NOTES TO THE READER.

1st. The calculations of this Almanac are made to solar or apparent time; to which, for the mean or clock-time, apply the equation given in the sixth column, adding when the Sun is slow, and subtracting when fast.

2d. The time of high-water at Philadelphia is so computed as to serve for either morning or afternoon, sufficiently near for common use; the morning flood being about twelve minutes earlier than the time in the tide column, and that of the afternoon as much later.

3d. The rising, setting or southing of a star, may be carried several days backward by adding, or forward by subtracting, four minutes per day; for instance—On the fourth of January, Sirius is south at thirty minutes past eleven; adding twelve minutes for three days sooner, we have 11h. 42m. for the southing on the first, and deducting eight minutes for two later, leaves 11h. 22m. for that of the sixth of the same month, &c.

4th. The time of Alioth's passage over the meridian, or when a plumb-line apparently cuts both the Pole Star and Alioth, is given, for the first six months above, and the last below, the Pole, to five days in every month, and may be readily known for any day by the preceding note. These two stars will be visibly coincident with a level east and west line at 5h. 59m. before or after Alioth passes the meridian. Thus we may regulate time-pieces to a minute, or tell the time without them. The Pole Star is on the meridian five minutes later than Alioth, when a true meridian line may be drawn by it, and the magnetic variation thereby determined.

Alioth is the first star in the tale of the Great Bear, viz. that next the square, or it is the third star of the seven commonly called the waggon or plough, counting toward those two of them denominated the pointers.

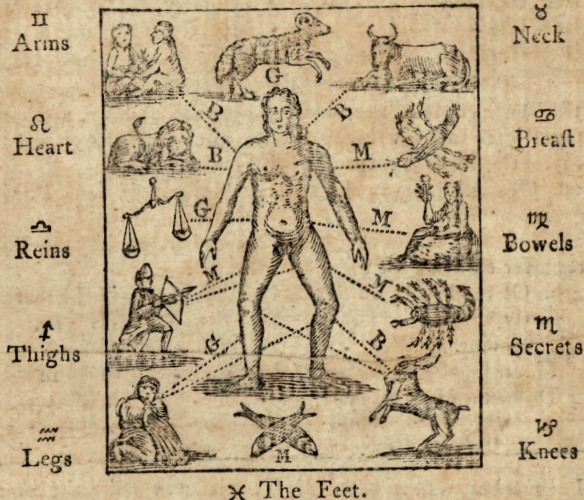

5th. As the day ends at midnight, the rising, setting and southing of the Moon, when after that time, is found against the succeeding day, so, on the night of (or following) the tenth of January, the Moon rises at 2h. 15m. after midnight, viz. in the morning of the eleventh not at 1h. 7m. the time opposite the tenth, which is that of its rising the preceding morning.

"What pleasure it is to pay one's debts."

I remember to have heard Sir T. Littleton make the same observation. It seems to flow from a combination of circumstances, each of which is productive of pleasure. In the first place, it removes that uneasiness which a true spirit feels from dependence and obligation. It affords pleasure to the creditor, and thereby gratifies our social affections : It promotes that future confidence, which is so interesting to an honest mind : It opens a prospect of being readily supplied with what we want on future occasions : It leaves a consciousness of our own virtue ; and it is a measure we know to be right, both in point of justice and sound policy. Finally, it is the main support of simple reputation."

A safe and easy Cure for a Polypus in the Nose.—TAKE the root called Blood-Root, dry and powder it and use it as snuff.

About four or five years since, a child of mine had a Polypus appear in her nose, which continued to extend until it filled the nostril. I consulted several physicians, who said they knew of no cure but by extraction, which was painful and dangerous. About two years since, I was informed, that a person in Vermont had been cured of a Polypus by this remedy. I procured some and the child used it as snuff—the Polypus turn'd pale [which was before a redish cast] and began to diminish, and contract until it wholly disappeared—and there has been no appearance of it for more than a year.

REMARKABLE PROPHECIES,

Prefixed to a volume containing the prophecies of RICHARD BROTHERS, intitled, THE WORLD'S DOOM, &c. published in 1795.

BY WILLIAM LILLY.

OUR noted countryman, Lilly, thus prophesied of the French nation, in 1626: "And it shall come to pass, when the king and the people of France have committed an act of great and flagrant treachery towards this land, that the Lord shall avenge his faithful people with vengeance an hundred-fold. For he shall send an angel of dissention among the perfidious Gauls; they shall massacre each other for years of years, and prey upon their own flesh. The king shall seek an asylum he shall not find, and his desolate family shall beg their bread of their antient enemies." It scarcely need be hinted, how plainly the first part of this prediction related to the conduct of the French nation towards us in our quarrel with America.

