calculate the exact amount due and owing because the date of sale of the 23 Rambling Brook Drive residence has not been provided, and calculations provided by respondent commence with February 1990, the date of the purchase of the condominium which obviously took place several months after the sale of the Rambling Brook Drive residence. The calculations provided by respondent also include the entire 1993-94 school year for both students and the entire 1994-95 school year for V.L. If the parties are unable to agree upon the exact dollar amounts due and owing pursuant to the foregoing opinion, the matter may be re-transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Commissioner for an additional hearing on damages.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION
TOWNSHIP OF HOLMDEL, :
MONMOUTH COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Both petitioners and respondent filed timely exceptions, and petitioners filed a reply pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioners assert that the initial decision is “legally unsound and amounts to a nonsequitur in view of the findings of fact [made by the ALJ].” (Petitioners’ Exceptions, at p. 1) Petitioners first contend that, in view of the facts which the ALJ found to be undisputed, it should be apparent that the superintendent of Holmdel “created a fiction” in order to justify permitting the Lees to reregister their children in the Holmdel school system in October 1987, after they had purchased a home and moved to Colts Neck. That fiction, petitioners argue, was that the Lees’ children could remain in the Holmdel schools as long as the Lees were owners of property and taxpayers in that community.

Moreover, petitioners aver, the fiction was continued in 1989 when the superintendent, after learning that the Lees had sold their home in Holmdel, permitted the Lee children to remain in the school system. Petitioners remind that all during the time that the Lees were residing in Colts Neck, they made no attempt to conceal their residence; school records contained the Colts Neck address and telephone number. Petitioners further argue that the superintendent's motive for permitting the Lees' children to remain in school, as established during the hearing, was that they were model students with superior academic achievements who were actively involved in student government and other activities. Petitioners maintain,

Clearly, the Superintendent used the Lee brothers as showpieces for the Holmdel school system, knowing full well that they did not reside within the district. He did this by assuring Mrs. Lee that her sons could attend the district schools if she merely owned property and was a taxpayer in Holmdel. (Petitioners' Exceptions, at p. 3)

Second, petitioners except to the ALJ's failure to apply the doctrine of equitable estoppel for the years 1989 through 1993, while apparently applying the doctrine for the years 1987 through 1989. Petitioners reason that, in view of the uncontested facts, the "[ALJ] incorrectly truncates the application of the doctrine of equitable estoppel in 1989 because of what she was convinced occurred at a meeting between the Superintendent, Mrs. Lee and a realtor, Mrs. Chu, immediately prior to the Lees' purchasing the premises at 156 Northhampton." (Id., at p. 4) Petitioners contend that there is no rational basis for the ALJ's finding that, at that meeting of December 12, 1989, the superintendent made clear his position that the Northampton property must be used by the Lees in some meaningful way, and could not be rented. Petitioners challenge the ALJ's credibility determinations on this issue with respect to Mrs. Lee and Superintendent Brennan.

Next, petitioners object to the ALJ's inference that they did not call Mrs. Chu as a witness in these proceedings because her testimony would not have supported their view of the December 12, 1989 meeting:

What the Administrative Law Judge is suggesting is that Mrs. Chu, had she testified, would have had to confirm that at the meeting of December 12, 1989, the Superintendent advised Mrs. Lee that if she rented that condominium, that would be evidence of her not being domiciled in Holmdel and her sons would be precluded from attending the Holmdel schools. (Id., at p. 5)

Yet, petitioners continue, such an inference is not logical when the record shows that Mrs. Lee left the meeting and immediately signed a contract of sale for the condominium on Northampton Drive. Petitioners argue that the reasonable inference to be drawn is that Mrs. Lee was prompted to make the purchase “because she was apprised by the Superintendent that for her sons to attend the Holmdel school system, she need only be a property owner and taxpayer in Holmdel.” (Id., at p. 6) This inference, petitioners hold, is supported by the ALJ's observance that Superintendent Brennan, on cross-examination, said “that it was conceivable that Mrs. Lee walked away from the conversation thinking that purchase and ownership was enough.” (Petitioners' Exceptions, at p. 6; Initial Decision, at p. 8)

Additionally, petitioners object to the ALJ's conclusion that Board member Blumenthal was aware of the situation, but “apparently took no action either then or later to correct it.” (Initial Decision, at p. 13, cited in Petitioners' Exceptions, at p. 6) Rather, petitioners contend that this Board member took action by bringing the matter to the attention of Superintendent Brennan, who thereafter did nothing to correct the situation.

Finally, petitioners advise that attention not be focused on Superintendent Brennan's ability to understand Mrs. Lee, a woman with a heavy accent. Rather, the focus should be on Mrs. Lee's understanding, from her conversations with Superintendent Brennan, of the implications of living in Colts Neck and sending her children to Holmdel schools. Here, petitioners assert:

Mrs. Lee understood Mr. Brennan, and on that score, there seems to be no doubt. Mrs. Lee fully understood that despite the fact she was living in Colts Neck with her family, Brennan permitted her to re-enroll her children in the Holmdel school system. Likewise, she purchased a condominium, not because she did not understand what Brennan was communicating, but precisely because she did understand.

Petitioners urge that a miscarriage of justice will result if the ALJ's decision with respect to the time period 1989 to 1993 is not reversed in that they have relied to their detriment on representations of a veteran superintendent, and that said superintendent wanted to "*bend the law as it pertained to domicilein order to allow two brilliant, versatile and well-rounded students to remain in the Holmdel school system." (Id., at p. 7) It is significant, they argue, that within months after Dr. LeGlise, Dr. Brennan's successor as superintendent, arrived in Holmdel in 1993, the Lees were told that they were not domiciled in the township, and they would have to remove their children from the school system.

In its exceptions, the Board concedes that tuition should not be charged to the Lees for the years 1987 to December 1989, "for reasons of equity." (Respondent's Exceptions, at p. 2) Further, the Board concurs with the ALJ's finding that tuition must be due and owing for the second portion of the 1989-1990 school year, through December 1993. However, the Board excepts to the ALJ's determination that tuition should not be due from January 1994 through the current school year.

The Board urges that, since the ALJ found that the Lees resided at the Holmdel condominium commencing January 1994, but were nevertheless domiciled in Colts Neck during that time, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1a, they were not entitled to a free public education in the respondent district from January 1994, to date. Challenging the significance of renting the condominium unit in Holmdel, the Board asserts:

Judge Duncan charged the Lee family tuition so long as they were receiving rent for the unit (December, 1989 - December, 1993) and, from a financial standpoint, there is much to be said for this conclusion. However, there is nothing in the legislation which so limits the tuition, and tuition is clearly due and payable whether the Lee family received rent or not. (Respondents' Exceptions, at p. 4)

In response to the Board's exceptions, petitioners acknowledge the Board's concession as to the equitable reasons which preclude charging them tuition for the time period October 1987 through 1989. However, they maintain that the same reasons which called for the application of equitable estoppel continued through January 1994. These reasons were articulated in petitioners' exceptions, supra. While petitioners agree with the Board that "[t]he standard of rent/no rent' should play no part in this case," they add that said standard "*cannot be used as an instrument for truncating the doctrine of equitable estoppel*after finding that the doctrine was applicable from 1987 through 1989." (Petitioners' Reply, at p. 3) Once the ALJ applied the equitable estoppel doctrine, petitioners assert, the impact of that doctrine could only be concluded by a finding that the Lees no longer relied on Superintendent Brennan's assurance that real property ownership and being a taxpayer were sufficient for attendance in the Holmdel school system.

Moreover, petitioners counter, there is no inconsistency in the ALJ's finding that tuition is not due from January 1994 to date pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d. It is possible, petitioners argue, for one to qualify for a free public education under one section of the statute (i.e., N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d), yet fail to qualify under another (i.e., N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1a).

Upon careful and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopts in part, and modifies in part, the initial decision of the ALJ in this matter. Initially, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that, commencing in October 1987, when the Lee family moved to Colts Neck, the domicile of the family has been Colts Neck. (Initial Decision, at p. 10) However, the Commissioner finds significant the respondent's concession that tuition should not be charged from October 1987 through December 1989 for reasons of equity. Inasmuch as this concession agrees with the ALJ's conclusion as to this time period, the Commissioner determines that no tuition is due.¹

Petitioners' exceptions challenge the findings of the ALJ which lead her to conclude that invocation of the doctrine of equitable estoppel is precluded by the principle of unclean hands for the time period commencing with the sale of petitioners' home at 23 Rambling Brook Drive and continuing through January 1994. (Initial Decision, at p. 13) The Commissioner recognizes that the application of equitable principles which might bar the recovery of tuition rests both on factual and credibility determinations. However, the Commissioner further recognizes that he cannot properly reject the ALJ's findings of fact without reviewing those portions of the transcript(s) relevant to petitioners' exceptions. Rowley v. Board of Education of Manalapan-Englishtown, 205 N.J. Super. 65, 75 (App. Div. 1985); In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 159 (App. Div. 1987). Inasmuch as it was petitioners' duty to provide the Commissioner with such portions of the transcript, Morrison, at 158, and petitioners failed to do so, no obligation arises for the Commissioner to review them before rendering a final decision regarding the findings and recommendations of the ALJ.² Accordingly, accepting the factual findings of the ALJ, the Commissioner determines that petitioners are obligated to respondent for tuition due and owing for the attendance of Albert Lee and V.L. in respondent's school district, commencing January 1990 through and including December 1993.³ The Commissioner notes that this determination is made without drawing a conclusion as to the failure of Mrs. Chu to testify for petitioners.

Finally, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's finding that, although petitioners used the condominium in Holmdel as a residence on a regular basis beginning in January 1994, that condominium is not petitioners' domicile in that it is not their true, fixed and permanent home. (Initial Decision, at p. 11) The Commissioner does not find, however, that N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d permits petitioners, under the circumstances herein, to attend the Holmdel schools free of charge, commencing in January 1994.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts in part, and modifies in part, the initial decision of the ALJ and orders that petitioners compensate respondent in an amount equal to tuition due and owing for the attendance of Albert Lee and V.L. in respondent's school district commencing January 1990, to date.⁴

IT IS SO ORDERED.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

² The hearing in this matter took place on November 2, 3 and 4, 1994. A transcript of only the second day of the hearing, November 3, 1994, was provided to the Commissioner for review.

⁴ The initial decision indicates that V.L., a senior, will complete the 1994-95 school year in the Holmdel school district. Consequently, tuition will be due and owing through June 1995.

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 11, 1995

(Peter P. Kalac, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Reusille, Mausner, Carotenuto, Bruno &
Barger (Martin M. Barger, Esq., of Counsel)

The decision of the Commissioner of Education is affirmed as clarified herein. The Commissioner, without providing his rationale, rejected the conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") that petitioners had been entitled to a free public education in the Holmdel school district commencing in January 1994. Petitioners do not contend that they were "domiciled" in Holmdel. Rather, they maintain that, by virtue of residing in their condominium in Holmdel four or five nights a week since January 1994, they were entitled to attend public school in the district free of charge during that period pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d). While we agree with the Commissioner's conclusion rejecting such claim, we find it necessary to clarify the basis for that result.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 provides, in relevant part:

Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:

a. Any person who is domiciled within the school district;
b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child...

d. Any person whose parent or guardian, even though not domiciled within the district, is residing temporarily therein, but any person who has had or shall have his all year-round dwelling place within the district for one year or longer shall be deemed to be domiciled within the district for the purposes of this section.

It is apparent from the statutory scheme that subsection (d) is an exception to the general rule providing free public school attendance only to those individuals who are "domiciled within the school district." (Emphasis added.) As pointed out by the ALJ, an individual can have more than one "residence," but can only have one true "domicile." "Domicile" is the place where a person "has his true, fixed, permanent home, and principal establishment, and to which, whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning....Residence, on the other hand, though parallel in many respects to domicile, is something quite different in that the elements of permanency, continuity and kinship with the physical, cultural, social and political attributes which inhere in a 'home' according to our accepted understanding, are missing. Intention adequately manifested is the catalyst which converts a residence from a mere place in which a person lives to a domicile." State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 250-51 (1955).

In enacting the legislation now codified in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a), the Legislature expressed its clear and unambiguous determination that public school attendance would be free only to those individuals who were actually domiciled in the district, i.e., had their true, fixed and permanent home therein. Mere residency was not sufficient. The Legislature did, however, provide a limited exception for those students "whose parent or guardian" (emphasis added), although not domiciled in the district, was temporarily residing therein. In proposing such legislation, the bill's sponsor indicated that:

Children whose parents were engaged in farm labor in this State during the war period were entitled to free public education under the provisions of chapter 91, P.L. 1943. This privilege expires at the official close of the war. The proposed bill continues to provide educational opportunity for the children of migrant farm laborers and for other children residing temporarily in the State with their parents or guardians.

Statement accompanying S. 216, L. 1947, c. 138.

Given the express language and intent of the statute, it is evident that the limited exception to the domicile rule provided by the Legislature in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d) was not designed to enable the petitioners herein to receive a free public education in the Holmdel school district while continuing to maintain a domicile in Colts Neck. The record in this case indicates that petitioners Albert Lee and his brother V.L. were occupying their family's condominium in Holmdel four or five nights a week, while spending their weekends at their home in Colts Neck, in order to attend public school in Holmdel. And while their mother testified that she had stayed with them during that period, she also acknowledged that their father had continued to live in Colts Neck.

The express domicile requirement of the statute would be rendered meaningless by an interpretation of subsection (d) which permitted petitioners, who do not dispute that they were domiciled in Colts Neck, to attend public school in Holmdel free of charge simply by taking up part-time residency within the district for that purpose.

Consequently, we affirm with clarification that portion of the Commissioner's decision concluding that N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 did not authorize petitioners to receive a free public education in Holmdel commencing in January 1994. In all other respects, we affirm the decision of the Commissioner on the points of appeal before us for the reasons expressed therein.

_____ :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 11, 1995

Decided by the State Board of Education, September 6, 1995

Remanded by the Appellate Division, October 9, 1996

For the Petitioners-Appellants, Kalac, Newman, Lavender & Campbell
(Peter P. Kalac, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Reusille, Mausner, Carotenuto, Bruno &
Barger (Martin M. Barger, Esq., of Counsel)

This matter is before us pursuant to a remand by the Appellate Division.

The case ~~was~~ initiated when the Holmdel school district sought retroactive reimbursement from the Lees for tuition for the period from October 1987 through January 1994. Until October 1987, the family had been domiciled in Holmdel. After that, the Lees moved to Colts Neck where they have been domiciled ever since. However, they retained their property in Holmdel until 1989, at which point they sold it and purchased a condominium. The two Lee children continued to attend school in Holmdel until January 1994, but paid no tuition.

The Lees contended that they were not obligated to pay tuition because school officials in Holmdel had been fully aware of the family's change in domicile in 1987. The Lees maintained that when they were told of the problem in 1989, school officials had led Mrs. Lee to understand that purchase of the condominium would be enough to entitle the Lee children to a free public education in Holmdel. They further contended that school officials had not made it clear to them until January 1994 that ownership of the condominium was not alone sufficient to create such an entitlement. At that point, the Lee children and their mother took up part-time residency during the week at the condominium, but the family continued to be domiciled in Colts Neck.

The Commissioner and the State Board concluded that the Lee children had not been entitled to a free public education in Holmdel because their domicile had been in Colts Neck during the entire period relevant to the litigation. However, both the Commissioner and State Board found that equitable estoppel applied so as to bar Holmdel from collecting tuition for the period between 1987 and 1989 on the grounds that the District had acquiesced to the situation until 1989 when the superintendent met with Mrs. Lee. Both the Commissioner and State Board concurred with the ALJ's conclusion that the Lees were fully aware in December 1989 that they were no longer entitled to attend school in Holmdel free of charge so that equitable estoppel should not be applied to excuse them from their obligation to pay tuition to Holmdel after that date.

While affirming our determination that equitable estoppel applied for the period between October 1987 and December 1989, as well as our legal conclusion that

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d) did not provide the Lees' children with an entitlement to a free public education in Holmdel from January 1994 to June 1995, the Court remanded for consideration of whether equitable estoppel should also preclude Holmdel from collecting tuition during that period. The Court further found that the ALJ, the Commissioner and the State Board had not adequately resolved whether Mrs. Lee had in fact understood that owning property in Holmdel did not alone entitle her children to attend school in the district free of charge, and it remanded for additional factual findings on this issue and for determination of whether equitable estoppel should be applied to the period between January 1990 and January 1994.

In view of the Court's decision, the State Board of Education remands this matter to the Commissioner for such proceedings as may be required to fulfill the terms of that decision. We do not retain jurisdiction.

RESPONDENT-CROSS/APPELLANT.

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 11, 1995

Decided by the State Board of Education, September 6, 1995

Decision on remand by the Commissioner of Education, December 8,

For the Petitioners-Appellants, Kalac, Newman, Lavender & Campbell
(Peter P. Kalac, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Cross/Appellant, Reusille, Mausner, Carotenuto, Barger & Steel (Martin M. Barger, Esq., of Counsel)

This case began in 1994 when Whasun Lee (hereinafter "petitioner" or "Mrs. Lee") filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging the determination of the Board of Education of the Township of Holmdel (hereinafter "Board" or "Holmdel Board") that her children were not entitled to a free public education in the Holmdel district. The Board filed a counterclaim seeking reimbursement for tuition for the period from October 1987 through January 1994.¹

The record indicated that petitioner and her family had been domiciled in Holmdel until October 1987, when they moved to Colts Neck. However, they retained their house in Holmdel until 1989, when they sold it and bought a condominium in Holmdel. Petitioner alleged that she had purchased the condominium after she had been told by the superintendent of the Holmdel school district, Dr. Timothy Brennan, that ownership of property in Holmdel was sufficient to allow her children to continue to attend school in that district free of charge. Petitioner's children continued to attend public school in Holmdel, although the family was domiciled in Colts Neck during all times relevant to this case.

Petitioner contended that she was not obligated to pay tuition because school officials in Holmdel had been aware of the family's change in domicile in 1987. Petitioner maintained that when school officials were advised of the situation in 1989, they had led her to believe that purchasing a condominium in Holmdel would be enough to entitle her children to a free public education in that district. She further contended that school officials had not made it clear to her until January 1994 that ownership of the condominium was not alone sufficient to create such an entitlement. At that time, petitioner and her children took up part-time residency during the week at the condominium, although the family continued to be domiciled in Colts Neck.

On May 11, 1995, the Commissioner determined that petitioner's children had not been entitled to a free public education in Holmdel since their domicile had been in

Colts Neck during the entire period relevant to this litigation. However, he concluded that equitable estoppel applied so as to prevent the Holmdel Board from collecting tuition for the period between October 1987 and December 1989, finding that the Board had acquiesced to the situation during that period. The Commissioner concluded that equitable estoppel should not be applied to excuse petitioner from her obligation to pay tuition to the Holmdel Board after that date, finding that petitioner had been aware in December 1989 that her children were no longer entitled to attend school in Holmdel free of charge. Consequently, he assessed tuition for the period from January 1990 through June 1995. On September 6, 1995, we affirmed the Commissioner's decision with clarification.

On October 9, 1996, the Appellate Division remanded for further proceedings. The Court found that this agency had not adequately resolved whether petitioner had understood that owning property in Holmdel did not alone entitle her children to attend school in the district free of charge. Consequently, it remanded this matter for additional factual findings and for determination of whether the doctrine of "unclean hands" barred the application of equitable estoppel for the period from January 1990 to January 1994. The Court also remanded for consideration of whether equitable estoppel should preclude Holmdel from collecting tuition for the period from January 1994 to June 1995. The Court affirmed our determination that equitable estoppel applied so as to preclude Holmdel from collecting tuition for the period between October 1987 and December 1989.

On October 21, 1997, following additional hearings on remand, which included the testimony of petitioner and Julia Chu, a real estate agent who had assisted petitioner in purchasing and renting out the Holmdel condominium, the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") determined that equitable estoppel would not apply so as to prevent the Board from collecting tuition for the period after December 1989. According to the

ALJ:

Because Dr. Brennan advised Mrs. Lee not to rent out the condominium, and I am convinced she understood that instruction, and because notwithstanding the Lees rented out the condominium almost immediately and continuing until January 1994 when Dr. Le Glise [the new superintendent] advised them of the requirements of domicile, the equities do not weigh in favor of the Lees.

Initial Decision on Remand, slip op. at 12.

I have found as a fact Dr. Brennan said to Mrs. Lee, in Mrs. Chu's presence, that she had to use the condominium in some meaningful way and that it would be proof positive that she was not so using it if she rented it out. Mrs. Lee's English language difficulty manifested itself throughout the hearing with a heavy accent which makes it difficult for others to understand her. I saw little evidence that she had difficulty understanding others when they spoke to her in English. If Mrs. Chu had testified that she explained to Mrs. Lee at or after the meeting that she should not rent out the condo, that would also have been relevant evidence of Mrs. Lee's knowledge. Of course, Mrs. Chu did not so testify, but the...testimony she did give on that issue when I asked her the question directly was so evasive and unresponsive as to permit the conclusion that she did have such a conversation with Mrs. Lee wherein she advised Mrs. Lee that she should not rent the condo.

Id. at 14.

The ALJ recommended that petitioner be directed to pay tuition to the Holmdel Board for the period from January 1990 through June 1995.

On December 8, 1997, the Commissioner adopted in part and rejected in part the ALJ's recommendation. The Commissioner agreed that petitioner had failed to meet her burden of showing that equitable principles should bar the Board from recovering tuition after January 1994. However, the Commissioner was “unwilling to ascribe bad faith, wrongdoing or fraudulent conduct to Mrs. Lee, in that such a label would presuppose that Mrs. Lee knew what the correct course of action would be.” Commissioner’s Decision on Remand, slip op. at 28. The Commissioner found that Dr. Brennan did not “possess an accurate understanding of the relevant law,” id. at 25, and “did not appreciate the distinction between a residence and a domicile.” Id. at 27. The Commissioner therefore directed petitioner to reimburse the Holmdel Board for tuition only for the period from January 1994 through June 1995.

Petitioner filed an appeal from that decision to the State Board, and the Holmdel Board filed a cross-appeal.

On December 16, 1998, our Legal Committee issued its initial report in this matter, in which it recommended affirming in part and reversing in part the decision of the Commissioner. The Legal Committee agreed with the Commissioner’s determination that equitable principles would not apply so as to bar the Holmdel Board from collecting tuition for the period from January 1994 through June 1995. However, it disagreed with the Commissioner’s conclusion that equitable principles would apply to prevent the Board from collecting tuition for the period from January 1990 until January 1994, concurring with the ALJ’s conclusion that the petitioner came into these proceedings with “unclean hands” and, therefore, could not avail herself of equitable principles.

Upon further reflection of the record in light of exceptions filed to that report, the Legal Committee found it necessary to issue a revised report. The Committee issued its revised report on April 21, 1999, in which it recommended affirming with clarification the Commissioner’s decision. Both parties filed exceptions to that revised report.

After a careful review of the record, we affirm the decision of the Commissioner as clarified herein. We conclude that the record before us does not permit a finding that petitioner had understood prior to January 1994 that owning property in Holmdel did not alone entitle her children to attend school in the district free of charge.

The events pivotal to this issue occurred in December 1989 at a meeting between Dr. Brennan and petitioner, which was also attended by Julia Chu. Dr. Brennan testified during the initial hearing in this matter that he had misunderstood the requirements of domicile, believing that ownership of property in the district while "spending time there and living there in some sense," tr. 11/4/94, at 44, was sufficient.² In essence, Dr. Brennan lowered the standard for "domicile." Indeed, he acknowledged the possibility that petitioner could have left their meeting with the understanding that owning a home and paying taxes in Holmdel would be sufficient to entitle her children to attend school in that district. Id. at 71-72.

Dr. Brennan, however, also testified that he had advised petitioner that she could not rent out the Holmdel property. Petitioner denied any awareness of such an instruction. The ALJ found in favor of the Board on the basis of the testimony of Chu, who had accompanied petitioner to the meeting with Dr. Brennan and had assisted petitioner in purchasing a condominium in Holmdel and renting it out. Although the ALJ found that Chu's testimony was so evasive as to "permit the conclusion that she did have a conversation with Mrs. Lee wherein she advised Mrs. Lee that she should not rent the condo," initial decision on remand, slip op. at 14, we find, upon further review, that the evidence in support of the ALJ's conclusion is simply too tenuous to permit such a finding. Although we agree with the ALJ that Chu appears to have been evasive in responding to questioning, in the absence of other evidence supporting the conclusion that petitioner had, in fact, understood that she could not rent out the Holmdel condominium, we are unwilling to ascribe such understanding to her. We note, moreover, in considering the equities of this matter, that Chu had been employed part-time as a teacher by the Holmdel Board in September 1996 and that she was still serving in such capacity at the time she was called as a witness by the Board in April 1997. Tr. 4/28/97, at 12.

² It is now well established that an individual can have more than one "residence," but can only have one true "domicile." "Domicile" is the place where a person "has his true, fixed, permanent home, and principal establishment, and to which, whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning." State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 250 (1955), quoting Story, Conflict of Laws (8th ed.), § 41, p. 40. "Residence, on the other hand, though parallel in many respects to domicile, is something quite different in that the elements of permanency, continuity and kinship with the physical, cultural, social and political attributes which inhere in a 'home' according to our accepted understanding, are missing. Intention adequately manifested is the catalyst which converts a residence from a mere place in which a person lives to a domicile." Id. at 251. In enacting the legislation now codified in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, the Legislature provided that public school attendance would be free only to those individuals who were actually domiciled in the district, i.e., had their true, fixed and permanent home therein. Mere residency was not sufficient.

Under these circumstances, we are unable to conclude on the basis of the record before us that the doctrine of "unclean hands" barred petitioner from applying equitable estoppel for the period from January 1990 to January 1994. We therefore affirm, as clarified herein, the decision of the Commissioner directing the petitioner to reimburse the Holmdel Board for tuition only for the period from January 1994 through June 1995, agreeing with the Commissioner that equitable principles would not apply so as to preclude the Board from collecting tuition for that period.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

SYNOPSIS

In consolidated matters, petitioning Board and Board member sought to disqualify newly seated Board member for conflict of interest (N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2) due to his ownership of the Town newspaper.

As respondent ignored the court's order to provide answers to interrogatories served upon him, pursuant to R. 4:23-5(a)2, the ALJ concluded that respondent's answers to the pleadings were dismissed and petitioners' assertions and allegations were adopted as true. Therefore, ALJ found that respondent was in conflict of interest by virtue of his ownership and operation of the only newspaper within the Board's jurisdiction. Respondent was disqualified from holding a seat on the Board and was ordered to vacate his seat for reason of conflict of interest.

Citing N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.10(b), N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.3 and R. 4:23-5(a)2, Commissioner found that the ALJ's dismissal of this matter based on respondent's failure to respond to interrogatories was appropriate and adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners, Board of Education of the Township of Brick (Board) and Frank Pannucci, allege that Edward Mueller, a member of the Board, is in conflict of interest and seeks an order from the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) to disqualify Edward Mueller from continuing to hold a seat on the Board.

The matters were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on May 16, 1994 and July 27, 1994, for determination as contested cases, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, with the recommendation that the two matters be consolidated.

On April 28, 1994, petitioners sought injunctive relief from the Commissioner to prevent respondent from taking the oath of office and a seat on the Board. On May 5, 1994, by way of letter decision, the Deputy Commissioner denied petitioners application for emergent relief asserting that the relief requested; i.e., to delay the Board's statutorily mandated reorganization meeting, was beyond the Commissioner's authority.

On September 15, 1994, a prehearing conference was held, with all parties represented, after which a Prehearing Order issued on September 22, 1994. The Prehearing Order states, in part, as follows:

NATURE OF PROCEEDINGS AND ISSUES TO BE RESOLVED:

Nature of Proceedings:

Respondent, Edward Mueller, was elected to a seat on the Board of Education of the Township of Brick (Board) on April 19, 1994. Respondent is the publisher, owner and operator of the only newspaper printed and published in the Township of Brick. New Jersey statutes mandate certain notices be published in a newspaper in the municipality of the school district. The Board alleges, among other things, that respondent is in potential conflict of interest and in violations of the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 to -34, due to his direct financial advantage as sole owner and publisher of the newspaper.

The Board alleges that on or about April 11, 1994, respondent filed a lawsuit, in Superior Court, against the President of the Board, the Board's Secretary and its former Superintendent of Schools. The Board alleges that respondent is in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, conflict of interest.

Petitioner Pannucci seeks a Declaratory Judgment by the Commissioner that respondent is in conflict of interest (N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2) due to respondent's ownership of the only local newspaper.

Issues to be Determined:

1. Whether respondent Mueller, the owner, publisher and operator of the only local newspaper in the school district is in violation of the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 to -34?
2. Whether, at the time of the annual school election, respondent was in violation of the School Ethics Act as a result of a claim against the Board before Superior Court?
3. Whether the Board has standing to raise the issue of respondent's alleged violation of the School Ethics Act?

Also at the prehearing conference, respondent insisted that the Board, the Commissioner and/or the OAL supply respondent with legal counsel. Respondent was advised that neither the Commissioner nor the OAL provided legal counsel to litigants. Legal representation is the responsibility of the litigant, unless otherwise provided by statute or regulation. Therefore, respondent's request was denied.

On October 6, 1994, a telephone conference call was conducted with counsel for petitioners and respondent at which, the Board requested that respondent comply with discovery and answer interrogatories served upon him by the Board on September 10, 1994. Respondent asserted that he had answered some of the questions which appeared in the Board's Interrogatories, however, he refused to supply the answers to the Board without the assistance of an attorney. Respondent again requested that the Board or the OAL provide him with legal counsel. Respondent was again advised that there are no provisions, either by statute or regulation, which authorized the OAL to provide legal counsel to a litigant in an administrative proceeding. Respondent was also advised that if he failed or refused to answer the Board's Interrogatories, without good cause, this tribunal would entertain an appropriate motion from the Board.

On October 11, 1994, this tribunal executed an Order to Compel respondent, Edward C. Mueller, to immediately provide the Board with answers propounded upon him on September 10, 1994. Such answers to Interrogatories were to be submitted to the Board on or before October 14, 1994.

Respondent failed to answer the Board's Interrogatories on or before October 14, 1994, without good cause. This tribunal then executed an Order dated October 28, 1994, to suppress and dismiss respondent's Answers to the Petition for Declaratory Judgment and his defenses.

On December 13, 1994, the undersigned was in receipt of Petitioner Frank Pannucci's Motion for Summary Decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, with a supporting memorandum of law. On January 3, 1995, the Board joined in the Motion for Summary Decision submitted by Pannucci, together with a memorandum of law and the certification of Frank Pannucci and Dr. Philip W. Nicastro, the Board's Business Administrator/Board Secretary. A conference call followed with counsel for petitioners and respondent. The court explained the summary decision procedure to respondent and advised him that he had the opportunity to respond.

On January 18, 1995, the undersigned was in receipt of respondent's sworn statement, in lieu of a legal memorandum. Respondent opposed petitioners motion for summary decision contending that there were facts in dispute which required a full and fair plenary hearing.

As a consequence of respondent's objections to the motions for summary decision, this tribunal advised the parties, by letter dated January 18, 1995, that the matter, presumably, did not meet the criteria for summary decision as set forth in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Therefore, the matter would move forward to the plenary hearing scheduled for January 30, 1995.

PETITIONERS STATEMENT OF FACTS

The respondent was elected to the Board on April 19, 1994, at the school's annual election. The respondent is also the publisher, owner and operator of the sole newspaper published in Brick Township, The Brick Township Town News & Sampler (hereinafter the “Town News”). The Board designated the Town News as its official newspaper based on the directives of the respondent and the statutes which mandate that certain Board notices be placed in a newspaper published in the municipality of the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-19 and N.J.S.A. 18A:22-11.

In the foregoing capacity, the respondent publishes all of the Board’s legal notices. Specifically, the newspaper publishes school board election notices and notices of public hearings on proposed school budgets, pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-19 and N.J.S.A. 18A:22-11. The respondent himself demanded that the Brick Township school district publish their bid notices and other notices in the Town News. Further, the respondent has urged the district to purchase subscriptions to his newspaper. Therefore, the respondent derives a direct financial benefit and economically profits from the designation of the Town News as the Board’s only and official newspaper. In addition, respondent has used his position as Board member to obtain information not available to the public and published same in his newspaper.

In a letter addressed to the Board’s School Business Administrator/Board Secretary, dated March 3, 1993, respondent, as editor and publisher of the Brick Township Town News and Sampler, stated the following:

Dear Dr. Nicastro:

As you are aware, our newspaper is the official organ of the township and school district, franchised by law to publish all legal notices emanating therefrom. However, while all other notices have been properly presented for publication, Bid Notices or Requests for Proposals have not.

The issue of whether Bid Notices should be inserted in the Town News went uncontested until about a year ago when a Court agreement with the township was reached whereby at the very least copies of advertisements would be supplied to us. Recently, the township has come around to the thinking that these advertisements should, in fact, be published locally.

Therefore, I am requesting that your office follow the example of Municipal Purchasing Agent Richard MacDonald in submitting Bid Notices and Requests for Proposals for legal publication in the Town

News. Or, in the alternative, a statute citation or case law indicating an exemption from this practice.

I note that the bid request for Irrigation and trees/shrubs at Drum Point School and Lake Riveria appeared in the Asbury Park Press (not a legal newspaper for Ocean County public affairs) and did not reach Construction Data Corporation for publication until three days before the bid date.

This contract appears to be well within the production capabilities of numerous landscapers and garden center operators based within the township. Failure to publish locally in our more visible space, coupled with the fact that we would have done a news story on the project, seems exclusionary and quite possibly more costly to the taxpayers.

May we reach an agreement in this matter without litigation?

Very truly yours,

(signed)

Edward C. Mueller
Editor & Publisher

(Board's Exhibit G)

In response to the petitioners Motions for Summary Decision, respondent's certification, in lieu of brief, states:

I, Edward C. Mueller, residing at 526 Jackson Avenue, Brick Township, County of Ocean, State of New Jersey, certifies:

1. That I am a member of the Brick Township Board of Education and the publisher and 99.5% owner of the Brick Town News and the respondent in the above-captioned petition.
2. That I have read the Certification and Motion for Summary Judgment dated December 30.
3. That I oppose for the following reasons and matter of law, any summary decision in the above-captioned decision.

(a) No contract between the Brick Township Town News and the Brick Township Board of Education exists--and petitioners have not demonstrated otherwise--thus, petitioners' allegations require a full and fair plenary hearing.

(b) No proof is shown that respondent has violated any trust within the purview of the original complaint of the office of member, a Board of Education, or of the greater trust as a representative of the First Amendment of the Constitution of the United States. Thus, petitioners' allegations require a full and fair plenary hearing.

(c) The facts, as interpreted by counsel to petitioners are in dispute. Thus, petitioners' allegations require a full and fair plenary hearing.

(d) The petitioners are in conflict of interest having voted in part or in full to deny qualified counsel to respondent while having accepted same, fait accompli, without a vote of the Board of Education they pretend to represent. Thus, petitioners' allegations require a full and fair plenary hearing.

(e) Petitioners' papers and respondent's research indicates no precedent for the disqualification for non-criminal reasons of any bona fide citizen duly elected by the registered voters of a United States political subdivision. Petitioners indicate no criminal activity on the part of the respondent. Thus, petitioners' allegations require a full and fair plenary hearing.

MOTION TO STRIKE RESPONDENT'S DEFENSES FOR FAILURE TO ANSWER
INTERROGATORIES AND MOTION FOR SUMMARY DECISION

At the hearing held on January 30, 1995, at the Lakewood, New Jersey, Municipal Building, petitioners moved to strike respondent Mueller's defenses and to bar him from presenting an opening statement, a closing statement or evidence at the hearing, based upon his failure to provide petitioners' with answers to interrogatories.

The petitioners argued, among other things, that under the holding in Perry v. Crunden, 79 N.J. Super. 285 (Essex Co. Ct. 1963) a defaulting defendant is prohibited from presenting either an opening statement or a closing statement to the court. Id. at 292.

In Jugan v. Pollen, 253 N.J. Super. 123, (App. Div. 1992), which held, among other things, that the defendant, who was held in default by failing to participate in discovery at the trial level, was properly foreclosed from making an opening or closing statement and precluded from presenting evidence. Id. 133. In Douglas v. Harris, 35 N.J. 270 (1961), our Supreme Court held, at 276, 277, that pursuant to then Rule, R.R. 4:56-1, that the clerk shall enter a default when a party has failed to “plead or otherwise defend.” The Douglas court continued to state:

R.R. 4:27-2, provides the penalties which may be inflicted upon a party for failure to obey an order requiring him to answer questions or make other discovery antecedent to trial. Among the sanctions which may be imposed, the court is authorized by R.R. 4:27-2(b) (3) to make “an order striking out the pleadings or parts thereof, or staying further proceedings until the order is obeyed, or dismissing the action or proceedings or any part thereof, or rendering a judgment by default against the party who fails to obey.” Id. 277. (emphasis supplied)

Petitioners argue that respondent has ignored orders of this court to complete discovery. As of the day of the hearing the Interrogatories remain unanswered by respondent.

Petitioners seek to have respondent disqualified as a member of the Board grounded upon respondent’s conflict of interest.

Respondent admitted, on the hearing record, that he had not supplied petitioners with his answer to their interrogatories. Respondent further asserted he would not supply petitioners with such answers without the advice of legal counsel. Respondent insisted that either the Board or the OAL provide him with an attorney. Respondent’s request was denied for lack of authority.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS WITH RESPECT TO THE MOTION TO STRIKE

In his text, Civil Procedure (Little, Brown and Company, 1965), Fleming James, Jr., discusses the federal discovery rules and observes that sanctions may be imposed upon a party who fails to answer interrogatories. At 191, he states:

The duty of a party to answer interrogatories is imposed by the rules themselves without need of a court order. The sanction for failure to answer is provided by Rule 37(d): “the court on motion and notice may strike out all or any part of any pleading of that party, or dismiss the action or proceeding or any part thereof, or enter judgment by default against that party.” (emphasis supplied).

The Rules Governing the Courts of the State of New Jersey, at Rule 4:23-5(a)2., provides that a matter may be dismissed, with prejudice, for the failure of a party to serve answers to interrogatories.

Respondent was in receipt of this court’s ORDER dated October 11, 1994, to provide answers to Interrogatories served upon him on September 10, 1994. Respondent ignored the ORDER and failed to provide the answers to petitioners.

Subsequently, respondent was in receipt of this court’s ORDER to suppress and dismiss his Answer to the Petition of Appeal and his defenses.

Respondent did not move before this court to vacate the dismissal and suppression order. Nor did he than attempt to comply with the ORDER, dated October 11, 1994, and provide petitioners with the required answers to Interrogatories. Rather, respondent elected to ignore the directions of this tribunal

I CONCLUDE, therefore, pursuant to R. 4:23-5(a)2., that respondent’s Answers to the pleadings are hereby DISMISSED and petitioners assertions and allegations are adopted as true, in fact.

Consequently, I FIND AND CONCLUDE that respondent Edward C. Mueller, is found to be in conflict of interest by virtue of his ownership and operation of the only newspaper within the Board’s jurisdiction and which, by statute N.J.S.A. 18A:14-19 and N.J.S.A. 18A:22-11, the Board is mandated to publish its official notice for its annual school election and annual school budget, among other things.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is HELD that Edward C. Mueller is DISQUALIFIED from holding a seat on the Board of Education of the Township of Brick, and it is therefore ORDERED that Edward C. Mueller VACATE the seat to which he was elected on April 18, 1994, for the reason of CONFLICT OF INTEREST.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

RESPONDENT. :
AND : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
FRANK PANNUCCI, : DECISION
PETITIONER, :

EDWARD MUELLER, :
RESPONDENT. :
_____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Petitioner's reply exceptions were untimely filed on May 4, 1995, in response to exceptions received by petitioner's own admission on April 25, 1995, and thus, are not considered herein.

Respondent's exceptions address both substantive and procedural issues. In that the ALJ does not reach the substantive issues of the case, these are not considered herein. Respondent excepts that the ALJ erred in dismissing this case for his failure to respond to interrogatories since N.J.A.C. 6:24-1 et seq. does not require that a respondent respond to interrogatories. Further, respondent contends that the Commissioner of Education should relax the rules under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.15 to prevent dismissal of this case in the interest of justice.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner agrees with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ with respect to each of the charges against respondent for the reasons clearly articulated in the initial decision.

The Commissioner finds that the ALJ was justified in finding that respondent's failure to comply with court rules sufficiently warranted dismissal of the instant case. New Jersey Rules of Courts, State and Federal, at Rule 4:23-5(a)2, provide that a matter may be dismissed, with prejudice, for the failure of a party to serve answers to interrogatories. Administrative law judges are authorized to proceed under these New Jersey Court Rules. N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.3. As such, once the Commissioner transmits a proceeding to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing, it must be conducted under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules of Practice set forth at N.J.A.C. 1:1. N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.10(b). Thus, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ's dismissal of this matter based on respondent's failure to respond to interrogatories was appropriate in light of these provisions.

Finally, although the Commissioner has discretion to relax the rules in order to prevent injustice, this case does not warrant such action as respondent was afforded a full opportunity to offer a defense to the allegations filed against him at a judicial hearing and refused to comply with court rules so as to avail himself of this opportunity. For the Commissioner to allow respondent to now raise defenses, after the fact of his dismissal, the broader concerns giving rise to the creation of the rules would be eroded. While it is recognized that removal from elected office is a harsh penalty, petitioner's conduct of deliberately violating court orders so as to prevent development of a full factual record leaves the Commissioner little alternative but to affirm the ALJ's initial decision.

Accordingly, for the reasons well-expressed therein, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law. Respondent is hereby removed from his position on the Brick Township Board of Education as of the date of this decision.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL :
 ELECTION HELD IN THE LOWER CAMDEN : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

 CAMDEN COUNTY. :
 _____ :

The announced results of the balloting for the General Fund question of the Lower Camden County Regional Board of Education at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the Lower Camden County Regional School District were as follows:

GENERAL FUND TAX LEVY	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
NO Votes	2083	26	2109

Pursuant to a letter request from the Board of Education filed on April 21, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Camden County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for the General Fund question pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.3. The recount was conducted on May 5, 1995 at the Voting Machine Warehouse, South Jersey Port Corporation, Camden. No request for a recount of absentee ballots was made to Superior Court by the Board, as the number of such ballots was insufficient to have affected the outcome of the election.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally for the General Fund question stood unchanged, remaining as follows:

GENERAL FUND TAX LEVY	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
YES Votes	2001	38	2039
NO Votes	2083	26	2109

There being no changes on recount, the outcome of the election is unaltered.

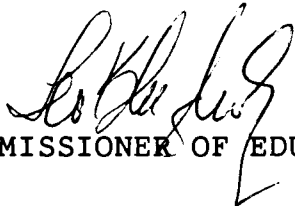

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner determines that, as originally announced, the General Fund question of the Board of Education of the Lower Camden County Regional School District was defeated by the voters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-58.

THIS AGREEMENT and GENERAL RELEASE, dated MARCH 27, 1995, is made by and between Frances Taliercio ("Taliercio") and the Glen Ridge Board of Education ("Board"). In consideration of the mutual promises and undertakings contained in this Agreement, Taliercio and the Board agree as follows:

1. Taliercio shall withdraw her petition of appeal before the Commissioner of Education by making the appropriate application to the Honorable Kenneth R. Springer, A.L.J.

2. COMPENSATION

In exchange for the promises and release described in this Agreement, the parties agree that the Board will pay Taliercio the sum total of One Thousand Two Hundred and Fifty Dollars and no cents ($1,250.00) after the parties have executed the settlement documents and the Commissioner of Education approves the settlement agreement.

3. GENERAL RELEASE

In exchange for the consideration provided in paragraph 2 above, the adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, Taliercio, on behalf of herself, heirs, successors and assigns, hereby fully releases and forever discharges the Board and its legal representatives, successors, assigns, agents, directors and employees, for any and all actions, claims and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, that she ever had or may now have against them or any of them, including, without limitation, any and all claims directly or indirectly related to or arising out of her employment by the Board or the termination of that employment. These releases specifically include, but are not limited to, claims under the New Jersey education laws and regulations, Civil Rights Act of 1991, sex discrimination claims and federal or state civil rights claims, including claims of age discrimination.

4. NO ADMISSION OF LIABILITY

Liability for any and all claims surrounding Taliercio's employment and separation from employment which she may now have, whether known or unknown, is expressly denied by the Board. It is understood and agreed between the parties that this is a compromise of a disputed claim or claims, and that neither this Agreement itself, nor the furnishing of the consideration of this Agreement, will be deemed or construed at any time, for any purpose, as an admission of anyone's liability or responsibility for any wrongdoing of any kind.

5. MODIFICATIONS

This Agreement constitutes the entire understanding of the parties on the subjects covered, and supersedes any and all previous agreement on these subjects. The parties agree that this Agreement will not be terminated or modified except in writing signed by Taliercio and the President of the Board.

6. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent for any other matter involving other employees.

7. This Agreement shall only be effective upon approval by the Commissioner of Education.

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Pending before me in this matter is a motion filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 by petitioner, Peter B. Contini, Assistant Commissioner of Education for summary decision or, in the alternative, for a declaration that he has made out a prima facie case as to all or substantially all of the facts alleged in the Verified Petition and that the burden should therefore shift to the respondent to demonstrate that a decision by the Commissioner of Education to recommend to the State Board of Education that there be a takeover of Newark's Public Schools would be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Briefs in support of and in opposition to the motion, accompanied by multi-volume appendices, were filed in February 1995 and March 1995 and oral argument was conducted on April 5, 1995. Since I previously scheduled lengthy plenary hearings to begin on April 24, 1995, I am issuing this summary decision well within the 45 day time period permitted under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(c) and 1:1-12.3(c).

This case, informally referred to as the "Newark School Takeover Case", was commenced on July 22, 1994 by the filing of a Verified Petition for Administrative Order by Peter B. Contini, who is the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Field Services, New Jersey Department of Education. The Board of Education of Newark is the respondent. The Verified Petition set forth in essential part that in January 1984, pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.1 et seq. the Department began a comprehensive monitoring process to determine whether the respondent was providing a "thorough and efficient system of free public education" as required by the New Jersey Constitution, ART. VIII, § IV, Para.1 and State law. The respondent (hereafter "Newark", the "District" or the "Board"), together with all the other school districts in this State, were to be monitored and evaluated with respect to ten general categories or "elements". Within these elements there were a total of fifty-one "indicators" designed to assess the thoroughness and the efficiency of each district's educational system and to determine whether each district should be certified by the State Board of Education as meeting prescribed state standards. In the first instance, a school district was expected to successfully pass what is known as "Level I" monitoring in which case it would be certified for a period of five years. If a district failed Level I monitoring it would move to a "Level II" wherein it would be required to appoint a self-study committee and within three months design an improvement plan to correct the deficiencies identified during the Level I review. If, as a result of its Level II activities, a district successfully demonstrated the deficiencies were subject to correction, certification would then take place. If, on the other hand, a district failed to correct the deficiencies during Level II, it then would move to "Level III" wherein a comprehensive assessment would be made in order to determine whether the district was able to take necessary corrective action to overcome the deficiencies which interfered with its ability to deliver a thorough and efficient system of free public education to its pupils. If, as a result of Level III monitoring activities, it was determined that conditions within the school district did not permit implementation of a corrective plan, the Commissioner then could order a "comprehensive compliance investigation" into the district's educational programs, fiscal practices, governance and management leading, if necessary, to a State "Takeover" and the creation of a State-operated school district. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14, 18A:7-15, 18A:7-15-1, 18A:7A-34, 18A:7A-35, N.J.A.C. 6:8-5.2 to 8:5A.6.

The Verified Petition went on to allege that with respect to Newark the Level I review procedure resulted in a determination that respondent's performance was "unacceptable" with respect to 7 of the 10 elements and 13 of the 51 indicators. After failing Level I Newark then moved into Level II and in December 1987 the District again received unacceptable ratings with respect to 7 of the 10 elements and now 16 of the 51 indicators. Thus, no certification was issued to it. Thereafter, continued monitoring took place with respect to all aspects of the respondent's operations and on May 13, 1993 the Commissioner, after reviewing a Level III external review report, determined that conditions existed within the District which might preclude successful implementation of a corrective plan. Thus, Newark was put on written notice that a "Comprehensive Compliance Investigation" (CCI) would take place. That investigation was conducted and, as a result, a determination was made that Newark was deficient in a variety of major areas, including a demonstrated inability to govern and manage in a way reasonably calculated to provide a thorough and efficient system of public education, an inability to have a consistently effective and efficient system in place for the delivery of educational programs and services for students, and an inability to operate an efficient, effective and appropriate system of finance. The Verified Petition then alleged that as a result of the adverse findings and pursuant to the provisions of various statutes, and under the authority of the Commissioner and State Board of Education, there existed as of July 1994 such major uncorrected deficiencies in the operation of the District as to prevent it from providing a thorough and efficient system of free public schools. Thus, the Verified Petition requested that the Commissioner of Education recommend to the State Board of Education pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 and N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34 that it issue an Administrative Order removing the elected Board members and creating a State-operated school district under the supervision of a State District Superintendent empowered to take all action necessary to assure the delivery of a constitutionally acceptable level of educational services. Accompanying the Verified Petition was an Order to Show Cause requiring respondent to demonstrate why the relief sought in the Verified Petition should not be granted. Certification of Peter B. Contini, Pa1 - Pa4.¹

Immediately following the filing of the Verified Petition and Order to Show Cause the file was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case. On August 16, 1994 the Board filed a Verified Answer admitting many of the factual background allegations but denying many of the conclusions which alleged that it had failed to deliver a thorough and efficient system of free public education. An in-person prehearing conference was conducted on October 5, 1994 and a prehearing order was issued the following day. Paragraph B(1) of the prehearing order identifies the issues as follows: (1) whether as of July 22, 1994 the respondent had failed to take or was unable to take the corrective actions necessary to establish a thorough and efficient system of education in Newark; and (2) whether the recommended administrative order creating a State-operated school district was arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious in view of the facts as of the date of the verified petition - July 22, 1994. Thereafter, on motion by the petitioner, the undersigned ruled that the "scope" of the evidentiary proceedings would be confined to the state of facts in existence on or before July 22, 1994 and no substantive activities after that date would be considered. See, Order Granting Petitioner's Motion for ruling In limine, Nov. 29, 1994.²

The plenary hearing originally was scheduled to commence on February 27, 1995 and to continue essentially on a four day per week basis until completed. For the convenience of the parties, presentation of proofs on behalf of the petitioner was scheduled to take place at the Quakerbridge Office of the Office of Administrative Law because of its proximity to Trenton. See N.J.S.A. 52:14F-5(n) At such time as the respondent's case was to be presented, it was agreed that the locale would be in Newark.

During the next few months following the October 1994 prehearing conference discovery began and certain preliminary matters were addressed and resolved; in particular, my ruling on the motion in limine as to "scope". However, in early February 1995, within weeks of the scheduled commencement of the plenary hearings, the petitioner moved for summary decision or, in the alternative, for a determination that he had made out a prima facie case. In light of the proximity of the filing of the motion to the scheduled hearings, and following a conference with counsel, a schedule was established for the filing of responsive and reply briefs and the start of the hearing was adjourned to April 10, 1995. Thereafter, as a result of certain delays in the filing of briefs and the scheduling of oral argument for April 5, 1995, it was agreed that the start of the hearings would be adjourned until April 24, 1995, assuming a hearing was necessary. Oral argument in connection with the summary decision motion was presented as scheduled on April 5, 1995 and the following constitutes my initial decision on that motion.

² Although my Order expressly provided respondent with an opportunity promptly to seek interlocutory review of my in limine ruling pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14-10 because of the strictures it placed on the scope of proofs I intended to permit at the plenary hearing, no such request was made to the agency head.

DISCUSSION

A. Introduction

At the outset I again note that the initial brief filed by the petitioner, the reply filed by the Board and the response filed by the petitioner included voluminous materials contained in multivolume appendices. Reference to pertinent portions of those documents will be made as appropriate throughout the course of this initial decision. Based upon my review and consideration of the briefs and supporting documents submitted in connection with the motion, including the appendices and various certifications, and after taking into account, as well, the points made by counsel during oral argument, I have determined for the reasons which follow that petitioner Contini's motion for summary decision should be granted.

Legislation pertaining to a State "takeover" of a local school district is contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14, 18A:7A-15 and 18A:7A-34. Prescribed procedures for the governance of State-operated school districts following "takeover" may be found in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34 to 7A-52. See also, N.J.S.A. 18A:9-1 and 18A:10-1. Major litigation arising out of the takeover legislation involving the School District of Jersey City soon followed passage of amendatory legislation and culminated in an initial decision on July 26, 1989 in McCarroll v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, by Administrative Law Judge Ken R. Springer. His detailed initial determination recommending a takeover was affirmed by the Acting Commissioner on August 31, 1989, and by the State Board of Education on October 4, 1989. See, McCarroll v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, 13 N.J.A.R. 1 through 94. There has in New Jersey been a long history of home rule and local control of public education by State delegation to local school districts. Thus, a State "takeover" involves action which is not to be treated lightly. The legitimate interests of a wide range of constituencies built up over many years plainly is implicated by such State action including, but not limited to, parents, teachers, administrators, Board members, employee associations and perhaps most importantly, the public school students themselves. Since Newark is the largest school district in the State, both in terms of numbers of pupils and staff members, the State's proposed action in this case must closely be scrutinized in order to protect against a result which might interfere with the rights and reasonable expectations of those various constituencies. See e.g., N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-44. Nonetheless, responsibility for substantive education is "squarely and completely committed to the State", Abbott by Abbott, v. Burke, 136 N.J. 444, 455 (1994), and it is the State's duty to step in where it believes it reasonably must.³

B. Propriety of the Motion for Summary Decision

Although not framed as an issue in the prehearing order, the present posture of this matter has given rise in the first instance to a preliminary procedural question; namely, do I have jurisdiction to entertain the instant motion, no less dispose of this case in summary fashion? The petitioner has moved for summary decision expressly pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, Newark maintains that the specific language used in the takeover legislation precludes summary disposition and insists that there must be a plenary hearing as a condition precedent to any State takeover. Of course, assuming that the Board does not prevail with respect to that procedural argument, it maintains that the necessary predicate for entry of a summary decision does not exist in any case.

The takeover legislation specifically refers to the conduct of a "plenary" hearing. In particular, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e provides that following certain preliminary procedural events the Commissioner shall order the local Board to show cause why an administrative order, subject to N.J.S.A. 18A:7-15 and N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34, should not be implemented and thereafter there shall be a "plenary hearing before a judge of the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to the 'Administrative Procedure Act', N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1, et. seq." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 then provides that the Commissioner may determine it is necessary to take certain corrective action if, after a plenary hearing, such corrective action appears to be appropriate.

According to the respondent, the Legislature therefore very carefully and wisely provided that no takeover be implemented unless there first was a plenary hearing and opportunity afforded to the respondent to have access to the full panoply of rights attendant thereto. In support of that position the Board points to the distinctly different definitions of "hearing" and "plenary hearing" contained in N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1. Thus, a "hearing" is described as a proceeding conducted by a judge for the purpose, "of determining disputed issues of fact, law or disposition". On the other hand, a "plenary hearing" excludes summary disposition since it is defined as a "complete and full proceeding conducted before a judge, providing the parties with discovery, the opportunity to present evidence, to give sworn testimony, to cross-examine witnesses and to make argument". Accordingly, respondent argues that since the takeover of a public school district has substantial and long lasting consequences for the several constituencies mentioned above, the Legislature deliberately intended that there be no disposition by way of summary decision.

Petitioner, of course, rejects this assertion and also points to specific language in the takeover legislation which he contends supports the view that summary disposition is perfectly appropriate here. In particular, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e immediately qualifies the requirement for a "plenary hearing" with specific reference to the fact that it shall be conducted not only "pursuant to the 'Administrative Procedure Act' " but, in addition, in the manner prescribed by subdivision B of article 2 of chapter 6 of Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 et seq.). The chapter 6 reference relates, of course, to the jurisdiction of the Commissioner to hear "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws". Although not mentioned by petitioner in response to the Board's argument, the State Board's implementing administrative regulations pertaining to hearings of "controversies and disputes" expressly provide that following transmittal of a contested case to OAL the conduct of the proceedings shall be governed by the Uniform Administrative Procedural Rules contained in N.J.A.C. 1:1-1 et seq. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-26; N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.10(b). Those rules specifically include, of course, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 regarding motions for summary decision.

In my view, no extended discussion is necessary in connection with the procedural issue. While the State's takeover of a local public school system potentially has very substantial consequences for pupils, parents, teachers, administrators, Board members and others, the specific reference by the Legislature in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e to the Administrative Procedure Act and to the "controversies and disputes" section of the education statutes compels the conclusion that summary disposition is permitted in a case of this sort. If the respondent's view were to prevail then by logical extension it must argue (as, indeed, Board counsel did at oral argument) that once a "takeover" case is instituted it can only be decided after a plenary hearing and not only is summary disposition on motion improper, so too would a consent agreement be improper. I disagree with that point of view and would point to the consensual takeover in 1991 of the Paterson School District. In short, pursuant to the provisions of the takeover legislation, the Administrative Procedure Act and the Department of Education Rules, OAL has jurisdiction to entertain petitioner's motion for summary disposition.

C. The "Merits" of the Petitioner's Summary Decision Motion

The next and primary issue, then, is whether there is a basis for me to render summary disposition in petitioner's favor. As noted above, I believe the answer to that question, for reasons which follow, is in the affirmative.

The cases in both this State and on the federal level are legion with regard to the principles that commonly apply in connection with motions for summary "judgment" or its administrative law equivalent, the summary "decision". As specifically articulated in N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), disposition of a matter in summary fashion is appropriate only where it is demonstrated by the moving party that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that it is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Of course, in analyzing the merits of such a motion judges are directed to "indulge" the party opposing the motion and to grant the motion only sparingly and with caution. See generally, Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954) and its progeny.

Thus, the well-established case law, not to mention the OAL rule itself, makes plain that the summary disposition of litigation is not encouraged and while judges should not display excessive timidity with respect to granting such motions, where appropriate, the exercise should take place sparingly so that a litigant's rights to a full hearing is not impermissibly eliminated. However, with respect to whether summary decision is appropriate in this particular type of case, I believe there is an aspect which deserves special attention. According to the petitioner, unlike the usual context of summary decision motions, the burden placed upon it in this case is not to eliminate all genuine issues of material fact in order to establish its right to a decision in summary fashion by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Rather, in light of the legislatively prescribed burden of proof as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e, it is petitioner's position that summary decision is appropriate here, even if fact issues arguably exist, if they only give rise to reasonable differences of opinion. Put another way, the ultimate issue is to determine whether the petitioner reasonably can demonstrate the existence of any rational basis to support his determination to recommend a State takeover..

According to the Board, a close look at the relevant underlying circumstances must lead to the conclusion that summary decision in favor of a State takeover would be highly inappropriate and tantamount to my placing a stamp of approval on, "the essence of caprice". I disagree. I take my lead, in the first instance, from the McCarroll decision wherein Judge Springer noted nearly at the outset of his initial decision that since the State's burden in a proposed takeover is to demonstrate that its action is neither arbitrary, unreasonable nor capricious, the scope of the inquiry immediately becomes narrow and limited. The issue, he said, "...is not whether the Commissioner of Education ... and his staff are necessarily correct in their analysis, but merely whether there is enough evidence for a reasonable person to reach the same conclusion". McCarroll v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, supra, 13 N.J.A.R. at 4-5, 64-66. That "limited" burden of proof standard was approved by both the Acting Commissioner in his affirmance of Judge Springer's initial decision (13 N.J.A.R. at 71) and by the State Board of Education in its decision as well. (13 N.J.A.R. at 89) Thus, I submit that the special, limited nature of the scope of this type of proceeding is to be found not only with respect to temporal concerns (no post-July 22, 1994 activities are relevant), but with respect as well to the substantially modified onus that the State must carry on a motion for summary decision.

Thus, although our case law is replete with decisions by the Supreme Court, the Appellate Division and trial courts to the effect that summary judgment motions are to be granted with caution and in the usual case a genuine "dispute" is easy to identify, that is not the case here. A situation more analogous to the instant matter may be found in the decision in City of Newark v. N. J. Turnpike Authority, 12 N.J. Super. 523 (Chan. Div. 1951), aff'd 7 N.J. 377 (1951) which involved a dispute between the municipality and the Authority concerning the method chosen by the agency with respect to the location and manner of construction of an interchange in Newark. The trial court decision was rendered by Judge (later Justice) Francis who pertinently observed that in analyzing the propriety of the Authority's exercise of discretion in that summary judgment context, the existence of a "contrariety of opinion" was not the determining factor. Rather, the proper question to be asked was whether the affidavits and exhibits on file show not only a contrariety of opinion or disputed facts, but such contrariety or dispute which would, "create an issue on which a finding might be made that the Authority was guilty of a palpable abuse of discretion". City of Newark v. N.J. Turnpike Authority, supra, 12 N.J. Super. at 530 (Emphasis added). The New Jersey Supreme Court certified the pending appeal and affirmed that result. It expressly rejected Newark's contention that summary judgment should have been denied because the pleadings, affidavits and exhibits raised genuine issues of fact requiring a trial. To the contrary, since there was no dispute that the Authority was acting within the scope of its statutory powers concerning location and mode of construction of interchanges, Judge Francis properly framed the issue to be whether there was a "palpable abuse of discretion". In fact, with reference to the use of the adjective "palpable", Chief Justice Vanderbilt, speaking for a unanimous Court, noted that this was a proper use of the word since it was synonymous with whether the exercise of discretion was "arbitrary" or "unreasonable". While he agreed that the discretionary power of the Authority was not absolute; nevertheless, whether there had been a "palpable abuse of discretion" did not turn on the existence of what clearly was only a difference of opinion as to what the best method of construction would be. A mere contrary view did not equate with arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable action. Rather, the obligation placed upon the City in opposing the motion was "...to raise a real question as to whether the Authority's plans were so far from right as to be a manifest abuse of discretion ...". City of Newark v. N.J. Turnpike Authority, supra, 7 N.J. at 383 (Emphasis added). That, I submit, is decidedly not "classic" summary judgment language. See also, Worthington v. Fauver, 88 N.J. 183 (1982).

I believe that the thrust of the Supreme Court's decision in the Turnpike Authority case is of particular significance in this case. A determination as to whether the State as part of the carrying out of its constitutionally mandated duties may take over a local public school district in order to assure delivery of a thorough and efficient system of free public education is a matter which the Legislature clearly committed to the State's discretion in the takeover statutes. Any doubt with respect to the vesting of such discretion was removed not only by the decision in the McCarroll case, but from the very language of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e itself. To put it another way, whether or not Newark agrees or disagrees with the soundness of the State's decision is not relevant. What is important is whether or not the exercise of the discretion was attended by reasonableness and unless it can be said that no conceivable rational basis exists to sustain the action, then it must be upheld. Whether Newark, or I for that matter, agree personally or not with the judgment is not important for, "where there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached." Bayshore Sewerage Co. v. D.E.P., 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199 (Chan. Div. 1973); aff'd. 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App.Div. 1974).

In order to determine whether enough evidence of an abuse of discretion was raised by the Board sufficient to defeat the motion, an analysis must be made of what the Department did in this case, how and why it did it and whether the conclusions it reached transcend mere differences of opinion and spill over into the prohibited area of arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable action. In other words, what were the bases for the State's action in this case and can reasonable minds differ with respect to the appropriateness of its action. If the proofs reveal that the discretion was exercised within proper bounds, summary decision is appropriate and no need for a lengthy, expensive and potentially heated plenary hearing exists.

Perhaps the most crucial prong upon which the petitioner rests its motion has to do with what it describes as the abysmal record of performance by Newark's students as measured by outcomes on standardized tests, particularly in relation to the 29 other "special needs" districts in New Jersey. Thus, in his original moving papers filed in early February 1995, an item highlighted by petitioner as particularly significant had to do with the performance, or lack thereof, by Newark's students on various standardized tests including, in particular, the Grade 8 Early Warning Test (EWT) and the Grade 11 High School Proficiency Test. (HSPT) Those statistics, which reflect the numbers of students involved in taking those tests, the numbers that passed and the percentages are not meaningfully in dispute. Indeed, many actually were provided by the Board. Thus, in October 1993, only one 11th grade student in four passed the reading, writing and mathematic sections of the HSPT. In April 1994 the test was administered primarily to students who had failed one or more sections in the Fall. Out of the 1852 11th graders enrolled in the Fall, slightly more than only 42% passed all three sections. More importantly in terms of overall impact, 438 students, or only 13.4% of the 8th grade student population in 1990-91, remained and passed the HSPT in October 1993, and 786 students, or only 24.1%, passed the October and April tests combined. See, Certification of Dr. Gerald E. DeMauro (Pa.11 to 12). In short, the percentage of Newark students passing the HSPT in 1993-1994 (including the retest) as 11th graders represented less than 25% of the class which had been 8th graders in 1990-91. That is a description of failure on a very large scale, and if "abysmal" is too strong a description, it most certainly is distressing to contemplate.

Additional pertinent statistical data reflecting the District's woeful failure with respect to preparing its students for achievement on standardized tests may be found in the test results for the 8th graders who took the Early Warning Test⁴ in March 1994.

Those results reflected that in 20 of 38 schools with an 8th grade, over half of the total number, not one qualified for Level I on all three test sections. Level I refers to the making of satisfactory progress towards mastery of the subject, or "clearly competent". This means that in terms of numbers of 8th grade students in those 20 schools, 1266 failed to demonstrate "clear competency" in the subject matter. In fact, the results of the same test reflected that in 23 of the 38 schools, 1% or less of the students demonstrated they were "clearly competent" in all 3 sections and only four of the 38 schools had more than 10% of its 8th graders qualifying at that level. See March 1994, Grade 8 EWT State Summary, (Pa. 11,58a). Statewide, including Newark, nearly 24% of all regularly enrolled 8th graders qualified for Level I in all three sections (Pa12,58a). Even worse, the undisputed proofs demonstrate that in 1993 only 7% of all Newark's 8th graders demonstrated clear competence in all three test sections, and that number decreased to less than 3% in 1994. Put another way, out of 3057 students regularly enrolled in the 8th grade in 1993-94, only 87 qualified as "clearly competent" in reading, writing and mathematics, and nearly 2118 (69.3%) of that total number could not demonstrate even "minimal competence" on the March 1994 EWT test. (Pa 12). Such results clearly are intolerable.

The statistics with respect to the performance of Newark students in 1992-93 at the 3rd grade level also are dismal. Out of the 30 special needs school districts, Newark ranked next to last in percentage of students meeting the Minimal Level of Proficiency (MLP) in reading and last in meeting the 3rd grade level in mathematics. With respect to percentage of students achieving MLP in language arts, Newark also ranked lowest. Thus, in two of the three areas assessed, Newark's performance was last and in the third area, its performance was next to last. (Pa833-834).

Additional statistics for 3rd grade "achievement" are equally grim. In 1990-91 Newark had the lowest percentage of 3rd grade students meeting State minimum levels of proficiency in reading and mathematics and the second lowest in the area of language arts. Furthermore, although Newark's "growth rate" among special needs districts in terms of percent of third graders reaching State minimum proficiency levels between 1990-91 and 1992-93 reflects that Newark moved up to 9th out of 30 (about 51% to slightly more than 62%). However, as the petitioner aptly observes in his reply brief with respect to that particular set of statistics, "Little satisfaction should be derived from the fact that even when motivated by the intense scrutiny of a decade of State monitoring, the best Newark could muster was less than 2-3rds of its 3rd graders achieving minimum proficiency" the worst performance of any school district in the State." This observation is mindful of the comment in McCarroll, supra, that Jersey City's boast that "only" 302 students in the LEP Program were being denied services was "a defense" of "dubious cloth" and "trivialized" the serious deficiencies in that program. See 13 N.J.A.R. at 78-79

Similarly, with respect to the results of the 6th grade testing for minimum levels of proficiency in reading, mathematics and language arts for the 1992-93 school year, Newark students ranked third lowest in reading, second lowest in mathematics and fourth lowest in language arts. (Pa 834, 845-847). Even here, in light of the greater number of 6th grade students in Newark's schools, it appears that the numbers of students who failed to achieve MLP exceeded the combined total of all 6th grade students who took language arts in three lower achieving districts, a fact which underscores that the failure rate in a district the size of Newark affects more children than a higher failure rate in much smaller school districts.

The conclusions drawn by the State with respect to the EWT and other test results adverted to above was challenged by the Board in its response to petitioner's motion. For example, the affidavit of Steven G. Block, Newark's Executive Director of Accountability and Quality Assurance, noted that in 1994 three other school districts had even higher percentages of schools with 8th grade populations producing no students with Level I competence than did Newark. (Ra3-4). However, as the petitioner's response to that arguments points out, those districts are smaller than Newark and the three specifically highlighted (Trenton, Irvington and Burlington) have a total of only nine schools with an 8th grade population as compared to 38 such schools in Newark. Indeed, those other districts had a total of 1103 pupils enrolled in those 9 schools, which was less than the 1266 students enrolled in the 20 schools in Newark that had no students achieving Level I on all three test sections. (Pa826-848). In sum, as the petitioner explains it in his reply brief, since: " ... more 8th grade students were enrolled in schools that did not produce a single student achieving Level I on all three tests in Newark than in the other three districts combined", Newark's failure rate has a compounding negative impact because of the greater number of students adversely affected.

Another startling statistic with respect to poor 8th Grade EWT results in 1994 is that of all the 30 special needs districts, a total of 36 out of 123 8th grade schools outside of Newark (about 30%) had no students achieving Level I in all three sections; whereas, in Newark in nearly 53% of those schools, (20 out of 38) not one student was able to achieve Level I status. Put another way, of the 56 schools in all the special needs districts producing not even one student who achieved Level I in all three sections, 20, or 35.7% were in Newark, even though it had only 23.6% of all the schools in those districts (Pa 830). Accordingly, as petitioner again points out, Newark's percentage of schools with no students achieving Level I on all three sections is disproportionately high when compared to the combined performance of all other special needs districts.

Dr. DeMauro also provided a matrix which describes Newark's 8th Grade student performance versus other special needs districts insofar as achievement of MLP is concerned. It also reflects that the percentage of students in Newark achieving Level I on all three tests was lower substantially than the other special needs districts. In particular, only 2.8% of Newark's 8th graders achieved Level I on all tests as opposed to 4.3% in all of the other special needs districts, a difference of nearly 50% on that basis alone (Pa 828). If more statistics are needed to demonstrate this point I would point out, as did the petitioner, that over 29% of all enrolled 8th graders in the special needs districts failing to achieve Level I attended Newark schools even though Newark had only 18.9% of the total 8th grade enrollment (Pa 830).

To be sure, the Board countered with the assertion, for example, that the 8th Grade EWT scores cited by petitioner do not combine the total numbers of students meeting Levels I and II, and similarly neglect with respect to the 11th grade HSPT to aggregate the scores over two years. See Certification of Elaine M. Walker (Ra 1 to 6). However, as the petitioner then aptly observes in reply, that is merely a function of how one tinkers with the statistics to try and make the results seem less severe - an essentially non-substantive matter of interpretation only. In fact, Newark's interpretation only reinforces the regrettable conclusion that, overall, the scores are unacceptably low in many school districts, not only in Newark. As Dr. DeMauro further pointed out in his reply affidavit (Pa 827-834a), however one combines the numbers, many of Newark's 8th graders demonstrably continue to fail to meet minimum levels of competence as measured by the EWT and the District consistently performs at or near the bottom of all the school districts in the State. While Assistant Commissioner McCarroll was cited by Judge Springer for the proposition that reliance should not solely be placed on poor test scores to justify a State takeover, McCarroll v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, supra, at 48, I believe there are some occasions, as here, when those scores are so poor and of such paramount significance as to "speak volumes" about a Board's failures.

Many other statistical comparisons made in the briefs and supporting documents were the subject of opinion and I need not lengthen this decision with reference to all of them. Suffice it to say that they reflect nothing more than that - a difference of opinion as to the significance of the percentages, particularly in the special needs school districts. Nevertheless, the underlying statistical data essentially remain undisputed and reveal the very severe deficiencies infecting Newark.

Before leaving the test score area additional reference must again be made to the poor performance of the 11th grade students who were 8th graders in 1990-91. As the State observes, the data sadly reflects that expectations of 8th graders in Newark to eventually take and pass the HSPT in 11th grade is extremely low, even if they remain in school. Specifically, with respect to all 30 special needs districts in the Fall of 1993, while 4001 students passed all three sections of the HSPT only 438 of those students were from Newark. That figure, as noted, represents just 13.4% of Newark's 8th grade enrollment in 1990-91. However, as to the other 3563 students enrolled in all of the other special needs districts who passed all three test sections, they constituted 28% of their original 8th grade regular enrollment. Thus, the ability of Newark to educate its 8th grade students ultimately to take and pass the critically important HSPT in 11th grade appears on the basis of those statistics to be less than half as effective on a percentage basis as all of the other special needs districts combined. When Newark performs among the worst of the 30 special needs district, it therefore performs among the worst of all of 590 active school districts in the State. Hence, I agree with the petitioner that by any valid measure students in Newark, generally, are failing in large numbers to meet even minimal State standards of competence and thereby are not being prepared to function adequately in society. Of course, there are a universe of factors which contribute to that situation and include societal based components which may have little or nothing to do with the ability of a school system adequately to deliver educational services. However, that is no reason to permit palpable educational failure to persist if remedial action through a State takeover can help to meet the problems where the local school officials have proven not to be up to that vital task. That view is not "Big Brotherism", nor misguided paternalism, it is plain common sense.⁵

Another factor somewhat related to the low test scores has to do with the District's attendance and "drop-out" figures. In 1991-92, Newark's daily student attendance was the second lowest of the 30 special needs districts. In 1992-93, it was the lowest. Moreover in addition to the low attendance figure is the more important fact that with respect to loss of enrollment on a percentage basis for special needs districts, Newark has a very high rate. Thus, although in 1990-91 there were over 3250 8th grade students regularly enrolled in Newark, by 11th grade that number had decreased by about 44 percent to about 1850. The State suggests that this diminution reflects that students essentially may be "voting with their feet" with respect to high school attendance in Newark. However, apparently no accurate statistics have been kept with respect to tracking those pupils to identify the precise reasons why they leave the Newark school system. On the other hand, I agree with the State insofar as it rejects outright the remarkable position taken by the Board that apparently completion of 8th grade and receipt of a diploma at that stage somehow vests a Newark student with the ability to attend any school district outside Newark he or she pleases. Indeed, the observation by Shirley Grundey-Harris, Newark's Director of Guidance Services, that with an "8th grade diploma" Newark students almost are expected to search out high schools outside of Newark to better satisfy their educational needs truly is astonishing (Ra41 to Ra 45). Putting aside the legal requirement that a non-tuition pupil must demonstrate that he or she honestly is resident in the district where he or she wants to attend high school, see generally, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, the Board apparently concedes that many of its students are expected (encouraged?) to look elsewhere for a high school education. This very nearly is an admission that they cannot receive the education they need if they remain in Newark beyond 8th grade and the implications of the Director of Guidance Services' acceptance of that situation is disturbing.

One can argue, of course, over the meaning of the statistics cited by both sides in this case. However, even taking them in their "best light", to me they reveal a situation which is nothing short of damning with regard to whether students in Newark are receiving the education they deserve and which the State Constitution mandates for them. In truth, despite Assistant Commissioner McCarroll's observation and especially when viewed in the dropout rate context, the test scores, alone, in this case arguably do provide a rational basis for the State to take the action that it proposes without other factors even having to be taken into account. Again, the test in connection with a summary decision motion in a case of this sort is whether the State had any rational basis to seek to take the proposed action. Differences of opinion or of interpretation with respect to the meaning of the statistics, and with regard to what the causes for the discrepancies may be, are of academic interest. But they do not support a contention that the proposed action is arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious and they do not constitute a legal basis to resist a motion of this sort and thereby delay further the delivery of an acceptable level of education services to students who for too long have been deprived of the same in a District which borders on the dysfunctional.

In addition to the test score - drop-out problem, which I find to be most significant, other factors do exist upon which the petitioner relies and which also are relevant to the question of whether as of July 22, 1994 the District has failed to or is unable to provide a thorough and efficient system of public education. These include such tangible factors as the deplorable condition of some of the physical facilities, and such intangible factors as the demonstrated attitude of the Board members and senior administrators with respect to responding timely to problems with which they are expected to deal. In the first instance, sight should not be lost of the fact that the July 22, 1994 issuance of the Verified Petition was not the product of some "11th hour" whim on the part of the State. To the contrary, it represented the culmination of an intensive ten year monitoring effort compelled by statute and regulation designed to assure that school districts in this State pass muster with respect to their legal obligations. Although the specific factual contents of the five volume CCI Report generated by the monitoring and the compliance investigation are not strictly relied upon by the State in connection with its motion for summary decision, many of the findings therein are corroborated by the State's sworn documents. The successive school boards and administrative staff which have operated Newark's school system since at least 1984 consistently have been made acutely aware of the variety of problem areas with which they must deal, and although certainly in some respects they have made sincere efforts to try to meet and overcome the particular difficulties which special needs districts like Newark face, there are many aspects which reflect a nearly total failure on their part to do so. Between 1984 when the monitoring process began, and late 1987, Newark was evaluated and found deficient at both Level I and Level II monitoring. Five years later an external review team conducted an examination of the District's operations including, in particular, those indicators which were found to have been unacceptable after the Level II monitoring. In April 1993 the team issued a report identifying the conditions which continued to prevent the District from achieving certification. A portion of the contents of that report was cited by the State in its initial brief and bears verbatim repeating:

"For almost a decade, the Newark School District has failed to achieve acceptable marks on a number of indicators needed to meet New Jersey Certification Standards. In large measure, those standards are a gauge, a measure of a school district's capacity to provide students with effective educational programs.

"The conditions of many of the facilities are decaying, not unlike many neighborhoods which exude evidence of urban decay.

"But outside factors cannot entirely account for the condition of public education in Newark. The district's plight should have been a call to decisive, creative action, What the situation cried out for was "excellence", - to reenergize the system and city sapped by years of indifference. Instead, the "outcry" over Newark's plight was slow and muted. As the Newark system struggles under the cumulative weight of poor performance on the part of many students, neglected buildings, charges of mismanagement, nepotism, cronyism, and rampant political interference, a sense of resignation prevails.

"The Board and the Administration seem like ships passing in the night. Each leaves a wake that has minimal influence on what the other does. There seems to be no sense of teamwork and unity of purpose."

That situation continued into mid-1994. Indeed, as noted, during 1993-94 a comprehensive compliance investigation was conducted under the supervision of an assistant commissioner and a core team of department staff. Moreover, the investigation also included participation by two respected outside consulting firms, Towers Perrin and Arthur Anderson & Company. Although the specifics of some of their findings were challenged, and I make no judgment concerning them here, the report which was submitted to Newark and to the Department contained findings which were highly critical, to say the least, of the District's inability with regard to governance, management of its operations, delivery of its educational programs and the carrying out of its fiscal affairs.

In addition to the abysmal test score results, the body of data reviewed by the Department preliminary to the issuance of the Verified Petition in July 1994 alarmingly revealed that the largest school district in this State, with an annual budget of about $525 million, clearly was in a state of distress. On a per pupil expenditure alone, not necessarily the best indicator but certainly capable of appropriate reference, Newark was a failure. Thus, for the school years 1991-92 and 1992-93 the average expenditure per student for the State as a whole, including Newark, increased by $687 from $7884 to $8571. In Newark, however, the average per pupil expenditure increased by $1,550 from $9150 to $10,700. In other words, on average for those two years, per pupil expenditures for students in Newark increased at two and one-half times and exceeded the statewide average (including Newark's figures) by about 20%. Given such increasingly high expenditures per student one legitimately could expect that Newark students would begin to meet or at least approach the requirement that 85% of its district students pass all three sections of the 11th grade HSPT. Newark did not come close.⁶ So, too, Newark's ratio of students per administrator in 1991-92 was the lowest of all the special needs districts and it consistently has remained the lowest or near to the lowest. In other words, Newark has an overabundance of administrative personnel as measured on a per student basis. Similarly, with respect to student per non-certified employee, Newark's ratio in 1991-92 again was the lowest of all the special needs districts (14.3) and substantially below the average of 26.8. For some reason, Newark seems to employ an inordinate number of non-instructional employees, which of course raises criticisms of the sort of mentioned by the CCI Report such as nepotism, cronyism and the like. Standing alone, the hiring of friends and/or relatives of Board members or senior administrators is not necessarily a reason for inquiry, no less for implementing such drastic action as a school takeover. However, the hiring statistics do raise serious questions about the manner of this school district's operations which fully justified consideration by the Department as part of its overall review.⁷

The State also devoted a substantial amount of attention to an assertion that Board members regularly take unnecessary and expensive trips, treat themselves to expensive dinners and have free use of Board-owned vehicles and that the monies devoted to those activities serve only to drain accounts which are much more important, such as text books, supplies, libraries and the like. (See Pa 162 to Pa165; Pa892 to Pa921) In reaching the conclusion I do in this case I have not given any weight to those assertions since they are particularly fact-sensitive and it would not be appropriate for me to draw any firm conclusions about those charges in this summary

⁶ I am aware, of course, that it is expected that more money than the average will be spent in special needs districts in order to help students overcome their special disadvantages. However, the grant of additional monies does not assure that they will be well spent. and if that occurs the State's responsibility actually increases. See Abbott by Abbott v. Burke, 136 N.J. 444, 455 (1994), decision context. Whether or not trips to conferences in St. Thomas, Paradise Island or Hawaii, for example, advance the best interests of the school system are matters which although pertinent subjects for review cannot be determined unless close scrutiny is paid to the precise facts. The particular context of this summary decision motion does not lend itself to such an inquiry. Thus, I have given no weight to the State's contentions in this respect although, as noted, there are ample enough other reasons to support the takeover action

Another area to which particular attention was devoted by petitioner in the summary decision motion had to do with the contention that Newark's substantially belated claim that finally it is taking "reform" steps was nothing more than mere payment of "lip service" and upon close examination lacked any substance whatsoever. To that end the State pointed out that as late as April 1994 the Board, after a very short review period and in a desperate attempt to seek a magical solution after years of neglect, agreed to an outside consultant's plan and advertised for proposals to assist the District to develop a program designed to accelerate instructional performance. When contracts which would have committed about $4.4 million to the project were about to be awarded without proper review by the Office of the Auditor General, the Commissioner of Education directed that the process be halted. Thus, as of the date of the issuance of the Verified Petition, July 22, 1994, some two and one half months later, even after ongoing technical assistance from the Auditor General was provided, the District still had proven unable to compile an acceptable reform plan. See Certification of Marie Nuccetelli, Acting Auditor General from 6/6/94 to 1/2/95 (Pa536-542; See also Pa712-714).

Finally, some of the Board's answers to interrogatories further exposed the unfocused, amorphous and wholly inadequate effort it made to deal with its severe problems. Thus, when the Board was asked to explain why it denied the State's claim that its efforts in the area of strategic planning had been "superficial", the Board merely replied that it had outlined a plan, attended staff retreats where plans were finalized, and that the Executive Superintendent was told to report his accomplishments both at regular Board meetings and at committee meetings (Pa 717). No specific facts to flesh out how any strategic plan was intended to be implemented was provided nor was any identification made of the goals of the plan together with how the District would achieve them. This, after 10 years of monitoring. Similarly, another interrogatory asked the Board to provide the factual basis for the denial of the allegation that it had failed to demonstrate a “sense of urgency” for improvement. The Board answered that it had demonstrated such a sense by expressing a willingness to deal with complex and sensitive issues such as violence in the schools and condom distribution. (Pa 718). Nowhere in that answer, nor anywhere else were specific facts provided to clarify if not explain what specific steps the Board demanded be taken by the senior administration to address the District’s huge deficiencies. Similar such vague answers appear throughout the interrogatory responses (Pa 715 to Pa 751) lending credence to the reasonable belief that implementation of meaningful change in this school district has not been of major concern, no less a top priority (See, e.g., Pa723, 727, 733, 742). While I am not prepared to make a specific finding on this record that Board members regularly demonstrated that they were more interested in their own personal affairs and those of their families rather than the best interests of Newark’s students, the Board’s answers to the interrogatories reflect generally a litigant which more often than not has been unable to provide any meaningful specific facts to support its mostly mechanical denials despite the great deal of time given to it to develop and articulate such facts.

Taken together the pleadings, briefs, reply briefs, appendices and other materials submitted in support of, and in opposition to this motion for summary decision take up several hundred pages and several cartons. In reviewing those materials it became clear that the need for a State takeover was obvious. Shortly, I will list those specific facts which I believe essentially are undisputed and which dictate the result I reach here. Even if some of the allegations upon which Findings of Fact are made are not admitted, the level of “dispute” does not adversely impair the underpinning for my conclusion that in the context of this case summary disposition not only is warranted, it is demanded. I will not repeat the many deficiencies which the petitioner has cited and which support the State’s proposed action. I must, however, return to what I believe to be a poignant example of what this case may be about; namely, the “justification” by Ms. Grundy-Harris to try to explain the somewhat harrowing drop-out statistics. She seems to entirely have missed the point which the State did not - many students who move beyond the 8th grade in Newark are almost desperate to go elsewhere (if at all) in order to have at least some chance to learn the necessary skills to function adequately in a society which does not always provide help in overcoming a lack of needed skills. What could she possibly have meant when she related that students leave the Newark system to seek a high school education that will better satisfy their needs? The answer to this phenomenon, I believe, clearly suggests itself. Those students fortunate enough to be able to go elsewhere to find a proper education do so. Those that cannot leave either remain in a failing system or drop out altogether. The message she bears is one of despair and the time has come to take whatever steps are necessary to end that despair. Whether this effort ultimately will be successful cannot be gauged at this point. However, the process now must promptly begin. Newark's Board and its senior administrative staff have for manifold reasons, some not always of their own making, failed the students despite having been given many years and substantial support to make changes to correct the deficiencies.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Accordingly, in light of the foregoing discussion I herewith make the following specific Findings of Fact and reach the following Conclusions of Law:

1. Petitioner, Peter B. Contini, is the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Field Services, New Jersey Department of Education. In that capacity he has primary supervisory responsibility over the Department's statutory responsibility to monitor school districts to determine whether they will be certified by the State Board of Education as providing the thorough and efficient system of free public education which the New Jersey Constitution prescribes.
2. Statutory authority has been given to the Department, through the Commissioner of Education and the State Board of Education, to develop and administer a uniform, statewide system for the evaluation of the thoroughness and efficiency of the public schools of this State as required by the New Jersey Constitution. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-10 and N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq.; N.J.A.C. 6:8-1.1 et seq.

3. In order to meet its constitutional, statutory and regulatory obligations to evaluate the public schools in the State the Department, in January 1984, initiated a comprehensive monitoring process designed to determine whether each school district in the State was meeting prescribed standards.
4. Between March 1984 and August 1984, the Essex County Superintendent of Schools monitored the Newark School District pursuant to the "Level I" procedure under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.1, et seq.
5. As a result, the District was rated "unacceptable" on 7 of 10 elements and on 13 of 51 indicators necessary for a thorough and efficient system of education. The 13 indicators for which the District received a rating of unacceptable in the Level I review were as follows:

Indicator 1.3: The plan has been reviewed and discussed by the Board of Education at a public meeting by September 30. Bates number 1129.⁸

Indicator 4.1: Average daily attendance rate for the district is 90 percent or higher. Bates number 1144.

Indicator 4.3: Average daily attendance rate for each school is 85 percent or higher. Bates number 1145.

⁸ The five volume CCI Report contains 1,798 "Bates" numbered pages. Accordingly, Bates number references from 1 - 1,798, inclusive, refer to the CCI Report.

Indicator 4.4: An attendance improvement plan has been implemented for each school where the average daily attendance rate is below 84.9 percent.

Indicator 5.1: There is evidence that a multi-year comprehensive maintenance plan exists and has been implemented.

Indicator 6.1: All professional staff members are certified in their area(s) of assignment. Bates number 1153.

Indicator 6.2: The annual rate of staff (teaching and administrative) occasional absenteeism does not exceed five percent. Bates number 1154.

Indicator 7.1: The Basic Skills Improvement (BSI) Plan has been approved by the county superintendent. Bates number 1159.

Indicator 7.3: The bilingual/ESL Education Plan has been approved by the county superintendent. Bates numbers 1161.

Indicator 7.5: The Annual Special Education Plan has been approved by the county superintendent. Bates numbers 1163-1166.

Indicator 8.1: Seventy-five percent (75%) of the pupils tested in grade nine in each school have passed the state's 9th grade Minimum Basic Skills test (score of 65 in math, 75 in reading). Bates number 1169.

Indicator 8.2: Seventy-five percent (75%) of the pupils in grades three and six in each school equal or exceed: (a) state-prescribed percentile scores in both reading and math on standardized commercial tests, or (b) state-prescribed scores on department approved local criterion reference tests. Bates number 1170.

Indicator 10.2: There is accurate and timely submission of fiscal and statistical reports to county state and federal offices. Bates number 1177.

6. Since the District failed Level I, it was not certified by the State Board of Education.
7. Respondent never formally challenged the Level I findings.
8. "Level II" required the District to develop and implement an improvement plan to correct the deficiencies noted in Level I. On August 13, 1984, the District was directed to prepare an improvement plan for Department review and approval and on March 18, 1985, the District was authorized to proceed with implementation of its improvement plan.
9. Between August 1986 and February 1987, the Essex County Superintendent of Schools conducted Level II monitoring.
10. In December 1987 the District having received "unacceptable" ratings on 7 of the 10 elements and on 16 of the 51 indicators, therefore failed to achieve certification from the State Board of Education. The indicators for which Newark received an unacceptable rating in the Level II review were as follows:

Indicator 3.2: The curriculum is being implemented. Bates numbers 1209-1219.

Indicator 4.1: Average daily attendance rate for the district is 90% or higher. Bates numbers 1129-1132.

Indicator 4.3: Average daily attendance rate for each school is 85% or higher. Bates number 1 234-1236.

Indicator 5.1: There is evidence that a multi-year comprehensive maintenance plan exists and has been implemented. Bates number 1241.

Indicator 5.2: Building inspections have been performed by the district within the last year to ensure adherence to health and safety laws. Bates numbers 1242-1285.

Indicator 5.3: The district has a board-approved plan to upgrade or eliminate all substandard classrooms. Bates number 1285.

Indicator 6.1: All professional staff members are certified in their area(s) of assignment. Bates numbers 1287-1302.

Indicator 6.2: The annual rate of staff (teaching and administrative) occasional absenteeism does not exceed five percent. Bates numbers 1303-1304.

Indicator 6.4: Tenured and nontenured teaching and administrative staff are observed and evaluated according to law. Bates numbers 1306-1307.

Indicator 7.1: The Basic Skills Improvement (BSI) Plan has been approved by the County Superintendent. Bates numbers 1310-1312.

Indicator 7.3: The Bilingual/ESL Education Plan has been approved by the County Superintendent. Bates numbers 1314-1322.

Indicator 7.5: The Annual Special Education Plan has been approved by the County Superintendent. Bates numbers 1324-1334.

Initiator 8.1: Seventy-five percent (75%) of the pupils tested in grade nine in each school have passed the state's 9th grade Minimum Basic Skills Test. Bates numbers 1336-1339.

Indicator 8.2: Seventy-five percent (75%) of the pupils in grades three and six in each school equal or exceed (a) stated prescribed percentile scores in both reading and math on standardized commercial tests or (b) state prescribed score on department approved local criterion reference tests. Bates numbers 1340-1348.

Indicator 9.2: There is an annual review of progress toward the objectives cited in the state approved affirmative action plan (Classroom/Employment Practices. Bates numbers 1352-1353.

Indicator 9.3: The desegregation plan, where applicable and the Affirmative Action Plans, including in-service, are implemented annually. Bates numbers 1354-1356.

11. Newark never formally challenged the Level II findings, never formally submitted a discrepancy analysis in opposition to the Level II findings and never appealed the Essex County Superintendent's determination requiring it to enter "Level III" monitoring.
12. As a preliminary to Level III monitoring, a Verification Review was performed during October and November 1992. The Level III Verification Review report, although not graded as acceptable, unacceptable or not applicable, contains substantive findings as to various indicators. Bates numbers 1495-1588. In addition to recognizing the District's continued failure to educate its students to a level of minimum proficiency, as measured by standardized tests, Bates numbers 1563-1570, other findings contained in the reported stated:

Indicator 5.1: The district board of education shall develop and implement a five-year comprehensive maintenance plan.

Findings: . . . in 1990-91 the plan identified the proposed expenditure of $23,805,000; however, in addition to the maintenance account only $2,608,876 was expended from the capital projects fund. Additionally, in 1991-92 the plan proposed the expenditure of $21,457,000; however, the actual expenditure in addition to the maintenance account was $3,037,554 from the capital outlay account and $6,280,999 from the capital projects fund . . . The 1991-92 annual audit reflects an unexpended authorization of $112,672,530 in capital projects fund.”
Bates number 1528.

Indicator 5.2: The district shall perform an annual inspection of buildings to insure adherence to health and safety laws.

Findings: Since the district was unable to provide current documentation of the required annual report of the local fire official, seventy-five of the seventy-six (99%) schools were rated non-compliant with this item. The only building rated compliant was the New Jersey Regional Day School . . .
“ . Bates number 1530.

“Twenty-three schools (30%) did not have current health certificates verifying the annual inspection of kitchens and/or cafeterias. . . Eight schools (11%) were not compliant with the annual inspections of boilers.”
Bates number 1531.

“Lavatories must be provided with soap, paper tissue, and paper towels for sanitary purposes.” Bates number 1535.

Indicator 5.3: The district board of education shall approve and implement a plan to upgrade or eliminate all substandard classrooms pursuant to law and rule.

"Findings: A review of the written documentation indicated the district has no substandard instructional areas approved for use in 1992-93. Of the 76 schools visited by the monitoring team, 65 schools were identified as using unapproved substandard instructional areas. The number of substandard areas exceeded 240 locations with many locations housing multiple substandard instructional settings." Bates number 1536.

13. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14c, an external review team was then appointed to conduct the Level III monitoring. Co-chairing the team were Floretta Dukes McKenzie, former Superintendent of Schools, Washington, D.C., and William H. Tremayne, Senior Vice President, The Prudential Company. From December 1992 to March 1993 the team examined all aspects of the District's operations including a review of all areas in which indicators were determined to be unacceptable after the Level II monitoring.

14. On April 16, 1993, the External Review Team issued its report to the Commissioner (Bates numbers 1589-1798) identifying those conditions which continued to prevent the District from achieving certification. The introduction to the report states in pertinent part:

"For almost a decade, the Newark School District has failed to receive acceptable marks on a number of indicators needed to meet New Jersey certification standards. In large measure, those standards are a gauge, a measure of a school district's capacity to provide students with effective educational programs. . .

“ . . . The conditions of many of the facilities are decaying, not unlike many neighborhoods which exude evidence of urban decay . . .

“ But outside factors cannot entirely account for the condition of public education in Newark. The district's plight should have been a call to decisive, creative action, . . . What the situation cried out for was “excellence,” to re-energize a system and city sapped by years of indifference. Instead, the “outcry” over Newark's plight was slow and muted. As the Newark system struggles under the cumulative weight of poor performance on the part of many students, neglected buildings, charges of mismanagement, nepotism, cronyism, and rampant political interference, a sense of resignation prevails . . .

“ The Board and the Administration seem like ships passing in the night. Each leaves a wake that has minimal influence on what the other does . . . There seems to be no sense of teamwork and unity of purpose.” Bates number 1598-1603.

15. Although the District prepared a “discrepancy analysis” in response to this report, it never formally protested or otherwise exercised its right to appeal its findings as provided by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14c(3).
16. On May 13, 1993, following a review of the Level III External Review Report, the Commissioner determined that conditions persisted within the school district which seemed to preclude successful implementation of a corrective action plan and by written notice to the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14c(4) the Commissioner initiated a Comprehensive Compliance Investigation (“CCI”).
17. The CCI was conducted under the overall direction of an Assistant Commissioner. Initially, a core team of Department of Education staff was assigned to the investigation as generalists for the purpose of discerning the underlying causes for the District's continued failure to provide students with a thorough and efficient system of education. Staff members from throughout the Department grouped into teams for the purpose of performing a thorough and detailed examination of the District's educational programs, management practices, and fiscal activities.

18. The CCI also included investigations by two respected outside consulting firms under contract to the Department, Towers Perrin, a firm with extensive experience in the analysis of governance, management, and the organizational structure of educational institutions, and Arthur Andersen and Company which conducted an investigation of selected fiscal practices of the District.
19. As a result of the CCI, and pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e, a five volume report (the "CCI Report") was prepared and issued in July 1994. Among the findings contained in the CCI Report were, "Numerous deficiencies and irregularities in the governance and management operations, educational programs, and fiscal practices of the District" which the CCI Report concluded, "prevented the District from providing a thorough and efficient system of education for the children residing within the District."
20. An "Executive Summary of Findings" set out at the beginning of Volume I of the CCI Report synthesizes the results found by the core team. Those Findings were as follows:

"The Newark School District, with approximately 48,000 students in 1993-94, is the largest in the State. Its average per pupil cost of $10,700 in 1992-93, the latest year for which statewide per pupil costs have been analyzed, places it well above the statewide average, in the top ten percent of all New Jersey districts. It is also the largest of the State's 30 "Special Needs" districts, which is the designated term for a district which includes a very high percentage of children from low-income families. The overwhelming majority of Newark's students also belong to racial and ethnic minority groups. Sixty-three percent are African-American; twenty seven percent are Hispanic; approximately nine percent are white; and one percent are Asian or other racial-ethnic category. Already at risk of school failure because of economic disadvantage, children in the Newark public schools are placed at greater risk by school district personnel who fail to provide them with the opportunity to achieve academically in a safe, healthful environment.

"The Newark School District has been at best flagrantly delinquent and at worst deceptive in discharging its obligations to the children enrolled in the public schools. The numerous deficiencies found throughout the district are the result of the Newark Board of Education's failure to meet its governance responsibilities and the Executive Superintendent's failure to lead and manage effectively.

"Although individuals on the Board acknowledge that "Things aren't working," and that "Major changes are needed," the Board, as a body, has been unable to summon either the sense of urgency or the willingness to take decisive action necessary for change to occur. This complacency in the face of massive and increasing challenges is reflected at every level of the organization. The Board has also failed to hold the Executive Superintendent accountable for achieving necessary improvements in the district's performance, despite clear evidence that current leadership and management approaches are inadequate.

"Although formal governance processes are generally in place and the Board formally approves all major plans and administrative decisions, its involvement in strategic planning and other important affairs of the district is superficial. The Board is unengaged with and cannot define critical challenges facing the district; therefore, they are unable to respond appropriately to the urgent need to correct deficiencies. Board members are unfamiliar with the contents of the strategic plan they approved five years ago, unfamiliar with the details of their own budget, unfamiliar with objective data regarding the District's performance, and unfamiliar and uninvolved with fundamental strategic issues in curriculum, instruction, human resources and accountability.

"When the Board does pay close attention to an issue, its focus is often misguided. Faced with a recent cutback in external funding for the Chapter I remedial program, for example, the Board concerned itself primarily with staff assignments and job security rather than with the impact on children's learning.

"The Board's committee structure has been ineffectual and even counterproductive in dealing with key issues. Examinations of Board committee minutes showed few discussions of anything other than the merits of individual cases or proposals. The primary function of the committees has been to limit discussion and promote faster movement through the agenda at meetings of the full Board.

"Also strongly deficient in the Board's style of governance is its failure to support or promote parental involvement at the school level, despite general knowledge of the importance of such involvement to school environments and student learning.

"Clearly, the current governance, leadership and management of the district are inadequate to achieve major improvements in student performance. The need to make such improvements is crucial. Even judging by the narrow standard of achievement test results, evidence shows that the longer children remain in the Newark public schools, the less likely they are to succeed academically.

"The percentage of children meeting State minimum achievement levels on standardized tests of basic skills is lower at grade six than at grade three. While this pattern is evident throughout the State, the differential between grades three and six is greater in Newark than in any other New Jersey school district. By the eighth grade, the performance of Newark's students on New Jersey's Early Warning Test in reading, writing and mathematics should alert school officials to the urgency of the need for improvement, yet results on the State's grade eleven High School Proficiency Test (HSPT11) in the same subjects are alarmingly low. As a consequence, the majority of youngsters who remain in Newark's schools through twelfth grade are in danger of leaving high school without diplomas.

"In 1992-93, average daily student attendance was approximately 90 percent, according to the district's report to the NJDOE. This figure was one of the lowest reported attendance rates of any district in the State. The actual rate may be even lower. CCI site visits uncovered numerous examples of careless or non-existent attendance reporting, discrepancies in reported and filed copies of attendance data, and overaccounting of enrolled and attending students. Overstated enrollments in four high schools, for example, resulted in a potential State aid reduction of nearly two million dollars.

"The investigation uncovered further examples of neglect, mismanagement, and misrepresentation at almost every turn.

"Staff records are maintained carelessly. Employees sign-in sheets receive little oversight by building principals, and some staff sign in and out at the same time. Names remain on payroll lists after individuals have transferred to other schools.

"School buildings are filthy and in disrepair, despite the presence of numerous maintenance personnel. Fire and safety precautions are ignored. Lavatories lack toilet paper, soap, and paper towels; in many schools, it is difficult to find a drinking fountain that works. School cafeterias, although well staffed, often do not provide the size of portions or the nutritional components described in their published menus. School libraries lack enough appropriate materials to support even a modestly challenging curriculum for mainstream students and virtually no native-language materials for bilingual/ESL students.

"A long-standing deficiency still evident in many school is the lack of sufficient, appropriate instructional materials, equipment and supplies in classrooms. Ordering and delivery processes and operations are not structured to provide timely services to schools.

"Classrooms, for the most part, are dirty and ill-equipped, and instruction is unchallenging and often misdirected or inappropriate. Few instances were found in any classroom, regardless of the subject or grade level, of children being encouraged to generate their own ideas, to collaborate in problem-solving activities, to write in class, to read widely and independently or to use skills and facts in context. Science laboratories lack basic equipment and show no evidence or recent use. Little science instruction takes place below the seventh grade; where science teaching does occur, students are rarely given "hands-on" experience.

"A number of teachers and other professional staff members are uncertified or inappropriately certified for their current assignments; some were observed to lack an understanding of the subjects they were teaching and to give misinformation for children to copy into their notebooks.

Services to special education, bilingual education, vocational education, and Chapter I program students are notably deficient and violate state and federal requirements. These programs are planned and directed from the district central office, with little input from parents, principals or teachers.

"The special education program in the Newark School District abuses the rights of parents and children by flagrantly violating state and federal mandates. The District receives nearly three million dollars in federal I.D.E.A. special education funding, but its commitment to the needs of children with disabilities is marked by misrepresentation, mismanagement and misuse of funds. Pupils have been overcounted in the application of federal funds; funds have been forfeited while preschool children and others with disabilities were denied services; and funds intended for special education have been used for general education. Parents' rights to information and input are routinely violated, and the District fails to evaluate pupils with disabilities properly and in a timely manner. As a consequence, educational programs for individual children are developed without essential information about the children's status and needs.

"Most disturbing in the blatant segregation of special education students. Pupils with disabilities are instructed in separate school buildings, according to their disability classification, rather than in integrated settings in their neighborhood schools as required by federal and state law. This same violation was cited in a 1987 investigation by the federal Office of Civil Rights. The district's practices regarding these "least restrictive environment" mandates are, at best, 20 years behind the times.

"The bilingual education program, which is supposed to parallel the regular program of the school, cannot do so because native-language materials and bilingual/ESL curricula are not available. No bilingual or ESL instruction strand is included in the program of the district's Staff Development School. The district has also ignored State mandates regarding entry and exit criteria, as well as the grouping of children with different language backgrounds in the same class when there are enough children to form a separate bilingual class in English and one native language. Bilingual and ESL classes in many of the schools are relegated to basements or other sub-standard spaces in the buildings.

"Vocational education deficiencies that have existed for years are still in evidence, despite infusions of funds and the availability of technical assistance. With the full knowledge that a high percentage of students in the district do not go on to college and that many who do go to college do not finish, the district has continued to function as if this fact were not true. Programs that exist are of poor quality and do not contain mandated components. Students with disabilities are deprived of meaningful, appropriate participation and of the support and resources they require. Shops and laboratories are obsolete and in disrepair. Students and staff are exposed to numerous safety and health hazards, which could result in injury or serious illness.

"The Chapter I program, as observed, is not being implemented as described in the District's approved application for funds. Some staff members are uncertified; some do not teach for the amount of time approved in the District's application. Schoolwide Projects and Program Improvement Projects are not being implemented as described. Individual student improvement plans, required to guide instruction, are riddled with errors in the recording of achievement data. Also found in the Chapter I program were ineligible students served with Chapter I funds on more than the incidental basis allowed by federal guidelines, and unexpended capital expense and program improvement funds that must be returned to the State.

"Investigators were shocked by the careless delivery of health services in the schools. Required screenings and examinations are performed inconsistently and recorded with extreme and potentially harmful carelessness. Medicines and dangerous chemicals are in unlocked storage areas, accessible to children. No district policy exists to ensure that adrenaline is on hand in case of adverse reactions to the substance injected during tuberculosis testing. The district requires parents to sign a blanket form, offered in English only, allowing district personnel to perform "any ... procedures [it] deems necessary for the child's [well] being," throughout the child's school life.

"Pupil transportation is hazardous, largely due to the District's failure to provide oversight to contractors providing the services. Children are riding in school buses that are operated by improperly licensed drivers, that lack the proper safety equipment and that have not been properly inspected. Many safety violations occurred in the presence of CCI site visitors, such as buses left unattended with children on board and children allowed to run freely in the area, without adult supervision, while buses were arriving, departing and backing up.

"The food service program, essential to the maintenance of adequate nutrition in a district where thousands of children are eligible for free and reduced-price lunches, is not properly monitored by district administrators. The CCI Team found numerous violations of State and federal regulations designed to ensure the quality and integrity of the program. Meal count figures are changed to correspond to applications on file; meals for which the district claims reimbursement from the State lack required nutritional components or portion sizes; a system for collecting money from children who are supposed to pay full or reduced prices for their meals is not in evidence; current food inventories are not maintained; and items planned and shown on the menu are frequently not offered for sale.

"The school buildings themselves are unsafe. Codes established to protect the health, safety, and welfare of individuals are routinely violated. Unapproved construction was observed throughout the investigation. The district allows renovation and remodeling to take place without submitted for approval the educational specifications or construction documents to the Bureau of Facility Planning. Requirements of both the Administrative Code, Title 6, Chapter 22, and the Uniform Construction Code (UCC) are ignored. The district also consistently fails to apply for Certificates of Occupancy.

"The CCI Team found two worlds during its investigation of the Newark School District: the world of the schools themselves, with misdirected instruction, badly neglected buildings, inefficient practices, and inequitable distribution of even the most basic resources; and the world of comfortable offices and important-sounding titles in the District central office, detached from the everyday reality of the schools. The activities that take place in the District central office accomplish little of value and drain needed resources from students.

"Uncovered in the District were conflicts of interest, falsification of reports, willful violation of New Jersey's election and bidding laws, misused and mismanaged federal, local and state monies, mismanaged personnel matters, loose control over cash, a significant backlog of uncompleted capital improvement projects, and many other irregular and deficient practices.

"Examples of such practices include the continued leasing of an unsafe, rat-infested, converted factory building for use as a school, although inspection reports dating back to 1973 urge that the building be vacated. Two employees of the Newark Board of Education receive remuneration through a conduit relationship for the rental of the building. The annual rent is in excess of $175,000. The Board also leases, at $18,000 annually, space in a hangar at Newark Airport and pays a full-time coordinator $54,000 annually for an "aerospace project" in which little activity is evident.

"The CCI Team also learned that prospective vendors to the Board of Education are strongly pressured to contribute $1000 or more to an "Executive Superintendent's Scholarship Fund," with the understanding that without such contribution they will not do business with the Board of Education.

"Investigation of the District's routine fiscal management uncovered many other practices with the potential for fraud and abuse. Among these practices were the Board of Education's failure to monitor uninvested balances and inactive bank accounts; the failure to prepare reports and account reconciliations on a timely basis; the failure to stamp and log in checks when received; the securing of blank checks and signature plates in the same location; and differences between the bank's and the District's records of authorized signatures.

"Numerous plans to improve district performance have been developed over the years, but what is lacking above all in the Newark School District is an effective, integrated improvement strategy and the corresponding will and ability to make it happen.

"In the spring of 1994, CCI investigators were told by the Board, the Executive Superintendent and senior staff that the district's new strategic planning process would pave the way for systemic change. Interviews with these district leaders, however, revealed the same lack of vision and confusion about direction that have characterized district leadership in the past. The planning they described in November 1993, with one particular consultant and model of school reform, had changed by March 1994 to a different consultant, planning assistance from outside organizations, a different set of identified needs and a different model for change.

"District leaders are floundering. It is clear that the pressure of a strong state presence, the investigation itself and the imminence of a decision regarding action after the conclusion of the CCI have precipitated a last-minute search for solution to problems that the Newark Board of Education and senior administrators have failed to acknowledge, let alone confront, for years. It is highly unlikely, however, that such "eleventh hour" remedies, applied by the same leaders, will be able to bring about the major change needed if the students in Newark's public schools are to receive the educational services they deserve.

"Recommendation

Over the last decade, the Newark School District has failed repeatedly to achieve State Board of Education certification. The conditions which have precluded the district, and continue to preclude the district from implementing a corrective action plan to achieve certification, include severe governance deficiencies on the part of the Board and inadequate leadership and management by district administrators. The combination of these severe governance and management deficiencies translates into failures in the schools and in the classrooms. The multitude of plans for improvement which have been developed at the district's central office have not resulted in either corrections of the district's deficiencies or substantive changes in the education of Newark's students. The Board's lack of urgency to correct the district's many deficiencies is demonstrated in its failure to hold Executive Superintendent strictly accountable for achieving necessary improvements in the district's performance. coupled with the Board's failure to hold the district's chief administrator accountable is the lack of an effective, integrated strategy for instructional change on the part of the district's management.

Based upon the findings and conclusions of the CCI, the Newark Board of Education has failed or has been unable to take corrective actions necessary to establish a thorough and efficient system of education. In order to achieve the constitutional mandate of providing a thorough and efficient system of education for the children in Newark, the State must withdraw its delegation of that important responsibility to the Newark Board of Education. Accordingly, the assistant commissioner for the Division of Field Services recommends the creation of a State-operated school district in the City of Newark." Bates numbers 0009 to 0016.

21. Thereafter, following his review of the CCI Report, petitioner determined as a result of: (1) the District's failure to be certified for a decade; (2) the consistently poor performance of District students on standardized tests; and (3) numerous other deficiencies uncovered by the CCI and identified in the CCI Report, that a Verified Petition for Administrative Order and Order to Show Cause should be filed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e seeking judgment against respondent and requesting the Commissioner of Education to recommend pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 that the State Board of Education issue an Administrative Order that the District become a State-operated school district. See, Certification of Peter B. Contini, Feb. 6, 1995 (Pa1-Pa4).

22. During the course of the CCI members of the team took photographs of various interior and exterior conditions at the schools and other District facilities, all of which depicted the deteriorated state of the properties (Pa752 to Pa819). They also video taped various interior and exterior sites at the schools and at other facilities visited within the District, all of which depicted unclean and/or unsafe conditions (Pa752-Pa820).
23. Newark has approximately 48,000 students and 4,200 teachers and is the largest school district in the State of New Jersey. It is also the largest "special needs" school district in the State as defined in the Quality Education Act of 1990, N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-3. As such, it also has the largest annual budget of any school district in the State -- approximately $525 million for the school year 1993-1994.
24. In 1991-1992, Newark spent $9,150 per student; in 1992-1993, it spent $10,700 per student. In 1991-1992 and 1992-1993, the average expenditure per student, for the State as a whole, including Newark, was $7,884 and $8,571, respectively. Bates numbers 1605; 1109.
25. In 1991-1992, Newark's ratio of students per administrator was 103, the lowest such ratio of all the special needs districts. The average ratio of students per administrator for special needs districts in 1991-1992 was 157.9. In 1992-1993, Newark's ratio rose to 163.9 per administrator, the third lowest of all the special needs districts. The average ratio of students per administrator for special needs districts was 273.1 in 1992-1993. Bates number 1110.

26. In 1991-1992, Newark ratio of 14.3 students per non-certified employer was the lowest ratio of all special needs districts. The average for the special needs district was 26.8. Bates number 1611. Hence, Newark had less students per non-certified employee than any other special needs district in the State.
27. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 prohibits a school official from "us[ing] his official position to secure ... employment for himself, members of his immediate family or others,". Nevertheless, many Newark Board members, as well as key District employees, have many family members who are employed by the District (Pa747; Pa750-Pa751; Ra45-Ra48).
28. Each Board member has at least one relative on this District's payroll, most of whom were appointed after these members were first elected to the Board (Pa747; Ra45-Ra48).
29. Executive Superintendent, Eugene Campbell has ten relatives on the District's payroll (Pa749; Ra46), eight of whom were hired after he was appointed to the position of Executive Superintendent on November 28, 1984 (Pa853).
30. Daniel Gutmore was appointed Assistant Executive Superintendent on February 16, 1988. His cousin was hired on September 6, 1989 (Pa858).
31. Two relatives of Eugene Foti, Deputy Executive Superintendent, were hired after he was appointed to that position. on November 28, 1984 (Pa858).

