The present dispute surrounds the Board's continued employment of Dr. Marcia V. Lyles as its Superintendent of Schools. The Board hired Dr. Lyles as its Superintendent and executed a contract with a term from August 2012 through June 30, 2016. Petitioner Lorenzo Richardson is a member of the Board.

Respondent Vidya Gangadin has served as Board President at all times relevant to the present action. Board Bylaw 9121, Election and Duties of President, vests authority in the Board President regarding the creation of the Board's agendas. By Board practice, other Board members may contact the Board President prior to the creation and publication of an agenda to request that the President include an item. Additionally, under Board Bylaw 9323/9324, Agenda Preparation/Advance Delivery of Meeting Material, any Board member is free to make a motion during a regular meeting to add an item to the agenda of that meeting. Such a motion must be seconded by another Board member for it to be considered by the entire Board, and a majority of the Board voting and present must then agree to consider the item for it to be added to the agenda.

Regular Board meetings are typically scheduled for the third Thursday of each month. On the third Tuesday of the month, the Board holds a caucus meeting during which time the Board members discuss what agenda items should be included on the regular meeting's agenda. In addition to regular Board meetings, Board Bylaw 9321, Time, Place, Notification of Meetings, provides for special meetings "at the request of the president or upon a petition signed by a majority of the board members[.]"

At the Board's caucus meeting on December 15, 2015 to discuss the Agenda items for the December 17, 2015 Board meeting, petitioner and one other Board member, Gerald Lyons, requested that an item be added to the Agenda for the December 17, 2015 Board meeting which would nonrenew Superintendent Lyles' contract. As per their request, the Agenda for the December 17, 2015 Board meeting included a Resolution addressing the nonrenewal of Superintendent Lyles' contract.

Neither Petitioner nor Mr. Lyons attended the regular Board meeting on December 17, 2015. Nor did either individual participate in that meeting via telephone conference, although that would be permitted by Board practice and policy. In their absence - because three (3) of the nine (9) board members have conflicts which prevent them from voting on resolutions involving the Superintendent's contract – only four (4) Board members could participate in any vote regarding Dr. Lyles employment. Mr. Richardson and Mr. Lyons would have been able to vote if they had attended. Given the absence of both petitioner and Mr. Lyons from the Board's December 17, 2015 meeting, Board President Gangadin exercised her authority as Board President and removed the item they requested addressing the nonrenewal of Superintendent Lyles' contract from the agenda for that meeting.

Although fully empowered to do so, none of the Board members attending the Board's December 17, 2015 regular meeting made any motion to add an item to the agenda of that meeting to address the renewal or nonrenewal of Dr. Lyles' contract. The Board did not address Dr. Lyles' contract via any resolution on December 17, 2015.

At the January 21, 2016 regular meeting, Mr. Lyons moved to place an item on the agenda which would have extended the Superintendent's contract. Mr. Richardson seconded that motion, but the motion failed.

Following the Board's January 21, 2016 regular meeting, petitioner contacted Board President Gangadin via email on or about January 26, 2016. He requested the inclusion of an item on the agenda for the Board's February 18, 2016 regular meeting which would renew the Superintendent's contract, the opposite of his Resolution from December. Shortly after Board President Gangadin received petitioner's email request, another Board member, Ellen Simon, who was apparently upset at perceived political "gamesmanship" being played by petitioner and Mr. Lyons regarding Dr. Lyles' contract, requested that the original resolution calling for the nonrenewal of Dr. Lyles' contract proposed by petitioner for inclusion on the December agenda should be included on the February agenda.

After considering the agenda item requests by petitioner and Ms. Simon, Board President Gangadin declined to include either Resolution on the Board's February 18, 2016 regular meeting agenda with the understanding that at the meeting a Resolution to put either item on the agenda could be made.

A copy of the agenda for the Board's February 18, 2016 regular meeting was made available to Board members and the public in advance of that meeting. During the Board's February 18, 2016 regular meeting, petitioner made a motion to add an item to the agenda to renew Dr. Lyles' contract. Board President Gangadin permitted petitioner an extended period of time to discuss his rationale in making said motion. No Board member seconded petitioner's motion, and the motion failed. The Board did not address Dr. Lyles' contract via any resolution on February 18, 2016.

The Board never provided Dr. Lyles with written notice that she would not be reappointed at the end of her current contractual term.

Consideration of petitioner's motion for emergent relief will begin with the second factor which is whether the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b). Petitioner relies on N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15, which provides that a board of education may by contract appoint a superintendent of schools "by the recorded roll call vote of the full membership of the board." Both petitioner and respondent cite N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1, which provides as follows:

> At the conclusion of the term of the initial contract or of any subsequent contract as hereinafter provided, the superintendent shall be deemed reappointed for another contracted term of the same duration as the previous contract unless either: a. the board by contract reappoints him for a different term which term shall be not less than three nor more than five years, in which event reappointments thereafter shall be deemed for the new term unless a different term is again specified; or b. the board notifies the superintendent in writing that he will not be reappointed at the end of the current term, in which event his employment shall cease at the expiration of that term, provided that such notification shall be given prior to the expiration of the first or any subsequent contract by a length of time equal to 30 days for each year in the term of the current contract.

A general principle of statutory interpretation is that a specific provision controls over a general one. This case involves a reappointment of a school superintendent. Because N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 specifically relates to reappointments, it is the applicable statute in this case.

In accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1, the superintendent is deemed reappointed, unless the board by contract appoints him to a different term or the board notifies the superintendent in writing that he will not be reappointed at the end of the current term. This statute further provides that such notification shall be given prior to the expiration of the contract by a length of time equal to thirty days for each year in the term of the contract. In this case, the term of the contract was effectively four years. Therefore, the notification would be required by March 1 or 2, 2016, which would be 120 (30 x 4) days prior to the expiration of the contract.

Petitioner maintains that Board members must take responsibility for evaluating and appointing the Superintendent and that this cannot be done by default. Petitioner reasons that the Board members are required to vote on the reappointment. As relief, petitioner seeks an order of the Commissioner allowing the six non-conflicted Board members to convene a special meeting and vote on the Superintendent's contract on or before the March 1, 2016, deadline. Alternatively, petitioner would have the Commissioner extend the statutory deadline to March 18, 2016, and mandate that the resolution proposed by petitioner and Mr. Lyons be placed on the March 17, 2016 Board meeting agenda to allow the six non-conflicted Board members to vote on the Superintendent's contract.

Petitioner's arguments are inconsistent with N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. This statue plainly contemplates that a superintendent may be deemed reappointed without a vote. In fact, action by the Board is necessary to prevent a Superintendent from being deemed to be reappointed to another contract term. It follows that petitioner has not demonstrated that the legal right underlying his claim is settled. Indeed, petitioner's position is directly contrary to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1.

Petitioner offers an alternative argument based upon N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. Petitioner maintains that language in the Superintendent's current contract provides written notice in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. The current contract contains a provision which states as follows:

> The Board agrees that by December 31, 2015 it shall notify the Superintendent in writing whether it desires to renew this Agreement for an additional period of time, and of the terms and conditions proposed for that period. Failure to notify the Superintendent by that date of an intention to renew will mean that an offer of renewal is not being made.

Petitioner maintains that the Board did not so notify the Superintendent and that therefore the Superintendent had written notice that an offer of renewal was not being made. This argument is also inconsistent with N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1, which requires an affirmative act by the Board in the form of written notification. The Board cannot modify the requirements of the statute with terms in a contract. It follows that petitioner's argument is without merit and that there is no legal right underlying this argument.

Another consideration is whether petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b)1. Harm is considered to be irreparable if it cannot be remedied by money damages. Moreover, the harm must be substantial and immediate; risk of harm alone is not sufficient. Here, petitioner's views with respect to the renewal of the superintendent's contract may not prevail, but there is no real harm to him.

The next factor is whether petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b)3. Here, petitioner lacks a legal theory to support his petition, as his contentions are contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. It follows that petitioner has not demonstrated a likelihood of prevailing on the merits.

The final requirement is that when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, petitioner will suffer greater harm than respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b)4. Here, petitioner has not established that he will suffer any real harm in this case. Further, it must be noted that the individual who could suffer real harm is the Superintendent who was not named as a party in this proceeding. It follows that petitioner has not established that he will suffer greater harm, if the requested relief is not granted.

In order to prevail on a motion for emergent relief, the movant must satisfy all four requirements under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b). Here, petitioner does not satisfy any of the four requirements. Under the circumstances, I CONCLUDE that petitioner does not satisfy the applicable standard for emergent relief. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergent relief is denied.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of Education, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of her son in November 2015, seeking a determination that V.H.A. was entitled to a free public education in West Orange Schools for the period between June 1, 2015 and November 30, 2015. The Board contended that – based on the results of a residency investigation – petitioner had been domiciled in East Orange during the period in question. Subsequent to the Board's determination of non-residency, however, petitioner moved back into the West Orange school district on November 30, 2015. Accordingly, the Board counterclaimed for tuition for the period from June 1, 2015 to November 30, 2015. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). Two pre-hearing telephone conferences were scheduled in February 2016, but petitioner failed to answer despite having received proper notice. Subsequently, counsel for the Board appeared at the scheduled hearing on February 29, 2016, but petitioner failed to appear and offered no explanation for her non-appearance.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, petitioner has the burden of proof in a determination of residency ineligibility; petitioner failed to participate in scheduled proceedings and provided no excuse for her failure to appear; petitioner did not file an answer to the Board's counterclaim for tuition. The ALJ concluded that the determination of the Board that V.H.A. was not domiciled in West Orange during the period in question should be upheld, and the petition of appeal dismissed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4. The ALJ further concluded that the Board has demonstrated entitlement to tuition reimbursement in the amount of $5,309.44 for the period of ineligible attendance. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the petition with prejudice and granted the Board's request for tuition reimbursal.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ findings and conclusions, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. Accordingly, the Commissioner ordered that petitioner shall reimburse the Board in the amount of $5,309.44 in tuition costs for the period of V.H.A.'s ineligible attendance in West Orange schools.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner appeals the determination of the respondent, West Orange Board of Education ("the Board"), that she is not domiciled in its district. The Board initially sought to remove petitioner's child, V.H.A., from its schools pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2), and demanded tuition reimbursement based on petitioner having moved out of its district on June 1, 2015. Subsequent to the determination of the Board, however, petitioner moved back in to the subject district on November 30, 2015. As a result, the Board demands tuition reimbursement from June 1, 2015, until November 30, 2015.

Petitioner filed an appeal with the Department of Education ("the Department") on November 30, 2015. The Board filed an answer on December 8, 2015. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case on December 16, 2015. A telephone prehearing conference was scheduled for February 1, 2016, and a Notice of Telephone Prehearing dated January 8, 2016, was sent to the parties. The Notice, as well as all subsequent notices, was sent to petitioner at the address listed in her pro se appeal. When the telephone call was made on February 1, 2016, to the telephone number listed in her pro se appeal, petitioner either terminated the call, or the connection was lost. The call was placed again; petitioner did not answer. A second telephone prehearing conference was scheduled for February 8, 2016. The parties were notified of same by telephone on February 5, 2016, and also by a Notice of Telephone Prehearing of even date. On February 8, 2016, the petitioner was telephoned five times, but failed to answer. Two voice messages were left for petitioner, but she failed to respond by telephoning the undersigned. A Notice of Plenary Hearing, dated February 10, 2016, was then sent to the parties advising them of the February 29, 2016, hearing date. Counsel for the Board appeared on February 29, 2016. Petitioner failed to appear.

FINDINGS OF FACT

At hearing, the Board offered a packet of documentary evidence (R-1), and the testimony of its Residency Investigator, Gerard Drappi, in support of its claim to tuition reimbursement. Based on the documentary and testimonial evidence presented to me, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. V.H.A. was and continues to be a general education elementary school student (Grades 1--5) in the West Orange Schools.

2. The Board determined that petitioner was not domiciled in West Orange commencing June 1, 2015. The Board subsequently determined that petitioner moved back in to West Orange on November 30, 2015.

3. During the time period from June 1, 2015 through November 30, 2015, when petitioner was not domiciled in West Orange, V.H.A. attended school for 61 days.

4. The annual per pupil cost for a general education elementary school, Grades 1 - 5 student is $15,668.

5. The daily tuition rate for a general education elementary school student in Grades 1 - 5 is $87.04. This is calculated by dividing the per pupil cost by 180.

6. As of February 29, 2016, the amount of tuition owed to the Board for V.H.A.'s period of ineligible attendance is $5,309.44.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Public schools are required to provide a free education to individuals between the ages of five and twenty years who are domiciled within the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). Domicile has been defined as the place where a person has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 250 (1955). The domicile of an unemancipated child is that of her parent, custodian or guardian. P.B.K. o/b/o minor child E.Y. v. Board of Ed. of Tenafly, 343 N.J. Super 419, 427 (App. Div. 2001).

Where a local board determines that a child is not properly domiciled in its district, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2) provides a right of appeal to the parents as follows:

> The parent or guardian may contest the Board's decision before the Commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the Commissioner and shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this section.

Petitioner has failed to appear and prosecute her appeal of the Board's decision. She has failed to advise me of the reason for the nonappearance. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the determination of the Board that V.H.A. was not domiciled in West Orange during the period of time from June 1, 2015 to November 30, 2015, should be upheld and the petition of appeal dismissed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4.

The Board asserts that it is entitled to be reimbursed for tuition for the period of V.H.A.'s ineligible enrollment in its schools. Where, as here, the evidence does not support the claims of the resident, the Commissioner of Education is authorized to assess tuition pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.2(a), which provides as follows:

> If in the judgment of the Commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the resident, he shall assess the resident tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the school district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner in which orders of the Commissioner are enforced.

N.J.S.A. 18A: 38-1(b) likewise requires that tuition be calculated on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance.

In accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(d), I accepted ex parte proofs from the Board relative to its tuition claim. The Board's proofs are convincing and its calculations are consistent with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b) and N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.2(a). Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Board has demonstrated an entitlement to tuition reimbursement in the amount of $5,309.44, for the period from June 1, 2015 through November 30, 2015.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that the petition of appeal be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. I further ORDER that the Board's application for tuition reimbursement is GRANTED in the amount of $5,309.44.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

APPEARANCES

FOR THE PETITIONER:

Benjamin S. Teris, Attorney
Therese M. Taraschi, Attorney
Brown & Connery, LLP

FOR THE RESPONDENT:

Cosmas P. Diamantis, Attorney
Zeller & Wieliczko, LLP

This dispute initially concerned charges of inefficiency, unbecoming conduct and other just cause, dated August 21, 2015.[1] They were brought against tenured teacher Bruce Turner under Section 25 of the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 as follows:

[1] For ease of reference, the creation date of each document has been cited, rather than the Department of Education stamp. In this matter there is no allegation of failure to comply with time limits.

1. The Camden City Board of Education entered into a Consent Order with the Commissioner of Education in March of 2013 to allow for full State intervention to begin on the last day of the school year in June 2013. The State of New Jersey began operating the Camden City School District ("the District") on June 26, 2013. Over the past two school years, the District evaluated all its teachers in accordance with the "Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act" ("TEACHNJ").

CHARGE ONE - INEFFICIENCY (TEACHNJ N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3)

2. The District brings this inefficiency charge against Bruce Turner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 based on his two consecutive "partially effective" summative evaluations.

3. Mr. Turner is an inefficient teacher who lacks the ability to effectively perform his daily responsibilities. This is simply not acceptable in a State-operated school district which is trying to effectuate important reforms, including the elimination of school teachers who fail or refuse to grasp the concept of being an efficient and effective teacher. Mr. Turner must be dismissed.

- Practical Portion: The Danielson Framework

4. Beginning in the 2013-2014 academic year, the TEACHNJ legislation and accompanying regulations were implemented statewide in New Jersey. In part, that law pertains to the evaluation process for tenured teachers and the subsequent process of removal for inefficiency.

5. The statute requires that only certain Department of Education approved practice evaluation rubrics be used in the evaluations of teachers. The Camden City School District has opted to use the Charlotte Danielson Framework for Teaching evaluation rubric, which has been approved by the Department of Education.

6. The Charlotte Danielson Evaluation Rubric identifies four (4) domains which are to be evaluated: (l) planning and preparation; (2) classroom environment; (3) instruction; and (4) professional responsibilities. Each of these domains includes a number of subdomains. Under the rubric, employees are scored in each subdomain on a scale of 1 to 4, 1 being "ineffective," 2 being "partially effective," 3 being "effective," and 4 being "highly effective." All subdomain scores within a particular domain are then averaged, yielding the employee's score for that domain. In turn, the scores from each domain are averaged, yielding the employee's overall score for the practical portion of the summative evaluation score. In the Camden City School District, the practical portion of the overall evaluation was weighted at 85% of the total summative rating for the 2013-2014 academic year and at 80% of the total rating for the 2014-2015 academic year.

7. Teachers and evaluators in the District received training and instruction with regard to the Danielson Evaluation Rubric.

8. Information regarding the evaluation process including observation information, pre- and post-conference information, summative ratings, etc. are recorded and stored electronically in the TeachScape software program.

9. All teachers and evaluators received training and instruction on TeachScape.

- Student Growth Achievement Portion: Student Growth Objectives (SGOs)

10. In addition to the practical portion of the teacher's summative rating, each teacher rating is required to include a measure of student growth achievement such as student growth objectives ("SGO"). In the Camden City School District the student growth achievement measure was weighted at 15% of the overall score for the 2013-2014 academic year and at 20% of the overall score for the 2014-2015 academic year.

- Year 1: The 2013-2014 Evaluation Process and Requirements

  o Practical Portion

11. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(c) requires that teachers be observed at least three (3) times in the first year with each observation lasting at least twenty (20) minutes.

12. Mr. Turner was observed four (4) times during the 2013-2014 academic year on the following dates by the following evaluators:

    a. Observation #1: December 2, 2013 by Nicole Harrigan-Nash;
    b. Observation #2: February 6, 2014 by David Corvi;
    c. Observation #3: March 31, 2014 by Cliff Kendeall;
    d. Observation #3: April 1, 2014 by Charles Dawson.[2]

    See attached documents bates stamped CCSD BT 17 through 46.

13. Each of Mr. Turner's observations lasted for the required twenty (20) minutes. Id.

14. N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-4.4(b) requires that each evaluator conduct a post-observation conference not more than fifteen (15) working days after the observation.

15. It is the practice of District evaluators to conduct post-observation conferences within the timeframe required and, upon information and belief, each evaluator conducted post-observation conferences in accordance or substantial compliance with the regulation.

Ms. Harrigan Nash, a Teacher Trainer and Evaluator at that time, holds a Standard Supervisor Certificate issued in June, 2007; Mr. Corvi, a Principal, holds a Provisional Principal Certificate, dated May, 2013; Cliff Kendeall, a Teacher Trainer and Evaluator at that time, holds a Standard Principal Certificate, dated February, 2010; and Charles Dawson, a Vice Principal, holds a Standard Principal Certificate, dated July, 2013.

and preceded by a pre-observation conference.

17. In the 2013-2014 academic year, Mr. Turner participated in a pre-conference on November 21, 2013, which, upon information and belief, was in compliance with the timing requirements set forth in the regulations. See attached documents bates stamped CCSD BT 17, 56.

18. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(c) also requires that at least one teacher observation occur during the first half of the school year and one occur during the second half of the school year.

19. During the 2013-2014 academic year, at least one of Mr. Turner's observations occurred in the first half of the school year and at least one occurred in the second half.

20. Every evaluator signed every observation report electronically.

21. Finally, in addition to reviewing the observation report at the post-observation conference, every teacher in the school district, including Mr. Turner, had access to each of their observations as soon as they were uploaded via the TeachScape program and continued to have such access throughout the remainder of the academic year.

o Student Growth Achievement Portion

28. Mr. Turner's CAP went into effect on September 16, 2014 and, upon information and belief, both the teacher and the supervisor participated in its creation. See attached documents bates stamped CCSD BT 60 through CCSD BT 65.

See attached documents bates stamped CCSD BT 77 through CCSD BT 109.

31. Upon information and belief, each observation lasted for the required twenty minutes and Mr. Turner was evaluated by more than one evaluator during the 2014-2015 academic year. Id.

timing requirements set forth in the regulations.

36. N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-4.4(c) also requires that at least one teacher observation occur during the first half of the school year and at least one occur during the second half of the school year.

o Corrective Action Plan

41. As previously indicated, a teacher rated "partially effective" or "ineffective" during an academic year must be placed on a corrective action plan ("CAP") pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(a) for the next academic year. During the year for which the CAP applies, the teacher and the supervisor are required to meet by February 15th in order to review the teacher's mid-year progress in accordance with the CAP. 44. Mr. Turner was also provided with support through weekly coaching sessions designed to help him improve.

45. Mr. Turner, however, did not make any effort [to] improve and, on numerous occasions, was either late or failed to attend the coaching sessions.

o 2014-2015 Summative Rating/Conference

46. After weighing each component of the evaluation, Mr. Turner's summative rating was calculated to be "2.26," which was again partially effective and a regression from his 2013-2014 summative evaluation. See attached documents bates stamped CCSD BT 9 through 16.

47. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.4(f), a summative conference must be held and both the teacher and supervisor must sign the summative evaluation within five (5) days of such conference. In this case, a conference was held on June 6, 2015 and the summative form was signed by Principal Corvi on that date. Mr. Turner unprofessionally refused to sign. See attached documents bates stamped CCSD BT 9 through CCSD BT 16.

- Conclusion: Inefficiency

48. The District has evaluated Mr. Turner in accordance with the law and provided him with the tools to be successful. Nonetheless, he has shown to be both unable and unwilling to improve.

49. Due to Mr. Turner's consecutive "partially effective" ratings for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 academic years, tenure charges must be brought against Turner. The District accordingly submits that Mr. Turner should be dismissed for inefficiency.

CHARGE THREE - OTHER JUST CAUSE

81. Mr. Turner's inefficiency and unbecoming conduct, when combined, constitute other just cause warranting his permanent dismissal from employment with the District.
[Petitioner Exhibit 1]

Accompanied by a statement of evidence, the charges were served on the teacher on August 21, 2015, and he was suspended without pay [Petitioner Exhibit 1].[4] The teacher filed a position statement, dated September 8, 2015 [Petitioner Exhibit 2]. With regard to Charge One—Inefficiency— he alleges that "the District has failed to substantially comply with required evaluation procedures...assigned ineffective or partially ineffective scores in one or more observations conducted during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 School Years...has made one or more mistakes of fact in one or more observations conducted during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 School Years...[and] each of my Student Growth Objectives...for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 School Years were scored 'high effective' with a numerical score of '4' for each SGO." As a result of these failures, "my 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 Summative Evaluations have been materially affected" [Statement of Position of Bruce Turner, pp. 1-3].

The teacher asserts that the second and third charges, Conduct Unbecoming a School Employee and Other Just Cause, are "meritless, without support in the record. Notwithstanding, the District has failed to comply with its Disciplinary Policy (3150) by not providing me with progressive discipline in the form of suspensions and/or increment withholdings for my alleged conduct unbecoming...and do not warrant my dismissal from the District" [Statement of Position of Bruce Turner, pp. 9-10].

On September 17, 2015, the teacher was served with notice of the District's intent to certify tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education, and charges were filed that day [Petitioner Exhibit 3]. On October 12, 2015, the parties were notified by M. Kathleen

BACKGROUND

The arbitrator conducted conference calls with the parties to discuss scheduling and other preliminary matters. Motions concerning discovery requirements were submitted.

Hearings were held on December 9, December 10, December 11, and December 21, 2015. The following witnesses testified under oath or affirmation:

FOR THE PETITIONER:

Nicole Harrigan, Principal
Clifford D. Kendeall, Lead Educator
Charles Dawson, Vice Principal
Christie Whitzell, Senior Lead Educator (Grades K to 3)
David M. Corvi, Principal, Forest Hill-Camden City School

FOR THE RESPONDENT:

Robert Eisberg, Teacher (retired)
Josephine Jones, Teacher (retired)
Bruce Turner, Teacher

On the last day of hearing (December 21, 2015), the parties appeared as scheduled before the undersigned to resume taking testimony. During the direct examination of the teacher, the parties engaged in settlement discussions outside the hearing room. The teacher's counsel announced that "we have agreed to terms that will effectively resolve this matter. We would like to put those terms on the record and we will be submitting a formal agreement for your review following this hearing" [Tr., p. 701]. In response to the arbitrator's question about the regulations governing settlements, the district's counsel read the following into the record:

> Any proposed withdrawal or settlement whether submitted to the commissioner or arbitrator, so it says or the arbitrator. And then I have to, the district has to lay out the various, we have to send you the, well, the documentation or the charges so you have already seen the tenure charges, but part of the package. Then we have to explain the circumstances justifying settlement and withdrawal of the charges and we will detail that as briefly as possible in our submission, consent of both the charge and the charging parts and we both will have consent, indication that Mr. Turner entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his rights which we will put, lay out on the record, showing that the agreement is in the public interest. The district can briefly state on the record why it's in the public interest, but we will do it very shortly in the form of our submission to yourself and, Mr. Turner, you have to be advised that the commissioner may forward the tenure charges to the State Board of Examiners and that they will review it. I'm sure your counsel has advised him of that as well [Tr., pp. 702-703].

The teacher's counsel acquiesced, and the teacher testified that he had no questions. The arbitrator asked the parties to set a deadline for submission of the settlement agreement in writing for her review. They chose January 8, 2016 [Tr., p. 705].

In order to ensure that the teacher understood and agreed with the terms of the settlement, the parties jointly conducted the following voir dire examination, which began with his counsel:

Q. Mr. Turner...I will be discussing with you the terms of the settlement that we have discussed just outside this conference room today.
A. Yes.
Q. Is it your understanding that the matter has, that you have settled the matter with the school district?
A. Yes.
Q. Is it your understanding that the school district will pay you a lump sum of $45,000?
A. Yes.
Q. And that lump sum is subject to an adjustment from the New Jersey Department of Pensions and Benefits which will turn out, which will equal your buy back of seven and some years getting you to 25 years of pension benefits?
A. Yes.
Q. In exchange for that you will agree to sign a general release?

A. Yes.
Q. And that general release you will be releasing any and all claims that you have against the Camden City School District regarding the allegations that were raised in the tenure charges?
A. Yes.
Q. And --
MR. TERIS: And anything up to from the beginning ever to the date that the general release is executed, all claims?
Q. Correct, all claims from prior to and up to the date the actual release is signed?
MR. TERIS: Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. You understand that you have a right to a hearing?
A. Yes.
Q. And you understand that you are waiving that right to a hearing in exchange for this settlement?
A. Correct.
Q. You had time to consult with me regarding the settlement terms?
A. Yes.
Q. And you agree that the settlement is in the best interest of at least yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. Are you under the influence of any drugs or alcohol today?
A. No.
Q. Off the record one second.
(Discussion off the record.)
MR. TERIS: Mr. Turner, you understand that probably it would be beneficial to yourself that we issue the check in 2016?
THE WITNESS: Correct.
MR. TERIS: The district is not responsible for any taxes that you may have to pay? That's your responsibility, you understand that?
THE WITNESS: Yes.
Q. And also my office will coordinate with the Camden City School District's counsel regarding the adjustment whatever that number will be.
THE ARBITRATOR: Right.
Q. And in lieu also you will be resigning and/or retiring effective immediately upon the receipt of the payment from the Camden City School District?
A. Yes.
MR. DIAMANTIS: Madam Arbitrator, I will defer to you unless you have any questions.
THE ARBITRATOR: It is always a victory for everyone when you get a settlement because everybody knows what they have. For arbitrators the only thing we can do is promise an honest call based on the evidence and the statutory framework, but sometimes we're even surprised where we go. So it's much better, as we say a good settlement is something that you don't get everything you want, but it satisfies enough of the parties' needs so it seems to be fair and, as I say, I look forward to receiving the actual terms in a timely manner. I will inform the commissioner now that it is coming and hopefully by the first week in January we will clear it up and everybody can go on with life [Tr, pp. 706-709].

On December 23, 2015, Mr. Teris emailed to Mr. Diamantis:

> Attached please find a draft settlement agreement and consent order withdrawing the matter. Please sign the consent order as soon as possible. Please review the settlement agreement and let me know if you have any changes or concerns. I understand the date of retirement may have to change due to the fact the Superintendent may not be able to sign the agreement until next week.
> [Respondent Brief, February 10, 2016, Tab L]

Later that day, Mr. Diamantis responded:

> Attached are my edits to the Settlement Documents. Mr. Turner will execute the documents tomorrow as discussed. Let me know if you have any issues with the proposed changes. Otherwise, I will assume they are acceptable.
> [Ibid., Tab M]

The next morning, Mr. Teris emailed back:

> Looks good to me. I will explain to my client after Mr. Turner signs. The revisions are minor and I don't anticipate any issues.
> [Ibid., Tab N]

On December 28, 2015, the teacher forwarded to the district his Letter of Resignation/Retirement as of December 24, 2015; an executed Consent Order to Withdraw the Tenure Charges; and an executed Settlement Agreement and Release [Appended below, Ibid., Tab N].

On January 14, 2016, the arbitrator emailed the parties, reminding them that the award due date was January 25 and that the "file can't be closed until I have the agreement." In an email response, the district's counsel announced a breakdown in the settlement. The next day he requested a date to resume hearings and conclude the arbitration—effectively notifying the arbitrator that the district no longer recognized the settlement. The teacher objected to the request and sought enforcement of the settlement, as detailed on the record on December 21, 2015, if he did not receive the expected payment by the end of the day.

The arbitrator requested and received from the commissioner an extension of the proceeding until April 1, 2016. The parties filed motions and counter motions on whether the settlement was in effect. The respondent also filed an emergent motion for reinstatement to the payroll, which was opposed by the district. Each party had a full opportunity to argue these motions; the last submissions were received by the arbitrator on March 24, 2016.

DISCUSSION

Despite reaching an apparent settlement agreement on December 21, 2015, the last hearing day, the district petitioned for continuation of the arbitration hearings on the ground that "the tenure charges...remain unresolved." It asserts that "no settlement agreement exists," presumably meaning no written agreement approved by the commissioner (or his designee) and the district superintendent. The district also contends that the commissioner (and thus the arbitrator as designee) "lacks authority to enforce settlement agreements" [Letter to arbitrator from district counsel, February 2, 2016]. The district further asserts that this matter has been referred to arbitration by the commissioner "on the tenure charges—not any other issue" [District opposition to respondent's motion, March 1, 2016, pp. 1-2]. The teacher insists that the agreement of December 21 is valid, binds both parties, and represents the final resolution of the tenure charges. Therefore, the arbitration has reached its conclusion, the teacher contends.

There is no question that on December 21 the parties fashioned an agreement to settle the dispute about the tenure charges. Specific terms were enunciated and placed on the stenographic record, along with an examination of the teacher intended to establish that he was fully aware of the terms and accepted them voluntarily. The parties and the arbitrator adjourned with the understanding that those terms would be incorporated in a consent order as the outcome of the dispute.

An agreement, even an oral one, has customarily been regarded as a binding contractual obligation, provided that the terms are clear. There appears to be no substantial reason to depart from that principle in regard to the agreement reached on December 21. The district's attempt to disavow the settlement is not grounded in a misunderstanding about the terms or a failure to achieve a meeting of the minds. Indeed, it was the district that drafted the written version of the agreement, which described the teacher's resignation letter as "irrevocable." The respondent signed and submitted the letter. If the agreement became binding on him at that moment, it surely must have become binding on the district as well.

After December 21, the district developed reservations about a single term: the amount it was obliged to pay the teacher in return for his resignation. The sum was $45,000; the district sought to reduce that amount by $14,000, ostensibly because of unemployment compensation payments of which it had been unaware.

That is not, however, a sufficient reason for unilateral withdrawal from a bona fide agreement. Unemployment payments are common in tenure disputes, and the district was sent an official Notice of Determination (October 26, 2015), which ruled that the teacher was eligible for benefits from September 20, 2015.[5] Unemployment compensation had not been an aspect of the tenure dispute itself, judging by the parties' briefs and supporting evidence. Furthermore, it is likely that without the settlement the cost to the district in salary for the teacher would exceed $14,000, since he would be reinstated to the payroll after the statutory 120 days of suspension. The litigation costs to finish the case would generate additional expense, and the district's objective of removing a teacher it regards as inefficient would be left in doubt.

Consequently, the undersigned arbitrator finds that the reasoning in the Connors-Ryan decision[6] of the Education Department is applicable to the district's attempt to withdraw from the agreed settlement:

> The party seeking the extraordinary remedy of reopening a case or issues previously resolved by a voluntary settlement must demonstrate by clear and convincing proof that the agreement was the result of fraud, undue influence or duress, or mutual mistake as to a material fact. Other standard reasons for rescission of settlement agreements include substantial failure of consideration, nonperformance or breach or other such compelling circumstances. A settlement cannot be vacated because the party later determines that he or she had made a bad deal or because he finds the contract less profitable to him than he had anticipated when the contract was made.

Given the lack of "compelling circumstances" in this instance, the district's attempt to withdraw from the settlement agreement must be rejected.

The sole remaining question is whether the settlement meets the Cardonick standards. Statutory language in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a) provides as follows:

> Any proposed...settlement, whether submitted to the Commissioner or to the arbitrator, shall address the following standards established by the State Board of Education in the matter entitled In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 (1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846):
> 1. Accompaniment by documentation as to the nature of the charges;
> 2. Explication of the circumstances justifying settlement or withdrawal;
> 3. Consent of both the charged and charging parties;
> 4. Indication the charged party entered into the agreement with full understanding of his or her rights;

[6] Kathleen Connors-Ryan v. Board of Education of Freehold Regional High School District, New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Administrative Law, April 15, 1993.

5. A showing the agreement is in the public interest; and

6. If the charged party is a teaching staff member, a showing the teaching staff member has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate.

As analyzed in detail below, the settlement agreement satisfies each of the Cardonick standards:

No. 1–When the settlement was reached, the arbitration proceeding was well advanced. The district and the teacher had ample opportunity, during four days of hearing, to present the charges, the defenses and the supporting evidence. The stenographic record of the proceedings (more than 700 pages), along with the attached exhibits, amounts to extensive documentation of all aspects of the case. The settlement took place after the parties were in possession of the salient facts.

No. 2–The circumstances were favorable for a settlement, inasmuch as neither party could determine the likelihood of its prevailing in the arbitration. The settlement brought a degree of certainty about the outcome that benefitted both sides. Moreover, the settlement saved considerable expense while achieving significant goals for each side: the district could ensure that the teacher would leave its employ, and the teacher preserved his pension benefits.

No. 3–The consent of both the charged and charging parties was confirmed by both parties on the hearing record. Since it originated with the district, the written version of the agreement demonstrated the employer's acceptance, and the teacher signified his by signing the resignation letter and settlement agreement on December 24, 2015. His counsel signed the consent order to withdraw tenure charges on December 28, 2015.

No. 4–There is ample evidence that the charged party entered into the agreement with full understanding of his rights, since the teacher was questioned on the record about his knowledge of those rights and what he was surrendering. He was examined by attorneys from both sides, and the transcript indicates that he was well aware of the costs and benefits of accepting the agreement.

No. 5–Among the statute's objectives is the expeditious resolution of tenure disputes. A settlement advances that purpose, shortening the time needed to achieve an outcome. In the arbitration process a settlement is typically welcome and considered superior to an imposed decision, because the parties play an active role in fashioning the terms.

No. 6–Under the terms of the settlement, the teacher was advised that the Commissioner may forward the tenure charges to the State Board of Examiners and that they will review it [Tr., pp. 701-703]," an action that could impact his certification.

Since the settlement satisfies each of the Cardonick standards and there is no persuasive justification for withdrawal by the district, the arbitrator approves the settlement.

For the reasons discussed above, and after considering all arguments and the entire record, the arbitrator concludes that the just, practical, and proper outcome of the tenure dispute is to give effect to the settlement agreement, as recorded under oath in the stenographic transcript of the hearing of December 21, 2015, and elaborated in the signed documents that are appended to this award. Inasmuch as the respondent resigned from his position, effective December 24, 2015, his motion for reinstatement to the payroll becomes moot.

Dear Mr. Rouhanifard:

Very truly yours,

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release ("this Agreement") is entered into by and between Bruce Turner ("Turner") and the Camden City School District (the "District"). Together, Turner and the District may be referred to herein as "the Parties."

WHEREAS, Bruce Turner is a teacher of Health and Physical Education

WHEREAS, the District certified tenure charges against Turner to the Commissioner of Education for inefficiency, unbecoming conduct, and other just cause;

WHEREAS, the Parties mutually desire to resolve this matter;

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS HEREBY AGREED by and between the Parties as follows:

1. Effective Date: This Agreement shall take effect on the date it is fully executed by the Parties, and as such, deemed ratified by the State Superintendent as the authorized representative of the District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35.

2. Separation from Employment:

(a) Bruce Turner shall provide the District immediately, through its counsel, Brown & Connery, LLP, with an irrevocable letter of intent to retire on December 24, 2015;

(b) The District shall not oppose or contest any application by Turner for unemployment compensation benefits. The District shall, however, be entitled to respond to any forms or inquiries from any governmental agencies with respect to Turner's unemployment compensation claim and shall be entitled to notify said governmental agencies of, among other things, this Agreement.

3. Dismissal of Tenure Charges: The District shall take all necessary actions with the Commissioner of Education or his designee to withdraw the tenure action against Turner bearing agency reference number 275-9/15.

4. Settlement Payment:

(a) The District shall pay Turner the total sum of forty-five thousand dollars $45,000 ("Settlement Payment").

(b) The District shall issue the Settlement Payment by way of a check payable to "Bruce Turner" between January 1, 2016 and January 15, 2016 following the receipt of: (1) IRS W-9 Forms for Turner and (2) an executed Child Support Judgment Certification.

(c) The Settlement Payment shall be reported on an IRS 1099 Form. Turner assumes sole responsibility for all applicable state, federal and local taxes required to be paid with respect to the Settlement Payment. In addition, Turner agrees that if any taxing authority seeks or deems due and owing from the District any taxes, interest, penalties or other amounts with respect to the Settlement Payment, he will indemnify and hold harmless the District for any sums it may be required to pay, and he will reimburse the District for any attorney's fees and costs it incurs in defending against such claims.

(d) The Settlement Payment shall be the total amount borne by the District under this Agreement. The District shall have no obligation to make any other payment to Turner including, but not limited to, any form of back pay and any reimbursement for accumulated unused sick leave.

5. General and Mutual Release: Turner releases the District, and the District releases Turner, from all known and unknown charges, complaints, claims, grievances, liabilities, obligations, promises, agreements, controversies, damages, actions, causes of action, suits, rights, demands, costs, losses, debts, penalties, fees, and expenses (including attorneys' fees and costs actually incurred) of any nature whatsoever that Turner, or the District, has, ever had, or may have had, against the District, or Turner, whether or not apparent or yet to be discovered, or which may hereafter develop, for any acts or omissions relating to or arising from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. This includes, but is not limited to, any claims Turner, or the District, asserted, or may have asserted, under the following: the National Labor Relations Act; the Civil Rights Act of 1964; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Employment Retirement Income Security Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Age Discrimination & Employment Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Occupational Safety & Health Act; the Family & Medical Leave Act; the Equal Pay Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Wage Payment Law; The New Jersey Minimum Wage Law; the Equal Pay Law for New Jersey; the New Jersey Worker Health & Safety Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; N.J.S.A. 18A; N.J.A.C. 6A; any constitution, statute, regulation, ordinance, executive order, public policy or common law; any written, verbal or implied contract; and any other authority or basis for seeking damages or relief of any kind. This release is intended to be broadly construed and applies to any and all claims and potential claims whatsoever, including those of which Turner, or the District, is not aware, resulting from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement.

6. Covenant Not to Sue: Turner warrants he has not commenced any legal proceedings of any type (including but not limited to charges filed with any governmental agency) against the District. Further, Turner agrees that he will not commence any legal proceedings against the District arising from or relating to anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. Should any such legal proceedings be commenced on Turner's behalf, Turner agrees that he will not seek or accept any relief or recovery therefrom. In the event of a violation of this paragraph, Turner agrees that the District shall be entitled to immediate dismissal of the legal proceedings, and that he shall be responsible for the District's attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection with those legal proceedings. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 5, Turner agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with this section.

7. Claims Not Released: Notwithstanding Sections 5 and 6 of this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that Turner is not waiving: (a) claims that were filed or could be filed under any state workers' compensation or unemployment law or any claim arising from a breach of this agreement; or (b) challenges to the validity of this Agreement under the Older Workers Benefits Protection Act. Turner represents that he is not aware of any present basis for such claims. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 5, Turner agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with Section 6, above.

8. Older Workers Benefit Protection Act: The releases in section 4 above include a waiver and release of all claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act ("ADEA") and the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act ("OWBPA"). Therefore, pursuant to the requirements of the ADEA and OWBPA, Turner specifically acknowledges that:

(a) He has been advised to consult with an attorney of his choosing concerning the legal significance of the Settlement Agreement and Release and has done so;

(b) The Settlement Agreement and Release are written in a manner that he understands;

(c) The consideration set forth this Settlement Agreement consists of benefits to which he is not otherwise entitled and is adequate and sufficient to support his promises, covenants and releases as set forth in this Release;

(d) He has been afforded twenty-one (21) days to consider the Settlement Agreement and Release before executing it, that any changes thereto subsequently agreed upon by the parties, whether material or immaterial, do not restart this period for consideration, and that by signing and returning the Settlement Agreement and Release before the end of the twenty-one (21) day period he will have knowingly and voluntarily waived the right to consider the Settlement Agreement and Release for the full consideration period; and

(e) He has been advised that during the seven (7) day period following his execution of the Settlement Agreement and the Release, he may revoke her acceptance of this Agreement by delivering written notice to counsel for the District (as identified below), and that the Settlement Agreement and the Release shall not become effective or enforceable until after the revocation period has expired:

9. Not Eligible for Rehire: Turner acknowledges and agrees that his employment with the District is irrevocably severed upon the effective date of this Agreement and that he is ineligible for re-hire as an employee of the District. Turner agrees not to apply for re-employment with the District. If, for some reason, the District receives an application for Turner's employment, the District shall have no obligation to consider or review his application for employment.

10. No Admission of Liability: This Agreement is not, and may not be construed as, an admission of liability by either Party.

11. Entire Agreement: This Agreement encompasses the sole and entire agreement between the Parties and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by the Parties, and expressly stated to represent an amendment or supersession to this Agreement.

12. No Contingencies: The effectiveness of this agreement shall not be contingent on any event not articulate herein, including but not limited to any applications Turner may file with the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund to purchase pension service credit and/or for retirement. Turner understands the District has no control over the approval or denial of any such applications and he cannot revoke this Agreement based upon same.

13. Severability: If any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder will be fully enforceable.

14. Applicable Law and Construction: This Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey; however, since each party to this Agreement and their counsel have reviewed and negotiated this Agreement, the general rule of construction that any ambiguity or uncertainty in a writing shall be interpreted against the party drafting the writing shall not apply to any action relating to this Agreement. Any action to enforce or interpret this Agreement shall only be brought in a court of competent jurisdiction in Camden County, New Jersey.

15. Counterparts: This Agreement may be exercised in more than one counterpart and each counterpart shall be considered an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same.

16. Individuals Bound: This Settlement Agreement and General Release is binding upon and shall inure to the benefit of the parties hereto and their respective heirs, executors, administrators, personal or legal representatives, successors and/or assigns.

9. Turner acknowledges that he has been duly advised by his attorneys, of the Commissioner of Education's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate.

OPINION

On January 29, 2016 the New Jersey State Department of Education's Bureau of Controversies and Disputes designated me to arbitrate the above matter in accordance with N.J.S 18A:6-17.1. Pursuant to that authority I reviewed the parties' Charges and Answer, ordered pre-hearing information exchange, and set hearing dates of March 22, April 15, and April 16, 2016. On March 11, 2016 the parties advised me that they were in the process of negotiating a settlement of all issues and canceled the March 22nd hearing date.

On April 7, 2016 the parties sent me a fully executed and certified copy of their Stipulation of Settlement that Respondent David Okin had signed and certified on March 17th, Board President Jason Redd had signed on April 4th, and Board Attorney Adam Herman had certified on April 6th.

I have again reviewed the Charges and Answer, relevant law, and the terms of the parties' Stipulation of Settlement, including the preamble's recited reasons supporting their decision to enter it. Upon that review and my knowledge of the complexity and likely expenses of litigating this matter, I approve this Settlement Agreement, which I attach as Exhibit A and incorporate herein as if fully set forth, as an appropriate resolution of all issues of this matter.

By reason of the foregoing, I issue the following

AWARD

I approve the attached Stipulation of Settlement as an appropriate resolution of all issues of this matter and incorporate its terms in this Award by reference as if fully set forth.

The Trenton Board of Education (the "District"), whose principal office is located at 108 North Clinton Avenue, Trenton, New Jersey 08609, and its successors, assigns, officers, employees, agents and representatives (collectively, "School District"), and David Okin, having an address at 117 Ashbrook Road, Cherry Hill, New Jersey 08034 ("Respondent") (collectively, the "Parties") have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Stipulation of Settlement, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them in full and complete settlement of all outstanding issues as detailed below.

WHEREAS Respondent is a tenured teacher employed by the District; and

WHEREAS the District certified tenure charges of Unbecoming Conduct and Other Just Cause to the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, captioned In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against David Okin, Trenton Board of Education ("Tenure Charges"), and such charges were assigned Docket No. 373-12/15 and Respondent filed an answer opposing the charges; and the Commissioner of Education, having reviewed the charges and Respondent's answer, determined that the charges were sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in compensation, and accordingly referred the matter to Arbitrator John E. Sands, Esq., ("Arbitrator") for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, Respondent has denied the allegations set forth in the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the Parties are aware of the uncertainty of the outcome of arbitration; and

WHEREAS, the District with stringent budget limitations and due to the expenditure of resources due to multiple days of hearings with numerous witnesses, including several students, and the concern that students will be removed from school to testify and that school administrators will be removed from their educational duties and responsibilities during that time, the Parties wish to resolve this matter in accordance with the terms set forth herein rather than proceed with arbitration; and

WHEREAS the proposed Stipulation of Settlement is in the best interest of the Parties and the public because Respondent agrees to serve a six (6) month suspension without pay, thereafter to resume his teaching duties, upon the formal approval of this stipulation of settlement by the Trenton Board of Education; and

WHEREAS, Respondent agrees to accept an assignment as a teaching staff member at any school or department within the District that the District finds to be appropriate and in the best interest of the District;

NOW, THEREFORE, subject to approval by the Arbitrator, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Respondent shall serve a six (6) month suspension without pay from December 15, 2015 through June 15, 2016. This suspension shall serve as the entire discipline for Respondent with respect to these tenure charges. Respondent agrees not to, and waives any right to, challenge or otherwise contest this suspension.

2. Respondent shall be placed on paid administrative leave from June 16, 2016 through June 30, 2016. Respondent will be restored to the payroll at his correct salary effective as of June 16, 2016, and shall receive back pay / benefits for any time between that date and the day when he is restored to the payroll.
3. Upon resumption of his teaching duties, Respondent agrees to accept an assignment as a teaching staff member at any school or department within the District that the District finds to be appropriate and in the best interest of the District.
4. Respondent also agrees to withdraw with prejudice any and all claims or suits that he may have previously filed against the School District that are still pending in any and all courts and/or before any and all agencies with the exception of workers compensation claims. This Settlement is intended to be the final resolution of all outstanding matters between the School District and Respondent. Should Respondent fail to submit letters of withdrawals for any such pending claims or suits, this Stipulation of Settlement will serve as Respondent's formal written notice of withdrawal of those pending claims or suits, except for workers compensation claims.
5. Respondent shall not earn any paid days (e.g. sick, personal or vacation) for the period from December 15, 2015 through June 30, 2016. Respondent releases and waives any claim which he may have to any pay from the District from December 15, 2015 through June 15, 2016.
6. The District agrees to dismiss the instant tenure charges with prejudice, subject to the approval required in Paragraph 20.
7. In exchange for the consideration set forth above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Respondent hereby waives, releases and discharges as against the School District any and all claims or causes of action, known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, arising through the date of his execution of this Agreement, including, without limitation, any claim for attorneys' fees, costs or other monetary relief; discrimination on any basis, any federal or state civil rights law, any alleged violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Worker Benefits Protection Act; Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Fair Credit Reporting Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act; the Employee Polygraph Protection Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the retaliation provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002; the False Claims Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the New Jersey Equal Pay Law; the New Jersey Occupational Safety and Health Law; the New Jersey Smokers' Rights Law; the New Jersey Genetic Privacy Act; the New Jersey Fair Credit Reporting Act; New Jersey Wages and Hours Law, unemployment compensations laws, disability benefits laws, retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law; the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution; and/or any other alleged violation of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance; any claim based on contract, implied contract, collective bargaining agreement, tort law, personal injury, or public policy, including but not limited to any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, vacation pay, sick pay, personal day pay, wages, attorneys' fees, costs, and/or future wage loss. Respondent also agrees to withdraw any and all pending complaints or actions that have been or may have been filed against the School District or any of its employees or representatives. Notwithstanding this release of claims / causes of action, Respondent retains all of the rights and protections of a tenured staff member of the District.

8. Notwithstanding Paragraphs 4 and 7 of this Stipulation of Settlement, it is understood and agreed that the parties are not prohibited from communicating with or participating in any administrative proceeding before the United States Department of Labor, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, or any other federal, state or local law agency. | IN THE MATTER OF TOM IACOVONE, | : | |
| HOPE COMMUNITY CHARTER SCHOOL, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| CAMDEN COUNTY. | : | DECISION |

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission, forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for final determination on the Commission's recommended penalty, have been reviewed. The Commission found that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Due to respondent's failure to satisfy the long-standing requirement – despite repeated notifications and ample opportunity to complete the training, either in-person or online – the Commission recommends that respondent be removed from Hope Community Charter School's Board of Trustees. Respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order to Show Cause, nor did he file exceptions or furnish any proof of having attended the required training. Finally, respondent did not appeal the Commission's underlying finding of a violation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty of removal recommended by the Commission and additionally admonishes respondent for failing to honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law, since such failure has resulted in unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby removed from office as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act, effective immediately.[1]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 4/11/16
Date of Mailing: 4/11/16

[1] The Commission recommended that the respondent be removed for a period of three years or the remaining term of the respondent's office, whichever is longer. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12(a), if a violation of the School Ethics Act is found, "the Commission may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension, or removal of the school official." There is no provision that permits the Commission to recommend a penalty that includes the removal of a school official for three years. Therefore, the respondent is removed from the Hope Community Charter School Board of Trustees immediately without any future restrictions.

[2] This decision may be appealed to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36. (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1) and applicable court rules.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission (Commission) at its December 15, 2015 meeting and mailed on December 16, 2015 to the above-named Respondent, alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1, and N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(a), prepared and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA).

Since March 1, 2012, Respondent has served as a trustee of the Hope Community Charter School, located in the City of Newark, County of Essex. As a result of his position as a charter school trustee, and in accordance with the statute and regulations cited above, Respondent is required to complete a training program prepared and offered by the NJSBA.

The NJSBA annually advises all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA provides the required training and notifies members and trustees of the dates and times of the sessions, and continuously publishes that information in School Board Notes. The NJSBA also offers training on its website, which may be completed anytime from any location at the convenience of the board member or charter trustee.

For the 2014 training cycle, which for charter school trustees ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015[1], Respondent was required to complete the Governance I training program. Respondent failed to complete his required training within the timeframe for the 2014 training cycle. The NJSBA informed the Commission by email dated November 17, 2015 that for the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA notified Respondent, the Business Administrator, and the Chief School Administrator of the Respondent's charter school of his mandatory training requirement during calendar year 2015 on the following dates: March 23 and May 12, before the time to timely train expired, and again on July 22, August 18, August 25, and September 15, among other dates, after Respondent had failed to timely complete his training, to give him the opportunity to comply with his training obligation.

Furthermore, in the certification submitted to the Commission at its January 26, 2016 meeting, the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Department attested that the NJSBA took the following actions in an effort to ensure member and trustee compliance with the mandated training requirements:

[1] As established by NJSBA, the training cycle for public school district board of education members is from January 1 to December 31 of each year, whereas the training period for charter school trustees is from July 1 to June 30 of the following year. Thus, for charter school trustees, the 2014 training cycle ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015.

- On October 5, 2014, the Respondent was registered to take Governance I training and an email with the link was sent to his registered email address.

- On March 23, 2015 and May 12, 2015, prior to the end of the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA communicated with charter school trustees by email regarding the mandated training requirements for the 2014 training period.

- On July 1, 2015, after the 2014 training cycle closed, the NJSBA provided the School Ethics Commission with a report of charter trustees who had failed to complete the required training for the 2014 training period, which included Respondent.

- On July 2, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising him that he had yet to complete the Governance I training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On July 22, 2015, the NJSBA sent an additional email to all charter school trustees regarding the mandated training requirement, included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On October 1, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising him that he had yet to complete the Governance I training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On November 18, 2015, the NJSBA notified the School Business Administrator (SBA) for the Hope Charter School advising the SBA that Respondent had failed to complete the required training.

- On November 23, 2015, the NJSBA communicated through email with the Hope Community Charter School and as a result sent an email to Tom Iacovone with the link and instructions for completing to the Respondent with the Governance I training.

The October 1, 2015 NJSBA notice was marked "Urgent: Action Needed" in an email to all school board members and charter school trustees who had not completed the mandatory training. In the October 2015 email, the NJSBA advised school board members and charter school trustees that failure to complete the mandated training might result in disciplinary action ordered by the Commission, up to and including removal from their respective board.

Further, the NJSBA notified the Commission by email on November 17, 2015, that it expressly notified Respondent by email that Respondent was non-compliant with the training requirement and urged Respondent to complete the mandated training no later than November 25, 2015. This notice also explained that failure to complete the training would result in the issuance of an Order to Show Cause requiring Respondent to explain why Respondent failed to complete the required training and potentially compelling Respondent to appear before the Commission. In addition, the November 2015 notice also advised Respondent that the penalty for failing to comply included removal from the charter board of trustees.

In addition to the communication efforts undertaken by the NJSBA, the School Ethics Commission, the Department of Education County Offices and the Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools also communicated with the Respondent, regarding the mandated training requirement.

Specifically, in September 2015, the Commission reported to Respondent's County Office of Education (County) that the NJSBA identified that Respondent failed to complete the 2014 training program within the required training period. Working in conjunction with the Commission, the County Office emailed the Chief School Administrator of Respondent's school that Respondent remained delinquent in completing the training requirement. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data. None was received.

Additionally, on October 29, 2015, the New Jersey Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools emailed Respondent directly to notify him that he was non-compliant with the training requirements, and also advised Respondent that the Commission requires the training to be completed to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal.

As a final notice of non-compliance, on November 30, 2015, the Commission directly emailed Respondent, advising that the Commission requires completion of the training to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal from office.

The December 15, 2015 Order to Show Cause sent to Respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that Respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order and the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Development certified that as of January 26, 2016, Respondent had failed to complete the required training for the 2014 training cycle.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that Respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Tom Iacovone failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and the Commission finds him in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

Mr. Iacovone received repeated notifications of the long-standing training requirement and has had ample opportunities to attend in-person training or to complete on-line training. Mr. Iacovone did not provide any response to the Commission's Order. The Commission believes that, based on his failure to complete his training requirement for the 2014 training cycle and his failure to respond to the Order, the appropriate penalty is removal. This penalty underscores to this Respondent, and all those similarly situated board members and charter school trustees, that the Commission will impose a penalty on those officials for their failure to comply with the statutory obligation to complete the training requirement within the timeline established in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be removed as a member of the Hope Community Charter School Board of Trustees for a period of three years or for the remaining term of Mr. Iacovone's office, whichever is longer.

At its meeting on January 26, 2016, the Commission voted to find Respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be removed from the above-named Board as a result of Respondent's failure to complete the Governance I training program within the required time period for the 2014 training period, effective immediately after the issuance of the Commissioner of Education's Decision affirming the penalty, for a period of one three-year term or the remaining term of Mr. Iacovone's office, whichever is longer.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

Parties seeking to appeal the Commission's finding of violation must file an appeal pursuant to the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:4 within 30 days of the filing date of the decision from which the appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission, forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for final determination on the Commission's recommended penalty, have been reviewed. ## PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission (Commission) at its December 15, 2015 meeting and mailed on December 16, 2015 to the above-named Respondent, alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1, and N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(a), prepared and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA).

Since January 1, 2013, Respondent has served as a trustee of the Newark Prep Charter School, located in the City of Newark, County of Essex. As a result of her position as a charter school trustee, and in accordance with the statute and regulations cited above, Respondent is required to complete a training program prepared and offered by the NJSBA.

The NJSBA annually advises all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA provides the required training and notifies members and trustees of the dates and times of the sessions, and continuously publishes that information in School Board Notes. The NJSBA also offers training on its website, which may be completed anytime from any location at the convenience of the board member or charter trustee.

For the 2014 training cycle, which for charter school trustees ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015[1], Respondent was required to complete the Governance II training program. Respondent failed to complete her required training within the timeframe for the 2014 training cycle. The NJSBA informed the Commission by email dated November 17, 2015 that for the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA notified Respondent, the Business Administrator, and the Chief School Administrator of the Respondent's charter school of her mandatory training requirement during calendar year 2015 on the following dates: March 23 and May 12, before the time to timely train expired, and again on July 22, August 18, August 25, and September 15, among other dates, after Respondent had failed to timely complete her training, to give her the opportunity to comply with her training obligation.

Furthermore, in the certification submitted to the Commission at its January 26, 2016 meeting, the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Department attested that the NJSBA took the following actions in an effort to ensure member and trustee compliance with the mandated training requirements:

[1] As established by NJSBA, the training cycle for public school district board of education members is from January 1 to December 31 of each year, whereas the training period for charter school trustees is from July 1 to June 30 of the following year. Thus, for charter school trustees, the 2014 training cycle ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015.

- On October 5, 2014, the Respondent was registered to take Governance II training and an email with the link was sent to her registered email address.

- On March 23, 2015 and May 12, 2015, prior to the end of the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA communicated with charter school trustees by email regarding the mandated training requirements for the 2014 training period.

- On July 1, 2015, after the 2014 training cycle closed, the NJSBA provided the School Ethics Commission with a report of charter trustees who had failed to complete the required training for the 2014 training period, which included Respondent.

- On July 8, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising her that she had yet to complete the Governance II training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On July 22, 2015, the NJSBA sent an additional email to all charter school trustees regarding the mandated training requirement, included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On October 1, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising her that she had yet to complete the Governance II training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On November 18, 2015, the NJSBA notified the School Business Administrator (SBA) for the Newark Prep Charter School advising the SBA that Respondent had failed to complete the required training.

- On November 23, 2015, the NJSBA communicated through email with the Newark Prep Charter School and as a result sent an email to Tinia Berger with the link and instructions for completing to the Respondent with the Governance II.

The October 1, 2015 NJSBA notice was marked "Urgent: Action Needed" in an email to all school board members and charter school trustees who had not completed the mandatory training. In the October 2015 email, the NJSBA advised school board members and charter school trustees that failure to complete the mandated training might result in disciplinary action ordered by the Commission, up to and including removal from their respective board.

Further, the NJSBA notified the Commission by email on November 17, 2015, that it expressly notified Respondent by email that Respondent was non-compliant with the training requirement and urged Respondent to complete the mandated training no later than November 25, 2015. This notice also explained that failure to complete the training would result in the issuance of an Order to Show Cause requiring Respondent to explain why Respondent failed to complete the required training and potentially compelling Respondent to appear before the Commission. In addition, the November 2015 notice also advised Respondent that the penalty for failing to comply included removal from the charter board of trustees.

In addition to the communication efforts undertaken by the NJSBA, the School Ethics Commission, the Department of Education County Offices and the Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools also communicated with the Respondent, regarding the mandated training requirement.

Specifically, in September 2015, the Commission reported to Respondent's County Office of Education (County) that the NJSBA identified that Respondent failed to complete the 2014 training program within the required training period. Working in conjunction with the Commission, the County Office emailed the Chief School Administrator of Respondent's school that Respondent remained delinquent in completing the training requirement. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data. None was received.

Additionally, on October 29, 2015, the New Jersey Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools emailed Respondent directly to notify her that she was non-compliant with the training requirements, and also advised Respondent that the Commission requires the training to be completed to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal.

As a final notice of non-compliance, on November 30, 2015, the Commission directly emailed Respondent, advising that the Commission requires completion of the training to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal from office.

The December 15, 2015 Order to Show Cause sent to Respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that Respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order and the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Development certified that as of January 26, 2016, Respondent had failed to complete the required training for the 2014 training cycle.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that Respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Tinia Berger failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and the Commission finds her in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

Ms. Berger received repeated notifications of the long-standing training requirement and has had ample opportunities to attend in-person training or to complete on-line training. Ms. Berger did not provide any response to the Commission's Order. The Commission believes that, based on her failure to complete her training requirement for the 2014 training cycle and her failure to respond to the Order, the appropriate penalty is removal. This penalty underscores to this Respondent, and all those similarly situated board members and charter school trustees, that the Commission will impose a penalty on those officials for their failure to timely comply with the statutory obligation to complete the training requirement, and the Commission will not continue to allocate additional administrative and adjudicative time tracking attendance at a training program well after the timeline established in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be removed as a member of the Newark Prep Charter School Board of Trustees for a period of three years or the remaining term of Ms. Berger's office, whichever is longer.

At its meeting on January 26, 2016, the Commission voted to find Respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be removed from the above-named Board as a result of Respondent's failure to complete the Governance II training program within the required time period for the 2014 training period, effective immediately after the issuance of the Commissioner of Education's Decision affirming the penalty for a period of one three-year term or the remaining term of Ms. Berger's office, whichever is longer.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

Parties seeking to appeal the Commission's finding of violation must file an appeal pursuant to the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:4 within 30 days of the filing date of the decision from which the appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's

| IN THE MATTER OF ANN PETROCELLI, | : | |
| LINK COMMUNITY CHARTER SCHOOL, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |

The Commissioner has reviewed the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission, finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. The Commission advises that the respondent ultimately completed training after the issuance of its December 15, 2015 Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's January 26, 2016 meeting; therefore, a penalty of censure is recommended. Respondent filed exceptions to the Commission's decision, challenging the Commission's recommended penalty, but did not institute an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation. The Commission filed reply exceptions.

In her exceptions, respondent argues that based on prior decisions by the Commission, the Commissioner should reduce the recommended penalty of censure to a penalty of reprimand. Specifically, respondent cites case law indicating that the Commission has previously recommended a penalty of reprimand in matters where a respondent completed the requisite training after the Commission issued the Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's meeting date. Respondent further notes that in most cases where the Commission previously recommended a penalty of censure, the facts may be distinguished from this matter as the board member or trustee in those cases did not complete the training prior to the Commission's meeting, but rather prior to the Commissioner's final decision. See, e.g., In the Matter of Corynda Hagamin, Camden's Promise Charter School, Camden County, Commissioner Decision No. 15-11SEC, decided January 10, 2011. Accordingly, respondent urges that the penalty be reduced to a reprimand.

In reply, the Commission argues that a penalty of censure is appropriate, given the extensive outreach it provided to respondent prior to the issuance of the Order to Show Cause and the multiple opportunities respondent had to complete the training. Specifically, the Commission contends that the cases cited by respondent are distinguishable because the notice provided to respondent of the obligation to complete the training – no less than 17 times – did not happen in previous cases. The Commission also points out that there is no evidence that respondent did not receive the Commission's communications. As respondent never availed herself of the multiple opportunities to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, the Commission contends that a penalty of censure is appropriate.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with respondent that in previous matters, when a respondent completed the requisite training after the issuance of the Order to Show Cause – but prior to the Commission's meeting date – the penalty has been a reprimand.[1] The Commissioner's determination of an appropriate sanction "inevitably requires consideration of penalties imposed in the past for similar conduct." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Brigitte Geiger, School District of the Township of Mount Olive, Morris County, No. A-1409-13T2 (App. Div. Nov. 18, 2015), at 20.[2] As such, the Commissioner finds that a penalty of reprimand is appropriate in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. As suggested by the court in the Geiger opinion, however, this shall serve as notice to the regulated community that similar conduct in the future may result in more severe penalties. Respondent is also admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.[3]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[4]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 4/11/16

Date of Mailing: 4/12/16

[2] Although, pursuant to R. 1:36-3, unpublished opinions are not precedential or binding upon any court, the Appellate Division remanded this matter and directed the Commissioner to impose a lesser sanction consistent with those in prior matters.

[3] The Commission recommended that any failure in the future to comply with the statutory requirement to complete training shall result in the removal of the respondent from her position on the Board for a period of three years. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12(a), if a violation of the School Ethics Act is found, "the Commission may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension, or removal of the school official." There is no provision that permits the Commission to recommend a penalty that includes the automatic removal of a school official for three years for future violations. Therefore, the respondent is reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act without any future restrictions.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission (Commission) at its December 15, 2015 meeting and mailed on December 16, 2015 to the above-named Respondent, alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1, and N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(a), prepared and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA).

Since March 26, 2014, Respondent has served as a trustee of the Link Community Charter School, located in the City of Newark, County of Essex. As a result of her position as a charter school trustee, and in accordance with the statute and regulations cited above, Respondent is required to complete a training program prepared and offered by the NJSBA.

The NJSBA annually advises all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA provides the required training and notifies members and trustees of the dates and times of the sessions, and continuously publishes that information in School Board Notes. The NJSBA also offers training on its website, which may be completed anytime at the convenience of the board member or charter trustee.

For the 2014 training cycle, which for charter school trustees ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015[1], Respondent was required to complete the Governance I training program. Respondent failed to complete her required training within the timeframe for the 2014 training cycle. The NJSBA informed the Commission by email dated November 17, 2015 that for the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA notified Respondent, the Business Administrator, and the Chief School Administrator of the Respondent's charter school of her mandatory training requirement during calendar year 2015 on the following dates: March 23 and May 12, before the time to timely train expired, and again on July 22, August 18, August 25, and September 15, among other dates, after Respondent had failed to timely complete her training, to give her the opportunity to comply with her training obligation.

Furthermore, in the certification submitted to the Commission at its January 26, 2016 meeting, the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Department attested that the NJSBA took the following actions in an effort to ensure member and trustee compliance with the mandated training requirements:

[1] As established by NJSBA, the training cycle for public school district board of education members is from January 1 to December 31 of each year, whereas the training period for charter school trustees is from July 1 to June 30 of the following year. Thus, for charter school trustees, the 2014 training cycle ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015.

- On October 5, 2014, the Respondent was registered to take Governance I training and an email with the link was sent to her registered email address.

- On March 23, 2015 and May 12, 2015, prior to the end of the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA communicated with charter school trustees by email regarding the mandated training requirements for the 2014 training period.

- On July 1, 2015, after the 2014 training cycle closed, the NJSBA provided the School Ethics Commission with a report of charter trustees who had failed to complete the required training for the 2014 training period, which included Respondent.

- On July 2, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising her that she had yet to complete the Governance I training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On July 22, 2015, the NJSBA sent an additional email to all charter school trustees regarding the mandated training requirement.

- On October 1, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising her that she had yet to complete the Governance I training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On November 18, 2015, the NJSBA notified the School Business Administrator (SBA) for the Link Community Charter School advising the SBA that Respondent had failed to complete the required training.

- On December 9, 2015 and December 21, 2015, the NJSBA sent an email to the Respondent with the Governance I link and instructions.

The October 1, 2015 NJSBA notice was marked "Urgent: Action Needed" in an email to all school board members and charter school trustees who had not completed the mandatory training. In the October 2015 email, the NJSBA advised school board members and charter school trustees that failure to complete the mandated training might result in disciplinary action ordered by the Commission, up to and including removal from their respective board.

Further, the NJSBA notified the Commission by email on November 17, 2015, that it expressly notified Respondent by email that Respondent was non-compliant with the training requirement and urged Respondent to complete the mandated training no later than November 25, 2015. This notice also explained that failure to complete the training would result in the issuance of an Order to Show Cause requiring Respondent to explain why Respondent failed to complete the required training and potentially compelling Respondent to appear before the Commission. In addition, the November 2015 notice also advised Respondent that the penalty for failing to comply included removal from the charter board of trustees.

In addition to the communication efforts undertaken by the NJSBA, the School Ethics Commission, the Department of Education County Offices and the Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools also communicated with the Respondent, regarding the mandated training requirement.

Specifically, in September 2015, the Commission reported to Respondent's County Office of Education (County) that the NJSBA identified that Respondent failed to complete the 2014 training program within the required training period. Working in conjunction with the Commission, the County Office emailed the Chief School Administrator of Respondent's school that Respondent remained delinquent in completing the training requirement. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data. None was received.

Additionally, on October 29, 2015, the New Jersey Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools emailed Respondent directly to notify her that she was non-compliant with the training requirements, and also advised Respondent that the Commission requires the training to be completed to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal.

As a final notice of non-compliance, on November 30, 2015, the Commission directly emailed Respondent, advising that the Commission requires completion of the training to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal from office.

The December 15, 2015 Order to Show Cause sent to Respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that Respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Respondent replied to the Commission's Order within the required time period, wherein Respondent claimed she did not receive the NJSBA mail because they were "going to the wrong address." The Respondent also provided an affidavit from the Head of the Link Community Charter School, who stated that the Respondent was having technical difficulties completing her training, but admitted that the Respondent had received notices via mail and email regarding the need for the Respondent to complete the training. Finally, Respondent advised the Commission on January 11, 2016, that she completed the required training on December 30, 2015. The NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Development verified said completion.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that Respondent did not complete her required Governance I training within the 2014 training cycle. Further, there is no dispute that Respondent did not provide the Commission with proof of completion of the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

Though the NJSBA reported to the Commission on January 19, 2016 that the Respondent completed the training on December 30, 2015, the Respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Ann Petrocelli failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and the Commission finds her in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Ms. Petrocelli received repeated notifications of the long-standing training requirement and has had ample opportunities to attend in-person training or to complete on-line training. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be censured as a result of respondent's failure to complete the Governance I training program within the required time period for the 2014 training period. This penalty underscores to this Respondent, and to all similarly situated board members and charter school trustees, that the Commission will impose a penalty on those officials for their failure to comply with the statutory obligation to complete the training requirement within the timeline established in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be censured as a member of the Link Community Charter School Board of Trustees. Accordingly, any continued failure in the future to comply with the statutory requirement to complete training shall result in removal from her position on the Board of trustees for a three-year period.

At its meeting on January 26, 2016, the Commission voted to find Respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be censured as a result of Respondent's failure to complete the Governance I training program within the required time period for the 2014 training period. Moreover, any continued failure in the future to comply with the statutory requirement to complete training shall result in removal from her position on the Board of trustees for a three-year period.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

Parties seeking to appeal the Commission's finding of violation must file an appeal pursuant to the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:4 within 30 days of the filing date of the decision from which the appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

The Commissioner has reviewed the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission, finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. The Commission advises that the respondent ultimately completed training after the issuance of its December 15, 2015 Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's January 26, 2016 meeting; therefore, a penalty of censure is recommended. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal of the Commission's underlying finding of violation, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4.

Upon review, the Commissioner notes that in previous matters, when a respondent completed the requisite training after the issuance of the Order to Show Cause – but prior to the Commission's meeting date – the penalty has been a reprimand.[1] The Commissioner's determination of an appropriate sanction "inevitably requires consideration of penalties imposed in the past for similar conduct." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Brigitte Geiger, School District of the Township of Mount Olive, Morris County, No. A-1409-13T2 (App. Div. Nov. 18, 2015), at 20.[2] As such, the Commissioner finds that a penalty of reprimand is appropriate in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. As suggested by the court in the Geiger opinion, however, this shall serve as notice to the regulated community that similar conduct in the future may result in more severe penalties. Respondent is also admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.[3]

[2] Although, pursuant to R. 1:36-3, unpublished opinions are not precedential or binding upon any court, the Appellate Division remanded this matter and directed the Commissioner to impose a lesser sanction consistent with those in prior matters.

[3] The Commission recommended that any failure in the future to comply with the statutory requirement to complete training shall result in the removal of the respondent from her position on the Board for a period of three years. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12(a), if a violation of the School Ethics Act is found, "the Commission may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension, or removal of the school official." There is no provision that permits the Commission to recommend a penalty that includes the automatic removal of a school official for three years for future violations. Therefore, the respondent is reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act without any future restrictions.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission (Commission) at its December 15, 2015 meeting and mailed on December 16, 2015 to the above-named Respondent, alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1, and N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(a), prepared and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA).

Since July 1, 2012, Respondent has served as a trustee of the Newark Prep Charter School, located in the City of Newark, County of Essex. As a result of her position as a charter school trustee, and in accordance with the statute and regulations cited above, Respondent is required to complete a training program prepared and offered by the NJSBA.

The NJSBA annually advises all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA provides the required training and notifies members and trustees of the dates and times of the sessions, and continuously publishes that information in School Board Notes. The NJSBA also offers training on its website, which may be completed anytime at the convenience of the board member or charter trustee.

For the 2014 training cycle, which for charter school trustees ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015[1], Respondent was required to complete the Governance II training program. Respondent failed to complete her required training within the timeframe for the 2014 training cycle. The NJSBA informed the Commission by email dated November 17, 2015 that for the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA notified Respondent, the Business Administrator, and the Chief School Administrator of the Respondent's charter school of her mandatory training requirement during calendar year 2015 on the following dates: March 23 and May 12, before the time to timely train expired, and again on July 22, August 18, August 25, and September 15, among other dates, after Respondent had failed to timely complete her training, to give her the opportunity to comply with her training obligation.

[1] As established by NJSBA, the training cycle for public school district board of education members is from January 1 to December 31 of each year, whereas the training period for charter school trustees is from July 1 to June 30 of the following year. Thus, for charter school trustees, the 2014 training cycle ran from July 1, 2014 to June 30, 2015.

Furthermore, in the certification submitted to the Commission at its January 26, 2016 meeting, the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Department attested that the NJSBA took the following actions in an effort to ensure member and trustee compliance with the mandated training requirements:

- On March 23, 2015 and May 12, 2015, prior to the end of the 2014 training cycle, the NJSBA communicated with charter school trustees by email regarding the mandated training requirements for the 2014 training period.

- On July 1, 2015, after the 2014 training cycle closed, the NJSBA provided the School Ethics Commission with a report of charter trustees who had failed to complete the required training for the 2014 training period, which included Respondent.

- On July 6, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising her that she had yet to complete the Governance II training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On July 22, 2015, the NJSBA sent an additional email to all charter school trustees regarding the mandated training requirement.

- On October 1, 2015, the NJSBA emailed Respondent advising her that she had yet to complete the Governance II training program required during the 2014 training period, and included a link to the online training module in the email.

- On November 18, 2015, the NJSBA notified the School Business Administrator (SBA) for the Newark Prep Charter School advising the SBA that Respondent had failed to complete the required training.

- On December 9, 2015, Respondent emailed the NJSBA, seeking assistance with access to the online training.

The October 1, 2015 NJSBA notice was marked "Urgent: Action Needed" in an email to all school board members and charter school trustees who had not completed the mandatory training. In the October 2015 email, the NJSBA advised school board members and charter school trustees that failure to complete the mandated training might result in disciplinary action ordered by the Commission, up to and including removal from their respective board.

Further, the NJSBA notified the Commission by email on November 17, 2015, that it expressly notified Respondent by email that Respondent was non-compliant with the training requirement and urged Respondent to complete the mandated training no later than November 25, 2015. This notice also explained that failure to complete the training would result in the issuance of an Order to Show Cause requiring Respondent to explain why Respondent failed to complete the required training and potentially compelling Respondent to appear before the Commission. In addition, the November 2015 notice also advised Respondent that the penalty for failing to comply included removal from the charter board of trustees.

In addition to the communication efforts undertaken by the NJSBA, the School Ethics Commission, the Department of Education County Offices and the Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools also communicated with the Respondent, regarding the mandated training requirement.

Specifically, in September 2015, the Commission reported to Respondent's County Office of Education (County) that the NJSBA identified that Respondent failed to complete the 2014 training program within the required training period. Working in conjunction with the Commission, the County Office emailed the Chief School Administrator of Respondent's school that Respondent remained delinquent in completing the training requirement. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data. None was received.

Additionally, on October 29, 2015, the New Jersey Department of Education's Office of Charter Schools emailed Respondent directly to notify her that she was non-compliant with the training requirements, and also advised Respondent that the Commission requires the training to be completed to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal.

As a final notice of non-compliance, on November 30, 2015, the Commission directly emailed Respondent, advising that the Commission requires completion of the training to avoid the issuance of an Order to Show Cause against Respondent for non-compliance, which carries the penalty of reprimand, censure, suspension or removal from office.

The December 15, 2015 Order to Show Cause sent to Respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that Respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order within the required time period; however, the NJSBA's Manager of Training and Professional Development certified thereafter that Ms. Williams completed the requisite training on December 16, 2015.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that Respondent did not complete her required Governance II training within the 2014 training cycle. Further, there is no dispute that Respondent failed to timely respond to the Commission's Order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Although the NJSBA reported to the Commission that the Respondent completed the training on December 16, 2015, the Respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Cynthia Williams failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and the Commission finds her in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Ms. Williams received repeated notifications of the long-standing training requirement and has had ample opportunities to attend in-person training or to complete on-line training. Ms. Williams did not provide a timely response to the Commission's Order, and the Commission believes that, based on her failure to timely complete the training and to timely respond to the order, the appropriate penalty is censure. This penalty underscores to this Respondent, and to all similarly situated board members and charter school trustees, that the Commission will impose a penalty on those officials for their failure to comply with the statutory obligation to complete the training requirement within the timeline established in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be censured as a member of the Camden's Pride Charter School Board of Trustees. Accordingly, any continued failure in the future to comply with the statutory requirement to complete training shall result in removal from her position on the Board of trustees for a three-year period.

At its meeting on January 26, 2016, the Commission voted to find Respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the Respondent be censured as a result of Respondent's failure to complete the Governance II training program within the required time period for the 2014 training period. Moreover, any continued failure in the future to comply with the statutory requirement to complete training shall result in removal from her position on the Board of trustees for a three-year period.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

Parties seeking to appeal the Commission's finding of violation must file an appeal pursuant to the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:4 within 30 days of the filing date of the decision from which the appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner was removed from her tenured position subsequent to the issuance of an arbitrator's decision on February 15, 2013, which sustained tenure charges of inefficiency. Following appeal proceedings, the Appellate Division issued a decision entitled Felicia Pugliese v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark and Edgard Chavez v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, 440 N.J. Super 501 (App. Div. May 19, 2015), which remanded the matter to the Commissioner, and – as a result – the tenure charges filed against the petitioner are once again pending before the same arbitrator. Petitioner asserted herein that she has been suspended without pay from her position as a tenured teacher in respondent's school district since September 12, 2012; that the tenure charges against her are still pending and remain unresolved; and, accordingly, she requested full salary beginning from the 121st day of her suspension, as required by the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, and prospectively until the pending tenure charges are resolved. The school district asserted that the Appellate Division's remand of this matter was not a reversal of the original arbitration decision, and that when tenure charges have been sustained on the original hearing, the suspension may be continued unless and until that determination is reversed. The parties filed opposing motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no genuine issues of material fact in this case, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the Appellate Division's decision remanding the case to the Commissioner effectively reversed the original arbitration decision; had there been no remand to the Commissioner, petitioner would be entitled to her job back; however, the arbitration of this matter began "anew" with the Commissioner's re-assignment of this matter to the arbitrator. The ALJ concluded that petitioner is entitled under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 to reinstatement of salary retroactive to the 121st day after her unpaid suspension commenced, even though she is not entitled to reinstatement to her teaching post. Accordingly, the ALJ granted petitioner's motion for summary decision, and denied respondent's opposing motion.

Upon comprehensive review, the Initial Decision of the OAL was rejected in part. The Commissioner concurred that petitioner is entitled to back pay, less mitigation, for the period beginning on the 121st day of her suspension through the date of the original arbitration decision, which sustained the tenure charges against her. However, the Commissioner found and determined that: the Appellate Division's remand of this matter did not dismiss the tenure charges against petitioner; rather, the matter was remanded as part of the petitioner's appeal process – which is still ongoing; under TEACHNJ, the February 2013 arbitrator decision was a final decision and accordingly ended the petitioner's entitlement to full pay under the 120-day provision. If petitioner is ultimately successful in having tenure charges reversed on appeal, she would at that juncture be entitled to full back pay, up to the date of reinstatement to her teaching position.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (District) and the petitioner, Felicia Pugliese's reply thereto.

This matter involves a request by the petitioner for full salary and benefits retroactive to the 121st day after she was suspended without pay while tenure arbitration proceedings are ongoing. The stipulated facts and the procedural history were thoroughly outlined in the Initial Decision and will not be repeated here; however, a brief summary of the procedural history is required to provide the necessary context for the instant matter. On February 15, 2013, Arbitrator Daniel Brent issued a decision sustaining tenure charges filed against the petitioner and removing the petitioner from her tenured position with the District. The petitioner appealed the February 15, 2013 decision to the New Jersey Superior Court Chancery Division, who confirmed Arbitrator Brent's award. Thereafter, the petitioner filed an appeal with the Superior Court, Appellate Division. On May 19, 2015, the Appellate Division issued a decision remanding the matter to the Commissioner with directions to provide certain guidance to arbitrators in tenure cases. Felicia Pugliese v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark and Edgard Chavez v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, 440 N.J. Super 501 (App. Div. May 19, 2015). As a result of the remand by the Appellate Division, the tenure charges filed against the petitioner are currently again pending before Arbitrator Brent.

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that – based on the Appellate Division's May 19, 2015 decision – the arbitration must begin "anew" and as a result, under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, the petitioner is entitled to reinstatement of her salary retroactive to the 121st day after her unpaid suspension commenced and up until Arbitrator Brent issues a second decision on the pending tenure charges. The ALJ also determined that since the matter was remanded, the petitioner is not entitled to reinstatement of her teaching post.

In its exceptions, the District contends that the Initial Decision should be rejected because the ALJ incorrectly interpreted N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The District argues that without a dismissal of the tenure charges against the petitioner or a reversal of the sustained charges, no portion of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 authorizes the resumption of salary or back pay to the 121st day of petitioner's suspension. The District maintains that the decisions that the ALJ relied upon to support her ruling are inapplicable because they were issued prior to the enactment of the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq. (TEACHNJ).

The District stresses that the tenure charge hearing procedures and specifically the procedural posture of this case are different because of the enactment of TEACHNJ. Prior to TEACHNJ tenured employees were entitled to full pay after the 120th day of suspension until the Commissioner rendered a final decision – even if an ALJ recommended sustaining the tenure charges. Now, in contrast, arbitrator decisions are "final and binding", subject to judicial review and enforcement as provided in the New Jersey Arbitration Act, N.J.S.A. 2A:24-7 through -10. Further, pre-TEACHNJ case law provides no justification for ignoring the final sentence of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, which provides that when the charge is sustained on the original hearing, the suspension may be continued unless and until that determination is reversed. Finally, the District asserts that the ALJ failed to properly address its arguments as to the ripeness of this dispute.

In reply, the petitioner contends that the Initial Decision is correct and should be adopted in its entirety. The petitioner argues that the District inexplicably misconstrues the Appellate Division's decision in an attempt to demonstrate that the court's remand of the case to the Commissioner to be considered "anew" somehow means that the initial arbitration award is still intact. The ALJ properly determined that the February 15, 2013 decision of Arbitrator Brent was reversed by the Appellate Division and therefore is null, void and has no force or effect. The petitioner emphasizes that upon remanding the matter, the court directed the Commissioner to "inform the arbitrator what legal standards to utilize, after which the arbitrators must review the facts anew within this legal framework." The petitioner maintains that the ALJ was correct in concluding that the determination which sustained the tenure charges has been appealed, sustained, appealed, and then reversed. Therefore – because there has yet to be a determination of the charges by Arbitrator Brent – in accordance with the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, the petitioner is entitled to her salary beginning on the 121st day of her suspension and until such time as the tenure charges against her are resolved.

The petitioner also contends that the pre-TEACHNJ cases relied upon by the ALJ are applicable to the instant case because the substance of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 requiring payment be made to a teacher whose tenure charges are outstanding after 120 days remains unchanged. That an arbitrator's decision under TEACHNJ is now a final decision does not change the fact that Arbitrator Brent's February 15, 2013 decision was reversed and remanded. Moreover, since the charges against the petitioner have been reversed and remanded, the last sentence of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 does not apply despite the District's argument to the contrary. Finally, the petitioner states that the ALJ's interpretation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 is consistent with the statute's purpose and legislative history. The Legislative purpose of the statute is to provide financial assistance to the employee who finds herself in protracted legal proceedings until the tenure charges are decided. Therefore, the Initial Decision should be adopted and the petitioner should receive her full salary retroactive to the 121st day of her unpaid suspension, plus any increments she would have been entitled to, and prospectively until a determination on the tenure charges is made by Arbitrator Brent.

As a threshold matter, the Commissioner finds that the petitioner is entitled to her full salary, subject to mitigation from any substituted employment or unemployment compensation, from day 121 of her suspension until Arbitrator Brent issued his original arbitration award on February 15, 2013, which sustained the inefficiency tenure charges filed against the petitioner and removed her from her tenured position.[1] The Commissioner further finds that the ALJ erroneously interpreted N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 to find that the petitioner is entitled to full back pay retroactive to the 121st day of her suspension until there is a second decision issued by Arbitrator Brent. Accordingly, that portion of the Initial Decision is rejected.

It is undisputed that under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, tenured employees are entitled to receive full salary and benefits starting with the 121st day of their suspension until a determination on the tenure charges is made by an arbitrator. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 also provides that, "[s]hould the charge be sustained on the original hearing or an appeal therefrom, and should such person appeal from the same, then the suspension may be continued unless and until such determination is reversed, in which event he shall be reinstated immediately with full pay as of the time of such suspension." In this case, there was a determination by Arbitrator Brent on February 15, 2013 sustaining the charges of inefficiency at the original hearing. Those charges have not been dismissed on appeal thereby triggering the reinstatement of the petitioner with full pay as of the time of her suspension pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; rather, the matter was remanded as a part of the petitioner's appeal process.[2] A tenured employee who is appealing from sustained charges may not fall back on the 120-day provision during the appeal process; instead, if the employee is successful in getting charges dismissed the employee is entitled to be reinstated with full pay as of the date of suspension. Moreover, the Appellate Division's reversal and remand of these proceedings did not re-trigger the 120-day rule because there is no mechanism for such contained within N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. Therefore, the remedy available to the petitioner at this juncture is reinstatement and back pay if she is ultimately successful in having the tenure charges dismissed.

[1] In the Initial Decision, the ALJ indicated that the 121st day was on or about January 14, 2013; however, the tenure charges were certified to the Commissioner on September 13, 2012. If the petitioner was suspended without pay upon certification of the charges to the Commissioner as permitted by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, then the 121st day would be January 12, 2013.

The cases relied on by the ALJ to support her determination that the petitioner is entitled to full pay retroactive to the 121st day of her suspension were issued before TEACHNJ and are distinguishable. For example, in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William Thomas, Plainfield School District, Union County, Commissioner Decision No. 242-08, decided May 23, 2008, the ALJ made a recommendation on the charges and the Commissioner remanded to the matter to the OAL for a factual hearing. Despite the fact that the Commissioner ultimately sustained the tenure charges, the tenured employee was entitled to full pay during the remand in accordance with the 120-day rule because there was not a final decision issued by the Commissioner at that stage of the proceedings. Importantly, prior to TEACHNJ, the tenure decisions of ALJs were simply recommendations to the Commissioner: they were not final decisions for purposes of the 120-day rule. Here, the decision of Arbitrator Brent on the original proceedings was a final decision, as opposed to a recommendation, and that February 15, 2013 decision ended the petitioner's entitlement to full pay under the 120-day provision.

Despite the petitioner's argument to the contrary, the Legislative history of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 does not dictate a different result. In her exceptions, the petitioner cites to In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super 13 (App. Div. 1974), to stress the purpose and Legislative intent behind N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14:

> It seems clear that in enacting [N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14] the Legislature must have had in mind the economic hardship endured by teachers and other board of education employees suspended without pay pending the outcome of charges filed against them and certified for hearing to the Commissioner of Education. We are certain, moreover, of the Legislature's awareness that in many instances, because of the volume of matters awaiting hearing, a prompt disposition is not feasible. Thus, the obvious intent and purpose of the amendment was to alleviate the financial plight of those affected by providing for the payment of their full salary ... from the 121st day following the certificate of charges until the determination thereof by the Commissioner. [Id. at 35-36]

Since the enactment of TEACHNJ, the arbitrator has stepped into the shoes of the Commissioner in that the arbitrator's decision is now deemed to be a final decision. The Legislative intent behind the 120-day rule remains in effect to help prevent economic hardship to the employee until the arbitrator makes a determination. However, once there is a determination by an arbitrator sustaining the tenure charges on the original hearing, the tenured employee is no longer entitled to full pay under the 120-day provision in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, which is consistent with the result of final Commissioner decisions and the Legislative intent prior to the enactment of TEACHNJ.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is rejected in part. The District is directed to pay the petitioner back pay for the period beginning on the 121st day of her suspension through Arbitrator Brent's February 15, 2013 award.

Record Closed: January 8, 2016 Decided: January 13, 2016

BEFORE GAIL M. COOKSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about July 24, 2015, Felicia Pugliese (petitioner) filed a Petition of Appeal to the Department of Education in which she asserted that a dispute had arisen between the respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (Newark BOE) and herself over whether she was entitled to her full salary and benefits retroactive to the 121st day after she was suspended without pay, which date was September 12, 2012. Petitioner has been a tenured teacher with Newark BOE and asserts in this appeal that the unique procedural history of a collateral arbitration proceeding entitles her to the relief sought in her Petition. On or about September 14, 2015, following notices and an extension, Newark BOE filed its Answer to the Petition.

The matter was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on September 16, 2015, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was assigned to the undersigned on September 23, 2015. Accordingly, I convened a telephonic case management conference with counsel on October 1, 2015, to discuss the potential issues in the case and schedule the matter for hearings. It was agreed that counsel would consider drafting a joint stipulation of facts and presenting the case through dispositive motion practice. The scheduling of a plenary hearing date was deferred and a briefing schedule established. The matter is now ripe for decision.

JOINT STIPULATION OF RELEVANT FACTS

1. Petitioner began her employment as a teacher with the Newark BOE in September of 2004.

2. Petitioner was employed by the Newark BOE as a teacher continuously thereafter, and acquired tenure in the district.

3. The Newark BOE filed tenure charges against petitioner on July 23, 2012.

4. In its tenure charges, the Newark BOE alleged that petitioner was inefficient in her performance of her duties. Petitioner denied the allegations in the charges and asserted that the charges were improper for other reasons also.