By Love.—This pious and holy minister of God's word, who suffered during the usurpation of Cromwell, predicted the destruction of popery in 1790, and that in 1797 it should be complete. A great man is then to arise. The stars will wander, and the moon turn as blood, in 1800. The whole world will tremble in 1803 with intestine troubles. In 1805 there will be a universal earthquake, after which all religious dis-sentions will cease, and a general reformation of mankind will then follow, as preparative for the blessed Millennium, which will, shortly after, restore to the world, purity, sanctity, tranquility and prosperity.

By Barclay.—This author in his Argenis, in which Henry IV. of France, cotemporary with Queen Elizabeth, is the hero of the Romance, makes this remarkable prophecy: "That the time shall come when France shall have no other boundaries than the Rhine, on one side, and the Ocean on the other. When success shall every where attend her arms; and the nation shall esteem it no hardship to be conquered by her."

A N E C D O T E.

A Scotchman, very fond of calves heads, cooked turtle fashion, was one day going home from market with a calf's head in his hand, which he held rather carelessly by the ear. Stopping to talk with a friend, a dog, watching his opportunity, slipped up and snapping away the head out of the hand of the honest Scot, fairly run off with it.—The owner, although swift on foot, soon found he was pursuing the dog to no purpose, and then bawled out, Ab Tyke! ye may gang awa' wi' it; but mind, boy, ye ha' na got the receipt for cooking calf's head!

Let men talk what they will of fortitude—supping the suffering to be equal, women support evils with infinitely more fortitude than men.

III Month, MARCH, hath 31 Days.

TOMMY TIPTOE is sent to school, as his mama says to be taught, not to be corrected. Like many other boys he prefers his play to his book. The master tries to coax him to his duty; but he has coaxed and coaxed, till he has coaxed away the boy's fear and his own authority. Still he is afraid to offend the parents. He wishes to have it said, he has kept the school without a blow. Besides there is the risk of losing the school. The father is a man of consequence, or what is worse, thinks himself so. The child grows obstinate, begins to pout, throw down books, and huff out wills and wonts with much emphasis. The master calls him up and is disobeyed: he thinks it time to have recourse to the ferula. One blow falls on the culprit's hand—If you strike me again father will horse-whip you! is returned with a kick at the master's shins, and off goes Tom, bellowing his tale to his mama.—What is the matter? Tommy, says Mrs. Tiptoe.—The master has struck me, and was going to tear me to pieces, mutters Tom.—You did right to run away, my dear; he is a cruel block-head, and shall be punished for his impudence, answers the tender mother.—In comes the father, and finds his boy pouting and his wife scolding.—What is the matter? The indignant mother relates the story, with additional colouring. A question pops into the father's mind that had escaped the mother's.—What did you do to provoke the master? Tom.—Nothing but look off my book.—And the poor boy must be skinned alive, or study till he is blind; fine times indeed! such treatment may do for our spiritless neighbors. My children shall not be abused in this manner, I'll warrant Mr. Cowskin! If the school committee don't take care of him, you ought to go and turn him out of the school yourself Mr. Tiptoe.—Tom's tears and his wife's Philipic against the schoolmaster have some weight with the father. He perceives he shall never enjoy a calm within doors, till he has blown up a breeze without. The school committee are called together. The master is summoned before them to answer face to face with Tommy Tiptoe, to certain high crimes and misdemeanors, committed against the peace and dignity of the Tiptoes. Tom is admitted as a witness, and his evidence, corroborated by the testimony of his aunt Prim, who deposed, verbatim, that, "The sate Tomme Tiptoe had bin under her stuwshun laste summer, and had always behaved as a good skolor ote to do, and she never had keched him in a ly or a fib in her lyfe." The exasperated mother argues the cause in an animated letter, addressed to the school committee, in which she displayed her skill in what some call female logic: the whole argument was entirely free from that kind of reasoning which the learned call a circle, from its running round Robbinhood's barn and ending where it began. She confined herself to the single point of assertion, without stirring a hair's breadth one way or the other. A majority of the neighbours and their children are present to exculpate the master and express their approbation of his conduct: unfortunately for him they are under the influence of Mr. Tiptoe, and he is under the benign control of what Messrs. Colon and Spondee call Robocracy.—The neighbours are together by the ears. The school is entirely interrupted, and the books lie on the shelves, while the scholars are espousing the different sides pro. and con. in the famous cause. Maternal weakness seems to be the main spring of all these notions. The master is under at least a partial censure if not a merited one. Much time is lost; and what is of more consequence, a great deal of friendship destroyed in the neighbourhood. Mrs. Tiptoe huffs and dings at those, who espouse the cause of the master, and calls their children liars, beggars, ill-bred scullions. This is not an uncommon case; I have known a number of the same nature. Now if Common Sense, or any other sense, could devise a method to avoid these petty quarrels, and set school government a going on the two legs of liberty and order, instead of the cumbersome crutches of

INFORMATION to OLD PEOPLE.