32. The following Board members had relatives hired by the District after their date of election (Pa859-Pa860)⁹:

Board Member	Date of Election	Dates of Relative's Hire
Eleanor George	1981	09/08/92
Charles A. Bell	1970	09/01/71 10/17/83 03/14/88
Guillermina Cruz	1991	05/18/92 05/02/94 10/28/94
Kim Thompson-Gaddy	1992	07/06/93
Evelyn Williams	1985	04/22/86 10/05/87

33. In a memorandum dated August 26, 1991, Executive Superintendent Campbell set forth the library budgets for Newark's high school libraries for each school year from 1987-1988 through 1991-1992 as follows (Pa880-Pa881):

School	1991-92	1990-91	1989-90	1988-89	1987-88

34. In a memorandum dated September 10, 1990 from Joyce Burt, Chief Clerk (Pa882), to Virginia Haskins DeVane, Executive Director, Ms. Burt

⁹ I have deleted the names of the relatives for privacy purposes. They do appear in the petitioner's proposed Findings of Fact. Also, purposefully I have made Findings of Fact vis-à-vis relatives even though my decision is not based on this situation since petitioner may wish to "except" to my decision and ask that this data be considered in connection with the review of my initial decision.

listed Board member expenses for dues, travel, meals, fees, etc., for the 14-month period from July 1, 1989 to August 31, 1990 as follows:

Ivette Alfonso	$ 4,719.21
Charles A. Bell	11,673.18
Mary Darden	6,658.57
Eleanor George	4,602.57
William A. Good	5,744.52
Dennis LaScala	5,498.17
John Mavilla	11,580.82
Rev. Simmons	4,235.06
Evelyn Williams	14,362.54
Louis Turco (to 5/1/90)	8,337.54
	$ 77,412.18

This amount was $40,000 to $50,000 more than was budgeted for each of the five school years referred in Paragraph 33.

35. In October and November 1992 the District conducted a "needs audit" to assess the status of school supplies in the classrooms (Pa892-Pa922). The needs illustrated that even after two months into the year schools had inadequate supplies, or the budget with which to purchase supplies. For example, the submission made by the principal of the Alexander Street School, dated October 22, 1992 demonstrates:

"NEEDS Third grade reading books, workbooks. Teacher['] kit for reading. Math books, workbooks, teacher['] kit, Language arts book and workbooks/ Spelling book and workbooks. About 35 books on each level, for reading, math language arts. Art books for all the grades about 30 books for each grade and teacher['] edition for each grade, 1st to 5th and teacher[']s edition for each grade 1st to 5th.

"RATIONALE We started a new 3rd grade class this year because of the high enrollment of students in that grade. Art. Music books are due to the fact that there isn't enough money in the budget for the books (Pa893).

36. The submission for the Arlington Avenue School, dated October 22, 1992 provides:

"NEEDS

1. Reading Level -> (10) Workbooks

...

3. 90 Spelling book[s] ... Grade 5

(Pa894)."

37. The submission for the Roberto Clemente School indicates that:

"NEEDS Ginn English Workbooks K = 50; 1st = 125, 2nd = 125; 3rd = 75; and 4th = 50. Science textbooks K = 200 Science Workbooks, K = 200; 1st = 50; 2nd = 50; 3rd = 30; 4th = 30 ..."
(Pa986).

38. The rationale of the principal of Belmont Runyon School underlying his request for supplies is that, "this school budget does not adequately supply the school with the necessary textwork and workbooks and supplies because it is based on enrollment" (Pa895). Similar comments were made by other principals. See Dayton Street School (Pa897), Bergen Street School (Pa 910), Broadway Elementary School (Pa913), Hawkins Street School (Pa919); and Miller Street School (Pa920).

39. Other rationales provided by school principals were: "Due to an extreme overcrowding situation we are in need of the above written supplies ... " First Avenue School (Pa899); "Furniture, equipment and instructional supplies for our new Prekindergarten and Kindergarten classes that were organized this school year have not been received." Branch Brook School (Pa912).

40. William Demetroulakos, Principal of the Dr. William Horton School commented:

"As you can see by the accompanying [sic] delivery sheets, numerous books were to have been delivered to this school and many books were delivered. Yet, many, many are no where to be found. ..."

There are entire grade levels without Math Workbooks or Reading Workbooks (Pa892).

41. Executive Superintendent Campbell's memorandum of August 26, 1991 indicates that at the time it was written, the American Library Association recommended 20 books per high school student (Pa880). His memorandum inventoried the number of books in the high school libraries as of that date as follows:

School	Books	Books per Student
Barringer	10,157	8
Central	9,650	10
East Side	16,401	8
Science	2,940	6
Shabazz	12,660	13
University	7,000	13
Weequahic	13,285	12
West Side	8,713	5

42. N.J.S.A. 18A:7C-6.2 requires that 8th grade students are to be administered the Early Warning Test in March. The 11th grade High School Proficiency Test ("HSPT11") is given twice each school year, October and April. The April administration of HSPT11 primarily is given to students who had not passed all sections of the test given in October.
43. Newark's daily student attendance for 1991-1992 was 90.5% (second lowest) and 89.7% in 1992-1993, the lowest of all special needs districts in the State. Bates number 1111. Newark had 3259 regular students enrolled in the 8th grade class that took the 1991 EWT, Spring 1991 Grade 8 Early Warning Test State Summary (Pa58B). Three years later, the same class had only 1,852 regular enrolled students in the 11th grade class that took the HSPT, October 1993 Grade 11 High School Proficiency Test State Summary (Pa22), resulting in a loss of 43.2%

44. The percentage of 11th grade students who passed all three test sections (reading, writing and math) of the HSPT11 test in October 1993 was less than 25%, second lowest of all special needs districts. (Pa22). When the results of the April 1994 test, which is taken primarily by students failing one or more sections of the October 1993 test, are included, only 42.4% of Newark's 1,852 11th graders enrolled as of October 1993 passed all three sections. April 1994 Grade 11 HSPT State Summary (Pa53). Of those Newark students re-taking any of the HSPT11 sections in April 1994, 41.9 passed reading; 43.7% passed math; and only 30.9% passed writing. Thus, of the 3,259 students who were enrolled as 8th graders in the 1990-1991 school year, only 438 (13.4%) remained and passed the HSPT11 in October 1993, and only 786 (24.1%) remained and passed the HSPT11 even after the April 1994 re-testing results are incorporated (Pa11; Pa22; Pa53). In other words, even though 3,259 8th graders were enrolled in Newark in 1990-1991, more than 75% failed the HSPT11 in 1993-1994.
45. As it relates to the 8th grade EWT, Level I refers to students making satisfactory progress toward mastery (clearly competent), Level II refers to students making marginal progress toward mastery (minimally competent), and Level III refers to students who make no satisfactory progress toward mastery (not competent).
46. Of 38 Newark schools whose 8th graders were tested in the March 1994 EWT, 20 of those schools (52.6%) had not even one of their 1,266 8th graders qualified for Level I in all three test sections, i.e. demonstrated clear competency in reading, writing and math (Pa58).
47. On the March 1994 EWT, the total of 38 schools with 8th graders, only four had more than 10% of its pupils qualify as clearly competent in all three sections. March 1994 Grade 8 EWT State Summary (Pa58).

- 48. In 1993, Newark's students' average scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) was 674, combined for verbal and math. The State average was 892 and the national average was 902. Bates number 1117.
- 49. In 1990-1991, only 50.9% of Newark's third grade students reached the State's minimum proficiency level for math; making Newark the lowest achieving district in the State.
- 50. In 1992-1993, Newark had only 62.4% of its third grade students reach the State's minimum proficiency level for math. For the 1992-1993 school year, Newark was the lowest achieving district in the State.
- 51. Across all 30 special needs districts, 656 students achieved Level I (clearly competent) scores on all three sections of the Early Warning Test in 1994, (Pa58, Table 3). Only 87 Newark students achieved Level I status on all three sections of an enrollment of 3,057 (2.8 percent). This figure is lower than the total figure for all the other special needs districts, which had 569 out of 13,110 students enrolled achieve Level I on all three sections of the test. These figures are expressed in matrix format as follows:

	Number Regular Grade 8 Enrolled	Number Achieving Level I on All Tests	Percent Achieving Level I on All Tests
Newark	3,057	87	2.8
Other Special Needs Dist.	13,110	569	4.3
Total Spec. Needs Dist.	16,167	656	4.1

52. Of all the 16,167 regular eighth grade students enrolled in 1994 in the special needs districts, including Newark, 5,714 (35.3 percent) achieved either Level I or Level II (minimally competent) on all three sections (Pa58; Table 2). However, Newark had only 939 (30.7 percent) achieve this status. In the special needs districts outside of Newark, 4,775 students (36.4 percent) achieved Level I or Level II on all three tests (Pa58; Table 2). This data is illustrated in matrix form as follows:

	Number Regular Grade 8 Enrolled	Number Achieving Level I or Level II on All Tests	Percent Achieving Level I or Level II on All Tests
Newark	3,057	939	30.7
Other Special Needs Dist.	13,110	4,775	36.4
Total Spec. Needs Dist.	16,167	5,714	35.3

53. Concerning three school districts that had a higher percentage of schools with eighth grade students that had no students in Level I on all three test sections than did Newark (Irvington, Trenton and Burlington City), one had five schools, one had four schools, and one had only one school, as compared to 38 schools in Newark. All together, the other three school districts had 1,103 students enrolled in these 10 schools (6.8 percent of the state special needs districts enrollment) ,as compared to the 1,266 students enrolled in the 20 Newark schools that had 0.0 percent of the students achieving Level I on all three test sections (7.8 percent of the state special needs enrollment). In other words, 163 more eighth grade students in Newark were enrolled in schools that did not produce a single student achieving Level I on all three tests than in the other three districts combined (Pa58, Summary Reports Section, pp. 2, 6-7, 8, 11).

54. Across the 29 special needs districts excluding Newark, a total of 36 of the 123 eighth-grade schools (29.3 percent) had 0.0 percent of the students achieve Level I in all three sections of the EWT. In Newark, in 20 of 38 of the eighth-grade schools (52.6 percent) not one student was able to achieve Level I status on all three sections of the EWT. Of all the schools in all the special needs districts with no eighth grades achieving Level I, 35.7 percent were in Newark even though Newark had only 23.6 percent of all the eighth-grade schools. Newark's percentage of schools with 0.0 percent of the students achieving Level I on all three sections of the EWT therefore is disproportionately high when compared to the combined performance of all other special needs districts.
55. The total enrollment of students in schools in special needs districts in which no students achieved Level I on all three sections of the test in 1994 was 4,336 (Pa58, Summary Reports Section, pp. 1-23). Of this enrollment, 29.2 percent consisted of students attending Newark schools even though Newark has only 18.9 percent of the special needs districts' total eighth-grade enrollment. Outside Newark, 3,070 students in special needs districts (23.4 percent of the enrollment) attended schools in which not one child achieved Level I on all three sections of the test. In Newark, this percentage was 41.4 percent.
56. Of all the schools with eighth grades in the 30 special needs districts 67 had one percent or less of the tested population achieving Level I on all three sections of the 1994 EWT (Pa58, Summary Reports Section, pp. 1-23). Twenty-three of these schools (34.3 percent) were in Newark. This difference far exceeds the statistical expectation of 18.9 percent, which represents Newark's percentage of the total eighth grade enrollment in the special needs districts.

57. Among all the special needs districts, a total of 23 schools had 10 percent of the tested population achieve Level I on all three test sections in 1994 (Pa58, Summary Reports Section, pp. 1-23). Of these schools, only four were in Newark.
58. The combination of the loss of students by 1993-94 who were enrolled as eighth-graders in Newark in 1990-91, and the low passing rate on the October 1993 HSPT11, means that the expectation of an eighth grader in Newark ever passing the HSPT11 is very low. Across all 30 special needs districts, 4,001 students passed all three sections of the eleventh grade HSPT in October 1993. Of these students, 438 were from Newark (Pa885). This number represents only 13.4 percent of Newark's total eighth grade enrollment as of 1990-91 (Pa58B, Summary Reports Section, p. 5). Among students enrolled in all the other special needs districts, 3,563 passed all three test sections. This number represents 28 percent of the original 1990-91 eighth grade regular enrollment of 12,729 (Pa841). Thus, the number of Newark students who were in eighth grade in 1990-91 and who ultimately passed the HSPT11 in 1993-94 was less than half, on a percentage basis, when compared to all other special needs districts in the state:

	Regular Grade 8 1990-91 Enrolled	Number Achieving HSPT11 Competency on All Tests in October 1993	Percent Achieving HSPT11 Competency on All Tests in 1993-94
Newark	3,259	438	13.4
Other Special Needs Dist.	12,729	3,563	28.0
Total	15,988	4,001	25.0

59. Of the 30 special needs districts, Newark ranked second lowest in percentage of students meeting the minimum level of proficiency (MLP) in third grade Reading in 1992-93 (75.9 percent) (Pa842), lowest in meeting the third grade MLP in Mathematics (62.4 percent) (Pa843), and was well below district monitoring standards in both (Pa841). Newark also ranked lowest in the percentage of students achieving the MLP in Language Arts (75.0 percent) (Pa844). Thus, in two of the three areas assessed Newark's performance was last; and in the third area, Newark's performance was second worst among the lowest scoring districts in the state.

60. In 1990-91 Newark had only 50.9 percent of its third grade students achieve the MLP in mathematics, resulting in Newark being the lowest ranking special needs district. The second-lowest scoring district was Trenton with 66.2 percent of its third grade students achieving the MLP in that subject (Pa842-Pa844).
61. Of the 30 special needs districts, Newark ranked third lowest in meeting the sixth grade MLP in Reading in 1992-93, second lowest in Mathematics, and fourth lowest in Language Arts. Relative to the other special needs districts, Newark's best sixth grade performance was in Language Arts. However, the number of students who failed to achieve the MLP in this area in Newark (952) exceeds the combined total of sixth grade students who took Language Arts tests in the three lower-achieving districts (Pa845-Pa847).
62. In a cover memorandum dated April 22, 1994, Executive Superintendent Campbell advised the Board that he would request that it adopt a strategic reform plan at the April 26, 1994 Board meeting, just four days hence (Pa631) The strategic plan was developed by an outside consultant, Dr. Robert Peterkin.¹⁰ (Pa634).

¹⁰ Dr. Peterkin's belated "corrected certification" was submitted quite late and was the subject of a cross-motion by petitioner to suppress. Since it is not sworn, the petitioner argued it should not be considered on this motion. However, I have considered it and it does not contain any data which would militate against the decision I have made.

63. Earlier, on March 7 and March 14, 1994, the Auditor General had requested information from the Board on the hiring of educational consultants (Pa537-Pa538). On May 18, 1994, about two months later, Alonzo Kittrels, Senior Executive Director, provided the Auditor General for the first time with the Request for Proposal ("RFP") for the support services for the strategic plan (Pa537-Pa538; Pa580-Pa597). The proposed Board resolution, if passed, would have committed approximately $4.4 million to the consultants to implement the strategic plan (Pa539; Pa689).
64. On May 23, 1994, the Commissioner directed the District to defer action on the $4.4 million resolution in order to allow the Auditor General to review fully the issues pertaining to the strategic plan (Pa539; Pa683).
65. By letter dated June 28, 1994, the Acting Auditor General informed the Board that it was not authorized to enter into contracts with consultants whom the District sought to use to implement the strategic plan because the District had failed to show that the contracts were to be awarded pursuant to the competitive bidding process required by the Public School Contracts Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-1 et seq. (Pa540; Pa698-Pa700).
66. As of July 21, 1994, despite having received ongoing technical assistance from the Office of The Auditor General, the District still had failed or was unable to compile an RFP which met the requirements of the Public Schools Contracts Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-1, et seq. (Pa541).¹¹

¹¹ The series of communications pertinent to the "RFP" activities between April 1994 and July 1994 may be found at Pa631 to Pa714.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Accordingly, based upon the foregoing Discussion and Findings of Fact, and as a result of my review and consideration of the documentary materials submitted by both sides in connection with the petitioner's summary decision motion, I believe that the petitioner unquestionably has demonstrated that a State takeover of Newark's public school system would not be arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or otherwise in violation of law. Indeed, given the mandate imposed by the New Jersey Constitution upon the State to see to it that a thorough and efficient system of free public education is delivered to all eligible public school students, I believe the State would be derelict in its duty if it did not take the proposed action.

Both sides have made reference to the language used by our Supreme Court in Abbott by Abbott, v. Burke, supra, wherein the court stressed that since it is the State's obligation to carry out the "thorough and efficient" mandate contained in the Constitution, it is the State which ultimately must to take whatever steps may be necessary to see that this result is accomplished. Abbott by Abbott v. Burke, 136 N.J. 444, 454-456 (1994). Thus, the State's decision to seek to take control of the public school system in Newark clearly was not the product of any whim or caprice. Rather, it was the culmination of at least ten years of examination, study and investigation of the many deficiencies that are rampant throughout the District and which compel State action pursuant to that constitutional mandate. More than thirty years ago the New Jersey Supreme Court observed with respect to de facto racial discrimination in Plainfield's public schools that curative measures to deal with that problem could not await progress toward curing other social ills involving housing, employment and other factors which bear upon the creation of racially imbalanced schools. See, Booker v. Board of Education of Plainfield, 45 N.J. 161,171 (1963). So too, in 1995 the State cannot continue to stand aside for another year, no less ten, while the school system in its largest city continues demonstrably to deteriorate. Certainly, the ills of urban society manifest themselves not only in our schools, but on our streets and in our homes as well. But the failure or inability of government to deal promptly or adequately with those problems is no reason to refrain from undertaking legitimate efforts to move forward on the education front at least. There are no golden promises attached to a State takeover. It is not a panacea. Indeed, it may be that the State's efforts in Newark will not prove to be successful at all. That, however, is not the issue before me. Based upon essentially undisputed facts the school officials in Newark have failed their students and it is time for the State to step in for as the Supreme Court also observed in Abbott by Abbott v. Burke, supra, it is a given that students in special needs districts are not able fairly to compete and to function effectively as citizens in our society unless they have an enhanced opportunity for an education capable of and specially designed to give them that opportunity, Abbott by Abbott v. Burke, 136 N.J. at 454. Where students in special needs districts like Newark are shown as here to be suffering educationally, it is the State which must remedy that failing and delegation of any part of the obligation to the local school district does not dilute the State's responsibility at all. Abbott by Abbot v. Burke, 136 N.J. at 455. Thus, where the delegation of the educational function to the local school district demonstrably has proven to be inadequate the State is obliged step in, take over the educational functions and see to it that the services which the New Jersey Constitution commands are delivered. The public school children in Newark labor under heavy enough burdens of social and economic disadvantage. We should not add to those burdens by continuing to tolerate the severe inadequacies which have marked the local school district's "efforts", particularly in the past ten years where specific monitoring to identify those deficiencies and to analyze what appropriate corrective action must take place has occurred. As the Supreme Court in the "first" Abbott case observed, it is not just that the future of the 48,000 public school pupils in Newark depends on the actions of the State for, more importantly, "the State's future depends on them." Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287, 392 (1990).

Finally, I am not unaware that disposal of this case on motion in summary fashion has deprived the Board of the opportunity to put the State to its proofs on the witness stand, under oath, subject to the rigors of cross-examination. The Board, I suspect, therefore will criticize this summary decision as a "rush to judgment" in a sensitive area of intergovernmental relations. Nevertheless, if this is a "rush" I believe it is warranted as the time for corrective action to attempt to interdict the many areas of concern identified in the proofs is fast slipping away. The State's determination in light of the proofs was anything but arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious. To the contrary, it was and is the only sensible course of action left if Newark's students are to receive the statutory and constitutional educational entitlements which are due to them.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth herein, I CONCLUDE that: (1) The Office of Administrative Law has jurisdiction pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14e, the Administrative Procedure Act, (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.), and implementing regulations, particularly N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, to entertain petitioner's motion for summary decision; (2) The petitioner's motion for summary decision should be granted as there are no material facts genuinely in dispute as to petitioner's determination as a matter of law that as of July 22, 1994 respondent failed to take or is unable to take the corrective actions necessary to establish a through and efficient system of public education for its 48,000 students. Thus, I FURTHER CONCLUDE that the petitioner's determination to take over the Newark public school system for the several reasons set forth in the Verified Petition for Administrative Order was neither arbitrary, unreasonable nor capricious and summary decision therefore is GRANTED.

ORDER

I herewith ORDER that the Commissioner of Education recommend pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14, -15, -15.1 and 7A-34 that the State Board of Education: (1) issue an Administrative Order removing the District's Board and creating a State-operated school district; and (2) take such other steps pursuant to law as are necessary and appropriate to implement the same.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

V.	:	DECISION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY	: OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
Respondent.	:

The record in this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) granting summary decision to petitioner have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions and petitioner's reply thereto were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 inasmuch as the OAL indicated that the date of mailing was April 17, 1995, instead of April 13, 1995, the date on which the decision was actually released to the parties.

The Commissioner of Education is being asked to consider whether it is necessary to recommend that the State Board of Education issue an order creating a State-operated school district in order to uphold the constitutional mandate for providing a thorough and efficient system of education to children residing in a municipality of this State. As a preliminary matter, a review of my responsibilities and duties as Commissioner will assist in placing this case in the proper context.

STATUTORY AND CONSTITUTIONAL OBLIGATIONS

Any review of the record in this proceeding must be accomplished within the broader parameters of my statutory and constitutional obligations to the children of the State of New Jersey. Those children are constitutionally guaranteed a thorough and efficient system of education. N.J. Const., Art. VIII, sec. IV, par. 1. The State Constitution places the obligation of providing for such a system on the State Legislature, which, in turn, has established shared State and local responsibility for its fulfillment. Robinson v. Cahill, 69 N.J. 449 (1975) (Robinson V). The legislative scheme and Supreme Court decisions make it clear that the ultimate responsibility for that educational system is upon the State. “The responsibility for substantive education is squarely and completely committed to the State; delegation of any part of the educational function to school districts does not dilute that State responsibility at all....” Abbott by Abbott v. Burke, 136 N.J. 444, 455 (1994) (Abbott III).

As Commissioner of Education, I serve as a legislative agent with the obligation to assure that this constitutional promise is met. Robinson V, supra. at 461. The obstacles to meeting this responsibility in poor urban districts are well-documented, as is the compelling need to do so. Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287 (1990) (Abbott II). For, as recently noted by the Supreme Court, it is not just the “plight of these students, whose education and lives are at stake...also at stake is the future of the State and the rest of its citizens....” Abbott III at 456.

The Commissioner is statutorily and constitutionally responsible for implementing a monitoring system which is designed, ultimately, to correct deficiencies in failing school districts so that the constitutional guarantee is realized. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14. If throughout the various steps of the monitoring process, a local school board demonstrates an inability to correct the identified deficiencies in that school district, the State eventually must rescind the delegation to that school board of any educational functions and directly assume the responsibility of correcting those deficiencies.

In the instant matter, I am faced with the question of whether the Newark Board of Education has failed or is unable to take the necessary steps to establish a thorough and efficient system of education, thereby requiring the State to rescind its delegation of authority to the Newark School Board and directly assume the constitutional obligation to establish such a system.

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) made sixty-six specific Findings of Fact which form the basis for his conclusion that summary decision should be granted to petitioner in this matter and that a State-operated school district should be created in the City of Newark. As a legal matter, he found that the OAL has the jurisdiction to entertain petitioner's Motion for Summary Decision. He also found that petitioner's Motion for Summary Decision should be granted because there are no material facts genuinely in dispute as to the determination that as of July 22, 1994, the Board had failed to take or was unable to take the corrective actions necessary to establish a thorough and efficient system of education for Newark's 48,000 students. Finally, he found that the decision to create a State-operated school district in the City of Newark was neither arbitrary, capricious nor unreasonable. Initial Decision at 57.

In its exceptions to the ALJ's decision the Board challenged both the appropriateness of entertaining a summary decision motion within the context of an action for the creation of a State-operated district and the majority of the Findings of Fact as not being based upon competent legal evidence. Before reaching the merits of the ALJ's recommendation regarding the creation of a State-operated school district in the City of Newark, these two issues must be addressed.

APPROPRIATENESS OF SUMMARY DECISION

Based on the reference in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14 and 15 to a “plenary hearing,” respondent contends that the statutory scheme precludes the use of the procedural mechanism of summary decision in this matter.¹ However, as petitioner notes, the “plenary hearing” referenced is to be conducted in accordance with the Administrative Procedures Act (APA) and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9; the APA and the school laws permit summary decisions in matters if material facts are not in dispute. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(a) (“...Any party ... may present his case or defense by oral and documentary evidence, submit rebuttal evidence and conduct such cross-examination as may be required, in the discretion of the administrative law judge, for a full and true disclosure of the facts”); N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 (“...a party may move for summary decision upon all or any of the substantive issues...”); N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.10(b) (contested cases before the Commissioner shall be governed by the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules of Practice, N.J.A.C. 1:1). Thus, the statutory language, read as a whole, clearly permits summary decision.

¹ Respondent also argues that summary decision is inappropriate due to petitioner’s failure to provide discovery. Respondent alleges that it did not receive access to materials which underlie the comprehensive compliance investigation in a timely manner and that the Board has, therefore, been prevented from a meaningful opportunity to respond to the summary decision motion. However, respondent has not set forth any justifiable reasons for denying summary judgment based on the discovery issue. Respondent has submitted nothing which would support a conclusion that further discovery will provide respondent with any documents that would create material disputes of fact, especially since petitioner is not relying upon the non-statistical facts in the CCI report which these materials address. Respondent has had access to the requested material since January and has had copies of all the materials since March 23, 1995. Yet, in its exceptions in support of this argument, the Board identifies the same classroom observations set forth in its response brief as support for its argument. Mere requests for further discovery cannot defeat a motion for summary decision; rather, respondent has to demonstrate the possibility that further discovery will be productive in identifying material disputes of fact. Respondent has failed to make that demonstration here.

Moreover, to read the statute as a bar to summary decision would be inconsistent with the spirit of the law, as well as the constitutional promise it was designed to effectuate. “The primary rule for construing a statute is to read it so as to effectuate the probable purpose with which it was enacted.” Tozzo v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co., 261 N.J. Super. 586, 589 (App. Div. 1993). The purpose of the statutes authorizing the creation of a State-operated district is to provide timely relief to children who are being victimized by intolerable educational circumstances. It would be inimical to the underlying statutory purpose to conduct a full trial in those instances where no material facts are in dispute. Such a procedure would exalt form over substance while delaying desperately needed relief for months or even years.² Nothing in the language of the statute requires such a meaningless exercise; to mandate such a process would be an injustice both to the children the statute was designed to protect and the constitutional guarantee the statute is implementing. Accordingly, I find that the policies and purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14 and 15 are best effectuated by construing the right to a “plenary” hearing consistent with the provisions of the APA, thereby permitting summary decision where appropriate. See Cedar Cove, Inc. v. Stanzione, 122 N.J. 202, 213 (1991) (“...The construction that will best effectuate the statute’s ultimate objective is to be preferred.”)

The standards for granting summary decision are analogous to those governing summary judgment. Compare N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 with R. 4:46. Summary judgment is appropriate “...where the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and affidavits, if any, show that there are no genuine issues as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Kopp, Inc. v. United Technologies, 223 N.J. Super. 548, 554-555 (App. Div. 1988). The purpose of summary judgment is “...to avoid trials which would serve no useful purpose and to afford deserving litigants immediate relief.” Id. at 555. The movant has the burden of excluding any doubt as to the existence of any genuine issue of material fact and “[t]he record presented must be considered in a light most favorable to the opponent of the motion....” Swarts v. Sherwin-Williams Co., 244 N.J. Super. 170, 178(App. Div. 1990).

However, once a movant has made out a “prima facie” right to summary judgment, the party opposing the motion must “show by competent evidential material that a genuine issue of material fact” exists. Ziemba v. Riverview Medical Center, 275 N.J. Super. 293, 301 (App. Div. 1994). Disputes as to facts which are irrelevant or immaterial will not bar summary judgment. Johnson v. City of Hackensack, 200 N.J. Super. 185, 189 (App. Div. 1985) (disputes as to the uses which plaintiff contended violated the restrictions in the grant were not material because those uses were not substantial enough to result in forfeiture). See also Ziemba, supra., 275 N.J. at 301 (“facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, ‘fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious’ [citation omitted] ” are not sufficient to preclude summary judgment); Swarts, supra., 244 N.J. Super. at 178 (opponent to summary judgment motion “cannot defeat the motion by raising a misguided subjective belief, without more, to create the existence of material... fact”). Moreover, disputes as to the conclusions to be drawn from the facts, as opposed to the facts themselves, will not defeat a motion for summary judgment. Lima & Sons, Inc. v. Borough of Ramsey, 269 N.J. Super. 469, 478 (App. Div. 1994) (“Where there is only one reasonably justifiable conclusion to be made from the undisputed operative facts, a summary disposition is proper.”) Finally, the appropriate standard of proof is a relevant consideration in reviewing a motion for summary judgment. See Costello v. Ocean County Observer, 136 N.J. 594 (1994) (given the heightened standard of proof in defamation actions, plaintiff failed to produce the “substantial evidence” needed to survive a summary judgment motion); City of Newark v. New Jersey Turnpike Authority, 12 N.J. Super. 523, 530 (Ch. Div. 1951), aff’d 7 N.J. 377 (1951) (“contrariety of opinion” not enough to defeat summary judgment where non-movant required to show abuse of discretion).

In an intervention action, the statutory standard of proof is whether the proposed action is arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14. Based on undisputed facts in the record, the ALJ found that petitioner met his burden of proving that the creation of a State-operated school district in the City of Newark meets this standard. The ALJ further found, based on that record, that the Newark school district had “failed to take or is unable to take the corrective actions necessary to provide a thorough and efficient system of public education....” Initial Decision at 57; N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15.

In its exceptions to the Initial Decision, the Board asserts that the Findings of Fact are not based upon credible legal evidence and, therefore, cannot form the basis of the determination that petitioner has met his burden of showing that summary decision is proper in this matter. Specifically, the Board asserts that Findings of Fact #17-66 are erroneous because either there is no evidence in the record to support the finding or the evidence supporting the finding is based upon hearsay. Petitioner in his reply asserts that all of the evidence is legally admissible; in each instance he points to evidence in the record and a specific evidentiary rule supporting the finding.

Upon review of the record, the Initial Decision and the arguments of the parties, I find that each Finding of Fact is supported by credible admissible evidence either in affidavits, certifications or documentary form. See N.J.R.E. 803(c)(8)(public records, reports, and findings); N.J.R.E. 803(c)(6)(records of regularly conducted activity); N.J.R.E. 803(b)(statement by party-opponent). Consequently, for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision as well as the additional reasons set forth below, I adopt the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and recommend that the State Board create a State-operated school district in the City of Newark.

ALJ'S FINDINGS OF FACTS

The Board asserts in its exceptions that material issues of fact remain to be decided by a trier of fact. However, simply stating that material issues of fact exist or that all non-statistical facts are disputed is not sufficient to defeat a motion for summary decision. Rather, respondent has an obligation to set forth the specific material facts that are in dispute supported by affidavits or certifications. The Board has failed to do so in this case.

In its exceptions, the Board does not specifically identify any material factual disputes.³ The "Disputed Findings of Fact" section in the exceptions merely questions the competency and authenticity of the evidence presented in support of the summary judgment motion. Yet, many of the facts found by the ALJ are supported by respondent's own certifications or affidavits. For example, respondent challenges Finding #22 which states that :

During the course of the CCI members of the team took photographs of various interior and exterior conditions at the schools and other District facilities, all of which depicted the deteriorated state of the properties (Pa752 to Pa819). They also video taped various interior and exterior sites at the schools and at other facilities visited within the District, all of which depicted unclean and/or unsafe conditions (Pa752-Pa820). [Initial Decision at 42.]

Petitioner submitted the certification of Thomas J. King in support of his motion; Mr. King identified these photographs and described the video tape. In response, the Board submitted the certification of William E. Belott, Senior Executive Director of Facilities Service Operations for the Newark School District. Mr. Belott's certification acknowledges, among other things, the graffiti, the locked exit doors, the drainage problem, the broken heating unit, the missing bathroom doors and the debris in the school yard. Further, respondent submitted photographs (unattached to any certification or affidavit) which purported to "update photographs of the alleged unsafe areas" showing that the "conditions were corrected." Respondent's Brief at 13.

Then, in its exceptions, the Board states that there is no evidence to support Finding #22, noting that "[t]here is no basis for concluding that the photographs actually depict any facility of respondent. The photographs have not been authenticated." Board's Exceptions at 26. However, respondent not only did not challenge the authenticity of these photographs and videotaped pictures through affidavits or certifications, but its own evidence submitted in response to the summary decision motion acknowledges the authenticity and accuracy of the photographic depictions.

Respondent also challenges Findings #27-32 regarding Board member's hiring by asserting that the record does not contain any evidence "that any school official used his position to secure employment for family members. Further, there is no evidence that any person hired is unqualified, unfit, incompetent or has performed below standard." Board's Exceptions at 26. However, none of the ALJ's findings reached those conclusions. Rather, Findings #27-32 simply contain information regarding Board members and district employees that is confirmed in affidavits or certifications submitted on behalf of respondent.

Respondent's challenges to other Findings are similarly devoid of merit. Respondent asserts that it does not dispute the statistical evidence but then contests the Findings based on test scores as being unsupported by any evidence in the record. These "contested" test scores are not only established as competent evidence through the certification of Gerald E. DeMauro submitted on behalf of petitioner, but the scores are also accepted and relied upon in the certification of Steven Block submitted by respondent.

Respondent also contests Findings #33-37 which are based on respondent's own documents and further contests the Findings related to the Comprehensive Compliance Investigation (CCI). Some of the CCI-related findings are statistical evidence which respondent asserted were not being disputed or are simply indisputable background information. Findings #23-26. Other CCI-related Findings merely restate the purpose of a CCI, (Finding #17), what the Newark CCI concluded, (Findings #19 and 20), or the steps taken by the Department as a result of the Newark CCI (Finding #21). Background data on the district, as well as the purpose, content and consequences of the CCI, are not rationally subject to dispute nor, if disputed, would that dispute be material to the outcome of this case.

Finally, as noted above, respondent excepts to many of the Findings based on a claim that the evidence submitted to support the Finding is hearsay. Findings #38-66. The petitioner, however, has identified hearsay exceptions that apply to each and every factual finding challenged on that basis. Thus, even if hearsay were not permissible in OAL, competent evidence exists to support the ALJ's decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5.

In light of this review, I am left with no alternative but to conclude that there are no genuine issues of fact left to be decided. Were there genuine issues of fact which would warrant a hearing, the Board was obligated to have raised them in opposition to the Motion for Summary Decision. Having failed to do so, it cannot now defeat the motion by unsupported and, at times, self-contradictory statements that they exist. The only real disputes identified by respondent are as to the conclusions to be drawn from the facts; that type of dispute does not preclude summary decision. See Ziema, supra. Consequently, in accordance with the determination of the ALJ, I find that summary decision is appropriate as there are no genuine issues of material fact remaining to be determined at a hearing. In so concluding, I now turn to the substantive issue of whether the facts warrant the grant of summary decision to petitioner.

DISTRICT CHARACTERISTICS

It is not genuinely disputed that the Newark school district is the largest school district in the State, far exceeding the enrollment of the second largest district, Jersey City. See Block Certification at 6. Newark has approximately 48,000 students, 4,200 teachers and is a special needs district which serves a very large number of disadvantaged students. Initial Decision at 42. In fact, given the large numbers of poor children served by this district, the task we face in that district is all the more critical. As opined by the Supreme Court in Abbott II, "...[c]ertainly the urban poor need more than education, but it is hard to believe that their isolation and society's division can be reversed without it. That part of the constitutional standard, then, requiring an education sufficient to enable students to assume their proper roles as citizens takes on new significance." Abbott II at 393.

Newark also has the largest annual budget of any school district in the State -- approximately $525 million for the 1993-94 school year with per-pupil expenditures above the State average. In 1991-92, Newark spent $9,150 per student, while the State average for that year was $7,884. During this same year, Newark had the lowest ratio of students to administrators (103:1) and of students to non-certified employees (14.3:1). This is compared with the average for special needs districts in that year of 157.9:1 and 26.8:1 respectively. In 1992-93, Newark's per-pupil expenditure rose to $10,700 per student, while the State average was $8,571. During that year, its ratio of students to administrators rose to 163.9:1; the average ratio in special needs district that year was 273.1:1. Initial Decision at 42-43.

HISTORY OF MONITORING IN NEWARK

Despite its above-average expenditures, the record in this case shows the undeniable (and essentially undenied) decade of failure by the Newark Board of Education, responsible for educating the largest number of children in the State, to meet the State's minimum standards for certification as providing a thorough and efficient system of education.⁴

In 1984, the school district failed Level I of the monitoring process. The district failed seven out of ten elements and thirteen of fifty-one indicators. Initial Decision at 26. The district was directed to prepare a corrective action plan and, in March 1985, the district was authorized to proceed with its implementation. Initial Decision at 28. By March 1985, Eugene Campbell had been appointed Executive Superintendent. Pa 715.

Between August 1986 and February 1987, Level II monitoring was conducted and again the district failed to become certified. Although the district passed certain indicators that it had previously failed, it failed other indicators that it had passed in Level I. Overall, the district failed the same number of elements but more indicators in Level II monitoring. In Level II monitoring, the district failed sixteen of the fifty-one indicators. Initial Decision at 28. Although the district prepared a "discrepancy analysis", the Level II findings were not formally appealed. As a result of the findings in Level II monitoring, the district was directed into Level III. Initial Decision at 30.

In the Fall of 1992, a verification review team was sent to the district to conduct a preliminary assessment prior to Level III monitoring by the External Review Team. Initial Decision at 30; Gutmore certification. Again, the district prepared a "discrepancy analysis" of the findings. See attachment to Gutmore certification.

At the conclusion of the Level III monitoring, the district once more failed to attain certification. Another "discrepancy analysis" was prepared by the district. See attachment to Gutmore certification. No formal challenge was taken to the Level III findings. Initial Decision at 33.

In response to the External Team Report, the Commissioner ordered a CCI that found, in part, that children in Newark, Already at risk of school failure because of economic disadvantage...are placed at greater risk by school district personnel who fail to provide them with the opportunity to achieve academically in a safe, healthful environment.

The Newark school district has been at best flagrantly delinquent and at worst deceptive in discharging its obligations to the children enrolled in the public schools." [Initial Decision at 35.]

The CCI findings ultimately led to the Order to Show Cause in this matter. Initial Decision at 41-42.

PUPIL PERFORMANCE

The Board's ability to provide its students with the skills necessary to meet State standards in Reading, Writing and Mathematics is a central focus of our inquiry. In addition to certain uncontested statistical data in the CCI report, petitioner has submitted statistical evidence regarding student performance in the Newark school district during the past few years; respondent has confirmed that statistical data through its own certification. Compare DeMauro and Block certifications. What this pupil performance data indicates is an utter failure by the Board to prepare its students to function as citizens and workers in society. Not only are the students failing to meet minimal State standards of performance, but they are doing so in staggeringly large degrees in both numbers and percentages. The students' test scores, alone, indicate a severe failure in educating the children in this district.⁵

As more extensively discussed in the Initial Decision, the Newark school district stands out among even the other special needs districts in its failure in pupil performance on the eleventh grade High School Proficiency Test (HSPT), the eighth grade Early Warning Test (EWT) and the third and sixth grade standardized tests. As articulated by the ALJ in his Initial Decision, the test scores of the district, demonstrate the complete failure, or the inability of the district, to meet the levels established by the State as consistent with the provision of a thorough and efficient system of education. As aptly articulated by the ALJ:

[I]n October 1993, only one 11th grade student in four passed the reading, writing and mathematics sections of the HSPT. In April 1994 the test was administered primarily to students who had failed one or more sections in the Fall. Out of the 1852 11th graders enrolled in the Fall, slightly more than only 42% passed all three sections. More importantly in terms of overall impact, 438 students, or only 13.4% of the 8th grade student population in 1990-91, remained and passed the HSPT in October 1993, and 786 students, or only 24.1%, passed the October and April tests combined.... In short, the percentage of Newark students passing the HSPT in 1993-94 (including the retest) as 11th graders represented less than 25% of the class which had been 8th graders in 1990-91. That is a description of failure on a very large scale, and... most certainly is distressing to contemplate. [Initial Decision at 13. (emphasis in text)]

The Board submitted its own interpretation of the test data through the certification of Steven G. Block, Ph. D., Director of the Office of Accountability and Quality Assurance for the Newark Board of Education. In his certification, Dr. Block confirms the dismal results as shown on the test scores by arguing that although the district scores are among the lowest in the State, they are not the lowest. In other words, rather than challenge the accuracy of the test data, the Board contests the relative ranking of the district as compared to other special needs districts. In so arguing, the district clearly misperceives the nature of the present proceedings. The degree of the district's failure as it relates to other special needs districts, is not the relevant inquiry when determining the appropriateness of State intervention. Rather, the inquiry is whether this district has failed or is unable to take the corrective action necessary to provide children with the constitutionally mandated education. Here, the Newark school district's pupil performance data makes its failure incontrovertible.

In defense of the tragically low test scores and, in what may only be characterized as a disingenuous protest, Dr. Block asserts that:

Comparisons of special needs districts are of particular importance in this case because the State has characterized Newark test scores and achievement levels as “abysmally low.” Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines “abysmal” as “immeasurably low or wretched.” Such characterization has no statistical validity since by definition “immeasurably low or wretched” has no quantifiable equivalent. [Block Certification attached to the Respondent’s opposition to the Motion for Summary Decision, par.5].

This assertion surely misses the point. While “abysmal” may have no statistical significance, the lack of achievement represented by these failing scores surely has great significance upon the lives of the students for whom this district is supposed to be providing an education. It cannot be legitimately contested that since monitoring of Newark began in 1984, the district has been unable to meet the minimum state standard for pupil performance on either the HSPT or the EWT. Further, scores on the third and sixth grade tests provide no indication that this will be remedied anytime soon. See Initial Decision at 52-53.

Not only are the test scores in the Newark school district reflective of an abject failure by the Board to provide a thorough and efficient system of education over the past decade, but the test scores are only part of the picture. Drop-out rates also support this conclusion. The certification of Shirley Grundy-Harris, Director of Guidance Services for the Newark Board of Education, confirms that “[a] large number of Newark elementary school’s eighth grade students do not attend their district high schools.” Certification of Shirley Grundy-Harris, par. 2. While she calculates the drop-out rates from between 8.2% to 9.7% for the past five years, she specifies that the Newark Guidance Office does not track eighth grade students to grade eleven. The drop-out picture established by another document submitted on behalf of the Board, however, paints a much bleaker picture. In the uncertified statement of Robert S. Peterkin, a Board consultant, the “four year drop-out rate” was asserted to be a dramatically higher 35%.⁶ Combined with information on drop-out-rates, student test scores are even more disturbing. See Initial Decision at 47-48.

The undisputed data leave me with but one conclusion -- that the test scores alone in this district, without more, are sufficiently “abysmal” to require immediate State intervention. My constitutional responsibility as Commissioner of Education demands no less. Nevertheless, my recommendation in this matter is further supported by the Board’s failure to develop systematic solutions to problems in the area of school facilities so as to meet its affirmative obligation to provide clean and safe facilities for the children in its charge.

SCHOOL ENVIRONMENT

It is well recognized that an environment which is conducive to learning -- clean and safe facilities -- is an integral component of a thorough and efficient system of education. As the Supreme Court noted, “deficient facilities are conducive to a deficient education.” Abbott II at 363. Respondent’s contention notwithstanding, the record contains sufficient undisputed facts to justify only one reasonable conclusion -- the Board has been unable to systematically address the district’s facilities problems.

The photographs and video tape taken during the CCI, as identified in the certification of Thomas J. King, vividly depict schools with crumbling ceilings, warped floors, unlocked supply closets, overflowing sinks, inoperable toilets, exposed wires, and filthy grounds. Similar to the findings by the Level III verification team which were attached to a certification submitted on behalf of respondent, fire exits were locked and bathrooms had missing stall doors and lacked the most basic sanitary supplies such as soap, toilet paper and paper towels. See Certification of Daniel Gutmore, Newark Board of Education, Discrepancy Analysis of New Jersey State Department of Education, Verification of Data Findings (January 1993) at 6 (noting that all the listed items, except for limited handicapped accessibility, “have or are in the process of being addressed”). A particularly disturbing indication of an unaddressed systemic facilities problem is the picture of a toilet paper holder installed in the hallway; toilet paper was only available in the hall, not in the bathroom. Certification of Thomas J. King, par. 4(m).

While Mr. Belott, Senior Executive Director of Facilities Operations for the Newark School District, states that most of these problems were corrected, the very existence of these appalling conditions -- even for a relatively short time -- demonstrates the Board’s failure and inability to systematically address facilities issues that have been identified through the monitoring process. Further, some of the identified deficiencies appear to be the result of long-standing neglect rather than a temporary condition . See e.g. Certification of Thomas King, par. 4(a), (l), (r), (aa), (dd), (ee) and (nn); 5(c), (e) and (f). While these conditions may not be representative of all the schools in the district, their very existence is nonetheless alarming.⁷ The pictures depict filthy and dangerous conditions that are simply unacceptable in the public schools of the State, even if subsequently corrected. Based on the undisputed evidence in the record, it is clear that the Board has been unable to assure the children of Newark that the school facilities they attend will provide “an environment in which children can learn; indeed, the safety of children in these schools is threatened.” Abbott II at 362.

BOARD MEMBER EXPENDITURES

The historic failure of the district to achieve certification through the monitoring process, the exceedingly low test scores of the students attending many of the schools in Newark and the Board’s inability to meet its affirmative obligation to ensure safe and clean facilities in the district lead me to conclude that the district has failed and is unable to take the corrective action necessary to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students. This failure, however, is made all the more troubling by the proofs submitted on behalf of petitioner and respondent regarding the expenditures by Board members for meals, trips, cars and flowers. Apparently, the district was aware of the need to devote more resources to such items as student materials and staff development. Certification of Daniel Gutmore, Newark Public Schools, Discrepancy Analysis of the Level III External Review at E76 (“As adequate funding becomes available from the State, the district will make every effort to provide increased materials/equipment necessary for learning”) and M40 (“The district based on availability of funds will provide more resources to staff development”). Yet, the Board members continued to expend substantial sums on themselves rather than redirecting those funds into the classrooms to directly address obvious problems in pupil performance and facilities.

In response to petitioner’s submissions regarding Board members’ expenditures, eight members of the Board submitted certifications which explained some of those expenditures. A review of the charges for meals by these Board members provide a clear example of the members’ misplaced priorities. Between March 1991 and June 1992, Board members Cruz, Mavilla, Bell, Williams, Darden and LaScala individually charged more than 70 meals in restaurants to the school district. The certifications identify the “board related matters” discussed at these meetings. These included, but by no means were limited to:

- A meeting on December 17, 1991, “concerning payment of personnel who worked at the Polls for the School Board Election,” at a cost of $157.80. Certification of Charles Bell, par. 19.
- A meeting with the Director of the Physical Education Department “on the Annual Golf Outing for the purpose of reviewing the schedule,” at a cost of $36.45. Certification of Charles Bell, par. 14.
- A meeting with six parents and a community activist to discuss “improvements needed in the district’s Special Education program”, at a cost of $237.90. Certification of Guillermina Cruz, par.5.
- A meeting with three “supervisors” to discuss the “district-wide elimination of the supervisor positions,” at a cost of $102.70. Certification of John Mavilla, par. 5.
- A meeting with a “supervisor” to discuss “the creation of Central Office Supervisors”, at a cost of $38.25. Certification of John Mavilla, par. 7.
- A meeting to discuss repairs of school facilities and Chapter II Block Grants with two principals and the Senior Executive Director of Facilities, at a cost of $154.80. Certification of John Mavilla, par. 6.
- Three meetings to discuss concerns regarding overcrowded schools -- May 11, 1991, at a cost of $167.50; January 31, 1992, at a cost of $161.80; and April 26, 1992, at a cost of $242.45. Certification of Dennis LaScala, pars. 4, 5 and 6.

- A meeting with two parents to discuss a “Parent and Teacher Meeting ...regarding bake sales and other activities that could involve parents” at a cost of $52. Certification of Evelyn Williams, par. 4.
- A meeting with two homeowners to discuss the school “Budget and how it will affect their taxes,” at a cost of $22. Certification of Evelyn Williams, par. 7.⁸

What is conspicuously absent from the Board members’ certifications is any reason why it was necessary to conduct these meetings, as well as more than sixty other meetings, at restaurants over meals paid for by the taxpayers.

The expenditures on meals for Board members combined with the other expenditures on their behalf for cars, flowers, lap-top computers, conferences and cellular phones may not appear large in comparison to the overall budget of the Newark school district. However, the comparisons drawn by petitioner between the Board members’ expenditures on themselves and the budgets for high school libraries place those expenditures in the proper perspective.

From July 1, 1989 to August 31, 1990, the district calculated Board members’ expenses as exceeding $77,000. Initial Decision at 45. The Executive Superintendent identified the budgets for high school libraries in the district for the 1989-90 school year as approximately $35,000. Initial Decision at 44. During the 1991-92 school year, the Board members spent $4,493.75 on an inaugural reception; according to the memorandum by the Executive Superintendent, only three of the district’s eight high schools had library budgets for the entire year which exceeded the expenditure on that reception. Ibid. These comparisons are particularly disturbing given the Executive Superintendent's inventory of the number of books in these libraries. According to his memorandum, as of August 26, 1991, not one of the district's high schools had the twenty books per student recommended by the American Library Association. Initial Decision at 47. In fact, only three out of eight high schools had more than 10 books per student. Ibid. Thus, a clearly identified unmet need existed in the libraries at the same time Board members were increasing expenditures on meals and flowers.⁹

⁸ It should be noted that Ms. Williams’ certification does not acknowledge the fact that this meal, or the other twenty-nine meals she individually charged to the district, were in any way related to these homeowners’ concerns about taxes.

Regardless of the Board members' motivation in expending substantial sums of money on flowers, cars, meals and conferences, I cannot ignore the fact that while the Board members were meeting with other Board members, district employees or community members over lunch and dinner, children in Newark were attending schools that were unsafe, unhealthy and underequipped. Given the students' extremely poor performance on standardized tests, Board members should have been aggressively and demonstrably focused on redirecting funds to support a concerted effort to improve student achievement, not expending resources on perquisites for Board members.

CONCLUSION

Based on the undisputed and indisputable facts in the record before me, I adopt the Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law of the ALJ as my own, for the reasons articulated herein and I conclude, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15, that the Board of Education of the City of Newark has failed to take or is unable to take the necessary corrective action to establish a thorough and efficient system of education for the students in that district. Given the district's obvious and continued failure to meet its obligations, the State must now intervene and directly assume its fundamental responsibility to provide a thorough and efficient system of education. For too many years, that constitutionally guaranteed education has been denied too many students. Therefore, I am obligated by my constitutional responsibility and statutory authority to recommend the creation of a State-operated school district in the City of Newark.

Although the creation of a State-operated school district is often referred to as a “State takeover,” I find that term to be an unfortunate and inaccurate descriptor of the role the State must seek to play. State intervention does not and cannot mean the elimination of local involvement. Community participation and support, at both the district and school levels, is essential to any effort to correct problems in the district. Parents, as well as other citizens and leaders of a community, have legitimate interests in decisions that concern the education of the community’s children. The success of schools depends in no small measure on their willingness to solicit ideas and support from members of their communities, and to respond to the legitimate hopes and expectations of parents and other citizens.

A State-operated school district administration, like any other, can succeed only by uniting major segments of the community in support of a concerted attempt to improve the education of children. Therefore, State assumption of the governance and administration of a school district must be accomplished in conjunction with a significant effort to continually inform and involve the local community.

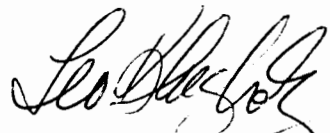

The children in Newark have been served by a failing school district for too long. It is our responsibility to these children to turn this failure into a success.

Success in a State-operated school district, or in any school district, is measured by the opportunities the schools provide to children and the results that those children achieve. The children of Newark deserve an opportunity, equal to that provided to children in other communities, to acquire the knowledge and skills they will need to flourish as citizens and workers in our society. They deserve a chance to pursue a curriculum that reflects high standards and holds forth high expectations for academic achievement. They deserve a chance to do so in safe, clean facilities that are conducive to learning. They deserve a chance to attend schools and classrooms that are adequately supplied and equipped to offer high-quality instruction in all subjects at all grade levels. Success, instead of failure, means approximately 48,000 children in Newark will have a chance to pursue their life's goals by participating to the fullest possible extent in our American society.

Finally, success in a State-operated school district can only be achieved if professionals in each school and classroom are free to provide students with the type of education they need. These professionals must be unequivocally supported in those efforts.

"After all the analyses are completed, we are still left with these students and their lives. They are not being educated. Our constitution says they must." Abbott II, supra. at 394. To meet our constitutional responsibility to the children of Newark, I am asking the State Board of Education to act expeditiously to create, through issuance of an administrative order, a State-operated school district in that city.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY	:
OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 19, 1995

For the Petitioner, Sally Ann Fields, Senior Deputy Attorney General and Kevin Marc Schatz, Deputy Attorney General (Deborah T. Poritz, Attorney General of New Jersey)

For the Respondent, Brown & Brown (Raymond M. Brown, Esq., of Counsel) and Alan Dexter Bowman, P.A. (Allan Dexter Bowman, Esq., of Counsel)

This matter is before us today on recommendation of Commissioner Leo Klagholz made pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15. As embodied in his decision, Commissioner Klagholz has determined that the school district of the City of Newark has failed to take or is unwilling to take the corrective actions necessary to establish a thorough and efficient system of education in the district. Consequently, as mandated by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15, Commissioner Klagholz is recommending that the State Board of Education exercise the authority entrusted to us by that statute to issue an administrative order directing the removal of the district board and the creation of a State-operated school district whose functions, funding and authority are defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34 et seq.

The Commissioner is making this recommendation following a long history of failure by the Newark school district to meet the educational standards established by the State to measure whether each local school district in New Jersey is minimally meeting its constitutional obligation to provide a thorough and efficient system of education to its students.

Newark's first formal evaluation took place in 1984, when the State undertook to systematically evaluate each school district in the state. Under the criteria that applied to all of New Jersey's school districts, the Newark school district failed Level I monitoring.¹ In Newark's case, the school district failed seven out of ten elements and 13 out of 51 indicators. The deficiencies identified in that report included major health and safety violations at the district's schools, student performance below required levels in State-mandated basic skills, poor student and staff member attendance, and the fact that 694 of the district's 4,422 teaching staff members were not properly certified for their assignments.

¹ We note that pursuant to the regulations under which Newark's Level I and Level II monitoring was conducted, a district's performance was required to be rated as acceptable in 40 required indicators out of a total of 51 indicators in ten categories in order for the district to be certified. See N.J.A.C. 6:8-2 et seq. (adopted 1976; readopted with amendments 1984). While failure to be rated as acceptable in the other 11 indicators would result in remediation, certification was not denied on the basis of unacceptable ratings for the 11 non-required indicators. However, a failure to be rated as acceptable for even one of the 40 required indicators meant that the district could not be certified. Id.

Under the process as then in effect, the District was directed to prepare a corrective action plan. It did so, and was authorized to proceed with the plan in March 1985.

Between August 1986 and February 1987, Level II monitoring was conducted by the Department of Education. Although the District's corrective action plan was in effect during this period, the District failed 16 out of 51 indicators in Level II, including many of the same indicators it had failed in its 1984 Level I assessment. Pupil test scores in State-mandated basic skills again failed to meet minimal State standards. A large number of dangerous conditions were identified at the District's schools, including chained exit doors, broken and missing fire extinguishers, flammables stored in boiler rooms and unsafe playground conditions. Many of the District's school buildings were in need of extensive repair and the District had no comprehensive long-range maintenance plan.

The Level II monitoring further indicated that the delivery of mandated educational programs was inconsistent with the District's approved basic skills program. Staff members were not properly certified, components of the basic skills program were not implemented in a timely fashion, substitute teachers were not employed when basic skills teachers were absent, the delivery of bilingual/ESL educational programs was inconsistent with the District's approved plan and serious deficiencies were identified in the delivery of special education programs.

Other deficiencies included a lack of operable equipment, inequitable delivery of educational services, and student attendance below required State levels. The Level II report indicated that staff absenteeism was in excess of the required State standard, and that the District had failed to properly observe and evaluate its staff as required by law.

As a result of the Level II findings, the Newark school district was directed into Level III.

In the fall of 1992, a verification review team conducted a preliminary assessment, following which Level III monitoring was conducted by the External Review Team.

At the conclusion of Level III monitoring, the District still was not meeting minimal State standards. The External Review Team concluded that there was a lack of administrative and teacher accountability, that there were no written procedures for the development, revision and/or dissemination of Board policies, and that there was a lack of mechanisms to implement those policies. The External Review Team found that organizational responsibilities and administrative procedures were neither clearly defined nor articulated, and that the Board often did not comply with its own policies and regulations related to district governance.

The External Review Team's report indicated that there was a shortage of textbooks, instructional materials and supplies, and a failure to implement recommendations made by the District's central office for changes in instruction targeted at improving performance on proficiency tests. The report found a breakdown in the transfer of student performance information from central administrative staff to the individual schools, and that teachers were not being held accountable for implementation of the curriculum alignment. Although the minimal acceptable rate of attendance was 90%, six of the District's schools continued to have attendance rates between 80 and 84 percent, and five of its schools had attendance rates below 80 percent. The District's official dropout rate for 1991-92 was reported as 7.8 percent, and the District had lost approximately 30 percent of its students during their four years of high school.

Significant health and safety violations were again identified. Most schools had exposed ceiling plumbing, electrical wires and poor heating. Many classrooms had large exposed ceiling areas and water leaks. The report found that four of the District's buildings had not been approved for use as school buildings and that 92 percent of the remaining schools had ceilings, walls or floors with holes, sags, damage or other hazards. Moreover, 75 of the District's 76 schools were unable to provide current documentation of the required annual report of the local fire official. The report found that capital expenditures had fallen far short of projected needs, and concluded that little had changed to provide any positive momentum to improve building maintenance.

On the basis of the severe deficiencies reported by the External Review Team, Commissioner Mary Lee Fitzgerald determined that extensive systemic problems existed within the Newark school district which might preclude successful implementation of a corrective plan. Accordingly, and stressing her fundamental obligation to protect and preserve the rights of the school children of New Jersey, on May 13, 1993, she initiated a Comprehensive Compliance Investigation (CCI) and expanded the Office of Auditor General.

The CCI Report was issued as required by statute. The Report indicated that, as reflected in the Level III Report, Newark continued to be deficient in a variety of major areas. In addition, the CCI Report reflected that the District's extensive systemic problems had continued and documented many areas of serious concern which had been revealed by the compliance investigation.²

Based on the results of the CCI Report, Peter B. Contini, Assistant Commissioner for the Division of Field Services filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education on July 21, 1994, alleging serious and wide ranging deficiencies in the Newark school district and requesting that Commissioner Leo Klagholz recommend to the State Board the issuance of an Administrative Order pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15.

As described by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) in his Initial Decision, the filing of the petition and accompanying Order to Show Cause signed by Commissioner Klagholz initiated proceedings before the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). A prehearing conference was conducted on October 5, 1994, and a ² We note that the CCI Report was not submitted by either party as part of the evidence in this matter. Accordingly, we are not considering the contents of the CCI in deciding the matter. However, we can not ignore that a show cause order would not have been issued had such investigation not occurred or had the results been positive.

prehearing order was issued the following day. The prehearing order specified that the issues involved in this matter were: 1) whether, as of July 22, 1994, the respondent Newark school district had failed to take or was unable to take the corrective actions necessary to establish a thorough and efficient system of education in Newark; and 2) whether the recommended administrative order creating a State-operated school district was arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious in view of the facts as of July 22, 1994.

A plenary hearing was scheduled to begin on February 27, 1995, and discovery began on the basis of the prehearing order.

In early February, petitioner filed a motion with the ALJ seeking a summary decision or, in the alternative, a ruling that it had made out a prima facie case with respect to the issues established in the prehearing order. Following the submission of briefs by both parties and oral argument, the ALJ issued his decision, granting petitioner's motion for summary decision and recommending to the Commissioner that he recommend to the State Board that it issue an administrative order establishing a State-operated school district in the City of Newark.

Commissioner Klagholz began his consideration of the ALJ's recommended decision by stressing his constitutional obligations to the students of Newark. The Commissioner concluded that the inability of the Newark school district to correct its identified deficiencies had been demonstrated throughout the various stages of the monitoring process. Finding that he had the legal authority to render a summary decision in this case, the Commissioner agreed with the ALJ that the Newark Board had failed to identify any factual disputes that were material to resolving the issues in this matter.

The Commissioner found that the only real disputes identified by the Newark Board related to the conclusions to be drawn from the facts as admitted by Newark. Following examination of those facts, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's findings of facts and conclusions of law. As summarized by the Commissioner:

Given the district's obvious and continued failure to meet its obligations, the State must now intervene and directly assume its fundamental responsibility to provide a thorough and efficient education. For too many years, that constitutionally guaranteed education has been denied too many students. Therefore, I am obligated by my constitutional responsibility and statutory authority to recommend the creation of a state-operated school district in the City of Newark.

Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 23.

On May 25, 1995, the Newark Board filed a notice of its intent to contest the Commissioner's recommendation, as provided by our regulations. N.J.A.C. 6:2-2.6. On June 9, 1995, Newark filed its written exceptions to the recommendation. Petitioner filed its response on June 16, 1995.

Newark's objections to the Commissioner's recommendation are almost entirely procedural. The lynchpin of its objections is that the recommendation follows from summary proceedings. The Newark Board contends that it is absolutely entitled to a full evidentiary hearing by the terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14 and -15. The Newark Board also maintains that the ALJ's findings were based on hearsay and are not supported by competent evidence.

In support of its position, the Newark Board lists by number the factual findings which it seeks to dispute, accompanying each number with a sentence or phrase specifying the grounds on which it is disputing the finding. Respondent's exceptions, June 8, 1995, at 24-26. Additionally, the Newark Board asserts that the Commissioner's recommendation is essentially based on test scores alone, and it points to Jersey City as countering the Commissioner's conclusion that immediate State intervention is required in Newark.

In short, it is Newark's position that:

Had a hearing been conducted as is absolutely required in the absence of a waiver, an alternative corrective action may have emerged from expert or other testimony. The educational imperialist view of the commissioner may result in colonization of school systems. History has taught that colonization leads to exploitation, subsequent rebellion and long-term struggle after liberation. Intense cooperative monitoring; replacement of clearly identified ineffective management and administration; motivation and training of qualified teachers and application of social services to socio-economically deprived students in our view will effect a more positive circumstance than state-takeover.

Newark's exceptions, June 8, 1995, at 28.

In response, petitioner reiterates that no material facts are in dispute and that issuance of an administrative order is the proper course for the State Board to follow at this juncture.

The responsibility with which we are charged is a great one, and the breadth of the accompanying power is equally great.

As set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15:

....Notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary and upon its determining that the school district is not providing a thorough and efficient system of education, the State board may direct the removal of the district board of education and the creation of a State-operated school district whose function, funding and authority are defined in P.L.1987, c. 399 (C. 18A:7A-34 et seq.)....

The only limitation which the statute places on our authority is to prohibit the creation of a State-operated school district solely on the basis of a district's failure to correct substandard facilities. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15.

The Legislature's broad grant of authority is reinforced by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34, which provides that:

Whenever the Commissioner of Education shall determine after the issuance of an administrative order that a local school district has failed to assure a thorough and efficient system of education, the State Board of Education may issue an administrative order as set forth in section 15 of P.L.1975, c. 212 (C. 18A:7A-15) which shall remove the district board of education and create a State-operated school district. The State-operated school district shall become effective immediately upon issuance of the administrative order by the State Board.

The Legislature's purpose is to maximize the ability of the State Board of Education to fulfill its delegated responsibility to insure that our Constitution's mandate for the provision of a thorough and efficient system of education is fulfilled. As we have previously stated:

The terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14 and -15 leave no doubt that these statutes and their particular provisions are components in the "interlocking whole" of the statutory fabric that insures that our constitution's mandate for the provision of a thorough and efficient education will be fulfilled. In re Trenton Bd. of Ed., 86 N.J. [327, 330 (1981)]. Quite simply, by these provisions, the Legislature has mandated that local school districts are to be held accountable for meeting their substantive obligation to provide a thorough and efficient education. Statutory provision for identification of deficiencies and remediation is aimed at insuring that deficiencies will be corrected. Viewing district performance on a progression, the statutes recognize the need for greater direction from the Commissioner and the State Department of Education where a district fails to make reasonable progress in correcting deficiencies or where conditions are such as to preclude the success of efforts at self-correction. However, at each step of the process and in every situation the over-riding statutory objective is the same: Insuring that each school district in New Jersey satisfies the standards of performance showing that it is meeting its obligation to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students, thereby achieving state certification.

McCarroll v. Board of Education of the City of Jersey City, grant of emergent relief affirmed by the State Board, December 1, 1988, slip op. at 13.

The seriousness of the Legislature's commitment to ensuring that students in failing districts receive their constitutional due is embodied in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-16, which requires the State Board of Education to seek judicial enforcement of any Administrative Order issued under N.J.S.A.

18A:7A-15 where the district board fails to or refuses to comply.

As set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-16:

Should the local board of education fail or refuse to comply with an administrative order issued pursuant to section 15 of this act, the State board shall apply to the Superior Court by a proceeding in lieu of prerogative writ for an order directing the local school board to comply with such administrative order.

See also Application of Board of Ed. of Upper Freehold Regional School Dist., 86 N.J. 265 (1981) (authority of State Board to obtain court order in proceeding in lieu of prerogative writ should not preclude application by the State Board to the Appellate Division for an order enforcing its administrative order).

In sum, by the terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15, the Legislature has entrusted the State Board of Education with the ultimate responsibility for making the educational judgment in cases of extreme failure by local authorities to fulfill their delegated responsibilities as to whether creation of a State-operated school district is the appropriate course to follow in order to correct the situation. In fulfilling this responsibility, we must be always mindful that the right of the students of our state to a thorough and efficient education is of such significance that it is enshrined in our state's Constitution. N.J. Const. Art. III, Sec. IV, Par. 1. In re Upper Freehold Reg'l School Dist., 86 N.J. 265, 272 (1981). School districts, in contrast, are creatures of statute. N.J.S.A. 18A:8-1 et seq.

The ultimate judgment with which we have been entrusted is an educational one. However, given the terms of the pertinent statutes, and the importance we place on procedural fairness, we would be remiss if we did not first carefully consider the legal objections which the Newark Board has raised in these proceedings.

We reject the contention that a full evidentiary hearing was required in this case before the Commissioner could arrive at the conclusion that the school district had either failed or was unwilling to provide a thorough and efficient education. In this, we fully concur with the Commissioner that the reference to a "plenary hearing" in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14 and -15 does not create an automatic entitlement to a full evidentiary hearing. Rather, both the terms of the statutes and the purpose for which they were enacted leave no question that the hearing that is required is one which is conducted in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act (APA) and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14(e) provides, in pertinent part:

The commissioner shall also order the local board to show cause why an administrative order, subject to the provisions of [18A:7-15] and... (C. 18A:7A-34) should not be implemented. The plenary hearing before a judge of the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to the 'Administrative Procedure Act,'... (C. 52:14B-1 et seq.), upon said order to show cause shall be conducted in the manner prescribed by [N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9].

N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 further references the "plenary hearing" but merely as a point of departure for describing the Commissioner's responsibilities after the hearing.

Thus, it is N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14(e) which establishes a district's right to a hearing when an order to show cause is issued. This provision specifically provides that the hearing is to be conducted pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 gives the Commissioner the authority to hear and determine controversies and disputes arising under the school laws. Under the implementing regulations that govern contested cases before the Commissioner, all such cases are subject to the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules of Practice, N.J.A.C. 1:1. N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.10(b). Thus, all hearings before the Commissioner under

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 et seq. must be conducted in accordance with the Administrative Procedure Act.³

The Administrative Procedure Act does not provide a substantive right to hearing, but rather prescribes the procedures to be followed when a hearing is provided for by statute. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b); N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); Spalt v. New Jersey D.E.P., 237 N.J. Super 206, 212 (App. Div. 1989) certif. den. 122 N.J. 140 (1990). The regulations implementing the APA specifically authorize an ALJ to resolve cases by summary decision when a full evidentiary hearing is not required to decide the matter. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. This procedural regulation incorporates the judicially established precept that an evidentiary hearing is not necessary when the material facts are not in dispute. Cunningham v. Dept. of Civil Service, 69 N.J. 13 (1975); Bally Mfg. Corp v. N.J. Casino Control Commission, 85 N.J. 325, 334 (1981).

Newark is mistaken. First, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-20 was enacted in 1968 to provide the Commissioner with authority to conduct hearings and subpoena witnesses. It was enacted at the same time the Legislature enacted the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. This was before the Administrative Procedure Act was enacted. The fact that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-20 provided the authority and procedures for the Commissioner to conduct hearings prior to enactment of the APA can not be read to mandate a full evidentiary hearing in this case.

When material facts are undisputed, due process does not require a full evidentiary hearing. Rather, the due process that must be afforded in such cases is that the parties must be provided with the opportunity to be heard, either orally or in writing, as to why the proposed action should not be taken. In re Solid Waste Utility Customer Lists, 106 N.J. 508, 520 (1987).

We reject Newark's contention that amendment of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-14(e) in 1987 alters this conclusion. While that amendment incorporates the language that a "plenary hearing" is required, the terms of the amendment also expressly provide that the hearing is to be conducted before an ALJ and in accordance with the APA. Thus, the amendment implements the Legislature's intent that an Administrative Law Judge, rather than the Commissioner, conduct the hearing. It does not require an evidentiary hearing to be conducted when there are no material facts in dispute.

Review of the Newark Board's arguments and independent examination of the record has eliminated any doubt as to the propriety of a summary decision in this case.

New Jersey was among the first states to make summary judgment procedures available and, consequently, the standards which the New Jersey courts apply when deciding whether to grant a summary judgment are well established. Judson v. Peoples Bank

& Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). As described by the Court, summary judgment

...is designed to provide a prompt, business-like and inexpensive method of disposing of any cause which a discriminating search of the merits in the pleadings, depositions and admissions on file, together with the affidavits submitted on the motion clearly shows not to present any genuine issue of material fact requiring disposition at a trial....

The standards of decision governing the grant or denial of a summary judgment emphasize that a party opposing a motion is not to be denied a trial unless the moving party sustains the burden of showing clearly the absence of a genuine issue of material fact....

...[I]t is the movant's burden to exclude any reasonable doubt as to the existence of any genuine issue of material fact....

Id. at 74 (citations omitted).

The summary judgment standards articulated in Judson are analogous to those which govern the granting of summary decision in proceedings involving the Office of Administrative Law. Compare N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 with R. 4:46. In both instances, the moving party has the burden of removing any doubt as to the existence of any material fact and the record must be considered in the light most favorable to the opposing party. Swarts v. Sherwin-Williams Co. 244 N.J. Super. 170, 178 (App. Div. 1990).

Summary judgment is appropriate only where the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and affidavits, if any, show that there are no genuine issues as to any material fact challenged. Kopps Inc. v. United Technologies, 223 N.J. Super. 548, 554-555 (App. Div. 1988). Answers to interrogatories which contain admissions and which were not amended can be considered admissions of fact. Unrebutted affidavits or admissions contained in answers to interrogatories may be sufficient standing alone to support the grant of summary judgment. United Rental Equipment Co. v. Aetna Life and Cas. Ins. Co., 74 N.J. 92, 100 (1977). Once the moving party has made out a prima facie case for summary judgment, the opposing party must "show by competent evidential material that a genuine issue of material fact" exists. Ziemba v. Riverview Medical Center, 275, N.J. Super. 293, 301 (App. Div. 1994). Disputes as to facts which are irrelevant or immaterial will not bar summary judgment. Johnson v. City of Hackensack, 200 N.J. Super. 185, 189 (App. Div. 1985); Ziemba v. Riverview Medical Center, supra. Also, disputes as to the conclusions to be drawn from the facts, as opposed to the facts themselves, will not defeat a summary judgment motion. Lima and Sons, Inc. v. Borough of Ramsey, 269 N.J. Super. 469, 478 (App. Div. 1994).

We reject the Newark Board's argument that summary decision should have been denied because petitioner had "failed to make full disclosure by way of discovery of significant documents essential to respondent's preparation and defense of the motion." Newark's exceptions, at 20. Our review of the record indicates that, in preparation for the scheduled hearings on the merits of the instant petition, the Newark Board filed a motion with the ALJ on February 6, 1995, requesting an adjournment of those hearings pending receipt of additional discovery.⁴ Following a telephone conference with the parties, the ALJ in a letter to the parties dated February 8, 1995, acknowledged a question regarding the relevancy of such documents to the petitioner's instant motion for summary decision and stated that "[w]ith respect to the Board's motion to compel production of documents it is my understanding that the State is making the necessary logistical arrangements to photocopy over 100,000 documents or pages of documents and to provide the same to Board counsel as soon as reasonably possible." The ALJ did not enter an order or otherwise direct the petitioner to produce such documents, as the Newark Board's papers suggest. Moreover, in a certification filed by counsel for the petitioner in response to Newark's exceptions to the Commissioner's recommendation, she avers that "[b]etween February 3, 1995 and March 15, 1995, petitioner provided respondent with copies of all of the Bates stamped documents referenced in its answers to respondent's interrogatories with the exception of approximately 100 documents which were provided on March 23, 1995." Certification of Sally Ann Fields, at 4.

The Newark Board has not specified that it is disputing any "critical facts [which] are peculiarly within the moving party's knowledge." Velantzas v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 109 N.J. 189, 193 (1988), quoting Martin v. Educational Testing Serv., Inc., 179 N.J. Super. 317, 326 (Ch. Div. 1981). Rather, the Board challenges "virtually every non-statistical fact set forth in the CCI report," Newark's exceptions, at 21, and "the interpretation and conclusions petitioner would draw from the data compiled in the report." Id. We reiterate that the CCI Report was not submitted by either party as part of the evidence in this matter and that we are not considering the contents of that report in deciding the matter. See, supra, n.2. Moreover, as indicated in United Rental Equipment Co. v. Aetna Life and Cas. Ins. Co., supra, un rebutted affidavits or the admissions contained in answers to interrogatories are sufficient standing alone to support the grant of summary decision. Accordingly, under the circumstances, we find no justification for denying petitioner's motion for summary judgment on the basis of discovery.

As set forth in the prehearing order in this case, and as we reiterated in our letter directing that oral argument be conducted, the facts material to deciding this matter are those which show whether the District is providing a thorough and efficient education and whether it has taken the corrective actions necessary to provide such an education.

As detailed in the Administrative Law Judge's initial determination, petitioner has presented much evidence that the Newark Board has failed to provide a thorough and efficient education and that it has failed to correct its deficiencies. See Initial Decision, slip op. at 13-19. In order to be entitled to an evidentiary hearing, the Newark Board must demonstrate to us by competent evidential material that a genuine issue of material fact exists as to these issues. Careful assessment of their claims fails to disclose any such dispute.

Of particular significance is the fact that Newark's submissions do not claim that the District is providing a thorough and efficient education to its students. For example, faced with a direct question at oral argument as to whether the Newark Board was currently providing a thorough and efficient education, its counsel responded by asserting only that "[t]here has not been a lawful determination of whether or not Newark is providing a thorough and efficient education to its students," Transcript of Oral Argument at Special Public Meeting of the State Board, June 21, 1995 (hereinafter "tr. 6/21/95"), at 43, and that such a determination could not properly be made in the absence of a plenary hearing. Counsel added that "it is a belief that [the Newark Board] is both capable and able to deliver and is in the process of doing so." Id. at 44.

Nor does Newark contest the fact that it has not provided a thorough and efficient education for the past decade as measured by minimal State standards. As previously discussed, the results of monitoring by the State since 1984 establish that the Newark Board has consistently failed to satisfy those standards.

Rather than litigating facts material to deciding this matter, Newark wants the opportunity to challenge the State's educational standards and to explore through litigation various other educational standards by which it would like its performance to be measured. See, for example, tr. 6/21/95, at 33 and 49. However, the District has failed to support even this effort by competent evidential materials. For example, in its answers to petitioner's interrogatories, Newark provided a list of expert witnesses upon which it indicated it would rely at hearing to support its position. That list included Robert S. Peterkin, Ed.D. However, in these proceedings, the District submitted only Dr. Peterkin's uncertified statement that Newark should be compared with "the other Great City School districts of this country, not exclusively with the other special districts of New Jersey." "Certification" of Robert S. Peterkin, at 2. He further maintains that such review should include an analysis of additional indicators published by the Council of the Great City Schools. Id. at 3.

However, the fact that other urban school districts in various parts of the country may be more educationally deficient than Newark can not be used to excuse Newark from failing to meet the minimal State standards designed to ensure that New Jersey's local school districts fulfill the constitutional responsibilities that have been delegated to them.

This failure is reflected in the performance of Newark's students on standardized tests, which was detailed in the ALJ's initial decision. The Commissioner found that Newark's test score data indicates "an utter failure by the Board to prepare its students to function as citizens and workers in society. Not only are the students failing to meet minimal State standards of performance, but they are doing so in staggeringly large degrees in both numbers and percentages." Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 4.⁵

The Newark Board attempts to counter this with the statement of its Executive Director of Accountability and Quality Assurance comparing the performance of its students against the other special needs districts. See Certification of Steven G. Block. However, even giving Newark the benefit of all reasonable inferences, we agree with the ALJ and Commissioner that the performance of its students in State-mandated basic skills is abysmal.

Again, Newark does not dispute the raw data or the accuracy of the scores that show its performance on all standardized tests is among the worst of New Jersey's special needs districts. Rather, it would like us to look at that data differently. However, even if we were to accept Newark's view that its performance should be judged by the combined number of students qualifying for Level I and Level II of the HSPT and even if we combined the results of different administrations of the test as they would like us to do, the fact remains that Newark's students are failing to meet minimal State standards of competence. This fact cannot be changed by limiting the comparison of Newark's performance to those school districts around the country which are as educationally deficient as Newark. To the contrary, were we to do so, we would be guilty of accepting educational failure.

We stress that this matter is before us as a result of the Newark school district's deficient performance which led to the issuance of an order directing the Newark Board to demonstrate why we should not establish a State-operated school district in Newark. As this agency's ultimate fact-finder in contested cases, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Tyler, 236 N.J. Super. 478 (App. Div. 1989), certif. den., 121 N.J. 615 (1990); Dore v. Redminster Tp. Bd. of Ed., 185 N.J. Super. 447, 452 (App. Div. 1982), we must answer the question of whether the school district of Newark has shown that it has met its statutory obligation to provide its students with the thorough and efficient education to which they are constitutionally entitled. Given the history of this District and its performance as demonstrated by its own submissions, no such conclusion is reasonably possible.

As previously discussed, a full evidentiary hearing is not required in this matter given the strength of petitioner's submissions, the findings of fact by the ALJ and the Commissioner, and the failure of the Newark Board, despite ample opportunity, to set forth contrary material facts. Furthermore, Newark has failed to present us with anything to suggest that a remand for further hearing would result in any conclusion other than that it has failed to provide a thorough and efficient education for over a decade.

For us to direct a remand given such circumstances would not be reasonable. Not only would such a remand be unjustified and costly, but such action would have the real potential to further compound the educational deprivation of Newark's school children. A remand is neither necessary nor warranted on this record, and, in our opinion, would be an empty exercise under these circumstances.

The nature and extent of this district's failure has long been a matter of public record. As described in detail in our decision in Gibson v. Board of Education of the City of Newark, decided by the State Board, May 6, 1986, aff'd, Dockets #A-5209-83T6 and #A-3111-84T5 (App. Div. 1986) (prior history omitted), the Newark school district has failed to function properly for decades. Despite the fact that the State has taken various approaches over the years to assist the Newark Board in addressing its problems, the record before us eliminates any question that Newark has made virtually no progress in either correcting its governance problems or improving its educational outcomes.

As detailed in Gibson, supra, the State's involvement in Newark predates the enactment of the Public School Education Act of 1975. Even at that point, the severity of Newark's problems had become so obvious that Education Commissioner Fred Burke directed an investigation and, on the basis of the outcome of that investigation, issued an administrative order directing the Newark school district to reform its organization and to adopt and implement remedial measures. The administration of the District was in such chaos at that point that Governor Brendan Byrne appointed a special agent to oversee the implementation of that order.

As a result of that intervention, the Legislature acted to establish by statute the unique administrative structure under which the Newark school system has functioned since 1975. Despite this approach and a subsequent change in governance structure from an appointed board to an elected board, Newark's administrative problems continued.

In Gibson, the Department of Education was confronted with claims made against the Newark Board by a former member of that board centering on its failure to conform the District's operations to the requirements of the statutory scheme that the Legislature had enacted to enable the District to provide a quality education to its students. Ultimately, we were called upon to consider those claims. On the basis of the record presented to us in that case, we issued a detailed opinion aimed at communicating to the Newark school district the requirements of law which it was expected to follow and its responsibilities thereunder to ensure that its students received the benefits of a thorough and efficient education. It would be denying reality were we to ignore that the record in this matter demonstrates that Newark has not corrected the serious problems we confronted in Gibson.

In short, the fact that Newark has not met the minimal educational standards set by the State for over a decade can not be disputed. We must now determine the best course to follow to insure that the situation is remedied. This involves making an educational judgment as to whether the constitutional right of the school children of Newark to a thorough and efficient education is furthered, and their educational interests best served, by ordering the creation of a State-operated school district.

Newark's failures are serious and long-standing, and even the District concedes that something must be done to address them. However, we can not ignore the fact that the District itself failed to develop and implement an effective corrective program during the last ten years. After closely examining the District's response in these proceedings, we are convinced that the Newark Board does not yet understand its obligations and can not be entrusted any longer to fulfill its delegated responsibilities.

The record is replete with glaring examples of Newark's failure to grasp its obligations and to comprehend what is required of it in order to fulfill them. One of the most telling examples is the District's response to the undisputed fact that each member of the Newark Board, as well as many of its high ranking administrators, has at least one relative on the District's payroll, and that ten of the current Executive Superintendent's relatives are employed by the District.

A detailed list of those relatives was submitted in response to petitioner's motion for summary judgment in an uncertified statement by Concette Caponegro which Newark appended to its response. According to the list submitted by Newark, two of these individuals were hired as late as 1994.

In its exceptions to us in response to the Commissioner's recommendation, Newark takes issue with the ALJ's finding with respect to its employment of relatives (finding #27) as follows:

There is no evidence in the record that any school official used his position to secure employment for family members. Further, there is no evidence that any person hired is unqualified, unfit, incompetent or has performed below standards.

Respondent's exceptions, June 8, 1995, at 25.

This is the same response the District offered to the Commissioner in its exceptions to the Administrative Law Judge's decision. Respondent's exceptions, April 28, 1995, at 26.

Newark apparently is not disturbed by the fact that it has acted to employ the relatives of school board members in significant numbers or to employ ten of its Executive Superintendent's relatives. Even assuming that no Newark official actually used his or her position to secure employment for relatives and that all the relatives who were hired were qualified, Newark is oblivious to a situation which should be causing it a great deal of concern.

The appearance created by such employment alone should be disturbing to Newark. However, even more troublesome is the District's apparent ignorance of and disregard for the requirements of law.

Until September 28, 1993, the Newark Board's policy expressly permitted its members to vote for their own relatives. Newark's list shows that this policy was still in effect when several relatives were hired in 1992 and 1993. We asked Newark about this at oral argument.

STATE BOARD MEMBER: I found one policy that was changed in 1993 that really should have been changed earlier. The School Ethics Act was passed and took effect in 1992, which prohibits the school Board member from voting on the employment and application of certain relatives, but as of 1993, the Board finally changed the policy. I was wondering if that is something that you have had problems with and if you did have a problem with the policy [committee], well, how did you rectify it....

NEWARK: ...[T]he Ethics Act was enacted in '92 but its first year of implementation was in '93. As of this date, which is one of the questions I have personally seen though I have not conducted it myself; but there's been a complete review of all the policies, the policy manuals as well as policy requirements as well as those circulars that flow from them are updated and current.

STATE BOARD MEMBER:I'd like you to look at the statute, because I think you might be wrong on the Ethics statute....

NEWARK: In terms of which aspect of it do you think we might be --

STATE BOARD MEMBER: Implementation of it. Timing of when it was to be implemented....

NEWARK: ...[I]f I read corrected, the Act became effective in April of 1992, and next school year in these kinds of determinations would have been made as '92-'93, and that's what we meant to say is that the first --

STATE BOARD MEMBER: That's what you meant to say, that's okay.

NEWARK: We thought that was clear. When the year starts in September, we meant '92, '93, I suppose.

STATE BOARD MEMBER: And you enacted it in September of '93?....

NEWARK: We believe that the -- our statement was correct. It's not artfully posed, I suppose.⁶

Tr. 6/21/95, at 39-42.

This exchange reflects how little importance Newark attaches to conforming with the requirements of the law. The record clearly shows that Newark's cavalier attitude is not limited to conformance with the School Ethics Act.

In Gibson, supra, we went to great lengths to communicate to the Newark Board the importance of conforming with the requirements of the Public Contracts Law. Nonetheless, the District subsequently lost $2,968,953 in State aid for transportation because it violated the bidding laws. In its response to petitioner's interrogatories, the District seeks to avoid responsibility by denying that any violation was willful, stating that "any failure to comply with the law was the result of inadvertence or misunderstanding relative to requirements." Answer to Interrogatory, #31. This is the same attitude the District expressed in its response to this finding in its "Discrepancy Review." Respondent's Appendix to its Response to Petitioner's Motion for Summary Decision, Volume II.

Although Newark's Executive Superintendent acknowledges the loss of this State aid in a certification seeking to use a portion of the 1993-94 fund balance, the sole concern he expresses is that he must get access to more money. Letter from Eugene Campbell to Essex County Superintendent of Schools, February 1, 1995, and undated certification of Eugene Campbell, Respondent's Appendix to its Response to Petitioner's Motion for Summary Decision, Volume IV.

Nowhere does Newark demonstrate that it recognizes its responsibility to conform with the law. For example, Executive Superintendent Campbell wrote to Commissioner Klagholz on March 17, 1995, informing the Commissioner that he could "no longer, in good conscience, permit agents and employees of your department to continue to hamper the function [sic] of the Newark School District." Id. One of Executive Superintendent Campbell's specific concerns in this letter was to "move the district forward" by proceeding with an RFP/contract for the District's "Education Reform Project." In this context, Executive Superintendent Campbell characterizes the actions by the Auditor General to insure compliance with the Public Contracts Law for the $4 million proposal as harassment and an attempt to "usurp the power of the Board to determine education policy for the district." Letter of March 17, 1995. What is missing here is any acknowledgment that compliance with the law was the District's responsibility in the first place and that it was the District's failure to do what was required of it that necessitated intervention by the Auditor General.

Seen in this context, the concern expressed by Executive Superintendent Campbell to Commissioner Klagholz as to the educational deficit the students would suffer if he could not utilize the District's surplus is disingenuous.

Newark's denial of responsibility permeates its submissions. The District's verification of the "Data Discrepancy Review" based upon the Level III External Review Monitoring Report is replete with acknowledgments that the Level III findings are accurate, in response to which the District offers only excuses for its failures to meet the criteria. What is most striking is the fact that, from the District's perspective, there was not a single failure that was caused by anything that was within the District's control. For example, the fact that the District was not in compliance with requirements to have current documentation of annual fire inspections was the Fire Department's fault, and the failure of its schools to have health certificates was the Health Department's fault. The District took no responsibility for the fact that the External Review Report found that the district had not, as required, transmitted a copy of the corrective action plan and audit synopsis to the New Jersey Department of Education because, in the District's words, "the [was] no identification of the corrective action plan of reference."

From the District's perspective, the fact that the 1991-92 annual audit reflected an unexpended authorization of $112,672,530 in capital projects was not cause for concern. The District sought to explain the situation away in its Discrepancy Review as follows:

It is noted that the 1991-92 Annual Audit reflected unexpended authorizations of one hundred twelve million dollars as of June 30, 1991. However, many contracts were still in progress as of June 30, 1991, payments of which were not reflected until after June 30, 1991. Fourteen million dollars is a more accurate assessment of what was encumbered and later expended for the period as opposed to the six million dollars reflected in the 1991-1992 audit report.

It should also be noted that priorities changed in concert with the revitalization of the city which precipitated a housing boom in certain areas of the city. This housing boom, in turn, is necessitating the immediate upgrading of existing facilities to accommodate new students as soon as possible. Originally these facilities were to be replaced rather than upgraded....

This explanation does not change the fact that the District failed to spend significant amounts on capital projects while it was supposed to be remedying serious long-term facilities problems. Nor is it consistent with the fact that, at the same time, it was complaining about lack of money.

In the same "Discrepancy Analysis" the District stated that it was in agreement with the findings of the Level III monitoring that 4 of 80 of its buildings had not been approved as school buildings based on New Jersey Department of Education standards, that 53 of 76 schools did not meet minimal criteria, and that 92% of the schools (70 of 76) had ceilings, walls or floors with holes, sags, damage, or other hazards.

From this record, it is apparent that Newark does not yet understand that there is something wrong with its approach. It is not the fact that Board members may have attended a conference in Hawaii, or eaten in a nice restaurant, or sent flowers at Board expense which in and of itself is disturbing. Rather, what is alarming is the fact that the District spends its money in this manner while budgeting lesser amounts for such items as school libraries.

The District's cavalier attitude is further reflected by its facile response to petitioner's allegation that it leases an unsafe, vermin infested building for use as a school for which it pays annual rent in excess of $175,000 and for which two Board employees receive remuneration through a conduit relationship. In its answer to petitioner's interrogatories, Newark responded that:

...the Board of Education does not lease an "unsafe, vermin infested building" for use as a school. It follows therefore, that the Board does not pay in excess of $1750,000 per year for such a facility. If the reference intended is to the Clemente Annex, it should be noted that for most years (those before 1991) payments did not exceed $175,000.

Answer to Interrogatory #30.

Another example is its answer when confronted with the allegation that it leases classroom space in a hangar at Newark Airport at $18,000 annually and employs a full-time coordinator at $54,000 annually for an Aerospace Program which shows little evidence of activity. To this allegation, Newark responded that it does lease the space at approximately $18,000 per year, but that "[s]ignificant Aerospace programs have been conducted at this location..." Answer to Interrogatory #28.

The District's denial of responsibility extends to the delivery of the District's educational programs. The District's Discrepancy Analysis views monitoring as something to which the District has been "subjected." Its answers to petitioner's interrogatories show that, in Newark's view, the District has fulfilled its responsibility to ensure that principals ensure that students have sufficient textbooks, supplies, equipment and course offerings merely by the act of directing the principals to complete annual orders, to submit emergency orders, to review mandated course offerings and to instruct administrative personnel to schedule students for appropriate courses. Answer to Interrogatory #44. Similarly, Newark feels that it has assigned and supervised staff in a manner that "facilitates effective instruction" when it has directed the principals to observe staff, review lesson plans and evaluate staff. Answer to interrogatory #43.

In response to petitioner's allegations that there was no evidence the District was providing its students with opportunities to discuss mathematics and that many teachers lack a necessary understanding of the subject to allow for instruction beyond rote memorization, Newark answered:

...[I]t is true that many of the District's teachers are finding it difficult to move away from some of our traditional practices like mere memorization of procedures or even recognizing the value of calculators and technology.

However, the need for a paradigm shift; to conceptual development, communicating mathematics, problem solving and engaging students has been the mission of the Office of Mathematics for the past five years.

There is much evidence that this reform effort has borne root in the District. Continued staff development and an increased comfort level with the new series will further enhance our teachers [sic] ability to provide a quality instructional experience for all of our teachers [sic].

Answer to Interrogatory #73.

Unfortunately, despite the promise of future improvement, the District has provided nothing to show us that there has actually been any significant improvement.

At oral argument, when the State Board asked Newark for an offer of proof in relation to statistics concerning student performance, Newark responded:

...[I]n terms of the past, from 1989 to 1993, there was progress made pursuant to reforms made in the teaching of mathematics. There were improvement in Stanford scores and improvement in HSPT9 scores with respect to math in the school district. The dynamics of that change in restructuring in terms of the math department, the specific changes in terms of compartmentalization, this emphasis on higher order thinking, retraining of teachers, needs to be developed in detail. Both as a paradigm of how we might go from here, and as evidence of how and in what way this district has been making efforts, does have that spark perhaps that Commissioner Cooperman spoke of, and also because it is relevant to the issue of how you evaluate what's being done in Newark, and whether it can be done again duplicated, expanded.

Tr. 6/21/95, at 23.

Examination of the District's math scores, however, fails to indicate that the District's approach has been successful. The kinds of "improvement" to which the District points include the fact that the percent of its students achieving minimum proficiency levels in third grade math increased from 50.9% in 1990-91 to 62.4% in 1992-93. While it is true that this represented an 11.5% increase for Newark, and was the largest percentage increase on this test by any of the special needs districts, this "improvement" merely allowed Newark to maintain its position as having the worst performance on this test of any special needs district. In point of fact, the degree by which Newark's performance was the worst of any special needs district increased from 9.3% in 1990-91 to 10.1% in 1992-93. This can not be read as a great improvement by any standard.

In sum, the Newark Board has failed its children. The undisputed evidence shows a clear and unbroken record of severe educational failure. The Newark school district is without question a prime example of dismal educational failure regardless of what test is applied. The Newark Board's responses in these proceedings show an appalling lack of understanding and appreciation of the pivotal role which a district board plays in assuring that the children who live in that district are provided with a thorough and efficient education. Given the record here and the right of the students of Newark to a constitutionally adequate education, the tired excuses and promises to do better in the future which the Newark Board is now offering us are not sufficient.

In the face of continued and glaring long-term failure, the Newark Board has responded with business as usual for too long. As both the ALJ and the Commissioner found, the responses and the behavior of the Newark Board in these proceedings has shown little or no recognition of the educational crisis in the District. In fact, the Newark Board has shown itself to be an impediment to correcting the constitutional failure in the school district. We can no longer close our eyes to this fact.

We take no pleasure in the Newark Board's failure. However, we can not countenance its continued hold on Newark's school children. We would be ignoring our own obligations if we were to allow this situation to continue any longer. Our constitutional responsibility compels us to take action to rectify the situation. Robinson v. Cahill, 62 N.J. 473 (1973); Robinson v. Cahill, 69 N.J. 478 (1976).

Given the grave educational failure in Newark, it is imperative that we delay no longer in insuring that the constitutional right of the children of the school district of Newark can be effectuated. Robinson v. Cahill, 62 N.J. 473 (1973); Robinson v. Cahill, 69 N.J. 478 (1976). We therefore direct the President of the State Board of Education to immediately execute the administrative order appended to this decision, by which we direct the removal of the district Board of Education of the City of Newark and the creation of a State-operated school district whose functions, funding and authority are defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-34 et seq.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL :
 SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION SCHOOL DISTRICT OF HIGH BRIDGE, : DECISION HUNTERDON COUNTY. :
 _____ :

The announced results of the balloting for the General Fund question of the Board of Education at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the High Bridge School District were as follows:

	FOR	AGAINST
Voting District #1 Machine Count	225	228
Voting District #1 Paper Ballot Count	10	24
Absentee Votes	24	7
TOTAL:	259	259

Pursuant to a letter request from the Board of Education dated April 25, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Hunterdon County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine and paper ballots cast for the General Fund question pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.3. The recount was conducted on May 2, 1995 at the Hunterdon County Board of Elections Voting Machine Warehouse and at the Office of the Hunterdon County Superintendent of Schools. A recount of absentee ballots was conducted, at the Board's request, by the Hunterdon County Board of Elections.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally for the General Fund question stood as follows:

	FOR	AGAINST
Voting District #1 Machine Count	225	228
Voting District #1 Paper Ballot Count	10	24
Absentee Votes	24	7
TOTAL:	259	259

In that a dual voting process was required on election day due to a malfunction of the voting machine, this election recount required counting both machine and paper ballots. As indicated by both the public counter and protective counter number of the voting machine, 588 voters cast machine ballots. Forty votes were cast using paper ballots. At the time of the recount, the sealed election packet received from the school district was opened to compare the number of voting authorities issued and voter names appearing on the poll lists to the number of ballots cast either by machine or paper ballot. There were no discrepancies in the comparison made of the protective counter, public counter, poll lists, paper ballots and voting authorities.

The Commissioner's representative found no change in the count for the General Fund question. As such, the Question remains defeated.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner determines that, as originally announced, because it does not attain a plurality of votes, the General Fund question of the Board of Education of High Bridge was defeated by the voters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-58.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Pursuant to a letter request from candidate Cliff M. Besett filed on April 25, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Ocean County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2. The recount was conducted on May 3, 1995 at the Ocean County Voting Machine Warehouse in Dover Township. Absentee ballots were recounted by the Ocean County Board of Elections pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:57-24.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood as follows:

Herman J. Geiger	1,401	60	1,461
Sam Kalmanowitz	1,328	84	1,412

The results of the machine tally changed by 5 votes less for candidate Wilson, while the results of the absentee ballot tally changed by one vote less each for candidates Beekman and Kalmanowitz. Overall, however, the outcome of the election was not altered by the recount.

Pursuant to a letter request from Raymond T. Durski dated April 19, 1995 and filed on April 21, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2. The recount was conducted on May 2, 1995 at the Edison Voting Machine Warehouse.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood unchanged, remaining as follows:

Absentee tallies on recount are as reported by the County Board of Elections. No application for a recount of absentee ballots had been made to Superior Court as of the date of the Commissioner's recheck of the voting machines.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner determines that, as originally announced at the conclusion of the election, Edward Campbell, Robert J. Kelly, Jr., and Cindy Coughlin-Zammit were elected to full terms of three years each, Patricia Olexa was elected to a two- year term, and Michael J. Felice was elected to a one-year term on the South Amboy Board of Education.

Re: Lane v. Bernardsville Board of Education
OAL Docket No: EDU 2396-93

Dear Judge Miller:

It is the position of the Bernardsville Board of Education, that this matter should be closed by way of an Initial Decision adopting the settlement, which has been fully implemented at this time. The psychiatric examination has taken place by the independent psychiatrist, and Ms. Lane has been restored to full employment within the Bernardsville school system. Accordingly, with respect to the issues raised in the petition pending before Your Honor, the settlement is a full and final disposition on all issues. I trust, therefore, that an Initial Decision will be issued so that the matter can be closed at the Commissioner's office.

If you require anything further, please feel free to contact me. Thank you very much for your attention in this matter.

Respectfully submitted,

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent and grandparent challenged Board's determination that P.M., Jr. was not legally domiciled within the Board's school district.

ALJ found that P.M., Jr.'s parents were not domiciled within the district and his grandmother, who was in the district, was not supporting him. Petitioners failed to demonstrate by a preponderance of credible evidence that P.M., Jr. was entitled to a free and appropriate education in the district. ALJ upheld action of Board seeking costs for his education for school years 1992-93 through 1994-95.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision and directed petitioners remit to Board tuition for P.M., Jr., pro-rated to the time of his ineligible attendance in the district.

BEFORE JOSEPH E. KANE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE
AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioners were notified by the Board of Education of the Greater Egg Harbor Regional High School District, Atlantic County (the Board) that P.M., Jr. could no longer attend the Absegami High School because he is not legally domiciled within the school district. Petitioners disagreed with this determination and on December 5, 1994, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A hearing was conducted at the Atlantic City OAL, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey on March 3, 1995. At that time P. M., Sr., the father of P. M., Jr. agreed with a motion made by the respondent that P. M., Sr. should be included as a party to this matter since he, rather than P. M., Jr.'s grandmother, D. W., filed the original petition with the Absegami High School. The motion was granted thus including P. M., Sr. as well as D. W. as petitioners in this matter. The record was held open until March 10, 1995 in order to permit the filing of an affidavit on behalf of the Board. A decision was rendered on March 30, 1995.

ISSUE

WHETHER PURSUANT TO THE CRITERIA SET FORTH AT N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 ET. SEQ. P. M., JR. IS LEGALLY DOMICILED WITHIN THE BOARD'S SCHOOL DISTRICT.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

P. M., Jr. is the son P. M., Sr. and R. M. D.W. is P. M., Jr.'s grandmother and resides within the Board's school district. P. M., Jr. has been attending the Absegami High School since the second semester of his freshman year. As of the date of the hearing, P. M., Jr. is a junior in his second semester.

In August, 1994, the Board notified the petitioners that in its opinion P. M., Jr. did not legally reside in its school district and thus, he was not entitled to a free education at Absegami High School.

Petitioners argue that D. W. is the legal guardian of P. M., Jr. and he has been residing with her since the Spring of 1992, in order to assist her with her disability. The Board does not disagree that D. W. is disabled, but contends instead that her disability does not serve as a legal basis under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 for P.M., Jr. to receive a free education within its district.

It is undisputed that P. M., Jr.'s parents have been divorced since April of 1992 and that both parents live outside of the Board's school district. D. W., the grandmother of P. M., Jr. lives within the Board's school district.

D. W. testified that due to a hip problem she has been disabled since the Spring of 1992. It was at that time she claims that P. M., Jr. came to reside with her in her Galloway Township apartment in order to assist her with shopping, food preparation and other daily living requirements. D. W. testified that the only income she receives is federal Social Security Supplement Income (SSI) and that she does not provide P. M., Jr. with any support. In April of 1994, her landlord advised her that if P. M., Jr. was going to reside with her he would have to be on the lease. Because of this requirement D. W. testified that P. M., Jr.'s parents turned over legal custody via a Superior Court Order to D. W. on April 6, 1994.

Both D. W. and P. M., Sr. testified that custody was not given to D. W. because P. M., Jr. could no longer reside with P. M., Sr. or because DYFS removed him from the home. According to both D. W. and P. M., Sr. legal custody was given to D. W. only so that P. M., Jr. could legally be on D. W.'s lease.

Having had an opportunity to consider the testimony of D. W. I found her to be unsure as to the amount of time that P. M., Jr. resides in her residence. She indicated at one point that he was always going back to his father's house and that when she brought this to the attention of P. M., Jr.'s mother, R. M., R. M. advised her to have the police bring him back to her residence in Galloway Township.

P. M., Sr. testified that he sometimes picks up P. M., Jr. after school on Wednesdays and returns him to D. W.'s apartment in the evening. He also indicated that he picks him up on Saturday mornings and sometimes P. M., Jr. will stay overnight into Sunday while other times he will return Saturday night and again be picked up by P. M., Sr. on Sunday morning, at which time they go to church and he is then returned to D. W.'s apartment on Sunday evening. After listening to this testimony, D. W. testified that P. M., Sr. "does not know what he is talking about", that P. M., Jr. is there with her during the whole week and sometimes goes with P. M., Sr. on weekends.

In the petition for relief filed by P. M., Sr., P. M., Sr. stated: "The reason I wanted him to attend Absegami was because there were too many gangs in my school district and I fear for his safety". P. M., Sr. claims that although that may have been a reason the primary motivation for placing him with D. W. was to help D. W. with her disability. P. M., Sr. also agreed with D. W.'s testimony that the only reason that custody was transferred by P. M., Sr. and R. M. to D. W. was because D. W.'s landlord was requiring P. M., Jr. to be on the lease. P. M., Sr. earns approximately $30,000 per year while R. M. earns approximately $18,600 per year. P. M., Sr. was unable to demonstrate whether or not he claimed P. M., Jr. as a dependent on his federal income tax since he testified that despite the fact he has been employed full time, he has not filed income tax statements since 1986.

On September 12, 1994, P. M., Sr. met with Mr. Ralph Martin, the Board Secretary and Business Administrator. In response to questions posed to P. M., Sr. by Mr. Martin, P. M., Sr. indicated that he supplies P. M., Jr. with food, clothing and funds throughout the school year. He further indicated that he claimed his son as a deduction on his federal income tax. When Mr. Martin asked why P. M., Jr. was attending Absegami High School, Mr. Martin testified that P. M., Sr. stated that he did not want his son to attend Pleasantville High School. Mr. Martin noted that during this entire meeting P. M., Sr. did not mention that he wanted P. M., Jr. to reside with D. W. to assist her with her disability.

I FIND that Mr. Martin's testimony and investigation was corroborated by a letter filed with the Board by D. W. on November 1, 1994. D. W. at that time wrote:

... They asked if I supported him and claimed him on my income taxes. I told them I was on disability and his father supports him. They denied him entrance to Absegami due to this fact. Perry is on my lease and whether they deny him entrance there, he still lives with me in Absecon due to the fact I need him to live here due to my disability and I am his legal guardian. His parents gave me the rights to be his legal guardian for these two reasons. He cannot reside in Absecon which he will be doing regardless of their decision not to let him return there and attend school in another city without paying tuition which I cannot afford. This is the long and short of this situation.

Andrea Mariner is the attendance officer for Absegami High School. At the end of the 1993/94 school year she received reports that P. M., Jr. was not attending school or was often very late. In response, Ms. Mariner testified that she went to D. W.'s apartment on at least four separate occasions when P. M., Jr. was not in school and did not find D. W. or P. M. to be at home. Finally after leaving her card at D. W.'s apartment on several occasions, D. W. called Mrs. Mariner. During this conversation which took place in the Spring of 1994, Mrs. Mariner testified that D. W. stated that she had no control over P. M., Jr. and that he was home with his father in Pleasantville.

Mrs. Mariner was charged by the Board with delivering a letter notifying P. M., Sr. and R. M. that their son could no longer attend Absegami High School. Mrs. Mariner testified that when arriving at P. M., Sr.'s home in Pleasantville, New Jersey she found two young boys present in the home. She asked them on at least two occasions if P. M., Jr. lived there to which they replied yes.

Whether a student can attend a school free of charge depends upon the criteria set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. The statute requires that education shall be provided to students free of charge in the event certain enumerated criteria are met. The burden is upon the petitioners to demonstrate by a preponderance of the credible evidence that P. M., Jr. meets all the enumerated criteria.

The statute reads in relevant part:

Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:

- a. Any person who is domiciled within the school district;
- b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child. . .

Based upon the testimony set forth above, I DO NOT FIND that the petitioners have made a prima facie showing that D. W. is supporting P. M., Jr. By her own admission which was corroborated by the statement P. M., Sr. made to Mr. Martin on September 12, 1994, P. M., Jr., although on D. W.'s lease, is being supported by P. M., Sr.

I FIND that the element of support by P. M., Sr. of P. M., Jr. is further evident in the health benefits contract submitted into evidence wherein it clearly indicates that P. M., Sr. has as one of the named beneficiaries P. M. Jr. In addition, the basis set forth in the petition for relief that P. M., Jr. attend Absegami High School because of a gang problem in the Pleasantville School District does not constitute a basis for relief under the above cited statute. It is clear from the record that P. M., Jr.'s parents are not domiciled within the school district nor was P. M., Jr. placed within the district through any action of the Division of Youth & Family Services.

In conclusion, I FIND that the petitioners have failed to demonstrate by a preponderance of the credible evidence that P. M., Jr. is entitled to a free and appropriate education within the Absegami School District. The cost for educating a student within this district was filed by Affidavit by Mr. Ralph Martin who has been the Board Secretary and Business Administrator with this district for 37 years. The cost figures were not disputed by the petitioners. According to Mr. Martin the cost of educating a student within the Absegami School District is as follows:

School Year 1992-93	$ 9,105.00 certified
School Year 1993-94	$ 8,000.00 estimated
School Year 1994-95	$ 8,500.00 estimated

Accordingly, I herein UPHOLD the action proposed by the Board.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT. :

_____ :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 22, 1995

For the Petitioner-Appellant, P.M., Sr., pro se

For the Petitioner, D.W., pro se

For the Respondent-Respondent, Louis J. Greco, Esq.

This matter was initiated in October 1994 when P.M., Sr. (hereinafter "appellant") filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education challenging the determination of the Greater Egg Harbor Regional Board of Education that his son, P.M., Jr., was not domiciled within the district and therefore not entitled to a free public education therein. See N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. Appellant claimed that his son was entitled to attend the district's schools free of charge since he resided with his grandmother, D.W., his legal guardian, within the district. By letter dated October 24, 1994 from the director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes in the Department of Education, appellant was advised that it would be necessary to amend the petition so as to include D.W. On November 7, 1994, D.W. filed her petition with the Commissioner.

During the proceedings in the Office of Administrative Law, the appellant agreed to a motion by the Board to include him as a party to this matter since he had filed the original petition. On March 30, 1995, the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") determined that petitioners had failed to establish that P.M., Jr. was entitled to a free public education in the district under the criteria of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. In particular, the ALJ found that petitioners had failed to demonstrate that D.W. supported P.M., Jr. On May 22, 1995, the Commissioner adopted the recommended decision of the ALJ.

On June 6, 1995, the appellant filed a notice of appeal to the State Board of Education.¹ On June 12, appellant was advised that his appeal was deficient in that he had failed to provide proof of service on either his adversary or the Commissioner as required by N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.6. In that appellant did not include his address in the notice, the letter was sent to his work address shown on the envelope. He was given until June 22 to cure the defect.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.11(a), appellant's brief in support of the appeal was due by June 26, 1995, 20 days after the appeal was filed. Appellant, however, failed to file a brief by that date. Nor did he cure the deficiency. By letter dated July 6, 1995, appellant was notified of his failure to file a brief in support of the appeal and advised that this matter was being referred to our Legal Committee for consideration of his failure to perfect the appeal. When appellant's home address was determined, he was again notified by letter dated August 18, 1995 of his failure to file a brief and provided with yet another opportunity to file and to correct the deficiency. He was given until September 8, 1995 to comply. Appellant, however, failed to file a brief in support of his appeal or to provide proof of service of his notice of appeal. Nor did he request an extension of time for such filing or provide any explanation for the delay.

On September 18, appellant called the State Board Appeals Office to relate that the Greater Egg Harbor Regional District had barred his son from further attendance. He also indicated that neither D.W. nor his son still resided in the district, and acknowledged that he had received our letters sent to his work address. Appellant was informed that, despite his failure to respond to the previous correspondence, he could file his argument and an affidavit as to why he had failed to respond by September 20, when the Legal Committee would be considering this matter. A letter was mailed and faxed to appellant on September 18 confirming the substance of that discussion. Appellant thereupon faxed a letter indicating that he had received the August 18 letter and didn't want to appeal this 'particular' item. Instead I wanted to keep my son in school due to senior privileges. I was told by some-one [sic] in your offices that due to the 'new' development I had to start a 'new' case. This is the reason why I didn't appeal this particular item or case from my previous appeal.

Appellant faxed another letter on September 27, again expressing concern that his son was not being permitted to attend school in the district.

In consideration of appellant's pro se status, we provided him with repeated opportunities to submit the required documents. Despite his acknowledged receipt of our letters to his home and work addresses notifying him of his failure to file an appeal brief, appellant has still failed to file a brief in support of his appeal. Nor has he corrected the deficiency in his notice of appeal by providing a proof of service. Indeed, appellant contacted us only after the district prohibited his son, who apparently no longer resides within the district, from attending school therein. Appellant's desire to pursue a new challenge to the district's action based upon "senior privileges" does not excuse his failure to comply with our regulations in pursuing the instant appeal or provide any basis for relaxing the filing requirement in this case.

The State Board of Education therefore dismisses the appeal in this matter for failure to perfect. N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.12(a).

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, defeated candidate, alleged there were irregularities and/or violations of law in the conduct of the annual school election.

ALJ concluded that while petitioner demonstrated there were irregularities in the manner in which voter absentee ballots were applied for, petitioner did not show that any of the contested absentee ballots were cast or those that were cast were cast improperly. Moreover, ALJ found that petitioner failed to show, by parol evidence, that any affiant not qualified to vote did, in fact, cast a ballot at the election. ALJ did find that the Board failed to provide poll lists at the polling places in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-48. ALJ admonished the Board to comport to the School Election Laws. However, since petitioner failed to show that the will of the electorate was thwarted, petition was dismissed and the results of the election, pursuant to recount, were ordered to stand.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision, emphasizing the admonition to the Board to comply with School Election Laws.

Decided: April 13, 1995

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Two letter complaints dated April 27, 1994, were filed by John P. Dollard and Lillian Waters, defeated candidates for membership on the Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City (Board), alleging irregularities in the conduct of the annual school election held on April 19, 1994. Petitioners requests that the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) conduct a recount of the ballots cast at the election and convene an inquiry into the alleged election irregularities.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on May 11, 1994, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. In the transmission to the OAL, the Commissioner requested that the matter be given priority scheduling.