5. The Newark BOE certified tenure charges against petitioner to the Commissioner of Education on or about September 13, 2012.

6. As a result, petitioner was suspended without pay effective September 12, 2012, has been suspended without pay since then, and remains suspended without pay to date.

7. The Commissioner of Education transferred the charges to Arbitrator Daniel Brent ("Arbitrator") for disposition under the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq.

8. The arbitration hearings were held on November 20, 2012, December 5, 2012, and January 3, 2013, and the Arbitrator rendered a decision on February 15, 2013[1], that upheld the tenure charges and terminated petitioner's tenured employment with the Newark BOE.

9. After the Arbitrator rendered his decision, petitioner filed a summary action in the Superior Court, Chancery Division, under N.J.S.A. 2A:24-7 to 10, seeking to vacate the Arbitrator's award. The Newark BOE filed a motion to dismiss the action and for confirmation of the arbitrator's award.

10. On September 16, 2013, the Chancery Division Judge, in an oral bench decision and an order, confirmed the Arbitrator's award, and dismissed petitioner's complaint.

11. Petitioner then filed a timely appeal of the Chancery Division's decision with the Superior Court, Appellate Division.

[1] Neither party has set forth when the 121st day should be deemed to have occurred, and no tolling periods were argued or stipulated. By my inartful calculation, that date would be on or about Monday, January 14, 2013. In other words, petitioner could have applied for her pay before the Arbitrator, the Commissioner, or the Superior Court.

12. The Superior Court, Appellate Division issued a decision on May 19, 2015

13. After receiving the Appellate Division's decision, on June 1, 2015, the Commissioner of Education re-assigned the matter to Arbitrator Brent for further proceedings.

14. On June 8, 2015, the Newark BOE filed a Notice of Petition for Certification with the New Jersey Supreme Court seeking to reverse the Appellate Division's decision, and in response, on June 17, 2015, petitioner filed a Notice of Cross-Petition for Certification. The Newark BOE subsequently filed a Petition for Certification and petitioner filed a Cross-Petition for Certification.

15. By letter dated June 9, 2015, petitioner also requested that the Commissioner reconsider his decision to remand the matter to the Arbitrator and reconsider the legal "guidance" he provided to the Arbitrator in light of its insufficiency pursuant to the parameters set forth in the Appellate Division's decision, and on that same day, the Newark BOE requested that the Arbitrator hold the matter in abeyance pending a decision on the Newark BOE's Petition for Certification.

16. In response to petitioner's letter, the Commissioner refused to reconsider his transmittal to the Arbitrator or the terms of the transmittal, stating that he no longer had jurisdiction after the matter was referred to the Arbitrator.

17. In response to the Newark BOE's request that the Arbitrator hold the matter that had been re-assigned to him in abeyance, the Arbitrator agreed to hold the matter in abeyance, pending a determination by the Supreme Court on the Petitions for Certification.

18. On July 13, 2015, petitioner filed a Notice of Appeal with the Appellate Division, challenging the Commissioner of Education's remand of the case to Arbitrator Brent. The Newark BOE also filed a Notice of Appeal with the Appellate Division on July 14, 2015, challenging the Commissioner of Education's action referring the matter to arbitration. Those appeals are pending before the Appellate Division.[2]

ARGUMENT ON THE MOTIONS

The petitioner argues that the long and still-incomplete appeal process from the original arbitration determination upholding the tenure charges against her has placed her back in the position of suspended without pay pending determination. As such, she argues that she is entitled to reinstatement to her salary as of the 121st day after she was suspended without pay, irrespective of the several years passage of time due to the appeals.

Respondent argues the petitioner cannot avail herself of the salary reinstatement provision of the tenure laws because she has not prevailed on appeal and the original arbitration determination precludes the relief she seeks herein.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The above-recitation of the undisputed facts together with a reading of the legal submissions of the parties makes it clear that the only issue pending determination on this summary disposition motion is the legal authority of the Newark BOE to not reinstate petitioner to her salary even though she is and has not been providing any teaching services to the District.

It is well-established that if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact, a moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Brill v. The Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995). The purpose of summary decision is to avoid unnecessary hearings and their concomitant burden on public resources. Under the Brill standard, a fact-finding hearing should be avoided "when the evidence is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Brill guides us thusly:

[2] Counsel has advised that subsequent to the preparation of the Joint Stipulation, the New Jersey Supreme Court denied both the Petition and Cross-Petition, and the Newark BOE withdrew its appeal of the second referral to arbitration from the Appellate Division. Petitioner's appeal is still pending and the arbitrator has established a briefing schedule for written submissions.

> [A] determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

In explaining the standard to be applied in summary motion practice, the Brill Court explained:

> The same standard applies to determine whether a prima facie case has been established by the party bearing the burden of proof in a trial. . . . If a case involves no material factual disputes, the court disposes of it as a matter of law by rendering judgment in favor of the moving or non-moving party.

On stipulation of the parties, I CONCLUDE in this matter that the issue of petitioner's tenure salary rights can be decided as a matter of law.

Pursuant to the Tenured Employees Hearing Act (Tenure Act), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq., a tenured teacher may not be removed from her position or have her salary reduced unless a school board successfully establishes one or more of these causes by a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). According to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, no person under tenure of office, position, or employment shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. Tenure is a status in a particular position created by statute, not the agreement of the parties. Accordingly, it is a "'statutory right imposed upon a teacher's contractual employment' [that] may not be forfeited or waived." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 77 (1982) (quoting Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65, 72 (1962); citing Red Bank Educ. Ass'n v. Red Bank Bd. of Educ., 78 N.J. 122, 141 (1978)). Tenure was designed to protect employees "from dismissal 'for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons.'" Wright v. Bd. of Educ. of E. Orange, 99 N.J. 112, 118 (quoting Zimmerman, supra, 38 N.J. at 71).

As part of the Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 provides the conditions under which a tenured teacher is protected from a prolonged suspension without pay pending adjudication of her other rights under tenure charges:

> Upon certification of any charge to the commissioner, the board may suspend the person against whom such charge is made, with or without pay, but, if the determination of the charge by the arbitrator is not made within 120 calendar days after certification of the charges, excluding all delays which are granted at the request of such person, then the full salary (except for said 120 days) of such person shall be paid beginning on the one hundred twenty-first day until such determination is made. Should the charge be dismissed at any stage of the process, the person shall be reinstated immediately with full pay from the first day of such suspension. Should the charge be dismissed at any stage of the process and the suspension be continued during an appeal therefrom, then the full pay or salary of such person shall continue until the determination of the appeal. However, the board of education shall deduct from said full pay or salary any sums received by such employee or officers by way of pay or salary from any substituted employment assumed during such period of suspension. Should the charge be sustained on the original hearing or an appeal therefrom, and should such person appeal from the same, then the suspension may be continued unless and until such determination is reversed, in which event he shall be reinstated immediately with full pay as of the time of such suspension.

The purpose behind the 120-day requirement was commented upon by the Appellate Division when it said:

> It seems clear that in enacting it the Legislature must have had in mind the economic hardship endured by teachers and other board of education employees suspended without pay pending the outcome of charges filed against them and certified for hearing to the Commissioner of Education. We > are certain, moreover, of the Legislature's awareness that in many instances, because of the volume of matters awaiting hearing, a prompt disposition of charges is not feasible. Thus, the obvious intent and purpose of the amendment was to alleviate the financial plight of those affected by providing for the payment of their full salary (less sums received from other employment during suspension) from the 121st day following the certification of charges until the determination thereof by the Commissioner, or in the case of an appeal by a board from a decision adverse to it, until the determination of the appeal.

> [In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13 (App. Div. 1974) (emphasis added)]

Cases at the OAL have applied Grossman and found that the tenured teacher, even while serious tenure charges have been sustained, were entitled to and that the statute mandates reinstatement of pay pending appeals, remands and other procedural curve-balls. In re William Thomas, OAL Dkt. EDU 1763-08 Initial Decision (April 9, 2008); IMO Tenure Hearing of Brian Yatauro, OAL Dkt. EDU 0793-99, Initial Decision (June 12, 1999). <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>

In Thomas, the teacher had been arrested for a drug CDS offense on May 4, 2004. He completed PTI on March 16, 2007, and tenure charges were filed on May 16, 2007. In the first Initial Decision, the Honorable Howard Solomon, A.L.J., entered an order sustaining the tenure charges on stipulated facts and without a plenary hearing, having found that PTI constituted a disfavorable conclusion to the criminal charge. The Commissioner reversed that summary decision and remanded the matter for a factual hearing. On April 9, 2008, Judge Solomon held, after a plenary hearing, that the underlying facts had been established and respondent's possession of CDS constituted just cause for tenure charges. Nevertheless, Judge Solomon granted the application for back pay for the period between completion of PTI and the tenure charges being filed, and from the 121st day after tenure charges had been filed, notwithstanding that he also sustained those charges, quoting Yatauro: "This statute contains mandatory language which requires that a board commence payment of salary on the 121st day after certification. It does not authorize a board to withhold such money until some later date, such as the conclusion of a tenure proceeding."

In Yatauro, the Honorable Jeff Masin, A.L.J., reviewed two proffered bases for that teacher's application for salary reinstatement. Therein, the teacher had been initially suspended with pay on March 27, 1996, pending resolution of criminal allegations relating to inappropriate sexual relationships with a student. Approximately six months later, he was indicted and the suspension was modified to one without pay. In 1997, he was acquitted but his district filed tenure charges against him on September 18, 1997. After an Initial Decision on the merits sustained the tenure charges, the Commissioner remanded as a separate matter the teacher's application for reinstatement of salary for the post-acquittal/pre-tenure charge period, and for his salary as of the 121st day after the tenure charges. Judge Masin engaged in a careful analysis of the equitable considerations at issue in the salary issue following acquittal on criminal charges and concluded that the respondent was not entitled to pay when he was ultimately discharged for the same behavior for which he had been indicted but found not guilty. He also reviewed the Tenure Law provisions on reinstatement of pay after the 120th day with equal attention to legal interpretation and precedence and held:

> The only reason why the salary payments would not begin would be an intervening indictment, or the prompt disposition of the tenure charge prior to the 121st day. Unlike the situation which exists regarding payment of moneys withheld during a period of indictment, where the statute does not indicate when, if at all, such moneys are to be paid to the employee, here the Legislature left no doubt that the salary was to commence on the 121st day. The statute cannot be read to authorize a board to hold the money aside, to keep a running tab of salary owed to the employee. Instead, it directs that the full salary "shall be paid." Equity is not an issue here.
> It is admittedly troubling that an employee such as Yatauro, who conducted himself so improperly and in doing so risked not only his own professional and financial future but the interests of a young student as well, should receive any salary payments for periods when he did not work. If the statute were not mandatory, it would be fully in accord with the equitable analysis applied to the post-indictment period to similarly deny this claim. However, here the Legislature has spoken with clear voice and intent.

> I CONCLUDE that the law as it currently exists does not permit a board of education to refuse to pay to an employee the employee's full pay once the 120-day initial period has concluded. Where a board fails to do so, it cannot invoke equitable considerations to support a refusal to pay the moneys owed to the now ex-employee following his or her removal on substantiated tenure charges.

Thus, I must also CONCLUDE as a matter of law that there is no discretion expressed in the mandate of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The only real question is whether the remand from the Appellate Division somehow makes that mandate inapplicable to these circumstances. Furthermore, it is clear from the analysis of the cases cited above that remands to the OAL from the Commissioner were often involved, creating a scenario where there were significant gaps of salary withheld even though the charges against the tenured teacher were ultimately sustained. Judges Solomon and Masin both entered orders of salary reimbursement for teachers accused of highly inappropriate conduct and whom had not worked for their respective districts for long periods of time after the tenure charges were sustained but before determination by the Commissioner.

A reading of the Appellate Division remand in this matter makes it clear that the substantiation of the original tenure charges have been wiped clean and that the tenure charges have to be tried "anew" under legal standards that had not yet been articulated as applicable under the TEACHNJ:

> We reverse and remand to the Commissioner to explicitly decide those legal defenses that the Commissioner does not expressly delegate to the statutorily-mandated arbitrator to decide. The Commissioner must also inform the arbitrator what legal standards to utilize, after which the arbitrators must review the facts anew within this legal framework.
> Thus, we remand both matters to the Department of Education to determine the validity of those legal defenses raised by each teacher deemed appropriate by the agency for resolution by the agency, so that a uniform educational > policy will be promulgated. The agency should determine the appropriate standards to be used by arbitrators when adjudicating tenure hearings, thus determining a consistent procedure for teachers in positions similar to Chavez and Pugliese, who have received tenure charges after the effective date of TEACHNJ, alleging poor performance that occurred prior to the implementation of the statute's new standards.

Here, the 121st day came and went about one month before the arbitrator issued his determination. Certainly, petitioner could have filed this motion at that time and the result should have been the same as herein. Now, that determination which sustained the tenure charges has been appealed, sustained, appealed, and then reversed. If there had been no remand to the Commissioner, petitioner would be entitled to her job back. As it stands, the arbitration must begin "anew" and petitioner is entitled under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 to reinstatement to salary retroactive to the 121st day after her unpaid suspension commenced even though she is not entitled to reinstatement to her teaching post.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner challenged his removal – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3 – from the Board of Education of the Town of Kearny as the result of the Board's finding that he had failed to attend three consecutive meetings of the Board without good cause. Petitioner contended that he had good cause to be absent from all but one of the meetings in question, as he was on duty as a Kearny police officer on those dates; further, petitioner asserted that he did not receive 72 hours of notice of the Board's proposed action, as required in the Board's bylaws.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3 provides that any member who fails to attend three consecutive meetings of the board without good cause may be removed from board membership; the respondent Board adopted bylaw number 0145, which provides that if a board member misses three consecutive meetings without good cause, the Board may remove that member provided that 1) such removal was proposed at the immediately preceding board meeting, and 2) the member be provided at least 72 hours' notice of the removal meeting; in the instant matter, petitioner missed numerous board meetings during 2014 and 2015 following his appointment as a township police officer, including three consecutive meetings; petitioner's many unexplained absences were contrary to the Board's interests; petitioner received timely notice of the removal meeting via ordinary mail and email, and was in attendance at the meeting prior to the removal meeting, at which his removal was discussed – although he left prior to the adjournment of the meeting; petitioner attended the June 1, 2015 removal meeting, but made no statement opposing his removal and did not request additional time to prepare a response; rather, petitioner stated he had not received adequate notice of the meeting and questioned the Board about how it had noticed him; however, the burden of proof was on petitioner to demonstrate that the Board's determination that his absences were without "good cause" was arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. The ALJ concluded that petitioner received timely notice of the removal meeting, and has not sustained his burden to prove that the board's actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

The Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1] The parties did not file exceptions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner agrees with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons thoroughly set forth in the Initial Decision – that the Board did not act in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner when it removed petitioner from the Board for failing to attend three consecutive Board meetings without good cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3. Further, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's finding that petitioner had 72 hours notice of the Board's special meeting on June 1, 2015, in accordance with the Board's Bylaw 0145. The Commissioner notes that the Board provided petitioner with the requisite notice by ordinary mail – in addition to electronic mail – thereby affording petitioner with the necessary notice and a fair opportunity to be heard. Indeed, petitioner attended the Board's special meeting and did not make a statement or present any argument as to why he had good cause for his absences and should not be removed as a Board member.

[1] The Commissioner was not provided with a transcript of the November 23, 2015 hearing at the OAL.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Daniel Esteves was an elected member of the Board of Education of the Town of Kearny. On June 1, 2015, he was removed as a Board member as a result of the Board's contention that he failed to attend three consecutive meetings of the Board without good cause.

Esteves contends that he did not receive the seventy-two hour notice required by the Board's bylaw 0145.

FACTS

Three witnesses testified in this matter. Two of them were Board members and the third was Daniel Esteves. From their testimony, I FIND the following FACTS, none of which are in serious dispute:

1. Since January 1, 2014, the petitioner was absent from the following Board meetings: (Answer, Ex. C.)

   a. Five special meetings held on March 24, 2014, August 12, 2014, October 9, 2014, November 13, 2014, and February 23, 2015;

   b. Two budget public hearing held on May 5, 2014, and April 30, 2015;

   c. Seven regular meetings held on April 22, 2014, June 16, 2014, September 15, 2014, December 15, 2014, including three consecutive meetings held on February 17, 2015, March 16, 2015, and April 20, 2015;

   d. One committee of the whole meeting held on January 13, 2015; and

   e. One student hearing held on April 22, 2015.

2. Since January 1, 2014, the petitioner attended the following Board meeting: (Answer, Ex. C.)

   a. Four special meetings held on March 6, 2014, May 13, 2014, May 27, 2014, October 9, 2014 (which he left at 6:40 p.m., prior to a vote); and

b. Six regular meetings held on January 23, 2014, February 18, 2014, May 19, 2014, July 29, 2014, November 27, 2014, and January 20, 2014.

3. In 2014, the petitioner was hired as a police officer for the Town of Kearny. (P-2.) He works the evening shift, between the hours of 12 p.m. and 10 p.m. and he was on-duty on the following dates in 2014 (March 24, April 22, May 5, June 16, August 12, September 15, October 9, October 20, November 13, December 15) and in 2015 (January 13, February 17, February 23, March 16, April 20, April 30). (P-6.) A review of his on-duty log indicates that except for the April 22, 2015, meeting, he was on-duty when the meetings were held.

4. Due to his numerous absences, the Board, through its counsel, sent him a letter dated May 8, 2014. The letter noted that "[o]ver the past few months, you have asked to be removed from all committees of the Board and you have missed many Board meetings...," and inquired whether he would "...be able to attend future meetings of the Board and to carry out the duties and responsibilities of a Board member in the future." (P-4.) In response to the Board's May 8, 2014, letter he wrote an undated letter objecting to the Board's characterization of his request to be removed from Board meetings, noting that his absences were work-related. He noted that he intended to "continue to carry out the duties and responsibilities" of a Board member. (P-4.)

5. The Board discussed his removal at its regular meeting on May 18, 2015. (R. Ex. D.) Although there is no indication why the petitioner attended this meeting, he was present for the public session portion of the meeting but left in between the time the Board went into a closed session to discuss the petitioner's removal and its return to a public session. He attended the closed session at which time his attendance was discussed.

6. The petitioner was removed at a special meeting held on Monday, June 1, 2015, at 5:30 p.m. He did not make any statement against his removal and did not request additional time to prepare. (R. Ex. D.) Instead, he stated that he did not receive adequate notice of the meeting and questioned the Board about how it noticed him. (R. Ex. D.) A Board member stated that the Board sent him notice via ordinary mail and certified mail and via email on May 26, 2015. (R. Ex. D.) The Board voted 8 votes in the affirmative and 1 vote in the negative (the petitioner voting in the negative) to remove him from the Board. (R. Ex. D.)

7. The Board sent notice of the removal meeting via ordinary mail and certified mail and via email on May 26, 2015. Although it is unclear how the petitioner became aware of the meeting, by his own admission, he "...became aware of the actual time of the meeting on May 30, 2015" (time unknown). (P-2.) The notice via ordinary mail was sent on May 26, 2015, intra-town—from the Board's attorney's office address to the petitioner's address in Kearny. The envelope is stamp-dated May 27, 2015. (P-5.)

8. Notice via certified mail was sent on May 26, 2015, simultaneously with the ordinary mail but it is undisputed that the petitioner received the certified mail on June 2, 2015, at 12:13 p.m. (P-3.)

9. Notice via email and accompanying attachments were sent to the petitioner's school district email address at Desteves@kearnyschools.com on Tuesday, May 26, 2015, at 6:32 p.m. (Answer, Ex. A.) The petitioner claims that he "...did not receive the email notices." However, the District's review of his district email account revealed that as of July 9, 2015, he had not accessed his emails since December 15, 2014, at 12:31 p.m. (Answer, Ex. B.)

10. On June 5, 2015, after his removal, he sent a letter to the Board indicating that he did not receive the certified mail until June 2, 2015, that he only became aware of the June 1, 2015, scheduled meeting on May 30, 2015, and that he had good cause to miss three consecutive Board meetings due to his working evening shifts (P-2.)

11. On June 15, 2015, during a regular meeting, the Board appointed Bryan Granelli to fill the seat left vacant after the petitioner's removal. In November 2015, Mr. Granelli was elected as a Board member for a three year term.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 2, 2015, the petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education, Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Department), seeking consideration of a conflict between himself and the Board. The Board filed an Answer on August 31, 2015. The Department transmitted the present matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case on September 1, 2015. A prehearing telephone conference was held on October 15, 2015, and a hearing was held on November 23, 2015.

PARTIES' ARGUMENTS

The petitioner argues that he had "good cause" to be absent from Board meetings and that he did not receive 72 hours' notice of the Board's proposed action to remove him as a Board member pursuant to Bylaw 0145. The Board argues that it is the Board that determines "good cause" and claims that it sent him notice of the June 1, 2015, special meeting via ordinary mail, certified mail, and via email on May 26, 2015, providing him with more than 72 hours' notice.

DISCUSSION

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3, provides that "...any member who fails to attend three consecutive meetings of the board without good cause may be removed by it." Local boards are creations of the State and, as such, may exercise only those powers granted to them by the Legislature — either expressly or by necessary or fair implication. See Wagner v. Mayor & Mun. Council of Newark, 24 N.J. 467, 474 (1957); Fair Lawn Ed. Assn. v Fair Lawn Bd. of Educ., 79 N.J. 574, 579 (1979). A local board is a "public body" as defined in N.J.S.A. 10:4-8(a), and such boards derive the authority to adopt Bylaws from N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1(c). New Jersey courts have required public bodies to adhere to their own Bylaws. Matawan Reginal Teachers' Ass'n. v. Matawan-Aberdeen Regional Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., 223 N.J. Super. 504, 509 (App. Div. 1988). Here, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3, the Board adopted Bylaw 0145 which provides that if a Board member misses three consecutive meetings, without good cause, the Board may remove that member provided that (1) his removal was proposed at the "immediately previous Board meeting," and (2) he is given "at least 72 hours' notice" of the removal meeting.

I. The Board's determination that the petitioner did not have "good cause" to be absent from numerous Board meetings was not arbitrary, capricious, or induced by improper motives.

In reference to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3, "...it is the Board itself that determines what constitutes good cause." Shamong Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Chwastek, 1985 S.L.D. (July 8). However, in Smith v. Bd. of Educ. of Twp. of Hazlet, EDU 53-99, Decision on Motion for Emergent Relief (February 8, 1999), remanded, Comm'r (March 8, 1999), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal, the Commissioner explained that Shamong is not dispositive when the issue is whether a "good cause" absence applies to the "three consecutive meetings" requirement, explaining that "there is no decisional law which specifically addresses and interprets the statutory intendment of the term 'three consecutive meetings' or resolves the question of whether 'good cause' is required for each individual board member absence or for the period of absence."

Since the Board's determination of what constitutes "good cause" is a discretionary decision, such decisions will only be vacated where it acts in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). And, unless there is a clear showing of abuse, the Commissioner will not substitute his own judgment for that of a local Board in matters which lie within its discretionary authority. Ibid. at 296. Thus, the burden of proof is on the petitioner to demonstrate that the Board's determination that his absences were without "good cause" was arbitrary, without rational basis, or induced by improper motives.

In order to determine whether the Board's determination was improper, it is necessary to articulate what the phrase "good cause" means. Judge Pressler, in Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385, 395-97 (Law Div. 1976); aff'd, 163 N.J. Super. 453 (App. Div. 1979); cert. denied, 79 N.J. 497 (1979), eloquently explained the concept of "good" or "sufficient cause."

> "Cause" in this context is a concept which, like all of the enduring principles of the common law, is certain as a matter of legal import while being at the same time extremely elastic > as a matter of specific application. It means, essentially "such cause as is 'plainly' sufficient under the law and sound public policy'" and has "reference to a substantial cause touching qualifications appropriate to the office or employment or to its administration." (citations omitted). It also necessarily implies such degree of misconduct or culpability on the part of the office holder as clearly implicates the public interest in precluding his continuance in that particular office. It is, indeed, the element of fault which conceptually distinguishes removal from office from all other causes resulting in a vacancy in office.

In Golaine, supra, at 393, the issue before the court was whether the plaintiff's 11-month absence from his unpaid appointment for a 6 year term (1972-1977) as a member of the Planning Board constituted a neglect of duty under a statutory removal provision.[1] The plaintiff was a diligent and valuable member of the Board but had to take a leave of absence when his employer assigned him to an overseas project that lasted for 11-months. Ibid at 390. The Board removed the plaintiff and argued that he was not granted a proper leave of absence, that his 11-month absence was inimical to the Board's interest, and that he "failed to do the right thing" by not resigning. Ibid. at 392. The plaintiff argued that his leave of absence was de-jure. The court reasoned that removal for "good cause" is in part based on an act of "misfeasance or nonfeasance" and includes an "element of fault," noting that "[t]he leitmotif of removal cases involving nonattendance is whether the absence was either excused or excusable, either circumstance negating a finding of neglect of duty." Ibid. at 398-99. The court entered judgment for the plaintiff and ordered him restored to his office, concluding that his nonattendance was not an actionable neglect of duty. In its decision, the court noted that the plaintiff had one and a half years of his 6 year term remaining and that he was prepared to return to office. Ibid. at 400-01.

Here, the petitioner does not sustain his burden of proof that the Board's determination was improper. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3 and Bylaw 0145 require that a Board member must fail to attend three consecutive meetings without good cause before he can be removed. The petitioner argues that he had "good cause" to be absent from the Board meetings because with the exception of the April 22, 2015, meeting, he was on-duty when the Board meetings were held. In this regard, Golaine, supra, suggests that the "misfeasance or nonfeasance" of not attending the Board meetings cannot be based on behavior that he can be faulted with—he was on-duty when the meetings were held. But unlike in Golaine, supra, where the plaintiff had one and a half years of his six year term remaining and he was prepared to return to office, here, the petitioner's term was due to expire at the end of 2015, a replacement Board member was elected in November 2015, and it is not clear whether the petitioner will be able to return to office given his work schedule. Furthermore, it is undisputed that he failed to attend Board meetings on February 17, 2015, March 16, 2015, and April 20, 2015. In this regard, the Board could have concluded that his numerous absences were inimical to it interests. Thus, it cannot be said that the Board's determination was arbitrary, without rational basis, or induced by improper motives.

Moreover, any remedy granted by this tribunal will have no practical effect on the outcome of this matter because the petitioner's term was due to expire at the end of 2015, but given his removal, Mr. Granelli was appointed as an interim Board member to sit for the rest of what would have been the petitioner's term. Subsequent to his interim appointment, Mr. Granelli ran and was elected to the Board in November 2015 for a three year term. See Marjarum v. Twp. Of Hamilton, 336 N.J. Super. 85, 92 (App. Div. 2000) (defining mootness as the inability of a court to grant judicial relief because of attendant circumstances)). See also Greenfield v. N.J. Dep't of Corr., 383 N.J. Super. 254, 257-58 (interpreting mootness when the court's decision can have no practical effect on the existing controversy)). Due to the attendant circumstances, specifically, the fact that the petitioner's Board seat was replaced by an interim member who was then elected and currently holds the seat, no remedy can be afforded to him.

II. The petitioner received timely notice via ordinary mail and email.

In New Jersey, in the absence of a statutory, regulatory, or a contractual provision identifying the type of notice required, when a mailing is correctly addressed, proper postage is affixed, the return address is correct, and the mailing is deposited into a mailing receptacle, a presumption arises that it was received by the party to whom it was addressed. SSI Medical Servs. v. HHS, Div. of Medical Assistance & Health Servs., 146 N.J. 614, 621 (1996). N.J.A.C. 1:1-7.1 provides that:

> (a) Service shall be made in person; by certified mail, return receipt requested; by ordinary mail; or in any manner which is designed to provide actual notice to the party or person being served.
> (b) Service by mail shall be complete upon mailing.

When a party is being served notice by ordinary mail, R. 1:3-3 affords that party an additional three days from the date of service to receive the ordinary mail. In addition, R. 1:5-4 provides guidance on the issue of when service is complete if service is made via regular and certified mail;

> (b) ... If service is simultaneously made by ordinary mail and certified or registered mail, service shall be deemed complete ... on mailing of the ordinary mail.

The petitioner's June 5, 2015, letter states that he did not receive the e-mail notice, that he did not receive the certified mail notice until June 2, 2015, but does not address the status of the ordinary mail. An analysis of the following facts reveals that the petitioner received the required 72 hours' notice: (1) the notice via regular mail was sent on Tuesday, May 26, 2015, (the envelope is stamp-dated Wednesday, May 27, 2015, time unknown) to the petitioner's address; (2) notice via email and the accompanying attachments were emailed on Tuesday, May 26, 2015, at 6:32 p.m. to the petitioner's school district email address; (3) the petitioner became aware of the time of the removal meeting on May 30, 2015, and (4) the Board convened for the June 1, 2015, special meeting at 5:30 p.m.

A. The petitioner received timely notice via ordinary mail.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-7.1(c), service by mail shall be complete upon mailing. R. 1:5-4 provides that when service is made by both ordinary and certified mail, service is complete upon the mailing of the ordinary mail and R. 1:3-3 provides the party being served with ordinary mail an additional three days, from the date of mailing, to receive the ordinary mail. Here, the petitioner received timely notice by ordinary mail. First, the ordinary mail is correctly addressed to the petitioner and mailed to his address, lists the correct postage ($0.48), and bears evidence of being processed through a postal facility. Therefore, it bears the presumption established in N.J.A.C. 1:1-7.1(c) and SSI Medical Servs. that it was received by the petitioner. Second, pursuant to R. 1:3-3, even if the notice was mailed at 5:30 p.m. on May 26, 2015, then he would have received it by 5:30 p.m. on May 29, 2015.[2] The difference in time between June 1, 2015, 5:30 p.m., and May 29, 2015, 5:30 p.m. is exactly 72 hours. Thus, he received timely notice.

B. The petitioner received timely notice via email because a plain and ordinary interpretation of the Bylaw's notice requirement does not exclude notice by email.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-7.1(a), service can be made "... in any manner which is designed to provide actual notice to the party or person being served." Email communication can serve to provide actual notice to a party. See Modan v. Modan, 327 N.J. Super. 44 (App. Div. 2000) (noting that email is a method that reasonably effectuates actual notice to a party and that the plaintiff failed his due diligence obligation to provide notice to the defendant when he knew the defendant's email address where she could be reached but did not send notice to it)). In Driscoll v. Burlington-Bristol Bridge Co., 8 N.J. 433, 474 (1952), the Court stated that members of a local board are public officers holding positions of public trust and:

> As fiduciaries and trustees of the public weal they are under an inescapable obligation to serve the public with the highest fidelity. In discharging the duties of their office they are required to display such intelligence and skill as they are capable of, to be diligent and conscientious, to exercise their discretion not arbitrarily but reasonably, and above all to display good faith, honesty and integrity.

[2] This tribunal uses 5:30 p.m. for calculating the difference because that is the time the Board convened for the removal hearing on June 1, 2015.

A logical extension of Driscoll would suggest that public officers who hold positions of public trust are required to be diligent and should display the intelligence and skill they are capable of. As corollary, public officers who have an email address issued to them by a public body for the purpose of transacting the public body's business, should at least check their emails to remain diligent and conscientious about the public body's matter. In other words, the use of and the periodic checking of a public official's email account issued by a public body is an implied condition of the public official's faithful execution of his obligations as a public official.

In the absence of specifically defined notice provisions, ambiguous or undefined notice provisions are interpreted in accordance with their plain and ordinary meaning. Nester v. O'Donnell, 301 N.J. Super. 198, 210 (App. Div. 1997); State Troopers Fraternal Ass'n. v. N.J., 149 N.J. 38, 47 (1997). New Jersey courts have invalidated public body decisions where notice requirements defined by statute or bylaw were deficient. See Opderbeck v. Midland Park Bd. of Educ. 442 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 2015) (addressing the sufficiency of "adequate notice to the public" under the New Jersey Open Public Meetings Act); DeVita v. Housing of Paterson, 31 N.J. Super. 394, 397 (App. Div. 1954) (differentiating between "published notice" and "written notice" and concluding that decision taken by Board was contrary to its bylaw which required 7 days "written notice").

Here, the petitioner received actual notice of the Board's June 1, 2015, special meeting on Tuesday, May 26, 2015, at 6:32 p.m. when the Board sent him an email with attachments to his school district email address. Neither N.J.S.A. 18A:12-3 nor Bylaw 0145 specifies the type of notice that is required, suggesting that any notice, including notice via email, is good notice. In his letter dated June 5, 2015, and addressed to the Board's counsel, petitioner states, "I did not receive the e-mails..." However, his excuse is unsatisfactory given his position as a public official who was issued a district email address. Moreover, as of July 9, 2015, his failure to check this email account since December 15, 2014, at 12:31 p.m. is not in accord with his intelligence, skills and his responsibility to be diligent and conscientious in keeping abreast of Board matters. Driscoll, supra, at 474. In short, he offers no justification for why he should not be responsible for periodically checking his district email address and why the Board's email should not count as effective notice. In this regard, 143 hours passed between the time the email was sent on Tuesday, May 26, 2015, 6:32 p.m., and Monday, June 1, 2015, 5:32 p.m. Thus, the Board's email notice was sufficient to provide him with 72 hours' notice.

III. Even if the petitioner did not receive the notice via ordinary mail and via email, the Board did not violate the Bylaw because his 72 hours' notice began at the conclusion of the May 18, 2015, meeting, and at the very least, he was aware of the removal meeting for 48 hours.

Assuming arguendo, that the petitioner did not receive timely notice, via ordinary and via email, his 72 hours' notice began after the conclusion of the May 18, 2015, meeting. Presumably, the purpose of the Bylaw is to (1) provide notice to the affected member that the Board will be seeking his removal and (2) apprise him with the date, time and place of the removal meeting.[3] Under this interpretation, the first requirement is substantive and affords the affected member with time to craft a defense to his removal. The second requirement is logistical and serves to apprise the affected member with the date, time and place of the removal meeting. The Bylaw's substantive and logistical notice procedures prevent the Board from unfairly surprising and removing a Board member. In this regard, so long as the Board complies with these procedures, or there is evidence that the affected member had notice and knew the date, time and place of the removal meeting, the substantive and logistical provisions of the Bylaw will not be violated because the purpose to the provisions have been met.

Using this logic, the substantive prong of the Bylaw was not violated and the petitioner's 72 hours' notice began at the conclusion of the May 18, 2015, meeting. He left the May 18, 2015, meeting between the time the Board went into a closed session and the time it returned to a public session. The petitioner offers no explanation for his early and voluntary departure from the meeting. The Board's May 18, 2015, meeting was the "immediately previous Board meeting" that should have placed the petitioner on notice that the Board would be seeking his removal. If he stayed for the entire meeting, he would have been aware that the Board would be seeking his removal at the next meeting or in the near future. He had all of the time between the conclusion of the May 18, 2015, meeting and the June 1, 2015, meeting to establish a defense.

[3] While the Board may effectuate a member's removal by first discussing his removal at the "immediately previous Board meeting," and then subsequently scheduling a removal meeting, it may also comply with the Bylaw in one proceeding. The removal of the Board member may be discussed at the "immediately previous Board meeting" and at the same meeting, the date, time, and location, so long as it is scheduled more than three days from this meeting may be announced as well.

The logistical prong of the Bylaw was not violated because the petitioner's act of leaving prior to the conclusion of the May 18, 2015, meeting is indicative that he knew that his removal was imminent. He knew or should have known as early as May 8, 2014, that the Board was concerned about his numerous absences. The fact pattern does not support a scenario where the Board attempted to unfairly surprise and remove him. In addition, he became aware of the date, time, and place of the June 1, 2015, meeting on May 30, 2015. In a letter dated June 5, 2015, and addressed to the Board's counsel, the petitioner acknowledges that he "became aware of the actual time of the meeting on May 30, 2015." Although he doesn't specify at what time he became aware of this information, using 5:30 p.m. (the start time of the removal meeting) and counting backwards to May 30, 2015, results in 48 hours. If he became aware of the meeting on Saturday, May 30, 2015 at 5:30 p.m., then he was aware of the meeting for 48 hours'. Consequently, the petitioner's argument becomes not that he was deprived of 72 hours' of notice but that he was deprived of an additional 24 hours' of notice. In this regard, he attended the June 1, 2015, meeting, was given an opportunity to address the Board but did not make any statement against his removal and did not request additional time to prepare. The act of attending the meeting acted as a forfeiture to the additional 24 hours' notice. Thus, the notice that he would have received had he remained for the entire May 18, 2015, meeting, and his actual knowledge of the date, time and place, of the June 1, 2015, meeting on May 30, 2015, leads to a conclusion that the provisions of Bylaw 0145 were not violated.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, the petitioner received timely notice via regular mail and email, and even if he did not, the provisions of Bylaw 0145 were not violated.

Pursuant to NJSA 18A:6-16, as amended by P.L. 2012, c.26 ("TEACHNJ"), the tenure charges brought by the Township of Hillsborough ("the District" or "Petitioner") against Nancy Mastriana ("Mastriana" or "Respondent") were referred to me by the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes for a hearing and Decision on October 20, 2015.[1] I conducted hearings at the District's Offices in Hillsborough, New Jersey on December 11, 21, 2015 and February 2 and 29, 2016.

At the hearing, the parties had full and fair opportunity to examine and cross-examine witnesses, introduce documentary evidence and make argument in support of their respective positions. The hearings were transcribed. The parties submitted written closing statements which were received on March 31, 2016, whereupon the record was closed.

THE CHARGES

The Sworn Tenure Charges brought against Nancy Mastriana on August 26, 2015, are as follows:

> Nancy Mastriana, a tenured teaching staff member in the employ of the Hillsborough Township Board of Education, consistently demonstrated inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in her teaching skills throughout the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years and, as a result of the significant negative impact that her poor teaching performance has upon the quality of education of her students, she must be dismissed from her position.

1. Nancy Mastriana ("Mastriana") has been employed by the Hillsborough Township Board of Education (the "Board") to serve as a full-time teaching staff member in the Hillsborough Township Public School District (the "District") since September 1, 2003. The District provides educational programs and services to students who reside in the Township of Hillsborough from kindergarten through grade twelve.

2. The Board has employed Mastriana as a Special Education/Resource Center teacher at Hillsborough Middle School ("Middle School") throughout the course of her employment with the Board. Mastriana received tenure on or around September 1, 2006.

3. For two consecutive school years, 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, Mastriana's performance was rated partially effective on her summative evaluations, thereby necessitating the filing of the within charge for inefficiency.

4. Joseph Trybulski ("Trybulski") is the Principal of the Middle School and one of Mastriana's supervisors. As such, Trybulski, along with other members of the school improvement panel, is responsible for observing and evaluating Mastriana in her position as the special education teacher.

5. During the 2013-2014 school year, the administrative staff observed and evaluated Mastriana on three separate occasions, specifically on October 29, 2013, January 29, 2014, and March 12, 2014. The first observation, performed by Trybulski, was announced and was a "long" observation (a full period). Leonore Johnston, the Director of Special Services at that time, performed Mastriana's second evaluation, which was also announced, while Trybulski performed her third evaluation (which was unannounced).

6. Near the end of the school year, the District prepared Mastriana's annual summative performance report. When her evaluation was scored, Mastriana received a score of 2.58, which falls within the "partially effective" category. (Exhibit 1). That score was among the lowest in the District.

7. A Teacher Summative Performance Report ("summative report") was discussed and agreed upon by Trybulski and Mastriana for the 2013-2014 school year. In the 2013-2014 summative report, Mastriana was rated as "partially effective" in following performance standards:

a. Professional Knowledge;

b. Instructional Delivery;

c. Assessment of and for Student Learning; and

d. Learning Environment.

Professionalism as it relates to parental communication was also noted as an area for improvement. (Exhibit 1).

8. In the area of professional knowledge, Mastriana inconsistently demonstrated her understanding of appropriate curriculum standards or a full understanding of the subject matter and skills necessary to promote student development. Despite Mastriana's participation in professional development activities, there was an evident lack of fluidity in her demonstration of such knowledge in practice. Mastriana periodically demonstrated lack of understanding of the social, emotional, and psychological needs of her students, thereby, hindering the student development. (Exhibit 1, p. 1).

9. Specifically, during a classroom observation on November 14, 2013, Mastriana failed to recognize elements of a correct response from a student's answer, which went beyond the textbook definition. Instead of building upon the student's answer, Mastriana repeatedly stated that the answer was incorrect and called upon another student who provided an exact textbook definition of "terminal velocity." (Exhibit 2). Mastriana did not demonstrate her ability to build her students' confidence and recognize how their reasoning is connected to the larger themes or terms being used in class.

10. For the 2013-2014 school year, Mastriana received a "partially effective" summative rating in her "instruction delivery." Although Mastriana demonstrated some evidence of her ability to effectively engage students, the effectiveness of her limited instructional methods and strategies was inconsistent across all students and failed to meet their individual learning needs. (Exhibit 1, p. 3-4). During her observation on November 14, 2013, Mastriana utilized Nearpod in efforts to implement the use of technology as part of a 1:1 pilot program, which was ineffective in a small-group setting and created distance between the students and the activity. (Exhibit 2). Trybulski noted in Mastriana's evaluation that she needed to develop "a better understanding of the cognitive and psycho/social needs of students as well as a deeper understanding of the content/skills associated with the curriculum and diversify her instructional strategies to better meet individual needs as well as enhance communications with student/parents that provide more specific, detail and solution-oriented guidance." (Exhibit 1, p. 4).

11. Likewise, Mastriana also demonstrated only partial effectiveness in her "assessment of and for student learning" for the 2013-2014 school year. The sample of assessments provided by Mastriana demonstrated assessment methods of a content area teacher and failed to demonstrate how Mastriana used the data to plan or modify instruction or guide the students' learning and achievement beyond that provided by the content area teacher. (Exhibit 38). Trybulski recommended that Mastriana look for ways to monitor students' progress on specific skills and concepts and report that information to students, parents and content area teachers with specific strategies to assist in remediating or strengthening those skills and concepts over the course of the school year. (Exhibit 1, p. 6).

12. With respect to the "learning environment" in Mastriana's classroom for the 2013-2014 school year, she demonstrated only partial effectiveness due to inconsistency in the classroom dynamics, as well as a lack of appropriate level of enthusiasm, respect, and teamwork. (Exhibit 1, p. 6-7). Additionally, Mastriana demonstrated inconsistency in her ability to establish positive and trusting rapport with all students. Mastriana's failure to establish a positive teacher-student relationship was evidenced in meetings with the Administration, Child Study Team ("CST") and communication with parents and students. During her classroom observation on November 14, 2013, Mastriana was observed to persistently and audibly huff and sigh with each statement that conveyed a sense of boredom, irritation or lack of interest in the lesson. (Exhibit 2). Additionally, at least two parents of students with special needs in Mastriana's classes raised concerns about Mastriana's lack of sensitivity to their children's emotional needs, requiring administrative intervention to assist in re-establishing a trusting relationship between student-teacher and parent-teacher.

13. Although Mastriana managed to achieve an effective rating in the area of professionalism in the 2013-2014 school year, she continued to exhibit weakness in the area of communication with parents. (Exhibit 1, p.7-8). Mastriana demonstrated evident lack of sensitivity, solutions, guidance and accommodations to the problems being presented in her communication with S.F.'s parents. For example, on September 25, 2013, Mastriana e-mailed the following correspondence to S.F.'s parents, which did not lead with a positive as she had been instructed to do:

> We are beginning to see a pattern with [S.F.], and we are beginning to get very concerned. [S.F.] did not bring either of her novels to school today, and was unable to complete the classwork for the day. At this point [S.F.] is chronically forgetting material at home and it is going to negatively impact her progress across the board. I am hoping that you will be able to help her organize her materials every night for the next school day.

Additionally, on October 9, 2013, Mastriana sent the following correspondence to S.F.'s parents, wherein she did not offer any suggestions or solutions to address S.F.'s issues:

> Yes, [S.F.] did not attempt to work on her assignment. It is also frustrating for us because we spend a lot of time with each student commenting on their work, modeling and providing assistance. We are able to see everything each student does on their documents by looking at their revision history… so when [S.F.] tried to tell us she worked on it, but did not finish because she didn't understand we were able to see that she was not being truthful. I am not sure that anything can be done to prevent her from failing her classes if she does not do the work.

Notably, when T.J.M.'s mother reached out to Mastriana to obtain extra help for her son who was struggling in Science class, Mastriana responded with the following (providing no constructive suggestions):

> I am sorry that [T.J.M.] was upset yesterday after school. I spoke to Miss Pierfy yesterday and told her that [T.J.M.] rarely does homework, therefore he is not getting the practice and reinforcement that he needs in order to be successful. I spend a lot of time in support class on the science curriculum reinforcing what was taught in class. Unfortunately I do not offer extra help before or after school. Hopefully this will help.

The examples were consistent with the long-standing issues the Administration had with Mastriana, and demonstrated that Mastriana continued to fail to provide constructive feedback to parents in her role as a support professional for the students. Improvement in the effectiveness of communication with parents was noted as an important area of development for Mastriana, and ultimately became a part of her corrective action plan ("CAP").

14. As a result of Mastriana's "partially effective" summative rating for the 2013-2014 school year, the District developed and implemented an individualized and comprehensive CAP to address the areas noted for improvement. (Exhibit 3). The CAP included multiple demonstrable goals intended to assist Mastriana and facilitate professional development. Specifically, a. Facilitate understanding of social, emotional and psychological needs of her students with special needs;

b. Provide Mastriana with professional development opportunities to enhance student learning;

c. Conduct weekly monitoring of lesson plans to ensure implementation of differentiated strategies in support of students in content area classrooms;

d. Provide mentoring services to assist Mastriana with implementing various instructional strategies that engage students in meaningful activities and are specifically designed for individualized learning; and

e. Encourage Mastriana to systematically gather formative data on student learning and utilize such data to guide instruction, provide timely feedback to students and parents, and promote collaboration with colleagues to improve communication with students and parents.

15. At the conclusion of the 2014-2015 school year, Mastriana failed to successfully accomplish a single demonstrable goal set forth above. (Exhibit 4). In some cases, she inexplicably made zero effort to comply with the CAP requirements, notwithstanding the knowledge that her future employment could be in jeopardy.

16. In her 2014-2015 CAP, Mastriana was responsible to read "Brainstorm: The Power and Purpose of the Teenage Brain" by Dr. Daniel Siegal and provide a reflection on the text as it relates to her teaching practices or engaging students. (Exhibit 3, p. 3). During her interim CAP evaluation in January of 2015, Mastriana only completed one section of the text and provided a one and one-half page bullet point summary of the text for her summative CAP review. (Exhibits 5, 6 and 45). At the summative CAP review on April 28, 2015, Mastriana demonstrated that she read the text, but failed to provide a reflection on the text as to how it relates to her teaching practices as required by the CAP. (Exhibits 4 and 7).

17. At the time of Mastriana's interim CAP evaluation in January of 2015, she did not demonstrate participation in any professional development activities. (Exhibit 5). Although by the end of the school year, Mastriana provided evidence of her participation in professional development opportunities, she provided "limited to no evidence" of specific application of the professional development to her classroom learning strategies, enhancement of student participation, differentiation in instruction or increase in student performance. (Exhibits 4 and 8). Moreover, all of the professional development activities were in the District, and many were required for all teachers—nothing representing any initiative on her part. Although Trybulski recommended that she contact her statewide union for resources, it does not appear that she ever did so, nor did she ever ask Trybulski for either course recommendations or for his input on whether the courses she selected (if any) were appropriate. As such, Mastriana failed to meet her CAP goal of "enhancing student participation, differentiating instruction, or increasing student performance."

18. The 2014-2015 CAP identified "lesson planning" as one of the areas in need of improvement. The four classroom observations throughout the 2014-2015 school year demonstrated Mastriana's mixed attention to lesson planning with inconsistency in the detail and degree of completeness and availability prior to the scheduled lessons. (Exhibits 9, 10, 11 and 12). Mastriana's classroom observations on October 29, 2014, December 11, 2014, February 5, 2015, and April 17, 2015 provided limited and inconsistent evidence of the use of varied instructional strategies that engaged the students in meaningful activities based on individual student needs. (Exhibits 9, 10, 11 and 12). As such, Mastriana failed to successfully complete her assigned goal. Notably, during the interim CAP review, Trybulski emphasized the following recommendation to Mastriana:

> As your assignment this year involves only in-class support, it is particularly important for your lesson planning to indicate the specific actions or areas in which you are addressing student needs reflecting IEP goals and accommodations. It is not clear what differentiates your actions in the classroom from that of a content-specific teacher. Naturally your plans should mirror the content-teacher's objectives and student activities, however, once you have copied and pasted that information, you should then indicate your plans to accommodate and support individual student needs.

Despite the above-stated recommendation, Mastriana failed to demonstrate significant efforts to differentiate herself from the content teacher and clearly define her role in the classroom.

19. As part of her 2014-2015 CAP, Mastriana was responsible to visit the classroom of her mentor, at a minimum, two to three times per marking period for the first three marking periods. (Exhibit 3). The Administration developed this requirement in efforts to facilitate development of strategies and ideas that would enhance meaningful student engagement. During her interim CAP review, Trybulski advised Mastriana of her failure to conduct even a single classroom observation of her mentor. (Exhibit 5). Further, he reminded Mastriana of her responsibility to complete the same. Nevertheless, by the end of the school year, Mastriana still failed to conduct a single classroom observation of her assigned mentor, thereby, completely disregarding her responsibility under the CAP (again with full knowledge that her future employment with the District depended in part on attainment of these goals). Mastriana never offered an excuse or rationale for her admitted failure to achieve this goal. (Exhibit 4).

20. Mastriana also completely failed to meet her 2014-2015 CAP goal of systematically gathering formative data on student learning and using the same to guide instruction and provide timely feedback to student and parents. (Exhibit 4, Exhibit 14). Mastriana did not provide Trybulski with any examples of formative assessment development or use. (Exhibit 4, Exhibit 13). The purpose of this goal was to "promote the use of formative assessments and specific/focused data collection on student behaviors and/or academic progress that could be shared with students to help develop self-monitoring skills, with parents to help inform their support at home, and with teachers/CST to help monitor and inform instruction and program decisions. This was not met." Again, Mastriana provided no justification for her admitted failure to achieve this goal. (Exhibit 4).

21. In accordance with the 2014-2015 CAP, Mastriana was required to collaborate with her mentor and colleagues in developing successful communication approaches, implementing such approaches and discussing their effectiveness with her mentor and supervisor. Special emphasis was placed on improving Mastriana's communication with parents. (Exhibit 3). However, the samples of e-mail communication with parents that Mastriana provided during her mid-year review did not demonstrate her implementation of effective communication strategies that Mastriana's mentor reviewed with her. Trybulski specifically advised Mastriana to start parent communication with "a positive opening regarding the child before addressing concerns" and framing the communication "with positive solutions… so parents understand what we are doing at school to help." Nevertheless, Mastriana's e-mails "often launched bluntly into the problem, detail all of the issues, but fail to provide much in terms of positive behavioral or motivational strategies/solutions." Instead, Mastriana's e-mails demonstrated, for example, the following: "I will continue to give [student] lunch detention for his behaviors, but I am not sure how well he will be prepared for the (test) retake with no notes," or "I just wanted to make you aware of the issues." (Exhibit 3).

22. Mastriana acknowledged the accuracy of the 2014-2015 CAP summative review and did not file a rebuttal statement, despite her right to do same. (Exhibit 3).

23. A Teacher Summative Performance Report ("summative report"), dated June 6, 2015, was prepared for the 2014-2015 school year that evaluated Mastriana's job performance as a special education/resource center teacher for the District. (Exhibit 15). Mastriana's overall rating was determined to be "partially effective." The summative report set forth Mastriana's rating of "partially effective" in the following performance standards:

a. Professional Knowledge;

b. Instructional Planning;

c. Instructional Delivery;

d. Assessment of and for Learning; and

e. Professionalism.

24. The Administration delineated specific evaluative statements regarding Mastriana's inefficiencies for each of the five performance standards set forth in the 2014-2015 summative report. Despite her CAP and the comprehensive support the District provided and made available to Mastriana throughout the school year, her performance and overall summative rating declined for the 2014-2015 school year.

25. Under the individual performance standards of "Professional Knowledge," Mastriana demonstrated inconsistent understanding of the curriculum, content and student development and lacked fluidity in the use of her knowledge. During two of the three formal classroom observations in the 2014-2015 school year, the evaluators could not observe evidence of Mastriana's professional knowledge. (Exhibits 11 and 12). Specifically, Trybulski noted that during the April 17, 2015 observation, professional knowledge was "[n]ot observed" as the "content teacher facilitated the presentation of material, student dialogue and class discussions throughout the period." (Exhibit 12). In other words, Trybulski did not see her actively engage with the students to address the specific and individual needs of the at-risk children she served.

26. With regard to the performance standards of "Instructional Planning," Trybulski noted that although Mastriana's lesson planning tended to improve toward the second half of the school year, she nevertheless demonstrated inconsistency in the "detail and degree to which those plans were complete and made available prior to the lessons." (Exhibit 15). Trybulski further noted that Mastriana demonstrated "limited evidence of best practices/effective strategies, significant modification [in] development of resources beyond those of the content teacher, or collection [and] application of formative data to inform or drive instructional decisions regarding individual needs for student growth on a consistent basis." (Exhibit 15).

a. During the October 29, 2014 formal classroom observation, Trybulski noted that it was not clear "what differentiates [Mastriana's] actions in the classroom from that of a content-specialist teacher." (Exhibit 9). Such observation was notable due to the Mastriana's assignment for the 2014-2015 school year solely as "in-class support." Due to Mastriana's limited assignment, it was particularly important for her to indicate specific actions or areas in which she was addressing student needs, reflecting IEP goals and accommodations, and not merely copy content teacher's objectives and student activities. Additionally, Mastriana's lesson plan document, as initially submitted, was "one long chart spanning over 100 pages" which made it "somewhat difficult to work with." (Exhibit 16).

b. At the completion of the December 11, 2014 formal classroom observation, the improvement panel member, Eloise Stewart ("Stewart"), encouraged Mastriana "to find a way to share [her] lesson plans so they are available for easier access." (Exhibit 10).

c. Mastriana apparently did not fully heed Stewart's advice, because two months later, during the February 11, 2015 formal classroom observation (which Mastriana was aware of in advance), the evaluator, Michael Volpe ("Volpe"), was unable to review the lesson plans for the week; they were not available, and had not been put into the shared Google Drive before the lesson, even though they are required to be consistently available. Volpe also reiterated Trybulski's recommendation that Mastriana differentiates her lesson plans from the ones of a content teacher by finding ways to accommodate and support individual student needs. (Exhibit 11).

27. Mastriana's performance in the performance standards of "Instructional Delivery" declined from the previous school year. The classroom observations on October 29, 2014, December 11, 2014, February 11, 2015, and April 17, 2015 provided "limited" and "inconsistent" evidence of Mastriana's use of varied instructional strategies that would engage students in meaningful activities while simultaneously consider the students' individual needs and advance learning. (Exhibits 9, 10, 11 and 12).

a. During the formal classroom observation on February 11, 2015, Volpe observed and noted the following:

> Ms. Altomari, the classroom teacher, began today's class by giving an overview of the next unit through the end of March… When some students had some difficulty in following the directions to download the textbooks, Ms. Mastriana helped one student step by step to download the textbook. During this time, Ms. Mastriana went to the back of the class to assist a student who was taking a make-up quiz for a brief period. After the students all attempted the download, they were directed to come to the back of the class where they would be discussing eclipses. This was 22 minutes into the period. Ms. Mastriana went to continue to work with the student who was taking the quiz. After helping the student, Ms. Mastriana joined the group in the back of the class where Ms. Altomari was using globes and lights to create shadows on the wall. During this time, Ms. Mastriana watched Ms. Altomari's presentation. With two minutes left, students were told to go back to their seats as they would watch a video about eclipses. A YouTube video was played, but had to get through a commercial before starting. The video then started and was watched for approximately 1 minute and 20 seconds. At that time, the bell rang and students left the class.

Mastriana thus did not demonstrate an effective and efficient use of her time in the classroom, notwithstanding the fact that she was fully aware of Volpe's presence and her prior less than favorable observation reports. As Volpe suggested, the textbook could have been downloaded ahead of time, allowing the students to focus on instruction. Additionally, once Mastriana's immediate assistance was no longer required, she did not proactively engage in the lesson and instead sat in the back of the classroom, passively watching the presentation by the content teacher. Ultimately, Mastriana demonstrated a lack of planning and coordination with her co-leader, resulting in a less than effective lesson.

b. Mastriana's lack of effort to seek out opportunities to engage students using instructional strategies and resources to enhance lessons and overall academic development was evident in all of her formal observations, as expected of an instructional aide, not a certified special education teacher. (Exhibits 9, 10, 11, 12 and 15). According to the evaluator, Mastriana mostly circulated throughout the classroom, "periodically checking on student and quietly addressing questions as needed." (Exhibit 12).

28. In the individual performance standards of "Assessment of and for Student Learning," Mastriana's rating was "partially effective" due to her limited selection of assessment strategies, inconsistent linking of assessments to intended learning outcomes, and lack of use of assessments in planning and modifying instruction. (Exhibit 15).

a. Trybulski provided the following comments regarding Mastriana's performance in the area of assessments of and for student learning:

> [T]here is limited evidence of any systematic approach to gathering, analyzing, or maintaining data on a consistent bas[i]s regarding academic progress or behavioral interventions. A critical role of in-class resource support is to provide for the use of formative assessment and specific/focused data collection on student behaviors and/or academic progress that can in turn be shared with students to help develop self-monitoring skills, with parents to help inform their support at home, and with teachers/CST to help monitor and inform instructional methods and program decisions.

b. Both the February 11, 2015 and April 17, 2015 formal classroom observations produced no evidence of "assessments of and/or for learning" on Mastriana's part. (Exhibits 11 and 12).

29. Mastriana's rating in the performance standards of "Professionalism" also declined from the prior school year. (Exhibits 1 and 15). Although she attended mandatory in-District professional development courses and activities, that all teachers attended, she did not avail herself of any other performance development activities as required by her CAP, there was limited evidence of specific application of any learned strategies to enhance student participation, differentiate instruction, increase student performance or, at the very minimum, demonstrate reflection of such efforts. (Exhibits 8 and 15). Despite the fact that the Administration specifically identified improvement in communication with parents as a focus in Mastriana's 2013-2014 summative performance review and CAP, the examples of communication with parents at the mid-year review reflected "a lack of sensitivity toward providing meaningful resources, strategies or follow-up to address concerns or developing issues." (Exhibits 1, 3 and 15).

a. For example, in October 23, 2014 e-mail correspondence to N.I.'s parents, Mastriana stated the following:

> We have had a couple incidents with [N.I.] today. When he first came to class he asked me to go to the bathroom. I did let him go when he didn't come back for a long time I went and waited for him to come out. While coming out of the bathroom he was putting his phone away. He was gone for 10 minutes. The same thing happened yesterday. We cannot have him out of class for that long so I am not going to allow him to go to the bathroom during period 8.
> When he came back to class he started playing with his empty water bottles creating a lot of noise and distracting the other kids in the class. Mrs. Kiel asked him to put his empty water bottles away. Instead he got up and was walking over to the sink. When I asked him what he was doing he said he was going to fill them up. I told him no and to sit down, and he proceeded to tell me to get out of his way several times. When I refused to move he walked around the table and went and filled his water bottled up.

I am not sure how to handle [N.I.] at this point. Every method I have tried does not seem to work.

[Exhibit 19]. This merely identified problems without providing solutions.

b. Mastriana clearly demonstrated lack of sensitivity and meaningful solutions in her correspondence with N.I.'s parents. Additional e-mails provided by Mastriana, which she submitted as samples of her successful communication with parents, included short confirmation responses regarding parents dropping off their children for extra help. (Exhibit 20). Notably, in Mastriana's final CAP documentation log, she confirmed at the very beginning of the school year, on September 29, 2014, that she discussed proper ways of writing e-mail correspondence to her student's parents with her mentor. Specifically, she documented, "[w]hen writing an email about what the child didn't do or for negative behavior always start the email off with positive opening… [f]rame the email with the problem and a possible solution. This lets the parent know what we are doing at school to help." (Exhibit 14). Notwithstanding the foregoing, Mastriana's correspondence with parents does not demonstrate her implementation of the proper parent communication procedures.

c. The final CAP documentation log created by Mastriana demonstrates that on October 13, 2014, she confirmed that she will be "[s]ending home 1-2 positive emails a week to parents." (Exhibit 14). However, Mastriana failed to provide any evidence of weekly positive communication with the parents.

d. Further, during two separate formal classroom observations, on February 11, 2015 and April 17, 2015, evaluators were unable to ascertain any evidence of professionalism on the part of Mastriana. (Exhibits 11 and 12).

30. Importantly, Mastriana's performance has been declining and in need of improvement as early as the beginning of the 2005-2006 school year and demonstrates a pattern of ineffectiveness and inefficiency. In Mastriana's annual performance report for teaching staff members for the 2005-2006 school year, Trybulski noted the need for improvement in the following three areas: employing instructional methods and materials that are most appropriate for meeting stated objectives, providing activities and experiences to meet the needs, interests and abilities of students, and creating a classroom environment that is conductive to learning and appropriate to the maturity and interests of students. (Exhibit 22). During the January 17, 2006 observation, Mastriana demonstrated lack of preparedness for class by failing to have an actual lesson plan prepared for that day. (Exhibit 23). During the classroom observation, Mastriana also did not provide her students with sufficient time to respond to questions and instead quickly proceeded to call on other students. Mastriana's observer, William Lyons, the Director of Special Services at the time, also recommended for Mastriana to be "more animated," use her voice "to show enthusiasm and excitement," and to "[e]njoy the class." Importantly, he noted that if her "performance continues at this level, a recommendation for future employment in Hillsborough cannot be made." (Exhibit 23). Notably, Mastriana's lack of enthusiasm proceeded to be a concern years after it was first brought to her attention in the 2005-2006 school year.

31. Mastriana's 2006-2007 annual performance evaluation demonstrated the need to improve the area of "questioning," requesting that Mastriana "include questions which elicit the higher level of thinking skills, such as applying, synthesizing, analyzing, and evaluating." Mastriana was also provided with a defined professional improvement plan that would address such need. (Exhibit 24). Nevertheless, as evidenced in Mastriana's more recent 2013-2014 performance evaluation, she continued to have such deficiencies, as she still failed to consistently elicit higher level of thinking from her students, despite the support and guidance provided by the District. (Exhibit 24).

32. In the 2007-2008 annual performance review, Mastriana's supervisor noted the following:

> As demonstrated in your classroom observation this year, there is a definite need to work on better and current planning. Your plans were not reflective of the lesson your supervisor observed and did not show evidence of modifying curriculum and strategies to meet the need of your special education students… I do have some concerns about the role you play as the special education teacher on your team. In December of this school year, the district supervisor of special education issued you an evaluative memorandum reflecting the fact that you had not shared any information with your team about a student who was classified…. I am also very concerned to find that you had not followed through regarding our conversations about a plan to provide support for J.M.R.

Mastriana's lack of preparedness for class and lack of a defined role in the classroom have thus been outstanding concerns for years as well.

Further, Mastriana's 2007-2008 annual evaluation also demonstrated an issue regarding Mastriana's inability or unwillingness to form positive and collaborative relationships with teachers on her team. (Exhibit 25). During the 2007-2008 school year, Mastriana did not establish a "comfortable or positive" relationship with the teachers on her team and was transferred onto a different team to ensure that her relationships with colleagues do not interfere with the students' success. (Exhibit 25). That continued to be an issue, up to and including the 2014-2015 school year, as various teachers requested that Trybulski not pair them with Mastriana.

33. Mastriana's consistent lack of lesson planning and differentiation of instruction was also noted in her 2008-2009 annual performance evaluation. (Exhibit 26). Procedural timelines with specific improvement goals were implemented by the Administration to assist Mastriana in completing lessons plans, developing strategies in motivating disaffected and difficult students, developing an organized system of identifying the classified students on her team, gathering information regarding the students' progress, and achieving specific IEP goals and accommodations. (Exhibits 26 and 42). However, despite the support provided by the District, Mastriana continued to show lack of improvement in the areas specified above.

34. In fact, in the 2009-2010 school year, Mastriana's performance declined even further. (Exhibit 27). The persistent lack of improvement in lesson planning was noted yet again in the 2009-2010 annual performance evaluation. Mastriana failed to timely complete students' progress reports, transition statements, IEP goals and objectives, and present levels of academic achievement and functional performance ("PLAAFP") that are necessary for IEP reviews and parent meetings. (Exhibit 27). The CST issued at least four separate memoranda to Mastriana, addressing her failures to provide timely information. (Exhibits 27 and 28). Additional concerns were expressed regarding Mastriana's "inattentiveness in class, including sleeping, text-messaging and working on the computer during instructional class time" in January of 2010. (Exhibits 29, 30 and 43). Mastriana was once again provided with an improvement plan, developed by the Administration, in efforts to assist Mastriana with her declining performance. Notably, Mastriana's lack of preparedness for class and timely completion of her duties as a special education teacher continued throughout the years and into the most recent 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years.

35. In the 2010-2011 school year, Mastriana continuously failed to demonstrate any improvement in her lesson planning, as evidenced in her annual performance evaluation. (Exhibit 31, Exhibit 44). Despite the administrative support and prior requests for improvement, Mastriana also continuously failed to prepare important records of student progress that are essential for monitoring students' response to intervention and for review of IEP and parent meetings.

36. Despite the Administration's repeated discussions with Mastriana regarding her lack of lesson planning, including by way of a meeting on March 27, 2012 and a follow up notice, Mastriana failed to respond to the notice or post lesson plans as requested. (Exhibits 32 and 33). The lack of lesson planning continued to be a major concern for the 2011-2012 school year. By the 2011-2012 school year, Mastriana "failed to comply with school policy regarding lesson planning… for the past 5 years." (Exhibit 33) (emphasis added). Additionally, despite prior notices and requests, CST members were yet again forced to follow up with Mastriana throughout the school year in efforts to obtain required information for IEP review and development in advance of parental meeting and for proper monitoring and reporting of student progress. (Exhibit 34). In her annual evaluation, Mastriana was once again reminded that her limited attention to District standards for professional responsibilities "places the [D]istrict at risk for procedural violations, including failure to ensure student progress toward IEP objectives and [free and appropriate public education]." (Exhibit 33). The annual evaluation further expressed a concern regarding Mastriana's preparation and engagement in classrooms as well as "unexplained lateness to class or absence from significant portions of ICR classes." (Exhibit 33). Despite the administrative support in efforts to assist Mastriana in improving her performance, she continued to demonstrate an inability or unwillingness to meet the District's standards of professional responsibilities.

37. In her 2011-2012 annual performance evaluation the evaluator noted that, "[Mastriana] ha[d] indicated her participation in the special education PLC meetings, however, [Mastriana] ha[d] provided no evidence of efforts to complete lesson plans in accordance with school and department standards or to develop an organized system of identifying the classified students on team, their specific goals and accommodations, useful strategies for their success, and regularly conveying and gathering information regarding the students' progress with the team. In addition, [Mastriana] made no attempts to meet with the principal as per her PDP for the past 2 years."[2] (Exhibit 33). Notably, in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, Mastriana also indicated participation in professional development, yet failed to demonstrate any evidence of incorporating the learned material into her teaching practice.

38. On June 20, 2011, based upon a recommendation of the Superintendent, the Board took action to withhold Mastriana's employment and adjustment increments for the 2011-2012 school year. (Exhibits 35 and 36). The Board's decision was guided by Mastriana's "overall performance" being "unsatisfactory" and "not reflecting the professional standards expected of the teachers in the [District]." (Exhibit 36). Importantly, Mastriana did not appear before the Board to persuade the Board not to withhold her increments, nor did she ever challenge or appeal the same. Thus, when Mastriana began the 2013-2014 school year, two years later, under the new rubric, she knew that her employment record and evaluations were a major concern—but was still unable or unwilling to change her teaching practices to obtain an evaluation within the effective range.

39. Indeed, although Mastriana's performance temporarily improved following the withholding of her increment, her annual performance evaluation for the 2012-2013 school year demonstrated "continued need of improvement in the level of support of students in the ICR setting, enhanced communication with parents/teachers, and even more significant academic engagement with students during ICR instructional time and during support." (Exhibit 37).

40. In sum, beginning with the 2005-2006 school year, Mastriana's teaching performance began to noticeably decline, as indicated by her annual observations and evaluations. As the District moved towards the adoption of the Common Core State Standards, and began to implement District-wide instructional initiatives, culminating with the full implementation of TEACHNJ and ACHIEVENJ, Mastriana's ineffective and inefficient teaching skills became increasingly evident. In the first full year of ACHIEVENJ implementation, Mastriana earned one of the lowest ratings within the District on the teacher evaluation rubric.

41. Throughout the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, Mastriana demonstrated inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in her teaching skills which deleteriously impacted the education of the students assigned to her.

42. Mastriana's evaluations for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years adhered substantially to the evaluation process.

43. Mastriana has never alleged any mistakes of fact in any of her observation reports or evaluation reports.

44. The instant tenure charges were brought consistent with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, which requires the Superintendent to file them in this circumstance, because of her partially effective ratings in two consecutive years and the absence of any exceptional circumstances warranting the deferral of such charges. In filing these charges, the Superintendent has not given any consideration to political affiliation, nepotism, or union activity, nor is he discriminating against Mastriana in violation of State or federal law, or engaging in other conduct prohibited by law.

45. The District's actions were, at all times, taken in good faith and in no way arbitrary or capricious.

46. Mastriana's continued ineffectiveness, and her unwillingness or inability to improve, constitute inefficiency that warrants her dismissal.

BACKGROUND

Respondent was hired by the Hillsborough Board of Education as a full time teacher in September 2003 after graduating with a B.A. from Temple University the same year. She is certified in teaching both Kindergarten through 12th grade Special Education and Kindergarten through Elementary Education. Since 2003, she has been assigned as an In-Class Support and Resource Room teacher for special education. For a majority of her classes, she co-teaches with another educator. Her main role is to support the special education students in a mainstream classroom. She has worked at the Middle School for the relevant time period.

As part of its implementation of the TEACHNJ Law, the District has adopted the Stronge Teacher Effectiveness Performance Evaluation System (TEPES). The model uses seven performance standards; each comprised of numerous performance indicators to provide evidence of the standard. The seven standards are: 1) Professional Knowledge; 2) Instructional Planning; 3) Instructional Delivery; 4: Assessment of/for Learning; 5) Learning Environment; 6) Professionalism; and 7) Student Progress.

Classroom observations comprise one of the primary methods of data collection to assess teacher performance under the under the model. A minimum of three observations must be completed for each teacher, one of which must be a formal observation. The formal observations include a pre-observation conference in which the teacher has the opportunity to advise the administrator about the lesson to be delivered. In addition, a post observation conference is also conducted to ensure the teacher obtains feedback from the observation. These events are documented in the school's database platform, which is referred to as "OASYS".

The observations themselves are not specifically rated. Rather, they are used as "evidence" for the summative evaluation, along with other sources of data, some of which may be supplied by the teacher.

The specifics of the model, including the scoring rubric, are included in a handbook, which was submitted into the record. The Stronge model was adopted by the District on a pilot basis in 2012-2014 school year and rolled out to the entire school for the 2013-2014 school year. Prior to the roll out, all teachers received an in-service training on the model. In addition, all evaluators receive annual calibration on the model to ensure they are applying the standards correctly.

Respondent received her first observation on October 29, 2013. The observation was conducted by Principal Trybulski. This was a long or 40 minute evaluation. Principal Trybulslki performed the pre-observation conference electronically on October 25, 2013. This included having the Respondent complete the pre-observation conference record where she provided her learning objectives and the materials she intended to use. Following the observation, Trybulski met with Respondent to have a post-observation conference.

Respondent's second evaluation was conducted by then Director of Special Services, Leonore Johnston on January 29, 2014. This was an announced short observation, which included a pre-observation conference. Respondent testified she recalled speaking with Johnston following the observation and the comments were primarily positive.

Respondent received a third observation on March 12, 2014. This was a short unannounced observation which was conducted by Principal Trybulski. The observation contained mostly positive remarks. The results were posted on the database system. Respondent acknowledged the observation, but did not file any comments or responses to the observations.

At the end of the 2013-2014 school year, Dr. Trybulski completed Respondent's summative evaluation. This is the tool used under the model to rate the teacher for the year. All evidence, including the observations conducted during the year, as well as information contained in Respondent's documentation log went into the score. Respondent received a score of 2.58, which is considered Partially Effective Under the rubric. Of the seven indicators, Respondent receive partially effective in the following areas: 1) Professional Knowledge; 2) Instructional Delivery; 3) Learning Environment.

Based upon her 2013-2014 summative evaluation, Respondent received a Corrective Action Plan for the 2014-2015 school year. Under the TEACHNJ regulations, the plan is to be developed between the principal and the teacher in order to provide a roadmap to improvement.

CAP requirements include having the teacher observed by at least two observers during the year and also an additional observation of at least 20 minutes. In addition, the teacher must be given a mid-year evaluation. The written CAP must include a description of the documented deficiencies, timelines for corrective action and a detailed list of responsibilities for both the teacher and the District.

Respondent's CAP was developed by Dr. Trybulski. He testified he shared the plan with Respondent prior to their meeting to provide her with the opportunity to give input into it, but she did not make any comments. Respondent explained that based upon her experience in the school she did not believe Trybulski welcomed any input. Respondent testified she understood the expectations that were set forth in the CAP.

Respondent received her first observation that school year on October 23, 2014. This was an announced observation. The school's records show the pre-observation documentation was submitted online. According to Dr. Trybulski, he offered to meet with Respondent beforehand, but she did not come to see him. Following the observation, Trybulski met with Respondent and then finalized his report.

Dr. Stewart conducted Respondent's second observation on December 2, 2014. As this was an unannounced observation, no pre-observation was conducted. Following the observation, Dr. Stewart conducted a post observation conference with Respondent. Respondent had access to the observation before the conference. According to Dr. Stewart, Respondent acknowledged and demonstrated she understood the concerns expressed in the observation report. Respondent did not file any objections to the observation.

According to Dr. Trybulski, he contacted Respondent on January 5, 2015 to meet with her regarding her mid-year evaluation. At that time, he requested Respondent provide him documentation regarding her progress with her CAP. Trybulski did not receive the type of material he expected and requested she provide additional documentation.

Trybulski reviewed the material and a document meant to summarize his assessment of her progress. He shared this plan with Respondent prior to their meeting. Specifically, Trybulski found Respondent failed to make any progress toward her participation in professional development to enhance student learning. He noted she failed to include specific strategies in her lesson plan, as required by her CAP, to show specific strategies to show improvement. She failed to to meet with her mentor teacher. She also did not show evidence of systematic gathering of formative data to guide instruction and give feedback to parents.

The areas where Trybulski noted some progress included implementation of varied instructional strategies; 2) her book study project on the teenage brain; and 3) meeting with her mentor teacher to discuss enhancing communication skills with parents.

Respondent received her third observation on February 11, 2015. This was an unannounced observation conducted by Human Resources Director Volpe. Volpe testified that he stayed longer than the planned short observation because of the nature of her assignment. According to Volpe, he was surprised by Respondent's performance (she watched a presentation with the students) and offered Respondent the opportunity to have an additional observation if she believed this observation did not properly reflect her performance. Respondent did not object to this observation report either in writing or verbally when she met with Volpe.

Dr. Trybulski conducted a fourth observation of Respondent on April 7, 2015. This was an unannounced observation, and therefore, only a post observation conference was held. Respondent acknowledged the observation and did not file any written or verbal comments.

Dr. Trybulski also met with Respondent on April 28, 2015 to review her CAP. Trybulski testified that as of that date, she had not made any meaningful progress toward her CAP. She did not meet any of the four goals laid out under the plan. Trybulski testified Respondent had not attended any professional development in the areas they discussed, nor had she observed her mentor teacher. Respondent did not note any problems she had in achieving these goals.

Respondent's summative evaluation was prepared on June 3, 2015. At that time, she received a score of 2.54 on her summative evaluation, which is considered partially effective under the rubric. Respondent and her Union Representative Mr. Goodhue requested the opportunity for her to upload additional documentation to be considered. Dr. Trybulski testified he reviewed all of the documentation submitted, but it did not impact her evaluation score.

As a result, the District filed charges of inefficiency against Respondent in accordance with TEACHNJ.

Positions of the Parties

Position of the Board

The Board maintains it has complied with the statutory requirements to sustain charges of inefficiency under TEACHNJ. It notes the legislature specifically limits arbitrators' decision making authority to determine whether one of four factors materially effected the outcome of the evaluation. In so doing, the arbitrator is prohibited from questioning the evaluator's determination of the quality of instruction; thus the arbitrator must determine the case based solely upon the factors noted. To that end, the Board maintains there is no evidence it did not substantially comply with the evaluation procedure, made a mistake of fact in the evaluation or was arbitrary or capricious.

According to the Board, it has demonstrated substantial adherence to the evaluation process during both the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. With respect to 2013-2014, it notes the District adopted the Stronge TEPES model, which was one of the evaluation rubrics specifically approved by the Department of Education as compliant with its regulations. According to the Board, the record evidence shows all evaluators were trained and calibrated under the model and all teachers were provided in-service training to ensure their understanding of the procedures.

With respect to the evaluation process, it maintains the record evidence shows Respondent was observed at least three times and at least once each semester in accordance with the regulations. It notes two of her observations were announced and preceded by an electronic pre-observation conference which is allowable under the regulations. Post observation conferences followed the observations and the record evidence shows, the Board maintains, Respondent was provided feedback regarding the observation and the opportunity to dispute any of the findings.

With respect to the 2014-2015 school year, the Board argues the record evidence also demonstrates substantial adherence to the evaluation process. It notes that it developed a CAP for her as required by Section 6A:1-02.5(a)-(e); conducted at least four observations of her using multiple observers as required by statute; and ensured she received a mid-year evaluation.

The Board argues the Board timely met with Respondent to review her performance under the CAP in February 2015 at which time her deficiencies were explicitly stated. They included failure to demonstrate progress toward participating in professional development to enhance student learning; failed to include specific strategies in lesson plans; failed to visit the classroom of her mentor teacher; and failed to show evidence of gathering formative data to guide instruction. It notes Dr. Trybulski met with Respondent to discuss these issues and provided resources for her to meet these goals.

The Board cites Respondent's 2014-2015 summative evaluation and end of year failure to meet the standards of her CAP as the basis for her end of year partially effective rating. It notes Respondent was provided the opportunity to raise any issues regarding her observations or provide any documentation to show her compliance with the CAP, which she never did. It notes Respondent's only explanation was, that it was pointless to dispute his assertions. The Board maintains that any minor deviations did not impact substantial compliance with the process. It argues that although the pre-observation conferences were electronic, Respondent was provided the opportunity to meet with Dr. Trybulski but declined.

The Board notes the goals set in her CAP were clear and Respondent acknowledged understanding them. According to the Board, the summative evaluation was made based upon the classroom observations that were conducted, as well as the documentary evidence provided by Respondent and gathered in preparation for the evaluation. It argues Respondent had the opportunity to achieve an effective rating, even if she failed to meet all the terms of the CAP.

The Board noted that recent arbitrator decisions support the conclusion that it adhered to the procedures and that Respondent failed to meet her burden to demonstrate that any such action or inaction materially affected the outcome of her evaluation.

The Board notes the only evidence of "mistakes of fact" in either her 2013-2014-2015 evaluations were not material. It argues during the hearing, Respondent raised only three things she characterized as "mistakes of fact". First, was the comment in her observation that she huffed or sighed audibly because of frustration. It argues she did not dispute whether she sighed, but only that it was not out of frustration for the students. The Board notes the observation was that the sighing appeared this way to the reviewer. It notes that it was therefore not a mistake of fact, but even if it were considered to be one, there is no evidence it would have materially affected the outcome of her overall evaluation.

Second, it notes Respondent claimed that concerns about her lack of sensitivity to her students and failure to provide a safe and supported environment were never brought to her attention. The Board argues that she never took issue with these allegations until after charges were filed against her. The Board notes it has provided extensive documentation of her email communication with parents to support this conclusion.

As to the 2014-2015, Respondent raised only one mistake of fact, that her lesson plans were not readily available. The Board contends there was evidence to support this observation, but that even if it did constitute a mistake of fact, there is not evidence it materially affected the outcome of her evaluation.

The Board argues the evidence shows the Board adhered to the evaluation process by observing Respondent at least three times and at least once per semester. It argues two of the Position of Respondent

Respondent argues the charges must be dismissed because the Board cannot meet its burden to demonstrate it has complied with the evaluation process as required by TEACHNJ. It maintains there is a paradox raised by Respondent's receiving a highly effective rating for student achievement for both years at issue while being rated partially effective for the year. It avers that Respondent's partially effective ratings, therefore, are based on serious flaws in the evaluation process which require the charges to be dismissed.

First, Respondent contends the Board failed to comply with the law and regulations applicable to the teacher evaluation process. Specifically it maintains, the record evidence shows: a) the Board of Education did not approve an evaluation rubric prior to the 2014-2015 school year; b) the Board could not confirm whether all teachers were notified of the evaluation procedures adopted by the Board of Education for both school years at issue; c) the Board could not confirm whether the District notified the Department of Education of the instruments that would be used in connection with the District's evaluation rubric or the 2014-2015 school year; and d) the Board could not provide evidence it certified to the Department of Education that its observers met the necessary statutory requirements as required by law. Respondent maintains these were material deficiencies. It maintains that after four days of testimony, the Board failed to show what exactly the "Stronge Model" is. Given the Board's failure to follow the law, Respondent maintains it cannot ask the undersigned to presume its subjective assessments of Respondent's performance are correct.

Secondly, Respondent maintains the Board improperly evaluated Respondent as if she were a general education teacher. Respondent maintains her role as an in-class support teacher is distinct in that she plays a supporting role in a "one teach, one support" co-teaching model. As a result, it argues, even Principal Trybulski recognized that her unique role gave her limited opportunity to demonstrate her mastery of the TEPES. However, it argues, Trybulski admitted he did not expand his observation and he chose to evaluate Respondent when observing another teacher who was also on a CAP the same year. As such, Respondent did not have the opportunity to demonstrate her skills.

Third, Respondent argues the Board's 2013-2014 evaluation was premised on a mistake of fact, which materially impacted her score. It notes her evaluation was premised on the score Respondent received for "Learning Environment" which Principal Trybulski wrote "students who did not feel safe, supported, understood or respected by Ms. Mastriana." However, Respondent argues there is no evidence for this claim. It notes no one mentioned this to her throughout the year. Trybulski justified this with mention of only one student and the allegations were vague. Respondent argues there is no competent evidence to support this allegation and therefore given how close Respondent came to receiving an effective rating, it is clear this materially impacted her score.

Fourth, Respondent argues the Board acted arbitrarily and capriciously when it evaluated Respondent poorly for failing to provide extra help. It cites Trybulski's testimony that Respondent's 2013-2014 summative evaluation was affected because she did not offer "before or after school help during the school year. It argues there was no contractual obligation to offer such help and, therefore, it cannot be a factor for scoring an evaluation. Moreover, it argues Respondent was never aware that this was an expectation. It maintains it was an unfair expectation to arbitrarily require, especially since she had child care issues to attend to before and after school.

Finally, Respondent argues the Board failed to follow the CAP provided to Respondent. Specifically, the CAP required Principal Trybulski to work with Respondent - yet he never met with her to discuss the content and ideas generated from the book assignment given to her, never took any meaningful steps to identify appropriate professional development resources and gave her no feedback and failed to take the initiative to arrange coverage for her to observe her mentor teacher. Moreover, it argues, Trybulski never conducted additional observations as specified in the CAP.

Decision

After carefully considering the entire record before me, including my assessment of witness credibility and the probative value of evidence, I find the Board has met its burden under the statute to sustain the charges of inefficiency against Respondent. My reasons follow.

Charges of inefficiency are specifically governed by TEACHNJ, which not only provides specific requirements for the teacher evaluation process, but also the limits the decision-making authority of the arbitrator in the process. To that end, the statute provides that in rendering a decision, an arbitrator "shall only consider whether or not"

1 The employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
2 There is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
3 The charges would not have been brought but for the consideration of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or 4 The district's actions were arbitrary or capricious.

The statute prohibits the arbitrator from reviewing the evaluator's qualitative determination of an employee's classroom performance. If the arbitrator finds that none of the above factors were either present or materially affected the outcome of the evaluation, "the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the Board and the employee shall be dismissed." N.J.S.A. C.18A:6-17.2 23.b

The credible record evidence shows Respondent received partially effective summative evaluation ratings in the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. The 2013-2014 summative evaluation resulted from a record of three observations, documentation from Respondent's documentation log and results from Respondent's students in meeting their School Growth objective. The 2014-2015 summative evaluation was based upon four observations performed with at least two different reviewers, documentation including a CAP, and the student achievement score, made up her Student Growth Objective.

Respondent's contentions that the Board failed to adhere to the regulations regarding the evaluation process is not supported by the credible record evidence. I credit Dr. Schiff's testimony the Board approved the evaluation policy submitted by the District, which specifically referenced the evaluation rubric used by the District. Of course, it was the same rubric used the year before. Thus, I find no basis to find it was not properly approved.

Likewise, I find insufficient record support to find that teachers failed to be notified of the evaluation procedure as required under the statute. Both Dr. Trybulski and Dr. Schiff testified the entire staff received a one-day training session on the new evaluation procedures at the start of the 2013-2014 school year. The record evidence included a letter issued by Dr. Schiff advising the staff of the training and Respondent acknowledged receiving in-service training.

In addition, I find no merit to the claim that the Board failed to satisfy whether the District certified to the Department of Education that the District Observers met the necessary statutory requirements. I credit Dr. Trybulski and Dr. Stewart regarding the training they received, including ensuring they were properly calibrated. They both described receiving training in the each of the standards and scoring a mock evaluation in each standard.

Finally, I note the model adopted by the District is one of the four evaluation models specifically approved by the Department of Education. Thus, even if any particular element were not satisfied to the letter under the statute (i.e., a timeline failed to be met), it is clear that the model used complies with the statutory requirements for the evaluation process and, I find no basis for determining any technical violation existed which materially affected Respondent's evaluation during the relevant time period.

I find no record support for Respondent's allegations the Board improperly evaluated her as a general education teacher rather than as an in-class support teacher. Respondent bases its contention upon a comment made in her October 23, 2014 evaluation by Dr. Trybulski. He noted the lesson he observed was driven mainly by the content teacher and because Respondent's assignment that year was as an in-class support teacher, additional short observations might be necessary in order to gather evidence on all seven indicators.

I do not Trybulski's comment to reflect a difference in the procedural standards applied to Respondent in the evaluation process. No such distinction exists in the statute or the Stronge evaluation model. In fact, Dr. Trybulski testified the same standards of evaluation are applied to all teachers. Susan Eckstein provided numerous examples of how Respondent, as a co-teacher in special education could meet all of the standards. She noted co-teaching requires planning and cooperation between the teachers. Such planning and cooperation would ensure Respondent being able to implement specific strategies such as using various assessment tools, such as exit tickets, which were indicated in her CAP.

While Dr. Trybulski acknowledged he did not increase the number of times Respondent was observed, Respondent was observed in accordance with the standards required under the statute. Moreover, the record evidence shows Respondent's 2014-2015 summative evaluation contained evidence of all seven indicators. As a result, I find no material deficiency in the evaluation process.

There is insufficient record support to substantiate Respondent's contention that her 2013-2014 summative evaluation was based on a mistake of fact, as alleged. Respondent argues her 2013-2014 summative evaluation rating of partially effective in the Learning Environment standard is mistakenly premised upon an allegation that students did not feel safe and supported by her. However, I credit Dr. Trybulski's testimony. He testified more than one parent expressed concerns to him regarding Respondent's insensitivity in class. He noted this was a specific concern in her CAP and assigned Respondent work with Ms. Eckstein on these issues. Ms. Eckstein testified she addressed these issues with Respondent directly. Given this evidence, I do not find there was a mistake of fact in Respondent's evaluation.

The record evidence also does not support Respondent's contention the District acted arbitrary and capricious by evaluating Respondent poorly for failing to provide extra help 2013-2014 school year. I note the issue was not cited in Respondent's summative evaluation. Rather, Respondent's CAP included a requirement to provide additional help to students outside of classroom hours. On cross-examination Dr. Trybulski testified that he considered it an element of professionalism and noted that there were many things teachers were required to do outside their school day.

I note Respondent fulfilled this aspect of her CAP and did not grieve it as being outside the scope of her duties. Moreover, while Trybulski testified that he considered this an aspect of professionalism, I did not find his testimony to indicate that it materially affected her 2013-2014 evaluation.

Finally, I do not find record evidence showing the District failed to follow its obligations under the CAP. While Dr. Trybulski did not meet with Respondent to discuss the book assignment given to Respondent, she met with Ms. Eckstein regarding this assignment.

As noted in prior arbitration decisions, the CAP is a two-way street with obligations falling to both parties. In this case, the evidence shows Respondent was specifically advised to seek out professional development opportunities to assist with enhancing student participation, and differentiated instruction. Dr. Trybulski testified he discussed with Respondent the various places where she could find such courses. Respondent never identified such opportunities, nor did she advise her supervisor of any difficulties she had in finding these resources.

Likewise, I find no basis for Respondent's contention the District took no action in arranging substitute coverage for Respondent to observe her mentor teacher. The record evidence shows Dr. Trybulski specifically advised Respondent he would provide her such time. However, Respondent testified she never asked Dr. Trybulski. There is no evidence to suggest he would not have provided her such time, especially since it was a CAP requirement. Here, the evidence demonstrates Respondent failed to take responsibility and comply with its requirements.

Finally, I return to Respondent's most compelling argument - how close she came each year to being rated Effective in both of the relevant school years. The record evidence shows her students were succeeding and yet she failed to achieve an effective rating. However strange this may seem, the legislature determined the weight that student achievement should play in a teacher's rating and the type of review to which the evaluation process is subject. Having found none of the statutory factors present that would materially impact Respondent's evaluations in either 2013-2014 or 2014-2015 school years, the undersigned is required by statute to uphold her termination from service.