How they may preserve the Eye Sight, or recover it after it has failed.

8	7	34	9	40	This is to be done while you wash, by dip-
9	8	14	10	26	ping your face in the water, opening your
10	8	57	11	9	eyes, and keeping them open under water as
11	9	43	11	43	long as you can hold your breath. Do this
12	10	33	0	21	three or four times successively every morning.
13	11	26	1	14	It will be expected, no doubt, that I should
14	aft.	24	2	12	give an account how I came by this know-
15	1	24	3	12	ledge; it was in this manner:—I knew, early
16	2	25	4	13	in life, that washing with cold water was good
17	3	23	5	11	against the tooth ache, and I have long used
18	4	20	6	8	that remedy with success. Some years ago I
19	5	12	7	0	went out a long journey towards the North,
20	6	2	7	50	and among other inconveniences, I suffered
21	6	51	8	39	the want of cold water to wash with accord-
22	7	39	9	27	ing to my custom; this brought on a violent
23	8	27	10	15	tooth ache; on my return I lost several teeth.
24	9	17	11	5	I applied closely my former remedy, which at
25	10	10	11	43	length took away the tooth ache, but was
26	11	4	0	22	not efficacious enough to remove a pain in
27	11	59	1	16	my gums, at the roots of my upper teeth, and
28	Morn.	2	11	I expected to lose them all. A little better than a year
29	0	52	3	4	ago a poor old man (whom I had long known) begged of
30	1	44	3	56	me a spot of land to cultivate: I gave it him within a quar-

He fitted up a rough table at his spring for my use, with a large pewter basin, which he placed on it every morning. I go early to wash, and after washing I dip my face under water and open my eyes, keeping them so as long as I can hold my breath, three or four times successively.
10	9 7	11 19	If I recollect well, it is about a year since I began to do this, and I am relieved, not only of the pain in the gums as I expected, but I have also recovered my sight, which I did not expect. I am not far short of 70 years old, and I have used spectacles about five and twenty years, but I have lately laid them aside, having (thank God) no occasion for them.
19	5 31	7 19	As this may be useful to all persons at one time or other, I wish it may be known to them, and desire that benevolent printers (seeing the utility of it) will be pleased to give it a place among their publications.

31	2 38	4 50	A person, lately a resident of Salford, a few evenings ago, having sacrificed a little too freely to the jolly God, in a visit to a few of his old neighbours, took his departure at a very late (or rather early) hour in the morning. Having about three miles to walk, and very often losing the balance of power ere he had attained half the way, at last he fell

1	3 19	5 31	near the mouth of a coal-pit, about half a mile from his house; here the leaden hand of Morpheus laid so heavy on him that he soon forgot his danger and himself in a sound sleep. Not long had he lain there before the black gentlemen of the pit arrived, to resume their daily task; these wicked wags (four or five in number) soon agreed to fasten the sleeping visitant in their basket, and introduce him into their infernal regions; this was done with all possible safety; and he was laid in the subterraneous regions. A figure of a black ugly boy was placed by his side to watch him closely when he should awake, which, when he did, and opened his eyes upon the object, produced an effect upon his mind, body and face, that emphatically declared (for he was speechless with horror) he thought himself really among the damn'd, and that this lad was no more nor less than one of the devil's imps. As soon as he was fairly awake, the sweat running from his brow with horror, the lad exclaimed. Oh! what you're come at last! Aye, aye, I'll fetch measter, the cawd one, to you. Accordingly the lad ran, and soon brot' not one only but four or five old ones, who burst forth with dissonant voices— "Oh! what he's here, is he? aye, we've been expecting him this long time past! Come, come, confess your sins directly, or else you go into a bed of brimstone in a moment." Here they produced a black book in which they pretended to register what he should confess. As soon as he could speak, he begged for God's sake that they would have mercy on him, and he would tell all his offences, though he solemnly declared they were very few. He then said that he had got drunk with some friends in Salford, and fell asleep on his way home, when he supposed that a cart had gone over him and killed him, "Aye, aye, that we know very well," roared the demons, "but your sins! your sins!" Why, cries the trembling culprit, 'tis

A N E C D O T E.