On May 16, 1995, the Commissioner issued his Decision with respect to petitioners' request for a recount of the election results of the annual school election held on April 19, 1994. The representatives of the Atlantic County Superintendent of Schools found that although there were some minor changes [in the results of the balloting], the names of the three winning candidates remained the same as those derived from the balloting of April 19, 1994. The Commissioner, therefore, accepted the representatives recommendation that the results announced at the conclusion of the election remain unaltered. (Commissioner Decision, May 16, 1994, slip op. at p.2).

This matter was originally scheduled for hearing on July 5, 1994, John West, Esquire, appearing for petitioner Dollard. On July 5, 1994, Mr. West requested an adjournment of the hearing asserting that there were problems with discovery. The Board did not object and the hearing was adjourned and rescheduled to be heard on August 2, 1994.

On August 1, 1994, petitioner requested an adjournment of the August 2, 1994, hearing asserting that Mr. West's parents had passed away and that his attorney was not available for the hearing. Petitioner also represented that he would retain substitute counsel.

On August 26, 1994, this tribunal was advised that petitioner Dollard had retained Louis P. McFadden, Jr., Esquire, as his legal counsel in substitution for John C. West, III. The instant matter was scheduled to be heard on October 21, 1994. However, on October 4, 1994, this tribunal was advised that Mr. McFadden was scheduled to be out of the State of New Jersey and, therefore, would not be available for the hearing scheduled for October 21, 1994. All parties agreed to an adjournment.

On October 20, 1994, this tribunal initiated a conference call to advise the parties that the matter must move forward as soon as possible. This tribunal learned that Patrick Casey, Esquire, would be substitute counsel for Mr. McFadden who would act as co-counsel. The parties were advised that this matter was getting stale and that the decision had the possibility of running into the 1995 school election scheduled for April 18, 1995. The only date available to all of the parties was January 3, 1995, therefore, the hearing was scheduled for that date.

On December 29, 1994, this tribunal was advised that there was an attorney conflict for the January 3, 1995 hearing date. All parties agreed to adjourn the hearing date.

The matter was rescheduled for and heard on February 27, 1995, at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The hearing record closed on February 27, 1995.

TESTIMONIAL AND DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Victoria Sumbillo, who as resided at 1508 Bellfield Street, Atlantic City, since 1988, was called by petitioners to testify. Ms. Sumbillo is in the business of providing writing and clerical service for others as an independent contractor. She is not a United States citizen and is not registered to vote. She asserts she is not a paid political consultant.

Ms. Sumbillo testified that in April 1994, she personally registered more than 100 individuals for voter absentee ballots. She visited and registered absentee voters in the King David Nursing Home, Ocean Side Convalescent Center, Eastern Pines Nursing Home, Seashore Gardens Nursing Home, Caring, a day care center, Upper Rise condominium, Lower Rise condominium, New York Avenue Apartments and the Ritz Condominium.

Ms. Sumbillo testified she registered more than 100 individuals for absentee ballots at King David in three days of visits. At Eastern Pines, she spent two days but could not recall how many voters she had registered. She asserted she visited the patients at Eastern Pines with the director of the facility. She admitted that some of the applications for absentee ballots were completed in her handwriting and that she witnessed all of the applicants sign their respective applications.

Mr. Sumbillo testified she met with individual patients at the Seashore Gardens where she personally completed 30 applications for voter absentee ballots. She spent three days registering absentee voters, who were patients at the Caring Day Care Center. Similarly, she devoted three days registering 100 plus absentee voters at the Upper Rise Condo.

Ms. Sumbillo testified that she was not paid to register absentee voters. Rather, she asserted she performed the service on a strictly voluntary basis. She stated she never discussed candidates running for election with the patients she registered. She further testified she personally sent the voter absentee ballot applications to the Atlantic County Board of Elections through the United States Post Office at her own expense.

Ms. Sumbillo testified that Henry Geiger signed the Civilian Absentee Ballot Application in her presence for the election to be held on April 19, 1994. (P-2) Ms. Sumbillo could not explain how Mr. Geiger's death was recorded as July 2, 1993, pursuant to the Certified Death Certificate, dated February 15, 1995. (P-3)

A Civilian Absentee Ballot Application for Eugene Tillman was completed in Ms. Sumbillo's handwriting for the school election to be held on April 19, 1994 (P-4). Ms. Sumbillo could not explain the Certified Death Certificate for Mr. Eugene Henry Tillman which demonstrated that his death occurred on December 19, 1993. (P-5)

The record shows that Ms. Sumbillo executed Civilian Absentee Ballot Application for: Madeline H. Rowley who died January 4, 1994, (P-7); Charles Boyce who died September 2, 1993 (P-9); Charles Clifton Everett, Sr., who died September 8, 1993 (P-11); and, James Franklin Brown who died December 31, 1993 (P-12).

Ms. Sumbillo testified that she encountered no problems in gaining access to patients at the various nursing homes and convalescence centers. In fact, she asserted, she was provided a table and space with which to work with the patients at some of the facilities. She stated that when she arrived at each of the facilities, the director of the facility would announce Ms. Sumbillo's presence and those who wanted to vote by absentee ballot were registered to vote.

Miriam Newlon, Director of Social Services for the Oceanside Convalescence Home (Oceanside), testified for petitioner. Ms. Newlon testified that in the Spring of 1994 she had contact with Ms. Sumbillo who was working for a political candidate interested in running for the position of mayor of Atlantic City. Ms. Sumbillo telephoned Ms. Newlon and asked if she could bring three men running for seats on the Atlantic City Board of Education to Oceanside. Ms. Newlon told Ms. Sumbillo that it would be a waste of time to do so. Despite Ms. Newlon's statement, Ms. Sumbillo arrived at Oceanside with three men running as a team in support of the Atlantic City Superintendent of Schools. After their arrival, Ms. Newlon again told the visitors that it would be a waste of their time to talk with the patients at Oceanside. Ms. Sumbill and the

In April 1994, Oceanside had 95 resident patients in the facility, 25 of whom were not competent. Ms. Newlon asserted that Ms. Sumbillo was not permitted to register the patients for voter absentee ballots. However, on one day prior to April 1994, Ms. Sumbillo managed to get into the facility, without Ms. Newlon's knowledge. Ms. Sumbillo had telephoned the facility approximately ten times prior to the April election seeking permission to register the patients for absentee ballots. Ms. Sumbillo arrived at Oceanside on three occasions, however, Ms. Newlon blocked Ms. Sumbillo from going onto the patient floors.

Ms. Newlon testified that prior to the April 1994 school election, she received a call from the Oceanside receptionist who told Ms. Newlon that Ms. Sumbillo was in the facility. Ms. Newlon asserted that Ms. Sumbillo appeared at Ms. Newlon's second floor office and handed Ms. Newlon an envelope. The envelope contained a $100 gift certificate for Macy's Department Store. Ms. Newlon got to Ms. Sumbillo before Ms. Sumbillo left the facility and returned the envelope to her. Thereafter, Ms. Newlon telephoned the Atlantic County Board of Elections to report the incident.

Ms. Newlon testified that she did not assist Ms. Sumbillo in completing any applications for absentee voter ballots. Nor did she provide Ms. Sumbillo with a table or room in which to register Oceanside patients for absentee voter ballots. Ms. Sumbillo was not permitted by Ms. Newlon to go to the patients floors. She did not know how Ms. Sumbillo had made her way onto the patients floor nor how long she was there before she left.

Ms. Newlon testified that Ms. Sumbillo asserted she had completed an absentee voter ballot application for Madeline Rowley when Ms. Sumbillo visited Oceanside in April 1994. Ms. Newlon contended, however, that Ms. Rowley was deceased on January 6, 1994. (P-7)

Charles Hawn, Jr., Atlantic City Board of Education Secretary and School Business Administrator, was called by petitioner who testified, among other things, that he was in charge of the Board's annual school election. Mr. Hawn asserted that he caused to be published, the notice of the annual school election and the notice for civilian and military absentee ballots. He stated that 500 absentee ballots were printed and sent to the Atlantic County Board of Elections.

The Board Secretary testified that election signature registers were delivered to each of the school election polling places. He asserted that the poll workers were instructed as to the procedure to follow during the election; i.e., that the poll list prepared and delivered to the polling place was to be compared with the individual voter signature. The poll list became the voters authorization to vote.

With respect to affidavit votes, Mr. Hawn testified that the statutory provisions were followed by the poll workers (N.J.S.A. 18A:14-51.3 incorporating N.J.S.A. 19:32-10). After the election, it was brought to Mr. Hawn's attention that certain people who voted by affidavit were not authorized to vote. Mr. Hawn testified that the Regular/Combined Statement of the Results of the School Election would not alter the results if the absentee ballots case were eliminated. (R-1) He admitted, however, that R-1 in evidence did not breakdown the affidavit votes which were cast. He contended that persons names who cast an affidavit vote were to be checked against the poll list.

Mr. Hawn asserted that the polling places for the annual school election were not the same polling places for the municipal election or the general election. He conceded that it was possible for a voter who voted by affidavit to also vote at the regular polling place.

Mr. Hawn testified that in the Third Ward, where there were 239 registered voters, 42 affidavit votes were cast. By comparison, the Second District, with 700 plus registered voters, no affidavit votes were cast. Mr. Hawn asserted that there was no way of knowing for which candidates the affidavit voters cast their votes.

Lillian F. Waters, a petitioner-complainant in this matter testified that she did not observe any irregularities at the polling place during the election held on April 19, 1994. She was a candidate for a seat on the Board and was defeated by 532 votes.

Ms. Waters based her complaint of voting irregularities upon hearsay statements made by Catherine Hunter, who was not available to testify due to illness. Ms. Waters testified that Ms. Hunter had suffered a stroke and was hospitalized at the time of the hearing.

Rosemary Devine, Director of Recreation and Volunteer Services at Seashore Gardens, testified on behalf of petitioner Dollard. She had daily contact with the 180 to 200 patients who reside at Seashore Gardens. She stated that prior to each election, candidates for elected office would call her to request permission to visit the facility and handout campaign literature to the residents. Ms. Devine stated that Seashore Gardens has a policy which requires that each candidate bring a computer printout of the registered voters residing at the facility.

In 1994, Ms. Sumbillo visited Seashore Gardens on one or two occasions and was instructed to bring the registered voters list in order that Ms. Devine could cross out the names of patients who had died or were incompetent. Ms. Sumbillo was aware of the Seashore Gardens policy but, Ms. Devine asserted, Ms. Sumbillo attempted to get around the policy when she visited the facility.

Ms. Devine testified that Ms. Sumbillo was alone when she visited Seashore Gardens and did not appear to represent any candidate. Ms. Sumbillo was always accompanied by a Seashore staff member when she visited the patients to apply for absentee ballots. Subsequent to the patients application for absentee ballots, the ballots were delivered directly to the patients. Ms. Devine contended that the Seashore Gardens staff members did not sign the patients absentee applications or ballots.

Ms. Devine testified she did not know how many Seashore Gardens residents requested absentee ballots. Nor did she know whether the patients voted or for whom they voted.

Ms. Devine asserted that Henry Geiger was a former patient at Seashore Gardens. The record shows that his Civilian Absentee Ballot Application was received by Atlantic County (presumably the Board of Elections) on March 23, 1994 (P-2). Ms. Devine contended that Mr. Geiger could not have voted in the April 19, 1994, school election because he died on July 2, 1993 (P-3).

Barbara Cohler, Assistant Director of Recreation at Seashore Gardens, testified that she had come in contact with Ms. Sumbillo several times prior to the 1994 school election. Ms. Cohler asserted that she was with Ms. Sumbillo at all times during Sumbillo's visit at Seashore Gardens. Ms. Cohler would take Ms. Sumbillo up to the patients floor and was present when Ms. Sumbillo presented or helped a patient complete the absentee ballot application. Ms. Cohler asserted that Ms. Sumbillo took the absentee ballots with her when she left the facility. Subsequently, Ms. Sumbillo would return to Seashore Gardens with the absentee ballot and provide it to the patient. Again Ms. Cohler was present with Ms. Sumbillo.

Ms. Cohler asserted that at times, Ms. Sumbillo would attempt to register incompetent patients. Ms. Sumbillo was unsuccessful because Ms. Cohler or Ms. Devine prevented Sumbillo from registering the incompetent patients.

Ms. Cohler testified that Ms. Sumbillo never attempted to campaign for any candidates when she registered or delivered the absentee ballots to patients. Both Ms. Cohler and Ms. Devine testified that Ms. Sumbillo never offered them money or gifts to register the patients at Seashore Gardens.

Betsy Ann Bartholomew, an investigator with the Atlantic County Prosecutor's Office, testified she was involved in an investigation of Victoria Sumbillo. The Prosecutor's Office had received information that absentee ballot applications had been forged by Ms. Sumbillo which caused Sergeant Bartholomew to interview Ms. Sumbillo at Sumbillo's home.

Initially, Ms. Sumbillo told the Investigator that she was not working for any candidate for elective office. Ms. Sumbillo then stated, however, that she had worked for individuals named Wheland (Mayor of Atlantic City), Cooper (Dolores Cooper, former New Jersey Assembly member), Tom Russo, Mike Toland, Dobison and Fauntleroy (candidates for the Atlantic City Board of Education).

Sergeant Bartholomew found uncompleted absentee voter applications on Ms. Sumbillo's desk. Ms. Sumbillo told the Investigator that the applications had been signed sometime before by the individuals requesting voter absentee ballots. Ms. Sumbillo explained that she had gone to several nursing homes and condominiums to have individuals apply for voter absentee ballots.

The Atlantic County Clerk advised the Atlantic County Prosecutor's Office that the reason for the requested Civilian Absentee Ballot Applications, as stated, by Ms. Sumbillo, was that the individual applicant was disabled. The Atlantic County Clerk checked on one individual absentee ballot application and determined that the individual who claimed to be disabled was at work. Ms. Sumbillo had no explanation for this finding.

Sergeant Bartholomew advised Ms. Sumbillo that eight individuals who had applied for absentee ballots, were all dead. Ms. Sumbillo responded that no one had told her the individuals had died. Ms. Sumbillo admitted to the Investigator that she would have an applicant sign more than one application for an absentee ballot.

Sergeant Bartholomew testified that she visited Altman Terrace and spoke with the manager of the facility who stated that Ms. Sumbillo had set up a table and registered many of its residents to vote. Sergeant Bartholomew spoke with Teresa Hanson, a woman 92 years of age. Sergeant Bartholomew observed Ms. Hanson's absentee voter application on Ms. Sumbillo's desk when she had visited Sumbillo. The Investigator asked Ms. Hanson if she recalled the application. Ms. Hanson replied that she did not recall such an application and asserted that she had never voted in her lifetime. Ms. Hanson had difficulty with her eyesight. Therefore, she could not state whether the signature on the application Sergeant Bartholomew offered her was her signature.

George Drozdowski, a representative of the Department of Education, Atlantic County and Cape May County Superintendent's offices, testified, among other things, that he was familiar with the election law provisions under Title 18A, Education. He asserted that he reviewed the voter Affidavit Forms of the 13 voting districts in the Board's annual school election. He asserted that an affidavit voter must execute a sworn statement which is witnessed by an election worker or a notary. He asserted that the Affidavit Form of Juan J. Shepperson (P-20) was not signed by the voter. The Board's counsel stipulated that the remaining Affidavit forms were not properly processed. (P-20)

John P. Dollard, petitioner-complaint, testified that he was one of a total of eight candidates for a seat on the Board at the April 19, 1994, annual school election. There were three seats to be filled at the election. Mr. Dollard placed in the fourth position, 47 votes behind the individual who was the third highest vote tally.

Mr. Dollard testified that where a voters name did not appear in the voter registration book, that individual was permitted to vote by affidavit. He asserted that the affidavit was to be witnessed by a poll worker. He further asserted that there were no poll lists provided to the poll workers nor were the voters permitted to sign the voter registration book.

Mr. Dollard personally inspected the voter Affidavit Forms (P-20) to determine whether or not the affiant was a registered voter. He contended that the prospective voter was required to register with the Atlantic County Board of Elections 30 days prior to the annual school election held on April 19, 1994. Subsequent to his inspection of the Affidavit Forms Mr. Dollard determined that some of the affidavit voters were not registered to vote. (P-20)

Mr. Dollard testified that five affidavit voters who voted in District No. 2, were either not registered voters or failed to sign the affidavit. With regard to District No. 5, he asserted there were eight affidavit voters who were not registered and that two of the individuals also voted by absentee ballot.

Mr. Dollard asserted there were three affidavit voters in District No. 6, who were not registered to vote. Similarly, there were five affidavit voters in District No. 3, who were not registered to vote in the annual school election.

On cross-examination Mr. Dollard testified that 47 votes at the polls separated him from the third place candidate. Mr. Dollard admitted that he received 38 absentee votes while the third place candidate received 54 absentee ballots. Therefore, there were 63 total number of votes cast which separated Mr. Dollard from the third place and successful candidate for a seat on the Board.

Mr. Dollard testified that Bertha Boone and Billy Hall voted by way of absentee ballot and affidavit, yet neither individual was a registered voter. Mr. Dollard admitted that it was the Atlantic County Board of Elections which determined whether an individual is a registered voter. He admitted, further, that it was the Board of Elections which sent both individuals absentee ballots. Mr. Dollard further asserted that he did not know who the improperly affidavit or absentee voters voted for.

Mr. Dollard testified that as a result of the Board of Elections recount of the absentee ballots, neither his absentee total votes changed nor did the tally of the third place candidate.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the testimony and other evidence adduced at the hearing, and having given fair weight thereto, I FIND the following FACTS and arrive at the following CONCLUSIONS:

Ms. Sumbillo's testimony that she volunteered her time to provide absentee ballot applications to senior citizens and disabled individuals was compromised by her admission to Sergeant Bartholomew that she had, in fact, worked for individuals seeking public elective office. Her testimony before this tribunal was that she did not work for any candidate, while she admitted to Sergeant Bartholomew that she had, in fact, worked for candidates seeking seats on the Board, as well as other political candidates.

The fact that Civilian Absence Ballot Applications for the April 9, 1994, annual school elections were completed with Ms. Sumbillo's admitted aid and direction of individuals who were deceased prior to the application raises the issue as to her credibility. A case in point is the absentee ballot application of Henry Geiger for the April 19, 1994, annual school election, which was received by the Atlantic County Board of Elections on March 23, 1994 (P-2). The death certificate for Henry Geiger, who resided at Seashore Gardens, Atlantic City, demonstrates that he died on July 2, 1993. (P-3). Similar irregularities involved applications and death certificates for Eugene Henry Tillman (P-4, P-5), James Franklin Brown (P-10, P-12), Charles Clifton Everett, Sr. (P-10, P-11), among others, who were registered to vote by absentee ballot for the April 19, 1994, annual school election after their respective deaths. There was no showing however, that any absentee votes were cast in the names of the deceased.

The record also demonstrates that there were irregularities with the affidavit votes at the annual school election. At least 30 votes were cast by affidavit vote by individuals who were either not registered to vote or, did not sign the affidavit.

Petitioner-complainant alleges that there were no poll lists at the polling places for the annual school election held on April 19, 1994. If true, the Board was clearly in violation of the School Election Laws, specifically N.J.S.A. 18A:14-48.

I CONCLUDE that while petitioner-complainant demonstrated there were irregularities in the manner in which voter absentee ballots were applied for, I FIND that petitioner did not show that any of the contested absentee ballots were cast or those that were cast were cast improperly. The statute, under N.J.S.A. 19:57-12, requires the Atlantic County Clerk to keep a list of requests for absentee ballots and show the disposition of each request. This list was available to petitioner-complainant pursuant to law, however, he did not produce it at the hearing to support his claim that irregular or illegal absentee ballots were cast in the annual school election.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner demonstrated that Affidavit Forms were executed by individuals not registered to vote at the April 19, 1994, annual school election or, were improperly completed by the affiant. I FIND that petitioner-complainant, however, failed to show, by parol evidence, that any affiant not qualified to vote did, in fact, cast a ballot at the annual school election held on April 19, 1994.

The statute at N.J.S.A. 18A:14-48 provides as follows:

The board of education shall provide, and one of the election officers, designated by the judge of election, and acting, as clerk of the election shall keep at each polling place, for each school election, a poll list arranged in a column or columns appropriately headed so as to indicate the election, the date thereof, and the school district and election district in which the same is used, in such manner that each voter voting in the polling place at the election may sign his name and state his address therein and the number of his official ballot may be indicated opposite the signature. (Emphasis added).

Petitioner-complainant alleges, without contradiction, that poll lists were not available at the polling places for the Board's annual school election. I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Board's failure to provide such poll lists was a violation of the statute.

There is little question that voting irregularities occurred with the Board's annual school election held on April 19, 1994. As the Commissioner said In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of the Township of Bedminster, Somerset, County, 1976 S.L.D. 438, 441:

While the Commissioner cannot condone irregularities which occur during an annual school election, he finds nothing in the record before him which would lead to a conclusion that the circumstances of the irregularity resulted in the will of the voters being thwarted. All qualified citizens possess the right to participate fully in the electoral process, but not one has the right to act in a manner contrary to the letter and intent of statutory prescription.

I too find nothing in this record to conclude that the circumstances of the irregularities resulted in the will of the voters being thwarted. However, the Commissioner and courts have steadfastly held that a strict and meticulous observance of the school election laws is required. The Commissioner has cautioned local boards of education and, most particularly, the members of the election board to give scrupulous attention to and conform with the statutes governing school elections. See: In the Matter of the School Election Held in the Township of Pittsgrove, Salem County, 1976 S.L.D. 585, 589. We repeat the Commissioners' admonition here and caution the Atlantic City Board of Education to comport to the School Election Laws.

It is well established that an election will be given effect and will not be set aside unless it is shown that the will of the people was thwarted, was not fairly expressed, or could not properly be determined. Love v. Board of Chosen Freeholders, 35 N.J.L. 269 (Sup. Ct. 1871); Petition of Clee, 119 N.J.L. 310 (Sup.Ct. 1938); Application of Wene, 26 N.J. Super. 363 (Law Div. 1953), aff'd 13 N.J. 185 (1953). Petitioner-complainant has failed to make such a showing.

ORDER

Accordingly, the results, pursuant to the recount, of the annual school election held on April 19, 1994, for seats on the Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City shall stand and the herein Complaint DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BEFORE DIANA C. SUKOVICH, ALJ

On March 7, 1995, the Board of Education of the Bergen County Special Services School District (petitioner) filed a petition for emergent relief with the Department of Education (Department) pertaining to a controversy which had arisen between petitioner and the County of Bergen (respondent) and William "Pat" Schuber (respondent), the Bergen County Executive. The Department transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on March 9, 1995 for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Several telephone conferences were conducted, and various hearing dates were adjourned at the request of the parties, pending efforts to achieve a resolution of the matter. An executed Stipulation of Settlement was filed on April 10, 1995, on which date the record was closed.

Petitioner contested letters dated February 16, 1995 from the County Executive to five of the six trustees of petitioner, rescinding their respective appointments as board members. The Stipulation of Settlement provides that respondents agree to rescind the removal letters and, with certain specifications, to not seek the removal of the individuals in question from serving on the Board of Education of the Bergen County Special Services School District prior to the expiration of their current terms. Petitioner agrees to certain conditions and limitations on its actions. Attached herewith is a copy of the Stipulation of Settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of the settlement and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures and the signatures of their representatives.
2. The settlement fully disposes of all the issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

 SOMERSET COUNTY, :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, prospective bidder, challenged bid specification requiring bidders to presently be providing maintenance, custodial and grounds management services for at least four New Jersey public schools.

ALJ concluded that the Board did have a reasonable basis for imposing the requirement -- to enable it to properly assess the ability of prospective bidders to serve what it views as legal and practical intricacies unique to New Jersey school districts. Motion for emergent relief was denied.

After reviewing ALJ's order on motion, Commissioner determined that the ALJ had addressed and made determinations with respect to petitioner's underlying claim and prayer for relief in this matter, obviating the need for further proceedings in this matter. Parties were notified Commissioner would be reviewing entire matter as an initial decision and parties were provided the usual exception and reply exception period. Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own, noting a board's reasonable exercise of its discretion is entitled to a presumption of validity absent the establishment by a challenger that such action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Palamar Construction Inc. Commissioner concurred with ALJ's denial of emergent relief and Petition of Appeal was dismissed.

Record Closed: April 12, 1995

Decided: April 13, 1995

BEFORE KATHRYN A. CLARK, ALJ:

This matter was opened by the petitioner, Harry A. Stroh Associates, Inc., on application for an Order granting emergent relief, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The relief sought requests a stay in the opening of bids returnable Thursday, April 13, 1995 at 10:00 a.m. for the awarding of a contract for the maintenance, custodial and grounds management services by respondent, Hillsborough Township Board of Education, or, in the alternative, an order temporarily restraining respondent from awarding a contract for such services until a final order is entered by the Commissioner of the Department of Education.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed his appeal, including an application for emergent relief and stay of Board action, on April 10, 1995 with the Commissioner of the Department of Education. On the same day, the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Oral argument on the motion for emergent relief was heard on April 12, 1995, at the Office of Administrative Law, Quakerbridge Road, Hamilton, New Jersey, and a brief oral decision was rendered at the close of oral argument. The Administrative Law Judge said that she would set forth her reasoning at length in writing, but did not wish to delay preparations for the opening of the bids, scheduled for the next morning.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The current maintenance, custodial and grounds management services contract for the Hillsborough Township Board of Education (Board), now held by Service Master, is due to expire on June 30, 1995. In anticipation of letting a new contract, the Board discussed the conditions it wanted to have met, and initially determined that bidders would be required to be current providers of such services to at least ten (10) New Jersey public school districts, and that at least three of those districts had to be of comparable size to the Hillsborough Township School District. In later discussions, the Board decided to reduce the number of New Jersey public school districts required to be served at the present time and to eliminate the size requirement, so as to attract a larger pool of bidders.

Ultimately, in January, 1995, the Board of Education advertised for bids, which required the bidders to be providing services at the present time to at least four (4) New Jersey public school districts. The Board determined this condition to be both material and non-waivable. Two bids were received one from ServiceMaster and one from petitioner. Both bidders were pre-qualified by the Division of Building Construction, Department of the Treasury (DBC). Both bids were opened on February 16, 1995. Petitioner's was the lower bid.

Upon initial review, the ServiceMaster bid was rejected as being too high, and petitioner's bid was rejected for failure to meet the requirement for the current provision of services to at least four New Jersey public school districts. The Board, at its meeting of March 13, 1995, decided to reject both bids, as it is allowed to do under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5(d) and N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-22. The possibility of the District providing its own services, in-house, was considered, but the Board decided instead to advertise a second time. The previous bidders were advised of both the rejection of the first set of bids (although no reason was given for rejection) and of the re-advertisement. The second advertisement contained the same requirement as the first advertisement, that the prospective contractor be providing services at the present time to at least four (4) New Jersey public school districts. The same two entities, ServiceMaster and petitioner, are again the only bidders. The bids are due to be opened April 13, 1995.

Petitioner states that it provides services to some 500 school districts worldwide. Petitioner said that it is now providing services to two (2) New Jersey public school districts and that over the years, it has served 16 New Jersey school districts. Petitioner did not challenge the bid specifications prior to the opening of the first set of bids. Petitioner is now challenging the bid specifications prior to the opening of the second set of bids

The fact that this contract has been re-advertised allows petitioner to raise a challenge, whereas petitioner did not do so before the opening of the first set of bids, and could not do so after the bids were opened.

Petitioner now argues that the bid specification of providing services to at least four (4) New Jersey public school districts is invalid, and that it will be irreparably harmed if the April bids are opened.

It is well-settled that a school district may add additional criteria to a bid advertisement. Michael T. Gavan, Inc., v. Board of Education of the Township of Lakewood, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 307 .

The granting of emergent relief is an extraordinary remedy which can only be awarded based upon a showing that irreparable harm will result if it is not granted, and a further showing that there is a likelihood of success on the merits. See, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6.

The criteria for determination of an application for emergent relief have been set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982). Four standards are articulated:

1. The relief should not be granted unless it is necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be adequately redressed by monetary damages.
2. Such relief should not be granted when the legal rights underlying the claim are unsettled.
3. In order to prevail on an application for temporary relief, a party must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits.
4. The relative hardship of the parties in granting or denying the relief sought should be considered.

The question is whether the additional requirement is fair and reasonable? Was it established to exclude petitioner unjustly? Does the Board have a reasonable basis for the requirement? Bil Jim Construction Co., Inc. v. Manchester Bd. of Ed., 236 N.J. Super., 603, 607 (App. Div. 1989).

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Board does have a reasonable basis for imposing such a requirement. The Board should be given enough information so as to assure itself that the eventual provider of the services is reputable, financially sound, and able to carry out the terms and conditions of the contract, and if the Board so chooses to elicit this information by checking with four school districts now served by the bidders, it is acting reasonably and is justified in doing so. Additionally, the Board's requirement that the four school districts be New Jersey school districts is valid and justifiable, as there are some provisions New Jersey school districts must meet that are unlike provisions in other states. Respondent, in his letter brief, mentions the "Right to Know" law as an example.

On the issue of irreparable harm, petitioner claims that respondent is not without a remedy if the bids cannot be opened tomorrow, because the respondent has the right to enter into a contract on an emergency basis, under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-7. Respondent rightly wonders who might be enticed to enter into such a contract, and this tribunal wonders what might be the circumstances and the costs under which another provider of such services would agree to be the “emergency” contractor. The greater hardship will be on the respondent, if it cannot sign a new contract before the expiration of the old one.

In Gavan v. Lakewood (supra), ALJ Campbell defined irreparable injury as “substantial injury to a material degree coupled with the inadequacy of money damages,” citing Judice’s Sunshine Pontiac, Inc. v. General Motors, Inc., 418 F. Supp. 1212 (D. N.J. 1976) and John Tully v. Mott Supermarkets, Inc., 337 418 F. Supp. 834 (D. N.J. 1972). This tribunal’s learned colleague concluded in that case which involved a challenge to an award of a contract because the school district required qualification statements in addition to the DBC qualification affidavits, that petitioner has shown that money damages are not available to it, but there had been no showing of “substantial injury to a material degree.” The petitioner in Gavan, and in this matter as well, will simply have lost out in an attempt to secure a contract, a risk that it presumably takes as a part of the routine functioning of its business. That does not fully satisfy the requirement of irreparable harm.

Additionally, petitioner states that the public interest is furthered by promoting unfettered competition. This is axiomatic, and, as petitioner said, is supported by case law. But also supported by case law is the notion that a school district should be able to request information sufficient to assure itself that the prospective contractor is capable and qualified.

Petitioner did not allege any collusion, corruption, fraud, undue influence or misfeasance between the Board and the only other bidder, ServiceMaster. Instead, the record is replete with indications that the Board is less than pleased with certain aspects of ServiceMaster’s past performance, and with the cost of Service Master’s bid for the new contract.

Petitioner has not suggested, much less offered any proof, that it has made expenditures on equipment, personnel or taken any other step in preparation for this contract.

Accordingly, petitioner cannot be said to have suffered any irreparable harm, outside of not receiving the economic benefits to be derived from the contract, for which he is not qualified according to the bid specifications. Kadell, Inc. t/a Reliable Roofing Corp. v. Pascack Valley Regional High School District, 1993 S.L.D. _____, slip op. at 5 (Comm. Ed. June 9, 1993).

Petitioner alleged that the added requirement placed an undue burden on small businesses, but then petitioner went on to describe the many types and kinds of facilities it serves, and the international scope of its operations. Petitioner cannot have it both ways - he either is or is not a small business, and it appears that he is not. The Board gave consideration to the possible impact on small businesses when it reduced the requirement from ten to four New Jersey school districts, and eliminated the size requirement. The Board is justified in expecting its eventual contractor to be of sufficient size and to have sufficient resources and financial stability to perform the maintenance, custodial and grounds management services it needs. If the Board feels that the experiences of four New Jersey school districts is enough to provide it with the desired assurances, this tribunal will not disturb that conclusion.

Petitioner has been afforded a reasonable opportunity to show that the added criteria created exclusivity and that there is not enough concomitant benefit to the Board to justify the imposition of the added criteria. Petitioner has not done so, and his MOTION is DENIED.

As a footnote, respondent, in oral argument, said that the decision of ALJ Samuels in Kadell v. Pascack Valley, as adopted by the Commissioner of the Department of Education, is binding on this tribunal, and, although he did not claim stare decisis standing for ALJ Campbell's decision in Gavan v. Lakewood, presumably respondent would make the same claim for that decision, too. Notwithstanding the high regard and deep respect this tribunal has for the inimitable and estimable ALJs Samuels and Campbell, I am compelled to point out that this forum is not controlled by precedent. See, 37 New Jersey Practice 336. Each case is heard and decided on its own merits, although reference can, and is, often made to earlier decisions which not only comport with this tribunal's decision but say it in words that cannot be improved upon, only reiterated.

A hearing date in this matter has been scheduled for June 26, 1995, commencing at 9 a.m. at the Office of Administrative Law, Bldg. 9, Quakerbridge Plaza, Quakerbridge Office, Trenton, New Jersey.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

_____ :

Upon review of the record of this matter and the Order Denying Emergent Relief issued by the Office of Administrative Law, it appearing there were no remaining issues which would require further hearings, the parties were advised by letter dated April 13, 1995, from the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, that the Commissioner would be reviewing the findings and conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge's order as an initial decision. Parties were, therefore, accorded 13 calendar days from their receipt of such April 13 letter (which was transmitted to them via fax and regular mail) to file exceptions to the ALJ's determinations and five additional business days for the filing of reply exceptions, and were further advised that at the expiration of this period the Commissioner would review all submissions and render his final determination in this matter. Exceptions and reply exceptions of both petitioner and the Board were timely filed in accordance with the established schedule.

Petitioner excepts to the ALJ's conclusion that the Board had a "reasonable" basis for imposing a requirement that any potential bidder must, at the time of the bid, be providing maintenance, custodial and grounds services to at least four other New Jersey public school districts. Petitioner rather contends that such requirement does not, as was asserted, provide the Board with an ability to assess a potential bidder's ability to perform, but only serves to preclude qualified and responsible companies who would be fully capable of performing such services from even bidding.

Petitioner presents a hypothetical example which, it posits, demonstrates the absurdity of such a pre-bidding requirement. It states that under this requirement company A, which it describes as one serving four small school districts and having no other clients, would be qualified to submit a bid, while company B, like petitioner, who has served 500 school districts worldwide, but which currently does not have four New Jersey school districts as clients, is precluded, despite its vast experience, from bidding at all.

Petitioner asserts that this arbitrary provision serves "no real purpose other than to artificially limit the pool of available bidders." (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 2) As such, it submits that the specification discourages, rather than encourages, free and open competition, favors one bidder or group of bidders to the exclusion of other potential bidders and is, therefore, contrary to the provisions and intent of bidding laws and regulations.

Petitioner further asserts that reliance by the Board and the ALJ upon the necessity for a prospective bidder being intimately familiar with certain New Jersey legal requirements, such as the Right to Know Law, as justification for the requirement is misplaced. It proffers that New Jersey law is not so unique or difficult to comprehend as to justify imposition of such a limiting requirement.

Lastly, petitioner argues that as the Board has acknowledged that petitioner is a responsible contractor, in that there would be no need to conduct a responsibility hearing if it had met all specifications, the Board has, therefore, implicitly acknowledged petitioner's ability to perform the contract. As such, petitioner asserts that its rejection due to the absence of a specification specifically designed to assure a bidder's ability to perform the contract is paradoxical.¹

In response, the Board contends that the hypothetical example and arguments advanced by petitioner to illustrate petitioner's "vast experience" are irrelevant to the issue at hand herein. The Board maintains that the within dispute centers around whether petitioner can be required to comply with a particular bid specification requirement and petitioner's responsibility, or lack thereof, is not germane to this determination.

The Board asserts that contrary to petitioner's assertions, which it notes are unsubstantiated by any proof whatsoever, this specific bidding requirement provides the Board with a resource to assess a bidder's ability to perform the contract and further argues that this requirement is reasonably related to the purpose of the specification and the particular nature of the work to be performed in that:

The Board operates a large school district containing a total of eight schools, including a high school, middle schools and elementary schools. Its custodial, maintenance and groundkeeping operations are, therefore, extensive. The Board has responsibly determined that only a contractor who has already developed a history of dealing with New Jersey public schools, including the unique practical and legal difficulties they present, will be able to manage operations of the Board's magnitude effectively and economically. Specifically, the Board's specification requirement ensures that the bidder can provide comprehensive employee development training programs as required by state law, properly label and comply with "Right to Know" requirements and otherwise be able to research, review, apply and make recommendations concerning compliance with state statutes and ordinances. (Board's Reply Exceptions at p.3)

The Board further argues that case law has firmly established that decisions by public entities with respect to the necessity of particular bid specifications are entitled to a presumption of correctness unless these entities have acted arbitrarily, unreasonably or capriciously (Palamar Construction Inc. v. Pennsauken Tp., 196 N.J. Super. 241, 250 (App. Div. 1983)), and absent such a determination, the courts should not substitute their judgment for that of the governing body, (Ace-Manzo, Inc. v. Neptune Tp., 258 N.J. Super. 129, 142 (Law Div. 1992)), even if some doubt exists as to the ultimate wisdom of the action (Palamar, supra). (Board's Reply Exceptions at p. 4) It urges that as petitioner has presented no evidence that the Board's "current service" requirement is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, the Commissioner should not substitute his judgment for that of the Board.

In response to petitioner's contention that such requirement is inconsistent with the philosophy of the public bidding statutes, the Board proffers that this particular assertion was fully addressed and considered by the ALJ on page 5 of her decision where she stated:

Additionally, petitioner states that the public interest is furthered by promoting unfettered competition. This is axiomatic, and, as petitioner said, is supported by case law. But also supported by case law is the notion that a school district should be able to request information sufficient to assure itself that the prospective contractor is capable and qualified.

Petitioner did not allege any collusion, corruption, fraud, undue influence or misfeasance between the Board and the only other bidder, ServiceMaster. Instead the record is replete with indications that the Board is less than pleased with certain aspects of ServiceMaster's past performance, and with the cost of ServiceMaster's bid for the new contract.

(Board's Reply Exceptions at p. 6)

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter and full consideration of the exception and reply exception arguments advanced by the parties, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusion of the ALJ that the Board did not act arbitrarily, unreasonably or in bad faith in imposing the particular bid requirement at issue herein.

As correctly noted by the Board in its exception arguments, a board's reasonable exercise of its discretion is entitled to a presumption of validity absent the establishment by a challenger that such action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable (see Palamar, supra.). The Commissioner finds and determines that the within petitioner has failed to make such a required showing. The Board asserted, and petitioner has advanced, no relevant proofs to the contrary, that the specification at issue in this matter was imposed to enable it to properly assess the ability of prospective bidders to serve what it views as legal and practical intricacies unique to school districts in New Jersey. Petitioner's disagreement with respect to the ultimate value of this specification vis-à-vis this stated purpose does not serve to render the Board's action illegal. As such, the Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of the Board. Further, the Commissioner was persuaded as to the Board's attempt to comply with the statutory intent of open, competitive bidding by its reduction of the number of such current service contracts required of an eligible bidder from the previously contemplated ten to the four actually required.²

² It was not necessary for the Commissioner to reach the ALJ's dicta discussion with respect to the precedential value of administrative decisions as such is not necessary or relevant to his decision herein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the findings and conclusions of the ALJ in her Order denying emergent relief in this matter and, as the Board's action in imposing the requirement at issue herein was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, the within Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: April 3, 1995

Decided: April 6, 1995

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Richard Harris and Kenton Garay, petitioners, are teaching staff members employed by the respondent Hunterdon Central Regional High School District Board of Education who sought an order vacating the head wrestling coach position, awarding the position to "a fully qualified permanent staff member who applied for the position," and full back pay and emoluments to that person.

The matter was opened on two separate petitions before the Commissioner of Education. They were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. The matters were heard and an initial decision issued on August 2, 1994.

The initial decision found that the district suspended three wrestling coaches in 1991 after a rules infraction was discovered; the district posted and advertised the positions of head wrestling coach and assistant wrestling coach on October 1, 1991; several applications were received and reviewed by the high school principal and the director of student administration; four persons were interviewed, Gibble, Garay, Harris and Holcombe; the interviewers reached a consensus and recommended Gibble to the Superintendent; the Superintendent accomplished the necessary application through the County Superintendent of Schools because Gibble, although he worked for the district, held only a county substitute certificate, and there was no procedural defect in the approval process. The decision concluded that Harris and Garay were not legitimately ruled out.

It was ordered that the petitioners be granted relief in the following way: the Board was to review the applications of both petitioners and, if necessary, interview both petitioners; the Board would then select one of the two petitioners based on its assessments of their backgrounds and abilities; that person would be paid the stipend lost, plus interest since the last day of the 1991-92 wrestling season. No other moneys were to be paid because the petitioners limited their petition to the 1991-92 season.

On September 16, 1994, the Commissioner agreed with the findings and conclusions, above, with the exception of limitation of remedy to the 1991-92 school year. The Commissioner remanded for determination of the question whether relief should necessarily be limited to the 1991-92 school year.

DETERMINATION

While this matter was pending on remand, the Appellate Division ruled in the case Arthur Krupp v. Board of Education of the Union County Regional High School District No. 1, 278 N.J. Super. 31 (App. Div. 1994). In Krupp the board of education sought review of a State Board of Education decision upholding a commissioner's decision that an intradistrict, certified teacher should have been appointed girls' basketball coach at the high school. The court held that employment of an intradistrict teacher was not mandated by regulation and the employment of an extra-district, certified teacher as a coach was authorized by the regulation.

The court examined the controlling regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3, closely. The regulation provides, in pertinent part:

(a) Any person not certified as a teacher and not in the employ of a district board of education shall not be permitted to organize public school pupils during school time . . . [for] coaching or for conducting games, events, and contests in physical education or athletics.

(b) School districts shall be permitted to employ any holder of a New Jersey teaching certificate to work in the interscholastic athletic program provided the position has been advertised.

(c) In the event there is no qualified and certified applicant, the holder of a county substitute certificate is authorized to serve as an athletic coach in the district in which he or she is employed . . . provided that:

1. The district chief school superintendent demonstrates to the county superintendent that:

i. The vacant coaching position had been advertised;
and

- ii. There was no qualified applicant based on the written standards of the board of education.

The Appellate Division panel observed that many school law decisions have indicated that the germ of the regulation permits broad interscholastic athletic programs because it enables schools to hire extra-district teachers to coach sports beyond the experience of in-district teachers. At the same time, the regulation prohibits school districts from hiring professional athletes who are not also employed as certified teachers. The court discussed various Commissioner and State Board of Education rulings centered on the regulation. The court found that a plain reading of the regulation required the court to conclude that the Commissioner and Board had erred as a matter of law. The language of the regulation is not ambiguous. N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(a) and (b) clearly allow local school boards to hire intradistrict or extra-district qualified, certified teachers, provided the coaching position is first advertised. No preference for intradistrict employees appears anywhere in the regulations, and there is no basis for reading a preference into the regulation.

Until revised in November 1983, N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(b) provided:

Every person appointed subsequent to June 1, 1960, to coach, teach or train individual pupils or school teams for inter-school athletic competition shall be a certified member of a school faculty in that school district and shall be employed full-time during the regular day when classes are in session [15 N.J.R. 1152(b), 1153 (July 18, 1983)].

This language was deleted and replaced by "School districts shall be permitted to employ any holder of a New Jersey teaching certificate to work in the interscholastic athletic program provided the position has been advertised."

The deletion of a specific requirement and substitution of broader language is a clear indication of intent to eliminate what was removed. As amended, subsection (a) requires that athletic coaches be: (1) certified teachers and (2) employed by a school district in New Jersey. The subsection does not state that coaches must be certified teachers employed by the school district in which they are employed.

Subsection (a) must be read in context with subsection (b). Subsection (b) permits districts to “employ any holder of a New Jersey teaching certificate,” provided the local board has advertised the vacant position.

The court went on to state:

In summary, as contrasted with the pre-1983 version of the regulation, the regulation in effect during the applicable time frame here cannot properly be read to impose any intra-district hiring requirement or preference. It only requires a local board to advertise coaching positions before accepting any applications from certified teachers. See N.J.S.A. 6:29-3.3(b). In our view, the State Board’s interpretation of the regulation after the 1983 amendment relies upon a strained construction of the word “employment.” Perhaps this is due more to over-reliance on pre-1983 school board case decisions before the state agencies and the language therein without actually considering the impact of the 1983 amendment and the actual language of the amended regulation. Such a construction of the regulation as given by the State Board here would effectively reimpose terms the State Board eliminated in 1983 without following the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq.

Accordingly, we are constrained to reverse the decision of the Board and remand the matter to it for reconsideration in light of this decision. Because of their special expertise, however, it is for the Commissioner and the State Board, in the first instance, to consider the Board’s argument that the Board exercised sound educational judgment in denying Krupp the coaching appointment for the year at issue, and Krupp’s argument to the contrary.
[278 N.J. Super. at 42-43.]

The Appellate Division returned the matter to the State Board for a determination on the merits not inconsistent with the construction of the regulation set forth in the court’s opinion. So far as this judge knows, the State Board has not spoken.

Counsel were given the opportunity to be heard on Krupp and how it affects the present case, if at all. Petitioner Harris argues that Krupp is factually distinguishable in most aspects from the present case. Therefore, it is neither controlling nor persuasive. Subsection (c), above, still controls the present case. Respondent Garay argues similarly. The Board, not unexpectedly, takes a different view.

The Board asserts that because Krupp involved the hire of extra-district qualified and certified teachers as opposed to an in-district teacher to coach basketball, an analogy can be drawn to the present case. The Appellate Division held that the plain reading of N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3 (a) and (b) regarding employment of coaches for interscholastic athletic programs clearly allows local school boards to hire intradistrict and extra-district qualified, certified teachers, provided the coaching position is first advertised. In footnotes to its opinion, the court addressed subsection (c). The court stated:

Only subsection (c), as amended, imposes a mandatory hiring preference for coaching personnel where no qualified and certified applicant is available. It permits local boards to hire county certified substitute teachers only if “no qualified and certified applicant” exists. [278 N.J. Super. at 40 n.3.]

And, the Appellate Division panel stated in its conclusion that the regulation here cannot properly be read to impose any intradistrict hiring requirement or preference. Prior Commissioner and State Board decisions have been distinguished or overruled.

This judge finds useful instruction in the court’s opinion at 42-43, cited above. The regulation now in effect cannot be read to impose any intradistrict hiring requirement or preference. It merely requires a board to advertise coaching positions before accepting any applications from certified teachers. When there is no qualified and certified applicant, the board may then hire the holder of a county substitute certificate, provided the chief school administrator demonstrates to the county superintendent that the vacant coaching position was advertised and there was no qualified applicant based on the written standards as a Board of Education (emphasis added).

It is undisputed in this matter that the Board specified in its announcement that it wanted prior head coaching experience. Because this standard was articulated and because the screening committee found the petitioners to lack head coach experience, the local superintendent certified to the county superintendent that the vacant coaching position had been advertised and that there was no qualified applicant based on the Board's standards.

But, while Krupp has clearly modified interpretation of N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(a) and (b), it does not direct reinterpretation of (c). No reading of Krupp can gainsay this fact. Accordingly, the DETERMINATION here is the same as in the initial decision of August 2, 1994. I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Board's 1992-93 and 1993-94 head wrestling coach appointments continued to violate the petitioners' rights. A failure to amend pleadings in this situation is not a bar to the petitioners' ability to claim further relief. The question of further relief was clearly raised in the first hearing. Even if there were no formal amendment of the pleadings, a continuing violation has been found. Under these circumstances, basic fairness dictates there must be a remedy.

In consideration of the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the Board review, as it did for 1991-92, the applications of the petitioners and, if necessary, interview both petitioners. The Board must then select one of the two petitioners based on its assessments of their backgrounds and abilities. That person will then be paid the stipends lost for 1992-93 and 1993-94 plus interest from the last day of each season, respectively. The Commissioner of Education shall specify the date by which these actions shall be accomplished in the final agency decision. If no final agency decision is rendered and this initial decision becomes final by operation of law, the actions ordered herein shall be completed by July 1, 1995.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE :
 HUNTERDON CENTRAL REGIONAL : DECISION ON REMAND HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, HUNTERDON :

 RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by the Board of Education, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1.1-18.4.

The Commissioner initially states that inasmuch as this matter is before him on remand, the inquiry is herein limited to the scope of relief to be afforded.¹ Consequently, the

Commissioner considers only the arguments on exception which address the relevant issue before him.²

The Board contends that the ALJ's decision on remand is not in accordance with the Commissioner's order in his decision of September 16, 1994 in that the ALJ, without the benefit of plenary hearing or gathering additional evidence, merely concludes that the Board's 1992-93 and 1993-94 head wrestling coach appointment continued to violate petitioners' rights, and therefore orders the payment of lost stipends to the selected candidate for those seasons. (Board's Exceptions at p. 2)

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's determination that the decision in Krupp, supra, does not alter the initial decision of August 2, 1994 with respect to petitioners' rights to the position in question. However, the Commissioner notes that while the parties were provided moment on remand to address the Krupp issue, contrary to the Commissioner's sole direction, the parties were not provided the opportunity to argue or present evidence as necessary on the question of relief, under the circumstances herein, beyond the 1991-92 school year. More troubling is the ALJ's finding and conclusion on remand, contrary to his prior determination,³ and in the absence of said additional argument or evidence, that, "[a] failure to amend pleadings in this situation is not a bar to the petitioners' ability to claim further relief." (Initial Decision at p. 7)

² The ALJ's decision of August 2, 1994 determined, and the Commissioner thereafter affirmed, that the Board failed to sufficiently articulate that petitioners were unqualified for the positions they sought, and the district did not articulate sufficient reason to employ an individual who held a county substitute certificate. (Initial Decision at p. 14) Several of the Board's exceptions effectively seek to relitigate this issue.

³ In his initial decision of August 2, 1994 limiting petitioners' relief, the ALJ states, "No other monies will be paid because the petitioners have limited their petition to the 1991-92 season." (Initial Decision at pp. 14 and 15).

Accordingly, the Commissioner is constrained to remand this matter to the Office of Administrative Law and direct once again:

fact-finding necessary to determining whether the Board's 1992-93 and 1993-94 head wrestling coach appointment continued to violate petitioners' rights and  consideration of argument, and evidence as necessary, on the question of whether petitioners' failure to amend the pleadings is a bar to their ability to claim further relief under the circumstances. (Commissioners' decision dated September 16, 1994, at p. 20)

Said argument should include, but need not be limited to, the certification status subsequent to the 1991-92 school year of Mr. Gible, the person initially awarded the position of wrestling coach, and the petitioners' continued efforts to apply for the wrestling coach position in the 1992-93 and 1993-94 school years.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, retired school psychologist, sought payment of salary under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 for a period of absences caused by an injury determined to be work related by the Division of Workers' Compensation. The Board argued that petitioner's claim was untimely filed, and that petitioner was precluded from bringing the appeal by the terms of a 1991 settlement agreement.

ALJ found that petitioner's cause of action arose at the time he received his Workers' Compensation determination, so that an appeal filed upon receipt of a letter from the Board stating that it would not pay the requested benefit was untimely under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2. Notwithstanding that he found the appeal untimely, the ALJ did conclude that petitioner was not prevented from bringing the appeal under the terms of the settlement agreement at issue. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner concurred that settlement did not preclude petitioner from bringing an action before the Commissioner. However, Commissioner reversed initial decision on the question of timeliness, finding that the cause of action in cases such as petitioner's is now to be reckoned in accordance with the State Board decision in Verneret, and that relaxation of the 90-day rule consistent with that decision was warranted under the circumstances herein. Matter was remanded for determination of petitioner's claim.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, a tenured school psychologist who has retired from the employ of the Board of Education of the Township of Jackson (Board) seeks payment of salary for periods of absences from his tenured position as a result of a personal injury caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

The Board denies petitioner's claims asserting, among other things; that (1) petitioner's claim is untimely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) and, (2) that petitioner is barred from seeking such claims grounded upon a settlement between the parties entered into in January 1991.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A prehearing conference was conducted on June 17, 1994, at which, among other things, the issues to be determined by this tribunal were agreed upon.

Subsequently, the parties cross-moved for summary decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. Extensions were requested and granted to execute this initial decision.

THE BOARD'S POSITION

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner was employed as a school psychologist by the respondent, Jackson Township Board of Education (Board), from September 1968 through June, 1992. In or about the years 1989 and 1990 there were several pending claims filed by petitioner against the Board, including claims before the Commissioner of Education, the Division on Civil Rights, the Division of Workers' Compensation, and the Superior Court. All of these claims, as well as all other potential claims, with the sole exception of the pending Workers' Compensation Claims, were settled by the parties in a settlement agreement, which was fully executed on January 3, 1991. (Exhibit A).¹ All matters except the Workers' Compensation claims were withdrawn and petitioner eventually retired from the Jackson School District effective June 30, 1992.

On December 29, 1993, a decision was rendered by the Honorable James J. O'Connell, Judge of Workers' Compensation in petitioner's claim for disability benefits. (Exhibit B) In that decision petitioner was awarded temporary compensation benefits, an award for partial permanent decision petitioner was awarded temporary compensation benefits, an award for partial permanent disability, medical expenses, legal fees and costs. In a letter from petitioner's attorney to the Board Secretary, dated April 22, 1993, petitioner sought reimbursement of salary for those periods of time corresponding to the Workers' Compensation award. (Exhibit C) This letter was received by the Board Secretary on April 26, 1993. On April 27, 1993, the Board Secretary sent a letter to petitioner's attorney informing him that the Board was referring the matter to the Board attorney and that further inquiries should be directed to him. (Exhibit D)

Petitioner sent two letters to the Board Secretary in May, 1993, requesting a response to his claim for salary reimbursement for back sick days related to his Workers' Compensation award. (Exhibits E and F). A third, follow-up letter was sent by petitioner on May 18, 1993. (Exhibit G) The Board Secretary responded to petitioner in a letter dated May 27, 1993, informing petitioner that his request had been forwarded to the Board attorney. (Exhibit H)

In a letter dated September 20, 1993, the Board attorney notified petitioner's attorney that all outstanding matters relating to petitioner's employment were resolved in the January 1991 settlement agreement and that petitioner was not entitled to additional compensation. (Exhibit I). The instant petition was filed with the Commissioner of Education on October 6, 1993.

LEGAL ARGUMENT

POINT I

PETITIONER'S CLAIM IS BARRED AS UNTIMELY SINCE IT WAS NOT FILED WITHIN 90 DAYS AS REQUIRED BY N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c)

The regulations covering petitions before the Commissioner of Education establish a period of limitations within which all claims must be filed. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) "the petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested case hearing." The Commissioner has already applied the 90 day rule Compensation award. The Commissioner concluded that the 90 day period would run from the date of the Order of Workers' Compensation Court. Verneret v. Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, 1991 S.L.D. 1725, 1732 (October 11, 1991). Since the instant case makes an identical claim, Verneret controls the issue of timeliness. Here, the final order or action which is the subject of this petition is the opinion of the Workers' Compensation Judge awarding petitioner benefits for his disabilities. This order was issued by Judge O'Connell on December 29, 1992. (Exhibit B). It is reasonable to assume that petitioner's attorney received this order by January 4, 1993. The 90 day period started running from the time petitioner received the decision of the Workers' Compensation Judge. Since the petition was not filed until October 1993, the petition should be dismissed as untimely.

Decisions of the Commissioner and the State Board have recognized that "[i]t is clearly established that the 90 day rule is strictly applied and the time within which the petition must be filed is measured from the time when the cause of action accrued." Frinquello v. Bd. of Education of the Vocational Schools of the County of Bergen, 1986 S.L.D. 2485 (October 20, 1986). While relaxation of the 90 day limitations period has been applied in some cases, and is authorized by the regulations, the Appellate Division has "expressly cautioned that strict interpretation and sparing application is to be expected, and the Commissioner and the State Board have consistently followed that directive." Nealy v. Bd. of Education of the Borough of Roselle Park, 1987 S.L.D. 1598 (July 16, 1987). Relaxation of the rule "has been reserved for limited situations wherein a compelling reason can be demonstrated for expanding the limitations period." Pacio v. Board of Education of Lakeland Regional School District, 1989 S.L.D. 2060, 2062 (June 29, 1989). In Pacio the Commissioner noted that the reasons for expanding the 90 day period are:

Where a substantial constitutional issue is presented, where judicial review is sought of an informal administrative determination, and where a matter of significant public interest is involved. 1989 S.L.D. at 2063. quoting Miller v. Morris School District, 1989 S.L.D. _____, (February 25, 1980).

The instant matter does not involve a constitutional issue or judicial review of an informal administrative determination. Petitioner has not alleged that there is a significant public interest involved. The only interest involved is petitioner's own interest in additional compensation. Petitioner has not alleged any other factors which would justify a relaxation of the rule in cases

Petitioner has not alleged any other factors which would justify a relaxation of the rule in cases involving far more serious claims than those set forth in the instant matter. Ward v. Board of Education of the Bridgewater-Raritan School District, 93 N.J.A.R. (EDU) 435 (June 1, 1992) (Claim of sexual harassment in appointment process); LeMee v. Board of Education of the Village of Ridgewood, 1990 S.L.D. 663 (Claim of non-renewal due to age discrimination). The facts of the instant matter simply do not warrant a relaxation of the 90 day requirement.

Furthermore, it is inconsequential that petitioner wrote to the district (first through his attorney and then on his own) to make a claim for payment. Any such attempt to resolve the issue of entitlement, without the need for litigation, does not serve to toll the time to file a petition, as consistently held by the Commissioner, the State Board and the Courts. Perhaps the most definitive statement on this issue is the opinion of the Supreme Court in Kaprow v. Board of Educ. of Berkeley Tp. 131 N.J. 572 (1993). In that case, a claim asserting tenure rights following a RIF was held untimely since it had not been filed within 90 days of when Kaprow learned that another person had been selected to fill a vacancy to which Kaprow believed he was entitled. Furthermore, the Court specifically rejected petitioner's argument that the 90 day period was tolled while he awaited a reply to his letter claiming entitlement to a position. Kaprow had learned of the Board's failure to appoint him to a vacancy on February 23, 1988. He wrote to the Board on February 28, 1988, asserting a right to a position. Id. at 577. After receiving no reply, he wrote again on April 25, 1988. (Id.) The Board attorney eventually replied on June 14, 1988, and maintained that Kaprow was not entitled to a position. Id. at 578. The petition was filed on August 1, 1988. Id. Based on those facts, the Court ruled that the 90 day period began to run on February 23, 1988, and that subsequent events did not change that fact.

Kaprow's attempt to resolve his claim through negotiations with the Local Board is irrelevant. It does not negate the fact that he received adequate notice on February 23, nor does it toll the running of the limitation period. Id. at 588.

See also, Bd. of Educ. of Bernards Tp. v. Bernards Tp. Ed. Assn., 79 N.J. 311 327 n.4 (1979) and Riely v. Hunterdon Central Bd. of Ed., 173 N.J. Super. 109, 113 (App. Div. 1980) (proceeding to arbitration does not toll the 90 day period).

Based on Kaprow, therefore, petitioner's attempts to resolve the matter by writing to the Board are immaterial. Indeed, the facts of the instant matter favor a determination of untimeliness even more so than the facts in Kaprow. At least in Kaprow, the letter to the Board was sent out within the 90 day period. Here, even the initial letter to the Board from petitioner's attorney, Charles Mandell, which was dated April 22, 1993 and was received by the Board on April 26, 1993, was sent beyond 90 days from the date of the order in the Workers' Compensation matter, December 29, 1992. Even if time for mailing is allowed and the time begins to run on January 4, 1993, the 90 day period elapsed on April 5, 1993. Clearly, a claim which is already untimely, cannot be resurrected by writing a letter to the Board, awaiting a response and then claiming another 90 day period.

It is clear in the instant matter that petitioner's claim for reimbursement for salary arose on the date of the decision of the Workers' Compensation Judge. This was the "final order, ruling or other action by the ... agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." Verneret, supra. Petitioner did not need any decision by the Board before he could file his claim. Petitioner's appeal is not from the decision of the Board to deny his request for additional compensation for his salary loss during periods of disability. The subject of his petition is the failure of the Board to pay his salary at the time he was on disability leave. The date on which his cause of action accrued was the date on which a final determination was made that petitioner was entitled to temporary disability benefits for two separate periods during the 1987-88 and 1988-89 school years. While petitioner was free to attempt to resolve his claim for salary reimbursement with the Board, any such attempts at a resolution did not toll the 90 day period.

Finally, the instant matter is not one which would fall under the limited exception established in Lavin v. Hackensack Bd. of Ed., 90 day N.J. 146 (1982). In Lavin the Supreme Court addressed the claim of a teacher that she had been denied the military service credit when she had been hired by the school board some nine years earlier. The Court held that the military service credit was a statutory entitlement, rather than a term of the individual's employment and, therefore, was not subject to the limitations period for a claim based on an employment contract. Id. at 150. The court in Lavin indicated that the situation it was addressing was limited to those where "the benefit is not directly related to the employment service, but is being awarded for a totally unrelated reason". Id.

The decision in Lavin has been consistently distinguished in subsequent decisions addressing the issue of whether a benefit is purely statutory or related to the individual's employment. For example, in North Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587 (1984) the Supreme Court held that a salary increment under N.J.S.A. 18A:29-8 was not a statutory entitlement, like the military service credit, but was a benefit based upon teaching performance. Therefore, the failure of the teachers to file a petition within 90 days of the date they had notice that they did not receive an increment barred their petition. Id. at 594.

And, in a case directly on point, Northey v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, 1987 S.L.D. 2273 (December 7, 1987), the Commissioner addressed a claim brought by two teachers claiming that the Board had improperly deducted monies from their salaries for sick leave benefits in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. The Commissioner dismissed the claim as untimely under the 90 day requirement, finding that the claim did not fall under the exception established in Lavin. It was held that "[t]he sick leave benefits provided by N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 are directly related to teaching services and are not automatic or continuous." Id. at 2278. Based upon the holding in Northey it is clear that the claim at issue in the instant matter is subject to the 90 day limitation.

Since petitioner has failed to file his petition within the 90 day period expressly provided for in the regulations, N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c), his petition should be dismissed as untimely.

POINT II

THE PETITION IN THIS MATTER IS BARRED BY A PRIOR SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT REACHED BY THE PARTIES

On December 7, 1990, petitioner signed an agreement of settlement with the Board releasing a number of claims against the Board in return for continuation of his employment, salary, the restoration of his increments and other compensation. (Exhibit A) In addition to releasing the Board from several specifically enumerated claims which petitioner had pending before the Commissioner of Education, the Division of Civil Rights and in Superior Court, the agreement also acts as a general release of all potential claims, with one specific exception, Workers' Compensation claims pending at the time of the settlement agreement. The last portion of paragraph 8 of the settlement agreement reads:

This agreement shall act as a release of liability of the Board for all matters or events occurring prior to the date of this agreement, with the exception of pending Workers' Compensation claims.

Paragraph 9 reads, in part:

Dr. Sweet agrees that after this agreement is signed he will not initiate or participate in initiating a petition, complaint, investigation or lawsuit of any kind arising out of or relating to matters or events which arose prior to the signing of this agreement.

By such agreement, petitioner expressly waived the instant claim, since it alleges entitlement to payment for periods of time prior to September 5, 1989.

The courts have held that "[t]he scope of a release is determined by the intention of the parties as expressed in the terms of the particular instrument, considered in light of all the facts and circumstances." Bilotti v. Accurate Forming Corp. 39 N.J. 184, 204 (1963). A release "not restricted by its terms to particular claims or demands, ordinarily covers all terms and demands due at the time of execution and within the party's contemplation." Herold v. Inman, 180 N.J. Super. 581, 586 (Law Div. 1981).

Any claim petitioner has regarding salary for the period he was on disability was cognizable at the time the release was entered. While a final resolution of such a claim may not have been reached until the Workers' Compensation matter was completed, the claim itself could have been brought prior to the time the Workers' Compensation matter was fully adjudicated. And, perhaps most critically for purposes of the instant matter, a claim for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 is a claim which could have been and should have been preserved by petitioner at the time the release was negotiated (as had been done with the pending Workers' Compensation claims), had that been his desire. While the impact on the settlement agreement is impossible to predict at this point, it is readily apparent that if petitioner had sought to keep alive a claim for sick benefits in the neighborhood of $20,000, the amount the Board was willing to pay would have been significantly reduced.

It is also clear that the Board was and remains justified in believing that a claim such as this one is precluded by the following language from paragraph 8:

This agreement shall act as a release of liability of the Board for all matters or events occurring prior to the date of this agreement, with the exception of pending Workers' Compensation claims.

Indeed, there is nothing more the Board could have done to insulate itself from future litigation than to use the language of a general release, such as "a release ... for all matter or events occurring prior to the date of this agreement." After all, Dr. Sweet did not have a specific claim pending for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 at the time of the settlement, thus it was impossible to have him specifically withdraw it, as was specifically done with all other matters, except the Workers' Compensation claims. Clearly, the parties bargained for a settlement of all issues and a cessation of litigation (with only one exception). Petitioner is now renegeing in an attempt to obtain more money from the district. Such an attempt is contrary to the specific terms of the settlement agreement and contrary to the principles governing settlement of litigation.

New Jersey Courts have recognized that "[a] general release, duly executed and fairly obtained is a complete bar to further recovery" Reinhardt v. Wilbur, 30 N.J. Super. 502, 505 (App. Div. 1954). Courts have held that a settlement agreement reached by the parties to a lawsuit is a contract and “will be honored ‘absent a demonstration of fraud or other compelling circumstances’ ” Nolan v. Lee Ho, 120 N.J. 465, 472 (1990). It has been noted that the “[s]ettlement of litigation ranks high in our public policy.” Jannarone v. W.T. Co., 65 N.J. Super. 472, 476 (1961). “Our courts strongly favor the policy that the settlement of litigation be attained and agreements thereby reached be honored.” Honeywell v. Bubb, 130 N.J. Super. 130, 136 (App. Div. 1974).

The release in this matter was duly executed and fairly obtained. Petitioner does not allege that he was subject to duress or that the agreement was fraudulently obtained. Therefore, the settlement agreement entered between the parties should be honored. Allowing petitioner to circumvent the settlement executed between the parties will not further the public policy of settling litigation. Instead, it will discourage the settlement of litigation by allowing a party to a settlement the opportunity to recover more than once on the same claim. There is simply no justification for disturbing the settlement agreement reached between the parties. The agreement should be upheld and the instant petition dismissed.

For the foregoing reasons, respondent, Board of Education of the Township of Jackson requests that summary decision be granted in its favor dismissing the petition in this matter.

PETITIONER’S POSITION

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner relies upon his Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner and his Affidavit in Support of his Cross-Motion for Summary Decision as the operative facts in this proceeding. Those documents, incorporated by reference, will not be repeated here.

LEGAL ARGUMENT

POINT I

THE PETITION OF APPEAL IS TIMELY FILED

The regulations covering Petitions of Appeal filed with the Commissioner of Education establish a period of limitations within which all claims must be filed. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) “The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of final order, or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested case hearing.”

The lead decision to be analyzed in this area is the New Jersey Supreme Court’s decision in Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Township, 131 N.J. 572 (1993). The Board of Education in citing the Kaprow decision correctly states that Kaprow’s claim asserting his tenure rights following a reduction in force was held to have been untimely filed since Kaprow had not filed his Petition of Appeal within 90 days of when Kaprow had first learned that another person had been appointed by the Board to fill a vacancy to which Kaprow believed he was entitled. However, what the Jackson Board of Education does not recognize is that the Supreme Court’s analysis in Kaprow is unequivocally supportive of petitioner Dr. Ira Sweet’s contentions in the instant matter regarding the timeliness of the Petition of Appeal filed in this case.

More specifically, the Supreme Court in Kaprow held as follows:

We also find that the letter Kaprow received on February 23, 1988, from the secretary of the Local Board constituted adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). Although the limitations period governing RIF rights requires that the petitioner file a petition no later than the ninetieth day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling, or other action by the District Board of Education, the regulation does not specify what constitutes adequate notice.

Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate. See Burns v. West Am. Corporation, 137 N.J. Super. 442, 446, 349 A.2d 142 (Dist. Ct. 1975). Moreover, adequate notice under the regulation must be sufficient to further the purpose of the ninety-day limitations period. See Apex Roofing Supply Company v. Howell, 50 N.J. Super. 462, 467, 158 A.2d 49 App. Div. (1960). A limitations period has two purposes. The first is to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims. Ochs v. Federal Insurance Company, 90 N.J. 108, 112, 447 A.2d 1963 (1982). The second purpose is “to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose” by giving security and stability to human affairs. Ibid. (Quoting Farrell vs. Votator Div., 62 N.J. 111, 115, 299 A.2d 394 (1973).

When a plaintiff knows or has reason to know that he has a cause of action against an identifiable defendant and voluntarily sleeps on his rights so long as to permit the customary period of limitations to expire, the pertinent considerations of individual justice as well as the broader considerations of repose, coincide to bar his action. [Farrell supra., 62 N.J. at 115, 299 A.2d 394.]

Adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 should accommodate both purposes. That is, the notice of requirement should effectuate concerns for individual justice by not triggering the limitations period until the tenured teachers have been alerted to the existence of facts that may equate in law with a post RIF cause of action. See Burd vs. New Jersey Tel. Company, 76 N.J. 284, 291, 386 A.2d 1310 (1978). At the same time, it should further considerations of repose by establishing an objective event to trigger the limitations period in order “to enable the proper and efficient administration of the affairs of government.” Borough of Park Ridge vs. Salimone, 21 N.J. 28, 48, 120 A.2d 721 (1956).

The final order, ruling, or other action by the Local Board occurred when it appointed non-tenured persons to positions to which Kaprow claims tenure rights. The Local Board was clearly required to give Kaprow official notice of that action. Kaprow, however, did not receive any notice of the Board’s action until February 23, 1988, when he learned from the secretary of the Local Board that it had created and filled two positions in which he claimed tenure rights. That notice, although it was unofficial and informal, was sufficient to trigger the ninety-day limitations period. It is clear that Kaprow learned that the Local Board had, in fact, taken final and formal action. Kaprow obviously believed that his tenured status entitled him to one or both of those positions under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 and the notice he had received was adequate to enable him to pursue his claim. In the future, it would be better if such information and notice is officially authorized and communicated by the Local Board.

Nonetheless, Kaprow's February 28th letter to the secretary of the Local Board demonstrates that he had sufficient knowledge of the relevant facts to bring a RIF claim. He wrote:

I have recently become aware that the position of Assistant Superintendent, to which I retain tenure rights, was reinstated as late as September 1986, if not before. Additionally, the duties which I performed as Assistant Superintendent have been transferred to a new position entitled District Supervisor of Elementary Education. I am certain that those duties were consolidated under one individual prior to the appointment of the District Supervisor of Elementary Education.

Kaprow's attempt to resolve his claim through negotiations with the Local Board is irrelevant. It does not negate the fact that he received adequate notice on February 23, nor does it toll the running of the limitations period. See Riely vs. Hunterdon Central Board of Education, 173 N.J. Super. 109, 413 A.2d. 628 (App. Div. 1980).

Kaprow received adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) on February 23, 1988, to trigger the ninety-day limitations period. On that day, he learned from the Local Board the existence of that state of facts that would enable him to file a timely claim. To insist under these circumstances that there be additional or more specific notice will not further the objectives of the regulatory scheme, and would only defeat the considerations of repose and interfere with the efficient administration of the school laws. Because Kaprow received adequate notice on February 23, he was obligated to file his petition within the ninety-day period. Kaprow, however, did not file his petition until August 1, more than two months after the limitations period had expired. We therefore find that his claims are time-barred by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). 131 N.J. at 587-589. (Emphasis added).

In sharp contrast to the facts in Kaprow, Dr. Sweet did not have any notice whatsoever of the Board of Education's intention not to comply with the prescriptions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 in terms of properly compensating him until Russell Weiss, the Board of Education's attorney, advised Dr. Sweet's Workers' Compensation attorney, Charles Mandell, in a letter dated September 20, 1993, that the Board of Education had concluded that no additional compensation was owed to Dr. Sweet. The instant Petition of Appeal was filed within two weeks after Dr. Sweet, through one of his legal representatives, had first been apprised that he would not receive the compensation to which he was entitled. In the Kaprow matter the petitioner was specifically and unequivocally placed on notice as of February 23, 1988 that the position that he asserted an entitlement to had been filled by another individual. The Supreme Court appropriately determined that the February 23, 1988 notification from the Board Secretary clearly put Kaprow on notice that he had a cause of action against the Board of Education at that time. In the instant matter, however, it would have been premature for Dr. Sweet to file a Petition of Appeal until after September 20, 1993, inasmuch as the correspondence received from Rosalie Gangemi, the Jackson Board of Education Secretary, (Exhibits "D" and "E" annexed to the Sweet Affidavit) certainly did not put anyone on notice that the Board of Education has rejected Sweet's claims pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. In fact, it was clear, in light of the communications between Ms. Gangemi and both Dr. Sweet and his Workers' Compensation attorney that this issue was simply being turned over to the Board attorney for his research and opinion.

In sum, it is "plain as a pike-staff" that the instant Petition of Appeal was timely filed.

The Board of Education in its brief also asserts, in part, that the Commissioner of Education decision in Veneret vs. Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, 1991 S.L.D. 1725, supports a contention that the date of the issuance of a final compensation award triggers any filing obligation regarding compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. It is submitted, however, that there is nothing in the record in the Veneret case that would indicate what the Elizabeth Board of Education's position was regarding compliance with the prescriptions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 as of the date of the issuance of the Workers' Compensation Judge's Order or at any time prior to the filing of the Petition of Appeal in that case. Certainly for all we know about the Veneret case the Elizabeth Board of Education may have advised Verneret contemporaneously with the issuance of the Workers' Compensation Judge's Award that it was not responsible for any additional compensation payments to Verneret.

Of far greater significance regarding the Verneret decision is the fact that the Kaprow Supreme Court decision was decided subsequent to the Verneret Commissioner of Education decision. The Kaprow decision clearly established specific standards to be applied in the future regarding the timeliness of Petitions of Appeal filed with the Commissioner of Education.

In sum, the Supreme Court's decision in Kaprow fully controls the instant matter and mandates the conclusion that the Petition of Appeal filed by Dr. Ira Sweet is timely filed.

POINT II

THE PETITION OF APPEAL IN THIS MATTER IS NOT BARRED BY THE PRESCRIPTIONS OF THE PRIOR SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT CONCLUDED BY THE PARTIES

It is the position of petitioner that nothing contained within the Settlement Agreement, annexed to the Gangemi Affidavit filed on behalf of the Board of Education, bars the instant litigation.

The last portion of paragraph 8 of the Settlement Agreement reads:

This agreement shall act as a release of liability of the Board for all matters or events occurring prior to the date of this agreement, with the exception of pending Workers' Compensation claims. (Emphasis supplied).

Paragraph 9 reads in part:

Dr. Sweet agrees that after this agreement is signed he will not initiate or participate in initiating a petition, complaint, investigation or lawsuit of any kind arising out of or relating to matters or events which arose prior to the signing of this agreement. (Emphasis supplied).

For the reasons set forth in the first legal point of this brief it is submitted that the relevant event that is the subject of this Petition of Appeal was the September 20, 1993, letter from the Board attorney specifically rejecting Dr. Sweet's claims that N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 required the Board of Education to pay Dr. Sweet additional salary payments during the operative time period. This Petition of Appeal clearly relates to events that arose subsequent to the signing of the Settlement Agreement, not prior to the date of the Agreement.

In the fourth legal point of this brief case support will be cited in support of petitioner's contention that the Workers' Compensation award affecting Dr. Sweet, issued after four years of litigation, is dispositive of all of the issues regarding the applicability of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, thus mandating, as a matter of law, additional salary payments to Dr. Sweet. It was not until the receipt of the September 20, 1993, from the Board attorney that Dr. Sweet had any claim or cause of action against the Board of Education regarding the non-payment of compensation to him that was required pursuant to the prescriptions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30.2.1.

It is obvious that the reservation in the Settlement Agreement of Dr. Sweet's right to continue to pursue his Workers' Compensation claims did not bar him from seeking to enforce his right to additional compensation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, which arose only when Dr. Sweet had prevailed regarding his compensability claims that were litigated before a Workers' Compensation Judge.

Once Judge James O'Connell, Jr. determined that the absences at issues were a result of a personal injury "caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of Dr. Sweet's employment" the Jackson Board of Education first became liable for the additional salary payments mandated by N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, approximately three years after the execution of the aforementioned Settlement Agreement.

If one was to credit the Board of Education's contentions Dr. Sweet, for example, would not have been able to sue the Board of Education if the Board of Education, subsequent to the execution of the Settlement Agreement defamed him and his professional reputation by, for example, misrepresenting his professional performance within the District. Moreover, if the Board's contentions were sustained, in a hypothetical situation in which the Jackson Board of Education was required to pay all certified employees in the District during the operative time period in which Dr. Sweet was employed additional compensation due to the resolution of some type of class action grievance or lawsuit the Board of Education would have been able to avoid paying Dr. Sweet because of reliance on the same prescriptions of the Settlement Agreement. Certainly Dr. Sweet would not have been barred from proceeding with defamation claims or contractual claims based upon the above hypothetical facts. Likewise, the prescriptions of paragraphs 8 and 9 of the Settlement Agreement certainly cannot bar Dr. Sweet from initiating breach of contract litigation against the Board of Education's noncompliance with paragraph 12 of the Agreement which required that Dr. Sweet receive a letter of recommendation signed by the Superintendent of Schools "upon separation from employment."

In sum, it is averred that Dr. Sweet had the absolute right to initiate litigation against the Board of Education regarding claims that first arose after the date of the Settlement Agreement which concerned the Jackson Board's refusal to comply with the prescriptions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

POINT III

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION CANNOT SEEK TO ENFORCE CERTAIN PROVISIONS WITHIN THE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT WHEN THE BOARD ITSELF BREACHED THE AGREEMENT AT ISSUE IN A SUBSTANTIAL AND MATERIAL WAY

Assuming arguendo that there was any merit to the Board of Education's contentions that paragraphs 8 and 9 of the Settlement Agreement at issue barred the initiation of any post agreement litigation it is averred that it is uncontroverted in the instant matter that the Board of Education itself failed to comply with the Settlement Agreement when the Board refused to supply Dr. Sweet with a letter of recommendation signed by the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Dominic Cotugno, which was required pursuant to the prescriptions of paragraph 12 of the Settlement Agreement.

Although he was not required to do so Dr. Sweet sent two separate letters to the Superintendent of Schools requesting the receipt of the letter of recommendation that should have been forwarded to his attention "upon separation from employment," only to have his requests denied by the administration. (See Exhibit "A" and "B" annexed to Dr. Sweet's affidavit).

It is beyond dispute that the failure to supply a requested letter of recommendation would undoubtedly have compromised Dr. Sweet's ability to secure any employment in the public or private sectors in any type of educational or professional capacity.

It is therefore averred that the Board of Education certainly lacks "clean hands" in the instant matter and in light of the Board of Education's substantial breach of the Settlement Agreement the Board of Education cannot therefore seek to enforce other prescriptions of the Agreement, assuming arguendo again that those cited prescriptions (set forth in paragraphs 8 and 9) had any applicability to the issues presented in this matter.

POINT IV

PETITIONER, DR. IRA SWEET, IS ENTITLED TO JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW IN CONSIDERATION OF THE PRESCRIPTIONS OF N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1

N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 states as follows:

Whenever any employee, entitled to sick leave under this chapter, is absent from his post of duty as a result of a personal injury caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, his employer shall pay to such employee the full salary or wages for the period of such absence for up to one calendar year without having such absence charged to the annual sick leave or the accumulated sick leave provided in sections 18A:30-2 and 18A:30-3. Salary or wage payments provided in this section shall be made for absence during the waiting period and during the period the employee received or was eligible to receive a temporary disability benefit under chapter 15 of Title 34, Labor and Workmen's Compensation, of the Revised Statutes. Any amount of salary or wages paid or payable to the employee pursuant to this section shall be reduced by the amount of any Workmen's Compensation award made for temporary disability. L. 1967, c. 271, § 18A:30-1, eff. January 11, 1968. (Emphasis supplied).

In the Appellate Division decision Forgash v. Lower Camden County School, 208 N.J. Super. 461 (1985), the Court determined that in a situation involving related Workers' Compensation claims and claims, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, the Workers' Compensation Courts had exclusive original jurisdiction to decide the issue as to whether a particular injury was caused by an accident "arising out of and in the course of (one's) employment." The Forgash decision effectively mandated the conclusion that Workers' Compensation Judges' findings with regard to "compensability" pursuant to the principle of res judicata, established that a school district employee prevailing in the Workers' Compensation forum was entitled, as matter of law, to additional salary payments pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

In the Verneret case cited by the Board of Education the Commissioner of Education in reversing the Administrative Law Judge, determined that once an employee prevailed with regard to the Workers' Compensation component of a particular personnel dispute regarding entitlements to additional salary that employee was entitled to judgment, as a matter of law, pursuant to the prescriptions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, regarding claims that the employee's "employer shall pay to such employee the full salary or wages for the period of such absence for up to one calendar year without having such absence charged to the annual sick leave or the accumulated sick leave provided in Sections 18A:30-2 and 18A:30-3."

In consideration of the Appellate Division's decision in Forgash, as applied in the Verneret case, it is submitted that petitioner's cross-motion for summary decision should be granted in its entirety. The Board of Education should be ordered to strictly comply with the prescriptions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 regarding additional salary payments owed to petitioner Dr. Ira Sweet.

POINT I

WHETHER PETITIONER'S CLAIM WAS TIMELY FILED PURSUANT TO N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c)

The controlling State Board of Education regulation is found at N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) which states, in part that:

The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing. (Emphasis supplied)

The instant matter concerns an Order for Judgment and an Amended Order for Judgment issued by the Honorable James J. O'Connell, Jr., Judge of Workers' Compensation dated December 29, 1992 and February 17, 1993, respectively. Therein, Judge O'Connell awarded petitioner partial/permanent disability which entitled petitioner to 120 weeks payable at the rate of $86.05 per week amounting to $10,326. Petitioner was also awarded counsel fees in an amount of $4,974.00 by the Board.

In the matter of Verneret, supra., cited by the Board, the Commissioner of Education held, among other things, that:

In this case, the Workers' Compensation determination upon which petitioner reasonably waited to file his claim was an absolute prerequisite to any ruling by the Commissioner; indeed, petitioner did not have a cause of action under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 until such time as the nexus between his injury and his employment was definitively established through compensation proceedings. Id. 1732 (citations omitted) (Emphasis supplied).

Thus, in Verneret, the Commissioner held that the Judgment of the Workers' Compensation Court triggered the 90 day rule under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). Here, petitioner was advised by the Workers' Compensation Court of its final Amended Order, dated February 17, 1993. Under the Verneret holding, the 90 days within which petitioner was required to file his petition commenced upon his receipt of Judge O'Connell's Amended Order of Judgment, dated February 17, 1993. The herein record demonstrates that the petitioner's Petition of Appeal was received by the Commissioner on October 6, 1993.

The Verneret holding by the Commissioner is supported by opinion of our Supreme Court in Kaprow, supra. concerning the 90 day rule under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). In John LeRose vs. Board of Education of the Township of Lacey, Ocean County, (OAL Dkt. No. EDU 10555-93, Decided March 25, 1994, remanded by the Commissioner of Education May 17, 1994) this court summarized the Kaprow case as follows:

Maurice Kaprow was a tenured assistant superintendent in the employ of the Berkeley Township Board of Education. Kaprow's employment was terminated effective June 31, 1981, as a consequence of a reduction in force (RIF) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. The Berkeley Board failed to maintain Kaprow's name on a preferred eligibility list for reemployment as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12. Subsequent to Kaprow's termination, the Berkeley Board filled the position of assistant superintendent with someone other than Kaprow and without notice to him.

On February 23, 1988, Kaprow inquired of the Berkeley Board's secretary as to whether positions for which he retained tenure rights had been established by the Board subsequent to his termination. On February 23, 1988, the Board Secretary wrote Kaprow to advise him that on September 9, 1986, the Board appointed Robert Cilento to the position of Assistant Superintendent of Administrative Services. The Board Secretary also advised Kaprow that on July 1, 1987, the Board had appointed Sheila McGuckin as District Supervisor of Elementary Schools.

In or about February 28, 1988, Kaprow addressed a letter to the Berkeley Board making claim to both the Assistant Superintendent and District Supervisor positions. Kaprow requested the Board to reinstate him retroactively with full back pay and benefits, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12. The Berkeley Board did not reply to Kaprow's letter of February 28, 1988.

On April 25, 1988, Kaprow sent a second letter to the Berkeley Board asserting he wished to amicably resolve the matter and requested a reply by May 16, 1988. On June 14, 1988, the Berkeley Board's attorney responded to Kaprow's April 25, 1988, letter and acknowledged that two positions had been created and filled. The Board's attorney asserted, among other things, that the duties of the two positions were substantially different from those performed by Kaprow and, therefore, his RIF rights did not attach and there was no basis for his reinstatement.

On August 1, 1988, Kaprow filed a verified Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education asserting his claim to the positions of Assistant Superintendent of Administrative Services and/or District Supervisor. Kaprow's case proceeded through the OAL, the Commissioner, the State Board of Education, the Appellate Division of Superior Court, to the New Jersey Supreme Court, which granted his petition for certification at 130 N.J. 16 (1992).

The Court in Kaprow found that the letter he received from the Berkeley Board's secretary on February 23, 1988, constituted adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). Justice Garibaldi, writing for the Court, made the following observation:

Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate. See Burns v. West Am. Corp., 137 N.J. Super. 422, 446, 349, A 2d. 142 (Dist. Ct. 1975).

Moreover, adequate notice under the regulation must be sufficient to further the purpose of the ninety-day limitations period. See Apex Roofing Supply Co. v. Howell, 59 N.J. Super. 462, 158, A. 2d. 49 (App. Div. 1960). A limitations period has two purposes. The first is to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims. Ochs v. Federal Ins. Co., 90 N.J. 108, 112, 447, A. 2d. 163 (1982). The second purpose is “to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose” by giving security and stability to human affairs. Ibid. (quoting Farrell v. Votator Div. 62 N.J. 111, 115, 299, A. 2d. 394 (1973)).

When a plaintiff knows or has reason to know that he has a cause of action against an identifiable defendant and voluntarily sleeps on his rights so long as to permit the customary period of limitations to expire, the pertinent considerations of individual justice as well as the broader consideration of repose, coincide to bar his action. [Farrell, supra. 62 N.J. at 115, 299, A. 2d. 394]

Adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 should accommodate both purposes. That is, the notice requirement should effectuate concerns for individual justice by not triggering the limitations period until the tenured teachers have been alerted to the existence of facts that may equate in law with a post-RIF cause of action. See Burd v. New Jersey Tel. Co., 76 N.J. 284, 291, 386, A. 2d. 1310 (1978). At the same time, it should further considerations of repose by establishing an objective event to trigger the limitations period in order “to enable the proper and efficient administration of the affairs of government.” Borough of Park Ridge v. Salimone, 21 N.J. 28, 48, 120 A. 2d. 721 (1956) Id. at 587.

The Court held that the notice to Kaprow on February 23, 1988, albeit unofficial and informal, was sufficient to trigger the ninety-day limitations period. Kaprow’s subsequent attempt to negotiate with the Board to resolve his claim was held to be irrelevant. The negotiations did not negate the fact that he received adequate notice February 23, 1988, nor did it toll the running of the ninety-day limitations period.

Here, petitioner was issued the Workers’ Compensation Court’s final order dated February 17, 1993. I CONCLUDE that the February 17, 1993 Amended Order for Judgment by the Honorable James J. O'Connell, Jr., J.W.C. constitutes the commencement of the 90 day rule pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). Petitioner knew or had reason to know that he had a cause of action against the Board at the time. Kaprow at 587.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that petitioner's Petition of Appeal filed before the Commissioner on October 6, 1993, was untimely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) and the holding in Kaprow.

According, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the instant Petition of Appeal should be dismissed.

POINT II

WHETHER THE PETITION OF APPEAL IS BARRED BY THE SETTLEMENT ENTERED INTO THE PARTIES

The Agreement between petitioner and the Board, signed by petitioner on December 17, 1990, provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

8. Withdrawal of Litigation

Upon the signing of this agreement, Dr. Sweet shall take all necessary measures to withdraw all pending disputes between the parties, with the exception of pending workers' compensation claims

This agreement shall act as release of liability of the Board for all matters or events occurring prior to the date of this agreement, with the exception of pending workers' compensation claims.

Paragraph 9 of the Agreement provides for the cessation of litigation and states:

Dr. Sweet agrees that after this agreement is signed he will not initiate or participate in initiating a petition, complaint, investigation or lawsuit of any kind arising out of relating to matters or events which arose prior to the signing of this agreement. Dr. Sweet further agrees not to initiate or participate in initiating a petition, complaint, investigation or lawsuit of any kind arising out of or relating to matters or events which arise after the signing of this agreement; and that in lieu thereof he shall submit any and all work-related problems to Edward Elms, Assistant Superintendent of Schools, as final arbiter of disputes between Dr. Sweet and anyone connected with the district. (Petitioner's Exhibit C, Board's Exhibit A)

The Agreement clearly saved and preserved petitioner's rights to continue to pursue his Workers' Compensation claims which were pending at the signing of the Agreement. Paragraph 9 of the Agreement merely provides that petitioner shall not "initiate" or "participate in initiating" in litigation of any kind arising out of or relating to matters or events which arose prior to the signing of the agreement.

The term "initiate" as defined by BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (5th ed. 1979) at 705, means to "commence: start; originate; introduce; inchoate." In MERRIAM-WEBSTER'S COLLEGIATE DICTIONARY (10th ed. 1993) at 601, "initiate" is defined as "1: to cause or facilitate the beginning of: set going" Here, petitioner's Workers' Compensation claims were continuous, ongoing and protected by the Agreement entered into by him and the Board. Petitioner did not "initiate" any litigation in violation of the Agreement. Rather, the Board failed to comply with Judge O'Connell's Order of Judgment and Amended Order of Judgment.

It was due to the Board's failure to comply with Judge O'Connell's Orders that caused petitioner to petition the Commissioner for recourse to recover that which was due him. Petitioner's Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner was merely an extension of his Workers' Compensation claim against the Board which was preserved by the Agreement.

I CONCLUDE, that pursuant to the Agreement between petitioner and the Board, petitioner preserved his right to pursue his remedies as a consequence of the Worker's Compensation Court's holding in his favor.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that petitioner had a right to petition the Commissioner pursuant to his claims under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

Petitioner's argument of the Board's "unclean" hands was not raised as a issue by the prehearing order to be determined by this tribunal and, therefore, will not be dealt with here.

Petitioner's argument that he is entitled to payment under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 as a matter of law is similar, in many respects, to the arguments advanced by petitioner Kaprow.

Notwithstanding Kaprow's entitlement, the Court determined that he slept on his rights for failure to comply with the 90 day rule and I so CONCLUDE here.

ORDER

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) and the holding in Kaprow, supra, the herein Petition of Appeal is DISMISSED for failure to comply with the 90 day rule and SUMMARY DECISION is hereby DENIED to PETITIONER and ENTERED on BEHALF of the JACKSON TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 _____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, timely exceptions were filed by both parties, and a reply to petitioner's exceptions was filed by the Board.

In his exceptions, petitioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusions regarding petitioner's ability to bring the within petition under the terms of his 1991 settlement agreement, but disputes the ALJ's findings with respect to the timeliness of that petition. Specifically, petitioner argues that the ALJ misinterpreted and misapplied the holding of the New Jersey Supreme Court in its Kaprow decision, supra, and that he further misunderstood the significance of the Commissioner decisions cited. Petitioner reiterates his Kaprow-based argument set forth at length in the initial decision at 11-14 above, as well as other legal arguments referenced in the initial decision regarding statutory entitlement and strict application of the 90-day rule in cases arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. Petitioner stresses that he received no substantive response from the Board or any agent thereof regarding his claim for salary following adjudication of his workers' compensation claim until the Board attorney's letter of September 20, 1993, which placed him on notice for the first time that the Board would not be honoring his entitlement, thereby giving him the first action from which he could take appeal under the express language of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c).

In reply, the Board contends that petitioner's position, that the 90-day period does not begin to run until a person receives notification from the Board that his or her claim has been rejected, turns the holding of Kaprow on its head. Rather, the Board contends, that case clearly requires the 90-day rule to be reckoned from the date a person has knowledge that will give him/her a cause of action, specifically, notice that his/her rights may have been violated or that he/she may have an entitlement to some form of compensation. In fact, Kaprow specifically rejects the notion that the 90-day period is tolled while a person is awaiting a reply to his/her letter claiming such an entitlement, and in a prior decision, Verneret, supra, the Commissioner expressly held the cause of action in claims arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 to be the determination of the Workers' Compensation Court.

In its own exceptions, the Board endorses the ALJ's reasoning and conclusions with regard to the timeliness of petitioner's filing, but seeks, for purposes of precedent or possible appeal, a correction holding that petitioner's cause of action arose upon issuance of the original Order of the Workers' Compensation Court dated December 29, 1992, not upon issuance of the Amended Order of February 17, 1993. It was the former, the Board argues, that established the fact of work-related injury and gave rise to any purported claim under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, while the latter's express purpose was solely to correct an inadvertent error in the original Order regarding calculation of petitioner's rate of compensation.

The Board further disputes the ALJ's conclusion regarding the effect of the 1991 settlement agreement on petitioner's ability to bring the instant appeal, reiterating the arguments reproduced at length at pages 8-10 above.

Upon review and consideration of this matter, for the reasons set forth below, the Commissioner reverses the initial decision with respect to its finding on the timeliness of petitioner's appeal, while affirming the ALJ's ruling with respect to petitioner's ability to bring an appeal before the Commissioner under the terms of the 1991 settlement agreement.

Initially, the Commissioner does not agree that Kaprow, supra, and the Commissioner's decision in Verneret, supra, compel a conclusion that petitioner's cause of action arose upon the date of his Workers' Compensation determination. In Kaprow, while petitioner's entitlement to a subsequent opening arose upon elimination of his own position, his cause of action did not arise until: 1) the Board affirmatively moved to place someone else in that opening, and 2) he had specific knowledge of the Board's action, so as to have been placed on notice that his rights may have been violated. It is, therefore, inconsistent to conclude herein that, based upon Kaprow, petitioner's cause of action arose upon creation of his entitlement, rather than upon the actions or events that would or should have reasonably led him to recognize that the Board did not intend to honor that entitlement, thereby violating his statutory rights.

Neither can the Commissioner's ruling in Verneret be construed, as the Board herein would have it, as express support of its position. In Verneret, the matter at hand was not whether petitioner's cause of action arose on issuance of a Worker's Compensation ruling as opposed to subsequent notice that a board would not pay additional benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, as is the case herein. Rather, the debate centered on whether it was necessary for petitioner to have filed before the Commissioner at the time benefits were initially refused by the Board, as opposed to waiting for a Workers' Compensation determination; indeed, the central issue of the present matter did not even arise, in that petitioner filed within 90 days of his Workers' Compensation determination.

Finally, neither the parties nor the ALJ take into account the State Board of Education's January 4, 1995 appeal decision on Verneret. Prior to that ruling, the Commissioner had routinely held, as he did in the matter on appeal, that petitioners had no cause of action under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 until such time as the Division of Workers' Compensation ruled that a specific disability was work-related. The State Board, however, declared this long-standing practice to be in error and held instead that

The fact that the Commissioner has the discretion to defer exercising his jurisdiction in certain instances in order to permit the Division of Workers' Compensation to determine whether an injury was work-related does not, however, excuse a petitioner's failure to comply with the filing requirements of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 when seeking benefits under the education law. Therefore, we can not accept the Commissioner's legal conclusion that a cause of action under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 does not arise until such time as Workers' Compensation renders such a determination.

We reiterate that it is the Commissioner who must determine whether or not the particular facts underlying a claim filed with him for benefits pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 are such that he should refrain from considering the matter until a determination has been made by the Division of Workers' Compensation. Hackensack v. Winner, supra. In contrast, N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 establishes filing requirements that petitioners must meet in filing petitions under the education laws.

We also hold that any petitioner claiming benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 must file a petition with the Commissioner of Education within 90 days of the district board's action which has the effect of denying such benefits to petitioner. (Slip Opinion at pp. 4-6, emphasis in final paragraph supplied)

Thus, it is now clearly established how a cause of action under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 is to be reckoned. However, the State Board, in recognition that its ruling significantly altered the prevalent understanding of when claims under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 were to be filed with the Commissioner, went on to apply its holding prospectively and relax the 90-day filing rule so as to permit petitioner to pursue his claim.

Therefore, under the facts and circumstances herein, which arose under the legal construction and practice in effect prior to the State Board's ruling in Verneret, the Commissioner deems it appropriate to relax the 90-day filing rule so as to permit consideration of petitioner's claim. In so holding, the Commissioner notes that petitioner promptly pursued his claim with the Board upon issuance of a determination from Workers' Compensation and promptly filed before the Commissioner upon first notice by the Board, or any representative thereof, that it would not pay the anticipated benefit.

On the question of whether the within appeal is barred by the terms of the 1991 settlement agreement between the parties, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner's entitlement under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 is an extension of the Workers' Compensation claims expressly preserved in the settlement agreement. As that agreement did not insulate the Board from the consequent obligation which arose once those claims were successful, petitioner is not prevented by the terms of the agreement from appealing the Board's refusal to fulfill that obligation.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, the Commissioner finds that petitioner is entitled to a hearing on the merits of his claim. The Commissioner, therefore, remands this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for findings and recommendations as to the extent of petitioner's entitlement under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE	:	DECISION

RESPONDENT-APPELLANT.	:

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 26, 1995

For the Petitioner-Respondent, Klausner, Hunter & Cige (Stephen B. Hunter, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Appellant, Carroll & Weiss (Russell Weiss, Jr., Esq., of Counsel)

The basic facts herein are not in dispute. On December 29, 1992 and, as subsequently modified on February 17, 1993, the Division of Workers' Compensation rendered a determination that Ira Sweet (hereinafter "petitioner"), a retired school psychologist, had suffered an injury which arose out of and in the course of his employment with the Board of Education of the Township of Jackson (hereinafter "Board") and that he was entitled to partial/permanent disability benefits. Petitioner thereafter sought payment from the Board, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, of his salary for periods of absence from his tenured employment as a result of such injury.¹ By letter dated September 20, 1993, the Board indicated that it was denying petitioner's claim on the basis of a settlement agreement entered into by the parties in January 1991. On October 6, 1993, petitioner filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging the Board's refusal to provide him with such benefits.

An Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") recommended dismissing the petition as untimely under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c), reasoning that petitioner was required to file that petition within 90 days after Workers' Compensation determined that he had suffered an injury which arose out of and in the course of his employment. The Commissioner rejected that conclusion, finding that relaxation of the filing requirement was appropriate in this instance. Accordingly, he remanded this matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for further proceedings on the merits of the petition. The Board filed the instant appeal to the State Board of Education.

Although we affirm the ultimate determination of the Commissioner to remand this matter to OAL, we modify the Commissioner's analysis.

¹ N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, "Payment of sick leave for service connected disability," provides, in pertinent part:

Whenever any employee, entitled to sick leave under this chapter, is absent from his post of duty as a result of a personal injury caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, his employer shall pay to such employee the full salary or wages for the period of such absence for up to one calendar year without having such absence charged to the annual sick leave or the accumulated sick leave provided in sections 18A:30-2 and 18A:30-3. Salary or wage payments provided in this section shall be made for absence during the waiting period and during the period the employee received or was eligible to receive a temporary disability benefit under chapter 15 of Title 34, Labor and Workmen's Compensation, of the Revised Statutes. Any amount of salary or wages paid or payable to the employee pursuant to this section shall be reduced by the amount of any workmen's compensation award made for temporary disability.

N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) provides that:

The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

Petitioner herein, in express compliance with N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2, filed the instant petition with the Commissioner of Education within 90 days after he received the September 20, 1993 letter from the Board notifying him that it was denying his claim for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. Petitioner's compliance with the 90-day rule is not impacted by decisions rendered by the Commissioner during this period which indicated that a petition claiming benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 was required to be filed within 90 days after the Division of Workers' Compensation determined that a claimant had suffered an injury which arose out of and in the course of his employment. See Verneret v. Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, decided by the Commissioner, October 11, 1991, aff'd with modification by the State Board, January 4, 1995.² Unlike the matter now before us, those cases involved circumstances in which the employee's claim for benefits had been denied by the district board prior to a determination by Workers' Compensation. In such instances, it had been held by the ² The State Board in Verneret acknowledged the confusion which existed regarding the filing requirements for petitions claiming benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 and clarified the law in this regard. The State Board rejected the Commissioner's legal conclusion that a cause of action under that statute did not arise until such time as Workers' Compensation rendered a determination that the injury was work-related and held that petitions for benefits thereunder were required to be filed with the Commissioner of Education within 90 days of the district board's action which had the effect of denying such benefits to the petitioner. Given the confusion that existed in this area, the State Board applied its holding prospectively.

Commissioner that a petition for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 need not have been filed until after Workers' Compensation rendered its decision.

As duly noted by the Commissioner, however, this case involves a situation in which the petitioner's claim for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 was denied by the Board subsequent to the determination by the Division of Workers' Compensation that he had suffered an injury arising out of his employment. We find no justification for applying circular reasoning to these circumstances so as to circumvent the express language of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) and require petitioner to have filed his petition subsequent to the Worker's Compensation determination, yet prior to the Board's denial of his claim. Inasmuch as petitioner filed his petition with the Commissioner of Education within 90 days after the Board provided him with notice that it was denying his claim for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, we find that he fully complied with the 90-day requirement of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). Consequently, we reject the Commissioner's assertion that it was necessary to relax that requirement in this instance.

In addition, although we agree with the Commissioner that petitioner was not prevented from claiming benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 as a result of the January 1991 settlement agreement with the Board, we also modify the Commissioner's analysis in that regard. Given the facts herein and the state of the law at the time of the controverted agreement, see, supra, we cannot conclude that petitioner knowingly relinquished his right to a statutory benefit. Indeed, the Commissioner had held, in a determination subsequently rejected by the State Board, that a cause of action for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 did not even arise until such time as Workers' Compensation rendered a determination that the injury arose out of and in the course of the claimant's employment. Verneret, supra.³ in view of the fact that petitioner expressly excluded "pending workers' compensation claims" from the settlement agreement, we are unable to conclude under these particular facts that petitioner knowingly waived any entitlement to benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed herein, we affirm the ultimate determination of the Commissioner rejecting the ALJ's dismissal of the petition and remanding this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings on the merits of the petition.

Date of mailing NOV 03 1995

³ Our January 1995 decision in Verneret, subsequent to the relevant events herein, settled that a cause of action for benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 is entirely distinct from a claim for workers' compensation benefits, notwithstanding that the employee's entitlement to benefits under that statute may be contingent upon a subsequent determination by the Division of Workers' Compensation that the injury was work-related.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF SOUTH ORANGE- :
MAPLEWOOD, ESSEX COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, full-time clerical aide, contended Board's action terminating her employment violated her tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2.

Citing Barnes Appellate Division decision, ALJ found that petitioner's job as clerical aide was a "clerical position" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 and she could not be removed from it without the filing and proving of tenure charges against her in accord with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -29. ALJ ordered petitioner be immediately restored to her position as clerical aide with back pay and compensation for benefits lost from the date of her termination.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision and ordered reinstatement with compensation.

MARGARET BERARDI,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF SOUTH

Respondent.

Gregory T. Syrek, Esq., for petitioner (Bucceri and Pincus, attorneys)

Joanne L. Butler, Esq., for respondent (Young, Dimiero & Sayovitz, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 6, 1995

Decided: April 11, 1995

BEFORE EDITH KLINGER, ALJ:

On July 15, 1994, petitioner, Margaret Berardi, filed a verified petition alleging that she was terminated from her position as a full-time clerical aide in violation of her tenure rights acquired pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. On August 1, 1994, the respondent filed its answer denying that Berardi had tenure rights. On August 5, 1994, the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

At a telephone prehearing conference, held with the parties on October 18, 1994, it was determined that the following were the issues to be resolved at hearing:

1. Was petitioner tenured in her clerical position pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2?
2. Was the Board required to file tenure charges against her in order to remove her for cause?
3. To what relief, if any, is petitioner entitled?

It was further determined that there was no dispute as to the facts in this matter. Therefore, the parties agreed to file a joint Stipulation of Facts with the undersigned and submit the matter for hearing on the papers. The record closed on March 3, 1994 after the last submission was received from the parties.

STIPULATION OF FACTS

The parties stipulated that the facts in this matter are as follows:

1. On August 25, 1986, the respondent, Board of Education of the School District of South Orange and Maplewood (Board), appointed the petitioner, Margaret Berardi, to serve as a full-time clerical aide at Columbia High School from September 1, 1986 to June 30, 1987. Berardi was notified of this action by letter dated August 26, 1986.
2. Berardi's salary for the 1986-87 school year was $9,165, as set forth in a memorandum dated October 1, 1986.
3. Berardi was reemployed as a full time clerical aide for the 1987-88 school year. Her salary for that year was $10,140, as set forth in a contract signed by Berardi on June 4, 1987.
4. Berardi was reemployed as a full time clerical aide for the 1988-89 school year. Her salary for that year was $11,460, as set forth in a contract signed by Berardi on January 3, 1989.

Her salary for that school year was initially set at $15,508, pending the outcome of collective negotiations as set forth in a document, dated June 2, 1992. Pursuant to collective negotiations, her salary was increased to $15,670.
9. Berardi was reemployed as a full time clerical aide for the 1993-94 school year. Her salary for that year was $16,532, as established by the applicable salary guide.
10. On May 2, 1994, the Board terminated Berardi's employment effective July 1, 1994. Berardi was notified by letter of May 5, 1994, that her employment was terminated "due to performance reasons."
11. At no time has the Board initiated tenure charges against the petitioner, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -29.

THE RELEVANT STATUTE

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 provides, in relevant part:

b. Any person holding any secretarial or clerical position or employment under a board of education of any school district or under any officer thereof, after

1. The expiration of a period of employment of three consecutive calendar years in the district or such shorter period as may be fixed by the board or officer employing him, or

2. Employment for three consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year, an academic year being the period between the time when school opens in the district after the general summer vacation and the beginning of the next succeeding summer vacation, and

c. Any person, who has acquired, or shall hereafter acquire, tenure in any secretarial or clerical office, position or employment under the board of education or a school district and has been appointed district clerk or secretary, or shall hereafter be appointed secretary of said district, as such secretary, shall hold his office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation, except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense and only in the manner prescribed by [N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 through -29].

DISCUSSION OF LAW

The applicable statute makes it clear that anyone employed by a school district in a clerical position for three consecutive calendar years or three consecutive academic years acquires tenure in the position. Therefore, in the present case, if Berardi's job as a clerical aide is a "clerical position" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, she cannot be removed from it without filing and proving tenure charges against her in accord with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -29.

The statutes contain no blanket denial of tenure to individuals employed as "aides," however, the applicable sections of the administrative code and case law have recognized that certain employees characterized as aides are not entitled to tenure.

Consequently, if Berardi is not employed in a clerical position, the Board may terminate her as it would any other nontenured employee.

In Barnes v. Bd. of Ed. Of Jersey City, 85 N.J. Super. 42 (App. Div. 1964), the school board argued that the words "clerical" and "secretarial" were synonymous and that "a clerk is one who under direction, performs routine, repetitive, non-complex clerical work of a varied nature as a beginner at the entrance level of employment." 85 N.J. Super. at 44, 45. The court considered the legislative history of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, and rejected the Board's restrictive definition, stating:

[T]he phrase "clerical position" was intended to extend the statutory protection coverage beyond secretarial employment. Moreover, since tenure statutes are intended to secure efficient public service by protecting the public employees in their employment, "the widest range should be given to the applicability of the law." (Citation omitted.)

[85 N.J. Super. at 45.]

The fact that additional, non-clerical duties, are performed does not control. In Barnes v. Bd. Of Ed. Of Jersey City, 1963 S.L.D. 240, 245-47, the State Board determined, and the Appellate Division affirmed, 85 N.J. Super. at 45, that the following employees held 'clerical positions' within the meaning of the statute, although some served under job titles that did not mention the words 'clerk' or 'clerical.'

1. Raymond G. Davis was appointed as a porter and later served as an inspector in the maintenance department. Among his duties were making up mechanic's payrolls, collecting time cards, keeping time records, and keeping lists of where mechanics were working and what they were doing. He also checked to see if the men were performing their work and did occasional inspections but 'the bulk of his time was spent on clerical assignments.'
2. Frank Casey held the position of storekeeper. He administered the storeroom. He also "kept time sheets, recorded absences, scheduled and recorded vacations, noted accidents and reported on them, kept delivery and pick-up records, recorded purchase orders, typed requisitions, took inventories, supervised the card index for storeroom records, received and counted supplies, etc.”

3. Albert Herberman was a stock clerk. He typed “records of what was received, and what was requisitioned and of inventory remaining.”
4. William R. Flanagan was a receiving stock clerk. He received goods sent in, checked them and signed receipts.
5. John Colleran was an assistant storekeeper. His duties consisted of “assigning requisitions for execution, listing purchase orders, checking loading of trucks, preparing inventories, maintaining neatness and order in storeroom, typing notices, handling inventory, etc.”
6. Ettore Vignone was a timekeeper. Ninety percent of his duties were clerical and for the rest of the time he was in charge of all maintenance emergencies occurring outside of regular school hours.

However, the mere fact that an employee performs clerical duties is not controlling. In Rossi v. Bd. of Ed. of the Tp. of Willingboro, Agency Docket No. 294-8/78 (decided Sept. 24, 1980), aff'd, Comm’r of Ed. (Nov. 7, 1980) (unreported), aff'd, State Bd. (August 5, 1981), the petitioner was employed as a learning resource center aide and claimed tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2b. The district argued that her title as ‘aide’ precluded her from eligibility for tenure pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.9. The administrative law judge stated that her job duties included clerical duties but found that the position was a paraprofessional, not a clerical, one. A paraprofessional is defined at N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.6(a) as a school or classroom aide “assisting in the supervision of pupil activities under the direction of a principal, teacher or other designated certified professional personnel.” He distinguished Barnes, supra, on the grounds that it dealt with nonprofessional, rather than paraprofessional employees.

In both Jacobsen v. Bd. of Ed. of Union City, Comm’r of Ed. (Sept. 16, 1983), aff'd, St. Bd. (Feb. 1, 1984), and Beaute v. Bd. of Ed. of North Arlington, OAL DKT. EDU 295-80 (July 28, 1981), adopted, Comm’r of Ed. (Sept. 14, 1981, aff'd, State Bd. of

Ed. (Feb. 3, 1982), the use of the word "clerk" in the petitioners' job titles was held to create reasonable expectations of tenure. There is no evidence in the record in the present case that would allow a finding as to Berardi's employment expectations as they related to tenure.

The Random House College Dictionary, 251 (Rev. Ed. 1984) defines a clerk as "a person employed, as in an office, to keep records, accounts, files, handle correspondence, or the like." The American Heritage Desk Dictionary, 194 (1981 ed.) defines a clerk as "a person who works in an office performing such tasks as keeping records and files." "Clerical" pertains to, is appropriate for, or is assigned to a clerk. The last definition is a composite of the definitions given by the two cited dictionaries.

Based upon these definitions, I FIND that Berardi's position is clerical. I also FIND that, whatever her job title, she holds a "clerical position" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, because her duties are "clerical" within the meaning of Barnes, supra. Most of her job duties are the same or very similar to those of the employees in that matter who were found to hold "clerical positions".

I FIND that she is not employed as a paraprofessional aide, as defined by N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.6(a), and, therefore, I CONCLUDE that she is not precluded from eligibility for tenure pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.9. Rossi, supra. The use of the word "aide" in her job title does not control her tenure status.

Consequently, I CONCLUDE that, pursuant to Barnes v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, 85 N.J. Super., supra, she is entitled to the statutory protection coverage of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that she may not be removed from her position except in accord with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -29. For this reason, I CONCLUDE that respondent's actions were in violation of petitioner's tenure rights.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that Margaret Berardi be immediately restored to her position as clerical aide with back pay and compensation for benefits lost from the date of her termination..

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

MARGARET BERARDI, :
PETITIONER, :
V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF SOUTH ORANGE-
MAPLEWOOD, ESSEX COUNTY, :
RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions and petitioner's reply thereto were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent's exceptions essentially recast and reiterate arguments advanced before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), again contending, inter alia, that petitioner's service as a clerical aide for the respondent Board is not a tenured position under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, and thus, petitioner's employment may be terminated without respondent's filing and proving tenure charges against her in accord with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to 29.