SYNOPSIS

In these consolidated matters, petitioner K.B. – on behalf of her five minor children – appealed the determination of the respondent Board that her children did not reside in Branchburg when they attended the Township of Branchburg Schools from November 2014 to June 2015, and therefore petitioner owed tuition for the period of ineligible attendance; the Board subsequently filed a petition, consolidated herein, seeking tuition reimbursement from K.B.'s ex-husband, C.U. – the father of the five children. C.U. never submitted an answer to the Board's petition.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: In 2012, K.B. and C.U. entered into a joint legal and physical custody agreement which stipulated that K.B. would be the parent of primary residence for purposes of determining school districts; at the time of the custody agreement, both parents resided in Branchburg; in November 2014, C.U. relocated his domicile to Bridgewater Township; as of the beginning of the 2014-2015 school year, all five children remained enrolled in Branchburg schools, but – commencing no later than November 2014 – all of the children began residing continuously and exclusively with C.U. at his residence in Bridgewater; a court order dated February 4, 2013 sets forth a new custody arrangement, whereby legal custody is shared between the parents and physical custody continues with the father, C.U.; the children remained enrolled in Branchburg schools until the end of the school year in June 2015, when they were withdrawn; K.B.'s domicile changed in November 2014 when she relocated to a trailer in Long Valley; there is ample evidence that petitioner was not domiciled in Branchburg from November 2014 to June 2015; and the testimony of K.B. was lacking in credibility, as she was not forthcoming with information about her actual domicile as of November 2014. The ALJ concluded that petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence that she was domiciled in the Branchburg Township School District from November 2014-2015; further, C.U. has failed to file an answer to the Board's petition despite numerous notices; accordingly, the Board's request for a default judgment was granted. The ALJ ordered K.B.'s petition dismissed and granted the Board's default order for tuition reimbursement.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. The Commissioner directed K.B. and C.U. to reimburse the Board for tuition in the amount of $ 54,966.16.

The record of these consolidated matters and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner K.B. filed exceptions and the Board filed a reply thereto.[1]

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding that K.B. failed to sustain her burden of establishing that she was a domiciliary of Branchburg from November 2014 to June 2015. The Commissioner further agrees with the ALJ's conclusion that the minor children were, therefore, not entitled to a free public education in the District's schools during this time.

[1] Petitioner K.B.'s exceptions were not timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, so they were not considered by the Commissioner. As K.B.'s exceptions were not considered, the Board's reply was also not considered.

Additionally, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding that respondent C.U. is in default due to his failure to file an answer or otherwise respond to the petition. The Commissioner notes that C.U. was directed to file an answer on numerous occasions – including May 14, June 9, and August 7, 2015 – and was informed that if he failed to do so, each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and the matter may be decided on a summary basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e).[2] C.U. did not file an answer, nor did he appear for any telephone conference or hearing at the OAL. As such, the Board's claim that C.U. should be assessed tuition for the period of his children's ineligible attendance in the District is deemed admitted.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b, the Commissioner shall assess tuition against K.B. and C.U. for the time period during which the minor children were ineligible to attend school in Branchburg. Therefore, the Board is entitled to tuition reimbursement in the total amount of $54,966.16 ($78.59 per day for 139 days for A.U., G.U., B.U., and T.U. and $81.08 per day for 139 days for A.U.) for the time period from November 2014 to June 2015.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted – for the reasons expressed therein – as the final decision in this matter. K.B. and C.U. are directed to reimburse the Board in the amount of $54,966.16 for tuition costs incurred during the time period that the minor children were ineligible to attend school in Branchburg.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner K.B. ("petitioner"), on behalf of her minor children A.U., G.U., B.U., A.U., and T.U., appeals the determination of respondent Township of Branchburg Board of Education ("Board" or "respondent") that the children did not reside in the Branchburg Township School District when they attended the District's schools from November 2014 to June 2015, and the Board's assessment of tuition for the period of the students' ineligible attendance in the schools of the District, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. The Board filed a petition seeking tuition reimbursement from K.B.'s ex-husband, C.U., the father of the five children.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 26, 2015, the Board conducted a hearing to determine the district of residence of petitioner's children A.U., G.U., B.U., A.U. and T.U. Both K.B. and her ex-husband C.U. attended. On March 30, 2015, the Board determined that the children were not eligible to attend school in Branchburg based on their alleged residency in Bridgewater since November 2014. Petitioner K.B. filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education challenging the Board's determination on April 23, 2015. The Commissioner transmitted the petition to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on May 15, 2015 for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The Board answered and filed a counterclaim for back tuition for the period of ineligible attendance. On August 27, 2015, the Board filed a motion for summary decision seeking dismissal of the petition and back tuition. On September 17, 2015, petitioner filed opposition to the motion. On September 21, 2015, I received the Board's reply to petitioner's opposition. I denied the motion for summary decision by Order dated September 22, 2015.

The hearing was scheduled for September 30, 2015, to determine residency as well as tuition, if proven to be owed. However, that date was adjourned due to the Board's filing a petition against C.U. for back tuition owed. That petition was consolidated with that of K.B. C.U. never answered the petition and never participated in any of the telephone conferences that we had regarding the case. A new hearing date of December 9, 2015, was scheduled. Prior to the hearing, on October 19, 2015, K.B. filed a motion to dismiss under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1.1, supplementing a previous statute she had sent without legal argument, explaining that she would have asserted the argument earlier had she known of the existence of the statute. I also received documents from the Department of Children and Families, Division of Child Protection and Permanency, released to me for my in camera review pursuant to N.J.S.A. 9:6-8.10(b). On November 13, 2015, I issued an Order denying petitioner's motion to dismiss. In the Order, I set forth the reasons that I would not find in her favor under the "family-crisis" exception set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-2(h)(1). The Order explains why I would not consider evidence regarding "family crises" at the hearing.

On December 9, 2015, I heard the case and closed the record, except that I gave Mr. Rubin two weeks to submit a formal request for default judgment against C.U., since C.U. never answered the Board's petition against him. I received the materials supplementing the oral request on December 11, 2015.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The following facts are undisputed, according to the pleadings submitted by the parties.

1. K.B. and C.U. are the mother and father of five children, A.U., T.U., G.U., B.U. and A.U.

2. K.B. and C.U. entered into a Separation and Property Settlement Agreement on June 5, 2012, providing for joint legal and physical custody of their children and shared living arrangements whereby the children would reside with each parent roughly half-time every week. The agreement provided that K.B. shall be the parent of primary residence for purposes of determining school districts. (Exhibit R-7.)

3. The Agreement provided, "The parties shall have joint legal and physical custody of the parties' minor children. The wife shall be the parent of primary residence for purposes of determining school districts as it is agreed that the parties' son [T.U.] has special needs." (Exhibit R-7 at 2.)

4. When the Agreement was entered into in 2012, both K.B. and C.U. resided in Branchburg, at different addresses, and all five children were enrolled in the Branchburg Township School District.

5. As of the commencement of the 2014–2015 school year, K.B. owned a residence at 451 B. Court in Branchburg.

6. In November 2014, C.U. relocated his domicile to Bridgewater Township in the Bridgewater–Raritan Regional School District.

7. As of the commencement of the 2014–2015 school year, all five children remained enrolled in Branchburg, including T.U., a special education student placed by Branchburg at an out-of-district special education school. Commencing no later than November 2014, all five children began residing continuously and exclusively with C.U. at his residence in Bridgewater.[2]

8. On March 3, 2015, the Board's counsel gave written notice to K.B. and C.U. of the District's preliminary determination that their children were not eligible to attend school in Branchburg because they no longer resided there, and that a hearing would be conducted before the Board on March 26, 2015, if either parent wished to contest that determination. (Exhibit A to respondent's motion for summary decision.)

9. In February 2015, storm-related damage forced K.B. to relocate to a residence outside of Branchburg temporarily so that repairs could be made. She had no water in the house during the damage repair.

10. An August 10, 2012, court order (Exhibit F to respondent's motion) continues legal and physical custody with C.U. K.B. is given weekly visitation with the children, supervised by the New Jersey Division of Child Protection and Permanency (DCPP).

11. The most recent court order, dated February 4, 2013, (Exhibit C to respondent's motion) sets forth that legal custody is shared between K.B. and C.U. and physical custody continues with C.U. K.B. has visitation with the children on a weekly basis under the supervision of the DCPP.

12. During the pendency of the appeal, all five children continued to reside continuously and exclusively with C.U. in Bridgewater until the end of the 2014–2015 school year in June 2015, when they were withdrawn from Branchburg.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner testified that she and her ex-husband, C.U., separated in January 2011. On January 24, 2011, she sent an email to the Branchburg Township School District saying that C.U. was going to Afghanistan. In February 2011 she sent an email to then principal of Whiton Elementary School Rebecca Gensel, advising that her ex-husband was threatening her in connection with their breakup. Their relationship had been difficult, and she was letting Ms. Gensel know that it was hard on the children. On November 7, 2011, C.U. returned from Afghanistan and their relationship deteriorated.

Petitioner testified that, as of January 2013, she no longer received any documents from the Whiton School, and when she asked to see any work of her children the teachers ignored her requests. She did not have physical custody of the children in January 2013. They were living in Bridgewater and going to Branchburg schools. The Branchburg house was in foreclosure at the time. Petitioner and her family were not able to live in the house between February 9 and April 9, 2015, because pipes had frozen in the home and they were waiting for the contractor to agree with the insurance estimate. All of her mail still went to Branchburg, including her utility bills, life insurance and credit cards. Petitioner testified that the District knew that the children were living in Bridgewater and going to school in Branchburg. Her ex-husband has moved four times since returning from Afghanistan.

A.U. actually did not live with his father, but lived with his paternal grandparents. The other children never see him. The Order of foreclosure on the Branchburg house is pending execution. Petitioner testified that she still owns it. She has been fighting for three and a half years to get her children back.

On cross-examination, petitioner testified that she and her husband owned the Branchburg property and moved there in 2004. The deed was changed over to her, apparently due to divorce. C.U. stopped living in the house in January 2011, first living with his parents at their home in Branchburg and then being deployed. C.U. moved to his present address in Bridgewater in November 2014 with all five children. K.B. noted that in response to requests for admissions, she conceded that "At no time, from November 2014 through the conclusion of the 2014–2015 school year in June 2015 did any of [her] five children reside in Branchburg." (R-5; R-6.) Rather, they resided exclusively with C.U. at his residence in Bridgewater. Petitioner testified that she lived in Branchburg up until February 2015. After repairs were completed on her home, she went back and forth between Long Valley and Branchburg. She entered into a lease for property and a trailer in Long Valley in November 2014. This was the same month that the children moved in with their father. She was in the process of selling their house in Branchburg, and found a property that she could afford. By the date she entered the contract of sale on the Branchburg home, which was determined to be February 9, 2015, mortgage foreclosure proceedings had started. The short-sale contract of February 9, 2015, was canceled. The final judgment of foreclosure was entered on March 18, 2015, and a Writ of Execution was issued on the same day. (R-12; R-13.) Petitioner reiterated that she lived in the house up until February 2015. In May 2015, she decided that it was time to move on and stopped living in the Branchburg home altogether. She did not report to the Board that her domicile became Long Valley in May 2015. The grandparents of A.U. were never declared his legal guardians.

Petitioner further testified on cross-examination that she believes that the Separation and Property Settlement Agreement dated June 7, 2012, is still in effect. (R-7.) When asked why the children are not enrolled in the Long Valley School District in accord with that agreement, she said that she has legal custody, but she cannot enroll them. She denied that there was a subsequent court order, but said that she cannot enroll them in Long Valley because C.U. does not abide by any court order. Paragraph three of the June 2012 agreement establishes that they share physical custody equally and that the wife shall be the parent of primary residence for purposes of determining school districts. In July 2012, they did not abide by the agreement. Petitioner's son almost drowned, and the court issued an order that the children would live exclusively with their father. However, she disagrees that the August 10, 2012, Court Order overrides the June 2012 agreement as to who is the parent of primary residence. (R-4.) The August 10, 2012, Court Order gives legal and physical custody to C.U. The Board had the August 2012 Court Order at the residency hearing on March 26, 2015, and the next day, K.B. emailed Mr. Rubin "a more recent court order" dated February 4, 2013, returning legal custody to both K.B. and C.U. but maintaining physical custody with C.U. (R-3.) She sent it because there was a mistake in the prior Order of August 2012 that said she did not have legal custody. She believes that the Property Settlement Agreement, paragraph three, is still in effect regardless of the Orders acquired by the DCPP. Despite that, once she moved out of Branchburg, she never filed an application to enforce the perceived requirement to have the children attend school in Long Valley. She testified that C.U. would fight her on that. She does not recall having a conversation with Ms. Suarez from the Branchburg Township School District in November 2014 following an IEP meeting regarding her son.

Carolyn Suarez testified that she is the secretary for Student Services in the Branchburg Board of Education. She worked under Carol Webb, director of Student Services. She testified that petitioner's son T.U. had an individualized education program (IEP) that placed him in an out-of-district school, the Midland School in North Branch. In November 2014 she received a call from the Midland School asking who would be attending the IEP meeting, and she told them that it would be Ms. Webb. Two weeks after that, she received a call from petitioner, who was very upset because she had not been notified of the meeting. Petitioner said that she had wanted to be there, but she had no knowledge of it. After the IEP meeting, Ms. Suarez sent a copy of the IEP to petitioner and C.U. at the Branchburg address on file. Petitioner said that she did not get a copy of the IEP. Ms. Suarez verified the Branchburg address and petitioner said, no, she was living in Long Valley. Ms. Suarez then made a copy of the IEP and mailed it to her at her Long Valley address. Petitioner never made a subsequent call to say that she was not living in Long Valley. She also recalled petitioner calling when C.U. had withdrawn the children from Branchburg to enroll them in Bridgewater. Petitioner was upset because she wanted them to stay in Branchburg.

James Butler testified that he is a residency investigator. He visited petitioner's Branchburg residence on March 17, 2015 (R-18), and in May 2015. Mr. Butler testified, referring to his certification, that when he went to the residence on March 17, 2015, two people were working and invited him in. They said that they were friends of petitioner, and were there making repairs to the water-damaged bathroom. There was no furniture in the home. He looked in the mailbox, which was full, and he surmised that the mail had not been picked up in a long time. He looked into the garage windows and the garage was also empty. In May 2015, he checked to see if anyone was living in the house. He looked in and saw nothing in the home. He rang the doorbell, but no one was living there. He returned in November 2015 to see if the house was occupied. It was not.

Carol Webb testified that she is the director of Student Services and the residency officer. She testified that she was present at the Board hearing, and the description of the parents' testimony in the hearing decision was accurate. (R-2.) At the hearing, petitioner would not explain why the children had not been residing with her at all since November 2014, even before she was forced to vacate the Branchburg home in February 2015, saying the information was private. Ms. Webb testified that she first saw the Separation and Property Settlement Agreement after the residency hearing. Petitioner did not mention it during the Board hearing.

Ms. Webb testified that the certified per-pupil cost for tuition-adjustment purposes for the 2013-2014 school year was $14,147 for grades one to five, and $14,594 for grades six to eight. (R-16.) The 2014-2015 figures had not been certified at the time of the hearing, but Ms. Webb testified that they did not go down. She testified that petitioner's triplets were in fourth grade, T.U. was in fifth grade out of district, and A.U. was in seventh grade. The children were in school 139 days, from November 2014 to June 2015, during which they were not living in the Branchburg School District. The statute does not speak to how tuition is to be calculated when a student is placed out of the district. Ms. Webb testified that if a parent's property-settlement agreement were the basis of his or her claim to residency in the district, she would expect the parent to submit it.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The determination of domicile requires that I make credibility determinations with regard to the critical facts. For testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963).

I found petitioner to be lacking in credibility due to the fact that her testimony did not "hang together" well with the other evidence in the hearing. Petitioner never mentioned that she bought another residence in November 2014 until pressed on cross-examination. Her testimony that it was just coincidence that she entered into a lease for property and a trailer in Long Valley at the same time that C.U. took the children to live with him in Bridgewater is simply unbelievable. She no longer needed the big Branchburg house to live in all by herself. Further, Wells Fargo Bank had already initiated proceedings against C.U., giving further reason to leave the Branchburg property and not return. It bears mentioning that pipes often freeze when a home is uninhabited in cold weather. In contrast, I found Ms. Suarez completely credible. She has no motive to fabricate that she talked to petitioner about her son's IEP and that petitioner told her that she lived in Long Valley. Not only did she have the conversation, but she took action to change petitioner's address to Long Valley. Petitioner never changed it back to Branchburg, even before the pipes froze in February 2015, and not after the house was fixed in April 2015. Petitioner did not refute any of Ms. Suarez's testimony, saying only that she did not recall. Similarly, I found Mr. Butler credible. His testimony was also supported by the other evidence in the case, and was inconsistent only with the testimony of petitioner, who seeks to persuade that despite the house being empty in March 2015, she intended to return to live there. Similarly, Ms. Webb was credible in her testimony that petitioner did not bring up the property-settlement agreement at any time prior to the determination being made that her children did not reside in the Branchburg Township School District. Although petitioner claims that her lack of knowledge of the statute was the reason she waited to raise the issue of the property-settlement language, she was less than forthcoming with all of the information in this case.

Based on my credibility determinations, the testimony and other evidence in the record, I FIND the following FACTS in addition to the above enumerated undisputed facts. In the same month that petitioner's children moved in with their father in Bridgewater, November 2014, petitioner bought land and a trailer in Long Valley. Also in November 2014, petitioner told Ms. Suarez that she never received her son's IEP because she was living in Long Valley. In February 2015, petitioner's home in Branchburg sustained water damage when nine pipes froze and broke. Petitioner's home was uninhabitable from February 9, 2015, to approximately April 15, 2015. On March 17, 2015, Mr. Butler visited petitioner's Branchburg house as part of his investigation. The house was empty with no furniture, including the garage, and mail had not been removed from the mailbox for a long time. He saw the same thing when he visited the house in May and November 2015. Petitioner moved to Long Valley in November 2014 and remained there.

Petitioner and C.U. divorced in 2012. K.B. and C.U. entered into a Separation and Property Settlement Agreement on June 5, 2012, providing for a shared living arrangement whereby the children would reside with each parent roughly half-time every week. (R-7.) The Agreement further provided that "parties shall have joint legal and physical custody of the parties' minor children. The wife shall be the parent of primary residence for purpose of determining school districts as it is agreed that the parties' son T.U has special needs." After the property-settlement agreement above, in July 2012 petitioner's son almost drowned. The Superior Court in Somerset County issued an Order on August 10, 2012, giving legal and physical custody of the children to C.U. The Court issued another Order on February 4, 2013, giving legal custody to both parents and physical custody to C.U. Both Orders gave petitioner weekly supervised visits. Wells Fargo Bank filed a foreclosure complaint against petitioner and C.U. on February 6, 2014. On March 18, 2015, the Superior Court, Chancery Division, in Somerset County issued a Final Judgment against petitioner and C.U. ordering sale of the mortgaged premises to satisfy the amount due. On April 23, 2015, petitioner appealed the Board's decision, which meant that her children would continue to go to school in Branchburg.

ISSUE

The issue is whether the petitioner has established that she was domiciled within the Branchburg Township School District for the period of November 2014 to June 2015, thus entitling A.U., E.U., B.U., A.U. and T.U. to attend school in Branchburg free of charge, pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

Attendance at public schools shall be free to any person who is domiciled within the school district and meets the age requirements. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). The domicile of a child is based upon the domicile of the parents or legal guardians with whom they live. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1). According to N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1)(i), where a student's parents are domiciled in different school districts, the student's domicile may be determined by a court order or written agreement between the parents designating the school district for school attendance.

A person's domicile is "the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which, whenever he is absent, he has an intention of returning, and from which he has no intention of moving." Kurilla v. Roth, 132 N.J.L. 213, 215 (Sup. Ct. 1944). A person may have multiple residences but only one domicile. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 251 (1955). Thus, residence may coincide with domicile, but does not, alone, determine it. Ibid. As set forth in Mercadante v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39–40 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971), where a person has more than one residence, the following factors are important in determining the person's domicile:

> the physical characteristics of each [place], the time spent and the things done in each place, the other persons found there, the person's mental attitude towards each place, and whether there is or is not an intention, when absent, to return.

Additionally, establishment of a domicile is an act of volition. In re Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 375 (Law Div. 1991). "[A] choice of domicile by a person, irrespective of the motive, will be honored by the court, provided there are sufficient objective indicia, by way of proofs, supporting the actual existence of that domicile." Id. at 376. Three elements that must be considered in regard to a change of domicile are: "(1) whether there has been an actual and physical taking up of an abode in a particular state; (2) whether the subject had an intention to make his home there permanently or [at] least indefinitely; and (3) whether the subject had an intention to abandon his old domicile." Ibid. Once established, a domicile continues until superseded by a new one. Id. at 377.

In the present case, when K.B. and C.U. entered into the Separation and Property Settlement Agreement in 2012, both K.B and C.U. resided in Branchburg, at different addresses, and all five children were enrolled in Branchburg Township School District. As of November 2014, all five children began residing continuously and exclusively with C.U at his residence in Bridgewater. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1)(i), the student's domicile may be determined by a court order or written agreement between the parents designating the school district for school attendance. Here, the parents entered into such an agreement on June 5, 2012, where it was decided that the mother will be the parent of primary residence for purpose of determining school districts. Although the children did not physically live in Branchburg from November 2014 to June 2015, if the petitioner's domicile remained in Branchburg, and the written agreement was not superseded by subsequent court order, then the children were eligible to attend school in Branchburg.

Regarding whether petitioner's domicile remained in Branchburg, the Board argues that there is ample evidence that petitioner was not domiciled in Branchburg from November 2014 through June 2015 and, therefore, petitioner's children were not eligible to attend school in Branchburg. The Board contends that petitioner changed her domicile from Branchburg to Long Valley as of November 2014 when she bought a trailer in Long Valley, around the same time that the children began living with the father in Bridgewater. The evidence includes the call that Ms. Suarez received from petitioner in November 2014 requesting a copy of an IEP for one of her children. Petitioner was upset, and told Ms. Suarez that she did not receive the IEP sent to Branchburg because she lived in Long Valley. Added to that is evidence that the house in Branchburg was for sale and Wells Fargo had filed for foreclosure. This action ended with a final order of foreclosure in March 2015. Further, when Mr. Butler visited the residence on March 17, 2015, to determine whether petitioner actually resided there, the house was empty and there was no furniture. He also found that the mailbox was full and that the mail "clearly had not been picked up in a long time." This is consistent with petitioner having told Ms. Suarez that she did not get mail at the Branchburg residence.

Petitioner argues that Branchburg was her domicile until she moved to Long Valley in May 2015. Petitioner contends that it was a coincidence that she bought a trailer in November 2014, around the same time her ex-husband and the children moved out of Branchburg. She contends that the reason she was not living in Branchburg was that she did not have any water in the Branchburg house and had to find temporary residence while the repairs took place. She also explained that Mr. Butler did not see any furniture in her Branchburg residence during his March 2015 visit because she was downsizing. She argues that her house had been for sale since her divorce in 2012, and that even though her house was foreclosed in March 2015, she could still physically occupy that residence if she wanted to do so.

As set forth above, establishment of a domicile is an act of volition. Unanue, supra, 255 N.J. Super. at 375. Thus, the question becomes whether petitioner wanted to or ever intended to return to the Branchburg residence. Further, was the Branchburg domicile superseded by a new one in Long Valley? The first element to consider regarding whether petitioner changed her domicile from Branchburg to Long Valley is whether there has been an actual and physical taking up of an abode in a particular state, or, in this case, another town. Here, there was an actual purchase of another property in November 2014 indicating intent to move. Also, by her own admission to Ms. Suarez, which she did not refute, she was living in Long Valley in November 2014. The second element is whether the subject had an intention to make her home there permanently, or at least indefinitely. Although petitioner testified that she intended to maintain her residence in Branchburg, the evidence shows intent to reside in Long Valley. The fact that the pipes froze in Branchburg indicates that petitioner was not living there before February 2015. In addition to her admission that she was living in Long Valley, the final judgment against her and C.U. in March 2015 makes it extremely unlikely that she would intend to remain in a house that a court has ordered and directed to be sold. The third element is whether the subject had an intention to abandon her old domicile. It is clear that the Branchburg residence was uninhabitable from February 2015 to mid-April 2015, but when petitioner was asked when she returned to Branchburg, she equivocated. She said that she went back and forth between Branchburg and Long Valley. She initially said she moved back to Branchburg once the damages were repaired. However, Mr. Butler did not see any signs of occupancy at the house or intent to return when he visited in March or May 2015. Finally, petitioner admitted on cross-examination that she did change her domicile to Long Valley as of May 2015. Just like the fact that she purchased another home in November 2014, petitioner was not forthcoming with the information, but it had to be adduced on cross-examination.

The relevant statute is N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 and it provides in part:

> The resident may contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner on the validity of the claim and shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection.

Where a local board of education removes a student, the parent may appeal to the Commissioner of Education. In the proceeding before the Commissioner, the parent has the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child meets eligibility requirements for a free education. The child shall not be removed while the matter is pending before the Commissioner. If the evidence does not support the parent's claim, the Commissioner shall assess the parent tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the schools of the district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2).

In conclusion, although petitioner filed a petition seeking to provide that her children were residents of the Branchburg Township School District because she was domiciled in the Branchburg Township School District based on the June 2012 Separation and Property Settlement Agreement, petitioner has not produced evidence that she was domiciled in Branchburg as of November 2014. Rather, the preponderance of the evidence shows that she purchased and moved into a property in Long Valley. For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that she was domiciled in the Branchburg Township School District from November 2014 through June 2015, making her children eligible to attend school in Branchburg. Therefore, petitioner and respondent C.U. are liable for back tuition for the days their children attended the Branchburg Township School District from November 2014 to June 2015.

The Board's request for default judgment against C.U. is granted based on the numerous attempts that the Board made to have C.U. answer the petition against him. The Board filed the petition on May 13, 2015; the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes sent C.U. the petition on May 14, 2015, and followed up with a letter giving C.U. an additional ten days to answer on June 9, 2015. Mr. Rubin reached C.U. on July 21, 2015, by telephone and confirmed his address in Bridgewater. Mr. Rubin confirmed the conversation by email on July 21, 2015. Mr. Rubin also wrote to the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on August 4, 2015, confirming that their response to C.U. not answering was to indicate that the matter was "under review." In August, Mr. Rubin learned from C.U. that he had once again moved to another address in Bridgewater. C.U. did not clarify his position on whether he intended to file papers contesting the petition. On August 7, 2015, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes sent another letter to C.U. saying that he still had not answered, and if he failed to do so in ten days, each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and the Commissioner would decide the matter on summary decision. On August 24, 2015, Mr. Rubin received a notice from the Department of Education that C.U. had filed an Answer, but neither Mr. Rubin nor I received a copy of an answer from C.U. Mr. Rubin's attempt on August 27, 2015, to obtain a copy of C.U.'s answer from him failed. Despite Mr. Rubin's additional attempts to obtain an answer from C.U. in September and December 2015, he has never obtained a copy, if one was ever filed. For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that C.U. has failed to file an Answer to the Board's petition despite numerous notices and requests to do so; therefore, the Board's request for default judgment against respondent C.U. is hereby GRANTED.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that petitioner's appeal is hereby DISMISSED. I ORDER that respondent Board's petition against C.U. is GRANTED by default judgment. I further ORDER that petitioner and C.U. shall reimburse the Branchburg Township Board of Education for the tuition and costs for A.U., G.U., B.U. and T.U.'s attendance at the District's elementary school during the time between November 2014 and June 2015 (139 school days) at the amount of $14,147 per year prorated, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b). Petitioner and C.U. shall reimburse the Branchburg Township

Board of Education for the tuition and costs for A.U.'s attendance at the District's middle school during the time between November 2014 and June 2015 (139 days) at the amount of $14,594 per year prorated, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b). The tuition amount shall be calculated consistent with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b) and paid by petitioner and C.U. within one month of the date of the Commissioner's Final Decision approving this Initial Decision.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." ## SYNOPSIS

The petitioner challenged the determination of the respondent Board that his son, C.C., engaged in behavior that fell under the school district's policy against harassment, intimidation and bullying (HIB). This case stems from an incident between two eleven-year-old sixth graders, which occurred in the cafeteria of the school district's Lower Middle School in October 2014. In accordance with the provisions of the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.2 et seq. (the Act), an investigation was conducted by the school's anti-bullying specialist. The investigation concluded that C.C. had committed acts of HIB stemming from comments he made regarding his classmate's vegetarian lifestyle, including C.C.'s self-admitted statement that "vegetarians are idiots". The HIB investigation report concluded that C.C.'s conduct met the statutory definition of HIB, as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14, as C.C. made verbal comments that were reasonably perceived as motivated by a distinguishing characteristic, and had the effect of insulting and demeaning a classmate who is vegetarian. C.C. was assigned five lunch-time detentions. A Board-level hearing took place in February 2015 at the request of C.C.'s parents, after which the Board affirmed the initial finding of HIB. Thereafter, G.C. filed the within petition. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the parties stipulated that there are no material facts in dispute and the matter is ripe for determination by summary decision depending on the resolution of the sole legal issue in dispute herein, namely whether the state of being a vegetarian can constitute "any other distinguishing characteristic" within the meaning of the Act; in this case, C.C. admitted making comments regarding his classmate's vegetarianism, including "it's not good to not eat meat" and a statement asserting that people who eat meat are "smarter and have bigger brains"; these comments are reasonably perceived to be motivated by the classmate's distinguishing characteristic of being a vegetarian; and the fact that C.C.'s classmate is a vegetarian is an identifiable motivation. The ALJ concluded that C.C.'s comments in October 2014 constituted a violation of HIB, and petitioner has not met the burden of proof that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner in concluding that C.C.'s conduct constituted HIB under the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act. Accordingly, the Board's motion for summary decision was granted, the petitioner's cross motion was denied, and the petition was dismissed.

Upon review, the Assistant Commissioner – to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34 – concurred with the ALJ that the petitioner failed to sustain his burden to show that the Board's actions regarding C.C.'s conduct in October 2014 were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the Assistant Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 30, 2015, the petitioner, G.C. on behalf of C.C., filed a Petition of Appeal to the Commissioner of Education, in which they dispute respondent's finding that C.C. committed an act of harassment, intimidation or bullying ("HIB") pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.2 et seq. and request that the Commissioner overturn such finding on the grounds that C.C.'s act was not reasonably perceived as being motivated by a distinguishing characteristic. Respondent, Board of Education of the Township of Montgomery, has moved for summary decision asserting that the Board's finding that C.C. committed an act of HIB. Petitioner cross moved for summary decision that respondent school board's action was improper.

The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on August 13, 2015. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The parties filed several briefs in support of the motion and cross-motion and the record closed on January 22, 2016.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The following facts are stipulated to by and between the Parties, G.C. on behalf of the minor child C.C., and the Board of Education of the Township of Montgomery, Somerset County ("the Board") (collectively, "the Parties") and I therefore FIND them as FACT:

1. On October 30, 2014, an incident occurred in the cafeteria of the Lower Middle School in the Montgomery Township School District ("the District") between two sixth- grade students, C.C. and K.S., both of whom were eleven years old at the time.

2. On October 30, 2014, K.S. reported the incident as a potential instance of harassment, intimidation or bullying "HIB", as defined by the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.2 et seq. (the "Act"), wherein he alleged that he was the victim of an act of HIB perpetrated against him by C.C.

3. On October 31, 2014, an investigation was begun by Ms. Lesley Hass, guidance counselor and school anti-bullying specialist, in accordance with the provisions of the Act. The parents of both C.C. and K.S. were notified of the incident and the investigation by letters, dated November 3, 2014.

4. On or about November 12, 2014, Ms. Hass completed the HIB investigation and forwarded her report to the Superintendent, Nancy Gartenberg. The HIB investigation concluded that C.C. had committed acts of HIB against K.S., stemming from comments he made regarding K.S.'s vegetarianism.

5. The HIB investigation found that C.C. admitted making comments to K.S. regarding his decision not to eat meat. The report found that C.C. told K.S. that "it's not good to not eat meat" and that "he should eat meat because he'd be smarter and have bigger brains." C.C. himself wrote that he told K.S. that "vegetarians are idiots." The anti-bullying specialist found that C.C. stated that K.S.'s response to his comments was amusing to him.

6. The HIB investigation report concluded that C.C.'s conduct met the statutory definition of HIB, as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. The District concluded that C.C. made verbal communications that were reasonably perceived as being motivated by a distinguishing characteristic between the two boys, namely vegetarianism, which substantially interfered with the rights of K.S. and had the effect of insulting or demeaning him.

7. As a result, C.C. was assigned five (5) lunch-time detentions. During said detentions, he was given the opportunity to speak with staff about his actions, with an intention of preventing future instances of such conduct. No other disciplinary consequences were imposed.

8. The findings of the HIB investigation were reported to the Board at its next meeting on November 25, 2014. Notice of the finding and information on the outcome, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15b(6)(d), was sent home to the parents of C.C. and K.S. by letters, dated November 26, 2014.

9. Thereafter, the parents of C.C. requested a Board-level hearing in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:37-15b(6)(d), which request was granted.

10. The Board-level hearing took place on February 10, 2015, at which time the Board heard from the school anti-bullying specialist, Ms. Hass, the vice-principal, the parent, and the parent's attorney, who was permitted to question the anti-bullying specialist. Following the Board-level hearing, the Board affirmed the superintendent's initial finding of HIB. The parents were later notified of the Board's decision.

11. On June 30, 2015, the petitioner, G.C. on behalf of C.C., filed a Petition of Appeal to the Commissioner of Education, in which they dispute the finding of HIB and request that the Commissioner overturn such finding on the grounds that C.C.'s act was not reasonably perceived as being motivated by a distinguishing characteristic.

12. The parties to the within matter stipulate as to the conduct alleged as found in the HIB investigation report.

13. The parties stipulate that the timelines of the HIB statute are not at issue in this case.

14. The parties stipulate that the sole issue in dispute in the within matter is limited to whether the state of being a vegetarian can constitute "any other distinguishing characteristic" so as to undergird a finding of HIB, within the meaning of the Act, as HIB is defined at N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14.

15. The parties stipulate that there are no material facts in dispute, and this matter is ripe for determination on cross-motions for summary decision, with one party or the other being entitled to decision, as a matter of law, depending on the resolution of the sole legal issue in dispute above.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The parties stipulate that the sole issue in dispute in the within matter is limited to whether the state of being a vegetarian can constitute "any other distinguishing characteristic" so as to undergird a finding of HIB, within the meaning of the Act, as HIB is defined at N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14.

N.J.A.C. 1:12-5, governing motions for summary decision, permits early disposition of a case before the case is heard if, based on the papers and discovery which have been filed, it can be decided "that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:12-5(b). The provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:12-5 mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 of the New Jersey Court Rules governing motions for summary judgment. To survive summary decision, the opposing party must show that "there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." Ibid. Failure to do so entitles the moving party to summary decision. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520 (1995).

Moreover, even if the non-moving party comes forward with some evidence, this forum must grant summary decision if the evidence is "so one-sided that [the moving party] must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 536. This tribunal is required to do "the same type of evaluation, analysis or sifting of evidential materials as required by Rule 4:37-2(b) in light of the burden of persuasion that applies if the matter goes to trial." Id.

at 539-540. Like the New Jersey Supreme Court's standard for summary judgment, summary decision is designed to "liberalize the standards so as to permit summary [decision] in a larger number of cases" due to the perception that we live in "a time of great increase in litigation and one in which many meritless cases are filed." Id. at 539 (citation omitted).

The parties stipulate that there are no material facts in dispute, and this matter is ripe for determination on cross-motions for summary decision, with one party or the other being entitled to decision, as a matter of law, depending on the resolution of the sole legal issue in dispute above.

New Jersey enacted the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act to "strengthen the standards and procedures for preventing, reporting, investigating, and responding to incidents of harassment, intimidation, and bullying" occurring both on and off of school grounds. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.1(f). Definitions relative to adoption of harassment and bullying prevention policies are found in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14, which states in part:

> "Harassment, intimidation or bullying" means any gesture, any written, verbal or physical act, or any electronic communication, whether it be a single incident or a series of incidents, that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory disability, or by any other distinguishing characteristic, that takes place on school property, at any school-sponsored function, on a school bus, or off school grounds as provided for in section 16 of P.L.2010, c.122 (C.18A:37-15.3), that substantially disrupts or interferes with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of other students and that:
> > (a) a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of physically or emotionally harming a student or damaging the student's property, or placing a student in reasonable fear of physical or emotional harm to his person or damage to his property;

> (b) has the effect of insulting or demeaning any student or group of students; or

The sole issue in dispute in the within matter is limited to whether the state of being a vegetarian can constitute "any other distinguishing characteristic" so as to support a finding of HIB, within the meaning of the Act, as HIB is defined at N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. Petitioner asserts that the fact that the statute requires that the insult must have been motivated by a characteristic of the individuals who was insulted means that the word "characteristic" must be construed as a limiting factor in determining whether an insult constitutes HIB. In W.C.L. and A.L. o/b/o L.L. v. Board of Education of the Borough of Tenafly, EDU 3223-12, Initial Decision (November 26, 2012), aff'd Commissioner (January 10, 2013) a student's comments relating to head lice on another student was perceived as being motivated by a distinguishing characteristic. In R.G.B. v. Village of Ridgewood Bd. Of Ed., EDU 14213-12, 2013 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 130 (May 15, 2013) a student calling another student a "horse" and a "fat-ass" was found to constitute HIB and reasonably perceived as motivated by the distinguishing characteristic of appearance or body-type. In C.C. o/b/o/ S.C. v. Bd. of Ed. Of Twp. Of Jefferson, EDU 10872-14, 2015 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 251 (April 6, 2015) a student's comments that another student "sucks at basketball" was found to constitute HIB because the comments were reasonably perceived as motivated by the distinguishing characteristic of height, intelligence and sports proficiency.

In this case, C.C. admitted making comments to K.S. regarding his decision not to eat meat. The report found that C.C. told K.S. that "it's not good to not eat meat" and that "he should eat meat because he'd be smarter and have bigger brains." C.C. himself wrote that he told K.S. that "vegetarians are idiots." I CONCLUDE that those comments are reasonably perceived to be motivated by the distinguishing characteristic of K.S. being a vegetarian. In K.L. v. Evesham Twp. Bd. of Ed. 423 N.J.Super. 337 the Appellate Division stated that the definition of bullying does not include harmful or demeaning conduct motivated by other reason, for example a dispute about relationships or personal belongings, or aggressive conduct without identifiable motivation. The fact that K.S. is a vegetarian is an identifiable motivation. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that C.C.'s comments constitute a violation of HIB.

Respondent urges this tribunal to conclude that the Board was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable in its determination that the HIB investigation was conducted properly and that C.C.'s conduct did constitute HIB. Therefore, the Petition of Appeal should be dismissed. Petitioner asserts that if vegetarianism is not a distinguishing characteristic as a matter of law than the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable.

The Commissioner of Education will not overturn the decision of a local board in the absence of a finding that the action below was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. T.B.M. v. Moorestown Bd. of Educ., EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008) (citing Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581(1966)), adopted, Comm'r (April 7, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Further, the Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of the board of education, whose exercise of its discretion may not be disturbed unless shown to be "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). New Jersey courts have held that "[w]here there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached." Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dep't of Envtl. Prot., 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199–200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd, 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974). Thus, in order to prevail, the petitioner must demonstrate that the Board acted in bad faith, or in utter disregard of the circumstances before it. T.B.M., supra, EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; see W.C.L. and A.L. ex rel L.L. v. Tenafly Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. EDU 3223-12 (2013) (The petitioner challenged the school board's decision that a student committed an act of HIB. The administrative law judge (ALJ) found that the board's actions were consistent with the letter and spirit of the law and were not taken in bad faith or in disregard of the circumstances. The ALJ concluded that the petitioner failed to establish that the board's actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The Commissioner affirmed the ALJ's decision to dismiss the petition of appeal.); J.M.C. ex rel A.C. v. E. Brunswick Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. EDU 4144-12 (2013) (The petitioner challenged the board's determination that the actions of the petitioner's son constituted HIB. The board found that the student called another student "gay" and said he "danced like a girl." The demeaning remarks constituted HIB.). In both cases, the petitioners failed to satisfy their burden to show that the board's actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

I have carefully reviewed the record. Petitioner has presented no credible evidence that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner. As I have previously concluded that C.C.'s comments are reasonably perceived to be motivated by the distinguishing characteristic of K.S. being a vegetarian, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met the burden of proof that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner in concluding that C.C.'s conduct did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying under the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act.

The Trenton Board of Education (the "District"), whose principal office is located at 108 North Clinton Avenue, Trenton, New Jersey 08609, and its successors, assigns, officers, employees, agents and representatives (collectively, "School District"), and Melissa Brown, residing at 12 Roberts Place, Willingboro, New Jersey, 08046 ("Respondent") (collectively, the "Parties") have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Stipulation of Settlement, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them in full and complete settlement of all outstanding issues as detailed below.

WHEREAS Respondent is a tenured secretarial staff member employed by the District as a secretary; and

WHEREAS the District certified tenure charges of Unbecoming Conduct and Other Just Cause to the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, captioned In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Melissa Brown, Trenton Board of Education ("Tenure Charges"), and such charges were assigned Docket No. 332-10/15; and Respondent filed an answer opposing the charges; and the Commissioner of Education, having reviewed the charges and Respondent's answer, determined that the charges were sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in compensation, and accordingly referred the matter to Arbitrator David Gregory, Esq. ("Arbitrator") for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, Respondent has denied the allegations set forth in the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the Parties are aware of the uncertainty of the outcome of arbitration; and

WHEREAS, the District with stringent budget limitations and due to the expenditure of resources due to multiple days of hearings with numerous witnesses, and the concern that school personnel will be removed from their educational duties and responsibilities during that time, the Parties wish to resolve this matter in accordance with the terms set forth herein rather than proceed with arbitration; and

WHEREAS the proposed Stipulation of Settlement is in the best interest of the Parties and the public because Respondent agrees to serve a one hundred and twenty (120) day suspension without pay, with reinstatement to an Administrative I Secretary position, upon the formal approval of this stipulation of settlement by the Trenton Board of Education; and

WHEREAS, Respondent agrees to accept an assignment to an Administrative I Secretary position at any school or department within the District that the District finds to be appropriate and in the best interest of the District;

NOW, THEREFORE, subject to approval by the Arbitrator, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Respondent shall serve a suspension without pay from October 27, 2015 through February 26, 2016. This one hundred and twenty (120) day unpaid period shall serve as the entire discipline for Respondent with respect to these tenure charges. Respondent agrees not to, and waives any right to, challenge or otherwise contest this suspension. Respondent shall be restored to the payroll at her correct salary effective as of February 27, 2016, and shall receive back pay / benefits for any time between that date and the day when she is restored to the payroll.

2. Upon resumption of her duties, Respondent agrees to accept an assignment to an Administrative I Secretary position at any school or department within the District that the District finds to be appropriate and in the best interest of the District;
3. Respondent also agrees to withdraw with prejudice any and all claims or suits that she may have previously filed against the School District that are still pending in any and all courts and/or before any and all agencies with the exception of workers compensation claims. This Settlement is intended to be the final resolution of all outstanding matters between the School District and Respondent. Should Respondent fail to submit letters of withdrawals for any such pending claims or suits, this Stipulation of Settlement will serve as Respondent's formal written notice of withdrawal of those pending claims or suits, except for workers compensation claims.
4. Respondent shall not earn any paid days (e.g. sick, personal or vacation) for the period October 26, 2015 through February 26, 2016. Respondent releases and waives any claim which she may have to any pay from the District from October 26, 2015 through February 26, 2016.
5. The District agrees to dismiss the instant tenure charges with prejudice, subject to the approval required in Paragraph 18.
6. In exchange for the consideration set forth above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Respondent hereby waives, releases and discharges as against the School District any and all claims or causes of action, known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, arising through the date of her execution of this Agreement, including, without limitation, any claim for attorneys' fees, costs or other monetary relief; discrimination on any basis, any federal or state civil rights law, any alleged violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Worker Benefits Protection Act; Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Fair Credit Reporting Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act; the Employee Polygraph Protection Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the retaliation provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002; the False Claims Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the New Jersey Equal Pay Law; the New Jersey Occupational Safety and Health Law; the New Jersey Smokers' Rights Law; the New Jersey Genetic Privacy Act; the New Jersey Fair Credit Reporting Act; New Jersey Wages and Hours Law, unemployment compensations laws, disability benefits laws, retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law; the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution; and/or any other alleged violation of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance; any claim based on contract, implied contract, collective bargaining agreement, tort law, personal injury, or public policy, including but not limited to any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, vacation pay, sick pay, personal day pay, wages, attorneys' fees, costs, and/or future wage loss. Respondent also agrees to withdraw any and all pending complaints or actions that have been or may have been filed against the School District or any of its employees or representatives. Notwithstanding this release of claims / causes of action, Respondent retains all of the rights and protections of a tenured staff member of the District.

7. Notwithstanding Paragraphs 3 and 6 of this Stipulation of Settlement, it is understood and agreed that the parties are not prohibited from communicating with or participating in any administrative proceeding before the United States Department of Labor, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, or any other federal, state or local law agency. Respondent understands that she may rescind this Agreement within 7 calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the District either by hand or by certified mail within the 7 day period.

11. This agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other District employees.

Each counterpart will be deemed an original, which taken together shall constitute a single instrument. Facsimile signatures or signatures in electronic Portable Document Format ("PDF") shall be construed and have the same force and effect as original signatures.

16. This Stipulation or any uncertainty or ambiguity therein shall not be construed against any party, but shall be construed as if both Parties to this Stipulation jointly prepared this Agreement.

17. Each party acknowledges that this is the entire agreement of the Parties concerning the subject matter of the foregoing paragraphs, and that there are no written or oral representations, understandings or agreements directly or indirectly connected with this Stipulation.

18. Additionally, this Stipulation is subject to final approval by the Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(c), and will become effective only upon approval by the Arbitrator. Counsel for the Parties shall jointly request the Arbitrator's approval of this Agreement and each shall take any and all necessary steps to effectuate dismissal of the Tenure Charges.

19. This Stipulation of Settlement is also subject to formal Board of Education approval.

20. Upon formal approval of this stipulation of settlement by the District and the Arbitrator, a copy of same will be placed in Respondent's personnel file.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – formerly employed by the respondent's school district as a non-tenured building principal – alleged that she received insufficient and untimely notice of the non-renewal of her employment at the end of the 2013-2014 school year and that, accordingly, her employment contract as a principal was automatically renewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11. Petitioner asserted, inter alia, that after she received a May 15, 2014 non-renewal letter – which was signed by the district superintendent – she spoke directly with the superintendent, who purportedly advised her that the non-renewal letter had been sent to petitioner in error, and that she should disregard it. The Board contended that petitioner's appeal was untimely filed, and submitted a motion to dismiss; the Board further claimed that the non-renewal notice received by petitioner on May 15, 2014 fully satisfied the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10. The ALJ denied the motion to dismiss prior to the hearing, based upon petitioner's claims that she was misled by information from the superintendent, and that she did not fully understand that she had been non-renewed until sometime in July 2014.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner received a letter of nonrenewal for her position as a principal on May 15, 2014; petitioner was non-renewed because of a fiscal crisis in the school district; at the time of her nonrenewal, the school district was under the financial oversight of a State monitor pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55; the nonrenewal letter was signed by the district superintendent; the State monitor made the recommendation to non-renew all non-tenured staff members by May 15, 2014, which district staff then implemented; in addition to the nonrenewal letter, petitioner received a "Rice Notice" on June 20, 2014 which advised her that her employment status would be discussed at the June 23, 2014 school board meeting; despite petitioner's confusion about her employment status resulting from the superintendent's alleged statement that petitioner's nonrenewal letter was sent in error, the nonrenewal of petitioner's employment was valid as it was never rescinded in writing; petitioner's contention that she failed to receive proper notice under N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11 was based solely upon verbal exchanges in which the superintendent purportedly advised petitioner that her nonrenewal letter was sent in error and should be disregarded. The ALJ concluded that rescission of the written notice of nonrenewal could have only occurred in one legally valid manner: via another written document. Accordingly, the ALJ denied petitioner's appeal and ordered that the petition be dismissed.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that petitioner failed to meet her burden to show that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in non-renewing her employment. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons thoroughly set forth in the Initial Decision – that the Board's decision to non-renew the petitioner as a non-tenured principal for the 2014-2015 school year was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Loraine Gammaro, who was formerly employed by the Belleville Board of Education (the Board) as a building principal, alleges that she received insufficient and untimely notice of the nonrenewal of her employment at the end of the 2013-2014 school year; and that accordingly, her contract of employment as a principal was automatically renewed, per N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11.

This dispute comes to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) after being first filed on August 27, 2014, in the Superior Court, Essex County, via Verified Complaint in Lieu of Prerogative Writs. On or about September 19, 2014, respondent, the Belleville Board of Education (the Board), filed a Notice of Removal to the United States District Court. Thereafter, a motion to dismiss the second count of the complaint was resolved via a November 17, 2014, consent order transferring the second count to the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner). A petition of appeal renewing the allegations in that count was filed with the Commissioner on December 4, 2014. The Board filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer on December 15, 2014, asserting that the petition was untimely. The contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 30, 2014.

The Board's motion to dismiss was denied via order dated April 1, 2015. A motion for reconsideration was denied on June 2, 2015.[1] A hearing was conducted on July 21, 2015. Based on the testimony received, I directed that the record be amplified to clarify the role of a State monitor in Gammaro's nonrenewal. Via letter dated August 21, 2015, counsel for the Board explained the State monitor's appointment, and attached his professional services contract. Thereafter, counsel for Gammaro requested leave to take the State monitor's testimony. The Board objected on relevancy grounds; via order dated August 27, 2015, I granted counsel leave to call the State monitor as a witness.

The hearing continued on January 6, 2016. Post-hearing submissions were filed on February 8 and 22, 2016, at which time the record closed.

[1] The Board renewed its timeliness arguments in its post-hearing submission. As set forth more fully in my earlier order, in light of the claims made by Gammaro that Feldman's conduct mislead her, and that she did not fully understand that she had been non-renewed until sometime in July 2014, I deemed it appropriate to allow Gammaro to proceed to a plenary hearing. At this juncture, I CONCLUDE that the parties will be best served by the issuance of a decision on the merits. Accordingly, the Board's arguments that the matter be dismissed as untimely under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) are again rejected.

ISSUE PRESENTED

Gammaro's claim that she did not receive sufficient or timely notice of the nonrenewal of her employment as a nontenured principal raises the following limited issue for determination:

Can a notice of nonrenewal issued in writing by the Superintendent of Schools pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10 be rescinded verbally? If so, does the employment of the affected employee then automatically renew, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11?

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Gammaro began her employment with the Board in 2005, as a Teacher of Comprehensive Business. During the second half of the 2012-2013 year, she became Supervisor/Principal of the Belleville Universal Campus School, an alternative program designed to remediate and motivate academic skills for at-risk students. She ran the program in the evening and continued to perform her teaching duties during the day. Gammaro was appointed as full-time principal of Elementary School Number 9 effective July 22, 2013. Her employment contract expired on June 30, 2014.

In 2014, Belleville was a school district in financial disarray. Via a memorandum dated March 20, 2014, Superintendent of Schools Helene Feldman was advised by then Acting Business Administrator Raymond Jacobus that he could not certify that there were sufficient funds to meet the district's financial obligations. Feldman so advised the Essex County Superintendent of Schools, via letter dated March 25, 2014. In response, on May 13, 2014, the Acting Commissioner of Education appointed Thomas Egan as a State monitor, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55. Egan's duties and responsibilities were as defined by law and as set forth in his contract. He had the clear authority to oversee the hiring and firing of staff. Egan moreover had the authority to "override a chief school administrator's action and vote by the board of education on any matters related to the fiscal and personnel management of the district . . . ." Upon entering the district in May 2014, Egan confirmed that there were insufficient funds to meet the district's payroll. He conferred with Feldman who, according to Egan, understood his concerns, and readily accepted his recommendation that all non-tenured staff members be non-renewed prior to the May 15 deadline for such action set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.

Since Gammaro did not hold her position of employment as principal under tenure, she too was non-renewed, and she received a letter dated May 15, 2014, signed by Feldman advising her as follows:

> It is with regret that I inform you that you are not being offered a contract for the 2014-2015 school year. Your employment will terminate June 30, 2015.

The letter went on to advise Gammaro that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2, she was entitled to a written statement of reasons and an informal appearance before the Board. The record does not reflect that she availed herself of these procedural rights, however.

Instead, on May 18, 2014, Gammaro questioned Feldman, who advised her that the letter was sent in error, and to disregard it. According to Gammaro, the Assistant Superintendent, Paula Cummis, was also in the room. At a subsequent meeting the issue of the May 15, 2014, notice was raised again, and Cummis reiterated that the notice should not have been sent to Gammaro. Gammaro testified that this "made total sense to [her]" because as a tenured employee she did not understand how her employment could be summarily terminated. Concededly, the letter did not address any recall or reassignment rights Gammaro might have in light of her tenured status as a teacher, which could have contributed to her confusion.

On June 20, 2014, Gammaro was summoned to the Board office, and was given a "Rice Notice," alerting her that her employment status would be discussed at the June 23, 2014, Board meeting.[2] Still feeling unclear about her employment status, Gammaro discussed matters at lunch with Cummis and Feldman that day. According to Gammaro, she was again reassured that the notice of nonrenewal had been sent to her in error. Feldman advised that she did not know what was to be discussed at the June

[2] This is notice that that a staff member's employment status may be discussed by the Board, so that she may avail herself of the right, under the Open Public Meetings Act, to request that any such discussion be conducted in public. See N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(b)(8); Rice v. Union City Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977).

23, 2014, meeting, as she had yet to receive an agenda for the meeting, and thus could not explain why Gammaro had received a Rice Notice. Since the notice went out under Feldman's signature, I asked Gammaro directly whether Feldman's apparent ignorance of why it was sent was confusing to her. It surely confused me. But I did not get a clear response. In any event, apparently her administrators' conduct confused Gammaro enough to prompt her to surreptitiously record their lunchtime conversation.[3]

The tape of the conversation is difficult to understand; the transcription references "unidentified speakers," and portions of the conversation are noted to be "indiscernible." But Cummis and Feldman are clearly disgruntled. In often salty language, they grouse about affairs in the school district, which at that point are under the direction of Egan as monitor. Both Cummis and Feldman appear primarily concerned about their own job security, stating that they both are going to be dismissed. They complain about the evisceration of their authority to direct school affairs. Gammaro tries valiantly, and repeatedly, to turn the conversation to her own employment situation, but with only limited success. Feldman does confirm that "[e]verybody who got a letter is gone until you get a letter that says you're not gone . . . ." Gammaro urges that while she got such a letter, it was sent in error, and Feldman replies "[w]ell, you got ripped by accident. They didn't ask us. You see, they didn't ask us." Thus, the lunchtime conversation actually confirms that while Feldman may not have liked doing it, she had indeed non-renewed Gammaro's employment.

Feldman contacted Gammaro again later that evening. This time Feldman affirmatively advised Gammaro that she would not be on the Board agenda that night. Gammaro testified that she remained unconcerned about her continued service as principal, notwithstanding the fact that her contract was to expire within days, because she had been told that contracts might not be renewed until mid-July. The minutes of the June 23, 2014, meeting confirm that discussion of Gammaro's employment status was not on the agenda.

[3] Both the recording and a transcript were admitted into evidence.

The lunchtime conversation with Feldman, Cummis, and Gammaro suggests that what transpired in May and June 2014 in Belleville was fraught with confusion and intrigue; but Egan's testimony readily revealed that the events those months were actually pretty straightforward. A Rice Notice was sent to Gammaro for the June 20, 2014, meeting, because, according to Egan, a layoff of over 100 employees, Gammaro included, was going to be discussed by the Board, and it was possible that any one of these staff members could have been discussed individually. Moreover, ultimately, Gammaro could no longer claim a lack of clarity about her employment status because, per Egan's testimony, she called him directly on at least two occasions, and he twice confirmed that she had been RIFed as a principal due to the fiscal crisis in the district.

Gammaro heard nothing further until she received a copy of a July 14, 2014, Board resolution transferring her from her position as principal to a position as a high school teacher. A July 16, 2015, letter enclosed her employment contract and indicated that she had been reappointed for the 2014-2015 school year as a teacher. According to Gammaro, between May 15, 2014, and June 30, 2014, she continued to perform the duties of her principalship. But at no time after receiving the May 15, 2014, letter and before receiving the letters in July 2014, appointing her to a teaching position, did Gammaro indicate that she was accepting appointment as a principal, nor did she at any time receive a contract appointing her to this position for the 2014-2015 school year.

In summary, while Egan urged that the layoffs were completed with full cooperation by Feldman, the tape of Gammaro's' lunchtime meeting suggests that both Feldman and Cummis may have perceived otherwise. This difference in perception notwithstanding, I FIND that Gammaro received a letter of nonrenewal as a principal on May 15, 2014; that she was non-renewed due to a fiscal crisis; and that her nonrenewal was never rescinded in writing. In light of this finding, and as will be more fully discussed below, Gammaro's confusion, or lack thereof, regarding her employment status becomes irrelevant to a determination as to the validity of the May 2014 notice of non-renewal issued by Feldman.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Although "[i]t is by now axiomatic that a board has virtually unlimited discretion in hiring or renewing non-tenured teaching staff members," Adams v. Trenton Board of Education, EDU 8237-07, Comm'r (August 13, 2008), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; Dore v. Bedminster Board of Education, 185 N.J. Super. 447 (App. Div. 1982), Gammaro's claims spring from her contention that she failed to receive proper notice of her nonrenewal per N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, which requires that

> On or before May 15 in each year, each nontenured teaching staff member continuously employed by a board of education since the preceding September 30 shall receive either
> a. A written offer of a contract for employment from the board of education for the next succeeding year providing for at least the same terms and conditions of employment but with such increase in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education, or
> b. A written notice from the chief school administrator that such employment will not be offered.

See also Skidmore v. Washington Twp. Bd. of Educ., EDU 5688-03, Final Decision (December 1, 2004), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11 affords a potential remedy should an employee fail to receive proper notice, providing that "then [the] board of education shall be deemed to have offered to that teaching staff member continued employment for the next succeeding school year upon the same terms and conditions but with such increases in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education." In the event notice is not timely issued, however, the teaching staff member must comply with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-12, which provides as follows:

> If the teaching staff member desires to accept such employment he shall notify the board of education of such acceptance, in writing, on or before June 1 in which event such employment shall continue as provided for herein . . . .

Compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:27-12 is critical to any claim to continued employment due to lack of proper notice, as the statute concludes by providing that, "[i]n the absence of such notice of acceptance the provisions of this article shall no longer be applicable." Ibid.

Gammaro, then serving as a nontenured building principal, received the requisite written notice from her superintendent of schools on May 15, 2014. She testified that the notice was worded in a manner that caused her to question its veracity, and that when she questioned Feldman, the superintendent verbally advised her more than once that it was sent in error and to disregard it. These verbal exchanges, and these exchanges alone, form the basis of Gammaro's contention that she failed to receive proper notice under N.J.S.A. 18:27-11. Her arguments are unpersuasive.

I CONCLUDE that a rescission of Feldman's written notice could have come in only one legally valid manner; that is, via another written document. Insofar as public moneys are at stake, as well as the livelihood of a public employee, the statute demands that the nonrenewal be unequivocal. Concomitantly, a rescission of the nonrenewal must be equally unequivocal. To hold otherwise would open a floodgate of claims that written nonrenewal notices have no import or meaning. For this reason, our courts have held that "[p]arol evidence is not admissible to contradict, alter, or vary a writing either appointed by law or by the compact of the parties . . . ." See Perrine v. Cheeseman, 11 N.J.L. 174 (1829).

Moreover, Gammaro's arguments ignore the reality of the administrative structure and climate in Belleville at the time of her nonrenewal. The role of the State monitor and his involvement in Gammaro's nonrenewal suggest why Feldman may have disavowed the notice sent under her signature; and equally so, why her disavowals cannot bind the Board. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(4) confirms that Egan had the authority to "oversee all district staffing, including the ability to hire, promote and terminate employees." See Rankins v Bd. of Educ. of the City of Pleasantville, A-1662-10T4 (App. Div. October 22, 2012), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/. He thus had the clear authority to direct Feldman to non-renew Gammaro for fiscal reasons, or for any non-proscribed reason whatsoever, and Feldman's protestations that her letter had no binding effect were at best an expression of her frustration at the emasculation of her authority.

Nor does the fact that Gammaro claims to have continued to perform the duties of a principal until June 30, 2014, alter the fact that Feldman's notice of nonrenewal was valid and binding; indeed, her contract did not expire until then. Likewise, although the transfer back to the classroom that was Gammaro's entitlement under the tenure and seniority laws was not formalized until the Board acted on July 14, 2014, this did not render Feldman's non-renewal letter untimely or ineffective. See N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12.

Finally, the Board urges that even if the notice issued by Feldman was somehow inadequate, Gammaro's claim to continued employment as a principal must nonetheless be rejected in light of her failure to comply with the express requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-12. In light of my determination above, it is unnecessary to address this argument.

DECISION

The record, proposed settlement agreement and general release, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner observes that the Executive Director of the Hope Community Charter School signed the agreement on behalf of the Board of Trustees. The file does not contain a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating the Executive Director to sign the agreement on its behalf – as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.13 under these circumstances – nor is the resolution attached to the settlement agreement itself. In the alternative, the agreement is not signed by the Board attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation. Without either the Board attorney's signature or the appropriate Board resolution designating the Executive Director to sign the agreement on its behalf, the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the settlement agreement consistent with the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to hearing.

Petitioner brings this emergency relief action seeking an order allowing their child to participate in the April 19, 2016, National Honor Society induction ceremony. On March 30, 2016, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL).

STATEMENT OF FACTS

P.A. is a 17-year-old high school senior at Whippany Park High School ("WPHS"). On Thursday, February 18, 2016, P.A. and eleven other students from Respondent school district attended the Future Business Leaders ("FBLA") conference in Atlantic City, New Jersey along with hundreds of students from other school districts. At or about 4:15 p.m., after the day's activities concluded, P.A. and three male students went to their hotel room. One of the students was P.A.'s roommate, S.R., said that he brought vodka with him on the trip. P.A. did not actually see S.R. with any vodka-labeled bottles.

After dinner that evening at a local pizzeria, P.A. returned to his hotel room at which time S.R., gave him a plastic sparkling water bottle containing a clear liquid and told P.A. that it contained vodka. P.A. took some sips from the bottle and later emptied its contents in the sink. He never removed the bottle from his hotel room.

Later that same evening, P.A. attended a dance at which S.R. displayed impaired behavior and was disruptive. P.A. and at least one other student helped S.R. back to the hotel room. On the way to the hotel room they saw Ms. Andrea Ritacco, a teacher from WPHS, and explained what occurred. She followed the students up to the hotel room and P.A. observed another student apparently intoxicated, and went to her aide in addition to S.R.

Respondent ultimately contacted P.A.'s parents ("Petitioners"), and the mother traveled to Atlantic City and caused P.A. to have a blood and urine test for drugs and alcohol at the request of WPHS administrators. The tests were negative.

After returning home on February 19, 2016, Petitioners and P.A. met with WPHS administrators to discuss the events of the prior evening. They required the Petitioners return to Atlantic City, to have the hospital physicians recertify the results of the blood and urine tests on their form. They also required that Petitioners sign a "Possible Alcohol or Drug Violation Letter to Parent/Guardian," presumably to acknowledge receipt of the letter. During that meeting, Christopher Kelly, Principal at WPHS, imposed the following discipline on P.A.:

1. A 4-day Out-of-school suspension commencing on Monday February 22, 2016.
2. Removal from the National Honor Society ("NHS").
3. Retraction of the principal's letter of recommendation required for an NHS scholarship.
4. Removal from participation in the Senior Service Project (later rescinded)
5. Placement on probation with respect to attending Senior Prom.

DISCUSSION

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) sets forth the standards governing motions for emergent relief. The regulation instructs in salient part:

> A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. Degioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
> 3. The petitioner has the likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
>

Petitioner has the burden of establishing each of the above requirements in order to warrant relief in his favor.

Turning to the first criteria, it is well settled that relief should not be granted except "when necessary to prevent irreparable harm." Crowe, supra 90 N.J. at 132. In this regard, harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be adequately redressed by monetary damages. Id. at 132-33. In other words, it has been described as "'substantial injury to a material degree coupled with the inadequacy of money damages.'" Judice's Sunshine Pontiac, Inc. v. General Motors Corp., 418 F. Supp. 1212, 1218 (D.N.J. 1976) (citation omitted). See New Jersey Dep't of Environmental Protection v. Circle Carting, Inc., 2004 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 968 (April 2, 2004) (finding no irreparable harm in connection with the revocation of respondent's solid waste license in that financial loss is generally insufficient to demonstrate this requirement). The moving party bears the burden of proving irreparable harm. More than a risk of irreparable harm must be demonstrated. Continental Group, Inc. v. Amoco Chemicals Corp., 614 F. 2d 351, 359 (D.N.J. 1980). The requisite for injunctive relief is a "clear showing of immediate irreparable injury," or a "'presently existing actual threat; (an injunction) may not be used simply to eliminate a possibility of a remote future injury, or a future invasion of rights, be those rights protected by statute or by common law.'" Ibid. (citation omitted.)

In the instant matter, the presumed potential for irreparable harm lies in the fact that P.A.'s reputation will be damaged because his admission to several colleges and universities might be revoked; he will be "branded" as one who abuses alcohol; he failed an exam in one of his Advanced Placement courses because of the 4-day suspension; and his opportunity to apply for a NHS scholarship was "undermined".

The undersigned is not persuaded that P.A. will be irreparably harmed. He was suspended in his junior year for an infraction of district policy which resulted in him not being inducted in the NHS. It is clear that this did not prevent many prestigious colleges and universities from admitting him to their institutions. Further, there is nothing more than speculation that the offers of admissions will be revoked once P.A. discloses information about the incident. All of P.A.'s purported conduct surrounding the incident reflects a compassionate, aware young man who exercised sufficient discretion not to get intoxicated himself. It appears that, just as he may be able to provide Admissions Officers with a reasonable explanation for the prior suspension, P.A. may likewise satisfactorily explain the current incident. Further, P.A. returned to school in February and there is no evidence that since February, his reputation has been tarnished as a result of the incident.

Petitioner argues that there is a likelihood that they will prevail on the merits of the case. They argue that the due process notice that they received regarding the regulatory provision that formed the basis for the suspension, did not afford Respondent jurisdiction to impose a penalty; the conditions precedent were not established. Respondent argues that, without conceding Petitioner's position, notwithstanding that provision, P.A. violated a specific Handbook policy; he violated the policy that prohibits the "use" of alcohol at school activities. It is undisputed that P.A. admitted that he drank what he believed to be vodka. The undersigned is persuaded that P.A. acted conscientiously when he candidly and honestly recounted the events of the evening and implicated himself. The undersigned is persuaded that his conduct during the course of the incident and following the incident might have risen to the level of a mitigating factor. Nonetheless, I cannot ignore his admission when determining the likelihood of success on the merits.

CONCLUSION

After hearing the arguments of petitioner and respondent and considering documents submitted, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is not entitled to emergent relief because the proofs submitted fail to establish the necessary elements to grant emergency relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b). Specifically, there has been no showing of irreparable harm by petitioner or the likelihood of prevailing on the merits.

ORDER

For the foregoing reasons, it is hereby ORDERED that Petitioner's request for emergent relief is DENIED.

This order may be reviewed by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. Hearing dates will be scheduled shortly.

| PETITIONER, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| V. | : | DECISION ON |
| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WEST ORANGE ESSEX COUNTY, | : | APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF |
| RESPONDENTS. | : | |

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. In this case, the petitioner is appealing the decision of the West Orange Board of Education (Board) to suspend H.S. from school for the remainder of the 2015-2016 school year for unauthorized occupancy of a school building. The ALJ denied the petitioner's request for emergent relief.[1]

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), a grant of emergent relief is considered an extraordinary remedy that can only be issued upon a finding that petitioner has met the four-pronged standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). The party seeking such relief must demonstrate the existence of each of the following: 1) the movant will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; 2) the legal right underlying the movant's claim is settled; 3) the movant has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and 4) when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the movant will suffer greater harm than the other party if the requested relief is not granted. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).

[1] The recommended Order states that the petitioner has not established the necessary elements to grant emergent relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6; however it did not specifically state why one or more of the Crowe prongs was not established.

In this case, the petitioner has failed to show that H.S. will suffer irreparable harm if he is not immediately permitted to return to the general education setting. It is undisputed that the Board is providing H.S. with home instruction and that the Board has provided an alternate education program for H.S. at the Essex Junior Academy. Moreover, H.S. is going to advance to 9th grade after the completion of the 2015-2016 school year, and the Board is allowing him to participate in the 8th grade graduation ceremony. Therefore, in light of the fact that all of the Crowe prongs must be met in order for emergent relief to be granted, it is not necessary to analyze the three remaining factors.

Although the petitioner is not entitled to emergent relief, the Commissioner emphasizes that the governing statutory and regulatory provisions prevent the Board from implementing a long-term suspension that extends to the remainder of the 2015-2016 school year without reviewing the case at subsequent Board meetings. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c), the "[s]uspension of a general education student shall not be continued beyond the district board of education's second regularly scheduled meeting following the suspension, unless the district board of education so determines pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-5." In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c), this determination must be made based on the following criteria:

i. The nature and severity of the offense;
ii. The district board of education removal decision;
iii. The results of any relevant testing, assessments or evaluations of the student; and
iv. The recommendation of the chief school administrator, after considering input from the principal or director of the alternate education program or home or other in-school or out-of-school instruction program in which the student has been placed. [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c)1.i.-iv.]

Therefore, at the May 9, 2016 Board meeting, the Board is directed to determine whether H.S. should return to the general education program or whether H.S.'s long-term suspension should continue.[2] If it is determined that H.S.'s long-term suspension should be continued, the Board must maintain H.S.'s placement in an appropriate alternative education program pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:16-9. Additionally, the Board is reminded that it must also continue to follow the applicable regulatory provisions concerning the process for determining whether the suspension should continue and/or when H.S. should return to the general education program, i.e., N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(d)-(f).

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted as modified. This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

Record Closed: April 13, 2016 Decided: April 13, 2016

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

Petitioner brings this action seeking emergent relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1 et seq. regarding the Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, Essex County, decision to suspend H.S., a minor child, from Liberty Middle School in West Orange, New Jersey. On April 6, 2016, the Commissioner of Education received petitioner's application for emergent relief. On April 6, 2016, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed as a contested case under Docket No. EDU 05199-16. On April 13, 2016, oral argument was presented at the OAL.

The standards for the granting of emergent relief are set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) and Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Emergent relief may be granted if the judge determines from the proofs that:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

In the instant case, after hearing the arguments of petitioner and respondent and considering any other documentation submitted, I FIND that petitioner is not entitled to emergent relief because the proofs submitted have not established the necessary elements to grant emergent relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b). H.S. will be provided an alternative education setting, specifically at the Essex Junior Academy Campus through the end of the 2015-2016 school year, in order that H.S.'s continuing educational needs are addressed.

After hearing arguments of petitioner and respondent, and considering all the affidavits, certifications and documents submitted, I enter this ORDER in favor of respondent. Petitioner's motion for emergent relief is therefore DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of the Department of Education, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this Order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this Order within forty-five days, this recommended Order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

On January 28, 2016, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner found B.P. liable for tuition in the amount of Nine Thousand Two Hundred Thirty Dollars and Thirty Eight Cents ($9,230.38), representing tuition for a period of ineligible attendance by his child, N.P., in the Board's school district between February 2, 2015 and June 18, 2015. The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that B.P. failed to comply with the decision and it requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the assessments on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. B.P. offered no reasons why the judgment against him should not be so docketed, although given an opportunity by this agency to do so.

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, Brandon Perrone is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $9,230.38, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

BEFORE PATRICIA M. KERINS, ALJ:

The issue presented in this request for emergent relief is whether petitioner Kevin Karp (Karp) is entitled to dismissal of tenure charges against him on the grounds respondent Barnegat Township Board of Education (Barnegat) did not comply with the Open Public Meeting Act (OPMA). This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for consideration of the emergent relief request on April 5, 2016 and scheduled for oral argument on April 18, 2016. The argument was held on that date at the OAL in Mercerville, New Jersey.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

This matter arises out of a dispute over whether Barnegat should have provided Karp notice of its consideration of tenure charges in accordance with the OPMA, N.J.S.A. 10:4-6. Karp is a tenured teacher employed by Barnegat. In January 2016, a student alleged Karp committed an act of "harassment, intimidation, or bullying" while handing out paperwork during a Computer Application class that he taught at a middle school in Barnegat Township. Barnegat's staff conducted an investigation of the allegations and issued a report on January 10, 2016, concluding that evidence did not show Karp committed the alleged acts. On January 20, 2016, Karp was advised that other students had made several similar allegations against him. Karp was not notified formally by Rice notice that his employment status was to be discussed by Barnegat in an executive session at a regularly scheduled board meeting on February 23, 2016. Barnegat voted at that meeting to serve Karp with tenure charges.

After considering the potential tenure charges on February 23, 2016 Karp was served by letter February 25, 2016, with the Board "Statement of Formal Charges" and "Statement of Evidence". The Board then voted to certify those charges on March 22, 2016. Karp was charged with (1) repeatedly brushing up to and against the breasts of a twelve-year-old female student; (2) making "cat calls" to a female student; (3) engaging in various incidents that made a female student "uncomfortable," such as touching her exposed bra strap and making "creepy comments;" and (4) making inappropriate comments to students. Petitioner's Petition of Appeal, Exhibit B, and Statement of Initial Charges. Karp will not receive his salary for 120 days while the charges against him are pending.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Karp asserts that Barnegat violated the OPMA by failing to notify him of his right to request a public discussion at the meeting on February 23, 2016, regarding his continued employment status. On those grounds Karp seeks emergent relief dismissing the tenure charges filed against him. In response the Board cites the provisions of New Jersey's teacher tenure statue which provide a Board's consideration and actions on tenure charges shall not take place at a public meeting. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), an application for emergent relief shall not be granted unless it satisfies the following four standards:

> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
>
>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
> [Id; Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982).]

Petitioners must meet all four criteria to prevail on this motion. See Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Further the moving party bears the burden of proving each of the Crowe elements "clearly and convincingly." Waste Mgmt of N.J. v. Union County Util. Auth., 399 N.J. Super. 508, 520 (App. Div. 2008).

The first standard to be addressed is whether the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-332. Harm is irreparable when it cannot be addressed with monetary damages. Id. This standard also contemplates that the harm be both substantial and immediate. Subcarrier Communications, Inc. v. Day, 299 N.J. Super. 634, 638 (App. Div. 1997). "In certain circumstances, severe personal inconvenience can constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 133. "Pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected." Id.

In this matter, Karp claims he will suffer irreparable harm if the tenure charges are not dismissed because the loss of his salary would have an "impact on his ability to even pay for his roof expenses." Petitioner's Brief, 9. Karp also claims that the pendency of the charges subjects him to ridicule in his municipality. Id.

The loss of salary is purely monetary and, should he prevail on the tenure charges he will be made whole. Further, there is no evidence that Karp will suffer irreparable harm as a result of being "subject to ridicule" in his municipality as the very procedure he is challenging is to keep discussion of the charges out of a public hearing. Therefore, Karp has not "clearly and convincingly" shown that he will suffer immediate or irreparable harm if the tenure charges are not dismissed.

The next standards Karp must meet are whether the legal right underlying his claim is settled and whether he is likely to prevail on that claim. Karp claims that his legal right in this matter arises under the OPMA, specifically N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(b)(8). He asserts he was entitled to (1) notice that his employment status would be discussed at an executive meeting on February 23, 2016 and (2) an opportunity to request that the matter be discussed publicly at that meeting. Barnegat counters that the "Tenure Employees Hearing Law," N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, ("the tenure statute") prohibits a Board's consideration of tenure charges from taking place at a public meeting.

The conflict between the OPMA and the tenure statute was settled initially in Cirangle v. Maywood Bd. of Educ., 164 N.J. Super. 595 (1979). Under Cirangle the tenure statue prevailed over the OPMA. In this matter, however, petitioner argues that before a Board can consider tenure charges in closed session it must first serve the employee with a Rice notice and allow him or her to choose to have the matter discussed in public. Only then he argues can the Board choose to move onto consideration of tenure charges in private as contemplated by the tenure statue.

The OPMA protects "a strong tradition both in this State and in the nation favoring public involvement in almost every aspect of government." Polillo v. Deane, 74 N.J. 562, 569 (N.J. 1977). In the OPMA, the Legislature declared "that the right of the public to be present at all meetings of public bodies . . . is vital to the enhancement and proper functioning of the democratic process; that secrecy in public affairs undermines the faith of the public in government and the public's effectiveness in fulfilling its role in a democratic society, . . . " N.J.S.A. 10:4-7. It also declared > it to be the public policy of this state to insure the right of its citizens to have adequate advance notice of and the right to > attend all meetings of public bodies at which any business affecting the public is discussed or acted upon in any way except only in those circumstances where otherwise the public interest would be clearly endangered or the personal privacy or guaranteed rights of individuals would be clearly in danger of unwarranted invasion.

One exception that allows the public to be excluded from a meeting is when a public body discusses any:

> matter involving the employment, appointment, termination of employment, terms and conditions of employment, evaluation of the performance of, promotion, or disciplining of any . . . current public officer or employee employed or appointed by the public body, unless all the individual employees or appointees whose rights could be adversely affected request in writing that the matter or matters be discussed at a public meeting . . .
> [N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(b)(8). ("the personnel exception")]

The personnel exception identifies a concern for "personal privacy or guaranteed rights of individuals which would be clearly in danger of unwarranted invasion" if these matters were to be discussed in public. Rice v. Union County Regional High School Bd. of Education, 155 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App.Div. 1977). However, to not require specific notice of the matter to be discussed at the meeting would "render useless and inoperative the statutory right granted an employee to have a public discussion of his or her personnel matter." Id. This section of the OPMA "provides a method by which the individual may forego [his] personal privacy and have a public discussion on the matter." Id. "We must presume that the Legislature knew what it was doing and did not intend to establish a useless procedure." Id; Gabin v. Skyline Cabana Club, 54 N.J. 550, 555 (1969). "Strict adherence to the letter of the law is required in considering whether a violation of the [OPMA] has occurred.'" Rice v. Union County Regional High School Bd. of Education, 155 N.J. Super. 64, 70 (App.Div. 1977); quoting Polillo, supra, at 578.

"[T]he right to request a public discussion of a personnel matter presupposes notice to an employee who may be adversely affected . . . ." Oliveri v. Carlstadt-East Rutherford Regional Board of Education, 160 N.J. Super. 131, 133-134 (App.Div. 1978). The personnel exception to the OPMA implies that if an employee decides to request a public hearing, "[he] can only exercise that statutory right . . . if [he has] reasonable advance notice so as to enable [him] to (1) make a decision on whether [he] desire[s] a public discussion and (2) prepare and present an appropriate request in writing." Rice, supra, 155 N.J. Super. at 73.

While the OPMA basically provides that meetings of public bodies . . . must be open to the public at all times, the tenure statue provided otherwise Cirangle v. Maywood Board of Education, 164 N.J. Super. 595, 598 (1979). The statute "details the procedure involved when charges are made against a tenured board of education employee." Id. at 599. When charges are made against a tenured board of education employee, "the Board's role is limited to making findings as to whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges." Id. If probable cause exists, the Board "merely forwards such written charges to the Commissioner of Education for further determination on the merits." Id. "It is at this stage of the proceedings where public hearings must be held and the charged employee is granted the full panoply of his rights to due process." Id. "Unlike the [OPMA], [the tenure statute] does not contain a provision which gives the employee the right to request that charges against him be heard in public." Id. Instead, the tenure statute provides that:

> Any charge made against any employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the secretary of the Board in writing and a written statement of evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the Board . . . After consideration of the charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the Board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary . . . The consideration and actions of the Board as to any charge shall not take place at a public meeting.
> [Id. at 599-00; N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11; emphasis supplied]

In Cirangle, a tenured superintendent of schools was confronted with charges and demanded that the charges be discussed in public. Id. at 597. The Board refused to comply with his request and evaluated the charges against him in closed meetings. Id. at 597-98. Then, the Board forwarded charges over to the Commissioner of Education for determination on the merits. Id. The court acknowledged that the provisions of the OPMA and the tenure statute were in direct conflict regarding the right to a public meeting on the charges. Id. at 598. The court found that the tenure statute was a narrower statute that became effective within nineteen days of the OPMA. Id. at 601-02 and that one purpose of the tenure statute was to remove the discussion of bringing tenure charges from the publicity of the local hearing which "tears the community apart" and "disrupts the orderly conduct of local school affairs." Id. at 601; quoting In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 414 (App. Div. 1967). The court then concluded,

> ["[b]earing in mind the legislative intent to remove hearings of this nature from local school boards because of the disruptive effect upon the community, it becomes apparent that the failure to specifically afford accused employees the right to demand a public hearing cannot be chalked up to legislative oversight." Id. at 602. Therefore, "the Legislature has manifested its intention to exclude the public even in the face of a demand for an open meeting by the affected tenured employee." Id. at 602.]

Here, Karp claims that Cirangle is distinguishable from his case because on February 23, 2016, Barnegat was not certifying tenure charges to the Commissioner, but instead was merely considering the allegations and its potential response. Therefore, Karp claims he was entitled to notice of the meeting. The gravamen of petitioner's argument is that irrespective of the tenure statue he was entitled to a Rice notice of the Board's consideration of possible tenure charges at its February 23, 2016 meeting.

Karp's claim is unlikely to be unsuccessful as this matter falls within the orbit of tenure statute, which has prevailed in the courts over the OPMA. The tenure statute evinces intent to exclude the public from board meetings regarding tenure charges. As a result, once a Board considered the possibility of tenure charges Karp was not entitled to a public hearing discussing those charges. In this matter there is no evidence that the Board considered any other action against Karp at its February 23, 2016 meeting. As its consideration went to tenure charges, it appears Karp had no right to notice and the concomitant ability to respond in public. Instead, under the tenure statue he had notice of the Board's proposed charges and the ability to respond to them prior to the Board's vote on certification. As such Karp has not met the second and third prong of the test for emergent relief.

The final prong of the test for emergent relief assumes a balancing of the equities and interests between the parties. Karp claims that he will suffer a greater harm if emergent relief is not granted because he will be without pay for a period. Petitioner's Brief, 8. Karp contends that if relief is granted the only harm Barnegat will suffer is that it will be required to restart the procedures for bringing tenure charges. However, if emergent relief is granted, the tenure charges will be dismissed and Karp will be reinstated to his position as a teacher. Therefore, Barnegat also has an interest in preventing Karp from teaching while it believes there are grounds for tenure charges.

In this matter the more substantial interest for Barnegat is likely preventing Karp from teaching during the pendency of his tenure charges. These charges allege inappropriate conduct by a teacher towards underage female students and Barnegat has an interest in preventing this conduct in school. This interest must be balanced with the harm that Karp will suffer suspension for a period without pay while the tenure charges proceeds. Because of the severity of the charges, Barnegat and its students will suffer a greater harm if emergent relief is granted. Therefore, the fourth standard for emergent relief has not been met.

ORDER

Petitioner's request for emergent relief is DENIED, no other issues remain.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

APPEARANCES

FOR THE SCHOOL DISTRICT

Therese M. Taraschi, Esq., Brown & Connery, LLP
Tara L. Humma, Esq., Brown & Connery, LLP

FOR THE RESPONDENT

Cosmas P. Diamantis, Esq., Zeller & Wieliczko, LLP

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This case arises under the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ Act" or the "Act"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117, et seq., which became effective on September 1, 2012. Pursuant to the Act, TEACHNJ establishes uniform requirements for the evaluation of teachers, including a process for filing inefficiency charges against teachers whose summative ratings for two (2) consecutive school years were "ineffective" or "partially effective."

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Lefkowitz is a tenured Music Education Teacher within the District. After several years of service, on May 11, 2015, Lefkowitz received a reduction-in-force notice, effective June 30, 2015. On August 31, 2015, Lefkowitz received a recall notice back to the District advising him that he must either accept or reject the position "no later than October 31, 2015." On the same date, August 31, 2015, Lefkowitz was placed on administrative leave "due to issues including, but not limited to, evaluation scores."

Pursuant to the Act, on September 2, 2015, the State-Operated School District of the City of Camden (hereinafter the "District"), specifically N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, filed a tenure charge of inefficiency against Michael Lefkowitz (hereinafter the "Respondent" or "Lefkowitz") alleging that he had received "partially effective" ratings for two (2) consecutive years of "2.56" and "2.36" and, as a result, these summative ratings warranted his dismissal from the District.

Thereafter, the District filed Amended Tenure Charges of Inefficiency on October 1, 2015.

The amended charges and a supporting statement of evidence which the District asserts "was caused by mathematical errors committed by Lefkowitz when he calculated his SY 14-15 Student Growth Objective ("SGO") scores, which altered his summative score and were discovered only after the original charges were served. Based upon this correction, the District revised Lefkowitz's summative evaluation rating" for SY 14-15 from the "2.26" that was noted in the original charges to "2.36."

The Respondent submitted a Position Statement to those amended charges on October 9, 2015. The District certified the charges to the Commissioner of Education on October 27, 2015. Effective October 28, 2015, Lefkowitz was suspended without pay in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

The Respondent filed a Motion for Summary Decision with the Commissioner of Education, David C. Hespe ("Commissioner") on November 6, 2015. The Commissioner appointed the undersigned to arbitrate this matter on November 13, 2015. The District filed its Opposition to the Motion for Summary Decision on December 4, 2015. The Respondent submitted his Reply on December 18, 2015. The Arbitrator issued his Opinion and Decision, denying the Motion on January 9, 2016.

The parties exchanged discovery. After discovery was complete, the District filed a Motion for Summary Decision on February 1, 2016. The Respondent submitted his Opposition to the Motion for Summary Decision on February 5, 2016. During a conference call with the parties on February 9, 2016, the Arbitrator issued a bench decision denying the District's Motion on timeliness grounds.

The arbitration hearing in the instant case was held on February 11, 2016, February 16, 2016, February 22, 2016 and February 25, 2016. The parties submitted post-hearing briefs dated March 23, 2016 and reply briefs dated March 28, 2016.

CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES

District Position

The District, which has the "ultimate burden of proving the tenure charges" against Lefkowitz, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, maintains that it evaluated Lefkowitz in compliance with the evaluation requirements of TEACHNJ. With respect to the District's evaluation procedure, "the District observed Mr. Lefkowitz three (3) times during the 2013-2014 school year in accordance with the law. Based on his poor performance, he received a 'partially effective' summative evaluation rating, necessitating his placement on a corrective action plan ("CAP"). Accordingly, the District placed Mr. Lefkowitz on a CAP for the 2014-2015 school year and provided him with ample support and opportunity to improve. In accordance with the law, the District observed Mr. Lefkowitz four (4) times during the 2014-2015 school year. He received post-observation conferences following every observation and had a mid-year CAP review. Nevertheless, Mr. Lefkowitz failed to improve. He again merely received a 'partially effective' summative evaluation rating and thus, the District was required to bring tenure charges of inefficiency against him in accordance with the law."

According to the District, it "adhered or, at minimum, substantially adhered to the evaluation process with Mr. Lefkowitz." Since he failed to receive an effective rating for two (2) consecutive years, the District contends that "the tenure charges must be sustained and Mr. Lefkowitz permanently dismissed from employment with the District."

I. TEACHER PRACTICE EVALUATION INSTRUMENT – DANIELSON AND TEACHSCAPE

A. Charlotte Danielson Framework for Teaching

Pursuant to TEACHNJ, the District adopted the Charlotte Danielson Framework for Teaching ("Danielson") – a pre-approved evaluation instrument. Under Danielson, teachers are scored on a scale of 1 to 4: 1-1.84 – ineffective; 1.85-2.64 – partially effective; 2.65-3.49 – effective; 3.5-4 – highly effective. The Teacher Practice score, which is based almost entirely upon classroom observations,[1] is one part of the two-part evaluation process under TEACHNJ. As discussed below, Student Growth Objectives (SGOs) comprise the second part of the evaluation process under TEACHNJ.

"Danielson encompasses four (4) domains: 1) Planning and Preparation; 2) Classroom Environment; 3) Instruction; and 4) Professional Responsibilities. (See Am. Tenure Charges ¶ 6; 3T 536:1-10; P-9.) Each domain contains a number of 'components' or 'subdomains,'[2] which are scored by the observer following the observation on a scale of 1 to 4 – 1 – ineffective; 2 – partially effective; 3 – effective; and 4 – highly effective. The component/subdomain scores within a particular domain are then averaged, yielding the score for that domain for the observation. The domain scores for each observation are averaged to obtain a total domain score for the school year and then assigned their percentage/weight of the Teacher Practice score." (See Am. Tenure Charges ¶ 6; 2T 230:22-231:22).

Teachers in the District received Danielson training prior to and during the 2013-2014 academic year and during the 2014-2015 academic year. (Dist. brief @ 5).

B. Teachscape

"The District also implemented Teachscape, a web-based software program utilized by 170 New Jersey School Districts to facilitate and implement Danielson, its evaluation rubric. Information regarding the evaluation process, included, but was not limited to, observation reports, student growth objectives ('SGOs'), and summative ratings that are recorded and stored electronically in Teachscape. Scheduling of observations, pre- and post-conferences, summative conferences, and other meetings may occur through Teachscape as well. Further, as discussed at length in Section IV, Teachscape calculates the summative ratings for the school year." (Id.).

"Prior to and during the 2013-14 school year and during the 2014-15 school year, each District employee responsible for observing teachers received Teachscape training. Teachers also received Teachscape training and support from the District when necessary." (Id.)

C. Classroom Observations in Teachscape

The Teacher Practice Component of the two-part evaluation process measures the teacher's instructional skill through classroom observation. Teachscape facilitates the completion and scoring of classroom observations under the Danielson framework.

Referring to the testimony of the District's evaluators/observers, the District notes that generally they conducted their observations using a laptop computer after logging onto Teachscape. They collected "evidence" by typing what they see and hear as the teacher provides instruction. As they "script" the lesson, the evidence is automatically time-stamped. "After the observation, the observer aligns the time-stamped evidence to the appropriate component(s)/subdomain(s) within the domain."

"After aligning the evidence to the appropriate component(s)/ subdomain(s), the observer assigns them a score between 1 and 4, as discussed above. Teachscape also affords observers the option of assigning insufficient evidence when there is no evidence to justify a score for a particular component(s)/subdomain(s). Observers also have the option of assigning critical attributes to each component/subdomain to provide further context for their scores. Once the scores are entered, Teachscape generates an observation report containing all of the scores, evidence, and critical attributes assigned to the components/subdomains within the domains, which is available for the teacher's review prior to the post observation conference." (id.)

There was a difference of opinion among the evaluators regarding whether evidence and/or critical attributes are required before a component/subdomain score can be assigned. The District relies on the testimony of Mr. Pillsbury, Implementation Manager, in the Office of Evaluation, who indicated that neither is required to assign a score under TEACHNJ and District policy.