A Student at a certain college, to avoid his studies at Euclid and Algebra, which he hated, feigned himself sick of a fever. After two or three days deception, the mathematical tutor calling at the young man's room to know how he was, met a girl coming out.—Well, how is it with you (said the tutor, feeling his pulse) has this fever left you, Isaac?—The student, conscious that nothing ailed him, answered with a yawn—Yes—yes, Sir—it left me but just—just now.—I thought so, said the other, with a sardonic grin, for it is but three minutes ago that I met it going down stairs!

X Month, OCTOBER, hath 31 Days.

Thy farewell smile, with fond regret, I view,
 Thy beaming lights soft gliding o'er the woods;
 Thy distant lan' scape, touch'd with yellow hue,
 While falls the lengthen'd gleam, thy winding floods.

AT the birth of the princess, when their Majesties visited Paris, the Queen, by an act of peculiar benevolence, awakened the affection of the Parisians, with whom she had never been a favourite. Her Majesty desired that a part of the money reserved for the public rejoicings, might be employed in marrying one hundred poor and virtuous girls with honest tradesmen. A choice was accordingly made from each parish; and the future spouses formed two rows, when their Majesties passed the nave of the church of Notre Dame. The new-married couples appeared uniformly dressed; the portion of each five hundred livres; and the Queen not only engaged to pay for the nursing of the first fruits of their marriage; but promised a greater sum to those mothers who would suckle their own children. The whole exhibition was crowned by the remarriage of an honest couple, who had lived together above half a century, and who now renewed their vows of affection, which they had sworn at so distant a period. This venerable pair, attended by all their children, grand children and great grand children, wore the same uniform as the younger ones, and they received the same portion. The marriages were celebrated before their Majesties; and the scene melted the sympathetic Parisians into tears.

The VANITY of EARTHLY PLEASURES.

WHAT pleasure some persons take in following the amusements of the age, while others are as assiduous in the pursuit of riches, honors, and preferment, little thinking that every sublunary acquisition and enjoyment are as incapable of affording permanent satisfaction to a rational being, formed for immortality, as they are of procuring lasting happiness and felicity in the present chequered scene of things. It is but a few weeks ago that the gay, the fashionable, and affluent Thymander, in the midst of earthly possessions and emoluments, breathed out his last in the wise man's energetic language—

Vanity of vanities, all is vanity and vexation of spirit. And indeed, when the sum total of all earthly acquirements is properly considered, and weighed in the balance of sound reason and mature reflection, it amounts to little or nothing more than Solomon's declaration in the passage just quoted, vanity and vexation.

Florianthus, a man of fortune, abilities and discernment, lived to the age of forty-three, eagerly grasping at wealth, dignity, and fame, before he was suitably convinced that each of them were utterly insufficient to make him truly happy; but a violent illness of three months brought him to a due sense of the folly of all worldly enjoyments, and their absolute inability to satisfy the longing desires of a never dying soul, on the verge of quitting its frail tenement of mortality and corruption. Religion only can point out the way to obtain pleasure unalloyed with pain; and felicity durable as eternity itself. Dr. Young in his Night Thoughts very justly says, Religion's all! descending from the skies

 To wretched man; the goddess in her left
 Holds out this world, and in her right the next.

CHARACTER of a WELL-BRED MAN.

SOME have supposed the fine gentleman and the well-bred man to be synonymous characters; but I will make it appear that nothing can be more widely different; the former leaves nature entirely, the latter improves upon her. He is neither a slave nor an enemy to pleasure, but approves or rejects as his reason shall direct. He is above stooping to flatter a knave, though possessed of a title; nor ever overlooks merit, though he should find it in a cottage. His behaviour is affable and respectful, yet not cringing or formal; and his manners easy and unaffected. He misses no opportunity wherein he can oblige his friends, yet does it in so delicate a manner, that he seems rather to have received than conferred a favor. He does not profess a passion he never felt, to impose upon the credulity of a silly woman; nor will he injure another's reputation, to please her vanity.

He cannot love where he does not esteem, nor ever suffers his passions to overcome his reason.

A CURE for BURNS.

Bruise raw onions, mix them with a little salt, and apply them to fresh burns, not blistered.—They will quickly draw out the fire, and prevent blisters.

A CURE for the FEVER and AGUE.

Seventy-five grains of Wormwood Seed mixed with Molasses, and made up into a small pill, taken just before the fit comes on, seldom fails to cure.

A CURE for little ULCERS on the HEAD

Wash them with a decoction made of Oak Leaves and the inner Bark of Elders.