Upon a careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that pursuant to the Appellate Division decision, Barnes v. Board of Ed. of Jersey City, 85 N.J. Super. 42 (App. Div. 1964), petitioner holds a clerical position within the meaning of the statute based on the nature of her job duties and on the broad range of definition afforded in applying this statute.

The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ that petitioner is entitled to the statutory protection coverage of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 and may not be removed from her position except in accord with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to 29.

Accordingly, for the reasons well-expressed therein, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law and orders that Petitioner Margaret Berardi be immediately restored to her position as clerical aide with back pay and compensation for benefits lost from the date of her termination.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL :
 SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE :
 SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION TOWNSHIP OF MOUNT LAUREL, : DECISION BURLINGTON COUNTY. :
 _____ :

The announced results of the balloting for three members of the Board of Education for full terms of three years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the School District of the Township of Mount Laurel, Burlington County, were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Cathy Ladd	2,170	164	2,334
Dennis Riley	1,733	171	1,904
Miriam (Bobbie) Espy	1,570	132	1,702
Robert M. Sacks	1,580	107	1,687

Pursuant to a letter request from Robert M. Sacks, filed on April 25, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner of Education from the Office of the Burlington County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast at two specific polling places, namely the Countryside Elementary School and the Parkway Elementary School. Mr. Robert Sacks also requested a recount of the absentee ballots, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:15-24. The recount was conducted on May 5, 1995 at the Burlington County Superintendent of Elections Office, Eayrestown Road, Mount Holly, and the Board of Elections Office, 49 Rancocas Road, Mount Holly.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Cathy Ladd	2,170	159	2,329
Dennis Riley	1,733	166	1,899
Miriam (Bobbie) Espy	1,570	132	1,702
Robert M. Sacks	1,580	107	1,687

While the recount of absentee votes resulted in a slight change in tallies for two candidates, the outcome of the election is unaffected by the change.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner determines that, as originally announced, Miriam (Bobbie) Espy, Cathy Ladd and Dennis Riley were elected to full terms of three years each on the Board of Education of the School District of the Township of Mount Laurel.

MAY 31, 1995

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL :
 SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE :
 SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF LITTLE FERRY, BERGEN COUNTY. :
 _____ : DECISION

The announced results of the balloting for three members of the Board of Education for full terms of three years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995, in the School District of the Borough of Little Ferry were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Joseph J. La Rosa	415	62	477
Michael P. Castelli	366	48	414
Linda C. Reinert	366	40	406
Janet Castellano	344	47	391
Salvatore Badalamenti	297	49	346
Peter F. Iurato	273	44	317

Pursuant to a letter request from Janet Castellano, dated April 20, 1995 and filed on April 21, 1995, an authorized representative of the Commissioner from the Office of the Bergen County Superintendent of Schools was directed to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 14-63.2. The recount was conducted on May 4, 1995 at the Bergen County Voting Machine Warehouse in Carlstadt.

At the conclusion of the recount, the totals were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Joseph J. La Rosa	415	62	477
Linda C. Reinert	364	40	404
Janet Castellano	354	47	401
Salvatore Badalamenti	297	49	346
Michael P. Castelli	294	48	342
Peter F. Iurato	273	44	317

There was a change in tally based on the number of votes at the polls for candidates on the ballots.* Such change, 72 fewer votes for Michael P. Castelli, 2 fewer votes for Linda Reinert and 10 additional votes for Janet Castellano, was attributable to a clerical error on the Official Tabulation of the original election results, and resulted in a change in the announced results of the election, with Janet Castellano rather than Michael P. Castelli being a successful candidate. As such, the Commissioner's representative recommends that Joseph J. La Rosa, Linda C. Reinert, and Janet Castellano are the successful candidates for three-year terms on the Little Ferry Board of Education.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts it as his own.

* Absentee tallies on recount are as reported by the County Board of Elections. No application for a recount of absentee ballots had been made to Superior Court as of the date of the Commissioner's recheck of the voting machines.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that Joseph J. La Rosa, Linda C. Reinert, and Janet Castellano were elected to full terms of three years each on the Board of Education of the School District of the Borough of Little Ferry.

The announced results of the balloting for three (3) members of the Board of Education for full terms of three (3) years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the School District of the Borough of Carteret were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Pat Crilley	835	43	878
Dennis Cherepski	793	50	843
Sally Bonventure	725	49	774
Louis G. Mangieri	754	13	767
William J. Kolibas, Jr.	612	38	650
Sophie F. Cherepon	587	13	600
Albert Walsh	491	36	527
Michelle M. Grandell	485	33	518

Pursuant to a letter request from Louis G. Mangieri, dated April 25, 1995, the Commissioner directed his representative from the Office of the Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2. The machine recount was conducted on May 2, 1995 at the Middlesex County Voting Machine Warehouse in Edison. There were no changes in the at-poll tallies as a result of the recount.

A recount of absentee ballots had been requested pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:57-24, and upon such recount, on May 3, 1995, the Board of Elections rejected several ballots printed in blue ink, with the result that the outcome of the election appeared to be altered. However, appeal of that determination was taken to Superior Court, and on May 12, 1995, the Court pronounced the May 3, 1995 certification null and void and reinstated the original count.

Thus, on recount, the results of the election were unchanged and remained as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Pat Crilley	835	43	878
Dennis Cherepski	793	50	843
Sally Bonventure	725	49	774
Louis G. Mangieri	754	13	767
William J. Kolibas, Jr.	612	38	650
Sophie F. Cherepon	587	13	600
Albert Walsh	491	36	527
Michelle M. Grandell	485	33	518

On recount, a two-vote discrepancy was noted between the numbers on the public counters and the poll list, but this discrepancy was insufficient to have affected the outcome of the election.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that Pat Crilley, Dennis Cherepski and Sally Bonventure were elected to full terms of three years each on the Board of Education of the Borough of Carteret.

The Commissioner further directs that a copy of this decision be forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law for inclusion in the record of the inquiry presently pending into the conduct of the above-captioned election.

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

On July 28, 1994, this matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -13. Cross-motions for summary decision were granted in part and denied in part by order entered January 31, 1995 (copy attached) and a hearing was scheduled for March 21, 1995. Prior to the scheduled hearing date, the parties advised that they had agreed to a settlement, resolving this matter without the necessity for a hearing. A signed Settlement Agreement, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof as if set forth herein at length, was received on April 12, 1995.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.
2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this Agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the Settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

Dear Counsel:

I have considered your cross-motions for summary decision, the responses filed by each of you, and the oral arguments I heard by telephone conference call on December 15, 1994. For the following reasons, petitioner's motion is granted in part and denied in part; respondent's motion is likewise granted in part and denied in part.

IT IS FURTHER AGREED that DHS will pay the Petitioner a lump sum of $3,000 subject to the approval of this settlement by the Commissioner of Education; and

IT IS FURTHER AGREED that DHS will not deduct funds from the $3,000 lump sum and makes no representation concerning what Federal or State taxes, if any, said lump sum may be subject to; and

IT IS FURTHER AGREED that both parties waive any right they may have to pursue any claim for relief for attorney's fees arising from the facts underlying this matter; and

IT IS FURTHER AGREED that both parties waive the right to file exceptions and cross-exceptions;

HOWEVER, should the Commissioner of Education or the State Board of Education refuse to approve any terms of this settlement, such refusal shall not interfere with the right of either party to pursue the matter further nor shall the terms of this settlement or the reasons therefor be offered or admitted as evidence in future proceedings;

THE REASONS FOR ENTERING INTO THIS AGREEMENT ARE AS FOLLOWS:

(a) The costs of continuing to prosecute and defend this matter are expected to be substantial; and

(b) The allegations contained in this petition concern only issues of back pay and do not involve allegations of moral turpitude; and

(c) The Administrative Law Judge has already recommended that the State be held liable for a portion of the monies claimed by Petitioner; and

(d) Petitioner is waiving her right to receive full back salary other than the $3,000 lump sum; and

(e) Both parties after consultation with counsel, fully endorse the agreement and wish to implement said terms.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, mother of high school student G.S., sought order directing the Board to reassess G.S.'s grade for the second marking period and part of the third marking period (1993-94 school year) in the Foods II class. Petitioner challenged use of a grading system which allegedly did not comply with district policy.

ALJ found that the superintendent acted pursuant to the Board's mandate to assure that the grading system was indeed in compliance with the district's policy. That petitioner did not agree with the superintendent's decision not to utilize her grading formula retroactively did not make his conduct nor the Board's affirmance of that conduct arbitrary or capricious. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

BEFORE CAROL LASKIN, ALJ t/a:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

K.S., mother of G.S., filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of the Department of Education on September 1, 1994, seeking an order directing the respondent Glassboro Board of Education (Board) to reassess G.S.'s grade for the second and part of the third marking period (1993-94 school year) in the Foods II class at Glassboro High School.

The matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing and determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. During the January 24, 1995 telephonic prehearing conference, counsel for respondent declared that he would not be representing the Board at hearing. Rather, the Board desired to appear pro se. The undersigned advised during said conference and by letter dated January 31, 1995, that N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4 does not authorize a school district, a body politic, to be represented at a contested hearing by a non-lawyer. Thus, the letter informed, "the superintendent or other non-attorney representative may not present witnesses nor cross-examine petitioner's witnesses at the hearing scheduled for March 2, 1995."

The hearing was indeed held on that date at the OAL, Trenton, New Jersey. While petitioner appeared with counsel, only Superintendent Nicholas Mitcho, fully aware of N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4 and the above outlined communications, was present for respondent. Thus, respondent presented no case in support of its position that it had acted in good faith in accordance with its policies.

Nevertheless, at all times, it remained the petitioner's burden of persuasion and production to establish by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously, discriminatory, or in bad faith in its application of its grading system to petitioner in the Foods II course during the 1993-94 school year. See J.B. on behalf of W.B. v. Bd. of Ed., Twp. of Pequannock, Piscataway, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d. (EDU) 664; Talarski v. Edison Twp. Bd. of Ed., 1977 S.L.D. 862.

To meet this burden, only petitioner, K.S., presented testimony. Fourteen exhibits were admitted into evidence: those exhibits purporting to be Board policies were acknowledged by the Superintendent to be accurate representations of those policies existing during the school year 1993-94. At the close of the hearing on March 2, 1995, the record was closed.

EVIDENCE PRESENTED

At hearing, K.S.'s testimony and the exhibits presented revealed the following: G.S., the son of K.S., a sophomore during the 1993-94 school year, matriculated in the Foods II course at Glassboro High School. The grade for the course was and is comprised 50 percent on tests and 50 percent from participation on food preparation days. It is the preparation grade given to G.S. during the second and part of the third marking periods which is the subject of the instant petition. Participation includes inter alia cooperation during food preparation as well as clean-up.

K.S. asserts that the failing grade given to her son for participation on food preparation days failed to conform with Glassboro Board of Education Policy 5121, P-9, and was inconsistent with the "definition of grades" contained in the student handbook, "The Margol" (P-3a). Petitioner stipulated that she makes no claim that the Board acted discriminatorily towards her son or in bad faith when it determined that on June 1, 1994, after the matter was presented to the full Board, not to recalculate G.S.'s participation grade. Rather, K.S. argues that the Board acted arbitrarily and capriciously in that decision.

Glassboro Board of Education Policy 5121, in pertinent part, provides:

The superintendent, in consultation with the teaching staff, shall develop a marking system to be used uniformly throughout the district. The system should be clear, easily understood by parents/guardians and pupils, and able to be applied with consistency of interpretation. The evaluation and the grading symbols shall be intended to appraise the pupil's progress toward established goals and shall be a factor in promotion/graduation decisions.

The parents/guardians must be made aware of the progress of their child, his/her own growth patterns and the child's progress in relation to recognized standards.

The board of education reserves the right to review and alter any grade or evaluation assigned to a pupil by the professional staff. As a matter of policy it delegates this authority to the superintendent, who shall develop and implement an administrative regulation that establishes a process for the review of any grade or evaluation in question. The regulations shall protect the integrity of the grading and evaluation system and guarantee a fair hearing to all individuals party to a dispute concerning a grade or evaluation.

The definition of grade section of "The Margol" states inter alia:

Note: The guidance department furnishes the following information to colleges and universities relative to grade interpretation.

- A -- 90 - 100 %
- B -- 80 - 89%
- C -- 70 - 79%
- D -- 60 - 69%
- NC -- Below 60%
- NCA -- 50 - 0% Failure due to excessive absences
- NCE -- 0% Failure due to not taking final exam

Teachers use the above stated information as a guideline in determining report period grades.

For the past twelve years, prior to the 1993-94 school year, the foods courses were taught by Mrs. Lynn Bullock. She utilized a daily food preparation grade system of 0, 1, 2, and 3. At some point, Mrs. Bullock took a medical leave of absence and was replaced first by Mrs. Dilba, and during the second marking period of the 1993-94 school year, by long term substitute, Patricia LaBouff.

In early February 1994, G.S. received his failing grade in Foods II, P-10. K.S., never disputing her son's less-than-admirable behavior and failing mid-term grade, requested a meeting with Mrs. LaBouff and the guidance counselor, Mr. John LaPalomente. Such meetings were conducted on February 25 and 28, 1994, to discuss the computation of the grade. K.S. asserts that at said meetings, she was informed that the 0, 1, 2, and 3 in participation corresponded to an equivalency of 1 equals 33, 2 equals 66, and 3 equals 100. This, K.S. argues, is inconsistent with Policy 5121, P-9 (outlined above) and the student handbook grade section, P-3 (outlined above), in that the grading system is unclear, not easily understood, and has the propensity to be applied inconsistently. K.S. has sought to have her son's grade changed in conformance with her formula, P-14, an equivalency of 3 equals 100, 2 equals 85, 1 equals 70. Utilizing this formula, K.S. tabulates that her son should have received a "60" in participation rather than "50" during the second marking period and an "86" rather than an "82" on the third marking period. See P-11 through P-13.

Receiving no satisfaction from the teacher or guidance counselor, K.S. appealed first to Principal Harry J. Alexandrowicz and then to Superintendent Nicholas A. Mitcho. K.S. testified that Superintendent Mitcho misinformed her that she had no recourse beyond him, and that he claimed he had no authority to change the grade, see P-1. Likewise, she complained he did not inform her of the right to challenge a student's grade pursuant to Board Policy 5125, P-7, and Board Policy 5145.6, Pupil Grievance Procedure, P-8. Nevertheless, K.S. acknowledged that her request for meetings, see P-2 and P-6, were addressed by the superintendent and the Board.

On April 4, 1994, another meeting to discuss the grading issue was held between K.S. with her son G.S. and the superintendent, principal, teacher LaBouf, guidance counselor, and department chairperson Pat Stewart. Therein, the superintendent discussed and presented an amended system for the participation grade, P-4. This new grading system contained a numerical equivalency of 1 through 5 unlike the previous system of 0 through 3. Superintendent Mitcho offered to recalculate the second period grading system utilizing an equivalency of 1 equals 50, 2 equals 69 and 3 equals 100. K.S. refused this calculation, claiming that her formula, identified above, should be utilized.

On or about April 14, 1994, P-4 (presented at the April 4, 1994 meeting) was provided to all students in the home economics foods courses to clarify the grading system for participation during food preparation days. No retroactive changes of grades were made.

K.S. appealed this decision to the Glassboro Board of Education pursuant to Board Policy 5125, P-7, through counsel. Providing the Board with the entire document package of P-1 through P-9, petitioner and counsel had full opportunity to present their arguments to the full Board. The Board recessed into a closed session to deliberate for over two hours where upon petitioner was informed that, based upon a tie vote, the Board had been unable to reach the resolution she sought. Thus, the Board refused to recalculate petitioner's son's participation grade for the second and part of the third 1993-94 marking period. Thereafter, in accordance with the Board's policies and applicable code provisions, petitioner filed the instant appeal.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

It is axiomatic that the Board's policies and acts are entitled to a presumption of correctness. Consequently, the reviewing authority may not over-ride or substitute its judgment for that of the Board unless there is a clear showing of arbitrariness. See Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Ed., 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div., 1960); K.L.L. v. Livingston Twp. Bd. of Ed., 92 N.J.A.R. 2d. (EDU) 648. It is not enough for the petitioner to prove merely that her formulation of a grading system is more reasonable and enlightened than that chosen by the Board, through its superintendent, its administrator. Superintendent Mitcho's determination to clarify the grading for participation in foods classes, P-4, in response to the concerns raised by the petitioner and his decision not to retroactively recalculate participation grades which, he believed, were consistent with P-4, was not arbitrary. Superintendent Mitcho, in good faith, believed that the participation grading system contained in the new "grading for foods classes," P-4, was consistent with the system enforced by Mrs. Bullock and Mrs. LaBouff for twelve years previous to the third marking period of the 1993-94 school year. In both grading systems, a No. 2 grade represented "minimal participation," P-4.

I FIND that Superintendent Mitcho, in devising P-4, with the input of the petitioner, department chairperson, teachers, principal, and guidance counselor, was acting pursuant to the mandate of the Board to assure that the food participation grading system was indeed in compliance with Glassboro Board of Education Policy 5121, P-9. That petitioner does not agree with the superintendent's decision not to utilize her formula retroactively does not make the superintendent's conduct nor the Board's affirmance of that conduct arbitrary or capricious.

Moreover, while I FIND that petitioner may have initially not understood nor have been informed of her appeal rights, I FIND that once cognitive of these rights, she was provided with all due process to appeal and was given a "full and fair opportunity to present evidence relevant to the issue,” pursuant to Board’s Policy 5125, P-7. Petitioner’s failure to present the testimony of her son, G.S., the superintendent, or any other relevant staff member of the Board attributed to her failure to meet her burden of establishing that the Board’s actions were arbitrary, capricious, or a bad faith exercise of the discretion in the performance of duties imposed upon them. See Talariski v. Edison Twp. Bd. of Ed., supra.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has not met her burden and that the petitioner’s appeal must then be DISMISSED. It is SO ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with and adopts as his own the ALJ's conclusion that petitioner has not met her burden of establishing that the Board's action in formulating, adopting and applying prospectively a new grading system for the Foods Classes, in response to petitioner's concerns about the former grading system, was arbitrary and capricious merely because it was inconsistent with the grading method devised by petitioner. As aptly noted by the ALJ, "That petitioner does not agree with the superintendent's decision not to utilize her formula retroactively does not make the superintendent's conduct nor the Board's affirmance of that conduct arbitrary or capricious." (Initial decision at p. 6)

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the petition in this matter is adopted for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SOUTH RIVER EDUCATION

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH RIVER, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,

Respondent.

Sanford R. Oxfeld, Esq., for petitioner (Balk, Oxfeld, Mandell & Cohen, attorneys)

Robert A. Blanda, Esq., for respondent

BEFORE ROBERT W. SCOTT, ALJ:

This matter was opened by the petitioner, South River Education Association, on an application for an Order granting emergent relief, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The petitioner seeks to restrain the respondent from using approximately $406,000 restored to the respondent's 1994-95 school budget by the Commissioner of Education on January 26, 1995.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner filed its appeal, including an application for interim relief with the Commissioner of the Department of Education on March 28, 1995. On April 5, 1995, the petitioner filed proof of service of its appeal on the respondent. On April 17, 1995, the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case. Oral argument on the motion was heard on May 10, 1995, at the Office of Administrative Law, 9 Quakerbridge Plaza, Mercerville, New Jersey.

CASE STATEMENT

The petitioner is the employee representative for employees of the respondent. In the Spring 1994, the parties entered into negotiations for a new collective bargaining agreement because their current contract was due to expire on June 30, 1994. On April 19, 1994, the voters of the Borough of South River rejected the proposed school budget for the 1994-95 school year. On May 11, 1994, the mayor and council of the Borough of South River, after reducing the budget approximately $967,000 approved said budget. On June 15, 1994, the respondent appealed to the Commissioner of Education seeking to restore to the 1994-95 school budget the monetary sums reduced by the mayor and council of South River. As indicated above, on January 26, 1995, the Commissioner restored certain items to the budget including approximately $406,000 for salary accounts. During negotiations between the parties from the Spring 1994 until the present, the respondent has taken a constant position concerning its offer for increasing salaries during the proposed time of the agreement under negotiation. Even after the $406,000 was restored to the budget by the Commissioner in January 1995, the respondent maintained its previous position as to salary increases and in March 1995, purchased computers, textbooks, desks, chairs, flash cards, posters, globes, and other supplies. Normally, these items are purchased at the beginning of the school year in July and August.

PETITIONER'S POSITION

The petitioner argues that the facts above demonstrate that the respondent is using the monies restored to the budget by the Commissioner to purchase equipment and supplies and not for salaries. The petitioner argues that the Commissioner's decision specifically restored the $406,000 to the budget for salaries and that these funds can only be used for that purpose.

RESPONDENT'S POSITION

The respondent represented that even though the Commissioner's decision restored $406,000 to the 1994-95 school budget the respondent has not received these funds because of on-going litigation with the Borough of South River. Further, the respondent disputed the petitioner's claim that the Commissioner had ordered that the restored funds were to be used only for salaries. The respondent had other arguments including that a similar application for relief such as this one had been filed by the petitioner with the Public Employment Relations Commission and the petitioner had been unsuccessful in that forum. Lastly, the respondent argued that the $406,000 in question had nothing to do with the on-going negotiations between the parties concerning the collective bargaining agreement and that there was no legal authority to allow the petitioner to interfere with how the respondent spent its funds. The respondent also argued that any money spent recently on supplies and equipment came from other accounts and was within the budget for the current school year.

APPLICABLE LAW

The criteria for determining an application for emergent relief has been set forth in case law. Crowe v. DeGiora, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Emergent relief should not be granted unless it is necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Relief also should not be granted when the legal rights underlying the claim are unsettled. Further, the party seeking the relief must show a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits of the dispute between the parties.

The provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6 clearly state that the granting of emergent relief is an extraordinary remedy which can only be awarded upon a showing that irreparable harm will result and that there is a likelihood of success on the merits by the party seeking such relief.

DISCUSSION

It appears to the undersigned that the real dispute between the parties in this matter is not the 1994-95 school budget or the sums restored to that budget by the Commissioner of Education. The on-going dispute between the parties is the negotiations concerning the future collective bargaining agreement between them. The petitioner, or its members, are obviously upset that they do not have a new contract and that the respondent has refused to raise its offer concerning salary increases. Though the petitioner may be concerned that the respondent is spending monies which could be used for other things including salaries, this does not in any way prevent the petitioner from seeking the best contract it can obtain from the respondent and pursuing applicable remedies if the parties fail to agree on a contract. If and when the parties reach an agreement, or some agreement is reach for them through other processes, the petitioner will have avenues to see that its members received their entitlements including salaries.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to show that irreputable harm will occur if the respondent is not restrained from spending the $406,000 in question. Further, the petitioner has not shown that there is a reasonable probability that the petitioner will be successful on the merits of its claim. The nature of the dispute between the parties is not a claim, but a collective bargaining agreement. Hopefully, in the end, both parties will be satisfied when a contract is reached or some other disposition occurs. One side or the other may feel that they were more successful in the process but, this does not mean ultimate success on the merits for the purposes of meeting the requirements for granting this motion. I, therefore, DENY the petitioner's application for emergent relief.

This Order on an application for emergent relief may be adopted, modified, or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH : DECISION ON MOTION

The record of this matter and the Order Denying Emergent Relief issued by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

After a full and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), that as petitioner has failed to establish the required elements necessary for the granting of emergent relief under Crowe, supra, such relief must be denied. The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ that “[t]he nature of the [within] dispute between the parties [herein] is not a claim, but a collective bargaining agreement.” (ALJ’s Order, at p. 5)

Accordingly, petitioner’s application for emergent relief is denied and this matter is being returned to OAL for such further proceedings as are deemed necessary to bring it to conclusion.

The announced results of the balloting for one (1) member of the Board of Education from the constituent district of the Borough of Franklin Lakes for a full term of three (3) years at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the Ramapo-Indian Hills Regional High School District were as follows:

FRANKLIN LAKES CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Steven B. Crystal	732	32	764
Joseph A. Medici	694	32	726

Pursuant to a letter request from Joseph A. Medici, dated April 19, 1995, the Commissioner directed his representative from the Office of the Bergen County Superintendent of Schools to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for the Franklin Lakes member of the regional Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2. The machine recount was conducted on May 3, 1995 at the Bergen County Voting Machine Warehouse in Carlstadt. There was no change in the machine tallies as a result of the recount. There had been some indication that a recount of absentee ballots would be requested pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:57-24, but no such request was ultimately made. Thus, absentee tallies on recount are as certified by the County Board of Elections at the conclusion of the balloting on April 18, 1995.

Therefore, on recount, the results of the election were unchanged and remained as follows:

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that Steven B. Crystal was elected to a full term of three years on the Board of Education of the Ramapo-Indian Hills Regional High School District, representing the constituent district of the Borough of Franklin Lakes.

The Commissioner further directs that a copy of this decision be forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law for inclusion in the record of the inquiry presently pending into the conduct of the above-captioned election.

SYNOPSIS

Board certified charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent, Spanish Teacher/Substance Awareness Counselor, due to her alleged use of illegal drugs on or about May 20, 1994. Respondent had completed a treatment program for drugs in 1989 and at that time had signed a Health Improvement Program Contract requiring her to remain drug free.

ALJ found that respondent's use of illegal amphetamines while attending a conference sponsored by the district constituted a breach of contract. ALJ found that based upon the definition of "handicapped" set forth in the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (LAD) at N.J.S.A. 10:5-5a, as well as applicable New Jersey case law, respondent's addiction to drugs was afforded handicapped protection status. Thus, ALJ found that "reasonable accommodation" had to be made for respondent's handicap. Moreover, ALJ found that a teacher should not be held to the same standard as that of a policeman or fireman in that upon one "slip" there exists just cause for termination. Therefore, ALJ found that termination was not the appropriate penalty. Respondent was ordered reinstated with penalty and restrictions as noted.

Examining this as a tenure matter, Commissioner found respondent's actions constituted unbecoming conduct. Commissioner further determined that, in light of the particular circumstances herein, and in consideration of the key role districts play in preventing substance use among students, the Board reasonably accommodated respondent's handicap. The Commissioner explicitly rejected the significance placed by the ALJ on the fact that students were not exposed to respondent's addictive behavior and that she voluntarily reported her actions, noting such rationale would permit repeated use of illegal substances. Commissioner ordered respondent dismissed as of the date of this decision and the matter forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for further appropriate action.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 2, 1994, Specification of Charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 was provided to the respondent. The charges alleged unbecoming conduct as a result of respondent's use of illegal drugs on or about May 20, 1994. On June 21, 1994, a hearing was conducted before the Board of Education of the City of Millville wherein the Board found probable cause exists that the charges if credited were sufficient to warrant dismissal and thus forwarded their findings and the written charges to the Commissioner of Education for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A hearing was conducted at the Atlantic City OAL, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey on February 8, 1995 and February 24, 1995. The record was held open until March 24, 1995, in order to permit the filing of post hearing briefs. A decision was rendered on April 12, 1995.

ISSUES

WHETHER RESPONDENT'S ADDICTION FALLS WITHIN THE DEFINITION OF HANDICAPPED UNDER THE NEW JERSEY LAW AGAINST DISCRIMINATION AND/OR THE FEDERAL AMERICANS WITH DISABILITIES ACT, AND IF SO, HOW MANY OPPORTUNITIES FOR REHABILITATION (REASONABLE ACCOMMODATION) SHOULD BE PROVIDED TO A TEACHER.

INTRODUCTION

Respondent has worked as a teacher for the Millville school system since 1986. In 1988, she revealed to her principal that she had a problem with drugs and requested assistance to enter a rehabilitation program. She successfully completed a 28 day in-patient treatment program and returned to work in January 1989. At that time she signed a Health Improvement Program Contract which in sum, required that she would remain drug free. Respondent continued to teach Spanish until the 1993/94 school year when she assumed the position of a Substance Awareness Counselor.

Respondent remained drug free until May 20, 1994, when while at a school sponsored conference she ingested amphetamines. She immediately reported her "slip" to school authorities who, on May 23, 1994, requested a drug screening. The results proved positive for the use of a controlled dangerous substance, amphetamines.

There is no dispute that respondent had an excellent reputation as both a classroom Spanish teacher and a Substance Awareness Counselor. Petitioner argues that despite respondent's good teaching record, the school system cannot sanction employment of a teacher who uses illegal drugs. Petitioner argues that it gave respondent an opportunity to redeem herself in 1989 and that the subsequent "slip" which occurred on May 20, 1994, constitutes a violation of the Health Improvement Program Contract with such breach warranting termination.

Respondent contends that her addiction falls within the definition of "handicapped" within New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-12 and the Americans With Disabilities Act, (ADA) 42 U.S.C.A. § 12101 to 12213, and accordingly, she is entitled to maintain her employment and to seek drug rehabilitation counseling as a "reasonable accommodation".

FINDINGS OF FACT

Respondent has been a teacher in the Millville school system since 1986. She started as a part-time language teacher and then began teaching Spanish full-time in the fall of 1987. Her duties included teaching Spanish I and II in the Millville Senior High School as well as an alternative program known as the Holly Heights School, where she taught an exploratory language program, French, Spanish and Latin. From the date of her initial employment until her termination in May of 1994, respondent gained an ever increasing good reputation as a teacher who had excellent rapport with her students. She got along well with and was respected by her fellow teachers, as well as those in the school administration and guidance program.

In December of 1988, respondent revealed to her Principal, Mr. Warren Elliott, that she had a problem with the use of illegal drugs. This meeting took place off the school premises. At that time respondent advised Mr. Elliott that her drug problem seemed to have begun after the death of her first husband.

Respondent was married at the age of 19 and described herself as a battered woman. At the age of 23 she and her husband separated and were considering a divorce. In an effort to reconcile her husband took her on a short vacation after which they returned to his residence.

When she advised him that she was not sure if she wanted to remain, he put a loaded gun to her head. Respondent testified that she did not move and that he continued to beg her to stay. He then took the gun away, began to sob and went into the bedroom. Respondent thought that if she attempted to leave that she would be shot. After a period of approximately one half hour, she went into the bedroom and found that her husband had hung himself in the closet. She ran to the kitchen, got a knife, cut him down and called the local police and hospital. Her in-laws arrived shortly thereafter and blamed her for the death of her husband and threatened to kill her.

Respondent stated that she was immediately placed under the care of a psychiatrist and was heavily sedated. She indicated that until this event in her life occurred in 1986, she had not been a user of illegal drugs.

Mr. Elliott testified that he fully supported and recommended to the school administration that respondent be admitted into an in-patient treatment facility. Respondent went directly from her meeting with Mr. Elliott to Seabrook House where she remained for a 28 day in-patient treatment program which she successfully completed.

Mr. Elliott testified that he had been supportive of respondent beginning in early 1988. At that time, it came to his attention that respondent had been found guilty of shoplifting. Mr. Elliott testified that respondent's in-school behavior was not inappropriate, but he opined that the nature of the offense could indicate an involvement with illegal drugs. No discipline was recommended by Mr. Elliott, instead, he advised his superintendent that he thought it was aberrant behavior and that he would monitor the situation closely. It was not until the meeting which took place between with Mr. Elliott and the respondent in December of 1988, that he was fully aware of the extent of respondent's drug problem.

When respondent returned to the school system in January 1989, she entered into a Health Improvement Program Contract. It was Mr. Elliott's recommendation that respondent be permitted to return and be given a second chance provided that she abided by the terms of the Health Improvement Program Contract. Mr. Elliott recalled advising the respondent that although the contract did not specify that termination would occur should she again use illegal drugs, he did indicate to her that termination would most likely take place. It was Mr. Elliott's opinion as well as that of the school administration that respondent was a good teacher who was worth saving and together with a representative of the teacher's union, respondent entered into the Health Improvement Program Contract.

The Health Improvement Program Contract permits the school system to call for random drug testing and further indicates that should a violation occur, disciplinary action would follow. The contract reads in pertinent part:

Should evidence or suspicion of a renewed problem occur in any other subsequent year of employment, Ms. Dublinsky¹ will agree to random testing.

Should testing at any time be clearly positive, Ms. Dublinsky understands that disciplinary action by the Millville Board of Education shall be warranted.

From the time respondent entered into the Health Improvement Program Contract until May 23, 1994, Mr. Elliott did not recommend random drug testing nor did he observe any evidence of drug usage. On the contrary, Mr. Elliott testified that he has never observed any misbehavior on the part of respondent and that she was a good teacher who had an excellent rapport with her students.

Mr. Elliott's testimony concerning respondent's abilities as a teacher is a common theme which was echoed by witnesses both for the respondent and the petitioner. This good reputation continued into the fall of 1993, when respondent assumed the position of a Substance Abuse Counselor (SAC). A SAC works with students and their parents to understand and deal with substance abuse issues of both alcohol and drugs. In the fall of 1993, respondent possessed the requisite certifications to be a SAC and currently expects to complete a master's program in student guidance in May of 1995.

Franklin MacDonald was respondent's supervisor within the Millville Senior High School Guidance Department when she was a SAC during the 1993/94 school year.

Mr. MacDonald was aware of the Health Improvement Program Contract and respondent's previous involvement with drugs. Knowing her past, Mr. MacDonald testified that he did not have a problem with respondent holding the position of a SAC. He indicated that it is not unusual for counselors in the field of substance abuse to also be recovering addicts. Mr. MacDonald opined that it was perhaps her former involvement with drugs and her subsequent recovery which enabled her to have a good empathetic relationship with students involved in alcohol and drugs.

Respondent was a member of the core team which hears and makes recommendations concerning students who are involved with alcohol or drugs. The team consists of a school administrator, school nurse, teachers, guidance counselor and the SAC. Respondent participated in the core team both at the senior high school as well as in the alternative school program. The alternative school is, as the name indicates, an alternative way for students who are not faring well in the regular high school to get an education. These would generally be students with discipline, attendance or substance abuse problems.

As late as April 29, 1994, Mr. MacDonald evaluated respondent's performance as a SAC and indicated that she had an excellent rapport with students and was performing well in the job. He observed that she worked very hard as a SAC and enjoyed the responsibilities. He found that she often would devote more time to the job than what was required and as a result, he was of the opinion that the school's success rate in reaching students with alcohol and drug problems had increased. Mr. MacDonald was in agreement with Mr. Elliott that he never observed any evidence of substance abuse, nor did he have any suspicion that respondent was using illegal substances until he received a call on the morning of May 20, 1994.

Frederick Setser was on the core team with the respondent for the alternative school. Mr. Setser testified that respondent did an outstanding job as the SAC on the core team. Mr. Setser stated that respondent had a unique ability to relate to the students and was able to get an enormous amount of students involved in the program within the short period of time that she was the SAC. Mr. Setser observed that the SAC position was very important to the respondent and that if he had any one criticism of her it was that she spent too much time involved with the job.

Jean Corson is a special education teacher who had three of her students working directly with the respondent. She noted that the respondent had a good working relationship with the parents of students involved in alcohol and drugs. She related one instance when one of her students had resisted going into rehabilitation and that respondent accompanied the student and his parents into the rehabilitation facility. The student later told Mrs. Corson that without respondent's direct intervention and assistance, he would not have followed through with getting help.

Mrs. Corson attended several week-end school sponsored trips with the respondent. Both during these trips and during the regular school day, Mrs. Corson never observed that the respondent engaged in any behavior which would be indicative of substance abuse.

Jeannie Setser is a science teacher at the senior high school. She has observed the respondent since she first began employment in 1986 and related that the respondent had taught her son Spanish. Mrs. Setser was aware of respondent's past involvement with drugs but testified she never saw any evidence of drug usage. She stated that she would not have any objection to the respondent being around or teaching her son.

Theodore Tardiff is employed by the New Jersey State Department of Labor Wage and Hour Compliance. He describes himself as a friend of the respondent and a recovering alcoholic. He attends either AA or NA meetings with the respondent at least once a week. He attributes his recovery and continued sobriety to the counseling and friendship she has shown to him over the years. He testified that he is able to call her at any time of the day or night for counseling should he feel that he is going to slip. He has never observed the respondent engage in any form of substance abuse.

Charles Maul is President of the Millville Teacher's Association. His classroom is directly opposite the respondent's. He described the respondent as one who is well loved both by her students and the faculty members. His testimony echoed that of the witnesses set forth above in that he has never observed any instances of substance abuse.

Finally, Charles Brett is the Principal of the alternative high school and one of respondent's supervisors. He is a member of the Board of Education of the Cumberland County Vocational Technical School and President of the Cumberland County School Board's Association. Mr. Brett, who was aware of respondent's past drug usage, testified that she had a unique way of reaching students. He further indicated that she did an excellent job as the SAC counselor for the alternative school core team. He was of the opinion that her past problems with drugs and her recovery helped her to empathize with students who have experienced the same substance abuse difficulties.

Based upon the record set forth above, I herein FIND that respondent successfully completed a 28 day rehabilitation program at Seabrook House in December, 1988/January, 1989 and thereafter signed a Health Improvement Program Contract in January 1989 which allowed her to return to work as a Spanish teacher. The record is abundantly clear that respondent enjoyed a good reputation as a teacher and as a SAC earning the respect of both students and faculty alike. I DO NOT FIND that respondent was a substance abuser while on school property or on school time from the conclusion of the Seabrook House rehabilitation program in January 1989 until May 20, 1994.

The incident which triggered what the petitioner characterizes as a breach of the Health Improvement Program Contract occurred on May 20, 1994. This is the event which ultimately led to respondent's termination.

Respondent assumed the title of SAC for the 1993/94 school year. She described this position as being very meaningful to her in her life since, as a recovering addict, this presented her with an opportunity to give back to students what she had learned about her addiction. She found this position to be eminently more meaningful than that of a classroom Spanish teacher. When assuming the position in the fall of 1993, the respondent was aware that the teacher who had vacated the SAC title was applying to be a guidance counselor and that she was reserving her bumping rights to move back into the SAC position. In late April 1994, it became abundantly clear to the respondent that these bumping rights were going to be exercised and that she would return to the classroom as a Spanish teacher for the 1994/95 school year.

May 20, 1994, was a Friday. For the four days prior to May 20th, respondent had been sponsored by the Millville Senior High School to attend a conference in Toms River, New Jersey on drugs in sports. The conference was being attended by school coaches, teachers, SAC's and at times students. By this time the thought of not retaining the SAC position became overwhelming. On the evening of May 19, 1994, she drove to Mays Landing, New Jersey and obtained two "diet pills" (amphetamines) from a friend. She drove back to the hotel where she was staying and ingested the amphetamines.

Mr. MacDonald recalled receiving at least three calls from the respondent beginning at approximately 7:30 a.m. the morning of May 20, 1994. He described the respondent as not making sense and being overly obsessed about retaining the SAC position. He stated that she wanted to return immediately to the school and meet with Mr. Elliott and other members of the administration to talk about the SAC position.

Mr. MacDonald testified that after the second call, it became apparent to him that the respondent was under the influence of either drugs or alcohol and he advised her to remain in the hotel room and not to drive and that he would make arrangements for her husband to pick her up. Mr. MacDonald then recalled receiving another call around 11:30 a.m. only this time respondent was calling from the conference. She explained to Mr. MacDonald that she felt that she had to go to the conference because the Board had sponsored her. Mr. MacDonald testified that during this call her speech was more normal.

Mr. MacDonald testified that in addition to respondent's concern over losing the SAC position, she was very apologetic stating that she had taken a drink the night before and that by doing so she had let the school down.

Mr. MacDonald's final telephone call came from the respondent at approximately 4:30 p.m. on May 20, 1994. Respondent advised him that she was in the Lighthouse in Mays Landing, New Jersey. The Lighthouse is a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center. Mr. MacDonald recalled that she had voluntarily admitted herself into the Lighthouse seeking assistance for her "slip". Mr.

MacDonald again advised respondent that they would meet on Monday morning to discuss the SAC position.

Mr. MacDonald recalled that on Monday morning, May 23, 1994, respondent arrived in his office early in the morning. She was extremely apologetic, explaining that she had let everybody down. Respondent, at that time, denied that she had used illegal drugs claiming instead that she had ingested alcohol. Mr. MacDonald advised her that the school administration would now require a drug and alcohol screening. Mr. MacDonald described respondent's attitude as cooperative and indicated that she readily consented to the test. The test was administered on the morning of May 23, 1994, and the results were returned as positive for the use of amphetamines on May 27, 1994.

On the morning of May 23, 1994, and for the remainder of that week, Mr. MacDonald did not observe any evidence of drug use on the part of the respondent.

Respondent later admitted that she had lied about her use of illegal drugs and instead claimed that she had ingested alcohol because, as a counselor in the field of alcohol and drug rehabilitation, she knew that society more readily accepted alcohol rather than drug abuse. Respondent testified that after she took the two diet pills she felt out of sorts, embarrassed and depressed. She had returned to a mode of behavior which she had not experienced for five years.

On May 20, 1994, and to the present, the Millville School System did not have an Employee Assistance Program (EAP). An EAP is a confidential intervention program which provides assistance in a variety of areas, but in particular alcohol and drug abuse.

Respondent testified that she knew that she had disappointed the school system, as well as herself when she took the amphetamines. On the morning of May 20, 1994, she contacted another SAC who indicated she could not help her and that she should immediately call Mr. MacDonald. When respondent arrived at the Lighthouse on the afternoon of May 20, 1994, she testified that she was not high but very aware that she had reverted to an old way of behaving and that she needed immediate help to stop what she knew was wrong.

Based upon respondent's admission of drug usage on May 20, 1994, as well as the positive test results returned on May 27, 1994, I FIND that respondent's use of illegal amphetamines while attending a conference sponsored by the Millville school system constitutes a breach of the contract. Paragraph 6 of this contract admonishes that disciplinary action may be instituted for a breach of the contract. The question which must now be addressed is whether under the FACTS of the within matter, as well as the below cited statutory and case law, termination of respondent's employment was proper.

Dr. Fred Ryan Chase, is a psychologist who has been treating the respondent for two years. Dr. Chase was accepted by this tribunal as an expert in the treatment of addiction.

Dr. Chase testified that drug addiction is recognized as a disease by the American Psychiatric Association. In his opinion the disease of addiction fits within the definition of "handicapped" set forth at N.J.S.A. 10:5-5q.

"Handicapped" means suffering from physical disability, infirmity, malformation or disfigurement which is caused by bodily injury, birth defect or illness including epilepsy, and which shall include, but not be limited to, any degree of paralysis, amputation, lack of physical coordination, blindness or visual impediment, deafness or hearing impediment, muteness or speech impediment or physical reliance on a service or guide dog, wheelchair, or other remedial appliance or device, or from any mental, psychological or developmental disability resulting from anatomical, psychological, physiological or neurological conditions which prevents the normal exercise of any bodily or mental functions or is demonstrable, medically or psychologically, by accepted clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques. Handicapped shall also mean suffering from AIDS or HIV infection.

Respondent began treating with Dr. Chase in October 1992. Dr. Chase described the goal of the treatment was to attempt to confront and deal with any and all obstacles to respondent's continued recovery from her addiction.

Based upon Dr. Chase's in-patient treatment of addicts over 20 years, he has found that one of the clinical wisdoms was that patients recover at a 30, 30 and 30 rate. That means that the first 30 percent can be expected to recover in a reasonably straight manner without experiencing "slips". The other 60 percent will absolutely experience "slips" and of that 60, 30 percent will at some point be able to embrace sober living. Finally, at some other point the remaining 30 percent may or may not succeed.

Dr. Chase testified that in his experience with treating employees in various industries, he has found that the general rule is that an employee is given three attempts at rehabilitation before being terminated. In keeping with the standard Dr. Chase concluded that although he cannot condone a "slip" it is something which for most addicts is likely to occur. More importantly, he looks at why the slip occurred and what response the addict had to continued recovery after the slip. Based upon this analysis together with a three step approach to recovery, that of continuing psychotherapy, participation in a 12 step program and administering medication, he was of the opinion that respondent would not be a threat to either her students or the administration should she be permitted to return to work.

Dr. Chase understood the May 20, 1994, slip as a response to the real sense of devastation over the loss of the SAC position and how the respondent was defining herself. Dr. Chase found that respondent in the SAC position was able to give back to her students some of the progress she has made as a recovering addict.

Not condoning a slip of this nature Dr. Chase, nevertheless, felt that her prognosis for recovery was excellent. His opinion is based upon the fact that the slip was of a very short duration which was marked by extreme remorse, shame and depression and a quick cessation of the addictive behavior within 24 hours. The interruption of the addictive behavior and her willingness to engage in immediate treatment points towards high motivation and an intent to recover.

Since the slip in 1994, Dr. Chase has altered his mode of treatment to include the medication Zoloft. This is an anti-depressant medication which diminishes intense feelings and emotions without reducing the person into a “zombie”. In his opinion this medication in no way would affect her ability to be a classroom teacher.

Zoloft is an aid to the respondent in managing her feeling of depression which has the effect of containing extremes in emotions.

Based upon this three pronged strategy: continued psychotherapy, participation in a 12 step program and continuance on Zoloft, his opinion was that she had an excellent prognosis for recovery. On cross examination Dr. Chase admitted that although there is no 100 percent guarantee that any addict will recover or not slip, he would feel that her chance of success at this point is at least 95 percent.

Should respondent be returned to employment with the Millville school system, Dr. Chase had some recommendations which should be conditions of return. First, he testified that the disease of addiction is often accompanied by a feeling of alienation and isolation. He would recommend a contact person at the job site so that respondent, as a recovering addict, will know that there is an ally available to talk to. In Dr. Chase’s experience he has found that the more an addict can perceive that he or she has allies, the less likely it is that feelings of isolation can become dangerous emotions. Secondly, he would require random drug screenings. He testified that respondent has to know that there are expectations made of her. Finally, he recommended that she continue with the three prong approach.

Given this strategy Dr. Chase concluded that there is a reasonable medical certainty that she will not have another slip. Dr. Chase candidly admitted that he cannot give a 100 percent guarantee that a slip will not occur, but he was of the opinion that there is a 95 percent certainty that respondent will not regress.

Dr. Chase was then asked the question, “What would be the perceived harm to either students or to faculty should a slip occur on school property?” Dr. Chase provided a two part answer to this question. He indicated that the job as a SAC is one of education and information. In that vein, it is hoped, people come to understand that this is not a morally bad thing, it is a struggle and a challenge which needs to be dealt with. Dr. Chase concluded that on one hand it would have impact and would admittedly disturb some students. On the other hand, he concluded from an educational point of view that if the public has an understanding of the progression of the disease of addiction, the problem is not to be minimized but there must be understanding that struggles and slips may occur during recovery. Dr. Chase hoped that students, although being disturbed over a slip, would understand what is occurring within the context of the recovery from addiction.

After working with Dr. Chase, respondent has concluded that it was wrong to attach intense feelings to the loss of the SAC position, that "a job is just a job". She feels that now her continued sobriety and her health is much more important than a position and that because of this realization, she feels that slips will not occur in the future.

There is a two-fold issue presented in this matter. The first is whether respondent's addiction is a "handicap" under the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (LAD) or the federal Americans With Disabilities Act (ADA) and if so, how many opportunities for rehabilitation (reasonable accommodation) should be provided to the respondent.

The petitioner contends that it provided respondent with a reasonable accommodation in 1989, when it allowed her to enter Seabrook House and thereafter regain her employment subject to the terms of the Health Improvement Program Contract. Once the Health Improvement Program Contract was breached, petitioner argues that it is no longer under an obligation to continually provide respondent with repeated opportunities to gain sobriety. Petitioner contends that respondent as a teacher should be held to a high standard of conduct which must be maintained at all times when dealing with vulnerable high school students.

Respondent submits that she is a qualified person with a handicap, the disease of addiction, who is entitled to reasonable accommodation of her handicap rather than dismissal from her tenured employment as a teacher. She contends further that it is not unusual in the treatment of the disease of addiction to have at least one "slip" during the course of recovery and that given her position as a teacher and the facts as set forth above, this one regression should not serve as a basis for elimination of her career as a teacher.

The threshold issue to be considered is whether respondent's drug addiction falls within the purview of the LAD. I FIND that based upon the definition of "handicapped" set forth in the LAD at N.J.S.A. 10:5-5(a) as well as applicable New Jersey case law, respondent's addiction to drugs is afforded handicapped protection status. See Matter of Cahill, 245 N.J. Super 397, 400 (App. Div. 1991) and Clowes v. Terminex Intern, Inc., 109 N.J. 575, 590-595 (1988).

Given that respondent is entitled to protection under the LAD, the next issue to be considered is what type and form of rehabilitation should be afforded to respondent if at all. There are two bodies of law which come into play to address this issue. The first is the case law interpreting the LAD. The second is the Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C.A. 701 et seq., (Act).

The New Jersey LAD, N.J.S.A. 10:5 et seq. was enacted in part to combat discrimination against handicapped individuals. Its regulations were patterned after those promulgated under the Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973. Ensslin v. Twp. of North Bergen A-959-9272, page 12, decided July 15, 1994; see 22 N.J.R. 1936. Many of the provision of the LAD are similar to those of the federal Act. The LAD provides:

unless it can be clearly shown that a person's handicap. . . would prevent such person from performing a particular job it is an unlawful employment practice to deny an otherwise qualified handicapped. . . person the opportunity to. . . maintain employment . . . solely because such person is handicapped. N.J.S.A. 10:5-29.1.

This "opportunity" means that an employer must make a reasonable accommodation to the limitations of the handicapped employee. . . unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its business. N.J.A.C. 12:13-2.5(b).

Thus, in making such a reasonable accommodation, an employer should take into consideration the interests of the employee and the public. Jamsen v. Food Circus Supermarkets, Inc. 110 N.J. 363, 374 (1988). To this point, the LAD operates similarly to the federal Act in seeking to protect the right of a handicapped individual to maintain gainful employment. However, New Jersey law does not solely seek to protect the handicapped's right; it also seeks to balance these rights against the employer's interests. New Jersey law provides that:

an employer who rejects a job applicant not because of his handicap per se but because of an opinion, reasonably arrived at, that the handicap precludes job performance, . . . cannot and should not be found in violation of the Law Against Discrimination." Anderson v. Exxon Co., U.S.A. 89 N.J. 483, 496 (1982).

In applying the above law to civil service employees who have substance abuse problems, two lines of cases have evolved. The first involves employees who work in positions involving public safety, such as police officers, firefighters, corrections officers, etc. Such employees have been afforded only one chance at rehabilitation before being terminated. For example, in Matter of Cahill, 245 N.J. Super. 397 (App. Div. 1991), a Newark firefighter was terminated upon discovery that he was a substance abuser. Prior to this discovery and unknown to the Newark Fire Department, the firefighter had voluntarily (at the advice of his union) undergone rehabilitative treatment at a substance abuse center. Subsequent to this discovery of drug abuse, the Department gave the firefighter leave of absence in order to join a treatment program. After he completed the rehabilitation program, the Department reinstated the firefighter upon condition that he submit to random drug testing. Thereafter, the firefighter failed such a test, and was terminated. The court held that the Department had reasonably accommodated the firefighter's handicap by offering him a chance at rehabilitation. Respondent argues that the Cahill court stated that Cahill had his chances at rehabilitation before being terminated, and that this means that respondent must be given more than one chance at treatment here. However, in Cahill, the employer gave the firefighter only one chance at rehabilitation. The Cahill court held that the Department had reasonably accommodated the firefighter's handicap by giving him leave to complete a treatment program, and then reinstating him upon condition that he submit to random drug testing. Thus, there was only one officially sanctioned allowance for rehabilitation. The court thus upheld the firefighter's dismissal. Cahill, 245 N.J. Super at 401.

Other cases have held similarly. See Tanner v. New Jersey Training School, Jamesburg, Department of Corrections, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 642 (corrections officer removed after testing positive for illegal substance after his return from a rehabilitation program); Ayers v. New Jersey Training School, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 497 (firefighter given one chance to rehabilitate his drug addiction, then terminated after testing positive again).

The other line of cases involves civil service employees who are not in positions that involve public safety or trust, such as clerical workers, secretaries, etc. In those cases, the employee is afforded several chances at rehabilitation. Termination is usually invoked if, after the rehabilitation, the employee's performance is substandard. For example, in LuSane v. Union County Board of Social Services, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 637, the employee, an income maintenance technician, was terminated for incompetence, inefficiency, and failure to perform duties. The employee contested her removal on grounds that she had a substance abuse addiction. Both the ALJ and the Merit System Board upheld the termination, citing that she had already been given numerous chances at rehabilitation. Similarly, in Fisher v. Union County Division of Social Services, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 125, an employee was terminated for incompetency, inefficiency and failure to perform her duties. The Board, upon learning of her drug addiction, first counseled her and then ultimately fired her. The employee argued that her drug addiction caused her problems, that this addiction was a handicap, and that thus she should not be terminated. The ALJ held that her removal should be modified to a six month leave of absence without pay because she was entitled to several chances to complete a drug rehabilitation program.

Since the New Jersey statutes are silent as to a limit to the number of chances at rehabilitation that must be afforded to a substance-abusing civil service employee, and since there are two divergent lines of case law on this point, one may look to the federal standards for guidance.

The Federal Rehabilitation Act was enacted to protect the handicapped from discrimination, and in particular, to maximize the employment of individuals with disabilities. 29 U.S.C.A. § 701(b). The Act has numerous provisions, whose enforcement is designed to "achieve equality of opportunity, full inclusion and integration in society" for such individuals. Id. Two of these provisions are pertinent to the instant matter. First, Section 706(7) of the Act specifically defines a "handicapped individual to include a drug abuser or alcohol abuser". Second, while the Act is a federal program, it applies to the States to the extent that it “prohibits a federally funded State program from discriminating against an otherwise qualified individual solely by reason of his or her disability.” Ensslin v. Twp. of North Bergen, A-959-9272, decided July 15, 1994, citing 29 U.S.C.A. § 794. Thus, the Act provides protection for individuals who are handicapped by drug or alcohol dependency, so long as they are paid through federal funds.

One particular protection that the Act provides for such individuals is a chance at rehabilitation. The Act requires the federal employers make “reasonable accommodation to the known physical or mental limitations of a . . . handicapped [employee] unless the agency can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose undue hardship on the operation of its program.” 29 U.S.C. § 794A(a)(i); 29 CFR § 1613.704 (1984). With respect to a handicap constituting alcohol or drug abuse, federal courts have interpreted the Act’s mandate of reasonable accommodations to mean that an employee must be given a full chance to rehabilitate him or herself, which would include offering counseling and leave time (without pay) for rehabilitation at a treatment program. See Whitlock v. Donovan, 598 F. Supp 126 (D.D.C. 1988). When granting such leave of absence, the employer should take into account the potential for relapses. Whitlock, 598 F. Supp at 134. This means that the federal employer must give the employee more than one chance at attending rehabilitation or treatment programs. Id. at 134; Callicotte, 698 F. Supp. at 949-950. Termination of employment can only be utilized as a last resort, if it becomes apparent that the employee cannot be rehabilitated or refuses to enter a treatment program, or if allowance for rehabilitation imposes an undue burden on the employer. Id.

The federal Act applies directly to federal employers and federal employees. Furthermore, the Act applies to state employees only to the extent that they are paid through federally funded programs.

Respondent was a teacher working for the Board of Education of the City of Millville. Although the record does not reflect, it can be reasonably assumed that she was paid from local and not federal funds. Therefore, the Act and corresponding federal case law does not expressly apply to her, unless New Jersey has adopted the Act. As seen above, New Jersey has enacted its own statute (the LAD) to assist handicapped or disabled individuals, and this law does not incorporate or expressly adopt all of the provisions of the federal Act. However, insofar as the New Jersey LAD follows the legislative intent of the federal Act, one may look to the Act whenever the LAD is silent. As seen above, the LAD does not expressly provide for a limit to the number of times that a civil service employee with a substance abuse handicap can be rehabilitated before her employment is terminated. Therefore, since New Jersey law on this point is silent, one may utilize the Act's provisions as guidance in this matter.

This conclusion is supported by the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, 42 U.S.C.A. § 12101 to 12213 (ADA), which closely parallels New Jersey's LAD. The ADA makes it unlawful for an employer to discriminate against an employee who suffers a disability. The ADA further requires that an employer "make reasonable accommodation to the known physical or mental limitations of an otherwise qualified applicant or employee with a disability . . ." 42 U.S.C.A. § 12112(b)(5)(A). The ADA includes substance abuse in its definition of a disability, so long as there is no current, on-going use and the disabled person is undergoing (or has completed) treatment. 42 U.S.C.A. § 12114(b). The ADA defines reasonable accommodation to include any facilitations that would enable the employee to continue his or her employment at an acceptable level, so long as the accommodations do not entail a changing of the "essential functions" of the position. 42 U.S.C.A. § 12111.

To this point, the ADA closely tracks the LAD. However, the ADA is silent as to what specifically constitutes "reasonable accommodation" of a substance abuse handicap. Since the LAD is on point, and since the LAD is not contrary to the ADA, one must defer to its language. Therefore, the provisions in the LAD for allowing for rehabilitation chances must be followed. However, as stated above, since the LAD is silent as to the number of chances at rehabilitation that must be afforded, one may use the standards espoused in the Federal Rehabilitation Act, which allows for multiple chances at rehabilitation.

In this matter respondent was a SAC and if returned to employment, would be a Spanish teacher. This position is not akin to the position of policeman, firefighter or corrections officer in the sense that there is less concern about public safety and threat to life. Nor is the position analogous to that of a clerk or income maintenance technician as set forth in Fisher and LuSane. A teacher in general, unlike a policeman or firefighter will not threaten the health or safety of students if the teacher's sobriety is compromised. Instead, what is lost is the quality of the teacher's job performance and the diminution of the teacher as a role model in the eyes of the students. These factors, albeit intangible, have the very real potential to harm the growth and development of students during the formative high school years.

Accordingly, I DO NOT FIND that a teacher should be held to the same standard as that of a policeman or fireman, in that upon one "slip" there exists just cause for termination. Nor do I FIND, however, that the chances for rehabilitation should be endless. To this end, I FIND Dr. Chase's testimony to be credible that in general most industries follow a three strikes and you're out rule. I herein FIND that this is the standard which should be applied in the instant matter, however, incorporated into that standard should be an inquiry as to what impact returning a teacher to the classroom would have upon students.

In the instant matter respondent's "slip" did not occur on school property or in the presence of students. The testimony of the witnesses who observed respondent on the morning of May 23, 1994, was that she did not appear to be under the influence of drugs. On the contrary, respondent continued with her regular duties during the course of the week.

Mitigating in respondent's favor is the fact that she immediately reported her slip to her supervisors and checked in to the Lighthouse rehabilitation facility. Respondent recognized that the behavior could not continue and took steps to avoid further involvement with drugs. These actions I FIND were consistent with her intent to continue recovery. A first or even second "slip" cannot be countenanced if students are exposed to non-sober behavior on the part of a teacher or if the teacher continues to reject assistance or to otherwise seek recovery. The concept of an employer providing reasonable accommodation to a teacher does not include returning a teacher to the classroom who is otherwise not in recovery and who has not voluntarily sought assistance to deal with the addiction.

Dr. Chase's testimony which was unrefuted would indicate that it is likely that a recovering addict will experience at least one slip. This standard is recognized in the Federal Act. See Whitlock, supra. However, I DO NOT FIND that a school system should provide reasonable accommodations to an addict who has incurred a slip when students would otherwise be adversely effected. In the instant matter respondent's slip was not discovered through involuntary means, that is, through a random drug test. She voluntarily provided this information to the school district and most importantly immediately sought assistance to stop behavior which could not be countenanced by herself or the school district.

The concept of reasonable accommodation as it pertains to a teacher does not include the concept of unlimited opportunities to seek recovery. The teacher's interest in obtaining recovery must be balanced against the school district's interest in providing a drug free environment for students. If, for example, respondent had not voluntarily admitted her slip and sought recovery or if she had ingested drugs on school property or the effects of drugs were manifest while she was teaching in the school, termination would be the appropriate penalty upon a second slip. In this instance, the only reasonable accommodation which must be provided by the employer is monitoring of continued compliance with the Health Improvement Program Contract.

Accordingly, I herein FIND that termination is not the appropriate penalty in this matter. A return to employment, however, is not without restrictions which I FIND were aptly set forth by Dr. Chase. Based upon Dr. Chase's testimony, I herein FIND that:

1. Respondent shall have a contact person which can be either in the form of the Employee Assistance Program or a person designated by the School Board.
2. The Board shall have, without probable cause, at any time the right to require respondent to submit to drug and/or alcohol testing.
3. Respondent shall continue attendance at NA and/or AA meetings or respondent shall continue a course of treatment the nature of which is to be prescribed by Dr. Fred Chase.

I further FIND that in accordance with Dr. Chase's testimony, that expectations are to be made of a recovering addict, that if those expectations are breached punitive measures may be in order. Accordingly, I DO NOT FIND that back pay shall be ordered for the 120 day period immediately following dismissal.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :
HEARING OF SONDRY YANNIELLO, :
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF MILLVILLE, CUMBERLAND COUNTY. :
_____ :
: DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The Board's exceptions and respondent's reply thereto were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1.1-18.4.

The Board initially objects to the ALJ's statement of the issues in this matter. The ALJ frames the issues as whether respondent's addiction falls within the definition of "handicapped" under New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination (LAD) and/or the Federal Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), and if so, how many opportunities for rehabilitation should be provided? However, the Board asserts that, inasmuch as this is a tenure matter, the primary question is whether the respondent, under the circumstances herein, was guilty of unbecoming conduct under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, and assuming the respondent is, by her addiction, considered handicapped under the LAD, is she, as a teacher, entitled to more than one opportunity for rehabilitation? (Board's Exceptions at p. 1)

The Board contends that the initial decision omits vital information from its introduction. In this regard, the Board notes that the ALJ fails to indicate that respondent did not tell the Board that she had a problem with drugs when she worked at the Egg Harbor Township School District prior to her employment with the Board of Education of the City of Millville. (Id. at p. 2) Rather, respondent only acknowledged this information under cross-examination. Further, the Board asserts that the ALJ excludes from the introduction data with regard to respondent's 1989 conviction for possession of cocaine and her second conviction for shoplifting, both incidents unknown to the Board at the time. Finally, the Board avers that the ALJ fails to state that respondent initially told her administration she had ingested alcohol when she left the conference on May 19, 1994; on direct examination, the respondent stated that she had taken "diet pills," but only when questioned by the ALJ did respondent acknowledge that she left the conference, drove to Mays Landing and obtained amphetamines. (Id. at pp. 2, 4)

Further, the Board strongly objects to the ALJ's characterization of the events which gave rise to this matter as a "slip" on respondent's part. Instead, the Board suggests that respondent's actions "allegedly violated the criminal statutes in that it was possession and use of a controlled dangerous substance  [and] violated the Health Improvement Program Contract, and  was clearly unbecoming conduct under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10(b)." (Id. at p. 3) Moreover, the Board contends that respondent did not voluntarily report her actions, "but rather [her actions] were the involuntary result of her ingestion of amphetamines, a controlled dangerous substance." (Id.) The Board also objects to the characterization of respondent's discourse with Mr. MacDonald on May 20, 1994 concerning this incident in that the ALJ states, "Mr. MacDonald recalled that she had voluntarily admitted herself into the Lighthouse seeking assistance for her 'slip'." (Initial Decision at pp. 9, 10) The Board insists that no place in Joint Exhibit 3, the memorialization of that conversation, does Mr. MacDonald indicate that he considered respondent's actions a "slip." (Board's Exceptions at pp. 4, 5)

Respondent asserts that the ALJ correctly represents respondent's behavior on May 19, 1994 as a "slip," and the expert testimony of Dr. Chase supports that characterization. (Respondent's Reply at p. 6) Moreover, respondent argues the Board makes a "preposterous assertion" when it contends that respondent did not act voluntarily when she contacted her supervisor, because she was under the influence of a substance and not aware of what she was doing. (Id. at p. 5) Respondent avers that, to the contrary, Mr. MacDonald's testimony regarding his conversations with respondent on May 20, 1994 suggests she clearly conveyed to him her concerns about staying in the position as substance awareness coordinator and, on the following Monday morning, May 23, 1994, respondent reported immediately to MacDonald's office to apologize for her behavior. (Id. at p. 6)

While acknowledging that respondent's drug addiction constitutes a handicap under New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination (Board's Exceptions at p. 5), the Board nevertheless contends that, by accommodating respondent's treatment in January of 1989 and permitting her return to the district thereafter, she has been given full opportunity for rehabilitation. "In addition, the Respondent had entered into a Health Improvement Program Contract and was aware that violation of same could result in her termination." (Id. at p. 9)

Respondent, however, concurs with the ALJ's determination that she should continue to be afforded reasonable accommodation for her handicap. (Respondent's Reply at p. 4) Concerning the Board's position that she be afforded only one chance at rehabilitation, respondent argues, "The Board presented no lay or expert testimony in support of this proposition, nor has it cited any authority to the ALJ or to the Commissioner for this proposition." (Id.) Instead, respondent counters, the expert testimony of Dr. Chase, belies the Board's position inasmuch as Dr. Chase testified that "*an addict will experience 'slips,' but what is of the utmost importance in determining whether the addict is truly on the road to recovery is the response to the slip.” (Id.) Respondent claims that her slip was short in duration, was marked by extreme remorse, shame and depression and there was a quick cessation of addictive behavior within 24 hours. (Id.) Thus, she disputes that she is seeking a “second chance.”

The Board further rejects the portion of the ALJ’s analysis which considers federal standards when determining the number of chances at rehabilitation an employer must provide a substance-abusing civil servant, since the LAD is silent on the issue. The Board contends that the ADA does not apply to individuals currently engaged in the unlawful use of drugs and, inasmuch as the ALJ has instructed that the Federal Rehabilitation Act applies to federal employers and federal employees, as well as persons funded under federal programs, “there is no need to force the imposition of a federal statute in this case.” (emphasis in text) (Board’s Exceptions at p. 7)

Respondent reasons that the ALJ properly considered federal standards, citing Grigoletti v. Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp., 118 N.J. 89, 97 (1990) for the proposition “that in a variety of contexts involving allegations of unlawful discrimination, the New Jersey Supreme Court has looked to federal law as a key source of interpretive authority; standards developed under the LAD ‘have been markedly influenced by the federal experience.’” (Respondent’s Reply at p. 3)

The Board submits there is clear case law in New Jersey furnishing guidance with respect to an employer’s duty to provide a handicapped employee with “reasonable accommodation,” N.J.A.C. 13:13-2.5(b). As to the two divergent lines of case law on this point, substance awareness activities working in a position involving public safety and dealing with vulnerable children, to the role of a police officer, firefighter, or corrections officer, rather than to a clerical worker or secretary. (Board's Exceptions at p. 6) The Board asserts that the ALJ inconsistently finds the role of a Spanish teacher "*is not akin to the position of policeman, firefighter or corrections officer in the sense that there is less concern about public safety and threat to life," yet acknowledges the prospect of "intangible" harm to students. (Initial Decision at pp. 19, 20)

Respondent asserts that the ALJ properly determined that she should not be held to the standard applied in Cahill, supra, and Tanner, supra, in that her position is not akin to that of a policeman, firefighter or corrections officer. (Respondent's Reply at p. 5) Rather, respondent continues, the ALJ properly adopted the "Three Strikes-You're Out" standard used in private industry (Id.) which permits respondent to remain in her position, subject to her participation in a plan proposed by Dr. Chase. Moreover, respondent contends that the Board has failed to meet its burden under Jansen, supra, of proving that her handicap precludes her from performing her job as a teacher or substance awareness coordinator. Respondent maintains that the Jansen standard requires the Board to show, with a reasonable degree of certainty, that respondent's employment poses a serious threat of injury to the health and safety of herself or others. (Id. at p. 7) In that there has been no showing that the Board cannot accommodate respondent, or that such accommodation would pose a threat of serious injury to the safety of herself or others, respondent maintains that the ALJ properly ordered respondent's reinstatement, and the initial decision should be affirmed.

Upon careful and independent review of this matter, the Commissioner initially finds that, based on the ALJ's determination that respondent used illegal amphetamines while attending a conference in May 1994, and said use of the substance was a breach of the Health Improvement Program Contract which she signed with the Board in January of 1989 following her completion of a drug rehabilitation program (Initial decision at p. 11), respondent's actions constitute unbecoming conduct, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-10. Analysis must next consider the consequence of respondent's conduct, in view of her status as a handicapped person under the LAD. (Initial Decision at p. 15)¹

New Jersey's LAD establishes that it is unlawful to discriminate against any person because such person is or has been at any time handicapped, and further prohibits any unlawful employment practice against such person, unless the nature and extent of the handicap reasonably precludes the performance of a particular employment. N.J.S.A. 10:5-4.1.

Additionally, State Administrative Code provides:

An employer must make a reasonable accommodation to the limitations of a handicapped employee or applicant, unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its business. N.J.A.C. 13:13-2.5(b).

Thus, merged with the analysis of appropriate consequence for respondent's conduct must be an examination of the Board's action to determine whether it has reasonably accommodated respondent's handicap.

The Commissioner has long recognized that teachers hold a position demanding public trust, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jeffrey Wolfe, School District of the Township of Randolph, Morris County, 1980 S.L.D. 721, 724, citing In the Matter of the Tenure

¹ Here, the Commissioner notes that the Board does not challenge the ALJ's finding that respondent is afforded handicapped status under New Jersey's LAD, N.J.S.A. 10:5-5q (Board's Exceptions at p. 5).

Hearing of Ernest Tordo, School District of the Township of Jackson, Ocean County, 1974

S.L.D. 97, 98. Consequently, teachers are held to a higher standard of conduct:

This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment. As one of the most dominant and influential forces in the lives of the childrenthe teacher is an enormous force for improving the public weal. Those who teach do so by choice, and in this respect the teaching profession is more than a simple job; it is a calling.”
In re Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. at 302.

As such, the Commissioner cannot concur with the ALJ’s finding that the “three strikes” standard followed in private industry should be applied to the matter herein. (Initial Decision at p. 20) Instead, the Commissioner recognizes that a determination of fitness for a particular position in a school system requires a balancing of interests, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Arlene Dusel, 1978 S.L.D. 526, 531. Under the particular circumstances existing in this matter, and mindful of the paramount role which local districts are assigned in the struggle to prevent substance use among students,² the Commissioner finds that the Board has reasonably accommodated respondent’s handicap by supporting her effort to obtain treatment for her chemical addiction in 1989 so as to permit her return to the district thereafter. Moreover, the Commissioner notes that respondent understood, or should have understood, upon signing the Health Improvement Program Contract that disciplinary action such as this could ensue upon her use of an illegal substance.³ Consequently, the Commissioner finds that the balancing of interests herein, Dusel, supra, compels that respondent be terminated from her position.

² See N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-1 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6:29-6.

Further, the Commissioner explicitly rejects the significance placed by the ALJ on the fact that students were not exposed to respondent's addictive behavior, and that respondent voluntarily reported her actions to the district while also seeking assistance from a treatment facility. Such rationale would permit repeated use of an illegal substance, provided the employee did not allow students to be exposed to such use, and provided, following every "slip," the employee voluntarily reported the action and sought assistance.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby dismissed from her tenured position with the Board as of the date of this decision, and this matter will be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action as it deems appropriate pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :
HEARING OF SONDRA YANNIELLO, : STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY : DECISION
OF MILLVILLE, CUMBERLAND COUNTY. :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, June 12, 1995

For the Petitioner-Respondent, Russell E. Paul, Esq.

For the Respondent-Appellant, Selikoff & Cohen (Stephen R. Cohen, Esq., of Counsel)

Sondra Yanniello (hereinafter "respondent") commenced her employment with the Board of Education of the City of Millville (hereinafter "Board") as a language teacher in January 1986. In December 1988, after respondent revealed to her principal that she had a drug problem, she entered into a 28-day inpatient treatment program, which she successfully completed. When respondent returned to the district in January 1989, she signed a Health Improvement Program Contract as a condition of her continued employment in which she agreed to submit to random drug testing during the 1988-89 school year and testing in subsequent years if there were ever evidence or suspicion of a renewed problem. Respondent acknowledged her understanding therein that if such testing proved to be positive, she would be subject to disciplinary action. In 1993, the Board appointed respondent to a position as a substance awareness counselor.

There was no further evidence of drug use until May 20, 1994. At that time, respondent had been sponsored by Millville Senior High School to attend a workshop in Toms River on drugs in sports when she took "two diet pills" containing amphetamine, a controlled dangerous substance, which she indicated she had obtained from a friend. Respondent's supervisor, Franklin MacDonald, testified that he had received four phone calls from respondent beginning at approximately 7:40 a.m. on the morning of Friday, May 20. As he related in a memorandum to respondent dated May 23, 1994: "Your disoriented state during the first and second phone calls prompted my concern....You appeared out of control in the morning at your hotel, your conversation rambled, seemed disjointed and, at times, you made little sense." Exhibit J-3, in evidence. Respondent told MacDonald that she had taken a drink the night before. Fearing for respondent's safety, MacDonald advised her not to drive to the workshop and told her that he would arrange for someone to pick her up. Tr. 2/8/95, at 64. Later that day, respondent called MacDonald from a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center. During the course of the day, MacDonald spoke to the acting principal and expressed concern regarding a possible relapse of respondent's drug abuse. MacDonald related in his memorandum that at their meeting held that morning, respondent had expressed "embarrassment and sorrow for your actions on Friday and your guilt for drinking Thursday evening, May 19, 1994 (Note - you denied the use of drugs)." Exhibit J-3, in evidence.

Pursuant to the terms of her Health Improvement Program Contract, respondent consented to a drug test, which revealed the presence of amphetamines. She subsequently acknowledged that she had lied about her use of illegal drugs, stating that she was afraid and embarrassed to admit to the drug use and contending that society more readily accepted social drinking. Tr. 2/8/95, at 178.

On June 21, 1994, the Board certified the instant tenure charges against respondent for unbecoming conduct as the result of that incident.

On April 20, 1995, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ"), finding that respondent's addiction to drugs was afforded handicapped status under the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, concluded that one "slip" did not provide just cause for a teacher's termination. Nor, however, did he find that the chances for rehabilitation should be endless:

The concept of reasonable accommodation as it pertains to a teacher does not include the concept of unlimited opportunities to seek recovery. The teacher's interest in obtaining recovery must be balanced against the school district's interest in providing a drug free environment for students. If, for example, respondent had not voluntarily admitted her slip and sought recovery or if she had ingested drugs on school property or the effects of drugs were manifest while she was teaching in the school, termination would be the appropriate penalty upon a second slip.

Initial Decision, slip op. at 21.

The ALJ recommended that respondent forfeit the 120 days' salary which had been withheld following certification of the tenure charges.

On June 12, 1995, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's finding that respondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct, but rejected the ALJ's recommended penalty. The Commissioner disagreed with the ALJ's finding that a "three strikes" standard should be applied to this case, and rejected the significance placed by the ALJ on the fact that students were not exposed to respondent's addictive behavior and that she had voluntarily reported her actions to the district while also seeking assistance from a treatment facility. The Commissioner noted that such rationale would permit repeated use of an illegal substance provided the employee did not allow students to be exposed to such use and that the employee voluntarily reported each "slip" and sought assistance. He also found that the Board had reasonably accommodated respondent's handicap by supporting her effort to obtain treatment for her addiction in 1989 so as to permit her to return to work in the district. Under the circumstances, the Commissioner determined that dismissal of respondent from her tenured employment was the appropriate penalty for her unbecoming conduct.

Respondent filed the instant appeal to the State Board.

After a thorough review of the record, we affirm the determination of the Commissioner to dismiss respondent from her tenured employment, as modified herein.

As acknowledged by the ALJ and Commissioner, drug addiction is a handicap within the protection of the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 et seq. Matter of Cahill, 245 N.J. Super. 397, 400 (App. Div. 1991). "[W]here feasible, an employer should afford an opportunity for rehabilitation to an employee handicapped by substance abuse." Id. at 401. However, "[t]he employer is not required to assume—or hope—that the employee will limit alcohol and other drug consumption to off-duty hours, or that the effects of drugs will be dissipated by the time the work day begins." Id.

In State-Operated School District of Jersey City v. Dorothy Howard, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 301 (App. Div. 1995), the district board filed tenure charges of chronic and excessive absenteeism against a tenured staff member following her successful completion of a residential alcohol abuse program. The Appellate Division affirmed the State Board's determination that dismissal of the staff member was not appropriate under those circumstances. The State Board observed that the record in that case demonstrated that the staff member was successfully addressing the underlying cause of her past absenteeism and was able to return to work. The State Board found nothing in the record of that case to warrant a conclusion that she would abandon her program of recovery thereafter or that she was not capable of satisfactorily fulfilling her job responsibilities. The Appellate Division stressed, however, that "nothing in the State Board's decision or in this opinion would prevent the district from refiling tenure charges in the event of a failure of Howard's rehabilitation in the future." Id. at 302.

Under the particular facts in the record before us, we agree that the Board has demonstrated respondent's unbecoming conduct and that dismissal of respondent from her tenured employment is the appropriate penalty.

As noted by the Commissioner, the Board reasonably accommodated respondent's handicap. The Board supported respondent's efforts in undergoing a 28-day inpatient drug rehabilitation program and subsequently reinstated her on the condition that she submit to drug testing if there were ever further suspicion of illegal drug use. When such a suspicion arose in May 1994, respondent tested positive for amphetamines.

We emphasize, moreover, that at the time of her positive drug test, respondent was employed in the district as a substance awareness counselor, a position in which she was responsible for counseling students on drug use and assisting students with drug related problems. The significance of respondent's responsibilities was underscored by MacDonald, who testified that "[t]he fact that she is acting in the capacity of a substance awareness coordinator forbids her from using any kind of illegal drug or alcohol, for that matter." Tr. 2/8/95, at 90.

Finally, we reject the ALJ's finding, apparently adopted by the Commissioner, that respondent voluntarily reported her "slip" to school administrators. It is undisputed that respondent expressly denied using drugs, the basis for her addiction, until after the drug test came back positive, claiming instead that she had consumed alcohol. Notwithstanding the fact that respondent may have been afraid and embarrassed to acknowledge her relapse, tr. 2/8/95, at 178, we find that she demonstrated a lack of candor in explaining her "disoriented state" to her supervisor.¹

Accordingly, under the particular facts in the record before us, we affirm the determination of the Commissioner to dismiss respondent from her tenured

¹ We note, in response to respondent's exceptions, that the record does not support her contention that she had called her supervisor on May 20, 1994 to report her "slip" and to seek his help. Rather, the evidence indicates that respondent had called to express an urgent need to meet with school administrators regarding the impending loss of her substance awareness position as the result of another staff member exercising bumping rights thereto. As previously noted, respondent's supervisor indicated that respondent's disoriented state during her first and second phone calls had prompted his concern. He stated that respondent had appeared out of control and that her conversation had rambled, seemed disjointed and made little sense.

Nor does the record support respondent's contention that the Board failed to provide her with promised accommodations and, in so doing, may have contributed to her "slip." Contrary to respondent's assertion in her exceptions, the Board did not agree in the Health Improvement Program Contract to provide respondent with "an employee assistance program, counselling [sic] and support for her in the event she suffered another slip." Respondent's Exceptions, at 4. Rather, that agreement allowed respondent to complete a drug treatment program and acknowledged respondent's understanding that she would be subject to disciplinary action in the event she ever tested positive for drugs in the future.

employment, as modified herein. Respondent's request for oral argument is denied as not necessary for a fair determination of this matter.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former Assistant Business Administrator, alleged Board abolished her position in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.

ALJ concluded petitioner failed to prove that the Board's action to abolish her position was done for reasons other than to reorganize the Business Office. Moreover, ALJ found that there were no violations of the Open Public Meetings Act. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Edna Thompson, alleges that the action by the Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville (Board) to abolish the position of Assistant School Business Administrator, thus reducing her annual salary, was arbitrary, capricious and lacked good faith. The Board denies petitioner's allegation and asserts that its actions to abolish the position was in accordance with the statutes and in good faith.

The Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) was in receipt of petitioner's Petition of Appeal on January 24, 1994. On February 23, 1994, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A prehearing conference was held on August 10, 1994, where, among other things, the issues to be determined were set forth and the hearing dates established.

The hearing was held on January 12 and 13, 1995, at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The parties requested, and were granted leave, to submit post hearing briefs of law. The hearing record closed with the receipt of the last submission on March 16, 1995.

ISSUES

The issues to be determined by this tribunal, as agreed upon by the parties, are these:

1. Whether the Board's action to abolish the position of Assistant Business Administrator was arbitrary, capricious and lacking good faith, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9?
2. If, in fact, the abolition of the position of Assistant Business Administrator was justifiable, what legal rights did petitioner maintain with respect to her employment with the Board?

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the testimony and other evidence adduced at the hearing, and having given fair weight thereto, I FIND the following FACTS in this matter:

Petitioner commenced her employment with the Board in 1987 in its Business Office in the position of bookkeeper. In or about 1980, she was transferred to the Office of the Superintendent of Schools with the title of Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent. While petitioner served in the Office of the Superintendent, the Board created the unrecognized title of Assistant Business Administrator in its Business Office. Petitioner was appointed to the position on or about October 6, 1992.

In or about 1987, petitioner began taking course work which would lead to her obtaining Certification as a School Business Administrator. Petitioner completed the required course work for the certificate in 1991. On September 9, 1991, the Board's Secretary School Business Administrator wrote a letter to the Atlantic County Superintendent of Schools outlining petitioner's career with the Board and her duties and responsibilities under the title of Assistant Business Administrator (P-2).

On November 13, 1991, Janice M. Howe, Certification Analyst, Office of Atlantic County Superintendent of Schools, wrote petitioner concerning petitioner's status with regard to a School Business Administrator Certificate. Ms. Howe stated the following:

A review of your transcripts and experience has been completed in regards to the above certification.

Our Trenton Office has notified us that before a Certification of Eligibility can be issued, a candidate must present evidence of five (5) years of School Board Secretary experience.

Enclosed is a copy of the current requirements.

If there are any questions/concerns, please do not hesitate to contact our office. (P-4)

The Board adopted a Job Description for the position of Assistant Business Administrator which provided, among other things, that the individual so appointed hold a School Business Administrator Certificate (the Board's existing staff member was required to obtain the certification by January 1993). (R-1)

In or about September 13, 1993, Judith Wilcox commenced service as the Board's Superintendent of Schools. On September 14, 1993, petitioner executed and signed a salary status with the Board in the amount of $42,852 for the 1993-94 school year in the position of Assistant Business Administrator (P-3).

On or about October 12, 1993, petitioner was called to Superintendent Wilcox's office concerning petitioner's employment position as Assistant Business Administrator. Petitioner understood that Superintendent Wilcox was concerned about petitioner's lack of certification for the position. Superintendent Wilcox intended to recommend to the Board that the position be abolished. Superintendent Wilcox did not advise petitioner of the Superintendent's intention to recommend to the Board the abolition of the position of Assistant Business Administrator.

On October 15, 1993, Superintendent Wilcox sent petitioner a letter which stated, in pertinent part, as follows:

This letter is to inform you that the Board of Education, on Tuesday, October 26, 1993, at 5:30 p.m. in close session, intends to discuss matters which are related to your employment.

If you wish these matters to be discussed in open session, please contact me on or before Thursday, October 21, 1993. Thank you. (P-9)

Two other Board employees received similar letters, i.e., Kemry McFadden, Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent, and Effie Jenkins Smith, Community Education Coordinator.

Subsequent to receipt of Superintendent Wilcox's letter dated October 15, 1993, petitioner spoke with the Superintendent's secretary on October 21, 1993. Petitioner testified she advised the secretary that petitioner wished to speak with the Board concerning the Superintendent's letter. Petitioner testified that the Superintendent's secretary stated there was no need for petitioner's to speak with the Board because a number of individuals had received such letters and the Board just intended to change job titles. Petitioner presented no corroborating testimony or other evidence to support this assertion. Nor did petitioner state she wished that her job status be discussed in open or closed session by the Board.

Following her conversation with the Superintendent's secretary on October 21, 1993, petitioner contacted the Atlantic County Superintendent of Schools Office and requested to be put in touch with Jack Epstein, a certification examiner with the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE), State Board of Examiners. Subsequently, the DOE Board of Examiners issued petitioner a Certificate of Eligibility for the School Business Administrator Certificate, dated October 1993. (P-6) The Certificate of Eligibility reads, in part, as follows:

[This is to certify that EDNA M. THOMPSON]

Has completed certain requirements for certification and is eligible to seek employment in positions requiring the Provisional Certificate in the area(s) Listed below. The Provisional Certificate will be issued contingent upon evidence of employment in a district that agrees to provide an approved induction program, including required job support, performance evaluation and professional coursework.

SCHOOL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATOR (P-6)

On October 22, 25 and 26, 1993, petitioner had conversations with Superintendent Wilcox concerning her certification for the position as Assistant Business Administrator. Petitioner testified that on October 22, 1993, Superintendent Wilcox advised petitioner that because petitioner did not have the appropriate certification, the Superintendent would recommend to the Board that it abolish the position of Assistant Business Administrator. Superintendent Wilcox denies she advised petitioner of her intention to recommend the abolition of the position.

On October 25 and 26, 1993, petitioner advised Superintendent Wilcox that petitioner's Certification of Eligibility for School Business Administrator was forthcoming. On October 26, 1993, the Board followed Superintendent Wilcox's recommendation and, among other things, abolished the position of Assistant Business Administrator.

Superintendent Wilcox testified that her recommendation to the Board to abolish the Assistant Business Administrator's position was based upon a total package of proposals to achieve instructional services, improve student achievement, student attendance and physical facilities. The Superintendent looked at the various positions in the school district and determined that the position of Assistant School Business Administrator was not necessary nor needed in the delivery of services to the children of the district. The Superintendent determined that the job duties of the Assistant Business Administrator could be performed by others in the Business Office.

Superintendent Wilcox testified about other areas within the school district which were in need of reorganization and were included in her recommendations to the Board. In addition to the abolition of the Assistant School Business Administrator position, the Superintendent recommended the reorganization of the bookkeeper positions in the Business Office; separate the position of Maintenance Supervisor into two positions; i.e., Facilities Supervisor and Maintenance Supervisor; separate the Board's Affirmative Action Officer from the Board's Personnel Office, among others. Superintendent Wilcox asserted that it was necessary to make the organizational changes in October 1993, rather than wait until the end of the 1993-94 school year.

There were no vacancies in bookkeeping within the Board's Business Office. There was however, a vacancy in a position of secretary for the Board's Good Start Program. The Board, therefore, transferred petitioner to this position, effective November 1, 1993, at an annual salary of $25,893. (P-5). Petitioner refused to sign the Board's salary notice for the position at the salary of $25,893 per year (P-5).

On November 19, 1993, petitioner wrote a letter to the Board's President and stated the following:

On yesterday, November 18, 1993 I received official notification that The Board of Education took action at its October 26th meeting to abolish the position of Assistant Business Administrator effective November 1, 1993. It is my understanding that the reason for this action was the lack of certification by the person in the position.

Perhaps seeing this in writing for the first time had its impact. It made me realize that I would be remiss if I failed to report to the Board circumstances surrounding my certification.

I initially applied for certification in September 1991, but was denied because I was not in the position of Business Administrator at that time. (See enclosed letters)

I called several times to see if they would reverse the decision and they would not, until October of 1993. I called my examiner, Jack Eckstein at the State Department and he informed me that I would receive a Certificate of Eligibility. (See enclosed)

The Certificate, dated October 1993 was issued, and would allow me to work in any position where certification is required.

The point that I am trying to make is that I did have certification before the effective date of the Boards' (sic) action.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to call me. (P-7)

Petitioner was offered the opportunity to appear before the Board. She met with the Board on December 27, 1993, where it reaffirmed its determination of October 26, 1993, to abolish the position of Assistant School Business Administration.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The statutory basis upon which the Board abolished the position of Assistant School Business Administrator is found at N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, and reads as follows:

Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article.

Petitioner argues, among other things, that the Board violated the spirit and purpose of the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA). Petitioner asserts that the general letter she received, dated October 15, 1993 (P-9) from Superintendent Wilcox was inadequate notice because it failed to communicate to petitioner the Superintendent's intention to recommend the abolition of the Assistant School Business Administrator position. Petitioner also contends that she was misled by the Superintendent's secretary who advised petitioner there was nothing to worry about when petitioner sought to meet with the Board concerning the letter dated October 15, 1993. Petitioner further argues that in the conversations she had with Superintendent Wilcox between October 12 and 26, 1993, petitioner was not advised that the Superintendent intended to recommend the abolition of her employment position but, rather, was lead to believe that the Superintendent was concerned about petitioner's lack of certification for the position of Assistant School Business Administrator. In re Bd. of Ed. of the City of Englewood, 150 N.J. Super. 265 (App. Div. 1977); Rice v. Union Cty. Reg. High School Bd. of Ed., 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977).

The Board counters that there is no contention that petitioner received the Superintendent's letter, dated October 15, 1993, (P-9) in an untimely fashion. It asserts that the letter is clear that the Board intended to discuss matters related to petitioner's employment. The Board argues that the notice to petitioner is sufficient and adequate to meet its obligation under N.J.S.A. 10:4-1 to -21, and decisional and case law. Burrows v. Ramapo Indian Hills Regional High School District, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d. (EDU) 605 at 609; Jamison v. Morris School District Board of Education, 198 N.J. Super. 411 (App. Div. 1985) at 416.

Petitioner further argues that the Board's motivation for the abolition of the position of Assistant School Business Administrator was in contravention of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 and represented an action which was arbitrary and capricious in nature. Petitioner contends there is an issue of credibility of the witnesses which is critical to this tribunal's determination. She asserts that all of her discussions with the Superintendent centered on the issue of petitioner's alleged defective certification to hold the position of Assistant School Business Administrator and the Superintendent's intention to recommend the abolition of the position. Petitioner avers there was no discussion of reorganization, economy or any other motivating factor for the abolition of the position. The only issue, she asserts, was her certification which, she contends, she satisfied prior to the Board's action on October 26, 1993. Superintendent Wilcox admitted on this hearing record that petitioner's certification was discussed and that reorganization of the Business Office was not discussed with petitioner. Moreover, petitioner asserts, the Superintendent provided no written documentation by way of memorandum or report to the Board of her intention, with an explanation of reasons, that a reorganization was contemplated. Moresh v. Bayonne Board of Education, 52 N.J. Super. 105 (App. Div. 1958); Klinger v. Cranbury Tp. Bd. of Ed., 190 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1984); Viemeister v. Bd. of Ed. of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super., 215

(App. Div. 1949). Therefore, petitioner contends, her testimony is more credible than Superintendent Wilcox that the Superintendent intended to abolish petitioner's position as Assistant School Business Administrator on the basis of petitioner's certification, not on the basis of any reorganization.

Petitioner argues there is nothing in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 which permits the Board to abolish a position on the basis of petitioner's alleged certification difficulties. She contends there is no managerial prerogative to abolish the position of Assistant School Business Administrator under the statute to deal with a problem Superintendent Wilcox perceived she had inherited; i.e., petitioner's lack of certification.

Petitioner maintains that the element of good faith is essential in matters of position abolishment and reorganization. Lauten v. Board of Education of Jersey City, 1963 S.L.D. 119; Page v. Board of Education of City of Trenton and Maffei, 1975 S.L.D. 644. Good faith should be evident in all such instances of reorganization. Boeshore v. Board of Education of the Township of North Bergen, 1974 S.L.D. 805.

Petitioner contends that neither economy nor reorganization was the basis for the Board's action to abolish the position of Assistant School Business Administrator. She asserts that reorganization became convenient after-the-fact criterion to justify an arbitrary and capricious action by the Board. Petitioner argues that the Board's action should be voided as a matter of law and that she should be immediately restored to the position of Assistant School Business Administrator.

The Board argues that petitioner has failed to sustain her burden of proof that the Board violated N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. It asserts that the authority of a board of education to abolish a position of employment, and thereby affect a reduction in force, is contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. Nothing in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, or case law interpreting that statute, requires that a superintendent of schools or a board of education must generate memoranda, reports or other written documents delineating a plan of reorganization within a school district. When a board of education votes publicly on personnel matters that it has discussed in closed session, it need not publicly reveal the reason for its action. Rice v. Union County Regional School Board of Education, 155 N.J. Super. at pg. 72. A board need only return to public session, after having discussed personnel matters in closed session, and on the public record state any resolution pertaining to the closed session deliberations. Gayeski v. Hackensack Board of Education, 1989 S.L.D. at pg. 1264. The petitioner does not allege the Board took action to adopt the resolution which abolished the position in other than an open, properly advertised, public meeting.

The authority given to school boards to abolish positions or job titles within their school districts is discretionary. Action of the local board which lies within its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Kopera v. Board of Education of Town of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (1960) at pg. 294. The Board, in the case at bar, contends that its action were neither arbitrary, capricious, without rational basis nor induced by improper motive.

The Board cites reorganization actions the Board adopted for the 1993-94 school year in addition to the abolition of the position of Assistant School Business Administrator. Superintendent Wilcox testified, without contradiction, that the Board approved the following:

- Effie Jenkins Smith was appointed Affirmative Action Officer for the District
- The job title Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent was changed to Administrative Assistant - Personnel
- The job description of the Director of Computer Services was changed to include responsibility for student transportation
- The three tier system of bookkeeper titles: Bookkeeper I, Bookkeeper II and Bookkeeper III was changed to one district title called Bookkeeper
- The district-wide position of Facilities Manager was created and filled
- All four supervisor positions in the district were abolished
- The position Director of Health, Physical Education and Athletics was created and filled
- The position of Elementary Guidance Counselor was created and filled for each of the elementary schools
- An additional Assistant Principal was hired for Leeds Avenue School, the largest elementary school in the district, giving that school two Assistant Principals instead of one
- Near the end of the school year an Assistant Superintendent was hired to aid the Superintendent in the area of curriculum and instruction.

The Board maintains that Superintendent Wilcox did not recommend the abolition of the Assistant School Business Administrator because of petitioner's problems with certification but rather, because in Wilcox's professional opinion the position was not needed. Actions of a Board of Education are entitled to a presumption of correctness, as well as a presumption that such actions will be upheld by the Commissioner of Education, absent a showing of bad faith, illegal motive or a lack of rational basis. Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education 60 N.J. Super. 288, Mackey v. Board of Education of the Borough of Ridgefield 83 S.L.D. 96, at pg. 100. Bad faith means improper or evil purpose or motive. Fegen v. Board of Education of Fair Lawn 1966 S.L.A. 167, at pg. 170.

The Board argues that presuming, arguendo, that it abolished the position of Assistant Business School Administrator because the petitioner lacks the certification as a school business administrator required by Exhibit R-1, the evidence presented does not show that such action by the Board would be arbitrary, capricious or without rational basis. Mackey v. Board of Education of the Borough of Ridgefield 83 S.L.D. at pg. 100; Page v. Board of Education of City of Trenton 75 S.L.D. 116. Nor could such action, if taken by the Board for that reason, be considered to have been taken in bad faith or for an improper, evil or illegal purpose under the circumstances that existed. Fegen v. Board of Education of Fair Lawn 1966 S.L.D. at pg. 170; Marotta v. Board of Education of the Borough of Sayreville 76 S.L.D. 676; Perry v. Board of Education of the Borough of Glen Rock 80 S.L.D. 655; Tinker v. Des Moines County School District 399 U.S. 503 (1969). Actions of a local board which lie within its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently arbitrary without rational basis, or induced by improper motives Kopera v. Board of Education of the Town of West Orange 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960) at pg. 294.

Having reviewed and considered the entire record in this matter, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to carry her burden of proof, by a preponderance of the reliable and credible evidence, that the Board's action to abolish the position of Assistant School Business Administrator was done for reasons other than to reorganize its Business Office.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner failed to demonstrate that the Board's action to abolish the position of Assistant School Business Administrator was arbitrary, capricious, and lacking in good faith, or in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.

While this tribunal may disagree with Superintendent Wilcox with respect to her conduct toward petitioner in their discussions concerning the abolition of the position then occupied by petitioner, there is no showing that the Board's action was in any manner violative of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. I CONCLUDE that the Superintendent's testimony was credible concerning her recommendations to the Board for the reorganization of the Board's Business Office. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950).

I CONCLUDE there were no violations of the OPMA by the Board, N.J.S.A. 10:4-1 to -21. It provided petitioner proper notice of its pending actions concerning her employment position under N.J.S.A. 10:4-8 and as required by the Court's holding in Rice, supra.

I CONCLUDE that the Board has properly placed petitioner in an employment position which comports with her tenure status.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the Petition of Appeal by Edna M. Thompson be and is hereby DISMISSED for the reasons set forth above.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner agrees with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ as articulated in the initial decision. The ALJ concluded, and the Commissioner concurs, that petitioner failed to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that abolition of her position was arbitrary, capricious, improper or taken in bad faith. The Commissioner further concurs that the Board has the authority to reorganize personnel and thereby affect a reduction in force under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.

Accordingly, for the reasons well-expressed therein, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the within Petition of Appeal.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent challenged Board's expulsion of his daughter, R.H., for allegedly assaulting a teacher.

Having considered the transcripts of the testimony of witnesses presented at the hearings conducted by the Board of Education, the ALJ concluded that the Board gave petitioner full and fair opportunity to present R.H.'s case, including all mitigating circumstances and that the Board's decision to expel was justified especially in light of R.H.'s long record of disciplinary problems.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own, noting he had no reason to challenge the credibility assessments made by the ALJ. Petition was dismissed.

BEFORE ROBERT S. MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE
AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

K.O.H. ("petitioner"), on behalf of his daughter R.H. (a minor), appeals from a decision of the Board of Education of the Township of Edison ("respondent" or "the Board") expelling R.H. from the J.P. Stevens High School as a result of an altercation that occurred there on October 15, 1993 between R.H. and Richard Krychowecky, a teacher at the high school.

Specifically, petitioner seeks a determination from the Commissioner of Education that the expulsion decision of the Board of Education was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable and therefore should be declared null and void. On May 13, 1994, petitioner filed a petition of appeal in the Office of the Commissioner of Education. Thereafter, a timely answer was submitted by the respondent. On July 27, 1994 this matter was filed in the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to the New Jersey Administrative Procedure Act.

A prehearing conference was held on October 26, 1994. Subsequently, respondent moved to have the case heard and decided on the basis of the record below. This motion was granted and, on January 3, 1995, I entered an order to that effect and further ordered that no additional testimony would be taken except on the question of "whether the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious or tainted by bias."

Subsequently, counsel decided that no testimony whatever would be presented at the hearing. Rather, counsel appeared before me on March 14, 1995 and submitted oral argument. The record closed upon the filing of reply briefs.

The essential background facts in this case are not in dispute, having been established by the pleadings, by stipulations made by counsel at the outset of the hearing, and by the submission of documentary evidence and of the transcripts of the hearings conducted by the Board of Education.

FINDINGS OF FACT

On October 15, 1993 the principal of the J.P. Stevens High School suspended R.H. for five days based upon an alleged assault by her on a teacher (Mr. Krychowecy) on that date.

On October 25, 1993, following further investigation, the superintendent of the Edison Township public schools extended the suspension of R.H. for an additional fifteen days. R.H. was then formally charged with (1) insubordination and (2) physically assaulting a teacher, and the superintendent referred the matter to the Board.

A hearing before the Board on the subject of the aforesaid charges against R.H. was scheduled for November 4, 1993. The Board, however, granted the request of counsel for R.H. to adjourn the proceedings so as to allow him to investigate the matter and further prepare R.H.'s defense. On November 15, 1993 the Board indefinitely extended the suspension of R.H., pending its determination at the expulsion hearing. R.H. was placed on home instruction in the interim.

Upon the motion of the Board, Administrative Law Judge Bruce R. Campbell entered an order on December 6, 1993 directing that a child study team evaluation be conducted respecting R.H. The Board's motion was made in response to the refusal of R.H.'s parents to consent to the child study team evaluation, required by N.J.A.C. 6:28-2.8(g) to be completed prior to consideration of a pupil for expulsion.

The expulsion hearing was conducted by the Board on a series of dates from December 1993 through March 1994. On March 4, 1994 the Board found by a preponderance of the credible evidence that on October 15, 1993 R.H. was insubordinate and did commit an assault upon a teaching staff member in the employ of the Board.

On March 15, 1994 the Board continued the hearing for the purpose of receiving testimony and argument of counsel on the subject of factors in aggravation and mitigation of R.H.'s conduct. R.H. was also represented by counsel at the March 15 hearing, on which date the Board expelled R.H. from the Edison Township school system. The Board determined, however, that she would not be prevented from participating in the G.E.D. Program through the Edison Township Adult School.

The hearing before me was conducted on March 14, 1995, by which time R.H.'s class had graduated and R.H. had received a general equivalency diploma.

ISSUE AND ANALYSIS

There are two statutory provisions directly applicable to this case.

N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2 provides that any "pupil who is guilty of . . . open defiance of the authority of any teacher or person having authority over him . . . shall be liable to punishment and to suspension or expulsion from school."

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1, any pupil who commits an assault upon a teacher "shall be immediately suspended from school consistent with procedural due process pending expulsion proceedings before the local board of education."

As noted by the United States Supreme Court twenty years ago, local boards of education have been expressly charged by the Legislature with the orderly conduct of public schools and, as a corollary, have been vested with broad discretion in matters of pupil discipline. See Goss v. Lopez, 419 U.S. 565, 573, 95 S. Ct. 729, 736, 42 L. Ed. 2d 725, 734 (1975) ("The authority possessed by the State to prescribe and enforce standards of conduct in its schools . . . [is] concededly very broad. . .").

In assessing the propriety of the instant expulsion, the scope of review of the Commissioner of Education is circumscribed. As noted by Administrative Law Judge Metzger in M.G. v. Monmouth Regional High School Bd. of Educ., 91 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4) 38, 40 (Education), adopted in part, rejected in part, State Bd. of Educ., 92 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4) 364 (Education): "[Board] decisions in this matter carry a presumption of validity and [it is the] petitioners who must show that the actions taken were arbitrary and unreasonable, if they are to be disturbed." In adopting the administrative law judge's decision, the Commissioner of Education likewise noted the limited scope of review: “ it is not a proper exercise of a judicial function for the Commissioner to interfere with local boards in the management of their schools unless they violate the law, act in bad faith (meaning acting dishonestly), or abuse their discretion in shocking manner. Furthermore, it is not the function of the Commissioner in a judicial decision to substitute his judgment for that of the board members on matters which are by statute delegated to the local boards.” 91 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4) at 42, quoting Boult v. Board of Education of the City of Passaic, 1939-49 S.L.D. 7 (1946), aff’d, State Board of Education 15, 135 N.J.L. 329 (Sup. Ct. 1947), aff’d, 136 N.J.L. 521 (E. & A. 1948).

Among the many judicial decisions expressing the same concepts are: Quinlan v. Board of Education of North Bergen Township, 73 N.J. Super. 40, 46-7 (App. Div. 1962); Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960); Thomas v. Morris Township Board of Education, 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff’d, 46 N.J. 581 (1966); and Boyle v. Riti, 175 N.J. Super. 158, 166 (App. Div. 1980). In Boyle, the court declared:

It is well established that a presumption of reasonableness attaches to the action of an administrative agency and the party who challenges the validity of that action has the burden of showing that it was arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious. . . . Also, where the administrative record discloses a reasonable basis for findings and accordant administrative action, . . . [the reviewing court’s] duty is ordinarily to uphold such action.

[175 N.J. Super. at 166 (citations omitted).]

There are, of course, numerous administrative law cases to the same effect. These include Boult, supra; M.G. v. Board of Education of West Deptford, 83 S.L.D. 339, 354 (Commissioner of Education cannot substitute his judgment for that of the local board of education and can only determine whether it had a reasonable basis for its conclusion); and K.L. v. Board of Education of Matawan/Aberdeen High School District, 91 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4) 74, 76 (Education) (discretionary action of local school board may not be upset, unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis, or induced by improper motives).

The judicial rationale for this deference to local boards of education appears to be twofold: (1) the ability of the local board of education as the fact-finder in the first instance to see and hear the witnesses and to determine credibility, and (2) the expertise of the local board with respect to its knowledge of local conditions and circumstances.

Turning to the instant case, the issue presented may be phrased as follows: Does a fair reading of the record established below lead to the conclusion that the decision of respondent was arbitrary, unreasonable, capricious, or tainted by bias? For the reasons expressed hereafter, I am of the opinion that this question should be answered in the negative.

There were two quite different versions of what occurred in the cafeteria at the J.P. Stevens High School around noon on October 15, 1993. The version of Mr. Krychowecky was as follows: While he was on cafeteria duty, he observed R.H. "cut the line." He approached R.H. and asked her several times to go to the end of the line. R.H. ignored him each time. He then took the container of milk out of her hand. Without warning, R.H. then punched him in the head. He was stunned. R.H. continued to throw punches. With some difficulty but without using excessive force, Mr. Krychowecky managed to subdue her, bring her under control, escort her out of the cafeteria, and turn her over to the security guard.

The version of R.H. was essentially as follows: She did not "cut the line." Mr. Krychowecky was mistaken in his belief and started to "hassle" her. Mr. Krychowecky approached her and when she ignored him he pushed her. R.H. reacted instinctively by hitting Mr. Krychowecky, and at that point he overreacted, forced her onto the ground and pushed her arm behind her back, causing her severe pain, and generally using excessive force.

There were witnesses supporting each version. Among those corroborating R.H.'s story were D.W., S.J., P.L., and J.Y. (all students). Confirming the version of Mr. Krychowecky were, among others, A.W., P.L.H., S.S., and A.D. (students) and Pamela Brown and Dorinda Tooker (teachers).

I have read the transcripts of the testimony of the witnesses called by both sides. In my opinion, neither the quantity of the witnesses nor the quality of their testimony preponderated in favor of petitioner. Indeed, it was my impression that the quality of the testimony supporting Mr. Krychowecky's version was superior to the quality of the testimony supporting R.H.'s version. For example, according to Mr. Ventola (graphic arts teacher), one of R.H.'s principal witnesses (P.L.) was in his classroom when the altercation occurred. Another witness for petitioner (S.J.) declared: "She ran towards him and she hit him and at that time Mr. Krychowecky was real upset . . . so he grabbed her by the neck and he started pushing her backwards and she started stumbling." R.H. herself admitted that she ignored Mr. Krychowecky and that she hit him with her closed fists (although she claimed that she did so only after he first pushed her).

Typical of the student eyewitnesses supporting Mr. Krychowecky was A.W., who confirmed that R.H. had "cut the line," that she ignored Mr. Krychowecky, and that she precipitated the incident and initiated the violence; A.W. was of the opinion that R.H.'s striking of Mr. Krychowecky was not warranted because she was in no way threatened or abused. Another witness (P.L.H.) stated that she saw Mr. Krychowecky speaking to R.H. and that the latter ignored him; he then took the milk out of R.H.'s hand and "she stepped forward and slapped him across the face." P.L.H. added that "she was going for him again," and that "he was trying to restrain her."

In short, I am of the opinion that petitioner has been unable to overcome the presumption of correctness and reasonableness which attaches to the decision of respondent with respect to the culpability of R.H. for the altercation and, in particular, the determination that R.H. physically assaulted Mr. Krychowecky during school hours on October 15, 1993.

With respect to the decision of the Board of Education to expel R.H., rather than to impose a lesser penalty, it should be noted that R.H. had a long record (going back to at least sixth grade) of insubordination, tardiness, disrespect for authority, and initiating violent behavior; on one occasion she pushed another teacher in the chest. This prior record was amply supported by the evidence presented at the hearing and was not effectively disputed by petitioner.

In my opinion, the Board of Education gave full and fair opportunity for petitioner to present her case, including all mitigating circumstances, and its decision to expel, under the circumstances here (including the need to protect its teachers from assault and students from violence), was justified.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

For the reasons expressed above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's application to have the Commissioner of Education declare null and void the decision of the Edison Township Board of Education expelling R.H. from the Edison Township school system be denied. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER, :
V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN- : DECISION SHIP OF EDISON, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, :
_____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties. It is, however, noted that on May 18, 1995, petitioner attempted to submit pro se "Exceptions by Petitioner" in this matter. Such submission was apparently without the knowledge or consent of his attorney of record, nor was there any indication that it had been served on opposing counsel. By letter dated May 19, 1995, petitioner's submission was returned to him and he was advised by the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.1, a party to administrative proceedings may choose one of several options with respect to his representation and that, because petitioner elected throughout the course of the instant proceedings to be represented by counsel with all submissions in this matter being accomplished by and through such legal counsel, absent notification to the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes that he is no longer represented by an attorney, petitioner is unable to make submissions of any kind on his own behalf to the record of this matter.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge that petitioner has not met the burden of establishing that the Board's action in expelling R.H. was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. He further finds that the record before him does not provide any cause to challenge the credibility assessments made by the ALJ. As such, the Board's action in this matter will not be overturned by the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons clearly articulated therein, and the within Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

The announced results of the balloting for three (3) members of the Board of Education for full terms of three (3) years each at the annual school election held on April 18, 1995 in the School District of the Township of Stafford were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Carol G. Williams	832	82	914
Richard Czajkowski	629	49	678
Joseph Suizzo	534	40	574
Dom Ross	500	63	563
John L. Steele	463	81	544
Ray Fix	452	77	529
Brian Delaney	408	51	459
Andrew Sivil	391	52	443

Pursuant to a letter request from Dom Ross, dated April 24, 1995, the Commissioner directed his representative from the Office of the Ocean County Superintendent of Schools to conduct a recount of machine ballots cast for members of the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.2. The machine recount was conducted on May 9, 1995 at the Ocean County Voting Machine Warehouse in Dover Township. Absentee ballots were recounted by the Board of Elections pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:57-24.

On recount, the results of the election were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Carol G. Williams	832	82	914
Richard Czajkowski	629	49	678
Joseph Suizzo	534	40	574

Ray Fix	452	77	529
Brian Delaney	408	52	460
Andrew Sivil	391	51	442

On recount, there were two minor changes in absentee ballot tallies (one vote more for Delaney and one vote less for Sivil), while machine counts remained the same as announced at the conclusion of the election. However, this difference did not affect the outcome of the election.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that Carol G. Williams, Richard Czajkowski and Joseph Suizzo were elected to full terms of three years each on the Board of Education of Stafford Township.

For Petitioners, B.M. and B.M., pro se

For Respondent, Donna Platt, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 7, 1995, by way of a Petition of Appeal and Motion for Emergent Relief filed by B.M. and B.M., on behalf of their son, J.M., seeking an order permitting J.M. to participate in graduation ceremonies from Deptford High School on June 14, 1995. On June 1, 1995, the Board of Education of the Township of Deptford denied petitioners' appeal of the principal's decision that J.M. had violated the Board's attendance policy by having excessive absences as defined by the policy and, therefore, had insufficient course credit to graduate or to participate in graduation ceremonies. Petitioners are challenging only the Board's decision to deny J.M.'s participation in graduation and not the decision that J.M. had insufficient credits to graduate.

This matter was filed with the Commissioner after the Board denied petitioners' appeal to it under the provisions of the Deptford Township Board of Education Rules and Regulations for Administering the Attendance Policy Grades 7 through 12 (hereinafter referred to as "Attendance Policy").

On June 12, 1995, oral argument was heard by telephone conference call by Gary Reece, Assistant Commissioner for the Office of Standards and Assessment, who was designated to hear and decide this matter, pursuant to the Commissioner's authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34. Upon consideration of arguments, the Assistant Commissioner found that petitioners had not met the standards for granting injunctive relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Petitioners were advised of the decision telephonically on June 13, 1995. The Crowe standards required petitioners to show that J.M. would be irreparably harmed if not permitted to attend the graduation ceremony, that J.M. has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the claim and that in balancing the interests of the parties, the harm to J.M. would be greater than that to the Board should the requested relief not be granted.

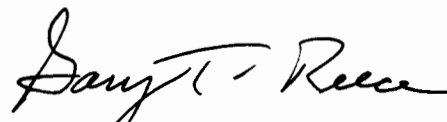

Petitioners assert that the Board's action denying their appeal at the local level was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion because the Board did grant the appeals of other students with more accumulated absences than J.M. and is permitting those other students to graduate and participate in graduation ceremonies. During arguments, however, petitioners raised no issue that the Board improperly applied the elements of its appeals procedure. The procedure permits the Board to excuse absences only for "reasons of sickness, hardship, or other extenuating circumstances ." The policy requires the Board in making its determination to "consider the student's total attendance record, academic standing and course performance ***."

(Attendance Policy at p. 6) The Board asserts that it has properly applied its policy, that K.C. has been excessively absent, and that his parents were notified that he was in non-credit status by certified mail. It asserts that the consequences of violating the attendance policy are contained in the letter, as well as the district's student handbook which was provided to petitioners prior to the commencement of the school year. Moreover, the Board asserts that petitioners signed a letter acknowledging that they read the handbook and agreed to be bound by its requirements. Strict enforcement of its attendance policy, it asserts, has resulted in the Board being able to maintain an approximately 95% attendance rate.

Although the Assistant Commissioner is mindful of petitioners' argument that the family will be emotionally and irreparably harmed if J.M. is unable to participate in graduation, this is not legally sufficient to permit him to grant emergent relief. A weighing of the arguments of the parties leads the Assistant Commissioner to conclude that petitioners have not demonstrated entitlement to injunctive relief.