D. Pre and Post Observation Conferences

TEACHNJ requires a pre-observation conference be completed prior to every announced observation, and post-observation conferences are completed following every observation. Both conferences are usually scheduled through Teachscape.

"Prior to the pre-observation conference, the teacher completes and uploads a Pre-Observation Conference Form in Teachscape. This form contains a series of questions regarding the lesson to be presented at the upcoming observation. During the pre-observation conference, the teacher and the observer discuss the design and goals of the lesson within the context of the Danielson domains and their corresponding components/subdomains. It is also an opportunity for the teacher to voice any concerns he may have regarding the lesson and/or students in the class (e.g. problematic student behavior)." (Dist. brief @7).

"After the component/subdomain scores for each domain are submitted, Teachscape generates an automatic email to the teacher advising that his scores are available for review. Once the scores become available, the teacher completes and uploads a Post-Observation Conference Form in Teachscape. (P. Ex. #55). This form contains a series of questions designed to have the teacher reflect on the successfulness of the lesson, including the strengths and weaknesses of the instruction delivered. During the post-observation conference, the teacher and the observer review this form as well as the scores and evidence assigned to the different components/subdomains on the observation report. The observer provides feedback on the areas in need of improvement and strategies to improve performance in these areas." (See id.)

"Following the completion of the post-observation conference, during which the scores are discussed, Teachscape generates an automatic email to the teacher advising that his scores have been finalized and cannot be changed. (See P. Ex. #56). At that point, the observation is complete." (Id.)

II. Student Growth Objectives ("SGO")

"SGOs represent the totality of student growth from the beginning of the school year to the end of the school year. Student growth is measured by taking baseline or diagnostic data on students in the beginning of the year and then setting growth marks or goals for the students to achieve before the end of the school year. The goals are set by the teacher with input from the administrator(s) and ultimately, finalized by the teacher and the administrator(s). At the end of the school year, the teacher is assigned two SGO scores based upon the percentage of students who meet the designated goals. Prior to and during the 2013-2014 school year and during the 2014-2015 school year, teachers received SGO training and support." (Dist. brief @ 8).

> "In addition to his teacher practice score, Mr. Lefkowitz received an SGO score of "3.45" for the 2013-2014 school year. (See id.) His SGO and Teacher Practice were assigned their respective weights/ percentages (15% and 85% respectively) and added together to produce a summative rating, which corresponds to one of the four (4) rating categories." (id.)

III. Evaluation Scoring in Teachscape

A teacher's summative rating is the combination of his/her Teacher Practice score and, in part, his SGO score. During the 2013-14 school year, the Teacher Practice Score comprised 85% and the SGOs comprised 15% of the teacher's summative rating. During the 2014-15 school year, the Teacher Practice score comprised 80% and the SGOs comprise 20% of each teacher's summative ratings.

A. Calculation of Summative Score

After the observation, SGO and Domain 4 Scores are finalized. Teachscape calculates, based on a pre-loaded formula, the teacher's overall summative rating for the school year. "Notably, this pre-loaded formula, which consists entirely of averaging at the domain level, is consistent with the language in the District evaluation overview." The numerical component/subdomain scores within each domain are averaged to obtain the domain scores for that particular observation. The domain scores for each observation are then averaged to obtain the total domain scores for the school year. The total domain scores are assigned their specific percentage/weight of the Teacher Practice Score and added together to obtain the Teacher Practice score for the school year.

B. Summative Evaluation

At the end of the school year, Teachscape generates a Summative Form containing the teacher's summative ratings, Teacher Practice and SGO scores. The teacher and the administrator participate in a summative conference, during which the scores on this form are reviewed. If a teacher received an ineffective or partially effective score, the teacher would be placed on a Corrective Action Plan ("CAP") for the upcoming school year, and the potential for tenure charges for inefficiency would ensue following a second consecutive ineffective or partially effective score.

C. Corrective Action Plan ("CAP")

TEACHNJ requires that a teacher who has received a partially effective or ineffective summative rating for a school year be placed on a CAP during the next school year. The CAP is drafted by the administrator with input from the teacher in terms of the specific areas in need of improvement, goals, and support services that will be provided to assist the teacher in meeting these goals.

"As required by TEACHNJ, the District ensures that teachers placed on a CAP receive a mid-year CAP review with an administrator during which the teacher's progress is discussed."

IV. 2013-2014 Academic Year

During the 2013-14 school year, Lefkowitz worked at Davis Elementary School as a music teacher. He received three (3) formal observations that year.

A. Observation One: 1/10/13 – Leon Mashore (Announced)

Mr. Leon Mashore ("Mashore") has been employed by the District for twenty-four years. He has been a Vice Principal for the past nineteen (19) years. He holds a standard principal and supervisory certificate issued by the New Jersey Department of Education ("NJDOE").

Mr. Mashore testified that he was trained on the Danielson Framework during the spring 2012-13 and Teachscape. He testified that he had to complete a Danielson/Teachscape test before September of the next school year (2013-2014). He explained that the test focused on bias avoidance and was based upon practice videos of observations. The test was scored, and if the observer was proficient in the Danielson Framework, s(he) received a certificate of proficiency. (P. Ex. #34).

Prior to conducting the Respondent's first observation during the 2013-14 school year, a pre-observation occurred on January 13, 2014. Lefkowitz submitted his pre-observation conference form on January 14, 2014, after the pre-conference had taken place. (P. Exs. #36, #37).

The observation occurred on January 21, 2014. (P. Exs. #35, #64). Mashore testified that the announced observation would have been at least twenty (20) minutes long. He completed the observation in Teachscape that same day at 1:40 p.m. Contemporaneously, Mr. Lefkowitz received an email from Teachscape indicating that "his scores were available for review." Mashore confirmed this observation in Teachscape on January 27, 2014 at 8:37 a.m. meaning "it is completed and the scores are finalized and cannot be changed." (P. Ex. #66).

The post-observation conference was held on or about January 23, 2014 or January 24, 2014, but definitely prior to January 27, 2014 when he "confirmed the observation in Teachscape." In Mashore's recollection, he would have first discussed Lefkowitz's areas of strength and then went into his areas in need of improvement. He recalled that Lefkowitz had some trouble in the areas of "questioning, answering and discussion and the other area was assessment." (Tr. @ 487-488). "Mashore did not receive any rebuttal to his observation from Lefkowitz."

Mashore further testified that teachers were provided with extensive training in the 2013-14 school year, including professional development sessions on Mondays and Thursdays focused on Danielson and the domains and components of the rubric. Teachers were also provided with the "Teach Like a Champion" book. Additionally, he testified that he did not receive any training in music and, although there had been a music curriculum, with a music supervisor whose position was eliminated in the prior year. "For music, we may have asked them to work in conjunction with a math teacher since music had beats and rhythm and time things..." (Tr. @ 496-497).

B. Observation Two: 3/4/14 – John Ketterer (Unannounced)

Mr. John Ketterer ("Ketterer") was employed as a teacher-trainer during the 2013-14 school year. His duties included training teachers in the Danielson Framework. He has held a standard supervisor certificate since 2001.

Ketterer observed Lefkowitz on March 4, 2014. (P. Ex. #31). He testified that the unannounced observation would have been around thirty (30) minutes long. He completed the observation in Teachscape on March 9, 2014 at 3:35 p.m. Lefkowitz concurrently received an email from Teachscape indicating that his scores were available for review. (P. Ex. #70). Ketterer confirmed his observation in Teachscape on March 21, 2014 at 10:33 a.m.

Among the concerns Ketterer had with Lefkowitz's performance was that students were getting out of their seats, there were too many chairs in the room, and students were ripping pages out of books.

The post-observation conference was held on March 21, 2014. Ketterer testified that he did most of the talking during his post-observation conference with Lefkowitz and was not sure whether Lefkowitz was "hearing him." Lefkowitz submitted his post-observation conference form. He neither mentioned any problems he had with his observation at the post-observation conference nor submitted a rebuttal. (P. Ex. #39).

Ketterer responded to questions about IEPs. He described how teachers may accommodate students with IEPs, with the teacher having the responsibility of obtaining the IEPs and implementing it for particular students. Ketterer testified that knowledge of the students' IEPs would be important to a music teacher. (Tr. @ 306).

C. Observation Three: 3/13/14 – Tracey Reed Thompson (Unannounced)

Ms. Thompson has been a principal with the District for approximately five years. During the 2013-14 school year, she was the Principal of Davis Family School. She held a provisional principal certificate during the 2013-14 school year and a standard supervisor's certificate during that year. Thompson completed the Danielson proficiency test and received training in Danielson and Teachscape before and during the 2013-14 school year.

She observed Lefkowitz for approximately twenty (20) minutes on March 12, 2014. The post-observation conference occurred on March 13, 2014. As noted in his post-conference form, Lefkowitz had problems with classroom procedures and assessment of the lesson. Although teachers were made aware that they could submit rebuttals if they disagreed with any part of the evaluation process, Lefkowitz did not submit a rebuttal to his observation.

She testified that teachers at Davis before and during the 2013-14 school year received training and coaching on the Danielson rubric, Teachscape and SGOs.

With respect to IEPs, Thompson testified that they were accessible to teachers, upon request, from the teacher's homeroom teacher or from the guidance counselor. (Tr. @ 440).

Thompson further testified that occasionally observations would overlap within the three "cycles" set for a particular school year; however, these cycles were not required under the Act.

D. SGOs for 2013-14 School Year

Thompson testified that both she and Lefkowitz signed off on his SGOs on June 12, 2014. (P. Ex. #45). She explained that she calculated the scores and entered them into Teachscape based on the results in his reports. (Tr. @ 381-282). She did not have knowledge that those SGO scores were ever changed. Pillsbury testified that Thompson entered a 4 and a 2.9 at the end of the school year. Lefkowitz, to her knowledge, never submitted a rebuttal to his SGO scores.

E. Summative/Domain 4

Thompson testified that she scored the Respondent's Domain 4 for the 2013-14 school year. She explained that teachers are able to submit artifacts for Domain 4. Lefkowitz submitted the following items in support of his Domain 4 score:

- A list of Profession Development hours
- A professional learning community agenda
- Student quick reference chart
- Faculty meeting agenda
- Professional development log
- Log of contributions made to teachers
- Student discipline log
- Parent-teacher communication log
- Log showing contributions to staff

- Log showing support provided to students
- Student work

Principal Thompson met with Lefkowitz to go over Domain 4 at the Summative Conference and entered his Domain 4 scores into Teachscape. After discussing his Teacher Practice and SGO scores, Thompson and Lefkowitz signed off on the short summative evaluation form. In addition, Lefkowitz submitted a summative conference form wherein he identified "significant areas for growth." Thompson submitted a similar form. (P. Exs. #49, #50). She completed Lefkowitz's summative conference for the 2013-2014 School Year on June 12, 2014. (Tr. @ 390) (P. Ex. #48).

Thompson further testified that all teachers at Davis received various training and coaching throughout the year. Coaching was done by the administration, by teacher-leaders in the building, and by outside district individuals that were supervisors. She also testified that there were walk-throughs completed and that she specifically recalled doing walk-throughs of Mr. Lefkowitz's classes. She recalled that his issues, which she would have discussed with him, related to his classroom management and assessment throughout the lessons.

V. 2014-2015 Academic Year

During the 2014-15 academic year, Lefkowitz worked at the Riletta Twyne Cream Family School ("Cream") as a music teacher. He received four (4) formal observations that year.

A. Corrective Action Plan ("CAP")

During the 2014-15 school year, Ms. Natalie Goode ("Goode") was the Lead Educator at the Cream School. The Lead Educator position was a supervisory position and she was required to hold a supervisor certificate. Unfortunately, Ms. Goode passed away during the 2014-15 school year. Ms. Goode received the requisite training and certification on Danielson and Teachscape.

Lefkowitz was placed on a CAP at the beginning of the 2014-15 school year due to his 2.36 partially effective score for the 2013-14 school year. Ms. Hye-Won Gehring ("Gehring"), Principal at the Cream School during 2014-15, assisted Goode in developing Lefkowitz's CAP. Ms. Goode emailed Gehring a draft of the CAP prior to her meeting with Lefkowitz where it was received and executed. Gehring testified that Lefkowitz participated in the creation of the CAP and signed it, indicating that he received a copy and contributed to its contents.

B. Mid-Year CAP Review

Gehring testified that Lefkowitz received weekly coaching from Goode during the 2014-15 school year and coaching with herself from December 2014-February 2015 on Danielson and the areas specified in the CAP. Grade level meetings and weekly professional development sessions after school were also provided. With respect to the after school sessions, Gehring noted that Lefkowitz opted to stay for the contractually mandated 45 minutes rather than the full 90 minute session. He also observed an experienced teacher and received feedback from Gehring following informal observations and walk-throughs.

A mid-year CAP meeting was conducted on February 11, 2015 during which Lefkowitz's progress toward the goals specified within the CAP was discussed.

C. Observation One: 9/11/14 - Natalie Goode (Unannounced)

Goode observed Lefkowitz on September 11, 2014. (P. Exs. #22, 55, 77). Based on the time-stamped evidence, the observation was at least 17 minutes long. Pillsbury testified that "the time-stamped evidence is not a precise indicator of the exact duration of the lesson as it merely captures the exact time the first and last piece of evidence was typed, which is not synonymous with the exact time the observer entered or exited the classroom." (Tr. @ 583-584). Lefkowitz admitted that he had no reason to dispute that the observation lasted the requisite 20 minutes. (Tr.@ 901-902).

Goode completed the observation in Teachscape on September 17, 2014 at 11:41 a.m. Concurrently, Lefkowitz received an email from Teachscape indicating that the scores from his observation were available to review. The post-observation conference was held on September 17, 2014 at 1:35 p.m. Prior to the post-observation conference, Lefkowitz submitted a post-observation form. Lefkowitz did not submit a rebuttal to his observation.

D. Observation Two: 10/16/14 - Hye-Won Gehring (Unannounced)

Gehring observed Lefkowitz on October 16, 2014. It was unannounced and consumed a minimum of twenty (20) minutes. Gehring completed her observation in Teachscape, with Lefkowitz receiving an email from Teachscape on October 21, 2014 at 2:29 p.m. On October 22, 2014, Lefkowitz received an email from Teachscape indicating that his scores were finalized and could not be changed. (P. Ex. #58).

Among the concerns identified by Gehring were "the content of the lesson was not age appropriate, numerous students were misbehaving during the lesson and Lefkowitz struggled in Domains 2 and 3 with regard to managing student behavior and engaging students in learning." (P. Ex. #9).

Gehring testified that the post-observation conference would have been held within ten (10) days of the October 16, 2014 observation. She recalled that Lefkowitz did not submit his post-conference reflection form prior to the post-observation conference but submitted it on Sunday, October 26, 2014 after the post-observation conference had taken place. (P. Ex. #9). From his submission, Gehring was able to determine that the post-observation conference took place prior to October 26, 2014. "As a result, she assigned him a score of insufficient evidence on Domain 4a, Reflecting on Teaching."

Gehring testified that during the post-observation conference, she discussed with Lefkowitz "engaging students in learning and managing student behavior and provided strategies for improving his performance in these areas." (Tr. @ 61-62). The Respondent did not submit a rebuttal to the observation.

E. Observation Three: 11/21/14 – Gehring (Unannounced)

Gehring also observed Lefkowitz on November 21, 2014. It was unannounced and at least twenty (20) minutes long. Gehring completed the observation in Teachscape and Lefkowitz received an email on 11/24/14. On December 19, 2014, Lefkowitz received an email from Teachscape indicating that his scores were finalized and could not be changed.

Among the concerns Gehring had with the lesson was its purpose. Although Lefkowitz was "teaching a Kindergarten class, he had the students complete several different tasks throughout the lesson (e.g. watching a video of Mozart, coloring a picture of Mozart, and learning the different parts of the piano)," which Gehring thought was too much for them to learn at one time. She also had "continuing concerns about his ability to manage student behavior and noted that the atmosphere in the classroom was chaotic, as an inordinate amount of time was spent passing out crayon, with the students fighting amongst themselves over some."

While Gehring could not recall the precise date of the post-observation conference, she testified that it would have been within ten (10) days of the November 21, 2014 observation. Lefkowitz deviated from standard practice by submitting his post-conference reflection form on November 24, 2014. As a result, she assigned him insufficient evidence on Domain 4a. During the post-observation conference, Gehring addressed the areas where Respondent needed growth, including a protocol for handing out crayons. Lefkowitz did not express any concerns regarding his scores and did not submit a rebuttal.

F. Observation Four: 3/10/15 – Gehring (Announced)

Gehring observed Lefkowitz for the final time on March 10, 2015. Her observation was announced and was for a minimum of twenty (20) minutes. Lefkowitz submitted a pre-observation conference form prior to the observation and received as score of "3" on Domain 4a, Reflecting on Teaching. (P. Exs. #11, #14). Lefkowitz received an email from Teachscape on March 16, 2015 at 9:50 a.m. indicating that his scores were available for review.

Gehring testified that this was Lefkowitz's best observation for three reasons: "First, she 'gave him the benefit of the doubt,' because he was in a different building due to the flood[3] and had to utilize another teacher's classroom. Second, Ms. Blair, the teacher whose classroom Mr. Lefkowitz was utilizing, chose to remain in the room during this observation and her presence assisted with classroom management, an area in which he greatly struggled during his prior observations. In fact, Ms. Gehring testified that Ms. Blair decided to remain in her classroom because if she did not, her classroom would be destroyed and her students would get into fights. Third, Mr. Lefkowitz had begun incorporating the feedback and coaching he had received throughout the school year, which resulted in better scores. However, the lesson continued to lack any type of assessment tools to determine whether the students comprehended the lesson."

Gehring testified that the post-observation conference would have been within ten (10) days of the March 10, 2015 observation. Lefkowitz did not submit a rebuttal.

G. Student Growth Objectives ("SGOs")

Gehring testified that either she or Goode approved Lefkowitz's SGOs for the 2014-15 school year. Gehring further testified that both she and Lefkowitz signed off on his SGOs on May 11, 2015. (P. Exs. #16, 17). Gehring entered Lefkowitz's SGO scores into Teachscape, and Teachscape factored them into his summative rating.

---

[3] During February 2015, there was a flood at the Cream School. For the remainder of the year, the students and teachers were relocated to different schools within the District. (See 1T 37:17-20.)

While Gehring did not notice any issues with Lefkowitz's SCO scores during their May 11, 2015 meeting, she later noticed that he made an error when calculating the scores. "Specifically, Mr. Lefkowitz assigned himself an 'O' for his 'high group' which is not possible, as '1' is the lowest score a teacher may receive." Ms. Gehring testified that she corrected the error in Teachscape, which resulted in Mr. Lefkowitz's SGO scores increasing from '1.85' and '2.67' to '2.19' and '3.38' respectively. (See id.) As a result, his summative rating for the 2014-2015 school year was increased from the '2.26,' initially reported to a '2.36. Despite the increase, Mr. Lefkowitz remained 'partially effective' for the 2014-2015 school." (See id.)

Mr. Lefkowitz never submitted a rebuttal to his SGO scores. (Tr. @ 107).

H. Summative/Domain 4

In scoring the Respondent's Domain 4 for the 2014-15 school year, Gehring took account of the fact that many classrooms were destroyed in the flood preventing many teachers from submitting artifacts that they otherwise would have submitted for Domain 4 scoring. "However, Mr. Lefkowitz did not submit any evidence for his Domain 4 scores beyond his professional development hours, which were contained in Teachscape."

"Ms. Gehring testified that she considered the following when assigning Mr. Lefkowitz's Domain 4 scores: multiple teachers requested not to have music on their designated days due to his poor classroom management, resulting in student misbehavior; multiple students were injured during his class without him having any knowledge of what happened; he was observed working on his laptop rather than paying attention to the students; he repeatedly failed to timely submit post-conference reflection forms; no formal school concerts were held, and he failed to engage with the parents and community." (See P. Exs.#19, #20, #23); (Tr. @100-103). (Dist. brief @26).

Gehring met with Lefkowitz to review his Domain 4 at the summative conference and enter his Domain 4 scores into Teachscape. This summative conference was completed on May 26, 2015. (P. Ex. #21). Gehring recalled that the conference was "very brief and a mere formality" since the Respondent's position had been subjected to a reduction in force, and therefore, he would not be employed with the District for the 2015-16 school year.

I. Other Testimony of Ms. Gehring

Principal Gehring testified that student IEPs were available in the main office during the 2014-15 school year. According to Gehring, Lefkowitz could have retrieved the IEPs for his students at any time.

She further testified that Lefkowitz was not a "good fit" for the students in the Cream School, largely because of his poor classroom management. She described his classes as often "very chaotic, bordering on dangerous, with students throwing things." (Tr. @ 128-130; 192-194). She personally observed the students in a 3rd grade boys class "screaming and throwing pencils," necessitating that she intervene in order to calm them down. Moreover, several teachers requested that Lefkowitz not come into their classes for music. "In short, student safety was an ongoing concern with Mr. Lefkowitz because students were having fist fights in his class and getting hurt."

In terms of her formal observations, Ms. Gehring testified that Mr. Lefkowitz was either teaching content that was inappropriate for the grade level of the students or very boring."

VI. Admissions By Mr. Lefkowitz

The District has delineated several "admissions" purportedly made by the Respondent that it submits in support of its decision to file the tenure charge as follows:

A. Admissions Regarding the Evaluation Process.

> Mr. Lefkowitz admitted during his testimony that his first observation during the 2013-2014 school year was completed by Mr. Mashore. (Tr. @898-899). He admitted that he had no reason to dispute that:
>
> - It was preceded by a pre-conference;
> - It occurred on January 21, 2014;
> - It was 20 minutes long; and
> - He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation.
>
> With regard to Mr. Ketterer's observation, Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he had no reason to dispute that:
>
> - It occurred on March 4, 2014;
> - It was 20 minutes long; and
> - He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation.
>
> (See 4T 899:14-900:5.) With regard to Ms. Thompson's observation, Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he had no reason to dispute that:
> - It occurred on March 13, 2014;
> - It was 20 minutes long; and
> - He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation.

(Tr. @900). Mr. Lefkowitz testified that he had no reason to dispute that he had a summative conference with Ms. Thompson on June 12, 2014. (Tr. @ 905).

Mr. Lefkowitz also testified that he had a CAP meeting on September 12, 2014. (Tr. @900-901). He admitted to signing the CAP on that date as well. He also testified that he had a mid-year CAP review meeting on February 11, 2015 and that he signed off on the CAP on that date.

With regard to the 2014-2015 school year, Mr. Lefkowitz admitted during his testimony that his first observation was completed by Ms. Natalie Goode. (Tr. @ 901-902). He admitted that he had no reason to dispute that:

- It occurred on September 11, 2014;
- It was 20 minutes long; and
- He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation.

Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he had a second observation with Ms. Gehring on October 16, 2014. (Tr. @902-903). He admitted that he had no reason to dispute that:

- It occurred on October 16, 2014;
- It was 20 minutes long; and
- He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation.

Mr. Lefkowitz's third observation was with Ms. Gehring. He had no reason to dispute that:

- It occurred on November 21, 2014;
- It was 20 minutes long; and
- He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation.

(Tr.@903) Finally, Mr. Lefkowitz had a fourth observation with Ms. Gehring. He testified that he had no reason to dispute that:

- It occurred on March 10, 2015;
- It was 20 minutes long;
- He had a post-conference within 15 days of the observation; and
- He had a pre-conference prior to the March 10, 2015 observation.

(Tr.@903-904). Finally, Mr. Lefkowitz testified that he had no reason to dispute that he had a summative conference with Ms. Gehring on May 26, 2015. (See 4T 905:11-17.) Mr. Lefkowitz also admitted that he never submitted a rebuttal to any observations in either the 2013-2014 school year or the 2014-2015 school year. (Tr.@855).

B. Admissions Regarding Training and Supports Received

Mr. Lefkowitz admits that he "was given professional development on Danielson." (Tr.@761). He does not dispute that he attended all of the training sessions listed in his records of professional development hours for 2013-2014 or 2014-2015. ( P. Exs. #20, #46). He also admitted that he received the "Teach Like a Champion" book described by Mr. Mashore as a resource teachers could use for instruction under Danielson. (Tr. @775-776).

During the 2014-2015 school year, Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he received coaching from Ms. Goode once per week until she passed away sometime in December or January (over holiday break.) (Tr. @ 802-804). He also admitted that she performed walk-throughs of his classroom. (See id.) Lefkowitz received additional coaching from Principal Gehring until the flood at Cream School sometime in February. (Tr.@ 810-811) Finally, Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he was also given the opportunity to observe an effective music teacher, which he did. (Tr. @ 880).

C. Admissions Regarding Individual Education Plans (IEPs)

Mr. Lefkowitz described having concerns with the students in his class who may have had IEPs. He explained that in the 2013-2014 school year, he requested copies of the IEPs, but was unable to obtain them. However, after this initial difficulty, he never went back and tried to retrieve them. (See 4T 871:9-872:25.) He admitted that he never alerted any of the observers about these concerns, wrote about them in his post-conference forms, or submitted rebuttals of his observations due to these concerns. (Tr. @872-873, 876-877).

During the 2014-2015 school year, other than asking Ms. Goode a few times at most for the IEPs that would apply to his students, he never tried again to obtain the IEPs. (See 4T 874:3-876:10.) Rather, Mr. Lefkowitz testified that he "just got frustrated and stopped asking altogether." (Tr. @ 869 -871).

D. Admissions Regarding 2014-2015 Domain 4 Scoring

Mr. Lefkowitz testified that after the flood at Cream during the 2014-2015 school year, he was unable to get access to his Domain 4 binder. (Tr. @ 823). He testified that Ms. Gehring said she would "take into consideration that a lot of the documents were not able to be produced, because they were at the Cream School and were in places that were inaccessible to the teachers." (Tr. @824). He also admitted that he had four (4) months to collect Domain 4 evidence, but did not do so. (Tr. @ 860-861). In fact, only after being questioned regarding whether he collected any evidence in those months did he allege that Principal Gehring said not to bring any Domain 4 evidence to be considered.

Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he did not contact anyone at the District to dispute his scores or submit a rebuttal or grievance even though he knew he was partially effective during the 2013-2014 school year and was on a CAP during the 2014-2015 school year. (Tr. @864 He explained that he did not do anything because he had already been RIF'ed at the time.

E. Admissions Regarding the Timing of Observations #2 and #3 in the 2013-2014 School Year

Mr. Lefkowitz alleges that in the 2013-2014 school year, his post-observation conference with Mr. Ketterer for his second observation occurred either on the same day as or after his third observation with Principal Thompson. (Tr. @ 892-893). Mr. Lefkowitz admitted, however, that he did not mention this to Principal Thompson either during her observation or at his post-conference. He admitted that he never mentioned this to anyone else nor did he ever submit a rebuttal to either observation. (Dist. brief @ 28-31).

VII. Legal Standard

In its argument, the District reiterates that the legal standard for an arbitrator's review of an inefficiency tenure charge is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 as follows:

> in rendering a decision the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not:
> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
>
> (2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
>
> (3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or
> (4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.
> b. In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraph (1) through (4) of subsection a. of > this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall determine if that fact materially impacted the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the [district] and the employee shall be dismissed. (Emphasis District).

The District maintains that it "followed, or at least substantially followed, the evaluation process, but Mr. Lefkowitz failed to achieve an effective summative rating in either the 2013-14 or 2014-15 school years."

Referring to the "Lefkowitz admissions," the District argues that "the required training was provided to observers during the 2013-14 school year and each was appropriately certified and working in a supervisory position." Mr. Mashore, Mr. Ketterer and Principal Thompson testified that they were extensively trained on the Danielson Framework and thereby met the requirement of N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.2(b). Also, Ketterer and Thompson hold standard supervisor certificates, and Mashore holds a standard principal certificate. Mashore also holds a standard principal certificate and Thompson holds a provisional principal certificate.

In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.2, all of the observers worked in a supervisory capacity: Mashore served as a Vice Principal, Ketterer served as a Teacher Trainer Evaluator, and Thompson was Lefkowitz's principal and direct supervisor during 2013-14.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.2(b), Lefkowitz, in his teaching position, was trained on the rubric. Mashore and Ketterer attested to this training in their testimony. They received Danielson training and SGO training. The District notes that "there is no statutory requirement for 'music specific' Danielson training." Ketterer testified that all teachers were given a copy of the critical attributes upon which they were to be observed. Principal Thompson testified that teachers at Davis received training and coaching during 2013-14.

The District further maintains that it observed the Respondent three (3) times in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(c) in the first year, with each observation lasting at least twenty (20) minutes. At least one observation occurred during the first half of the academic year and at least one occurred during the second half of the academic year.

The District next delineates that for each of Lefkowitz's three (3) observations in 2013-14, a post-observation conference was held within fifteen (15) days pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(b).

The District maintains that N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(c) was satisfied when Mashore conducted a pre-observation conference with Lefkowitz preceding his announced observation. Pillsbury testified that Thompson inputted Lefkowitz's SG0 scores, a 4 and a 2.9 respectively, into Teachscape. Subsequently, Thompson entered Lefkowitz's SGO scores into his summative evaluation. (P. Ex. #75). Also, Lefkowitz had a summative evaluation conference on June 12, 2014 and Thompson included his Domain 4 score into his summative evaluation.

The Respondent was placed on a CAP and met with Goode on September 12, 2014 to review his CAP. Lefkowitz acknowledged his signature was on the CAP directly under the statement which read: "My signature below indicates that I have received a copy of this Corrective Action Plan and that I understand and contributed to its contents. (P. Ex. #3). It is undisputed that a teacher on a CAP and his supervisor must meet by February 15th to review his progress toward his goals in the CAP. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(m). It is undisputed that Mr. Lefkowitz met with either Hope Edwards Perry or Principal Gehring on February 11, 2015 to review his progress in accordance with his CAP. (Tr. @ 33-34)(P. Ex. #8). Mr. Lefkowitz admitted that he met with someone on that date and that he signed off on the mid-year CAP review portion of his CAP document."

Gehring testified that Lefkowitz was provided with "weekly coaching sessions, grade-level meetings and professional development sessions each week." Prior to Ms. Goode's death, she also met weekly with Lefkowitz concerning his CAP. According to the testimony of Gehring and Lefkowitz, he participated in a mid-year CAP review on February 11, 2015. In addition, the District notes that Lefkowitz was given the opportunity to observe an effective music teacher but chose not do so.

According to the District, the Respondent failed to achieve an effective summative rating for the 2013-2014 school year, despite the fact the District followed the evaluation process.

Similarly, for the 2014-15 school year, the District observed Lefkowitz four times, on September 11, 2014 (Goode), October 16, 2014 (Gehring), November 21, 2014 (Gehring) and March 10, 2015 (Gehring). The particulars of the observation process were adhered to as in 2013-14, including observations of at least 20 minutes, post-observation conferences within 15 days, and one pre-observation conference preceding the announced and 4th observation.

Respondent also had a summative evaluation conference on May 26, 2015 where his Domain 4 scores were included in his summative rating. Lefkowitz admitted that he did not bring any documents to be reviewed at his Domain 4/summative meeting.

VIII. Arbitrary and Capricious

Referring to the statutory criteria, the District asserts that its "actions with regard to Mr. Lefkowitz were neither arbitrary nor capricious." Defining "arbitrary and/or capricious" in the case law as an action having "no rational basis" or a "willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances," the District maintains that "the fact the District observed Mr. Lefkowitz allegedly without considering that certain students had IEPs was not an arbitrary and capricious action."

The District alludes to the testimony of Ketterer that it was the teacher's responsibility to obtain the IEPs and implement them. The District deems dubious Lefkowitz's claim that he could not obtain the student IEPs in 10 months. "While Mr. Lefkowitz described weak efforts to obtain the IEPs, he admitted that he got frustrated and gave up." He is also deemed "not credible where he admitted that he never brought any of his concerns to his principals in his post-observation conference or by way of rebutting his observation scores." (See, Tr. @ 872-873; 876-877).

The District further disputes the Respondent's contention that the scoring of critical attributes and consideration of evidence was arbitrary and/or capricious. "This claim lacks any iota of merit. Mr. Pillsbury testified that there is no requirement that evidence be inputted into Teachscape in support of a component/subdomain in order for an observer to score same."

"In short, since the evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance is not subject to review under TEACHNJ and the observer has the discretion regarding how to score the components/ subdomains within a particular observation as far as assigning evidence and critical attributes in Teachscape, the District's actions cannot be considered arbitrary or capricious."

The District contends that Principal Thompson's observation of Lefkowitz on March 12, 2014 was not arbitrary and/or capricious. Although this third observation occurred on the same day as or sometime before the post-observation for his second observation, the District maintains that "there is no statutory requirement which states that a pre-observation conference must occur prior to the next observation. There was testimony that sometimes observations would occur in overlapping cycles." Also, Lefkowitz never brought this concern to the Principal's attention. Moreover, "even if this action was considered to be arbitrary and capricious, there is no way it materially affected the outcome of Mr. Lefkowitz's evaluation..."

IX. Mistake of Fact

The District argues that "no mistakes of fact were made with regard to Mr. Lefkowitz." Mr. Pillsbury testified that the SGO scores of 4 and 2.9, which were entered by Ms. Thompson into Teachscape, negate the Respondent's claim that he should have received two 4s for his 2013-14 SGOs. "It can be inferred that at the end of the school year, as Mr. Pillsbury testified, Ms. Thompson determined that a 72% success rate was not enough to give Mr. Lefkowitz a score of 4 on that particular SGO and therefore, determined that he would receive a 2.9." Irrespective of his SGO scores, the District contends that Lefkowitz would still have been rated "partially effective," and placed on a CAP for the 2014-15 school year.

Lefkowitz's claim for the 2014-15 school year that he should have received a 2.31 on his SGO #1 score instead of a 2.19 is refuted by Gehring's testimony that Lefkowitz erred when he gave himself a zero ("0") in some categories when one (1) is actually the lowest score. The letter submitted by Gehring explains the change to 2.19 as follows:

1. Lefkowitz filled the "Results of Student Growth Objective" portion of the SGO form out incorrectly. He gave himself a Teacher SGO Score of 0 for the High Preparadeness Group. A 1 is the lowest score you can receive. His Teacher SGO score should be high: 1, medium: 2, low: 4.

2. The medium students at target score should be 85% (as reflected on the attached spreadsheet), not 75%, which he noted.

3. Also, at the end of the year, he had 12 students in the medium group, not 15 as he reported on the form (total number of students was actually 18, not 21) and thus, his weight (based on students per group) is wrong. To get the weight (based on student's per group), you do the following: high: 3/18=.17 (as opposed to what he did, which was 3/21), medium: 12/18=.67, high=3/18=.17.

(See id.) Mr. Lefkowitz argues for a straight average (1+2+4/3=2.33). This is incorrect, in the 2014-2015 school year, the scores were weighted (e.g. the score of 2 in the medium group is weighted heavier than the other scores b/c they only encompassed 3 students each). The correct weighted score is high: 17*1=.17, medium: 67*2=1.34, high: 17*4=.68. Total SGO score is 2.19. Therefore, there was no mistake of fact. (Dist. brief @ 45).

It is the District's opinion that, even if there were a mistake of fact and his SGO score was 2.31, Lefkowitz's summative rating would still have been partially effective. Therefore, the SGO calculation could not have materially affected the outcome of his evaluation.

X. The District's Scoring Method is Proper and in Sync with the TEACH NJ Statute and the District's Policy

The pertinent District policy reads as follows:

> All observations will be scored based on the evidence collected during the observation and additional evidence collected since the previous observation. At the end of the year, scores from all observations throughout the year are averaged at the domain level and then weighted appropriately to produce an overall Teacher Practice rating of 1-4. (See Exhibit P-52.)

Contrary to the Respondent's position that the District average all the subdomain scores within a particular domain equally, to obtain the average at the domain level, the District averages each domain per observation, then averages all of the domain averages to obtain a final domain score. The Lefkowitz method is as follows:

> Total Domain 3 Score, SY 13-14: 3+2+3+2+3 (Observation #1) +2+1+2+1 (Observation #2) +3+2+3+2+3 (Observation #3) = 32/14=2.28

The District applies a scoring system utilized by the "overwhelming majority across the State using Teachscape...TEACHNJ does not provide any requirement regarding how the scores for the four domains must be weighed or calculated to arrive at the numerical teacher practice score, which would then be converted into one of the four (4) rating categories. Therefore Lefkowitz's argument that the component/subdomains must be assigned equal weights is completely without merit..."

In reliance on the testimony of Ms. Karlie Termotto, the District maintains that it reasonably utilized the Teachscape pre-loaded formula to determine Lefkowitz's teacher practice score as discussed supra. Were Lefkowitz's contention to prevail, "every teacher facing tenure charges for inefficiency would file motions for summary decision challenging the method utilized to calculate their teacher practice score and championing whatever method yielded an effective rating from their subdomain/domain scores. This would lead to widely inconsistent results within the District, as teachers with the same subdomain/domain scores would be assigned different ratings (e.g. some effective and some partially effective or ineffective). Further, it would permit teachers who should have received ineffective or partially effective ratings to remain with the District without fear of removal or incentive to improve the quality of their instruction."

XI. Both Natalie Goode's Full Observation Report and Karlie Termotto's Testimony must be admitted into Evidence

The District takes the position that Exhibit P-22, the full-observation report of Ms. Goode, should be admitted on three grounds: "(1) Mr. Lefkowitz waived any future reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(b)(3) when he requested such documents in his interrogatories to the District and the parties agreed to extend that statutory timeframe; and/or (2) Exhibit P-22 is simply an incomplete copy of Exhibit P-77 (which was produced timely) due to a printing error in Teachscape."

Since the Respondent Interrogation No. 23 specifically requests "copies of any and all documents contained on Teachscape with regard to Respondent...," the District produced Exhibit P. #22. As a result, the District argues that this request waived any reliance on the statutory deadline. Also, the Respondent used other documents produced at the same time as P. #22. Further, the exhibit was produced well in advance of the first hearing date with this matter.

With respect to the Respondent's claim that the testimony of Ms. Termotto should be excluded on the ground that she was not named as witness by the District upon referral of the case to the arbitrator, the District notes that the need to call Ms. Termotto only arose following the decision of the arbitrator on Mr. Lefkowitz's Motion for Summary Decision. (See Decision of Arbitrator re: M. Lefkowitz's Motion for Summary Decision.) In denying said Motion, "the arbitrator requested that testimony be heard on the matter at the hearing. As such, the District amended its witness list to include Ms. Termotto, who could provide testimony on that issue. Lefkowitz had sufficient notice of the District's intent to call Ms. Termotto as a witness and thus, was not prejudiced by her testimony." (Dist. brief @ 51).

Therefore, Ms. Termotto's testimony should not be excluded but instead, should be admitted into evidence in this matter.

The District distinguishes I/M/O Michael Wilson, State-Operated School District of Newark (Dkt. No. 302-10/15) from the instant case in that "the parties did not agree to extend the statutory time period, there was not an arbitrator decision requesting testimony on a particular issue, and there were no interrogatories requesting the specific documents to be produced, and there was no printing error ..."

Finally, the District concludes that Mr. Lefkowitz must be dismissed from his position with the Camden City School District because he failed to "show that any of the actions falling into one of the four [statutory] categories impacted the outcome of the evaluation."

Respondent Position

The Respondent, Michael Lefkowitz, argues that the District's Amended Charge of Inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.3 should be dismissed because "the District failed to allege Lefkowitz was 'partially effective' for two (2) consecutive school years." Respondent further argues that "Lefkowitz was an 'effective' teacher for the 2013-2014 School Year and the District failed to properly calculate, pursuant to its own Evaluation Policy, 1) Lefkowitz' subdomain scores for the Teacher Practice portion of his Summative Score, and 2) Lefkowitz' Student Growth Objective ("SGO") scores. As a result of the District's miscalculation and nonconformance with its own Evaluation Policy and approved SGOs, Lefkowitz received a 2013-2014 Summative Score of 2.56, a "partially effective" rating, when he should have received a Summative Score of 2.73, an "effective rating. In the event, the Arbitrator determines that the District did not deviate from its Evaluation Policy, the Arbitrator should find that the Evaluation Policy is arbitrary and capricious."

"Second, the District's Evaluations failed to substantially adhere to its Evaluation Policy by failing to observe Lefkowitz in the first observation cycle, failing to provide Lefkowitz with any evidence, notes, and critical attributes associated with his Domain 4 subdomain scores for the 2013-2014 School Year, and failed to provide any evidence, notes, or critical attributes to several other subdomain scores."

"Third, the District's action during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 School Years were arbitrary and capricious with regard to its failure to provide Lefkowitz with his students' IEPs and failing to implement a uniform system of teacher evaluation as evidenced by the testimony of each of Lefkowitz' observers who all utilized different evaluation procedures."

"Fourth, the District failed to provide Lefkowitz with the necessary documents requested during discovery. As well, the District inappropriately attempted to introduce evidence at the arbitration hearings that were not produced in a timely manner pursuant to the TEACHNJ ACT."

"Fifth, the Arbitrator should uphold his bench decision denying the District untimely filed Motion for Summary Decision for the reasons set forth on the record during the February 11, 2016 arbitration meeting." (Resp. brief @ 1-2).

After reviewing the procedural history and Lefkowitz's educational background, Lefkowitz focuses on his assignment to the Davis Elementary School where he taught vocal music, instructed general music classes, in-school and after-school choir practices and participated in other performances with the students. "In addition, Lefkowitz taught entire classes of students just like any other teacher, unlike the instrumental music teacher who taught one to three students at a time."

During the 2014-15 school year, when Lefkowitz was transferred to the Cream School, "his students ranged in ages from 3-4 years old pre-K, to 10-12 years old 6th grade. There were approximately 2-4 classes per grade, and Lefkowitz was the only music teacher who taught each of these classes on a weekly basis."

IEPs

"Students with Individual Education Plans ('IEPs') were not precluded from participating in Lefkowitz' music class. (Tr. @ 753- 754). To Lefkowitz' knowledge, there were no District level policies for requesting students' IEPs for review. (Tr. @754). At no time in the District, including during the 2013-2014 or 2014-2015 School Year, did anyone present Lefkowitz with any of his students' IEPs. (Tr. @ 754). Lefkowitz indicated that reviewing the IEPs for his students would be useful in designing specific instructional strategies for students with a hearing, visual, or a behavioral disability that would affect their ability in the classroom." (Tr. @ 755).

"During the 2013-2014 School Year, Lefkowitz had concerns that some of his students may have IEPs, so he affirmatively requested, both verbally and through email, the IEPs for his students from his administrators. (Tr.@ 754- 755). Specifically, he requested on numerous occasions the IEPs for his students from their classroom teachers, the nurse, the guidance counselor, and the principal, all without success because they were either too busy or instructed him to ask someone else. During the 2014-2015 School Year, Lefkowitz also had concerns regarding whether his students have IEPs, and requested them accordingly. (4T 813:20 to 815:1). In both school years, he was unable to obtain and review the IEPs for any of his students." (Tr. @ 755-758; 815)(Resp. brief @ 10).

Extra-Curricular Activities

While at Davis Elementary, Lefkowitz maintains that he "participated in numerous extracurricular activities, which included the preparation and participation of vocal music winter and spring concerts, holiday concerts, black history month concerts, Chinese New Year concerts, Hispanic appreciation month concerts. Some of these concerts were attended by a local television station due to the positive reputation associated with the music program. In addition, he tutored students in piano and successfully helped them prepare for auditions to gain admission, with scholarship, into the Moorestown Friends School, which is a private school ranked among the best in the State of New Jersey for academics and extracurricular activities, on scholarship." (Tr. @ 717-719)

Music Supervisor

"Prior to the 2013-2014 school year, Lefkowitz was assessed by the building principal and the music supervisor. The role of the music supervisor was also to lead PD opportunities for music teachers in the District. In addition, the music supervisor would confer with the building principal regarding the evaluation of music teachers and offer specific advice to improve music instruction. Lefkowitz reported to and relied upon the music supervisor for general support such as instruction specific questions, feedback on lessons, implementation on advices, and any other concerns. (Tr. @ 751). However, the position of the music supervisor was abolished just prior to the commencement of the 2013-2014 School year, and no one has since assumed the music supervisor's duties and responsibilities. (Tr. @ 729-730)(Resp. brief @ 11).

2012-2013 Evaluation

The Respondent has cited the evaluation ratings he received prior to the evaluation period at issue in the instant case, namely 2013-14 and 2014-15. He notes that on November 27, 2012, he was rated "satisfactory" by Principal Thompson. Also, on January 8, 2013, Principal Thompson rated him "proficient" in 3 out of 4 Domains, and "basic" in the remaining domain using a different evaluation form.

Danielson Framework 2013-2014

According to Lefkowitz, the document titled "Camden Teacher Evaluation Overview ('Evaluation Policy') was the only document he received regarding the District's evaluation policies for the 2013-14 school year. At no time was Lefkowitz advised that he had the ability to request additional observations." He also was not advised that he could request a change in a subdomain score during a post-observation conference.

Evaluation Policy

The Respondent interpreted the Evaluation Policy language that "All observations will be scored based on the evidence collected during the observation and additional evidence collected since the previous observation...to mean that an observer would only score a particular subdomain on the evidence recorded." (Tr. @ 764).

With respect to the Evaluation Policy Statement, "At the end of the year, scores from all the observations throughout the year are averaged at the domain level and then weighted appropriately to produce an overall teacher practice rating of 1 to 4," Lefkowitz did not "understand this phrase to mean that the District would first average each [domain] at the observation level, and then again at the domain level before weighing the Domains into the Teacher Practice score accordingly." Also, Lefkowitz "did not understand the possible ramifications of a subdomain score of 'insufficient evidence' on the overall observation."

Regarding his SGOs for 2014-15, "Lefkowitz expressed his concern to Ms. Goode that he had no experience in preparing a tiered SGO and did know his students well enough to set a prior 'baseline data.'" (Tr. @ 771-772). Also, Lefkowitz received no training on the Danielson Model or SGO specific to music or special area instruction.

With respect to his first observation on January 21, 2014, Lefkowitz maintains that "while every subdomain in Domains 1, 2 and 3 received a score from Mr. Mashore, for Domain 1, no evidence, notes, critical attributes, or summaries were provided for any of the subdomains; for Domain 2, no critical attributes or summaries were provided for any of the subdomains with minimal notes and evidence provided for and some of the subdomains; for Domain 3, minimal notes, evidence, and critical attributes were provided for and some of the subdomains. No scores were provided for Domain 4." (P. Ex. #35).

Regarding the March 4, 2014 observation by Ketterer, Lefkowitz notes that "for Domain 1, Mr. Ketterer only scored subdomain Ia and Ie without providing any notes, evidence, or summaries in support of those scores; for Domains 2 and 3, Mr. Ketterer provided insufficient notes, evidence and/or critical attributes in support of some of the subdomain scores; and for Domain 4, no scores were provided. The Post-Observation Conference occurred on March 21, 2014." (P. Ex. #32).

Lefkowitz encountered students "with extreme behavioral inconsistencies and high energy." The Respondent did not consider Ketterer, a teacher trainer, to be a supervisor.

Regarding the March 13, 2014 observation conducted by Principal Thompson, Lefkowitz notes that "[w]hile every domain score in Domains 1, 2, and 3 received a score, Ms. Thompson did not provide any notes, evidence, critical attributes, or summaries, to any of the subdomain scores. The District did produce a document that contained Ms. Thompson's notes and evidence, but it was untagged to any specific subdomains. No Domain 4 scores were provided. (P. Ex. #41). The Post-Observation Conference occurred on the same day, March 13, 2014." (P. Exs. #40, 41, 42).

Since Thompson observed the same class Ketterer had observed a week prior, with a very similar lesson, he had not participated in a post-observation conference with Ketterer. Therefore, he could not use the feedback from Ketterer prior to Thompson's observation.

Lefkowitz had no recollection that he was to be placed on a CAP. Unlike Mashore and Thompson, who had background knowledge of the students in his classes and made positive comments, Ketterer "was coming in cold" and made "very negative" comments.

2014-2015 School Year

The September 11, 2014 observation was conducted by Ms. Goode. "[F]or Domains 1, 2 and 3 Ms. Goode provided insufficient notes, evidence, and/or critical attributes in support of some of the subdomain scores; and for Domain 4, no scores were provided."

According to Lefkowitz, on September 12, 2014, he was presented with a CAP "drafted solely by the District without any input or collaboration from Lefkowitz." (Tr. @ 802).

The second observation was conducted on October 16, 2014 by Principal Gehring. "While every subdomain score in Domains 1, 2 and 3 received a score, Ms. Gehring provided inconsistent notes, evidence, critical attributes and/or summaries to the subdomain scores. No Domain 4 scores were produced." (P. Ex. #9).

The third observation was also conducted by Gehring on November 21, 2014. The same comment as above was made regarding this observation.

Cream School Flood

The flood at Cream caused Lefkowitz and other teachers to relocate to the Hatch Family School ("Hatch"). "Lefkowitz was advised to bring a week's worth of materials to the new school...As a result, Lefkowitz did not have adequate materials at Hatch, did not have a classroom, and never was allowed back to Cream School." During this period, Lefkowitz testified that "coaching was not as consistent."

Mid-Year CAP Review

Ms. Perry-Edwards, Vice Principal, requested evidence that she would review in preparation for the CAP meeting. "After receipt of the evidence, Ms. Perry-Edwards indicated Lefkowitz was making progress toward each of his goals on the CAP." (P. Ex. #3).

March 10, 2015 Observation

Lefkowitz's fourth and final observation occurred on March 10, 2015. Principal Gehring conducted the observation. The Respondent raised the same concerns about the lack of evidence, notes, critical attributes and/or summaries for each subdomain in Domains 1, 2, and 3. "Only subdomain 4a was scored in Domain 4 without any notes, evidence or summaries."

Coaching Sessions

Lefkowitz contends that Gehring's coaching sessions were inconsistent "with about half of the sessions cancelling with no rescheduling. When the coaching sessions did occur, they lasted about 5-15 minutes, with Ms. Gehring multi-tasking on the phone or computer. Lefkowitz did not receive substantive instructional feedback in music at any time during the 2014-2015 School Year.

(Tr. @ 811-812). Once Lefkowitz moved to Hatch Family School following the flood at Cream School, all coaching sessions ceased."

Additional Testimony

Respondent alludes to Mashore's testimony that a teacher on a CAP should be observed for an entire lesson as evidence that his evaluation was insufficient. Mashore's testimony that he was trained to assign critical attributes to subdomains that received a score of ineffective or partially effective is deemed relevant. Also, he testified that for a teacher to obtain a highly effective score of four (4), "the students would need to lead the class and do a majority of the work."

Ketterer's testimony is cited that IEPs are important for a music teacher to review in order to provide "differential instruction" and accommodate disabilities. Ketterer assumed that "every class he observes has at least some students with IEPs and that the teacher has reviewed them." As he put it, "[i]n music, you would look at the accommodations, although you're not teaching – the student's disability is not in music per se, although he may have difficulty in literacy." According to Ketterer, he is able "to identify critical attributes from the standpoint of a music teacher that a non-music teacher may not have observed." (Tr. @ 340).

Ms. Thompson approved Lefkowitz's SGOs for 2013-14 and testified that he should have received a score of "4" for both SGOs. She has never given a subdomain score of "insufficient evidence." District Exhibit #40 contained her evidence for Lefkowitz's observation, untagged to any subdomains. Thompson referred to District Policy indicating that one observation should ideally occur within each cycle.

Ms. Gehring testified that Ms. Goode coached Lefkowitz during the "first cycle" (September to November) and she coached him during the "second cycle" (December to February). Ms. Goode was supposed to coach him during the "third cycle" (March to April) before she passed away. Gehring had a practice of assigning a score of "insufficient evidence" to subdomain 4a if a teacher did not timely submit the post-observation conference form. She testified that Lefkowitz was not provided with any IEPs for his students during 2014-2015.

With respect to Gehring's practice of taking notes and evidence, and assigning it to critical attributes, she testified that it is possible to have different levels of critical attributes for a single subdomain (i.e., an "effective" critical attribute and a "partially" effective critical attribute). (Tr. @ 141- 145). In that situation, it becomes a "professional judgment call" as to what subdomain score should be assigned. However, if there were multiple critical attributes assigned, the weight of the critical attributes would not be noted anywhere on the observation. (Tr. @145- 146).

According to Ms. Gehring, critical attributes, notes and evidence are not required before assigning a subdomain score, whether or not it is a positive or negative score. (Tr. @146- 148).

With regard to Lefkowitz's CAP for 2014-15, she did not review his 2013-14 observations or speak to any of his previous observers. "Ms. Gehring was part of the School Improvement Panel, which produced meeting minutes kept by Ms. Goode in her own binders."

Mr. Pillsbury reviewed the summative score ranges set by the State as follows: "Mr. Pillsbury indicated the summative score ranges set by the State are as follows: 1 – 1.84 (ineffective); 1.85 to 2.64 (partially effective); 2.65 to 3.49 (effective); and 3.50 to 4.0 (highly effective). (Tr. @ 544). Mr. Pillsbury further testified that a Domain Average is derived from the average of the subdomain scores within a Domain, by observation first, then by averaging those results together (the 'Formula'). (Tr. @ 539). This method was called 'the default method in Teachscape' because it was allegedly 'preloaded' into the system from Teachscape. (Tr. @ 552-553). However, Mr. Pillsbury indicated that the Evaluation Policy does not state it averages scores within each observation." (Tr. @ 639).

"The information regarding the Formula being preloaded into Teachscape was derived solely from conversations Mr. Pillsbury had with Ms. Termotto."

Respondent finds inconsistent Pillsbury's testimony regarding the need for evidence. On the one hand, he testified that a teacher should not be given a score if there is no evidence. (Tr. @ 550). On the other hand, he testified with regard to evidence and assigning a score "nothing is required," "no critical attributes are required," and that "a teacher could get just an evaluation with just numbers, no evidence, no critical attributes." In response to the arbitrator's question, Pillsbury testified that "observers may 'feel' a teacher deserves a score 'based on [the observer's] judgment." He ultimately stated that 'everyone should be collecting some kind of notes and evidence' and that it would not be the best practice to exclude evidence before assigning a score." (Tr. @ 663-664).

Pillsbury acknowledged that "if Lefkowitz had received a "4" for both SGOs, his summative score would have been 2.64, just 0.01 point below an 'effective rating'"

Ms. Karlie Termotto ("Termotto"), an employee of Frontline Technologies, a company which recently acquired Teachscape, testified that the District Evaluation and Advisory Committee ("DEAC") determines the scoring methodologies of its evaluation policies. She denied the existence of a Teachscape default scoring method; however, Teachscape did provide a recommendation to the District. She has no personal knowledge of the "particular scoring method" utilized by other districts. With respect to the District's formula, Termotto agreed that it can take less data to generate an observation that would be weighted equally when compared to another observation with more data. (Tr. @@ 237). Respondent objects to "Termotto's testimony as evidence because it was not timely produced by the District."

Legal Argument

After reviewing the TEACHNJ standard of review, the four factors to be considered by the arbitrator in rendering a decision and the board of education's "ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met," the Respondent argues that "the Amended Tenure Charge must be dismissed because Lefkowitz was not rated 'ineffective' and/or 'partially effective' for two (2) consecutive years."

As the Respondent argued in its Motion for Summary Decision, Lefkowitz maintains that he was an "effective teacher for the 2013-2014 School Year." The Respondent further argues that "[t]he District improperly calculated Lefkowitz' Teacher Practice Score by failing to adhere to its own scoring policies. Had the District followed its own scoring policies, Lefkowitz would have been rated an "effective" teacher for the 2013-2014 School Year. In addition, the District's calculation method is arbitrary and capricious, and results in mistakes of fact with regard to Lefkowitz's observations."

Alluding to the Arbitrator's January 9, 2016 Award and Opinion where the Arbitrator opines that the phrase "averaged at the domain level" was ambiguous and required an interpretation, at this juncture, Respondent contends "there is no longer a genuine issue of material fact precluding the Arbitrator from finding in favor of Lefkowitz on this issue. Therefore, and for the reasons stated more fully below, Lefkowitz must be found to have been 'effective' during the 2013-2014 school year, and the amended Tenure Charge must be dismissed with prejudice."

Moreover, the credibility of Pillsbury is deemed dubious with respect to his certification that the Teachscape's default scoring method is utilized by 190 school districts in New Jersey. Absent personal knowledge of such facts, Pillsbury presumably "became aware of those facts in his conversations with Ms. Termotto." In addition, Termotto "refuted any contention that Teachscape had a 'default scoring formula.'" Finally, with respect to Pillsbury's contention that the Formula is used to track teacher progress throughout the year, his testimony that 32% of a teacher's overall score is not available until the end of the year ostensibly negates this assertion.

In arguing that "the Amended Tenure Charge should be dismissed because the District failed to calculate Lefkowitz's Teacher Practice Score pursuant to its evaluation policy," the Respondent construes the phrase "averaged at the domain level" as consisting of only two specific calculations. The first calculation takes "all observations through the year" and averages those subdomain scores on the "domain level." The second calculation takes those "domain level" averages and weighs them accordingly (i.e. 20% for Domains 1 and 4, and 30% for Domains 2 and 3)."

Since nothing in the Evaluation Policy requires that another calculation must first be done on the "observational level," as Pillsbury acknowledged, Respondent argues that his Teacher Practice score was distorted.

The Respondent next reiterates the examples of a proper method of calculating the subdomain scores within a particular Domain as set forth in his Motion for Summary Decision as follows:

By way of example, assume a teacher, John Doe, received the following subdomain scores for Domain 1:[4]

Observation One (3, 3, 3)

Observation Two (3, 3, 3,)

Observation Three (1, no score, no score).

[4] This method of calculation shall be referred to hereinafter as the "Camden Teacher Evaluation Overview Method" or "CTEO Method" for short.

To obtain the "average at the domain level" the District simply needs to add all the subdomain scores and divide that answer by the total number of subdomain scores. Thus, in this example, John Doe's overall score for Domain 1 will be 2.71. The following steps were used to calculate that score:

Step 1 – add all the subdomain scores for Domain 1 (3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 3, 1).

Step 2 – divide the answer in Step 1 (19) by the total number of subdomain scores (7).

Illustration: 19/7 = 2.71

However, the District does not calculate Domain Scores in this manner, and in accordance with its own Evaluation Policy. Instead, the District calculates the Domain Score by averaging each Domain per Observation, then averaging all of these Domain averages to obtain a final Domain Score.[5] The following steps are used by the District to calculate Domain Scores using the above John Doe example:

Step 1 – add all the subdomain scores for each observation.

Illustration:

Observation 1: 3+3+3 = 9
Observation 2: 3+3+3 = 9
Observation 3: 1 = 1

Step 2 – divide each answer in Step 1 by the total number of subdomain scores in each observation.

Illustration:

Observation 1: 9/3 = 3
Observation 2: 9/3 = 3

[5] This method of calculation shall be referred to hereinafter as the "District's Actual Method" or "DA Method" for short.

Observation 3: 1/1 = 1

Step 3 – add all the Step 2 answers (3, 3, 1) together.

Illustration: 3+3+1 = 7

Step 4 – divide the answer in Step 3 (7) by the total number of observations (3).

Illustration: 7/3 = 2.33

From the Respondent's perspective, "[e]ach calculation yields a different Domain Score because Observation 3 has missed subdomain scores. Under the DAM, the single subdomain score for Observation 3 receives much greater weight in the overall Domain score than it would if the District followed the CTEO. Said another way, under the DAM, John Doe's Observation 3 Missing Subdomain scores effectively become 1's, or default to the average of the Observation Domain. However, if John Doe received subdomain scores for every subdomain, then both methods of calculation would yield the same result."

According to Respondent, for the 2013-14 School Year, "Domains 1, 2 and 3 were calculated to be lower under DAM than they would have been if the District used the CTEOM. This ultimately affected his Summative score by rating him 'partially effective,' when he was otherwise an 'effective' teacher for the 2013-2014 School Year."

The Respondent next proceeds to give several examples illustrating how the DAM "improperly inflates or deflates a teacher's Domain score depending on the number of subdomains assigned a score of 'insufficient evidence.'"

The germane scoring circumstances are those where the DAM lowers a teacher's score from effective to partially effective, or partially effective to ineffective.

Through a series of charts, the Respondent analyzes how the effect of the DAM and the factoring in of "insufficient evidence" materially affects the outcome of the teacher's evaluation. The inclusion of an "insufficient evidence" score on a subdomain is shown to have a disproportionate impact on the teacher practice calculation for a particular Domain. A fictitious teacher with ten (10) "partially effective" subdomain scores and only one (1) "highly effective" subdomain score is deemed effective using DAM. Utilizing subdomain percentages, the Respondent asserts that under DAM, "a score of 'Insufficient Evidence' will pass its weigh[t] on to the other subdomains that receive a numerical score, which could lower or raise the domain score."

In Respondent's case, "two (2) 'Ineffective' subdomain scores received in Observation 2 were 33.3%, or 16.67% each, of the Domain Score, where all other subdomain scores in the Domain were only 6.67% of the Domain Score. This is the definition of arbitrary and capricious scoring and may amount to a form of Simpson's Paradox whereby the aggregate data (the Teacher Practice Score) is not truly reflective of the underlying data, and thus leads to improper conclusions. Respondent is in essence being punished for the observer's failure to score the other subdomains in Observation 2."

In addition to the arbitrary and capricious statutory criteria manifest in the DAM, the Respondent argues that his evaluations for the 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years "failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process." Alluding to Thompson's testimony regarding the observation cycles, Lefkowitz notes that he "was observed three times in the first cycle and once in the third cycle."

Second, the development of the CAP after the first observation occurred in 2014-15 is deemed a violation because Lefkowitz was not apprised of his goals and objectives in advance of the first observation.

Third, "Lefkowitz did not receive adequate coaching and support during the 2014-15 School Year. "While Ms. Goode provided regular coaching sessions, she did not provide any substantive instructional feedback to Lefkowitz, like the music supervisor would have." When Gehring took over, he "received less feedback and attention, with almost half of his sessions cancelled." Following the flood at the Cream School, "[a]ll coaching essentially ceased at that point and Lefkowitz was forced into a new building with no supplies for the remainder of the 2014-15 school year."

The Respondent maintains that contrary to the Evaluation Policy, his observations entailed "numerous subdomain scores without any notes, evidence, critical attributes and/or summaries." Also, he "did not receive any support whatsoever for 2013-2014 Domain 4 scores."

Alluding again to the "arbitrary and capricious" statutory criterion, the Respondent claims that "the District failed to provide Lefkowitz with his student IEPs."

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-3.7(a)(2), "[e]very student's IEP shall be accessible to each regular education teacher, special education teacher, related services provider, and other service provider who is responsible for its implementation." Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-3.7(a)(3), "[t]he district board of education shall inform each teacher and provider described in (a) (2) above at his or her specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP and the specific accommodations, modifications, and supports to be provided for the student in accordance with the IEP" and "shall maintain documentation that the teacher and provider, as applicable, has been informed of his or her specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP[.]" (Emphasis Resp.).

Indeed it has been held that the New Jersey Administrative Code is "unambiguous in requiring that both regular education teachers and support services providers have access to a student's IEP." Z.R., v. Fort Lee Board of Education, 2008 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 828, 260.

According to Lefkowitz, notwithstanding his "numerous attempts and requests for both the 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years," his efforts were of no avail. The lack of IEPs precluded Lefkowitz from "implementing appropriate classroom management procedures given he was not made aware of the unique conditions affecting his students."

The District Evaluation Policy was purportedly "arbitrary and capricious" because it was inconsistently applied by Lefkowitz's observers during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years and did not result in "a fair, accurate and comprehensive picture of the teacher's performance."

Since "Lefkowitz's observers differed in their understanding of the Evaluation Policy with regard to the necessity of evidence, [they] were inconsistent as to whether notes, evidence, critical attributes, and/or summaries were necessary before a subdomain score could be assigned...[I]t is axiomatic that Lefkowitz was not being evaluated by the same standard."

Mr. Thompson and Mr. Ketterer are described as giving "vastly different scores during observation of the same class with a similar lesson." He received mostly "effective" subdomain scores from Thompson as opposed to mostly "ineffective subdomain scores from Ketterer even though he did not have his post-observation feedback from Ketterer prior to the Thompson observation."

Respondent was not advised that Ketterer, who was not employed in a supervisory capacity during 2013-2014, as a "Teacher Trainer and Evaluator" had any "supervisory authority over him." Moreover, the "Teacher Trainer & Evaluator" job description makes no reference to any supervisory role, authority, or other similar duties that position has with respect to teachers. (See R-C, CCSD ML 231-233). Instead, under the section captioned 'Supervises,' it specifically states 'N/A' Here, the statute requires that an individual be employed in a supervisory role before they are eligible to observe teachers."

The Respondent avers that "[t]he Amended Tenure Charge should be dismissed because the District failed to produce evidence in a timely manner and/or failed to produce documents responsive to Lefkowitz's interrogatories."

With respect to this claim, Respondent maintains that "the District failed to produce and/or notice Ms. Termotto's testimony and District Exhibit P-22 'upon referral of the case for arbitration.'" In support of its contention, the Respondent cites Wilson and the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, (Dkt. No. 302-10/15) where Arbitrator Lewis R. Amis dismissed the tenure charge of inefficiency because the school district "untimely provided its evidence 14 days following the referral of the matter to arbitration." Also cited is I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Ebert, State-Operated School District of Newark (Dkt. No. 267-9/14) where Arbitrator Denenberg also dismissed the tenure charge of inefficiency due to the school district's failure to provide its evidence in a timely manner as set forth in the TEACHNJ Act.

The Respondent contends that the District did not produce any documents responsive to his Interrogatory No. 11, namely DEAC evaluation policies and procedures. Also, not produced were documents responsive to Interrogatory No. 8, Lefkowitz training documents on the Evaluation Rubric. "The District did not produce any documents responsive to this Interrogatory, but merely attached documents showing Mr. Lefkowitz attended these training sessions/workshops," without specific reference to the Danielson Model.

Additional documents were not produced are set forth in Interrogatory No. 23 as follows:

> Provide copies of any and all documents contained on Teachscape with regard to Respondent, including but not limited to, observations, Corrective Action Plans, walkthrough notes, artifacts, and evidence in support of Domain 4 for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, as well as prior years, if applicable.

The Arbitrator is urged to uphold his bench decision and deny the District's Motion for Summary Decision. Lefkowitz reiterates the points made in his Motion for Summary Decision in that he filed an answer, rather than a Motion for Summary Decision in lieu of a response, and his Answer to the Amended Tenure Charge conforms to the applicable administrative codes." And even if the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a) apply, Lefkowitz's answer conforms to all the "necessary requirements."

DISCUSSION

It is undisputed that the Arbitrator's review of inefficiency tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.2 is limited to: "(1) whether the evaluation substantially adhered to the evaluation process; (2) whether there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation; (3) whether the charges were brought for a prohibited reason; (4) whether the District's actions were arbitrary and capricious."

I. The District's Evaluation Policy Prior to the 2013-2014 School Year

As a preliminary matter, the Arbitrator concurs with the District in finding that its "Evaluation Policy and Process prior to the 2013-2014 school year is irrelevant and cannot be considered under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2."

Despite the Respondent's reference to the evaluations he received during the 2012-2013 school year, including two observations conducted by Principal Thompson and ratings of "satisfactory" and "proficient" respectively, this evidence is irrelevant.

The Respondent has been charged with inefficiency under the TEACHNJ statute, which had not been enacted in 2012-2013. During the preceding period, the District was utilizing an evaluation system distinguishable from the Danielson Framework. Since the Respondent has been rated "partially effective" for two consecutive years in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 and charged under TEACHNJ, any ratings he received prior to the District's decision to implement the Danielson Framework pursuant to the enactment of the statute have no bearing on the issue before the Arbitrator. As the District has correctly argued, Lefkowitz's performance under an evaluation system prior to 2013-2014 is not only irrelevant but also "outside the bounds of what the arbitrator may consider under TEACHNJ."

II. The District's Evaluation Scoring Method

The crux of the Respondent's defense to the tenure charge of inefficiency is his claim that the District improperly calculated his Teacher Practice Scores by failing to adhere to its own scoring policy. But for the Districts purported failure to adhere to its own scoring policies, Lefkowitz contends that he would have been rated an "effective" teacher for the 2013-2014 School Year.

The Arbitrator, in his January 9, 2016 Interim Award and Opinion, denying the Respondent's Motion for Summary Decision, found that the phrase "averaged at the domain level" was ambiguous and required an evidentiary hearing for clarification. In addition to finding a genuine issue of material fact that precluded a finding in favor of the Respondent in his Motion for Summary Decision, the Arbitrator further acknowledged that "an issue of credibility had arisen with respect to Pillsbury's Certification that the Teachscape default scoring method is utilized in 190 school districts in New Jersey."

Following the hearing, the Respondent argues that "there is no longer a genuine issue of material fact precluding the Arbitrator from finding in favor of Lefkowitz on this issue. Therefore, and for the reasons stated more fully below, Lefkowitz must be found to have been 'effective' during the 2013-2014 School Year, and the amended Tenure Charge must be dismissed with prejudice."

Considering the evidence in its entirety, the Arbitrator is persuaded that the District's scoring method complies with TEACHNJ and the alternative method of calculating the Teaching Practice Score as proposed by the Respondent is unsupported by the evidentiary record. Although the Respondent's alternative method of calculating his teacher practice score by "averaging at the domain level," designated the "Camden Teacher Evaluation Overview Method" or "CTEO" for short, produces a different outcome, the Arbitrator is not persuaded that the District's Actual Method ("DAM") is arbitrary or capricious.

Whereas the Respondent notes that pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.2, "[t]he purpose of a scoring guide is to provide a transparent and reliable evaluation process," TEACHNJ "merely requires that the teacher practice instrument include scoring guides that differentiate among a minimum of four (4) levels of performance and provide a conversion to the four (4) rating categories of ineffective, partially effective, effective, and highly effective. Inasmuch as TEACHNJ does not specify how scores for the four (4) levels of performance or Domains must be calculated, absent a preponderance of evidence to the contrary, the District could exercise its discretion in selecting the method of calculating the Teacher Practice score it deemed "transparent and reliable."

The District has established that its selection of the Danielson Framework as the method for calculating its Teacher Practice Score was neither arbitrary nor capricious but rather consistent with the decision made by several other New Jersey school districts to adopt an evaluation rubric approved by the NJDOE. Having selected the Danielson Framework as its evaluation rubric, the District was required to contract with Teachscape, which not only owns the copyright for the Framework, but also "is currently the only software program available to implement the Framework."

The testimony of Pillsbury and Termotto clarified the District's use of Teachscape as the method for calculating the Teacher Practice Score given its incorporation as the pre-loaded formula or "default method," which consisted averaging at the domain level during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. In the Arbitrator's opinion, the fact that Pillsbury and District personnel referred to the District's Method of Calculating the Teacher Practice Score as the "default" method whereas Termotto referred to it as the "pre-loaded formula" constitutes a semantic distinction that neither diminishes their credibility nor supports the contention that the method, irrespective of its description, is arbitrary and capricious.

The District takes the subdomain scores for each of the four (4) domains, scored on a scale of 1-4, based on evidence of the teacher's performance during a classroom observation, and averages them to obtain the domain scores for that particular observation. The domain scores for each observation are then averaged to obtain the total domain scores for the school year. The total domain scores are next assigned to specific percentage/weight of the Teacher Practice Score and added together to obtain the Teacher Practice score for the school year. The District provided the following illustrations:

This method is best demonstrated by reviewing Mr. Lefkowitz's Domain 3 scores during the 2013-2014 school year:

Observation #1, Domain 3: 2.6, effective (3+2+3+2+3=13/5=2.6)

3a: Communicating with students: Effective, 3

3b: Using questions and discussion techniques: Partially Effective, 2

3c: Engaging students in learning: Effective, 3

3d: Using assessment in instruction: Partially Effective, 2

3e: Demonstrating flexibility and responsiveness: Effective, 3

Observation #2: Domain 3: 1.5, ineffective (2+1+2+1=6/4=1.5)

3a: Communicating with students: Partially Effective, 2

3b: Using questions and discussion techniques: Ineffective, 1

3c: Engaging students in learning: Partially Effective, 2

3d: Using assessment in instruction: Ineffective, 1

3e: Demonstrating flexibility and responsiveness: Insufficient evidence

Observation #3: Domain 3: 2.6, effective (3+2+3+2+3=13/5=2.6)

3a: Communicating with students: Effective, 3

3b: Using questions and discussion techniques: Partially Effective, 2

3c: Engaging students in learning: Effective, 3

3d: Using assessment in instruction: Partially Effective, 2

(See P-75.) The three Domain 3 scores are averaged to produce a total Domain 3 score of "2.23" for the 2013-2014 school year (2.6+1.5+2.6=6.7/3=2.23).

id.; 551:15-553:6.)[6] The Domain 3 score is then assigned its percentage/weight of the overall Teacher Practice score for the academic year (2.23 *.3=0.669). (Tr. @ 539) This process was repeated for the remaining domains and produced the following scores:

Domain 1, SY 13-14: 2.33 *.20=0.466
Domain 2, SY 13-14: 2.43 *.30=0.729
Domain 3, SY 13-14: 2.23 *.30=0.669
Domain 4, SY 13-14: 2.67 *.20=0.534

These scores were then added, producing a Teacher Practice Score for the 2013-2014 school year of 2.398 or "2.4" (0.466+0.729+0.669+0.534). Teacher Practice scores were assigned their respective weights/percentages (15% and 85% respectively), and added together to produce a summative rating which corresponds with one of the four (4) ratings categories:

Lefkowitz's SY 13-14 Summative Score: 3.45 *.15=0.5175 (SGO) + 2.398 *.85 (Teacher Practice) = 2.5558 or 2.56, Partially Effective.

In contrast, the calculation method proposed by the Respondent would first add all the scores for Domain 3 (3+2+3+2+3/2+1+2+1/3+2+3+2+3=32 and

[6] The District notes that "[t]hroughout these proceedings, Mr. Lefkowitz has maintained that when certain components/subdomains within a particular domain are assigned "insufficient evidence," that particular domain arbitrarily has greater weight in the overall Teacher Practice Score than domains in which all components/subdomains have numerical scores. This is simply incorrect. Both Mr. Pillsbury and Ms. Termotto testified that domains having component/subdomain scores of insufficient evidence do not receive greater weight under the Teachscape pre-loaded formula, as each observation is viewed as a snapshot of teacher performance on that given day and thus, the domain scores for each observation are kept separate and averaged together at the end of the year to obtain the total domain average (e.g. Domain 2 scores for each of the three observations are averaged to obtain the total Domain 3 score for the year). (See 2T 247: 6-248:21; 3T 559:13-560:15; 3T 631:7-632:20.) In fact, Ms. Termotto was only aware of one district utilizing Mr. Lefkowitz's proposed method of averaging all the component/subdomain scores at the end of the year." (See 3T 248:22-249:6.)

second divide the answer in Step 1 (32) by the total number of subdomain scores (14) = 32 ÷ 14= 2.85.

As compared to the District's calculation of 2.23, a higher number of 2.85 is calculated.

Using a different set of subdomain scores for a fictitious John Doe teacher, with three observations, encompassing nine (9) subdomains for Domain 1, with two (2) insufficient evidence scores, the Respondent offers the following calculations:

Observation One (3, 3, 3)
Observation Two (3, 3, 3)
Observation Three (1, no score, no score).

In the Respondent's CTEO Method, averaging at the Domain level would entail adding all the subdomain scores and dividing that answer by the total number of subdomain scores, namely:

3+3+3+3+3+3+1 = 19 ÷ 7 = 2.71

In contrast, the District's Method ("DAM") calculates the Domain Score by averaging each Domain per observation, then averaging all of these Domain averages to obtain a final Domain score.

Step 1 – add all the subdomain scores for each observation.

Illustration:

Observation 1: 3+3+3 = 9
Observation 2: 3+3+3 = 9
Observation 3: 1=1

Step 2 – divide each answer in Step 1 by the total number of subdomain scores in each observation.

Illustration:

Observation 1: 9/3 = 3
Observation 2: 9/3 = 3
Observation 3: 1/1 = 1

Step 3 – add all the Step 2 answers (3, 3, 1) together.

Illustration: 3+3+1 = 7

Step 4 – divide the answer in Step 3 (7) by the total number of observations (3).

Illustration: 7/3 = 2.33

According to the Respondent's CTEO Method, these respective calculations yield a different Domain Score because the missing (insufficient evidence) scores in Observation 3 under the District's Actual Method disproportionately receives much greater weight in the overall Domain Score as would not be the case if the District followed Respondent's CTEO Method.

Since the District's Method is shown to have a detrimental impact on Lefkowitz's Teacher Practice Score to the extent he would have been rated "effective" rather than "partially effective" for the 2013-2014 school year, Respondent maintains that the "District Method is arbitrary and capricious scoring that is inconsistent with the Evaluation Policy."

In the Arbitrator's opinion, the fact that Respondent has generated another method of calculating his Teacher Practice Score which is more beneficial to him is not tantamount to a conclusion that the District's Method is arbitrary or inaccurate. Probably, there are multiple permutations and combinations of averaging and calculating the subdomain and Domain scores that yield a range of results that are not necessarily arbitrary.

Since the method of averaging at the Domain level is only one variable that can affect a Teacher Practice Score and subsequently a summative rating, other components of domain scoring are similarly susceptible to alternative calculations. For example, increasing the weight assigned to the four (4) domains could change the Respondent's Teacher Practice Score. For example, increasing the percentage weight of Domain 4 where Lefkowitz received 2.67 to 30% of the total and reducing the weight of Domain 3 where Lefkowitz received 2.23 to 20% would have increased his teacher practice score to 2.442 as follows:

> Domain 1 (0.466); Domain 2 (0.729); Domain 3 (0.446); Domain 4 (0.801) = 2.442[7]

A Teacher Practice Score of 2.442, when added to his SGO of 0.5175 = 2.592; therefore, still partially effective (1.85-2.64).

Absent evidence that the District scoring method irrationally deviates from the statute or unreasonably implements the District's Evaluation Policy, the District's exercise of discretion in selecting Teachscape and its concomitant scoring policy must prevail.

In this regard, the District notes that if every teacher were allowed to experiment with the Teacher Practice Scoring Method until s(he) found the subjective method most conducive to an effective rating, the District's method of calculating the Teacher Practice Score would be reduced to a nullity. Moreover, as the District correctly projects, "it would be required to re-calculate the summative ratings for all of Lefkowitz's 1100+ colleagues, resulting in an avalanche of tenure charges for inefficiency being filed against teachers who were previously deemed effective."

[7] The rounding up effect from 2.38 would have left Lefkowitz at "2.4" in any event and his Summative Score would have remained unchanged.

In the Arbitrator's opinion, so long as the Respondent's Teacher Practice score was calculated using a method that conforms to the general concept of "averaging at the domain level" and no evidence was adduced that Lefkowitz was placed at a disadvantaged vis-à-vis his similarly evaluated colleagues, the Arbitrator can discern no grounds for singling out Lefkowitz for special treatment. Absent evidence, preferably expert testimony, discrediting the District's interpretation of the phrase "averaged at the domain level," in its Evaluation Policy, the Respondent's claim cannot be sustained.

In this connection, the Arbitrator finds credible the testimony of Pillsbury and Termotto that approximately 170 New Jersey school districts, who utilize the Danielson Framework, also were compelled to utilize Teachscape in calculating their Teacher Practice scores. The fact Pillsbury initially obtained this information from Termotto constitutes admissible hearsay evidence.

III. Substantial Adherence to the Evaluation Process

Insofar as the District's adherence to the evaluation process for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years is concerned, the Respondent has raised four (4) claims:

(1) the District failed to observe him within the observation cycles or rounds for each school year;

(2) the District untimely developed his Corrective Action Plan ("CAP");

(3) the District did not provide him with adequate coaching and support during the 2014-2015 school year;

(4) in multiple observations during 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, he received numerous subdomain scores without any notes, evidence, critical attributes and/or summaries.

A. Observation Cycles

According to the Respondent, the District violated its own policy by not observing him throughout the school year within each of the three (3) observation cycles. Relying on the testimony of Principal Thompson regarding the timeframe for the three cycles, Lefkowitz contends that in 2013-2014, he was "observed once in the second cycle and twice in the third cycle, with the latter two observations occurring within one week of each other. During the 2014-2015 school year, Lefkowitz was observed three times in the first cycle and once in the third cycle."

Notwithstanding the testimony of Thompson regarding the observation cycles and their inclusion in the parties' collective bargaining agreement, the Respondent does not cite any District policy requiring that a specific number teacher observations be allocated to the purported cycles. Given Thompson's testimony that neither TEACHNJ nor District policy requires the use of these cycles, the Respondent's reliance on her testimony is misplaced. She subsequently testified that due to scheduling conflicts, an observation scheduled in one cycle could be moved to the next cycle. (Tr. @ 449).

Contrary to the Respondent's assertions, the Camden Teacher Evaluation Overview for the 2013-2014 school year states:

> Formal observations began in early November and will continue up until summative evaluation conferences for both tenured and non-> tenured teachers. While observers were given a schedule of observation rounds to guide them, they will continue to observe and coach teachers throughout the district outside of those rounds, where necessary, to prepare for summative conferencing. (P. Ex. #52).

Similarly, the Overview for the 2014-2015 school year states:

> Observations will begin in September 2014 and will continue up until summative conferences for both tenured and non-tenured teachers. Classroom walkthroughs will occur throughout the entire school year. Observation schedules will be developed within each building and will guide completion of the observations. Observers will continue to observe and coach teachers throughout the year to provide support and coaching where necessary and to prepare for summative conferencing.

Since N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(c) requires only that one observation occur during the first half of the school year and one observation occur during the second half of the school year, the evidence indicates that the District was in compliance with this regulation. Given the commencement of the second half of the school year on February 1, 2014, Lefkowitz's observation by Mashore on January 21, 2014 fell within the first half of the 2013-2014 school year. His second (3/4/14) and third (3/13/14) observations occurred during the second half of the school year. During the 2014-2015 school year, Lefkowitz was observed three (3) times prior to February 1, 2015, or in the first half of the school year, and once (3/10/15) in the second half.

Other than the Respondent's testimony that the proximity of the two March 2014 observations deprived him of the opportunity to obtain feedback before being observed again, there is no evidence that this factor either constituted a substantial deviation from the evaluation process or materially affected the outcome of his evaluation. It is noteworthy that Lefkowitz neither raised this issue during his post-observation conferences with Ketterer and Thompson nor submitted a rebuttal.

B. Corrective Action Plan ("CAP")

The Respondent avers that the development of his CAP after his first observation occurred in 2013-2014 constituted a failure to adhere to the District's evaluation process. According to Lefkowitz, since his CAP was not in place as of his first observation on September 11, 2014 by Ms. Goode, he was "unaware of what goals and focus areas he would need to focus on." He also maintains that the CAP was developed without his input or collaboration. Although he signed the CAP to avoid being "adversarial," he testified that he did not contribute to its contents. (Tr. @ 802).

The Respondent has not provided any statutory/regulatory support for his position. As the District correctly notes, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(b) requires only that "...then the corrective action plan shall be developed and the teaching staff member and his or her supervisor shall meet to discuss the corrective action plan prior to September 15th of the following school year." Given this language, there is no support for the Respondent's position that observations are precluded prior to the initial CAP meeting.

Moreover, there is ample evidence that Lefkowitz had full access to his observation reports and scores once they were entered into Teachscape, had the opportunity to review the scores with his observers during his 2013-2014 post-observation conferences, had received coaching in all the areas in which he was rated partially effective or insufficient evidence on various subdomains, and had reviewed the aggregate feedback and observation reports with Principal Thompson during his Summative Conference on June 12, 2014. Principal Thompson testified credibly that not only was Lefkowitz provided with coaching during 2013-14 through walk-throughs, she also discussed his need for improvement during the Summative Conference. There is also a record of Lefkowitz's Professional Development plan, including professional development in-service training on Danielson, Teachscape and related subjects. (P. Ex. #46).

Lefkowitz's claim that he had no input into the development of his CAP is refuted by his signature under the statement:

> My signature below indicates that I have received a copy of this Corrective Action Plan and that I understand and contributed to its contents. (P. Ex. #3).

Moreover, Principal Gehring testified credibly that Ms. Goode gave Lefkowitz the opportunity to make adjustments to his CAP, after "Natalie drafted it based on what she thought were the highest needs for him to improve so that he can keep his job," but he declined to do so. (Tr. @ 152). Here again, Lefkowitz did not submit a rebuttal.

C. Support and Coaching During the 2014-2015 School Year

Lefkowitz asserts that he did not receive adequate coaching and support during the 2014-2015 school year. In his recollection, he received consistent coaching from Ms. Goode, but this ended when Ms. Gehring took over and the flood occurred at the Cream School. Once Ms. Gehring took over, Lefkowitz contends "he received even less feedback and attention, with almost half of the sessions cancelled."

Respondent acknowledges that by the commencement of the 2014-2015 school year, he had been fully apprised of the deficiencies that resulted in him being placed on a CAP for 2014-2015. Lefkowitz further acknowledges that Ms. Goode provided him with weekly coaching sessions as well as support through grade level meetings, professional development with her on Mondays, and feedback via frequent informal walk-throughs.

The record evidence indicates that when Gehring assumed the coaching responsibility for Lefkowitz prior to the holiday break and retained those responsibilities after Ms. Goode's unfortunate passing, she also provided consistent coaching prior to the mid-year CAP review on February 12, 2015. Lefkowitz admitted that he had a coaching session with Ms. Gehring prior to the March 10, 2015 observation, and three coaching sessions from February 2105 to the end of the year. (Tr. @ 885-886). It was not until the mid-February 2015 flood when all students and staff had to be relocated to Hatch that the formal weekly coaching sessions ceased.

The Arbitrator is not persuaded that the one month cessation of his coaching sessions between his February 12, 2015 mid-year CAP review and his final observation on March 10, 2015 materially affected the outcome of his evaluation. As the District notes, Lefkowitz had been previously observed formally three (3) times in 2014-2015 concurrently with weekly coaching sessions provided by Goode/Gehring. It is also noteworthy that the March 10, 2015 observation was rated "his best" by Gehring. The Respondent's improved performance was attributed, in part, to the presence of the classroom teacher in the room, which assisted in classroom management – the area in which Lefkowitz was in most need for improvement and because Gehring gave him the "benefit of the doubt" due to the flood.

Given evidence that the highest observation score Lefkowitz received during the two years at issue in his tenure charge resulted from his 3/10/15 observation, Respondent cannot reasonably claim that the four (4) week period during which he did not receive coaching at Hatch adversely or materially affected the outcome of his evaluation. If this had been the case, he had the opportunity to raise his concerns with Gehring either during their pre-observation or post-observation conference. Lefkowitz also did not avail himself of his right to submit a rebuttal to the observation.

D. In Multiple Observations, Observers gave Subdomain Scores without any Notes, Evidence, Critical Attributes and/or Summaries

Although there was clearly ambivalence in the testimony of District witnesses as to whether the availability of evidence was a prerequisite in their scoring of subdomains/components, the Respondent failed to prove that specific evidence was required in order to substantially adhere to the evaluation process. On the one hand, Mashore testified that for certain subdomains/components where he observed effective teaching practice, he did not include evidence in the Teachscape input because there was nothing negative to bring to Lefkowitz's attention. On the other hand, Pillsbury initially testified that an observer's task is to "align the evidence to components or subdomains...So a classroom observation is basically the observer going in, observing the lesson, taking their notes, assigning scores for those components...if you don't see any evidence for that specific component – and you don't feel...they should be getting a score for nothing that's when you would put insufficient evidence, because it's not weighted at all." Later, Pillsbury testified, "[w]hen they're typing their notes, if they don't see anything, yes, they could still assign a score. They could say I give a 4 because I didn't see any evidence of bad behavior." (Tr. @ 565-567). Pillsbury reinforced this testimony when he explained that with regard to evidence and assigning a score that "nothing is required," "a teacher could get just an evaluation with just numbers, no evidence, no critical attributes." (Tr. @ 625).

However, the determinations of the evaluators/observers regarding their collection of evidence during Lefkowitz's classroom observations and their decisions with respect to assigning that evidence or the lack thereof to critical attributes is beyond the scope of the arbitrator's review. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(c) clearly states that "the evaluator's determination as to the quality of the employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review."

The Arbitrator construes this statutory provision as permitting significant deviation in the scoring practices of evaluators so long as these deviations do not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation. Evidence that Mashore may have assigned a score for a subdomain without including evidence in the Teachscape report and Gehring assigned a sub-domain score without any critical attributes, or notes, or evidence such as "the behavior is excellent the entire time and there's no evidence of misbehavior" are, in the Arbitrator's interpretation of the statute, both permissible, and more importantly, beyond the scope of the Arbitrator's review.

IV. Arbitrary and Capricious

A. IEPs

The Respondent alleges that the District violated N.J.A.C. 6A:14-3.7(a)(2) when it did not provide Lefkowitz with access to the IEPs for the students in his classes and violated N.J.A.C. 6A:14-3.7(a)(3) when it did not "inform each teacher and provider described in a (a)(2) above of his or her specific responsibilities related to implementing the student's IEP and the specific accommodations..." Respondent further alleges that the District also violated "the Administrative Code provisions in failing to advise and/or provide him with any of his students' IEPs, notwithstanding Lefkowitz's numerous attempts and requests for both the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 School Years to obtain them."

Considering the evidence in its entirety, the Arbitrator is not persuaded that Lefkowitz exercised due diligence or made a reasonable effort to obtain the IEPs for the students in his classes. Whereas Lefkowitz testified that during the 2013-2014 school year, he requested the IEPs through email, he provided no proof of his email requests. (Tr. @ 754). Although Lefkowitz testified that when he asked Principal Thompson how he could get the IEPs she referred him to the guidance counselor, there is no evidence that he followed through in his efforts. In fact, Lefkowitz testified that after making two attempts to obtain the IEPs, "he got frustrated and gave up." In addition, there is a dearth of evidence that Lefkowitz raised this issue during his post-observation conferences when the need to improve his classroom management arose. He neither filed a grievance nor a rebuttal on the subject.

Principal Thompson described the process for obtaining IEPs as follows:

> "...they have a special ed teacher who makes the teacher, whatever teacher it is, aware that they have a student in that room [with an IEP]...[T]hey just request it [the IEPs]..." (Tr. @ 239-240).

For the 2014-2015 school year, Lefkowitz testified that he requested IEPs from Ms. Goode, but did not pursue these requests during the numerous coaching sessions she conducted or raise this issue in any of his post-observation reflection forms. (Tr. @ 873-876). He acknowledged being told by Ms. Gehring during 2014-2015 that the IEPs were accessible for teachers in the main office. As she put it, "All IEPs are housed in the office on the first floor. He didn't have to request, he can just go and physically get it." (Tr. @ 161-162).

The Arbitrator finds incredulous Lefkowitz's testimony that despite raising the IEP issue with Principal Thompson, the guidance counselor and the nurse during 2013-14, he made no progress in obtaining the IEPs. During 2014-15, despite being told by Principal Gehring that the IEPs were available in the main office, he never discovered where they were housed and admitted that his concern that "teachers were yelled at by the office staff" discouraged his further pursuit. Ms. Goode purportedly "brought in information about the students, but didn't actually show me the IEPs that I had requested." (Tr. @ 874-876).

In the absence of any email or other correspondence from Lefkowitz regarding his request for the IEPs, any reference to IEPs in his post-observation conference, or any rebuttals where the IEP subject was mentioned, the Arbitrator cannot credit his claim that the District acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner in denying him access to the IEPs of his students. Interestingly, the testimony of Ms. Ketterer corroborates the position of the District in that he assumed that each teacher he observed would have reviewed the IEPs for students in his class, and this assumption was based on the fact that it was the teacher's responsibility to obtain the IEPs. (Tr. @ 307).

B. Ms. Thompson and Mr. Ketterer gave vastly different scores during an observation of the same class with a similar lesson

During the 2013-2014 school year, Ketterer and Thompson each observed the same class a week apart. However, Lefkowitz was not able to incorporate or utilize any feedback from Ketterer prior to Thompson's observation. To the extent the variation in his scores are a function of the individual observer's assignment of evidence or critical attributes to the sub-domains within an observation, the Arbitrator, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 18A:6-17.2(c) is precluded from reviewing this aspect of the Respondent's observations. Moreover, the fact that two observers recorded vastly different scores during the observation of the same class within a week, in addition to the observer's scoring style, could be attributed to the difference in the Respondent's performance during those two observations.

C. Ketterer's Supervisory Role During the 2013-2014 School Year

The Respondent challenges the authority of Ketterer to conduct an observation of him during the 2013-2014 School Year because "he was not employed in a supervisor role or capacity." Citing N.J.A.C. 18A:6-119 that "an evaluation shall include formal observations, as well as post conferences, conducted and prepared by an individual employed in the district in a supervisory role and capacity and possessing a school administrator certificate, principal certificate or supervisor certificate," Lefkowitz contends that he was never advised by the District that Mr. Ketterer, a "Teacher Trainer and Evaluator," was his "supervisor" or possessed any "supervisory authority" over him during the 2013-2014 School Year. According to the Respondent, "Mr. Ketterer did not assert any supervisor authority over Lefkowitz' and indeed Lefkowitz' did not understand Ketterer to be a supervisor."

The Arbitrator dismisses the Respondent's claim that Ketterer was not properly certified to serve in a supervisory capacity and conduct formal observations as part of the District's evaluation process. The Respondent's misconception of the "Teacher Trainer and Evaluator" position does not negate the District's approval of Ketterer's supervisory authority and related role of evaluating teachers, and providing teachers with coaching and feedback on their performance. Inasmuch as the job description, Teacher Trainer & Evaluator requires the holder to possess a "valid principal or supervisory license in the State of New Jersey" and among "qualifications and responsibilities: support the teacher observation and feedback cycle by: conducting observations and evaluations of teachers across the district," the Arbitrator is convinced that Ketterer was qualified to observe Lefkowitz. (R. Ex. #C, CCSD ML 231).

D. The District's Failure to Produce its Evidence in a Timely Manner and Assert Proper Objections to Lefkowitz's Discovery Requests Requires its Exclusion

The Respondent argues that the testimony of Ms. Karlie Termotto and District Exhibit No. P-22 should be excluded because Termotto was not on the District's witness list on or before December 18, 2015 "upon referral of the case for arbitration."

The Arbitrator shall admit the testimony of Ms. Termotto as an exception to the statutory rule because her testimony arose only in response to the Arbitrator's request, set forth in his dismissal of the Respondent's Motion for Summary Decision, for clarification of the District scoring method, specifically the phrase "averaged at the Domain level." In addition, Mr. Pillsbury's testimony corroborates that of Ms. Termotto regarding the District's scoring method.

The cases cited by the Respondent are distinguishable, and the Arbitrator discerns no basis to dismiss the tenure charge on this ground.

In I/M/O Wilson, there was no waiver of the statutory time period by serving interrogatories after the statutory deadline, seeking "copies of any and all documents contained on Teachscape with regard to Respondent..." and no decision of the Arbitrator in response to Respondent's Motion for Summary Decision requesting additional testimony regarding the District's scoring method.

The Arbitrator shall also admit Petitioner's Exhibit No. 22, which represents the long form version of the observation begun by Ms. Goode on September 11, 2014 and completed on September 17, 2014. As such, P-22 is the best evidence of the observation conducted by Ms. Goode and, irrespective of the inclusion of P-22, the P-77 truncated scores have been entered into Teachscape and used to calculate Lefkowitz's summative rating. The Arbitrator also credits the testimony of Mr. Pillsbury that Exhibit P. 22 is a correct and full copy of P-77 which was produced in the District's initial disclosures, but due to a printing error less complete than P-77. Given this evidence, the Arbitrator discerns no prejudice to Respondent in admitting P-22.

Moreover, the Arbitrator is persuaded that an exception to the rule regarding the District's submission of evidence upon the referral to arbitration arises when the document is generated in response to the Respondent's interrogatories or request for documents.

The Respondent further asserts that the tenure charge should be dismissed because the District failed to provide documents in response to Interrogatories Nos. 3, 5, 8, 11 and 23, which substantially prejudiced his defenses. "Lefkowitz initially raised this argument after two full days of hearing were complete via his attorney's February 19, 2016 correspondence to this office." The District maintains that it "asserted valid and lawful objections to each and every one of the subject interrogatories when it provided its responses on January 22, 2016 pursuant to the discovery schedule agreed upon by the parties. After receipt of the District's responses, Lefkowitz did not send a deficiency letter seeking more specific responses to the subject interrogatories or file any type of action with the Arbitrator seeking to compel such responses or any additional production of documents. As such, the District believed that Lefkowitz did not oppose its lawful and appropriate objections to the subject interrogatories."

Inasmuch as Lefkowitz not only had the District's responses to the subject interrogatories approximately three (3) weeks before the start of the hearing on February 11, 2016 and also had access to these materials in Teachscape during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 School Years, the Arbitrator is persuaded that his defense was not prejudiced. Moreover, the Respondent had the opportunity to raise these discovery issues with the Arbitrator and seek his intervention in order to compel the responses and/or additional production of documents prior to the commencement of the hearing and opted not to do so.

E. District's Motion for Summary Decision

The Arbitrator reaffirms his denial of the District's Motion for Summary Decision. The basis for the denial was the District's untimely filing of the Motion ten (10) days before the start of the arbitration hearing.

Conclusion

Having found that none of the actions delineated by the Respondent satisfies one or more of the four (4) areas of allowable challenge under the statute pursuant to an Arbitrator's review of inefficiency tenure charges, the Arbitrator concludes that Mr. Lefkowitz must be dismissed from his position with the State-Operated Camden City School District.

The Respondent failed to establish that his evaluation by the District for the two (2) consecutive years, 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, where he was rated "partially effective," failed to substantially adhere to the evaluation process. The Arbitrator is persuaded that in evaluating the Respondent's performance, including his three (3) classroom observations in 2013-2014, his Corrective Action Plan, and his four (4) classroom observations in 2014-2015, the District followed, or at least substantially followed the evaluation process. His observations conformed with N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(c) in that at least one observation occurred during the first half of the school year and one observation occurred during the second half of the school year. In addition, the Respondent was given ample opportunity to improve his performance through coaching sessions, informal walk-throughs, as well as in pre and post observations with his observers and supervisors.

The Respondent further failed to establish that the District's actions were arbitrary or capricious. The District complied with TEACHNJ in calculating his Teacher Practice Score utilizing the State approved Danielson Framework and Teachscape software program. The Respondent's Teacher Practice score was calculated using a method applied to all teachers in the District that was also consistent with the statute. The methods used by the observers in collecting and assigning evidence to score the Teacher Practice components/subdomains was not subject to challenge as per N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17(c).

In addition, the correction of an error made by Lefkowitz in calculating his 2014-2015 SGO scores resulted in an increase in his summative rating from 2.26 to 2.36. Nevertheless, Lefkowitz's summative rating remained "partially effective" for 2014-2015.

In the final analysis, the District has sustained its burden of proof by a preponderance of the credible evidence. It has established and implemented an evaluation policy in accordance with TEACHNJ and District policy. It has preferred a tenure charge of inefficiency against Lefkowitz based upon his two consecutive partially effective summative ratings for 2013-2014 and 2014-2015. In the absence of preponderant evidence that the District's actions were arbitrary or capricious, substantially deviated from its evaluation process, encompassed mistake of fact, or the tenure charge was brought for a prohibited reason, the Arbitrator is required to uphold the Respondent's dismissal.

Accordingly, the Respondent, Michael Lefkowitz, is dismissed from his position as a teacher with the Camden City School District.

NOW THEREFORE, as the duly selected Arbitrator, having heard the evidence presented, I hereby issue the following:

AWARD

Pursuant to the TEACHNJ Statute, the Respondent, Michael Lefkowitz, shall be dismissed from his position as a teacher in the State-Operated School District of the City of Camden, New Jersey.

On November 12, 2015, the School District of the Township of Montgomery, Somerset County ("Board" or "District") filed a Certificate of Determination including, inter alia, the Board's resolution of tenure charges against Jeffrey Tagliareni ("Respondent" or "Tagliareni"). On December 7, 2015, the tenure charges were referred to the undersigned pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26 and P.L. 2015, c. 109.

On December 23, 2015, Respondent filed a Motion for Summary

Decision requesting the tenure charges be dismissed. On January 8, 2015, after two telephonic hearings and review of the parties' arguments, the undersigned denied the motion. Prior to the commencement of the hearing, the parties argued over evidentiary matters, resulting in the Protective Order entered with consent by the parties.

Three days of hearings were conducted at the District's administrative office; January 15, 2016, February 17, 2016 and February 18, 2016. Two additional days were scheduled. Immediately prior to the fourth day of hearing, Tagliareni submitted a unilateral, voluntary resignation (Exhibit 1). The Board, by resolution on March 16, 2016 unanimously accepted Respondent's "Letter of Resignation", effective the close of business on March 31, 2016 (Exhibit 2).

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 Withdrawal, Settlement or Mooting of Tenure Charges requires the undersigned to review the Letter of Resignation and acceptance by the Board to determine whether the tenure charges should be dismissed as moot. In recent tenure hearings, upon receipt of a resignation, arbitrators questioned what, if any, legitimate interest the Petitioner maintained to pursue the charges. (See Arbitrator Simmelkjaer decision in In the Matter of the Tenure Charges c. Jerome C. Higgins, State District of the Township of Edison, Middlesex County, Dkt. No. 121-5/14 and cases cited therein).

In the instant matter, Respondent submitted a unilateral, voluntary and irrevocable resignation from his employment with the School District of the Township of Montgomery, Somerset County. Respondent has no claim to any employment or back pay. Thus, Petitioner has no other legitimate interest arising out of the instant matter. Accordingly, the following Award is issued:

AWARD

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, the Montgomery Township Board of Education's March 16, 2016 Resolution accepting Tagliareni's Letter of Resignation, effective March 31, 2016, certified by the Business Administrator/Board Secretary does hereby conclude the tenure hearing. The charges against Jeffrey Tagliareni, are, hereby, dismissed as moot.

| J.L., on behalf of minor child, T.D., | : | |
| PETITIONER, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| V. | : | DECISION ON |
| BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE NORTH STAR ACADEMY CHARTER SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY, | : | APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. In this case, the petitioner is appealing the decision of the North Star Academy Charter School Board of Trustees (Board) to continue the suspension of T.D. from school through May 20, 2016 for the assault of a staff member. The ALJ granted the petitioner's request for emergent relief.

By way of factual background, the record demonstrates that T.D. was initially suspended on December 14, 2015 for assaulting a staff member and was informed that a recommendation for an additional period of suspension or expulsion would be considered at the next Board meeting. (Board's Brief, Exhibit 1) At the Board's meeting on February 10, 2016, the Board "determined that the conduct warranted suspension from school for ten additional days" and that T.D. "may return to school on March 22, 2016." (Board's Brief, Exhibit 4) Thereafter, the Board again considered T.D.'s suspension at the March 21, 2016 Board meeting, including the administration's recommendation to "continue the long term suspension for an additional 38 school days in order to complete and consider the evaluation for eligibility for special education that [J.L.] requested", i.e., through May 20, 2016. (Board's Brief, Exhibit 8)

Noting that completion of the special education evaluation process was pending only the psychiatric exam, the Board determined that the "incomplete IEP team evaluation warranted the continuation of [T.D.'s] suspension in order to gather all the necessary information to determine the appropriate course of action following [T.D.'s] suspension." (Ibid.)

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner is entitled to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), a grant of emergent relief can only be issued upon a finding that petitioner has met the four-pronged standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Specifically, the party seeking such relief must demonstrate the existence of each of the following: 1) the movant will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; 2) the legal right underlying the movant's claim is settled; 3) the movant has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and 4) when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the movant will suffer greater harm than the other party if the requested relief is not granted. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c), the "[s]uspension of a general education student shall not be continued beyond the district board of education's second regularly scheduled meeting following the suspension, unless the district board of education so determines pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-5." In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c), this determination must be made based on the following criteria:

i. The nature and severity of the offense;
ii. The district board of education removal decision;
iii. The results of any relevant testing, assessments or evaluations of the student; and
iv. The recommendation of the chief school administrator, after considering input from the principal or director of the alternate education program or home or other in-school or out-of-school instruction program in which the student has been placed. [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c)1.i.-iv.]

The Board's determination at its March 21, 2016 meeting to suspend T.D. through May 20, 2016 in order to complete the evaluation for eligibility for special education is not authorized by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c). The regulation does not permit a district to keep a child out of school while determining if a child is eligible for special education services, and a long-term suspension for such reasons is an improper use of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c). The determination regarding a long-term suspension and an evaluation for special education are in no way related; the Commissioner only has jurisdiction over the long-term suspension – a disciplinary matter – and not over special education matters. See N.J.S.A. 18A:16-9. Thus, a district may not conflate the issues as the Board has done here.

The Commissioner notes that "[t]he results of any relevant testing, assessments or evaluations of the student" is included in the criteria relevant to determining a long-term suspension. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(c). As such, the Board would have been permitted to require a psychological or psychiatric examination prior to T.D.'s return to school for purposes of determining whether it was safe for her to return or whether she was a danger to herself or other students. However, in this circumstance, there is no evidence in the record that the Board required a psychiatric or psychological evaluation as a condition of T.D.'s return to school. Instead, the only mention of a psychiatric evaluation in the record is in the context of T.D.'s psychiatric evaluation for special education services – a process which was requested by J.L. Accordingly, the legal right regarding long-term suspensions is well settled and the petitioner has demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits.

The Commissioner finds that T.D. will suffer irreparable harm if she is not immediately permitted to return to the general education setting. Keeping T.D. from school in violation of the N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3 constitutes irreparable harm. See Dolores Sanchez v. Board of Education of the City of Camden, Camden County, Commissioner Decision No. 107-03, decided March 6, 2003, aff'd State Board June 4, 2003 (finding irreparable harm stemming from a statutory violation when a Board illegally transferred a principal to the position of assistant principal); see also Daniel Flynn v. Board of Education of the Freehold Regional School District, Monmouth County, Commissioner Decision No. 243-09, decided August 9, 2009. Preventing T.D. from attending school while she is being evaluated for special education services deprives her from interaction with her peers, without any authority to do so.

Finally, when balancing the equities and interests of the parties, petitioner will suffer greater harm if emergent relief is not granted. T.D. has been deprived of involvement in school activities and events as well as interaction with other students, without any statutory or regulatory authority. Conversely, the Board will not suffer any harm if emergent relief is granted as it is acting in violation of state regulation.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL granting petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted as modified. The continued suspension of T.D. from March 22, 2016 to May 20, 2016 is reversed and the Board is directed to permit T.D. to return to school. This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners filed a Verified Petition and Motion for Emergent Relief with the Office of Controversies and Disputes in the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) on April 1, 2016. In support of the Motion for Emergent Relief petitioners also filed an Affidavit of petitioner J.L. and a brief in support of the motion.

Said motion seeks order authorizing the immediate reinstatement of petitioner, T.D., to North Star Academy; and, directing respondent to assess any academic curriculum and home instruction missed by T.D. during 2015 and 2016, and to provide same to T.D. in the form of supplemental tutoring and summer programs.

Respondent filed its brief in opposition to the Motion for Emergent Relief, together with Exhibits 1 through 8 and the certification of Jason Russell, Associate Chief Operating Officer, on April 20, 2016.

Because of the issues presented in the Verified Petition the matter was docketed by both the Office Special Education (as Docket No. 2016-24244E) and the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (as Docket No. 100-4/16).

DOE requested that the OAL docket and review the matter as a special education (EDS) case and issue a final decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-2.7. The OAL issued a docket number of EDS 05098-16.

The Motion for Emergent Relief, while touching upon special education issues, is not a special education motion. Accordingly, the issues raised in the Verified Petition regarding special education issues will not be addressed in the within Order.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

Petitioner, T.D., is a student at North Star Academy Charter School (North Star). She is presently in the eighth grade.

T.D. has been attending North Star since August 2012.

T.D. has a history of suspension since enrolling in North Star. An incident occurring on December 14, 2015, resulted in a ten day suspension.

The notice to T.D.'s parents regarding the suspension advised that the suspension would run through January 11, 2016. (Exhibit 1 Respondent's brief). It also advised that T.D. might receive an additional suspension, or expulsion, after a meeting of the Board of Trustees. That meeting was scheduled for January 25, 2016. That meeting was not held due to inclement weather.

The Board of Trustees did meet on February 10, 2016. At that meeting the Board determined that T.D. would continue under suspension until March 22, 2016, at which time she could return to school. The Board, by letter dated February 11, 2016, advised the parents of T.D. accordingly. (Exhibit 4 Respondent's brief). Said letter did not attach any conditions on T.D.'s return to school.

By letter dated March 22, 2016, the Board advised the parents of T.D. that her suspension would continue through May 20, 2016. The rationale stated in said letter was to evaluate T.D. for eligibility for special education in response to the parents of T.D. request. (Exhibit 8 Respondent's brief). Nothing in the documentary record indicates that the parents agreed to a continuation of T.D.'s suspension pending an evaluation for eligibility for special education, or for a clearance from a medical professional to return to school.

No notice of the meeting wherein a continuation of T.D.'s suspension occurred was provided to the parents of T.D.

Nothing contained in the March 22, 2016 letter from North Star indicates that T.D. will be returned to school upon the completion of the special education eligibility assessment. There is no date certain form T.D.'s return.

T.D. continues to be suspended to date.

During the course of T.D.'s suspension she has received appropriate education services from North Star for ten hours per week.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Initially, it must be determined if petitioners are entitled to emergent relief.

A party may only request emergent relief for the following reasons, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:14-2.7:

1. Issues involving a break in the delivery of services;
2. Issues involving disciplinary action, including manifestation determinations and determinations of interim alternate education settings;
3. Issues concerning placement pending outcome of due process proceedings; and
4. Issues involving graduation or participation in graduation ceremonies.

As the present matter concerns a disciplinary action, petitioners are entitled to seek emergent relief.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has set forth a four-prong test for determining whether an applicant is entitled to emergent relief. Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982) (enumerating the factors later codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b)).

The four factors ("the Factors"), include:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

[N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).]

The moving party bears the burden of proving each of the Crowe elements "clearly and convincingly." Waste Mgmt of N.J. v. Union County Util. Auth., 399 N.J. Super. 508, 520 (App. Div. 2008).

A review of the four factors is in order.

Factor One. T.D. by being continued to be suspended for an extended period of time suffers irreparable harm. See C.F. v. City of Wildwood Board of Education, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 619, 621 (holding indefinite placement of a student on homebound instruction demonstrated irreparable harm). See also B.K. v. Princeton Regional Board of Education, OAL DKT. No. EDS 4813-13 (April 15, 2013), where it was found on a motion for emergent relief referring to home instruction that "such an educational option is to be used by a district in limited circumstances and for a limited time period."

Factor Two. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled.

N.J.S.A. 18A:372.4 provides that a suspended student is entitled to a hearing before the Board of Education. The continuation of T.D.'s suspension to May 20, 2016, was without notice or hearing. There was no intervening incident with T.D. of any kind. Respondent's claim that the continued suspension was based upon the parents' consent is simply not accurate. Nothing in the documentary record reflects this and petitioner denies it. T.D. had the legal right to a hearing and it was not provided.

Factor Four. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief will not be granted. Here it is clear that by denying T.D. access to school, T.D. is denied access to any school activity or event, interaction with her peers and interaction with her teachers. That cannot be replaced by continued home instruction. The harm to respondent is speculative in their claim that T.D. may be a threat to other students and her teachers. This is based upon one incident where there was physical contact.

Lastly, respondent advised T.D. and her parents that she would be permitted to return to school on March 22, 2016, without conditions. That simply never happened. The unilateral decision to extend her suspension, without notice or hearing cannot be permitted to stand.

I CONCLUDE that the continuation of T.D.'s suspension from March 22, 2016 to May 20, 2016 was without merit and should be REVERSED.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the continued suspension of T.D. from March 22, 2016 to May 20, 2016 is REVERSED and

It is further ORDERED that Respondent permit the immediate return of T.D. to North Star Academy.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If (title of agency head) does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson, Passaic County ("District" or "Employer") initiated and the State District Superintendent certified to the Commissioner of Education a tenure charge seeking the termination of employment of Thomas Schaefer ("Respondent" or "Mr. Schaefer"), who is employed as a tenured Teacher within the District. By letter dated October 13, 2015, the Commissioner of Education referred the charges to this Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:5-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26 and P.L. 2015, c. 109. By agreement of the parties, the hearing of this matter was commenced on November 24, 2015. At that time, although no testimony was taken, discussions were held, documentation and exhibits were reviewed, and an outline of the full case proceeding was developed. The taking of testimony commenced on January 19, 2016, at the offices of the District, 90 Delaware Avenue, Paterson, New Jersey, and continued on February 3, February 10, and February 18, 2016. Throughout this proceeding, both parties were ably represented by legal counsel, and Respondent was present at all times. Each party was provided a full and fair opportunity to present evidence through documents and testimony. All witnesses were sequestered, other than Respondent, and all testified under oath and were subject to direct, cross, and redirect examination. The parties agreed to the presence of a court reporter and to the subsequent preparation and use of a transcript of the evidential hearings. When the taking of evidence was concluded on February 18, 2016, counsel agreed to present written closing arguments. As the result of various intervening events, including a weather emergency, family leave for one participant, and the agreement of the parties to proceed first to an interim decision in another arbitration addressing issues with potentially District-wide effect regarding the Paterson Evaluation System, the Commission approved an extension until April 30, 2016, for the issuance of this Award. In accordance, the deadline for closing briefs was established and then extended by agreement of the parties. Same, which were meticulously developed and documented, were timely conveyed to the Arbitrator, whereupon receipt of which the record was closed. In reaching the conclusions and making the Award set forth herein, the Arbitrator has given full, fair, and careful consideration to all evidence of record, all arguments, and all authorities and citations offered by the parties.

II. THE CHARGES AND APPLICABLE STANDARDS

Based upon the Notice of Tenure Charge of Inefficiency issued by the District, the State District Superintendent's finding of probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges, and Respondent's Answer, the Office of the Commissioner of Education concluded that the charges, if true, were sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary, "subject to determination by the arbitrator of respondent's defenses. . . ." Thus, by letter dated October 13, 2015, the charges were referred to this Arbitrator by the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26 and P.L. 2015, c. 109, for her review.

The District asserts one charge, citing "inefficiency," contending that Respondent was rated as Partially Effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations. The charge also asserts that Respondent failed to effectively perform the duties of a teacher, to effectively prepare for instruction, to effectively use data to inform instruction, to effectively deliver quality instruction to his students, to effectively intervene to meet the diverse needs of his students, to effectively foster a safe, effective, respectful, and collaborative classroom environment, to effectively exhibit leadership, and to effectively fulfill his professional responsibilities.

The actual summative ratings for the school years of 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 are not in dispute and are established in the record through the admission of joint exhibits documenting the cited scores. Respondent raises a number of arguments challenging the validity of the processes used, the manner in which the evaluation system was implemented and applied to Respondent, and specific conclusions reached therein, but there is no dispute as to the scores themselves, which were as follows: in the 2013-2014 annual summative evaluation, Respondent was rated partially effective based on a teacher practice score of 2.00 and a student growth objective score of 1.00, for an overall score of 1.85; and, in the 2014-2015 annual summative evaluation, Respondent was rated partially effective, based on a teacher practice score of 1.60 and a student growth objective score of 0.80, for an overall score of 2.40. This then resulted in two consecutive years of ratings of less than effective, which enabled the District to seek termination of employment.

The District has the ultimate burden of establishing that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met, but N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(a) addresses specifically the standards for determination of cases involving charges of inefficiency. Under these provisions, the Arbitrator is to determine, in the first instance, only the following: whether the Respondent's evaluations failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including but not limited to a corrective action plan: whether there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation; if the charge would not have been brought against Respondent but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by federal law or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or if the District's actions were arbitrary and capricious. If one of these shortcomings is found from the evidence adduced at hearing, the Arbitrator then must determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of Respondent's evaluation. If the established factors did not, then the charges must stand and removal will follow.

As an initial matter, however, the parties to this action, along with the parties in three other tenure proceedings, agreed that the challenges to the Paterson Evaluation System would be consolidated and addressed in a single interim award that potentially would have District-wide effect, which was issued by Arbitrator Gifford on January 14, 2016. In examining the District's evaluation system, Arbitrator Gifford concluded that "there is insufficient evidence to conclude at this point in the proceedings that the District has failed to meet its legal requirements." In the Matter of the Tenure Charge of Carrie Osborne, et al., Agency Docket No. 288-9/15 (Jan. 14, 2016). The Respondents before Arbitrator Gifford had contended that the District had unilaterally implemented Student Growth Objectives, which would have been contrary to the statutory system, which requires that the teacher develop, "in consultation with his or her supervisor or a principal's designee, each student growth objective," with the principal making the final determination if the teacher does not agree with the student growth objectives. Arbitrator Gifford considered the allegation of unilateral implementation and concluded that any failings in this regard are to be reviewed on a case-by-case basis. The Respondents also challenged the calculation of teacher observation and evaluation scores, contending that the District had failed to disclose scoring rubric information, refused to explain the calculation of standard scores for observations and the Annual Summary Report, failed to implement and enforce objective observation scoring rules, and had not disclosed how sub-indicators are factored into overall scores. On these issues, Arbitrator Gifford indicated that the evidence had been presented in a broad context and can be detailed in future cases to indicate the steps the District has taken with regard to training and disclosure.

III. FACTS AND ANALYSIS

A. Background

Respondent has taught in the District for more than 15 years and earned tenure in 2002. Grievant entered the teaching profession after having completed his bachelor's degree in journalism and having worked for several years as an accountant. He first secured teaching positions in parochial schools and New York City Public Schools. After becoming certified in New Jersey as an Elementary School Teacher, Respondent worked for one year (1995-96) in the District, teaching eighth grade. His contract was not renewed, and he taught elsewhere until hired again by the District in 1999. In the ensuing 14 years, Respondent taught at various schools within the District, teaching several subjects and differing grades. In addition to holding his initial certificate as an elementary school teacher, he later became certified as a teacher of business studies, bookkeeping, accounting and English.

Respondent's recent service included an assignment, in the 2010-2011 school year, to the John F. Kennedy High School, teaching business education, followed by a year at the Sports Business Academy, also teaching business education. For the 2012-2013 school year, Respondent moved to the New Roberto Clemente Middle School (NRC), where he was one of two Educational Technology Teachers for sixth, seventh and eighth grades. In teaching these programs, Respondent was trained in and used the District's computer technology curriculum, Learning.com, which includes lesson plans, lessons and assessments for students in various grades.

B. The Evaluation Process at NRC

At the end of Respondent's first year at NRC, 2012-2013, the District began the training process to implement the new Paterson Evaluation System. Respondent underwent training in these processes, which was designed to introduce the teacher evaluation process. Respondent also was given the Paterson Public Schools Teacher Performance Evaluation Packet, a comprehensive document that sets forth the process in detail. The Evaluation Packet, or handbook, as it is commonly called, outlines the evaluation process and includes summaries, a glossary, goals and objectives, examples of the evaluation instrument, and an outline of the planning process for SGOs. It also contains 55 pages of question and answers. Within the handbook is an outline of the specific elements of each of the seven performance standards for the Teacher Practice Rubrics, which are: preparation for instruction; use of data to inform instruction; delivers quality instruction; interventions to meet diverse needs; classroom environment; leadership; and professional responsibilities. Within each standard are subcategories and rating elements reflecting whether a score would be considered unsatisfactory, progressing, proficient, or exemplary and also indicating the weight to be accorded each score.

With the commencement of the following school year, 2013-2014, came the actual implementation of the evaluation system, which Respondent recalled as including group training sessions or professional development sessions in which the evaluation process and scoring systems were addressed. He recalled specifically a session presented by NRC Vice Principals Ventura and Garcia in which he posed questions regarding the scoring process. Respondent has asserted throughout, however, that he did not understand aspects of the scoring process and that questions posed at training sessions and references to the handbooks did not provide answers.

One of the first steps, at the beginning of the school year, was for teachers to develop their SGOs for the purpose of tracking the development and progress of their students. Respondent alleges that the SGOs for both years were unilaterally determined and imposed by the District. Yet in testimony, Respondent addressed the assistance he received in formulating his SGO for the first year. He met with Principal Hector Montes, and they discussed the approach to development of his SGO. Principal Montes suggested to Respondent, as he did with most teachers, that at least one sixth-grade class be included, as this would provide a benchmark to show the students' progress as they advanced within the middle school. Respondent's chosen growth objective for that school year was that "[a]t least 70% of students will show improvement in their total proficiency level between the pre and the post assessments," a number that Respondent believed, in retrospect, was overly ambitious. Respondent testified in varying ways regarding the development of this number and approach. He said that Principal Montes had "suggested" that the use of sixth grade classes for the logical reason of tracking their progress over the course of three years, yet he also testified that this was a "directive." He also testified that Dennis Vroegindewy, the Director of Libraries and Technology, told him to use 70% and that when Vice Principal Garcia later said that the number could be reduced, he did not do so because he felt he needed to comply with what Mr. Vroegindewey had said and also because he believed that he could achieve this goal.

Respondent testified that, later that year, he learned that at least one technology teacher in another school was using a 3% measure for the SGO. Respondent attempted to contrast 3% with 70% without acknowledging that they were being used as completely different measures, with the 70% applying to the number of students advancing to the next level and the 3% being used to measure the students' degree of improvement. He then went on in testimony, however, to explain the 3% calculation in a manner that reflected that he had a thorough understanding of that analysis at the time he discovered it, even though, after he had incorporated it the following year as his SGO, he repeatedly professed to supervisors that he did not understand what the 3% was or to what it applied. Respondent also testified at hearing both (a) that he learned of the more appealing 3% measure not long after the start of the year when he was still at NRC and yet (b) that for the following school year, at a different school, the use of 3% had been "assigned" by the then-Principal and had been "her idea."

From a careful evaluation of testimony and all other evidence of record, the Arbitrator finds that the Respondent's contention that the District unilaterally imposed the SGO levels that were used in both years is not supported by the evidence of record. Rather, the record establishes that Respondent agreed to the use of these standards. Further, as will be addressed below, the Arbitrator finds that Respondent was being disingenuous when, during and especially at the close of the following school year, 2015-2015, he purported to have no understanding of the application of the 3% element of his then-SGO.

In keeping with the new evaluation system, Respondent's teaching in the 2013-2014 year was given three formal observations, in which the seven factors incorporated in the evaluation program were assessed. These formal observations were conducted on October 16, 2013 (by Assistant Principal Jorge Ventura), January 16, 2014 (by Assistant Principal Ramona Garcia); and April 4, 2014 (by Principal Hector Montes with Mr. Vroegindewy). The evaluations produced mixed ratings in the seven categories. The factor of greatest concern was from the October 16, 2013, observation by Mr. Ventura, in Standard #3, "Delivers Quality Instruction." Respondent on this observation received a rating of unsatisfactory, with the notes indicating that he gave unclear directions to students, causing students to ask for clarification, led learning that was "passive rather than active," incorporated excessive "busy work," monopolized discussions, called on one student primarily, and sparked "low intellectual involvement."

Respondent also received ratings of "Progressing I/Partially Effective" in categories such as Preparation for Instruction, Use of Data to Inform Instruction, Interventions to Meet Diverse Needs, and Classroom Environment. In the April 2014 observation, Mr. Montes provided several ratings of "Progressing II" in categories of Preparation, Use of Data, Delivering Quality Instruction, and Intervention to Meet Diverse Needs. In all evaluation documents, significant commentary was provided, citing specific examples and areas in which improvement was needed. Each category indicated the value attached to that rating. The requisite meetings were held after each observation and rating, so that discussion could be held to enable Respondent to better integrate the comments and rating into his performance. Respondent submitted rebuttals to each, indicating that he had reviewed and considered the information stated therein.

Respondent contends that there was unfairness and there were procedural flaws in each of these three formal observations. At hearing, Respondent testified that, especially with regard to the October observation, there had been problems with the operation of the computers, resulting in the commencement of class being actually only on October 6, just a week prior to the evaluation. The result, he said, was that he had very little time to get up to speed to teaching in this environment, and the students were still involved with pre-testing in Learning.com. Mr. Ventura testified, however, that he and Respondent spoke about this, and he pointed out to Respondent that if he did not have necessary data ready for the students a week into the class, it was not clear when he would have it ready. Mr. Ventura also noted to Respondent that there various ways in which the material may be taught, whether in a lab or a classroom, and the teacher needs to be able to engage in effective teaching in these different settings. Respondent at one point complained that he did not have adequate access to computers, noting issues with electricity, but Mr. Ventura testified in response that he had explained to Respondent before and at the time of the review that he had to stop leaving the laptop carts plugged in for long periods of time, as it was causing the batteries to diminish, and that this was why he was left with laptops that would not successfully maintain a charge.

Respondent also contends that it was inappropriate that the observation was of a bilingual class and that it was conducted by an administrator who spoke Spanish and thus could relate more directly to the students. He argues further that there was a mistake in the evaluation notation that he did not have data binders in the classroom when, in fact, the observer, in this instance, Mr. Ventura, had not looked in the correct place. Respondent also argues that he had been unfairly criticized in the observation by Principal Montes for not using smartboards when, in fact, the smartboard that he was assigned was broken. Mr. Montes testified, however, that he had not been aware until the observation that the smartboard was not operating and that, had Respondent notified him, he would have addressed the problem. Mr. Montes testified without contradiction that he takes pride in ensuring that such logistical matters are rectified immediately and that teachers know that they can email or call as soon as a technological problem arises and it will be addressed. Respondent's failure to attempt to have the smartboard repaired or replaced was an example of Respondent's inclination (noted also by other administrators) to be "very passive" as opposed to "being proactive and trying to find answers."

Respondent also alleges that the District did not comply during this school year with the evaluation process regarding informal walkthroughs. The record, however, indicates that at least four informal walkthroughs of Respondent's classes were performed at NRC in 2013-2014. According to the manual, a walkthrough is not more than ten minutes in duration and "identifies and informs teacher practice in the areas of classroom environment, instruction, and student encouragement." These walkthroughs were cited in the document prepared at the end of the year (the CAP, addressed below) to outline corrective efforts to be undertaken to help Respondent improve his performance.

From the foregoing information and the full record as it relates to the formal observation and evaluation process for Teacher Practice in 2013-2014, the Arbitrator finds no showing that the District failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, engaged in any mistake of fact in the evaluations, or was arbitrary and capricious.

C. Other Issues at NRC

In the 2013-2014 school year at NRC, Respondent received a written reprimand for "unbecoming conduct" relating to Respondent having referred, in class, to a good student who had received his first detention as "detention kid" and, when the student objected, Respondent asked, "Are you going to tell your mommy?" Respondent was reminded in the written reprimand of the humiliation that this caused the student and that the District expected him to adhere to the high standards of performance and responsibility and professional rapport with students, earning their respect while treating them with respect. In testimony, Respondent acknowledged the incident and noted that his remarks had been inappropriate.

In May of 2014, Grievant initiated three grievances. In one, he challenged the assignment to teach in a content area that he said was outside of his certification. (See discussion below.) In this regard, Respondent testified that raised the issue because he wanted to get off the Corrective Action Plan (CAP) and he wanted to teach something he knew so that he could be successful. (Although the CAP was not in place as of May 2014, it would be clear from the nature of the evaluations that the summative evaluation was likely to be Partially Effective and that, therefore, a CAP would have to be put in place.) The grievance was denied and nothing in the record indicates that it was pursued further. Respondent also initiated a grievance alleging that he had been denied access to appropriate technology and materials that would enhance his level of instruction. In this regard, Respondent noted that he was referring especially to a "smart board" that was not functioning, as addressed above. The District, he said, was aware of this but did not take steps to repair it. Another grievance initiated in May 2014 related to an alleged failure of Principal Montes to write comments on Respondent's lesson plans or to provide a copy of rubrics or of the observations a full workday prior to a conference to discuss observations.[1]

D. Summative Evaluation for 2013-2014

In June 2014, as prescribed in the Paterson Evaluation System, the Respondent's Annual Summative Performance rating was developed from the weighted combination of the Teacher Practice and Student Grown Objective scores. The Teacher Practice Score, based upon the three evaluations by three different administrators, as noted above, with weighting as indicated on the evaluation instrument that had been provided to Respondent, was a total score of 44.0. That score then translated to a Teacher Practice Score of 2.0 on the District's four-point scale, which is clearly set forth on the Annual Summary Conference Form.

Respondent's SGO score was calculated at rating of 1, which is the lowest rating, based on the average of the progress of the two sixth-grade classes Respondent had designated to monitor for student growth. Respondent's target of advancement by 70% of the students had not been met. As noted above, Respondent had recognized that the objective of having 70% of students advance may have been overly ambitious. He knew that he could follow the suggestion of Mr. Vroegindewey and take steps to amend the SGO as the year progressed, but he did not do so.

When the Teacher Practice Score was combined with the SGO, Respondent received an annual summative rating of 1.85. This number was achieved by an allocation of 85% to the Teacher Practice Score and 15% to the SGO. That score was within the range specified in the Evaluation

[1] Respondent argues that he raised these, in addition to six grievance initiated in the following school year, to put the District on notice of what he believed were various deficiencies in the evaluation process. He argues that if the District had attended to these issues, rather than denying the grievances, problems that allegedly affected Respondent's performance and evaluations would have been rectified and the need for the instant charges eliminated. In this regard, the Respondent argues that the District's actions were arbitrary and capricious. The Arbitrator finds, however, that denial of grievances is not at issue or developed in this forum cannot form a basis for findings and conclusions in this case under the applicable statutory standards.

System as denoting performance that was only "Partially Effective." In fact, the score was at the lowest end of that rating group, hovering precariously above "Ineffective."

As a result of this rating, it was necessary, under N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5, for the District to develop and implement a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) for the upcoming school year. Vice Principal Venture testified to his recollection post-evaluation discussions with Respondent in which Respondent said that he knew that he would have to go on a CAP but that he wanted to confirm that, if he made it through the following year with acceptable evaluations, he would be off the CAP. Vice Principal Ventura expressed frustration that Respondent was focused less on achieving excellence and becoming a better teacher than timing the good and bad evaluations, seeking to confirm that, if he had an acceptable year, then he could have another sub-standard year and not be "in trouble."

Vice Principals Ventura and Garcia, along with Principle Montes, discussed the terms of the CAP, and then Mr. Ventura and Ms. Garcia actually developed it. Using the district-wide format, the CAP identified the areas in which improvement was needed and specified steps that would be taken by Respondent and also by administrative personnel to help Respondent achieve the needed improvement. Timelines also were established. Vice Principal Ventura testified that they had not discussed the CAP with Respondent, but they had intended to do so when school resumed in the fall.

E. School 20 -- Implementation of the CAP

Respondent, however, did not return to NRC for the following school year. For that year, the school schedule was to be changed. Respondent explained at hearing that, as the result of a grant, an additional hour of work was going to be required of teachers at NRC. Thus, he said, those teachers who did not want to or could not work the additional time were given the opportunity to leave the school. As a result, he said, he "opted out" and requested a transfer. Respondent had asked to be transferred to JFK High School. Respondent testified that, at first, at the end of the 2013-14 school year, he believed he was being transferred to JFK but in August he was notified that, instead, he was being transferred to School 20, an elementary school, as the Educational Technology Teacher.

This, said Respondent, was the first time in his career that he had taught an age range below sixth grade. Although Respondent's first certification in New Jersey was in elementary education and he continues to hold that certification, the approach, he said, to teaching "babies" was very different from the approach with older children. He also has asserted in this proceeding that it was inappropriate for him to teach Technology, a subject for which he says he had no certification and has no desire to teach. A certificate or endorsement in educational technology is not required to teach that subject, however. Nonetheless, Respondent's New Jersey teaching certificate as an Elementary School Teacher qualifies him to teach a variety of subjects in grades K through six, including "computer and information literacy," and his certification in business education qualifies him to teach "keyboarding, computer data entry, word processing and exploration of related careers." N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-9.3(b)(2) (ii); 5.17(b); and 9.4(a)(1)(iv).

Respondent also argues that, by relying on Respondent's performance during this first year in a new school and with a new age group, the District was setting Respondent up to fail and, thus, acted arbitrarily and capriciously. As noted above, however, the points upon which the evaluations rest relate largely to matters and functions required for performing any teaching position, whether in a new environment or one of complete familiarity. Moreover, it was Respondent's choice to leave NRC, even though he knew that he had a received a Partially Effective rating and would be dealing with a CAP. The Arbitrator thus is not persuaded by Respondent's argument in this regard.

Respondent thus began teaching at School 20, serving its only Educational Technology Teacher. At the beginning of the school year, on September 10, 2014, Respondent met with School 20 Principal Antoinette Young. It is clear from the testimony that Respondent had known that he would be receiving a CAP but that he had not yet seen it. Ms. Young gave him the CAP that had been prepared at NRC, and the District asserts that Respondent and Ms. Young then agreed to use adopt it. The record does not establish that Respondent overtly agreed to this, but, as the District has argued, he did have opportunities before and after the adoption at School 20 to raise issues regarding the structure and content of the CAP. Respondent testified that he was given the CAP on September 10 and then signed the document on September 11 because, he said, although Ms. Young had not been in a hurry for the document, there was a deadline by which she needed to submit it. Respondent noted with his signature, "Disclaimed. I did not contribute to this CAP on 9/10/14. Understanding is from a cursory review from Ms. Young." The three areas of improvement noted on the CAP, listed below, related to preparation of appropriate and timely lesson plans, using data to create and implement plans incorporating strategies for all student, and delivering high quality and motivating lessons. Respondent testified that these categories did not make sense to him, for he had no shortcomings in performance in those areas.

The three areas in which Respondent and Administrators would work to achieve improvement are set forth in the CAP, as follows:

1. Teacher needs to prepare and submit lesson plans on time that are aligned with the district's model curriculum and pacing grid and incorporate differentiation of instruction and modifications for subgroups.
2. Teacher needs to be able to gather, analyze and use data from multiple sources in order to create and implement lesson plans that incorporate strategies and activities for all students.
3. Develop ability to attain student focus by delivering lessons that are high quality and motivating to students.

The CAP noted the responsibilities of Respondent and supervision as to each area in which improvement was needed, and timeline was developed for each. (At hearing, however, Respondent took issue with each of the areas designated for attention, contending that there had been no need to seek improvement in any of the specified areas.) Many of the steps involved plans for Respondent to view videos, interact with data coaches, develop lesson plans. Supervision, which included the Principal, Assistant Principal, and the Director of Libraries and Technology, fulfilled various steps by ensuring, for example, that Respondent had access to training and professional development videos as well as open time in his schedule to view them, arranging for Respondent to meet with a representative of Learning.com, reviewing with Respondent his level of proficiency with Learning.com, arranging meetings with the supervisors of ELA, Math and Special Education for training, reviewing lesson plans, providing sample lesson plans, and providing access to the IEPs for students. Mr. Vroegindewey was readily available, as was Frank Zalocki, the Data Coach, who met with Respondent a number of times. . His familiarity with Learning.com, the primary source for lesson planning and instruction, was assessed by Mr. Vroegindewey, who found him to be conversant with the program.

Deadlines existed in the CAP and, while Respondent has noted that some were missed, several items were regarded as being continuing functions and, for others, the timelines were extended to allow for completion.

Then, at the beginning of the calendar year, the administration changed at School 20, with Boris Simon, formerly Vice Principal, becoming Principal and Petula Harden-Brown coming in from another school as Vice Principal. Ms. Hardin-Brown thereafter met with Respondent to review the CAP and progress thereunder. She assessed progress regarding the various categories but found in several, such as the viewing of videos and preparation of written reflections, in which Respondent had done nothing. In addition, Principal Simon testified to having had numerous conversations with Respondent during the school year, often in the mornings or after school. He noted that Respondent occasionally would arrive early so that they could speak. Respondent, he said, was "proactive" in seeking conversations about how he could "get off of a CAP."

F. Other Issues at School 20

In February 2015, Respondent received a written reprimand from Vice Principal Harden-Brown. The document, however, is not identified as a reprimand and, while Ms. Harden-Brown testified that it related to a lack of preparation for a parent meeting and what she described as a condescending approach to interaction with a parent, none of these allegations is reflected in the document issued to Respondent. The memorandum recommends and reiterates rules and policies. Of note, it also highlights Teacher Performance Rubric Standards three, five and seven. In any event, at hearing, Respondent acknowledged that the letter related to a discussion he had with a parent in which he had said that the student "might be failing" but at the same time had no information to provide the parent to discuss the child's performance or grades. Respondent acknowledged that he should not have spoken with the parent in this manner.

G. Evaluation Process at School 20

As the school year progressed at School 20, Respondent underwent four formal observations, each by a different administrator: September 29, 2014; November 24, 2014; March 10, 2015; and April 2, 2015. Respondent had noted to Principal Simon that he believed that evaluation of his performance in the classroom, where there are few computers, was unfair and that evaluations should be conducted in a computer lab. As a result, Principal Simon ensured that each formal observation was conducted when Respondent was teaching in a computer lab. (The District's witnesses, however, noted that teachers should be nimble in their ability to teach and address curriculum content in various environments, incorporating modalities that step beyond the computer screen.) The evaluations were in seventh grade, second grade, second grade again, and kindergarten, respectively. The rating were all either Proficient I (and no higher) or Progressing 1 and 2, with mostly Progressing 1, which is just one step beyond unsatisfactory. (There was one rating of unsatisfactory, but the District has acknowledged that this was a software error and, based upon the actual evaluation, should have been "Progressing 1.") The total weighted score of these evaluations was 51.37, which translated to 2.00.

Respondent has argued that each of these formal evaluations is tainted by the timing. In this regard, Respondent relies on In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Patsy Cuntrera, Passaic County Vocational School District, Agency Docket No. 223-8/15 (Gandel, 2015), with regard to the element of timing and spacing of evaluations. In that case, the teacher, who had had a good record and long service, had been dealing with a serious health issue and related absences. Arbitrator Gandel found that the evaluation process had been fatally tainted and rendered arbitrary and capricious in that one evaluation was conducted on the teacher's first day of return after a two-week absence and then additional evaluations were held on consecutive days following a return from another multi-week absence. That case, however, is readily distinguished in that the timing issues raised by Respondent relate not to absences or evaluations without sufficient time between to absorb and implement the recommendations. Rather, Respondent here cites only issues relating to access to the computer lab, arguing that he should not have been evaluated on what were returns to the lab after periods of classroom teaching, another which Respondent says was only the fourth time teaching the class in the lab, and another on the heels of a schedule change. These factors, which Respondent says disadvantaged him, have been shown to be reflective of the manner in which these classes and access to the computer lab must be juggled. Not every class will be in the computer lab, yet Respondent persuaded Mr. Simon that it was unfair to evaluate him in any other setting, even though an adept teacher must be able to fulfill his or her functions in this area when teaching in a classroom as well as a lab. The District accommodated Respondent's concern in this regard. Thus, for Respondent to allege that there was a lack of fairness or an arbitrariness in conducting evaluations when he had not recently been in the lab or had been in the lab only four times with a particular class is unpersuasive.[2]

Respondent also alleges that the evaluation process was not properly followed at School 20 in that too few walkthroughs were conducted. The record contains documentation of three walkthroughs, two of which were conducted by Vice Principal Harden-Brown. In addition to these, Principal Simon testified that he conducted a number of additional walkthroughs in the fall of 2014. He was, he said, "often" in Respondent's classroom throughout the school year because Respondent had many classroom management issues. (Principal Simon noted that students often reported that Respondent "talked down" to them and that there also were frequent issues with staff members perceiving Respondent as being condescending. This, he said, led to several verbal altercations in the course of the year, including disputes with an aide in the Behavioral Disability class as well as with a security officer. These matters never led to formal discipline, as Mr. Simon addressed them as verbal discussions. The account, however, provides a foundation or basis supporting Principal Simon's recollection that he frequently was needed in Respondent's classroom. Respondent has asserted that, as he was subject to a CAP, he should have received at least eight walkthroughs in the year. Even assuming that the total informal involvements in his class did not constitute eight walk throughs, however, the Arbitrator cannot find that an omission of this nature rises to the level of a failure to adhere substantially to the evaluation process.

H. Student Discipline at School 20

Respondent has alleged that the District did not deal effectively with student discipline issues at School 20, making his potential to perform as an instructor even more challenging. Principal Simon testified credibly, however, that, as there was a wealth of new teachers and administrators in School 20 in year 2013-2014, there were many student suspensions and office conduct referrals from within the behavior disability classes, but that the "regular ed" classes did not have significant issues. The exception, he said, was Respondent's classes. Mr. Simon said, however, that by the next school year the suspension rate and office conduct referral rate were "dramatically reduced."

I. Year-End at School 20: Grades, SGO Calculation, and Summative Evaluation

The 2014-2015 school year ended with Respondent assigning a grade of A to every student in the building. This was highly unusual, according to Ms. Harden-Brown, and the administrators were aware that several students had been often out of Respondent's class, which would make a legitimate A unlikely for them. Ms. Harden-Brown testified that, when Respondent was asked about the grades, he replied only that that "they all did well." Respondent was instructed to review his records to be sure that he could provide evidence to support the grades.

Thereafter, an issue arose regarding completing the calculation of Respondent's SGO for the year. Respondent did not convey the information that was required to have that calculation made. He professed to not understanding what was intended by the SGO, which he had developed with former Principal Young, as noted above, and had fully understood the year before when he learned of the 3% approach taken by another technology teacher. Principal

Simon testified that, as Ms. Young had moved to another school, he instructed Respondent to reach out to her to discuss any questions regarding the approach they had discussed. Respondent did not do this. Mr. Simon waited for Respondent to produce the SGO data so that the summative evaluation could be completed and, ultimately, a support person from the District was made available to Respondent to assist him in making the calculations. This data was submitted in July. While Respondent had been able at hearing to explain, simply and directly, what the 3% SGO formula had been, Principal Simon testified that, even after retaining assistance and submitting calculations, when he asked Respondent to explain the calculations, Respondent could not provide any information. Mr. Simon testified that no other teachers had encountered such difficulties in addressing SGOs. Mr. Simon noted, too, that Respondent's answers in this regard were emblematic of his response to most questions or requests for even the simplest of information; Respondent would reply that he did not know and that he needed to be "re-tooled."

After the delay in obtaining data from Respondent and after arranging assistance for him to calculate his SGO, it was determined that Respondent would receive the highest possible score on the SGO, which was a 4.0. Mr. Simon testified that Respondent's SGO goal of 3% was not at all rigorous and that a much higher level of achievement than a 3% increase in students' targeted skill levels would be expected over the course of a year. Nonetheless, this is the score that was applied and used.

Based upon the evaluations and the SGO score, Respondent's Annual Summative Score for 2014-2015 was 2.0 for Teacher Practice and 4.0 for SGO. These were weighted at 80% and 20%, respectively, thus giving rise to a total score of 2.40. In the summative rating scale, this placed Respondent again in the range of Partially Effective. While higher than the prior year, it includes the high SGO rating, which the Arbitrator finds questionable because of Respondent's charade of not understanding what a 3% increase in performance would be or how it would be measured and calculated. In addition, the agreement to the SGO by then-Principal Young was generous in this regard, and the puzzlement over calculation merely added to the questionable validity of that number. Respondent has raised various arguments to suggest that the Teacher Practice Score should have been higher or, because of a lack of clarity or information about the calculation, may not be credited. The Arbitrator, however, finds that Respondent's own actions have cast substantial doubt on the reliability of the one number that reflects success on his part and actually resulted in a higher number than otherwise would have been achieved.

Mr. Simon also testified that he had several conversations with Respondent in which Respondent insisted that he did not know how to calculate the Teacher Practice Score. Mr. Simon explained it to him, using the manual and showing him the forms. At every turn, however, Respondent would reply that he did not understand and needed to be "retooled." Respondent argues that Mr. Simon himself was befuddled by the process and contradicted himself in the course of testimony. The Arbitrator finds, however, that, while there are aspects of the evaluation instrument and process that are difficult to understand and while some calculations are completed by software and thus cannot readily be determined from the face of an evaluation document, the overall process is one that, with a little study, can be readily understood, even using only the materials in the manual. In addition, each element of each evaluation over the course of the two years had specific commentary from numerous administrators on the shortcomings observed in Respondent's performance as well as suggestions, in the evaluation and the CAP, as to steps to be taken for improvement.

Moreover, any shortcoming in this aspect would not materially affect Respondent's evaluation, whether by alteration of the numbers or by providing a glimmer of additional insight into the required areas of improvement. The score that Respondent received for the 2013-14 school year placed him at the very bottom of the range of Partially Effective. Thus, variations in calculation or ratings would not have been sufficient to alter the score upwards into the Effective range. Similarly, while the summative rating in 2014-15 was higher that the preceding year, this number included the highest rating possible for the SGO, which the Arbitrator regards as having been artificially high because of the adoption of an unusually low bar and Respondent's pretense of confusion. Further, substantial guidance and input were provided to Respondent from numerous credible administrators regarding the need and potential for improvement. As a result, even if the evaluation system were flawed or the process not properly conducted, there is no showing that these factors would have materially affected the outcome of the Respondent's evaluation.

AWARD

For the reasons stated in this Decision and Award, the Arbitrator finds that the District has met the burden of proving that, for the two consecutive school years of 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, Respondent received summative evaluations that, being "Partially Effective," were less than "Effective" and that these evaluations were properly conducted under applicable New Jersey laws and regulations. Therefore, the charge of "Inefficiency" is sustained and the dismissal of Respondent is upheld.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – formerly employed for the 2014-2015 school year by the respondent Community Charter School of Paterson (CCSP) – sought reinstatement of her employment as a full-time instructional assistant. Petitioner claimed that, because she did not receive written notice by May 15, 2015 of CCSP's determination to non-renew her employment for the following school year, she was automatically entitled to continued employment for the 2015-2016 school pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2. CCSP contended that petitioner was not so entitled, and filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner was employed by the respondent during the 2014-2015 school year as an instructional assistant – a paraprofessional as defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2(a); petitioner relies solely upon N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2 in support of her claimed right to contract renewal; an employee's right to receive notice by May 15 – as prescribed in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2 – does not equate with a right to contract renewal for the succeeding year; although a corollary regulation governing non-tenured teaching staff does provide that when a board fails to give non-tenured teaching staff either a contract offer for the next year or proper notice that such employment will not be offered, the board shall be deemed to have offered employment for the following school year; however, no such parallel statute exists for paraprofessionals; and, even if petitioner had pled an implied contract claim – which she did not – that common-law grounded claim does not invoke the Commissioner's jurisdiction, as it does not involve a controversy arising under the school laws. The ALJ concluded that the school laws do not grant an automatic renewal of employment to a paraprofessional based on a board's violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2; therefore, the petitioner has advanced no cause of action for renewal of her employment for the 2015-2016 school year, nor has she stated a claim upon which relief can be granted. Accordingly, the ALJ determined that dismissal of the petition is warranted.

Upon independent review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ, for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the Board's reply thereto.

Petitioner's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of her submissions at the OAL. Because the Administrative Law Judge thoroughly addressed those arguments in the Initial Decision, further discussion herein is unnecessary.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons thoroughly set forth in the Initial Decision – that N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2 does not entitle paraprofessionals to automatic reappointment based on a Board's failure to provide timely notice of non-renewal. As such, petitioner has failed to state a cause of action by which renewal of her employment for the 2015-2016 school year can be granted. Additionally, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that petitioner did not assert an implied contract claim, and even if she did, such a claim would not fall within the Commissioner's jurisdiction pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein, and the petition is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Rickenya Tanner seeks reinstatement of her employment as a full-time instructional assistant with respondent Community Charter School of Paterson (CCSP). CCSP controverts petitioner's claimed entitlement to employment.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 31, 2015, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) seeking an order finding that she remains an employee of CCSP and directing CCSP to reinstate petitioner to a full-time position or assignment with at least the same terms and conditions of employment as she had during the 2014–2015 school year, together with increases in salary as may be required by law or policies and all other benefits of employment. CCSP filed a Motion to Dismiss in Lieu of Answer on September 14, 2015, and the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on September 16, 2015, for determination as a contested case. I held a telephone conference with counsel on October 13, 2015, during which a briefing schedule was established with regard to CCSP's motion. Following requested extensions by both parties, petitioner filed a brief in opposition to the motion dated November 12, 2015, and CCSP filed a reply brief dated December 4, 2015. Oral argument was entertained on February 12, 2016, on which date the record closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

In view of the procedural posture of this case, the facts alleged in petitioner's Petition of Appeal shall be accepted for purposes of the within motion.

Petitioner was employed by CCSP as an instructional assistant, and as a paraprofessional as defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2(a), during the 2014–2015 school year. (Petition at ¶¶ 1, 4.) CCSP is a charter school established pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1, et seq., and receives funding under Title 1 of the federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, 20 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq. (Id. at ¶¶ 2, 3.) As of May 15, 2015, petitioner had received neither a written offer of a contract for employment for the next succeeding school year, nor a written notice from the chief school administrator that employment would not be offered. (Id. at ¶ 6.) On June 1, 2015, petitioner wrote to Mr. Valli, the chief executive officer of CCSP and the chief school administrator, accepting employment as a paraprofessional with CCSP for the 2015–2016 school year. (Id. at ¶¶ 8, 9.) On June 12, 2015, Mr. Valli responded to petitioner by stating that a decision had been made not to renew petitioner's contract for the 2015–2016 school year. (Id. at ¶10.)[1]

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.10, "upon motion to dismiss filed in lieu of answer, the Commissioner may dismiss the petition on the grounds that the petitioner has advanced no cause of action even if the petitioner's factual allegations are accepted as true." See Sloan v. Klagholtz, 342 N.J. Super. 385, 394 (App. Div. 2001). Our courts have recognized that "[t]he test for determining the adequacy of a pleading is whether a cause of action is suggested by the facts." Velantzas v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 109 N.J. 189, 192 (1988). The "inquiry is limited to examining the legal sufficiency of the facts alleged on the face of the complaint," Printing Mart-Morristown v. Sharp Elecs. Corp., 116 N.J. 739, 746 (1989), and "the legal requisites for [the petitioner's] claim must be apparent from the complaint itself." Edwards v. Prudential Prop. & Cas. Co., 357 N.J. Super. 196, 202 (App Div.), certif. denied, 176 N.J. 278 (2003). The decision must be based solely on the petition and the documents to which it referred. N.J. Citizen Action, Inc., supra, 391 N.J. Super. at 605. The focus of the analysis at this stage is not concerned with the ability of petitioner to prove the allegations contained in her petition, and she is afforded the benefit of all legitimate inferences that may be drawn in her favor. See Banco Popular N. Am. v. Gandi, 184 N.J. 161, 166 (2005); Printing Mart-Morristown, supra, 116 N.J. at 746. However, "dismissal is mandated where the factual allegations are palpably insufficient to support a claim upon which relief can be granted," Rieder v. Dep't of Transp., 221 N.J. Super. 547, 552 (App. Div. 1987), and where the petition sets forth no legal basis for the relief sought. Banco Popular N. Am., supra, 184 N.J. at 166; see Gillison v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 157.

[1] CCSP's reply included a certification of counsel that attached copies of petitioner's June 1, 2015, letter and an "At Will Employment Contract," which provided for petitioner's employment for the school year beginning on August 18, 2014 and terminating on June 30, 2015. At this procedural stage, "consideration of the documents referred to in the [petition]," such as petitioner's June 1, 2015, letter and employment contract, "is proper and does not convert [respondent's motion to dismiss] . . . into [a] motion[ ] for summary judgment." N.J. Citizen Action, Inc. v. County of Bergen, 391 N.J. Super. 596, 605 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 192 N.J. 597 (2007).

Against this backdrop, petitioner asserts in her Petition that, "[p]ursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2, petitioner was entitled to receive on or before May 15, 2015 either a written offer of a contract for employment for the 2015–2016 school year from the respondent or written notice from the Chief School Administrator that employment will not be offered." (Petition at ¶ 5.) Petitioner avers that, "[a]s the respondent did not provide written notice that employment would not be offered for the 2015–2016 school year, petitioner is entitled to be reemployed by the respondent for the 2015–2016 school year," and "[o]nce respondent had failed to prove [sic] petitioner written notice as of May 15, 2015 that her employment would not be renewed for the following school year, the respondent no longer had a right to nonrenew the petitioner for the 2015–2016 school year." (Id. at ¶¶ 7, 11.) She further alleges that, "[a]s petitioner has accepted employment for the 2015–2016 school year, the respondent is required under law to reemploy the petitioner for the 2015–2016 school year, and to pay her at the appropriate salary required by law or policies of the respondent pursuant to at least the same terms and conditions of employment as she was employed under during the 2014–2015 school year." (Id. at ¶ 12.)

Chapter 27 of the school laws governs "employment and contracts." Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10:

> On or before May 15 in each year, each nontenured teaching staff member[2] continuously employed by a board of education since the preceding September 30 shall receive either
> > (a) A written offer of a contract for employment from the board of education for the next succeeding year providing for at least the same terms and conditions of employment but with such increases in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education or

[2] A "teaching staff member" is defined in pertinent part as "a member of the professional staff of any district . . . holding office, position or employment of such character that the qualifications, for such office, position or employment, require him to hold a valid and effective standard, provisional or emergency certificate, appropriate to his office, position or employment, issued by the State Board of Examiners." N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1.

> (b) A written notice from the chief school administrator that such employment will not be offered.

In 2009, the Legislature enacted separate and distinct statutes governing the employment of paraprofessionals. See N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.1 to -10.4.[3] Similar to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, a school district is required by statute to provide to a paraprofessional either a written offer of a contract for employment or written notice that employment will not be offered on or before May 15 in each year. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2(b) provides:

> On or before May 15 in each year, a paraprofessional continuously employed since the preceding September 30 in a school district that receives funding under Title I of the federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq.) shall receive either:
> > (1) a written offer of a contract for employment from the board of education for the next succeeding year providing for at least the same terms and conditions of employment but with such increases in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education; or
> > (2) a written notice from the chief school administrator that employment will not be offered.

Accepting as true the facts asserted in the Petition of Appeal for purposes of the within motion, CCSP did not issue notice to petitioner that her contract would not be renewed for the 2015–2016 school year until June 12, 2015, and, therefore, did not comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2(b). However, this does not end the inquiry. The question then becomes the remedy, if any, for the alleged defective notice. In this regard, petitioner asserts in her Petition of Appeal that because CCSP "did not provide written notice [on or before May 15, 2015] that employment would not be offered for the 2015–2016 school year, [she] is entitled to be reemployed by the respondent for the 2015–2016 school year" and CCSP "no longer had a right to nonrenew the petitioner for the 2015–2016 school year." (Id. at ¶¶ 7, 11.) In other words, petitioner claims that she is automatically entitled to continued employment for the 2015–2016 school year because CCSP did not timely inform her of its decision not to renew her employment by May 15, 2015.

[3] A "paraprofessional" is defined as "an individual who is employed in a school district as a school aide or classroom aide who assists a teaching staff member with the supervision of pupil activities." N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2(a).

As noted, the employment of teaching staff members and paraprofessionals is specifically prescribed by statute. The principles governing statutory construction are well settled. The "overriding objective in determining the meaning of a statute is to 'effectuate the legislative intent in light of the language used and the objects sought to be achieved.'" McCann v. Clerk of Jersey City, 167 N.J. 311, 320 (2001) (citation omitted). The general rule of statutory construction requires an examination of the language of a statute to determine whether the language is clear or ambiguous and susceptible to more than one interpretation. "If the statute is clear and unambiguous on its face and admits of only one interpretation, [it is necessary to] delve no deeper than the act's literal terms to divine the Legislature's intent." State v. Butler, 89 N.J. 220, 226 (1982). As the Supreme Court explained in Murray v. Plainfield Rescue Squad, 210 N.J. 581, 592 (2012) (citations omitted):

> The objective of all statutory interpretation is to discern and effectuate the intent of the Legislature. To achieve that objective, we begin by looking at the statute's plain language, ascribing to the words used "their ordinary meaning and significance." We do not view the statutory words in isolation but "in context with related provisions so as to give sense to the legislation as a whole." If the Legislature's intent is clear on the face of the statute, then we must apply the law as written. It is not our function to rewrite a plainly written statute or to presume that the Legislature meant something other than what it conveyed in its clearly expressed language.

The Legislature expressly addressed the consequence of failing to timely provide either an offer of a contract for employment or a notice that such employment will not be offered to a non-tenured teaching staff member. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11 directs:

> Should any board of education fail to give to any nontenure teaching staff member either an offer of contract for employment for the next succeeding year or a notice that > such employment will not be offered, all within the time and in the manner provided by this act, then said board of education shall be deemed to have offered to that teaching staff member continued employment for the next succeeding school year upon the same terms and conditions but with such increases in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education.

N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11 is clear and unambiguous as to the intended recipients of the remedy of automatic renewal should a board of education fail to timely give the required offer of a contract or notice of non-renewal. The plain and unambiguous language of the statute limits that remedy to teaching staff members. Separate and distinct statutes address the employment of a paraprofessional. And, in contrast to the statutes governing teaching staff members, the statutory scheme governing paraprofessionals does not provide that a board of education shall be deemed to have offered continued employment for the next succeeding school year or for automatic renewal in situations where a board has failed to give the required notice by May 15. Succinctly stated, "[t]he Legislature is presumed familiar with prior legislation," and, had the Legislature intended to provide paraprofessionals the same relief as nontenured teaching staff members under N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11, "it would have been an easy matter to have expressed such an intent," as it did in the case of teaching staff members. N.J. Coal. of Health Care Prof'ls v. N.J. Dep't of Banking & Ins., 323 N.J. Super. 207, 256 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 162 N.J. 485 (1999).

The Petition of Appeal relies solely on N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2 in support of petitioner's claimed right to contract renewal. However, a right to receive notice by May 15 is not the same as a right to have a contract automatically renewed in the absence of such notice. The distinct nature of these rights is evidenced by the fact that, in the case of non-tenured teaching staff members, the notice requirement and the automatic-renewal remedy are found in two separate statutes. In short, the school laws do not grant an automatic renewal of employment to a paraprofessional based on a board's violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2. Accordingly, even if CCSP failed to give petitioner the required notice by May 15, no statutory authority supports petitioner's claim of relief that she is entitled to continued employment for the 2015–2016 school year.

Indeed, the Commissioner has addressed and rejected the claim that a board of education's violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2 entitled educational student aides to automatic reinstatement in Winslow Township Paraprofessional Organization Local 6171, AFT, AFL-CIO v. Winslow Township Board of Education, PRC 15022-13 and EDU 10977-11, Initial Decision (August 12, 2014), adopted, Commissioner (November 10, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Although Administrative Law Judge Susan Scarola found that "the Board failed to timely notify employees that their jobs would be terminated as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2," she concluded that "the regulations do not provide for any specific remedy," and the paraprofessionals in that case were not entitled to automatic reinstatement. In so ruling, Judge Scarola reasoned:

> The question then becomes, what is the remedy for defective notice? A corollary regulation governing non-tenured teaching staff provides that when a board fails to give a non-tenured teaching staff member either an offer of contract for employment for the succeeding year, or a notice that such employment will not be offered, the board shall be deemed to have offered that teaching staff member continued employment for the next succeeding school year. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11. Similarly, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 governs the reappointment of superintendents, and provides that if neither an offer nor a notice of termination is given, then the superintendent will be deemed reappointed. It can be presumed that if the Legislature had intended automatic reappointment to be the remedy for defective notice with regard to paraprofessionals, it would have included similar language in the statute governing paraprofessionals, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2. See Marino v. Marino, 200 N.J. 315, 330 (2009) (stating that statues that deal with the same matter or subject should be read in pari materia, construed together as a unitary and harmonious whole); see also Diprospero v. Penn, 183 N.J. 477, 496 (2005) (discussing the interpretive maxim expressio unius est exclusio alterius, meaning the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another). Therefore, although the Board gave defective notice, the educational student aides are not entitled to automatic reinstatement.

In its exceptions to the Commissioner in Winslow, the union contended that "the ALJ erroneously found that there was no remedy for the Board's violation of N.J.S.A.

18A:27-10.2" and argued that, "[e]ven though the statute does not include a provision for re-appointment, . . . a logical approach would be to borrow the remedial nature of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11 concerning notice to teaching staff members, and reappoint the paraprofessionals because of the Board's faulty notice." Winslow, supra, PRC 15022-13 and EDU 10977-11, Final Decision (November 10, 2014). The Commissioner did not embrace that stance, and agreed with the ALJ's conclusion that "N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2 does not entitle the paraprofessionals to automatic reappointment based on the Board's failure to give notice by May 15, 2010 that employment would not be offered for the next school year." The same rationale applies with equal force in this case.

In her brief, petitioner attempts to distinguish the within matter from Winslow. Petitioner argues that she "is not claiming automatic renewal here," but, "[i]nstead, petitioner is claiming that the respondent's actions and petitioner's reliance on those actions created a binding contract." Petitioner contends in her brief that "[w]hen [she] never received notification of non-renewal, she reasonably believed that indicated she was being offered employment for the following year," and petitioner's "unequivocal acceptance of this offer created a binding contract between [her] and respondent." Simply put, petitioner's attempt to now assert an implied-contract claim is unavailing.

The Petition of Appeal is devoid of facts and allegations setting forth the elements of an implied-contract claim. Rather, the Petition of Appeal specifically states that the within controversy arises "under the school laws," and a fair reading of the Petition of Appeal discloses that the only asserted basis for petitioner's claim to reemployment is predicated on CCSP's alleged violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10.2. Accordingly, petitioner's argument as to the existence of an implied contract, a claim that goes beyond the scope of the Petition of Appeal, is insufficient to defeat CCSP's motion to dismiss. Apart from this, the Petition of Appeal referenced an existing contract for the 2014–2015 school year, and that contract was still in effect at the time of petitioner's letter dated June 1, 2015, accepting employment which, according to petitioner, forms the foundation of a binding contract between the parties. The courts have recognized that an implied contract cannot be found where an express contract already covers the same subject matter. See Shapiro v. Solomon, 42 N.J. Super. 377, 385 (App. Div. 1956) ("where it appears that there is in fact a legally subsisting express contract the law will not imply an agreement concerning the same subject matter"). Finally, the Commissioner's jurisdiction is defined by statute, and is limited to "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Our courts have held that "[w]here the controversy does not arise under the school laws, it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction even though it may pertain to school personnel." Bd. of Educ. of E. Brunswick v. Twp. Council of E. Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94, 102 (1966). It is recognized that "the sweep of the Department's interest and the Commissioner's jurisdiction does not extend to all matters involving boards of education." Archway Programs, Inc. v. Pemberton Twp. Bd. of Educ., 352 N.J. Super. 420, 424–25 (App. Div. 2002). In determining the scope of the Commissioner's jurisdiction under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, the Appellate Division has held that "contract claims against boards [of education] do not arise under the school laws but rather from statutory or common law," and such claims are appropriately adjudicated in the courts. Id. at 425; see Picogna v. Bd. of Educ. of Cherry Hill, 249 N.J. Super. 332, 335 (App. Div. 1991) (holding that the "contract claim of a nontenured school employee does not arise under the school laws simply because its outcome may later enable him to attain tenure under the school laws," and "[w]hether petitioner's employment was wrongfully terminated under the contract and under the CEP Act is for the court, not the Commissioner, to decide"); S. Orange-Maplewood Educ. Ass'n v. Bd. of Educ. of the Sch. Dist. of S. Orange and Maplewood, 146 N.J. Super. 457, 463 (App. Div. 1977) (holding that the Commissioner did not have jurisdiction over a dispute involving the interpretation of a sabbatical-leave provision set forth in a collective negotiations agreement between the board of education and the education association). Accordingly, even if petitioner had pled an implied contract claim, which she did not, that common-law-grounded claim does not invoke the Commissioner's jurisdiction, as it does not involve a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has advanced no cause of action for renewal of her employment for the 2015–2016 school year and the Petition of Appeal fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. I CONCLUDE that dismissal of the Petition of Appeal is, therefore, warranted.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the papers filed in connection with respondent's request for interlocutory review of Chief Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Laura Sanders' order issued April 20, 2016 denying respondent's request to submit deposition testimony as competent evidence – as opposed to hearsay evidence, which is admissible in administrative proceedings pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5 – based upon the unavailability of a witness. Upon full consideration of all of the submitted materials, I have determined not to grant interlocutory review, pursuant to my discretion under N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10.

Accordingly, respondent's request is denied.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :

HEARING OF KELLY CHESNEY, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWN OF : DECISION

KEARNY, HUDSON COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent – a tenured teacher under the Board's employ – and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the tenure charges following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(c), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and overwhelmingly warrant the termination of the respondent from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

| HEARING OF KELLY CHESNEY, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWN OF | : | DECISION |
| KEARNY, HUDSON COUNTY. | : | |

For the Petitioner, Kenneth J. Lindenfelser, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, Kelly Chesney

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on March 24, 2016, through tenure charges of conduct unbecoming certified by Patricia Blood, Superintendent of the Kearny School District, together with supporting evidence against respondent, Kelly Chesney, a tenured teacher in the petitioner's employ. The petitioner provided respondent with written notice of such certification at the respondent's last known address, via UPS Overnight Delivery and certified mail on March 23, 2016. The petitioner also served a copy of the tenure charges on the respondent's union representative.

On March 28, 2016, the Commissioner directed the respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. No reply to the tenure charges was received from or on behalf of respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate that respondent has been employed as a teacher in the District since September 1, 2002. On June 17, 2015, the respondent tested positive for cocaine. The respondent was directed by the District to follow Board Policy Regulation #3218 (Substance Abuse) and submit proof of the required counseling. On October 8, 2015, the respondent again tested positive for cocaine and was directed to follow Board Policy Regulation #3218. Respondent was also warned that any future positive test results for a controlled substance would result in the filing of tenure charges. After falling asleep in class on February 2, 2016, the petitioner directed the respondent to go for a substance use screening and the respondent again tested positive for cocaine.

Deeming the allegations to be admitted and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against her, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's charge of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member has been proven and overwhelmingly warrants the respondent's dismissal. Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from her tenured position with the District. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of insubordination and other just cause against respondent, a tenured custodian, and sought to terminate his employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on his behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.4(g), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant termination of the respondent from his tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner and dismissed the respondent from his tenured custodial position in petitioner's school district.

| IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING | : | |
| OF DAVID SHIFFER, SCHOOL DISTRICT | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WEST ORANGE, | : | DECISION |
| ESSEX COUNTY. | : | |

For the Petitioner, Matthew J. Giacobbe, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, David Shiffer

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on March 21, 2016, through tenure charges of insubordination certified by Jeffrey Rutzky, Superintendent of the West Orange School District ("District"), together with supporting evidence against respondent, David Shiffer, a tenured custodian in the District's employ. The District provided respondent with written notice of such certification at the respondent's last known address, via hand delivery, on March 15, 2016. The District also served a copy of the tenure charges on the respondent's union representative.

On March 22, 2016, the Commissioner directed the respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. The certified mail return receipt card indicates that the March 22, 2016 notice was delivered to the respondent on March 26, 2016. No reply to the tenure charges was received from or on behalf of respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate the respondent has been employed by the District as a tenured custodian since January 2006. In accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:17-41 and Article XIII of the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA)[1] between the District and the Union, the District may terminate an employee who does not secure a Black Seal License[2] within 24 months of permanent employment. The job description for the Custodian position, approved by the District on June 21, 2010, also provides that the possession of a Black Seal License is a qualification of employment.

On January 18, 2011, the District provided the respondent with notice that he was required under the CBA to obtain a Black Seal License. Despite several additional notices from the District, the respondent failed to obtain a Black Seal License.[3] Therefore, on February 21, 2014, the District provided the respondent with written notice advising him that, based on his failure to secure a Black Seal License, he was being assessed a one day suspension and that he would not be entitled to overtime until he secured the requisite license. Again, the respondent failed to secure a Black Seal License and on May 1, 2014, the District provided the respondent with written notice advising him that, based on his failure to secure a Black Seal License, his salary increment was being withheld. The respondent was also advised that the failure to secure a Black Seal License by January 1, 2015 would result in his termination. To date, the respondent has failed to obtain the required Black Seal License, despite the District having provided him with ample notice and opportunities to secure the license.

[1] The CBA covered the period between July 1, 2011 and June 30, 2015.

[2] It appears that the Black Seal License is a type of Fireman's License that is also referred to as a low pressure boiler operator's license.

[3] The Statement of Evidence outlines several occasions upon which the District provided the respondent with notice that he was required to obtain a Black Seal License, and that his failure to do so would jeopardize his employment status. All of the notice dates will not be repeated here.

Deeming the allegations to be admitted, and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against him, the Commissioner finds that the District's charges of insubordination and other just cause against the respondent have been proven and warrant respondent's dismissal. The respondent's repeated failure to obtain the requisite Black Seal License despite numerous warnings and directives from the District demonstrates egregious insubordination and inability to fulfill the requirements of his position as a custodian in the District. Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from his tenured position with the District.

BILLY CHESTER,

PETITIONER,

MARGARET SNYDER AND THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PENNSAUKEN, CAMDEN COUNTY,

RESPONDENTS.

SYNOPSIS

On April 11, 2014, petitioner filed an appeal, together with a request for emergent relief, alleging that respondent – a member of the Pennsauken Board of Education (Board) – had a disqualifying conflict of interest when she was sworn in to serve as a member of the Board in January 2014. Emergent relief was denied on April 28, 2014. Respondent filed a motion for summary decision, and a hearing was held in the matter on September 18, 2014.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no genuine issues of material fact herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; respondent retired from employment in Pennsauken schools effective July 1, 2013, and claimed entitlement to payment from the Board for unused sick time; respondent was elected to the Board in November 2013; shortly thereafter, petitioner requested that the Board issue payment for her sick leave prior to December 20, 2013 in order to avoid a perceived conflict of interest under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2; this request was denied at the Board's December meeting; on January 7, 2014, respondent executed a document which purported to transfer the sick leave claim against the Board to respondent's daughter, who was not a member of her household; later the same day, respondent took the oath as a Board member, certifying that she was qualified to take office; on January 23, 2014, the Board approved the payment of respondent's accumulated sick leave to her daughter; and – pursuant to a 2014 case entitled Board of Education of the Westwood Regional School District, Bergen County v. Russell Miller, OAL Dkt. No. EDU6392-13, Agency Dkt. No. 57-3/13 – a board member only has a duty to cure a conflict of interest so long as a current conflict of interest exists, and once the conflict is mooted, any duty to cure is likewise mooted. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the respondent is not required to forfeit her seat on the Board, and granted summary decision in favor of respondent.

The Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the respondent, Margaret Snyder, may have had a disqualifying conflict of interest pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 when she was sworn in as a member of the Pennsauken Board of Education (Board) on January 7, 2014. The Commissioner, however, is also in accord with the ALJ's determination that the issue became moot once the Board approved the payment of Ms. Snyder's sick leave on January 23, 2014. Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is adopted for the reasons expressed therein.

[1] Former Solicitor, Pennsauken Board of Education, Frank Piarulli, Esq., appeared at Oral Argument on September 18, 2014, for respondent the Board of Education of the Township of Pennsauken, Camden County

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Billy Chester (petitioner) filed a petition for due process seeking a determination that respondent Margaret Snyder (respondent Snyder) had a conflict of interest at the time she was sworn in as a member of the Board of Education of the Township of Pennsauken (respondent Board), and that her assumption of office is void ab initio.

On April 11, 2014, petitioner's petition of appeal was filed with the Office of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education, together with a request for emergency relief. On April 15, 2014, the emergent matter was filed along with the due process request with the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). The emergent relief request was scheduled for oral argument, which was held on April 17, 2014. Emergent relief was denied by the undersigned on April 28, 2014.

On July 28, 2014, respondent Snyder filed a motion for summary decision seeking dismissal of the petition in this matter. Petitioner filed a brief in opposition to the motion on August 7, 2014, and respondent Board filed a brief supporting respondent Snyder's motion on September 8, 2014. Oral argument was held on September 18, 2014.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

The petitioner filed a petition which contained the following enumerated alleged facts:

1. Petitioner Billy L. Chester is a tax-paying resident of the Township and school district of Pennsauken. He voted in the election which is the subject of this dispute. He is the president of the Pennsauken Republican Club.

2. Respondent Snyder was employed by the Pennsauken Board of Education and gave written notice of her retirement on or about March 1, 2013.

3. At the time of her retirement, respondent Snyder had a claim against the Board of Education for her unused sick time.

4. Respondent Snyder's retirement was effective July 1, 2013.

5. Respondent Snyder claimed entitlement to a payment of $14,129 from the Board of Education.

6. On June 4, 2013, while respondent Snyder was still employed by the Board of Education, she filed a nominating petition to run for the Board of Education. Respondent Snyder is a registered Democrat.

7. On November 5, 2013, respondent Snyder received the most votes in the election.

8. The voting result of the top four candidates for three contested positions were as follows:

   Respondent Margaret Snyder ..... 2,192
   Nicholas Perry ..... 2,041
   Plaintiff JoAim Young ..... 1,326
   Plaintiff Michael E. Stargell..... 1,296

9. On November 12, 2013, respondent Snyder emailed to school board members, Matthew McDevitt, District Superintendent Marylin Martinez, Director of Personnel Curt Wrzeszczynski, and the Board of Education Solicitor, with a request to resolve her claim for compensation.

10. On November 14, 2013, respondent Snyder submitted a letter dated November 13, 2013, to McDevitt, with copies to all Board of Education members regarding her claim for compensation.

11. In her letter dated November 13, 2013, respondent Snyder referred to her employment contract, the collective bargaining agreement, her retirement and the election.

12. In her letter dated November 13, 2013, respondent Snyder made a claim against the Board of Education, wherein she stated, on the second page:

> . . . I feel that paying me the accrued sick time prior to assuming office will cure the conflict, and be in keeping with the collective bargaining agreement. Also, the payment is a one-time payment and would be paid in January 2014, the same month I would assume office.

13. Respondent Snyder goes on to state:

> . . . it is now incumbent upon Pennsauken Board of Education to seek to cure the conflict. I am requesting that the Board move and approve a resolution that the one-time payment of my accrued sick time is made prior to my being sworn into office as a member of the Board of Education. Payment can be made up until the day before the reorganization meeting; therefore, curing the matter.

14. On November 14, 2013, respondent Snyder met with Board President Matt McDevitt, board member Carlos Rodriguez, Solicitor Piarulli, Superintendent Martinez, and the Board of Education Business Administrator, Celeste Rickets, "to discuss resolving my unused sick time payout request."

15. Respondent Snyder refers to her claim as a "petition."

16. On November 21, 2013, the Pennsauken Board of Education denied respondent Snyder's "petition."

17. On December 5, 2013, respondent Snyder made a claim on the Pennsauken Board of Education to reconsider its November 21, 2013, decision not to pay respondent Snyder's sick time in the manner in which she sought to have it paid, i.e., before she took her oath of office.

18. Respondent Snyder's letter requesting reconsideration, Exhibit D to her certification, makes the following statement:

> . . . I am again respectfully requesting that the Board reconsider their previous decision and issue payment to me for unused sick pay by December 20, 2013, the last pay date of this calendar year as published on the payroll website.
> Please be advised that in addition to exercising the teacher option set forth in Article X1I(A)(6), that is, receiving accumulated sick time payment in my retirement year, I am also requesting payment by December 20 to avoid and cure any potential or perceived conflict that a payout delay may create under N.J.S.A. § 18A:12-2.

19. The request to make payment by December 20, 2013, was denied at the Board of Education's December 12, 2013, meeting.

20. On January 7, 2014, respondent Snyder executed a document which purported to transfer the claim against the Board of Education to her daughter (see attached assignment).

21. On January 7, 2014, respondent Snyder took the oath of office, certifying that she was qualified to take office.

22. On January 7, 2014, respondent Snyder had a conflict of interest in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, which provides:

> No member of any board of education shall be interested directly or indirectly in any contract with or claim against the board, nor, in the case of local and regional school districts, shall he hold office as mayor or as a member of the governing body of a municipality, nor, in the case of county special services school districts and county vocational school districts, shall he hold office as a member of the governing body of a county.

23. On January 23, 2014, the Pennsauken Board of Education approved the payment of Snyder's accumulated sick leave, which payment was made to respondent Snyder's daughter.

Upon review of the pleadings and briefs in this matter, the preceding statements do not appear to be in dispute, and are hereby FOUND as FACT. Additionally, the parties do not dispute that the claim existed or that it would have been disqualifying, this is also FOUND as FACT.

LEGAL ANAYLSIS AND CONCLUSION

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), summary decision "may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This rule is substantially similar to the summary judgment rule embodied in the New Jersey Court Rules, R. 4:46-2. See, Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954). In connection therewith, all inferences of doubt are drawn against the movant and in favor of the party against whom the motion is directed. Id. at 75. In Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520 (1995), the New Jersey Supreme Court addressed the appropriate test to be employed in determining the motion:

> [A] determination whether there exists a 'genuine issue' of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The 'judge's function is not . . . to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial.'
> [Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (citations omitted).]

The mere existence of disputed facts is not conclusive. An agency must grant a plenary hearing only if material disputed adjudicative facts exist. Bally Mfg. Corp. v. Casino Control Com'n, 85 N.J. 325, 334, 426 A.2d 1000 (1981), App. Div. 454 U.S. 804, 102 S.Ct.

77, 70 L.Ed.2d 74 (1981); Cunningham v. Dept. of Civil Service, 69 N.J. at 24-25, 350 A.2d 58. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-9.

Having reviewed the parties' submissions and arguments in support of, and opposition to the within motion, I FIND that there are no genuine issues of material fact pertinent to respondents' motions, and hereby FIND and adopt the statement of facts described earlier herein. Petitioner asserts that a dispute of material fact exists, specifically, that respondent Snyder's assignment of her claim to her daughter created an indirect claim, which disqualified respondent Snyder from taking the oath of office, rather than curing the disqualifying conflict. This assertion appears to be a plea for a conclusion of law rather than a finding fact, and as such is not deemed to be a disputed material fact for purpose of the herein motion.

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 provides that "No member of any board of education shall be interested directly or indirectly in any contract with or claim against the board, nor, in the case of local and regional school districts, shall he hold office as mayor or as a member of the governing body of a municipality, nor, in the case of county special services school districts and county vocational school districts, shall he hold office as a member of the governing body of a county."

The parties do not dispute that respondent Snyder was elected to the respondent board and had an outstanding claim for a sick leave payout at that time. What is in dispute is whether or not respondent Snyder's assigning of her claim to her daughter, who is not a member of her household, on the date of respondent Snyder's taking of the oath of office effectively cured the conflict. Respondent Snyder and respondent Board believe it did, while petitioner maintains that it did not and that an indirect interest remained. Petitioner asserts that Snyder had a disqualifying conflict which was not cured by her assigning of her claim. Respondents both argue that the assignment did cure the conflict, prior to the oath of office being administered, and therefore is entitled to continue in office.

It is undisputed that respondent Board paid out on the underlying claim to respondent Snyder's daughter on January 23, 2014, after respondent Snyder took the oath of office yet before petitioner brought this challenge. The parties each cite to the Commissioner of Education's decision in Township of Barnegat, Ocean County, v. Robert A.

Houser, EDU 22948-07, Initial Decision (May 23, 2007), modified, Comm'r (July 30, 2007), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Petitioner points to the fact that the Commissioner held that the outstanding claim in the hands of a family member did render a board member's assumption of office void ab initio, while respondents point to the fact that the family member was also a member of the Board member's household, which is not the case in the present matter.

It is noteworthy that in Houser the Commissioner indicated a reluctance to undo the results of an election and to remove a member of the board, who had been duly elected and had been serving when the inconsistent interest was cured. The challenge was brought after assumption of the office (and after the claim was settled), and the Commissioner held that the matter was best rectified by readministering the oath to Houser.

Additionally, in a recent decision considering a petition seeking a determination that a board member was ineligible to serve due to a disqualifying conflict, the Commissioner of Education concurred with the findings and conclusions of Administrative Law Judge Leslie Z. Celentano in holding that "a board member only has a duty to cure a conflict of interest, so long as a current conflict of interest exists. Once the conflict is mooted, the duty to cure is mooted." Board of Education of the Westwood Regional School District, Bergen County v. Russell Miller, OAL Dkt No. EDU 6392-13, Agency Dkt. No. 57-3/13 (2014).

The facts in the present matter are sufficiently similar to those in Miller so as to tend toward a determination that even if respondent Snyder's assignment of her claim to her daughter did constitute an impermissible, disqualifying conflict, the curing of that conflict by the board's paying out of the claim effectively mooted that conflict, before the present matter was even brought. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that respondent Snyder is not required to forfeit her seat on the Board, and that summary decision is appropriate in this matter.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board certified tenure charges of abandonment against respondent – a tenured teacher under the Board's employ – and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the tenure charges following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(c), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and warrant the termination of the respondent from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

| OF THE BOROUGH OF GLASSBORO, | : | DECISION |
| GLOUCESTER COUNTY. | : | |

For the Petitioner, Andrew W. Li, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, Kimberly Berry

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on March 14, 2016 through tenure charges of abandonment certified by Mark J. Silverstein, Superintendent of the School District of the Borough of Glassboro, together with supporting evidence against respondent, Kimberly Berry, a tenured teacher in the petitioner's employ. The petitioner provided respondent with written notice of such certification at her last known address – via certified mail, return receipt requested – on February 25, 2016.