In so concluding, the Assistant Commissioner notes that petitioners do not contest the requirement that J.M. attend summer school based on J.M.'s excessive absences (inclusive of cuts and tardiness) which were calculated pursuant to policy.

Accordingly, the Motion for Emergent Relief is denied and the matter is ordered transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings.

For Respondent, Donna Platt, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 12, 1995, by way of a Petition of Appeal and Motion for Emergent Relief filed by B.B. and L.B., on behalf of their son, T.B., seeking an order permitting T.B. to participate in graduation ceremonies from Deptford High School on June 14, 1995. On June 1, 1995, the Board of Education of the Township of Deptford denied petitioners' appeal of the principal's decision that T.B. had violated the Board's attendance policy by having excessive absences as defined by the policy and, therefore, had insufficient course credit to graduate or to participate in graduation ceremonies. Petitioners are challenging only the Board's decision to deny T.B.'s participation in graduation ceremonies. This matter was filed with the Commissioner after the Board denied petitioners' appeal to it under the provisions of the Deptford Township Board of Education Rules and Regulations for Administering the Attendance Policy Grades 7 through 12 (hereinafter referred to as "Attendance Policy").

On June 13, 1995, oral argument was heard by telephone conference call by Peter Contini, Assistant Commissioner for the Division of Field Services, who was designated to hear and decide this matter pursuant to the Commissioner's authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34. Upon consideration of argument, the Assistant Commissioner finds that petitioners have not met the standards for granting injunctive relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGoja, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Those standards required petitioners to show that T.B. would be irreparably harmed if not permitted to attend the graduation ceremony, that T.B. has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the claim and that in balancing the interests of the parties, the harm to T.B. would be greater than that to the Board should the requested relief not be granted.

Petitioners assert that the Board's action denying their appeal at the local level was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion. This is because the Board granted the appeal of other students with more accumulated absences than T.B. and is permitting those other students to graduate and to participate in graduation ceremonies. During argument, however, petitioners raised no issue that the Board improperly applied the elements of its appeals procedure. The procedure, which was provided to the Assistant Commissioner, permits the Board to excuse absences only for "reasons of sickness, hardship, or other extenuating circumstances ." The policy requires the Board in making its determination to "consider the student's total attendance record, academic standing and course performance ." (Attendance Policy at p. 6)

Petitioners argued that T.B. will suffer irreparable harm if he is denied the opportunity to participate in graduation ceremonies because he will suffer emotional distress and his resentment may affect him in future years. Although in the petition it is asserted that T.B. suffers from asthma, during oral argument petitioners expressly denied that any of the absences were related to his illness.

A weighing of the arguments of the parties leads the Assistant Commissioner to conclude that petitioners have not demonstrated entitlement to injunctive relief. Even if the Assistant Commissioner considers the doctor's notes which petitioners acknowledged were not provided to the Board, T.B.'s absences still exceed the number of permissible absences to receive course credit. Additionally, the school has demonstrated that it has a legitimate reason to deny graduation to students as part of its enforcement of its attendance policy, and its record of student attendance.

The Board asserts that it has properly applied its policy, that T.B. has been excessively absent, that his parents were notified that he was in non-credit status by certified mail on March 16, 1995, and that prior to the certified letter, the Board had sent six letters indicating that T.B. was having attendance problems. It asserts that the consequences of a student violating the policy are contained in the letters, as well as in the student handbook which was provided to petitioners prior to the commencement of the school year. Moreover, the Board asserts that petitioners signed a letter acknowledging that they had read the handbook and agreed to be bound by its requirements. Strict enforcement of its attendance policy, it asserts, has resulted in the Board being able to maintain an approximate 95% attendance rate.

Petitioning Board sought to compel respondent, tenured music teacher, to undergo a physical and psychiatric examination by a physician of the Board's choosing. Board also sought order to suspend respondent's pay until completion of such examination.

ALJ concluded that there was no authority granted to the Board to suspend respondent's pay pending a physical and psychiatric examination unless the Board certified tenure charges in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-10. Therefore, the Board's application to suspend respondent's pay pending examination was dismissed. ALJ concluded Board has the statutory right and obligation to require respondent to undergo examination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 to determine fitness. (Gish Appellate Division decision) ALJ ordered respondent to submit to an examination and evaluation by the Board's authorized psychiatrist at a time and place scheduled by the Board.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own and directed respondent submit to an examination in accordance with ALJ's instructions. Commissioner dismissed Board's application to suspend respondent's pay pending the physical and psychiatric examination.

RICHARD CHAMBERS,

Respondent.

Record Closed: March 21, 1995

Decided: May 5, 1995

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville (Board or Petitioner) seeks an Order from the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) to compel respondent, Richard Chambers, a tenured teaching staff member in the Board's employ, to undergo a physical and psychiatric examination by a physician of the Board's choosing. The Board also seeks an Order from the Commissioner to suspend respondent's pay until such examination is completed.

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Prehearing conferences were held on November 9 and 17, 1994, at which, among other things, the issues to be determined by this tribunal were settled. The parties agreed that the matter should be determined by way of stated facts and written legal arguments. Therefore, no hearing was required. The record was closed on December 22, 1994, with the last submission. Extensions were requested and granted in order to execute this initial decision.

LEGAL ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

The Board's Position:

FACTS

The Board relies upon the facts, allegations and statement set forth in the Petition filed in this matter.

1. Respondent is a tenured music teacher in Petitioner's school district.
2. At a meeting held on February 22, 1994, based upon the evidence presented to it and a finding that Respondent's behavior evidences a significant possibility of harmful, significant deviation from normal mental and/or physical health, affecting his ability to teach, discipline and associate with school district students, the Petitioner passed a resolution requiring the Respondent to undergo a psychiatric examination to be performed by Dr. Stuart Zuckerman, D.O. and a physical examination to be performed by a physician approved by the Petitioner, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. The said resolution also set March 8, 1994 as the date on which the Respondent would be afforded an opportunity to be heard by the Petitioner regarding its requirement that the Respondent be so examined.

3. By separate resolution passed also on February 22, 1994, Petitioner suspended the Respondent from his teaching duties, with pay, pending the completion of the said examinations.

4. By letter from Petitioner's Personnel Administrator dated February 23, 1994, Respondent was advised of the Petitioner's decisions of February 22, 1994, his rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 and, that March 8, 1994 at 6:00 P.M. had been set as the date and time for him to be heard by the Petitioner regarding its decision to have him examined. Said letter was hand delivered to Respondent on February 23, 1994.

5. By letter dated February 24, 1994, from Petitioner's Personnel Administrator, Respondent was provided with a Statement of Reasons for the Petitioner's decision, a copy of the resolutions passed by Petitioner on February 22, 1994, and written documents and statements relied upon by the Petitioner in arriving at its decision to have the Respondent examined.

6. At the request of the Respondent, the hearing scheduled before the Petitioner on March 8, 1994 was rescheduled to March 29, 1994 at 6:00 P.M., on which date the Respondent appeared before the Petitioner with his legal counsel, Ned P. Rogovoy, Esquire, and Respondent made a presentation to the Petitioner. Following Respondent's presentation to the Petitioner, the Petitioner voted to affirm its prior decision to require the Respondent to be examined, which affirmation Respondent was informed of by letter dated April 6, 1994, to Respondent's attorney. Also in the said letter of April 6, 1994, Respondent was advised that he would receive a written notice of the date, time and place for the examination by written correspondence.

7. Dr. Stuart Zuckerman, the psychiatrist chosen by the Petitioner to perform a fair and thorough psychiatric examination of the Respondent, said he would need to review certain records pertaining to the Respondent, including records of Respondent's prior medical and psychiatric treatment, hospital records or reports, credit records, personnel files and military discharge records, if Respondent has been in the military service. Dr. Zuckerman also advised that he would require that Respondent execute an informed consent prior to the examination.

8. In a telephone conversation on April 21, 1994, Petitioner's Solicitor advised Respondent's Attorney, Ned P. Rogovoy, regarding the information Dr. Zuckerman required in order to perform a fair and meaningful examination. Respondent's counsel was also informed that an authorization to acquire the necessary records and an informed consent form would be prepared for the Respondent to execute and return to Petitioner's Solicitor. Petitioner's Solicitor would then obtain the records which would be forwarded directly to Dr. Zuckerman. Thereafter, an appointment for the examination with Dr. Zuckerman would be scheduled. Mr. Rogovoy advised the Petitioner's Solicitor to forward the authorization to obtain the records and the informed consent form to him and he would discuss the same with the Respondent. Said authorization and informed consent were forwarded to Mr. Rogovoy by certified mail under cover letter dated April 26, 1994 and was received by Mr. Rogovoy on April 29, 1994.

9. Not hearing from Mr. Rogovoy for several days after his receipt of the authorization and informed consent, Petitioner's Solicitor contacted Mr. Rogovoy by telephone on May 9, 1994 at which time Mr. Rogovoy advised Petitioner's Solicitor that he had spoken to his client, the Respondent, and the Respondent told him that he would not sign the authorization or informed consent form forwarded under cover letter of April 26, 1994.

10. At a regularly scheduled meeting of the Petitioner held on May 17, 1994, Petitioner directed its counsel to file the appropriate petition before the Commissioner of Education to obtain an order to compel the Respondent to execute the said necessary authorization and informed consent and otherwise cooperate so that the required examination may be performed by Dr. Zuckerman.

11. During the more than three (3) month period between February 23, 1994, when Respondent was advised that Dr. Stuart Zuckerman had been chosen by Petitioner to perform the psychiatric examination and May 18, 1994, the Respondent did not express a preference for another psychiatrist to perform the required examination.

12. By letter from Respondent's counsel dated May 18, 1994, faxed on May 18, 1994, Petitioner's Solicitor was advised that Respondent had directed his attorney to advise Petitioner's Solicitor that Respondent chose Dr. Janet Thornton, a staff psychiatrist at Atlantic Mental Health, Inc. to perform the examination. Respondent cited the fact that Respondent has previously been evaluated by Dr. Thornton on or about February 8, 1993, at the request of the Petitioner, before the Respondent was allowed to return to work after a six (6) month absence during which he was under psychiatric treatment at South Amboy Memorial Hospital in South Amboy, New Jersey and Middlesex County Mental Health Clinic in Old Bridge, New Jersey.

13. At a regularly scheduled meeting of the Petitioner held on June 7, 1994, Petitioner was advised of Respondent's request that the examination be performed by Dr. Janet Thornton and, after discussion, Petitioner voted not to approve Respondent's request to have the required psychiatric examination performed by Dr. Thornton. By letter dated June 9, 1994, faxed to Respondent's counsel on June 9, 1994, Respondent's counsel was advised of the Petitioner's decision at its meeting on June 7, 1994, citing the Petitioner's position that it wants the examination of the Respondent performed by a professional that has had no previous contact with the Respondent and that the Petitioner is seeking a completely objective evaluation.

14. Respondent has failed and refused to cooperate with Petitioner to accomplish the examination of the Respondent required by the Petitioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2.

THE BOARD'S LEGAL ARGUMENT

A Board of Education may suspend a tenured teaching staff member, with pay, pending a physical or psychiatric examination. John W. Griggs vs. Board of Education of the Borough of Somerville, Somerset County, 80 S.L.D. 1492 (St. Bd.); N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6; N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. However, unless it certifies tenure dismissal charges to the Commissioner, a board of education lacks the authority to suspend a tenured teaching staff member without pay or to otherwise reduce such person's compensation. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

The Respondent was suspended, with pay, by the Petitioner commencing February 23, 1994 pending the receipt and review of the results of a psychiatric and physical examination of the Respondent. Petitioner's actions were based upon a finding that Respondent's behavior "evidences a significant possibility of harmful, significant deviation from normal mental and/or physical health affecting his ability to teach, discipline and associate with school district students"

(See a copy of Petitioner's Resolution attached as Exhibit "A"). Respondent did not challenge Petitioner's findings. Since February 23, 1994, Petitioner has gone through the procedural steps necessary including requests for Respondent's cooperation. Respondent's response has been a belated request, more than three months after the initial notice to Respondent, that the examination be performed by someone other than Dr. Zuckerman, the physician designated by the Petitioner in every notice or correspondence sent to the Respondent starting February 23, 1994. The Petitioner has disapproved each of the physicians suggested by the Respondent for the appropriate reasons stated in letters to Respondent's attorney dated June 9, 1994 and July 13, 1994 (mistakenly dated June 13, 1994), hereto attached as Exhibits "B" and "C", respectively.

The irreparable harm to the Petitioner, and through it to the taxpayers of Pleasantville, is the continued payment of public funds to the Respondent, as salary, for which he is not working. Respondent's actions also undermine the authority of the Petitioner. Respondent has thus far been paid for more than four (4) months salary in this matter. Though Petitioner has filed a Petition seeking an Order of the Commissioner requiring the Respondent to undergo the requested examinations, that Petition is not likely to be decided for several months. Petitioner will again be required to pay salary to Respondent, beginning in September, for the 1994-1995 school year, without recompense. Once the salary is paid, the Petitioner has no legal basis or adequate remedy at law for recouping the funds paid to the Respondent, no matter what the outcome of the examinations or the Petition filed in this matter. Crowe vs. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 132-133; Morris County Transfer Station, Inc. vs. Frank's Sanitation, 260 N.J. 570 (App. Div. 1992) at pg. 575. Respondent should not be allowed to continue to benefit from his failure to cooperate with the Petitioner. Equity will never suffer a wrong without a remedy. Orland Properties, Inc. vs. Broderick, 94 N.J. Super 307 (Ch. Div. 1967) at pg. 313-314.

The second prong of the Crowe test requires that temporary relief be withheld when the legal rights of the parties are unsettled. This prong is satisfied in the case at bar. The authority of a board of education to have a teaching staff member examined is well settled. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2; Kochman vs. Keansburg Board of Education, 124 N.J. Super 203 (App. Div. 1973)); Gish vs. Board of education of Borough of Paramus, Bergen County 145 N.J. Super 96 (App. Div. 1976); 74 S.L.D. 1150. The Petitioner's authority has been upheld as a reflection or extension of the board's duty to protect students from significant danger or harm, whether physical or otherwise. Gish at pg. 104-105.

In his answer the Respondent cites the fact that he has offered the names of two psychiatrists he chooses to have perform the required psychiatric examination. One of the psychiatrists chosen by the Respondent previously examined him on or about February 8, 1993, at the request of the Petitioner, and thereafter advised the Petitioner that the Respondent was fit to return to work. The behavior which has caused the Petitioner to require that the Respondent undergo the pending psychiatric examination was first documented on December 7, 1993, ten (10) calendar months or seven (7) school months after that psychiatrist had declared him fit. The second psychiatrist suggested by the Respondent is associated with the same office or association as is the first. The psychiatrist who examined the Respondent on February 8, 1993 did so at the Petitioner's direction prior to Respondent's return to work after Respondent's self-imposed six month absence from his duties due to a mental disorder. However, there is no legal or other requirement that Petitioner approve the Respondent's return to that same psychiatrist or her associate for the pending examination. Pursuant to its obligation to protect school district students, the Petitioner has legitimately taken the position that it wants an objective psychiatric examination performed by a psychiatrist not previously associated with Respondent or Petitioner in any way. The Petitioner has exercised its legitimate right not to approve the psychiatrists suggested by the Respondent. The Respondent continues to refuse to cooperate and he draws a salary while doing so.

The third prong of the Crowe test requires that interim relief not be granted when material facts are controverted. A review of the Petition and Answer filed in this matter show that no material facts are controverted. The third prong of Crowe is satisfied.

The final prong of the Crowe test requires an examination of the relative hardship the requested interim relief will impose upon the parties. When applying this prong of the test, the principles of justice, equity and morality must always be considered. Zoning Board of Adjustment vs. Service Electric Cable T.V., 198 N.J. Super 370 (App Div. 1985) at pg. 379. Applying those principles, the Respondent should not be allowed to continue to collect a salary of public funds, without recompense, while failing to cooperate with the Petitioner in carrying out its legitimate authority. This prong of the test should not be decided in a way that renders the Petitioner's authority vain and useless. Pfaus vs. Palermo, 97 N.J. Super at page 8 (App. Div. 1967); Poff vs. Caro, 228 N.J. Super 370. Applications for interim relief should not be viewed with a narrow and grudging approach; but rather in a manner which seeks equity and justice.

It is within the Respondent's power to resolve this matter by providing the cooperation sought by the Petitioner in order to carry out the Petitioner's legitimate authority and function. In that regard, should the commissioner grant the Petitioner's request that Respondent's current suspension be without pay, any hardship which may be visited upon the Respondent thereby has been brought about by the Respondent. The Petitioner does not have the independent power to cease paying salary to the Respondent until the required examination has been done.

Respondent's Position

FACTS

Petitioner School Board, by resolution adopted February 22, 1994, alleged that Respondent's conduct was a deviation from normal mental or physical health and, therefore, effected his ability to teach. The resolution further requested that the Respondent undergo a psychiatric and physical examination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and 18A:16-3. The resolution further directed that the examination be performed by a Dr. Stuart Zuckerman, and further a March 8, 1994 date was set for a hearing should the Respondent request same. In fact, the Petitioner School Board then rescheduled the hearing for Tuesday, March 29th. It was agreed by and between counsel for the respective parties that the hearing would be of the type delineated in Gish v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Paramus 145 N.J. Super 96. Subsequent to the Gish hearing held on March 29th, the Board, by letter on April 6, 1994, affirmed its prior decision to require that Respondent undergo a psychiatric and physical examination, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2, with the proviso that Respondent would receive a subsequent notice of date time and place for the examination. Prior to receiving a date, time and place, there was communication between counsel for the respective parties whereby Petitioner was requesting authorizations to obtain medical records and reports, psychiatric and/or psychological records and reports, hospital records and reports, credit records, personnel files and military records. Ultimately, in the give and take of the propriety of Petitioner's request for Respondent's authorizations, and specifically on May 18, 1994, Respondent, through his attorney, caused a letter to be sent to solicitor for Petitioner, wherein pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 the Respondent designated a different psychiatrist which the Board had designated in a prior evaluation of Respondent back in February of 1993. There was then an exchange whereby the Board would not accept their prior designee psychiatrist, the Respondent chose another which prompted the Petitioner School Board, by and through their attorney, to file an action with the Commissioner related to the interpretation of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and 18A:16-3, which is the subject of the underlying action herein.

Now, Petitioner brings another emergent application requesting that Petitioner School Board be able to discontinue Respondent's pay. Respondent opposes any emergent relief for reasons which are inhereinafter cited.

RESPONDENT'S
LEGAL ARGUMENT

In Slater v. Board of Educ., 237 N.J. Super. 424 (App. Div. 1989) at 426, it is specifically stated:

Thus, a tenured employee may be suspended without pay only if indicted or if tenure charges have been preferred and certified to the Commissioner of Education. In all other circumstances, a suspension must be with pay.

Further, at page 426 in Slater, supra., it is stated:

If a tenure charge is preferred and filed with the school board, the board reviews it and the accompanying statement of supporting evidence, and any written statement submitted by the employee. The board then determines if there is probable cause for the charge. If there is, the board's certification to that effect is forwarded to the Commissioner of Education. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.

After certification of the charge, the board may suspend the employee with or without pay.

In the instant case, obviously there is no indictment and further no tenure charge has been preferred filed and certified. The Board properly requested that the Respondent submit to a psychological and physical examination, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2, and Respondent exercised his options to a hearing and then to another psychiatrist previously designated by the School Board under 18A:16-3. Respondent never refused to be examined, but then again, all of that is the subject of the underlying suit. After examination, which certainly will be insightful as to Respondent's ability to teach, the School Board may then exercise different options, including the certification or the attempted certification of tenure charges. At this point there certainly are no tenure charges which have been certified by Petitioner School Board, nor has that certification been sent to the Commissioner, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-11, but rather there is a request for an examination of Respondent which is a preliminary action and an investigatory action, but certainly is not a tenure charge in and of itself. Also citing Romanowski v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, 89 N.J. Super. 38.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 specifically provides that a board of education lacks the authority to suspend without pay unless it certifies tenure dismissal charges to the Commissioner.

Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 132 is relied upon by Petitioner for relief herein. Crowe deals with whether temporary relief can be awarded in a suit to enforce an agreement between unmarried co-habitants. Crowe, a female, lived with DeGioia from 1960 until 1967 and from 1967 to 1980 lived in DeGioia's house and claims DeGioia made certain representations that he would take care of her for the rest of her life. Crowe then asked the court to enforce her alleged agreement and there was certainly some factual dispute as to the promise to support, but the Chancery Division denied a motion for transfer to the Law Division and they awarded Crowe minimal immediate temporary support. DeGioia appealed and the Appellate Division reversed on the basis that there was no authority for awarding "alimony" and that preliminary relief in any event was not available, thus the Appellate Division vacated the order granting support.

The Supreme Court went on to say that under a "relevant" statute alimony may be ordered on an interim basis only in a matrimonial action, specifically N.J.S.A. 2:34-23, which statutory action does not embrace an action on a contract between unmarried co-habitants. The court goes on to mention that there are times when the courts will recognize preliminary relief but only in the most sensitive exercising of judicial discretion. The court further says that in order for any temporary relief to be granted, the underlying claim cannot be unsettled.

In the case at bar, which psychiatrist should examine the Respondent and the outcome of that psychiatrist's analysis is and has not been accomplished and, therefore, the outcome of who should examine Respondent and what the examiner will say is unsettled. Specifically what is unsettled is a professional opinion as to Respondent's ability to perform his job as a teacher, the Board wants a psychiatric examination prior to making that determination, therefore, the underlying claim is unsettled.

The Crowe case further states that no preliminary injunctions should issue "where all material facts are controverted", page 133. "Thus, to prevail on an application for temporary relief, a plaintiff must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits." After the Gish hearing and Respondent's presentation the Petitioner still requested that Respondent submit to a psychiatric examination. NO DETERMINATION WAS MADE AS TO RESPONDENT'S ABILITY TO TEACH NOR HIS FITNESS TO TEACH, therefore, the material facts are controverted and even if the Crowe case were the standard, the material facts being in dispute would not permit a court to issue preliminary injunctive relief as is requested by Petitioner herein.

The statutes are clear and so is the Slater case, supra, no suspension of pay is justified and/or appropriate by the statutes or the case law at this point in time and suspension of pay on this emergent application should be denied.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The Board is authorized to suspend an employee under the statutory provisions found in Title 18A Education Law. As the court observed and stated in Slater, supra at 426, a board of education may suspend a tenured employee without pay only if that employee is under indictment (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3) or the board has preferred and certified tenure charges against the employee to the Commissioner (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16). Neither of those elements are extant here. Respondent is not under indictment nor has the Board preferred and certified tenure charges against respondent to the Commissioner. The Board's arguments in equity are inappropriate and may not be considered in making a determination concerning the law which dictates the operation of our State's public schools.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that under the facts and circumstances of this matter, there is no authority granted to the Board to suspend Respondent's pay pending a physical and psychiatric examination. Therefore, the Board's application to suspend Respondent's pay pending the physical and psychiatric evaluation is hereby DISMISSED.

The Board, however, has the statutory right and obligation to require Respondent to undergo a physical and psychiatric examination, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 when, "... in the judgment of the board, an employee shows evidence of deviation from normal, physical or mental health." The Court, in Gish, supra, said at 105 that:

A teacher's fitness may not be measured "solely by his or her ability to perform the teaching function and ignore the fact that the teacher's presence in the classroom might, nevertheless, pose a danger of harm to the students for a reason not related to academic proficiency." In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super 13, 32 (App. Div. 1974), certif. den. 65 N.J. 292 (1974), and authorities cited therein.

The Gish Court stated at 104 that the obligation of the board of education to determine the fitness of its teachers is a reflection of the board's duty to protect the students under its charge from significant damages of harm, whether it be physical or otherwise.

Respondent, on the other hand, relies upon N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 to support his position that he has the option to choose the physician and/or psychiatrist to perform the examinations and evaluations. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 reads as follows:

Any such examination may be made by a physician or institution designated by the board, in which case the cost thereof and all laboratory tests and fluoroscopic or X-ray procedures shall be borne by the board or, at the option of the employee, they may be made by a physician or institution of his own choosing, approved by the board, in which case said examination shall be made at the employee's expense.

Respondent seeks to use the services of a psychiatrist who had previously evaluated Respondent, at the Board's expense. The Board has rejected Respondent's choice of psychiatrists which, under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 it is authorized to do. The law does not bestow upon Respondent the right to unilaterally select the psychiatrist of his choosing. Rather, the statute is explicit in granting the Board the right to approve, or disapprove, Respondent's selection. The Board has done so and rejected Respondent's choice in favor of an independent examination and evaluation. Absent the Board's express imprimatur for Respondent's selection, it may invoke the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and require Respondent to undergo an examination by a psychiatrist of its choosing.

It is therefore ORDERED that Respondent submit to an examination and evaluation by the Board's authorized psychiatrist at a time and place scheduled by the Board.

In order for the conduct of a fair and impartial evaluation of Respondent, it is necessary for the examining physician/psychiatrist to have for his/her review all pertinent data and information concerning Respondent's prior medical and psychiatric treatment, hospital record or reports, together with personnel files under the control of the Board.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that Respondent execute the necessary releases and authorizations for such records or reports for the use of the psychiatrist selected by the Board to perform the examination and evaluation of Respondent.

Summary decision is hereby entered on behalf of Respondent denying the Board's application to withhold or suspend Respondent's salary pending Respondent's examination under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2.

Summary decision is hereby entered on behalf of the Board with regard to its right and obligation to cause Respondent to submit to a physical and psychiatric evaluation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

_____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

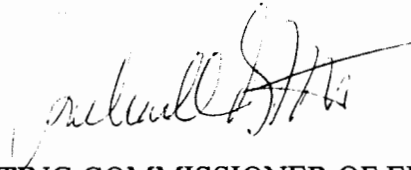

Upon a careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the Board may require respondent to undergo a physical and mental examination in accordance with Gish, supra. Additionally, the Commissioner concurs that the Board has a right to approve of respondent's choice of physician since respondent does not wish the examination to be conducted at his own expense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and 16-3.

Finally, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and 6-11 unless the Board certifies dismissal charges, the Board lacks the authority to suspend a tenured staff member without pay.

Accordingly, for the reasons well-expressed therein, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law ordering that respondent submit to an examination in accordance with the ALJ's instructions and dismissing the Board's application to suspend respondent's pay pending the physical and psychiatric evaluation.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

RESPONDENT-APPELLANT. :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, June 19, 1995

For the Petitioner-Respondent, James L. Jackson, Esq.

For the Respondent-Appellant, Girard & Rogovoy (Ned P. Rogovoy, Esq., of Counsel)

On February 22, 1994, the Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville (hereinafter "Board") adopted a resolution pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and 18A:16-3 directing Richard Chambers (hereinafter "respondent"), a tenured teaching staff member, to undergo a psychiatric examination to be performed by Dr. Stuart Zuckerman, D.O. and a physical exam to be performed by a physician to be approved by the Board. On May 18, 1994, respondent, acting pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3, provided the Board with the name of a psychiatrist he wanted to perform the examination. On June 7, the Board rejected respondent's choice, advising him in a letter dated June 9 that the Board wanted a completely objective evaluation performed by a physician who had not had any previous contact with respondent.¹ On June 20, respondent provided the Board with the name of another psychiatrist who had not had any previous contact with him but who was associated with the same medical center as his first choice.

On June 30, 1994, the Board submitted the instant petition to the Commissioner of Education, seeking to compel respondent to submit to a psychiatric examination conducted by Dr. Zuckerman. At its meeting of July 5, 1994, the Board rejected respondent's second choice "for substantially the same reasons" it had given for rejecting his first choice.

On May 5, 1995, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") recommended that respondent be directed to submit to an examination by Dr. Zuckerman. Observing that the law did not bestow upon respondent the right to unilaterally select the physician of his choosing, the ALJ concluded that the law was explicit in granting the Board the right to approve or disapprove of respondent's selection and that the Board had rejected respondent's choice in favor of an independent examination and evaluation. The ALJ concluded that absent the Board's express approval of respondent's selection, it could invoke the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and require respondent to undergo an examination by a psychiatrist of its choosing.

On June 19, 1995, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's findings and conclusions and directed respondent to submit to an examination by the Board's psychiatrist in accordance with the ALJ's instructions. The Commissioner added that he "concur[red]" that "the Board has a right to approve of respondent's choice of physician since respondent does not wish the examination to be conducted at his own expense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and 16-3." Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 15.

Respondent filed the instant appeal to the State Board. Respondent does not dispute the Board's authority to compel him to submit to a psychiatric examination or its action in directing him to submit to such an evaluation. Rather, he argues that the statutory scheme provides him with the option of selecting the psychiatrist, subject to the Board's approval.

After a thorough review of the record, we reverse the decision of the Commissioner.

While there is no dispute that a district board may require psychiatric or physical examinations of any employee "whenever, in the judgment of the board, an employee shows evidence of deviation from normal, physical or mental health," N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2, such an examination:

may be made by a physician or institution designated by the board, in which case the cost thereof...shall be borne by the board or, at the option of the employee, they may be made by a physician or institution of his own choosing, approved by the board, in which case said examination shall be made at the employee's expense.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 (emphasis added).

We reject the Commissioner's adoption of the ALJ's conclusion that the Board, upon rejection of respondent's selected physician, could automatically invoke the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 so as to require respondent to submit to an evaluation by a physician of its choosing. We find nothing in the statutory scheme that would support such a construction. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 expressly provides the employee with the option of selecting a physician to conduct the examination. While that option is not unlimited, and the employee's selections are subject to the district board's approval, N.J.S.A. 18A:16-3 does not, as the Initial Decision would allow, provide a district board with the authority to mechanically nullify that option simply by rejecting the employee's initial choice and then, at that point, forcing the employee to accept the doctor it selected.

Moreover, in "concurring" that the statute provides the Board with the "right to approve of respondent's choice of physician since respondent does not wish the examination to be conducted at his own expense," the Commissioner misconstrued both the statute and the record. The Initial Decision does not offer such a conclusion, and respondent does not dispute his statutory obligation to pay for the examination if performed by a physician of his choosing. Nor is the Board's right to approve respondent's selection conditioned upon that payment obligation. Rather, the statute is clear in providing that an examination conducted by a physician of the employee's choosing must be at the employee's expense and that the district board has the right to approve of the employee's selection.

Both district boards and their employees must act in a reasonable manner in proceeding under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 and 18A:16-3. Given the particular facts in the record of this matter, the Board herein has not demonstrated that respondent's conduct has been such as to entitle it to compel him to submit to an examination by Dr. Zuckerman at this time. Respondent provided the Board with the names of two psychiatrists, both of whom were rejected by the Board as indicated above.² The record does not indicate that respondent's actions or particular selections were designed as a subterfuge to frustrate or impede the Board's statutory authority to compel him to submit to an examination.³ Indeed, when informed of the Board's reason for rejecting his first choice, respondent promptly submitted the name of another psychiatrist with whom he had no previous contact. The Board, however, also rejected that choice, apparently on the grounds that the second physician was associated with the same medical center where respondent's previous examination had been conducted.

Consequently, for the reasons stated herein, we reverse the decision of the Commissioner directing respondent to submit to a psychological evaluation by Dr. Zuckerman. However, given the time which has already elapsed in this matter as the result of these proceedings, we direct respondent to provide the Board with the name of another psychiatrist within two weeks from the date of our decision herein. Inasmuch as we reject respondent's contention that the Board acted unreasonably in requiring him to submit to an independent objective evaluation, we direct that the ² We note that the Board submitted its instant petition to the Commissioner prior to rejecting respondent's second choice.

³ While the Board argues that respondent waited nearly three months after its selection of Dr. Zuckerman on February 22, 1994 to submit his own choice on May 18, we note that a hearing on its directive was held by the Board on March 29, at which time it reaffirmed its action. See Gish v. Bd. of Education of Paramus, 145 N.J. Super. 96 (App. Div. 1976), certif. den., 74 N.J. 251 (1977), cert. den., 434 U.S. 879 ["Before a teacher is ordered to submit to a psychiatric examination, he is entitled to...a hearing, if requested." 145 N.J. Super. at 100, quoting Kochman v. Keansburg Bd. of Ed., 124 N.J. Super. 203, 213 (Ch. Div. 1973)]. Notice to respondent of such action was dated April 6, 1994.

respondent select a physician who is not associated with the medical center which performed his previous evaluation and who has not had any previous contact with him. In acting upon such selection, the Board may not unreasonably withhold its approval.⁴

⁴ We stress that once the parties have agreed on a physician to perform the examination, the Board is required to respect the ensuing physician-patient relationship. Accordingly, respondent cannot be compelled by the Board to authorize release to the Board's counsel of any records requested by the physician as part of his or her evaluation. SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, building-level administrators who were members of the collective bargaining unit of Willingboro Educational Administrators' Association, challenged Board's requirement that its administrators and supervisors obtain a black seal license as a condition of employment.

While the ALJ found that petitioners failed to meet their burden of proof that the requirement to obtain a black seal license was arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious in that the principal needs to have a working knowledge of potentially dangerous equipment within the school building, the ALJ also determined that the requirement was a negotiated term of employment within petitioners' bargaining agreement since 1982. Accordingly, since disputes that are properly the subject of mandatory negotiation are not cognizable by the Commissioner as controversies arising under school laws, this matter should not fall within the decisional purview of the Commissioner. Petitioners' application for a determination of invalidity of the black seal license requirement was denied.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

Decided: May 3, 1995

BEFORE ROBERT S. MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 10, 1994, Herbert Druker filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education for a declaratory determination that the respondent Willingboro Township Board of Education ("Board") has no authority to require its administrators and supervisors to obtain a black seal license as a condition of employment.

An answer was filed on April 4, 1994. On November 10, 1994, without objection, an amended petition, adding a number of other individuals and the Willingboro Educational Administrators' Association, was filed.

Subsequently, counsel agreed upon a stipulation of facts and made cross-motions for summary decision. Briefs and reply briefs were filed in due course. Oral argument was held on April 10, 1995, at which time counsel also submitted (by way of a joint exhibit) a copy of a collective bargaining agreement between the Willingboro Township Board of Education and the Willingboro Educational Administrators' Association for July 1, 1991 to June 30, 1994.

As stated above, the essential facts in this matter are not in dispute. They are as follows:

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Petitioners are building-level administrators employed by the Willingboro Board of Education.
2. Petitioners are members of the collective bargaining unit identified as the Willingboro Educational Administrators' Association.
3. A current collective bargaining agreement between the Willingboro Board of Education and the Willingboro Educational Administrators' Association provides in Article 15 that each unit member of the Association shall obtain a black seal license within three (3) years.
4. The administrators were first required to obtain their black seal licenses as a result of the renewal of the collective bargaining agreement that became effective on July 1, 1982 and was to remain effective through June 30, 1984.

5. This collective bargaining agreement was signed by the president of the Willingboro Educational Administrators' Association on behalf of the membership.
6. The black seal license has remained a requirement for administrators since the 1982 collective bargaining agreement made it so.
7. Dr. Herbert Druker was employed by the Willingboro Board of Education from December 1, 1968 to his retirement on December 1, 1994.
8. The black seal license signifies that the holder thereof has taken a course and passed a test concerning the safe and proper operation of steam generators (boilers) and steam generator equipment.

ISSUE AND ANALYSIS

In pertinent part, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4 provides as follows:

Each board of education may make rules, not inconsistent with the provisions of this title, governing the employment, terms and tenure of employment, promotion and dismissal, and salaries and time and mode of payment thereof of teaching staff members

N.J.S.A. 34:7-1 states that no unlicensed person shall operate a steam generator and that no owner or person having charge of a building in which such equipment is located shall allow the use of such equipment unless the same is in charge of a properly licensed person.

N.J.A.C. 6:11-9.5 sets forth the requirements necessary to hold a principal's endorsement to an administrative certification. These requirements include: (1) a master's degree in one of the recognized fields of leadership or management; (2) passing a State administered examination; (3) a performance assessment conducted by State-approved assessors; and (4) completion of a State-approved residency program under the direction of a State-approved mentor and sponsorship of a public or non-public school.

The question in this case thus becomes whether the black seal license requirement in the collective bargaining agreement is "inconsistent with" the certification requirements for administrators and principals found in N.J.A.C. 6:11-9.1 et seq. For the reasons to be expressed hereafter, I believe this question should be answered in the negative.

The argument of petitioners, as set forth in their brief of March 10, 1995, is essentially as follows:

“Nowhere in the certification rules is there a requirement that a principal also must know how to operate a steam powered generator to hold the title of principal. Petitioners contend that a local district board may not make or impose local requirements which are materially different from and which materially alter the State certification requirements. Petitioners submit that assuming a local district board of education has the authority to impose local requirements in addition to the State certification requirements to hold a given position, there must be some reasonable relationship between the locally mandated requirements and the position for which they are intended to apply.”

Petitioners, however, have the burden of proof in this matter and they have been unable to cite any authority directly in support of their position. The closest they have come are the cases of South River Educational Association v. South River Board of Education, 1987 S.L.D. 2724, and Van Os v. Board of Education of Township of Cinnaminson, 1977 S.L.D. 1040. The former decision invalidated certain requirements imposed by the South River Board of Education which had the effect of defeating the established seniority rights of teachers in the school system. Clearly, that is not the situation in the instant case. The Van Os decision upheld the right of the Cinnaminson Board of Education to impose requirements greater than those for a regular teaching certificate, but warned that a board can not be “wholly arbitrary in its quest for teachers with multiple certification” (1977 S.L.D. at 1043).

Furthermore, petitioners concede that one of the responsibilities of a principal is the safety of the students, teachers, and other people who attend, visit, or work in the school building (or buildings) where, so to speak, he presides. Again, petitioners have been unable to demonstrate anything arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious in a requirement that the principal have working knowledge of potentially dangerous equipment within the school building and of the precautions and measures that should be taken to minimize the risks thereof.

Third, the requirement of a black seal license has not been unilaterally imposed by respondent on petitioners. It was agreed upon by both parties and has been in effect and incorporated into collective bargaining agreements since 1982. As respondent's counsel points out, the collective bargaining agreement under which the parties have been operating is the result of a negotiating process, involving quid pro quos by both sides. It is quite likely that the administrators agreed to the black seal license requirement in return for a concession or concessions made by the Board of Education. Without pursuing the matter further, I should note that petitioners' claim of invalidity at this time (twelve years after having agreed to the requirement) implicates the equitable doctrines of laches and estoppel, both of which may be invoked as a defense by respondent.

Finally, although N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 gives the Commissioner subject matter jurisdiction to hear and determine "all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws," that phrase has been interpreted to mean that the dispute arises under Title 18A. Fair Lawn Board of Educ. v. Mayor of Fair Lawn, 143 N.J. Super. 259, 266 n.3 (Law Div. 1976). If the controversy does not arise under the school laws, it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction, even though it may pertain to school personnel. East Brunswick Bd. of Educ. v. Township Counsel of East Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94, 102 (1966). The Commissioner's main responsibility is to see that the policies of the school laws are being faithfully effected. Laba v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 23 N.J. 364 (1957).

Disputes that are properly the subject of mandatory negotiation are not cognizable by the Commissioner as controversies arising under the school laws. See Dunellen Bd. of Educ. v. Dunellen Educ. Ass'n, 64 N.J. 17, 22 (1973); Red Bank Bd. of Educ. v. Warrington, 138 N.J. Super. 564, 571 (App. Div. 1976). The Public Employment Relations Commission has primary jurisdiction to determine whether the subject matter of a dispute is within the scope of collective negotiations. Ridgefield Park Educ. Ass'n v. Ridgefield Park Bd. of Educ., 78 N.J. 144, 154 (1978). Terms and conditions of employment are subjects that are negotiable pursuant to the Employer-Employee Relations Act, N.J.S.A. 34:13A-1 to -21. The requirement that principals obtain a black seal license, having been negotiated and set forth in the collective bargaining agreement, is clearly a term and condition of employment. If it involves educational policy at all, it does so only indirectly, and should not fall within the decisional purview of the Commissioner.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

For the reasons expressed above, I CONCLUDE that the petitioners' application for a determination of invalidity of the black license seal requirement should be DENIED. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN- :

RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioners' exceptions and the reply thereto were timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioners essentially renew their arguments previously advanced before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) and further argue that the ALJ's erroneous reasoning and conclusion that the Board did not act arbitrarily in requiring its building level administrators to obtain a black seal license could lead to an endless list of requirements being imposed at the local level. (Exceptions at p. 3) Additionally, petitioners assert that this matter is properly within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner in that "[t]he Commissioner has an interest in determining whether the qualifications of any teaching staff member can be controlled by something other than what is set forth by the State Board of Examiners in the New Jersey Administrative Code” (Id. at p. 4)

The Board supports the ALJ’s findings that petitioners have failed to meet their burden of proof, that the black seal requirement was a negotiated term within petitioners’ bargaining agreement, and that this matter is not within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner. (Board’s Reply at pp. 1, 2)

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner finds petitioners’ exceptions to be without merit and concurs with the ALJ’s conclusion that petitioners’ request for a determination of invalidity of their contractual requirement to obtain a black seal license should be denied. In that the requirement to obtain a black seal license has been part of petitioners’ collective bargaining agreement since 1982, and is a term and condition of employment, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that petitioners’ request “[i]f it involves educational policy at all  does so only indirectly, and should not fall within the decisional purview of the Commissioner.” (Initial Decision at p. 6)

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision of the ALJ for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Board certified tenure charges against respondent secretary for alleged excessive and chronic absenteeism beginning in the first year of her employment (school year 1987-88) and documented through school year 1993-94.

ALJ concluded that the Board properly served respondent with tenure charges and established by a preponderance of credible evidence that her unauthorized absences were excessive and imposed undue hardship on the operation of the Board's Accounting Department. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 13:13-2.5(b), the Board made reasonable accommodations for her handicap (drug use) as it existed in 1988-89; moreover, ALJ determined, based on respondent's testimony, that her excessive absences were not due to her drug use. Board also complied with Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA); respondent's refusal to accept the properly served notice did not give rise to a violation of the OPMA. ALJ ordered the Board's action terminating the respondent's tenured secretary position sustained.

In light of the record of absences which fully supported sufficient cause to terminate respondent from her tenured position, Commissioner adopted the initial decision as his own and directed dismissal from her position as of the date of this decision.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City (Board) certified charges against respondent, Sharon Jones, a tenured secretary, before the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) alleging excessive absenteeism and seeks her removal from her tenured position.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 11, 1994, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A prehearing conference was held on October 21, 1994, at which, among other things, the issues to be determined by this tribunal were set forth and the hearing dates of March 21, 22 and 23, 1995, were established.

The hearing was conducted on March 21 and 22, 1995, at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The hearing record closed on March 22, 1995.

ISSUES

The issues to be determined, as agreed upon by the parties, are as follows:

1. Whether the tenure charges of excessive absenteeism are true, in fact?
2. Whether the Board failed to conform to the provisions of New Jersey Statutes in certifying tenure charges against respondent, and has thus deprived respondent of due process of law?
3. Whether the Board violated the provisions of the Open Public Meetings Act with regard to the action taken against respondent?
4. Whether the Board is barred by the doctrines of equitable estoppel and laches?
5. Whether the Board is barred by the statute of limitations?
6. Whether the Board is barred in that it fails to state a cause of action upon which relief can be granted?
7. Whether the Board has violated respondent's rights by its refusal and/or neglect in providing respondent with an accommodation of her disabilities in violation of the laws of the United States and the State of New Jersey including, but not limited to, the Americans with Disabilities Act?

BURDEN OF PROOF

The Board has the burden of proof for Issue No. 1 and must carry it by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Respondent has the burden of proof with respect to Issue No. 2 through No. 7, by the same standard.

STIPULATIONS

The parties stipulated to the documents contained in Exhibit P-1. Respondent did not, however, stipulate that the Board's Notice to her was either sent or received. The Disciplinary Charges which give rise to the tenure charges against respondent and allege chronic absenteeism are as follows:

1. During the period from 1987 to the present date, the respondent, Sharon Jones, has been chronically absent from her duties as a secretary of the Atlantic City Board of Education.
2. Pursuant to the respondent's contract of employment with the Atlantic City Board of Education, a secretary is permitted a total of twelve (12) sick days per year, three (3) personal days per year, and ten (10) vacation days per year during the first six (6) years of employment.
3. The respondent's contract of employment commenced in the school year of 1987. In her first year of employment the respondent accumulated nine (9) sick days and two (2) personal days. Additionally, the respondent was docked for three (3) days during the days of June 15, June 16 and June 17, 1988. "Docked" days are defined as unauthorized absences. During school year 1988-89, the respondent consumed all of her allocated twelve (12) sick days, three (3) personal days, and then (10) vacation days. The respondent was granted twenty five (25) days approved medical leave during school year 1988-89.
4. Additionally, in school year 1988-89 the respondent was docked for twenty five (25) unauthorized absences, as follows:

July 22, 1988
August 18, 1988
September 5, 12, 13 and 20, 1988
October 18, 1988
November 2, 3 and 15, 1988

1989

January 25, 1989
February 1, 6, 7, 8, 13, and 14, 1989
April 18, 1989
May 2, 3, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10, 1989

vacation time for a total of fifteen (15) days vacation. During the said school year, the respondent was docked a total of twenty six (26) days for unauthorized absences, as follows:

1993

November 19 and 30, 1993

December 1, 2, 3, 6, 9, 15, 16, 17, 20 and 21, 1993

1994

January 7, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 21, 24, 25, 27 and 31, 1994

February 1 and 2, 1994

10. The respondent's continued absences have caused repeated interruptions in the the efficient management of the Administrative offices due to requirements for substitution of secretaries and shifting of assigned secretarial tasks. Additionally, the respondent's absences have imposed an undue hardship upon the administrative process of the school system.
11. The respondent's portfolio of accrued absences has continually escalated in each academic year of her employment.
12. The respondent's absences constitute excessive and chronic absenteeism by a secretary and require disciplinary action by the Board of Education. (P-1).

TESTIMONIAL AND DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Charles B. Hawn, Jr., the Board's Assistant Superintendent and Board Secretary, testified, among other things, about the composition of the Board's Business Office. He asserted there were five employees and one supervisor in the Accounting Department, three of which were assigned to payroll.

Mr. Hawn testified that respondent was assigned to post purchase orders and record their payments. She was subject to deadlines and was required to have reports ready and available prior to the Board's monthly meetings. The Board Secretary asserted that he was satisfied with respondent's work when she appeared for duty.

Mr. Hawn testified that respondent was awarded twelve sick leave days per year or one per month for a twelve month employee. Sick leave time may be accumulated and carried over from year to year. She was also allowed three administrative days per year which, if not used, are converted to sick leave days at the end of the year. Respondent was allowed ten vacation days per year up to her sixth year of employment. Thereafter, she was allowed five additional vacation days or, fifteen days per year. Vacation days are not allowed to be accumulated or carried over to the subsequent year.

Board Secretary Hawn testified that he has had numerous discussions with respondent about her absenteeism, arriving late for duty and leaving her duty post early. Mr. Hawn testified that in every year of respondent's employment while he served as the Board's Secretary, respondent would be docked for unauthorized absence beginning in or about April of each year. Unauthorized absences is an absence from duty where the employee has exhausted his/her sick leave time and other leave time used for absences. A note from a physician does not excuse an unauthorized absence.

Mr. Hawn testified that he had discussions with respondent about her absenteeism on at least five occasions during the past three years. Although the Board Secretary would give respondent the benefit of doubt and attempt to work with her to improve her attendance, it did not improve even after respondent asserted that it would not happen again.

Board Secretary Hawn testified that he had personally discussed the Board's Policy concerning absenteeism and specifically Article XV, Section 7 which provide that an employee who is absent for more than two days without the knowledge and consent of the Superintendent of Schools shall be considered to have broken her contract with the Board (P-5). He also discussed the implication of Title 18A, Education Law, with respect to her continued employment with the Board.

Mr. Hawn testified that respondent was granted an authorized leave of absence during the 1989-90 school year. Hawn was told that the leave was granted for medical reasons; i.e., a drug problem. He did not discuss this leave with respondent at anytime.

In 1992, Hawn recommended to the Board, which it accepted, to permanently withhold respondent's salary increment for chronic absenteeism.

In March 1994, Board Secretary Hawn advised respondent, orally, that the Board would discuss her employment status concerning her absenteeism. The discussion took place in Mr. Hawn's office with Ilenna Pitts, respondent's union representative, present. Respondent had arrived for duty late on that day. Mr. Hawn advised respondent and Ms. Pitts that respondent's absence jeopardized the Board's Business Office operation. He also advised both respondent and Pitts that respondent would receive official notice from the Board.

On or about March 3, 1994, the Board's Superintendent of Schools brought disciplinary charges against respondent to the Board. The Board executed a Notice of Disciplinary Charges against respondent, dated March 1, 1994. On March 4, 1994, the Board's solicitor mailed respondent two notices at the addresses she had supplied to the Board. One notice was sent to P.O. Box 5254, Atlantic City, NJ 08404. The other notice was sent to respondent at 1734 Grant Avenue, Atlantic City, NJ 08401. Both notices were unclaimed by respondent and returned to the Board.

On April 26, 1994, the Board, by a majority vote, certified disciplinary charges against respondent and suspended her without pay, effective April 27, 1994. On April 29, 1994, the Board's Solicitor sent its Notice, Certification of Determination, Notice of Disciplinary Charges, Disciplinary Charges and Proof of Mailing to respondent at the above addresses. (P-1). The same documents sent to respondent dated April 29, 1994, were returned to the Board's Solicitor unclaimed.

Susan G. Maggio, Accounting Department Office Manager, testified on behalf of the Board asserting, among other things, that she was respondent's director supervisor. Ms. Maggio, who is responsible to Mr. Hawn, asserted that respondent was a good worker when she was present. Ms. Maggio did not have any personal problems with respondent. The major problem she had was with respondent's absenteeism.

Ms. Maggio testified that the Board's Accounting Department processed more than 4,000 purchase orders each year. This required the posting of the purchase orders and confirming the orders. She asserted it got to the point where respondent's duties were divided between two other employees in the Accounting Department because of respondent's excessive absenteeism. As a consequence, the other two employees fell behind in their assigned work.

Respondent was required to generate a report for the Board's monthly meeting. Ms. Maggio asserted that respondent would always be absent just prior to the deadline for the Board report thus, placing an additional burden upon the other employees in the Accounting Department to complete respondent's assigned duties.

The record demonstrates that between May 3, 1989 and April 20, 1994, Ms. Maggio generated nine memoranda concerning respondent's conduct. The memoranda to respondent included: observations of sleeping at her desk (January 14 and 15, 1992, June 5, 1992, August 12, 1992, May 28, 1993); taking her lunch break and not returning to duty (September 21, 1993); reporting that she had overslept, was seeing a doctor and would report to work late but did not (May 3, 1989, November 30, 1993, December 1, 1993, December 3, 1993); no call and no show (December 2, 1993). These observations were in addition to respondent's unauthorized absences. On April 20, 1994, Ms. Maggio addressed the following memorandum to Mr. Hawn:

Attendance is a crucial part of efficient office management. Sharon's attendance since Easter break is averaging 2 1/2 days per week. She has been late, she is taking an extended lunch, nodding at her desk, or she is either coming in a half day or not at all. I cannot run an office and expect accuracy if she is not here to complete her job. For the past four months Jacque and Dottie have not only to had to complete their share of the work, but also Sharon's work. Dottie's job is to complete all federal program paper work, be it purchase orders, vouchers, or reports. She also is responsible for completing the check registers each month, which includes listing all voided and canceled checks.

Consequently, she has fallen behind. I do not feel this is fair to the other ladies in the office, or for that matter, me. I am requesting you speak to her and reinforce the importance of her attendance and accuracy in completing her job. On Tuesday, April 19, Sharon left for lunch at 11:10 a.m., and never returned. She called at 3:35 p.m. to say she had fallen asleep. She called this morning and told Jacque she was running late and would be in by 9:30. It is now 2:00 p.m., and she has not arrived or even called to let me know what her intentions are. My position includes the responsibilities of all work that is required to be done on a monthly basis. I cannot accept responsibility if I do not have a full staff to complete their respective jobs. Her absenteeism is putting a great strain on our monthly deadlines and extreme stress in our office. I am available to discuss any suggestions you may have. (R-2)

Ms. Maggio testified that one full-time employee had been absent from the Accounting Department for more than one year on an approved medical leave of absence. She conceded that the absent employee's work was divided among the other employees with the bulk of the work assigned to respondent. Ms. Maggio asserted that long-term absence was easier to accommodate than the unauthorized excessive absenteeism of respondent. The Accounting Department was in the position to plan the work of the long-term employee where the absence of respondent interrupted the flow of work.

Ms. Maggio testified that she was not aware that the Board intended to bring charges against respondent for the termination of her tenured position until Mr. Hawn advised the whole Accounting Department that respondent had been suspended, effective April 27, 1994. Although Ms. Maggio was respondent's supervisor, she did not evaluate respondent.

Dorothy Maxwell-Guzman, Accounting Clerk, testified on behalf of the Board. She has been employed by the Board for nine years and is responsible for accounting for all federal and state grants in aid. She has been placed in the position to help her co-workers when they are in need of help and assistance.

Ms. Maxwell-Guzman testified that she was friendly with respondent and that respondent was an excellent worker when she appeared for work. However, respondent was in the habit of coming to work late and leaving work early. Respondent also slept on the job and failed to call in to report her absence or just failed to appear for work after she called to report that would be late.

Ms. Maxwell-Guzman attempted to help respondent with respondent's personal problems. Respondent would confide in Maxwell-Guzman and told her about respondent's medical leave of absence for drug detox and rehabilitation. Ms. Maxwell-Guzman was aware that respondent was involved in an automobile accident which caused respondent to be absent from duty. Ms. Maxwell-Guzman was also aware that respondent missed work when she had contracted pneumonia. Ms. Maxwell-Guzman testified that during the 1990-91 school year, respondent was involved in a bitter custody action with her former husband. She asserted that respondent missed work because of court appearances.

Respondent confided in Maxwell-Guzman when the Board filed charges against her and she was suspended without pay. Respondent told Maxwell-Guzman that respondent felt Ms. Maggio treated her differently and ridiculed respondent. Respondent felt that Ms. Maggio picked on respondent.

Ms. Maxwell-Guzman asserted that the problem in the Accounting Department's office was respondent's absence.

Respondent testified on her own behalf asserting, among other things, that her current address is 1734 Grant Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey, and has been so for the past three years. She admitted she also maintained a post office rental box with her sister at P.O. Box 5254, Atlantic City, New Jersey. It is the post office box number which is listed as her present address on the employment application respondent signed and executed on September 30, 1987.

Respondent corroborated Board Secretary Hawn's testimony that she met with him in March 1994, where Mr. Hawn advised respondent that her absenteeism would be discussed by the Board. Respondent testified that "we met a lot" about her absenteeism and arriving late for duty.

Respondent asserted that she was made aware that her suspension from duty was to be considered by the Board and that Board Secretary Hawn would recommend that tenure charges against her be certified to the Commissioner. She testified that she became aware of her pending suspension on April 18 or 19, 1994. Respondent asserted that she was in receipt of the charge against her either April 28 or 29, 1994, subsequent to the Board's action on April 26, 1994. (P-1)

Respondent testified with regard to Charge No. 4, of the Superintendent's Disciplinary Charges to the Commissioner concerning the 1988-89 school year. She admitted that she had 25 days of unauthorized absence prior to her entry into a drug rehabilitation program. She contended that she was having difficulty with a thyroid problem in addition to problems with her husband in a child custody dispute. Respondent was admitted and completed a 31 day drug rehabilitation program at Seabrook House during the 1988-89 school year. This involved three days of detoxification followed by 28 days of rehabilitation. This was an approved leave of absence by the Board after which, respondent returned to duty in the Board's Accounting Department.

Respondent admitted she continued to take unauthorized absences after the exhausting of her sick leave, personal and vacation days. In 1989-90, it was five unauthorized absences beyond her earned and allowed leave days. In 1990-91, it totaled eight unauthorized days; 1991-92, it was four days; 1992-93, 21 days; 1993-94, 26 days, with five vacation days added to her approved absences for longevity.

Respondent asserted that she would oversleep on occasion and call her office after it had opened for the day to report her absence. She contended she was not always successful in making contact with the Accounting Department to report she would be appearing late for work.

With regard to the child custody problems with her husband, respondent testified she had to get a second job in order to pay child support and pay for the litigation. She asserted that the custody process lasted two years, which caused her to be in court at least twice per month. She asserted she also had medical problems during this period which required surgery and caused her to be absent from work approximately one week. During this period, respondent was involved in an automobile accident where she suffered a dislocated shoulder and a herniated disc.

During the 1993-94 school year, respondent asserted she contracted pneumonia which caused her to be absent from work for one month. She also asserted she suffered a nervous breakdown and entered into counseling at the Atlantic City Mental Health Clinic.

Respondent testified that she confided in Ms. Maggio about her drug problem and that Ms. Maggio sought help for respondent. She admitted that from 1988 until 1994 she was advised, annually, that her continued absence would result in the loss of her employment position. Respondent further admits that due to her continued absence, her salary increment was withheld at the end of the 1992 school year. Respondent complained that she felt that Ms. Maggio ridiculed her when respondent was late for duty by asking respondent if she was doing drugs.

Respondent asserted that everyone in the Accounting Department helped her to get to work and in a timely manner. Some employees would call respondent at her home when respondent overslept and one employee would pick respondent up at her home and transport her to work. Respondent testified that all of the employees in the Accounting Department tried to be "my mom."

DISCUSSIONS AND CONCLUSIONS

Respondent admits she had been addicted to drugs and now claims protection as a handicapped person under New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (LAD), N.J.S.A. 10:5-5(q), as

. . . suffering from . . . any mental, psychological or developmental disability resulting from anatomical, psychological, physiological or neurological conditions which prevents the normal exercise of any bodily or mental functions or is demonstrable, medically or psychologically, by accepted clinical or laboratory diagnostic techniques. . .

In the matter of Clowes v. Terminix Intern, Inc., 109 N.J. 575, 593-594 (1988) our New Jersey Supreme Court held that alcoholism is a handicap under LAD. Drug addiction as a handicap was included in the Matter of Cahill, 245 N.J. Super. 397 (App. Div. 1991). As the Court said in Cahill, "Alcohol is a drug." Id. at 400. Se also Clowes at 592. The Cahill Court continued to say:

Addiction, habituation or dependency which results from use of one drug or another, or as in this case, a combination of drugs, renders a person handicapped. Id. 400

The Administrative Code, at N.J.A.C. 13:13-2.5(b) provides that:

An employer must make a reasonable accommodation to the limitations of a handicapped employee or applicant, unless the employer can demonstrate that the accommodation would impose an undue hardship on the operation of its business. The determination as to whether an employer has failed to make reasonable accommodation will be made on a case-by-case basis.

Respondent claims that the Board has failed to make the necessary accommodation for her handicap. She also relies upon the testimony of the Board's witnesses who asserted that her work was satisfactory when she was in attendance at her duty station.

Respondent admits to drug addiction which caused her to enter a drug detoxification and rehabilitation program during the 1988-89 school year. Respondent does not, however, admit to drug use thereafter. Rather, respondent blames her unauthorized absence on a protracted child custody case over a two year period which required respondent to appear in court. Respondent also asserts she had to take a second job to pay the expenses for the child custody case which caused her to report to work late. Respondent also states that her unauthorized absenteeism was the result of an automobile accident, pneumonia, death in the family, a medical problem which necessitated surgery and a nervous breakdown. At no time during the hearing did respondent admit that she had returned to the use of drugs subsequent to rehabilitation during the 1988-89 school year. In fact she took offense when Ms. Maggio asked her if her tardiness or absenteeism was due to drug use.

The facts in this matter clearly demonstrate that the Board afforded respondent a reasonable accommodation of her drug abuse handicap by granting her an unpaid leave of absence during the 1988-89 school year to provide her the opportunity to attend a drug detoxification and rehabilitation program. The record shows that her attendance improved, however, she was still charged five unauthorized absence during the 1989-90 school year. These unauthorized absences were charged against respondent after she had exhausted her 12 sick leave days, three personal days and 10 vacation days. The unauthorized absences continued up until at least February 1994 (P-1). During these periods of unauthorized absences, the employees of the Board's Accounting Department completed respondent's work assignments, to the detriment of their own work assignments. Respondent's conduct contributed to a stressful condition in the Accounting Department. It was not known when respondent would appear for duty or, even if she did appear, it was not known whether she would remain on the job. Respondent has the reputation of arriving to work late, falling asleep at her desk and taking an early lunch and not returning to her work station. Respondent admits that Ms. Maggio and others in her office attempted to help her in a variety of ways to get to work and perform her assigned duties. By her own admission, everyone in the Department attempted to be her "mom."

Respondent claims that the Board failed to conform to the provision of the new Jersey Statutes in certifying tenure charges against her. She maintains that she was not properly served.

The facts of this matter clearly demonstrate that Board Secretary Hawn advised respondent in March 1994, that the Board would be discussing her absenteeism at one of its subsequent meetings. Respondent knew that her excessive unauthorized absences would be the subject of the Board's review. Respondent was also aware that her salary and adjustment increment had been permanently withheld for her excessive absenteeism. The Board presented proof that it mailed respondent its Disciplinary Charges and that respondent failed to claim the mail. It can reasonably be inferred that respondent knew the contents of the letters and simply refused to claim them. To suggest that the Board did not properly serve respondent stretches credulity.

I CONCLUDE that the Board properly served respondent with the charges against her in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.

Respondent presented no evidence that the Board was, in any fashion, in violation of the OPMA. I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the Board complied with the provisions in the holding in Rice v. Union Cty. Reg. High School Bd. of Ed., 155 N.J. Super 64 (App. Div.) 1977) whereby it advised respondent of its intent to discuss her employment status. Respondent's refusal to accept the properly served notice does not give rise to a violation of the OPMA.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that respondent failed to meet her burden, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the Board violated the OPMA.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the Board has established, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that respondent's unauthorized absence from duty was, in fact, excessive.

I CONCLUDE, that respondent's absenteeism imposed an undue hardship on the operation of the Board's Accounting Department.

I CONCLUDE that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 13:13-2.5(b), the Board made reasonable accommodations for respondent's handicap as it existed in 1988-89.

I CONCLUDE that respondent failed to demonstrate a continuing drug addiction or dependency subsequent to her rehabilitation in 1988-89. Clowes, supra at 595. In fact, she denied that her unauthorized absences were related to the use of drugs, contending other reasons for the unauthorized absence.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the action of the Board to terminate respondent's tenured secretary position be and is hereby SUSTAINED and that she be REMOVED effective on the date of the Board's action, April 26, 1994.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :
HEARING OF SHARON JONES, SCHOOL : DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ATLANTIC : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY. :
: _____:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Exceptions were timely filed by respondent in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent's exceptions assert that she should be permitted to return to work since the continued punishment imposed by the Board violates the intent of state and federal statutes precluding discrimination on the basis of a disability. (Respondent's Exceptions at p. 2) Further, respondent maintains that the Board failed to establish that her absences adversely affected the education process or the ability of the district to operate, and did not jeopardize the health and safety of students or staff. (Id.) Finally, respondent argues that testimony revealed the Board did not have an appropriate attendance policy in place and, consequently, there were no standards by which a staff member could be properly guided. (Id.)

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner finds respondent's exceptions to the initial decision rendered in this matter to be without merit. The ALJ specifically determined, and respondent does not refute:

that respondent failed to demonstrate a continuing drug addiction or dependency subsequent to her rehabilitation in 1988-89 Clowes, supra at 595. In fact, she denied that her unauthorized absences were related to the use of drugs, contending other reasons for the unauthorized absence[s]. (Emphasis added)

(Initial Decision at p. 15)

Consequently, respondent's argument that the Board's punishment violates laws against discrimination is ineffective.

Additionally, the Commissioner notes that respondent stipulated to the fact that her continued absences caused repeated interruptions in the efficient management of the administrative offices and imposed undue hardship on the administrative process of the school system. (Initial Decision at p. 5) The Board is not required to show more.

Finally, respondent's claim as to testimony which disclosed inappropriate Board policy cannot be addressed where respondent fails to provide relevant portions of the transcript of the administrative hearing. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987). Moreover, the Commissioner finds the assertion that respondent was not duly warned of the potential consequences of her excessive absenteeism to be unpersuasive in that "[s]he admitted that from 1988 to 1994 she was advised, annually, that her continued absence would result in the loss of her employment position." (Initial Decision at p. 11) Thus, the Commissioner determines that the record fully supports sufficient cause to terminate respondent from her position as a tenured secretary based upon her excessive absenteeism.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision of the ALJ for the reasons expressed therein, and directs that respondent be dismissed from her tenured position with the Board of Education of Atlantic City as of the date of this decision.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

_____ :

For Respondent, Edward Mueller, Pro Se

For the Board of Education, Nicholas C. Montenegro, Esq. (Wilbert & Montenegro)

For Frank Pannucci, Michael C. Paxton, Esq. (Shea & Novy)

This matter was opened on May 24, 1995 before the Commissioner of Education by way of motion and an affidavit of Respondent Mueller seeking a stay of the Commissioner's decision rendered in the above-captioned matter on May 12, 1995. Responsive papers were filed by the Board on June 2, 1995 and by Frank Pannucci on June 2, 1995. In support of his claim that a stay should issue pending review of this case before the State Board of Education, respondent's motion essentially presents a recitation of his initial response on the merits of this matter except for his assertion that if the requested stay is not granted he will suffer irreparable harm "emotionally and [in] his belief in due process; and to [the belief in due process by the] voters of the district who chose him [by] disenfranchising the majority's votes." (Motion for Stay at p.1) He also indicates that he will suffer irreparable economic harm if a stay of the Commissioner's decision is not issued as he has deferred acceptance and application of compensation allegedly owed to him and the Brick Township Town News since being sworn to a seat on the Brick Township Board of Education. (Id. at p. 2)

In response, the Board initially points out that respondent's stay application is facially deficient in that the notice of his intention to seek a stay was filed prior to the filing of a notice of appeal to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:2-2.2, and it was not drafted in accordance with that regulation. The Board further argues that respondent's brief does not address the legal standards necessary for the granting of a stay and, thus, must be denied. Lastly, the Board argues that economic harm can never justify the issuance of emergent relief or a stay citing, Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Mr. Pannucci's response incorporates these arguments.

Upon careful review of the papers submitted by the parties, and under the legal standards that apply to an assessment of whether a stay of the Commissioner's decision should be issued, see, Crowe, supra, respondent's motion is hereby denied. It is clear that extraordinary remedy may not be granted where there has been no showing of irreparable harm or likelihood of success on the merits, or where material facts are in dispute. See, Crowe, and Glassboro v. Gloucester Cty. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 98 N.J. 186 (1984) (court considers merits of appeal and whether irreparable harm will result without a stay). In the instant case, the Commissioner agrees with the Board's contention that respondent has failed to address any of the necessary criteria set forth in Crowe, in particular, he has made no showing that he will suffer irreparable harm from complying with the Commissioner's decision in this matter, or that he will prevail on the merits of the appeal before the State Board. Further, respondent advances no basis for a stay but rather reiterates arguments previously raised and rejected by the Commissioner and, in any event, argues he stands to incur a monetary loss which is insufficient grounds for a stay. Crowe, supra; Morton v. Beyer, 822 F. 2d 364 (3rd. Cir. 1987)

Accordingly, as respondent has failed to meet the criteria for granting of a stay, this 15th day of June 1995 the instant Motion for Stay is denied and the Commissioner's decision of May 12, 1995 shall stand.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

This matter having been opened to the court on December 5, 1994 and the parties have determined to enter into the following agreement to settle this matter:

1. The respondent will provide to the State Board of Examiners/Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification a letter requesting a change in the recommendation on the petitioner's final comprehensive evaluation report as a provisional teacher. The requested change in recommendation shall be from "Disapproved" to "Insufficient." The request shall be ~~with~~ submitted by December 11, 1994 and shall reflect the following facts:

(a) Petitioner was employed by the respondent from January 11, 1993 as an Elementary Bilingual Teacher under the provisional teacher program of the State Department of Education.

(b) For the remainder of the 1992-93 school year, petitioner was employed as a Bilingual pull-out teacher.

(c) In September, 1993, petitioner was assigned to teach a kindergarten class.

(d) During the months of October and November, 1993, petitioner was absent for several weeks.

(e) Petitioner's original mentor was transferred to another building and the principal did not secure another mentor during the 1993-94 school year.

(f) On November 22, 1993, petitioner was ~~provided~~ provided with 60 days notice of termination and, ^{was} advised ~~that~~ that she would not be recommended for certification as a teacher. Petitioner's last day of work was November 24, 1993.

(g) After reviewing the circumstances regarding petitioner's employment, the respondent has determined that it is both fair and reasonable to change its recommendation from ^{"disappointed"} insufficient to permit petitioner to pursue employment opportunities with other school districts.

(h) The letter the respondent will prepare as referenced above will acknowledge the above-referenced facts and the fact that petitioner had evaluations indicating potential success as a teacher.

2. The above-captioned case will be held in abeyance pending the respondent's submission of the above-referenced letter to the state Board of Examiners/Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification and the approval of the requested change by that agency. Upon approval of the requested change by that agency, this matter shall be dismissed with prejudice. SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parents of 12th grade student, B.L., alleged their son was improperly excluded from school, effective February 2, 1995, violating his due process rights. Board contended B.L. was excluded for inappropriately touching and/or making vulgar sexual remarks to 7th and 8th grade girls.

ALJ concluded Board did not act in an arbitrary or capricious manner. In light of testimony and evidence, the ALJ concluded that the preponderance of credible evidence showed that B.L. committed many of the offenses set forth by his accusers. ALJ affirmed the modified penalty of the Board placing B.L. on a long-term suspension for the remainder of the school year and continuing to provide homebound instruction.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision, noting that having considered the record, including excerpts of transcripts provided, the Commissioner found no cause to challenge any of the determinations or credibility assessments made by the ALJ. Petition was dismissed.

BEFORE AUGUST E. THOMAS, ALJ t/a:

Petitioner, B.L., a twelfth-grade student, was expelled from the high school, effective February 2, 1995, by the Board of Education of the Kingsway Regional High School District (Board) after a hearing before the Board on February 1, 1995. Petitioner's expulsion is based on the Board's determination that he had touched inappropriately and/or made vulgar sexual remarks and suggestions to seven elementary school girls, six of whom are in eighth grade and one of whom is in seventh grade. Petitioner denied committing any offenses against the girls and appealed his expulsion to the Commissioner of Education. On March 10, 1995, the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A hearing on petitioner's request for emergent relief was conducted on March 16, 1995, before Administrative Law Judge Joseph E. Kane, who denied petitioner's application for reinstatement in the high school on the same date.

As a result of this determination, petitioner filed a second appeal, which was received in the OAL on March 30, 1995. After a conference call with the parties, hearings were conducted on April 4, 5, 7, 17, 18, 19, and 25, in the Swedesboro Boro Hall, Swedesboro. Seven eighth-grade girls and one seventh-grade girl testified against B.L. Thirteen high school students testified on behalf of B.L. and B.L. testified on his own behalf. Additionally, testimony was offered by a psychiatrist, a school teacher, the school psychologist, school administrators and parents. The alleged incidents occurred in the high school building, which also houses the district's middle school. Although middle school students are generally separated from the high school students, there is some intermingling in the hallways and cafeteria, and in study halls.

DISCUSSION

The record shows that B.L. is taking academic studies and that he intends to go on to college after graduation. His grades are good and he has never before committed any infractions which would invoke disciplinary action by the school officials. The record indicates that he has a sound family background. He played football in his first two years in high school and has played tennis for three years. In court he was well dressed, polite and accompanied each day by his parents and other family members. After the alleged incidents, B.L. was examined by the district's child study team, which determined that he is not handicapped; therefore, he is not eligible for special services. It is in this context that I examine the testimony and the evidence regarding the complaints against him.

The seven eighth-grade girls are good friends. They met at M.D.'s home on the evening of January 10, 1995, to work together on a literature project. Some of them were not being serious about their homework, prompting M.D. to chastise them about being more mature. As they talked, K.Mc. (who was not a witness at this hearing) began crying because she believed some of the girls were upset with her. As they tried to console K.Mc., another girl began crying, and soon all of the girls were crying. However, before the evening ended, the conversation shifted to B.L. K.D. said that she didn't know what to do about B.L., and that he was doing things she didn't like. M.D. testified that K.Mc. said she saw behaviors she did not like regarding B.L. They decided to meet again at M.D.'s home; however, the next morning at school, K.Mc. said they could meet in the principal's office. The principal was aware of some personal problems involving one of the girls having to do with a recent death in the family and a serious illness in that same family, and he thought the time would be well spent if the girls could resolve their interpersonal relationships. However, during this meeting in the principal's office, B.L.'s name was mentioned again, and although the meeting was not called to discuss B.L., he became the topic of conversation.

During this discussion of B.L., the principal returned and inquired of the girls what their concerns were. The girls related their stories of inappropriate touching, cursing and other actions attributable to B.L. The principal considered this information to be of great severity and took all the girls to the office of the high school principal because their allegations involved a high school student, B.L. The girls were directed to write down their statements. Petitioner states that the girls were coached in writing their statements because many of their statements begin with the phrase, "B.L. has on many occasions" The record shows, however, that after the girls were isolated, one of them said that she didn't know how to begin and M.D. suggested the phrase above, which most of them used as they wrote their individual statements.

M.M., fourteen years of age, who was not in the study group at M.D.'s home, testified to the following incidents. Her problems with B.L. began in November 1994, when he asked her, "Can we have sex?" On another occasion he touched her breast, and on still another occasion he placed his hand on her thigh. During this touching B.L. would say things, such as "When are we going to have sex?" and "Look at that butt." M.M. said, "He unzipped his pants and asked [her friend V.G.] if she would give him a hand with this"; he drew stick figures on her book cover of two people having sex, and a penis with the words "s--- this" (R-1). On another occasion, "B.L.

unzipped his pants and said 's--- on my big meat' while rubbing his leg." M.M. said B.L. called her a little kid. She testified that she heard B.L. say to D.L., "When are we going to have sex," and that "he always said that." M.M. claimed, "He said stuff to me everyday and he touched me occasionally." Her teacher sent D.L. to the principal's office because she yelled at B.L. to leave her alone. She testified also that she saw B.L. put his hand on D.L. and heard him say to her, "When are we going to have sex?" These incidents occurred in study hall and M.M. reported to her teacher only that B.L. was bothering her, and her seat was moved.

K.D., fourteen years of age, lives directly across the street from B.L. She liked B.L. during the summer of 1994. Her infatuation with him began and ended in August. The incidents related here began in the fall of 1994. On the way to lunch, B.L. had a paper rolled up and he said "you're sweating my big meat," which means she "wanted him sexually"; he would hold the rolled-up paper in front of his body nearly every day and stroke it as if to simulate masturbation, saying "you know you want it." K.D. said she and the other girls "thought it was disgusting." In study hall, he would lip synch "I want to have sex with you." On one occasion in the hallway, K.D. said, B.L. "grabbed [her] crotch," laughing as she pushed his hand away. At other times he "grabbed [her] butt" and held her "around [her] waist," and he would say, "Do you want to have sex with me?" She testified that she had visited B.L. in his home several times, the last visit being on Halloween. One of B.L.'s parents was always at home during her visits. K.D. did not tell her mother about these incidents in school because her uncle had just died and her mother's mother was dying. K.D. felt that "it was too much for [her mother] to handle." Her grandmother died on Christmas Eve. During mid-December 1994, B.L. came to her home with his friend. She testified that while his friend played ball outside with her younger brothers, B.L. tried to force her upstairs, and "attempted to pick [her] up." K.D. said she "freaked out" and he then realized she was serious and said, "I only want to be friends."

D.L., fourteen years of age, testified that she has study hall with B.L. six periods per week. She saw him every day and he would always make comments such as "You want to s--- my fat c---" or "S--- my big meat." He unzipped his pants in study hall and in the hallway and grabbed his penis on more than one occasion. D.L. said she never saw his private parts. D.L. stated that B.L. said he wanted to "stick his c--- in [her]," "f--- [her]," "split [her]," and other stuff like that. In study hall he touched her "once or twice," placing his hand on her leg and on her "boob"; when he touched her breast she told him to stop. He drew dirty pictures on her papers such as people "having sex" and "s---ing his penis" (R-2); he would ask her, "You want to do this?" D.L. said she witnessed him simulate masturbation with a rolled-up piece of paper and she heard him talk dirty to other girls. The only touching of other girls she witnessed was B.L. placing his hand on M.M.'s shoulder. D.L. testified that B.L. made a "flip book" with her literature notebook. He drew stick figures having sex on one corner of about twenty consecutive pages. When the corners of the pages are "flipped" the figures appear to be in motion. D.L. drew a sample in court (P-5).

V.G., fourteen years of age, did not attend the homework session on the literature project on the evening of January 10, 1995. She testified that on one occasion, she was talking to B.L. and his friend D.M. in the hall and B.L. took off his belt, shaped it like a penis and said, "You know you want it -- you know you like it." She was surrounded by the two boys and told them to get away; however, she was touched with the belt around the neck, on her back and on her stomach. B.L. said, "You know you'll feel good." On another occasion, she was going to her locker with D.L. when they met B.L. and his friend J.L. in the hall. B.L. unzipped his pants in the doorway of the boys' bathroom, put his hand in his pants and asked V.G. to "help him with it" while he went to the bathroom. She replied "B.L., you're sick." V.G. also witnessed the simulated masturbation with a rolled-up piece of paper; she testified that "this happened almost every day on the way to lunch." She also heard B.L. say, "You know you sweat my big meat." After these incidents, she took a different route to the lunchroom. She testified that B.L. never exposed himself. Despite these incidents, V.G. didn't expect B.L. to be expelled from school. She said that her friends were "not happy about it" and that she personally "didn't want [B.L.] to be expelled."

M.K., thirteen years of age, testified that she once saw B.L. simulate masturbation with a piece of rolled paper in front of a group of her friends. On another occasion, she heard B.L. say to her, "Oh, you have a nice butt" and "You're looking good today."

S.R., unlike the other girls, is a twelve-year-old seventh grader. She knows B.L., M.M. and D.L. only because they are in her study hall period. She is the equipment manager for the band so she also knows V.G., who plays an instrument in the school band. She testified that during study hall, B.L. would sit next to her and ask her to "f--- him." This happened at least ten times. She said he also asked her to "choke on his big meat." B.L. would not leave her alone so she told her mother, who advised her to stay away from him. He asked her where she lived, but she would not tell, fearing he would come over when her parents were away. S.R. saw B.L. pull on his crotch in the hall while she was bent over a water fountain, but he did not say anything to her. On another occasion, he said, "I have a nice ass."

T.S. is a fourteen-year-old girl who saw B.L. simulate masturbation with a piece of rolled paper on one occasion in the hallway and heard him say something about "s---ing him." She told him to stop staring and making comments to her. He was laughing when he told her she looked good, and she and her girlfriends would say "he's disgusting, or a jerk, or something like that." His actual statement about her was, "Damn she looks good today, I want a piece of that."

M.D. is a fourteen-year-old girl who witnessed the incidents of simulated masturbation with a rolled piece of paper on more than one occasion. She heard no utterances from B.L., but said he was laughing and/or smirking.

Twelve high school students testified on behalf of B.L. Some of them were assigned to the study hall class where many of the alleged incidents reported by the younger girls took place. Generally, they said they never saw B.L. touch any of the girls and that they did not hear him curse or use suggestive sexual language. There was general acknowledgment that students did move around in study hall and sit at each others' tables, and that the girls visited other tables, including B.L.'s table.

S.B. is a good friend of B.L.'s who has several academic classes with him. He and B.L. sat at the same table. He stated that the girls came to their table four or five times a week and interfered with their homework assignments. He did not see B.L. draw stick figures on the girls' papers or books, but he did recall seeing B.L. draw stick figures once at someone's house depicting volleyball or weightlifting. He never heard B.L. use any untoward language with the young girls and he never saw him with any rolled-up paper. S.B. was not positive about B.L. saying "give me head" to any girl. Although he testified that all of the girls are beautiful, he did not recall ever talking about them. He said he tried to keep a clean mouth around all girls, but admits that both boys and girls use crude words in the high school.

C.M. is an eleventh-grade academic honor roll student, seventeen years old. He has computer drafting class with B.L. five days per week. He did witness B.L. mimic masturbation in the hall with a piece of rolled paper while classes were changing on more than one occasion; however, he believes that this was done only in front of a group of guys and that it was not done to insult or embarrass any girls. He never heard B.L. say anything improper to any of the girls. Later he testified that he did hear B.L. curse in the presence of the girls, but that all young men and young women curse in school. He has heard B.L. use the terms "s--- my c---" and "sweat my meat," but not around the girls.

There was also testimony offered by several of the boys attempting to discredit the girls, especially K.D. and V.G., and establish a motive for their complaints against B.L. The girls were portrayed as less than ladylike. However, J.L., one of B.L.'s best friends, was not believable. He never heard B.L. say any inappropriate words in the school, only around the guys away from school. His testimony about the rolled paper was different. Although he admitted seeing the rolled paper, he said it was held at B.L.'s side and never in front of him, as the others testified. He testified also that after B.L.'s expulsion, K.D. threatened him, saying "If you or your friends say anything about me, I'll say more stuff and get you in more trouble." Another boy, R.K., accused K.D. of "grabbing [his] butt," and he accused V.G. of lifting her skirt and taunting him. On rebuttal the girls denied these accusations.

Finally, B.L. testified and denied all of the charges and accusations leveled by the girls. He said they were made up and that the girls were lying. He specifically denied touching any of the girls or making references to sex to any of them. He did not "doodle" or draw stick figures on any of the girls' books or their papers. He admitted using profanity in front of female friends on occasion, but they've never told him to "stop or cut it out." He has never touched any girl improperly. B.L. testified that he did not recall any rolled-paper incident, but admitted, "it could have happened."

B.L. opined that the girls were out to get him. He said that K.D. was obsessed with him and that she convinced the other girls to say they saw things that never happened. He accused the school administrators of being part of a conspiracy to sacrifice him to strengthen their plan to demonstrate to the community the need to construct separate buildings for the high school and the middle school students, and they seized upon this incident as the perfect opportunity to further their goal.

The record shows that B.L. has been on homebound instruction since his expulsion on February 2, 1995, with the same teachers he had while attending school. He testified that he is doing better with the homebound study and that his grades are up. He believes he is receiving a better academic education. Nevertheless, he wants to return to school to be with his friends and to participate in tennis.

CONCLUSIONS AND ORDER

After reviewing the testimony and the evidence, including the demeanor of the witnesses at the hearing, I CONCLUDE that the preponderance of the credible evidence shows that B.L. committed many of the offenses set forth by his accusers. I cannot conclude that this is a conspiracy among the girls for the following reasons:

1. The suggested motive for a conspiracy was K.D.'s alleged obsession with B.L. and the fact that he had another girlfriend. However, even if this is true, eight thirteen- and/or fourteen-year-old girls could not remember so many events involving B.L. in the same or a similar manner without contradicting each other or being trapped in gross inconsistencies.
2. The admission by B.L.'s friends that he used profanity in and out of school, although not to the degree asserted by the girls. However, his friends' testimony did show that he had the propensity to use inappropriate language, notwithstanding the testimony that "all young people curse in school." Even B.L. admitted cursing in front of female friends, although they've never told me to "stop or cut it out."

3. The seventh grader did not know B.L. or the other girls except through study hall. The record shows that she did not even live in the same town as B.L.; nevertheless, she gave similar damaging testimony against B.L. She clearly was not a part of any alleged conspiracy.
4. I do not believe B.L.'s testimony that he did not know K.D. was an eighth grader. Although she appeared older and more mature than her fourteen years, the record shows that they live directly across the street from each other; they have visited each other's homes; he has played with her younger brothers; he walked her to the school bus stop every day for six weeks and rode to school with her on the bus. They were friendly and talked to each other. Given these facts, I believe B.L. knew K.D.'s grade in school and, consequently, had a good idea about her age.
5. Finally, I believe the high school principal, who testified that he did not suspect a conspiracy, and he based this on a) the emotions of the students when this matter arose; b) the number of students involved; and c) his experience as an educator.

Accordingly, I FIND that the charges are in fact true.

Petitioner asserts that the penalty of expulsion is cruel-hearted and that B.L. should be reinstated in school immediately. Through suspension, exclusion and expulsion, B.L. has now been out of school nearly four months. Petitioner argues that the Board has a policy of progressive discipline and that this is a first-offense situation; consequently, he has been punished excessively.

The school's Parent/Student Handbook clearly provides for progressive discipline, in that for the first and subsequent offenses, the suspensions become progressively higher. Section 9 prohibits a student from engaging in obscene or lewd physical acts and Section 13A prohibits sexually assaultive behavior. However, as the administrative law judge stated in the earlier hearing, the policy is modified by the preamble on page 17 which states: "Punishments assigned under this policy can be supplemented by more severe punishment where circumstances warrant."

Statutory provision for suspension and expulsion is found in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-1 and 37.2. The authority of a board of education to act is set forth in language appropriate for this matter in Thomas v. Morris Township Board of Education, 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), where it is stated:

When such a body acts within its authority, its decision is entitled to a presumption of correctness and will not be upset unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The agency's factual determinations must be accepted if supported by substantial credible evidence.

There is no showing that the Board action in this matter is arbitrary or capricious. Consequently, it is not the province of this tribunal to determine whether it disagrees or agrees with the Board or to determine whether it would have decided the matter differently had it been a member of the Board or whether the decision is right or wrong.

The Board, through its counsel, stated that it was willing to change the expulsion to a long-term suspension and continue B.L.'s homebound instruction until the end of school so that he will graduate; however, he cannot participate in the graduation ceremony.

Accordingly, and with the above modification, the action of the Kingsway Regional High School District Board of Education placing B.L. on a long-term suspension for the remainder of the school year and continuing to provide homebound instruction is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioners' exceptions were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioners' exceptions essentially argue that in reaching his determination that the Board's action in this matter was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable the ALJ "did not comprehensively and objectively weigh and evaluate the testimony of numerous witnesses but rather culled out selected testimony, of which a significant portion was unsupportable." (Petitioners' Exceptions at p. 1) Petitioners present a recitation of what they contend was relevant factual testimony and the conclusions which they aver should be adduced from such testimony.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ for the reasons expressed by him in the initial decision. With respect to the exceptions of petitioners, the Commissioner notes that without a review of the transcripts of the seven days of testimony in this matter, which were not a part of the record before him,* it is not possible to reconcile the assertions made by petitioners with respect to proffered testimony. (See In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987).) However, it is clear that the existing record provides no cause to challenge any of the determinations or credibility assessments made by the ALJ.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the within Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct (corporal punishment and use of profane language) and insubordination against tenured teaching staff member.

Citing Redcay and In re Fulcomer, the ALJ found that there were certainly enough incidents to sustain dismissal of respondent. In fact, the single allegation that respondent placed several pupils in a closet as punishment was sufficiently flagrant to warrant dismissal. ALJ found that considered alone the charges of corporal punishment, conduct unbecoming a teacher, insubordination and use of profanity justified dismissal; when the charges and supporting evidence were considered together, it was clear that dismissal was the only appropriate penalty. ALJ ordered respondent dismissed as a tenured employee.

Having considered the record, including transcripts of six days of hearings conducted at OAL, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that the Board had proven by a preponderance of credible evidence the tenure charges against respondent. Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision and directed respondent be terminated from her position as of the date of this decision and the matter transmitted to State Board of Examiners for further appropriate action.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE
HEARING OF NORMA POLLARD,
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT
OF THE CITY OF PATERSON,

Gregory G. Johnson, Esq., for petitioner

Ashton E. Thomas, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: February 27, 1995

Decided: May 12, 1995

BEFORE ELINOR R. REINER, ALJ:

On June 23, 1994, petitioner, State Operated School District of the City of Paterson, certified tenure charges, dated May 18, 1994, of corporal punishment, conduct unbecoming a teacher, use of profane and inappropriate language and insubordination against respondent, Norma Pollard. On July 19, 1994, respondent filed a statement denying the charges. Petitioner filed an answer to respondent's petition of appeal on July 29, 1994. On July 28, 1994, the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The matter was assigned to the undersigned judge on August 26, 1994, and a hearing scheduled for October 3, 4, and 5, 1994, at the Office of Administrative Law, 185 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey. The hearing was held on October 3, 4, 5, November 3, December 20 and 21, 1994. The record closed on February 27, 1995 after the submission of briefs filed in this matter.¹ Based on the administrative law judge's voluminous case load and the complexity of this case, an extension of time to render this Initial Decision was granted to May 30, 1995. Witnesses who testified and exhibits marked into evidence are listed in the attached appendix.

CHARGES

The petitioner, State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson, certified the following tenure charges against respondent, Norma Pollard.

CHARGE ONE: CORPORAL PUNISHMENT

3. The respondent committed numerous acts of corporal punishment with the intent to discipline, harm, punish, intimidate or otherwise embarrass the pupils under her charge:

- a. During the 1988-89 school year while assigned to Public School No. 28, the respondent placed several pupils in the closet as punishment.
- b. On March 30, 1994, the respondent grabbed pupil S.A.'s left hand and scratched him in an attempt to take his notebook away.
- c. On March 24, 1994, the respondent and pupil M.P. had a heated argument, during which the respondent purposely spit directly in M.P.'s face.
- d. On October 1993, while assigned to Public School No. Three, the respondent attempted to slap pupil A.R. and as a result scratched A.R. in the face.
- e. The respondent grabbed pupil Y.A., placed her hands around his arms and violently shook him as punishment for talking.

¹ It is to be noted that subsequent to the conclusion of the hearing, respondent filed a notice of motion, together with supporting certification for dismissal of the charges. Quite clearly, the instant decision is considered a determination on respondent's motion for dismissal and consolidation of the charges.

CHARGE TWO: CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHER

4. The charge of conduct unbecoming a teacher is based upon the same specifications as those set forth above in Charge One. Those specifications are hereby incorporated by reference.

CHARGE THREE: USE OF PROFANE AND INAPPROPRIATE LANGUAGE

5. During the respondent's years of employment, she referred to District employees, pupils and parents in a demeaning and disrespectful manner by using profanity and other derogatory language:

a. On June 15, 1989, the respondent referred to Principal Mary K. Holmes as a "bitch" in the presence of her class and secretary Esther Boone. During the 1988-89 school year, the respondent called several persons "bitches" and other demeaning words at school.

b. During the 1993-94 school year, the respondent referred to several pupils in a derogatory and profane manner:

1. On February 25, 1994 and March 30, 1994, respondent called pupil S.A. a "fat faggot" and "fat whale" and "get your fat freakin' ass out of my class."
2. In January -March 1994, the respondent ordered pupil S.H. to his desk and stated "You cannot see that well. You blind bastard."
3. The respondent ordered pupil T.M. out of class stating, "get your ass down the stairs."
4. The respondent called pupils A.R., S.R. and E.V. "bitches." The respondent regularly repeated the word "shit" in class.
5. The respondent stated to pupil A.R., "You need to lose some weight. You need to go to the bathroom and take a shit." The respondent also said, "F--k you" to A.R.
6. The respondent called pupil J.A. a "dumb ass" when the pupil did not stop talking.
7. The respondent referred to pupils' parents as "bitches" and called parents derogatory names.

CHARGE FOUR: INSUBORDINATION

6. On June 15, 1989, the respondent refused to submit her class register to Principal Mary Holmes, Public School No. 28, and called her a "bitch" in the presence of her class and school secretary Esther Boone.

7. On or about February 25, 1994, the respondent was directed to cease and desist from calling pupil S.A. a "fat faggot." The respondent admitted she called S.A. a "fat faggot." Despite this directive from Principal Lynn Liptak, the respondent again called pupil S.A. a "fat faggot" on March 30, 1994.

8. On or about December 19, 1988, the respondent left her class unattended, refused to teach while her supervisors were conducting an observation and refused to submit individual student improvement plans (ISIP's) for her assigned students.

9. During the 1993-94 school year, the respondent routinely ordered certain students to leave the classroom without reporting same to the office or following procedures. On March 25, 1994, the respondent was directed to follow school procedure.

10. During the 1993-94 school year, the respondent permitted students to leave the class in order to go to the lavatory. When certain students returned, the respondent routinely locked the classroom door excluding pupils such as M.R. from entering the class. The respondent continued to lock the door on pupils despite directives from the principal.

11. On or about March 30, 1994, Principal Liptak requested that Douglas J. Bolton, Supervisor of Social Studies meet with the respondent to improve her teaching effectiveness in the social studies area. The respondent refused to meet with Mr. Bolton.

12. In February, Principal Liptak directed the respondent to stop doing homework assignments in class. The respondent continued to do so despite Principal Liptak's directive.

13. On January 28, 1994, despite requests from Principal Hernandez, the respondent failed to provide grades for the second marking period for her 7th grade class.

TESTIMONY

Mary Holmes has been the principal of school No. 28 since 1985 and she supervised Pollard at school No. 28. Holmes explained the sequence of events during the 1988-89 school year. From September through November 1988 Pollard was a basic skills instructor (BSI), and she was a good teacher. In December she was transferred to the first grade for which she had proper the certification, and she became ineffective (P-1). Pollard refused to conference with Homes and the prior first grade teacher. Holmes testified that when she attempted to observe her, Pollard would not teach. Pollard folded her arms and stopped teaching. Holmes went to get Vice-principal Fulmore. Pollard would not teach for either of them. Holmes noted that a teacher usually wants to make the best impression during an observation, and she could not recall a similar event, where during an observation a teacher ended the lesson. She advised Superintendent Frank Napier in writing that Pollard would not cooperate, and refused to teach or meet with her.

Holmes described other specific incidents. On one occasion the children reported to the office that Pollard was not in the classroom. Holmes went to the classroom to locate Pollard. Pollard, who was present in school on that day, was not in the classroom. Holmes requested to meet with Pollard, who refused to meet with her and did not explain why she was not in the classroom. Holmes referred to a letter she sent to Ms. Pollard (P-2) in which she described the noise in the hallway made by students from Pollard's class. The yelling had to be very loud for her to hear it in her office. In fact the security guard at the front desk heard the noise and came to check on it. Pollard just watched the students and did not take the initiative to control the class. The class was out of control.

Holmes described the events surrounding the letter she wrote to Pollard on December 22, 1988. Holmes saw F.B., a student in Pollard's class, in the hall and she asked her why she was outside. The child said that she had gone to the bathroom and Pollard would not let her back into the classroom. F.B. also indicated that Pollard was placing children in the closet. Holmes went into the classroom, opened the closet door (closed but not locked) and found a child sitting in a fetal position with his head towards his knees, in the closet. Holmes described the coat closet as three feet in depth which must be opened or closed from the outside; there is no handle inside. If someone was inside the closet, that person could only get out if someone opened the door. Holmes recalled that she questioned several students as to whether they were put in the closet. Three students, F.B., R.G., and J.W. indicated that they had been placed in the closet. Holmes saw one of these students in the closet. By letter (P-22), Holmes requested that Pollard attend a conference to discuss the incident but Pollard refused. Holmes communicated with Dr. Napier.

Holmes testified that register reports are due each month in regard to attendance (P-5). Since Pollard would not submit her attendance report, the other reports could not be completed. Pollard did not submit lesson plans due each month.

In a written notice from Dr. Napier on or about January 17, 1989, Pollard was given ninety-days to correct the deficiencies in her teaching and cooperation. However, during that ninety-day period Pollard would not come in with her plan and would not meet with them; the insubordination continued. Holmes indicated that she and Mr. Fulmore requested several conferences with Pollard (P-7) to no avail. Pollard's end of the year evaluation rated her poor.

Referring to her letter dated June 13, 1989 to Dr. Napier, Holmes recalled that Pollard refused to complete pages six and seven of the register. She refused to cooperate with Ms. Boone, the secretary, and stormed into Holmes' office where there was a conference, and threatened the principal. More particularly, Holmes recalled that an irate Pollard pointed her finger at her from approximately three feet away and said "you will pay." Holmes also recalled a letter from secretary Boone to Pollard regarding completion of the register (P-9). Holmes had asked Boone to get the completed pages of the register from Pollard. Boone went to Pollard's class where Pollard informed her that Mr. Rosenberg, the Board's attorney, told her that she did not have to complete the register. Pollard then said that the administrator (Holmes) was a "bitch." Holmes also stated that Dr. Napier decided to transfer Pollard to school No. 17; Holmes did not request Pollard's transfer.

On cross-examination, Holmes indicated that she transferred Pollard to the first grade during the 1988-89 school year because Ms. Pipkin, the first grade teacher, was ill and there was a possibility that she might take medical leave. Holmes wanted continuity of instruction in the first grade. Pollard has good skills and she knew Pollard would be present every day. Pipkin took over Pollard's job. After the transfer, Holmes noticed a drastic change in Pollard.

Holmes agreed that the transfer of Pollard (J-1) occurred on December 8, 1988, prior to the Board meeting on January 8, 1989. She contended that this could be done with the assistant superintendent's approval. Pollard was notified prior to December 8, 1988, that she was being transferred, and prior to her receipt of J-1. Holmes opined that she told Pollard the day before that she would be the first grade teacher and gave her the materials the next day. Pollard received the plan book, the record book, and the yellow cards (the register is kept in the office).

The day Holmes learned about the "closet" incident Pollard was in the classroom. She asked Pollard why there was a child in the closet. Pollard did not respond and kept teaching. Homes then asked the child why he was in the closet, and the child said that the teacher had put him there. Holmes had the child come to her office, notified the parent and prepared an incident report. Pollard would not attend a conference with the parent, child and principal. In fact, Pollard would not attend any conference in which Holmes was a participant. Holmes testified that either R.G. or J.W. was in the closet. As part of her investigation, she questioned ten to twelve students in Pollard's class. She prepared an incident report, but did not recall the result of the investigation. She did not notify DYFS. The report was sent to Assistant Superintendent Durgett. Noting that it was up to "them" to follow through with the charge, she did not inquire about the follow-up and did not know the result. She did recall that the vice-principal tried to question Pollard regarding the closet incident and she refused to talk to him about it. Ms. Durgett had a conference with Pollard on the condition that Holmes not be present. Therefore, Holmes did not know what transpired. She noted that there may have been similar complaints of this nature, which would be part of the teacher's file.

Holmes did not recall that Pollard filed a grievance against her on January 27, 1989 (R-2), and did not recall the contents of it being discussed at a meeting with a Paterson Association representative. In referring to the incident described in P-1, Holmes said she was not cognizant that Pollard was ill the days before the December observation. Referring to the noise in the hallway (P-2), Holmes indicated the problem was that Pollard watched the students make noise for ten minutes and did not attempt to discipline them nor ask for Holmes' assistance. Holmes told Pollard, "Quiet your kids down," but Pollard said nothing. Holmes had the students go inside the classroom. Pollard went inside but said nothing.

Holmes indicated that she received complaints from parents in January 1989 about a lack of education in Pollard's class. Complaints made in February, March, April or May about Pollard's teaching effectiveness would be noted in her personal file. This file was sent to the school where the teacher was sent.

Esther Boone has been the secretary at school No. 28 since December 1, 1980. Boone described the circumstances around the memo to Ms. Holmes dated June 15, 1989 (P-9). She recalled that Holmes told her to take the register book to Pollard for Pollard to complete pages six and seven. Boone went to Pollard's classroom. She knocked and went inside. She recalled that students were in the classroom but not whether Pollard was teaching. She advised Pollard that Holmes wanted her to complete pages six and seven. She could not recall Pollard's response. Referred to her memo to Holmes (P-9), Boone recalled that Pollard said she would not do the register book. As she walked out of the room, Boone heard the word, "bitch." She did not know whether the students heard this and noted it was said in a "quiet" voice. She could not recall another occasion when she heard the word "bitch" used by Pollard. She stated that Pollard refused to have conferences with Holmes.

On cross-examination, Boone indicated that she did not know Pollard's reason for not filling out pages six and seven. She did not recall her saying that she was not the teacher of record in September 1988 and could not fill it out. Boone agreed that although she heard Pollard say the word "bitch," she did not hear Ms. Holmes' name. Boone indicated that she had her back to Pollard, but she believed that Pollard was referring to Holmes. In the memo (P-9), the term administrators referred to Holmes and Fulmore, but Boone could not recall exactly what other time Pollard called them "bitch." Although Pollard referred to her as the "clean-up lady," Boone indicated that she did not think much of this. Boone wrote the letter at Holmes' direction and gave a copy to Pollard either the same or the next day.

Joseph S. Fulmore has been the principal of school No. 6 for the last five years. He was the vice-principal of school No. 28 under Mary Holmes for school years 1987-88 and 1988-89, and he supervised Pollard, a BSI teacher. In December 1988, he accompanied Mary Holmes to conduct an informal observation of Pollard. Some students were not conducting themselves in the best manner and there was disruption in the classroom. Fulmore stated that when Pollard saw them in the classroom she stopped, folded her hands, sat down and said, "You teach them."

Fulmore recalled that a number of parents visited the school to complain about the instruction or lack of it in Pollard's class. Holmes had told him that Pollard left her class unattended and he knew that the Individual Student Improvement Plans (ISIPs) were not submitted by Pollard as required (R-3). Pollard's classroom control was poor and there was an indication at the main office that the noise level in her classroom was elevated. The basic problems during the year were Pollard's failure to cooperate with the administration, follow directives, and comply with completing the register and records. The principal's requests for conferences with Pollard never materialized. It was difficult to communicate with Pollard; she did not care to have a discussion with him. He noted other problems with Pollard; the inability to observe her because she would not "deliver instruction," the inability of Holmes to have a conference with Pollard, the number of letters from Pollard to him placed in envelopes and given to him at once, and the lack of an opportunity to discuss the issues with her. He recalled the incident when Holmes called him and Mary Boone to her office. Boone informed Fulmore that Pollard called Holmes a "bitch." On cross-examination, Fulmore testified that Boone indicated that this was not the only time Pollard used the term "bitch."

Fulmore testified that Pollard was transferred to the first grade position because Ms. Pipkin, a first grade teacher, was frequently absent, due to poor health, thereby creating poor continuity for the students. After an assessment and evaluation of the teachers, the administrators concluded that it was in the best interest of the first grade children for Pollard to be their teacher.

On cross-examination, Fulmore indicated that there was a problem with Pollard's performance in September 1988 in terms of carrying out directives and responding to administrative concerns about the school. He verbally advised Pollard of these concerns and filed a written report with the principal. He also prepared reports regarding her work in October and November 1988. Fulmore agreed that prior to the transfer, he had written her up regarding communication and not following directives.

Pollard was transferred to the first grade in December; this was not as a result of her evaluations. After an analysis of the teachers' strengths, Pollard was selected to replace Pipkin as the first grade teacher. Pollard was selected in order to maintain some kind of continuity for the first graders at that particular time. Fulmore did not know if the first grade class was experiencing problems because of this lack of continuity. He did not know times Pipkin had been absent and there was a need for a substitute teacher. He indicated that Pipkin's class was not a particularly difficult one. It contained a group of children who performed at a somewhat higher level than some other classes. Pollard's strength included experience in working with disadvantaged children and students with varying levels of comprehension. Based on her degrees and experience, he thought she would be the best candidate to place in that position. Pipkin took over Pollard's position.

Although Fulmore did not see the grievance filed by Pollard in January 1989, he recalled meeting with a representative from the State along with Ms. Pollard, and he was aware that she had filed a grievance against him and Ms. Holmes. One of her concerns was her transfer to the first grade position. He did not recall her complaining about receiving sixteen memos from the administrators, or that she did not receive written instructions or procedures for duties for the first grade. Fulmore was sure that Pollard received a plan book, a record book and a register for her class.

In regard to the allegation that children were being locked in the closet, Fulmore indicated that the normal response would be to call DYFS. He did not conduct an investigation on his own nor did he report it because it was not reported to him. After December he heard no further allegations of locked students in the closet.

Fulmore had concerns regarding classroom management by Pollard in February and March 1989. He recalled the time Pollard brought her class to the office so that the administrators could see their bad behavior. The administrators then wrote memorandums to Pollard requesting conferences which never took place.

Grisell Hernandez has been the principal of school No. 3 since March 1993. She oversees the operation and safety of the building and supervises and evaluates the staff. In the 1992 school year, Pollard was a fifth grade teacher. In the 1993-94 school year, Hernandez assigned Pollard to the seventh grade to teach literature, since Pollard has a masters degree in reading. She recalled conferences with Pollard concerning the behavior and discipline of students in her class. Hernandez referred to an incident on September 24, 1993, in which Pollard brought the entire class to the front office to call their parents, to come in for a conference, from the telephone designated for staff members. Since a number of classes were being disturbed, Hernandez advised Pollard to take her class back upstairs. In a memo to Pollard, Hernandez outlined the procedure to follow. She advised that a conduct report form was to accompany a student when a student is sent to the office. The form indicates the misbehavior, what the teacher did in order to alleviate the problem, whether the teacher was able to reach the parent, and measures that could be taken. In response, Pollard thanked her for her memo. Hernandez described her relationship with Pollard as fine until that time.

Hernandez indicated that in 1993 the relationship with Pollard became strained, as there were so many meetings with Pollard, students and parents. Hernandez recalled a meeting between A.R.'s mother and Pollard where both were upset; A.R. claimed Pollard had called her "fat," and told her that if she went to the bathroom she might lose some weight. A.R.'s mother, who wrote a letter about the incident, noted that A.R. was conscious of her weight and was quite upset. Hernandez received other letters from parents who felt that Ms. Pollard undermined them by making remarks about the way the children were raised at home. They also complained about the inappropriate language (e.g. the "f" word) being used in the classroom.

Pollard requested a transfer and sent her request to Dr. DeMolli, assistant superintendent. Hernandez believed the situation could be corrected and that it would be detrimental for the students to change teachers after school year had begun. However, the situation became progressively worse. The parents were concerned about their children's safety and Pollard was afraid the children might harm her. Thus, the president and the vice-president of the home school council volunteered to sit in the classroom to see if the situation would improve. Pollard agreed. Everyday from periods 4 through 6, Albino or Moran sat in the back of the room. The problems continued, i.e., homework, students wanted to be in the bathroom and not stay in the classroom, unannounced tests, no grades, and students' contention that Pollard did not call on them. Since the students were not getting an education (some wandered the hall or hid in the bathroom), Hernandez called Dr. DeMolli and agreed to Pollard's transfer.

Hernandez asked Mr. Campos to take his students to the bathroom before they went to Pollard's class, thereby decreasing the requests for passes to leave Pollard's class. Hernandez spoke to Pollard about locking the classroom door from the outside, and locking the students out of the classroom when they went to the bathroom. The proper procedure was to require a student who left to go to the bathroom to sign out and get a pass. Upon returning the student would return the pass and sign-in the time. Pollard did not follow this procedure. Hernandez went to Pollard's class on two separate occasions because students were locked out. Asked why the door was locked, Pollard told her that she did not want the students back in her classroom. Hernandez told her that it was illegal to lock the door from the outside for fire safety reasons; the door must remain open at all times. She did not write Pollard up for the incidents. On the second occasion, Pollard had opened the door by the time Hernandez got there, after having been told by the students that they were locked out of the room. Hernandez testified to this sequence of events during the cross-examination.

Hernandez spoke to Pollard and sent her a memo about the need to issue the students' grades. The grades were due in November. She told her on many occasions to send in the grade book. She collected all the teachers' grade books to check the grades. She reviewed Pollard's records. Pollard gave them grades on their report cards for November. There were not sufficient grades to merit some of the letter grades (average of the grades) that the students received on the report cards. For September and October, there was only one set of grades for students per month (P-21). Some students had no grades. (Pollard had only two sets of grades for the entire year in social studies.) On November 8, 1993 (R-10), Hernandez wrote to Pollard advising her to resubmit plans and grades for social studies which were missing. This was in response to documentation (P-21 and R-9) that Hernandez had received. Pollard was given a copy of the grading system. Hernandez indicated that when Pollard was transferred, she took her plan book, attendance book and grading book with her. It was difficult to pickup the pieces. Hernandez asked the students to bring back their report cards. The new teacher had to do the assessments again.

In September and October 1993, Hernandez conducted informal observations of Pollard almost every week. There were constant arguments between the students and Pollard. Hernandez evaluated Pollard and this was combined with Liptak's evaluation for the school year (P-22). She conducted numerous observations of Pollard in preparation of the report and participated in all discussions regarding the ratings. Hernandez agreed with every single item and comment and indicated her specific words in the report and their meaning. Pollard received a satisfactory in knowledge of the subject matter and outstanding in correct use of English. However, in all areas of teaching techniques, the rating indicated needs improvement and she received an unacceptable in social control, since she was unable to control the class. Hernandez removed students (e.g. E.J. and A.R. on certain days) from Pollard's class. Hernandez did not write Pollard up prior to her transfer. She evaluated her and gave her a second chance at another school.

Hernandez indicated that she did not consider Pollard's class to be made up of "bad kids," but similar to any other class in the building. Mr. Campos, who taught the same students math, health and science did not have any problems with the students. She was "not out to get Ms. Pollard."

On cross-examination, Hernandez agreed that she served as acting principal until January 1994 when the principal retired. In the spring of 1993, Pollard taught a fifth grade class, and Hernandez gave Pollard a satisfactory evaluation. She observed her in April 1993, and found her teaching technique, classroom organization and management satisfactory. She found her professional relationship and achievement traits satisfactory. She received no complaints from parents nor did she recall problems with children leaving the room to go to the bathroom or being locked out of the classroom. Pollard completed her grades for her class, and she did not recall complaints from students about not having enough time to prepare for tests.

In September 1993, there were two seventh grade teachers, Pollard and Campos. Each taught the students in the homeroom for the first three periods. At the end of the three periods, the students switched teachers and received instruction from the other teacher. After two periods, the students returned to the homeroom. Pollard taught language arts to all of the seventh graders, and Campos taught math, science and health.

Although Pollard had some problems with some of the students in her homeroom (e.g., Y.A. and others who switched classes at the beginning of the year), most of the problems Pollard had were with students from Campos' homeroom. However, Campos did not have a problem with those same students. Hernandez spoke to Campos about the problem. He told her that the students indicated that they did not want to go to Pollard's class. Campos requested that the traveling be stopped and that he be allowed to teach his class all subject areas because he was having so many problems when the students came back from Pollard's classroom. He spoke to the students often and there were meetings with the students to try to alleviate the problems. The students believed that Pollard did not respect them, and they lost respect for her. Hernandez did not believe her policy of having the students write about the incidents eroded Pollard's authority. She opined that the policy helped the teacher because often the teacher and student would agree on the situation.

Hernandez described in detail her communications with Pollard. On September 24, she asked Pollard to identify the students who used obscene language and to prepare conduct reports (P-19). Pollard did not use the conduct report form (R-5) each time that she had a problem with students. As a result of an incident, E.J. was removed from Pollard's class and placed in special education (R-5). Hernandez indicated that she did not receive the report on A.R. (R-6) until the following morning from Ms. Pollard. She asked A.R. to write down what occurred. Hernandez also explained the procedure that each time a student is sent to the office with a conduct report, the student has to write down what occurred. Hernandez impressed on the student to tell the truth and attached the student's letter to the form. Thereafter, there was a meeting with the teacher and/or the parent to discuss the situation. Pollard saw the students' letters when she went to the meetings and did not request copies of the letters.

Hernandez did not recall when she learned that A.R. had said "shut the f--- up" to Ms. Pollard in class, but she did recall that Pollard told her (she did not hear it) that a child had used the "f word" in her class. Pollard repeated the incident, including using the "f" word three times in front of the class. This was inappropriate. Hernandez spoke to Pollard about the inappropriateness of using the "f" word in class.

Hernandez recalled learning that A.R. and Ms. Pollard were making fun of each other. She heard about this when A.R.'s mother complained that Ms. Pollard had called her daughter "fat" and Pollard indicated that they were making fun of her and explained about the "lips." She did not recall that M.R. said something about Pollard's lips.

A.R. and Pollard had a lot of problems. A.R. was not disruptive in homeroom but was disruptive in Pollard's class. Hernandez specified the actions taken to assist Pollard with A.R. and the reprimands that A.R. received. A.R.'s conduct improved when Pollard was no longer her teacher. A.R. had no conduct reports from January to June 1994. Mr. Campos had no problems with A.R.

Hernandez stated that although Pollard took some records with her when she was transferred, she did not write a memo about it. However, it was referred to in the evaluation of March 21, 1994, as part of classroom organization and management.

She noted that they had to retest all of the students to reconstruct the grades. She did not try to contact Pollard to ask her for the grade book, the lesson plans and the attendance books.

On rebuttal, Hernandez testified that Pollard had requested a transfer because she felt she was not safe with the children, and the children were lying about her. Referring to the number of incidents, on many occasions, Pollard said, "If I am the problem, remove me." She tried to talk to Pollard as to what could be done to avoid taking a teacher out of the school in the middle of the school year, and denied her request. Hernandez spoke to Assistant Superintendent DeMolli, who agreed that they should provide all the support that they could to avoid transferring a teacher once the term had begun. She outlined measures to assist Pollard as a classroom teacher. They had volunteer parents, from the Home School Council to sit in on Pollard's class during periods four, five and six. They also called parents in for conferences numerous times. Each time she received a conduct report, she or the guidance counselor contacted the parent. It is customary at school No. 3 to write a conduct report when a student is sent to the office. The bottom of the report has a section: "Things to be done." On many of them, she wrote exactly what was done. (See e.g. P-55A). She never refused to take action once Pollard submitted the conduct reports to her and recalled meetings with parents where she and Pollard were present to resolve problems. She had meetings with Campos and Pollard individually and jointly, and with parents of the students who were in Campos' class.