On March 15, 2016, the Commissioner directed respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the date such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. The certified mail return receipt card indicates that the March 15, 2016 notice was delivered on March 18, 2016. No reply to the tenure charges was received from or on behalf of respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate that respondent has engaged in a prolonged absence from her teaching position in the District and has been absent from work since November 30, 2015. During the 2014-2015 school year, respondent took a leave of absence from January 20, 2015 through June 30, 2015. Thereafter, respondent returned to work for the beginning of the 2015-2016 school year, but was sent home for medical reasons on November 16, 2015. She then used her remaining sick and personal leave through November 20, 2015. Respondent did not return to work on November 30, 2015, following the Thanksgiving break, and subsequently requested leave under the Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) – which was denied because she was ineligible for FMLA leave. Respondent then requested an unpaid leave of absence, which was also denied. To date, respondent remains absent without leave.

Deeming the allegations to be admitted and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against her, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's charges of abandonment of her teaching position have been proven and warrant the respondent's dismissal from employment.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from her tenured position with the District. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

SYNOPSIS

This consolidated case arises out of the July 1, 2013 layoff of 136 Newark Public School (District) employees, including all 46 of the District's attendance officers. Before the Commissioner is the petition of the Newark Teachers' Union alleging that the District violated N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 to -33 when it abolished the position of attendance officer; in the other matter, individual employees filed an appeal with the Civil Service Commission (CSC), claiming the layoff from their full-time positions was in bad faith. The respondent District contended that the layoff was undertaken for economic reasons, and did not violate the education laws because the role of the attendance officers had been transferred to school-based "Student Support Teams" (SST). The cases were consolidated for hearing in the Office of Administrative (OAL), with the Commissioner having predominant interest over the education law issues, and the CSC having jurisdiction over the remaining issues.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: instead of appointing attendance officers as mandated by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32, the District abolished that position and created the SST – comprised of a principal or vice principal, social worker, guidance counselor, parent coordinator, school resource officer, nurse, and two teachers, whose duties on the SST are voluntary and in addition to their primary role at each school; the SST does not warn children, parents or guardians of persistent absences, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, nor do members of the SST – except for the school resource officer – have authority to make an arrest; moreover, without attendance officers, no District employee is designated to look for truant students, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28. Accordingly, the ALJ determined that the District is in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, and N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32, and therefore ordered the layoff of the attendance officers reversed.

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that: a school district is permitted to designate a team – rather than individuals – to serve as attendance officers; in Newark, the SST now performs the duties and responsibilities of the attendance officer; the purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29 and the entire statute is to promote attendance, and the District's use of new technology to notify parents and guardians of attendance issues and truancy advances this cause. The Commissioner concluded that the District did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29 or N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 when it laid-off 46 attendance officers and created school-based SSTs to carry out the functions previously performed by the school attendance officers. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was rejected. The remaining aspects of the case were transferred to the Civil Service Commission for determination.

| AND | : | |
| IN THE MATTER OF ORLEANA SIMPSON, ET. AL, NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT. | : | |

This consolidated case stems from a layoff of approximately 136 employees by the Newark School District (District), including 46 attendance officers.[1] In the first action, the individual employees (petitioners) filed a layoff appeal with the Civil Service Commission (CSC) challenging whether the layoff from their full-time positions was in good faith. In the second action, the Newark Teachers Union (NTU) filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner, alleging that the District violated education laws when it abolished the position of attendance officer. On February 5, 2015, the petitions were consolidated for hearing before the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), with the Commissioner having the predominant interest over the education law issue and CSC having jurisdiction to determine any remaining issues. Thereafter, hearings in this matter were held on June 10 and September 9, 2015.

With respect to the education issue, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) determined that the District was in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, and N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 when it abolished the attendance officer position. Specifically, the ALJ found that instead of appointing attendance officers – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 – the District created a student support team (SST) comprised of the principal or vice principal, social worker, guidance counselor, parent coordinator, school resource officer, nurse, and two teachers. The ALJ also found that the SST does not warn children, parents or guardians of persistent absences, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, nor do any members of the SST – except for the school resource officer – have authority to make an arrest. Further, the ALJ determined that without attendance officers, no District employee looks for truant students, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28. Accordingly, the ALJ reversed the layoff of the attendance officers.

[1] It is undisputed that the positions of attendance counselor and attendance officer are synonymous. For consistency and ease of reference, the Commissioner will refer to the position as attendance officer.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the OAL have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the District, and the replies thereto filed by the NTU and petitioners. In its exceptions, the District argues that the ALJ erroneously found that it violated education laws when it eliminated the position of attendance officer.[2] Specifically, the District takes exception to the ALJ's finding that no one in the District is looking for truant students. (District's Exceptions at 4-6) The District contends that there is credible evidence in the record to support the finding that it carries out its statutory duty to monitor and locate truant students – without the title of attendance officer – through the power school system of records, which sends out warning notices to parents and/or schedules meetings when a student is absent for certain periods of time.

The District also argues that Abdul Rahman Saleem's testimony did not provide a credible account of his job duties as an attendance officer, and that the ALJ should not have relied upon it. (Id. at 6) Instead, the District argues that the ALJ should have relied upon the testimony of Eric Ingold,

[2] The District also argues that the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to review this matter as the CSC has sole jurisdiction. The Commissioner has jurisdiction over all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws of this State. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Accordingly, the Commissioner has jurisdiction over the issue of whether the District's layoff of its attendance officers violated N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, or N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32, as this claim arises under the State's education statute.

The District further contends that it did not act in bad faith when it eliminated the position of attendance officer. While the Commissioner has jurisdiction over the education issue, only the CSC has jurisdiction over whether the layoff of the attendance officers was in bad faith, as that issue does not arise under the State's school laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. As this issue will be transferred to the CSC following the Commissioner's decision, the Commissioner will not address the District's arguments with respect to whether the District acted in good faith.

the District's Executive Director for Safety and Security, who testified as to the efforts made by security guards, rapid response and school resource officers to combat truancy. (Ibid.)

The District contends that while N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 allows it to "designate" persons to serve as attendance officers, the word "designate" should have a broad interpretation. (Id. at 7) "The discrepancy between the use of the word 'designated' and 'appointment' further implies that the legislature permits the District to identify employees to perform the statutory duties of an attendance officer" – without requiring the specific creation of an attendance officer position. (Ibid.)

The District notes that N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28 does not prohibit the District from laying-off attendance officers, but rather "provides guidance" for those assigned as attendance officers. (Id. at 8) Accordingly, the District argues that it did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28 when it laid off the attendance officers – a decision that was approved by the Civil Service Commission. (Ibid.)

The District also challenged the timeliness of the petition of appeal. (Id. at 12-13) Specifically, the District argues that the petition was filed with the Commissioner nearly one month beyond the 90-day filing deadline and that the ALJ erred in relaxing the 90-day rule.[3] (Ibid.)

In reply, the NTU contends that the ALJ correctly found the District in violation of the education statutes when it abolished the position of attendance officer. (NTU's Reply at 6) The NTU argues that by applying principles of statutory interpretation, it is clear that an attendance officer must be a separate position with certain job responsibilities. (Id. at 6-11) The NTU points out that the intent of the statute is to ensure that children attend school. (Id. at 6-7) As such, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 requires that school districts "shall appoint a suitable number of qualified persons to be designated as attendance officers and fix their compensation." (Emphasis added) (Id. at 8) The NTU contends that the language is "crystal clear" that attendance officers are required. (Ibid.) Further, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-27 and [3] The ALJ found that because the issues raised in the NTU's petition of appeal involve matters of significant public interest, a relaxation of the 90-day filing deadline was warranted under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16. Further, the ALJ noted that the District failed to raise timeliness as an affirmative defense (with the exception of the generic affirmative defense that NTU failed to state a claim), nor did it raise the issue before the ALJ in any of the court proceedings – including in the oral argument on the predominant interest motion – prior to the closing submissions. Considering the circumstances – the importance of attendance and the fact that the District did not address this issue with the court until after two days of hearing had concluded – a relaxation of the rules is warranted, and the Commissioner will consider the instant appeal. See N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29 delineate certain job responsibilities and requirements for attendance officers, which the District seeks to "dilute . . . by implying that the District can designate individuals to assume the statutory duties." (Id. at 9)

The NTU additionally points out that the testimony of the District's own witnesses – Nadiyah Sa'id, Vanessa Rodriguez, and Eric Ingold – proves that the District does not have any employees who go into the community to look for truant students, the members of the SST are volunteers, and the District no longer uses buses to pick up truants. (Id. at 12-13)

Similar to that of the NTU, petitioners' reply to the District's exceptions also emphasizes that the ALJ's findings are supported by the weight of the evidence, and demonstrates that no one in Newark Public Schools presently serves as an attendance officer or performs the core functions of that role. (Petitioners' Reply at 8-11) Specifically, the District's own witness – Nadiyah Sa'id – confirmed that no one holds the attendance officer title, no one replaced the truancy team who formerly went into the community searching for truants, and the current SST consists of school-based volunteers who have other responsibilities besides attendance. (Id. at 8-10) Similarly, Vanessa Rodriguez and Eric Ingold testified that no one in the district was designated as an attendance officer. (Id. at 10-11) Eric Ingold further testified that the District no longer utilizes a bus with attendance officers who patrol the streets to combat truancy, but instead relies on the Newark Police Department to identify and pick up truants. (Ibid.) As such, petitioners dispute the District's argument that the ALJ only relied on the unsupported testimony of Abdual Rahman Saleem. (Id. at 17)

Petitioners contend that the ALJ correctly concluded that the District violated education statues by failing to have anyone in the statutorily-mandated attendance officer position. (Id. at 13-19) Petitioners point out that the reason the statute requires attendance officers is part of a larger statutory scheme to enforce compulsory education. (Id. at 13) Additionally, petitioners assert that the District attempted to distribute the job duties of the attendance officer to members of the SST, but that the SST does not perform the core duties of the attendance officer, ie., "going out into the community and utilizing...police powers to actually locate and return truant students to school." (Id. at 15-16)

Upon review, the Commissioner agrees with the District that the layoff of the 46 attendance officers did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, or N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32. Specifically, when evaluating a statute, the Commissioner must consider the Legislature's intent by considering the plain language of the statute. State v. Munafo, 222 N.J. 480, 488 (2015). When N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 to -35 is read as a whole, it is clear that the purpose of enacting this legislation was to compel children to attend school. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 states that parents or guardians of school-aged children "shall cause such child regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools[.]" To achieve that end, districts are required to designate attendance officers. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 provides that "[f]or the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this article, the board of education of each school district . . . shall appoint a suitable number of qualified persons to be designated as attendance officers, and shall fix their compensation."

Considering its plain language, the statute does not require the employment of individual employees to serve solely in the role of attendance officer, but rather that the district "designate" attendance offices to enforce the provisions of the statute. Designating a team to perform the core duties outlined in the statute is acceptable, provided that the ultimate goal of encouraging student attendance at school is achieved – regardless of whether the team members have additional job duties and responsibilities. See Ann Quinlan v. Board of Education of the Township of North Bergen, 73 N.J. Super. 40, 47-48 (App. Div. 1962) (permitting a school clerk to serve in the role and perform the duties of both clerk and attendance officer).

Here, the District has designated the SST – as a whole – as attendance officers. The roles and responsibilities of the SST were developed through a listening tour of approximately 25 meetings in which Nadiyah Sa'id, the District's Deputy Executive Director of College and Career Readiness, met with a variety of school employees – including principals, students, parents, attendance officers and court representatives – to develop "a new strategy for how the district would implement attendance support for [its] students." (Testimony of Nadiyah Sa'id, 1T at 8)[4] Specifically, Sa'id sought to "work with the remaining attendance staff to get a clear understanding of [the] state code on attendance, work with the existing office staff to determine how things had been functioning, the various roles that contributed to the district's delivery of attendance support services" and to identify how the District could support all areas of attendance following the layoff of the attendance officers. (Id. at 9) Thereafter, the District developed the SST as part of a new attendance policy, in accordance with State attendance policy. (Initial Decision at 10-11)

The designation of the SST as attendance officers does not – in and of itself – violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32. The purpose of the SST is to monitor student attendance and combat truancy, the same function as the former attendance officers. Additionally, although N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 requires that attendance officers receive compensation, there is no requirement that the position be full-time. It is undisputed from the record that the members of the SST – principal or vice principal, social worker, guidance counselor, parent coordinator, school resource officer, nurse, and two teachers – are all employees of the District and receive compensation. As such, the District is permitted to designate a team – rather than individuals – to serve as attendance officers, and an analysis of whether the SST meets the statutory responsibilities of the attendance officer is therefore necessary.

In order to ensure that children attend school, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29 provides that:

> The attendance officer shall examine into all violations of this article, shall warn any child violating any of the provisions of this article and the parent, guardian or other person having charge and control of the child of the consequences of the violation if persisted in, and shall notify such person in writing to cause the child to attend school within five days from the date on which notice is served, and regularly thereafter. The attendance officer shall have full police power to enforce the provisions of this article and may arrest without warrant any vagrant child or habitual truant or any child who is habitually incorrigible or who is vicious or immoral in conduct or illegally absent from school.

The record demonstrates – and the ALJ made findings of fact – that the power school clerk system sends out written notices to parents of children who are absent from school. If a student is absent for one to four days, the power school clerk mails a warning notice to the parent, and the teacher may also call the parent to determine the reason for the student's absence. (R-5; Initial Decision at 11; Testimony of Nadiyah Sa'id, 1T at 17, 19-20) When a student is absent for five to nine days, the SST is activated and invites the parent to a meeting with the SST to develop an action plan. (R-5; Initial Decision at 11; Testimony of Nadiyah Sa'id, 1T at 21) The SST will make a verbal or written request three times before making a home visit. (Ibid.) Thereafter, if a student is absent for ten or more days and the parent has not responded to the intervention efforts of the SST, the SST then reaches out to the court representative. (R-5, Testimony of Nadiyah Sa'id, 1T at 22-23)

As such, the SST performs the duties and responsibilities of the attendance officer with respect to warning parents and guardians of student absences and notifies parents in writing within five days, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29. Further, the school resource officer – a member of the SST – is a police officer, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29. The fact that the District utilizes technology to assist with the performance of its statutorily-mandated responsibilities is of no moment. The purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29 and the entire statute is to promote attendance, and advancements in technology are an asset to the cause.

Finally, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28 requires:

> Any attendance officer who shall find any child between six and 16 years of age who is a truant from school, shall take the child and deliver him to the parent, guardian or other person having charge and control of the child, or to the teacher of the school which such child is lawfully required to attend.

Although the District used four buses to round up truant students prior to the layoff of the attendance officers, such use of buses and patrolling the streets is not required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28. Considering the plain language of the statute, attendance officers "who shall find" truant students are required to return them to school or to their home. The phrase "who shall find" does not compel districts to develop a scheme wherein attendance officers are required to canvas the streets searching for truant students. To the contrary, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28 does not delineate specifically how attendance officers will find students and leaves districts with discretion on how to find students. Advancements in technology will naturally result in new and innovative ways to locate truant students. Through the SST and the power school clerk, the District finds truant students through parent contact and involvement after the student has been absent as few as one to four times. As such, the District is in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected for the reasons expressed herein. The layoff of the attendance officers does not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, or N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32. In accordance with the predominant interest order, the remaining aspects of the case are now transferred to the Civil Service Commission for determination.

BEFORE KIMBERLY A. MOSS, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Orlena Simpson, et. al (appellants), allege that their layoffs from permanent full-time civil service positions with respondent, Newark Public School District (NPS), was in bad faith. Respondent contends that the layoff was for economic reasons. The matter was filed before the Office of Administrative Law under OAL Docket Number CSV 14755-13 as a contested case by the Civil Service Commission. Appellant Newark Teachers Union (NTU) alleges that NPS abolished the position of attendance officer in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 to -33. That matter was assigned OAL Docket Number EDU 17995-2013 and filed before the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case by the New Jersey Department of Education. Appellant Simpson filed a motion for consolidation and predominant interest determination on September 22, 2014. The Motion was granted with the Department of Education having predominant interest over the education law issue and the Civil Service Commission having predominant interest over the other issues in the matter. Hearings were held on June 10, 2015, and September 9, 2015. Simpson, et. al submitted a closing brief on December 7, 2015. NTU and NPS submitted closing briefs on December 8, 2015. The parties requested additional time to respond to the closing briefs, which I granted. NTU and NPS submitted reply briefs on January 5, 2016. Simpson, et. al submitted a reply brief on January 7, 2016. NPS submitted a supplemental brief on January 12, 2016. Simpson submitted a letter and attachment on January 22, 2016, at which time I closed the record.

TESTIMONY AND FINDINGS OF FACT

The factual discussion is not intended to be a verbatim report of the testimony of all the witnesses. Rather, it is intended to summarize the testimony and evidence found by the undersigned to be relevant to the issues presented. I FIND the following uncontested facts:

On July 1, 2013, NPS laid off approximately 136 employees who were or are members of the Newark Teachers Union Local 481. Those laid off included forty-six attendance counselors, seven clerk 1's, fourteen community aides school, twenty-five community aides school/teacher's aides, twenty keyboarding clerk 1's, five keyboarding clerk 2's, and nineteen teachers' aides.

TESTIMONY

Nadiyah Sa'id

Nadiyah Sa'id (Sa'id) is the Deputy Executive Director of College and Career Readiness with the NPS. She has previously worked for NPS in the capacity of supervisor and social worker. During the 2012-2013 school year she was a supervisor in the office of college and career readiness.

In April 2013, she was informed that NPS would be laying off all of its attendance counselors. Sa'id was not involved in the layoff decisions. The superintendent made the decision to lay off the attendance workers. Her office had to develop a new strategy for attendance, which became attendance policy 5133. A student support team (SST) was developed as part of the attendance policy. The SST consists of a principal or vice principal, social worker, guidance counselor, parent coordinator, school resource officer, a nurse, and two teachers. The school resource officers are police officers. Each high school has one school resource officer. The elementary schools share school resource officers. Participation on the SST is voluntary but assigned by the principal. If a student has ten or more absences a pre-judicial meeting is scheduled with the court representative. Court representatives are representatives of the district. Sa'id does not know if there have been more court cases regarding attendance since the new system has been in place; however, the court representatives are in court every Tuesday. If a student is chronically absent—over ten absences in a school year—the SST is activated. At this time no one's going out looking for the students who are absent. Chronic absenteeism is a significant problem especially in the NPS high schools.

Sa'id helped create the attendance policy 5133, which was reviewed by the legal department. It was approved by the school advisory board then approved by the School Board by Resolution. Once policy 5133 was approved training in the policy was provided to principals, vice principals, support teams, and students.

On October 15 of every year NPS must provide the State with a rooster of all of its students.

Nafisah Hunter

Nafisah Hunter (Hunter) is the manager of non-instructional staff for NPS. She has been in that position for the past year. She was previously a human resources coordinator for non-instructional employees. In 2013 she became aware that there would be layoffs. She was at a meeting where it was announced that there would be layoffs due to the budget and provided with a list of names of employees impacted. She was not involved in determining who gets laid off. She submitted the layoff plan to civil service on May 24, 2013. She did not participate in budgetary discussions. The abolition of positions was for cost savings and efficiency.

A forty-five-day notice of layoffs was sent to all employees. Individual notices were sent to employees who were impacted. She met with the unions regarding the layoffs on April 24, 2013. This meeting was to inform the unions of the layoffs. The Civil Service Commission approved the layoff plan. Once the approval was received, the impacted employees were notified that either they are laid off or of their bumping rights.

She is not familiar with the job listing of attendance manager and not aware of the existence of the position. Civil Service Commission is given the reason for the layoffs. It has a thirty-day review period. Civil Service Commission does not request documents during this review period.

Valerie Wilson

Valerie Wilson (Wilson) has been the business manager for NPS since December 2010. Her duties include some budget functions. The budget process begins in December for the next school year. NPS looks at expenses and revenues to project the increasing cost for the next school year. A preliminary budget is filed in the first week of March and the final budget is filed in the first week of April. When determining the budget NPS looks at costs for the next school year and where they can create efficiency and economy. Wilson assisted in putting the 2013-2014 budget together.

The revenue is assumed when formulating the budget. There was no assumption of additional State aid. NPS looked for other sources of revenue. They also looked at what was mandated and what programs and staffing could be reduced to close the gap. The budget must be balanced. The superintendent of NPS oversees the priorities that are reflected in the budget.

The layoff plan was not final at the time of the meeting with the unions on April 24, 2013. NPS is required to meet with unions when there are going to be layoffs. It discusses the parameters of the layoffs with the unions. The unions can ask questions or suggest alternatives to the layoff. NPS knew the positions where the layoffs would occur but not the individuals that would be laid off. There is a very low number of students who go to school in the district but live out of district. The superintendent determines what positions will have layoffs. Civil Service Commission determines who will be laid off.

Vanessa Rodriguez

Vanessa Rodriguez is NPS chief talent officer. She began in January 2013. She oversees payroll, human resources, health department, benefits, educational efficiency, staffing and recruitment. She works with each department to meet goals. Human Resources implements layoffs. There was a notification meeting with the union regarding the layoff on April 23, 2013. John Abeigon and Michael Maillaro represented the some of the union. The meeting was contentious and Abeigon and Maillaro left the meeting.

There was no alternative to the layoff. All other options were exhausted. NPS had a 56 million dollar budget gap due in part to the increase in charter school enrollment and the decrease in non-charter school enrollment. Student enrolment in NPS is decreasing yearly. Rodriguez does not know if State aid has been increased to NPS. The school business administrator asked all department heads to determine which positions are critical and which are not. NPS tried to renegotiate its contracts with vendors to close the budget gap. The budget had to align with the needs of the schools. A layoff plan was sent to civil service which was approved. The attendance rate at NPS was less than sixty percent.

Rodriguez did not have any impact on the decision as to who would be laid off. She does not oversee attendance. Teachers, guidance counselors, social workers, principals, and vice principals are all involved with attendance. She does not know if any of those received a salary increase to be a part of the new attendance policy. The new attendance policy is to collaborate with security. The attendance teams are now designated by the school. The primary attendance tasks were created by people who had experience in the schools. They were designed to cover what attendance counselors did. NPS does not presently have any one designated as an attendance counselor. There are sixty-six schools in Newark.

Eric Ingold

Eric Ingold (Ingold) is the NPS executive director for safety and security. He has held that position for approximately eighteen months. He was previously a lieutenant in the Newark Police Department. When he was a police officer, if he saw a juvenile who belonged in school, he would take the juvenile to the school. He is familiar with the attendance counselor position. Rapid response officers patrol the area around the school. The security guards maintain the safety of the school. The security officers are mainly stationed at the high schools. . The Newark Police Department's role regarding truancy has not changed after the layoffs. The duties of the safety officers have changed to a restorative effort. There are no officers or guards whose sole purpose is to look for truants. If an administrator wants to do a home visit an officer will accompany her.

Ingold does not know of anyone designated as an attendance counselor. The job description of rapid response officer and security officer does not list truant officer. Safety officer is not a civil service position. During the 2013-2014 school year there were at least twelve occasions where the Newark police were called to pick up truant students. Ingold believes that there has been a decrease in truancy since the time that he was employed by the Newark Police Department.

Abdul Rahman Saleem

Abdul Rahman Saleem (Saleem) was employed by the NPS beginning in 1982. In 1992 he became an attendance counselor. His job duties as an attendance counselor was to find out why students did not come to school; counsel students and parents, gather information for court cases and give legal notices to parties for court actions. He visited homes of students with social workers, police officers, or alone. He interacted with Welfare and DYFS as part of his job. There were four yellow busses used by the attendance counselors to look for students.

Due to the layoff he was transferred to the position of security guard, which he did for one year. After he was transferred to the position of security guard, no one held the title of attendance counselor. There was a position of specialist attendance manager that remained vacant. Most of the security guards counseled the students, but that was not part of their duties.

When he was an attendance counselor he dealt with Newark special police. Newark special police are police officers who deal with schools and restaurants. Now the rapid response officers work with the Newark special police. After he was laid off the special police continued to do truancy work. The special police were in the schools doing security work. Rapid response officers broke up fights in the schools and responded to intruders.

When Saleem was an attendance counselor he went to court as well as handing court notices to parents. He did security while he was an attendance counselor because security would not always be present. The supervisors of the attendance counselors' were located at Camden Middle School. The four busses were for the four areas of Newark. The bus could have fifty to sixty truant students on them per day. There were approximately 350-700 truant students per week. The attendance counselor took the names of all of the students who were truant and kept logs. After the attendance counselors were laid off, the busses were no longer used.

Security guards are not involved with truancy. Once he was bumped to a security guard, he would see students who he knew from his time as an attendance counselor. They were hanging out on the corner. They had slipped out of school. He would see them when he was on a break. He would see the students in stores on Springfield Avenue during the mornings and afternoons.

Having reviewed the witnesses and evidence I FIND the following additional FACTS:

The total revenue for the NPS 2013 fiscal year was one billion seventeen thousand dollars. The revenue was less than expenses for the 2013-2014 school year. There was a 56.9 million dollar budget deficit. For the 2013-2014 school year State aid did not increase, there was a loss of a onetime only source of revenue and a significant increase in costs. The largest increase in expenses is payment to charter school which increased by 33.6 million dollars. Other cost increases included a 4.7 million dollar for strategic initiatives, four million dollars for educators without permanent sites (EWPS), 3 million dollars for salaries, 1.4 million dollars for construction at Barringer High School and West Side High School, and 800 thousand dollars for health benefits. The expenses exceeded revenue by 56.9 million dollars. There are approximately 279 EWPS. NPS experienced a budget deficient for the 2012-2013 fiscal year of 36.3 million dollars. In 2011-2012 there was a funding law suit where NPS received a one-time restoration of State aid that was used in the 2012-2013 school year.

State funding is based on the number of students enrolled on October 15 of the year. There is currently a moratorium from the State on increasing or decreasing funding. Enrollment in NPS has declined in the past few years. Although there are philanthropic organization which may provide funds to NPS, NPS must make a request for the funds. That request is not necessarily granted by the philanthropic organization.

Cost reductions were made in the following areas: school budgets 18.4 million dollars, central office restructuring/elimination of titles and vacancies 9.4 million dollars, portfolio changes 7.2 million dollars, reduction in non-recurring expenditures 7.1 million dollars, reduction in personal services, travel and supplies 6.6 million dollars, creation of more inclusive learning environments 6 million dollars, and efficiency increases in school operations and facilities 3.2 million dollars. The central office restructuring included layoffs. The district makes the choice of what to cut and not cut. There were supervisors, directors, and department chairs that were eliminated. Assistant superintendents were decreased from four to two. There is a reserve in elementary and high school budgets for flexibility to afford additional teachers.

The advertised recapitulation of balances shows the general operating balance of 39,309.035 dollars for 2013-2014, which is the fund balance. The fund balance is monies in excess of obligations. Each district is required to retain two percent of its budget in the fund balance. Two percent of NPS's budget is 17 million dollars. Anything over that amount is allocated to the next year. The remaining money in the fund balance was used by NPS before the gap funding was determined. The fund balance did not decrease the 56 million dollar budget deficit.

The superintendent determines what positions will have layoffs. Civil Service Commission determines who will be laid off. The district met with the unions on April 23, 2013, where it was announced that there would be layoffs due to the budget. Hunter submitted the layoff plan to civil service on May 24, 2013. 145 people were laid off. Temporary employees were terminated. A forty-five-day notice of layoffs was sent to all employees. Individual notices were sent to employees who were impacted. Hunter sent an email to the Civil Service Commission revising the layoff plan on May 23, 2013. The Civil Service Commission approved the layoff plan. Once the approval was received the impacted employees were notified that either they are laid off or of their bumping rights.

There was no hiring freeze for teachers or crucial staff positions in the 2013-2014 school year. The EWPS are teachers that are not in a budgeted position in the district. They are budgeted out of the central office line. These teachers are all in classrooms, either as a teacher or co-teacher. One reason for EWPS is the decline in enrollment. Teachers apply for their positions. They are interviewed. If they are not chosen to retain their position or do no choose to be interviewed they become EWPS. NPS is consistently recruiting and hiring and staffing in the hard-to-staff areas of math, science, and bilingual.

The position of attendance counselor was abolished. Attendance counselors job was to report to the school and obtain form of absences then contact the families or make house visits. They would make referrals for families to mitigate obstacles. The attendance counselors who were in the truant section would attempt to locate the students and bring them to the school. If the student would not come to school it was referred to a court representative. One of the core functions of attendance counselors was home visitation. In addition that had community based contacts that would help them find students. They asked local business not to sell to students during school hours. Attendance counselors also found out if students living out of district were attending NPS. Prior to the abolition of the position NPS had four busses that the attendance counselors used to look for students. There were approximately 350-700 students truant weekly. The SST now has some of the responsibilities that the attendance counselors had. The Civil Service code number for attendance counselors is 00829. No one in the district is working under that code number.

Sa'id did a listening tour meeting with staff principals, students, and parents regarding attendance regarding attendance. She met with attendance counselors and court representatives on her listening tour. The listening tour consisted of twenty to twenty-five meetings. There were concerns regarding who would physically look for the students and bring them to the school. After the listening tour the attendance policy 5113 was developed. The attendance policy 5133 was matched to the State attendance policy. If a student is absent one to four days, the teacher or power school clerk contacts the parent. Power school is a system of records for the district. The power school clerk is the school clerk. Teachers enter attendance in power school teacher program. A warning notice is mailed to the parent by the power school clerk. A legal notice is also sent to the parent by the legal representative. If a student is absent five to nine days, the SST notices the parent either verbally or by letter at least three times to schedule a meeting. The SST consists of a principal or vice principal, social worker, guidance counselor, parent coordinator, school resource officer, a nurse, and two teachers. Members of the SST do not receive any additional monetary compensation. At this time no one from the SST goes out looking for students who are absent.

NPS has 400 security guards, twelve rapid response officers, and eleven safety officers. Safety officers have the same powers as police officers. Rapid response and safety officers address truancy. Rapid response officers patrol the area around the school. The security guards maintain the safety of the school. The security officers are mainly stationed at the high schools. A rapid response officer may see a student who is truant while patrolling, but is not tasked with looking for truants. School resource officers are also called safety officers. Security officers and rapid response officers do one component of the job of attendance counselors, but that is not there sole job function. There is no rapid response officer, security officer, or security guard whose sole responsibility is to look for truant students. Rapid response officers do not keep truancy records or maintain a daily log. Newark Police have on approximately twelve occasions picked up truant students and brought them to school during the 2013-2014 school year.

Sixty percent of the NPS high school students are absent more than ten times during the school year. There is a high rate of absenteeism in the district. NPS wanted to move away from a punitive discipline to a restorative approach.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

One of the issues in this matter is whether NPS violated N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 by abolishing the position of attendance counselor or did the creation of the SST comply with the statute. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 provides:

> For the purpose of enforcing the provisions of this article, the board of education of each school district and the board of education of each county vocational school shall appoint a suitable number of qualified persons to be designated as attendance officers, and shall fix their compensation; except that if a county attendance officer or officers are appointed for any county, any district board of education of such county may be exempt from the appointment of a local attendance officer if such exemption is approved by the county superintendent. Each board shall make rules not inconsistent with the provisions of this article and subject to the approval of the commissioner, for the government of the attendance officers.

The duties of an attendance officer are stated in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, which provides:

> The attendance officer shall examine into all violations of this article, shall warn any child violating any of the provisions of this article and the parent, guardian or other person having charge and control of the child of the consequences of the violation if persisted in, and shall notify such person in writing to cause the child to attend school within five days from the date on which notice is served, and regularly thereafter. The attendance officer shall have full police power to enforce the provisions of this article and may arrest without warrant any vagrant child or habitual truant or any child who is habitually incorrigible or who is vicious or immoral in conduct or illegally absent from school.

NPS created the SST after it abolished the position of attendance counselor. The SST is comprised of the following: a principal or vice principal, social worker, guidance counselor, parent coordinator; school resource officer, nurse, and two teachers. All of the members of SST are there voluntarily. They are not paid to be members of the SST. Instead of the attendance officer warning the child, parent, or guardian of persistent absences, the power school clerk mails an initial notice. The SST sends a notice to the parent if a child is absent between five to nine days. The only people in the SST who have the authority to make an arrest are the security officers. However, the eleven security officers are stationed at the high schools.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28 provides:

> Any attendance officer, who shall find any child between six and 16 years of age, who is a truant from school, shall take the child and deliver him to the parent, guardian or other person having charge and control of the child, or to the teacher of the school which such child is lawfully required to attend.
> [Emphasis added.]

The testimony in this matter has shown that there is no one in the NPS who is looking for truant students since the attendance officers were laid off. The rapid response officers may find truant students, but that is incidental to performing their duties of patrolling the area of the school. There was no testimony as to how specifically the security officers are involved in locating truant students. I do not interpret the word "find" in the statue to mean that if an attendance officer, or in this case a rapid resource officer, happens upon a truant student in the course his other duties. I interpret it to mean that when an attendance officer is looking for truant students and finds one.

I therefore CONCLUDE that NPS violated N.J.S.A. 18A:38-28, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-29, and N.J.S.A. 18A:32-32 when it abolished the position of attendance counselor.

NPS argues that the petition of Newark Teachers Union was filed untimely. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.2(i) provides:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing. This rule shall not apply in instances where a specific statute, regulation or court order > provides for a period of limitation shorter than 90 days for the filing of a particular type of appeal.

In this matter NPS has violated N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 by abolishing the position of attendance counselor that is statutorily mandated. In the case of Bloomfield Education Association on Behalf of The Child Study Team v. Board of Education of the Township of Bloomfield, EDU 18705-13, Order (May 1, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/> a similar issue arose. In that matter the board laid off the child study team and contracted their positions to a third party. The Board filed a motion that the petition be dismissed as untimely in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). In that case Judge Bass stated that:

> This case presents one of those rare circumstances when relaxation of the ninety-day rule is appropriate under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16. This extraordinary relief has been reserved only for those situations where a substantial constitutional issue is presented or where a matter of significant public interest is involved beyond that of concern to the parties, Portee v. Board of Education of Newark, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (Edu) 381,384. Here the alleged actions of the Board in using Delta-t to provide child study team services will affect students and staff alike.

In this matter the abolition of the positions is a matter of significant public interest. The public is entitled to know whether the abolition of the position of attendance officer and replacing them with SST where there is no one whose specific duty is to go out and pick up truant students is consistent with law and regulation.

The matter of timeliness was first argued in NPS closing submissions dated December 7, 2015. This matter was filed at the OAL on December 17, 2013. NPS's Answer in the NTU matter was filed on December 12, 2013. It did not list the petition being untimely filed as an affirmative defense. During the predominant interest motion and oral argument there was no mention of the petition being untimely filed.

I CONCLUDE that this case presents one of those rare circumstances when relaxation of the ninety-day rule is appropriate under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16.

An appointing authority may institute layoff actions for reasons of economy, efficiency, or other related reasons. N.J.A.C. 4A:8-1.1(a). On appeal from a layoff, the issue to be determined is limited to whether the appointing authority's action was motivated by good-faith considerations of economy or efficiency in effectuating the layoff.

The burden of proof is on the appellant to demonstrate a contrary or bad-faith motivation. N.J.S.A. 11A:8-4; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(c); N.J.A.C. 4A:8-2.6(c). Where it is shown that a layoff action was motivated by a bona fide desire or necessity to effect economy, the action taken is presumed to be in good faith. Greco v. Smith, 40 N.J. Super. 182, 189 (App. Div. 1956); Sieper v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 21 N.J. Super. 583, 586 (App. Div. 1952). Further, > [t]he mere fact that the removal of an individual from the municipal payroll results in an economy is not the exclusive test, since such removal will always be manifested by a saving. The question is, not narrowly whether a plan conceived and adopted for the purposes of saving money actually, in operation, attained that purpose, but whether the design in adopting the plan was to accomplish economy or, on the contrary, was to effect the removal of a public employee, protected by civil service, without following the statutory procedure for removal. City of Newark v. Civil Service Commission, 112 N.J.L. 571, 574 (Sup. Ct. 1934), affirmed, 114 N.J.L. 185 (E. & A. 1935).

> [Greco, supra, 40 N.J. Super. at 190.]

Therefore, in proving that an appointing authority has acted in bad faith, the employee must show that the layoffs were not motivated by true considerations of economy and/or efficiency. It is not sufficient to meet the burden of proof for an employee to show that a layoff is uneconomical. Such evidence may assist the establishment of bad faith, but the employee must go further. He or she must show by sufficient proof that the layoffs resulted for reasons other than economy and efficiency. Amodio v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 81 N.J. Super. 22 (App. Div. 1963); Chirichella v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 31 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1954); Prosecutors, Detectives and Investigators Ass'n of Essex Cty. v. Hudson Cty. Bd. of Freeholders, 130 N.J. Super. 30 (App. Div. 1974).

Evidence may indicate that a mixture of motives existed in connection with a layoff decision. If other motives besides economy and efficiency were involved, it makes no difference so long as the position involved was useless and its abolition was in the public interest. Pellet v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 10 N.J. Super. 52, 57 (App. Div. 1950).

It is also settled that the holder of a protected civil service position may be laid off in the interest of economy and his or her duties consolidated and assigned to others. Gianettino v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 120 N.J.L. 531, 533 (Sup. Ct. 1938); Sieper, supra, 21 N.J. Super. at 583. It is a question of the bona fides of the action, and the burden is on the appellant to show that the action taken was in bad faith.

Other cases further define bad faith as "[g]enerally implying . . . design to mislead or deceive another . . . not prompted by an honest mistake as to one's rights or duties, but by some interested or sinister motive." In re Afolo, CSV 4145-07, Initial Decision, (Mar. 31, 2008) (quoting Brown v. State Dep't of Educ., 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 537, 541 (1997)), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (May 22, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. In trying to prove bad faith, the appellant has a very heavy burden to meet because bad faith is "not simply bad judgment or negligence," but the conscious doing of a wrong because of some dishonest purpose. Ibid.

Appellants other than Attendance Counselors

NPS has demonstrated that there was a 56.9 million dollar budget deficit. The majority of the budget gap comes from payments to charter schools. There was no evidence that NPS instituting charter schools solely to extinguish civil service jobs. There was substantial testimony regarding the attendance officer's duties and the SST. There was no testimony regarding any of the other positions where layoffs occurred. The notices were sent to petitioner in accordance with the civil service regulations. Petitioners have not established that the layoffs were done for reasons other than economy and efficiency. Petitioners may believe that the layoffs are uneconomical and that other persons such as EWAP should have been laid off; however, they have not proved that NPS laid these workers off in bad faith.

Attendance Counselors

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-32 requires districts to appoint attendance officers. From the above discussion NPS violated this statue when it abolished the attendance counselors' position. Petitioners have shown that NPS by violating the above regulation acted in bad faith.

Re: State-Operated School District of the City of Camden, Camden County v. C. Ann Volk, Executive County Superintendent, New Jersey State Department of Education, and E.H., on behalf of minor child, K.M.,
Agency Dkt. No. 371-12/14, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 6081-15

Dear Parties:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with the State-Operated School District of the City of Camden's (District) Motion for Reconsideration of the Commissioner's decision, dated March 18, 2016, denying the District's motion for summary decision and remanding the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for development of the factual record.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2, a motion for reconsideration shall be considered based upon the following:

i. claim(s) of mistake, provided, however, that disagreement with the outcome of a decision, or with the analysis upon which it is based, shall not constitute "mistake" for purposes of this section;

ii. newly discovered evidence likely to alter the outcome of a matter, where such evidence could not have been previously discovered by due diligence;
iii. newly ascertained misrepresentation or other misconduct of an adverse party, where such misrepresentation could not have been previously known; or
iv. reversal of a prior judgment on which the present matter is based.

Upon review and consideration of the submissions, I find that the District has failed to satisfy any of the requisites for granting such relief specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2. In its papers, the District argues that the Commissioner mistakenly found that the grant of summary decision in favor of the District was unsupported by the record. The District argues that the evidence that it submitted, and the facts that were deemed admitted by E.H.'s failure to file an answer, were sufficient to establish that E.H.'s home was fixed and regular. Further, the District asserts that the Commissioner erred by misapplying the summary decision standard and that it would be futile to call E.H. at a plenary hearing given her lack of participation in the proceedings. Although couched as a mistake, the District is merely expressing its disagreement with the Commissioner's March 18, 2016 decision, which does not equate to a mistake warranting reconsideration of the matter.

Accordingly, the Motion for Reconsideration is hereby DENIED.

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe
Commissioner

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Legacy Treatment Services-Mary A. Dobbins School (Legacy) appeals the decision of respondent New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) denying Legacy's request to increase the tentative tuition rate for the 2016-2017 school year. On April 13, 2016, Legacy filed an amended petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education, along with an application for emergent relief. The entire matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on April 15, 2016, and scheduled for an emergent oral argument on April 29, 2016. The parties filed written briefs with proposed exhibits, and a telephone conference was held on April 27, 2016. On April 29, 2016, oral argument was heard and the record for petitioner's emergent relief application was closed.

The issue presented is whether Legacy is entitled to emergent relief granting it an increase in the tentative tuition rate for the 2016-17 school year because DOE acted in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner in denying the request for an increase.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Legacy is a certified private school for students with disabilities ("PSSD"). Respondent's Brief, at 3. As such, Legacy charges tuition fees to school districts that send disabled students to Legacy for education. Id. DOE decides the tuition rates for PSSDs, including Legacy, under procedures set forth in governing statutes and regulations. This matter arises from DOE's decision not to increase Legacy's tentative tuition rate for the 2016-17 school year. Petitioner's Brief, at 1.

By way of background, the DOE Office of School Finance ("OSF") annually sets a maximum tentative tuition rate for each PSSD based on audited financial statements of the prior year provided by the PSSD. Id; N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i). These rates are generally established in December or January of the preceding year. Id. The DOE released the 2016-17 tentative tuition rates for PSSDs (including Legacy) in December 2015 based on 2014-15 audited financial statements. Id. at 3-4.

Once the maximum tentative tuition rates for PSSDs are published, the sending districts enter into contractual agreements establishing a tentative tuition rate, which cannot exceed the maximum rate set by the OSF. Id. at 4; citing N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(h). The tentative tuition rate cannot be changed during the school year. Id. The contract is written according to a "mandated tuition contract form prescribed by the Commissioner and shall be executed prior to the enrollment of a student." Id. The PSSD must provide the OSF with audited financial statements by November for the prior school year ending on June 30. Id. The school must ensure that those financial statements "reflect the certified actual cost(s) per student [("CACPS")]." Id; quoting N.J.A.C. 6A: 23A-18.9(c). The actual final tuition rate charge by the PSSD must be less than or equal to the CACPS. Id; N.J.A.C. 6A: 23A-18.9(d).

After the OSF audit is complete, the PSSD either bills the sending school district for the difference between the approved final tuition rate and the tentative tuition rate or, if the final tuition rate is lower than the tentative tuition rate that was already paid, the PSSD issues a refund to the sending district. Id. at 4-5; N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(1).

Here, Legacy's expenses totaled $5,324,534 for the 2012-13 school year. Petitioner Certification of Debra Vincent, pg. 1, para. 5; Petitioner's Brief, at 2. During the 2013-14 school year, Legacy's expenses were $5,315,670. Petitioner Certification of Debra Vincent, pg. 2, para. 8.

The tentative tuition rate for the 2014-15 school year was $326.50 and Legacy received $6,759,203 in tuition from sending districts. Respondent's Brief, at 5. Legacy's total expenses for 2014-15 were $5,231,707, so Legacy had to refund $1,569,117 to the sending districts for that year. Id. Thus, Legacy's final tuition rate was $250.65. Id. But since 2006-07, Legacy's tentative tuition rate had not exceeded the final tuition rate by more than $5.00 in any year, until the 2014-15 school year. Petitioner's Exhibit A, Comparison of Tentative and Final Tuition Rates.

The 2014-15 school year tuition-rate disparity occurred when a merger between Union Association of the Children's Home and the Lester A. Drenk Behavioral Health Center created Legacy Treatment Services. Petitioner's Brief, at 2. The merger resulted in Legacy's average enrollment jumping from approximately 95 students in September to 113 students by June 2015. Id. at 3. Tuition from these additional students increased Legacy's revenue for the 2014-15 year. Id. However, because many of the students arrived in the last few months of the school year, Legacy did not expend the additional revenue by the end of the school year. Id.

The student enrollment returned to approximately 91 for the 2015-16 school year. Id. But the tentative tuition rate for the 2016-17 year was based on the expenses at the end of the 2014-15 year, which totaled $5,231,707. Id. Legacy claims that the 2014-15 figure is too low because it does not take into account the fact that Legacy received unexpended revenues at the end of the school year from the additional students, Id. at 4, and it did not include the salaries required to fill open positions with full-time teachers. Id. at 3.

The DOE calculated Legacy's 2016-17 tentative tuition rate to be $262.82 based on "the school's actual cost per pupil in 2014-2015, indexed by four percent, plus the permitted surcharge or public school restricted working capital fund." Petitioner's Exhibit E, Denial Letter; Respondent's Brief, at 6; N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i).[1] Legacy ended 2014-15 with $829,000 in its working capital fund. Respondent's Brief, at 6. Legacy projects its costs for the 2016-17 school year at $6,587,454, so the tentative tuition rate of $262.82 would leave it with a $1,289,003 shortfall. Petitioner Certification of Debra Vincent, pg. 6, para. 42.

On February 5, 2016, Legacy filed an application requesting a higher tentative tuition rate ($320.20) for the 2016-17 school year. On February 25, 2016, the DOE denied Legacy's request, stating that Legacy had not demonstrated a hardship necessitating an increased tentative tuition rate. Respondent's Brief, at 6. This appeal and request for emergent relief followed.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

According to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, an application for emergent relief shall not be granted unless it satisfies the following four standards:

> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

[1] The final 2014-15 tuition rate was $250.65.

>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b); Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).]

1. Will Legacy suffer irreparable harm if the tentative tuition rate is not increased?

One of the principles for emergent relief is that relief should only be ordered to prevent irreparable harm to the petitioners. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-332. Harm is irreparable when it cannot be addressed with monetary damages. Id. This standard contemplates that the harm also be both substantial and immediate. Subcarrier Communications, Inc. v. Day, 299 N.J. Super. 634, 638 (App. Div. 1997).

In assessing irreparable harm, the impact on the public interest should be considered. Parks v. Commerce Bank, N.A., 377 N.J. Super. 378, 387 (App. Div. 2005). "Pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 133. The threatened loss of an enterprise constitutes irreparable harm sufficient to justify the issuance of a preliminary injunction. Beilowitz v. GMC, 233 F. Supp. 2d 631, 644 (D.N.J. 2002).

The prospect of future harm cannot be purely speculative. Peregoy v. Peregoy, 358 N.J. Super. 179, 203-204 (App. Div. 2003). "Concerns that 'may' lead to irreparable harm are not enough." Id. at 203. In Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Englewood Cliffs v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Englewood, EDU 1086-86, State Bd. of Educ., Decision on Motions (June 3, 2005) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, the Englewood Board sought $6 million from the Commissioner of Education to cover a budgetary shortfall. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Englewood Cliffs v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Englewood, EDU 1086-86, State Bd. of Educ., Decision on Motions (June 3, 2005) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. The Englewood Board argued that without the funding it would be left without top administrators, numerous programs would fail, 318 students would be "dispossessed of their education," and the first graduating class would be "denied the opportunity to complete their program." Id. In denying the emergency relief, the State held that Englewood "has failed to demonstrate that it will suffer irreparable harm if it is not afforded the relief it seeks." Id. The State Board held that the "scenario presented" by Englewood was "speculative" and that nothing showed that Englewood would be irreparably harmed without emergency funding. Id.

Here, Legacy claims that it will suffer irreparable harm if the tentative tuition rate is not increased because it will "cease to exist" if the rate of $262.82 takes effect. Petitioner's Brief, at 6. It argues that this tuition rate will result in a $1,300,000 shortfall, which will prevent Legacy from meeting its operational costs. Id.

However, under N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i), the 2016-17 tentative tuition rate was based on the final actual cost per student in the 2014-15 school year, which was $250.65. While Legacy claims that $262.82 is insufficient because it will incur more than $6,000,000 in costs for the 2016-17 school year, in its projected expenses, Legacy appears to substantially align with the 2015-16 budget. And the final actual cost per student for the 2015-16 school year is not yet available.[2] As discussed above, Legacy's expenses for 2012-13 were $5,324,532; in 2013-14 they were $5,315,669; and in 2014-15 they were $5,231,707. The tentative tuition rate of $262.82 would produce about $5,300,000 in gross tuition. Despite the fact that the tentative rate is the same as it was in 2007, it is only speculative rather than certain that Legacy would suffer irreparable harm if the tuition rate is not increased.

As for immediacy, Legacy urges that binding contracts with the sending districts for the tentative tuition rate must be finalized "now, in the Spring." Without an increased rate, it is forced into an imminent contractual term that will result in its demise sometime during the 2016-17 school year, as the shortfall would render it unable to pay its operational costs. As stated above, the contract "shall be executed prior to the enrollment of a student." N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(h). What is more, Legacy had $829,000 in its working capital fund, as of the end of the 2014-15 school year. Further, N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18-2(h)(3)(i)(1) states that "[a] sending district board of education shall pay the approved private school for students with disabilities no later than the first of each month prior to the services being rendered." N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18-2(h)(3)(i)(1). And Legacy does not even begin payments for the 2016-17 year until July 1, 2016, at the earliest. Therefore, Legacy can presumably use its working capital fund to operate in July and August 2016, and sending districts will begin payments in or about September or October 2016. Though no consolation to Legacy under its own forecast, it must be noted that Legacy would be reimbursed for any negative difference between the final tuition rate and the tentative tuition rate, because under N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18-2(m):

[2] It is noteworthy that an increase in Legacy's projected expenses from the 2015-16 school year to the 2016-17 school year totaled $132,162, solely in the area of salary, pension, and benefits for teachers and other professional staff (R-B at 1.). Yet student enrollment had returned to an "average" level in the 2015-16 school year.

> [if] the tentative tuition rate for the school year established by written contractual agreement pursuant to (h) above is less than the final tuition rate charged for the school year, the [PSSD] may charge each sending district board of education all or part of the difference owed, but the same final tuition rate shall be charged to each sending district board of education. The sending district board of education shall pay the difference on a mutually agreed upon date during the second school year following the year for which the actual cost per student is certified.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18-2(m).]

So, the harm is not irreparable unless Legacy actually ceases to exist. On this record, it is uncertain when, not to mention whether, Legacy would have to cease operations. Legacy has not sufficiently provided clear proof that its enterprise is actually or imminently facing nonexistence by the DOE not increasing the tentative tuition rate now. Therefore, it has not satisfied the first prong of the test for emergent relief.

2. Is the legal right underlying Legacy's claim is settled?

Legacy claims that the legal right underlying its claim to an increased tentative tuition rate is well settled because N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(j) allows for these rates to be increased when need is demonstrated. "The Commissioner may approve a higher tentative tuition rate for any year in which the PSSD can prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the maximum tentative tuition rate for the year is not adequate and would cause an undue financial hardship on the private school." Id.

Although Legacy has a right to request a tentative tuition rate increase, it does not have a legal right to an automatically increased tentative tuition rate under N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(j). This regulation allows for the Commissioner to exercise discretion as to whether the sending school districts must pay a higher tuition rate to begin a school year. As discussed in the following section, an agency's determination will only be overturned if it was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. See Pineland Learning Ctr. v. New Jersey Dep't of Educ., Div. of Admin. And Fin., EDU 138-14, Comm'r (March 24, 2014); Matter of Visiting Nurse Ass'n of Sussex Cnty, Inc., 302 N.J. Super. 85, 94 (App. Div. 1997). There appears to be little precedent for what constitutes an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable decision to deny a PSSD's request for an increased tentative tuition rate for financial hardship. Therefore, the legal right underlying Legacy's claim to a tuition rate increase is not well settled and Legacy has failed to satisfy the second prong required for emergent relief.

3. Is Legacy likely to prevail on the merits of its underlying claim that the DOE acted in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner when it denied Legacy's request for an increased tentative tuition rate?

Legacy claims that the DOE's denial of its request to increase the tentative tuition rate for the 2016-17 school year was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable because the DOE did not give any basis for its decision in the denial and no school has been granted a tentative tuition rate increase in years, thus evidencing a blanket policy to deny these requests. Petitioner's Brief, at 7-8. Legacy also argues that it is likely to succeed on the merits of its claim because the DOE has depressed the tentative tuition rates for PSSDs by imposing a spending growth limitation of four percent rather than five percent as provided in N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i)(1); which states:

> The maximum tentative tuition rate per student shall equal the product of the audited actual cost per student for the school year prior to the current school year inflated by twice the spending growth limitation of 2.5 percent and any > school year prior to the current school year inflated by twice the spending growth limitation of 2.5 percent and any applicable change to this percentage identified in N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-5.d or the CPI, whichever is greater.

> [N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i)(1), emphasis added. ]

A petitioner bears the burden of demonstrating that the DOE's determination to restrict its tuition rates was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Titusville Acad., Inc. v. N.J. Dep't of Educ., EWR 00651-06, Initial Decision (May 21, 2007), adopted, Comm'r (July 6, 2007) <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/html/initial/edu00651-06_1.html>; See Pineland Learning Ctr. v. New Jersey Dep't of Educ., Div. of Admin. and Fin., EDU 138-14, Comm'r (March 24, 2014).

When determining whether an agency acted in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner, the court must examine:

> (1) whether the agency action violates the enabling act's express or implied legislative policies; (2) whether there is substantial evidence in the record to support the findings upon which the agency based application of legislative policies; and (3) whether, in applying the legislative policies to the facts, the agency clearly erred by reaching a conclusion that could not reasonably have been made upon a showing of the relevant factors.
> [Lipman v. Rutgers-State University of New Jersey, 329 N.J. Super. 433, 441 (App. Div. 2000).]

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(j), "[t]he Commissioner may approve a higher tentative tuition rate for any year in which the PSSD can prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the maximum tentative tuition rate for the year is not adequate and would cause an undue financial hardship on the private school." N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(j).

Here, the DOE based its decision for the 2016-17 tentative tuition rate on the actual spending for the 2014-15 school year. The DOE considers each application for a tentative tuition rate increase individually on its own merits. Respondent's Sadler-

Williams Certification, pg. 4, para. 20. When considering Legacy's request to increase the tentative tuition rate, the DOE reviewed Legacy's actual spending for the 2014-15 school year, its actual expenditures for the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years, and Legacy's estimated spending for the 2015-16 and 2016-17 school years. Id. at pg. 3-4, para. 11 and 14-16.[3]

The 2014-15 expenses, along with the 2012-13 and the 2013-14 school years expenses showed that Legacy's expenses were typically about $5,300,000. The DOE also observed that Legacy had $829,334 in working capital at the end of the 2014-15 school year. In its claim of financial hardship, Legacy projected that it would require over $6,500,000 to operate its school for the 2016-17 school year. However, the DOE determined that Legacy did not submit sufficient evidence showing that it would have $6,500,000 in expenses during the 2016-17 school year. The DOE rejected Legacy's request for an increase to the tentative tuition rate based on Legacy's actual expenses in 2014-15, which were in line with its expenses for previous school years.

Legacy argues that the fact that no PSSD's request for an increase to the tentative tuition rate has been granted in over six years shows that the DOE has a "rubber stamp" denial process and does not analyze each request on its own merits. However, this circumstantial evidence is insufficient to rebut the Sadler-Williams Certification, and show that the DOE acted in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner. There may be a variety of reasons tentative tuition rate increases may be denied and there is no evidence submitted about how many requests are received, why they are denied, or the consequences of the denials. So, Legacy has not shown that the DOE actually acted in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner by denying its request for an increased tentative tuition rate due to a blanket policy of denying such requests.

[3] As referenced above, it is noteworthy that Legacy's twelve-month budget comparison for school years 2015-16 and 2016-17 (R-B) indicates that the only area of increase in expenditures was salaries, pensions, and benefits for special education instruction and professional staff, in the amount of $132,268, but student enrollment had returned to its "typical average" in 2015 after an influx of students and need for increased staff at the end of 2014-15.

Legacy also asserts that the DOE has depressed tuition rates by imposing a spending growth limitation below the five percent required by N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i)(1). However, this regulation does allow for the spending growth limitation of five percent to be changed under certain circumstances. To justify the applied limitation of four percent, DOE cites N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-5.d and N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-38, but does not specifically describe its methodology in applying the four percent spending growth limitation. Legacy argues that the first statute does not authorize DOE to impose a four -percent index statewide, and the relevance of the latter is similarly unclear. And, even if those statutes did provide authority for a four-percent limitation, they lack relevance because DOE's denial letter, dated February 25, 2016, clearly indicates its reliance only upon the single regulation, "N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i)" [sic]. "There is no question that the statutes respondent stumbled upon in preparation for oral argument today were not the basis for the DOE's denial of Legacy's tuition rate increase in February." Petitioner's Supplemental Brief, at 5. According to Legacy, any belated change of authority by DOE runs afoul of the formal rulemaking process, in violation of Metromedia, Inc. v. Dir., Div. of Taxation, 97 N.J. 313 (1984) and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2.

First, it must be noted that the pertinent regulation, N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(i)(1), specifically references N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-5.d, which in turn cites to N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-38. Second, without development of evidence on the record at a plenary hearing regarding DOE's methodology and its calculation of the four-percent limitation, including application of the statutes cited, it is unclear whether DOE appropriately applied the four-percent spending growth limitation.[4] Therefore, Legacy may succeed in its claim that the reduction of the spending growth limitation from five percent to four percent was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. However, despite a possibility that Legacy may ultimately prevail on this claim, Legacy has not quite met the high burden required for this element for emergent relief, the likelihood of success in showing the four percent limitation was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable.

[4] The DOE contends that the one-percent differential is of no significant consequence, given Legacy's projections.

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, will Legacy suffer greater harm than the DOE if the requested relief is not granted?

Legacy claims that it will suffer a greater harm if emergent relief is not granted because it will be forced to close and its students' educations will be threatened. Petitioner's Brief, at 9. The DOE claims that Legacy has not shown any good cause for why it estimates an approximately $1,300,000 budget increase for the 2016-17 school year. DOE also asserts that evaluating budgets for tentative tuition rates based on projections rather than actual past tuition rates would result in awarding high rates to all PSSDs with little evidence of necessity. Respondent's Brief, at 18-19. Also, the DOE argues that awarding higher tentative tuition rates would burden the sending school districts who are the source of the funding and should not be required to pay higher tuition rates than necessary. Id.

If the tentative tuition rate ends up being less than the final tuition rate charged, the PSSD may charge the sending school districts for the difference. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18-2(m). The sending school district must pay the difference during the second school year after the cost is certified. Id.

Here, if the tentative tuition rate is less than Legacy's final tuition rate, Legacy will be reimbursed for the difference. While Legacy claims that it will not be able to remain open long enough to receive the reimbursement, it has not produced evidence of when it expects to become insolvent based on its projections. Legacy's own projections show that it will need a higher tuition rate, but after considering Legacy's past expenses, the DOE determined that the expenses for the 2016-17 school year will be lower than Legacy's projections. As long as Legacy remains open, it will not suffer irreparable harm and the students' education will not be threatened.

If the DOE is forced to increase tentative tuition rates based on each PSSD's projections, it will be forcing sending school districts to pay higher tuition rates than may be necessary. This would be a large burden to put on school districts that are undoubtedly constrained by their own budgetary concerns. The DOE will likely suffer a greater harm than Legacy, so long as Legacy is not forced to close, because Legacy can be reimbursed if its final tuition rate exceeds its tentative tuition rate. If the DOE has to base its tentative tuition rates on projections, then it will be forced to approve higher tuition rates than may be necessary. However, if Legacy can show conclusively that it will be forced to close and that its students' right to an education would be threatened without a rate increase, the burden on the DOE would be outweighed by the harm to Legacy. Thus, the balancing of the interests depends on the likelihood that Legacy will be forced to close without a tentative tuition rate increase for the 2016-17 school year.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) and Crowe, all four criteria for emergent relief must be sustained. Based upon all of the above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met all four of the applicable criteria for emergent relief, because Legacy has not shown that: (1) it will suffer immediate irreparable harm; (2) the legal right underlying its claim is well-settled, (3) it will be successful on the merits by proving DOE acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unreasonably; and (4) the balance of hardships weighs in its favor. I therefore CONCLUDE that emergent relief in this matter must be denied.

ORDER

Therefore, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergent relief is hereby DENIED.

This Order disposes of only the issues raised in petitioner's application for emergent relief.

The matter will be scheduled for a telephone prehearing in the near future regarding the plenary hearing. Notices will be sent to the parties under separate cover.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

This matter comes to the Commissioner as a Supplemental Order on a Motion for Emergent Relief. The record of this matter and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.* There is no provision in N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 for parties to file exceptions in emergent matters, so the exceptions filed by the North Star Academy Charter School Board of Trustees (Board) on May 6, 2016 will not be considered by the Commissioner.

By decision dated May 3, 2016, the Commissioner granted emergent relief to petitioner, reversing the continued suspension of T.D. from March 22, 2016 to May 20, 2016 and directing the Board to permit T.D. to return to school. It appears from the ALJ's Order that, following the Commissioner's decision, the Board sought to return T.D. to a different campus in the North Star district rather than the North Star West Side Park Middle School, which is the school she previously attended. Upon holding a telephone status conference on May 5, 2016 at the request of petitioner, the ALJ issued a Supplemental Order on the Motion for Emergent Relief, in which he ordered that the Board return T.D. to the West Side Park Middle School campus of the North Star Academy.

* The Commissioner was not provided with a sound recording of the May 5, 2016 telephone conference at the Office of Administrative Law.

The issue of which campus T.D. would attend following her suspension was not addressed in the petition of appeal, in the briefs and certifications submitted, or at oral argument on the Motion for Emergent Relief. This issue has only arisen following the issuance of the Commissioner's May 3, 2016 decision.

Upon review, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ does not have jurisdiction to issue a Supplemental Order on a Motion for Emergent Relief since the Commissioner has already issued a final decision on the emergent matter, and the issue raised in the supplemental order is not properly before the ALJ. Instead, when a petitioner wishes to allege additional causes of action or demands for relief once the matter has already been transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the petitioner may make a motion to amend the petition with the ALJ. N.J.A.C. 1:1-6.2; N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.7(b). Should a party seek relief on an emergency basis, the party may file a motion for emergent relief with the Commissioner. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(b); N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Accordingly, should petitioner wish to seek additional relief in this matter – specifically, that her daughter be sent to the West Side Park Middle School campus – she may make a motion to amend her petition with the OAL, and file a new motion for emergent relief with the Commissioner. Until such procedures are properly followed, the issue of whether the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner when it sent T.D. to a different middle school campus is not before the ALJ or the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL is rejected, for the reasons expressed herein. This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners filed a Verified Petition and Motion for Emergent Relief with the Office of Controversies and Disputes in the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) on April 1, 2016. In support of the Motion for Emergent Relief petitioners also filed an Affidavit of petitioner J.L. and a brief in support of the motion.

Said motion seeks order authorizing the immediate reinstatement of petitioner, T.D., to North Star Academy; and, directing respondent to assess any academic curriculum and home instruction missed by T.D. during 2015 and 2016, and to provide same to T.D. in the form of supplemental tutoring and summer programs.

Respondent filed its brief in opposition to the Motion for Emergent Relief, together with Exhibits 1 through 8 and the certification of Jason Russell, Associate Chief Operating Officer, on April 20, 2016.

Because of the issues presented in the Verified Petition the matter was docketed by both the Office Special Education (as Docket No. 2016-24244E) and the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (as Docket No. 100-4/16).

DOE requested that the OAL docket and review the matter as a special education (EDS) case and issue a final decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-2.7. The OAL issued a docket number of EDS 05098-16.

The Motion for Emergent Relief, while touching upon special education issues, is not a special education motion. Accordingly, the issues raised in the Verified Petition regarding special education issues will not be addressed in the within Order.

The undersigned issued an Order, dated April 22, 2016, reversing the suspension of T.D., and ordering Respondent permit the immediate return of T.D. to North Star Academy. The Order of April 22, 2016, was adopted as modified by the Commissioner of DOE by Order dated May 3, 2016.

A telephone status conference was conducted on May 5, 2016, at the request of Petitioner's counsel, wherein the undersigned was advised that Respondent has not returned T.D. to school, but wishes to return her to a different school within the North Star district. It was unknown prior to the issuance of the April 22, 2016 Order that there were more than one school campus. The Order of April 22, 2016, did not specifically address which school campus T.D. was to return to, as it was unknown at the time the Order was issued that there was another campus. T.D. was suspended from the North Star West Side Park Middle School.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the continued suspension of T.D. from March 22, 2016 to May 20, 2016 is REVERSED and

It is further ORDERED that Respondent permit the immediate return of T.D. to North Star Academy at the West Side Park Middle School; and,

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

AWARD

The parties have entered into a Settlement Agreement (copy enclosed) in resolution of the above referenced matter. I have reviewed the Settlement Agreement and found it to be in compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6. As indicated in Item 3 of the Agreement, page two, the District will "take all necessary actions with the Commissioner of Education or her designee to withdraw the Tenure Charges.

The Settlement Agreement came about after two (2) days of hearing at which the Respondent was present and at which the nature of the charges were fully presented and known to him. Both parties have freely entered into this Agreement and both have signed the Agreement. As noted on page six (6) of the Agreement, Mr. Rivera acknowledged his understanding of the agreement which had been negotiated by his attorney with his knowledge and consent. Both parties have acknowledged, page one of the Agreement, and I find that the settlement is in the public interest.

   (b) In consideration for Rivera's Resignation Letter and release of claims in accordance with Sections 4 and 5, the District shall pay Rivera his salary for the current 2015-2016 school year (the "Current School Year") less: (i) any amount that Rivera has already been paid for the Current School Year and (ii) any amount that Rivera has received in unemployment benefits ("Settlement Payment").

   (c) The District shall pay the Settlement Payment by way of regular payroll checks issued to Rivera by the District in the normal course of the District's payroll operations and with any normal and required withholdings from pay as had been withheld from Rivera's paychecks before the Filing Date of the Tenure Charges.

(d) Rivera shall remain on the District's health care benefits program for the remainder of the Current School Year.

(e) Rivera will not report back to work for the remainder of the Current School Year.

(f) In connection with any inquiries by prospective employer of Rivera, the District shall limit any information provided to (1) Rivera's former job position; (2) dates of employment and (3) salary at the time of termination of employment

(g) The Settlement Payment shall be reported on W2 Statements issued in the normal course by the District to its employees. Rivera assumes sole responsibility for all applicable state, federal and local taxes required to be paid with respect to the Settlement Payment. In addition, Rivera agrees that if any taxing authority seeks or deems due and owing from the District any taxes, interest, penalties or other amounts with respect to the Settlement Payment, he will indemnify and hold harmless the District for any sums it may be required to pay, and he will reimburse the District for any attorney's fees and costs it incurs in defending against such claims.

(h) The Settlement Payment shall be the total amount borne by the District under this Agreement. The District shall have no obligation to make any other payment to Rivera and/or any reimbursement for accumulated unused sick leave.

3. Dismissal of Tenure Charges: The District shall take all necessary actions with the Commissioner of Education or her designee to withdraw the Tenure Charges.

4. General Release: Rivera releases the District from all known and unknown charges, complaints, claims, grievances, liabilities, obligations, promises, agreements, controversies, damages, actions, causes of action, suits, rights, demands, costs, losses, debts, penalties, fees, and expenses (including attorneys' fees and costs actually incurred) of any nature whatsoever that Rivera has, ever had, or may have had, against the District, whether or not apparent or yet to be discovered, or which may hereafter develop, for any acts or omissions relating to or arising from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. This includes, but is not limited to, any claims Rivera asserted, or may have asserted, under the following: the National Labor Relations Act; the Civil Rights Act of 1964; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Employment Retirement Income Security Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Age Discrimination & Employment Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Occupational Safety & Health Act; the Family & Medical Leave Act; the Equal Pay Act; the New Jersey Law Against

This release is intended to be broadly construed and applies to any and all claims and potential claims whatsoever, including those of which Rivera is not aware, resulting from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement.

5. Covenant Not to Sue: Rivera warrants he has not commenced any legal proceedings of any type (including but not limited to charges filed with any governmental agency) against the District. Further, Rivera agrees that he will not commence any legal proceedings against the District arising from or relating to anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. Should any such legal proceedings be commenced on Rivera's behalf, Rivera agrees that he will not seek or accept any relief or recovery therefrom. In the event of a violation of this paragraph, Rivera agrees that the District shall be entitled to immediate dismissal of the legal proceedings, and that he shall be responsible for the District's attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection with those legal proceedings. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 4, Rivera agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with this section.

6. Claims Not Released: Notwithstanding Sections 5 and 6 of this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that Rivera is not waiving: (a) claims that were filed or could be filed under any state workers' compensation law; or (b) challenges to the validity of this Agreement under the Older Workers Benefits Protection Act. Rivera represents that he is not aware of any present basis for such claims. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 4, Rivera agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with Section 5, above.

7. Older Workers Benefit Protection Act: The releases in section 5 above include a waiver and release of all claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act ("ADEA") and the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act ("OWBPA"). Re: Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton, Mercer County v. J.B., on behalf of minor child, M.G., Agency Dkt. No. 73-3/16

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with this matter, and based upon the respondent's failure to submit an Answer to the Petition that complies with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of the petitioner.

On March 3, 2016, the Board filed its Petition of Appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1, seeking an order assessing tuition and claiming that minor child, M.G., was not entitled to attend school in the district from April 17, 2015 through June 19, 2015, in accordance with to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition was served upon respondent on March 1, 2016, via certified and regular mail, as was an acknowledgment of filing and notice – dated March 4, 2016 – that an Answer to the Petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because J.B. failed to respond to the initial notice, a second notice was sent on March 28, 2016, via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that – absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition within 10 days – each count in the Petition would be deemed admitted and the matter may be decided on a summary basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). J.B. failed to respond to the second notice. A third and final notice was sent to E.B. – via certified and regular mail – on April 11, 2016, again clearly indicating that, absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition of Appeal within 10 days, each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and this matter may be decided on a summary decision basis.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer • Printed on Recycled Paper and Recyclable

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of J.B. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that M.G. was not entitled to attend school in the district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted. It is hereby ordered that J.B. reimburse the Board $3,422.40 in tuition costs for M.G.'s ineligible attendance in the district from April 17, 2015 through June 19, 2015.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner contended that was recruited and hired in the fall of 2014 by the respondent school district (District) to serve as an assistant varsity basketball coach. Petitioner asserted that he was promised $6,000 for the coaching assignment, which was to be paid at the close of the season. Additionally, petitioner claimed that he was independently and solely responsible for coaching the junior varsity basketball team during the same time period. Petitioner held no teaching certificate at the time he began to coach in Paterson; however, he began to complete the steps needed to obtain a county substitute certificate. Petitioner claims that, through no fault of his own, the certificate was not issued until April 20, 2015 – which was after the end of the bastketball season. The District maintained that petitioner could not be compensated for his work because he lacked the teaching credential or substitute certificate necessary to be employed as a coach, and further contended that petitioner made the decision to stay with the basketball program on a voluntary basis despite his lack of the required certificate.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Commissioner's jurisdiction is defined by statute and limited to controversies and disputes arising under the school laws, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9; the Commissioner has no jurisdiction over contractual claims by non-tenured school employees, as these claims do not require an interpretation of the school laws; petitioner's claims in the instant matter are contractual in nature; the only school law issue even tangentially raised herein is the propriety of the District retaining a coach who was not properly credentialed; fundamentally, however, the dispute here is not whether petitioner should have coached, but rather whether he should have been paid for his services; petitioner's claims are viable, but they fall outside of the Commissioner's jurisdiction; petitioner's claims should be filed in Superior Court. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the petition for lack of jurisdiction.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the petition of appeal must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. OAL DKT. NO. EDU 03163-16

v.
STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, ET ALS.,

---

Trevor Carter-Harris, pro se

Nathaniel M. Davis, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: April 15, 2016 Decided: April 19, 2016

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Trevor Carter-Harris, contends that the respondent, State Operated School District of the City of Paterson (the District), failed to compensate him for services rendered as an athletic coach during the 2014-2015 school year. The District replies that it had no obligation to compensate Carter-Harris because he was not properly credentialed, and he had agreed to perform his duties on a volunteer basis.

Carter-Harris filed his appeal with the Commissioner on January 13, 2016. An answer was filed on behalf of the District on February 1, 2016, and the contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on March 1, 2016. Upon reviewing the pleadings, I corresponded with the parties via letter dated March 8, 2016, and questioned the Commissioner's jurisdiction to review petitioner's claims. I asked the parties to simultaneously reply to my jurisdictional concerns on or before April 8, 2016. Carter-Harris submitted a timely reply. Counsel for the District did not reply, and I closed the record on April 15, 2016.

The controversy presented by the pleadings is as follows:

Carter-Harris contends that he was promised $6,000 to serve as an assistant varsity basketball coach when he was recruited and hired in the fall of 2014. In addition to his duties with the varsity squad, Carter-Harris contends that he was "independently and solely responsible" for coaching the junior varsity basketball team. He was to be paid at the close of the season. Carter-Harris held no teaching certificates, but he began to complete the steps needed to obtain a county substitute certificate. He alleges that, through no fault of his own, the certificate was not obtained until April 20, 2015, after the performance of his duties. As a result, the District refused to compensate him. On August 18, 2015, Carter-Harris corresponded with the Superintendent of Schools to plead his case. He urged that he had performed an excellent job coaching Paterson students.

In an undated reply, Anna Adams, the Director of Health and Physical Education, agrees that Carter-Harris did a fine job coaching Paterson students, but explains that Carter-Harris could not be compensated because he never submitted the requisite substitute's certification. She advises him that his status was reviewed in December 2014, and again in January 2015. Carter-Harris remained ineligible for compensation because he was uncertificated, but Adams noted that he decided to stay with the program on a volunteer basis "pending [his] certification['s] arrival." She advises further that "[u]nfortunately, the said documents did not arrive until after the end of the season. Please understand that all coaching positions must be approved by the Board prior to the start of the season."

Upon receiving my correspondence questioning the Commissioner's jurisdiction, Carter-Harris replied via letter dated March 31, 2016, in which he contended further that he was never provided with or informed about District guidelines for hiring, pointing out that a school district must promulgate such guidelines under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.1. He attached school district policies and guidelines that cover athletic coaches, including volunteer coaches, but urged that these documents were never provided to him. Carter-Harris strenuously reiterated that it was his understanding that he would be paid for his services as a coach during the 2014-2015 school year, notwithstanding the fact that he did not obtain a substitute's certificate until after his services were rendered.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Commissioner's jurisdiction is defined by statute, and is limited to "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Our courts have held that where a controversy does not arise under the school laws, it is outside the jurisdiction of the Commissioner, even if the dispute pertains to school personnel. Bd. of Educ. of East Brunswick Twp. v. Twp. Council of East Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94, 102 (1966). It is well established that contractual claims by non-tenured school employees do not invoke the Commissioner's jurisdiction, as such claims do not require an interpretation of the school laws. Picogna v. Board of Education of Cherry Hill, 249 N.J. Super. 322, 335 (App. Div. 1991).

The Commissioner has consistently declined to exercise jurisdiction over contractual disputes. In Demikoff v. Harrington Park Board of Education, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 16, the claims of a non-tenured school business administrator, whose employment was terminated pursuant to a contractual sixty-day-notice provision, were dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The Commissioner, quoting the Initial Decision, held that "'the gist of the petition does not sufficiently implicate education law or statutory entitlement under education law to warrant or permit exercise of the Commissioner's dispute resolution jurisdiction over what are fundamentally contractual matters more properly cognizable in [a] judicial forum.'" Demikoff, supra, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) at 18; see also Paladino v. Bd. of Educ. of Lacey, 1989 S.L.D. 3063, 3065; Fanego v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City, EDU 10968-97, Initial Decision (April 27, 1999), adopted, Comm'r (June 14, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; Larsen v. Piscataway Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. 1445-81 (State Board, October 6, 1982).

I CONCLUDE that Carter-Harris's claims sound in contract and equity, and that accordingly, the Commissioner of Education is without jurisdiction. Had counsel for the District deigned to reply to my March 8, 2016, letter, I would like to think he would have argued that the Commissioner has jurisdiction; and should use his authority to rule that the District has no obligation to compensate Carter-Harris, because the law did not permit him to work as a coach without an appropriate educational certification. Indeed, N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-5.16(b) provides that "[s]chool districts may employ any holder of either a New Jersey teaching certificate or a substitute credential pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-7 to work in the interscholastic athletic program provided the position has been advertised..." Since it is uncontroverted that Carter-Harris was not certificated during the time he served as an athletic coach, unless the District retained him to volunteer under the immediate supervision of a head or assistant coach, it would have retained his services in contravention of law.[1]

The propriety of retaining an uncertificated coach is the only school law issue even tangentially raised by the pleadings. But fundamentally, this is not a dispute about whether Carter-Harris should have coached; rather, it is a dispute about whether he should be paid for his services. In the end, this case is simply a claim for payment for services rendered, no more, no less. And the District's possible violation of the school laws does not necessarily defeat Carter-Harris's entitlement to compensation for services all agree he ably performed. Carter-Harris provided a valuable service to the District, and with the expectation that he would be paid. As such, the District was arguably unjustly enriched by his services. Moreover, he based this expectation of payment on representations allegedly made by school personnel. As such, Carter-Harris had arguably entered into an implied contract for his services. Carter-Harris's claims thus are viable, but they fall outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction. Carter-

[1] It is noteworthy that Carter-Harris contends that he coached Junior Varsity basketball without supervision.

Harris's claims sound in equitable principles; do not implicate the school laws; and thus are more properly brought in a judicial forum.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Carter-Harris's petition of appeal does not raise a case or controversy arising under the school laws, but rather raises claims that fall outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction and are cognizable in Superior Court.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the petition of appeal be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. On May 2, 2014, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner found I.J. liable for tuition in the amount of Nineteen Thousand Six Hundred Nineteen Dollars and Seventy Six Cents ($19,619.76), representing tuition for a period of ineligible attendance by her son, Q.J., in the Board's school district between September 5, 2012 and December 20, 2013, plus the additional period of January 2, 2014 through March 5, 2014.* The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that I.J. had failed to comply with the decision and it requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the assessments on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. In response to the Board's request, I.J. asserts that because her son received a poor quality education in the Board's school district, the amount of tuition owed should be reduced to $3,000. As the assessment of tuition has been fully and fairly adjudicated, I.J. can no longer challenge the amount of monies owed. I.J. has offered no reasons that have not been fully and fairly adjudicated as to why the judgment against her should not be so docketed.

* I.J. appealed the Commissioner's May 2, 2014 decision to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court. By decision dated January 26, 2016, the Appellate Division affirmed the Commissioner's decision and assessment of tuition.

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, Irene Johnson is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $19,619.76, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

INTRODUCTION

The underlying dispute over this dismissal action arose from an incident occurring on March 25, 2015 between the Tenured Teacher [Mr. Taylor] and a student [identified herein as, "B.L."] who attended the same school. Described in greater detail below the incident is alleged by the "Board" to have been the culminating factor in a series of preceding disciplinary events and/or corrective actions taken with this Teacher. Some disciplinary history and further proceedings are summarized here but presented in greater detail under the Background, Facts, Party Positions, below this section.

2012-2013; it was during this, "... academic year, James Taylor ("Taylor") was employed by the Englewood Board of Education ("Board" or "District") as a tenured teacher of Physical Education/Health. This matter stems from tenure charges ... filed against him for Unbecoming Conduct, Incompetence, Insubordination and Other Just Cause pursuant to the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et seq. [Board Brief]

March 25, 2015; is the undisputed date of the incident which gave rise to the charges brought by the "Board" against the, "Teacher". The incident involved Teacher /Taylor and a School District student, "B.L." [Hereinafter, the, "Student"]. [Board Brief and Teacher Brief]

March 26, 2015; "...Taylor was served with a "Rice Notice" from Interim Superintendent M. Roth." Also that date, "... Interim Superintendent M. Roth authored a letter to Taylor requesting a written statement about what occurred on March 25, 2015." [Board Brief; citing Exhibits 6 and 7]

March 27, 2015; is the date of a, "Memo from Principal Elbert to Interim Superintendent M. Roth describing the security video of the March 25, 2015 incident involving Taylor and B.L. [Board Brief, referencing Exhibit B-1and B-2; the Memo and a video, of the March 25th Incident]

March 30, 2015; is the date of, "...the statement from Taylor to Superintendent of Schools Roth setting forth what occurred during the class period in question, i.e., what occurred during his 4th period class on March 25th [Teacher's Brief, citing Teacher Exhibit #1]

March 30, 2015; "...Taylor authored an email to Interim Superintendent M. Roth setting forth Taylor's written statement as to the March 25, 2015 incident with B.L." [Board Brief]

The Teacher's Brief acknowledges the same date, but with the perspective, "...the Taylor statement is dated... less than one week after the event, when what occurred was still fresh in Taylor's memory". [Teacher Brief]

July 29, 2015; Principal Peter Elbert ("Principal Elbert") executed Sworn Tenure Charges of Unbecoming Conduct, Incompetence and Insubordination against Taylor and a Sworn Statement of Evidence in Support of Charges. [Underlining added, Board Brief]

August 4, 2015; "...Board served the tenure charges and statement of evidence on Taylor." [Board Brief]

August 17, 2015; "...Taylor filed with the Board his opposition to the tenure charges" [Board Brief]

September 21, 2015; "the Board certified the tenure charges to the Commissioner of Education. [Board Brief]

September 17, 2015; "...the Board determined that there was probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the tenure charges, that said charges were sufficient, if credited, to warrant Taylor's dismissal and/or reduction in salary, and voted to certify the charges to the Commissioner of Education and suspend Taylor without pay for 120 days or until final determination of the tenure charges"

[Board Brief]

September 21, 2015; "...the Board certified the tenure charges to the Commissioner of Education"

[Board Brief]

December 3, 2015; pre-Hearing Conference held [Newark, NJ] with parties Counsel, and Arbitrator

December 11, 2015; first Hearing occurs as scheduled. The 'Board' presents its case-in-chief. Thereafter, discovery issues delay proceeding further that day and the matter is continued, generally.

January 18 -22 -28, 2016; 'Stipulation' (1- 8) [Joint Exhibit #2] is drafted by the Parties jointly, ostensibly intending to end discovery and other evidentiary issues. When Arbitrator seeks to clarify certain inconsistencies, several emails result in the Parties disagreeing on the meaning intended.

March 24, 2016; second set of 'Stipulations' are contained in a "MEMO", jointly executed by and between parties' counsel. Pursuant to its terms also admitted to the underlying record of this matter. The parties agree that this document will guide the next, 'Final" Hearing. [Joint Ex. #1]

March 31, 2016; "2nd and Final Hearing" takes place consistent with prior scheduling, 'Stipulations' and, is also conducted by agreement between the parties' Counsel and the Arbitrator, within the terms of Joint Ex. 1; [7 Stipulations].

As a result of two hearings, each side had opportunity to present written exhibits, sworn testimony, cross-examination and rebuttal. The Tenured Teacher was present during both hearings, given opportunity, but did not testify. Each Party agreed to a written closing and the terms of submission.

April 3, 2016; transcribed record of hearing is received.

April 13-19, 2016; by agreed to schedule, the Parties file their closing submissions electronically with the Arbitrator; thereafter mailing same with cited materials, to one another and the Arbitrator. After a Pre-Hearing Conference and two Hearings the record was declared closed upon receipt of the respective closing submissions / briefs. Both sides had been well represented. The representatives acknowledged the stated issue(s) to be properly before the undersigned Neutral.

April 21-22, 2016; an unsolicited and unscheduled 'Reply Brief ' is forwarded to the Arbitrator by one side only. The opposing party responded to that act: " I will not be filing a reply to his initial submission as I do not believe anything other than initial submissions was either agreed upon or in fact contemplated when we spent a great deal of time going over the briefing schedule."

ISSUE; while the Parties did not stipulate to a legal issue per se they tacitly acknowledged the following questions required answering by their joint participation in these proceedings:

"Did the Board have just cause to discharge Tenured Teacher James Taylor?

"Whether there is sufficient, credible evidence to sustain the tenure charges against Taylor and ultimately, to warrant his dismissal" [Board Brief] If not, what shall be the remedy?

May 20, 2016; decision rendered; filed with the NJ COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION.

BACKGROUND, FACTS and PARTY POSITIONS

By way of summary background the Board of Education maintains that, "21. Taylor's employment with the Board is replete with instances of aggressive interactions with children, for which he was disciplined. Neither Taylor nor the Englewood Teacher's Association contested any of the previous disciplinary actions taken. Not only were Taylor's salary increments withheld for the 2011-2012 academic year, but he was required to complete a corrective action plan and attend professional development seminars on how to deal with "difficult students." [Board Brief]

More to the point of its argument and evidence the Board continues by citing the specific charge against the Tenured Teacher and rationale for its ultimate position, "Here, Taylor is charged with unbecoming conduct for his aggressive behavior toward student, B.L., and failure to control that aggression. His pattern of aggression and unprofessional behavior makes him unfit to teach children and warrants his dismissal." [Board Brief]

On the opposing side, the Tenured Teacher's view does not fully address the Board's position as it ignores certain elements in the Teacher's record [i.e., "... instances of aggressive interactions, ...salary increments withheld... he was required to complete a corrective action plan and attend professional development seminars on how to deal with "difficult students"]

Yet it does acknowledge the just cause standard. Moreover, there is evidence presented, i.e., the Tenured Teacher's 'legal position' is cited in its Brief as, "Commissioner decisions..., as well as more recent decisions from tenure arbitrators..."; for the proposition that, "The concept of just cause is found twice in the tenure statutes. The first place is N.J.S.A 18A:6-10, [ Teacher Brief]

The closing Brief for the Teacher proceeds to cite that statute, "This statute reads in pertinent part: No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation
(a) if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state, or . . .
...except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing held pursuant to this subarticle, by the commissioner, or a person appointed by him to act in his behalf, after a written charge or charges..." [Tenured Teacher Brief]

Somewhat painstakingly, the 'Teacher's argument proceeds further with the previously referred to legal position:
"That standard was reiterated with the 2012 amendment to the tenure statute which also provided for the first time that arbitrators, not the Commissioner of Education, determine tenure cases. N.J.S.A 18A:6-17.2(d) reads:

Also, it speaks to the burden of proof:

The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met. [Teacher Brief]

Moreover, it cites from what is ostensibly the first arbitration decision under the [prior cited] Statute: "Arbitrator Joseph Licata's decision in the Buglovsky/Randolph Board of Education case (a copy of which is attached hereto). It was the first arbitration award made under the new tenure statute, which determination has been uniformly followed consistently thereafter. [Teacher Brief]

Finally, it maintains what is perceived to be the essence of its argument, citing from the above referenced decision, "The arbitrator therein held: In the State of New Jersey, tenured teachers shall not be dismissed from his or her position or reduced in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause". N.J.S.A 18A:6-10. The burden of proof in a discharge case rests with the employer to prove, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the factual allegations are true, and that the penalty imposed is just. Elkouri & Elkouri, How Arbitration Works, 5th Ed, pages 930, et seq. "Preponderance" may be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State vs Lewis, 67 NJ 47 (1975). [Teacher Brief]

In summary of the Employer's Position; it was submitted that, "As specified in Count One of the Tenure Charges, between February of 2009 and March 25, 2015, Taylor engaged in a pattern of unprofessional and unbecoming conduct that reflects upon his inability and unfitness to serve as a public school teacher and ultimately warrants his dismissal.
[Emphasis added; Board Brief]

In its Brief, the Board argues the following points:

"The culminating event leading to the instant charge occurred on March 25, 2015, when Taylor escalated a dispute with a student from a verbal disagreement to a physical altercation. Instead of seeking assistance from security, staff or school administration, Taylor initiated physical contact with the student by "bumping" and pushing him with his torso and "mushing" the student in the head with his hand.

In summary of the Teacher's Position it argues that, "...it is respectfully submitted that the tenure charges against Taylor should be dismissed in their entirety. Taylor should be reinstated to his position as a tenured teaching staff member with no penalties and should be given back-pay and all other emoluments of employment for the 120 days suspension which he served. Any reference to this matter should be purged from Taylor's record. [Emphasis added; Teacher Brief]

FINDINGS AND OPINION

A careful review of all evidence presented including all documents, hand written and transcribed notes of testimony occurred. They take into account the positions taken and arguments advanced by both parties. Relevant portions of the statutory sections by which the Parties mutually acknowledged being guided were cited herein by each side and are deemed relevant without further recitation. Those Statues impose a, "just cause" standard for discharge, also granting School Districts the right to issue reasonable rules, orders and regulations, which are not conflicting. There has been no challenge to those statutory standards for discipline.

Analysis; Overview

If the surrounding facts/ interpretation of the March 25, 2015 'incident' were, standing alone, to be the sole determinative factor for whether there was a 'just cause' dismissal here, then Teacher's defense to it might have provided some pause for consideration. Yet, the defense to the incident flies in the face of some additional, very disturbing factors. While the Teacher's denial, generally, is based loosely upon several common theories of typical workplace violence [attempting to define who was the initiator, aggressor and/or instigator of the 'Incident'] such theories do not work [or, are misplaced] here in a school environment.

While persuasive that in a day and age of needing a police presence in our schools, this Arbitrator is aware that Teachers' face much different challenges than in prior generations. That said, this is neither a political forum nor a sociological experiment. Clear Rules are in place for how teachers in this school system should be guided when confronted with troublesome students.

Moreover clear evidence was presented that this Tenured Teacher had been the recipient of retraining and rehabilitative efforts due to his prior misplaced theories about handling difficult situations involving troubled or difficult students.

Yet this Tenured Teacher was caught on a video of the March 25, 2015 'incident' as the clear aggressor, if not, i.e., the initiator and /or instigator, of a physical and /or emotional confrontation with a student. Whether or not the video clearly and absolutely portrays the entirety of both the words and deeds of the confrontation, it is clear enough that the Teacher did not back down nor, take any other action to diffuse the situation from escalating. Instead, the only clear interpretation of the events portrayed in the video demonstrates this Teachers aggressive and unwarranted behavior toward a student.

Moreover as stated above, this Teacher possessed a clear predilection toward similar behavior in past. Corrective actions if not discipline per se were in this Teacher's background, all connected to similar aggressive behavior. Thus, progressive discipline was achieved.

Therefore and notwithstanding the Teacher's defenses [as documented but not testified to] surrounding his actions on March 25, 2015, any attempts to dissect the events of that day are simply deemed to be a futile attempt to avoid the more critical and underlying question about this Teacher's suitability for continued employment within this School District.

Beyond the above the following analysis leads to the decision below.

Burden of Proof

The Board's case-in-chief was brought by Petitioner in a relatively seamless manner. Its case is deemed irrefutable by the evidence presented and clearly supported the burden of proof imposed by the relevant statutes. While processing of the charges appeared somewhat micro-managed, it was controlled with careful handling and afforded proper and appropriate regard for the rights of Tenured Teacher James Taylor.

The Teacher's case did not reply with specificity to the charges, "...unbecoming conduct for...aggressive behavior toward student, B.L., and failure to control that aggression. His pattern of aggression and unprofessional behavior makes him unfit to teach children and warrants his dismissal." [citing, the Board Brief]. Instead of defending his actions within appropriate guidelines that the Teacher was taught in rehabilitative programs ["...he was required to complete a corrective action plan and attend professional development seminars on how to deal with "difficult students"] clear evidence in the 'video' supports, at minimum, unbecoming conduct for aggressive behavior. While the Teacher's evidence attempts to characterize what is viewable as the Teacher's attempt to properly control the Student's [B. L.] aggression, the opposite is plainly true.

The Teachers evidence flies in the face of clear and convincing evidence to the contrary of his account of a verbal dispute between Student [B.L.] and himself. The Teacher's credibility could not be determined from testimony which did not occur, and could only be tested by viewing the video, which clearly showed the Teacher escalating the dispute ["...when Taylor escalated a dispute with a student from a verbal disagreement to a physical altercation. Instead of seeking assistance from security, staff or school administration, Taylor initiated physical contact with the student by "bumping" and pushing him with his torso."; Board Brief]

Even if we were to credit Teacher's version in part, a reasonable inquiry might be whether there was any reason for him not to have sought the assistance of other professionals to alleviate an already inflamed situation. While a difficult question, it was not within the purview of the neutral to answer why this Teacher, already on notice of prior disciplinary concerns would not have sought the external assistance required in this March 25, 2015 incident. Regardless, the burden of proof was met by the Petitioner and not refuted by the Teacher in his defense.

Thus the just cause standard was met in that a 'just cause' dismissal convincingly occurred under the evidence in this case. The overriding principle here is that reasonableness must be found in the enforcement of the behaviors expected of a teacher, i.e., there was a good faith showing that just cause was properly enforced.

Mitigating vs Aggravating Circumstance

The School Board raised the basic premise of the charge against Teacher 'Taylor' ["...using physical force against (the Student)"and, even acknowledged that, "A teacher may use reasonable and necessary physical force against a student under certain circumstances:"

Following this train of thought the Board explored the circumstances under which physical force was permissible. It cited both statute and case law to support this: "*(1) to quell a disturbance, threatening physical injury to others; (2) to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of a pupil; (3) for the purpose of self-defense; and (4) for the protection of persons or property[.]", In re Tenure Hearing of Craft, 2012 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 1600, 7-8 (App. Div. July 5, 2012) (citing N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1)

However, none of the above [underlined] potentially mitigating factors were found in the record below.

Instead, the Board returned to the instant matter by maintaining that aggravating factors were present, "...Taylor has engaged in a sustained pattern of unbecoming and aggressive conduct toward children. See Bock, supra. The culminating event was the March 25, 2015, incident which occurred after many years of Taylor being warned about his inappropriate conduct and resulting consequences. Instead of immediately walking away from the incident or obtaining assistance from the teacher in the adjoining gym or security or staff or administration, Taylor continued to aggressively engage with the student and further escalated the situation to physical violence. (See Exhibits B-1 and B-2). Even if the Arbitrator believes that B.L. was an instigator, Taylor was the teacher and was obligated to walk away, not to further engage and never to place his hands upon a child. There is absolutely no excuse for Taylor to have continued the encounter with B.L. to the point of physical violence. [Board Brief, Pg. 24]

It is highly persuasive that the aggravating factors described were present in this record. "Moreover, there are no mitigating circumstances present to excuse Taylor's conduct. Unlike in Kearney, or even Craft, Taylor's reaction on March 25th was not a reflexive, defensive or unintentional action. Taylor showed a complete lack of judgment and control, acted with pure aggression and failed to use any skills he learned from the seminar[1] or seek assistance from security, staff or administration. As a result, Taylor's conduct completely disrupted the provision of educational services to students, compromised the integrity of the instructional process, detrimentally impacted the educational environment and blatantly disregarded the health, safety and welfare of the students whose safety he was entrusted to protect. Furthermore, Taylor's past record of aggressive conduct with students, including an increment withholding and fitness for duty issues, should be taken into consideration because it establishes the likelihood that his behavior will reoccur. [Board Brief, Pg. 24-25]

Thus on balance here, the Board has pointed to this Tenured Teacher's numerous prior disciplinary events and admonishment short of discipline, along with follow-up opportunities for rehabilitating his behaviors. Pointed reference is made to this rehabilitative history, ostensibly done to help achieve some degree of normality in the Teachers classroom or other similar setting. The aggravating factors considered here were that this Teacher did not back off or away from an emotional or physical confrontation. He is observed on the video touching and/or pushing Student [B.L.], neither retreating nor calling for other professional assistance and thus demonstrating poor judgement.

Thus there were no factors in mitigation to excuse this Teacher's conduct. Moreover, based on the clear evidence discussed above his behavior was deemed to include aggravating factors.

In summation of the above and after careful consideration of all evidence and the arguments in support thereof, it is conclusive that this Tenured Teacher was dismissed from his employment with the Board for just and sufficient cause.

Accordingly, the Decision follows.

DECISION

Just cause required that the elements of fair and progressive discipline had to be applied before the final step of dismissal could be imposed in this matter. This included a full and fair investigation of the charges, including careful consideration of any mitigating and/or aggravating circumstances. The evidence is clear as detailed hereunder that all of the above elements were present in this case and thus the burden of proof was met by Petitioner.

Moreover, no adequate defenses were raised by the Tenured Teacher to either circumvent or refute the rationale for discipline, the charges or the penalty of dismissal.

Taking all manner of evidence and argument by both parties into deliberation, it is the considered opinion of the undersigned neutral that Petitioner Englewood School District had the absolute right to have charged Tenured Teacher James Taylor with the offenses stated hereunder and, to have caused his dismissal thereafter. In view of the above, the penalty of his dismissal is upheld.

No other remedies apply.

Petitioner Trenton Board of Education

The Board alleges that during the 2015-2016 school year, Respondent Charai Bowman failed to fulfill her responsibilities as a senior secretary for the District, committed insubordination, engaged in excessive tardiness, and accepted a substitute teaching assignment in the Trenton Schools while simultaneously accepting payment for her secretarial job. It alleges that Bowman is guilty of conduct unbecoming a tenured employee, neglect of duty, and other just cause sufficient to warrant her dismissal from employment by the District.

Respondent Charai Bowman

Bowman's representative, the Trenton Educational Secretaries Association, argues that the Board has failed to demonstrate that Bowman is guilty of the offenses charged by a preponderance of the evidence. With regard to the allegation that Bowman neglected her filing responsibilities, it alleges that there was a tremendous backlog of filing well before the 2015-2016 school year. It further contends that she was not insubordinate but merely asked questions in response to a directive. It asserts that the Board has significantly "inflated" her tardiness record, and the Board's time and attendance policies were lax. Finally, it denies that Bowman performed a teaching assignment for "Source 4 Teachers" while on duty as a District secretary. It maintains that the tenure charges should be dismissed.

STATEMENT OF CHARGES

On December 17, 2015, the Board brought the following charges against Charai Bowman by an affidavit of Elizabeth DeJesus, Assistant Superintendent of Special Education for the City of Trenton Public Schools:

FINDINGS OF FACT

Elizabeth DeJesus has been with the Trenton Board of Education since 2001; first, as a Special Education supervisor and Special Education teacher. She has been the Assistant Superintendent for Special Education since July, 2015. Her responsibilities include assuring that the students' Individualized Education Plans (IEPs) are implemented with fidelity and are in compliance with the New Jersey Special Education Code.

The Department is responsible for insuring that students with disabilities receive the education and related services that they are entitled to under federal and State laws. The Department must be compliant with State and federal regulations including the maintenance of a complete file for each educationally-classified student. The State audits the District's Department of Special Education every three years. The most recent audit occurred in the Spring of 2016.

DeJesus supervises the Special Education Department, including the Child Study Teams (CSTs), support staff, speech and occupational learning disability specialists, and a social worker. The Department has six senior secretaries whom she also supervises and two administrative secretaries; each senior secretary is assigned to three Child Study teams. The senior secretary's main responsibility is to support the CSTs. They type student IEP's and correspondence; coordinate meetings between the CST members and parents; and prepare for mailing any paperwork that needs to be distributed to parents.

The senior secretaries are also responsible for the maintenance of the individual students' files to include the IEP's, all student evaluations such as psychological, learning, social, and/or neurological evaluations. The secretaries also handle telephone calls from parents and the schools and others. They are also required to shred duplicate copies of documents as needed. Student files which are "aged out" (students 25 or older), remain with the Department and are archived in a warehouse to ensure that prior students' requests for copies of their transcripts, IEPs and evaluations are met.

Senior secretaries play an integral role in ensuring that classified students' files are legally compliant and contain all up-to-date documents. This task encompasses maintaining the files in an organized sequence; specifically, one section of the permanent file should include a log of file access; another section includes the evaluations; another section for correspondence; and another section for the student's IEPs.

Charai Bowman has been employed by the Trenton Board of Education since 2001. During the 2015-2016 school year, Charai Bowman was employed as a tenured senior secretary in the District's Department of Special Education and Services. Her position required her to work Monday through Friday, between the hours of 8:30 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. DeJesus was her immediate supervisor.

Soon after DeJesus was appointed as Assistant Superintendent in July 2015, she learned that there was a significant backlog of duplicate files that required shredding (T-24). Over the summer she also learned that there were approximately 60 file boxes of inactive files that needed to be labeled and logged so that they could be sent to the District's archives.

By September, DeJesus was getting complaints from members of the CST that Bowman could not be counted on to properly file documents or to even schedule parental meetings (T-102-103). It was also brought to DeJesus' attention by the other senior secretaries that the Department's file room had approximately twenty copy paper boxes of paperwork lined up on the floor. As she reviewed the content of the boxes, she learned that they contained various documents which were not in any sequential or alphabetical order that she could understand. DeJesus testified that these records should have been in the student's individual permanent files. These documents included IEPs, evaluations, parental notices, et cetera. DeJesus was informed that the boxes contained Bowman's unfiled student records (T-5; T-26).

Around the very end of September, 2015, DeJesus discovered that Bowman had been creating "dummy files" by placing each new student document in a manila folder and writing the student's name on it, and placing the folders in the boxes. It was brought to DeJesus' attention that this practice had been going on for at least a year.

In addition, DeJesus started to receive complaints from the CSTs that they were afraid to give documents to Bowman because they knew they would not be able to later locate them in the student files. One CST member who went out on medical leave and who had completed ten IEPs, gave her files to DeJesus rather than have Bowman file them because she wanted to be sure they would not be lost (T-28-29). DeJesus testified that the dummy files created a major problem because now the student's permanent files were not in compliance; nor, did they have updated IEPs or evaluations.

DeJesus met with Bowman to inquire about the dummy files. DeJesus asked Bowman about why she had created dummy files instead of filing the documents into the student's records. Bowman responded that she believed it would be a more efficient way of doing the filing. DeJesus noted that in some cases there were multiple dummy files for the same student. Bowman acknowledged that she had been creating dummy files and placed them in boxes instead of filing required materials in students' individual permanent files. Bowman testified that when DeJesus questioned her as to why she had created the dummy file system, she responded,

> I told her that it was easier and smarter to do it that way instead of constantly taking paper and going back to the same, you know, as I found the same name. I told her it was easier.

Bowman testified that she started creating the "dummy files" in 2013 when Alexa Ingram was the Assistant Superintendent. Bowman stated that by the time DeJesus arrived in July of 2015, she had created nine to ten boxes with dummy files. According to Bowman's testimony, DeJesus initially told her the method made sense. However, Bowman acknowledged that DeJesus put her on notice that she would have get her dummy files incorporated into the permanent files, and Bowman agreed. But Bowman testified that DeJesus did not give her a completion deadline at that time. I infer that this was the first conversation the two had about the files. (T-128 through 133) DeJesus told Bowman that she wanted the documents removed from the dummy files and placed in the students' permanent files and that the boxes should be cleared from the floor.

DeJesus stated that she was a bit surprised that Bowman really did not know how to file the files. She provided Bowman with a tutorial that had a sample file with all of the different pockets and the identification of what belonged in each pocket. DeJesus then demonstrated the filing to Bowman. DeJesus also asked the Special Education Coordinator to come over and assist with the tutorial (T-30). Bowman responded, "This is really, really hard." (T-31)

By late October, DeJesus had discovered that of lot of Bowman's boxes of filing were no longer on the file room floor. She learned from the senior secretaries that Bowman had placed handfuls of her dummy files in random order throughout the file cabinets -- but not in the students' permanent files.

DeJesus met with Bowman and TESA representative Elizabeth Gill, in the file room on October 30, 2015. They discussed the importance of filing properly and timely. DeJesus wanted to make it clear to Bowman that this was a very serious matter which required immediate action; and she also wanted to discuss Bowman's lateness when arriving to work. (T-34)

DeJesus challenged Bowman as to why she moved the dummy files into random spaces in the file cabinets. Bowman replied that she was not trying to hide the files, but had moved the dummy files to the cabinet so that she could file them correctly at a later time; in the meantime, Bowman reasoned that she was following DeJesus' directive to get them off of the floor. Bowman also acknowledged that she thought this would give her more time to complete the job. DeJesus stated to Bowman that her process was not best practice and she should cease immediately. She gave Bowman a student file checklist and one week to correct the problem by removing the dummy files from the file cabinets (T-36).

DeJesus' followed this meeting with a letter to Bowman, dated November 1, 2015 (P-17). The letter stated that DeJesus and Bowman had agreed upon the following four-prong approach during the October 30, 2015 meeting:

- All dummy files will be removed by the end of next week from the student files.
- All dummy files will be reviewed and pertinent information will be inserted into the student's permanent files as per the Student File Check List. This task should be completed by the end of the month. (underlining in original)
- Duplicate student information will be set aside for shredding.
- I [DeJesus] will review all materials before shredding can commence.

DeJesus concluded her letter to Bowman by stating that it was Bowman's professional responsibility to adhere to her contract and the duties of her position; moreover, Bowman also had a legal responsibility to maintain the integrity of their files and to adhere to the District's policies and regulations (P-17).

By the first week in December, DeJesus realized that while Bowman had done some of the filing, she had not completed the elimination of the dummy files and the filing of documents into students' permanent files (T-39). DeJesus was still receiving complaints from the CSTs that they were still unable to locate documents in students' files. DeJesus explained that despite the agreed-upon action plan, multiple meetings, and memorandum, Bowman failed to rectify the "dummy" file issue. Instead, after Bowman left the District in December, a substitute secretary and the other senior secretaries "pitched in" to ensure all of Bowman's files were in order and in compliance.

Bowman testified that in the October 30 meeting, she told DeJesus it was a lot of work to get done by the end of November because she would have to go through all the records one by one. DeJesus originally told her to dedicate one hour after lunch every day to clean up the filing backlog; however, when Bowman told her it was not enough time, DeJesus extended the daily time period Bowman was to dedicate to the filing. Bowman stated that she continued to work on the records. (T-26-27)

On December 7, 2015, DeJesus held another meeting with Bowman along with her Union representatives Ann Sciarrotta, Pat Vogt and Elizabeth Gill. DeJesus asked Bowman for an explanation of why the filing project had not been completed by the agreed-upon deadline. Bowman responded,

> I told her, I said, well, Miss Liz, I was out sick. I had documents, I was sick, so -- I was out sick. And I said, I wasn't here. So I wasn't at work every day (T-145).

Bowman also told DeJesus that the task was virtually impossible to complete in that time frame (T-146).

On December 10, 2015, DeJesus sent a memo (P-18) to Bowman concerning that meeting. DeJesus's memo recited that they had all previously agreed that all dummy student files would be filed in the appropriate student records in the file room by the end of November. She indicated that a substantial number of dummy files still had not been filed; and as a result, it continued to be difficult to locate student files. DeJesus stressed that it was imperative that all student files are in compliance with the New Jersey Administrative Code for Special Education. (P-18) Bowman wrote a rebuttal letter to DeJesus on December 15, 2015 but did not address the filing issue.

Ann Sciarrotta was employed by the Trenton Board of Education since July, 1967 until March 1, 2013. Since 2000, Sciarrotta has been the Vice-President of TESA. According to Sciarrotta, at one time there were previously 14 CSTs and 14 secretaries, or one secretary per Child Study Team.

Sciarrotta stated that the filing situation in Special Services goes back several years. Sciarrotta testified that in 2010, she also visited the file room on several occasions and saw numerous boxes all over the room with papers just thrown in the boxes (T-9).

In 2012, the District abolished all of the CST senior secretaries' positions, which resulted in a complete disarray of the CST files; the CST's were left to prepare, type and file all of their own paperwork with no secretarial support. The CSTs could not perform the work they were hired to do and keep up with the administrative duties previously performed by the secretaries.

Sciarrotta testified that in 2012, TESA filed an unfair labor practice with PERC regarding the secretaries doing the file work left over from the abolishment of the senior secretaries. A settlement at PERC was reached on January 9, 2013, in which seven of the CST secretary positions would be restored to service the Child Study Teams;[1] and any of the filing which pre-dated their return would be performed on an overtime basis. Alexa Ingram, who was the Assistant Superintendent at that time, tried to arrange for the overtime but it never occurred.

The District decided to move all of the files from all of the CSTs offices and place them in the Special Education records room, on the second floor of its headquarters building. Prior to school year 2013-14, there were two secretaries assigned to the Special Education records room. However, these two positions were abolished on July 1, 2013. Thereafter the CST filing work was transferred to the CST senior secretaries. In 2014, the file work showed up on the senior secretaries' desks. During the 2014-2015 school year, upon her visit to the file room, Sciarrotta stated that there were two secretaries surrounded by numerous boxes all around the entire room (T-10).

[1] At that time, the CST's were scattered through the school district. Sometime thereafter, Special Services was moved to the Board headquarters on South Clinton Avenue.

Sciarrotta explained that all the senior secretaries had a responsibility with the boxes; to go through the boxes, see what was in them, and place the contents into the permanent files.

Sciarrotta visited the file room around September of 2015 and noticed that many of the boxes had been removed from the file room. She stated there was another instance where she had visited the other side of the building and in an outer office along the front side of the building there were probably 80 to 100 boxes stacked three to four feet high, with several rows down on that side which took up at least a quarter of that side of the building. I infer that this was the 60 boxes of inactive files that were ready to be sent to the archives.

Two to three times a week in 2015, Sciarrotta testified that she visited the Special Education records room and personally reviewed the contents of maybe four to five boxes that were near to where she was standing; knowing that some of the documents were confidential student records. She stated that the files were just sitting there open with no lids and she proceeded to take pictures of the boxes. (T-19) No photographs were introduced into evidence.

The "Insubordination Incident"

DeJesus sent Bowman a memo (P-18) on December 10, 2015, re: "Misfiling of Student Files, Coding of Absences and Documentation of a November 19th Incident". DeJesus informed Bowman that she had discussed with her an incident that occurred on November 19, 2015, at approximately 10:00 AM in her office. According to DeJesus, she approached Bowman's desk area to inform her that she had her permission to shred a box of duplicate documents which Bowman had placed in her office. Bowman proceeded to walk to DeJesus' office where DeJesus informed Bowman that there was another box of materials that required shredding in the file room. Bowman responded by telling DeJesus that she would only shred the box in DeJesus' office and that she should ask the other secretaries to shred the other box. DeJesus informed Bowman that she was giving Bowman a directive and her refusal would constitute "insubordination". At that point of the conversation DeJesus was standing by the door; Bowman proceeded to grab the box in her office and told DeJesus, "Get out of the way." DeJesus informed Bowman that she was being extremely disrespectful and unprofessional. Bowman, in turn, informed DeJesus that she was not being disrespectful, and then she walked towards DeJesus and squeezed by her, which made DeJesus feel very uncomfortable. DeJesus requested that Bowman's behavior stop immediately. (P-18)

Bowman responded to the Assistant Superintendent's memo on December 15, 2015 (R-5). The Respondent explained that DeJesus told her to shred the other box in the file room too; in which Bowman responded, "Whose box is that!" DeJesus responded that "It did not matter . . . just shred it". Bowman stated that she would shred DeJesus' box of documents. DeJesus replied, "No! You will not! . . . You shred the other box too." And then you can grieve it later." Bowman stated that she got up from her desk to retrieve the box from her office and DeJesus began to follow her. As they were in DeJesus' office she started pointing and shaking her finger towards Bowman stating, "You will shred the other box, it doesn't make any difference whose box it is." Bowman explained that DeJesus then mentioned that, "It's not fair to give any other secretary, another secretary['s] work load." Bowman told DeJesus to not talk to her in that manner, she wasn't a child. Bowman picked up the box and DeJesus moved towards the door and stood there. Bowman said, "Excuse me! Excuse me!" DeJesus did not move according to Bowman, so she had to squeeze pass her. Bowman denied that she told DeJesus to get out of her way; and that she (DeJesus) was the one who was not acting in a professional manner. (R-5)

Bowman testified that she refused DeJesus' directive to take the second box of files; and instead took one of her boxes to shred and continued to work until the end of the day or 4:30 p.m. (T-39-40; T-152). Bowman testified that she did not like the way DeJesus spoke to her on November 19, and agreed that she could have shredded the box, but chose to decline the supervisor's directive. (T-153-154)

Substitute Teaching Assignments

Lissa Johnson, Assistant Superintendent for the Office of Talent Acquisition and Development, had been employed by the District since July, 2015. Her office has the responsibility for all of the recruitment and firing of employees within the District; and all benefits, pensions and retirements. Moreover, her office is responsible for talent development under Achieve NJ and all the evaluations for employees, as well as teachers and administrators. (T-13)

Johnson testified that the Department has a District Policy #4230, Outside Activities for its support staff, which states in relative part (P-21),

> The Board of Education recognizes that support staff members enjoy a private life outside their job responsibilities in the school district. The Board believes that school employees exert a continuing influence away from the school district. Accordingly, the Board reserves the right to determine if activities outside the support staff member's job responsibilities interfere with their performance and the discharge of the support staff member's responsibilities to this district.
> All support staff members are advised to be governed in their activities outside the school by the following guidelines:

> 1. Support staff members shall not devote time during their work day to an outside private enterprise, business, or business organization. They shall not solicit or accept customers for a private enterprise, business, and/or business organization on school grounds during their work day without the express permission of the Superintendent; (emphasis mine)

The accompanying Board Regulation provides that:

> A full time employee may engage in outside employment only when such employment does not: constitute a conflict of interest, occur at a time when the employee has assigned district duties, or diminish the employee's efficiency in performing assigned district duties. A full-time employee who engages in employment outside the district shall report that employment to the Superintendent. (emphasis mine)

Johnson testified that she first learned that Bowman had accepted a substitute teaching position with Source 4 Teachers[2] when DeJesus came to discuss it with her. (T-17) Bowman testified that she did not notify the Superintendent when she was officially hired in 2014 for Source 4 Teachers (T-63).

Johnson testified that there is a process by which a teacher would advise of his or her absence, thus, triggering the need for a substitute teacher. Substitutes on the Source 4 Teachers list can access the system and select the absence that they would like to cover for the following day or in the future. (T-16)

Johnson testified that she had the opportunity to see Source 4 Teachers' documents reflecting that Bowman had accepted substitute teaching assignments from them, which included assignments in the Trenton school district. Exhibits P-1, P-2 and P-3, Substitute History by Date and Available Subs, report that Bowman accepted and filled two substitute teaching positions in the 2015-2016 school year as follows:

[2] Source 4 Teachers is a private company that the District has contracted with for the current year to provide substitute teacher services.

- 9/17/2015 - Bilingual Science Teacher, Trenton - Dunn Middle School (11:30 AM - 2:55 PM)

- 10/19/2016 - Elementary Teacher Gr-3, Trenton - Martin L. King Elementary (8:30 AM - 3:15 PM

Bowman testified that she received a call about 6:30 a.m. or so from Source 4 Teachers on the morning of September 17, 2015. She was asked (via automated system) if she would like to substitute as a bilingual-science teacher at the Trenton's Dunn Middle School on September 17; and, she thought she would take a vacation day in order to substitute for that day. She testified that she accepted the substitute position but then thought better of her decision since she did not know how to speak Spanish. She decided to not accept the position and disconnected the call. (T-10)

Bowman stated that she reported to work on September 17, 2015 at 8:30 and signed in her arrival time and initialed. She basically started the process of shredding, reviewing overtime work boxes, answering the phone, taking messages, and Xeroxing. Bowman stated that she left work at 4:30 p.m. that day. (T-14)

However, Source 4 Teachers issued Bowman a check for the substitute teaching assignment on September 17. Bowman cashed the check. Johnson stated that Bowman was paid by both Source 4 Teachers and by the Trenton School District for that day. Bowman accepted the position; however, she never reported to the Dunn Middle School that day. Johnson testified that upon receiving an invoice from Source 4 Teachers, that included a teaching assignment for Bowman on September 17, Johnson checked with Source 4 Teachers. She was advised that Bowman had not signed in to the Dunn Middle School as having taught there that day. Upon further review, Source 4 Teachers credited the District's account for any payment made to Bowman that day. (T-30)

In January, 2016 -- after tenure charges were filed against Bowman -- Bowman contacted Brandon Murphy from Source 4 Teachers and asked him where they got the information that she worked September 17, 2015. Brandon pulled the Dunn Middle School sign-in card and scanned it to see if Bowman did or did not sign in for that day. Murphy saw that she did not work the day in question and told Bowman that he would contact his supervisor to have her pay straightened out.

Bowman testified that she contacted Source 4 Teachers again and informed them that the correction was never made to her pay; she told them that they were to have deducted one-half a day's pay from her (T-32). Respondent's exhibit R-6, is an email from Elisheva Lane from Source 4 Teachers stating that she had made the change to finance but apparently they had not credited it yet.

On October 19, 2015, Bowman took a vacation day and she substituted at the Martin L. King Middle School through Source 4 Teachers. On that morning, she called Donna Covell Brenna, the administrative secretary that took their attendance, to request a vacation day and Brenna acknowledged her with, "OK, I'll put you down as a vacation day." She stated that she was not aware that she had to obtain approval from DeJesus to use a vacation day.

Lissa Johnson testified that she received weekly invoices from Source 4 Teachers for all the absences for which they provided substitutes; she validated the invoices prior to approving the bills and the invoices for payment. Bowman was paid by the Trenton Board of Educations for the substitute teaching assignment on October 19, 2015, along with her senior secretary pay for that day. Bowman had recorded a vacation day on the office sign-in sheet for that day. Johnson believed that the incident was a conflict of interest because the Board was paying Bowman twice for the same day, yet her daily secretary job was not fulfilled that day. (T-22)

Absences/Tardiness/Leaving Early

The District's Regulation 4211 (R-2), Support Staff Attendance, provides as follows:

A. Reporting Intended Absence

1. A support staff member who anticipates absence from work will call the immediate supervisor two hours prior to commencement of work shift, whenever possible.

2. The following information will be given by the caller:

   a. The employee's name, job title, assigned school, and shift (if applicable);

   b. The day and date of the intended absence; and

   c. The reason for the absence.

D. Staff Attendance Patterns-Tardiness

It is the expectation and goal of the Trenton Board of Education that all Trenton School District employees shall report on time to their assigned duties whenever scheduled to work in order to effectuate the continuous delivery of the education services (for which the Board has contracted). A prerequisite for the efficient performance of a staff person's assigned duties is regular and punctual attendance.

Therefore, any employee who is tardy, in reporting to work according to the schedule of the school or department to which he/she is assigned without approval, two times in a school year shall have a conference with his/her immediate supervisor regarding such tardiness. On the third time an employee is tardy in a school year without approval, he/she shall receive from his/her immediate supervisor a written communication indicating (setting forth) the dates of the tardies (tardiness) and a notification that continuation of such tardiness shall result in disciplinary action. This written communication shall be copied to the teaching staff's personnel file.

Once an employee is tardy the fourth time without approval the employee's salary shall be deducted at fifteen minute intervals for every fifteen minutes or less that an employee is tardy. For example, an employee shall be docked fifteen minutes for being late between one through fifteen minutes, docked thirty minutes for being late between sixteen through thirty minutes, docked forty-five minutes for being late between thirty-one through forty-five minutes, docked one hour for being late between forty-six minutes through one hour, etc. Similar deductions shall be made for each additional incidents of tardiness, in any given year. Approval of tardiness must be in writing and state the reason. All tardiness must be recorded. . .

E. Record of Attendance

1. A record shall be kept of the attendance of each support staff member, including administrators. Any absence, for part or all of a school day, shall be recorded along with the reason for the absence. An employee's attendance record shall be part of the employee's personnel file.

2. The record will distinguish paid leave, such as sick leave, unpaid leave, such as excessive sick or personal leave. The employee's attendance record will include notation of verification of an absence where such verification is required by Policy No. 4432.

The Trenton Board of Education's District Policy for support staff #4211 (P-19) on Attendance, provides as follows:

Employee attendance is an important factor in the successful operation of any school district and in the maintenance of the continuity of the educational program. The Board of Education is vitally and continually interested in the attendance of each employee and considers satisfactory attendance an important criterion of satisfactory job performance.

The privilege of district employment imposes on each employee the responsibility to be on the job on time every scheduled working day. This responsibility requires that the employee maintain good health standards, take intelligent precautions against accidents both on and off the job, and manage personal affairs in order to satisfy district attendance requirements.

The Board is required by the high cost of absences a disrupted work schedules to give continuing attention to the maintenance of regular attendance by employees.

Chronic absenteeism and tardiness are subject to discipline and may be cause for dismissal.

The Superintendent shall develop regulations to implement this policy.

District Policy #4215, Code of Ethics for support staff, states in relative part, that employees will,

Report to work as scheduled;

Complete thoroughly their assigned tasks;

Commit themselves to providing the best possible services for pupils;

Keep the trust under which confidential information may be given;

Adhere to all the conditions of a contract;

Protect and care for district property.

The current expired agreement between the Trenton Board of Education and Trenton Educational Secretaries Association (TESA), covering the period July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2012, Articles 13 and 14, provide in relative part, as follows:

Article 14
Vacations and Holidays

A. Vacations may be taken during any time of the year at times approved by the immediate supervisor.

Bowman had previously been advised that she was required to submit requests for vacation leave in advance. On August 28, 2008, Bowman was advised in writing by the then Director of Special Services, that she had been failing to seek and obtain advanced approval for vacation leave. This apparently continued to be the policy of the department as DeJesus' December 10 memo to Bowman recited that "Vacation days require prior approval and should not be used at will".

On November 1, 2015, DeJesus sent Bowman a letter, re: "Excessive Lateness, Attendance Falsification and Misfiling of Student Files" (P-18). This memo recited the substance of the October 30 meeting with Bowman and her Union representative Elizabeth Gill. During the meeting they discussed the importance of coming to work on time and taking the allotted time for lunch as per the contract. DeJesus informed Bowman that she had been averaging 2-3 late arrivals per week, along with taking extended lunch breaks.

During the meeting DeJesus pointed out that between the period of July 8, 2015 through October 29, 2015 alone, there have been at least eight recorded occasions on which Bowman reported to work late: July 8, 2015; July 10, 2015; July 24, 2015; August 7, 2015; September 1, 2015; September 28, 2015; October 9, 2015; and October 23, 2015. DeJesus informed Bowman of her work schedule, lunch schedule and her two breaks. Moreover, DeJesus explained to Bowman that the meeting served as her "final" verbal warning and hereafter, she would be docked for arriving to work late/or taking extended lunch breaks. (P-17)

Furthermore, DeJesus informed Bowman that on October 29, 2015, Bowman left work at 11:30 AM and she did not sign-out, nor, did she inform Brenna, administrative secretary, that she was taking a half-day. She was informed that she would be docked for that time immediately.

DeJesus emphasized to Bowman that District Policy #4211 states that chronic absenteeism and tardiness are subject to discipline and may be cause for dismissal. The regulation for Policy 4211 states that you must report all absences. Bowman's failure to adhere to this policy would lead to the following progressive discipline:

> Daily Salary (Annual Salary/260-261)/8 hours (Daily Work Hours) X (Amount 15 Minute Interval Tardy) = Deduction.

Bowman testified that the District had asked her questions about her arriving late for work or not late for work. Upon her review of her daily attendance records she testified that she was not late on July 8, 2015 and did not know who wrote "late" next to her name on the sign-in sheet. On July 24, 2015, Bowman testified that DeJesus assigned ESY overtime for that day at the P.J. Hill School; her sign-in sheet was annotated with her arrival at 9:00 a.m. Bowman stated that she was not aware of who signed in for her since her start time for that day was 9:00 a.m. at the P.J. Hill School. (T-46-47)

Bowman stated that she reported to work at 8:30 a.m. for her job as a senior secretary on September 17, 2015. She testified that she left work at 4:30 p.m. that day and could not think of any idea why DeJesus could not find her. She explained that she could have been in the basement, the file room, or at the Xerox machine on the second floor. (T-14-15)

Bowman testified that on days where she knew she would be late to work she would always contact Brenna to let her know. She testified that contacting her was the office procedure when you were going to be late. (T-49)

On October 9, 2015, the sign-in sheet depicted Bowman arrived late at 9:30 AM. Bowman testified that she was not late that day; she stated that she initialed her departing time for that day on the sheet, however, the sign-in time of 9:30 was not her writing. (T-52) On October 23, 2015, Bowman's attendance record indicated that she was late and arrived at 9:30 a.m. and departed at 2:00 p.m. due to back issues. She denied being late for that day and testified that she did not depart work at 2:00 p.m. as reflected on the sign-in sheet, but closer to 3:00 p.m. (T-53; T-93) On October 29, 2015, Bowman signed in at 8:30 a.m. and signed-out at 11:45 a.m. with a question mark (?); however, she denied leaving early that day. (T-55)

Bowman stated in her November 3 rebuttal letter that on October 29, 2015, she did leave the building mid-day to locate Ms. Grady regarding a coaching position. Bowman explained that she had a deadline and had to reach Grady; she attempted to call her, but to no prevail; she left the Board of Education building to find Grady and returned around 12:45 p.m. She then took a lunch hour from 1:00 p.m. to 2:00 p.m.; after returning she proceeded back into the basement to shred documents. She admitted that she had failed to sign out at the end of the day. Bowman told DeJesus that if tardiness was to be addressed she felt that everyone should be monitored as her co-workers were also frequently late. (R-41; P-17)

Bowman testified that she was at work on October 30, 2015 when around 11:00 a.m., her co-workers were organizing a lunch with a Halloween theme. Bowman stated that the party raised some concern with her because of her religious beliefs that Halloween was a pagan holiday. Bowman stated that the majority of the Special Services Department employees participated in the luncheon; which lasted more than an hour and a half. (R-4; P-17)

Bowman testified that she decided to see DeJesus to tell her that she did not believe in Halloween and she would leave the office. However, Bowman was unable to locate DeJesus and left the office around 12:30 p.m. She did not return until approximately 2:10 p.m. Bowman acknowledged that she did not get permission to take an extended lunch break on that day and that she was paid for an entire day (T-116). Upon Bowman's return, she went to the basement to shred documents and to the Xerox to do the report cards and finished work for the day. (T-57-58)

Stephanie Greg, a senior secretary and co-worker of Bowman in 2015, was called to testify on Bowman's behalf. She testified that every month there would be a birthday celebration at work. Greg testified that there is never a party theme for the birthdays; she could not recollect if there were any form of decorations at the October 30 birthday party. (T-11) Bowman testified that she did not participate in these monthly celebrations (T-111). She stated that she really did not socialize with the vast majority of the co-workers in the Trenton Board of Education; she stated that she was more of a loner (sic).

Trenton Public Schools Daily Attendance Records, Petitioner's exhibits P-6 through P-16, reflect the daily sign-in sheets for Bowman for numerous days in 2015. Bowman's co-worker's names were redacted on the exhibits; however, the times for her co-worker's arrival and departure were not redacted but were blank on some days throughout the exhibits. Bowman addressed her attendance and reporting absences as [being in compliance] with Article 13, Leave Policies and Article 14, Vacation and Holidays.[3]

Past Disciplinary/Evaluative Records

Several of Bowman's past disciplinary and evaluative records[4] (P-22 through P35) are depicted below in summary detail:

- April 15, 2014, 2013-14 Annual Appraisal of Classified Employees: Overall "Average" rating; "Below Average" rating for ability to work

[3] No written District or Board policy on requesting approval of vacation days in advance was submitted. However, it is evident from the record that as far back as 2008, Bowman was put notice that this was the Department's policy.

[4] I admitted Bowman's past disciplinary and evaluative records over the objections of Bowman's counsel. These documents were admitted because they are relevant to the issue of whether Bowman had previously been warned about inappropriate conduct which was identified in the tenure charges herein.

harmoniously with others; and attendance /infrequently tardy.

- February 26, 2009, Official Reprimand for errors and lateness within legal timeframes for IEPs.
- December 18, 2008, Written Warning from Director of Special Education/Support Services for lateness; recommendation of withholding of 2009-10 salary increment.
- October 8, 2008, Annual Evaluation was "Below Average"
- September 5, 2008, Continued pattern of lateness and a refusal or unwillingness to conform to professional standards; Director of Special Education/Support Services to coordinate with Assistant Superintendent for Human Resources for further action.
- April 29, 2008, Annual Appraisal of Classified Employees, Recommendation for Re-employment: With Reservation due to repeated issues of unexcused lateness and early departures; lack of problem-solving abilities.
- August 28, 2008, Directed by Director of Special Education/Support Services to: 1. Arrive to work on time; 2. Submit and receive authorization, in advance, for vacation days; 3. Report to an administrator [for] leaving work before your contractual time.
- July 1, 2004, Entire increment withheld for 2004-05 school year.
- June 7, 2004, Assistant Director of Human Resources memo: Attendance needs much improvement.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 provides that a tenured employee may only be removed from his or her position because of inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. The parties acknowledge that the Board bears the burden of demonstrating unbecoming conduct by a preponderance of the competent, credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962).

Even where a board of education demonstrates unbecoming conduct, the next question is whether the conduct warrants the employee's removal. The determination of the penalty includes consideration of several factors: [1] the nature and gravity of the offense(s); [2] the impact on the staff member's career; [3] any extenuating or aggravating circumstances; [4] and the harm or injurious effect the conduct may have had on the proper administration of the school system. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 401, 422 (App. Div. 1967).

Sometimes the conduct in a single incident is so egregious, it standing alone would warrant removal. More often, the unbecoming conduct charge is based upon a series of infractions or pattern of conduct. See Redcay v. State Board of Education, 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd. o.b. 1341 N.J.L. 326 (1944). In such cases, one would expect to find that the principles of progressive discipline have been applied especially if the present conduct is similar in nature to that for which the employee has previously been disciplined. Further, in analyzing whether the employee's conduct, assuming the board has met its burden of proof, is sufficient to justify termination, one would consider whether the employer had a clear work rule or policy, whether the rules were known to the employee, whether the employee had previously been warned that his/her conduct was unacceptable to the employer, and whether the employees was warned that repeated infractions might result to more serious discipline.

Failure to File Student Records

Bowman's responsibilities included filing student records into the student's individual permanent file folders. Such records included IEP's, evaluations, reports and correspondence. Senior secretaries in the Special Services office each maintain a file basket on their desks. Documents are put into the basket for filing by the members of the CSTs to which the senior secretary is assigned.

The record shows that there was a backlog of filing in the file room starting in 2013. It appears from the record that this backlog consisted mainly of inactive records waiting to be archived at the District's warehouse. This was initially caused by District's decision to eliminate all 14 secretaries assigned to the Child Study Teams, leaving the teams to do their own filing. Although 7 of the CST secretaries were rehired, it appears from the record that two file clerks assigned to the Special Services file room were relieved of that assignment. Former Assistant Superintendent Ingram agreed to clear the backlog through the use of overtime, but that plan never materialized. She then assigned each of the senior secretaries a set of the boxes of the backlogged filing and directed them to complete the task.

By the time DeJesus was appointed in July 2015, Bowman's filing was accumulating in 10-20 copy paper boxes lining the floor of the file room. When DeJesus asked the senior secretaries about the boxes, she was told that the boxes contained Bowman's unfiled documents. Bowman acknowledged that she had started her "dummy file" system two years before this. Whether the collection of Bowman's 10-20 boxes in the file room consisted of documents she was given for filing during that period or whether it also included the backlogged filing, cannot be determined from the record. The record also does not indicate whether the other senior secretaries had their filing up to date or not. However, I infer that Bowman was the only senior secretary to have a significant backlog of filing -- if this were not the case, the other senior secretaries would not have been so willing to complain to DeJesus about Bowman's failure to file. In addition, Bowman did not claim that she received disparate treatment over the directive to clean up her filing backlog.

In any event, DeJesus met with Bowman for the first time in either September or early October about her filing and her use of the dummy files. DeJesus emphasized the importance of maintaining the records in the students' permanent files and she went through a tutorial on the proper protocol for document organization in the file. Bowman understood DeJesus' directions as a result of this meeting to include the need to eliminate the dummy files and get them off the floor. While TESA characterizes this directive as evidence that DeJesus wanted to put a "clean face" on the problem by eliminating the boxes, I do not ascribe that theory to the directive. Rather, it is evident to me that DeJesus did not merely want to make the boxes of unfiled documents disappear, but rather, she wanted the documents to be filed in the students' permanent records.

After this initial meeting with DeJesus, Bowman began to "make the boxes of files disappear" by inserting handfuls of dummy files randomly throughout the file cabinets. Apparently DeJesus believed that by doing so Bowman was trying to hide the problem. When she challenged Bowman as to why she had placed the dummy files in the cabinets, Bowman denied attempting to hide the files, but suggested that she was merely placing the files inside the cabinets to be corrected filed at a later time. She also reasoned that this would give her more time to complete the task.

By the end of October, when it did not seem to DeJesus that Bowman had made much progress on accomplishing the task, she met with her again, along with Bowman's union representative. An action plan was developed at that time, which Bowman did not contest.[5] If, as Bowman later claimed,

[5]At the arbitration hearing, Bowman was careful to distinguish her reply to DeJesus' action plan. Bowman testified that she responded to DeJesus's plan by it was an impossibility to complete the task within the timeframe set up by DeJesus, she could have taken alternative action. She should have either so advised DeJesus at the October 30 meeting that the time period being set was unrealistic; or at the least, she could have written a rebuttal to the action plan; or she could have notified DeJesus at any time in October that the plan was proving unworkable and requested more time. She chose none of these options.

By early December, DeJesus met again with Bowman and her Union representatives about Bowman's filing backlog. By this point, some of the filing had been done, but there was still a backlog. According to DeJesus, CST's were still concerned that the documents of students assigned to them were getting lost. Bowman's "excuses" for her failure to complete the task included that she was out sick and that the task was "really hard."

The problem here is not limited to Bowman's last six weeks of her employment before she was put out on tenure charges; the real focus is her failure to file her CST's documents over the last two years. While she thought that creating the dummy files would simplify the filing process, the reality is that she created stating that she "would try" to complete the task by the end of the month, she denied that she told her she agreed to perform as per the plan. If Bowman believed that it was not possible to complete the action plan, she and her union representative should have promptly so advised DeJesus.

dummy files instead of actually filing anything in the students' permanent files.

The maintenance of the records is critical, especially because these are records of students with learning disabilities or other handicaps. The mission of the Department of Special Education and Services is to insure that these students get the best education that can be achieved and that their disabilities are adequately addressed. The mission is not just the Board's policy -- it's a statutory mission. Bowman's failure to properly maintain the files put those classified students with incomplete files at risk of being disenfranchised from getting the proper educational protocols. Without a complete file, the child study team cannot fulfill its responsibilities to the students to get them the most appropriate help for their needs. It also put the District at risk of being found in violation of the State Board of Education's requirements for file compliance.

Bowman's excuses for having failed to complete the filing are an indication of the real problem here. The real problem is that this is an employee who is way behind on her work, and yet is chronically coming in late, taking long lunch hours, leaving work early, and taking time off to attend to personal business and accept substitute teaching assignments. I find that Bowman is guilty of count #9 of the tenure charges and engaged in conduct unbecoming an employee and neglect of duty by her failure to perform her assigned duties.

Insubordination Incident

It is undisputed that on November 19, 2015, Bowman committed insubordination towards Assistant Superintendent DeJesus. DeJesus gave Bowman a directive to shred two boxes of documents. Bowman acknowledged that the first box was "her documents" but questioned why she should "have to" shred the other box, which she believed was someone else's job. Bowman directly refused to shred the second box even after DeJesus made it clear that she was giving her an order and she expected Bowman to comply. This latter statement put Bowman on notice that her continued refusal to shred the second box would be viewed as a direct act of insubordination. The message was clear: comply with the directive (and grieve if you believe it to be "unfair"), or face discipline. Still, Bowman did not shred the second box of documents.

Insubordination is a serious offense in the workplace. It undermines the supervisor's authority and causes a loss of respect for the supervisor in the workplace. If left unchecked, this may lead to workplace anarchy.

By this act of insubordination, Bowman violated Board's Code of Ethics policy for support staff, which provides in relevant part, that employees must:

Complete thoroughly their assigned tasks;

> Commit themselves to providing the best possible services for pupils;

Further, it is an axiom of every work place setting that employees must obey all lawful directives of their supervisors whether they agree with the fairness of those directives, or not. Insubordination is never a tolerable offense in the work place. Rather, employees are to obey the adage "work now; grieve later". Clearly, Bowman's conduct in refusing to follow DeJesus' directive amounts to insubordination and conduct unbecoming an employee.

I find that the Board has proven Charge #10 against Bowman and that she is guilty of insubordination, conduct unbecoming an employee and neglect of duty.

Substitute Teaching Assignments

Source 4 Teachers is a private vendor contracted by the Trenton School District, and other surrounding districts, to place daily substitute teachers in its classrooms to cover the absences of its regular teachers. The record establishes that in 2014, Bowman was approved by Source 4 Teachers to be placed on its list of qualified substitute teachers. It is unclear whether the District administration knew of this fact prior to 2015, when it received an invoice from Source 4 Teachers which included Bowman's name as having fulfilled a substitute assignment at Dunn Middle School. In any event, the Board's policy regarding outside activities provides that:

> . . .the Board reserves the right to determine if activities outside the support staff member's job responsibilities interfere with their performance and the discharge of the support staff member's responsibilities to this district.
>
> All support staff members . . . shall not solicit or accept customers for a private enterprise, business, and/or business organization on school grounds during their work day without the express permission of the Superintendent; (emphasis mine)

The accompanying Board Regulation provides that:

> A full time employee may engage in outside employment only when such employment does not: constitute a conflict of interest, occur at a time when the employee has assigned district duties, or diminish the employee's efficiency in performing assigned district duties. A full-time employee who engages in employment outside the district shall report that employment to the Superintendent. (emphasis mine)

Pursuant to this policy and regulation, Bowman was obligated to report her employment with Source 4 Teachers as soon as she was appointed to the substitute list.

Bowman acknowledged that she had not informed the Superintendent of her retention by Source 4 Teachers. If she had, the Superintendent (or his/her designee) would have then had an opportunity to inform Bowman that the Board would view her acceptance of teaching assignments in the Trenton School District as presenting a conflict of interest. Therefore, I find that Bowman's failure to advise the Superintendent that she was hired by Source 4 Teachers was in violation of District Policy and constituted conduct unbecoming an employee.

On September 17, 2015, Bowman accepted a teaching assignment from Source 4 Teachers to teach a half-day class at Dunn Middle School.[6] She testified that her intention was to call in to the Special Services Department and report herself as taking a vacation day. According to Bowman's testimony, she then reconsidered the assignment and decided she had to decline it because she is non bilingually qualified. She testified that she notified Source 4 Teachers that she was declining the assignment. She then reported to her regular job at 8:30. What happened next is controverted. Bowman testified that she signed in and worked her regular hours that day until 4:30. However, the log does not show that she signed out at 4:30 or any other time. DeJesus testified that Bowman "disappeared" at about 11:30 a.m., and that she "could not find" her for the rest of the day. Bowman contends that she spent the afternoon of September 17 shredding paper in the basement, and left at her regular quitting time. Sometime prior to November, 2015, Source 4 Teachers issued Bowman a check for the September 17 half-day teaching assignment. Bowman accepted and cashed the check.[i]

[6] This acceptance was accomplished electronically on the vendor's website.

On November 17, Lissa Johnson processed an invoice from Source 4 Teachers (P-1), which included Bowman's serving as substitute at the Dunn Middle School on September 17. After Bowman was served with the tenure charges on December 17, 2015, she then contacted Source 4 Teachers and arranged to return the amount of the payment.

On October 19, Bowman accepted another teaching assignment from Source 4 Teachers and taught at Trenton's M.L.K. Elementary School. To do this, she notified the Special Services Department that she would be taking a vacation day that day.

The Board maintains that by accepting payment for the substitute teaching assignment on September 17 and simultaneously accepting salary from her regular secretarial job with the district, Bowman was "double-dipping" the District. It contends that this violated its Outside Employment Policy, its Ethics Policy, and amounted to conduct unbecoming an employee.

The Board argues that on October 19, Bowman again double-dipped by accepting payment from both the substitute teaching assignment and being in paid status from her secretarial job. It contends that this created a conflict of interest and violated the public trust. Further, it maintains that Board Policy dictates that employee must submit an advance request for vacation time off.

TESA argues that Bowman never actually worked the substitute job on September 17 and that her acceptance of payment was merely an oversight. With regard to the substitute teaching job on October 19, TESA maintains that since Bowman was on a vacation day that day, she was entitled to do whatever she wanted on her vacation time, including working for another employer. It contends that Bowman engaged in no wrongdoing on either date and that the charges #1 through #4 should be dismissed.

The conflicting evidence concerning Bowman's whereabouts after 11:30 a.m. on September 17 require me to make credibility resolutions. I do not find Bowman's assertions that she was at work all day to be credible. I find it implausible that she would accept a teaching assignment and then renege on it and just go to work for the day. Additionally, I find it illogical that DeJesus would not be able to locate Bowman for a five-and-one half hour period that day. She testified that Bowman was not at her desk, not in the hub, not in the filing room, and not in the basement. Five hours plus is a long time for someone to be at work and not be noticed. Moreover, contrary to her customary and usual habit, she did not sign out that day, although she was aware that employee sign in and sign out was expected. While Source 4 Teachers confirmed to Johnson that Bowman had not signed in to substitute teach at Dunn Middle School on September 17, there is no way for me to determine whether she actually engaged in the teaching job that day or not. I credit DeJesus's account that Bowman was not at work after 11:30 a.m. The point is that she was not at work that afternoon. More importantly, Bowman accepted payment for the teaching assignment without another thought until she was served with tenure charges.

I find that Bowman accepted payment for both her regular secretarial job and for the substitute teaching job for September 17, thus, engaging in conduct unbecoming an employee and violating the Board's ethics policies.

In addition, I find that Bowman violated the Board's policies and rules by not submitting an advance request for a vacation day for October 19. TESA's contract states in Article 14 that secretaries are given a vacation allowance annually but vacation approval is at the discretion of the employee's supervisor.

Further, Bowman had previously been warned about her failure to submit advance requests for vacation leave. Once an employee is warned that conduct is unacceptable to the employer, the employee is certainly expected to modify her behavior in the future and comply with the employer's expectation. I therefore find that Bowman's acceptance of both the substitute teaching assignments from Source 4 Teachers on September 17 and October 19 amounted to conduct unbecoming an employee, violation of Board policies concerning required notice to the Superintendent concerning outside activities, and violation of the Board's ethics policies. I find Bowman guilty of charges #1, 2, 3, and 4.

Chronic Tardiness/Leaving Early

The record demonstrates that between July 1 and November 1, the Department's attendance logs show eight tardiness occasions by Bowman. In addition, she left early on several occasions, some of which were without permission. Further, she took an extended lunch period and/or left work in the middle of the day on two occasions during that period.

The Union argues that the Employer's attendance control policies are lax and inconsistently applied. For example, DeJesus could not say with certainty whether her department's policies required employees to sign-in and sign-out with just their initials or whether the sign-in time was also required. The log shows that some employees included only their initials while others also included the time. There was apparently no rule or enforcement about employees not signing-in/out at all. These lax procedures make it difficult to enforce its time and attendance policies.

Unfortunately, Bowman's disciplinary record shows that she has a long history of repeatedly being warned about her issues with punctuality and taking unauthorized time off.

Had the Department followed the attendance policies as set forth in Board Policy 421, it would have engaged in progressive discipline including written warnings, the docking of pay, and formal discipline prior to the latest round of time infractions.

However, all of Bowman's time away from the job after July 1, 2015, resulted in a meeting between DeJesus, Bowman and Bowman's union representative on October 30 and a follow-up memorandum on November 1, 2015. In the November 1 memorandum, DeJesus noted her tardiness patterns and the fact that she had left early on October 29, without permission and took an extended lunch on October 30. DeJesus' memo continues,

> I informed you [on October 30] that this was your final verbal warning and henceforth, you will be docked for arriving to work late and/or taking extended lunch breaks. . . You will be docked accordingly [for the time taken after 11:30 on October 29]. (P-17)

TESA argues that once the Employer engaged in this form of discipline -- a written warning, any additional discipline for the same events would amount to "double jeopardy". I agree. The record does not show that Bowman was tardy or took time off from work at any time after the November 1 written warning. The purpose of a written warning is to put the employee on notice that the conduct engaged in is unacceptable to the Employer and that future infractions will lead to additional discipline. Here, there were no further infractions that would trigger additional discipline. Once an Employer decides to implement one level of discipline, it cannot double back and re-discipline the employee for the same set of infractions.

I therefore find that Bowman is not guilty of conduct unbecoming an employee or neglect of duty for her tardiness between July 1 and November 1, 2015. Charge #5, 6, 7, and 8 are dismissed.

Disciplinary Record

I note that Bowman's record shows that she has been sporadically warned about her failure to perform the duties of her job, as well as her absence record. In 2008, an employee improvement plan was developed by the then Assistant Director of Special Services to assist her with resolving performance issues. Her evaluation cautioned that she was not meeting performance expectations. In 2009, she was reprimanded again, in writing, concerning IEP revisions that were two months late and contained many errors. Her record of past discipline is remote in time to the contemporaneous events herein, and therefore not particularly relevant to the issue of whether she should be terminated from her position.

However, I find based upon the totality of circumstances of the events of 2015, including the seriousness of her failure to file student records, her insubordination, and her acceptance of payment for a substitute teaching assignment while simultaneously accepting pay for her District's secretarial job results in the conclusion that her conduct is sufficiently egregious to warrant termination.

AWARD

I conclude that Charai Bowman is guilty of conduct unbecoming an employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause to warrant her termination. I find that she is guilty of charges #1, 2, 3, 4, 9, and 10 as set forth in the tenure charges filed by the Board and certified by the Commissioner of Education on February 3, 2016. The remaining charges are dismissed. Her tenure as a senior secretary with the Trenton School District is revoked and she is terminated immediately.

Statement of the Decision: Based upon the evidence presented I must find that the School District has established a sufficient basis for the charges set forth herein. The charges are sustained.

INTRODUCTION

This matter was brought to arbitration before the undersigned arbitrator pursuant to P.L. 2012, Chapter 26 of Title 18a N.J.S.A. These involve certain charges filed on September 10, 2015 against the Respondent Ms. Heather Grey by the School District of the Township of Lower Cape May County, New Jersey. The charges seek to remove Ms. Grey from her position as a school bus driver for the School District. The Statement of Tenure Charges is set forth herein as follows:[1]

STATEMENT OF TENURE CHARGES

INTRODUCTION

Ms. Grey, a bus driver employed by the Board, has engaged in a pattern of dangerous, reckless, unlawful and unbecoming conduct sufficient to support tenure charges brought against her. Specifically, Ms. Grey's conduct includes, but is not limited to: (1) improper use and false reporting of sick/medical leave; (2) repeatedly failing to comply with Board Policy and applicable law regarding use of a cellular telephone while operating a school bus; (3) repeatedly failing to safely operate a school bus; (4) failing to comply with Board policy regarding mandatory child safety school bus inspection procedures; (5) repeatedly causing damage to private property while operating a school bus; (6) failure to comply with procedure to maintain updated bus routes, maps and seating charts; and (7) general failure to comply with administrative directives.

As a result, the Board seeks to terminate Ms. Grey.

BACKGROUND

1. Ms. Grey began her employment with the Board as a bus driver as of September 1, 2006.
2. As a bus driver, Ms. Grey is a member of the Lower Township Elementary Education Association ("LTEEA"), which is party to a collectively negotiated agreement with the Board (the "CNA").
3. Pursuant to the terms of the CAN, as of September 2009, Ms. Grey became a tenured employee of the Board.

CHARGE ONE
"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"
IMPROPER USE AND FALSE REPORTING OF SICK/MEDICAL LEAVE

4. Without providing any advance notice, in the afternoon of October 3, 2014, Ms. Grey produced to the Board's Transportation Department Secretary a handwritten note written on a prescription sheet blank from Burton Waisbren, Jr., M.D. ("Dr. Waisbren"), which indicated the patient as Heather Grey and "NO WORK 10/3/14 – 10/17/14," but provided no further detail.
5. Prior to submitting the note, Ms. Grey worked a full day on October 1, 2014 and half days on October 2, 2014 and October 3, 2014.
6. Based upon the note, Ms. Grey indicated that she was unable to appear for work for the time period specified.
7. After she was informed by the Transportation Department Secretary of Ms. Grey's doctor's note, on October 3, 2014, the Transportation Supervisor sent Ms. Grey a text message asking Ms. Grey to call her.
8. Ms. Grey responded in a text message indicating that she could not talk because "[t]hings are Crazy here. I have a lot going on Dr. didn't think I should be driving until we got everything situated."
9. Ms. Grey further indicated she would call the Supervisor back shortly, but no such call was ever received.
10. Out of concern for Ms. Grey's wellbeing, on October 6, 2014, the Transportation Supervisor inquired with some of her co-workers as to how she was, but received no responses.
11. The Transportation Supervisor then contacted the central Administration, informed them of the situation and expressed her concern regarding Ms. Grey's wellbeing.
12. On October 6, 2014, after receiving no further communication from Ms. Grey or information on her wellbeing, the Transportation Supervisor went to Ms. Grey's home at 8:20 AM and 11:20 AM to attempt to see if she was okay, but she received no responses at the door on either occasion.
13. At 8:20 AM, Ms. Grey's vehicle was not observed at her residence, but it was observed there at 11:20 AM.
14. Given the lack of specificity in the Dr. Waisbren note, on October 6, 2014, the Administration contacted Dr. Waisbren's office to attempt to obtain further information regarding the requested leave and to confirm that Dr. Waisbren had supplied the note.

15. On October 6, 2014, Betsy Young, the Office Manager for Dr. Waisbren, responded via email, attaching a copy of the same handwritten prescription sheet note from Dr. Waisbren, along with another handwritten note signed by Ms. Young which read "I checked with Dr. Waisbren and he did write this note for Heather Grey. She was seen here in the office by Dr. Waisbren on 10/1/14 and he did put her out of work from 10/3/14 until 10/17/14."
16. The response that Dr. Waisbren had seen Ms. Grey on October 1, 2014 but did not put her out of work until October 3, 2014, couples with the fact that Ms. Grey had reported to work on October 1, 2014 through October 3, 2014, appeared confusing to the Administration.
17. Accordingly, on that same day, the Administration responded to Ms. Young and asked for further clarification given that Ms. Young's note indicated that Dr. Waisbren saw Ms. Grey on October 1, 2014, but did not explain why she would be unable to work until two (2) days later.
18. Ms. Young responded later that day and indicated that Dr. Waisbren saw Ms. Grey on October 1, 2014 and wrote the note on that day excusing her from work beginning on October 3, 2014, but that his notes did not indicate anything about her ability to work on October 1, 2014 or October 2, 2014.
19. In response, the Administration wrote back to Ms. Young and specifically indicated that they were not inquiring as to what Ms. Grey was being treated for, but requested confirmation that her illness is severe enough that she would be unable to work for two (2) weeks.
20. The final communication from Ms. Young was a response on the evening of October 6, 2014 which stated "I asked Dr. Waisbren the question you relayed and he said that he is not at liberty to discuss this any further."
21. On October 7, 2014, the Transportation Supervisor telephoned Ms. Grey at 9:50 AM and left a message, but received no response.
22. At 10:05 AM on October 7, 2014, the Transportation Supervisor sent Ms. Grey a text message indicating that she was coming over to her home, but received no response.
23. When the Transportation Supervisor arrived at Ms. Grey's home, her vehicle was observed at the residence, but there was no response at the door.
24. On October 8, 2014 at 10:00 AM, the Transportation Supervisor went to Ms. Grey's home, but no response was received at the door and Ms. Grey's vehicle was observed at the residence.

25. Despite her numerous attempts to contact her, the Transportation Supervisor received no further contact from Ms. Grey from October 3, 2014 until October 20, 2014.
26. Ms. Grey did not appear for work from October 3, 2014 to October 17, 2014, and she recorded her absence as the use of paid sick days.
27. On or about October 17, 2014, the Administration was informed by the Lower Township Police (the "LTPD") regarding an incident that took place at Ms. Grey's home.
28. The LTPD were dispatched to the location on October 14, 2014 in connection with a report that a dog had been hit by a car.
29. Upon further investigation, the LTPD was informed that the dog belonged to Ms. Grey, but that it was being watched for her by a friend who was "pet-sitting" because Ms. Grey was away in Florida.
30. After receiving the information that Ms. Grey was apparently in Florida during the time when she was supposed to be out of work on medical leave and unable to work, the Administration began an investigation in the matter.
31. As part of that investigation, the Administration received information from other employees that Ms. Grey was apparently travelling to Florida on vacation with another Board transportation employee.
32. On November 3, 2014, a meeting was held with Ms. Grey, an LTEEA representative, the Transportation Supervisor and the Superintendent at which time the information received regarding Ms. Grey's apparent trip to Florida during her purported medical leave was presented to her.
33. Ms. Grey responded that she was at home during that time period, and denied being in Florida.
34. On or about November 12, 2014, Ms. Grey produced a second handwritten note from Dr. Waisbren on a prescription sheet, dated November 12, 2014, which noted "THIS PATIENT WAS OUT OF WORK, AT MY DIRECTION FROM 10/3 – 10/17 –PLEASE SEE MY EARLIER NOTE."
35. Thereafter, by letter to the Superintendent dated November 18, 2014, Ms. Grey explained she was under the care of Dr. Waisbren for the period in question in October, 2014, and that he had ordered her to stay out of work as she was unable to perform her duties.
36. In that letter, Ms. Grey also stated "I was at home for most of this absence."
37. Attached to the November 18, 2014 letter was a two (2) sentence letter from Dr. Waisbren which stated:

This letter is confirmation that had ordered Heather Grey to remain out of work from 10/3/14 to 10/17/14 as she was unable to perform her work duties during that period

Please see all previous documentation.

38. After receiving Ms. Grey's letter and upon further consideration, a second meeting was held on December 22, 2014 with Ms. Grey, who was also accompanied by James Jameson, the local New Jersey Education Association ("NJEA") UniServ representative.
39. At that meeting, Ms. Grey ultimately admitted that she went to Florida during part of the time period during which she took paid sick leave in October, 2014.
40. Given the fact that the Administration had confirmed Ms. Grey admittedly travelled to Florida during the period in which she claimed she was unable to work, the Administration sought to dock her pay for the eight (8) days during which she was out on the suspect leave.
41. Following the subsequent discussions with NJEA representative Jameson who was seeking a lesser penalty for Ms. Grey, the Administration agreed to only dock her for four (4) days of the paid leave, provided she entered into a "Last Chance Agreement" (the "Agreement") provided by the Board.
42. The Agreement provided that although the Board could have sought to pursue far more severe consequences, including terminating Ms. Grey's employment as a result of the falsely reported leave, the Board agreed to the lesser penalty of docking Ms. Grey for four (4) days of pay from the period of her medical leave.
43. The Agreement further provided that in exchange for the Board agreeing to forego any action to terminate her employment, Ms. Grey accepted the docking of her pay and further agreed that her continued employment was conditional upon her good standing with the Board and that she would not engage in any other breach of the Board's expectations of her employment.
44. The Agreement was provided for review to NJEA representative Jameson.
45. 45. The Administration did not receive a response from the NJEA until a month later at which time, a revised version with minor language changes was submitted.
46. 46. The Administration responded and indicated that they would accept the minor language changes.
47. 47. However, the NJEA then submitted another version of the Agreement which was further revised to remove some of the language in the original version, including that Ms. Grey had admitted to travelling to Florida or had improperly taken paid sick leave.

48. The Administration responded that the second revised version of the Agreement was not acceptable and that if a signed version of the initially accepted Agreement was not received that day, the Agreement would be withdrawn and the Board would seek other disciplinary sanctions.
49. Neither Ms. Grey nor the NJEA representative produced a copy of the signed Agreement.
50. Despite the fact that Ms. Grey never signed the Agreement, she was ultimately only docked for four (4) days of pay, which was spread out over four (4) pay cycles.
51. Ms. Grey filed no objection to the docking of the four (4) days' pay.

CHARGE TWO
"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"

REPEATED FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH BOARD POLICY AND APPLICABLE LAW REGARDING USE OF CELLULAR TELEPHONE WHILE OPERATING SCHOOL BUS

52. On December 12, 2002, N.J.S.A. 39:3B-25 was enacted making it unlawful for the driver of a school bus to use a cellular or other wireless telephone while operating a school bus. This law has remained in effect during the entire term of Ms. Grey's employment as a bus driver.
53. In that regard, Board Policy 8630 "Bus Driver Responsibility" further provides in pertinent part as follows:

    A school bus driver, during the driver's work schedule, may only use a cellular or other wireless telephone, for school related business. The driver is prohibited from using a cellular or other wireless telephone, while operating a school bus. A cellular, or other wireless telephone may only be used for school related business by the school bus driver while operating the school bus, when the school bus is parked in a safe area off a highway or in an emergency situation.

54. Bus drivers were regularly reminded of the prohibitions on use of cellular telephones during the driver's work schedule. For example, a memorandum dated August 28, 2012 which was provided to all drivers, including Ms. Grey, stated as follows:

Please be advised that no bus driver is allowed to use their cell phone for either conversation or texting, while operating the bus. This jeopardizes the safety of children and staff and is in violation of law.

Anyone caught violating this procedure will face disciplinary action. (Emphasis in original)

55. Another memorandum to all bus drivers and aides dated September 3, 2013, which Ms. Grey received, reviewed procedures and expectations for bus drivers, including the following statement:

NO ONE is to use their cell phones while driving their bus, this includes texting. If you have an emergency please pull your bus over to a safe spot. THERE WILL BE NO EXCEPTIONS...Please remember the safety of your students. Remember the public is watching, also the video system records everything. (Emphasis in original)

56. On October 23, 2012, the Transportation Department received a telephone call from a concerned parent of a student who reported that Ms. Grey was texting on her cellular telephone and speeding while operating a school bus on Suzanne Avenue in Lower Township while children were present on the bus.
57. That same day, Ms. Grey met with the Transportation Supervisor, was informed of the issue and presented with a write-up regarding the incident. That write-up was accompanied by copies of memoranda previously distributed by the Transportation Department to all Board bus drivers.
58. Ms. Grey signed the acknowledgement portion of the October 23, 2013 write-up without providing any comments on the write-up form.
59. On April 2, 2014, Ms. Grey was observed by a LTPD Officer talking on a cellular telephone while driving a school bus.
60. The LTPD Officer issued a written Warning to Ms. Grey in connection with the incident.
61. That same day, Ms. Grey met with the Transportation Supervisor, discussed the violation and was presented with a write-up regarding the incident. That write-up was accompanied by copies of memoranda previously distributed by the Transportation Department to all Board bus drivers.
62. On April 2, 2014, Ms. Grey signed the acknowledgement portion of the April 2, 2014 write-up form.
63. In the employee comments section of the April 2, 2014 write-up form, Ms. Grey admitted that she was talking on a cellular telephone while she was driving a school bus on school property.

64. Given that this was a second reported incident of Ms. Grey violating applicable law and Board Policy regarding the use of a cellular telephone while operating a school bus, a formal Official Reprimand dated April 4, 2014 regarding the incident was also provided to her and placed in her personnel file.
65. In addition to the Official Reprimand, a meeting was held with Ms. Grey, accompanied by LTEEA representation, and the Board's Business Administrator on April 9, 2014 to further discuss the incidents and the additional disciplinary sanctions that would result if she continued to violate applicable law and Board Policy regarding the use of cellular telephones.
66. Following reports in March 2015 of certain Board bus drivers not complying with mandatory requirements for child safety checks on school buses, the Transportation Department conducted a review of the video footage from the video cameras located on all Board school buses to attempt to determine any violations by bus drivers.
67. All Board school buses are equipped with a dual camera system, with one (1) camera at the back of the bus directed forward showing the student passenger compartment, and a second camera mounted above the driver to observe the driver's conduct.
68. The school bus camera systems also automatically record and note on the video footage certain information, including the speed of the bus in real time.
69. All bus drivers, including Ms. Grey, were aware of the school bus video camera systems, as well as the use and purpose of those systems.
70. The use and purpose of the school bus video camera systems was further memorialized in Board Policy and Regulation 8690 "Monitoring Devices on School Vehicles."
71. On the March 17, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey's school bus, Ms. Grey was observed using her cellular phone to both send text messages and make a telephone call while students were present on the school bus.
72. On the March 27, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey's school bus, Ms. Grey was observed, among other improper activities, to use her cellular phone to send text messages while students were present on the school bus.
73. On or about March 30, 2015, Ms. Grey was made aware that she was observed on video footage using her cellular telephone while operating the school bus.
74. Despite being made aware that she had been recently observed via the video system on her school bus, on the May 1, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey's school bus, Ms. Grey was again observed using her cellular telephone to send text messages while students were on the school bus.

75. However, upon information and belief, because she was aware that school bus video footage was being monitored, Ms. Grey attempted to conceal her use of her cellular phone by placing her purse in her lap and using the phone inside her purse.

CHARGE THREE
"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"

REPEATEDLY FAILING TO SAFELY OPERATE A SCHOOL BUS

76. On October 1, 2014, the Transportation Department received a call from a citizen who reported that the bus being operated by Ms. Grey, while students were on board, was tailgating him while travelling on Bayshore Road. The citizen further reported that he sped up his vehicle to 55 miles per hour, but that Ms. Grey continued to tailgate him despite his increased speed.
77. On October 1, 2014, the Transportation Supervisor met with Ms. Grey, discussed the incident and provided her with a write-up advising her to maintain a safe following distance from vehicles in front of her bus.
78. Ms. Grey refused to sign the acknowledgement portion of the write-up form, but did provide comments in the employee comment section indicating that she did not believe she was tailgating anyone.
79. On the May 20, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey's bus, she was observed not correctly wearing her seat belt and removing the seat belt while the bus was still moving.
80. On the May 21, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey's bus, Ms. Grey was observed to engage in the following behavior while operating the school bus:

- Permitting a student to walk from the back of the bus to the front while the bus was moving:

- Using a broom to sweep the bus with the entry door open and travelling in excess of 45 miles per hour;

- Removing both hands from the steering wheel to telescope the broom handle while travelling in excess of 40 miles per hour;

- Removing both hands from the steering wheel to access her purse while travelling in excess of 20 miles per hour.

- Removing hands from the steering wheel to reach down and open a container of wipes while travelling in excess of 40 miles per hour; and

- Removing one hand from the steering wheel to wipe down an area while travelling in excess of 40 miles per hour.

81. On the June 1, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey's bus, Ms. Grey was observed to be filling out her daily bus condition report while the bus was moving.
82. On June 4, 2015, the Transportation Supervisor met with Ms. Grey, discussed the recent series of incidents observed on video footage from May and June 2015 and provided her with a write-up indicating that it is a safety concern for Ms. Grey to operate a school bus in such a manner.
83. Ms. Grey signed the acknowledgement portion of the June 4, 2015 write-up and added the explanations of some of the incidents, including the following:

    - As to the May 20, 2015 seat belt violation: "due to time restrictions, I remove just prior to entering my spot"

    - As to the May 21, 2015 incidents of sweeping/cleaning her bus while it was moving: "wasp-trying to swat it away"

84. On the June 4, 2015 write-up form, Ms. Grey also added general comments, including the following: "Feel like this is harassment in order to remove me from my position. (camera is directed at me not student) Also, most of this wouldn't even be an issue if the camera was fixed like we discussed last school year."

CHARGE FOUR
"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH BOARD POLICY REGARDING CHILD SAFETY SCHOOL BUS INSPECTION

85. In order to ensure that no students are left on school buses, the Board has a long-standing mandatory procedure whereby all bus drivers are required to physically check that no students remain on the bus.
86. As part of that procedure, each school bus is equipped electronic safety system which requires that a button located at the rear of each bus be pressed by the driver when the school bus is parked, thus ensuring that all bus drivers get up and physically check the bus. If the button is not depressed within approximately sixty (60) seconds, an alarm sounds.
87. All Board bus drivers receive training regarding the requirements of the physical checks of school buses and the operation of the bus safety system.
88. For example, on January 20, 2011, Ms. Grey attended the "New Child Alert System/How to properly check all seats" in-service training.
89. Following that training, Ms. Grey signed an acknowledgement form which stated that "I understand how the system works and the proper procedure to check all seats. I understand this is my sole responsibility as the bus driver."
90. In addition, all Board bus drivers are regularly reminded regarding their obligations to physically check the buses and of their operation of the bus safety system. For example, a written memoranda dated October 29, 2013 issued to all Board bus drivers, including Ms. Grey, provided as follows:

> While we all understand that driving a bus is a difficult job, it also important and critical that it be done safely.
> When you arrive at any school and the students have disembarked the bus, you must physically check that no student is remaining on the bus. This is your responsibility and you cannot delegate this to anyone else. Follow all the safety procedures is important and crucial. They are there for a reason. Checking your bus for any students at the end of your run must be done as well. Failure to follow this procedure can and shall lead to the termination of your employment. Please follow all the procedures and review then with your supervisor.

91. As noted above, following reports in March 2015 of certain drivers not complying with mandatory requirements for child safety checks on school buses, the Transportation Department conducted a review of a video footage from the video cameras located on all District school buses to attempt to determine any violations by bus drivers.

92. On the March 27, 2015 video footage from Ms. Grey' school bus, Ms. Grey was observed to not follow the required procedure to disengage, but rather had a student press the button at the rear of the bus so that she did not have to walk through the bus to do it herself.

CHARGE FIVE

"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"

REPEATEDLY CAUSING DAMAGE TO PRIVATE PROPERTY WHILE OPERATING A SCHOOL BUS

93. On December 15, 2014, the owner of a property located at the corner of Congress Avenue and Texas Avenue located in the Villas section of the District reported that on December 12, 2014 during her morning bus run, Ms. Grey cut the corner of the roadway while making a turn and drove across the private property, causing damage and leave tire track ruts on the property.
94. On December 15, 2014, the Transportation Supervisor met with Ms. Grey, discussed the incident and provided her with a write-up reminding her to be mindful of property lines when making turns with the school bus.
95. On December 15, 2014, Ms. Grey signed the acknowledgment of write-up form without providing any comments.
96. On May 13, 2015, the Transportation Department received another complaint from the same homeowner that Ms. Grey was causing damage to his property by running over the corner of his yard and leaving tire marks in his grass.
97. On May 13, 2015, the Transportation Supervisor met with Ms. Grey, discussed the second incident of property damage and provided her with a second write-up again reminding her to be mindful of property lines when making turns with the school bus.
98. Despite having the meeting and being provided with a copy of the write-up, Ms. Grey refused to sign the acknowledgment section of the May 13, 2015 write-up form.

CHARGE SIX
"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH PROCEDURE TO MAINTAIN UPDATED BUSROUTES, MAPS AND SEATING CHARTS

99. Board bus drivers are responsible for maintaining updated bus routes, maps and seating charts for their bus runs at all times in the event a substitute driver is needed.
100. Board bus drivers are regularly reminded of their responsibility to maintain these updated documents on their buses.
101. For example, a March 13, 2013 memorandum was distributed to all bus drivers, including Ms. Grey, which indicated "All routes, maps and seating charts are to be kept up to date NO EXCEPTIONS."
102. On April 14, 2015, Ms. Grey was scheduled to be absent from work for an appointment.
103. However, Ms. Grey left no routes, maps or seating charts for her bus runs to be used by the substitute driver covering for her, resulting in a disruption of the transportation of students to school, among other issues.
104. On April 15, 2015, the Transportation Supervisor met with Ms. Grey, discussed the incident and provided her with a write-up directing her to ensure that all bus routes, maps and seating charts are updated and maintained on her bus at all times.
105. Ms. Grey signed the acknowledgement portion of the April 15, 2015 write-up and added comments indicating that she had intended to provide updated maps, but that she did not. Ms. Grey further admitted that once she was informed of the situation, she made an arrangement for the updated maps to be delivered later on April 14, 2015.

CHARGE SEVEN
"UNBECOMING CONDUCT" AND "OTHER JUST CAUSE"

GENERAL FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH ADMINISTRATIVE DIRECTIVES

106. As noted above, despite being advised in writing of the expected responsibilities of a bus driver, including in multiple write-ups and reprimands issued to her, Ms. Grey continued to disregard directives from the Administration.

107. Perhaps the most significant examples of Ms. Grey's disregard for Administrative directives came after Ms. Grey was made aware that video footage from school buses of driver conduct was being actively monitored as of March 2015.
108. In that regard, despite being fully aware of the fact that her actions were being video-taped and monitored, she was observed to continue to violate Board Policy and applicable law by using her cellular telephone while operating a school bus and attempting to conceal same in her purse) and attempting to clean her bus while operating it at speeds in excess of 45 miles per hour.
109. The Administration has engaged in multiple and repeated attempts for years to advice and counsel Ms. Grey regarding the expectations regarding her conduct as a Board employee and bus driver, as well as to repeatedly impose disciplinary sanctions on Ms. Grey for violations of Board policy and applicable law.
110. Notwithstanding the Administration's continued efforts, those Administrative interventions appear to have had little or no effect as Ms. Grey has continued to engage in inappropriate conduct, including through the end of the most recent 2014-2015 school year.

CONCLUSION

WHEREFORE, for the foregoing reasons, Respondent Heather Grey should be terminated for unbecoming conduct and other just cause.

On September 23, 2015, Respondent's attorney entered his appearance and submitted an answer to the charges. The answer stated "after reviewing all the charges, I have elected to defend as I do not believe that there is sufficient cause for the taking of my tenure." After the receipt of the Respondent's answer, the Commissioner of the Department of Education of the State of New Jersey reviewed the charges and determined that they were sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary.

Accordingly, the matter was referred to the undersigned arbitrator pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, Ch. 26.

After a brief discovery period, a hearing was convened and held on November 24, and December 7, 2015 and January 13 and 14, 2016 in the offices of Respondent's counsel in Vineland, New Jersey. The School Board presented the testimony of the following witnesses: Kelly Hewitt, Transportation Supervisor and George Drozdowski, Superintendent of Schools. Respondent testified as well as Police Officer Darrin Hickok, Pamela Gittle, Bus Aide, Ryan Adams, Head School Bus Mechanic and the Respondent's father, Robert Stansbury.

Throughout the hearing both the School District and the Respondent were represented by counsel who presented evidence through the sworn oral testimony of witnesses as well as through documents. Each side had the opportunity to confront the evidence presented by the opposing party. The hearing was officially closed upon the receipt of written post-hearing letter/briefs.

BACKGROUND AND THE EVIDENCE PRESENTED

The Lower Township Board of Education operates an elementary school district that consists of 4 schools located in the vicinity of Cape May, New Jersey. These schools are the Sandman Consolidated School, the Maud Abrams School, Memorial School, and the Carl T. Mitnick School. The superintendent of the School District is Mr. George Drozdowski.[2]

Documentary exhibits will be referred to as [B#] for Board or School District exhibits or [R#] for Respondent exhibits.

The alleged infractions that have served the bases for the charges herein are based upon the interpretation and application of a number of Board policies regarding the operation of the school buses. Specifically, in 2008 the Board promulgated Policy 8630 regarding bus driver responsibility. The relevant paragraph in this particular case concerns the use of cellular or wireless telephones on the buses. In particular the policy states as follows:

> A school bus driver, during the driver's work schedule, may only use a cellular or other wireless telephone, for school related business. The driver is prohibited from using a cellular or other wireless telephone, while operating a school bus. A cellular, or other wireless telephone, may only be used for school related business by the school bus driver while operating the school bus, when the school bus is parked in a safe area off a highway or in an emergency situation. A driver who violates this policy provision is subject to fines pursuant to N.J.S.A.39:3B-25. [B7]

The Board has pointed out that bus drivers receive reminders concerning this policy especially with respect to the use of cell phones as part of the orientation at the beginning of the academic school year. It is asserted that individuals received copies of these reminders in 2012 and 2013 at the beginning of each academic year. [B8, B9] Specifically it is noted that in August 28, 2012 the Board through Ms. Kelly Hewitt the Transportation Supervisor advised all bus drivers that "no bus driver is allowed to use their cell phone for either conversation or texting while operating the bus."

Another policy that has been involved in this case concerned the notice of the use of monitoring devices in school vehicles. This was also edited and created in October 2008 as policy number 2690 entitled Monitoring Devices on School Vehicles. In relevant portion the policy states as follows:

> "To maintain the safe and secure conditions for all pupils transported on school owned or contracted school vehicles, the Board may use devices to > monitor and/or observe pupil behavior, teacher and support staff behavior, school bus driver discipline procedures and/or school bus driving techniques. The device may be a sound video camera, a voice monitoring device or other appropriate devices..." [B14]

Another policy which addressed the safety of students on school buses was issued in 2013 and concerned the assurance that all students be accounted for at the end of a designated or assigned run. In a memorandum from Mr. Drozdowski dated October 29, 2013 it was stated that all school bus drivers must physically check that no student is remaining on the bus at the end of the driver's run. This was the result of an incident that occurred in 2011. As part of the policy the Respondent received in-service training for a new child alert system which must be shut off from the rear of the bus. According to the testimony provided, the bus driver is required to walk to the back of the bus to turn off the alarm. By making this trip to the rear of the bus, drivers will have to check all of the seats to ensure that no child has remained on the bus. [B19]

The third policy considered in this case involves an internal memorandum concerning the maintenance and upkeep of route and emergency binders. According to a memo distributed by Ms. Hewitt, all bus drivers were expected to maintain a route/emergency binder that are to be kept up to date and on the buses at all times. [B22]

The Respondent was initially hired by the Lower Township Board of Education in December 1999 initially as a bus aide. She worked continuously for Lower Township with the exception for one year in 2003. She subsequently qualified to become a bus driver in 2008. At all times material herein she was supervised by Ms. Kelly Hewitt [T3.10-12]. Ms. Kelly reported to the District's Business Administrator Mr. Frank Onorato who reported to the superintendent Mr. Drozdowski.

As a bus driver, the Respondent was responsible driving four separate routes in the morning from pickup points throughout the School District to transport children to the elementary schools. On or about 4:00 p.m. she would pick up those students from their elementary schools and drop them off at pre-designated locations. According to the testimony, her first run of the morning involved the transportation of between 20 and 55 students from designated locations to the Sandman School [T1.1-2].

The first incident that served as a basis for one of the charges set forth herein arose on October 23, 2013. On that date, the Respondent received a warning as a result of a complaint from a parent who accused her of driving and speeding while texting on her cellular phone. In the warning letter, she was reminded of the 2003 policy that addressed this issue. The Respondent signed the warning and receipt. Even though the Respondent was represented by a collective bargaining representative there is no evidence that she had attempted to file a grievance challenging the warning.

On or about April 2, 2014 Respondent was informed by Ms. Hewitt that she "had received a concern that you were talking on the cell phone while driving the bus." [B12] In her testimony, Ms. Hewitt could not recall who submitted the concern [T1.56]. Nevertheless, as a result, she requested that the video tape on the bus be viewed. After she viewed it she contacted the School Resource Officer [SRO] Darren Hickock, an officer with the Lower Cape May Police Department. Officer Hickock reviewed the video and as a result issued a warning ticket to the Respondent for talking on the cell phone in violation of NJ State statutes. [B11]

Two days later, the Respondent was issued an "official reprimand" for driving while talking on her cell phone. Her response in writing and through her testimony stated that while she was driving and about to pull her bus into the driveway leading to the bus parking lot, her cell phone rang. Her bus aide Pamela Gittle informed her that the number showing on the phone was from the Lower Cape May Regional school nurse. Surmising that it may concern one of her own children, she asked the aide to answer it. As she was pulling into the driveway leading to the bus lot, the aide handed her the phone. She subsequently pulled over in the driveway to speak to the nurse. [T3.72] She maintained in her testimony moreover that she never saw the disputed video and maintains that it never existed [T3.70]

Respondent's counsel during the hearing called both Officer Hickock and Ms. Gittle. Officer Hickock testified that Ms. Hewitt explained to him that there was a complaint about a driver using a phone and that led him to go to the Transportation Department and watch the video [T4.10-11]. In viewing the video Officer Hickock stated that he observed the Respondent on the cell phone as she was pulling into the Mitnick school driveway. He therefore decided to issue the warning ticket.

The Respondent's response to the warning was not reflective of what she saw on the tape. According to Officer Hickock the Respondent had the cell phone in her hand as she pulled off Seashore Road into the driveway [T4.13]. Therefore he used his discretion and issued the warning ticket [T4.17].

Ms. Gittle stated that she was assigned to assist the Respondent on the bus and as they were concluding their run and turning into the Mitnick School driveway, Respondent's cell phone rang. Ms. Gittle testified that she answered the call and handed the phone to the Respondent. It was the school nurse who said one of her children was sick and she had to pick them up. She testified that she only handed the Respondent the phone when she had pulled into the driveway [T4.29].

There were no further incidents that semester until October 1, 2014 when Respondent received a warning based upon a complaint from another motorist who noted the bus number (Bus 7) and asserted that the Respondent was speeding and tailgating. While the Respondent admitted being in the area at that date and time, she denied she was ever speeding and tailgating. She refused to sign the warning letter under protest, based upon advice received.

Two days later, the Respondent submitted to Ms. Hewitt's office a doctor's note that was dated on the date of the warning letter of October 1, 2014. The doctor's note stated that the Respondent would not be able to work from Friday, October 3, 2014 to Friday, October 17, 2014. [B1][T1.25]. According to Ms. Hewlett's testimony, she received a text from her secretary stating that the Respondent was out with a note. It was noted that the Respondent had worked on October 1, and 2 and the morning runs of October 3 before presenting the note. She did not volunteer any diagnosis or basis for the upcoming absence. Ms. Hewlett testified that she tried to follow up with the Respondent and texted her to find out if she was okay. She recalled that the Respondent said things were "crazy there" and that the doctor did not want her to work. She then forwarded the matter to Mr. Drozdowski the Superintendent [T1.28].

Mr. Drozdowski testified that when he received the note he was confused. Specifically, he did not know what the doctor meant when he stated that the Respondent was not to work [T2.23]. Mr. Drozdowski stated that he had never seen a restriction given days before it was to take effect. He felt it was necessary to request specifics with respect to the absence [T2.24]. He therefore asked his secretary to contact the doctor's office to confirm the reason for the absence. On cross examination Mr. Drozdowski maintained that he inquired about the note because he wanted to ascertain when the Respondent was seen by the doctor and he wanted to determine the degree to which she was disabled or whether she would be able to work in a light duty capacity. [T2.93]

On the following Monday, October 6, 2014 Mr. Drozdowski's secretary emailed the doctor's office to query and clarify the doctor's note. In the email, the secretary informed the office manager that Mr. Drozdowski understood the HIPPA laws but needed to confirm whether the Respondent's illness was severe enough that she was unable to work for two weeks. After several email exchanges the doctor's office manager replied that the doctor was not "at liberty to discuss the matter any further." [B2] In addition the following Monday and Tuesday October 6 and 7, Ms. Hewlett physically visited the Respondent's home. She stated that she did so out of concern for the Respondent's wellbeing. She testified that when she visited the home she noticed that Respondent's car was present but no one responded to her knocks on the door. [T1.30]

Subsequently on October 14, 2014 Ms. Hewitt and Mr. Drozdowski became aware of a police incident in which the Respondent's dog was struck by a vehicle. The investigation showed that the Respondent was not present but in Florida [B3]. The fact that the Respondent was indeed in Florida was confirmed by one of the Respondent's co-workers. [T1.32].

On November 3, 2014 Ms. Hewlett and Mr. Drozdowski convened a meeting which was attended by Ms. Hewlett, Mr. Drozdowski, the Respondent and a Union representative. Ms. Hewlett recalled that she specifically asked the Respondent if she was in Florida to which the Respondent stated that she was not. Rather she maintained that she was at home. [T1.40] Subsequently by a letter to Mr. Drozdowski dated November 18, 2014 the Respondent stated among other things that:

> "I am writing this letter per your request in reference to my absence from 10/3-10/17/14. I was under the care of Dr. Burton Waisbren during that time period. He ordered me to stay out of work as I was unable to perform my duties. I was at home for most of this absence." [B5]

After receiving this letter, Mr. Drozdowski convened another meeting on December 22, 2014 which was also attended by Ms. Hewlett, the Respondent and the Union representative. During that meeting she was asked again by Mr. Drozdowski about her whereabouts during her absence. According to Ms. Hewlett, the Respondent first said that she was home and then she got agitated and disclosed that she was indeed in Florida. She then according to Ms. Hewitt, called Mr. Drozdowski a "bully." Mr. Drozdowski immediately terminated the meeting [T1.41-43]. On cross, Ms. Hewlett admitted that there is no policy that mandated that a person has to remain home if they are out sick [T1.181] but nevertheless maintained that the Respondent lied to management. This testimony was confirmed by Mr. Drozdowski who stated that the Respondent finally admitted that she was indeed in Florida and became agitated and referred to him as a bully [T2.43].

Mr. Drozdowski testified that management considered docking the Respondent's time for the period that she was absent which would have been eight days. Subsequently supervision entered into discussions with the union concerning the penalty and as a result decided to reduce the penalty from 8 to 4 days provided that the Respondent signed a last chance agreement [B6]. The Union representative took the draft and returned it to Mr.