Hernandez indicated that she wrote (R-10) to Pollard asking her to resubmit plans and indicating that the grades for social studies were missing. They were not submitted on time. Pollard did not submit her plan book or the grade book when she left. Hernandez had no indication as to the students grades for the second marking period (November to January).

Teachers were expected to submit plan books every two weeks for review. Hernandez indicated that there were times when Pollard did not submit them on time. Hernandez did not recall the last time she saw Pollard's plans. The students did not receive grades on a daily basis for homework, class participation and quizzes. Referring to a page from Pollard's grade book (P-21), Hernandez indicated that for November no grades were given; Pollard was responsible for recording those grades. After Pollard left, they had a difficult time ascertaining where the students were in terms of grades and had to test them in order to give them a grade.

Hernandez agreed that her evaluation of Pollard as a fifth grade teacher was favorable. The next year Pollard was assigned as the literature teacher for the seventh grade. Hernandez did not know the classifications of the students in Pollard's or Campos' class but agreed that Campos had a group of limited English proficient students in his class. She agreed that in the fourth period, Campos' class went to Pollard for instruction. Hernandez did not know if it included those students who needed assistance in bilingual instruction. Pollard had students in her fourth, fifth or sixth periods that she was not supposed to teach or grade, i.e., the limited English proficient students from Campos' class. Pollard was not responsible for their grades, but she was told that if the students were comprehending the material, she could teach them. However, the students had assignments from the bilingual ESL teacher (Mr. Soto not Mrs. Kaufman) to complete during the time they were with Pollard.

Hernandez never indicated to Pollard that she wanted a bilingual teacher. At one point, Pollard talked to her about the students who did not understand her. Hernandez explained to Pollard that Mr. Soto was responsible for teaching those students reading, language arts and math. Those students had 45 minutes of reading, 45 minutes of math and 30 minutes of developmental ESL daily. Hernandez did not recall whether this was during the fourth, fifth or sixth periods. Pollard replied that this was not helping the students. Thus, Hernandez replied that perhaps those students would require a self-contained bilingual class the following year. This was the only reference to bilingual instruction. Pollard then indicated that she did not believe in bilingual education.

Hernandez never said that she wanted to replace Pollard with a bilingual teacher, or that she did not like her due to her race. She did not hire a bilingual teacher to replace Pollard. In fact, when Pollard was assigned to school No. 2, she did not know who was going to replace her. She did not interview the person or get a chance to select the teacher who would replace Pollard. Ms. Mosch was sent from downtown to replace Pollard. Although Mosch speaks Spanish, she is not a bilingual teacher nor was her assignment in the school a bilingual position. Mosch had exactly the same assignment that Pollard had as a "regular teacher." The bilingual students in Campos' homeroom were served by a bilingual teacher, Mr. Soto.

Hernandez agreed that Ms. Mosch came from school No. 24 and according to a letter (R-65 for identification), she had been a bilingual teacher. However, Mosch came to her school as an elementary teacher. Hernandez never called the district office to ask for a bilingual teacher. Hernandez noted that Mosch is not certified bilingual and that she needed a regular teacher.

Lynn Liptak has been the principal of school No. 2. since July 10, 1992, and she is responsible for the entire operation of the plant, all staff evaluations and the safety of the students in the school. During the 1993-94 school year, Mr. Carol was hired as a substitute teacher on a per diem basis to fill a vacancy in the seventh grade. Carol was doing an adequate job. In January of 1994, Pollard was assigned to fill that vacancy. When Pollard was assigned, they discussed the class and Pollard received materials; their relationship was professional in nature.

Liptak testified as to a letter she wrote to Norma Pollard (P-24) and a conference she had with her concerning S.A. The purpose of the letter was to put Pollard on notice that she would not tolerate name calling of students and that continuing to do so would be serious in nature. Liptak recalled that the incident was initially reported to her by Vice-principal Vitone, who heard about it from the students. Vitone spoke to Pollard who confirmed it. The incident reported to her was that the class was coming back from the lunchroom when a verbal confrontation broke out between Ms. Pollard and S.A. S.A. did "some name calling" and Pollard called him a "fat faggot."

Liptak described the incident regarding M.A., a student in Pollard's class. M.A. came to the office and said she had been told to leave the classroom. Pollard claimed that M.A. had left without permission. Liptak testified that school policy required that the incident should have been reported to the office, and she put the policy in writing (P-27). Liptak indicated that a student is not to be told to leave the classroom. If a child leaves without permission, it should be reported to the office. If a child is disrupting the class, the teacher should use the house phone, call the office, and either the security guard or an administrator will be sent to escort the child. She opined that Pollard should have called to report the child was out of the classroom as soon as it occurred. The whereabouts of the students must be known for safety reasons.

Liptak described the events that led to an incident report prepared by the school nurse (P-26), regarding S.A. on March 30. S.A. was in Pollard's class, and he was looking in his desk for his notebook. Pollard approached him, and as she took the notebook from him, squeezed and scratched his hand. When he complained that she had scratched him, she said something to the effect of, "You're too fat to feel it, you fag." Liptak contended that Pollard's behavior constituted direct insubordination to her earlier letter, specifically, the same words were repeated. Liptak proceeded to investigate the incident, and she questioned the students to verify if what S.A. said was correct (P-25). S.A. was interviewed as was P.A. Liptak stated that she took each child in the stairwell and asked them what had happened between S.A. and Ms. Pollard. She wrote down their comments (P-25). However, she agreed that there was no indication that she recorded a statement from P.A. as to the incident with S.A. She contacted the assistant superintendent after the S.A. incident. Liptak also directed that S.A. be examined, and the nurse found a superficial scrape on his left hand. Liptak indicated that she reported the incident with S.A. to institutional child abuse (P-25c).

Liptak did not believe that she had a conference with Pollard regarding the incident. Liptak recalled that the last meeting she had with Pollard was after her evaluation, and she advised her that she was recommending that her increment be withheld. At that point, Pollard refused to meet with her regarding an observation and her evaluation, despite Liptak's written requests to do so. Pollard had responded in writing that she required more advance notice and that she would not meet without the PBA representative. By the time of the March 30 incident, her relationship with Pollard was "strained." Liptak felt Pollard was insubordinate and abusing students.

Liptak referred to the incident with P.A., in which he asked at 11:50 if he could use the bathroom. Another student reported that he had asked in a respectful way, and when it was denied he left the classroom. Liptak opined that this was atypical behavior for P.A., a serious, honor roll student. P.A. had not had disciplinary problems on a prior occasion nor has he had problems thereafter.

Referring to her notes (P-25b), Liptak recalled that M. reported to her that Pollard had spit on her and M. thought it was on purpose. Initially, M. thought Pollard was speaking too close to her face and she had just been sprayed. When she went to wipe the spit off her face, Pollard said, "That's not spitting, this is spitting," According to M., Pollard spit on her three times. Liptak spoke with Sa.Z., another student, regarding the spitting. Sa.Z. said she saw the incident and believed it was on purpose.

Liptak recalled that S.H. told her that Pollard had said to him, "You're blind." She noted that the charges said, "Blind bastard," because some of the students had reported those words to counsel for petitioner in her presence.

Referring to Pollard's March 23, 1994 letter(P-28), Liptak recalled that when she gave Pollard her evaluation, she had a brief conference with her informing her that she would recommend withholding her increment. She did not recall if Pollard asked her any questions. Pollard's written request covered items that would normally be covered in a conference. Liptak stated that she was available for conferences and yet was receiving directives in writing from a teacher to submit things in writing. It was unusual for her to receive these types of memos and letters from a teacher. Pollard's letter dated March 28, 1994 (P-29), was in response to her letter to Pollard, dated March 25, 1994.

Liptak opined that Pollard was "weak as a teacher." She recalled an informal conference with Pollard regarding homework. Liptak thought they had agreed that homework was to be done at home as opposed to using class time to do homework. She suggested that if the students returned without homework, they should get after school detention.

Initially optimistic that Pollard would be a good teacher, Liptak later recommended suspension. Liptak conducted informal and one formal observation of Pollard. The vice-principal made two formal observations. She received complaints from parents concerning Pollard's behavior towards the students. More particularly, Liptak conferred with two parents, Mrs. McK. and Mrs. H. Mrs. McK. was concerned that her daughter, T.McK., was being treated disrespectfully and reported a bruise on her. Liptak noted that that was the first she heard of the bruise which apparently had occurred sometime before the conference with Mrs. McK. (P-32). Mrs. H. was concerned that S.H. had lost interest in school and that she was having trouble getting him to attend. He had asked to go to the nurse and been denied the opportunity to go. Finally, the social worker apparently got him to the nurse, and he was diagnosed with pink eye. Mrs. H. felt that he should have been allowed to see the nurse.

Liptak testified that she and Hernandez signed off on the final evaluation and that Pollard refused to sign the evaluation (P-23). Liptak referred to a memorandum from Douglas J. Bolton, social studies supervisor, regarding his efforts to confer with Pollard and provide assistance to her. Pollard stated that she did not need any assistance (P-30). Pollard was suspended from her teaching position by letter, dated March 31, 1994 (P-31).

On cross-examination, Liptak indicated that in regard to the alleged spitting incident she did not notify the parent, DYFS, nor did she confront Pollard about it. Normally, she would have a conference with the teacher, but at this point she was not having conferences with Pollard. Referring to the statement of charges, Liptak stated that she did not see all of the documentation on incidents that occurred in other schools nor did she try to get access to information on the charges, prior to signing the statement of charges. She accepted the word of other people as to the incidents that occurred in their buildings. Liptak explained that the statement of charges and evidence was prepared by Mr. Johnson. She saw a draft of the document and made corrections to the part for which she was responsible. Johnson asked her to sign the document. Referring to charge three, ¶ 5B3 which alleged that respondent ordered pupil T.McK. out of the class stating, "Get your ass down the stairs," Liptak learned of this from the vice-principal. She believed the vice-principal found out about this from the students. Liptak did not do a follow-up investigation; the investigation had been done. Liptak learned about the incident involving S.A. on February 25, 1994, from the vice-principal. Pollard admitted to calling S.A. a "fat faggot" on the stairwell, after he had made some comments to her. Liptak believed that S.A. had called Pollard, "bald" and made another comment as well. S.A. was suspended for three days for disrespectful language to Pollard. Ms. Vitone made the decision which Liptak supported. Liptak discussed the incident with S.A.'s parents. Liptak spoke to Pollard that day. Pollard confirmed for Liptak that she had called S.A. a "fat faggot" and signed a letter to that effect. Referred to Pollard's denial (R-12 for identification), Liptak contended that that was the first time she had seen this denial. She alleged that she had never had any problem retrieving mail from her mailbox in her office.

Liptak indicated that S.A. came down to the office and reported an incident to her directly. Liptak recalled that she had seen R-13, but did not know exactly when she had received it. From her questioning of the students in the classroom, Liptak concluded that the stories were similar. S.A. was taking something out of his desk (a notebook) or playing with something on his desk. When Ms. Pollard took it from him, she called him "fat faggot" or "you're too fat to feel it fag" or words to that effect. She testified that S.A. also mentioned a struggle with the notebook.

Liptak recalled that S.H. had said that Pollard called him, "blind." Some students reported hearing the words "blind bastard," others reported that "blind" was said. Liptak did not write the words "blind bastard" on the charges. She heard the words, "blind bastard" from other students, not S.H. Mr. Johnson asked S.H. for clarification, and Liptak did not recall S.H. saying the words "blind bastard." Asked why she signed off on those words, Liptak indicated that other students had reported them. She did not recall asking S.H. what he or Pollard said or did prior or subsequent to the comment and did not discuss the circumstances with Ms. Pollard. Noting that Pollard refused to meet with her beginning on March 22, 1994, and her notes were dated March 30, 1994, she alleged that it was thus not possible to conference with Pollard. Liptak did not know the date of the incident. She only found out about it when she spoke with the students and "it came out."

Liptak contended that charge four ¶ 9, referred to the incident on March 25, 1994, when M.A. was either told to leave the classroom or left the classroom without permission. Pollard submitted a letter to Liptak indicting that she had told M.A. to leave the classroom. Pollard directed Liptak to advise her as to what had been done about M.A. and to outline all of the circumstances. It contained quite a few directives.

Liptak indicated that normally no more than two students can leave to go to the bathroom at once (it is disruptive). She admitted that when P.A. was refused permission to go to the bathroom, she did not know how many students were already out. She did not believe Pollard kept a sign out book. Questioned as to whether or not other students claimed that Pollard refused them access to the bathroom, Liptak indicated that a number of students had said that. She claimed, however, that this would not be unusual because a teacher cannot let every student leave whenever the student wants to. Many students complained that some students were allowed to go to the bathroom and others were not. Liptak opined that it is a matter she leaves to the discretion of the teacher. Thus, she agreed that if two or three students were out of the classroom, and P.A. indicated he needed to go to the bathroom, the teacher's refusal at that point might not be unreasonable. Questioned about the allegation that Pollard routinely ordered the students to leave the classroom without reporting this to the office, Liptak referred to M.A.'s allegation, the instance with T.McK. (which was reported to the vice-principal) and noted that there may have been several others. She noted that there were several incidents at school 3.

Liptak indicated that she had to remove a number of students from Pollard's class because of conflicts with Pollard. She confirmed that S.A. had problems in other classes (could have been suspended on other occasions) and was not a model student. He was inclined to spread gossip to get other students agitated. S.A. was removed for the first two periods from Pollard's class, and he was then in Pollard's class only one period a day. There were many complaints about Pollard from students and parents. The teachers also complained about receiving students who had problems with Pollard. It was not good for morale. Liptak was aware that Pollard had the elementary school certification that she needed for her position but knew nothing else about her credentials.

On redirect examination, Liptak agreed that there were certain incidents in the statement of charges that did not occur in her building. She understood that those charges had been documented with the administrators in charge of those buildings and that there was evidence for those charges. She indicated that S.A. was not a model student before Pollard arrived but was "nothing to the extent that he got into later." Liptak described the types of assistance given to Pollard: assigned students to other classes where there appeared to be extreme personality conflicts; contacted parents; conferred with students; frequently removed students from the classroom that Ms. Pollard reported being disruptive; gave after school detention and imposed suspensions.

Catherine Mary Vitone, employed by respondent as vice-principal of school No. 2 for two and one-half years, testified that her main responsibility is to ensure that the students and staff can carry out their functions throughout the school day. For the past year, she was specifically assigned to the older students. She is in charge of technology and media and audio/visual education in the school and has lunch duty. She shares the responsibility to supervise, observe and evaluate teachers with Liptak.

Vitone recalled that S.A. came to her office. He had tears in his eyes and was extremely upset. He said he was coming upstairs from the lunchroom, and Pollard called him a "fat faggot." He was extremely sensitive to the phraseology. Vitone took him to see Pollard. She asked Pollard to step outside into the hallway and advised Pollard what S.A. had said. Pollard admitted that she called S.A. a "fat faggot." Vitone asked S.A. to return to her office. Vitone told Pollard that this was objectionable, out of the ordinary and not something expected from a teacher. Vitone took S.A. back to her office and wrote up the incident (P-24). S.A. was suspended from school because he admitted to saying things to Pollard which were disrespectful.

Vitone noted that on March 21, 1994, she spoke to Pollard about the observations and asked to meet with Pollard about them (P-33). She recalled that she went to Pollard and attempted to meet with her; Pollard refused. Vitone noted that this was unusual and the first time that this occurred in the building. She explained that an observation is written up, put in the staff member's mailbox or given to them personally. The teacher has time to review it. A conference with the staff member occurs to benefit the teacher, who then signs the observation sheet. Vitone conducted two observations of Pollard (P-34 and P-35). Vitone's entry on P-33 indicates that she asked Pollard to sign the observations of March 18, 1994 and March 16, 1994. Pollard said that "she needed more time and wished to check with someone regarding the signing and would sign in 24 hours." She never signed the observations. Referring to her observation (P-34), Vitone found that Pollard was not really well prepared for the class. The students seemed to be extremely restless and unable to follow her train of thought. They asked some valid questions, which Pollard disregarded. Vitone did not think the class was well organized and opined that the students were not receiving quality instruction. There was no homework assignment given to the students. School policy requires that every student receives homework in every class. Vitone was very concerned about the progress of the class. It was mid-March and the class was still at the beginning of the book.

She observed another class two days later at a different time, and Vitone found that the exact same lesson was taught again. She was thus not sure about the progress. She had had students come to her office upset because the same lesson was taught over and over again. There was a great deal of material in social studies to cover and the class was still studying the early part of the curriculum. During the second observation, it took a while for the lesson to start. There was a lot of class time spent getting organized which Vitone opined should not be occurring at this point in the year with seventh and eighth graders. (Vitone had observed them organized in other classes).

Vitone asked the supervisor for social studies, Dr. Bolton, for assistance. Since social studies was Pollard's main assignment, Vitone asked Bolton to meet with them to discuss ways of helping Pollard with the curriculum. Bolton came on March 30, 1994. Pollard was not at all receptive. As a result of Pollard's reluctance and failure to cooperate, Vitone wrote a memo requesting a formal meeting with Bolton on April 11, 1994, the purpose of which was to discuss the teacher evaluation. Vitone indicated that this was a gesture of assistance.

Vitone met with Mrs. McK. a number of times. T.McK. is a very sensitive young lady, who at times had difficulty with other students. She also had difficulty with Pollard, whom she felt singled her out and harassed her. Mrs. McK. was extremely upset about it. Vitone spoke to Pollard about T.McK. and her parent. Vitone recalled that T.McK. left Pollard's room, extremely frustrated. She came to Vitone's office, said she was angry and would not go back to Pollard's class. T.McK. told Vitone that Pollard had told her to get her "ass out of the room." Vitone did not ask T.McK. to return to the class.

On cross-examination, Vitone stated that she did not recall seeing R-12, but agreed it was addressed to her. Vitone recalled that S.A. had come to her office and told her that Pollard had called him a "fat faggot" in the stairwell coming up from lunch and that it was not fair. She spoke with Pollard who confirmed that she called him a "fat faggot" because he was making fun of her. He called her "bald" and "fat lips" and spoke unkindly and disrespectfully to her. S.A. admitted to Vitone that he had said those words, and he was suspended for this.

Vitone was not involved in the preparation of the statement of charges nor did she review the statement of charges before Liptak signed it. At no time did she become aware of Pollard's credentials or look at Pollard's file. She understood that Pollard was certified to teach in elementary school. She opined that those are things the principal should know.

E.V., is a thirteen-year-old student at school No. 3, and Hernandez is the school principal. Ms. Pollard was her language arts teacher from September to December 1993, and Mr. Campos taught her math. E.V. testified about several incidents in Ms. Pollard's class that she observed and reported to the principal and to her mother. She also made written notes about the incidents for the principal and these are part of petitioner's exhibits.

Regarding the problem between A.R., a student in her class, and Ms. Pollard, E.V. noted that A.R. is "fat." She recalled that A.R. had requested to go to the bathroom, and Ms. Pollard said, "Yes," but advised A.R. that she could lose five pounds while she used the bathroom. The students started laughing, and A.R. was embarrassed. E.V. further observed Pollard, on the other side of the room, near A.R.'s desk. She heard Pollard call A.R. a "bitch," and saw her "mush" A.R., and tell her to "shut the f--- up." E.V. explained that to "mush" somebody is to put a finger to the head and push it. (P-14). She recalled that the entire class heard Ms. Pollard's comments, and they determined to tell the principal because a teacher is not supposed to curse at students.

E.V. testified about the time someone threw a paper in class, and Pollard had indicated that the students' houses are a mess, they do this to their parents, and their parents are garbage. (P-15) At another time in Pollard's class, E.V. was pointing to the word she looked up in the dictionary. Although uncertain if it was an accidental or on purpose, she indicated that Pollard scratched her finger, the one she was pointing with. E.V. went to the school nurse. Pollard came to the nurse's office, screamed at her and told her to get out. (P-13). Both Pollard and the nurse closed the door on her, and she sat on the bench. E.V. told her mother about the incident; her mother met with the principal and Pollard.

E.V. testified that Pollard wrote her up and sent her to the office many times but she does not know why. E.V. claimed that she had been a student at school No. 3 since kindergarten and had no previous academic problems or problems with her teachers. E.V. recalled that Pollard made fun of certain students; she made fun of E.'s nose, A.R.'s weight and M.'s weight. She described the time she asked to go to the bathroom and Pollard told her, "No." It was an emergency, and she walked out of the room. Ms. Pollard wrote her up. She also recalled that on several occasions when students went to the bathroom, Pollard "locked the door on them." They went to the principal who brought them back to the classroom.

On cross-examination, E.V. agreed that A.R. was "always disruptive, gave Ms. Pollard problems" and screamed at Pollard. However, she did not recall A.R. saying, "Oh shit," nor was she present when A.R. was fighting with E. Although she recalled A.R. telling Pollard in a low voice to, "Shut the f--- up." Pollard said, "What? You shut the f--- up." On the same day Pollard also called A.R. "a bitch" and "mushed" her. She recalled that A.R. used a "bad word," and Pollard told her to go to the office. She did not recall A.R. using the word "f---" frequently in class. E.V. confirmed that A. R.'s disruptive behavior started after Pollard told her to "lose five pounds while you are in the bathroom."

She agreed that Pollard was in the habit of writing a report anytime she had a problem in class and wrote reports about her. E V testified that whenever Pollard sent her to the office, the principal told her to write a letter about what happened in class. Thus, she wrote reports about Pollard. She told her parents that she had been asked by the principal to write these letters. The principal did not make any comments about Pollard and did not instruct her to write negative things about Ms. Pollard. She did not tell Pollard about her notes to the principal. She recalled "writing a lot" (approximately five letters). E.V. agreed that her letter on October 4, did not include everything A.R. said. She recalled the day Pollard just kept moving her around in the class for no reason. She wrote about this in a letter (R-4) because the principal had advised her not to argue but just to write down what occurred.

E.V. did not see Pollard "mush" anyone else. Pollard's statement to A.R. about losing the five pounds while she was in the bathroom was prior to October 4. E.V. only heard Pollard use the word "bitch" on October 4, and that was after A.R. said, "Shut the f--- up."

M.M. is the mother of E.V. Prior to the 1993-94 school year, M.M. had not received any complaints about her daughter. E.V. was a very good student and her academic performance was good. During the school year, E.V. complained everyday about how Pollard conducted herself in class. E.V. was very upset because Pollard said that the parents were all garbage. She had a conference with the principal and Ms. Pollard because of the trouble E.V. was having in class. She opined that Pollard picked on her daughter. M.M. received a supplementary report on E.V. from Pollard and she replied: "E.V. will start improving in self-control when you stop picking on her. You have something against my daughter, it better stop soon or I'm taking action. E.V. never had trouble with any other teacher before. She's always been a good student. Mr. Campos has no trouble with my daughter, E.V." (P-16) Despite the conferences with the principal and Pollard, the situation did not improve.

On cross-examination, M.M. stated that she did not believe her daughter was in remedial classes because she was below her grade. She recalled that E.V. told her about A.R., but did not tell her that A.R. was a disruptive student or that she heard A.R. tell Ms. Pollard to, "Shut the f--- up." E.V. told her that students threw paper at Ms. Pollard in the classroom. E.V. also complained that Pollard was always picking on her but M.M. could not recall E.V. telling her that Pollard called her a bad word. M.M. stated that E.V. was written up by Pollard because of her behavior in class. During the conference with the principal and Pollard, they discussed E.V.'s behavior in class. M.M. did not recall Pollard's concerns but did recall that Pollard called E.V. a liar. Although she did not know what "mushing" meant, E.V. had mentioned the word (apparently in regard to Pollard mushing somebody). Aware that her daughter was asked by the principal to write letters, M.M. told E.V. that every time something happened in class to write it down and give copies to the principal and to her. The letters were written because M.M. wanted action taken by the school; she was ready to remove her daughter from the school. She did not make the letters available to Pollard and did not know what action was planned. M.M. saw all of the letters.

M.M. stated that when Pollard was transferred in March 1994 (not sure of the date) to school No. 2, Ms. Mosch became E.V.'s teacher. E.V. has not had further problems in school.

S.R. was a student at school No. 3 in Pollard's language arts class during the 1993-94 school year. She is fifteen years old. There were about twenty-three students in the class. She had problems with Pollard and described her as unfair. Pollard would not let S.R. use the bathroom, and in one instance when S.R. persisted in her request Pollard called the office; she allowed the Spanish girls to use the bathroom. She answered questions from the students with an attitude. S.R. agreed she wrote P-18, but did not recall giving it to anyone. Due to the problems, the class had to write a letter to Ms. Hernandez about how they felt (P-17). She recalled that somebody had thrown a piece of paper at Pollard. Pollard stated that this was the way they "treat their parents, that they throw garbage at them." She observed A.R. and Ms. Pollard arguing all the time in class. A.R. had said, "Shut the f--- up" to Pollard, and Pollard repeated that back to A.R. A.R. always bothered Pollard. She did not hear Pollard use any other profanity. S.R. never got along with Ms. Pollard and believed Pollard did not like her.

On redirect examination, S.R. stated that she observed students go to the bathroom and return to find the door locked. She noted that Hernandez came to the class to calm them down and at times, took A.R. out of the classroom. The students did not have the same problem in Mr. Campos' class.

On cross-examination, S.R. agreed that she is Spanish and claimed she was referring to the Mexican girls in her class. When questioned as to Pollard's attitude, she indicated that Pollard had a "big mouth" and answered back with an attitude. For example, if she asked if she could go to the bathroom, Pollard screamed, "No."

S.R. opined that Hernandez told them to write the letters when they went to the office and complained. She recalled meetings with the principal, who told them to write letters about how they felt and that Hernandez walked into Pollard's classroom when Pollard was teaching and asked the entire class to write letters. She admitted that she did not put in her letter A.R.'s specific words to Pollard. Hernandez did not tell her why she wanted her to write the letters, and S.R. never gave the letters to Ms. Pollard. She further recalled that in language arts class Pollard asked the students to write how they felt about her. She did not recall which letter it was.

S.R. recalled that A.R. threw some paper at Pollard, and Pollard then said, "Is that what you do to your parents, throw garbage?" On further questioning, S.R. indicated that Pollard said, "That's the way they treat their parents, throwing them garbage." S.R. agreed that A.R. was usually a disruptive student. She played around, did not do her work, tried to make people laugh, and cursed at Pollard. She called her a "bitch," and a witch. S.R. recalled the one occasion Pollard wrote her up for talking and walking out of class. S.R. did not think that she was ever written up by Pollard for something she did not do.

M.R. is thirteen-years old and was a student at school No. 3 during the 1993-94 school year. Pollard was his teacher, and he had problems with her. Pollard locked the door on students who left the class without permission. On at least four occasions, when he went to the bathroom he was locked out by Pollard. He went to the principal's office and advised her that Pollard had locked him out of the class for no reason. Hernandez brought him back to the classroom.

Noting that he is a "big kid," he recalled that Pollard told him that he was so big he ought to go to the bathroom and lose some weight. The other students in the class started to laugh, and this made him feel, "like sad, mad." He recalled that Pollard said something about S.R., A.R. and other students. If he was late to see a special teacher, he would get into trouble. Pollard cursed at him and told him not to go at that time. She also cursed at A.R. but A.R. also said bad things about Ms. Pollard. Pollard also said that their parents must be "treating them to act immature," probably "their parents were immature."

M.R. admitted that he had been written up by Ms. Pollard and sent to the principal for leaving his seat and not returning to it despite being asked to do so. He did not recall being written up because he refused to take out his book and because he was involved in some disruptive action with A.R. He opined that Pollard wrote him up for something he did not do; somebody else made a paper airplane and threw it, and she believed it had been him.

Referring to Pollard's statement about losing weight in the bathroom, he remembered telling her to leave him alone since she was teasing and bothering him about the way he looked. Another verbal exchange with Pollard started when she thought he was talking and it was really S.A. Pollard had told him to be quiet and said that he was too fat to get a girlfriend. He admitted, however, that he had first said she was so ugly and had big lips, and it was afterward that she said to him, "You so ugly, you probably never even get a wife." S.A. then said, "Oh, look at her, turn her off, turn her off, she's so ugly." On questioning by this judge, M.R. agreed that he made the first comment to Ms. Pollard about having big lips and being ugly and she responded to him.

M.R. further recalled that A.R. cursed at Ms. Pollard, that she said she would not take all her "bull," and that she was not going to do any work until she saw the principal. M.R. recalled that when the class acted up, Pollard indicated that their parents were teaching them to be immature, that they must act up like that to their parents, or their parents must act up like that to them. However, the class was acting up because they wanted to see the principal and Pollard would not let them. The class wanted to see the principal because they believed that Pollard was "saying bad stuff about them." He recalled that Hernandez visited the class while Pollard was there and told them all to write letters on yellow pieces of paper about what occurred and why they were making so much noise. Hernandez read the letters and spoke to them on another day. M.R. could not recall how many letters he wrote. He recalled writing a letter indicating that A.R. used words like "shit" and "f---" in the classroom to Ms. Pollard but opined that A.R. ripped it up and it did not get to the principal. He opined that Hernandez wanted them to write the letters to know what was going on. She did not indicate that she wanted to "get Ms. Pollard."

Y.A., a fourteen-year-old, was a student at school No. 3 during the 1993-94 school year. Ms. Pollard was his teacher for language arts, reading and spelling. He had problems with her. He recalled that sometimes Pollard held on to his arms. Y.A. noted that when he misbehaved or Pollard thought he was acting out, she asked him what was wrong with him, what he was doing and advised him to stop fooling around. She grabbed his arms and shook him a bit. Sometimes, she grabbed him kind of hard and it hurt. He did not feel her fingernails in his arms. No one else observed what occurred because she closed the door. He did not hear Pollard use profanity and was not in A.R.'s class.

Y.A. indicated that Pollard wrote him up for acting improperly, such as saying, "Oh shit." She never wrote him up for something he had not done. Also, when Pollard shook him and asked him what was wrong, he was for example, talking to his friends. He was not asked by Hernandez to write a letter.

On further questioning, Y.A. explained that Pollard spoke to him in her "office." He described the "office" as space in the hallway outside the classroom where the students hung their coats. There were no desks or chairs there. It is outside the classroom and she closed the door to the classroom. Y.A. indicated that Pollard shook him on approximately three or four occasions in her "office." He told his mother, who spoke to Pollard in his presence and Pollard's actions stopped. Pollard had told his mother that she shook him because she was just trying to talk to him.

P.A. was a student in school No. 2 during the 1993-94 school year. P.A. is thirteen years old, and Ms. Pollard was his teacher beginning in January 1994. He testified that he did not really get along with Pollard even though she sent him to the office on only one occasion. Sometimes she would not let him go to the bathroom, and if he did not do his homework, she picked on him. Neither he nor the other students liked the class.

In Pollard's class P.A. sat in front of S.A. S.A. and Pollard had problems. S.A. was looking at cards. P.A. recalled an occasion when Ms. Pollard was standing behind him talking to S.A., but he did not recall what S.A. said. He heard Pollard say, "You fat fag," and S.A. reply, "You scratched me." Pollard said, "How could you feel it, you fat fag?" Although she said it in a rather quiet voice, others heard it; the class was in shock. P.A. did not recall if S.A. remained in class or if he went to the nurse. Both P.A. and S.A. reported the incident.

P.A. recalled that on an occasion he asked to go to the bathroom and Pollard would not let him. He told her that he did not want to "pee" on himself. She said, "Go ahead pee on yourself." He had to walk out of the room. P.A. testified that Pollard told students to get out of the class, apparently without conduct slips.

P.A. indicated that S.H. cannot see very well and uses a computer to do his work. S.H. was sitting next to him. He recalled that Pollard called him "blind" (he could not hear the rest of the sentence and did not know if there was a dispute between the two before he heard the word "blind"). Other students heard what Pollard said and stared at her; S.H. looked angry. He never heard Mr. Carol, the prior teacher, use profanity or order students to get out.

On cross-examination, P.A. indicated that Ms. Pollard was his teacher until 10:20 a.m. and again from 11:40 to 12:20. He explained that pursuant to the school's policy regarding the bathroom, a student could not go to the bathroom before 10:00 and after 2:00. In an emergency, the teacher was supposed to let the student go with a pass. The bathroom incident occurred during social studies, 11:40 to 12:20. Asked if students claimed there was a bathroom emergency when there was not, he replied, "No." He recalled telling Pollard that it was an emergency and asking her if she wanted him to pee on himself. She replied, "Go ahead." P.A. left the classroom. He noted that he had not asked for permission to go to the bathroom during any of the other periods.

P.A. indicated that Pollard would not call on him when he raised his hand, even if there was only one hand raised.

P.A. stated that the incident involving S.A. occurred in social studies. Pollard walked past him to S.A., who sat directly in back of him. Although P.A. was doing his work, he turned around when Pollard passed by and he heard her talking to S.A. He observed cards on the table and the first thing he recalled hearing was S.A. say, "You scratched me." Pollard said, "How could you feel it, you fat fag?" Noting that he turned around, he actually saw Pollard do it. Although he recalled that Pollard had nails, he did not remember exactly how she scratched S.A. He believed she scratched him somewhere on his hand.

On redirect examination, P.A. indicated that he saw Pollard move her hands towards S.A. More precisely, he indicated that he saw Pollard withdraw her hand. He did not actually see her scratch S.A., nor did he observe the entire incident that occurred. He heard it. On questioning by this judge, he stated that he saw Pollard trying to grab something with two hands. He did not know what she was trying to grab and did not exactly see her scratch S.A.

S.H., a fourteen-year-old student at school No. 2, testified that Ms. Pollard was his teacher the prior school year. He explained that he has a disability in that he is crossed-eyed. He receives help in reading and math and used a closed circuit television in Pollard's class. S.H. had no problems with Mr. Carol, his teacher prior to Pollard. He had problems with Pollard. Although he did not know the exact location of his desk in terms of S.A.'s desk, he recalled that Pollard called S.A. a "fat fag" and noticed that other students heard it. Other students told the principal. S.H. did not hear S.A. say anything to Ms. Pollard nor did he know why Pollard said this.

S.H. recalled that on one occasion, (sometime in the morning) Pollard called him, "blind." He was at his desk working and had not said anything to Pollard before she made that statement. He stated that this made him "mad" and he told his mother. He reported the incident to the principal. He indicated that other students heard Ms. Pollard call him blind but did not notice their reactions. He recalled that another teacher had called him blind.

On cross-examination, he indicated that he had Pollard first and second periods and in the afternoon. In regard to the incident with S.A., he believed that he was about six feet away from S.A. and that P.A. was in the class. He did not recall the seating relationship, if he could see S.A. from his seat, or if he had to turn around to see him. He did not remember exactly what Pollard was doing, what S.A. was doing (he was not playing with cards), or whether Pollard said or did anything else before he heard her use the words. He did not recall a commotion or disturbance prior to hearing the words and did not recall what occurred after Pollard uttered the words. He only remembered the words "fat fag" from that day.

Questioned as to Pollard calling him "blind," S.H. indicated that he is not really blind. He did not recall what was going on in the classroom at the time, did not recall Pollard saying anything else to him, responding to her, or anything else that happened in that period.

R.G. is twelve years old and a seventh grade student at Northside Chapel school. He remembered Pollard as his substitute teacher at school No. 28 when he was in the second grade. Questioned as to whether he was ever disciplined by Ms. Pollard, he stated, "In the closet." He recalled that he and the class were playing around, and Pollard placed him in the closet. More particularly, R.G. recalled that he stopped playing around, sat in his seat and raised his hand for help. Pollard got mad, grabbed his arm and picked him off the seat, and put him in the paper closet, locked the door and turned out the light. R.G. indicated that the closet was located in the little hall between the next classroom and Pollard's classroom. He was scared because it was dark and he could not see. He was in the closet for a long time. He yelled and knocked on the door. A lady from next door, whose name he did not know, opened the closet and let him out. He did not know if someone was placed in the closet after he was let out by the lady and taken to the office. He went to the principal's office and spoke with the head principal, Mr. Fulmore. R.G. told his grandmother that he was put in the closet and his great-grandmother, G.D., went to the school.

R.G. testified that while he was a student in Pollard's class he saw other students placed in the closet. They played around and Pollard got mad. "She just started picking kids up and putting them in the closet." R.G. stated that Pollard would then take one out and put the next one in. R.G. indicated that he observed other students being placed in the closet because his desk was in the front near Pollard's desk and near the hall. He could see where she "brung them over there and put them in the closet." He observed J.C.W., his classmate, placed in the closet.

On cross-examination, R.G. stated that Pollard was substituting for his teacher, Ms. Pipkin. He did not recall what the room looked like but there was a bathroom in the classroom and a door to the paper closet, where the paper and pencils were kept for the two classrooms. That closet was between the two classrooms "connected together." One did not have to go through a door to get to that closet. The closet that he was referring to is the paper closet. It was "like a wall."

On further questioning, R.G. advised that he was locked in the closet more than once. Before Pollard put him in the closet, the light was off and another student was taken out of the closet. He did not recall who. From the position of that closet, one could see into the other classroom and see the class being taught. He opined that when one student was taken out of the closet another was put in. On redirect examination, R.G. indicated that he first met Mr. Johnson on the day of the hearing.

Norma Pollard began teaching in September 1961. She received a Bachelor of Science degree in 1961 in elementary education from Seton Hall University, a Master of Arts degree in reading specialization in 1967 from Kean College, and obtained a permanent teaching certificate from the State of New Jersey in 1965. She received a certificate in learning disabilities from Montclair State College and is certified as a reading teacher, a learning disabilities teacher/consultant and a teacher of the handicapped. In 1989, she became a reading specialist.

Pollard claimed that she was forced out of East Side High in 1982 when Joe Clark was the principal. From 1982 to 1986, she did not work for Paterson. In June 1986, she was assigned to school No. 21, but she was transferred to school No. 28 as a basic skills instructor in the fall of 1986. She was evaluated by Joseph Fulmore on May 28, 1987. In the category of classroom organization and management she was rated needs improvement, and in the other categories, she received outstanding or satisfactory ratings. Pollard taught in the school in 1987-88 and was evaluated by Mary Holmes on May 31, 1988. In two categories, she received needs improvement, but received no unacceptable ratings. She was rated outstanding or successful in the other categories. In September 1988, she was a basic skills instructor at school No. 28. She received no negative evaluations in September, October or November 1988. On December 6, 1988, she was transferred to the position of first grade teacher. Pollard recalled that at approximately 12:00 the principal informed her that she was to report immediately to the first grade as the teacher. Pollard questioned this arbitrary action. She was not given the class register, the class list or yellow cards (record cards). Pollard had no idea how many students were in her first grade class nor did she have a list with the students names. She walked into a class and children were sitting "all around the walls. They were running around."

Pollard indicated that by document (J-1) from the Board, dated December 7, 1988, she was transferred pursuant to the Board's meeting in January 1989 to an elementary teacher position on December 8, 1988. Pollard contended that she was evaluated December 7, 1988, by Joseph Fulmore after having been in that classroom less than a day (R-16). Noting that she did not have the register, the yellow cards or the class list, she agreed that she was making name tags for the children in order to create an attendance record. Pollard told Fulmore that she did not have a register and was unable to identify the children. She asked him if he knew the number of children in the classroom. He told her to do "whatever." She noted that the other allegations in the letter, dated December 7, 1988 (R-16), in which Principal Holmes asked her to complete and update student ISIPs, were not true. She was then a classroom teacher and it was a BSI responsibility to complete and update student ISIPs.

Pollard indicated that she was reassigned on December 6, in school on December 7 and absent December 8, 9, 12 and 13, 1988. (R-19) She was observed December 13, 1988, at 10:40 a.m. by Ms. Mary Holmes, a day that she was not in the building (R-20). By letter dated December 15, 1988, Pollard informed Holmes that she was absent December 13, 1988 (R-21); Holmes did not respond to her letter.

Pollard testified to a number of documents in an effort to explain the memos she sent and received. Pollard referred to R-22, sent in response to R-19, R-23 sent in response to R-18, R-24, P-2, R-25, 26, and P-3. Pollard contended that she still did not have the class register, the class list or yellow cards and had received no response to her attempt to get them from the principal and the vice-principal.

Pollard drew a sketch of her first grade classroom (R-37) and indicated that it was a little larger than 17' x 24'. Pollard opined that when she was first assigned to the first grade classroom there was chaos. The children were out of their seats, running and screaming. They ran out the door to the left and into the classroom through the other door. She tried to keep the children in their seats and out of the bathroom. None of the doors were locked, and she did not know which students were in the other class and which were in her class. She discussed the chaotic situation with Holmes, who just walked away. Similarly, Fulmore shrugged his shoulders and left. No administrator in the school rendered assistance to her.

Pollard referred to a diagram (R -37) and indicated where the doors were located and their use. Pollard and D'Olivera, another first grade teacher, could enter one another's classroom where it is marked "exit." The door went into D'Olivera's classroom but did not open into Pollard's classroom. It did not have a swinging hinge. Somebody in the other classroom could enter Pollard's room by pulling the door open. Sometimes the door stayed open. The door was solid wood, and when it was closed, one could not see what was going on in the other room. The door to the storage closet was made of solid wood.

Pollard stated that from the time that she took over the class, to the end of December, there were a minimum of ten visits from Fulmore and a minimum of ten from Holmes. She estimated that between the principal and the vice-principal, they entered her room a more than twenty times. She never knew when they were coming.

Pollard testified that she did not know what incident R.G. was referring to in his testimony. Nothing R.G. described ever occurred in her classroom. The area that he claimed to have been locked in was not in her room. Asked to which closet R.G. referred, Pollard pointed on R-37 to the "exit marked entry other class." Pollard indicated that there was a closet next to that class and it was for storage; it was not in her room but in the other room. She and D'Olivera kept "art papers in that particular room," and both had access to that area. The area was not locked, did not have a lock, and there was no light bulb in the closet. The door remained open. The only way to have gotten to that area was to enter another teacher's classroom. From December 6 to December 23, that classroom was occupied. The other teacher used that room while she used hers. Pollard stated that R.G. had told her that the class was very mad because Ms. Pipkin was not there. Pollard recalled that from December 6 to December 23, R.G. was involved in quite a few fights with T. and J.C. He made his nose bleed and she would tell him to run to the nurse. Pollard indicated that R.G.'s grandmother and C.'s mother came into the class. C.'s mother wanted to know about a fight with R.G.

Pollard did not recall Ms. Holmes coming into her classroom about an allegation of locking children in the closet. She did not recall any time in December 1988 when she was teaching in the first grade and Ms. Holmes walked into her room and found a child in the closet. She did not recall a discussion with the teacher in the adjoining room about putting children in the closet. Her first notice of the allegation, was when Ms. Holmes came into her room in December and hand delivered P-3 to her. Holmes did not tell her that she found the child in the closet. Pollard handed a written response directly to Ms. Holmes (R-1). Holmes did not respond to that letter. Neither Ms. Holmes or Mr. Fulmore asked for a conference with her.

Referring to photographs of the room (R-38c), Pollard indicated that except for the furniture, the room was substantially the way it was in 1988. The door on the right of the picture leads to the bathroom; the door to the left leads to the other classroom. Referring to R-38b, Pollard indicated that the door in the picture is the exit door into the other classroom. R-38d depicts the rear of the room with what looks like a bulletin board. The blackboard is in the front of the room. Pollard indicated that the bulletin board is actually the cloakroom door, with push in doors. There are pictures on the doors. The children hang their coats in the closet, and they put papers in the closet. (R-38f). R-38f, shows the closet with doors open. Referring to R-38e, Pollard indicated that it is the storage closet and it was in the other room. Art supplies and items for gym were kept there. The storage closet was a little bit larger than three feet deep and did not have a light bulb. R-39 was a picture of her room taken some years before. The door to the left on R-39 leads to the corridor from Pollard's room. There were numerous doors in the room as depicted on the pictures and none of those doors had locks.

Pollard referred to various documents marked into evidence on the issue of submitting attendance reports (R-27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 31, 34, P-12) for the month of December, which Pollard maintained she could not do without the register, class list or yellow cards. Pollard contended that she only saw the official register (P-4) toward the end of the year (definitely after January) when she completed the numbers for the 1989 register. She referred to Holmes' letter to Dr. Napier in which she advised him that the register had not been completed and the monthly report to the district for December could not be completed. Pollard contended that in order to comply she needed P-4 in evidence.

Pollard also requested a transfer from the school, claiming that from the day of the arbitrary transfer in violation of her contract, she had been "harassed, intimidated," and received over sixteen letters, to which she had tried to respond. She was unable to identify the children in her class, did not have regular prep periods, as required by the contract, and received no support. Allegations had been made about her and continuous letters written about her. The transfer request was not approved and Pollard filed a formal grievance on January 27, 1989 (R-2). Pollard testified as to the concerns that she had as set out in the grievance. According to Pollard, as a result of the grievance hearing, she was informed that it was not her responsibility to complete one of the documents. Pollard was also advised that the transfer would not take place. Pollard then requested the specific reasons for the denial of her request for a transfer from Dr. Napier (R-33). Pollard contended that between December 1988 and February 1989, all her letters or memos to Ms. Holmes or Mr. Fulmore were in response to some communication from them.

Pollard stated that she filed a civil complaint against the Paterson Education Association and the Paterson Public School System (R-26), as a result of action that took place at East Side High School, when Joe Clark was principal. The complaint was dismissed by the court September 1988. In September or early October, she had a discussion with a union representative who indicated that she should be very careful because "they were out to get her." Several of the representatives told her to "watch herself." A summary judgment was entered in favor of certain defendants (apparently, including Dr. Napier, (R-44) in December 1988).

Pollard referred to the December 19, 1988 letter (P-1) of Holmes to Dr. Napier which recommended her suspension. Pollard noted that at that point, she had been a first grade teacher for no more than ten days. In January 1989, Dr. Napier gave Pollard ninety days in which to correct her deficiencies (P-6). Pollard contended that there was no reason to hold her paycheck in June 1989. Advised by Holmes that the board's attorney had told her to hold the check, Pollard called the board attorney and he told Holmes to give Pollard the check. Holmes refused to do so.

Pollard did not recall any incident in which Boone came up to her room and she used the word "bitch." She never called Ms. Holmes or Ms. Boone "bitch." (R-9)

Pollard taught in school No. 28 from September 1986 until June 1989. By letter dated November 17, 1989, she was transferred to school No. 17, effective September 1, 1989 (R-47). In her February 1990 evaluation, she did not receive any unacceptable or needs improvements; her ratings were either outstanding or successful (R-40). She was transferred from the position of BSI at school No. 17 to an unassigned teacher position at School No. 17, effective September 1, 1990 (R-48). In her evaluations she received ratings of either outstanding or successful and no unacceptable or needs improvement ratings (R-41). Pollard was transferred in September 1991 to school No. 12, as a BSI (R-49) and had no problems for the year. Effective September 1, 1992, Pollard was transferred to school No. 3, to be a classroom teacher. Laval Wilson transferred everyone from school No. 12.

Pollard recalled that she had a very nice fifth grade class at school No. 3 for the 1992-93 school year. She had no problems with the class or Mr. Bradshaw, the principal. She received pleasant letters on February 17, 1993, from the students (R-51A-P). Grisell Hernandez became principal in March or April 1993. In the performance report from Hernandez, dated April 7, 1993 (R-53), Pollard was rated outstanding and satisfactory, she had no unacceptable or needs improvement.

In September 1993, at school No. 3, she had a seventh grade class. She had a homeroom of regular, classified and BS students for the first three periods. Pollard's homeroom went to Mr. Campos for further instruction and in turn his students came to her for instruction. Campos' class, a State-classified bilingual class, had regular, classified, BS and ESL students. The ESL students (one-half of the class) were placed in his' class because he spoke Spanish. Pollard noted that her certification allowed her to teach all of the children, but she does not speak Spanish. She was supposed to teach and grade the regular students, but not the ESL students. Another ESL teacher was supposed to teach these children for one of the periods and give them enough work to keep them busy for the two additional periods. Another bilingual teacher who saw them in the morning while they were in Campos' class was also supposed to give them enough work to occupy them for the fifth and sixth periods. Pollard indicated, however, that the other ESL teacher, Ms. Kaufman, did not always pick up the students. They remained with Pollard when she was absent. Pollard gave them work because they had no assignments and were socializing. Pollard opined that she should have been paid for this. Pollard told Hernandez that the children did not have enough work to occupy the two periods nor was there a teacher to correct their work. The ESL students asked Pollard many questions. The other students complained that they had to work and the ESL students did not have to work. Pollard began to include ESL students in the class, although Hernandez told her that she was not to teach them. Pollard recalled that Hernandez expressed her preference for a bilingual teacher for the class.

Pollard described Hernandez' "bathroom policy," requiring all traveling teachers to take their children to the bathroom before the classes began to travel. At 10:00 every morning, she took her homeroom class to the bathroom. She contended, however, that when she received Campos' class, the students wanted to go to the bathroom or came into her class late, alleging they had been in the bathroom. She told the students to tell Campos that he had to take them to the bathroom, and she also spoke to Campos and Hernandez. (Although she allowed the ESL students to go to the bathroom, because they came from another class, she revised this because the other students claimed she was prejudiced.) She opined that the problem was Hernandez' policy. Hernandez told Pollard that Campos was taking all of his children to the bathroom; the students said he was not.

Pollard chronicled the disciplinary problems that she encountered in the fall of 1993, and claimed that she specifically informed Hernandez of the problems. On September 27, she called the office and told them there was a problem in the classroom; the children were fighting and making racist statements. Neither the security guard nor the office answered her call. A student was sent to the office to tell Ms. Hernandez to come to the classroom; Hernandez did not come. Pollard thus took the entire class down to the office. Pollard asked if she could call the parents of several of the children to let them know how the students were acting in the class, that this activity was disrupting the learning process and that it was dangerous. Pollard wanted to correct the situation and asked to speak to the parents. Pollard opined she could not control the situation. Hernandez told Pollard not to bring them (students) "back." In written instructions to Pollard, Hernandez set out school policy. As a result Pollard issued conduct reports. Pollard stated that she tried continuously to reach out. However, the problem was not with the children or with her; it was something else.

Pollard indicated that after she received P-19 from Hernandez, she issued conduct reports (R-55A-D). Referring to the September 27 incident, Pollard gave the conduct reports to Ms. Hernandez (R-55A-BB) and asked Hernandez to call the parents to come into school to observe their children's behavior. (One parent came, apologized, and transferred the child out of the school.) Hernandez did not support her or inform her how she was going to handle the discipline. Pollard explained that the students used profanity, walked around the class without permission, walked out of the classroom and threw objects. She called the office for help on October 1 for similar problems and received no response from Hernandez. She had similar problems on October 4. She recalled that the students indicated that they could get her in trouble and that they had done this before. The students let her know they were not going to listen to anything she told them. At this point, she knew the few students that were acting out. Hernandez did not reinforce the instructions of abiding by the school rules. Telling the children they did not have to listen to Ms. Pollard, per se, diminished her authority.

On October 8 (R-55P), a student was talking loudly in class and refused to do his assignment. Pollard forwarded that conduct report to Hernandez, who did nothing about it. (Eventually his mother came in and apologized for his behavior.) There were problems on October 26, when one of the students went into a rage. Pollard called the office and the principal, taking over for Hernandez on that day, removed the student. Some of the children continued to be disruptive. Pollard contended that whenever she reported disciplinary problems, Hernandez replied that she wanted a bilingual teacher in the seventh grade. Pollard maintained that it was at this hearing that she understood that Hernandez was prepping the children to come into her classroom for three periods as an attack against her. Had she known this, she would have used a different approach.

Pollard noted that Hernandez did not respond to the conduct reports she filed. On November 1, 1993, a fight started between two students and she sent three students to the office with conduct slips and received no response from Hernandez. On December 3, 1993, the children threw objects (attached to R-62) at her and she informed the office. Hernandez shrugged her shoulders and contended that she wanted a bilingual teacher in the class. Pollard opined that she did not have to go about it this way. Pollard referred to other incidents in which she issued conduct reports (R-55Y, R-55Z, R-55-AA, R-55BB), and Hernandez did not respond. It is to be noted that certain of these incidents related to A.R.

By October 6, 1993, Pollard knew that there was definitely a problem and that she could not resolve the situation. Knowing that there was a very hostile, competitive environment, and she could not control the children, she requested a transfer from public school No. 3. Pollard opined that Hernandez had never informed her that the children she sent to the office were asked to write letters about her. Pollard did not know that Hernandez went into Campos' class and that these letters were being written in his class. In thirty years of teaching, she had never known a principal to ask students to write letters about a teacher.

At the end of September 1993, the president of the parents' association, whose son had been in Pollard's fifth grade class, sat in on the class, as did another parent. Although Pollard had informed Hernandez that it was not safe in the classroom, she contended that she was not involved in this decision. The monitors were to remain for the three periods. They did not always stay for the entire three periods and they did not come everyday. The monitors were present from October 1993 to December 1993. Pollard contended that their presence did not affect the conduct of the students. In fact, the monitors took some of the students to the office and indicated that they were creating a problem in the classroom. One of the monitors who had observed Pollard's morning class informed Hernandez that Pollard did not have any problems with her regular homeroom. It was only this class and only some of the children. Pollard stated that the monitors were working with her and really trying; Hernandez did not respond to their efforts. Pollard noted that only one of the conduct reports in R-55A - BB involved a student in her homeroom. (Pollard had no problems or complaints with her homeroom.)

Pollard opined that she had other professional disagreements with the principal. Pollard objected to a survey (R-57) which the principal asked her to distribute to the class. Pollard did not submit it to her class, but responded with her objection to it. Pollard claimed that it was not a multi-cultural survey, but was selectively biased in vocabulary and organization. Hernandez did not respond to her objection. In addition, Hernandez sent a memo on December 6 about a staff cultural representation survey (R-58). Pollard believed that it did not make sense, and she had never seen anything like it before. Pollard claimed that she was eventually replaced by a bilingual teacher.

She found out that she was being replaced from the security personnel and several children who told her that Hernandez had taken the new teacher around to the various classes and introduced her as the new seventh grade teacher. She observed the new teacher talking in Spanish to Mr. Campos.

Pollard then attempted to demonstrate that Hernandez had transferred Afro-Americans out of school No. 3 in an effort to replace them with Hispanic employees. Betsy Banister, a cafeteria director, informed Pollard that the cafeteria workers were being terminated since Hernandez had become principal. Banister was transferred in 1994. Johnny Mack, a food service worker, was transferred to another school because of an incident with a Spanish child and replaced by an Hispanic person. Questioned as to their race, Pollard indicated that she could not tell race by looking at a person, but in appearance Mack and Banister were either African American or Caribbean American. Pollard testified that Francis Wright, a nurse at school No. 3, left and she made a statement at the faculty meeting about the hostility at the school. Her rings had been stolen. Ms. Robinson, an African-American, was written out of a program called the Schoolwide Project and went to another school. Cynthia Williams, a food service employee, told her that Hernandez was removing the black teachers and staff. Williams indicated that Hernandez transferred her because of her color and replaced her with an Hispanic person. Pollard recalled that Dana Bozeman, an African-American, who had been given a long term position in September 1993 was transferred in September or October 1993, amid controversy. Pollard noticed that the cafeteria monitors at school No. 3, who were "of color," were systematically being removed. When two of them told her what was happening, she advised them to tell Hernandez how they felt.

She referred to letters from E.V. dated October 26, 1993 (P-13), and October 4, 1993 (P-14 and P-15) which she had not seen at the time, and indicated that the incidents did not occur in her classroom. Regarding the supplementary report (P-16) that she sent to E.V.'s parent, Pollard opined that she was not picking on E.V. She believed that E.V.'s mother was threatening her by saying, "It better stop." Pollard stated that E.V. had told her that her grandmother and Ms. Hernandez were very good friends, and that Pollard had better leave her alone. Pollard indicated that E.V. was not on a seventh grade level and her social performance was not average; she was definitely disrespectful. She did not agree with the statements in S.R.'s letter (P-17). She alleged that the letters were written by students she had issued conduct reports for. She had no idea where a page from her class record book (P-21) fit in. Noting that she left everything at the school, she had no idea what happened to her grade book.

Pollard was transferred to school No. 2 in January 1994 as a language arts teacher. She taught reading, writing, composition, language arts and spelling. She also taught seventh grade social studies and eighth grade civics. After her evaluation (P-22), she wrote to Ms. Liptak asking her to clarify which statements she had written and which statements Hernandez had written. She never received a response to that letter.

Pollard indicated that P-23, P-24, P-27 and P-32 were not true. She referred to a drawing of her that S.A. put on her desk. S.A. claimed that he had found it (R-60). Pollard informed Vitone of the drawing. She indicated that the students also called her names. Referring to P-25A, Pollard indicated that P.A. left the class without permission. She called the principal and sent a notice to the office. She called the allegations by S.A. false and said that he walked out of the room, which he did all the time. Pollard maintained that she never said, "You're too fat to feel it, you fag." "No, cause I don't touch the children, I don't put my hands on them." The allegation against her in P-25B concerning M. was not true nor was the allegation involving S.H. She said, "He's not blind." Referring to an incident report on S.A. (P-26), she indicated that she did not know in March 1994 that S.A. had been seen by a nurse. Referring to her comments on the observation dated March 16, 1994 (R-63), Pollard indicated that prior to signing the evaluation, she asked for help with the students. She "wanted some assistance as to her comments so that she could respond to the observation." Referring to an eighth grade evaluation (P-35), she indicated that it was a civics class, not a social studies class. She disagreed with Vitone's comments in R-64. She wanted her to demonstrate a lesson utilizing the materials that Pollard had available to her. The statements in P-33 were not correct. She did not speak to Vitone at all in reference to the evaluations on March 21 and March 24. Pollard indicated that she met with Dr. Bolton contrary to P-30. In fact she had not refused to speak to Bolton and Vitone. She requested that they adhere to the contract and that she would appreciate a demonstration lesson from the supervisor of the social studies department. Pollard referred to R-9, indicating that it referred to Campos' class, but was in her grade book.

Pollard responded specifically to the charges and indicated the following. She denied charge one ¶¶ 3b, 3c, 3d, 3e, charge three ¶¶ 5a, 5b1. Asked if she had a conversation with Vitone as far as an incident with S.A. in February 1994, Pollard indicated that coming up the stairs from the cafeteria, there could be noise from the classes. She did not know if S.A. had been suspended. She denied charges three ¶¶ 5b2, 5b3, 5b4, 5b5, 5b6, 5b7, and charge four ¶ 10. Questioned as to ¶ 12, Pollard indicated that it was half true, half false. She was directed not to check any homework. The first two or three days, the students continued to bring homework to her, and she informed them that the principal did not want her to correct their homework. She informed Liptak that the parents were complaining about it. Liptak told Pollard that they had hired people outside of school to go over the homework, that it was not her concern, and that she was not to check the homework. Pollard stopped checking it. Referring to charge four, ¶ 13, she indicated that that charge was not true; school was closed most of that week.

On cross-examination, she admitted that during the 1993-94 school year, she was observed by Liptak and Vitone on three separate days. Pollard contended that the observations did not point out weaknesses in her performance. She admitted, however, that No. 8 under teaching skills (P-34) indicated that systematic and orderly progression was not apparent. The writing in the recommendation section did not refer to weaknesses in her performance. Similarly, Pollard did not believe P-35 or P-37 pointed out any deficiencies in her performance. She disagreed with some of the comments of her supervisor; however, she never met with Liptak or Vitone to discuss their observations. She contended that Vitone never requested that she meet with her to discuss her observations. Pollard contended that she never refused to meet with Bolton. Bolton came or was brought to see her at 2:15 while she was in a class and not during her prep period. Although she did not recall that he wanted to discuss her performance in the social studies area, she alleged that they had no time to discuss anything since she had to dismiss her class. She agreed that her following period was prep time, but she contended that the administrators did not adhere to the contract which provided for four days notice to meet with an administrator in the presence of a representative of her choice. She respectfully informed her supervisors that she would meet with them but that they should adhere to the contract. She did not leave them to call a union representative. She was not angry with the administrators. She opined that the observations were very positive in many ways and were not critical of her teaching performance.

Pollard did not recall the incident in which she allegedly called S.A. "a fat faggot." She signed the document (P-24), but she did not engage in a discussion with Liptak about it. Pollard did not recall ever meeting with Vitone to discuss S.A., or Vitone accompanying S.A. to her class to discuss S.A. with her. She agreed that there was an incident regarding S.A. in the hallway or stairwell on February 25, 1994, but she never referred in any manner to his weight or his looks. She never referred to S.A. as a "fat faggot." She did not know if S.A. made fun of her on that day or if he was suspended from school. She did not recall where P.A. sat in her class. Questioned as to whether some time on March 30, 1994, there was an incident involving S.A. in her class, she indicated, "No, or if it was, I don't recall the specific dates." Pollard maintained that P.A. and S.H. did not testify in court that she called S.A. a "fat fag." "They never did state when they heard the remark or where it took place." She indicated that P.A. was not an honor student, but an "okay" student and not the best as far as self-control.

Pollard stated that P.A. did not ask to go to the bathroom. (Students in her class could sign the sheet and leave.) She never denied him access to go to the bathroom or told him to "pee on himself." Pollard stated that S.H. has a "seeing disability," and "I have no idea. He could be multiply handicapped. He cannot read. He cannot write, he has difficulty expressing himself." She contended she had not been given the information by the nurse as to S.H.'s acuity vision. She agreed, however, that he used a closed-circuit television. She contended that she had not called him "blind something, because he is not blind."

Pollard indicated that she requested a meeting with Liptak or Vitone regarding the observations or evaluations. They did not request a meeting. She left her attendance book and grade book at school No. 3, and all the other documents there when she was transferred. She did not conclude the final grades because she was not the teacher at the end of the marking period. Hernandez did not speak to her about providing the student grades. She admitted that according to a page from her grade book (P-21), there were no grades for November.

Pollard recalled that in 1988-89 she was reprimanded in writing by her supervisors many times. She was also reprimanded by the district superintendent. The reprimand (P-6) concerned her refusal to present herself for review of her teaching technique and ability. It was not true that there were instances where Principal Holmes and Vice-principal Fulmore came to her class to observe her and she refused to teach. (Pollard disagreed with the comment that she refused to conduct the lesson (P-1).) She did not fold her arms and say, "You're the master teachers, you teach."

She had wanted them to demonstrate the lesson, but she did not think she said it "like that."

Pollard maintained that she was never removed from the class, but agreed that Holmes relieved her of duties on a particular afternoon. She did not "place kids in a closet." She contended that Holmes never testified that she came to Pollard's classroom, looked in the closet and found a student in the closet, took the student out of the closet and asked Pollard why the student was in the closet. Pollard indicated that that never happened. She agreed that during the 1988-89 school year, Holmes approached her about kids being placed in the closet.

Pollard agreed that she disputed the transfer from the BSI position to the classroom in December 1988. She had filed a grievance, but the arbitrator never directed the district to place her back in the BSI position. She was angry with the procedures taking place and agreed that she was angry at Holmes and Fulmore. Although Fulmore and Holmes requested to meet with her to discuss their observations, she did not meet with them. (Pollard agreed that she did not meet with Vitone or Liptak.) It was not that she refused to meet with them, but she asked them for four days notice or to have an objective person sit in with them. She disagreed with their observations of her teaching deficiencies, totally disagreed with the conclusions that they reached regarding her performance and disagreed with the evaluations.

Pollard admitted that when she was a teacher at East Side High, there was an incident concerning a locker, as a result of which she was suspended for five days by Joe Clark. She was directed on December 10, 1982, to leave the building. She refused and advised them to adhere to the contract. She concurred that the school district and the administrators were not found liable but the matter was in compensation court. Pollard alleged that once there was a court decision in the law suit, Dr. Napier retaliated against her. Everything that was done was inappropriate and not according to the contract. In fact, Pollard opined that her refusal to meet with Fulmore and Holmes, as well as the other problems that she had at school No. 28, were not based on meritorious reasons but because Napier directed that she be reprimanded. As of April 3, 1989, when she requested a transfer from Napier (R-45), she considered him to be hostile to her request for a transfer.

Pollard agreed that when she did not receive her paycheck on June 15, 1989, she was angry. However, she did not barge into Holmes' office and threaten her.

Pollard admitted that she was directed a number of times to complete pages six and seven of the register by Holmes. She did not refuse the directive but she could not complete a document that she was not responsible for. She stated, "I could not document any names for any child in grade one on September 30. I was not the teacher of record on September 30. I did not have a register. I did not have a class list. I had nothing. I was not the teacher of record." Although Pollard could have asked Pipkin, who was a teacher at school No. 23, and a fellow colleague, about the class register, Pollard contended that there were numerous communications to the principal and vice-principal that she did not have the records for the boys and girls and that she approached Esther Boone to request the grades and attendance. Pollard alleged that she asked Pipkin if she had a class list and Pipkin said, "She was in BSI." However, Pollard claimed that when she went to Pipkin's classroom, as a result of the transfer, Pipkin was flustered and did not know what was happening. Pollard did not request those documents from Pipkin on the day she was transferred to the first grade. She could not certify page six as of June 16, 1989, since she was not the teacher of record. Pollard did not recall that Esther Boone, Holmes' secretary approached her in her class concerning the completion of pages six and seven of the register. Pollard initially stated that Boone did not testify that she went to Pollard's class at Holmes' direction and asked her to complete pages six or seven but that she asked her to "complete the register." Pollard later indicated that Boone testified that she had approached Pollard during class and informed her that the principal wanted her to complete pages six and seven right now. Pollard, questioned as to whether she recalled Boone coming to her class about this matter, indicated that, "She came to my class many times." Of import, Pollard did not recall ever making a remark "bitch," or calling Boone, "Ms. Holmes' clean-up lady."

Pollard asked for the transfer from school No. 3 for her own safety and concern for the children. However, she opined that she was "forced out." In school No. 3, during periods four, five, and six, there was an uproar, confusion, fighting and total disorder; the children were writing letters about her. Hernandez wanted a bilingual teacher. Pollard claimed that she asked for help with the disorder but Hernandez would not let her telephone the parents when the behavior was egregious. Although Pollard agreed that Hernandez offered parental monitoring of the classes to her, she contended that Hernandez did not provide a lot of assistance with regard to the disruptive students or problems she had at school. Problems did not stop with the monitors present. Pollard believed the school was hostile to her.

On redirect-examination, Pollard indicated that she considered P-38 to be a favorable evaluation and explained what she considered favorable about it. Similarly, she indicated what she found favorable in the March 16, 1994 evaluation (R-63) and March 18, 1994 evaluations (R-64). From January to March 1994, she was not requested to and did not meet with the principal and vice-principal about her teaching performance. She disagreed with several of the comments, and she requested Ms. Vitone to demonstrate the lesson utilizing the same materials (R-63 and R-64). She opined that it was not inappropriate to ask a supervisor to demonstrate. She asked for assistance, but never got a response to her request.

Pollard recalled that Vitone brought Bolton to her class and asked Pollard to meet with them in her office after she had dismissed the class. After she dismissed her class, she went to Vitone's office. Pollard asked them to adhere to the contract. She wanted an "objective person" present. She told them that she was willing to accept what Bolton had to offer, but Bolton jumped up from his seat, pushed his chair back, and said, "You will listen." She again asked him to adhere to the contract and that an objective person be present. She said she was leaving and returned to her classroom. There was no agreement as to the follow up.

Pollard reiterated that page six of the register contains the official names of the students that entered school from the first day of September through September 30. She could not complete it because she did not have the official information (the yellow cards, the class list, or the official spellings of the children's names.)

Pollard stated that when she was transferred to the first grade, she asked Boone for information in reference to the children. She asked for the register, a class list, in case of an immediate exit from the building. Boone told her she had to talk to Holmes or Fulmore. Pollard claimed that she made this request several times. Noting that Boone told her that she was following the orders of the principal and the vice-principal, Pollard claimed that she got the impression that Boone was instructed not to turn the material over. Pollard then tried to get the material directly from the principal. Holmes' letter to Napier (dated June 13, 1989 P-8), did not even remotely describe what had occurred. Noting that the letter referred an incident on June 15, Pollard did not recall having any discussion on June 15, 1989, about her check nor did she receive her check that day.

On recross-examination, in answer to whether she knew of any contractual provision that would give a teacher the right to refuse to meet with a principal or vice-principal concerning an observation or evaluation, Pollard indicated that she did not refuse to meet with them regarding an observation.

FINDINGS OF FACT

At the outset, it should be noted that in evaluating the testimony and evidence in this matter, I have considered the seriousness of the charges that have been brought against respondent. Having considered the testimony in this light, I must state that I was persuaded by the testimony of petitioner's witnesses as to respondent's words and actions which formed the basis of the charges. While the testimony was sometimes at odds in regard to the particular words that were spoken, it is quite clear to the undersigned that the testimony was both credible and worthy of belief. The substance of the testimony was corroborated and supported in substantial measure the charges against respondent. Moreover, I am compelled to point out that I found the testimony of respondent to be particularly unconvincing. Respondent essentially denied these charges in whole, as being ludicrous or ridiculous. However, her denial was basically unbelievable. In fact, her dispute of the charges as to errors in time or date, only served to demonstrate that she was seeking some way to refute the charges, which were true in substance. Her denial quite simply did not have the ring of truth. Rather, her demeanor on the stand served to show the undersigned that she was angry in large measure with her supervisors and essentially had had tremendous difficulty coping with the students assigned to her class. The background of this situation, how it arose, and why it reached the level that it did, is not for this judge to determine. Rather, what is of import here is the fact that Ms. Pollard could not cope with her job in a reasonable, proper and legal manner. This was even more distressing, in light of Pollard's impressive credentials. However, it is only Pollard's ability to teach and conduct herself in a positive, appropriate, and professional manner which is at issue here. With this backdrop, I have considered the particular charges against Pollard and whether these charges were proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

Charge 1: Corporal punishment

Principal Holmes and student, R.G., gave credible testimony in support of Charge one ¶. 3a. The testimony, as outlined above, indicates that Holmes noticed a pupil standing outside Pollard's classroom. The pupil stated that Pollard was placing children in the closet. Holmes entered the classroom and opened the door of the coat closet. There she found a child sitting in a fetal position, with his head towards his knees. Holmes removed the child from the closet and questioned the child about why he was in the closet. The child stated that the teacher had put him there. Although Holmes asked Pollard to explain why the child was in the closet, Pollard did not respond nor did she attend a conference to discuss the incident.

Holmes initiated an investigation into the closet incident and questioned ten to twelve students in Pollard's class. Holmes testified that three students in Pollard's class said that they were placed in the closet as punishment (P-4). Holmes did not recall the name of the child found in the closet, but narrowed it down to either J.W. or R.G.

It was clear from the testimony adduced that a student could not open or close the door while in the closet. The door handles to the coat closet were located on the outside of the doors. Holmes concluded that Pollard was guilty of placing pupils in the closet as a disciplinary measure and reprimanded her for this misconduct (P-3). Holmes prepared a report and submitted it to Assistant Superintendent Durgett.

As noted by petitioner, the credible testimony of R.G. corroborated Holmes' testimony. R.G. vividly described a day Pollard was having difficulty with the class; she approached him at his desk, grabbed his arm and forcibly took him to a paper closet. The paper closet was located between Pollard's room and the adjacent classroom. Pollard opened the closet door and took another student out of the closet and placed him in the dark closet. He testified that he was in the closet for a long time and was scared because it was dark. He yelled and pounded on the door until the lady next door (presumably the teacher) rescued him from the closet. R.G. was taken to the principal's office where he reported the incident and he also told his grandmother. He testified that he was locked in the closet more than once and also observed Pollard "get mad" and place other students in the closet, such as J.W.

In regard to charge one ¶ 3b, the evidence supported the fact that respondent grabbed pupil S.A.'s left hand and scratched him in an attempt to take his notebook away on March 30, 1994. Principal Liptak gave credible testimony that pupil S.A. reported to her that he was scratched by Pollard and called a "fat fag" on March 30, 1994. The school nurse examined S.A. on March 30, 1994, and noted a superficial scrape on his left hand (P-26). Liptak questioned S.A. who stated that Pollard approached his desk and attempted to take his notebook. Pollard squeezed his hand and scratched him. According to Liptak's notes (P-25), S.A. complained to Pollard about being scratched by her. Pollard replied, "You're too fat to feel it, you fag." Liptak questioned several students who corroborated the "fat fag" remark.

P.A., apparently not a disciplinary problem, gave credible and sincere testimony that Pollard approached S.A.'s desk, scratched him and called him a "fat fag." He stated that he was working on his lesson when Pollard approached S.A. He turned to see Pollard withdrawing her hand and then S.A. complaining about being scratched.

In support of charge 1 ¶ 3e, Y.A., assigned to Pollard's class at school No. 3, testified that when he misbehaved Pollard would call him into the area where the students hang their coats. Pollard would grab him by his two arms, scold him and shake him. Y.A. explained that Pollard's grip on him was kind of hard and sometimes hurt him. He stated that this grabbing and shaking occurred three or four times and that he told his mother about it.

It is to be noted, as pointed out by petitioner, that several other pupils gave credible testimony about other acts of corporal punishment committed by Pollard. E.V. testified about Pollard's conduct. She described how during a class, she was pointing to a word in the dictionary and Pollard scratched her fourth finger with her nail. E.V. went to the nurse's office for treatment.

E.V. also gave convincing testimony that she observed Pollard "mush" pupil A.R. On one occasion, E.V. saw Pollard approach A.R.'s desk, call her a "bitch" and place her finger on A.R.'s head and push her head.

Based upon the above review of the testimony in regard to corporal punishment, I FIND that charge one ¶¶ 3, 3a, 3b, and 3e have been proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence. It is to be noted that the parties have agreed that charge one ¶ 3c was not proven by a preponderance of the believable evidence and should be dismissed. In addition, the testimony does not substantiate charge one ¶ 3d, as no testimony was adduced in regard to that charge.

Charge two: Conduct Unbecoming a Teacher

The charge of conduct unbecoming at teacher was based on the specifications outlined in charge one. In actuality, it may be based on any and all the charges that are substantiated. Clearly, all of the charges here if proven would warrant a determination of conduct unbecoming a teacher.

Charge three: Use of Profane and Inappropriate Language

Charge three alleges that respondent repeatedly used profane and inappropriate language directed at pupils, parents and district employees. As pointed out by petitioner, Esther Boone, school secretary, gave credible testimony regarding the profane statement made by Pollard on June 15, 1989. Holmes requested that Boone take the register book to Pollard's classroom and ask that she complete pages six and seven. Students were in class when Boone approached Pollard and advised Pollard of Holmes' request. Pollard refused to complete the register. As Boone was walking toward the classroom door to exit, she heard Pollard utter the word "bitch." Boone felt that Pollard was referring to Holmes and not herself. Boone reported this incident to Holmes who asked her to write a memo (P-9). Fulmore also testified that he was advised about Pollard's "bitch" remark on June 15, 1989, by Holmes and Boone. Boone even hand delivered to Pollard a copy of the memo.

E.V., a pupil at school No. 3, testified that Pollard made a derogatory comment to pupil A.R. about her appearance. In October 1993, Pollard gave A.R. permission to use the bathroom and said, "While you use the bathroom, you can lose at least five pounds." This was a demeaning and personal attack upon A.R. Pollard also used inappropriate language directed at A.R., such as "shut the f---- up."

Pollard called pupil S.A. a "fat faggot" on two separate occasions. S.H., a pupil who had a visual disability, was called a "blind something" by Pollard. P.A. was told to "pee" on himself by Pollard.

In addition, there was much testimony that Pollard spoke about the students' parents in a disrespectful manner. While the specific words used are unclear, apparently Pollard blamed the parents to some extent for the misbehavior of the children and indicated something about the parents treating the students as "garbage" or being treated by the students as "garbage."

In sum, the testimony adduced at the hearing was credible and worthy of belief and supported charge three ¶5 and ¶5a.

In regard to charge three ¶5b, I FIND:

1. On February 25, 1994 and March 30, 1994, respondent called pupil S.A. a "fat faggot."
2. During the period January through March 1994 respondent called pupil S.H. "blind."
4. Respondent called pupil A.R., a "bitch."
5. Respondent stated to pupil A.R., "You need to lose some weight." The respondent also said, "f--- you" to A.R.

In regard to charge three ¶ 5b3, Vice-principal Vitone testified that T.McK. came to the office very upset and informed her that Pollard told her to "get her ass out of the room" and that she had a conference with T.McK.'s parent. This testimony, clearly hearsay, was not supported by any legally competent evidence. That being so, pursuant to the residuum rule, there can be no finding of fact made in regard to this charge. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b). Charge three, ¶ 5b3 is therefore dismissed.

Charges three, ¶ 5b6, calling J.A. a "dumb ass" when the pupil would not stop talking and charge three, ¶ 5b7, referring to pupils parents as "bitches" and other derogatory names has not been substantiated by the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing and are also dismissed.

Charge four: Insubordination

Without getting into the specifics as to what occurred when Pollard was assigned to East Side High School as a teacher during the 1982-83 year, it was clear from the testimony and evidence that over the years Pollard encountered a number of difficulties with her superiors. Of import, Pollard was transferred to school No. 28 as a BSI. Mary Holmes was the principal and Joseph S. Fulmore the vice-principal in the 1988-89 school year. The problems began when Holmes transferred Pollard to the position of first grade teacher. Apparently, this transfer was made because the first grade teacher, Pipkin, had certain health problems. Up to this point, Holmes considered Pollard a good teacher with years of experience as a BSI. Assistant Superintendent Durgett approved Pollard as the new first grade teacher and Holmes notified Pollard a day in advance of the transfer of this change in assignment and made preparation for Pollard to receive the plan book, record book and the yellow cards. Pollard received a notice from Dr. Frank Napier dated December 7, 1988, stating that the transfer was effective December 8, 1988 (J-1). Pollard vehemently protested this transfer and filed a grievance, which was later denied (R-3).

The testimony adduced at the hearing indicated that Pollard's conduct was uncooperative, defiant and unprofessional. In regard to charge four ¶ 8, on December 19, 1988, Holmes wrote to superintendent Dr. Napier (P-1) to report that Pollard refused to teach during an observation and left her class unattended. On the day Holmes entered Pollard's class to conduct an informal observation, she took a seat in the rear of the room, and Pollard folded her arms and stopped teaching. Holmes left the classroom in disbelief and went to get Fulmore. When Fulmore and Holmes returned, Pollard still refused to teach. The administrators could not understand Pollard's conduct under the circumstances.

The testimony indicated that Pollard's conduct continued in this matter through the school year. On January 17, 1989, Dr. Napier reprimanded Pollard for "lack of performance and lack of cooperation" (P-6). Pollard was given ninety days to improve her conduct. Unfortunately, she did not. She refused to attend conferences with her supervisor to discuss concerns regarding her performance, particularly classroom observations.

As to charge four ¶ 6, Pollard refused to complete her class attendance forms, pages six and seven of the register. She ignored numerous requests, verbal and in writing to complete the register. On June 13, 1989, Holmes wrote to Dr. Napier to report her defiance (P-8). Holmes even withheld Pollard's check to get cooperation, but Pollard threatened her. On June 15, 1989, Holmes asked secretary Boone to go to Pollard's classroom to request that Pollard complete the register. Pollard again refused to cooperate. Holmes testified that Pollard never completed the attendance part of the register. Also, Pollard refused to submit student improvement plans (ISIPs) to Vice-Principal Fulmore.

As stated by petitioner, Pollard's conduct was of serious concern to her supervisors during the 1993-94 school year. From September to December 1993, Pollard was assigned to school No. 3, and Grisell Hernandez was the principal. In September 1993, Pollard was assigned to the seventh grade to teach language arts. From September to December 1993, Hernandez had many conferences with Pollard concerning the proper procedure for handling student discipline problems and in regard to locking students out of the class. On September 27, 1993, Hernandez reprimanded Pollard for bringing her entire class downstairs to use the phone to call their parents; Pollard disturbed several classes. She failed to use the conduct report procedure as outlined in the teacher's handbook.

In support of charge four ¶ 10, Principal Hernandez testified that she became aware that some of Pollard's students were wandering the halls. M.R. testified that Pollard frequently locked students out of class when they went to the bathroom and then attempted to return to class. M.R. was locked out by Pollard at least four times. E.V. and S.R. confirmed that Pollard "locked the door on them." Principal Hernandez asked Pollard to stop locking the classroom door. Pollard locked the door from the outside so that the students could not gain entry into the class. Pollard did not issue a conduct report nor did she follow the procedure for using passes and sign out books for going to the lavatory. On one occasion, Hernandez went to Pollard's class and found the door locked. After knocking, Pollard opened the door and Hernandez admonished her for locking the door, which was illegal. Pollard apparently continued to lock out students, and students continued to report her. On another occasion, Hernandez found Pollard unlocking the door when she came up to the classroom; Hernandez had been advised by a student that the door was locked.

As to charge four ¶ 13, Principal Hernandez credibly testified that Pollard did not turn in her grades for social studies which were due. When Pollard left school No. 3, she took her plan book, attendance book and grade books with her. She did not comply with Hernandez' request to submit plans and grades for social studies. This caused quite an upheaval because Hernandez and her staff had to determine the grades. The students had to bring in their prior report cards and, in addition, they had to be retested in order to receive a grade.

Hernandez indicated that the situation with Pollard did not improve despite the many efforts of parents and herself. The pupil and parental complaints continued.

As a result, Pollard was transferred to school No. 2 in January 1994. She replaced long-term substitute, Mr. Carol, as the new seventh grade teacher. Her new supervisors were Principal Lynn Liptak and Vice-principal Catherine Vitone.

Vice-principal Vitone testified as to the February 25, 1994 incident involving S.A. and that she reported it to Principal Liptak. Vitone gave convincing testimony that S.A., a pupil in Pollard's class, came to her office "upset with tears in his eyes." S.A. explained that his class had just returned from lunch when Pollard called him a "fat faggot." Vitone asked S.A. to accompany her to Pollard's class to speak with Pollard. Vitone asked Pollard to step out into the hall with S.A. and questioned Pollard about calling S.A. a "fat faggot." Pollard admitted she made the remark. Pollard complained that S.A. was disrespectful to her by calling her "bald and fat lips." S.A. admitted he made the disrespectful remark about Pollard, and Vitone asked him to return to her office. S.A. was suspended for misconduct and Vitone admonished Pollard not to use objectionable language towards her students.

On February 25, 1994, Pollard was called to the principal's office and issued a written reprimand (P-24) for calling S.A. a "fat faggot." As to charge four ¶ 7, Liptak testified that the reprimand was issued to warn Pollard that name calling of students would not be tolerated and there would be serious consequences if repeated.

Despite receiving a written reprimand at the conference with Principal Liptak, and an admonishment from Vice-principal Vitone, Pollard called S.A. a "fat fag" on March 30, 1994. Several pupils, including P.A. and S.H. heard Pollard make this remark.

There was lengthy testimony regarding the classroom observations of Pollard and that these indicated certain deficiencies in classroom management. Principal Liptak conducted a classroom observation on March 9, 1994 (P-38) and noted that the "lesson lacked a clear objective and focus." Vice-principal Vitone conducted two observations; March 16, 1994 and March 18, 1994 (P-34 and P-35). In the written observations, Vitone voiced her concerns; specifically, the students were not receiving quality instruction, and there was insufficient progress in the social studies curriculum. Vitone requested to meet with Pollard to discuss her two classroom observations. Although she asked Pollard on March 21, 1994 and March 24, 1994 to meet with her, Pollard refused to meet and sign the observations.

Teaching social studies was Pollard's major assignment at school No. 2, and in light of the teaching deficiencies, Vitone requested that Dr. Douglas Bolton, district supervisor of social studies assist Pollard. Pollard was not receptive to meeting with Dr. Bolton. Vitone gave convincing testimony that she and Dr. Bolton went to Pollard's classroom, that Dr. Bolton was introduced to Pollard and that he explained the purpose of his visit. Vitone had arranged this preliminary meeting with Dr. Bolton during Pollard's preparation period. As stated by petitioner, what followed was negative and unprofessional conduct exhibited by Pollard. Pollard was given permission to make a telephone call before entering the meeting. She then came to Vitone's office and proceeded to "take control" of the meeting (P-30). She refused Dr. Bolton's and Vitone's help and exited the meeting. Although Vitone attempted to reschedule the meeting with Pollard and Dr. Bolton, her efforts were to no avail and the meeting was not held.

Several witnesses testified in support of charge four ¶ 9. On February 25, 1994, Pollard failed to report that S.A. left the classroom. Principal Liptak reprimanded Pollard on March 25, 1994, for not reporting that pupil M.A. left the class. M.A. stated that Pollard told her to get out of the classroom. Similarly, on another day, T.McK. came to the office and reported that Pollard told her to "get her ass out of the room." Pollard again failed to report that T.McK. left the classroom.

In addition, and as noted by petitioner on March 21, 1994, Principals Liptak and Hernandez completed a joint year-end evaluation of Pollard. Pollard refused to sign the evaluation.

I FIND based on the testimony and evidence adduced at the hearing, as set forth in the testimony, and as outlined above, that charges four ¶ ¶ 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 13 were proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence. As to ¶ 12, continuing to do homework assignments in class despite Principal Liptak's directive, the evidence did not support this allegation and this specific charge is dismissed.

DISCUSSION

Unfitness to remain a teacher is best demonstrated by a series of incidents but might be shown by a single incident if sufficiently flagrant. Redcay v. State Board of Education, 130 N.J.L. 369, 371 (Sup. Ct. 1943), affd, 131 N.J.L. 326, 327 (E. & A. 1944), In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967). Based on the testimony and evidence in this matter, there are certainly enough incidents to sustain a dismissal of the respondent since the occurrence of those incidents has been proven by a preponderance of the evidence. In fact, the single allegation that respondent placed several pupils in a closet as punishment is sufficiently flagrant to warrant dismissal.

Corporal Punishment

As stated above, Charge one, ¶¶3, 3a, 3b and 3e, were proven by a preponderance of the believable evidence. These substantiated charges constitute a violation of the prohibition against corporal punishment.

The prohibition against corporal punishment is codified at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 which provides:

No person employed or engaged in a school or educational institution, whether public or private, shall inflict or cause to be inflicted corporal punishment upon a pupil attending such school or institution; but any such person may, within the scope of his employment, use and apply such amounts of force as is reasonable and necessary:

(1) to quell a disturbance, threatening physical injury to others;

(2) to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of a pupil;

(3) for the purpose of self-defense; and

(4) for the protection of persons or property;

and such acts, or any of them, shall not be construed to constitute corporal punishment within the meaning and intentment of this section.

The purpose of this legislation has been articulated by the Commissioner of Education in a number of cases.

While the Commissioner understands the exasperations and frustrations that often accompany the teacher's functions, he cannot condone resort to force and fear as appropriate procedures in dealing with pupils even those whose recalcitrance appears to be open defiance. The Commissioner finds in the century-old statute prohibiting corporal punishment (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1) an underlying philosophy that an individual has a right not only to freedom from bodily harm but also to freedom from offensive bodily touching even though there be no actual physical harm.

Moreover, the Commissioner has emphasized that such a philosophy with its prohibition of the use of corporal punishment or physical enforcement does not leave a teacher helpless to control his pupils. Competent teachers never find it necessary to resort to physical force or violence to maintain discipline or compel obedience. If all other means fail, there is always a resort to removal from the classroom or school through suspension or expulsion. The Commissioner cannot find any justification for, nor can he condone the use of physical force by a teacher to maintain discipline or to punish infractions. Nor can the Commissioner find validity in any defense of the use of force or violence on the ground that "it was one of those things that just happened." While teachers are sensitive to the same emotional stresses as all other persons, their particular relationship to children imposes upon them a special responsibility for exemplary restraint and mature self-control.

The exemplary restraint and mature self-control expected of teachers has been specifically discussed by the Commissioner. Members of the teaching profession serve a very important role, they are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment.Those who teach do so by choice, and in this respect the teaching profession is more than a simple job; it is a calling.

As discussed above, petitioner has provided testimony and evidence supporting Charge One: ¶ 3.a., placing several students in a closet as punishment, ¶ 3.b., grabbing and scratching S.A.'s left hand, and ¶ 3.e., grabbing and shaking Y.A. as punishment for talking. In each instance, respondent allegedly resorted to physical force or violence to maintain discipline or punish infractions and failed to exhibit any degree of self-restraint or self-control. Such conduct clearly violates the prohibition against corporal punishment. Moreover, the conduct of placing students in a closet is particularly offensive and, in fact, is sufficiently flagrant to constitute that "single incident" which warrants the disciplinary action of removal.²

Use of Profane and Inappropriate Language

As discussed above, the testimony and evidence has substantiated all charges of this count except for Charge three, ¶ 5.b.6., respondent calling J.A. a "dumb ass" when the pupil would not stop talking, and ¶ 5.b.7., respondent referring to pupils' parents as "bitches" and other derogatory names. The remaining allegations ¶¶ 5, 5a, 5b1, 5b2, 5b3, 5b4, 5b5, all of which occurred in the classroom and in the presence of students, were substantiated either in whole or in part, as discussed above.

The Commissioner has determined that when a teacher uses profanity to a pupil which was heard by other pupils in the classroom, such action cannot be condoned. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Juanita Zielenski, 1977 S.L.D. 786, 793. Emphasizing the important role of teachers, the Commissioner stated:

Teachers are public employees who hold positions demanding public trust, and in such positions they teach, inform, and mold habits and attitudes, and influence the opinions of their pupils. Pupils learn, therefore, not only ² Important factors to be considered when determining a just and reasonable disciplinary action are whether the acts were premeditated, cruel or vicious or done with intent to punish or to inflict corporal punishment and whether the student was injured. In re Tyler, 13 N.J.A.R. 297, 318 (1988).

what they are taught by the teacher, but what they see, hear, experience, and learn about the teacher. When a teacher  violates the public trust placed in him, he must expect dismissal or other severe penalty as set by the Commissioner.*"

[Id. at 793-794 (citing In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ernest Tordo, 1974 S.L.D. 97).]

The one incident of profanity in Zielenski was found to constitute gross misconduct sufficient to substantiate the charge of conduct unbecoming a teacher. Id. at 794. That determination coupled with findings of inefficiency warranted the teacher's forfeiture of her rights to tenure in the school district. Ibid.

Removal was deemed too harsh a penalty in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Earmond DeMarco, 1980 S.L.D. 204, where the teacher used profane and vulgar terms to threaten bodily harm to a pupil during an off-campus ski trip. The Commissioner distinguished the situation in Zielenski from DeMarco on several factors. The removal in Zielenski was predicated upon several instances of inefficiency as well as the profanity, the profanity occurred in a classroom where a teacher should have better control as opposed to the less structured circumstances of a ski trip, and the children were younger, 9 and 10, than those under DeMarco's control who were 14 and 15. DeMarco's conduct was found inexcusable, nonetheless, and he was denied any salary adjustments or increments to which he might have been entitled during the course of his suspension.

In the present matter, the alleged incidents of profanity occurred in the classroom, were directed at students in five of the incidents and at a staff member in one incident, and were spoken in the presence of students each time. Under either Zielenski or DeMarco, Pollard's use of profane language would constitute conduct unbecoming a teacher. Although conceivably standing alone such allegations might not warrant removal, in combination with the allegations of corporal punishment they furnish just cause for removal.

Insubordination

The petitioner has proven seven of the eight charges of insubordination. The evidence does not support the allegation that respondent continued to do homework assignments in class despite Principal Liptak's directive that she stop such work. The remaining charges include intentional failure to follow school procedures, intentional disregard of directives to cease specific conduct towards students, and referring to the school principal as a "bitch" in the presence of students and another staff member.

Insubordination is a form of unfitness generally evidenced by willful disobedience of a substantive nature. Bd. of Educ. of the Boro. of Edgewater v. Scarpignato, 1983 S.L.D. 311, 317, aff'd. St. Bd. 1983 S.L.D. 338. It embraces conduct which hinders management's efforts to further legitimate educational goals. Ibid.

The court has also expressed concerns about the efficient operation of schools to which the Commissioner has agreed and relied upon. In Pietrunti v. Bd. of Ed. of Brick Twp., 128 N.J. Super. 149 (App. Div. 1974), the court stated a teacher is expected to exhibit loyalty to the district in which he or she is employed and to cooperate with the administration in seeking the education goal ... It is the individuality each teacher brings to the educational scheme that contributes to educational success; that individuality however must be sublimated to the educational goal. A teacher is expected to show a reasonable respect for the authority of his or her employer and to maintain a civility commensurate with his or her professional status.

[Id. at 165, see also Hunterdon County Schl. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. McCormick, 1 N.J.A.R. 231, 238 (1980).]

The charges of insubordination against respondent are substantial and sufficient to sustain her removal. The conduct described is both brazen and bizarre. Clearly, in conjunction with the foregoing charges of corporal punishment and the use of profane language, they justify the termination of her tenure in the school district.

Unbecoming Conduct

As stated above, all of the substantiated charges, constitute conduct unbecoming a teacher.

CONCLUSION

In sum, I CONCLUDE that the charges in the instant matter which have been sustained by a preponderance of the credible evidence are serious and substantial.

While I believe that considered alone the charges of corporal punishment, conduct unbecoming a teacher, insubordination, and use of profanity would justify dismissal, when the charges and supporting evidence are considered together, it is clear that dismissal is the only appropriate penalty. Respondent's conduct and attitude, unbecoming and unprofessional, has demonstrated her unfitness to continue teaching in petitioner's school district. It is therefore ORDERED that respondent be dismissed as a tenured employee of petitioner.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :
HEARING OF NORMA POLLARD, :
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, PASSAIC : DECISION COUNTY. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties. It is herein noted that on Friday, May 26, 1995, respondent faxed a request for an unspecified amount of additional time to file exceptions in this matter which were due on May 30. Respondent's request stated "[t]he decision, a 64 page document, was prepared after an extension was granted to the judge. Fairness requires that counsel be granted time to review and address a complex matter." It is further noted that the Board, by letter filed on May 30, 1995, objected to an extension of time for exceptions being granted in this matter. By letter dated May 30, 1995, which was faxed to the parties, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes denied respondent's request stating that N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8 requires good cause be shown prior to the issuing of an extension order and no such demonstration had been proffered in this matter.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, which included transcripts of the six days of hearings conducted at the OAL, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge that the Board has proven, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, charges of Corporal Punishment, Unbecoming Conduct, Use of Profane and Inappropriate Language and Insubordination against respondent. The Commissioner finds and determines that the record clearly establishes respondent's unfitness for teaching and that the only appropriate penalty in this matter is respondent's dismissal from her tenured teaching position.

Accordingly, for the reasons well expressed therein, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of OAL. Respondent is hereby terminated from her tenured teaching position in the State-operated School District of the City of Paterson as of the date of this decision. Additionally, a copy of this decision shall be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate as it deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION

BOROUGH OF MOUNTAIN LAKES, :

MORRIS COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent alleged the Board failed to implement its own policies regarding gifted and talented students and co-curricular activities.

ALJ concluded that the Board did not violate either the governing law or its own policy statements. No law prescribes the substantive content of a gifted and talented program or imposes any particular regimen on a local school district. ALJ found that petitioner did not demonstrate any legal basis for interfering with district operations. ALJ ordered relief requested by petitioner denied.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own, concurring with ALJ's conclusion that Board had not violated its own policies with respect to providing programs for gifted and talented students and offering co-curricular activities and noting that he cannot ascertain merits of petitioner's claims that rely on proffered testimony in the absence of hearing transcripts.

BEFORE KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of the Case

This is a suit brought by a parent who accuses a local school board of failing to implement its own policies regarding gifted-and-talented students and co-curricular activities. Basically, petitioner makes four complaints: (1) that the school district is violating its own policy by not using multiple measures to identify gifted-and-talented children at every grade level; (2) that the district does not provide a sufficiently "differentiated" program to meet the needs of gifted-and-talented children; (3) that the parents are not consulted about the purpose and content of the gifted-and-talented program; and (4) that the district does not offer an adequate variety of co-curricular activities in the middle grades. Respondent Mountain Lakes Board of Education ("Mountain Lakes") not only denies the allegations, but also asserts that its program fully complies with all applicable statutes and regulations. For the reasons which follow, petitioner's claims are without merit.

Procedural History

On April 22, 1994, petitioner Fredric Kanter filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner"). Mountain Lakes filed its answer on May 26, 1994. Subsequently, on June 10, 1994, the Commissioner forwarded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case. The OAL held hearings on March 29 and 30, 1995.

Findings of Fact

I FIND the following facts:

Fredric Kantor, a local businessman and the father of three children, resides in the Borough of Mountain Lakes, where he has long been active in civic affairs. He serves on the board of directors of a nonprofit daycare center, does volunteer work at the grade-school library, and regularly attends board of education meetings. Two of his children currently attend Mountain Lakes public schools. Lars, age eleven, is in fifth grade at Wildwood Elementary School. Zack, age nine, is in third grade at the same school. His third child, Max, age fourteen, is now enrolled in eighth grade at a nearby private school, but previously attended the public school system from kindergarten through sixth grade.¹

Both board policies in question were adopted in October 1990. Policy No. 2464, entitled "Gifted And Talented Pupils," sets forth the district's general procedures for identifying gifted-and-talented children and for developing educational programs "which encourage and challenge them in the specific areas of their abilities." Policy No. 2430, entitled "Co-Curricular Activities," outlines the district's philosophy regarding activities "related to the curriculum" and "conducted wholly or partly outside the regular school day."

At the outset, it is helpful to clarify the nature of Mr. Kanter's objections. Since all three of his sons have participated in Mountain Lakes' gifted-and-talented program, he is not claiming that his children have been wrongfully denied benefits for which they are eligible. Nor is he challenging the selection criteria used by the district to identify children who might benefit from services. Instead, his focus seems to be that the district does not test at an earlier age or pay sufficient attention to creative abilities. In this context, he emphasizes that Policy 2464 obligates the superintendent of schools to "develop procedures, using multiple measures, for the identification of gifted and talented pupils at every grade level."

Unrefuted proofs demonstrate that Mountain Lakes fully satisfies its own standards for assessment of gifted-and-talented children. Bonnie Cytron, the coordinator of the district's gifted-and-talented program, is recognized by Mr. Kanter to be "a talented, professional and responsible educator." Ms. Cytron explained the district's assessment procedures, which have been incorporated into a document. Identification of giftedness is not based on cognitive ability alone, but on a composite of intelligence, creativity and task commitment. Evaluative data include scores on standardized test instruments, teacher observations, and "self-selection" by students who ask for greater challenges. Testing begins in the first and second grades, when the Stanford Achievement Tests are administered. Second and third grade teachers fill out the Renzulli-Hartman Rating Scales, which measure a child's motivation and leadership skills. By third grade, students also take the Torrence Test, designed to provide an objective measure of creativity, and the Otis-Lennon, a group-administered intelligence test. Although actual selection is deferred until the end of third grade, the district seeks to provide "opportunities to meet the needs of all students demonstrating exceptional talents and abilities, regardless of grade." Significantly, petitioner presented no expert opinion that it would be possible, let alone desirable, to start formal testing in kindergarten or to begin drawing definitive conclusions before third grade. Mr. Kanter is understandably proud of the accomplishments of his children. Reportedly, Max has perfect pitch and plays many different instruments. Lars is said to exhibit unusual artistic talent. However, the record does not support the inference that Mountain Lakes neglects abilities in the creative arts. As noted, creativity is one of the qualities considered for admission into the gifted and talented program. If anything, Max's success in music is a natural progression of the clarinet lessons he received in the fourth grade at Mountain Lakes.

During his direct testimony, Mr. Kanter acknowledged that Max was identified as gifted in fourth grade. While he still attended school in the district, Max participated in an enrichment program sponsored by the Gifted and Talented Consortium, a group of school districts in northern New Jersey which pool their resources. Membership in the Consortium enables gifted-and-talented students from Mountain Lakes to meet with their peers from other districts. Max also attended supplemental science classes for gifted children taught by a high school chemistry teacher.

Similarly, Lars was invited into the gifted-and-talented program soon after he entered the fourth grade. As a result, he was afforded an opportunity "to master curriculum in depth and . . . investigate new areas beyond the scope of [the regular] curriculum." In December 1993, Lars was selected to participate in the Science-By-

Mail program produced by the Museum of Science in Boston. Limited to students who are gifted-and-talented, this activity allows specially-selected youngsters to interact with a professional scientist and receive guidance in conducting experiments. For two years, Lars took part in the district's Mentorship Program, "designed to extend talented students in the area of their specific strength." A mentor, either a teacher or a high-school honors student, works with a small group of advanced students in a given subject area. In Lars' case, the mentorship activity was directed toward nurturing his special abilities in mathematics. Last year, Lars had the opportunity to become a contestant in a math contest conducted by the New Jersey League. Mr. Kanter was pleased with this opportunity, but discounted its importance because the contest was open to "all fourth graders." Like his brothers before him, Zack was recently identified as gifted-and-talented and invited to join the Mentorship Program in mathematics.

In addition to the enrichment activities offered to the Kanter children, Ms. Cytron enumerated a wide range of other options available to grade-school children who demonstrate a particular proficiency or interest. Such opportunities include forensic competitions, math marathons, interpretive readings, spelling bees, art workshops and the brain bowl. In-residency programs, funded by contributions from parent groups, bring novelists, playwrights, and dramatists into the children's classroom. Opportunities exist for independent study projects. For example, one student interested in health care was paired with a practicing pediatrician.

Although Mr. Kanter appreciates the value of such activities, he regards them as "just plain good-old teaching." Seizing on the wording of Policy 2464 that gifted-and-talented pupils "require differentiated educational programs and services beyond those normally provided by the regular school program," he insists that the offerings for such children must be "programmatically separate" from what other children receive. But Mr. Kanter's narrow analysis ignores later language in Policy 2464 that "the program offered an exceptional pupil may be infused into the pupil's regular instructional program." (Emphasis added.) Mountain Lakes' approach avoids pull-out programs, which have a tendency to stigmatize the brighter students and deprive them of contact with the rest of their social group. Indeed, Mountain Lakes deserves to be commended, rather than criticized, for not isolating its better students and seeking to blend enrichment activities into the mainstream curriculum. At most, the evidence merely shows that Mr. Kanter prefers a different pedagogical method than do the educators chosen by the school board to manage the Mountain Lakes school system.

Mr. Kanter's complaint about not being consulted adequately about his children's program must also fail for lack of proof. According to his own testimony, the building principal, classroom teacher and enrichment coordinator met personally with him to discuss the district's gifted-and-talented program as it relates to his children.. Ms. Cytron periodically sends letters to parents describing particular enrichment activities and encouraging them to call her if they have any questions. Moreover, Mr. Kanter knows Ms. Cytron personally from other dealings and frequently meets with her, "both formally and informally." If he wanted more information or had any concerns, he had ample opportunity to get his questions answered.

With respect to co-curricular activities, Mr. Kanter relies on the declaration in Policy 2430 that the district's goals and objectives are best achieved "by a diversity of learning experiences." Originally, Mr. Kanter had alleged that "[t]he only co-curricular offering for grades 6-7 is Drama." At the hearing, however, he conceded that this contention is clearly erroneous and that Mountain Lakes offers several other co-curricular activities in middle school, including a school newspaper, yearbook, band, and Project Adventure. Mr. Kanter also alluded to a series of minicourses, covering such diverse topics as cookie bake, chess club, model rocketry, student government and word games. It became readily apparent as his testimony unfolded that Mr. Kanter feels Mountain Lakes spends too much money on sports and not enough on nonathletic pursuits.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that Mountain Lakes has not violated either the governing law or its own policy statements.

No law prescribes the substantive content of a gifted-and-talented program or imposes any particular regimen on a local school district. Proposed legislation which might require local districts to establish homogeneous grouping and pull-out classes for academically accelerated and gifted children has not yet been enacted. See, e.g., Assembly Bill No. 1401 (1994). Pursuant to the Public School Education Act of 1975, a major element of a thorough and efficient education is "a breadth of offerings designed to develop the individual needs and abilities of pupils." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-5(d). Prior state regulations mandated that each school district must provide "educational opportunities" for exceptionally gifted and talented pupils. Use of the word "opportunities" was carefully chosen to convey the meaning that "the activities offered to the exceptionally gifted and talented [should] be extensions of ongoing programs." Humcke v. Tinton Falls Bd. of Educ., 1981 S.L.D. 165 (Comm'r Dec. 12, 1980).. Quoting from an internal departmental memorandum, the Commissioner noted approvingly that,

. . . While some schools may wish to provide the gifted and talented with a program, it would be unrealistic to expect schools to offer separate programs for each and every exceptionally gifted and talented pupil. However, it is realistic to expect schools to provide opportunities for these pupils.

Humcke, at 170.

Although current guidelines for state monitoring require that a local district "make provisions for identifying pupils with gifted and talented abilities and for providing them with an educational program and services," N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.5(a)(4), there is no reason to suppose that this rule was intended to impose greater substantive burdens on local districts. Rather, the intent was to recodify existing authority that the state standards for gifted and talented programs “are guidelines and not, underscored, a monitoring checklist.” Humcke, at 170. In any event, no evidence has been adduced that Mountain Lakes ever failed the monitoring system for perceived inadequacies in its gifted-and-talented program.

Traditionally, schools have provided opportunity for a wide variety of extra-classroom activities in which pupils are encouraged to explore and pursue individual interests. Smith v. Paramus Bd. of Educ., 1968 S.L.D. 62, 65 (Comm’r March 28). Such activities, while certainly part of the total school curriculum, are not part of the classroom teaching program. Willett v. Colts Neck Bd. of Educ., 1966 S.L.D. 202, 206 (Comm’r Dec. 2, 1966). Again, the law does not attempt to dictate the scope and content of co-curricular offerings. Appropriately, the monitoring procedures are silent regarding this subject.

For purposes of this proceeding, it will be assumed that a local board of education is bound by its own policy statements, provided that such policies are consistent with the controlling statutes and regulations. Although a board of education formulates general policy objectives for governance of the district, ultimate responsibility for carrying out the details belongs to the professional staff. Acting within the constraints of board policy, the Mountain Lakes school administration has implemented procedures to identify gifted-and-talented children at every grade level, to provide meaningful opportunity for developing their potential, to consult with parents about available opportunities, and to offer all children in the district a choice of learning experiences beyond the regular classroom. While Mr. Kanter’s concern for improving the quality of education in his community is laudable, he simply has not demonstrated any legal basis for interfering with district operations.

Order

It is ORDERED that the relief requested by petitioner is denied.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter.  BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION BOROUGH OF MOUNTAIN LAKES, :
 MORRIS COUNTY, :
 RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Exceptions were timely filed by petitioner in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Initially, petitioner excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) exclusion of two documents from evidence which are alleged to be respondent's regulations concerning gifted and talented pupils and co-curricular activities. Petitioner argues that, inasmuch as these exhibits (P-1 and P-2) were provided by respondent in its answers to interrogatories, they constitute admissions by a party and are admissible as evidence. (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 2) Petitioner concludes, it was palpably erroneous for the ALJ to exclude them in this administrative proceeding where, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.1, the parties are not bound by the rules of evidence unless specifically provided by them. Had the regulations been admitted, the ALJ would have been compelled to conclude that the Respondent was not following its policies and procedures. (Id. at p. 3)

Petitioner next asserts that the ALJ erred in finding that respondent's program offered to gifted and talented students conforms with district policy. Here, petitioner argues that his testimony belied such a conclusion since he "*testified, without rebuke, that he had never been provided a written description of an infused program for his admittedly gifted and talented children" (Id. at p. 5) in spite of respondent's answers to interrogatories which indicate that all gifted programs are infused into the student's regular program. Petitioner further contends that the activities highlighted by the ALJ do not constitute "'differentiated' educational programs and services beyond those normally provided by the regular school program" as the district's policy requires. (Id. at p. 7)

Finally, petitioner avers that the ALJ erred in failing to find that respondent was violating its policy and procedures regarding co-curricular activities. Petitioner maintains that the testimony demonstrates the district does not annually assess its co-curricular activities, contrary to its own policy and procedures. (Id. at p. 9) Moreover, the activities which the ALJ highlights, petitioner maintains, do not constitute co-curricular activities within the meaning of the district's policy, but are, instead "*busy work designed to relieve teachers from the classroom." (Id. at p. 10)

Upon careful and independent review of the record, which, the Commissioner notes, did not include transcripts of the administrative hearing, the Commissioner finds petitioner's exceptions to be without merit, and concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that the Board has not violated its own policies with respect to providing programs for gifted and talented students, and offering co-curricular activities. Additionally, the Commissioner finds no cause to disturb the ALJ's evidentiary rulings in this matter, as he is cognizant of the ALJ's discretionary authority granted by N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.1. Finally, the Commissioner notes that, to the extent petitioner's challenge to the findings of the ALJ relies on proffered testimony, he cannot, in the absence of hearing transcripts, ascertain the merits of the claims. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 157, 158 (App. Div. 1987).

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is adopted for the reasons expressed therein, and relief requested by petitioner is denied.

Record Closed: May 11, 1995

Decided: May 17, 1995

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law from the Department of Education, on December 13, 1994, for a hearing, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -21 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

This matter arises from a petition brought by International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 269 ("petitioner") to the Commissioner of Education seeking consideration of a controversy which arose between petitioner and the Hopewell Valley Regional School District ("respondent") and Wagner-Hohns-Inglis regarding a May 20, 1994, public bid to replace boilers at the Tollgate Grammar School and to replace burners at the Timberland School.

The parties consented to and Wagner-Hohns-Inglis has been dismissed as a party in this matter by an Order of Dismissal issued by the undersigned on May 18, 1995.

The parties have agreed to settle this matter and have prepared the attached Stipulation of Settlement and of Dismissal ("Stipulation") indicating the terms of settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.
2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Agency Docket No. 334-7/94
OAL DOCKET NO. EDUOT 11972-94S

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT AND OF DISMISSAL

This matter having brought on by petition of IBEW Local 269, and the respondent, Wagner Hohns Inglis, Inc. having been dismissed as a party by consent, and counsel for petitioner and for the remaining respondent, the Hopewell Valley Regional School District, having pursued discovery and having exchanged views and agreed upon the substantive matters previously thought to be in dispute, it is, on this 20th day of March, 1995,

Stipulated and Agreed as follows:

1. This Stipulation of Settlement and of Dismissal is made and entered subject to the approval of same by the Administrative Law Judge and Commissioner of Education, as provided by law in such case. In the event such approval is not granted, the fact of this stipulation shall not be deemed to prejudice either party's ultimate position.

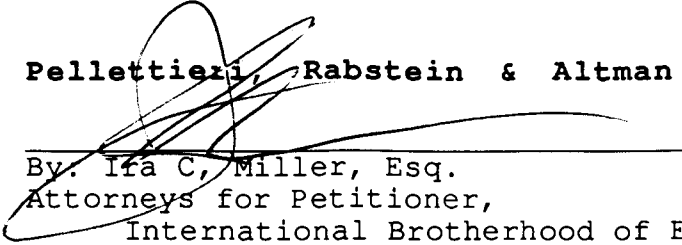

2. The parties agree that in circumstances where the provisions N.J.S.A.18A:18A-18 apply, petitioner shall have the right, with advance notice to the secretary of respondent board and with appointment made during normal business hours of respondent board, to inspect the specifications for and bids received and opened pursuant to such statute, including the identification made of subcontractors in any such bid submitted.

3. The parties agree that in circumstances where construction work to be bid pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:18A-4 is of a character involving only a single prime trade listed in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18, and where such single prime trade may subcontract or require the services of another listed trade, and where the estimated cost of the latter trade, including services and materials, is less than the threshold amount for which bids are required pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-3, then in such circumstances the pre-bid listing of subcontractors in said latter trade is not necessary. In such circumstances, respondent may proceed either by separate award to the second trade under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-3 or by single bid under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18. Respondent shall be entitled to rely upon the written estimate of its design professional in establishing the value of such second trade materials and services prior to bid. Petitioner shall have the right, with advance notice to the secretary of respondent board and with appointment made during normal business hours of respondent, to inspect such written estimate after bids, if any, are submitted and opened.

4. The parties agree that the petition seeking relief in the case of the Monarch Boiler Construction Co. contracts is now moot and shall be dismissed with prejudice, each party to bear its own costs.

For petitioner, D.K., pro se

For Respondent, Viola Lordi, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 13, 1995, by way of a Petition of Appeal and Motion for Emergent Relief filed by D.K., on behalf of her son, D.K., seeking an order permitting D.K. to participate in graduation ceremonies from Edison High School on June 15, 1995, and seeking a judgment stating that D.K.'s coursework is complete so that he is not required to attend summer school. On June 10, 1995, the Board of Education of the Township of Edison denied petitioner's appeal of the Board's decision that D.K. violated the Edison Township Board of Education Student Attendance Policy (hereinafter referred to as "Attendance Policy") by having excessive absences and, therefore, insufficient course credit to graduate or to participate in graduation ceremonies. This matter was filed with the Commissioner after the Board denied petitioner's appeal to it under the provisions of the Attendance Policy.

On June 13, 1995, oral argument was heard by telephone conference call by Gary Reece, Assistant Commissioner for the Office of Standards and Assessment, who was designated to hear and decide this matter, pursuant to the Commissioner's authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34. Upon consideration of arguments, the Assistant Commissioner found that petitioner had not met the standards for granting injunctive relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

Petitioner was advised of the decision telephonically on June 15, 1995. The Crowe standards required petitioner to show that D.K. would be irreparably harmed if not permitted to attend the graduation ceremony, that D.K. has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the claim, and that in balancing the interests of the parties, the harm to D.K. would be greater than the harm to the Board should the requested relief not be granted.

Petitioner asserts that the Board's action denying her appeal at the local level was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion because D.K. had a chronic illness note on file with the high school since the beginning of the school year excusing his absences. Relying on a statement in the Attendance Policy, petitioner argues that "Chronic Illness is an exception to the Attendance Policy." (Attendance Policy at p. 6) The Attendance Policy permits twelve absences by a student in one school year. The chronic illness exception to the Attendance Policy is valid when a doctor submits a note to the school district indicating that a "chronic medical condition" exists. The Board does not dispute that petitioner's chronic illness note was in place, nor does the Board contend that it was defective. Based on such note, petitioner argues that D.K.'s absences should not have been charged against D.K. to prevent him from graduating with his class.

In response, the Board argues that its policy on chronic illness requires the following in order for the exception to be operative and absences approved accordingly: “Once the doctor’s note is accepted and approved, absences will be excused only if a parent calls the attendance office on the day of the absence and specifies that the absence is due to the chronic condition.” (Attendance Policy at page 6, paragraph 2) The Board contends, and petitioner admits, that a parent did not call the attendance office on many days that D.K. was absent.

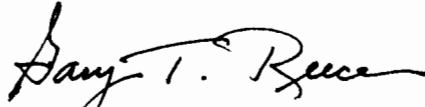

The Board also argues that petitioner’s claims that D.K.’s absences were due to D.K.’s chronic illness came too late in that the policy further states that, “Absences/tardies/early dismissals will not be excused if notification is received the day after. A call must be made the day of in order to be excused.” (Id. at paragraph 5) Additionally, the Board argues that petitioner had called on several occasions to inform the school when D.K. was absent due to his chronic illness and that those absences were excused. The Board further acknowledged that it did accept those doctor’s notes that were timely submitted as, “Exceptions for chronic illness become effective from the date the doctor’s note is received and approved.” (Id. at paragraph 6)

The Board asserts that it has properly applied its policy, that D.K. has been excessively absent, and that his parents were notified that he was in non-credit status by certified mail. It asserts that the consequences of violating the Attendance Policy are contained in the letter, as well as the district’s student handbook which was provided to petitioner prior to the commencement of the school year. Moreover, the Board asserts that petitioner signed a letter acknowledging that she read the handbook and agreed to be bound by its requirements.

A weighing of the arguments of the parties leads the Assistant Commissioner to conclude that petitioner has not demonstrated entitlement to injunctive relief. Accordingly, the Motion for Emergent Relief is denied and the matter is ordered transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

In response, the Board argues that J.M. chose to take the class and decided to remain in January, despite difficulties she was experiencing, and that she had received notice of her possible failure and was provided with additional assistance. Her parents were aware of the requirement that J.M. pass English in order to graduate as it was included in the district's student handbook which was provided to petitioner prior to the commencement of the school year. The Board argues that the principal, James Greczek, was only notified of petitioner's requests to transfer J.M. to another English class in the middle of the fourth marking period when it was too late in the year to make such a transfer.

A weighing of the arguments of the parties leads the Assistant Commissioner to conclude that petitioner has not demonstrated entitlement to injunctive relief as J.M. failed a required course and lacked sufficient credits to graduate. Accordingly, the Motion for Emergent Relief is denied and the matter is ordered transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings.

For Petitioner, A.S., pro se

For Respondent, Clark Convery, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 13, 1995, by way of a Petition of Appeal and Motion for Emergent Relief filed by A.S., on behalf of her minor daughter, D.S., seeking an order permitting D.S. to participate in graduation ceremonies from South Amboy's H.G. Hoffman High School on June 14, 1995. On June 9, 1995, the Superintendent of the District of South Amboy denied petitioner's appeal of the principal's decision that D.S. was ineligible to graduate because of her asserted failure to successfully complete 11th grade physical education, and, therefore, had insufficient course credit to graduate or to participate in graduation ceremonies. Petitioner is not contesting that D.S. has to make up her absences in summer school, but is appealing the superintendent's determination to prohibit D.S. from participating in the graduation ceremony.

This matter was filed with the Commissioner after the superintendent denied petitioner's appeal to it under the provisions set forth in the South Ambøy Board of Education Policy Manual (hereinafter referred to as "Attendance Policy").

On June 13, 1995, oral argument was heard by telephone conference call by Ellen Schechter, Assistant Commissioner for Academic Programs and Standards, who was designated to hear and decide this matter, pursuant to the Commissioner's authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34. Upon consideration of arguments, the Assistant Commissioner found that petitioner had not met the standards for granting injunctive relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

Petitioner was advised of the decision telephonically on June 15, 1995. The Crowe standards required petitioner to show that D.S. would be irreparably harmed if not permitted to attend the graduation ceremony, that D.S. has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the claim, and that in balancing the interests of the parties, the harm to D.S. would be greater than the harm to the Board of Education should the requested relief not be granted.

In assessing a likelihood of success on the merits, the applicable law controlling the physical education requirement was considered:

N.J.S.A. 18A:35-5 provides in full as follows:

Each board of education shall conduct as a part of the instruction in the public schools courses in health, safety and physical education, which courses shall be adapted to the ages and capabilities of the pupils in the several grades and departments. To promote the aims of these courses any additional requirements or rules as to medical inspection of school children may be imposed.

N.J.S.A. 18A:35-7 provides in full as follows:

Every pupil, except kindergarten pupils, attending the public schools, insofar as he is physically fit and capable of doing so, as determined by the medical inspector, shall take such courses, which shall be a part of the curriculum prescribed for the several grades, and the conduct and attainment of the pupils shall be marked as in other courses or subjects, and the standing of the pupil in connection therewith shall form a part of the requirements for promotion or graduation.

The Board requires its pupils to achieve a passing grade in physical education each year of school to meet graduation requirements.

Petitioner asserts that the Board's action denying her appeal at the local level was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion because D.S. failed physical education class due to a medical problem and should have been excused for her absences. The Attendance Policy permits absence due to illness as verified only by a doctor's note. Petitioner argues that D.S. has presented doctor's notes in her appeal but that the school will not accept them at this time. Based on such notes, petitioners argue that D.S.'s absences should not have been charged against D.S. to prevent her from graduating with her class. The superintendent contends, and petitioner admits, that a doctor's note was not received in school on many days that D.S. did not take gym class.¹ Petitioner states that D.S. attempted to make up classes during the year, but that the gym teacher's schedule could not accommodate D.S.'s schedule.

In response, the Board argues that D.S. had the opportunity to make up missed classes but could only do so based on the teacher's schedule to accommodate the student as it is done outside of the regular school day. The school policy specifically states that, "all classwork must be made up at the initiative of the students under the direction of the teacher.” (Attendance Policy at p. 4) The Board argues that it has an interest in enforcing its Attendance Policy. It asserts that it has properly applied its policy, that D.S. has been excessively absent, and that her parents were notified that she was in non-credit status by mail. It asserts that the consequences of violating the Attendance Policy are contained in the letter and in the district’s student handbook which was provided to petitioner prior to the commencement of the school year. Moreover, the Board asserts that petitioner signed a letter acknowledging that she read the handbook and agreed to be bound by its requirements.

A weighing of the arguments of the parties leads the Assistant Commissioner to conclude that petitioner has not demonstrated entitlement to injunctive relief.

Accordingly, the Motion for Emergent Relief is denied and the matter is ordered transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings.

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

This matter was opened in June 1995 on a request for emergent relief made to the Commissioner of Education. The Commissioner designated an assistant commissioner to hear the case on June 14, 1995. The request was denied after oral argument. The Commissioner's designee memorialized the decision on June 29, 1995 and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on July 6, 1995 for disposition as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14-1 through -13. The matter was assigned to me on September 8, 1995.

Upon review of the file, the matter appeared moot. On January 12, 1995, I wrote to the parties, stating:

This matter has been assigned to me. In reviewing the file, I find this was a request for emergent relief in connection with June 1995 graduation exercises. Inasmuch as the Commissioner denied the request, is there any issue remaining before me?

Please advise me of the status of this case by September 25, 1995.

Allowing three days for movement of the mails, and having received no response, I closed the record on September 28, 1995.

Having reviewed the papers, I FIND and CONCLUDE that this matter no longer contains a justiciable issue and, therefore, is MOOT.

Accordingly, the matter is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

B. Mr. Cozza's employment was terminated by the Board on August 2, 1994 as part of a reduction in force; and

C. Mr. Cozza subsequently filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education, OAL Dkt. No. EDUOR 10162-94N, contesting the legality of his termination by the Board; and

D. It is in the best interests of the parties to resolve this matter by mutual agreement, permanently and without further disruption to the school District;

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
 APPEAL OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION : OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MIDDLETOWN, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
 MONMOUTH COUNTY. : DECISION
 _____ :

SYNOPSIS

Board appealed $3,685,080 of the General Fund cap waiver rejected by voters.

Upon review of the record, Commissioner determined to order the increase of $3,016,080 in cap waiver monies, offset by reallocation of $435,500 from Other Employee Benefits for a total General Fund tax levy of $64,586,822 for the 1995-96 school year.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION : OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MIDDLETOWN, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
MONMOUTH COUNTY. : DECISION
_____ :

For Petitioner, Peter P. Kalac, Esq. (Kalac, Newman, Lavender & Campbell)

For Township, John T. Lane, Jr., Esq. (Dowd & Reilly)

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on May 26, 1995, through the filing of a Petition of Appeal, Motion for Emergent Relief¹ and a Position Statement by the Board of Education of the Township of Middletown (Board), seeking inclusion in its 1995-96 budget partial amounts included in its voter cap waiver request at the annual school election on April 18, 1995.

At that election, the voters rejected two separate public questions proposing a General Fund Tax Levy of $67,691,322 for the 1995-96 school year, including one question for $62,006,242 in the General Fund base budget and the other for a $5,685,080 cap waiver request. On April 20, 1995, following consultation with the Board as required by law, the Township adopted a resolution determining to certify a General Fund tax levy of $62,006,242 as sufficient to provide for a thorough and efficient system of education (T&E) in the district. Although the Township resolution proposed fourteen (14) specific line-item reductions, for a total reduction of $1,750,000, it also recommended increasing two line items in that same amount, resulting in no reduction in the amounts sought by the Board. The resolution essentially sought to reallocate certain amounts originally funded by the voter cap waiver into the base budget. The Township then resolved to support the Board's cap waiver appeal in the amount of $3,685,080.

The amounts sought in this appeal are as follows:

Tax Levy (Proposed by Board)		Tax Levy Certified by Township
General Fund	$62,006,242	General Fund	$62,006,242
Cap Waiver	5,685,080	Cap Waiver	- 0 -
Total	$67,691,322	Total	$62,006,242
 Amount of Reduction by Township		 Amount of Cap Waiver Request
General Fund	- 0 -		$3,685,080

On June 1, 1995, the Township submitted a letter and copy of the resolution in support of the Board's cap waiver appeal.

On June 15, 1995, the County Superintendent filed his affidavit and supporting documents attesting to the process of review and analysis that led to his conclusion, and that of the Department of Education's Cap Waiver Panel, that a $5,435,080 voter cap waiver should be conditionally certified as essential to the provision of T&E, and, further, attesting to the changed circumstances permitting the reallocation within the base budget proposed by the Township in its resolution and sought by the Board in the amount of $1,750,000. On June 21, 1995, the Board submitted the affidavit of Steven K. Robinson, Deputy Business Administrator and a Certified Public Accountant, in response to this affidavit.

analysis of the anticipated free balance reveals the possibility of reallocation of an additional $135,036 in surplus in excess of the 3 percent permissible pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-2A.11.

The Board, in response, while not denying the possible existence of the additional surplus, asserts that it is premature to estimate that such amounts will in fact be available and, further asserts that “[u]ntil such time as the Board has received its 1994-95 comprehensive annual financial report (due to be filed in October of 1995), the Board cannot anticipate the surplus would exist.” Affidavit of Steven K. Robinson at p. 3.³ In addition, the Board asserts that the additional funds should not be used for tax relief because “its 1996-97 budget must begin with the Board allocating $3,150,528 already utilized for tax relief in the 1995-96 budget. By adding $135,036 to this amount, the Commissioner of Education would further negatively impact the 1996-97 proposed budget.” Id.

In order to independently assess whether these amounts may be further appropriated, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes requested further information as to the district’s financial condition as of the close of business on June 23, 1995. This documentation was submitted by the Board on June 23, 1995.

Based on the above, and relying on the Board’s financial report as of June 23, 1995, the Commissioner determines that the additional $135,036 identified by the County Superintendent is not available to partially fund the cap waiver amounts specified in this decision, subject to verification through the Board’s 1994-95 annual year-end audit report.

³ The implication of the Robinson statement that the district’s financial reports cannot be relied upon prior to completion of the annual independent audit has no merit and bears upon the credibility of his affidavit. It is both the professional and statutory obligation of the board secretary and/or business administrator to provide current and accurate financial reports throughout the year on which the board, school management, the public and governmental agencies can rely. It should be noted that Robinson is a certified public accountant.

Based on analysis of the materials submitted on June 23, 1995, the district's unreserved, undesignated general fund balance of $2,214,507 is below the regulatory requirement of 3 percent and contains $1,583,178 which may be necessary to be expended if the Board decides to change health insurance carriers as it contemplates.

REALLOCATIONS

In its advertised budget the Board reflected $5,793,006, $7,683,625 and $7,750,000 for Other Employee Benefits (Account No. 11-000-290-290) for fiscal years 1993-94, 1994-95 and 1995-96, respectively. This amount for the most part is needed to fund the district's employee health benefits plan and to a lesser degree workers' compensation. The amount budgeted to 1995-96 shows a 28 percent increase over the actual audited amount expended during 1993-94. As such, both the County Superintendent and the director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, requested additional documentation and narrative explanation of the amount necessary for health benefits. The pertinent facts follow:

1. The Board in collaboration with the municipality agreed to reallocate $314,500 from this account as part of the $1,750,000 reallocation to reduce the cap waiver request which resulted in an adjusted appropriation in this account of $7,435,500. A reduction in staff and level premiums were cited as rationale.
2. The Board has reduced the 1994-95 appropriation of $7,683,625 by $545,502 between February 1, 1995, and June 23, 1995, and reallocated this amount to other areas of the budget for expenditure citing a lower than expected health claims experience for the year.

3. Actual expenditures for the 1994-95 year as reflected on the June 23, 1995, financial report were $6,806,573 which is $877,052 less than originally budgeted for 1994-95 and $628,927 less than the adjusted appropriation of $7,435,500 for 1995-96.
4. Quotes obtained from other health insurance carriers, and entered into the record, included one which guaranteed an annual cost of $6,501,083.

Based on the weight of the evidence entered in the record and the failure of the Board to provide a more definitive accounting of its health benefits needs and final choice of carriers, the Commissioner finds that another $435,500 can be conservatively reallocated from this account to fund items contained in the cap waiver.

Accordingly, the Commissioner directs the following:

Account	Description	Sustained	Restored
12-000-400-450	Construction Services	$669,000	$3,016,080
		_____	_____
Total Line-Item Determinations:		$669,000	$3,016,080
Tax Levy Certified by Township:			$62,006,242
Amount of Cap Waiver Ordered:			3,016,080
Amount of Restoration Funded by Reallocation			(435,500)
			$64,586,822

Accordingly, the Monmouth County Board of Taxation is directed to make the necessary adjustments as set forth above, subject to verification of surplus amounts through the year-end audit, to reflect a total of $64,586,822 to be raised in tax levy for General Fund purposes for the Middletown Township Board of Education for the 1995-96 school year.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, host sponsor of V.H.C., an exchange student from Mexico, sought permission to allow V.H.C. to take part in the graduation processional and ceremony to receive a certificate of attendance or recognition, although he was not graduating.

ALJ denied petitioner's request for relief. ALJ found that throughout the years, the Board enforced its policy without exception. Exchange students are included in the ceremony and they are afforded recognition from the podium, but they are denied graduation and a processional where the exchange student has not earned the same credits as the graduates. Board's motion to dismiss was granted.

Commissioner concurred with findings and conclusions of the ALJ. Petition was dismissed.

BEFORE JOSEPH LAVERY, ALJ:

Petitioner, Linda Barcalow, asks that V.H.C., an exchange student, be allowed to participate in the June 1995 graduation processional and ceremony, with cap and gown, and to receive a certificate of attendance or recognition, although he will not be graduating.

Respondent, Monmouth Regional High School District Board of Education, contests the appeal, citing its policy of not allowing students who do not graduate to march in cap and gown.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 28, 1995, the Commissioner of Education declared this dispute a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-9 and -10, by forwarding it the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as an emergent matter. At the hearing on May 3, 1995, on petitioner's motion for emergent relief, the parties agreed that rapid plenary hearing and decision better served adjudication of the issues. Consequently, the matter went forward to full hearing on May 18, 1995, and an oral decision issued. Today's initial decision memorializes that ruling.

ANALYSIS OF THE RECORD

Background:

Petitioner is the host sponsor of V.H.C., an exchange student from Mexico. She has full power of attorney to act in the place of his parents. Her charge has attended Monmouth Regional High School since September 1994, and he has been a participating member of the soccer, swimming and track teams.

In March 1995, petitioner asked the district superintendent, Patrick Colum, to allow V.H.C. to take part in the graduation processional. Petitioner did not ask that V.H.C. be graduated. The boy will be formally graduating from his own school in Mexico this summer. Moreover, in March 1995 V.C.H. had not taken the High School Proficiency Test (HSPT), and had completed only one of the requisite two American History courses. There is no dispute that his schedule during the one year of his exchange presence could not have accommodated both courses. V.H.C. has since taken the HSPT, and no one expects him not to pass.

The superintendent denied petitioner's request, grounding his decision on Board policy which prohibits such participation by non-graduating exchange students. However, the superintendent did encourage having V.H.C. present in normal dress at the ceremony, where there would be oral recognition of the boy as part of the proceedings. The District custom is for exchange students to take their seats on the stage, with, but apart from, the graduates.

Not satisfied with this response, petitioner accumulated signatures on a petition to the Board, asking that V.H.C. be allowed to march in cap and gown. When the Board would not overrule the superintendent's position, petitioner brought the instant appeal. She now seeks the following relief:

1. Participation of V.H.C. in the graduation processional, with cap and gown.
2. Award at the ceremony of a certificate of recognition or attendance.
3. Award of compensatory damages.
4. Award of incidental and consequential damages.
5. Counsel fees.
6. Any other relief deemed equitable.

Arguments of the Parties:

Petitioner's argument:

Pointing out that V.H.C. had actively participated in the life of the school, and had developed many close friendships with his classmates, petitioner asked that the Board's policy be changed. She observed that exchange students in two other school districts had joined in graduation processionals. Additionally, petitioner claimed, within the past four years, one American student drop-out from the district, with insufficient credits to graduate, had obtained permission to join in the march with graduates, though he would not have graduated (the student cited eventually chose not to take part, petitioner acknowledged). Although petitioner subpoenaed the former student for the hearing on May 18, he did not appear.

In her own testimony, petitioner contended that at the beginning of V.H.C.'s school year she had spoken with a guidance counselor, who obtained confirmation from her supervisor that V.H.C. would participate in all activities undertaken by other seniors. Petitioner conceded that the guidance counselor did not define "participate," and the counselor did not specifically mention graduation as one of the senior activities. V.H.C. gave the same testimony with respect to the guidance counselor's statements. In addition, he recalled that other teachers and students offered assurances that V.H.C. actually would take part in the graduation ceremony.

As a matter of law, petitioner argues that the Board has violated education law, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 through 10:5-42, and the federal Equal Educational Opportunities Act (EEOA), at 20 U.S.C.A. § 1701. Petitioner believes the Board has also deprived V.H.C. of his rights to substantive due process and equal protection under the U.S. Constitution. Further, in petitioner's view, V.H.C. has been denied his rights under the constitution of this State. She argues that it would be unfair and discriminatory to segregate V.H.C. on stage, since he is the only exchange student to be leaving this year.

The Board's reply:

The Board did not submit a reply brief. Instead it supplied testimony at the request of the administrative law judge (ALJ), and moved to dismiss at the end of petitioner's case.

When questioned by the ALJ, Superintendent Patrick Colum observed that he had been with the District since 1978. Throughout that time, the currently enforced policy concerning exchange students had been in place. Exchange students joined the graduation class on the stage, and were given oral recognition. They did not graduate, nor did they march in cap and gown. In like fashion, four-year District students who did not have the required credits for graduation also were barred from the processional, and from receiving a diploma or certificate of any kind.

The superintendent was certain that there had never been an exception to this policy. He had researched school records to find the student suggested by petitioner. Only one person of that name could be found. He had been assigned to another school in the district. Eventually, he dropped out, not four, but seven years ago. There was no record of any request, or documented permission, for that student to march in the Monmouth Regional High School graduation. Superintendent Colum observed that his permission would have been required for such an exception in any case. He added that neither he, the school principal, nor the director of guidance had ever informed petitioner that an exception would be made.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Findings of Fact:

To resolve the only material facts disputed, I make the following FINDINGS:

1. From at least 1978, the District policy has been to include non-graduating exchange students in the ceremony at Monmouth Regional High School. However, that participation has been limited to seating on stage with the graduates, without cap and gown, and without marching in the processional. Instead of a diploma or certificate, they are given oral recognition by the presiding school officials.
2. The District policy also prohibits students who are four-year students from participating in the processional, and from wearing caps and gowns, if they have not accrued enough academic credits to graduate. No one lacking that status, whether domiciled District student or resident exchange student, has ever been granted an exception to this policy by school officials with requisite authority.

Conclusions of Law:

The burden of proof:

Petitioner must prove her case by a preponderance of the credible evidence, which is the standard in administrative proceedings. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Precisely what is needed to satisfy the standard must be decided on a case-by-case basis. The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Credibility, or more specifically, credible testimony, in turn, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself, as well. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954).

The controlling legal standard:

The legal standard to be applied here is well-settled. Petitioner must demonstrate with preponderating evidence that the Board's action exceeded the reasonable use of its broad discretionary powers. The Board's decision may not be upset unless it can be demonstrated to be patently arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). In the absence of such anomaly, the ALJ cannot recommend reversal, nor can the Commissioner intervene to do so.

The facts of record disclose that the Monmouth Regional High School District Board of Education acted within the acceptable limits of its discretion: No student who is not graduating may march in the processional, be seated in cap and gown, or receive a diploma or certificate.

Petitioner does not dispute that the Board has power to set policy for the graduation ceremonies. Instead, she believes the policy should be changed, or that an exception should be made for V.H.C. In her concern for her charge as host sponsor, petitioner's insistence is understandable. Nevertheless, she has not proven the Board's policy to be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, and only such proof can reverse its action.

Throughout the years, the Board has enforced its policy without exception. Significantly, exchange students are included in the ceremony, and they are afforded recognition by officials from the podium. What is denied is graduation and a processional where the exchange students have not earned the same credits as the graduates. This is not an unlawful classification. Members of the class are barred whether they are students domiciled in the District for four years, or shorter-term exchange students from other countries. Despite petitioner's complaint, no law cited or found obligates the Board to alter its course schedule so that one-year exchange students can accrue the necessary credits to graduate.

Petitioner's legal arguments:

Even if it were to be assumed, solely for the purpose of addressing petitioner's legal arguments, that the benefit of our constitution and laws would be relevant to students in an exchange program, petitioner cannot obtain relief here.

First, administrative agencies have power to pass on constitutional issues only where relevant and necessary to the resolution of a question concededly within their jurisdiction, Christian Bros. Inst. v. Northern N.J. Interschol. League, 86 N.J. 409, 416 (1981). There is no need to explore constitutional relevance where it can be found that the Board satisfies the Kopera standard.

Second, petitioner has not cited any specific section violated in the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 through N.J.S.A. 10:5-42. More to the point, she has not made a prima facie showing of intent to discriminate. The Board has maintained its policy uniformly. No evidence suggests that it has done so for purposes of excluding anyone other than those who are not eligible to graduate. This is plainly a "legitimate, nondiscriminatory reason," not in any way pretextual, and within sound discretion. Texas Dep't of Community Affairs v. Burdine, 450 U.S. 248, 253-56, 67 L. Ed. 2d 207, 215-17, 101 S. Ct. 1089, ___ (1981).

Third, relief from an ostensible violation of the Equal Educational Opportunities Act must be sought in a different forum:

An individual denied an equal educational opportunity, as defined by this subchapter may institute a civil action in an appropriate district court of the United States against such parties, and for such relief, as may be appropriate. The Attorney General of the United States (hereinafter in this chapter referred to as the “Attorney General), for or in the name of the United States, may also institute such a civil action on behalf of such an individual.

[20 U.S.C.A. § 1706]

The appropriate district court of the United States shall have and exercise jurisdiction of proceedings instituted under section 1706 of this title.

[20 U.S.C.A. § 1708]

It can be seen that the Commissioner of Education and, therefore, this tribunal lack jurisdiction to entertain petitioner’s EEOA claim.

The Board’s motion to dismiss:

On the facts and the law, petitioner has not demonstrated a right to relief. She has failed to introduce any evidence which, taken together with all favorable inferences possible, would sustain a judgment in her favor. She has not entered a prima facie case. Cf. Pressler, Current N.J. Court Rules, comment on R. 4:37-2 (1995). The Board’s motion must therefore be granted.

ORDER

I ORDER therefore that petitioner’s request for relief be DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions."  _____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon a careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that Respondent Board's policy concerning participation in its graduation ceremonies may not be upset unless it can be demonstrated to be patently arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ that the Board's decision to prohibit the exchange student under petitioner's charge from walking in its graduation procession in full cap and gown, where the student did not earn a high school diploma, did not exceed the reasonable use of the Board's broad discretionary authority.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law and finds that the within Petition of Appeal must be dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY : OF CLIFTON, PASSAIC COUNTY, :
RESPONDENT. :
_____ :

For Petitioner, Katie Stylianou, Esq. (Stylianou & Fonseca)

For Respondent, Anthony D'Elia, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 21, 1995, by way of a Petition of Appeal and Motion for Emergent Relief filed by S.K., on behalf of her minor son, T.T., seeking an order permitting T.T. to participate in graduation ceremonies from high school on June 21, 1995. On June 16, 1995, the principal of the high school denied petitioner's appeal, finding that T.T. was ineligible to graduate because of his asserted failure to successfully complete an arts and crafts course, resulting in insufficient course credit.

This matter was filed with the Commissioner after petitioner attempted to resolve this matter on the local level with the high school principal but testified that telephone calls and to the district superintendent were not returned. Additionally, petitioner was not informed that there was a school board meeting scheduled for June 21, 1995 where this matter could have been addressed.

On June 22, 1995, oral argument was heard by telephone conference call by Gary T. Reece, Assistant Commissioner for Standards and Assessment, who was designated to hear and decide this matter, pursuant to the Commissioner's authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34. Upon consideration of arguments, the Assistant Commissioner found that petitioner had met the standards for granting injunctive relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and granted emergent relief permitting T.T. to participate in graduation ceremonies.

Petitioner was advised of the decision telephonically on June 22, 1995. The Crowe standards required petitioner to show that T.T. would be irreparably harmed if not permitted to attend the graduation ceremony, that T.T. has a substantial likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the claim, and that in balancing the interests of the parties, the harm to T.T. would be greater than the harm to the Board of Education should the requested relief not be granted.

The Clifton Board requires its pupils to achieve 130 cumulative credits in order to graduate. Petitioner asserted that the failing mark that T.T. received in Arts and Crafts in his senior year, which resulted in his being denied a high school diploma and participation in graduation ceremonies, was arbitrary, capricious and an abuse of discretion. Petitioner disputes the reasonableness of the method used by respondent to compute T.T.'s final grade, arguing that while T.T. received a 67 for the year, when 70 was necessary to pass, the teacher's grade was discretionary and based on a personal conflict with the student. Petitioner presented T.T.'s report card which evidenced that he had average grades in other subjects, including a very high average in Paint and Draw, another class requiring art skills. Petitioner also asserted that T.T. had a solid attendance record.

In response, the Board argues that T.T. did not meet the stated requirements of 130 credits to graduate, and that in order to uphold academic standards, he should not be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremony or receive a diploma. The Board does not dispute that T.T. had a solid record of attendance, nor did it provide such attendance record for review.

A weighing of the arguments of the parties leads the Assistant Commissioner to conclude that petitioner has demonstrated entitlement to injunctive relief. Petitioner has established that T.T. passed all required courses, that he has passed the HSPT11, that T.T.'s Arts and Crafts grade could be subjective, that he earned a third marking period grade of 85 in this course, as well as the fact that he was only three points within passing the course and graduating. Also, the Assistant Commissioner noted that the district did not provide a fourth marking period and final exam grade for review as was requested by him, nor did the district provide contrary evidence or testimony to the petitioner's assertion that T.T. had a solid attendance record. Based on these factors, the Assistant Commissioner found a likelihood of success on the merits. Additionally, a weighing of the equities demands this result as the Assistant Commissioner was particularly mindful that despite her attempts, petitioner was not able to have this matter addressed on the local level, nor was petitioner notified that there was a Board meeting scheduled June 21, 1995, where this matter may have been addressed.

Accordingly, the Motion for Emergent Relief is granted and the matter is ordered transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former school psychologist and child study team member who was rified, alleged his tenure and seniority rights were violated by the Board's use of Independent Child Study Teams, Inc. (ICST) to provide child study team and school psychologist services for the pupils in the district.

Having considered the record and the testimony of witnesses, the ALJ concluded that petitioner's claims were not moot, that the provision of services contracted for by the Board with ICST did not constitute supplemental independent child study team evaluations and/or child study team diagnostic services, that provision of such services was contrary to N.J.A.C. 6:28-5.1(c)1i, that the Board should have offered petitioner a part-time position for the 1993-94 school year and that if petitioner is reemployed by the Board in the future, petitioner is entitled to seniority for the period from August 10, 1993, the effective date of the contract with ICST, through August 12, 1994, the date of petitioner's notification to the Board that he was declining part-time employment for the 1994-95 school year. ALJ ordered that petitioner be deemed to have seniority with the Board for the period from August 10, 1993 through August 12, 1994 on a part-time basis.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own.

BEFORE DIANA C. SUKOVICH., ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 1, 1993, Jerome Elson (petitioner or Elson) filed a petition with the Commissioner of the Department of Education (DOE) contesting action by the Hudson County Area Vocational-Technical Schools Board of Education (respondent or Board). The Board filed an answer on December 13, 1994, and the DOE transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative (OAL) on December 16, 1993 for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Conferences were conducted throughout the proceedings. Hearings scheduled for October 1994 were adjourned because petitioner was in a car accident. A hearing was held on March 15, 1995. Post-hearing memoranda were filed by Elson and respondent on April 7 and April 12, 1995, respectively. The record was closed on April 12, 1995.

NATURE OF THE CASE

Elson is a certified school psychologist who was employed by the Board on one of its child study teams (Teams). Petitioner was previously subject to a reduction in force (RIF). The Board subsequently contracted certain services, including those of Team psychologist, to an outside private child study team. Petitioner argues that he should have been rehired because of his seniority. The issue in this respect focuses on whether respondent's determination to contract services out to a private team was consistent with N.J.A.C. 6:28-5.1. The case also raises issues regarding what relief, if any, can be awarded to petitioner if he prevails. Elson has been employed by another district at a higher salary.

STIPULATIONS

The parties stipulated to the following facts:

1. Petitioner holds an Educational Services Certificate with an endorsement as a school psychologist.
2. Petitioner was employed by respondent as a school psychologist. As a result of his service with respondent, petitioner gained tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

3. While employed by respondent, petitioner was a member of the school district's Team.
4. Petitioner was initially employed by respondent, effective September 1, 1981. His position of employment was abolished, and his employment was terminated, effective June 30, 1989. (Ex. J-1).
5. A copy of respondent's adopted job description for the position of School Psychologist is Ex. J-2.
6. On June 1, 1993, respondent adopted the following resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Board of Education does hereby ratify, confirm and approve the submission of the Agreement for Examination and Classification Services for the 1993-1994 school year between the Hudson County Area Vocational-Technical Schools' District and Independent Child Study Teams, Inc. as attached. (Ex. J-3).

A copy of the Agreement in question is Ex. J-4.

7. The proposed agreement (Ex. J-4) was submitted to the Hudson County Superintendent of Schools (County Superintendent) for review and approval. The County Superintendent did not approve the proposed agreement and requested certain modifications.
8. On August 10, 1993, respondent adopted the following resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Board of Education does hereby approve the Agreement between the Hudson County Area Vocational-Technical Schools' District and the Independent Child Study Team, Inc. as amended and attached, for the 1993-1994 school year. (Ex. J-5).

9. A copy of the agreement to which reference is made in respondent's August 10, 1993 resolution is Exhibit J-6. This agreement is dated August 13, 1993.
10. The agreement dated August 13, 1993 (Ex. J-6) was submitted to the County Superintendent for review and approval.
11. The agreement of August 13, 1993 was approved by the County Superintendent, as set forth in his letter dated October 4, 1993. (Ex. J-7).
12. Requisition forms for services provided by Independent Child Study Teams, Inc. (ICST), dated March 24, 1994 and May 31, 1994, are Exs. J-8 and J-9.
13. Respondent has not continued the use of services from ICST for the 1994-95 school year.
14. By letter dated August 9, 1994, respondent offered petitioner part-time employment for the 1994-95 school year. (Ex. J-10).
15. By letter dated August 12, 1994, counsel for petitioner notified counsel for respondent that petitioner was unable to accept the offer. (Ex. J-11).
16. A document captioned "Specifications for Child Study Team Services in Compliance with N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.1 et seq." was prepared by ICST and provided to respondent as an indication of services it was capable of providing. (Ex. J-12). Not all such listed services were utilized by respondent.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner testified on his own behalf. Petitioner also presented the testimony of Joseph P. Sirangelo (Sirangelo), respondent's Assistant Superintendent in charge of the Business Office; Alexander DeNoble (DeNoble), the Director of Special Services for the Board; and Dr. Lisa Tomasini (Tomasini), a psychologist under contract with ICST who provided services to respondent during the school year in question. DeNoble also testified on behalf of respondent.

Sirangelo, DeNoble, and petitioner testified regarding the provision of services to classified students in general in the district. DeNoble and Sirangelo also testified regarding the determination to enter into a contract with ICST and the nature of the services provided. Tomasini testified in more detail in the latter respect, focusing on the services which she rendered. Elson also testified regarding his employment subsequent to the RIF and his reaction to a subsequent offer for employment with the Board.

All of the witnesses were credible. Their testimony was not discredited on cross-examination and is not in dispute. It is clear that the material facts are not contested. The dispute focuses on how the services rendered to the Board by ICST should be characterized pursuant to the pertinent regulation.

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be FACTS.

The district is composed of three high schools, which are located in Bayonne, North Bergen, and Jersey City, New Jersey. The process leading to execution of a contract between ICST and respondent commenced in early 1993, when the Board started budgeting for positions for its Teams. Approval was received at the State level by February 1993. DeNoble, who is respondent's Director of Special Services, recommended the provision of additional services. Although he did not specifically recommend ICST, he reviewed the pertinent contract documents.

At the time, respondent had a child study team consisting of three professionals, employed on a full-time basis, and an additional learning consultant, also employed full-time. DeNoble requested an additional Team. In approximately December 1992, a special education plan, submitted under DeNoble's auspices, was provided to the Board. The plan identified the need for the following school year for an additional Team, providing services "as needed." The Board approved the proposal for another Team to provide all services, including social worker, psychologist, and learning consultant services, sometime between November 1992 and January 1993.

The document entitled "SPECIFICATIONS FOR CHILD STUDY TEAM SERVICES IN COMPLIANCE WITH N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.1 ET. SEQ." (Ex. J-12) was initially attached to the initial draft contract (Ex. J-4). Both documents were drafted by ICST. The County Superintendent communicated to Sirangelo that he (the County Superintendent) preferred that the specifications document not be included with the contract. The only change between the initial draft contract and that executed by ICST and respondent was deletion of the specifications document. The term of the executed contract was September 1, 1993 through June 30, 1994.

Subsequent to approval of the executed contract by the County Superintendent, the first meeting between respondent's personnel and that of ICST personnel occurred in late October 1993. ICST commenced providing services to students of the Board, pursuant to the executed contract, in November 1993. In general, ICST personnel provided evaluation and diagnostic services relevant to the areas of psychologist, learning consultant, and social worker services.

Respondent's in-house Team determined which students needed special education services and the type of such services. Initial evaluations were performed by members of respondent's Team. Respondent's Team performed evaluations still required by late 1993. Team members decided which member of the ICST team would provide services for individual students for annual reviews. Specific assignments were transmitted by respondent to ICST personnel, who, in turn, distributed them among Tomasini and the other consultants. All documents were typed by ICST personnel.

The ICST social worker assigned to respondent, Judy Gibbons, provided annual review services to the Board, including diagnostic services, completion of social histories, including meeting with parents and obtaining information pertaining to the family, and diagnostic/evaluation services. These services were provided during school hours, 8:30 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. ICST personnel also conducted student observations during school hours, interviewed teachers, and participated in the development of individual educational plans (IEPs) for students. The ICST social worker participated in the entire evaluation process, up to the conference with parents. ICST also provided related clerical services to the Board, which represented one of respondent's "greatest needs" at the time.

The ICST learning consultant was not available commencing in approximately February 1994 and was replaced in approximately April 1994. When available, the ICST learning consultant provided reevaluation and diagnostic services to respondent. These included educational assessments, classroom observations, records reviews, teacher interviews, standardized educational evaluations, and other testing. The ICST consultant performed complete educational assessments, including participation in reevaluations and the development of IEPs, up to the point of the conducting of a parent conference. When the learning consultant left, Tomasini filled the void. Initially, it was contemplated that the learning consultant would be responsible for fifty percent of the caseload assigned to ICST by respondent.

Reevaluations in general incorporate standard tests, the development of IEPs, and presentation of IEPs to students' parents. In general, reevaluations are conducted every three years for a particular student. Diagnostic services are, in general, provided on an annual basis unless there are major program changes or extenuating circumstances.

ICST personnel did not provide any follow-up services required pertinent to annual reviews and reevaluations. They also were not involved in implementation of IEPs. None of the ICST consultants provided counseling services to students. Such services, which are generally provided to a school district, include consultations with teachers regarding texts, the provision of and attendance at work shops, appointment to committees, the design of new programs, and case manager duties. ICST personnel were not involved in the operation of resource centers in the district, the provision of work-shops to Board personnel, and the development of long-range plans, programs and policies. ICST personnel were not involved at any time subsequent to the conducting of parent meetings, at which time a final IEP draft was completed. Subsequent to parent meetings, case management functions came into play and were provided by respondent's in-house Team.

Respondent's full-time school psychologist on the in-house Team during the period in question was Stephanie Saracino (Saracino); its learning consultant, Ann Gerardi (Gerardi), and its social worker; Eugene Wallace (Wallace). The part-time learning consultant, Veronica Romano (Romano), divided her time among the three school facilities which comprise the district.

Tomasini's primary interaction with respondent's personnel was with Saracino, although Tomasini also had contact with DeNoble. Saracino provided an introduction to ICST personnel with respondent's system and functioned as the case manager for annual reviews. Tomasini did the "leg work" and provided IEP documentation for Saracino for the latter's ultimate approval. Gerardi, in addition to Saracino, also reviewed recommendations of ICST personnel pertinent to reevaluations.

Tomasini provided school psychologist services to respondent during the 1993-94 school year. She was employed by ICST at the time. Tomasini's first meeting with Board personnel, DeNoble and Saracino, was in October 1993. Tomasini commenced providing services to respondent early in November 1993.

Tomasini functioned as an independent consultant to the Board. As such, she did not have a regular schedule with respondent, but was present at school facilities according to her work load, which varied. Services required were more intensive during the spring. During such periods, she worked from approximately 10:00 a.m. until 2:00 p.m., four days a week. Tomasini completed the work required for the Board by the end of May 1994 or early June 1994. Except for reports which she typed at home on her computer, Tomasini provided all services rendered to respondent at the Board's facilities. The bulk of her time was devoted to evaluations and the provision of diagnostic services. During the 1993-94 school year, Tomasini, on average, worked the equivalent of a half-time employee.

In general, Tomasini provided services to respondent in the nature of testing, preparation of reports, preparation of IEPs, including responsibility for IEPs in certain cases, and diagnostic services. She also had contact with students, parents, and teachers. However, Tomasini did not provide any follow-up services nor counseling services. These were provided by in-house Team members. In certain cases, Tomasini was designated as a "sub-case manager." Saracino functioned as case manager.

For those students assigned to Tomasini, both Tomasini and another ICST consultant provided reevaluation services. Consultants from two different disciplines were always assigned by ICST to perform reevaluations. ICST also provided, as needed, other consultants, such as psychiatrists, for reevaluations.

Services provided by Tomasini in reevaluations included administration of intelligence tests, class observations, teacher interviews, administration of other tests, such as projective and coordination tests, review of student records, determinations as to eligibility for services, development of IEPs, including classification and programs, and the conducting of meetings with parents for a review of results. She spent approximately two to three hours' time on the preparation of IEPs, including interaction with students and parents. The time spent by Tomasini in a particular case for writing reports and evaluations totaled several hours.

Tomasini also provided diagnostic services, leading to annual reviews, for respondent, not including testing and preparation of reports for students. Services for particular students, in other respects, were the same as those provided in reevaluations. She was involved in this respect in updating IEPs consistent with a student's current or changed needs. Tomasini was the only ICST personnel who provided diagnostic services.

After receiving documents, respondent's personnel communicated any questions or changes desired to ICST personnel during an "interactive" period subsequent to the transmission of reports to the Board. Respondent's personnel did not make "official changes." Comments were communicated to Tomasini, who met with parents, and whose "name" was on the IEP.

During the 1993-94 school year, Tomasini was involved in 30 to 40 reevaluations for respondent. She participated in approximately 100 annual reviews. Tomasini earned between $22,000 and $23,000 during her tenure with ICST as a result of services she performed for respondent.

Pursuant to the contract, payments by respondent to ICST were based on the number of evaluations performed by ICST personnel. ICST's work product was ultimately reviewed by DeNoble, who then referred matters to Sirangelo for payment. It was Sirangelo's responsibility to review vouchers and approve payments.

During the 1993-94 school year, approximately 200 annual reviews were performed for students of respondent. ICST personnel participated in 116 of them. A total of approximately 60 reevaluations were conducted; ICST personnel participated in 33. Two hundred diagnostic services were performed. ICST personnel provided 116.

Personnel on respondent's in-house Team participated in all the evaluations. ICST provided the following services to respondent during the year in question:

Nature of Services	Number of Students	Costs
Diagnostic Services	116 students	$34,800
Psychological	9 students	3,600
Educational Assessment	8 students	3,200
Social Assessments	3 students	1,200
Reevaluations (2 components)	23 students	18,400
Reevaluations (3 components)	1 student	1,200
Total Costs		$62,400

Those classified students spending approximately one-half of their school time in the sending district and one-half in respondent's facilities are referred to as "shared time" students. Responsibility for services provided to shared time students was largely with the sending school districts; those students included out-of-district students but children from within Hudson County. Classified students spending all of their time in the Board's facilities are referred to as "full-time students." As of 1989, there was a shared time special needs education program at the Jersey City and North Bergen centers, the two centers in existence at the time. Respondent employed a full-time special education teacher. During the prior ten years, none of the shared time special needs program students were mainstreamed.

There are differences between the current special education program operated by the Board and that in existence in 1989. At the current time in respondent's district in its entirety, there are 600 students classified. There are 100 students in the shared time program who are mainstreamed. Respondent provides some services, such as resource room availability, to approximately thirty. The individual currently functioning as a second learning consultant has responsibility for liaison with the three centers pertaining to the shared students. One hundred forty students in the full-time program are mainstreamed; for the others, the Board has primary responsibility regarding the development of IEPs, annual reviews, plus reevaluations and the delivery of educational services. Their sending school districts have responsibility for evaluations and annual reviews.

During the time Elson last was employed by the Board, he was assigned to what was referred to as "Team B," which was designed to "supplement" another team of the Board, referred to as "Team A," based on services Team A felt they could not handle. Such services included, for example, providing testing, reevaluations, and "leg work" to students in respondent's shared time program. Team A was involved in some reevaluations. In general, Team B handled the "surplus" caseload of Team A regarding full-time students in addition to admission responsibilities pertaining to shared time students.

Petitioner worked at facilities located in Jersey City and North Bergen. He was involved in any follow-up needed, generally for shared time, not full-time, students. Elson was involved in annual reviews, reevaluations, the entire diagnostic process, and any required follow-up. Petitioner's responsibilities when involved in annual reviews included interactions with teachers, attendance at meetings, etc.

Respondent's current staffing of Team members includes a full-time psychologist at an annual salary of $75,000 and the equivalent of 30 percent thereof in benefits and a social worker and learning consultant, each earning an annual salary of $40,000, with benefits. During the 1994-95 school year, Tomasini has been employed by petitioner directly on a part-time, per diem basis, working two days per week for the Board. The services she provides are more expansive than those she rendered when employed as a consultant by ICST and include the provision of counseling services, attending and providing workshops, involvement in annual reviews and reevaluations, and case manager duties for those students to whom she is assigned.

Elson is currently employed by the Irvington, New Jersey, school district on a full-time basis as a school psychologist. His annual salary is $67,000, and his benefits include pension and health benefits. Elson commenced this employment three days subsequent to termination by respondent, and he has tenure in the Irvington district. His salary during the 1993-94 school year was $64,000.

Elson never inquired of respondent's personnel concerning the salary of the part-time position which he was offered for the 1994-95 school year, and they never informed him. Respondent did not offer petitioner employment for the 1993-94 school year. Petitioner was the first individual to whom respondent offered the part-time position available for the 1994-95 school year.

The August 12, 1994 letter submitted by Elson's counsel on petitioner's behalf to the Board stated that petitioner was unable to accept the position for economic reasons because "the part-time position will not provide a salary necessary to support Mr. Elson and his family." (Ex. J-11). The letter stressed that it was not a waiver of any tenure or seniority rights petitioner might have to any full-time positions in respondent's district and that petitioner was ready and willing to accept a full-time position, if available.

DISCUSSION

The Commissioner of the DOE (Commissioner) generally has jurisdiction to hear and determine all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

The services of teaching staff members serving in any school district or under any board of education shall be under tenure during good behavior and efficiency, and such individuals shall not be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, or conduct unbecoming such a teaching staff member or other just cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. (Supp. 1994-95).

However, the local board of education can reduce the number of teaching staff members employed in the district whenever, in the board's judgment, it is advisable to abolish such positions for reasons of economy, because of a reduction in the number of pupils, because of a change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district, or for other good cause. Id. at §9. Any such RIF shall be made on the basis of seniority according to standards established by the Commissioner with the approval of the State Board. Id. at §10. The board of education shall determine the seniority of the persons affected and shall notify such persons regarding their seniority status. Id. at §11.

A person dismissed as a result of a RIF shall remain on a preferred eligibility list in the order of seniority for reemployment whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which such person is qualified. Such person shall be reemployed if and when such vacancy occurs. In determining seniority and computing length of service for reemployment, full recognition shall be given to previous years of service. Id. at §12. (Supp. 1994-95). The Commissioner may also award prejudgment and/or post-judgment interest in any circumstance in which an individual has sought relief and has successfully established entitlement to a monetary award. N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(b)1.

A tenured teacher has the ultimate burden when contesting action by a board of education of demonstrating both that his/her seniority rights were violated and that he/she suffered harm so as to entitle him/her to redress as a result of that violation. James Parker and Joseph Pellegrino v. Board of Education of the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, 1990 S.L.D. 1778, 1779. Tenured school board employees who have been improperly denied reemployment are entitled to such reemployment in addition to back pay and emoluments. A person holding employment in a public school system of the State who is illegally dismissed or suspended is entitled to "compensation" for the period covered by the illegal dismissal or suspension if such is finally determined to have been without good cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-30.

The obligation of a board of education to recall an employee from a preferred eligibility list is deemed to occur whenever a vacancy itself comes into existence. Mueller v. Hunterdon Central Regional High School District Board of Education, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (Vol. 4A) 419, 421 (Dept. of Ed.) (Mueller). However, a petitioner fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted unless he/she is actually subject to a loss of position and reduction in pay pursuant to a RIF. Ibid. Seniority cannot limit a teacher's tenure rights over nontenured teachers. Ibid. A prevailing teacher that contests action is entitled to appointment to an available position, back pay, and other economic emoluments of "employment," including appropriate pension fund adjustments. Mueller at 422.

However, an individual subject to dismissal or suspension has a duty to mitigate his/her damages. Mullen v. Board of Education of Jefferson Township, 81 N.J. Super. 151 (App. Div. 1963) (Mullen). West Orange Supplemental Instructors Assoc. v. Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, 1991, S.L.D. 1 (October 12, 1990), aff'd 1991 S.L.D. 99 (State Board of Education, July 3, 1991), appeal dismissed, A-6033-90T1(App. Div., October 1991) (West Orange). Any actual pay that the employee earned must be set off from an award of back pay. West Orange, supra. An individual who obtains employment at a higher salary, is no longer employed by the board which took the action in dispute, and does not intend to return to that board is not entitled to a "windfall." Mullen, at 160.

Child study teams are intended to represent a multidisciplinary approach to identifying, evaluating, and planning suitable educational programs for children with learning difficulties. Cochran v. Watchung Hills Regional High School Bd. of Educ., 1985 S.L.D. 1878, aff'd, A-2327-85T7 (App. Div. Dec. 22, 1986) (Cochran). N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.3. Regulations promulgated by the DOE address the requirement and duties of child study teams. For students over the age of five years, a team shall consist of a school psychologist, a learning disabilities teacher-consultant, and a school social worker. Team members shall be employees of the local board of education and shall be available during hours pupils are in attendance. N.J.A.C. 6:28-3.1(b). One team member shall be designated at the case manager for each pupil with an educational disability. Id. at §(e).

The child study team shall be responsible for the initial evaluation of students and participation in the determination of eligibility for special education and/or related services; coordination of the development, monitoring, and evaluation of the effectiveness of the IEP; deliverance of appropriate related services to pupils with educational disabilities; provision of preventive and support services to nondisabled pupils; and provision of services to the general education staff regarding techniques, materials, and programs for pupils experiencing learning difficulties. Id. at §(a). The team shall act in consultation with other professionals as appropriate. Id. at §(c). At least one member of the team shall be knowledgeable about placement options for pupils with educational disabilities. Id. at §(d).

An initial evaluation shall consist of an assessment by all team members as well as a physician employed by the school and shall include an appraisal of the pupil's current functioning and an analysis of instructional implications appropriate to the child study team member reporting. Initial evaluations shall include, among other items, standardized tests, where appropriate, and functional assessments. Id. at §§3.4(a)-(d). Psychological assessments shall be the responsibility of the school psychologist employed by the local board of education and shall include an appraisal of the pupil's current cognitive, social, adaptive and emotional status. Id. at §(e)2. Each team member shall prepare a written report of the results of his/her assessments. Id. at §(f). A team report is required when an initial evaluation is completed. Id. at §3.5.

An IEP shall be written upon the completion of the team's evaluation and prior to the pupil's placement in the special education program. Id. at §3.6(a). The IEP shall be developed with participation of parents and members of the district board of education team who have participated in the evaluation and any additional persons required. Id. at §(b). IEPs are required to contain certain minimum information and data. Id. at §(d). Annually, or more frequently if necessary, the case manager, parents, teachers and other appropriate individuals shall meet to review and revise the IEP and determine placement. Id. at §(f). A reevaluation and an IEP shall be completed within three years of the date of the previous classification, or sooner if warranted. Id. at §3.7(a). The child study team shall determine which members and/or specialists will conduct the evaluations. A reevaluation shall include assessment by at least two team members. Id. at §(a)1.

Related services shall be provided to a pupil with an educational disability according to his/her IEP. Related services may include counseling services, which shall be provided by certified school psychologists, social workers or guidance counselors, counseling and/or in-training services for parents, and therapies. Id. at §3.8.

Despite the requirement that a school district's team consist only of district employees, the pertinent regulations permit local boards of education to contract for certain services. Clinics and agencies approved by the DOE may provide such contracted services; such clinics and agencies shall be approved annually by the DOE. Id. at §§5.1(a) & (b). Only specified services may be contracted. For public school pupils, these are:

- (c)
 - i. Independent child study team evaluations and/or child study team diagnostic services to supplement existing local district services;
 - ii. The related services of occupational therapy and physical therapy; and
 - iii. Home instruction. Id. at §(c).

A local board cannot subcontract the services of its child study team to outside individuals. A board may supplement such services, but this situation presupposes an existing team with members who are employed by the district. Outside contractors are permitted in limited circumstances and only to supplement services provided by existing team members. Mullin v. Boonton Town Board of Education, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (Vol. 4B) 583 (Dept. of Ed.) (Mullin). Cochran, supra. General team work is still intended to be performed by employees of the local board. Cochran, supra. The determination as to whether the utilization of outside contracted services constitutes a supplanting or supplementing of the existing team members "involves a review of all surrounding facts and circumstances." Mullin at 590.

In Mullin, former members of a team, including a psychologist, claimed that the abolishment of their positions pursuant to a RIF violated their tenure rights. The RIF coincided with the school board's decision to contract with non-board members for the provision of team services. Prior to the RIF, the district had two teams, one full-time and the other part-time, each comprised of three professionals. The school district abolished the part-time team and retained the full-time one. Rather than engage contractors to perform all of the work of the prior part-time team, the district utilized members of the existing team in the summer. The school district also utilized the services of outside contractors during summer months and during the school year. The administrative law judge (ALJ) found that the contracted services were supplemental to the remaining full-time team. The judge distinguished the case before him from the facts in Cochran.

Cochran involved action by the local district reducing its only child study team to half-time and contracting out the balance of team services to the Somerset County Educational Services Commission. Finding that the board's intention was not an actual abolishment of position, but a mere reorganization and transfer of duties to a less expensive provider, the State Board of Education upheld determinations of the presiding ALJ and the Commissioner voiding the RIFs in question as being in violation of petitioners' tenure rights.

In Impey v. Bd. of Educ. of Shrewsbury, 273 N.J. Super. 429 (App. Div. 1994) (Impey), the court affirmed determinations of the presiding ALJ and of the Commissioner upholding action by a local board abolishing the position of a tenured part-time speech correctionist and contracting with the Educational Services Commission of Monmouth to provide speech correction services for the district's pupils. Finding that such contracting out of services was authorized by statute, N.J.S.A.

18A:46-14, and pertinent regulations, the court found that the board had the authority to abolish the position for reasons of economy pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. The court distinguished situations involving the mere re-titling of a position in order to remove an intended incumbent. Impey at 435.

CONCLUSIONS

A threshold issue is whether Elson's substantive claim should not be reached because the dispute is moot in light of the fact that he has suffered no damages. The Board argues that the petition should be dismissed based on petitioner's failure to show that he was damaged by its actions. Elson argues that dismissal is not warranted because a decision on the substantive issues is essential to inform the parties of their respective rights and responsibilities in the future and also to protect Elson's claims regarding his tenure status and reemployment rights arising therefrom. Alternatively, petitioner argues that his pleadings should be deemed to be amended to request a declaratory ruling.

As responded argues, Elson had a duty to mitigate damages. His actual earnings are relevant in this respect. It is clear that Elson suffered no monetary damages regarding his salary status. In fact, petitioner does not argue that he suffered any financial damage at all. It is reasonable to infer that his pension and related benefits would have been decreased if he accepted a part-time position with respondent rather than full-time employment in another district.

However, I am persuaded that Elson has a sufficient stake and real adverseness in the outcome of the current matter. "A controversy is justiciable in cases where 'the litigants' concern with the subject matter evidence(s) a sufficient stake and real adverseness.'" In re Boardwalk Regency Corp. Casino License, 90 N.J. 361, 368 (1982) (Boardwalk Regency).

Elson testified that he could not say whether or not he would have accepted part-time employment with respondent if it had been offered to him. Although respondent's argument that it is reasonable to conclude that petitioner would not have been available for a part-time position during school hours has some persuasion in light of petitioner's subsequent refusal of a part-time position because of economic considerations, Elson's argument is more consistent with the applicable legal principles. As petitioner argues, the current matter demonstrates the difficulty presented to individuals affected by board action later deemed to be contrary to the law. Elson testified that if he had been offered the position in question, he could have considered his options. As he argues, it is impossible to subsequently determine what one would have done if given the option.

If he had accepted part-time employment with respondent, if offered in August 1993, petitioner would have continued to incur seniority with the Board. Seniority is determined according to the number of academic or calendar years of employment, or a fraction thereof, in a school district in specific categories. N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1(b). Petitioner remains on respondent's preferred reemployment list and has indicated interest in a full-time position with the Board. I am persuaded that petitioner should be accorded seniority from August 10, 1993, the effective date of the contract, until August 12, 1994, the date of his notification to respondent that he was declining part-time employment for the 1994-95 school year, if the Board's decision to contract with ICST was in violation of the applicable regulation. For reasons of administrative efficiency, I am persuaded that the latter issue should be addressed in the current case. See, N.J.A.C. 1:1.3(a). The possibility of future involvement of seniority claims establishes a sufficient stake and real adverseness. See, Boardwalk Regency, supra. It is therefore not necessary to reach Elson's arguments that his petition should be deemed to be amended to request a declaratory ruling and whether or not such request should be granted.

Pursuant to the executed contract, ICST was required to provide child study team services to the Board for all eligible children enrolled in the district upon receipt of a written form requesting such service. The term of the agreement was for one year, subject to cancellation by either party upon ninety days written notice. (Ex. J-6, pp. 1-2). ICST agreed to conduct the evaluations at the specified rate and to make staff available to provide diagnostic services "to supplement" existing district services "on an as-needed basis." When requested, ICST also was required to review pupil progress and records, observe students in classroom settings, confer with teachers and district team personnel, conduct assessments, when applicable, and provide written reports to teachers and the administration of all findings. Id. at 2. The specifications prepared by ICST and provided to respondent as an indication of services ICST was capable of providing included reference to "comprehensive basic child study team" evaluations for all referred children, including psychological, educational, and social assessments. (Ex. J-12, p. 1). The listing of possible services also included determinations of pupil eligibility, classification, specialist services, development of IEPs, the provision of updates for annual reviews, and triennial evaluations (Ex. J-12).

Although characterized as "supplemental" in the contract, it is clear that the agreement executed in August 1993 did not incorporate a numerical limit on the number of students for which ICST would provide reevaluation services. The specification of services which ICST could provide, although not all utilized by respondent, was substantially broader. In addition, it is clear from the nature of services actually provided by ICST, especially those provided by Tomasini, that such were not supplemental to those provided by respondent's in-house Team.

Tomasini provided a broad range of diagnostic and evaluative services to a significant portion of respondent's classified students. Respondent had a legal obligation to provide the services rendered by ICST to the students in question. Presumably, this number of students could not be handled by one full-time team and had been provided services by part-time staff personnel, even prior to the RIF in question. During Elson's tenure, as found, respondent had more than one team and more recently employed, and still employs, a part-time learning consultant. At some point, which cannot be determined from the record, respondent would presumably have had to employ another full-time team if the number of classified students increased dramatically. However, such consideration is not determinative of the question presented in this case. I am persuaded that the services contracted for with ICST and actually provided by ICST were not supplemental evaluative and diagnostic services.

As Elson argues, and as the applicable regulations and the Mullin case make clear, a local board is not generally permitted to provide professional services to children through the use of non-employees. In light of this situation, and in light of the lack of a broad statutory mandate for the provision of services by non-school employees, such as is the case regarding cooperative endeavors, petitioner's argument that N.J.A.C. 6:28-5.1(c)1 should be narrowly construed is meritorious.

During his tenure with the Board, Elson provided services similar in nature to those provided by ICST, although, as the record indicates, the structure of the provision of special education services changed somewhat subsequent to the RIF of Elson. The nature of the responsibilities of a district school psychologist (Ex. J-12) are essentially the equivalent, with minor exceptions, to those services contracted for with ICST by respondent and actually provided to the Board. The fact that Tomasini's services alone were the equivalent of a half-time position also supports the conclusion that all the services provided by ICST were not supplemental.

In addition, the approval letter of the County Superintendent reinforced the requirement that services to public school students pursuant to contract were restricted to evaluations and diagnostic services to supplement existing local district services and that it was incumbent upon the Board to evaluate its staffing needs and make any necessary adjustments for the 1994-95 school year to employ sufficient staff to ensure the provision of services. The notification concluded that services could not be delivered through a contract with an individual agency on a permanent basis.

The facts of this case are more akin to those considered in Cochran, where a full-time in-house team was reduced to a part-time one by a RIF with a subsequent engagement of outside contractors to perform services in equal amount to those performed by the remaining part-time team, than to the facts of Mullin, which involved limited instances of contracting out of services. This case is distinguishable from Impey, supra, in which the court found broad statutory and regulatory authority for a local board to enter and to join agreements with other school districts for the provision of special education services. There is no such broad authority pertinent to child study teams in general. As discussed, a local board may only contract team evaluation and diagnostic services to supplement existing local district services, not to supplant them.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner's claims are not moot, that the provision of services contracted for by respondent with ICST did not constitute supplemental independent child study team evaluations and/or child study team diagnostic services, that the provision of such services by ICST to students of respondent pursuant to the agreement in question was contrary to N.J.A.C. 6:28-5.1(c)1i, that respondent should have offered petitioner a part-time position for the 1993-94 school year, and that if petitioner is reemployed by respondent in the future, Elson is entitled to seniority for the period from August 10, 1993 through August 12, 1994.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner be deemed to have seniority with respondent for the period from August 10, 1993 through August 9, 1994 on a part-time basis.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL STATEMENT

Petitioner, Wood-Metal Industries (Wood-Metal) seeks emergency relief pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5 in the form of an Order staying the award of a contract for the purchase of premanufactured wood casement systems and equipment by respondent, the Board of Education of West Windsor-Plainsboro Regional School District (Board of Education) to respondent Dean Equipment and Furniture, Inc. (Dean). Petitioner contends that since it presented a lower bid on the contract than did respondent Dean, the bid should have been awarded to it. The Board of Education has filed an answer to the Petition of Appeal and Brief in Opposition to the request for emergent relief along with supporting affidavit. It is the Board's position that, although petitioner was a lower bidder, it maintains that petitioner was not the most responsible bidder because it failed to comply with the specifications which were mandated in the bid offering. The Board of Education also contends that any further delay regarding the awarding of this contract will prejudice the ability of the school district in its construction schedule. Respondent Dean, also filed an answer to the Petition of Appeal and a Brief in Opposition along with a supporting affidavit. It is Dean's position that petitioner Wood-Metal is not entitled to emergency relief due to (1) its failure to file its Petition of Appeal with "utmost promptitude" (2) that Wood-Metal failed to comply with the specification requirements for the bid offering and (3) that Dean has already incurred considerable expense in accordance with the contract which was awarded to it by the Board of Education in this matter.

Subsequent to the filing of the appeal in this matter, petitioner filed a motion to take the oral deposition of Linda Andreychik, a principle in the architectural firm of Jordan and Pease, which is the school district's architect on the project. A telephone conference was conducted by this tribunal with counsel on May 17, 1995, regarding the application for deposition, at which time this tribunal ordered that the depositions of Linda Andreychik, as well as Carl Fernandes, who is the sales manager for T. O. Gronlund, Inc., which is a distributor for petitioner Wood-Metal Industries. The depositions were ordered to take place on May 24, 1995, after which argument on the application for emergent relief was conducted at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville, on May 26, 1995. At the conclusion of the hearing on that date, the hearing record closed for purposes of this application.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The relevant facts adverd by petitioner Wood-Metal, the Board and Dean are essentially not disputed. The bids for the purchase of premanufactured wood casement and equipment were solicited and received by the Board of Education on February 22, 1995, relative to Contract No. 7. Respondent Dean, which is a distributor of Campbell Rhea Wood Casements, submitted a base bid for contract No. 7 based upon the specifications for Campbell Rhea Wood Casement for a specified price of $684,050. Petitioner Wood-Metal submitted an alternate (non-base) manufacturer bid regarding the same Contract No. 7 in the amount of $620,000. There was a third manufacturer who submitted a bid which was lower than both the Dean and Wood-Metal bids. However, the respondent Board of Education at a regular meeting held on February 28, 1995, awarded Contract No. 7 to Dean, even though its bid was $64, 050 higher than Wood-Metal's bid. The third party bid has also been rejected because, even though it supplied an appropriate base bid, it failed to supply complete and proper documentaion with it.

On or about March 3, 1995, Wood-Metal's Sales Representative Carl M. Fernandes contacted Linda Andreychik, a principal in the architectural firm of Jordan & Pease (the architect on the Board's high school building project) and asked her to explain why Contract No. 7 was awarded to Dean even though Wood-Metal's bid was $64,050 less than Dean's bid. Andreychik told Fernandes that there was nothing wrong with Wood-Metal's product and that Jordan & Pease did not know anything that could be wrong with the product. However, since Wood-Metal's bid was submitted as an alternate bid and not a base bid or equal (equivalent), Jordan & Pease did not feel it was necessary to look at that bid since a base bid had been submitted which included the specified Campbell Rhea product. Respondent Dean signed its contract with the Board of Education on April 5, 1995. On or about April 17, 1995, petitioner Wood-Metal filed a complaint in Superior Court, Middlesex County, hut then it subsequently determined to refile before the Commissioner of Education on April 27, 1995. The instant emergent relief application, which seeks temporary restraint, has been requested as part of that filing.

In its answer to petitioner's petition, the respondent Board of Education has included the affidavit of Linda Andreychik in which she stated, at paragraph 2, that her office examined the package submitted by Wood-Metal and determined that "the bid should be rejected because it should not have been submitted as an alternate, but should have been submitted under the base bid as an equal." She then noted, in the same paragraph, that "Wood-Metal Industries did not submit a completed line-by-line comparison of their product with the Campbell Rhea which was specified. The bid was, therefore, rejected on both bases." (Affidavit of Andreychik, at paragraph 2.)

At the deposition of Linda Andreychik which was ordered by this tribunal and held on May 19, 1995, Andreychik reviewed the bid submitted by Wood-Metal, which was contained as Exhibit H on petitioner's Verified Petition. When asked whether or not Wood-Metal complied with the bid specification for the production of data required with substitution requests (See, affidavit of Michael Hoffman, Exhibit E §1600-6(F) 1 through 9), Andreychik indicated that Wood-Metal had failed to submit the required information regarding all areas except for item No. 7, which required the submission of a list of maintenance services and replacement materials available. The information which Wood-Metal failed to supply included: (1) identify product by specification section and paragraph number. (2) Manufacturer's name and address, trade name and model number of product (if applicable), and name of fabricator or supplier (if applicable). (3) Complete product data. (4) A list of other products on which the proposed product has been used, with product name, the design professional's name, and owner contact. (5) An itemized comparison of the proposed product to the specified product, based upon the cited requirements of the individual specification sections. (6) Net amount of change to the contract sum. . . . (8) Statement of the effect of the substitution on the construction schedule. (9) Description of changes that will be required in other work or product if the substitute product is approved.

In addition, at the deposition held on the same date of May 19, 1995, Carl Fernandes conceded that petitioner Wood-Metal did not submit an appropriate prequalifying statement at the time Wood-Metal's bid was submitted, even though he contended that Wood-Metal was qualified on the date of bid submission (See, Fernandes deposition at page 25, line 1 through 24). In addition, in response to the allegation that Wood-Metal had failed to satisfy the line-by-line bidding requirements, Fernandes contended that, by submitting a two page summary comparison chart to its alternate bid (See, Hoffman, affidavit Exhibit B, last two pages of bid) Wood-Metal had satisfactorily complied with the line-by-line specification requirement.

Petitioner contends that by not even considering alternate bids, the respondent Board of Education violated the State Bidding Law regarding the award of contracts. In addition, since the architect never even considered Wood-Metal's bid, any claim by the architect that Wood-Metal's bid was rejected due to its failure to comply with a line-by-line comparison was, at best, a pretext. However, at the same time, petitioner argued that it could not comply with the bidding requirements which it viewed as being too onerous and unreasonable under the circumstances. Finally, petitioner contended that, by failing to consider its alternate bid, the Board of Education's architect demonstrated favoritism in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-15(d) which prohibits specifications which would require "with regard to any purchase, contract or agreement, the furnishing of any 'brand name,' but may in all cases require 'brand name or equivalent,'" Finally, petitioner contends that Dean did not incur any hardship, even though some work has been generated by it since March 30, 1995, since Dean was not allegedly entitled to the contract in the first place.

In reply, the respondent Board of Education indicated that the school is under a tight building construction schedule and that the Board accepted the recommendations of its architect based upon the bid submissions made prior to February 28, 1995. The Board indicated that Dean complied with the specifications, including the requirement to submit a base bid, and since they were the only contractor to do this with appropriate backup information, that bid was the lowest responsible bid at the time. Further, since Wood-Metal did not provide a base bid but instead, relied only upon an alternate bid, the Board was under no obligation to consider it unless all bids exceeded the fully budgeted amount. The Dean fell well within those limits. Further, the Board was satisfied that the architect properly rejected Wood-Metal's bid when it failed to comply with the line-by-line requirements set forth in the bid specification. As a result, it was Wood-Metal which defeated its own ability to submit an acceptable bid.

Respondent Dean contends, among other things, that Wood-Metal failed to act with "utmost promptitude" when it failed to challenge the award of Contract No. 7 in a timely fashion.

It relied upon the case of Richardson Engineering Co. v. Rutgers, et al, 51 N.J. 207, 219 (1968), in which the New Jersey State Supreme Court set specific time limits on the length of time within which an unsuccessful bidder must commence its legal challenge to an award of a public contract. In that regard, Dean contends that within ten days of the awarding of the contract, Wood-Metal should have sought restraints but instead allowed this matter to continue until almost three months before an emergent hearing was ultimately heard by this tribunal.

In addition, Dean contends that Wood-Metal failed to conform to the specifications to a substantial degree. Further, Wood-Metal failed to submit a prequalifying statement, which was also required in the bid specifications. By showing noncompliance with the bid specifications, Wood-Metal jeopardized its right to be considered a responsible bid under the circumstances. In that regard, Dean contends that Fernandes's two page comparison summary did not provide specific product data to respond to the requirements of the bid specification for Contract No. 7.

LEGAL ANALYSIS, FINDINGS, CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Emergent relief is available from the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5. This Rule provides that the standards for granting such relief shall be those articulated by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). The Crowe decision underscores the time honored equitable principles to be used when assessing whether preliminary relief should issue. These are: Whether irrefutable harm will ensue if the emergent relief is not provided; whether the applicant can show that the legal right underlying the claim is settled as a matter of law; whether the applicant can demonstrate a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits; and the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief. Applying those standards to the instant situation, I FIND that petitioner Wood-Metal has not carried this burden and that the application for emergent relief should be DENIED.

In assessing whether reasonable probability of success on the merits has been demonstrated by petitioner, it is essential to review the statutory provision which governs the award of a public contract by a local school district. In pertinent part, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-37 provides:

All purchases, contracts or agreements which require public advertisement for bids shall be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. . . .; provided, however, that if the contracted agent, . . . having sought such quotation determines that it should not be awarded on the basis of the lowest quotation received, the contracting agent shall file a statement of explanation of the reason or reasons therefore, which shall be placed on file with said purchase, contract or agreement.

A major objective of this statute, as with all public bidding statutes, is “to guard against favoritism, improvidence, extravagance and corruption” and “to secure for the public the benefit of unfettered competition.” Terminal Const. Corp. v. Atlantic Sewerage Authority, 67 N.J. 403, 409-10 (1975). Thus, the award is to be made to the lowest bidder, but in recognition of the need to assess the effect on the public interest in making the award for the provision of goods or services to the public, the governing body is required to assess the responsibility of the bidders and award only to the lowest responsible bidder, stating the cause for any determination that responsibility is lacking in the lowest bidder.

It is to be noted that Case Law in New Jersey in assessing the awarding of public bids has long recognized that the bidder who achieves the status of the lowest bid enjoys a status that may not be lightly disturbed. Sellitto v. Cedar Grove Township, 133 N.J.L. 41, 42 (Supreme Ct. 1945). A question of whether an individual is the lowest responsible bidder is a question of fact which is a matter for determination by the governing body awarding the bid. Id. at 43.

Responsibility has been defined as the “characteristic the absence of which ‘would cause fair-minded and reasonable men to believe’ that it was not in the best interest of the municipality to award the contract to the lowest bidder. Arthur Venneri v. Paterson Housing Authority, 29 N.J. 392, 402 (1959).” Suburban Restoration Co. v. Jersey City Housing Authority, 179 N.J. Super. 479, 483 (App. Div. 1981).

Here, Wood-Metal failed to comply at the outset regarding the submission of a base bid or equal, which was provided for in the bid specification. Instead, it chose to submit an alternate bid. The school board relied upon the recommendations of its architect which determined that alternate bids were not even to be considered where valid base bids were otherwise submitted by even just one contractor. Under the circumstances, I can FIND absolutely no fault with the determination of the architect to consider only base bids or equal where the base bid fell within the budgeted amount for the Board's high school. I also FIND totally unpersuasive Wood-Metal's argument that it had substantially complied with the line-by-line specifications of the bid when it submitted its comparison chart along with its bid. I specifically FIND that Wood-Metal's comparison chart grossly deviated from a minimum level of acceptability under the circumstances and its paucity of specific information is equally astonishing considering the fact that, plaintiff's counsel's Wood-Metal's representative, Fernandes, has approximately forty years in the business. One would have expected the type of bid which Wood-Metal submitted to have been prepared by a mere novice in the field rather than one with considerable alleged experience. If anything, the singular failing on the part of Wood-Metal to submit a compliant bid with sufficient data to enable the architect to reasonably even consider the bid at all represents a significant and material defect which, in itself, defeats the ability of Wood-Metal to prevail upon the merits at a full plenary hearing to be held in this matter. And I so FIND. Similarly, armed with the alleged knowledge and experience of Fernandes, Wood-Metal should have known that the submission of an alternate bid under the circumstances was inappropriate, incorrect, and ill-advised. Instead, it should have submitted a base bid or equal and should have provided the specific information as was required by the bid specification. That also constitutes a material and independent failing on Wood Metal's part. And I so FIND. In addition, I am concerned about the failure on the part of Wood-Metal to submit a valid prequalifying statement along with its bid, even though it contends that it was otherwise qualified at the time. The specifications were meant to be honored, not altered or disregarded. Instead, Wood-Metal, for whatever reason, chose to submit a bid which substantially failed to address the contract requirements of the Board. Under those circumstances alone, I FIND that Wood-Metal committed a serious breach of professional responsibility regarding the bid process when it submitted its alternate bid for the individual reasons set forth hereinabove.

Further, I am also satisfied that Wood-Metal was derelict in the prosecution of its appeal when it failed to articulate its objections "with utmost promptitude" in accordance with Richardson Engineering Co. v. Rutgers, supra. I FIND that, unlike loose furniture and/or appliances which can be created and supplied late in the construction of a school facility, the work required for the design and construction of premanufactured wood casement systems and equipment must be initiated early on in the process. It must be coordinated with the plumbers, heating and ventilation contractors, particularly here where the items were to be used regarding the installation of science laboratories. As a result, it was incumbent upon Wood-Metal to initiate its appeal in an expeditious fashion and, when it failed to do so until April 27, 1995, some two months after the bid was awarded, Wood-Metal severely exceeded reasonable limits regarding the prosecution of its claim. And I so FIND. In the process, Dean went ahead with its contract and did incur sufficient hardship already despite the claim by Wood-Metal that Dean should have halted its work earlier on than the date of filing of the instant appeal. I FIND no excuse on the part of Wood-Metal which reasonably excuses it from a affirmative obligation to have filed its claim with utmost promptitude under the circumstances. In the process, I reject Wood-Metal's claim that its delay was, in part, occasioned by representation by the Board attorney that for a period of time after the bid award, the Board was predisposed to consider reawarding this contract. That allegation was not substantiated, nor corroborated at the hearing. As a result, and independent of my findings with reference to the above-cited inaccuracies of the alternate bid submitted by Wood-Metal, I FIND and CONCLUDE that Wood-Metal's failure to timely process its claim was a substantial breach which also causes its request for temporary restraints to fail at this time.

Overall, I FIND that petitioner has fallen very short of establishing anycausal basis to allow for the grant of emergency relief at this time. As such, I reject its arguments that the award of the bid to Dean should fail. Instead, Dean was the only bidder which submitted an appropriate base bid with appropriate and satisfactory documentation to convince the architect that it was the lowest responsible bid under the circumstances. By contrast, and for the reasons stated hereinabove, I FIND that petitioner failed to satisfy a whole host of requirements when it submitted its alternate bid in February 1995.

When coupled with the inappropriate delays which it generated in pursuit of its application for emergent relief, one may become initially perplexed by the apparent cavalier approach taken with reference to the submission of Wood-Metal's bid for Contract No. 7. Fernandes has had almost forty years of experience in the industry and yet the contract bid appears glaringly deficient for the reasons stated hereinabove. An explanation perhaps lies in the admission made by plaintiff's counsel when he contended that petitioner could not comply with the bid requirements because it found them to be too onerous and unreasonable. I have not been presented with any sufficient data to suggest that efforts were made by Wood-Metal to challenge the entire bid process in a timely fashion in order to forestall the awarding of the bid in February 1995. Instead, petitioner submitted its alternate bid, lost out on the award, and only some two months later it proceeded to issue the current challenge. On balance, I FIND this approach to be less than adequate and somewhat half-hearted at best. At the same time, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the applicant has not demonstrated any legal right underlying its claim is settled as a matter of law. I am not convinced that the architect was unreasonable in its approach toward demanding base line bids or equals at the time or that its rejection of alternate bids was somehow to be construed as being inappropriate. I also do not FIND any favoritism, improvidence, extravagance or corruption by the Board requiring the use of base bids or equal where valid base bids were submitted under budget. In fact, the architect recommended the rejection of the true lowest bid when it also failed to meet minimum standards of acceptability.

Based on all the foregoing I also CONCLUDE that petitioner has not demonstrated preliminarily a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. If anything, the depositions taken of Linda Andreychick and Carl Fernandes, the former at the specific request of petitioner in this current application, has convinced me by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Linda Andreychik's handling of this matter on behalf of the respondent Board was totally appropriate and consistent with the requirements of the law. In addition, I CONCLUDE that irreparable harm will not ensue to Wood-Metal if the emergent relief is not provided. Petitioner is always entitled to bid appropriately as projects and this ORDER is not a bar to those efforts in the future. By contrast, harm will occur to Dean and the Board, since Dean has already properly initiated work in accordance with its bid award. I also CONCLUDE that there would be a significant hardship to the respondent Board should a temporary restraint be imposed at this time since as a practical matter the School Board is under a scheduled completion date and the Contract No. 7 is an integral part of that process. It is ORDERED that the request for emergent relief is DENIED..

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but not later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Superintendent, employed by contract pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 et seq., appealed Board of Education's action to retain his employee status, but relieve him of his duties as Superintendent and assign him to perform the duties of Assistant Superintendent instead. Petitioner contended that he could not be removed from his position of Superintendent without filing of tenure charges, and that the tenure bestowed on him for the duration of his contract by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 et seq. expressly entitled him to function as, and perform the duties of, Superintendent during that time.

ALJ found that petitioner retains his employment and continues receiving all other benefits of his contract, so that the Board's action is consistent with the statutory scheme as previously interpreted by the Commissioner. (Harrington) Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner modified initial decision to address concomitant holding of Harrington that duly contracted Superintendent, like any other contractually employed teaching staff member, may be relieved of duties by the Board of Education for the duration of the contract. (N.J.S.A. 18A:27-9) Commissioner further found, however, that controlling statute did not contemplate assignment of alternative duties in such cases, so that, while the Board could relieve petitioner of his duties while retaining his employment as Superintendent, it could not assign him the duties of Assistant Superintendent in their stead. Board was ordered to cease and desist requiring petitioner to perform such duties.

Decided: May 12, 1995

BEFORE MARYLOUISE LUCCHI-McCLOUD, ALJ:

This case comes by way of a petition filed on behalf of Thomas G. Dunn, Jr., with the Department of Education on July 1, 1994. An answer was received by the Department on July 15, 1994 and on July 25, 1994 the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

In addition to the ultimate issues in this case which are resolved by this initial decision granting the cross-motion for summary decision, a number of other motions were filed. Cross-motions for emergent relief were originally filed and heard by the Honorable Richard McGill, ALJ on July 28, 1994. Both motions were denied and the matter proceeded for scheduling.

DISCUSSION

Although this initial decision is captioned with the two motion decisions which are dispositive of the entire case a number of other motions were filed and must be detailed here for clarity. As a number of the motions were filed prior to December 6, 1994, oral argument was scheduled on that date for the motions. The first of these that will be discussed was a motion to dismiss the action against one of the individuals named in addition to the Elizabeth Board of Education. At the time of the oral argument on December 16, 1994 that motion was granted and it was also ordered that the matter be dismissed against each of the named individuals consisting of Urbano Venero, Newton J. Burket, Jr., Lelia Poch, Daniel P. Sullivan and Carolyn Cole. That order is based upon the reasons given on the record on that date. In the briefest of possible terms it is apparent that while the Board of Education may come under the auspices of the Department of Education each of these individuals may not be sued on an individual basis in this particular forum.

Expedited scheduling was attempted in this matter however the parties advised that a temporary resolution which would allow for the appropriate filing of motions and the discovery process had been accomplished and, as a result, the matter continued allowing the parties to file motions. Among those motions were cross-motions for summary decision. Although the parties had filed the motions there was a request that the undersigned await the decision of the Commissioner of Education in the case of Robert M. Harrington v. Board of Education of the Township of Clinton, Hunterdon County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 10750-93 which had a final decision date of February 16, 1995 and was then provided to the undersigned. The parties had indicated during oral argument that this case was pending before the Honorable Kathleen Duncan, ALJ and might be illustrative as to the question being presented in this case.

ISSUES AND DISCUSSION

The facts in this case are not in dispute and as a result the matter is ripe for summary decision.

The essential facts that exist in this case are that by contract dated August 15, 1991, the respondent, Elizabeth Board of Education, (BOE) appointed the petitioner, Thomas G. Dunn, Jr., to serve as superintendent of schools for five years. The contract contained no termination provision but required the respondent to provide petitioner with at least one year notice of its intention not to renew the contract.

By a five-to-four vote, the respondent adopted a resolution on June 29, 1994, not to renew the petitioner's contract and terminating his services as superintendent effective June 30, 1994. The respondent has continued to pay the petitioner pursuant to his contract although he has not been functioning in the role of superintendent. Voting during that particular vote was Lila Poch and the petitioner questioned her residency during the course of this matter.

On February 8, 1995 the respondent passed a second resolution of nonrenewal of the petitioner's employment contract by a vote of eight-to-zero. As a result subsequent filings were received espousing the idea that regardless of the status of Ms. Poch at the time of the original vote the matter is now moot.

At no time during this action have proceedings been commenced against the petitioner for inefficiency, incapacity or conduct unbecoming a superintendent. This dispute revolves entirely around the position of superintendent and the statute and related case law surrounding it. The petitioner maintains career tenure in his former position of assistant superintendent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.4.

In July 1994 some discussions in the nature of the possibility of settlement took place. No settlement agreement was ever signed by the parties although a vote was taken by the respondent board of education regarding certain terms of what might have been a proposed settlement. Those terms were approved by the board of education.

DISCUSSION

For purposes of ease it may be best to deal with the motion to enforce the "settlement" first. In this case no written document was ever exchanged and signed by the parties. It is clear from the filings that there is a dispute that any meetings of the minds ever existed. A settlement pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1 means any agreement between parties which resolves disputed matters and may end all or part of the case. Settlements are more particularly described in N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 which states that when the parties to a case wish to settle the matter the judge shall require the parties to disclose the full settlement terms in writing by consent order or stipulation signed by all parties or their attorneys or, orally, by the parties or their representatives. It is then up the administrative law judge to determine whether the stipulation of settlement or the parties' oral declaration of a settlement under oath is voluntary, consistent with the law and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy. N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1(b). Should those things be found the administrative law judge (ALJ) is required to issue an initial decision incorporating the full settlement terms and approving the settlement. In cases such as this the matter would then be transmitted to the Department of Education for a final decision on the settlement.

In this case there is no question that none of these things occurred. Whether or not there might have been, if not a meeting of the minds, a closing in on position of the parties, there has never been a settlement disclosed to the undersigned by which a determination can be made that that settlement is voluntary, consistent with the law and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1. Absent such ability to make a determination no settlement has occurred, least of all been accepted by way of initial decision and subsequently final decision by the Department of Education. As a result the motion to enforce the terms of the alleged "settlement" must be denied. No settlement has ever been disclosed to the undersigned that complies with the Administrative Procedure Act and the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules. Additionally no settlement has ever been finally accepted by the Department of Education and as such none exists in this case.

In the petition there are requests made for compensatory and punitive damages based upon an allegation of malicious interference with the petitioner's contractual rights as well as a request for damages for humiliation, mental pain and anguish and attorney's fees. These matters may be dealt with simultaneously for the purposes of this initial decision. The jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Education is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 which provides that the Commissioner shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine, without cost to the parties, all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws, excepting those governing higher education, or under the rules of the State Board or of the Commissioner. The courts have "repeatedly reaffirmed great breadth" of his power, Hinfey v. Matawan Regional Bd. of Ed., 77 N.J. 514, 524 (1978), however this is not limitless.

One area specifically exempted from the Commissioner's jurisdictional grant is contractual disputes unless only incidental interpretation of the contract is necessary to resolve the claim. New Jersey Educ. Ass'n. v. Trenton Bd. of Educ., 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 481, 489. For example, the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to decide issues arising from an employment contract between a janitor and a school board. (Citation omitted) He does not have jurisdiction to decide issues arising from a contract between a milk supplier and a board. (Citation omitted). Nor can he exercise jurisdiction over a contract dispute between an architect and a board of education, (citation omitted) or interpret a contract in a tenure dispute . . . (citation omitted). [Ibid.]

The courts have affirmed the Commissioner's lack of jurisdiction over contractual disputes. See Picogna v. Bd. of Ed. of Cherry Hill Twp., 249 N.J.Super. 332, 335 (App. Div. 1991); South Orange-Maplewood Ed. Ass'n. v. Bd. of Ed. of South Orange, 146 N.J.Super. 457, 463 (App. Div. 1977); Newark Teachers' Union v. Bd. of Ed. of Newark, 149 N.J.Super. 367, 372 (Ch. Div. 1977). The reasoning for this has been that there is no need to defer to administrative expertise since the only question properly presented to the court in contract disputes is one of contract interpretation.

It has also been consistently held that the Commissioner cannot award punitive damages, North Bergen Fed. of Teachers Bd. of Ed. of Bergen, 1975 S.L.D. 461, 467 or counsel fees, Balsley v. North Hunterdon Bd. of Ed., 117 N.J. 434, 442-43 (1990). It has also been held that the Commissioner cannot award legal costs. Lilenfield v. Bd. of Ed. of Watchung, 1977 S.L.D. 315, 323; Watsula v. Bd. of Ed. of Plumstead, 1977 S.L.D. 692, 695. Moreover, the payment of any damages other than lost earnings or restoring an increment which has been improperly withheld, is not within the Commissioner's authority. McLean v. Bd. of Ed. of Glen Ridge, 177 S.L.D. 311, 314; Smith v. Bd. of Ed. of Hamilton, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 5468-87, adopted in part and rejected in part on other grounds, Comm. Of Ed. Dec. (April 21, 1988).

In the present matter the petitioner asserts malicious interference with contract. This claim is purely one of contract interpretation and requires no administrative expertise and is, therefore, not within the scope of the Commissioner's jurisdiction. As a result that portion should, and hereby is DISMISSED. As to the petitioner's request for punitive damages, counsel fees and costs, the case law clearly establishes that the Commissioner lacks the authority to grant such relief and those requests are hereby DISMISSED.

We now turn to the motion to compel the deposition of Lila Poch based upon an allegation that she did not, in fact, have appropriate residency within the City of Elizabeth while acting as a board member. Determining the residency of Ms. Poch will not affect the outcome of the board vote at issue because, at the very least, she was a de facto member of the board which thereby rendered her vote to be valid. The definition of a de facto officer was set forth in Jersey City v. Department of Civil Service, 57 N.J. Super. 13 (App. Div. 1959) as follows:

An officer de facto is one whose acts, though not those of a lawful officer, the law, upon principles of policy and justice, will hold valid so far as they involve the interests of the public and third persons, where the duties of the office were exercised,

First, without a known appointment or election, but under such circumstances of reputation or acquiescence as were calculated to induce people without inquiry to submit to or invoke his action, supposing him to be the officer he assume to be.

Second, under color of a known and valid appointment or election, but where the officer had failed to conform to some precedent requirement or condition, as to take an oath, give a bond, or the like.

Third, under color of a known election or appointment, void because the officer was not eligible, or because there was want of power in the electing or appointing body, or by reason of some defect or irregularity in its exercise, such ineligibility, want of power, or defect being unknown to the public.

Fourth, under color of an election or appointment by or pursuant to a public unconstitutional law, before the same is adjudged to be such. Ibid.

The legality of a de facto officer has also been considered by the Commissioner of Education in Monsees v. Bloomingdale Bd. Of Ed., 1982 S.L.D. 1384. The Commissioner stated that:

A de facto school officer is one who has entered into possession of a school office and assumed to exercise the function thereof by virtue of an apparent election or appointment which is illegal or irregular. (Citation omitted). It is also well established that the acts of a de facto officer are valid and may not be challenged and set aside on the grounds that he did not hold title de jure. The official acts of a de facto school officer, which a de jure officer would be authorized to do, are, if formed in the prescribed manner, as valid and binding on the public and third persons as the acts of de jure officers, and authority to act cannot be questioned collaterally. This is true even though the acts are performed pending a contest or quo warranto proceeding which subsequently terminates in the ouster of the de facto officer from office. (Citation omitted) Id. At 1409-10.

As the result of this, the vote of Ms. Poch, cannot be used to invalidate the board's resolution of June 29, 1994. Based upon this analysis the motion to compel Ms. Poch's deposition is hereby DENIED. This denial is based upon the above reasoning and not predicated upon the subsequent vote by the respondent board on February 8, 1995 passing a second resolution by a vote of eight-to-zero in which Ms. Poch did not participate. It is not necessary to reach the question of whether or not this subsequent vote moots the issue of Ms. Poch's participation.

The respondent also brought a motion for sanctions based upon an alleged refusal to provide discovery or for more specific answers. A counterclaim was made by the petitioner that sanctions should be imposed upon the respondent. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-10.5 sanctions may be imposed by an ALJ pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4 for failure to comply with the requirements of the discovery subchapter of the rules. Before imposing sanctions, the judge shall provide an opportunity to be heard to each of the parties. Based upon the ultimate decision in this case the issue of sanctions becomes moot and any further hearing is not required. Additionally the imposition of sanctions would be inappropriate absent the ability of both parties to be heard on the issue. It should be noted that sanctions may be granted for the unreasonable failure to comply with any order of a judge or any requirements of the Uniform Procedure Rules. Those sanctions run the gamut from continuing a proceeding to dismissing or granting a motion or application and include the suppression of a defense or claim and the exclusion of evidence. There also exists the catchall phrase that the judge may "take other appropriate case-related action." N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.5. These issues become moot in light of the ultimate determination in this initial decision and therefore both applications are DENIED.

All of this legal analysis brings us finally to the question of appointment of superintendents pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17.15. That provides that the board of education may by contract appoint, for a term of not less than three nor more than five years. At the conclusion of the term of the initial contract or of any subsequent contract as hereinafter provided, the superintendent shall be deemed reappointed for another contract term of the same duration as the previous contract unless, at least one year prior to the expiration of the first or any subsequent contract, the board shall notify the superintendent in writing that he will not be reappointed at the end of the current term, in which event his employment shall cease at the expiration of that term.

In this case much has been made of what the term employment means. Thomas G. Dunn, Jr. remains employed by the district and has received notice that the board, at least by way of the February 8, 1995 vote, had passed a second resolution which was one of nonrenewal of his contract. During the entire time of this proceeding the petitioner has retained employment with the district and has not had a reduction in salary from that found in his contract. No action has ever been taken in the context of this case to affect the tenure rights which the petitioner has in any other position. The position of superintendent is by contract through the statute only. The petitioner continues employment and continues receiving all of the benefits of the contract.

The Commissioner of Education has stated that the scheme established by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15. to 20.5 provides for a superintendent to be employed through one or more three to five year contracts, with employment following the initial contract to either continue via a succession of subsequent contract(s), or cease upon expiration of the current contract following due notice of nonrenewal, or alternatively, upon dismissal through tenure proceedings. The Commissioner of Education has pointed out that there is neither mention of, nor place for a unilateral termination, notwithstanding a payout situation involving a sum equivalent to remaining salary based upon the contract. While having pointed that out in Harrington v. Bd. of Ed. of the Twp. of Clinton, Hunterdon County, Commissioner Decision (February 16, 1995) the Commissioner also points out that this scheme expressly provides for employment for the duration of a superintendent's contract, thus conferring a status beyond mere entitlement to money. This of course leaves open the question of whether or not the continued employment compels a board to file tenure charges or continue, for practical purposes, a working relationship it no longer finds satisfactory. There is however a recognition that a notice of nonrenewal may be given pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 that employment will not be continued beyond the term of the contract.

In the case of Thomas G. Dunn, Jr. he has retained his employment with the District, although his duties have changed, and not been subject to a payout of the remaining contractual period. In this case the petitioner has not been dismissed but retains employment through the District as well as all the benefits of the contract. The only thing required by the law is "employment" for the duration of a superintendent's contract. This confers a status beyond mere entitlement to money. The petitioner in this case retains his employment and retains all of the benefits although his duties have been changed and amended over time. As a result the petitioner's motion for summary decision is hereby DENIED and the respondent's cross-motion for summary decision is hereby GRANTED.

ORDERS

Based upon the foregoing it is hereby ORDERED that

1. The motion to enforce the alleged settlement is hereby DENIED.
2. The claim is for malicious interference with contract, compensatory damages, punitive damages, and attorney's fees and costs are hereby DENIED and the cross-motion for summary decision on those issues is hereby GRANTED for the reasons stated above.
3. The motion to depose Lila Poch is hereby DENIED.
4. Cross-motions for the imposition of sanctions for alleged discovery violations are hereby DENIED.
5. The petitioner's motion for summary decision is hereby DENIED.
6. The respondent's cross-motion for summary decision is hereby GRANTED for the reasons stated above and the petition is hereby dismissed in its entirety.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision on this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14b-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision is received by the parties, any party may file exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, 8th Floor, CN 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

THOMAS G. DUNN, JR.,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE	:
CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:
_____	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, as were replies thereto by the Board of Education. Exceptions by the Board on the issue of sanctions were also filed with the Director of the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14.

On exception before the Commissioner, petitioner urges reconsideration of his prior briefs and, in particular, renews his argument that the law entitles him not only to continued employment for the term of his contract, but specifically to employment in the position of Superintendent, with all of the duties, rights and amenities attendant thereto. Petitioner contends:

The key issue, and the issue that Judge Lucchi-McCloud seems to side-step and won't address for some reason is Petitioner's right to employment as Superintendent of Schools through June 30, 1996. The Court below never addresses, or even mentions, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20 and N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.2, the specific statutes that establish tenure during the term of the contract, ignores the extensive legislative history presented to it, and fails to recognize the complex issues that must be resolved. The decision is merely a conclusion, with nothing to support it. Less than two pages are devoted to the main issue in the litigation, and there is certainly no in-depth analysis of this issue by the Court. (emphasis in original) (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 2)

In reply, the Board contends that petitioner's exceptions ignore the Commissioner's decision in Harrington, supra, which expressly holds that a board may relieve a superintendent of his or her duties at any time between notice of termination and expiration of contract.

Upon review of the record and consideration of the parties' arguments on exception, the Commissioner determines to affirm the initial decision with modification as set forth below.

Initially, the Commissioner notes his full concurrence with the ALJ's determinations regarding the parties' purported settlement agreement, petitioner's claims for punitive damages and attorney fees and his related contractual claims, and compelling the testimony of Board member Poch. (Initial Decision at pp. 4-8)

The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ's conclusion, based on Harrington, supra, that the statutory scheme governing appointment of superintendents does not permit unilateral termination of a superintendent's employment, but rather requires either that employment be maintained for the duration of the contract or that tenure charges be brought pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. (Initial Decision at pp. 9-10) Where the ALJ's analysis falls short, however, is in failing to include, and to apply to the facts of this matter, the concomitant holding of Harrington that a superintendent may be relieved of his or her duties during the period between notice of nonrenewal pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 and actual expiration of the employment contract.

Specifically, in Harrington, the Commissioner held that:

the law's requirement for continued employment does not compel a board to either file tenure charges or continue, for practical purposes, a working relationship it no longer finds satisfactory. Rather, as with any other contracted teaching staff member, the board may elect to relieve the superintendent of the performance of his or her duties during any time between the giving of notice pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 that employment will not be continued beyond the term of the current contract and the actual termination of employment upon that contract's expiration. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-9. Such a result recognizes both the employment entitlement of the tenured superintendent and the need for a reasonable degree of flexibility on the part of the employing board of education.

(Slip Opinion at pp. 21-22)

Thus, as noted by the Board, petitioner's argument to the effect that, so long as petitioner remains entitled to the position of Superintendent, he must be allowed to actually perform the duties attached to that position, has been negated by the Commissioner's holding in Harrington. Therefore, the Commissioner finds the action of the Board herein in relieving petitioner of his duties as superintendent while maintaining his status as an employee of the district was neither contrary to law nor violative of petitioner's tenure right. However, the inquiry does not end with this finding.

In the present matter, petitioner was not merely relieved of his duties as Superintendent. The record shows, and the parties do not dispute, that subsequent to being informed that he was no longer to perform the duties of Superintendent, petitioner was directed to perform instead the duties of Assistant Superintendent, and to report to the Acting Superintendent appointed to carry out the duties of which petitioner had been relieved. The Board views this arrangement as acceptable, even commendable, as the duties of Assistant Superintendent are within the scope of petitioner's certification, petitioner has tenure rights in the position of Assistant Superintendent, and the Board needs these functions filled because the person formerly performing them has been appointed Acting Superintendent. The Board further contends that educational continuity is being served, as it intends to appoint the Acting Superintendent to the position of Superintendent upon expiration of petitioner's contract.

The difficulty with this arrangement, however, is that it ignores petitioner's statutory entitlement to the position of Superintendent for the duration of his contract and subverts the intent of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 et seq. to strike a balance of power between the board and its superintendent through the hybrid mechanism of contractual tenure. In effect, the Board herein has removed petitioner from the position of Superintendent and transferred him to the distinct position of Assistant Superintendent, notwithstanding that he retains the salary and benefits due him under his contract as Superintendent. This the Board cannot do and still abide by the intent of the law, which is not now, and never was, to permit a board to replace a duly contracted superintendent easily or without meaningful practical consequence. Rather, under the statutory scheme, a board is given the benefit of having its employment obligation to any superintendent limited to 3 - 5 years; but the superintendent is given the benefit, for reasons of both personal stability and educational integrity, of employment security and a degree of professional independence for that period of time. It is axiomatic that, when entering into an employment contract with a superintendent, a board must expect to make a commitment to live and work with him or her during the term of the contract, and if the board in that time becomes dissatisfied, it cannot merely dismiss the superintendent, impose a unilateral “buyout” or effectuate what amounts to an involuntary transfer to another position in the district. Rather, the board must conclude that the prospect of continuing the working relationship, for a period which by law cannot be more than 5 years and in reality is likely to be considerably less, is so untenable that, in the absence of a mutual separation agreement, it warrants the serious step of either filing tenure charges or relieving the superintendent of the performance of his or her duties under a statute (N.J.S.A. 18A:27-9) which does not contemplate performance of other work in lieu of the relieved duties, notwithstanding that the affected teaching staff member retains employee status for the remainder of the contract and the board obtains no benefit in return for salary and emoluments proffered during that time.

Thus, in the present instance, while the Board was free to unilaterally relieve petitioner of his duties for the remainder of his contract, it was not free to assign him the duties of Assistant Superintendent instead. Petitioner’s tenure right to that position, should he choose to exercise it, will arise upon expiration of his contract, and should the Board need the functions of Assistant Superintendent filled in the interim, it must make some arrangement other than assigning these duties to petitioner. Neither will this prohibition result in harm to educational continuity, as there is nothing to prevent the Board from continuing with its plan to appoint the current Acting Superintendent, to whom the Assistant Superintendent must report and from whom he or she must take assignments, to the position of Superintendent upon expiration of petitioner’s contract.

Accordingly, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law as modified above, so that the Board is directed to cease and desist requiring petitioner to perform the duties of Assistant Superintendent for the duration of his contract. As in Harrington, supra, to the extent that petitioner may be entitled to any further relief as a result of the Board’s ultra vires action herein, the Commissioner declines to so order in view of the recency of the controlling statutory scheme and the absence of prior interpretation by the Commissioner and State Board on the question of alternative assignment upon relieving a superintendent of duties.

The Commissioner makes no determination on the issue of sanctions, as that function is reserved to the Director of the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning District appealed determination that it return $349,930 in grant funds to respondent Department for failure to expend or commit said funds by June 30, 1992.

ALJ concluded that respondent's demand for the return of the grant funds was not arbitrary or unreasonable. ALJ concluded that the District failed to expend or commit the funds in fiscal 1992 and thereby violated the conditions imposed by the Commissioner in the award of the discretionary aid grant. For the funds to be committed, the District had to be contractually or otherwise legally bound to invest resources by June 30, 1992. ALJ ordered that the Department was entitled to recover the grant funds not committed by June 30, 1992.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own and directed the adjustment of the District's 1995-96 state aid to recover the funds at issue.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Jersey City School District (District), appeals from the decision that it return $349,930 to respondent, Division of Administration and Finance of the New Jersey Department of Education (Department). The District received the money through a grant from the Commissioner of Education's discretionary aid fund. The terms of the grant required that the funds be either expended or committed by June 30, 1992. Respondent argues that petitioner did not comply with those conditions because the monies were neither expended or committed by June 30, 1992. Therefore, respondent demands that the District return these grant funds. The District concedes that it had not expended the monies by June 30, 1992, but maintains that it had committed the grant funds by June 30, 1992.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on March 30, 1994, as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to-15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A prehearing conference was held on August 11, 1994, and hearings were held on January 23 and 24, 1995. The parties submitted post hearing briefs and the record closed on March 29, 1995.

ISSUES

1. Is the Department's demand that the District return $349,930 in grant funds arbitrary and unreasonable?
- 2a. Did the District commit the grant funds for the District's Early Childhood Program by the end of fiscal year 1991-92? and if so,
- 2b. Was the commitment of grant funds consistent with the Commissioner's letter dated October 21, 1991.
- 3a. Is the purchase order issued to the District (i.e., building renovations and repairs) a commitment for purposes of the grant, and if so,
- 3b. Did the District substantially comply with the conditions of the grant?
4. Was the District's commitment and use of grant funds consistent with the statutory purpose of the discretionary aid fund?

FACTS

The parties have stipulated to the following facts:

1. A discretionary aid account of $25 million was established within the New Jersey Department of Education by L. 1991, c. 62, § 39, enacted and effective on March 14, 1991. This account was established for use by the Commissioner of Education to provide aid to school districts in order to ensure the continuation of educational quality during the period of transition to the new State aid program under the Quality Education Act, L. 1990, c. 52 as amended by L. 1991, c. 62.
2. The Commissioner of Education, by memo of April 25, 1991, advised school districts of the discretionary aid funding program and invited the submission of grant proposals.
3. The petitioner, Jersey City School District submitted a proposal for discretionary aid funds on May 15, 1991, seeking funding in the amount of $9,185,748.
4. On July 22, 1991, the Commissioner of Education advised the District of the ability to provide funding in the amount of $2.5 million and requiring the submission of a proposal revised according to the funding amount.
5. The District submitted a revised proposal on October 3, 1991. The proposal included a plan for expansion of the District's Early Childhood Program by establishing additional pre-kindergarten classes within the public schools and also in rented space within local housing projects.
6. By letter of October 21, 1991, the Commissioner of Education awarded a discretionary aid grant totaling $2,414,595 for implementation of the District's proposal, including $2,284,904 for implementation of the Early Childhood Program. The Commissioner's letter stated that "All funds not expended or committed at the conclusion of the fiscal year shall be returned to the Department of Education.”

7. By June 4, 1992, the District was in the process of finalizing a written lease to rent space at the A. Harry Moore Apartments on Duncan Avenue, Jersey City, (Duncan Project) for use as an Early Childhood Development Center. The written lease was entered between the Jersey City Housing Authority and the District.
8. On June 9, 1992, the District submitted educational specifications to the respondent's Bureau of Planning concerning the Early Childhood Development Center to be housed at the Duncan Project.
9. The Bureau of Facility Planning approved the educational specifications by letter dated June 30, 1994.
10. The District reserved $349,930.38 in discretionary aid funds for building renovations for preschool classrooms, by purchase order dated June 30, 1992. It canceled the purchase order on July 1, 1992.
11. The District advertised for bids on July 18, 1992 and July 19, 1992, for renovation work for the Early Childhood Development Center at the Duncan Project and opened bids on July 28, 1992.
12. Contracts for the renovation work were awarded by the District on August 6, 1992, to Groeschke Construction Co., for general construction work in the amount of $298,600, and to G&T Mechanical Co., Inc., for mechanical/plumbing work, in the amount of $97,000.

13. The total amount paid by the District for the renovations at the Duncan Project, after change orders, was $412,535.54.
14. The District charged $326,472.64 of the total cost of the renovation work at the Duncan Project to the discretionary aid grant funds.
15. Respondent commenced an audit of the discretionary aid grant on January 11, 1993, and reported its findings on June 28, 1993. The audit indicated that grant funds should be disallowed for the building repairs and renovations at the Duncan Project because no contracts had been signed and no bids has been solicited for the work by June 30, 1992.
16. By letter of January 26, 1994, respondent determined that the District should refund $349,930.38 of the discretionary aid grant as the questioned costs for the building program at the Duncan Project.

Based on the evidence, I further FIND the following as FACT:

On April 25, 1991, the Commissioner advised the District of the grant and invited grant proposals. The Commissioner also informed the District that "the Commissioner's QEA fund is a one-time-only supplemental state aid appropriation which must be expended during FY '92 (1991-92)." (J-1).

On October 21, 1991, the Commissioner informed the State District Superintendent, Dr. Elena Scambio, that the District had been approved to receive $2,414,595 in discretionary funds, including $2,284,904 for implementation of the Early Childhood Program. The Commissioner also notified the District that a "[s]eparate accounting must be maintained for each program. All funds not expended or committed at the conclusion of the fiscal year shall be returned to the Department of Education." J-8. The Commissioner further advised the District that "[i]n the event the program cannot be implemented as approved, the regional director of the Urban Assistance Center should be contacted immediately." Ibid.

On January 24, 1992, Thomas J. King, Acting Director, Division of Compliance, (Division) informed the District that it would audit the QEA discretionary funds awarded in FY '92. (J-9). Moreover, the auditors would review the following requirements:

2. All funds not expended or committed by June 30, 1992 shall be returned to the Department of Education.

4. In the event that a program cannot be implemented as approved, the county superintendent's office must be contacted and a decision made on appropriate action.

Thus, on three occasions, the Commissioner advised the District to take action on the funds in fiscal year 1991-92. The parties agree that the District did not expend the funds by FY '92. They dispute that the District "committed" the grant funds by June 30, 1992.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

Petitioner contends that respondent's demand for the District to return $349,930 in discretionary aid grant funds is arbitrary and unreasonable because the District did commit those funds in accordance with the conditions in the Commissioner's grant and consistent with the purpose and intent of the governing statute. Petitioner asserts that before the end of fiscal year 1992, it "reserved" the funds remaining in the grant by issuing a "purchase order" to itself. The purchase order stated that the funds were needed for the renovation of the preschool classrooms used in the Early Childhood Program. Thus, petitioner submits that the "pledge" of funds to a particular disposition satisfied the requirement that it "commit" the funds by June 30, 1992.

Alternatively, petitioner contends that the District should not be required to return the funds because it substantially complied with the conditions of the Commissioner's grant award. Petitioner avers that due to unanticipated difficulties in securing space for the Early Childhood Program, it could not expend the grant funds by June 30, 1992. However, within seven weeks from June 30, 1992, the District had incurred contractual liabilities for the program. Indeed, by August 19, 1992, the District entered into a lease agreement, opened bids for the renovation at the project, awarded construction contracts, and issued purchase orders to contractors. Thus, petitioner submits that grant funds expended within a relatively short time span after June 30, 1992, complied substantially with the grant conditions.

Respondent argues that the money was not committed as of June 30, 1992, because no contracts had been signed for services or bids solicited from contractors. Respondent further argues that a valid commitment must create a liability in the initiator. Here, there was no valid purchase order to a third party vendor. Thus, there was no valid encumbrance of funds or commitment by June 30, 1992.

Respondent argues that substantial compliance with the terms of the grant is not sufficient. Moreover, respondent asserts petitioner did not substantially comply with the terms of the grant.

I

The Quality Education Act of 1990, (QEA or Act) established a new method for distributing State aid to school districts. N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-1 to -37. On March 14, 1991, an amendment to the Act, L. 1991, c.62, § 39, appropriated $25 million for the Commissioner of Education to use for supplemental State aid to school districts. Specifically, the Legislature set up the "[s]pecial account to ensure educational quality during transition to New State Aid Program." N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-28 Historical and Statutory Notes. The statutory provision provides in part:

There is established within the Department of Education a special account into which the State Treasurer shall deposit $25,000,000. The Commissioner of Education shall utilize the monies in the fund for supplemental State aid to school districts in order to ensure the continuation of educational quality during the period of transition to the new State aid program established pursuant to P.L. 1990, c.52 (C.18A:7D-1 et al.). Any supplemental State aid provided to a school district from this account shall not be included in the calculation of the spending limitations established pursuant to section 85 of P.L. 1990, c.52 (C.18A:7D-28).

The District received the grant from the $25,000,000 discretionary fund administered by the Department.

Neither QEA nor the amendment provides for the return of funds by school districts. But see Essex County Educational Services Comm. v. N.J. Dept. of Educ., 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (Vol. 4A) 522 (Dep't. of Ed.) (where the district was required to return unexpended funds to the Department of Education because the aid programs governed by the statutory provision required the return of unexpended funds, N.J.S.A. 18A:46-19.8). Moreover, the statute does not specify the manner in which grants from the discretionary fund are to be administered. Rather, the statute vests the Commissioner with broad discretion over such matters. Accordingly, the Commissioner's October 21, 1991 letter awarding the grant funds to the District explicitly directed that funds not "expended or committed" by the end of the fiscal year must be returned to the Department. (J-8). The Commissioner further directed the District to contact the regional director of the Urban Assistance Center if the program could not be implemented as approved. Ibid.

Where the terms of a contract are clear and unambiguous, the courts must enforce those terms as written. Karl's Sales & Serv., Inc. v. Gimbel Bros., 249 N.J. Super. 487, 493 (App. Div. 1991), certif. denied, 127 N.J. 548 (1991), citing Kampf v. Franklin Life Ins. Co., 33 N.J. 36, 43 (1960); Levison v. Weintraub, 215 N.J. Super. 273, 276 (App. Div. 1987), certif. denied, 107 N.J. 650 (1987). The ordinary meaning is to be given to words, unless circumstances show that a different meaning is applicable. Deerhurst Estates v. Meadow Homes, Inc., 64 N.J. Super. 135, 148 (App. Div. 1960), on remand, 71 N.J. Super. 255 (Law Div. 1961). Technical terms of art should be given their technical meaning unless the context indicates otherwise. Deerhurst, supra, 64 N.J. Super. at 150. Often, the same word may have a variety of ordinary or technical meanings. Ibid. The standard of interpretation of a contract is the meaning that would be ascribed to it by a reasonably intelligent person who was acquainted with all the operative usages and the circumstances surrounding the making of the writing. Id. at 149. Where there is ambiguity in a contract, words are to be construed against the drafter. Karl's Sales & Serv. v. Gimbel Bros., Inc., supra., 249 N.J. Super. at 493; Matter of Community Medical Center, 623 F. 2d 864 (3d Cir. 1980).

On the other hand, where a grant agreement contains ambiguous terms, e.g., to "commit," the ambiguity should not necessarily be resolved against the Commissioner as the drafter of the grant agreement. In Bennett v. Kentucky Department of Education, 470 US 656, 105 S.Ct. 1544, 84 L.Ed. 2d 59d (1985) the Court addressed the contractual nature of federal grant agreements and stated that:

Unlike normal contractual undertakings, federal grant programs originate in and remain governed by statutory provisions expressing the judgment of Congress concerning desirable public policy....Given the structure of the grant program, the Federal Government simply could not prospectively resolve every possible ambiguity concerning particular applications of the requirement of Title [citation omitted]. ... Moreover, the fact that Title I was an ongoing, cooperative program meant that grant recipients had an opportunity to seek clarification of the program requirements. Accordingly, we do not believe that ambiguities in the requirements should invariably be resolved against the Federal Government as the drafter of the grant agreement.

Here, neither party has demonstrated that the term "committed" has a special meaning in the context of school funding. Webster's Third International Dictionary 457 (1976) defines the term to commit: "to obligate or bind to take some moral or intellectual position or course of action . . . to pledge to some particular course or use: contract or bind by obligation to a particular disposition." Thus, the term commit connotes an obligation of the committing party to a particular disposition or course of action. In its most liberal sense, the term means simply to pledge.

I have considered the District's position that it pledged the funds to a particular disposition, albeit not to a particular vendor. Indeed, on June 30, 1992, the District put aside the funds "for their express use for the building renovations for the pre-school program at the Duncan Avenue housing project." Petitioner's Initial Brief at 21-22. With the authorization of its "high-level officials," the District sought to establish a reserve through a purchase order "to carry those funds over to the next fiscal year for expenditure for their particular use". Id. at 22. The District issued the purchase order in its own name because this was the "only way it could find to document the reserve for financial recording keeping." Ibid. Thus, the District submits that under the ordinary meaning of "commit" its actions evinced a commitment of the grant funds to the Early Childhood Program.

I have also considered the context surrounding the Commissioner's use of the term "committed." Robert Finger performed the audit for the Department. Finger testified that a "commitment" is a liability to a third person vendor for goods or services. Further, a commitment which is represented by a valid purchase order must include a description of the goods or services to be purchased or delivered, an estimate, a bid or quote of the purchase price, and it must identify the vendor. And, a purchase order must be written to a third party. Essentially, the purchase order sets aside funds that will eventually become a payment or an expenditure after the service is performed or the goods are delivered. Additionally, the Department's guidelines used by school districts for keeping records and making reports about school financing state that "[a] purchase order constitutes a legal document binding the Board of Education upon the receipt of the articles or services listed." Directions for Using New Jersey Public School Financial Accounting System. J-32 at 17.

Finger concluded that the District's purchase order was not a valid commitment because it did not create a commitment to a third party vendor. Further, the purchase order did not create a valid encumbrance of funds and it could not be treated as an accounts payable by the District because there was no one to pay other than the District. Rather, the District's purchase order, written to itself, created a reserve of funds. Moreover, after the District canceled the purchase order, the funds reverted to the free balance to be used again.

The use of the term "commitment" in other contexts demonstrates that it is more than a mere pledge. See Dubin Weston, Inc. v. Louis Capano & Sons, Inc., 394 F. Supp. 146, 154 (D.C. Del. 1975). A "commitment" for a mortgage loan is generally defined as a mutual agreement between a lender and the borrower that the former will grant the mortgage loan according to certain terms. In re Rexplore, Inc. v. Securities Litigation, 671 F. Supp. 679, 692 (N.D. Cal. 1987). As used in the Depository Institutions to Regulation and Monetary Control Act of 1980, a "commitment" means an enforceable agreement to provide a loan. The Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978, 15 U.S.C.A. § 3301 to -3432, uses the phrase "committed or dedicated to interstate commerce" to mean gas which is required to be sold under the terms of any contract, certificate under the Natural Gas Act, or any provision of the Act. 15 U.S.C.A. § 3301(18)(A)(ii). See Falcon Petroleum v. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, 642 F.2d 780, 784 (5th Cir. 1981).

Finally, I have considered the significance of the change in the conditions of the terms of the grant. In his initial letter on April 25, 1991, the Commissioner used the term "expended" not coupled with the term "committed." In his second letter on October 21, the Commissioner "liberalized the conditions of the grant [by adding the word "committed"] and, therefore made it easier for districts to comply therewith, when he advised districts it would be sufficient if they merely committed the funds, rather than having to fully expend them." Respondent's Initial Brief at 3. Consequently, the Commissioner broadened the conditions of the grant terms by requiring that the funds be "expended or committed" by June 30, 1992, the close of the fiscal year. (J-8, J-9). The time limitation imposed by the Commissioner is an exercise of fiscal management over statutory created school funds. In general, purpose limitations directly imposed by grant conditions must be construed and applied strictly. See Valente, Education Law - Public and Private § 20.42 at 306 (1985). Therefore, a liberal application to the term "committed" that included a non-binding pledge would be too broad and unrealistic.

I therefore CONCLUDE that for the funds to be "committed" by June 30, 1992, the District must be contractually or otherwise legally bound to invest resources in the Early Childhood Program by June 30, 1992.

Prior to the end of the 1992 fiscal year, petitioner failed to enter into any legally binding relationship with a third party vendor for the Early Childhood Program. Although the District took steps towards committing the funds prior to June 30, e.g., J-10, to J-16, the "purchase order" executed by petitioner to itself on June 30, 1992, created no legal obligation on petitioner's behalf. At most, the District was committed to the program as a matter of policy. Because petitioner was neither contractually nor otherwise legally bound to make the expenditures on the program it was also free to abandon its "commitment" to the program without legal consequence. Accordingly, I reject petitioner's interpretation that the term "committed" includes action which has no legal consequence.

I also reject petitioner's interpretation that the funds were committed by June 30, based on the District's view that respondent's audit confused various terms, such as "redefining 'expenditures' to mean payment, and equating 'commitment' with the term 'expenditure'." Petitioner's Initial Brief at 17, 26. Ambiguities should not be resolved against the Commissioner. See Bennett v. Kentucky, supra. 470 US at 649, 84 L.Ed 2d at 601. I CONCLUDE that the purchase order issued to the District was not a commitment for purposes of the grant.

Based on the above, I further CONCLUDE that the District failed to expend or commit the funds in fiscal year 1992 and thereby violated the conditions imposed by the Commissioner in the award of the discretionary aid grant.

II

I reject petitioner's assertion that the District should not be required to return the funds because it substantially complied with the conditions of the Commission's grant award. The conditions of the grant required that the funds be expended or committed in fiscal year 1992. Thus, action taken after June 30, 1992 does not comply with the terms of the grant. Indeed, within the context of federal funding of education programs the U.S. Supreme Court rejected the doctrine of substantial compliance. In Bennett v. Kentucky Dept. of Educ., 470 U.S. 656, 105 S.Ct. 1544, 84 L.Ed. 2d. 590 (1985), the Court held that neither substantial compliance nor the absence of bad faith absolves the state from liability for spending funds contrary to the terms of the grant. Therefore, the Court granted the Secretary of Education's demand for repayment. Notwithstanding the District's good faith efforts to comply with the grant terms and assuming that its efforts constituted substantial compliance with the grant terms, I CONCLUDE that the District is liable for repayment of the funds. Bennett v. Kentucky, supra.

Having concluded that substantial compliance does not absolve the school district from liability to return the grant funds, it is not necessary to determine whether the District substantially complied with the terms of the grant.

III

The Department has indicated that should it prevail, it will recover the funds by reducing the District's State aid by the amount at issue. "Adjustments in funds between a district and the Department are usually made by adjusting state aid.” Respondent’s Initial Brief at 16.

The District avers that its expenditure of grant funds for its pre-school program at the Duncan housing project furthers the legislative purpose of providing quality educational services. Therefore, if the Department demands the return of monies, the legislative goals of benefiting the education of schoolchildren will be defeated. Thus, I have carefully reviewed the evidence showing the District’s total action taken to implement the Early Childhood program in the Duncan housing project.

The Discretionary Aid funds were used for its intended purposes. The pre-school program at the Duncan housing project opened for classes on December 21, 1992. Considering the obstacles petitioner encountered to secure the space from the housing project, I commend the District’s efforts in implementing the pre-school project within four and a half months from the time it awarded construction contracts in August 1992. Moreover, this is not a situation where funds were mis-used for improper purposes. The cost to the District for the renovation work at the Duncan project was $412,535, an excess of $86,063 above the amount in question. Thus, the District paid an amount greater than the grant funds in question for the renovation work at the Duncan project but charged $326,472 of the total cost to the Discretionary Aid funds. These expenditures provided a quality pre-school program and educational services to the school children in Jersey City.

I am persuaded by the witness’ demeanor that they were committed to implementing the a pre-school program at the earliest possible time after it received the grant award on October 21, 1991. Moreover, I reject respondent’s assertion that “[a]ny activity that took place after the expiration of the grant was irrelevant because it was not within the period of the grant.” Respondent’s Initial Brief at 4. To the contrary, the Department’s auditor reviewed the District’s books for fiscal year 1992-93 and confirmed that the District expended the grant funds and issued purchase orders for the renovation work within seven weeks of June 30, 1992. Upon the completion of renovations at the Duncan housing projects, the pre-school program opened for classes on December 21, 1992. Based on the evidence, I CONCLUDE that the District's use of the grant funds was consistent with the statutory purpose of the Discretionary Aid fund. Thus, I have also considered the consequences to the District's ability to continue its program if it required to return the money.

Where an agency has properly determined that funds were misspent, a reviewing court has no independent authority to excuse repayment based on considerations of equities. Bennett v. New Jersey, 470 U.S. 632, 105 S.Ct. 1555, 84 L.Ed.2d. 572 (1985). Bennett v. Kentucky Dept. of Educ., 470 U.S. 656, 105 S.Ct. 1544, 84 L.Ed.2d. 590 (1985). However, an agency has discretion to decide whether special circumstances exist that would warrant a waiver of recoupment. Chicano Educ. & Manpower Serv. v. Dept. of Labor, 909 F.2d. 1320 (9th Cir. 1990).

Indeed, in Newark Bd. v. Division of Compliance, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 156, the Commissioner exercised her discretion to either withhold or adjust transportation aid based on the school district's improper conduct. There, the Newark Board of Education (Board) admitted that it violated regulations regarding bidding procedures for school transportation for special education students. Specifically, the Board misconstrued the regulatory requirement that it provide transportation to only those special education children whose IEP required it or as prescribed by the school physician. N.J.A.C. 6:28-3.8(a)(5). Instead, the Board's transportation policy provided busing to all special education children in the district. Consequently, the Board's policy led it to wrongly bid its contracts for transportation. A Department audit of the Board's pupil transportation program resulted in the Department's action to recover the funds by reducing the aid given to the school district. The Commissioner rejected the ALJ's recommendation that an adjustment be made to the full amount of reimbursement claimed by the Department. Although the Board's conduct was not the result of any improper or dishonest motive, the Commissioner found that the Board should be sanctioned for the total amount of monies sought. Moreover, the Commissioner would not compel the State to adjust the amount of reimbursement because the Board's policy of busing all its special education students was not required by law. Also, the Commissioner considered whether the children would suffer from withholding transportation aid from the state aid given to the school district and the board's systemic failure to ensure that its bidding procedures and transportation contracts were in accord with the law. She determined that under the circumstances an adjustment to transportation aid for the improper award of contracts was not appropriate. Newark Bd. v. Division of Compliance, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) at 162.

Here, the Early Childhood Program is a worthwhile endeavor and serves a necessary purpose. Indeed, the facts strongly support a determination that the children in Jersey City will suffer in "exacting" from the District's State aid by the amount at issue. Although the Department is entitled to a return of the grant funds not committed by June 30, 1992, the Commissioner may also determine that under the circumstances in this matter a recoupment should not be issued against the District's State aid. Newark Bd. v. Division of Compliance, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 156.

I am mindful, however, that the school districts and officials in charge of such programs must be required to adhere to all terms and conditions of any grant agreement. Strict compliance with grant conditions furthers effective fiscal management practices by school districts. Also, strict compliance permits the State to ensure that grant funds are properly expended and promotes the sound administration of education funds. Indeed, the State took over the Jersey City School District, in part, due to the mismanagement of school funds. McCarrol v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City 1989 S.L.D. 2337. Consequently, the State is now directly responsible for improving the operation of the Jersey City School District and ensuring that its students receive a thorough and efficient system of education. It is appropriate that the State require that its own appointee, the State District Superintendent, to comply with the conditions of all grant awards.

Based on the above, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's demand for the return of the grant funds because the District failed to expend or commit the funds by June 30, 1992, is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the Department is entitled to recover the grant funds not committed by June 30, 1992.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT : OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY, :
PETITIONER, :
V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF : DECISION EDUCATION, DIVISION OF ADMINIS- : TRATION AND FINANCE, :
RESPONDENT. :
_____ :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Exceptions of both petitioner and respondent and reply exceptions of respondent were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent's exceptions urge the Commissioner's adoption of the ALJ's decision averring that the decision correctly found that, "in the absence of a legally binding commitment [for the monies herein at issue] by June 30, the district failed to comply with the Commissioner's mandate that the district expend or commit the funds by the end of the school year," and respondent is, therefore, entitled to recover these funds. (Respondent's Exceptions at p. 2)

Petitioner excepts to the ALJ's conclusion that, under the circumstances existing in this matter, strict compliance with the terms of the discretionary grant was reasonable, therefore, requiring recoupment of these monies. Rather, it asserts that "[r]equiring strict adherence to the June 30, 1992 deadline is inequitable  particularly in light of the Judge's findings that the District's use of the grant funds was proper, consistent with the statutory purpose and resulted in a 'quality pre-school program and educational services to the school children in Jersey City' *" (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 7) Petitioner notes that the ALJ determined that timelines for expenditure of these funds were agency rather than statutorily determined and, therefore, the Commissioner has the discretion to decide whether special circumstances exist which would warrant a waiver of recoupment. It urges that such special circumstances are clear in this matter. Specifically, the District contends that the ALJ found

- . The District's use of the funds was consistent with the statutory purpose of the Discretionary Aid fund.
- . The funds were used for their proper and intended purposes, i.e., to provide a quality pre-school program and educational services to the school children of Jersey City.
- . There was no mis-use or improper expenditure of funds. In fact, the District spent $412,535 on renovations for the pre-school program, an amount of $86,063 in excess of the charged grant monies.
- . Although the District did not legally commit the funds by June 30, 1992, it did incur contractual liabilities for the program by August 19, 1992, just seven weeks after the end of the fiscal year.
- . The District's staff acted in good faith and were committed to implementing the pre-school program at the earliest possible time.
- . The District's use of the monies was for a worthwhile endeavor and serves a necessary purpose.
- . The facts strongly support a determination that the children in Jersey City will suffer if the District's state aid is reduced by the amount at issue.

(Petitioner's Exceptions at pp. 3-4)

Petitioner further contends that in light of these facts and the equities existing in this matter, the ALJ "virtually invited the Commissioner to exercise his discretion and waive recoupment." (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 2) Petitioner distinguishes this matter from Newark Bd. of Ed. v. Division of Compliance, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 156, 162, discussed by the ALJ in her initial decision, where the Commissioner rejected the ALJ's recommendation for equity and directed the return of state aid. It contends that here, unlike Newark, there was no violation of law, regulation or public policy in the District's inability to use the grant funds by June 30, 1992.

Petitioner next excepts to the ALJ's determination that an examination of whether the District "substantially complied" with the terms of the grant was unnecessary as strict compliance with the grant's terms was required. It argues that substantial compliance has been held sufficient in areas where statutory rather than agency imposed requirements are involved. Petitioner cites case law in the areas of school elections and public contract bidding where it contends the Commissioner has held that substantial compliance with strict requirements is acceptable when furthering legislative goals.

In conclusion, as the District substantially complied with the terms of the grant or, alternatively, because the facts in this case strongly and fairly warrant a waiver of recoupment, petitioner urges the Commissioner "to accept the suggestion stated by the Administrative Law Judge and '...determine that under the circumstances in this matter a recoupment should not be issued against the District's State aid' ." (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 10)

In reply, respondent argues that it acted properly in requesting the return of the funds at issue. It posits that the District was advised on three separate occasions that the grant monies must be utilized during the 1991-92 school year. Further, it asserts that the District was also twice notified to advise the Department if implementation of the grant funds could not be accomplished as required. Notwithstanding this clear notice, the District presented no evidence whatsoever that it advised the Department that it would have difficulty complying with the conditions of the grant. (Respondent's Reply Exceptions at pp. 1-2)

Respondent next asserts that while petitioner contends that the ALJ in her initial decision “invited” the Commissioner to utilize his discretionary power and allow the District to retain the grant funds, it chose to ignore the ALJ’s subsequent discussion on page 16 of her initial decision with respect to this potential option:

I am mindful, however, that school districts and officials in charge of such programs must be required to adhere to all terms and conditions of any grant agreement. Strict compliance with grant conditions furthers effective fiscal management practices by school districts. Also, strict compliance permits the State to insure that grant funds are properly expended and promotes the sound administration of education funds. Indeed, the State took over the Jersey City School District, in part, due to mismanagement of school funds. McCarroll v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, 1989 S.L.D. 2337. Consequently, the State is now directly responsible for improving the operation of the Jersey City School District and insuring that its students receive a thorough and efficient system of education. It is appropriate that the State require that its own appointee, the State District Superintendent to comply with the conditions of all grant awards.

(Respondent’s Reply Exceptions at pp. 2-3)

With respect to petitioner’s arguments as to substantial compliance being sufficient in the within matter, respondent discounts such an assertion arguing that public policy dictates that where public funds are concerned, all depositories of such monies must be held to a strict accountability and absolute compliance. It argues, as noted in Connor v. Morse, 20 N.E. 2d 424 (Mass. Sup. Jud. Ct. 1939), “the safeguards erected to protect public treasuries are not to be thrust aside or evaded because public officers believe in particular circumstances that their operation is harsh, but there should be strict application to particular instances.” (Respondent’s Reply Exceptions at p. 3)

In conclusion, respondent renews its assertion, advanced in its post-hearing submission to the ALJ, that the Commissioner’s establishment of a June 30, 1992 limitation on the commitment of funds was statutorily compelled and, consequently, the Commissioner lacks the discretion to permit a district to utilize these funds after the fiscal year at issue.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner finds the exceptions advanced by petitioner unpersuasive, and adopts the ALJ's conclusion that, as petitioner failed to comply with the terms and conditions under which the discretionary grant monies were awarded, respondent's demand for return of these funds is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable.

Initially, the Commissioner notes that he concurs with the ALJ's determination, for the reasons clearly articulated in the initial decision at pp. 8-12, that the District failed to "expend or commit" the funds at issue herein by June 30, 1992 as clearly mandated by the terms of the discretionary grant. Further, while the Commissioner recognizes and commends the efforts expended by the District which, ultimately, resulted in a quality pre-school program and educational services for the school children of Jersey City, public policy and the facts in this matter require him to reject petitioner's argument that its substantial compliance with the grant's terms or the equities of this matter compel the Commissioner to exercise his discretion and permit the District to retain these funds. Even accepting, arguendo, that the Commissioner has such discretion, he would be precluded from this course of action by the following considerations.

As aptly noted by the ALJ, even assuming that the District exercised good faith efforts to comply with the terms of the grant and such efforts constituted "substantial compliance" with such terms, this is not sufficient to absolve the District from liability for expending the monies contrary to the grant's specific conditions and, consequently, does not operate to insulate the District from liability to return the grant funds. (See Bennett v. Kentucky Dept. of Ed., supra) Notwithstanding petitioner's contention that substantial compliance may be tolerated in areas of school elections and public contract bidding where the Commissioner has declined to invalidate elections for "minor irregularities" or has found that "technical omissions" will not vitiate a bid where a bidder substantially conforms to specifications, the instant matter is distinguishable in that it involves the expenditure of public monies and, therefore, requires the highest level of assurance that the public trust be maintained. (Petitioner's Exceptions at p. 9) The Commissioner must remain mindful of his responsibility to safeguard public assets which have been entrusted to him. As such, he must exercise sound fiscal policy in the administration and handling of these monies which includes attaching such terms and conditions to the grant of these funds as he determines are necessary to insure their effective utilization, and recipients of the monies must be held strictly accountable for acting within this established framework.

The Commissioner further finds that the District's failure to comply with the timeliness requirement, particularly when it had been specifically advised and invited, on two separate occasions, to report and discuss any potential difficulties in this regard with Department officials, strongly belies an argument that fairness and equity compel a waiver of the penalties necessitated by its actions.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed. The Commissioner directs the adjustment of the State-operated School District's 1995-96 state aid to recover the funds at issue.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning attendance officer challenged Board's action denying an extension of his sick leave as violative of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-1 through 30-3. Petitioner subsequently retired.

ALJ found that since petitioner submitted updated medical information when the Board requested it, attesting to the continued inability of petitioner to work, the Board's denial of extension of sick leave, without medical review or advice, was arbitrary. Petitioner was entitled to use his accumulated sick leave up to the effective date of his retirement. Board was ordered to pay petitioner for the available sick days between the last day for which he received payment and the effective date of his retirement.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own and directed payment for the accumulated sick days.

Record Closed: May 12, 1995

Decided: June 1, 1995

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

Joseph P. Zarzaca filed a civil suit in the Superior Court of New Jersey, challenging the action of the respondent Board of Education, which had denied an extension of Mr. Zarzaca's sick leave. He contended that the Board violated his rights under the sick leave provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-1 through 30-3. The court transferred the matter to the Department of Education, which received the matter on August 23, 1994, and then transferred the contested hearing to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on September 1, 1994, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -21 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -14. After a prehearing conference held on October 24, 1994, the case was scheduled for hearing on February 9, 1995, but was adjourned from that date and was subsequently heard by this judge on April 4, 1995, at the OAL offices in Mercerville. The attorneys filed briefs and closing statements on April 28 and May 10, 1995, and the record closed on May 12, 1995.

The essential facts which underlie this case are not in dispute. Mr. Zarzaca was employed by the Willingboro Board of Education as an attendance officer and registrar. He had begun his employment with the District in January, 1970, after having served as a police officer for 18 years with Willingboro Township, ending his police career as a Detective Sergeant. He worked until 1993; however, according to Mr. Zarzaca, beginning in 1986 he began to experience back pain. By 1993 the pain had become intense. After a severe spasm during his vacation in Vermont, he returned home and was examined by his family physician, Dr. Daniel Tran. The doctor advised Mr. Zarzaca that he should not return to work, and Mr. Zarzaca went out on medical leave. At the time he had accumulated 223 sick days with the District. He provided a medical report from Dr. Tran in support of his request for sick leave. From August 1993 until March 1994, he remained out on sick leave, apparently without questions being raised by the Board. Then, in March, 1994, the Director of Personnel for the Board, Dr. Phyllis Young, wrote to Mr. Zarzaca and requested another letter from his physician "stating a current diagnosis and prognosis for your condition with an approximate date of return if applicable." In response, Mr. Zarzaca forwarded a letter from Dr. Tran, date March 18, 1994, (P-2), in which the doctor stated that Mr. Zarzaca was still "experiencing much difficulty with his back pain," had exhibited "no improvement" and was to "remain home from work." The doctor noted that Mr. Zarzaca was to see a neurosurgeon on April 19 and that the doctor would review the report from that doctor. He invited Dr. Young to contact him if she had any questions regarding Mr. Zarzaca's condition.

On April 21, the Board issued a letter to Mr. Zarzaca, advising him in accordance with legal requirements that on May 2, at a closed session of the Board, he "may be discussed" in regard to a "Ratification of Extension of Leave of Absence With Pay." On May 3, Dr. Young again wrote, this time advising that the Board had not approved an extension of the leave of absence with pay and that the time frame covered was from 11/2/93 to 4/19/94. Minutes of the meeting show that the motion to ratify the extension failed for want of a second.

On May 18, Mr. Zarzaca sent the Board a second letter from Dr. Tran, dated May 17, 1994, in which the doctor wrote that Mr. Zarzaca had visited his office on the 17th, complaining of continuing severe low back pain, which pain radiated down the buttocks and legs, and numbness in the right leg. Dr. Tran also noted the presence of a left side paraspinal mass, extending from L3 to L5, and degenerative disc disease. The letter reflected the findings on examination as well. The doctor concluded that

Because of Mr. Zarzaca's symptoms, he is unable to perform normal daily activities. Any activities aggravate his pain.

Mr. Zarzaca testified that when he did not receive his pay for the pay period ending on May 15, he called the Board's accountant and was told that there was a problem. The accountant later advised that Dr. Young had advised the accountant that the Board had acted to "hold" the pay. Mr. Zarzaca had not heard anything about this action up to that time.

On May 18, Dr. Young wrote to advise the petitioner that the Board might discuss him in closed session on the 23rd of May, regarding "status of medical leave." On May 25, Dr. Young again wrote, this time advising that at its executive session on the 23rd the Board reviewed the May 17 letter from Dr. Tran and considered the fact that no report has been received from the neurosurgeon you were to have seen. Please be advised that there has been no change in the Board's decision of May 2, 1994 and that you are not on an approved medical leave. Therefore, you are directed to return to work. If you do not return to work immediately, you will be removed from the payroll.

On June 1, 1994, Frederick W. Hardt, Esq., the attorney representing Mr. Zarzaca, wrote to Ms. Josephson, the attorney representing the Board. Mr. Hardt enclosed the report received from Dr. Balderston of the Rothman Institute, the neurosurgical consultants who had evaluated Mr. Zarzaca at Dr. Tran's request. He asked if reconsideration of the Board's decision would occur in light of the report, or if not, whether Ms. Josephson could accept service of process for the Board. Ms. Josephson responded on June 3, writing that the Board clearly had a managerial prerogative to assure that employees did not abuse sick leave and pointing out that "accumulated sick time is only to be used if an employee is unable to work because of illness" and that it was “not the employees’ option not to come to work because the time has been accumulated.” Ms. Josephson then wrote

If anything the Rothman report confirms the Board’s decision that Mr. Zarzaca is fit to return to work. The report concludes: “His only medical problem is hyperthyroidism for which he takes Synthroid. Physical examination today shows a well developed, well nourished white male in no acute distress.” (Emphasis in the original).

Ms Josephson ended by suggesting that Mr. Zarzaca’s alternatives were to retire or return to work immediately.

On a date in June which has not been specifically determined in this hearing, but which was apparently sometime after the issuance of the June 3 letter from Ms. Josephson, Mr. Zarzaca wrote to the Board to advise that he had decided to retire, effective September 1, 1994. A notice of June 14, 1994, advised him that his retirement and reappointment might be discussed at the Board’s closed session of June 14, 1994. On July 5, a letter from Dr. Young confirmed that the Board had accepted the letter of retirement at its June 27 meeting. Mr. Zarzaca’s retirement became effective on September 1, 1994.

Mr. Zarzaca testified that in conversations with Dr. Young, he had advised her that he was to undergo an MRI at Dr. Balderston’s request about a week to ten days after seeing the doctor. In fact, the test was performed about 8-10 days after he saw the doctor. However, the witness explained that even up to this day he has never been able to obtain the MRI. He was never asked by the Board to see any other physician. No doctor ever advised him that he was well enough to return to work.

Dr. Tran testified regarding his examinations of Mr. Zarzaca and his diagnosis. According to the doctor, Mr. Zarzaca was seen on 10 occasions between April 2, 1992, and September 15, 1994, and during that whole period his condition was essentially unchanged. He was suffering from severe back pain, and an MRI study performed in January 1993 confirmed multiple level disc degeneration and the presence of a large lesion in the paraspinal muscle on the left side running from S-1 to L-3. Mr. Zarzaca had been out of work since August 2, 1993, and he agreed with the patient that he was in too much pain to work. The doctor did not question Mr. Zarzaca about the nature of his duties with the Board. He assumed that he worked at a desk job, but he admitted that it would have mattered to him to know the exact duties. The referral to the Rothman Institute was basically for the purpose of ascertaining whether the lesion could be removed. Dr. Tran was never contacted by anyone on behalf of the Board regarding Mr. Zarzaca.

Dr. Phyllis Young, now an assistant principal in a junior high school in the District, was formerly Director of Personnel for the Board. She explained that the March 1994 letter to Mr. Zarzaca was sent in the normal course of business, as it was the time of year for the Board to determine who it would be employing for the next school year. When she received Dr. Tran's letter in March she shared it with the Board, but does not recall whether she recommended any course of action at that time. She was instructed to contact Mr. Zarzaca regarding the neurological report. She wrote to him, but does not recall seeing the response from Dr. Tran of May 17 (P-3). As for P-4, the Rothman Institute report, the witness did not recall if she was present when the Board discussed it. After the Board met she was told to ascertain the results of the MRI. She was also told to advise Zarzaca to report for work, as the Rothman report did not say that Mr. Zarzaca couldn't work. She doesn't recall whether she was ever told to secure an independent medical evaluation of either the letters from Dr. Tran and/or Rothman Institute. She was unaware of whether there was any Board policy regarding independent evaluations or any past history of other employees who had been required to obtain such evaluations. She did remember being asked by the Board how many accumulated sick days Mr. Zarzaca had available to use.

Dr. Young explained that after June 1 she was told to contact Mr. Zarzaca about the MRI. She had spoken with Ms. Josephson about having a Board selected doctor review the MRI. Conversations were held with the Board's Workers' Compensation counsel regarding the names of physicians available for this task. Mr. Zarzaca was never told that his sick leave was being withheld pending submission of the MRI. Once he submitted his letter of resignation she viewed the issue as moot.

Board President Linda Taylor testified that she was present at the May 23, 1994, meeting. At an executive session that evening the Board discussed Mr. Zarzaca. No physician was a member of the Board at the time. She did not recall reviewing any documents regarding Mr. Zarzaca.

The Board has a sick leave policy, and extensions are granted at the discretion of the Board. The Board did have the Tran report, but had no recommendation from any school official regarding the extension. Ms. Taylor explained that the Board did not review or reconsider the matter after June 1.

Edison Holley, another member of the Board, was present on May 2, when the motion seeking to approve an extension failed to receive a second. He did not recall if he had seen any medical reports, or whether the Board was given any distillation of such material.

The parties stipulated that unaffiliated employees such as Mr. Zarzaca did not receive written contracts in 1994-95, and Mr. Zarzaca had an oral contract for the period from July 1 to September 1, when his retirement became effective.

DISCUSSION

The decision of a school board as to whether to extend a sick leave is discretionary in nature. As such, the standard by which the actions of the board are tested is whether it acted in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner. Dore v. Bedminster Township Board of Education, 185 N.J. Super. 447 (App. Div. 1982). If it did not, then the Commissioner of Education will not interfere with the local board's decision. Denney v. Board of Education, 131 N.J. 626 (1993).

In the present case, I FIND that the undisputed facts reveal that Mr. Zarzaca had a long history of back trouble. For a number of years, he managed to come to work and perform his duties as required, despite the pain and discomfort that afflicted him. Eventually, in 1993, after a significant flareup while on vacation, he discussed his problem with his personal physician, Dr. Tran, and the result was the advice that Mr. Zarzaca should not go to work, due to the back condition. The Board accepted Dr. Tran's opinion, at least to the extent that it agreed to a paid sick leave credited against Mr. Zarzaca's accumulated sick leave from August 3, 1993.

When the Board's representative, Dr. Young, advised Mr. Zarzaca in March, 1994, that the Board needed to obtain updated medical information, Mr. Zarzaca contacted Dr. Tran, who supplied the Board with a new letter, attesting to the continued inability of Mr. Zarzaca to work. It was admitted during the hearing that Dr. Tran did not actually discuss the details of Mr. Zarzaca's work activities with Mr. Zarzaca. Nevertheless, the Board was not then aware of this fact, (it does not appear that a detailed description of those duties would have dissuaded Dr. Tran from his opinion, as the job was in fact both a desk job and also involved "outside" work), and as of the date upon which it received Dr. Tran's letter of March 18, 1994, the only evidence which the Board possessed about Mr. Zarzaca's medical condition and his ability to perform the duties required of his job from any medical professional was that received from Dr. Tran, to wit: Mr. Zarzaca was still disabled from performing his job. It also knew that Mr. Zarzaca was to see a neurosurgeon on April 19th.

Additionally, I FIND that when the Board considered a motion to extent Mr. Zarzaca's leave on May 2, 1994, it had no additional information available to it as to his condition beyond that which it had after receiving Dr. Tran's March 18 letter. It was not then aware of any results of the scheduled April 19 neurosurgical consult. For reasons which are not evidenced in the record of either the Board meeting or this hearing, the motion was not seconded, and therefore failed. Thereafter, the Board, through Dr. Young, advised Mr. Zarzaca that the motion had not passed. It did not provide any reason for this failure of passage, and did not suggest that the failure had been influenced by a desire for the neurosurgeon's report, or for any other reason.

Following his receipt of the notice that the Board had not approved the extension, Mr. Zarzaca submitted a second letter from Dr. Tran, which stated in clear language that Mr. Zarzaca was "unable to perform normal daily activities." Despite its receipt of this report, the Board once again denied the extension. Here again, at the time of this second consideration of Mr. Zarzaca's request for an extension, the only report available to the Board from a medical person as to the condition and fitness of its employee was Dr. Tran's report.

Following the Board's May denial of an extension, the Board, through Dr. Young, advised Mr. Zarzaca by letter of May 25, that it had not received any neurosurgical report and that the extension had been denied. Until the letter of May 25, the Board had made no request for the neurosurgical report and the exact influence which the lack of the receipt of this report exerted upon the determination to deny the extension was not stated, although by this time it could be inferred. Indeed, in response to this letter, Mr. Hardt submitted the neurosurgical report to the Board's attorney on June 1.

The June 6, 1994, letter from Ms. Josephson to Mr. Hardt is quite significant. Ms. Josephson quite correctly notes that sick time is only to be used when the employee is unable to work because of illness and that verification of illness is a management prerogative. She then asserts that the Rothman report "confirms the Board's decision that Mr. Zarzaca is fit to return to work."

It is not clear how the Board or Ms. Josephson determined that the quoted comments from the Rothman report "confirmed" any such notion. The hearing record revealed that no qualified medical personnel sat on the Board, and Ms. Josephson's letter does not suggest that any medical expert, let alone any medical personnel, had reviewed the report and advised the Board that the fact that the report stated that Mr. Zarzaca was not in "acute distress" or that his only "medical" problem was hyperthyroidism, or that the report did not specifically conclude that he could not work, "confirmed" Mr. Zarzaca's fitness to work, and that as a result Dr. Tran's opinion should be ignored. In fact, what apparently occurred was that the Board, a group of lay individuals, or perhaps their attorney acting as their advisor, took it upon themselves or herself to decide that if Mr. Zarzaca was not in "acute" distress (as opposed to "chronic")¹ when seen by Dr. Farmer and/or Dr. Balderston at Rothman, he was therefore capable of working, and that the proper reading of the reference to the single "medical" problem contained in a report rendered from a medical person to a medical person, i.e., a report which might perhaps be written in the jargon and language of the profession, was that Mr. Zarzaca was now fit to work. Any such conclusion as to his fitness to return which they drew from the Rothman letter would have been reached despite the fact that the report did diagnose "right side back pain and left paraspinal tumor" and called for another MRI. Further, the Board did not appear to have had any knowledge of whether the Rothman consultants were even asked to express an opinion as to whether the patient could work.

On the whole, the statements and conclusions in Ms. Josephson's letter reflect a determination regarding a medical issue by lay persons which, in the absence of medical guidance, was at best arbitrary. Despite the fact that the Board clearly had the statutory authority to compel Mr. Zarzaca to submit to an examination by a doctor of the Board's own choosing, it failed to ask him to do so. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-4. Instead, at the hearing, it offered that it consulted with its worker's compensation attorneys as to the names of possible examiners to whom he might have been referred if the Board had received the MRI report. However, the evidence reflects and I FIND that, by that time the Board had determined for itself that the Rothman report "confirmed" that Mr. Zarzaca could work, and its counsel's letter had offered Mr. Zarzaca only the cold alternatives of a return to work or retirement, a "come back or get out" approach which did not appear to even hint at any further review of the issue upon the submission of the MRI report.

Counsel for the Board argues that Mr. Zarzaca retired and wanted to be paid for used sick time. She contends that sick time may only be used when the absent employee intends to return to work, and since Mr. Zarzaca did not intend to return he therefore was not entitled to use the sick time. Counsel relies upon Sharp v. Bayonne Board of Education, 1978 S.L.D. 807 and Costanzo v. Lakewood Township Board of Education, Commissioner's Decision # 384, issued on September 5, 1980, in support of this proposition. Neither case supports counsel's argument as applied to the facts of this case.

In Sharp, the employee was involuntarily retired by action of the PERS Board of Trustees due to physical incapacity. The effective date of the retirement was July 20, 1977, the date upon which the PERS Board voted to retire the employee. As of that date, Sharp was retired, and clearly as of that date there no longer existed any contractual or other employment relationship between Sharp and the Board. Thus, any claim for any continued sick leave was terminated as of that date. Here, the effective date for the petitioner's retirement was not until September 1, and he remained in an employment relationship with the Board until that date. That he was unable to work as of the date of the approval of his retirement (at least according to the only available medical assessment), and might well remain incapacitated up to the actual retirement date, did not diminish his right to seek to use remaining accumulated sick time up to the date of his retirement, and the Board's obligation to deal with that request in a fair and reasonable manner. As for Costanzo, in that case Mr. Costanzo had suffered a work related accident and had been on paid leave since May 20, 1974. He was paid pursuant to statute, due to the work-related nature of the incident, his accumulated sick leave was not charged. However, his retirement became effective in December, and the decision held that as of that time he was not entitled to receive any sick leave or payment therefore. As the administrative law judge noted, once retired, the employee was no longer prevented by the illness or injury from attending to his post of duty. "A retired person has no post of duty of employment to which attendance is expected." Costanzo, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 3519-79, initial decision at page 4. Here, Mr. Zarzaca was not effectively retired until September 1, and until that date he had a position to which he would have been expected to report unless he had some legitimate reason not to do so, i.e., a condition which disabled him from working. Thus, unless the Board acted reasonably in denying an extension of the sick leave, Mr. Zarzaca was entitled to use his accumulated sick leave up to the effective date of retirement.

Ultimately, the action of the Board in this case was presented as a rational exercise of its duty to assure that sick leave is not abused. There can be no doubt whatsoever that the Board is charged with precisely that responsibility, as a necessary check upon the possibility of damage to the effectiveness, morale and integrity of its school system, and as a precaution against harm to the public fisc. However, in exercising its supervisory role and the discretion inherent therein, the Board is constrained to act reasonably, not arbitrarily. Here, I FIND that the facts available to the Board, at least as they are spread upon the record of this hearing, demonstrate no reason to have suspected any fraud, and the record merely shows that both when he first asked for a leave, and later when he was asked to supply updated medical support for the leave, Mr. Zarzaca did exactly as asked. If the Board doubted Dr. Tran's assessment, or if it truly felt that it needed to see the results of additional tests before deciding upon the matter of an extension, it could have communicated these determinations to Mr. Zarzaca or his physician. It never clearly did so, but even when he did submit a consult report which confirmed the pain and the tumor which had been noted in Dr. Tran's reports, rather than ask for an examination by a physician of its choosing, as was its right, or even decide to withhold judgment until receipt of the MRI report, the Board, on its own, without medical review or advice, elected to reject an extension and order Mr. Zarzaca to return to work or to retire. On the record herein, I CONCLUDE that such action was arbitrary and unreasonable.

It is HEREBY ORDERED that the Board of Education shall pay the petitioner for the available sick days between the last day for which he received payment and the effective date of his retirement.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION
 TOWNSHIP OF WILLINGBORO, :
 BURLINGTON COUNTY, :

 RESPONDENT. :

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The Board's exceptions and petitioner's reply thereto were timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

The Board excepts to the ALJ's finding that it acted arbitrarily and unreasonably in denying petitioner use of his accumulated sick days, and submits that there is no statutory obligation to support the ALJ's finding that the Board has a duty to secure independent medical evaluation of petitioner's fitness for work. The Board argues that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2 authorizes a board's discretion with respect to requiring additional independent psychiatric or physical examinations of an employee. The Board continues:

There is no requirement in this statute that a Board must confirm by way of a medical expert the information provided pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-4, which states in pertinent part: "In case of sick leave claim, a board of education may require a physician's certificate to be filed with the secretary of the board of education in order to obtain sick leave.” (Board’s Exceptions at p. 2)

The Board concludes that the statement provided by the Rothman Institute could be interpreted by a lay person to mean that petitioner was fit to return to work. The Board contends, “If that was not the import of that letter, then the burden rested on the petitioner to clarify that point in light of the fact that he was seeking the use of his accumulated sick leave days.” (Id.)

Petitioner’s reply to these exceptions essentially recasts his argument as embodied in post-hearing submissions before the ALJ.

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner finds the Board’s exceptions to be without merit, and concurs with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that the Board’s action in denying petitioner’s use of accumulated sick leave was arbitrary and unreasonable under the circumstances herein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision of the ALJ for the reasons articulated therein, and orders that the Board of Education pay petitioner for his available sick days between the last day for which he received payment and the effective date of his retirement.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Frederick W. Hardt, Esq., for the Board of Education of the Township of Pemberton

Record Closed: May 30, 1995

Decided: June 7, 1995

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law from the Department of Education on August 19, 1994, for a hearing, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -21 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

This matter arose when the Board of Education for the Township of Pemberton certified tenure charges to the Commissioner of the Department of Education which contained 19 charges set forth in a Statement of Charges and Statement of the Evidence Supporting the Charges. A Prehearing Order was issued on October 27, 1994, and the matter was partially heard on April 27 & 28, 1995. The parties then agreed to settle the matter and prepared the attached Settlement

Agreement, which appears to be in the best interests of all concerned in light of the nature of the alleged violations, expense involved and nature of the proceedings

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.
2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : OAL Docket No. EDUTH 08082-94S
TOWNSHIP OF PEMBERTON AGENCY Ref. No. 297/7/94

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This matter being opened to the Court on the petition of the Pemberton Board of Education of the Township of Pemberton, Frederick W. Hardt, Esquire appearing and the matter having been answered by Dorothy Houston, Louis N. Caggiano, Jr., Esquire, now appearing, and the parties having met and resolved the dispute between them, it being appropriate to enter this Order memorializing this agreement and good cause appearing;

RECITAL

The parties agree and recite the facts agreed upon in this matter as follows:

1. Dorothy Houston is a secretary holding tenure with the School District of the Township of Pemberton pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2.
2. As a tenured employee Dorothy Houston may not be dismissed, suspended or reduced in compensation except for neglect, misbehavior, or other offense.

3. Dorothy Houston is a confidential employee of the payroll department of the District having various responsibilities of a financial nature with the District.

4. Pemberton Board of Education has instituted tenure charges against Dorothy Houston alleging a variety of offenses said to be sufficient to warrant dismissal from her office. They, in essence, involve:

a. An allegation that she used her office improperly to issue herself a payroll check on or about February 25, 1994.

b. Improperly used her office to cause a hand check to be issued by the District to her from the payroll account on or about April 22, 1994.

c. Improperly used her office to aid her daughter in obtaining a loan from a lending institution.

d. Has engaged in negligent behavior while an employee of the District.

5. Dorothy Houston has steadfastly denied any intent to take any of the actions described within the Board's statement of charges and has suggested on her own behalf that:

a. She was entitled to the payroll check issued on or about February 25, 1994 having actually worked for the overtime pay due to a snow holiday.

b. Had not improperly issued a hand check to herself on or about April 22, 1994 having put a stop on against a deduct from her payroll which transferred funds to a local financial institution prior to causing the hand check to be issued.

c. Had not used her office to assist her daughter to obtain improper credit for an automobile.

d. Had not engaged in any negligent behavior but had instead attempted to comply with all regulations in the District which were confusing and not administered properly.

6. Both the Board and Mrs. Houston agree that protracted litigation of the issues set forth within the Statement of Charges would be expensive to both parties and counter-productive to all concerned.

7. The current settlement is designed to resolve the dispute between the parties without an acknowledgment by Mrs. Houston or wrong doing and without an admission by the Board that it improperly brought charges, but with a recognition that the cost of litigation will far exceed the numbers agreed to in the matter..

NOW, THEREFORE, it is agreed that :

1. Dorothy Houston effective April 27, 1995 submits and the Board accepts her resignation from her position with the District; as of the date specified all benefits due and owing to Mrs. Houston from the District will cease except as provided within this Agreement.

2. The Board agrees to pay Mrs. Houston the sum of $17,500.00 due upon execution of this Agreement. This sum shall have deducted from it all appropriate statutory deductions and voluntary deductions normally deducted from Mrs. Houston's pay check.

3. The parties agree that the Pemberton Township School District will issue only a neutral recommendation concerning Mrs. Houston's employment with the District and will not discuss in the recommendation the nature of charges proffered by the District in the matter out of which this settlement arises.

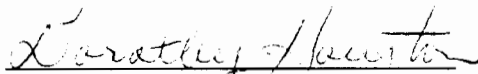

4. The Board will dismiss any and all proceedings against Dorothy Houston pending in any form which have been instituted by the Board and involve any of the facts set forth in the Statement of Charges.

5. The settlement reached by this Agreement shall not be deemed an admission by Mrs. Houston of any wrong doing but rather an acknowledgment of the high cost of litigation which would not serve the interest of anyone in the proceeding.

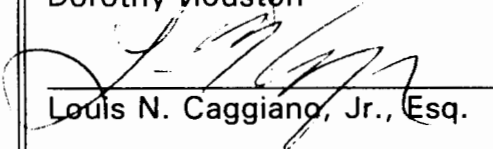

6. In compliance with the payment provisions of this Order shall take place within thirty (30) days of the date the Order is approved by the Commissioner of Education.

J. Peter Sokol, Esq., for petitioner, Board of Education of the School District of Long Branch (McComber & McComber, attorneys)

Thomas W. Cavanaugh, Jr., Esq., for respondent, Brenda Johnson (Chamlin, Rosen, Cavanaugh & Uliano, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 2, 1995

Decided: June 5, 1995

BEFORE DANIEL B. MCKEOWN, ALJ t/a:

INTRODUCTION

Brenda Johnson (respondent) is a school matron with tenure in the employ of the Long Branch Board of Education (Board). On April 28, 1994, the Board determined to certify charges of excessive absenteeism against respondent to the Commissioner of Education for determination under the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. Respondent was not suspended from her duties during the pendency of the charges. The charges were received by

May 3, 1994 at the Department of Education, after which the matter was transmitted May 26, 1994, to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. A telephone conference call was initiated and held by this judge July 6 and continued, by agreement, to August 8, 1994. This date was adjourned at the request of the parties, rescheduled, and adjourned again. The telephone conference call was finally continued on September 21 at which time the parties waived a formal prehearing conference and agreed that this case should be scheduled for hearing on the same day as a case regarding tenure charges against a clerk in its employ.¹ The request of the parties was honored and this case, with the Jimenez case, was to commence December 12 while the remaining case, Desmond, was to begin the following week beginning December 19, 1994.

Prior to December 12 the parties advised that all three cases were settled and a Settlement Agreement would be submitted by the end of that month for submission to the Commissioner for approval. The scheduled hearings were canceled upon that representation. Not having received a proposed Settlement Agreement by the end of December, the undersigned learned during a telephone call to board counsel on January 17, 1995 that counsel for respondent was in possession of the Agreement and was adding language to avoid later rejection by the Commissioner. After a letter was sent the parties March 7, 1995 to determine the status for the proposed Settlement, it was determined that while the parties fully intended to settle all three cases the propriety of one or more settlement terms became subject to disagreement for various reasons. During an informal telephone conference call on or about April 19, 1995, a hearing was scheduled and conducted in the Johnson and Jimenez cases on May 1, 1995 at the Freehold Township Municipal Building Courtroom at which time counsel announced a Settlement Agreement had in fact been reached and jointly entered the settlement terms on the record.

For the reasons which follow, this initial decision recommends that the Commissioner of Education accept the Settlement Agreement as a full and final disposition of In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Brenda Johnson, OAL DKT. NO. 5244-94, AGENCY DKT. NO. 139-5/94²,

² A separate initial decision is issued this day in Jimenez case which recommends the Commissioner approve the settlement agreement.

so that both sides may devote their full attention, energy, and Board resources to the real public interest of providing their pupils the opportunity for a thorough and efficient program of education.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT STANDARDS

The State Board of Education's standards for approving settlement agreements in tenure cases are stated in In re Tenure Hearing of Frank Cardonick, Brooklawn Borough Board of Education, 1982 S.L.D. - - - (Aug. 4, 1982). It is necessary to insure that the standards announced for the approval of tenure charge settlements by the State Board of Education are met. Therefore, it is appropriate to briefly discuss the tenure charges which allege respondent engaged in excessive absences. The charge of excessive absenteeism is a serious matter. It should not be made lightly by the charging party, nor taken lightly by the accused for it is not taken lightly by either the Commissioner or State Board of Education.

While the Board found probable cause to credit the evidence against respondent, it is well within its authority to assess, in good faith, the strength and/or weaknesses of its competent, credible evidence to prove the truth of the charges and to have entered negotiations with respondent for purposes of settlement. In Cardonick, supra, the State Board of Education recognized that

The New Jersey courts have looked with great favor upon the voluntary resolution of litigation through settlement. [Citations omitted.] As a general principle, and without considering the toll of human resources, the settlement of lawsuits in good faith can be said to save time, money and proof problems. School boards, in their efforts to conserve public funds, no less than private parties, have been encouraged by the state and federal courts to carefully consider equitable settlement possibilities.

(Slip opinion, at p. -----)

Nevertheless, the State Board also cautions that the boards of education which settle litigation "must act in the public interest, lawfully, constitutionally, reasonably and in accordance with duly enacted rules and regulations of the Commissioner of Education and State Board of Education.”

(Id.)

In Passaic Board of Education v. James Viani, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 76, the Passaic Board certified charges of excessive absences to the Commissioner for determination against custodian Viani. The evidence submitted convinced the Commissioner that Viani’s absences were shown to be “grossly excessive.” The Commissioner noted that evidence was absent regarding prior notice the board gave Viani of “its concern for his excessive absences,” nor did it present evidence that Viani’s absences had an “adverse impact on the educational process or [their] ramifications.” By way of direction to all boards of education, the Commissioner noted “. . . the Board’s burden in a case seeking dismissal of a tenured janitor due to alleged excessive absenteeism is to demonstrate the extent of harm such performance of a custodial employee has on the provision of a thorough and efficient education in an ‘adequately equipped, sanitary and secure physical facilities . . . [citations omitted.]’” It is inferred that ‘such performances’ means the affected employee must be shown to have aggregated sufficient absences from work, on a case-by-case basis, to constitute ‘excessive absenteeism’. Viani was not terminated from his employment. He received a warning that by having to go through the tenure charge process he was “apprised as to the impropriety of excessive absenteeism and the need to significantly improve his absenteeism or else be subject to future disciplinary action.”

In a subsequent case, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of David Riddick, State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson, Passaic County, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 345, school custodian Riddick was found to have engaged in excessive absenteeism, among other kinds of misbehavior. The administrative law judge recommended termination of Riddick’s employment for several reasons, including excessive absenteeism, after having determined:

Based on the facts found, Riddick has been excessively absent . . . I find that there have been efforts made by various district personnel . . . to get Riddick to correct the pattern of absenteeism. Specific periods of improvement were shown when Riddick was warned that negative action would be taken against him if improvement was not demonstrated during those periods. Nevertheless, despite the improvement, the absence pattern returned as well as the leaving work early and not attending to certain work directives.

In the recent decision of the Commissioner of Education [Viani, supra,] noted that excessive absenteeism by a custodian is not sufficient grounds for dismissal on its own, unless there is demonstration of the extent of harm the employee's performance has on the provision of a thorough and efficient education in having adequately equipped, sanitary and secure physical facilities. In the record in this matter, excessive absenteeism has been demonstrated to have had a negative impact on the condition of the building

CHARGES

The certified charges in this case allege respondent accumulated the following number of absences from her employment.

- a) during the 1991-92 school year, a total of 41.5 absences;
- b) during the 1992-93 school year, a total of 45.5 absences;
- c) during the 1993-94 school year, a total of 38 absences, as of March 25, 1994.

In the Answer, respondent does not contest the number of absences alleged. Rather, in five separate defenses she asserts that termination of her employment is excessive and severe based on the nature and quantity of the absences; that the Board failed to use proper progressive discipline or correction with her; that she has evidence to justify many of the absences complained of; that none of her absences caused the Board harm in any manner; and, that the Board failed to give her appropriate warning and correction nor did it provide her the opportunity to improve her record as is required under Viani, supra, and Raddick, supra.

PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The Board and respondent agree that in return for a dismissal of the present charges, respondent would have withheld from her any 1995-96 salary and/or adjustment increment to which she would otherwise be entitled.

The Board, after having considered the two cases cited above and its evidence in support of the charges against respondent, determined that while it may establish by a preponderance of credible evidence respondent was absent from her duties on numerous occasions, supervisory evaluations of her performance make no mention of any negative impact her absences had on having adequately equipped, sanitary and secure physical facilities. Nor is the Board confident it will be able to show progressive discipline or prior warning to respondent that her attendance is poor and must improve. Finally, the Board is sensitive to the fact that prosecution of these charges will divert substantial financial and human resources from its pupils whom it is to serve and it notes that respondent's attendance has improved significantly since these charges have been certified. The Board notes that as of May 1, 1995 respondent was absent a total of three days for the entire 1994-95 school year. Consequently, it seeks to settle the case in a manner which will serve its purpose of impressing upon respondent the need for her attendance to significantly improve and for the benefit of its pupils and school district as a whole in using its scarce resources in support of its educational program.

Respondent says that many of her absences were approved before taken, many were health-related, that she never received any kind of formal directive to improve her attendance that she was subjected to no prior discipline which could constitute progressive discipline, and that there is no evidence to show her absences resulted in any harm or negative impact upon the sanitary conditions of the school to which she was assigned. Indeed, respondent notes that included within the total number of absences are days she was subpoenaed to appear in court on a family matter, days missed because of deaths in her family, and a Board approved leave of absence among other days for which she had received prior approval.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

CONCLUSION

Based on the record in this case including society's interest in the nature of the charges as well as the interests of the Board, the interests of respondent and of the school district as a whole, the likelihood of whether the charges may be supported by proofs reasonably anticipated by the Board to be offered at hearing, the terms of the proposed Agreement including the absence of an exchange of public funds for service not rendered, and the consistency of the Agreement with existing law, I CONCLUDE that the proposed Settlement Agreement, which is represented by counsel as having been freely entered into by the parties, with full knowledge of their rights and each of whom are represented by competent counsel, is a full, fair, lawful and final disposition of the issues presented in this case.

ORDER

The parties are ORDERED to fully comply with the terms of the Settlement Agreement as set forth herein.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. GEORGE SEFCIK, :

PETITIONER, :

V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RED : DECISION

BANK REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL :

DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT. :

SYNOPSIS

In consolidated matters, petitioner, vocational education teacher who was reduced from full-time position to half-time position in 1988, contended as a tenured teacher he was entitled to certain classes, assigned for 1994-95 to a nontenured teacher, which would provide him with a full-time schedule. Petitioner further alleged he was not placed in full-time position in retaliation for his refusal to settle the tenure entitlement claim.

ALJ found that although petitioner could seek to claim classes by tenure right, he could not teach Small Engine Mechanics because he was not properly certificated to do so, owing to the distinction between industrial arts courses and trades courses. Moreover, petitioner failed to establish that he was the subject of retaliation for failing to accept a settlement offer. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision with modification. Commissioner found that even if petitioner were properly certificated to teach the course at issue, he would not be entitled to claim it as a matter of tenure right. Petitioner was not a tenured employee at the time his position was reduced to half-time, being precluded from such status as a matter of law because he was teaching under an emergency certificate; thus, he had no entitlement to full-time employment arising from his 1988 RIF. Petitioner, who obtained tenure in 1990 through acquisition of a standard certificate, suffered no subsequent reduction in employment, so that his tenure rights were not triggered by the Board's action to assign available classes to a nontenured teacher.

Record Closed: April 24, 1995

Decided: June 6, 1995

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of two petitions filed with the Department of Education (DOE) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 et seq. and regulations promulgated thereunder. The matters were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as contested cases pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13 and consolidated. A hearing was conducted on January 4 and 5, 1995, and the record closed on April 24, 1995, with receipt of the last posthearing submission.

The questions presented are whether petitioner's certification as a teacher of "Skilled Trades: Auto Mechanics" entitled him to teach a course in "Small Engine Mechanics" during the 1993-94 school year and whether respondent retaliated against petitioner in preparing his 1994-95 schedule, for failing to settle his claim in connection with that question.

The basic facts are undisputed. Petitioner was first employed by respondent in September 1984 under an emergency certificate as a teacher of "Skilled Trades: Auto Mechanics." From the 1984-85 school year through the 1989-90 school year, petitioner's emergency certificate was renewed annually while he pursued courses required for a standard certificate. In March 1990, petitioner received his standard certificate as a teacher of "Skilled Trades: Auto Mechanics." Starting with the 1988-89 school year, petitioner's full-time position was reduced to half-time, as a result of a reduction in force (RIF), brought about by declining enrollment in his auto mechanics courses. He continues to teach auto mechanics on a half-time basis, which consists of four instructional periods; teaching five or six instructional periods is considered full-time within the district.

On June 16, 1993, respondent hired Robert Franchino as a teacher of industrial arts/technology education for the coming school year and his schedule included two single periods of Small Engine Mechanics. On November 15, 1993, petitioner filed an appeal with the DOE contesting this action and asserting his entitlement to the assignment. On December 3, 1993, Donald D. Warner, respondent's superintendent of schools, wrote to Michael Maddaluna, Monmouth County superintendent of schools, seeking clarification concerning petitioner's claim (R-2). By letter of April 29, 1994, Mr. Maddaluna notified the district of his conclusion that petitioner was not eligible to teach Small Engine Mechanics (R-1).

The Small Engine Mechanics course has always been listed in the industrial arts education section of respondent's curriculum guides and was until recently described as follows:

Each student will completely disassemble and reassemble a single cylinder engine. Component inspection, system troubleshooting, and overhaul procedures will be emphasized. The theory and use of hand tools, special tools and test equipment will be pursued. The course is an excellent first experience for students interested in further work in Auto and Power Mechanics.

[P-7 and P-8]

In the 1994-95 curriculum guide the course was retitled "Small Engine Technology" and was described as follows:

Students will experience a variety of technology activities which demonstrate alternate forms of energy and how energies can be applied to transportation systems. Aerodynamics, environmental restrictions as well as future transportation systems will be explored and discussed.

[P-9]

Mr. Franchino is integrating new material into the course this school year and expects in time to convert the class in accordance with the new curriculum guide. The course, however titled, was and continues to be a one-period class

On April 20, 1994, approximately five months after he filed his first appeal, petitioner was reappointed to a half-time slot. On June 14, 1994, petitioner's department supervisor, Thomas Conlon, issued a tentative schedule for him for the 1994-95 school year. There were twenty-eight students interested in the Auto Mechanics I class and this meant that there would be two sections, which in combination with Auto Mechanics II and III, yielded a full-time schedule (P-17). Virginia George, president of the Red Bank Teachers' Association, advised petitioner in late June 1994 that she had spoken with Superintendent Warner, who told her that petitioner was to receive a full-time contract for the 1994-95 school year. An agenda was prepared on or about July 9, 1994, for a July 13, 1994 Board of Education meeting, which contained a provision ratifying this change (P-19). On the day of the meeting that agenda item was deleted and no action was taken to adjust petitioner's work schedule for the coming school year (P-20).

John W. Orr is certified as a teacher of vocational/technical-related subjects, as well as a teacher of electronics technology; he has no certificate to teach auto mechanics. Mr. Orr has been teaching in the district for some twenty-five years. In the spring of 1994 he received his usual full-time teaching assignment, but there were two periods missing; this was not unusual and he anticipated that these would be filled later. He was given no notice that he might be subject to an RIF. Robert Nogueira is respondent's high school principal. In August 1994 Dr. Nogueira informed Mr. Orr that he would be teaching the electronics component of Auto Mechanics I in the coming year and that he was to collaborate with petitioner to divide the course along these lines. Mr. Orr submitted a curriculum in early September (P-26). The course was split and the students alternate in six-week intervals between petitioner in the auto shop, and Mr. Orr in the electronics laboratory. They are with petitioner for three marking periods and with Mr. Orr for three marking periods. Mr. Orr's assessment of each student is given to petitioner, who incorporates it into his grade for the student. This structure provided Mr. Orr with a full-time teaching load, but had the effect of negating the increased enrollment in Auto Mechanics I, which had been the basis for petitioner's tentative full-time schedule. The students who had enrolled in the Auto Mechanics I course at the end of the previous school year were disappointed at the loss of time in the auto shop.

Petitioner testified that his certification entitles him to teach courses in power mechanics under a matrix disseminated by the DOE and that the small engines course falls in that category (R-3 & R-4). Moreover, Small Engine Mechanics was for many years either a prerequisite for, or recommended before taking, Auto Mechanics I, and if he could teach the more advanced course he should be able to teach the foundation course. Petitioner testified that Small Engine Mechanics was and continues to be a hands-on course; he frequently observes Mr. Franchino teaching it and generally the students are engaged in repairing engines. Although the course has now been renamed Small Engine Technology, it remains the same.

Petitioner testified that when Mr. Conlon gave him a tentative schedule in June 1994 he asked "Does this mean I'm full-time?" and Mr. Conlon responded affirmatively. Although he understood that this was a tentative schedule, his tentative schedules had never before changed.

In August 1994, Mr. Conlon informed him that the Auto Mechanics I students would be split between himself and Mr. Orr.

John Orr testified that sometime around the second week of August 1994, Dr. Nogueira advised him of his plan to sever the electronics component from petitioner's Auto Mechanics I course. This had not been discussed before and he is not aware of any district that does this. Dr. Nogueira explained that motor vehicle electrical systems were becoming more complex and that the courses needed to reflect this trend. Mr. Orr testified that the students work on distributors, alternators and other electronic components in the laboratory. He testified that he has received late assignments in the past that required him to prepare new materials.

Roger Schneider taught Small Engine Mechanics for respondent from 1970 until his retirement in June 1993. This was a vocational course and was a useful preparation for the auto mechanics courses. He spoke with Mr. Franchino a few times after his retirement and Mr. Franchino made no mention of redesigning the course. Mr. Schneider holds a certificate in industrial arts, among others, and this is what he used to teach Small Engine Mechanics.

Dr. Robert Nogueira has been the principal of Red Bank Regional High School since 1980. He has taught industrial arts and electronics, was department chair, and before appointment as principal was the supervisor of vocational education. Dr. Nogueira testified that the area of technology education is transforming from hands-on work to more abstract learning and the Small Engine Mechanics course is changing as well. He explained that Small Engine Mechanics was and is an industrial arts course and cannot be taught by someone with a skilled trades certificate. Industrial arts is an academic program and petitioner's ability to teach a hands-on course about more complex engines does not qualify him to teach an academic program about small engines. Dr. Nogueira testified that skilled trades certificates are precise and the holder may only teach in the area specified. He testified that occupational preparation courses are double periods; Small Engine Mechanics is a single-period class. Dr. Nogueira acknowledged that certification questions can become intricate, and confirmation of petitioner's qualifications was obtained from Superintendent Maddaluna, as well as from Mr. Earl Brancolino, a specialist in industrial arts education at the DOE.

Dr. Nogueira testified that he authorized the tentative full-time schedule for petitioner in June 1994 because of an increase in student enrollment. There are, however, many revisions made to the master schedule over the course of the summer and by July he knew that he would need a number of extra half-time teachers in other subjects. He so advised Dr. Warner. In August 1994 five or six half-time teachers were hired in social studies, science and English to fill needed slots. Mr. Orr's schedule had not yet been filled in, and splitting the Auto Mechanics I class made sense to him. Dr. Nogueira testified that automobiles are increasingly controlled by microprocessors and microchips and this was an opportunity to enhance the class. He did not seek advice from Superintendent Maddaluna when he made this decision. Dr. Nogueira testified that the issue of settlement was never raised in any of his discussions with Dr. Warner.

Michael Maddaluna is the Monmouth County superintendent of schools. He was contacted by Dr. Warner concerning the question at bar and after researching it with his staff and speaking with the DOE's Mr. Brancolino, he concluded that petitioner could not teach Small Engine Mechanics. He acknowledged that he is not an expert on certification questions and that he relied in large measure on the information he received from others.

Earl Brancolino has been employed by the DOE for seventeen years and is an education program specialist in the Office of School to Work Initiatives. He holds a BA and an MA in industrial arts education. Mr. Brancolino's duties include assisting school districts with certification questions. Mr. Brancolino testified that to teach an industrial arts course, one must hold an industrial arts certificate, and to teach a trades course, one must hold a skilled trades certificate. These are not interchangeable. There are no skilled trades people teaching industrial arts courses and his office has always responded to such inquiries in the negative. Industrial arts courses are typically one period, while trades courses are double periods.

Mr. Brancolino testified that he is not the author of the DOE matrix that petitioner is relying on, he does not use it to decide certification questions and he does not think it can be used for that purpose. The matrix does not mean to convey that the job title categories listed can be taught by anyone holding a certification code included under that grouping. These may have been assembled for other purposes, although he was not certain what these might be.

Dr. Donald Warner has been the district's superintendent of schools for twenty years. He testified that he is not involved in the preparation of teaching schedules, but is consulted on new hires or problems. In June 1994, he spoke with Ms. George, the incoming president of the teachers' association, about outstanding issues including petitioner's grievance, and he informed her about the decision to offer petitioner a tentative full-time schedule. There was no quid pro quo for this; the students were there. Dr. Warner was still under this impression on July 9, 1994, when he included an agenda item on the subject for the school board's consideration. On July 13, 1994, the day of the meeting, Dr. Nogueira informed him that several half-time positions would be needed in other areas, so he pulled this agenda item to retain as much fiscal flexibility as possible. He was not aware at that time of any settlement discussions, but did later authorize counsel to probe this possibility. Petitioner's attorney was contacted on or about July 28, 1994, with an offer of settlement. Dr. Warner testified that he was keeping his options open during this period, as the schedule continues to shift throughout August and sometimes into September. He informed Dr. Nogueira that a full-time teaching load would have to be found for Mr. Orr so that he could justify his salary to the school board. Dr. Warner testified that after the 1988 RIF involving petitioner, he contacted other superintendents and found a full-time position for him; petitioner decided to stay with respondent.

Robert Franchino testified that he is a graduate of Trenton State College, Department of Technical Studies, and holds a certificate in industrial arts and technology education. He has passed the national teachers' examination in technology, which is a prerequisite for certification in this state. The field is moving toward technology education and he is taking the Small Engine Mechanics course in that direction. This is the substance of the record.

Petitioner must show by a preponderance of the credible evidence that he was entitled to teach Small Engine Mechanics. He must also show that the offer of a tentative full-time schedule for the 1994-95 school year was withdrawn in retaliation for his decision to reject respondent's settlement offer. Neither case has been proven.

Respondent argued initially that petitioner had no right to teach Small Engine Mechanics as a matter of law, because he did not obtain a standard certificate in "Skilled Trades: Auto Mechanics” until after the RIF that reduced him to part-time status. Respondent’s March 22, 1995 brief at 8-9, citing Francey v. Board of Education of the City of Salem, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4A) 449 (Education), and Johnstone v. Board of Education of the Township of Cinnaminson, Burlington County, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4A) 506 (Education). I do not agree. These cases stand for the proposition that tenure and seniority rights are triggered and frozen at the point of an RIF and certificates and endorsements in new areas do not confer additional rights. Here, however, petitioner held an emergency certificate in “Skilled Trades: Auto Mechanics” and acquired a standard certificate in “Skilled Trades: Auto Mechanics.” Francey and Johnstone reason that it would burden school districts administratively to allow employees to accrue seniority for certifications and endorsements collected after an RIF, and would unduly limit hiring choices. That is not the case here. Moreover, this result would contravene N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1(e), which entitles the holder of an emergency certificate to that time for seniority purposes, once a standard certificate is issued.

Petitioner maintains that his certificate entitles him to teach Small Engine Mechanics because the DOE matrix allows it, it has always been taught as a vocational preparation course and, logically, since his course relates to a more complex engine, he ought to be able to teach about a simpler group of engines. Dr. Nogueira and Dr. Warner felt that petitioner did not satisfy certification requirements because trades certificates are narrowly tailored to subject matter and do not entitle the holder to teach outside that area. Mr. Schneider, who taught Small Engine Mechanics for many years, used his industrial arts certificate to do so and the course has always been considered part of respondent’s industrial arts program (P-7 through P-9). Nevertheless, they put the question to Superintendent Maddaluna, and to Mr. Brancolino of the DOE, who supported their view. The distinction mainly seems to be that industrial arts education is an academic pursuit and requires qualifications distinct from those expected for trades courses. Thus, two classes could have the same title, but would be taught by different certificated individuals depending on whether they were within a single-period industrial arts framework, or a double-period skills preparation program. These explanations are consistent with the regulatory scheme. See N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.2(a)13, 27 and 29; N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.1, -3.3, and -1.2.

Despite vigorous cross-examination, Mr. Brancolino would not accept petitioner’s assumption that the DOE matrix bore on the question at hand. He was the only avowed expert presented on the subject, and he testified credibly. Thus, I have largely discounted the matrix in this opinion. I must acknowledge that this case is my introduction into the world of teacher certification and the tug-of-war over the matrix made the subject seem quite obscure.

As to the question of retaliation, respondent authorized a tentative full-time schedule for petitioner in June 1994 based on increased enrollment, but then chose not to ratify that decision on July 13, 1994. These facts are a problem for petitioner's argument. The tentative schedule was not contingent on any reciprocal agreement by petitioner to withdraw his earlier claim and if respondent had been as calculating as petitioner suggests, it had no incentive to make this assignment. Further, the full-time offer was tabled two weeks before respondent made its July 28, 1994 settlement offer through counsel. Thus, respondent was reconsidering petitioner's assignment prior to the incident which purportedly provoked the retaliation.

Petitioner's proofs improve with the August decisions. Dr. Warner allowed that he was keeping his options open, which translated means that a full-time slot might have been arranged for petitioner as part of a settlement, but when discussions faltered he decided to use the money elsewhere and in the bargain found a way to use Mr Orr. The late decision to split petitioner's classes, though this had never been done before, raises some questions about respondent's motives. Dr. Nogueira's explanation that changing auto technology made this a logical step would be unassailable if it had ever been discussed previously. Yet, Dr. Nogueira and Dr. Warner were generally credible witnesses and I am not prepared to say that they swore falsely. Their testimony that there are many late and sometimes imperfect changes made to the master schedule was uncontroverted and somewhat blunts the argument that what occurred here was suspicious for its novelty. It may be that there is more here than meets the eye, but the evidence does not quite show it.

Petitioner further supports his argument by suggesting that if respondent's motives were unalloyed, it would have asked Superintendent Maddaluna in advance about splitting his course with someone who is not certified in auto mechanics, as is required under N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3. That it did not do so reveals a fear that the superintendent might obstruct the plan. It is difficult to assess this argument, because the record is sparse on the point. As it happens, Superintendent Maddaluna was a witness in this case and petitioner did not take the opportunity to inquire along these lines. There is no basis here for concluding that respondent improperly assigned Mr. Orr.

Based on the foregoing, it is my conclusion that petitioner has failed to establish that he is entitled to teach Small Engine Mechanics, or that he was the subject of retaliation for failing to accept a settlement offer. It is ORDERED that this petition be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

 BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : DECISION
 RED BANK REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL : DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY, :
 _____ :

The record of these consolidated matters and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by both parties pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, as was a reply to petitioner’s exceptions by the Board. Petitioner’s reply to the Board’s exceptions was incorporated into his primary filing.

In his exceptions regarding entitlement to teach Small Engine Mechanics, petitioner contends that the ALJ erred in discounting the DOE Fall Survey Certification Code Matrix, which clearly shows that he is properly certificated to teach the course. This matrix, petitioner argues, “has been historically utilized by Department of Education personnel to determine the appropriate endorsements that can be held so as to entitle certificated teachers to teach various courses in public education. The apparent determination of Judge Metzger to credit Mr. Brancolino’s testimony that this certification code matrix was irrelevant regarding certification related issues is devoid of any factual or legal support.” (Petitioner’s Exceptions at pp. 2-3, quoted passage at p. 3) Petitioner further reiterates his post-hearing arguments regarding the history and nature of the disputed course and claims that the ALJ has failed to recognize the primacy of a tenured teacher’s rights as against those of the nontenured staff member now teaching that course. (Id. at pp. 4-5)

With regard to his claim of retaliation, petitioner seeks to demonstrate that the record herein, contrary to the determination of the ALJ, does in fact evince that the Board, “at the eleventh hour, made a series of bizarre personnel moves to deprive Petitioner of full-time employment for the 1994-95 school year” in retaliation for his refusal to settle pending litigation on terms not beneficial to him. In particular, petitioner avers that the ALJ failed entirely to consider the implications of petitioner's claim that Automotive Electronics was a component of a team-taught Automotive Mechanics course and was handled by a teacher (John Orr) not certified to teach Auto Mechanics. (Id. at pp. 6-9)

In reply, the Board observes that petitioner brings no testimony or evidence in support of his claim regarding the DOE matrix, and that his casting of events so as to support a claim of retaliation ignores the credible and uncontroverted testimony of Dr. Nogueira and Dr. Warner. (Board's Reply Exceptions at pp. 1-2)

In its own primary exceptions, which petitioner urges the Commissioner to reject as incorrect for the reasons expressed by the ALJ, the Board contends that the ALJ erred in concluding that petitioner was entitled to tenure and seniority rights on the basis of a certificate acquired after he was rified from full-time to part-time status while teaching under an emergency certificate. The Board states:

At the time of his reduction from a full-time to a part-time position [in 1988], petitioner was recognized as a nontenured teacher and was not placed on a preferential rehiring list. Nor was he placed on a preferential rehiring list when he obtained his regular teaching certificate in March, 1990. Petitioner remained employed as a half-time teacher from the 1988-89 school year to present. The hiring of a new industrial arts/technology education teacher in 1993-94 did not give rise to a further reduction in the petitioner's position. Respondent Board of Education argued that tenure and seniority rights are triggered by a reduction in force. (citation omitted) Post-RIF acquisition of certificates/endorsements does not create additional entitlements. (citations omitted)

The Administrative Law Judge states that the respondent's argument runs contrary to the administrative code regarding the recognition of service under an emergency certificate for seniority purposes. (citation omitted) But this provision is only triggered at the time of a reduction in force, not at the time when a teaching staff member acquires a regular teaching certificate after teaching for several years under an emergency certificate. It is respectfully submitted that there is no inconsistency with administrative code regulations or case law if the only time you need to recognize whether seniority and tenure rights exist is at the time of the reduction in force. Once a teaching staff member holding tenure is placed on a preferred rehiring list, that list remains in effect; but if there is no tenure held at the time of the reduction in force, there should be no need to revisit that issue subsequently simply because the teaching staff member has acquired a "new" regular teaching certificate.

(Respondent's Exceptions at pp. 1-2)

Upon consideration of the record and the arguments of the parties in this matter, the Commissioner affirms the ultimate recommendation of the initial decision that petitioner's appeal be dismissed, but modifies the ALJ's conclusions as follows.

Initially, with respect to petitioner's claim that the Board denied him a full schedule in 1994-95 in retaliation for his refusal to settle pending litigation, the Commissioner finds no basis in the transcripts of hearing, or elsewhere, to challenge the credibility assessments of the ALJ or fault his perception of underlying events. Certainly, petitioner's challenge regarding the certification of another staff member (Orr) and his role in team teaching the Auto Mechanics course is not sufficient to alter this result. Rather, the overwhelming body of credible testimony and factual evidence run counter to petitioner's position and, instead, support the conclusion of the ALJ.

Similarly, on the question of petitioner's claim to the Small Engine Mechanics course by tenure right, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ, for the reasons expressed in the initial decision, that petitioner could not be assigned to this course under any circumstances, as he is not properly certificated to teach it. In so holding, the Commissioner notes that petitioner has adduced no evidence whatsoever in support of his claim as to the nature and purpose of the DOE matrix, which runs counter to the only credible testimony brought forward on this issue, that of DOE employee Brancolino. Neither does the parol or documentary evidence proffered in support of petitioner's claims regarding the nature and purpose of the disputed course itself carry the required burden, nor does it suffice to overturn the credible testimony of district administrators Nogueira and Warner.

However, even if petitioner were properly certified to teach the course at issue, he may not lay claim to it as a matter of tenure right. Here, the Commissioner rejects the ALJ's analysis at pp. 7-8 above, which concludes that case law fixing tenure and seniority rights at the point of RIF does not apply to circumstances such as are present herein, where a standard certificate is acquired post-RIF following continued service under emergency certification. This analysis fails to consider that employment entitlement rights do not exist in the abstract or in a temporal continuum; rather, they arise specifically upon the point at which a tenured employee is subjected to a reduction in force. Francey, supra, Johnstone, supra; Gloria Benson v. Board of Education of the Borough of Rockaway, Morris County, 1991 S.L.D. 2194, affirmed State Board of Education, May 6, 1992. At the time petitioner's position was reduced to half-time, he was not tenured, and could not be as a matter of law. Thus, he had no entitlement, no full-time position was offered him, and he was not placed on the preferred eligible list resulting from that reduction. Since he obtained tenure in 1990, when he was employed as a half-time teacher, petitioner has suffered no RIF; his status now remains as it was at that time. Therefore, petitioner has no basis on which to claim a full-time schedule herein as a matter of tenure right. Neither is this result contrary to N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1(e), as petitioner would be fully credited for his time under an emergency certificate upon any reduction in force occurring subsequent to his having achieved tenured status.

Accordingly, as modified with respect to petitioner's tenure entitlement claim, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the Petition of Appeal is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

 RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT. :

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, July 17, 1995

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Klausner, Hunter & Seid (Stephen B. Hunter, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, James P. Granello, Esq.

The decision of the Commissioner of Education dismissing the instant petition is affirmed substantially for the reasons expressed therein. We fully agree that petitioner's acquisition of a permanent instructional certificate subsequent to his reduction to part-time status in 1988, when he was serving under a substandard emergency certificate, does not alter the fact that he was not tenured at the time of the reduction so as to provide him with tenure and seniority rights arising from that particular reduction. As correctly pointed out by the Commissioner, petitioner would receive full seniority credit for his service under the emergency certificate in any staff reductions occurring after he achieved tenure as a result of his acquisition of a permanent certificate in 1990.

Dec. 6, 1995

N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1(e).

In light of our conclusion that petitioner had no tenure rights arising from his reduction to part-time status in 1988, we have not considered the Commissioner's determination that petitioner's instructional certification in "skilled trades: auto mechanics" did not authorize him to teach a claimed course in small engine mechanics.

SYNOPSIS

In consolidated matters, Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent, tenured custodian, for alleged criminal sexual contact and sought ruling that respondent forfeited his employment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2(a)(2) by virtue of judgment of conviction.

Granting motion for summary decision, the ALJ concluded that respondent forfeited his position as offense involved and touched his employment and, thus, it was unnecessary to reach a determination on the tenure charges. On June 24, 1994, Commissioner reversed and remanded matter for full hearing to reach determination as to whether he forfeited his public employment. Commissioner ordered this matter to proceed to hearing on the merits if it was concluded on remand that respondent did not forfeit his employment.

On remand, Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the offense to which respondent pled guilty did not touch and involve his employment as a school custodian, consequently, he was not deemed to have forfeited his employment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2. However, the Commissioner further agreed with the ALJ that the circumstances underlying respondent's guilty plea constituted unbecoming conduct and termination was the appropriate penalty given the seriousness of his acts.

BEFORE DIANA C. SUKOVICH., ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 19, 1993, the Superintendent of Schools of the Borough of Bergenfield (Borough) filed tenure charges and a sworn statement of evidence against Howard Efferen (Efferen or respondent), a tenured custodian, with the Acting Secretary of the district's Board of Education (Board or petitioner). Respondent did not submit a written statement of evidence in opposition. On July 13, 1993, the Board passed a resolution certifying tenure charges to the Commissioner of the State Department of Education (DOE) seeking dismissal of respondent. Efferen was suspended without pay. The DOE transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative (OAL) on August 26, 1993 for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was docketed as EDU 8099-93.

On August 23, 1993, the Board filed a petition for declaratory judgment with the DOE. The DOE transmitted that matter to the OAL on September 14, 1993 for determination as a contested case. It was docketed as EDU 8672-93 and consolidated with the matter previously transmitted.

During the course of the proceedings, petitioner filed a motion for summary decision. On April 25, 1995, this judge issued an initial decision granting the motion, concluding that Efferen had pled guilty to an offense which touched and involved his employment and that he therefore was subject to forfeiture. On June 24, 1995, the Commissioner of the DOE (Commissioner) issued a decision reversing the initial decision and remanding the matter to the OAL for a hearing. The matter on remand was transmitted to the OAL on July 6, 1994 for determination as a contested case and docketed as EDU 6487-94.

Telephone conferences were conducted, and a hearing was held on March 16, 1995. The parties filed post-hearing briefs on April 19, 1995, on which date the record was closed.

NATURE OF THE CASE

The tenure charges consisted of two counts of unbecoming conduct. Count One alleged that on July 29, 1992, respondent had criminal sexual contact with his 25-year-old stepdaughter, D.A., who was alleged to be mentally handicapped, and that on January 25, 1993, respondent pled guilty to a charge of criminal sexual conduct in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3b.

Count Two of the tenure charges alleged that Efferen misrepresented the status of the criminal action pending against him to the Assistant to the Superintendent of the district, Richard Cirelli (Cirelli), more specifically, that Efferen stated that the criminal charges had been dropped when they were still pending.

As noted hereinabove, in granting the Board's motion for summary decision in the prior proceeding, this judge determined that Efferen had forfeited his position because of the criminal plea. I therefore did not consider petitioner's motion for summary decision as it pertained to the tenure charges.

The Commissioner remanded the matter for a hearing wherein respondent would be permitted to present proofs relating to all relevant circumstances surrounding the offense in question. The Commissioner therefore remanded for further proceedings to determine whether respondent forfeited his public employment. The Commissioner further directed that in the event it is concluded that respondent did not forfeit his employment, the matter should proceed to hearing on the merits of the outstanding tenure charges.

For reasons of administrative efficiency, See, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.3(a), the hearing on remand addressed both forfeiture and the tenure charges. The burden of proof is on petitioner by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The issues, broadly, are whether the offense to which Efferen pled guilty touches and concerns his employment, resulting in a forfeiture, whether the Board has proven the tenure charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence, and, if so, what, if any, discipline should be imposed upon respondent.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Prior Findings

The Commissioner's decision did not reject nor modify the findings of fact set forth in the initial decision of April 25, 1994, and those findings are incorporated herein. For convenience, they are restated as follows.

Efferen commenced employment with petitioner in 1980 in the position of custodian at Bergenfield High School (High School). The duties of High School custodians in the district are set forth in Exhibit A to an affidavit of Cirelli filed in support of petitioner's motion for summary decision.

During each school year of his employment, respondent was generally assigned to an evening shift at the High School. His hours of employment were from 3:00 p.m. until 11:00 p.m. During the summer months, July 1 through August 30, respondent worked the day shift at the High School, from 7:00 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. There are usually five custodians at the High School during the evening shift. At that time, custodians generally perform their duties unaccompanied by other custodians and are not under constant supervision.

There were in excess of 900 students attending the High School during the 1992/93 and 1993/94 school years. A summary of events and activities which occurred at the High School after hours and during the shift on which respondent worked during the 1991 school year is as stated in Exhibit B to Cirelli's affidavit. A summary of events and activities which occurred at the High School during the 1992/93 school year, after school hours and during the evening shift on which respondent previously worked, is as stated in Exhibit C to Cirelli's affidavit. A summary of the events which occurred during the summer of 1993 during daytime hours during which respondent worked is as stated in Exhibit D to Cirelli's affidavit.

High School students, faculty members, students and staff from other schools, and numerous other visitors were present at the High School during the various events referenced in Exhibits B, C, and D to Cirelli's affidavit. High School students, staff, and visitors could, and did, proceed unaccompanied or unescorted to parts of the building and grounds of the High School during the events and activities of the nature referenced in these exhibits. During the performance of his duties, respondent had continuing opportunity for contact with students, staff members, and visitors to the High School and its grounds.

On July 29, 1992, respondent's wife reported to the Borough police department that respondent had sexually assaulted her daughter, D.A., who was then 25 years of age, on July 29, 1992, at their home. In a statement given to a senior investigator with the Bergen County Prosecutor's Office, Sex Crime/Child Abuse Squad, on July 29, 1992, Mrs. Efferen described D.A. as being "slightly mental," noting that D.A. had attended "handicapped schools most of her life." A warrant was obtained for the arrest of respondent, charging him with aggravated sexual assault. Efferen was arrested on July 30, 1992.

During the summer of 1992, Mrs. Efferen advised the Board that respondent had been arrested and was incarcerated. The Board suspended respondent on approximately September 18, 1992.

Respondent was indicted on September 25, 1992. Count One averred that on July 29, 1992, Efferen committed sexual assault upon D.A. by performing an act of sexual penetration, i.e., inserting his finger into her vagina through the use of physical force or coercion, the victim not sustaining personal injury, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2c(1). Count Two alleged that on July 29, 1992, respondent committed sexual assault upon D.A. by performing an act of sexual penetration, i.e., anal intercourse with her through the use of physical force or coercion, the victim not sustaining severe personal injury, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2c(1). Count Three stated that on July 29, 1992, Efferen committed criminal sexual contact with D.A. by intentionally touching her breasts for the purpose of degrading or humiliating her or to sexually arouse or gratify himself, through the use of force or coercion, in violation, of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3b.

On approximately January 8, 1993, Cirelli received a letter dated January 5, 1993 from respondent requesting his reinstatement. The content of this letter is as stated in Exhibit 1 to the statement of evidence supporting tenure charges.

On January 25, 1993, respondent pled guilty to Count Three of the indictment, fourth degree criminal sexual contact, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3b. A judgment of conviction was entered on March 8, 1993. Efferen was sentenced to probation for three years. As a condition of probation, respondent was required to attend and complete Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) or any program deemed appropriate by the probation department and was required to continue psychological counseling.

Additional Findings

Cirelli testified on petitioner's behalf; and Efferen and his wife, Madeline Efferen, on respondent's behalf. Both parties moved several documents into evidence.

Based upon a review of the entire record, including credibility assessments of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be additional FACTS.

Efferen is 57 years old. He resides in the Borough with his wife; D.A., who is now 27 years old; and D.E., the natural daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Efferen, who is 17 years of age. Mrs. Efferen also has a 27-year-old daughter, M.E., who is in the Navy.

D.A. is currently employed by a Roy Rogers facility in the Borough, where she has worked for eight years. She is a crew manager, with supervisory duties. From the third grade on, D.A. was a special education student during her school years. She went to Paramus Vocational School.

Respondent has had problems with alcohol for years, having received treatment at Bergen Pines Hospital (Bergen Pines) during the 1960s and 1970s. At some point, he was employed for five years at Bergen Pines as an orderly. When respondent drinks, he tends to become violent. He has exhibited a pattern of subsequently not recalling what has happened because of the effects of alcohol. On at least two to three occasions prior to July 29, 1992, he has exhibited aggression towards his family while he was under the influence of alcohol, physically striking Mrs. Efferen, M.E., and D.A. Mrs. Efferen has previously made complaints to the police regarding her husband, has taken her husband to court at least twice, and has obtained restraining orders. The most recent restraining order was issued in approximately April 1992. The restraining orders prohibited respondent from entering the home. Mrs. Efferen eventually let him return because she concluded he was not drinking. To Mrs. Efferen's observations, when he is drinking, respondent is "out of control," like a different person.

Efferen's mother died on June 20, 1992. Respondent was very upset as a result. Efferen went on vacation, during which he consumed alcoholic beverages. After his mother's death, Efferen consumed a substantial amount of alcohol.

As of July 29, 1992, Efferen was on a "binge." He was out late the night of July 28, 1992, during which time he consumed alcoholic beverages. When he returned home, Mrs. Efferen could tell that he was drunk. Respondent was due back at work from vacation the morning of July 29, 1992. Before she left for work, Mrs. Efferen reminded him to report to the High School. Efferen said that he would. The incident which occurred on July 29, 1992 involved Efferen pushing D.A. onto a bed.

Subsequently, a Borough police officer was called to the High School, where he met with Mrs. Efferen and D.A. The content of the officer's investigation report is as stated in Exhibit P-7. The officer stated in his report that he has known D.A. ". . . to be functionally retarded." (Ex. P-7, p. 2).

Mrs. Efferen went to the Borough police department on July 29, 1992, where she was interviewed and gave a sworn statement to investigators. Efferen gave a sworn statement to law enforcement personnel on July 30, 1992. The content of the statement provided by Efferen is as stated in Exhibit P-4; and that of Mrs. Efferen, as stated in Exhibit P-1. The charge of aggravated sexual assault, N.J.S.A. 2C:14-2(a)(5)(b), was signed against respondent because of D.A.'s "mental handicap." (Ex. P-9, p. 5). Efferen was arraigned, bail was set at $10,000, and respondent was remanded to the Bergen County Jail.

Senior Investigator Edward A. Schiro (Schiro), of the Bergen County Prosecutor's Office, prepared a memorandum dated August 4, 1992 regarding the incident in question. The content of this document is as stated in Exhibit P-9. Schiro noted that Mrs. Efferen had reported in an interview that her husband had been on a "drinking binge" since the Sunday before July 29, 1992 and "had been acting very strangely" since his mother's death. (Ex. P-9, p. 3).

During the winter of 1992, Mrs. Efferen, accompanied by D.A., made efforts to have the charges dropped. She spoke in this respect with Wakeley Paul (Paul), the Public Defender assigned to Efferen. Paul advised Mrs. Efferen that she would have to contact the Prosecutor's office. In approximately December 1992, she went to the Prosecutor's office and was advised that the charges would not be dropped. Two days later, on a Friday, Mrs. Efferen spoke with Paul. She understood from this conversation that the charges would be dropped. Mrs. Efferen returned to Paul's office the following Monday and, again, several days thereafter. A plea was discussed at this time. It was Mrs. Efferen's understanding that Paul was negotiating with the High School to reinstate her husband.

Efferen's January 5, 1993 letter to Cirelli read as follows:

I Howard Efferen would like To be reinstated as soon as possible.

Charges against me have been dropped (Ex. P-3)

When he wrote this letter, respondent believed that the charges against him had been dropped.

By letter dated February 5, 1993, Paul advised John Galish (Galish), the Board's Superintendent, that Efferen had pled guilty to charges for which respondent would not receive jail time. Paul indicated that he was inquiring about reinstatement of Efferen.

Mrs. Efferen sent a letter dated April 25, 1993 to Galish. Mrs. Efferen expressed her dissatisfaction with the outcome of the criminal proceedings and her concerns regarding Efferen's employment situation, imploring Galish to reinstate her husband. She wrote this letter in efforts to help her husband regain employment with the district, an outcome which she views as important to her family and herself.

Efferen has completed two years of his three-years probation. Anne Byrnes (Byrnes) is a Senior Probation Officer assigned to Efferen's case. Respondent initially reported to Byrnes on a weekly basis; then, on a bi-weekly basis; and currently, on a monthly basis. In April 1994, Efferen completed a 12-month alcohol treatment program (Program) provided by the Bergen County Department of Health Services, Division of Alcohol and Drug Dependency, Office of Alcohol Recovery. Efferen attended the Program as a condition of probation. His counselor was Julie Shaw (Shaw), a Senior Alcoholism Counselor, with whom Efferen attended weekly sessions. Efferen currently attends AA meetings and has not consumed alcohol beverages since July 30, 1992. Since approximately April 1993, Efferen has attended therapy sessions with Eleanor Faulkner (Faulkner), a "certified sex therapist." (Ex. R-2). Respondent currently attends weekly group sessions, lasting one and one-half hours, with Faulkner.

Since 1993, Shaw has sent various letters to Efferen's counsel in the current matter and a report to Byrnes. Shaw sent a letter dated March 22, 1994 to Efferen's counsel regarding respondent's status. The content of this document is as stated in Exhibit R-5. Shaw sent a report dated April 22, 1994 to Byrnes regarding Efferen. The content of this document is as stated in Exhibit R-4. Shaw sent another letter to Efferen's counsel on April 22, 1994. The content of this letter is as stated in Exhibit R-3. She again communicated with Efferen's counsel by letter dated October 15, 1993.

The content of this letter is as stated in Exhibit R-6. Finally, Byrnes sent a letter dated February 16, 1995 concerning Efferen to his counsel. The content of this letter is dated February 16, 1995. In her April 22, 1994 memorandum to Byrnes, Shaw noted, in part, the following:

Mr. Efferen appears too (sic) have a reasonable attitude regarding employment and other life areas and should continue to work toward appropriate goals. Mr. Efferen has received group counseling with a sex therapist for a period of one year and appears to have gained more awareness regarding his drinking practices and consequences of his excessive alcohol use.

It is also this counselor's opinion that as long as Mr. Efferen continues to maintain sobriety, he should continue to behave in a responsible manner in all areas and life situations. (Ex. R-4).

For two years subsequent to the termination of his employment with the Board, respondent worked for Manpower, an agency which sent him on temporary jobs. Efferen currently is employed in warehouse work.

While employed as a custodian at the High School, respondent's duties included cleaning any areas used by students, such as hallways, classrooms, gymnasiums, locker rooms, and bathrooms, including bathrooms and locker rooms utilized by females. The Board does not employ female custodians assigned specifically to those tasks.

Subsequent to 3:00 p.m., the High School is very busy. It is not only used for school-related activities but also functions as a community center. Student activities occurring in the High School subsequent to 3:00 p.m. include clubs, sports, all practices, including color guard and cheerleading, and dances. The Borough has very active athletic activities, and the High School is used for girls' sports activities. Various organizations also rent the High School for activities, including recitals and parent teacher association events, for example. Activities occur at the High School well into the evening hours. During the past five years, many such events continued until 11:00 p.m. during winter months, especially on Friday evenings, when dances are often held. For security reasons, certain doors at the High School are locked. During activities, some doors are left open. Custodians lock them after the activities are completed.

Students utilizing the High School for athletic events, as well as other events, include both students at the High School, as well as from other districts. These students use the gym, locker rooms, and bathrooms. Locker rooms and bathroom facilities are not locked during activities. During games, students may go to the locker rooms, which contain showers, and rest rooms to change, etc. These areas are not monitored at such times. Any group or individuals in the building, including students, at the direction of teachers, regularly seek out custodians to unlock doors and retrieve equipment. Students interact with janitors on a regular basis.

Cirelli is employed as the assistant to the Board's superintendent and deals with personnel matters. Although he makes efforts to assign janitors to specific areas of the High School, such is not generally the practice. In the past, respondent employed female custodians. Male custodians do not clean female locker rooms while they are in use. In general, custodians employed by the district are assigned to different buildings.

Approximately 90 to 95 students at the High School are classified as special education students. Their classifications include neurologically impaired, physically impaired, emotionally disturbed, and physically handicapped. There are a total of 930 students at the High School, divided approximately evenly between male and female students. The students range in age from 13 to 19 years. The High School contains grades 9 through 12.

There are five middle schools, containing grades 6 through 8, in the district. Not all schools in the Borough have the same janitorial shifts as those at the High School. There are two elementary schools in the district, having two shifts, 7:00 a.m. until 4:00 p.m. and 3:00 p.m. until 11:00 p.m. There are five custodians on the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift at the High School. The other schools in the district do not have 11:00 p.m. - 7:00 a.m. shifts.

Cirelli was involved in the current matter. He was in contact with the police department and reviewed police records and documents supplied to the Board. The documents he reviewed and relied on included the pertinent arrest report and the police department's investigative report.

DISCUSSION

The Commissioner generally has jurisdiction to hear and determine controversies and disputes arising under the school laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Every public school janitor of a school district shall, unless appointed for a fixed term, hold his/her office, position, or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation, except as a result of a reduction of the number of janitors in the district or except for neglect, misbehavior, or other offense, pursuant to the manner prescribed in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Id. at §17-3.

No individual shall be dismissed if he/she is under tenure of office, position or employment in a public school system, except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, "or other just cause." Such action can only be taken after a hearing held pursuant to applicable statutory provisions, subsequent to written charges of the cause of complaint. Id. at §6-10. Upon certification of charges to the Commissioner, a local board may suspend the person against whom such charges are made, with or without pay. If a determination of the charges is not made by the Commissioner within 120 calendar days after certification thereof, then the full salary of the individual in question shall be paid beginning on the 121st day, until such determination is made. A dismissal of the charges shall result in reinstatement with full pay from the first day of any suspension. Id. at §6-14.

A person holding any public office, position or employment under State government, or any agency or political subdivision thereof, who is convicted of certain specified offenses shall forfeit his/her office or position. These are convictions of any offense involving dishonesty or a crime of the third degree, conviction of an offense "involving or touching such person's position or employment," or if the constitution or a statute so provides. N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2(a).

Forfeiture shall take effect upon a finding of guilt by the trier of facts or a guilty plea, if the court so orders, upon sentencing, unless the court for good cause shown orders a stay of such forfeitures. Id. at §(b). Forfeiture takes effect at the time an employee pleads guilty to or is found guilty of an offense involving or touching his/her employment. Moore v. Youth Correction Institute, 119 N.J. 256 (1990) (Moore). The forfeiture statute reflects the belief that the circumstances of a criminal conviction relate to an employee's competency and capacity to continue his/her employment or to perform any other public job. Moore at 271.

The determination of whether a crime touches or involves employment requires ". . . an analysis of the nexus between the crime and the employment to determine if there is a sufficient relationship between the two to warrant the harsh penalty of forfeiture." Moore at 266. The initial determination should generally be made by the employer and administrative agencies subject to the individual's right to appeal to the Appellate Division. Moore, supra.

Moore involved a senior prison corrections officer convicted of harassing his supervisor, a petty-disorderly-persons offense. A determination by the Department of Corrections that he had forfeited his employment was upheld by the Merit System Board and the Appellate Division. In doing so, the court held that an offense may involve or touch employment even if it was not committed on the job premises or during work hours, noting that it is the substance of the crime which determines whether or not it involves or touches employment. Moore at 269-270. A crucial factor is the relationship between the offense and the individual's capability to perform satisfactorily in the future. Moore at 270-271.

The determination of whether a crime touches or involves employment requires an assessment of the gravity of the offense as evidenced by its nature, context, and the identification of the victim. There must also be an assessment of the qualifications required by the employee's public employment. Moore at 269.

The Commissioner and the State Board of Education (State Board) have narrowly interpreted the requirement that the underlying circumstances of a plea or conviction touch or involve an individual's employment in an educational setting, essentially determining that the incident in question must either occur on educational premises, or directly affect the employee's duties. In The Town of West Orange, Board of Education v. Martin Lieb, 1985 S.L.D. 933 (Lieb), the Commissioner affirmed the findings of the presiding ALJ that Lieb should be reinstated as a school teacher following a lewdness conviction. Lieb was initially charged with violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3(b), criminal sexual contact. The charge was subsequently downgraded to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4, lewdness. Lieb at 934-935. The underlying offense was that Lieb had contact with an undercover police officer's genital area. Lieb was subsequently found guilty. In determining that the offense of which he was convicted did not involve or touch Lieb's employment as a teacher, the ALJ noted the following:

The plain language of N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2(a)(2) would apply if the offense of which respondent was convicted involved or touched his employment as a teacher. Significantly, the conduct underlying respondent's conviction occurred during the summertime when school was not in session; his conduct did not involve pupils; nor was respondent's employment as a public school teacher in any way involved with his conduct. Consequently, respondent's conviction of lewdness may not be seen to be an offense involving or touching his employment as a public school teacher. Lieb at 939.

In School District of the City of Garfield v. Olek, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 319 (Olek), a tenured teacher pled guilty to possession of a hypodermic syringe or needle, possession of a prescription legend drug, steroids, and unlawful use of a prescription legend drug, steroids, disorderly persons offenses. The ALJ's determination, on motion for summary decision, that the underlying offenses touched and involved Olek's employment and that he therefore forfeited his position were upheld by the Commissioner. The State Board reversed the Commissioner's decision, finding that there was insufficient information in the record to conclude that there was a sufficient nexus between the offenses committed by Olek and his employment to conclude that forfeiture applied.

The fact that the offense to which respondent pled guilty did not involve a controlled dangerous substance lends support to a conclusion that it does not touch or involve Efferen's employment, as construed by the State Board. See, Olek at 325. Petitioner argues that the State Board in Olek was unable to determine the exact parameters of Olek's employment duties. However, the State Board's analysis in this respect focussed on whether Olek was employed as a wrestling coach at the time of his arrest, the specific period of time in which he was employed in such capacity, his specific coaching assignments, the duties and responsibilities of such assignments, and the qualifications required thereof. Olek at 325. The Commissioner in Olek referenced the relationship between the fact that Olek had possessed steroids and his roles as a science teacher, mentor of students, and a former wrestling coach. Id at 323. It is reasonable to conclude that the State Board was persuaded by the fact that the underlying offenses did not occur on school property nor involve students.

Determinations of the Commissioner and the State Board in their areas of expertise must be given great weight, and I feel constrained to apply the narrow interpretation of the forfeiture statute as applicable in the education area articulated by the State Board and the Commissioner. Petitioner argues that it is incongruous that another public employer would be precluded from hiring respondent in light of his guilty plea but that petitioner is required to continue his employment. However, this reasoning was implicitly rejected in the Commissioner's decision of June 24, 1995. Similarly, the Board's reliance on Miller v. New Jersey Dept. of Education, 91 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 15 (1991) is misplaced in the context of the current matter. As discussed in my initial decision in the prior docket, it is reasonable to conclude that in that case the Commissioner applied the disqualification provision to Miller as if he were a new employee. The Board's reliance on Borough of Haddonfield School District v. Wayne V. Wisdom, 1986 SLD 656 (1986) is similarly misplaced. Wisdom was convicted of a crime of the second degree, resulting in automatic forfeiture.

Although respondent may not be deemed to automatically have forfeited its position, the Board has the authority to discipline Efferen if the facts underlying the offense in question constitute unbecoming conduct. The Board argues, alternatively, that the underlying facts establish unbecoming conduct warranting Efferen's dismissal. Although the Board argues in this respect that said dismissal should be effectuated pursuant to its initial motion for summary decision, I am persuaded that such is not appropriate in light of the fact that the plenary hearing is completed. While conceding that his conduct was unbecoming, respondent argues that a penalty less than dismissal should be imposed.

I am persuaded that respondent's conduct on the morning of July 29, 1992 constituted unbecoming conduct for which he may be disciplined. The facts indicate that Efferen pushed D.A. onto a bed in the family's residence and engaged in forced sexual contact with D.A. It is reasonable to infer from the facts, and the offense to which respondent pled, that Efferen used physical force, that D.A., at least to some extent, was incapacitated in her mental abilities, and that respondent was aware of that.^{*} Forced sexual contact is a serious offense on its face. D.A.'s age and her relationship with Efferen heightened the seriousness of the offense. The question to be decided is what discipline, if any, should be imposed on Efferen.

In determining the discipline which should be imposed in cases involving unbecoming conduct, the Commissioner considers the nature and circumstance of the incident in question, the individual's prior record and current attitude, and the likelihood that the behavior in question will recur. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frederick L. Ostergren, School District of Franklin Township, Somerset County, 1966 SLD 185 ". . . each such matter must be judged in the light of its particular circumstances. The kind and degree of penalty will necessarily vary according to the specific problem." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William H. Kittell, School District of the Borough of Little Silver, Monmouth County, 1972 SLD 531, 541.

Discipline may be imposed upon a tenured employee for unbecoming conduct even if such conduct did not occur in the course of a teacher's employment. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Robert H. Beam, School District of the Borough of Sayreville, 1973, S.L.D. 157 (Beam). Beam involved the certification of charges of unbecoming conduct by the local school board on the basis of a parental complaint alleging that Beam had assaulted the parents' 13 year-old-daughter, who attended

^{*} At the time in question an individual was guilty of criminal sexual contact, a crime of the fourth degree, if he/she committed an act of sexual contact with the victim under certain specified circumstances. N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3(b). These were:

1. He actually used physical force or coercion but the victim did not sustain severe personal injuries;
2. The victim was one who the actor knew or should have known was physically helpless and mentally incapacitated.
3. The victim was on probation or parole or was detained in a hospital, prison, or other institution or was mentally defective and the actor had supervisory or disciplinary power over the victim by virtue of his/her legal, professional, or occupational status;
4. The victim was at least 16 years but less than 18 years old, and the actor was a member of the victim's family with supervisory or disciplinary power over the victim; or parochial school, not the public school system, during evening hours on a public street in Parlin, New Jersey. The Commissioner rejected Beam's argument that because the incident occurred in the evening away from school premises, the Commissioner lacked jurisdiction to discipline him. Although not disturbing the board's determination of unbecoming conduct, the Commissioner concluded that while such behavior could not be condoned, a "single, isolated incident" was not sufficient to warrant dismissal. Beam at 164.
5. The victim was at least 13 years but less than 16 years old, and the actor was at least four years older than the victim. Id. at §2(c).

Similarly, in Lieb, supra, the presiding ALJ found that Lieb's conduct constituted unbecoming conduct but that termination was too harsh in light of "one fleeting instance of bad judgment," the stress he was undergoing at the time in question, the findings and conclusions of the board's psychiatrist, and Lieb's long and successful career as a public school teacher, as well as his standing in the community and family. Lieb at 943. The Commissioner, upholding the ALJ's decision, noted:

Given respondent's outstanding teaching career, the factual circumstances underlying the tenure charges, the fact that action giving rise to the charges, was a single, isolated incident on an otherwise unblemished record and the findings of the Board's psychiatrist, the Commissioner believes that termination is not warranted. . . . Lieb at 945.

In Dinkins v. Department of Health of Cape May County, 6 N.J.A.R. 202 (1983) (Dinkins), the presiding ALJ held that a supervisor in the Division of Laboratories of the Department of Health had forfeited his employment due to his conviction of a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:24-4A. The offense in question involved engaging in sexual contact with a five-year-old female. Sentencing included probation and a requirement that Dinkins, who was an alcoholic, continue participation in AA. Dinkins at 202-203. Although concluding that forfeiture was automatic because the crime in question was of the third degree, the ALJ also considered the appointing authority's action removing Dinkins on other grounds, including unbecoming conduct. Evidence before the ALJ demonstrated that Dinkins was an alcoholic as well as a user of various narcotic substances, that at the time in question, Dinkins was living with the child and her mother, that Dinkins had been drinking during the day in question, that Dinkins received treatment from an alcoholic counselor subsequent to his conviction, and that he was thereafter actively involved with AA and had not consumed alcohol nor drugs for one and one-half years. A psychotherapist testified that, in her opinion, the incident would not have occurred if Dinkins had not been drinking and that the incident was an isolated one not likely to be repeated. Id. at 204-205.

In determining that Dinkins' conduct was unbecoming and that he should be removed from his position on that basis, the ALJ stated:

In connection with the discretionary grounds for removal, there is no question but that the conduct of Mr. Dinkins in connection with the five-year-old child was immoral and was clearly conduct unbecoming one who holds a public position. While the actions did not touch or concern the public employment and were undertaken in the context of Dinkins' private life, this does not change the fact that the conduct is shocking and that it is certainly something that should not be tolerated from one who holds the confidence of a public position. Mr. Dinkins' status as an alcoholic no doubt provides a strong clue as to how he fell into the conduct in which he engaged, but it does not excuse the fact that what he did was totally wrong. Given the circumstances, I do not believe it would be appropriate for the appointing authority to continue Dinkins as a public servant. There are few actions which are less tolerable to society than improper sexual contact with a child of tender years. Given Dinkins' position as a responsible supervisory individual in the Department of Health, it does not seem appropriate that his employment in that job be continued where he has violated the public trust by engaging in such immoral actions, even in his private life. Therefore, I believe that removal is necessary under N.J.A.C. 4:1-16.9(a)7, 9 and 11. Dinkins at 208-209.

As the Board argues, criminal sexual contact with an individual's mentally handicapped stepdaughter is similarly conduct unbecoming an individual who holds a public position, especially one in which, as in this case, the individual in question has opportunity for unmonitored contact with adolescent females in a public school setting.

A single incident can be sufficient to support dismissal of a tenured employee. South Orange-Maplewood Board of Education v. Simonic, 1986 SLD 3117 (1986). The facts of this case strongly argue for imposition of substantial discipline even if the conduct in question can be viewed as an isolated incident. However, I am not persuaded by respondent's argument that it was an isolated incident. As the Board argues, the record demonstrates a pattern of aggressive action by respondent directed towards adolescent or otherwise vulnerable females in unprotected locations. This case is therefore distinguishable from Lieb, supra. The underlying offense in the current matter is strikingly similar to that in Dinkins.

Although raising issues pertaining to the disqualification statute, N.J.S.A. 18a:6-7.1, the facts of Paul v. New Jersey State Department of Education, 91 N.J.A.R. 2nd (EDU) 46 (Paul), are analogous to those of the current matter. In upholding action by the DOE disqualifying Paul from the position of custodian because of three drug-related offenses, the ALJ, whose decision was affirmed by the Commissioner, noted that:

Under its general police powers, the State has the right to impose reasonable restrictions on various occupations in order to protect the public health and safety Protection of the public is particularly vital in the school environment where a custodian has ready access to impressionable young children who are not under the watchful eye of their parents. Paul at 47(citation omitted).

The same rationale applies in the current matter. In addition, the fact that the incident in question occurred when Efferen was a mature adult, and the fact that the seriousness of his aggressive actions has apparently escalated over time, supports a conclusion that he should not be employed in a public school setting. See, Paul at 47.

Anticipating arguments on behalf of respondent, the Board argues in its brief that Efferen has not established rehabilitation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1e. Although this provision is applicable to applicants, not current employees, the principles reflected therein are relevant to consideration of whether Efferen's unbecoming conduct should result in termination or a lesser discipline.

The nature of the offense to which Efferen pled guilty and his relationship with D.A., as well as her age and status, argue for termination for the reasons discussed hereinabove. As respondent argues, the fact that the Board introduced no evidence pertaining to his employment record indicates he was previously not subject to discipline and must therefore be considered to have been a satisfactory employee. However, I am persuaded that this factor, in light of the nature of the offense and the identity and relationship of the individuals, does not mitigate a conclusion that termination is appropriate. Respondent was a mature individual at the time in question. Students at the High School are not much younger than D.A. There is ample opportunity for contact with unsupervised students, including female students and classified students. Efferen has exhibited a pattern of physical aggression towards women. Mrs. Efferen's testimony that he is a good father and husband when not under the influence of alcohol was self-serving. Similarly, Shaw's communications to respondent's counsel on their face were prepared relevant to the current matter and are not given substantial weight. The memorandum from Shaw to Byrnes states that Efferen should be able to function in an educational employment setting if he refrains from the consumption of alcohol beverages. Although Efferen completed the court-ordered alcohol rehabilitation program and has not recently consumed alcoholic beverages, the record establishes a long-standing problem with the consumption of alcoholic beverages and prior participation in a treatment program, apparently without continuing effect. The record also indicates that respondent is receiving counseling for the existence of issues related to sexual matters, reinforcing the Board's concerns regarding safety issues in light of the nature of a custodian's duties. Finally, as petitioner argues, the incident in question is not a distant historical event.

I am not persuaded by respondent's reliance, in support of his argument that termination is not warranted, on In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Robert P. Valenti, School District of the Township of Monroe, 1990 S.L.D. 410 (Valenti), In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jude Martin, School District of the Township of Union Beach, 1987 S.L.D. 1929, Board of Education of the Township of Old Bridge v. Richard M. Pappa, 1988 S.L.D. 542 (Pappa), and Parsippany-Troy Hills Board of Education v. Greg W. Molinaro, 1989 S.L.D. 1996 (Molinaro). None of these cases involved instances of physical aggression. The Commissioner's concern, in considering the appropriate discipline for unbecoming conduct, that such incidents not be a "momentary aberration" is also clear. Valenti at 2. The fact that the incident in question in Pappa was a "single isolated incident," Pappa at 548, and that there was a "single incident of misconduct" in Molinaro, Molinaro at 2008, argued for lesser discipline. Such is not the case in the current matter.

Respondent relies, in part, on public policy that alcoholics and intoxicated persons not be subject to criminal prosecution because of their consumption of alcohol, but should be afforded treatment so that they may lead productive lives, N.J.S.A. 26:2B-7, and that no person who has received treatment shall be denied any right or privilege under the United States or State Constitutions for the reason that he/she has received such treatment or is an alcoholic. Id. at §21. However, any discipline imposed on respondent in the current matter is not because of his status nor his consumption of alcohol but because of his acts. In addition, Efferen is not precluded from employment, as evidenced by the fact that he has been employed since his suspension by the Board. The question presented in this case is whether or not he should be employed in an educational setting. I am persuaded that that question should be answered in the negative. The ALJ's reasoning in Dinkins, supra, is applicable in this respect in the current matter. I am persuaded that termination is appropriate.