Drozdowski with minimal revisions which Mr. Drozdowski felt was acceptable. The Union however returned with another version which management considered not to be acceptable because it took out any admission of using the time inappropriately. Ultimately, management never received a signed document but it still docked her for the four days. [T2.41-47]

The Respondent testified that she began seeing her doctor, Dr. Waisbern in 2012 for a number of reasons but disclosed that she was having anxiety attacks beginning in September 2014 and thought that it was having a deteriorating impact on her concentration and ability to drive. She stated that "I explained to him how things at work had just progressively gotten worse, how I felt like Ms. Hewlett was harassing me and constantly calling me in over things that were not true or happening, and we discussed them." [T3.26]

The Respondent recalled that there was an event on October 2 that increased her anxiety such that she was crying uncontrollably and she had to call the school nurse. This was exacerbated by the conversation during the meeting that resulted in the October 2 warning [T3.28]. Her doctor had previously given her the note [B1] and said that she could use it if she felt anxiety. She said that she spoke to her Union representative and school nurse and felt that she was under stress so she called the doctor and informed him that she was using the note. She testified that on that day she felt "distracted" and could not drive [T330-32]. So therefore on October 3 after her morning run she presented the note.

The Respondent stated that her father had indeed made plans to have a family trip to Florida before she asked for the note from her doctor. She had originally planned to drive with her husband on October 9 and return on the following Monday with her children. School was closed for the four day weekend and her children would be flying down with her father. As a result of her illness she stayed home from October 3 to October 9 and then drove to Orlando. Once they arrived and she was out of work she decided to remain with her family until October 16. She drove home and arrived back home on October 17 [T3.42].

She stated that after she returned she was called into the superintendent's office and was nervous when she was asked about the absence. She recalled that Mr. Drozdowski had asked for a letter explaining where she was during her leave. He also asked her to sign over her medical records from one year prior to her leave. The Respondent testified that she felt that this was unnecessary and was unreasonable. Yet she said that she would talk to her doctor about it. The Respondent stated that her doctor also felt that the request was "absurd" and recommended that they should not be turned over. Rather, she informed Mr. Drozdowski that she was at home for most of the absence but was indeed in Florida from October 10 to October 16. [T3.45-49]

The Respondent's trip to Florida was confirmed by her father's testimony. He testified that he began to make plans during May or June of that year. He wanted to take his grandchildren to Disneyworld. Therefore, he rented a house for 10 days in order to host his three daughters, their spouses and grandchildren. The plan was for Respondent's children to fly to Orlando while Respondent and her husband would drive down on October 9 and return with the children [T4.56-61].

Respondent's father further testified that he noticed that the Respondent appeared to be stressed and upset. She had told him that she was afraid of her job and of other things that were happening at work [T4.61].

The Board challenged the veracity of the Respondent's explanation. During the hearing, after reviewing her medical records, the Board noted that at no point in those doctor's notes did the Respondent mention a concern for driving or anxiety to her doctor or any type of distress [T3.96, 98]. Rather, the notes indicated that she saw her doctor on October 1 saying that she could not concentrate and drive yet; she continued to drive her students on October 1, October 2 and in the morning of October 3 [T3.88-90] [B24].

It was pointed out by the Board that the Respondent never mentioned to Ms. Hewlett that she did not think that she was medically able to drive. Rather she returned to work and worked as normal on October 20 and never spoke to her superintendent or the administrator [T3.103]. The Board also noted that there was no documentation from the school nurse indicating that the Respondent visited her on October 1 or 2. It also argued that the nurse was also a representative of the union and that there was no evidence saying that she approached her claiming that she was suffering an anxiety attack due to harassment from management. [T3.107].On December 15, 2014, the Respondent again received a transportation incident form based on a complaint from a homeowner on her route who alleged that on December 12 as she was turning the corner she took the corner "too close" to the homeowner's property and left tire marks on the grass. The Respondent signed the memorandum without protest [B20]. At the hearing, a photograph of the corner was attached to the December notice. Respondent disputed this because it appeared that there was only one tire track in the grass while the bus had two tires on its rear end. Moreover Respondent's counsel contended that in the photograph there were leaves on the trees which would not be indicative of a photograph taken at the time of the December incident. [T1.109, 157]. As described below, a similar memorandum was issued on May 13, 2015 [B21].

Subsequently, according to Ms. Hewitt, in March 2015 she began regularly monitoring videos in response to a request by Mr. Drozdowski to review activity on the buses. This increased monitoring was the result of an incident in which a child was inadvertently left on a bus at the conclusion of a driver's run. To management, this showed that the driver had failed to adequately check her bus as required. Therefore, Mr. Drozdowski testified that he gave Ms. Hewitt a specific order that the bus videos be reviewed [T2.56].

Ms. Hewitt documented a number of violations involving the Respondent which had occurred on March 17 and March 27, 2015. On March 17, 2015 it is alleged that she was observed using a cell phone and texting while students were on the bus and she was also placing a cell phone call while students were on the bus. Furthermore, on March 27, 2015 Ms. Hewitt stated that she observed the grievant driving one handed with a coffee cup in her hand. Moreover on that day she had failed to deactivate the rear alarm system which according to policy required bus drivers to walk to the rear of the bus to deactivate the alarm. Thus the driver would have to scan all of the seats to make sure no one was left behind. It was noted that in this particular video a student had deactivated the rear alarm system. Moreover, the Respondent was observed using her cell phone and texting while students were either on the bus or disembarking the bus. Finally, it was asserted that she did not check her bus prior to departing. [B15]

The Respondent challenged the violations especially with respect to using a cell phone while students were on the bus. In this regard, the Respondent contended that she was parked and the bus engine was been turned off while she was waiting for a word to have the students disembark. Therefore under her interpretation of the policy and state law she was not "operating the bus", therefore there was no violation [T1.122-139].

Ms. Hewitt and Mr. Drozdowski on the other hand testified that the Board has always interpreted its policy as stating that the driver is operating the bus whenever there are students present. This would mean that even though the driver may not be actually driving a bus, according to Ms. Hewitt and Mr. Drozdowski, the driver is still directly responsible for observing and monitoring the children. Moreover, the policy itself only allows for the use of a cell phone only on those occasions which involve school business. [T1.205, T2.19]

Two weeks later, on April 14, 2015 the Respondent received a memo stating that she violated school district policy when she failed to have updated routes, maps and seating on her bus. According to the memorandum, the Respondent was scheduled to be off on the day in question. However, when the substitute driver arrived there were no route maps available for him to utilize [B23]. According to Ms. Hewitt's testimony the Respondent said that she took the maps home to update them but was not able to get them to the substitute by the next morning [T1.115]. In her response to the memo, the Respondent stated that she had taken the maps home to update but intended to send them in with another driver but did not get them to her in time. The substitute did eventually have maps by the time he made his run to the Maude Abrams School.

In her testimony, Respondent acknowledged that even though she had a scheduled day off she was supposed to have the maps and routes updated. She stated that the substitute had accompanied her on the route before and had rode with her the prior Friday and Monday. However on that Monday, she had to add three students to her route. Therefore, she took the maps home to update them. She maintains that she intended to update them and give them to another driver to return them to the school and deliver them to the substitute the next morning. However, since she had missed the driver she gave the maps to her children to make sure that another driver got them to the substitute but the children forgot. Eventually, she gave the maps to her father to deliver which he promptly did. [T3.81-83]

On May 13, 2015 the same homeowner who had complained on December 15, 2014 contacted the school that stated that Respondent had again run over the corner of his property. [B21].

On June 4, 2015 the Respondent received a disciplinary memo citing five more violations of policies, they were: On May 1, 2015 she was seen using the cell phone while students were on the bus as it was parked at Sandman school at 7:41 a.m.; on May 20, 2015 she was improperly wearing her seatbelt, she was not wearing it correctly and removed it while the bus was moving.; On May 21, 2015 again a student was observed walking from the back of the bus to the front while the bus was moving. In addition, she was observed sweeping the bus while the bus was moving. Finally, on June 1, 2015 she was observed filling out a daily condition report while the bus was moving. [B17]

The Respondent responded to many of the incidents directly on the form. First, she continued to dispute the fact that using a cell phone with students on the bus is a violation of policy and law. She also stated that she was removing her seatbelt while entering her spot "due to time restrictions." Finally she stated that she was using a broom to swat at a wasp that had gotten into her bus. Overall she claimed that this feels "like this is harassement [sic] in order to remove me from my position." Most of this wouldn't have been an issue if the camera was fixed like we discussed last school year."

Indeed, during the hearing, the Respondent claimed that she was "targeted" by Ms. Hewitt and management because the forward camera on her bus was focused on her rather than on the children. She stated that she complained to Ms. Hewitt and Mr. Onorato about the camera after an incident in April 2013. She realized that the camera was inappropriately focused on her when she attempted to see a video of an incident on her bus which involved a special needs student. However, they could not see the student who was apparently sitting on the front of the bus because the camera was focused rather on her. She stated that she was being harassed by having the camera exclusively focused on her. She stated that "I feel like I am under scrutiny constantly. It's not safe for me to be driving when I feel like I'm being spied on basically." [T3.57] According to the Respondent, Mr. Onorato and Ms. Hewitt promised that they would repair the focus but it was never changed. [T3.58]

Ms. Hewitt on the other hand claimed that the cameras were all focused the same way on all buses [T1.104]. Moreover, Mr. Drozdowski stated and it was stipulated that the drivers were aware of the camera system on the buses [T2.51]. Therefore, consistent with policy in the notice one of the cameras was always pointed on the driver [T2.63].

Nevertheless, the Respondent presented the testimony of Mr. Ryan Adams the senior mechanic at the bus garage. According to Mr. Adams, he was instructed in the fall of 2013 to change the focus of the camera on the Respondent's bus. Before that the camera was focused toward the rear but he moved it to view the driver. This was not the same with all of the other 25 buses [T4.44]. Moreover, he was required to pull the Respondent's tapes more frequently than the other 24 drivers [T24.49].

Mr. Drozdowski maintained that the Respondent's continued employment was not safe and that her termination was in the best interest of the school district. [T2.69] Accordingly, he eventually showed the videos, especially of the March and May incidents, to the Board and recommended the non renewal of the Respondent's contract. However, he was advised that drivers are tenured employees and thus subject to a due process hearing. Therefore, the non renewal notice was withdrawn and tenure charges filed.

SUMMARY OF THE ASSERTIONS OF THE PARTIES

The Board

The Board acknowledges that it has the burden of showing by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent was terminated for the reasons as charged. According to the Board, the Respondent is tenured in her position as a bus driver due to a prior administrative grant of tenure to transportation workers in the School District. Tenure protects certain public employees from arbitrary dismissal for an "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Admittedly, according to the Board, there is no reported authority directly relating to tenured disputes involving bus drivers. In this case, the Board maintains that its basis for terminating the Respondent's tenure was founded on facts that clearly indicated that she had engaged in unbecoming conduct as a bus driver. The Board maintains that unbecoming conduct is a term that is broadly defined to include any conduct which has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and confidence in the operation of public services. As such, a determination of unbecoming conduct may be based merely upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation but also may be based upon the violation of an "implicit standard of good behavior which develops upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct."

The determination of whether to remove an individual from a tenured position requires consideration of the nature of the act, the totality of the circumstances and the impact on the individual's career. In this case, the Board asserted that it has presented sufficient evidence to show that the Respondent is unfit to perform her job as a bus driver and that her conduct destroyed public respect and confidence in the operation of a critical public service. According to the Board, the Respondent was counseled and cautioned and disciplined by supervision which put her on notice and gave her a chance to correct any issues with her performance. However, if one reviews the totality of the circumstances in this case, the Board's decision to terminate the Respondent's tenure was appropriate and should be upheld.

In addressing specific charges, the Board has maintained that the Respondent violated her obligation to safely perform her duties. According to the Board it provided a number of instances in which the Respondent was observed violating the clear safety rules which applied to her as a school bus driver. This conduct was contrary to her essential employment obligations which are to safely and properly operate a school bus. The term "operation" according to the Board includes not only safely driving the vehicle but also in supervising the children on the bus. In this respect, the grievant had been previously warned that it is inappropriate to use her cell phone while on the bus even though the bus may be parked and turned off as long as there are children that needed supervision. Therefore, given the Respondent's continued pattern of dangerous and troubling behavior, the Board asserted that it has demonstrated that it has lost confidence in her ability to continue to be a driver for the school district.

The Board further argues that even though there is no evidence that anyone was injured as a result of the Respondent's actions, the evidence is clear that the Board does not have to wait for harm or an injury to occur before it can terminate the employee who placed children in such a vulnerable position.

The Board also maintained that the Respondent improperly used her sick leave. According to the Board the Respondent improperly claimed to be too sick to work so that she could join her family on a pre-planned trip to Disney World. Although the Board did not take immediate action to terminate the Respondent following her act, the incident played a significant role in the totality of the circumstances and must be seriously considered in determining the future of the Respondent's tenure.

The Board also maintained that the Respondent's testimony with respect to the allegations is simply not credible. According to the Board the testimony was not corroborated by any actual facts or persuasive evidence. Virtually all of the excuses that she presented are undercut by the consistent and credible testimony of the Board representatives. Indeed, according to the Board it produced ample evidence and testimony to demonstrate that not only had the respondent been provided with proactive training regarding reminders and memoranda regarding cell phone usage, she had been repeatedly disciplined for the improper use of her cell phone over the course of several years. The Board can only describe the Respondent's testimony as "self serving" and was riddled with inconsistencies and convenient "truths", therefore this testimony should be given little or any weight in this matter.

In summary, the Board claims that the Respondent engaged in a "pattern of dangerous, reckless, unlawful an unbecoming conduct" that was demonstrated through a significant amount of testimony and supporting documentation. Accordingly, the Board had met its burden of proof showing that the Respondent's termination was not only appropriate but given the degree of her responsibility as one entrusted with the safety of children in a public school, termination was also necessary.

Respondent

The Respondent had been working for the Lower Township Board of Education for approximately 17 years, half of her life. She became a qualified school bus driver in 2008. According to Respondent's counsel, since she is a tenured employee she may only be terminated for just cause. Accordingly therefore, the Board carries the burden proof of showing by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent is guilty of the charges set forth herein. The Respondent's counsel addressed each of the charges through its arguments.

With respect to Charge 1 regarding the use and false reporting of sick and medical leave, the Respondent alleges that if there had truly been a question of whether the Respondent could or could not work, the School District did not take advantage of its rights and request that the Respondent undergo a fitness examination. Respondent also reviewed the testimony of Mr. Drozdowski and Ms. Hewitt as well as the Respondent. Mr. Drozdowski testified that he found that the note saying that the Respondent could not work, to be unusual. Therefore, he falsely believed that somehow the Respondent and the doctor were in "cahoots." In that respect, Respondent contends that the Board did not meet its burden of substantiating a finding of improper use and false reporting of sick leave. Instead Respondent contends that the superintendent's motives were driven by his preferences as to how he thought the respondent should have handled the matter. This according to the Respondent does not amount to a violation of policy. Respondent testified credibly that she had been complaining about stress at work and was having anxiety. She was forthright with her explanations. Therefore, there was no improper use or false reporting of sick or medical leave.

In addressing the second charge alleging that the Respondent repeatedly failed to comply with Board policy and applicable law in using her cellular phone while operating the school bus, the Respondent challenged the language of the policy itself. There is no dispute that during the ten minutes in which the Respondent was parked at the Sandman school, she was not "operating the bus." Rather, the clear language shows that in order to operate "a bus" the Respondent would have to drive it.

Just because supervision said this does not necessarily mean operation does not in and of itself make it so. The Respondent reviewed the policy and statute cited. Based upon the language any use of cell phone while parked is allowed by state law and policy. The supervision's interpretation is contrary to the plain language of the policy.

With respect to the April 2014 incident where Officer Hickock issued a warning against the Respondent for using a cell phone while driving on Seashore Road without any substantiation. Rather, the Respondent denies that this happened and her testimony was clearly substantiated by the testimony of the bus aide Pamela Gittle. Moreover, one must note that the video that Officer Hickock apparently reviewed was never presented. Therefore, the charge must be denied because there was insufficient proof that the Respondent was indeed operating the bus.

With respect to the third charge, in which it was alleged that the Respondent repeatedly failed to safely operate a school bus, the Respondent asserted that there was no evidence to show that the Respondent was tailgating or speeding as complained. There could be no corroboration except for the hearsay representation by an anonymous motorist. This is insufficient to support a charge to revoke the Respondent's tenure.

With respect to charge four alleging the failure to comply with the Board policy regarding the child safety school bus inspection, the Respondent denied violating the policy. Moreover, it was noted that this policy was imposed because another driver had inadvertently left a student on her bus. There is no allegation that the Respondent left a student on the bus. Therefore, this allegation is not founded.

Charge five alleges that the Respondent repeatedly caused damage to a private property while operating her bus. This is denied by the Respondent. Moreover, the Respondent's counsel claims that the photographic evidence attached to the December 15 allegation did not support the written allegation. It was noted by the Respondent that the photograph appeared to have trees with leaves on them which would not have happened during winter. Also the Respondent asserts that the rear wheels of the bus are double wheels and the evidence of any damage shows it was done by only one tire. The Respondent alleges that there is no corroboration of video or other testimony from the citizen homeowner. Therefore the Respondent asserts that the Board did not meet its burden in proving the charge in that instance.

In Charge six, it is alleged that the Respondent failed to comply with procedures to maintain updated bus routes, maps and seating charts. In this regard, the Respondent's counsel asserts that Respondent's testimony and explanation was forthcoming and honest. The Respondent had taken the bus routes, maps and seating charts home to update them and even though she attempted to return them in time, she was unable to do so. However, there is no evidence that this was somehow detrimental to the children. Indeed, the substitute had previously ridden with the Respondent. Therefore, no one was disadvantaged by not immediately having the bus routes, maps and seating charts. At most, it was an honest mistake that was rectified as soon as possible. It was not sufficient to sustain the invocation of tenure charges.

Finally, in Charge Seven it was alleged that the Respondent generally failed to comply with administrative directives. Respondent's counsel asserts that this charge was "not specific enough to defend."

To the contrary, Respondent points to the fact that she received evaluations from 2008-2013 which did not show any alleged disregard for her responsibilities. Moreover, after the events that gave rise to the charge occurred, the Respondent was given additional duties. She was asked to take an additional run with a preschool student who had special needs. If the Respondent was such a challenged driver then the question must be raised as to why the School District would have entrusted her with the responsibility of taking an additional new route.

In general, the Respondent maintains that after the sick leave incident the supervision became and still is prejudiced to the fact that there was wrong doing on the part of theft of time. Everything else thereafter was geared toward collecting additional evidence to try to take away her tenure. In short, the Respondent's counsel asserts that there was significant animus toward the Respondent simply because she refused to sign a last chance agreement and subsequently disagreed with her supervisor in writing and refused to sign any disciplinary memoranda. No matter what the Respondent did in her job performance, she was not going to be successful.

In conclusion, the Respondent alleges that she has worked for the District since she was 19 years old and there have been no other write ups but when the note of no work came from her doctor the whole attitude and temperament of the District changed and even though she had a sufficient number sick days in her bank and an excuse note, she has not been believed to this day. The Respondent has been a good employee for 17 years and wants to continue as a driver. Therefore the Respondent requests that the charges be overturned and the Respondent reinstated to her position.

ANALYSIS AND OPINION

The New Jersey statute that provides tenure for teachers and other covered employees provide that a person protected under the statue cannot be dismissed from employment "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." NJSA 18A: 6-10(b). The general purpose of such a statute is to protect individuals under the statute from dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons" Spiewak v. Board of Education, 90 NJ 63, 73; 447 A.2d 140 (1982).

In order to sustain charges for dismissal the charges filed must be substantiated by a fair preponderance of the evidence. In Re Polk, 90 NJ 550, 560; 449 A.2d 7 (1982). The standard has been interpreted as one of reasonable probability. For example, the decision maker has to determine whether or not the evidence presented is of sufficient quality to generate a belief that the submitted theory of the case is in all likelihood the truth of what occurred. The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the giving conclusion. It should be noted that the evidence presented does not have to have the indicia of certainty but must be well founded in "reason and logic. Lesniewski v. WB Furze Corp., 308 NJ Super. 270, 279; 705 A.2d 1243 (App. Div., 1998).

The School Board is seeking to remove the Respondent Heather Grey from her employment as a school bus driver based upon seven distinct charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause. The term unbecoming conduct has been interpreted in some New Jersey case law even though the cited law has not been applied to individuals in the Respondent's position. Nevertheless, it has been defined as conduct that has the tendency to destroy public respect for such employees as well as the confidence and the operation of the Board. Karin v. City of Atlantic City, 152 NJ 532; 706 A.2d 706 (1998). This may include any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the Board. The substantiation of conduct as being unbecoming does not have to be predicated on a violation of any particular rule or policy. Such a conclusion maybe based merely on the violation of an implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an "upholder of that which is morally or legally correct" Karin v. City of Atlantic City, 152 NJ 555.

In determining whether an individual has engaged in such conduct, the arbitrator has to take into an account "any harm or injurious effect which the [teachers] conduct may have had on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system." In Re Grossman, 127 NJ Super 13; 316 A.2d 39 (1974).

The term unbecoming conduct and other just cause must be viewed in the context of the Respondent's responsibility as an employee of the School District. The Respondent has been employed as a school bus driver responsible for the safe and efficient transport of school children both to and from home. The Respondent is a skilled and professionally trained driver who holds a commercial driver's license. Therefore she is held to a higher standard as an individual whose conduct in fulfilling this responsibility is clearly in the public eye. Parents have an interest in insuring that the drivers pick up their children, transport them to school and return them home in the safest and most responsible manner possible. These parents are also members of the motoring public who constantly observe the school bus drivers conduct in driving their bus. So evidence of negligence or carelessness in the performance of the driving assignment must be given weight in determining whether a driver has engaged in unbecoming conduct.

In order to future appreciate the nature of the conduct which serves as the basis for these charges, one must consider the evidence presented in the chronological order in which each incident occurred. The evidence shows that prior to 2013 Respondent worked under another supervisor and then worked under Ms. Hewitt beginning in 2013 [T3.12-13] According to the Respondent, the mere presence of Ms. Hewitt as a supervisor has resulted in constant harassment over the course of her employment.. In other words, according to the Respondent, the charges constituted nothing but "harassment in order to remove me from my position."

Overall however, the acts raised by the School Board clearly have a negative impact on its interest in insuring the safe and professional transportation of its children.

As indicated in detail below, the conduct taken as a whole did have a destructive impact on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system.

During the academic year ending in June 2013, the Respondent had only two concerns that had been raised by Ms. Hewitt. On October 23, 2013 the Respondent received a "write – up" based upon a complaint from a parent alleging that she was speeding and texting. In that instance, the Respondent acknowledged the complaint without question.

Six months later however, the Respondent received a complaint that also included an official warning from Officer Hickock. While Respondent disputed the warning saying that she was on "school property" and the aide had handed her the phone to respond to a call from her child's school nurse, there were no other incidents or warnings for the remainder that academic year. In essence, the Respondent finished the 2013-2014 academic year and entered the summer break without any further incident. To the extent in which the Respondent was the subject of debilitating harassment during that time period, it was not apparent. These were the only complaints on the grievant's record prior to the events that led first charge in which the Respondent allegedly engaged in the improper use and false reporting of her sick leave.

If one continues to review the charges within the chronology of the underlying events, one would discover that even though the Respondent had no disputes and possibly did not interact with Ms. Hewitt for three of the prior six months, Respondent still felt that it was necessary to complain to her physician that she was under substantial harassment from Ms. Hewitt. Specifically, the Respondent testified "I explained to him how things at work had just progressively gotten worse, how I felt like Ms. Hewitt was harassing me and constantly calling me in over things that were not true or happening, and we discussed them." [T3.25 Line 21]. For some reason, in September 2014 she began complaining of stress saying that she could not drive or concentrate even though she had only been driving a few weeks into the academic year. It is difficult to credit an assertion of such anxiety based upon a hostile workplace environment when the academic year had just begun. While I am not in a position to question whether she was indeed feeling anxious, it is difficult to conclude that such anxiety was entirely the result of her relationship to Ms. Hewitt to the extent that she could not drive. Yet, she relied on that perception to convince her physician to give her a "just – in - case" medical slip allowing her to take two weeks off during the time in which she was previously aware that her family had a preplanned vacation over the Columbus Day holiday.

According to the evidence presented on October 1 the Respondent received a complaint form alleging that she was speeding and tailgating. In that moment, the Respondent refused to acknowledge the complaint and then decided to use the slip provided to her by her physician two days later. Suddenly, the Respondent presented the slip on October 3 stating that she could not work until October 17 due to insurmountable stress and anxiety even though this condition was never disclosed to her employer. She was so stressed and anxious that she could not fulfill her responsibilities as a professional driver of children.

Mr. Drozdowski questioned the note because of the timing. Respondent argued that in raising these questions, Mr. Drozdowski somehow overstepped his authority as superintendent. I must disagree, if the source of the Respondent's illness is related to her responsibility as a school bus driver, she is obligated to disclose that limitation to her employer. The note itself raised a number of questions are the District's interest. For example, if Respondent could not drive, should the employer engage a substitute? Can she perform light duty? Was her illness compensable under worker's compensation? Yet the Respondent through her physician decided to stonewall her employer's queries.

The Respondent claims that she is somehow not obligated to disclose the work – related nature of her illness since she entitled to the benefit since she has accrued sick days and there is no inherent violation in her going to Florida while she was on leave. The issue here is not about the trip to Florida. If the Respondent was truly stressed out and could not work she could have disclosed this to her employer and engaged in finding a solution for the overall problem. She still may have been able to work out an accommodation which would have allowed her to spend time in Florida with her family.

Such conduct indeed did have the impact of destroying any confidence in the Respondent's ability to meet her obligations as a driver. It is the mendaciousness of the explanation for her leave and, even if she was suffering from debilitating stress, her refusal to disclose it to the employer that provides a reasonable basis to support the allegations of the first charge in this matter. It also serves as a basis to question her honesty and ability to be forthright to her employer for the remainder of her academic year.

The second charge concerns the Respondent's repeated failure to comply with Board policy and applicable law regarding use of cellular telephones while operating a school bus. An assertion that was raised by counsel in the context of this charge concerns the interpretation and application of Board policy. Specifically, the issue concerns the interpretation of the following sentence as presented in Board Policy 8630: "the driver is prohibited from using a cellular or other wireless telephone, while operating a school bus." The policy goes on to cite state statute. The evidence relating to the charge shows that the Respondent was disciplined for using a cellular phone on October 23, 2013, April 2, 2014, March 17, 2015, March 27, 2015 and May 1, 2015

In this regard the Respondent claims that in those instances in which she received discipline she was not "operating" the bus. Indeed, she notes that at the times she was alleged to have violated the policy, her bus was parked and the engine was turned off. She was sitting on the bus waiting for the school to release her children to travel from the bus to the school entrance. The Board interprets "operating" in this context that the times in which students are present on the bus. It is expected that even though the driver is not in the act of driving, he or she must be actively monitoring the children's behavior. While one my question the wording of the policy, it is reasonable to expect the drivers to be active monitors while waiting to release the children. The Board's interpretation therefore is not arbitrary or capricious especially in light of the fact that the Board through the testimony of all of its witnesses has consistently applied this interpretation.

On the other hand, no witnesses were provided other than the Respondent to show that there was some confusion among the bus drivers with respect to the policy. Indeed, one must note that even though the Respondent was disciplined five times no one has ever challenged the policy, not the Union and not the Respondent. Furthermore, the evidence shows that since the Board has consistently applied this interpretation. Accordingly by the third or fourth time in which she was advised of the issue she should have been fully aware of this interpretation and the Board's expectations regarding compliance. Therefore to continue to violate the policy on numerous occasions regardless of the interpretations is insubordinate and is conduct unbecoming. Therefore the second charge is sustained.

In the third charge, the Board alleges that the Respondent engaged in unbecoming conducted by repeatedly failing to safely operate the school bus. In support of the charge in addition to the incident on October 1, 2014 the Respondent was observed on video footage engaging in a number of activities on the bus which the Board considered to be unsafe. These are noted specifically in paragraphs 79 and 80 in the Statement of Tenure Charges including incorrectly wearing her seatbelt and removing it while the bus was moving, permitting a student to walk from the back of the bus to the front while the bus was moving, removing a broom, using that broom to swat at a wasp and then wiping down the area all while the bus was moving and finally accessing her purse while the bus was moving.

The Respondent did not substantially challenge these incidents accept to say that these are examples of how the Board in general and Ms. Hewitt in particular had targeted her by using the camera devices. Respondent testified that she had raised the issue regarding the position of the cameras with Ms. Hewitt and Mr. Onorato as early as April 2013. According to the Respondent even though she alleged that they would look into it she admitted that the cameras continued to be on her in 2014 and 2015. [T3.60]

In 2008, the Board promulgated a policy that put the Respondent and other drivers on notice regarding the use of "devices to monitor and/or observe pupil behavior...school bus driver discipline procedure and/or school bus driver driving techniques." The School District has an interest in monitoring driver performance on the bus. Based upon the language of this policy, it has been consistently applied.

One must note that the testimony that most supports the allegation of disparate treatment in this regard is that of mechanic Mr. Ryan Adams who said that the tapes from the Respondent's bus was requested to be viewed more often than others [T4.48]. There is no dispute that the Board began to view more tapes after an incident in which a student was left on another bus. This did not involve the Respondent. Even though more of the Respondent's tapes may have been pulled, one could argue that it was justified given the issues raised by the Respondent during that year and behavior in October 2014. In sum, there is insufficient evidence to show that the violations which were visible in the video could somehow be excused because she was being disparately targeted by placing video cameras and the review of the tapes. Accordingly, in and of itself the violations that were observed on the tapes given the definition of unbecoming conduct as cited above, clearly contrary to the expectations of one who is responsible for the transport of children and also someone who is professionally licensed and charged to exercise that responsibility. Accordingly, I am sustaining charge number three.

Charge four alleges that the Respondent failed to comply with Board policy regarding child safety bus inspection. The evidence in this case is based upon a video which showed a student going to the rear of the Respondent's bus to release the child safety alarm. In this regard, the Respondent had provided little testimony to disprove what had occurred. The Board's policy is quite clear. The driver is expected to walk to the back of the bus to disengage the alarm in order to ensure that there are no other students that remain on the bus after a route has been concluded. In my opinion, the policy as stated is clear and is very reasonable in its purpose. Nevertheless while this does not in and of itself constitute serious misconduct, in light of the overall conduct that has occurred within the short period of time, I do find that this is a basis to support this particular charge.

In Charge five, the grievant is alleged to have repeatedly caused damage to private property while operating her school bus. This charge centers around two complaints by a property owner asserting that the Respondent had cut her bus short and drove across the corner of his property. The two incidents occurred in December 2014 and May 2015. The Respondent generally denied riding across the individual's property. Nevertheless, the complaint that was registered identified the Respondent's bus on both occasions and the corner is on the route.

The basis of the denial in addition is based upon the issue of the photographs taken by Ms. Hewitt who visited the property after the complaints were submitted. The photographs were attached to the complaint dated in December 2014. In that regard, Respondent's counsel accurately pointed out that the photograph showed leaves on the trees in the background of the photograph. Therefore, I agree with the conclusion that those photographs could not have been taken during the investigation in December incident. At the same time however one must keep in mind that the second incident occurred in May 2015. In that regard, the photograph would have supported what was seen in the investigation. Given these circumstances there is a presumption that the photographs were mistakenly attached to the wrong complaint.

Respondent also noted that it appeared that there was only one wheel on the property which would not identify the Respondent's bus. I must disagree with the observation and note that it appeared to this arbitrator that indeed two wheels cut the corner of this property. Therefore I believe that the Board has met its burden in showing that the incident did occur and that the Respondent's bus definitely was identified and there is no dispute that the property was on the Respondent's bus route. Therefore, I will sustain charge five.

In Charge six the Respondent allegedly failed to comply with procedures to maintain updated bus routes, maps and seating charts. During testimony, the Respondent freely admitted that the route charts were not present because she had taken them home to update them. However, she was not able to return the document prior to beginning of the first route the following morning. At first, she had asked her children to drop off the necessary documents before they reported to school, but they failed to do so. Eventually, the Respondent's father delivered the packages. He arrived too late to meet the beginning of the morning routes.

The Respondent further maintained that the substitute driver had ridden with her previously and therefore there should have been no problem with him understanding the route. However, this conclusion is inconsistent with the fact that the route as well as the identification of one of the children to be picked up was changed on the day before which necessitated the update. It would not be fair to assume that a substitute, even though he did preview the route, would have been able to pick up and respond to the adjustment which required the update of the list. This is why the School District placed this requirement. In this regard, therefore I find that the Respondent violated the policy.

Finally, the Board stated that the Respondent had engaged in a general failure to comply with the administrative directives. This represents a compilation of all of the directives that have been mentioned above and the Respondent's failure to comply with them. It is noted that the Respondent has alleged that she had been the subject of harassment by management in general and Ms. Hewitt in particular. In all of these cases it is noted that the Respondent in meeting with Ms. Hewitt, Mr. Onorato and Mr. Drozdowski did have union representation. In addition, the Respondent also has asserted that the policies which were cited were unreasonable and to a certain extent, administered in an unfair manner. Yet over all of this time the Respondent did not grieve a single discipline or policy application even though the evidence showed that she did have the representation of her union. In addition it is important to note that even though the Respondent felt that she was harassed to the extent that she could not work, that she did not place any grievance or claim alleging that there was a hostile work environment due to such harassment.

One must also ask whether these disciplines and charges warranted such a severe discipline as the removal from a position given the fact that the Respondent did have a number of moderate to positive annual evaluations. The one evaluation that was critical in this case was the one that was issued in April 14, 2015. The reviews were indicative of moderate to satisfactory performance with the exception of poor dependability due to an unsatisfactory attendance record. [R3] In addition, this evaluation was issued before the numerous violations noted in May and June, 2015. Therefore, despite these reviews, the Board has met its burden by showing by a preponderance of the evidence that the Respondent did commit the actions that served as the basis for the charges set forth herein.

It is important to note that all of these disciplines with the exception of one or two occurred within one academic year. This demonstrates a clear pattern of misconduct that warrants consideration of the removal of one's tenure. In this regard, I must find that the weight of the evidence presented support this conclusion. Therefore, based upon the evidence presented I must find that the School District has established a sufficient basis for the charges set forth herein. The charges are sustained.

In addition, a date for oral arguments relative to motions made was set, December 18, 2015. Additionally, a tentative schedule of hearing dates was established.

Subsequently, the parties exchanged initial disclosures and discovery. Further, Respondent submitted a motion to dismiss the charges on December 1, 2015 (HOX2). The District submitted its opposition to the motion to dismiss on December 15, 2015 (HOX3). As indicated above, oral arguments concerning the motion to dismiss were offered on December 18, 2015. The Arbitrator denied the motion to dismiss the charges on January 6, 2016. Hearings were conducted on January 14, 15, 21, February 2, 8, 11, 2016. Post hearing briefs were submitted on May 1, 2016

CONTENTIONS OF THE DISTRICT

The District argued as follows:

Respondent is a tenured teacher. Tenure charges have been proffered against him. These charges are based upon Inefficiency, Conduct Unbecoming and Other Just Cause.

Charge One alleges Inefficiency. Respondent received ratings of Ineffective (2012-13) and Partially Ineffective (2013-14 and 2014-15). He was under a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) as of March 2015. The plan was initiated at that time because he had been removed from the school until February of the 2014-15 school year.

When he returned to the Hawkins Street School in February 2015, he was placed in a third grade class. In order to address his deficiencies, he began working on the CAP with Vice Principal Orr (Orr). He was not formally observed at this time because he purportedly could not manage the class. In an effort to reduce the disruptiveness, Principal Marques (Marques) created a kindergarten position for Respondent. He was required to teach letter identification to 30 kindergarten students, in groups of five. Despite the efforts of Marques and Orr, Respondent rendered inefficient service for the period February-June of the 2014-15 school year.

NJAC 6A:10-4.4 (e)1 states that teachers who are present less than 40% of the school days shall receive at least two observations to earn a teacher practice score. Due to his administrative removals, Respondent had extended absences in 2013-14 and 2014-15 and the District was in substantial compliance with the evaluation requirements of the TEACHNJ Act.

Charge Two, Conduct Unbecoming, and Other Just Cause deal with the inappropriate use of corporal punishment on two occasions. Respondent's misconduct in this regard led to significant disruption in the school and in his classroom. His inability to manage his class shifted his responsibility to other teachers, security guards and to administrators.

Charge Three alleges that, based on the totality of the circumstances, Respondent neglected his duties as an educator. The District's unrebutted evidence shows that Respondent failed to follow district policies and procedures concerning student management and failed to invest in his own professional development and to address his deficiencies despite the efforts made by the District and school personnel.

The District produced the following witnesses: Keith Barton, Executive Managing Director of Operations for the District, Principal Sandra Marques, Vice Principal Ronald Orr, Mitchell Center, Assistant Superintendent of the District, and Vice Principal Christine Magalhes DiTaranto. Respondent was the only witness for the defense.

The District's witnesses supported the tenure charges. Respondent's testimony did not adduce credible evidence to rebut the evidence produced by the District.

The District established the Tenure Charge of Conduct Unbecoming. It defined Conduct Unbecoming through citation to case law. It is understood that a charge of Conduct Unbecoming goes to a teacher's fitness to perform his/her duties and functions. A single incident involving Conduct Unbecoming is grounds for the revocation of tenure.

The record shows that, on two separate occasions, Respondent made physical conduct with students in an effort to discipline them. This constituted corporal punishment and is a violation of District policy and State statute. Respondent's actions in this regard caused a risk of harm to the students and disrupted the school community.

Respondent was aware of the District policy of student disciplinary procedures and staff behavior. It is contained within the Hawkins Street School Handbook. Teachers are expected to respond to student misbehavior by seeking counseling and other proper interventions through referrals to the SST team.

Repeated acts of teacher hostility, whether directed at students or displayed in their presence, negatively impacts the educational environment and constitutes justification for removing the teacher from the school. In this case, Marques witnessed the incident involving NM. Her testimony was supported by contemporaneous documents and an unrebutted Memorandum of Conduct Unbecoming.

Respondent denied shoving NM but admitted yelling at him. Respondent showed no remorse for yelling at NM and offered no evidence in support of his denial of shoving the student.

As to the incident with TP, Respondent claimed that the student was acting out as an excuse for grabbing the student's arms. However, on cross-examination, Respondent denied grabbing TP by the arms and shoulders and alleged that the student was running around the room and knocking over chairs and desks. For his part, TP told Marques that Respondent had hurt his arms.

Marques noted that the majority of the students confirmed TP's statements. The principal found TP to be credible.

Under New Jersey law, a letter of reprimand is a form of discipline. It may form the basis for additional disciplinary action and can support a charge of Conduct Unbecoming.

Respondent poses a harm or the potential to cause harm to students. He had been administratively removed from his classroom for one day and received a Memorandum of Conduct Unbecoming. He was also administratively removed from his classroom from February 28, 2014 until the end of the 2013-14 school year while a second incident of corporal punishment was investigated.

Further, at the end of the end of the 2013-14 school year, tenure charges were served on Respondent. These charges were dismissed based on an interpretation of the 2012-13 school year as a pilot year. Respondent returned to Hawkins Street School in February 2014 and was given two Memoranda of Conduct Unbecoming based on interactions with school staff and administrators. The District met its burden of proving that Respondent has demonstrated unbecoming conduct.

With respect to the charge of Inefficiency, the District met its burden to dismiss Respondent under a preponderance of the evidence standard and the TEACHNJ Act. Under TEACHNJ, tenure charges for Inefficiency must be filed to teachers receiving the ratings that had been given to Respondent.

As to the number of classroom observations performed on Respondent during the 2012-13, 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years, the District either complied or substantially complied with the regulations. In order to dismiss a tenure charge based on a flawed evaluation process, there needs to be evidence that an error in the process materially affected the outcome of the evaluation.

The question to be resolved is whether the District was in substantial compliance with the evaluation process. A review of the record indicates that the District met its burden of substantially complying the required number of evaluations set forth in the statute.

Even if the rubric set forth in NJSA 18A:6-17.2 is found not to be appropriate for the judging of the evidence in this matter, the District met its burden under the well settled preponderance of the evidence approach. Despite significant reviews of Respondent's performance and significant efforts and time on the part of administrators to support Respondent's areas of weakness, Respondent did not improve upon his inefficient performance. Thus, based upon a preponderance of the credible evidence, the District proved that Respondent is an ineffective teacher and that his tenure should be terminated.

The District established Other Just Cause to dismiss Respondent. The undisputed evidence of numerous classroom management and supervision issues and neglect of duty sufficient to revoke tenure.

There is evidence of a three year period of demonstrated poor performance, resistance and a refusal to accept support. Respondent shirked his duty to manage classroom behavior and to follow relevant protocols for addressing student behaviors.

He was given coaching and support to address challenging students. He did not implement the strategies he was shown and did not complete the paperwork needed for referrals to SST. He did not follow the District's Discipline Policy and attempted to shift the responsibilities onto administrators, including the principal, and security personnel. When Respondent testified, he did not comment about his unprofessional conduct when arguing with staff in the presence of students and becoming confrontational and pounding on a desk during his Annual Evaluation Conference.

Respondent was uncooperative during the creation of a CAP and was unprofessional in his interactions with colleagues and administrators. During the 2014-15 school year, Respondent engaged in altercations with another teacher. Principal Marques recorded several incidents that took place in February and March 2015.

Respondent's actions in failing to adhere to disciplinary policies and protocols and his refusal to take responsibility for his own behavior or that of students disrupted the Hawkins Street School.

A special assignment which Respondent requested was created for him. Despite this, he continued to act inappropriately with administrators, he refused to sign evaluations and raised his voice and pounded a desk during a post-observation conference. This pattern of conduct constitutes unbecoming conduct, which is sufficient to establish just cause to terminate Respondent's employment with the District.

Respondent has demonstrated inefficiency, unbecoming conduct and other just cause for dismissal. His tenured employment with the District should be terminated.

CONTENTIONS OF RESPONDENT:

Respondent argued as follows:

The tenure charges of Inefficiency warrant dismissal since the District failed to substantially comply with the evaluation and rehabilitative procedures set forth by the TEACHNJ Act. In addition, the tenure charge of Conduct Unbecoming must be dismissed because it is not supported by a preponderance of the evidence and is precluded by the Entire Controversy Doctrine.

TEACHNJ was signed into law on August 6, 2012. As of the 2013-14 school year, an evaluation rubric was established. Under the statute, teachers who are rated Ineffective or Partially Effective in two Summative Annual Evaluations are to be charged with Inefficiency. The only evaluations which may be used for this purpose are those conducted in accordance with the established rubric.

The Tenure Charges of Inefficiency, which can only be brought under Section 25 of TEACHNJ should be dismissed. There is nothing in Section 25 that would allow a charge of inefficiency to be heard under Section 8. Case law indicates that Section 8 refers to Conduct Unbecoming. Nothing in Section 8 allows for the charging of inefficiency.

Section 23(a) of the Act suggests that inefficiency charges must be brought pursuant to Section 25. This section sets forth the determinations to be made by an arbitrator in Section 25 cases.

In this case, the District failed to substantially adhere to the evaluation process. Its actions were arbitrary and capricious.

The statute requires a requisite number of observations, measurement of student progress through Student Growth Objectives (SGO) and assistance for underperforming teachers through professional development, which included CAPs.

The District failed to provide Respondent with the requisite number of observations. The statute indicates that teachers shall be observed at least three times during a school year. It adds that teachers on a CAP must be observed an additional time.

Respondent was on a CAP for the 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years. He did not receive the four required observations in either year. In 2013-14, Respondent received a long observation on October 4, 2013 and a short observation on November 15, 2013. He received his Annual Summative evaluation on May 15, 2014.

In 2014-15, he was again observed twice; a short observation on April 10, 2015 and a long observation on May 7, 2015. Although he received another short observation on o June 16, 2015, it was not part of his Summative Evaluation since it was completed on June 2, 2015.

Thus, in 2013-14 and 2014-15, the District fell short of the required four required observations of teachers on a CAP. It must be noted that Peer Evaluations of teachers cannot be considered observations.

The District failed to comply with statutory procedures because Respondent should not have received summative evaluations without having the requisite number of valid Teacher Practice and Student Achievement components. Evaluations underlying charges of Inefficiency must be at least based on objective measures of student performance, i.e. SGOs., using standardized assessments.

This matter is also reflected in Framework for Effective Teaching policy manual. This policy defines a student learning goal as a long-term objective on which the teacher will focus for his/her students.

These policies are consistent with State regulations concerning evaluations of teachers. SGOs are explicitly mandated by statute as a component of student achievement upon which Summative evaluations are based. Under the law, SGOs must be specific and measurable, based on available student learning data, aligned to Core Curriculum and based on growth and/or achievement.

Each teacher, like Respondent, without a student growth percentile must have at least two SGOs developed in conjunction with his/her supervisor or a principal's designee. These SGOs can only be adjusted by the teacher in consultation with an administrator by February 15th of the school year and may only be calculated by the supervisor. Once the SGOs have been calculated, they must be discussed during the annual summary conference, if available at that time.

Teachers are evaluated based on components of Teacher Practice and Student Achievement. Even teachers who are absent for a portion of student school days may receive a summative evaluation as long as they have both a practice score and a student achievement score based on the requisite number of observations and SGOs.

Teachers present for fewer than 40% of the number of school days must receive at least two observations. Student progress is measured by assessing the progress of students meeting two SGOs. Teachers without component scores in Teacher Practice and Student Achievement may not receive a summative rating for the year.

Respondent does not have valid component scores in Teacher Practice because he received only two observations n 2013-14 and three in 2014-15. Even though he was on administrative leave in both years, he was present 40% or more in each of the years. Since he did not have the required number of observations in either year, he did not have a valid score in the Teacher Practice component in both years.

As to the SGOs, Respondent was required to have two SGOs for each of 2013-14 and 2014-15. Marques testified that no SGOs were established for 2013-14. She said that Respondent was measured on student growth areas, which she noted were different from SGOs.

As to 2014-15, the school was authorized to use student growth areas in lieu of SGOs for 2014-15. However, no such authorization was given for the 2013-14 school year. Thus, Respondent should not have received a summative rating for 2013-14. Therefore, without a summative rating for both 2013-14 and 2014-15, the District was precluded from bringing forth tenure charges for Inefficiency.

The District failed to comply with the statutory requirements for CAPs. CAPs need to address areas in need of improvement identified in the evaluation rubric, set forth specific , demonstrable goals for improvement, include responsibilities of the employee and District in the implementation of the CAP and include time lines for meeting the goals.

Respondent received CAPs for the 2013-14 and 2014-15. He was on administrative leave until February of the 2014-15 year and began teaching kindergarten in March 2015. He was on the CAP for only three or four moths.

Case law in tenure cases suggest that TEACHNJ anticipates observations being scheduled throughout the year, a mid-year review and a CAP will provide the assistance needed for an underperforming teacher to correct deficiencies.

Respondent was not given an appropriate amount of time in which to improve his evaluations. In addition, the District did not provide specific support for Respondent, as required by the CAP. While Marques and Vice Principal DiTaranto indicated Respondent's specific needs, Vice Principal Orr said that a teacher was assigned to assist Respondent for one week and Marques conceded that the resources provided to Respondent were provided to all teachers. The District failed to provide any professional development that was tailored to assist Respondent overcome his deficiencies.

The District engaged in arbitrary and capricious conduct. It has brought charges of Inefficiency against Respondent three times. Instead of spending three years trying to remove Respondent from his profession, it should have met its obligation to provide the support needed for him to remedy his deficiencies.

It acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner by failing to adhere to the TEACHNJ requirements. As such, the evidence cannot support the revocation of Respondent's tenure and the dismissal of charges of Inefficiency must be dismissed.

The Conduct Unbecoming charges must be dismissed because they are not supported by a preponderance of the evidence and they are barred by the Entire Controversy Doctrine. Unfitness to remain a teacher can be demonstrated by a single incident if it is serious enough, while less serious matters should be subject to progressive discipline.

He cites judicial case law relative to the use of corporal punishment. He stresses the Murphy case that indicated that a loss of pay was warranted but dismissal was not.

Corporal punishment is defined by statute. Respondent is being charged with unbecoming conduct based on two incidents of alleged corporal punishment. He was accused of shoving students on two different occasions.

In one instance, Respondent raised his voice but did not commit corporal punishment. There was no finding of abuse and half the students in the class said that there was no physical touching, Despite the preponderance of evidence that Respondent did not commit corporal punishment, he was disciplined with a letter of reprimand.

In the second instance, Respondent gently put his hands on an unruly and out of control student and guided him to where he had been seated. Respondent was put on administrative leave for the rest of the year despite the presence of an investigation that vindicated him. He ultimately returned to the classroom.

Respondent denies shoving or exerting undue physical force on any student. He was merely trying to quell disturbances from out of control unruly students and to prevent these students from injuring themselves and/or others. The instances do not rise to the level of corporal punishment and do not support a charge of Conduct Unbecoming.

Even if Respondent engaged in Conduct Unbecoming, progressive discipline should be employed. Thus, his tenure should not be revoked because of these two incidents. He had been previously disciplined and the District should not be permitted to further discipline him.

Furthermore, the District was obligated to bring all of its claims during the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years. Under the Entire Controversy Doctrine, the District should be precluded from bringing this charge in the current set of charges.

All of the tenure charges should be dismissed.

OPINION

After considering the documentary and testimonial evidence, the undersigned concludes that Leonard Yarborough is guilty of Charge II. Charges I and III are dismissed. For the sake of clarity, each of the charges will be addressed separately.

ANALYSIS OF THE CHARGES

CHARGE I:

This charge alleges Inefficiency. A fundamental issue in this case relates to the evaluation process requirements set forth in TEACHNJ. According to the statute, teachers who are rated Ineffective or Partially Effective in two consecutive years must be charged with Inefficiency.

The District asserted that the process it followed was in substantial compliance with the statute, while Respondent argued that the District was out of compliance with the statutory requirements. As such, Respondent maintained that Charge I must be dismissed.

It is appropriate to first review the evaluation requirements under TEACHNJ. This charge references the 2012-13, 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years. Respondent received end of year evaluations in each of the years. He was rated Ineffective in 2012-13 and Partially Effective in 2013-14 and 2014-15.

TEACHNJ became effective during the 2013-14 school year. It had no bearing on the 2012-13 school year. Thus, the discussion of the statutory evaluation requirements is limited to 2013-14 and 2014-15.

As noted above, under the statute, teachers who are rated Ineffective or Partially Effective in two consecutive years must be charged with Inefficiency after the second of the consecutive years. Consistent with this requirement, the instant charges were served and the instant proceeding was convened.

There are substantive requirements under TEACHNJ. First, the Annual Summative evaluations must be based on three lesson observations. In addition, teachers who are serving under a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) must have one additional observation. In short, these teachers must be observed a minimum of four times.

A review of the record indicates that Respondent was observed twice in 2013-14 and twice in 2014-15. The District pointed out that a relevant provision of the statute indicates that teachers who are present less than 40% of the total school days for students must receive a minimum of two observations during that academic year in order to earn a teacher practice score. For purposes of this analysis, teacher practice reflects the efficiency or competency with which the teachers practices his/her teaching.

The District stressed that this exception pertains to this case. In order to determine the applicability of this exception to the statutory requirement, an analysis of Respondent's attendance in 2013-14 and 2014-15 had to be done.

The record suggests that there are 191 days of teacher attendance in the school year. 40% of 191 days is 76 days. Thus, according to the 40% exception, a teacher had to have taught 76 or fewer days for there to have been a reduction in the number of observations from three or four, depending on the CAP status, to two.

A review of Respondent's attendance data suggests that Respondent was present on more than 100 student school days in 2013-14. This number is significantly higher than the maximum of 76 days permitted under the 40% exception rule.

Respondent needed to be observed four times during the 2013-14 school year, three times based upon TeachNJ and once because he was on a CAP. One must recall that that Respondent was rated Ineffective in 2012-13 and was under a CAP in 2013-14.

A second evaluation requirement in 2013-14 is that teachers set one or two Student Growth Objectives (SGOs). A review of respondent's 2013-14 Annual Evaluation reveals that there were student learning goals set. They were not called SGOs but substantively, they were very similar.

It should be added that the outcomes of these goals was not determined. Respondent was removed from the school as of March 1, 2014 and did not return before the end of the year.

Thus, the District did not comply with the TeachNJ requirement of Respondent being observed four times during the 2013-14 school year. Therefore, the 2013-14 Annual Evaluation is invalid and cannot be considered under Charge I.

Turning now to 2014-15, Respondent was present on approximately 80 student attendance days. In addition, the District was given a waiver with respect to SGOs. Ordinarily, the District would have been in substantial compliance with the evaluation regulations in 2014-15.

However, Inefficiency charges are brought after two consecutive years of Ineffective or Partially Effective ratings. In this case, the District did not comply with the statutory evaluation requirements in 2013-14. Therefore, even if 2014-15 was found to be in compliance with the TEACHNJ requirements, at most it could only be the first of the two consecutive years of Ineffective or Partially Effective ratings.

As a consequence, despite best efforts by its counsel, the District's failure to comply with the evaluation standards must result in the dismissal of Charge I.

CHARGE II:

The gravamen of Charge II is that Respondent used inappropriate corporal punishment on two different occasions, once on October 21, 2013 and again on February 28, 2014. The District concluded that Respondent was guilty of Conduct Unbecoming.

For purposes of this discussion, NJSA 18A:6-1 proscribes the use of physical force against students in educational settings. The statute states as follows:

> No person employed or engaged in a school or educational institution, whether public or private, shall inflict or cause to be inflicted corporal punishment upon a pupil attending such school or institution; but any such person may, within the scope of his employment use and apply such amounts of force as is reasonable and necessary:
>
> (1) to quell a disturbance, threatening physical injury to others;
>
> (2) obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of a pupil;
>
> (3) for the purpose of self-defense; and
>
> (4) for the protection of persons or property;
>
> and such acts, or any of them, shall not be construed to constitute corporal punishment within the meaning and intendment of this section.

With definition in mind, it is necessary to consider the facts of the two cited instances. They will be addressed separately.

October 21, 2013

Principal Marques testified that she entered the classroom and witnessed Respondent shoving an eight year old student, NM, while screaming at him (TS page 163). Marques considered Respondent's actions to constitute corporal punishment. She removed Respondent from the classroom for a day and issued a Memorandum of Conduct Unbecoming (DX3).

For his part, Respondent indicated that he raised his voice in order to cause NM to stop disrupting the class (TS page 698). He insisted that he did not inflict corporal punishment.

He observed that NM had been questioned about the incident by the school nurse and school social worker. He stressed that NM told both of these people that Respondent did not shove him (TS page 102-13).

Marques arranged for the matter to investigated. The students in the class were interviewed and their statements were summarized and were added to the Report of Incident (DX1&2). The statements of the students varied. However, two comments were clear. First, a significant number of students confirmed that Marques had entered the room at the time of the incident and, second, a significant number of the students interviewed stated that Respondent became angry at NM, yelled at NM and pushed or grabbed him (NM)

The confirmation of Marques's presence at the time of the incident adds credibility to her testimony about seeing Respondent shoving NM. Further, the confirming statements of the students also makes it more likely than not that Respondent pushed or shoved NM.

It is true that there were students who did not say that they saw Respondent make physical contact with NM. To a large extent, this should be expected. Eye witness testimony is not always reliable because witnesses often view the same incident in very different ways. As to what NM may have told the nurse and the social worker, students who had misbehaved may be reluctant to say that they were shoved for fear that they will be subject to additional criticism.

What is dispositive here is that Marques was clearly present at the time of the incident and her rendition of what happened was confirmed by students. In sum, the undersigned is persuaded that Respondent inflicted corporal punishment on NM.

Respondent argued that he had already been disciplined for this matter and that further discipline would constitute double jeopardy. This argument fails.

The memorandum he received (DX3). While it is entitled a Letter of Reprimand, it is, in fact, a counseling memo. It recites a discussion that took place between Marques and Respondent and counsels Respondent of the potential for future discipline. There was no discipline imposed but cautioned as to the potential for disciplinary action in the future.

A review of the statutory definition makes it clear that none of the exceptions to corporal punishment are applicable here. The Arbitrator concludes that Respondent was having difficulty managing NM and resorted to physical means of controlling the child.

February 28, 2014

The second alleged instance of corporal punishment took place on February 28, 2014. The incident was reported to Marques. Respondent was charged with grabbing TP by the arm and hurting the student. Marques reported the matter to DCP&P. The matter was investigated and a report was generated by that agency (DX6).

There were two important findings in the report. For purposes of this hearing, Respondent was found to have grabbed TP by the arms and shoulders and to have pushed him to the floor. In addition, TP was found to not be an abused child as defined in NJSA 9:6-8.21.

The instant hearing has been convened to determine if corporal punishment was employed. The DCP&P report is relevant in terms of the investigation it conducted. Its findings suggest that Respondent did, indeed, employ corporal punishment. While the agency is charged with determining if there was abuse, this proceeding has been convened to determine if corporal punishment was used.

There are different statutory standards for corporal punishment and abuse. It may well be that the standard for abuse was not satisfied, However, such a finding does not preclude the presence of corporal punishment.

Respondent stated that TP was a danger to himself and others and was knocking over furniture (TS702). Respondent's version of the incident was not confirmed by the report. It simply stated that TP refused to follow Respondent's directives.

The Arbitrator concludes that grabbing a student by the arms and shoulders and then pushing the student to the floor constitutes corporal punishment. With that being said, the undersigned finds that the District met its burden of proving Specifications 2-5 of Charge II.

Further, Respondent asserted that, under the Entire Controversy Principle, the charges of corporal punishment had to have been raised in the charges served after the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years. He stressed that the failure to do so then precludes their being considered at this time.

It is clear that the two earlier sets of charges had been dismissed on procedural grounds. As such they are a nullity and the fact that the corporal punishment was not charged earlier does not suggest that the District's earlier error, if it was a legal error, cannot be cured by including the charges in a subsequent set of charges that, in fact, survived a Motion to Dismiss.

Respondent's argument suggests that the corporal punishment charges could never be litigated if those charges were not part of the 2012-13 charges. Such a position is extreme and flies in the face of numerous examples of manners in which errors can be remedied.

In short, the District met its burden of proving Charge II. Therefore, Respondent is guilty of Conduct Unbecoming.

CHARGE III:

This charge alleged Other Just Cause for dismissal. It restated the allegations found in Charges I and II and alleged that the cumulative effect of Respondent's misconduct and inefficiency constitute other just cause for dismissal.

Charge I has been dismissed based on improper evaluations. To consider them under Charge III would constitute an end run around the statute. It would, in effect, resurrect dismissed charges under a different heading. That would thwart the apparent intent of TEACHNJ.

Respondent was found culpable of Charge II. To consider them again under Charge III would raise the specter of double jeopardy. One may not be charged with the same misconduct twice. To do so would result in a respondent being penalized twice for the same misconduct.

In sum, Charge III is dismissed.

PENALTY

Having reviewed the case law, the undersigned is persuaded that dismissal is excessive in this case. Charge I was dismissed because of the District's failure to properly implement the evaluation procedures and standards set forth in TEACHNJ. Charge III was dismissed due to its redundancy of Charge I.

The issue here is the determination of an appropriate penalty. When considering this question, the focus must be on Respondent. Specifically, if he is to be reinstated, the matter to be resolved is whether Respondent has grown as a result of the process of going through this hearing.

The Arbitrator has serious doubts about Respondent's recognition of his need to re-examine his professional bearing. A review of his testimony suggests that he has taken little or no responsibility for his actions.

He was found culpable of two instances of corporal punishment. He essentially blamed the students for his actions. There was little that showed any introspection on his part. He failed to recognize that he needs to focus on additional ways and means of managing his classes.

He seems to believe that it may be beyond his ken to properly manage students who are beyond the kindergarten level. His teaching certificate does not limit him to teaching kindergarten.

He expressed little remorse for his conduct. As noted above, he held the students, not himself, accountable for the corporal punishment. He insisted that he is an effective teacher when that may not be true.

It is the view of the undersigned that the past may be prelude to the future if Respondent does not seriously hold himself accountable for his actions. If he fails to do so, he may be part of the disciplinary process again. If he successfully does so, he will likely have a satisfying career as a teacher. He has serious choices before him and the undersigned trusts that he will make good ones.

As to the penalty, Respondent cited Murphy as being a case that is on point. Like Respondent, Murphy was found guilty to have engaged in corporal punishment twice. S/he was not discharged but was denied pay for 120 days.

Given the totality of the circumstances here, the undersigned concludes that a similar penalty is appropriate here. Thus, the Arbitrator finds that appropriate penalty to be imposed on Leonard Yarborough is a 120 day suspension without pay. Therefore, based on the above, the undersigned makes the following

1. Leonard Yarborough is guilty of Charge II.
2. The following charges are dismissed: Charges I & III.
3. The penalty imposed on Leonard Yarborough is a 120 day suspension without pay.

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Penny Keough, School District of the City of Burlington, Burlington County. Agency Dkt. No. 119-4/16.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with respondent Penny Keough's Motion for a Stay of the tenure proceedings pending the resolution of the discrimination and retaliation complaint that was filed by the respondent against the Burlington Board of Education in the Superior Court, Law Division. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), a motion for stay is considered an extraordinary remedy that may only be issued upon a finding that the moving party has met each prong of the four-pronged standard for the granting of interim relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Thus, a stay may be granted where necessary to prevent irreparable harm, where the legal right underlying the movant's claim is settled, where there is a likelihood of success on the merits and where the relative hardship to the moving party favors granting such relief. Id. at 132-134.

Upon review of the parties' submissions, I find that the respondent has failed to meet the standard required for a stay of the tenure proceedings. Most notably, the respondent has failed to establish that a stay is necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is irreparable when it cannot be addressed with monetary damages. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-332. This standard contemplates that the harm also be both substantial and immediate. Subcarrier Communications, Inc. v. Day, 299 N.J. Super. 634, 638 (App. Div. 1997).

The respondent argues that a stay is necessary because if she wishes to litigate the issue of discrimination and retaliation, she must do so in Superior Court only, or forever forfeit her right to do so. In support of her argument, however, the respondent misconstrues the holding in Steven J. Winters v. North Hudson Regional Fire and Rescue, et al., 212 N.J. 67 (2012). The Court did not hold that all administrative proceedings should be stayed pending the outcome of a retaliation claim in Superior Court; but rather, the Court found that any retaliation claims that are not fully presented during an administrative proceeding may not be subsequently filed in another forum after the administrative proceeding is completed. In Winters, supra, the employee initially raised the retaliation claim in the administrative proceeding but he did not fully present his evidence during the administrative proceeding. Under those circumstances, the Court held that, "Winters cannot take advantage of his own tactic of throttling back on his claim of retaliation in the administrative proceeding after having initially raised it. Retaliation was a central theme of his argument and that he chose not to present there his comprehensive proofs of that claim does not afford him a second bite at the apple...." Winters, supra, at 88. Moreover, in Winters, supra, the Court actually put employees "on notice that integration of employer-retaliation claims should be anticipated and addressed where raised as part of the discipline review process." Winters, supra, at 74.

Throughout the tenure proceedings in this case the respondent will be afforded the opportunity to fully and comprehensively present the discrimination and retaliation claims in defense of the tenure charges. As the Court pointed out, "administrative tribunals can and do provide a full and fair opportunity for litigation of an issue." Winters, supra at 87 (citations omitted). Further, unlike in Winters, supra, the respondent has already filed a complaint in Superior Court, therefore, she has persevered any claims that do not fall within the Commissioner's jurisdiction. Therefore, the respondent has failed to establish that she will suffer irreparable harm if the tenure proceedings proceed in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

In light of the fact that all of the Crowe prongs must be met in order for a stay to be granted, it is not necessary to analyze the three remaining factors. Accordingly, the respondent's request for a stay of the tenure proceedings is hereby DENIED.[1] The respondent shall file an Answer to the tenure charges within 10 days after the date of this decision.

Sincerely,

Peter Shulman
Acting Commissioner

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATE OF JAMES MESSINA, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF HOBOKEN, HUDSON COUNTY.

SYNOPSIS

In February 2016, the Commissioner of Education issued an Order to Show Cause requiring respondent to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending his teaching certificate for unprofessional conduct pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for resigning his position without giving the required notice. The respondent failed to answer the order. Respondent was duly advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to respond would cause each allegation raised by the Board to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for implementation of the suspension.

| IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATE OF JAMES MESSINA, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF HOBOKEN, HUDSON COUNTY. | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATIONDECISION |

For Petitioner, Marie-Laurence Fabian, Esq.

No appearance by or on behalf of respondent

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on February 17, 2016, by way of an Order to Show Cause served by petitioner, the Hoboken Board of Education (Board), upon the respondent, James Messina, requiring respondent to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending his teaching certificate pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for resigning without giving the notice required by his contract with petitioner. By notice dated February 18, 2016, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Bureau) acknowledged receipt of proof that the Order to Show Cause had been served upon respondent and directed respondent to answer within 20 days.

No answer having yet been received, on March 15, 2016, the Bureau sent respondent a second notice – via regular and certified mail – directing that he file an answer within ten days. The notice advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to answer would cause each allegation in petitioner's papers to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner. The certified mail return receipt card indicates that the March 15, 2016 notice was delivered on March 17, 2016.

No answer having yet been received, on April 4, 2016, the Bureau sent respondent a final notice, via regular and certified mail, directing that he file an answer within ten days. The notice advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to answer would cause each allegation in petitioner's papers to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner. The certified mail return receipt card indicates that the April 4, 2016 notice was delivered on April 7, 2016. No answer to the Order to Show Cause has been filed as of this date.

The affidavit submitted by the petitioner in this matter states that: the respondent entered into a contract with the petitioner for the 2015-2016 school year; on January 4, 2016, the respondent informed the district that he would not be fulfilling the term of his employment; and the respondent resigned effective January 4, 2016, giving the district no notice. The respondent has not denied the allegations therein; therefore, the Commissioner deems such allegations to be admitted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), and further deems them sufficient to justify suspension of respondent's teaching certification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to petitioner, and respondent's teaching certification is suspended for a period of one year from the filing date of this decision, a copy of which shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for implementation of the suspension.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record, proposed settlement agreement, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner observes that the Board President of the Princeton Charter School Board of Trustees signed the agreement on behalf of the Board. The file does not contain a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating the Board President to sign the agreement on its behalf – as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.13 under these circumstances – nor is the resolution attached to the settlement agreement itself. In the alternative, the agreement is not signed by the Board attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation. Without either the Board attorney's signature or the appropriate Board resolution designating the Board President to sign the agreement on its behalf, the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement.

To the extent that Paragraph 7 of the settlement agreement provides for confidentiality, the parties are reminded that the settlement agreement may be subject to disclosure pursuant to the Open Public Records Act, N.J.S.A. 47:1A-1, et seq.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the settlement agreement consistent with the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to hearing.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Agency Docket No. 99-3/16

The above-entitled matter was submitted to the undersigned Arbitrator from the Commissioner of Education through the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes by letter dated April 25, 2016, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26. Hearings were scheduled on May 16, May 20, and May 23, 2016. Before the first hearing, the parties requested an adjournment pending settlement discussions. These discussions were successful, and the parties advised the Arbitrator that the matter had been settled and that the settlement had been ratified by the Board of Education.

On May 23, 2016, the Arbitrator received for examination and approval an executed Settlement Agreement, Affidavits, and a Resolution of the Board of Education of Sussex County Technical School District approving the terms of the parties' settlement Resolution E-2, dated May 10, 2016. After duly considering the nature of the tenure charges, the Respondent's record of service to the Sussex County Technical School District, and the advantages and factors cited by the Board as the bases for its Resolution dated May 10, 2016, I hereby find that the terms and conditions agreed upon by the Board and Respondent, each of whom has been advised by counsel, are reasonable and in the best interest of both the parties and the public.

There being no charge against the Respondent of any moral turpitude, the cessation of the Respondent's employment by the Sussex County Technical School District and conditions negotiated by the parties under the parties' Settlement Agreement serve the best interest of the public and the students of the Sussex County Technical School District and satisfy the criteria set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 (a). Consequently, I accept the Settlement as proposed by the parties, and hereby issue a Consent Award incorporating the terms of the Settlement Agreement executed by the parties, effective May 31, 2016, provided that Respondent has not revoked her execution of the Settlement Agreement.

On May 23, 2016, an executed Settlement Agreement and a Resolution of the Board of Education of Sussex County Technical School District approving the terms of the parties' settlement Resolution E-2, dated May 10, 2016, were submitted to the Arbitrator for examination and approval. After duly considering the nature of the tenure charges, the Respondent's record of service to the Sussex County Technical School District, and the advantages and factors cited by the Board as the bases for its Resolution dated May 10, 2016, I hereby find that the terms and conditions agreed upon by the Board and Respondent, each of whom has been advised by counsel, are reasonable and in the best interest of both the parties and the public.

There being no charge against the Respondent of any moral turpitude, the cessation of the Respondent's employment by the Sussex County Technical School District and conditions negotiated by the parties under the parties' Settlement Agreement serves the best interest of the public and the students of the Sussex County Technical School District and satisfies the criteria of N.J.A.C. 6A:P3-5.6 (a). Consequently, I accept the Settlement as proposed by the parties and hereby issue a Consent Award incorporating the terms of the Settlement Agreement executed by the parties, effective May 31, 2016, provided that Respondent has not revoked her execution of the Settlement Agreement.

CONSENT AWARD OF ARBITRATOR

Based on the facts elicited by the evidentiary record in the instant matter regarding Respondent Deborah Coulson, and having examined the terms of the Stipulation of Settlement executed by Respondent and by a duly authorized representative on behalf of the Sussex County Technical School District, I find that the terms and conditions set forth in the parties' Stipulation of Settlement dated May 10, 2016 appear to me to be reasonable and to be consistent with the terms and intent of the TEACHNJ Statute and applicable regulations.

I hereby endorse and approve the parties' Stipulation of Settlement as appropriate under the circumstances and as satisfying the requirements of the TEACHNJ Statute.

SYNOPSIS

This case, on remand from the Appellate Division, stems from certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct filed by the Board against respondents – tenured physical education teachers employed at Mount Olive High School – for allegedly engaging in a verbal exchange that was racially derogatory and overheard by students. Respondents denied making the alleged comments, and contended that the students had fabricated their story based on biases against the respondents. The Board argued that the respondents' March 2012 conversation in the girl's locker room, during school hours, amounted to conduct unbecoming of teachers, and sought removal of respondents from their tenured positions. Subsequent to a hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the ALJ determined that the respondents' actions in making derogatory comments – together with their denial of and failure to take responsibility for their actions – constituted conduct unbecoming, and warranted dismissal from their tenured positions. The matter was delegated by the Commissioner – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34 – to an Assistant Commissioner, who concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions. The Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in October 2013. Respondents appealed to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court.

On appeal, the Appellate Division upheld the determination that the respondents were guilty of conduct unbecoming, but remanded the matter to the Commissioner for further consideration of the severity of the penalty imposed based upon then-existing precedent in similar cases. In so deciding, the Appellate Division recommended, going forward, that the Commissioner give notice of an intent to impose greater discipline for racially insensitive comments made in the school setting.

Pursuant to the direction of the Appellate Division, and based on the precedent that existed at the time of the respondents' racially derogatory comments, the Commissioner determined that the appropriate penalty for respondents' unbecoming conduct shall be forfeiture of the 120 days of salary already withheld pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, suspension for an additional six months without pay, and the withholding of salary increments for two years. In accordance with the Appellate Division's instructions, the Commissioner noted that this decision shall serve as notice to the regulated community that similar conduct in the future will result in more severe sanctions.

| AND | : | DECISION |
| IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING | : | |
| OF SHARON JONES, SCHOOL DISTRICT | : | |
| OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MOUNT OLIVE, | : | |
| MORRIS COUNTY. | : | |

This consolidated case involves tenure charges of unbecoming conduct brought by the Board against respondents – Brigitte Geiger and Sharon Jones, two teachers in the Mount Olive School District – based on the use of racially derogatory comments in reference to African American students. Specifically, it is alleged that two students – G.H. and Z.C. – overheard a conversation in the locker room in which respondent Jones said something to the effect of "these Negros think they are tough shit" to which respondent Geiger replied "yeah, that is what they are a bunch of Negros, Negros, Negros." The Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") found that the respondents were guilty of unbecoming conduct, and recommended that they be dismissed from their tenured positions with the Mount Olive School District.

In a decision dated October 7, 2013, an Assistant Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the Board established that the respondents were guilty of unbecoming conduct. The Assistant Commissioner was also in accord with the ALJ's determination, based on the circumstances and considerations existing in the matter, that the removal of respondents from their tenured positions was appropriate. The respondents appealed the Assistant Commissioner's October 7, 2013 decision, and on November 18, 2015, the Appellate Division affirmed the Assistant Commissioner's determination that respondents were guilty of unbecoming conduct, but remanded the matter for determination of a lesser sanction than removal.

In a supplemental submission following the Appellate Division's November 18, 2015 decision, the Board argues that the penalty imposed on respondents should be an unpaid suspension for time served from October 7, 2013 – the date of the Assistant Commissioner's decision, when respondents were terminated – to January 2, 2016, when respondents were reinstated, plus any other penalties that the Commissioner finds appropriate, such as increment withholdings or sensitivity training. The Board emphasizes that the respondents' behavior cannot be tolerated, especially in light of the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13, et seq., which prohibits discrimination on the basis of characteristics, such as race.

Further, the Board contends that the Appellate Division's reliance on: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lauren Cooke, School District of the Township of Egg Harbor, Commissioner Decision No. 503-10, decided November 22, 2010; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Barbara Emri, School District of the Township of Evesham, Burlington County, Commissioner Decision No. 371-02, decided October 12, 2002; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jayson H. Burg, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 649-97, decided December 18, 1997; and In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Adelphia Poston, School District of the City of Orange Township, Essex County, Commission Decision No. 362-06, decided October 19, 2006, was misplaced, because respondents' conduct was more severe than that of the teachers in those cases. Instead, the Board argues that this matter is more similar to the discriminatory comments in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Madhumita Chaki, Franklin Township School District, Somerset County, Commissioner Decision No. 542-11, decided December 12, 2011, which resulted in the teacher's removal. Finally, the Board points out that back pay of any sort would not be a penalty and would instead punish the District for appropriately pursing tenure charges.

In response, the respondents reiterate that they should be disciplined consistent with the precedent that existed at the time of their conduct, and that similar circumstances previously resulted in a suspension rather than a removal. Respondents contend that in determining an appropriate penalty, the Commissioner should consider that the statements at issue were not directed at students – nor were they intended to be heard by students – and that respondents had unblemished records of thirty-one and twenty-eight years, respectively. In consideration of those factors and existing precedent, respondents argue that – at most – a two-month suspension is justified. Respondents further argue that the regularity and pervasiveness of the conduct in Chaki distinguishes that case from the instant matter. Finally, respondents insist that they are entitled to back pay and increments – except for the period of any suspension that the Commissioner imposes – in order to be made whole.

Pursuant to the direction of the Appellate Division, the Commissioner has considered the precedent that existed at the time of respondents' racially derogatory comments, as well as the mitigating and aggravating factors. Accordingly, respondents: shall forfeit the 120 days' salary that has already been withheld pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; shall be suspended for an additional six months without pay; and shall have their increments withheld for two years. In accordance with the Appellate Division's instructions, this will serve as notice to the regulated community that similar conduct in the future may result in more severe sanctions.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

Respondent Kevin Karp has taught in the Barnegat School District for seven years. The Petitioner, the Barnegat Township School District, certified tenure charges against the Respondent on March 23, 2016. On May 2, 2016 I was appointed by the Department of Education to serve as arbitrator in this matter.

The tenure charges allege that:

1) The Respondent "repeatedly brushed up to and against the breasts of a (then) 12 year old female student (A.R.), when she was a seventh grader." A.R. specifically alleged that, when handing out papers in class the Respondent, K.K., reached out across her desk and brushed up against her breasts with his arm, placing a paper on her desk. "On a few occasions A.R. advised that she attempted to move back in her seat to avoid contact, however, K.K. continued to manage to brush up against her."

2) A.R. alleged that K.K. made "cat calls" to her while she was in the hallway.

3) R.R. reported that K.K. made her uncomfortable by touching her exposed bra strap and on another occasion brushed up against her shoulders in class. K.K. made creepy comments about taking off sweaters and sweatshirts. K.K was very touchy to her and other female student. On one occasions K.K. touched her hair and complimented her.

4) E.R. reported that when he was a student in K.K.'s wrestling class, there was a female wrestler, N.T. in the class. E.R. reported that K.K would on occasion stare constantly at N.T. without her realizing it. "Other male wrestlers saw this and all the male wrestlers talk(ed) to each other about how K.K. unnecessarily and improperly continued to glance and stare at N.T. during wrestling practice. E.R. reported that K.K. made inappropriate comments and jokes to the students in his class, referring to the jokes as "dirty".

5) Another female student, K.Q. reported that she was in K.K.'s computer class in 7th grade, K.K. made a comment to K.Q. and her female friend for holding hands. He then essentially said "it was OK to try new things over Spring Break" to K.Q. and her two friends, (one male and one female).

6) K.Q. also reported that she sat at the end of row the in typing class. K.K. would brush against her when handing out papers in the row.

The charges include a Statement of Evidence sworn to and sighed by Karen M. Wood Superintendent of Schools that the evidence in support of the charges is contained in a documentary exhibit annexed to the charges. The annexed exhibit contains emails and the transcribed notes of Superintendent Wood concerning her conversations with the board attorney, the local police, Ocean County Prosecutor's office and the Strauss Esmay Associates. There are also unsigned statements of two school administrators who interviewed the students whose complaints form the basis of the tenure charges. There are no signed statements in the annexed exhibits, not from the complaining students or the aforesaid school administrators.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 states, in pertinent part, that:

> Any charge made against any employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the Secretary of the Board in writing, and a written Statement of Evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the Board. The Board of Education shall forthwith provide such employee with a copy of the charge, a copy of the Statement of Evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath with respect thereto. ...

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-4.1(b) (1) states that:

> In all instances of the filing and certification of tenure charges, except charges filed against a teacher, principal, assistant principal or vice principal for reasons of inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, the following procedures and timelines shall be observed:
>
> 1. Charges shall be stated with specificity as to the action or behavior underlying the charges and shall be filed in writing with the Secretary of the District Board of Education or with the State District Superintendent, accompanied by a supporting statement of evidence, both of which shall be executed under oath by the person(s) instituting such charges.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(6) states, in pertinent part, that:

> If the District Board of Education or the State District Superintendent finds probable cause exists and the charges, if credited, are sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary, then the District Board of Education or the State District Superintendent shall file, within fifteen days, written charges with the Commissioner. The charges shall be stated with specificity as to the action or behavior underlying the charges. ...

Respondent has filed two motions seeking the dismissal of the tenure charges. The first seeks emergent relief, contending that Karp was improperly denied a "Rice Notice" when the District failed to notify Karp that it intended to discuss possible discipline of Karp. Rice v. Union County Regional High School Board of Education, 155 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (1977). The motion was initially denied by Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Patricia M. Keirins on April 19, 2016 who found that the Respondent failed to meet the irreparable harm standard of Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

The second Motion to Dismiss argues that the tenure charges as filed are deficient and fail to comply with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1.

The parties made oral arguments on the motions at a hearing on May 18, 2016. The Respondent did not make specific argument as to its application for emergent relief but asked that I reconsider its motion and relied upon its submissions before Judge Keirins. Respondent made argument on its second motion. Specifically:

The Respondent argues that the Board of Education failed to comply with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1. The annexed exhibit to the Tenure Charges fail to state any of the dates or times when the alleged operative events occurred. The names of the persons involved are not provided and the Respondent asserts that it is impossible for him to identify all of the persons involved by the initials provided. Nothing in the annexed exhibit indicates the Board relied upon more than vague assertions. The Superintendent of Schools who signed the Statement of Evidence under oath did not assert any direct knowledge of any of the facts and relied upon the unsigned reports of school administrators who apparently interviewed the complaining students. There are no signed statements from any of these students. Nor are there any dates or times of the alleged acts mentioned in the annexed exhibit.

There is no indication as to what facts the Superintendent of Schools is attesting to under oath. There is merely a jurat and signature of a notary republic signed by the Superintendent entitled Statement of Evidence followed by the fifteen pages of unsigned documents which allegedly constitute the basis for the fling of tenure charges.

Respondent cites In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frank King, School District of the City of Salem, Salem County, 2007 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 589 (2007) and In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Edwards, East Orange Board of Education, 1982 S.L.D. (2011) and the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Marilyn Feitel, 1977 S.L.D. 451 (Aff'd 458). In all three cases tenure charges were dismissed for their lack of specificity. In King the tenure charges, "failed to state a time, or the alleged dates of the violations, nor were the names of the alleged victim or victims of the "unprofessional conduct" provided. Here the Board failed to provide the time or dates of the alleged occurrence nor has the Board provided the names of the alleged victims.

In Edwards the ALJ held that the statute requires a statement of evidence under oath in support of the charge. An oath connotes swearing to the truth of the facts asserted. But here the Superintendent is swearing to the truth of second hand assertions. The superintendent signed the oath without ever speaking to the victims or providing signed statements from the victims or even those members of the administration who interviewed said alleged victims.

The Respondent notes that Straus Esmay Associates develops policy and regulation manuals for school districts. The Annexed Exhibit lists the recommendations made by Straus Esmay. These included: Have the District obtain signed statements from the complaining students; "Have the Principal call students/parents in and sign; K.W. (apparently, the Superintendent) should sit with the two school principals (apparently referring to the Principals who talked with the complaining students) and bring students in. Superintendent needs to hear it herself; personally with Principals talk with teacher (apparently the respondent), – explain". There is no evidence or representation that the District did any of these things.

There is no reference in any of the documents attached to the tenure charges that anyone spoke to student E.R. and/or student wrestler N.T. Accordingly, the Respondent urges that the tenure charges be dismissed.

The Petitioner School District argues that the tenure charges were properly filed and meet all the statutory requirements. The documentary evidence annexed to the certification of the Board Superintendent includes fifteen pages of notes, investigative reports recitation of interviews with students and the parents of some of those students which provide ample evidence of the improper sexual conduct and sexual abuse inflicted by Mr. Karp.

The documentation attached to the tenure charges reveals the names of all the Board administrators who conducted the investigation and includes the dates that investigation was conducted and who was present. Although it does not indicate the names of the students involved, it was legal and appropriate for the Board to identify students by their initials and not use their proper names. The allegations of sexual abuse by the Respondent were made by children. The District was simply trying to protect the interests of minor children. The investigatory documents are through and detailed.

The District contends that the facts here are distinguishable for those in the cases cited by the respondent. In King, the Board only set forth general allegations of the Respondent's unprofessional conduct. There was no written record of specific allegation to which the Respondent could respond. Here, one can easily see what the allegations against the Respondent concern sexual misconduct. In Feitel the Commissioner of Education held that that Board was woefully deficient in meeting the time requirements and failed to comply with prior directives of the Commissioner. These are not issues before this tribunal. Feitel has no relevance to this proceeding.

The Petitioner asserts that the allegations are specific, although for the protections of the students involved it used their initials rather than their full names. The tenure charges state specific acts and meet the requirements of the statue. The tenure charges are clear, expansive and very detailed. The documents meet all the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.A.C.6A:3-5.1.

DISCUSSION

The Superintendent of the Barnegat Township School District, Karen Wood, swore to a statement of evidence and signed under oath the tenure charges but nothing in the record indicated she directly participated in the investigation of the student's complaints or talked to any of these students and/or their parents. Moreover the documents which were relied upon when the tenure charges were brought before the Board consisted of emails and unsigned memorandum from the school administrators who conducted the investigation and the Superintendent's own notes. There are no signed statements from any of the complaining students or their parents. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 requires that a "written Statement of Evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the Board," Edwards. An oath connotes swearing to the truth of the facts asserted. Here however, no signed written statement by someone with direct knowledge of the alleged events was ever presented to the Board. The tenure charges were certified on the basis of double hearsay. It is troubling that the recommendations by the independent advisory association, to have signed statements by the students and parents and to have the Superintendent interview the students, were never followed.

In order for a school district to certify tenure charges it must provide a clear statement of the facts including the time and dates when the alleged incidents occurred. King requires that tenure charges, "state a time, or the alleged dates of the violations." But the Petitioner's tenure charge fails to allege any dates at all, not even a year. Moreover, some of the allegations in the tenure charge, e.g. Karp made "cat calls" are so vague as to be meaningless. What exactly was said? Was this a whistle? One of the alleged victims' the female wrestler, N.T., apparently was never even questioned.[1]

On the basis of the record before me it is evident that the charges filed by the Barnegat Board of Education failed to satisfy N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.[2]

[1] However, the Board's failure to submit the names of the complaining students was not improper. Given that nature of their complaints, it was appropriate to protect their privacy. If the Respondent could not reasonably identify the students through their initials and the specific time and dates of the alleged offences, the Respondent's attorney could have requested a confidential list of the names of the complaining students.

[2] Having found that the Petitioner's tenure charge fails to meet the requirements of the statute it is not necessary to consider the merits of the Respondent's motion seeking emergent relief.

AWARD

For the reasons contained herein it is hereby ORDERED that the tenure charges lodged against the Respondent Kevin Karp be DISMISSED, without prejudice, and that he forthwith be restored to his positon as a schoolteacher with all salary and emoluments to which he would be entitled had charges not been filed against him.

This matter arises out of tenure charges filed against the Respondent, David Pickney, on October 19, 2015. Those charges were certified on November 25, 2015. Petitioner filed the charges against Mr. Pickney pursuant to the State Evaluation System, AchieveNJ and the Teach NJ Act. By letter dated December 21, 2015, the Commissioner of Education referred the charges to me pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:5-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, C. 26 and P.L. 2015, C109. Hearings were held at the offices of the Board of Education, One University Place, Irvington, NJ. With the exception of the Superintendent of Schools and the Respondent, witnesses were sequestered. A transcript of the hearing was prepared. In consideration of receipt of the transcript, the parties agreed to submit briefs on May 2, 2016. At the request of the attorney for the Petitioner, and with the acquiescence of the attorney for the Respondent and the arbitrator, submission of briefs was rescheduled until May 16, 2016. Pursuant to the Statute, after 120 days, Mr. Pickney was placed on the District's payroll.

BACKGROUND:

Mr. Pickney began his employment with the District on September 1, 2001. He holds teaching certificates in social studies and general education.

During the 2013-2014 school year, under the TeachNJ Act, new teacher evaluation and observation methods were adopted by the District. Following the implementation of new guidelines, Respondent's evaluations were classified "Partially Effective" and "Ineffective." Based upon these evaluations, Mr. Pickney was placed on a Corrective Action Plan (CAP). The intent of the CAP is to improve a teacher's proficiency in the classroom. Under the CAP, a District Supervisor conducts an additional yearly observation and schedules a post-observation meeting with the teacher within 15 teaching days.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4. 4(c), a teacher is required to be observed at least three times during the school year. When under a CAP, a teacher is to be observed at least four (4) times in the course of the school year. The Respondent's attorney argued that the District failed to adhere to the Statute.

The Petitioner submitted letters of reprimand and contended that a prior 60-day improvement plan failed to bring about an improvement in Mr. Pickney's effectiveness. The District contended that despite its efforts the only alternative was to ask that the tenure charges be sustained.

The Respondent had asked that the charges be dismissed given the Petitioner's failure to provide a list of witnesses in accordance within the time frame specified in N.J.A.C. 18A: 6-16 and P.L. 2012, C. 26 (C. 18A: 6-117 et al). The matter was referred by the Department of Education for arbitration on December 21, 2015. On January 11, 2016, counsel for the Petitioner asked for a list of witnesses. On January 13, 2016, Petitioner's counsel responded a list would be provided "shortly." The witness list was eventually transmitted to Respondent's attorney on January 22, 2016, but not a summary of their testimony.

In consideration of the Respondent's request, I considered the time of year (Christmas – New Year) that the matter was referred for arbitration by the Department of Education. I had also been informed by the law firm representing the District that it had reassigned the matter to a different attorney.

Given the change in the Petitioner's attorney of record and scheduling conflicts brought to my attention by both parties, the first hearing was not held until March 4, 2016. It was also my understanding that the Respondent's attorney had been in possession of the case file compiled by the District. In consideration of these factors, I determined that the matter should proceed.

The Respondent's attorney argued that the District had submitted past incidents that occurred years before the instant matter. It was also contended that the penalty imposed by the District was unreasonable and excessive.

The Petitioner argued that the termination of the Respondent from the Irvington School District was supported by unsatisfactory evaluations over a two year period. The charge of inefficiency and failure to exercise good judgment were based upon the following:

1. On or about December 17, 2013, Respondent was evaluated by Teresa Steele-Hunter, Social Studies, Supervisor. This evaluation was announced. Respondent received the rating of Unsatisfactory, based on a score of 1.2.

2. A post evaluation conference was held on or about January 27, 2014. 21. Petitioner firmly believes that when staff members receive continuous inefficient evaluation scores, in addition to letters of reprimand as shown above, such actions are unacceptable because it negatively affects the academic development of students.

RESPONSE OF THE RESPONDENT

Under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10, the District is required to follow guidelines in the observation of and follow-up conference with classroom teachers. These mandatory guidelines were not met by the Petitioner.

> Under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10, "Each teacher shall be observed as described in this section, at least three times during each school year but not less than once during each semester. For all teachers, at least one of the required observations shall be announced and preceded by a pre-conference, and at least one of the required observations shall be unannounced. The chief school administrator shall decide whether the third required observation is announced or unannounced."

During the 2013-2014 school year, the Petitioner failed to adhere to the required guidelines. As a result, the post-observation meetings were not held in the required time period. On two occasions, the Petitioner was forced to nullify an evaluation because the time frame was not followed. However, the District still included one of the two nullified evaluations in the Respondent's Summative Evaluation for the 2014-2015 school year.

A review of the Respondent's record reveals that his evaluations fell from usually "Effective" to "Partially Effective" to "Ineffective." Beginning in school year 2013-2014, Respondent was deemed ineffective and placed on a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) for the 2014-2015 school year.

As required, a teacher under a CAP is to be observed at least one additional time above the previous year. The record shows Petitioner failed to schedule the required number of observations and post-observation conferences. As stated in N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-4, 4 (c):

> "Observation conferences shall include the following procedures: A supervisor who is present at the observation shall conduct a post-observation conference with the teacher being observed. A post-observation conference shall occur no more than 15 teaching staff member working days following each observation." (Emphasis added)

Under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-2, 5 (k), a teacher under a CAP is to be observed at least four (4) times. One observation took place on October 20, 2014 but was nullified when Petitioner failed to meet the 15-day post-observation time limit. However, the October observation was included within the year end summative evaluation. In addition, the third and final observation under CAP took place on the last teaching day of the year, which left no time for a fourth observation.

Respondent's attorney noted that the District did issue several letters of reprimand during Mr. Pickney's period of employment as a teacher but never suspended him. The Petitioner considered the letters of reprimand a justification to satisfy the standard of just cause. Under just cause the Petitioner would be required to suspend the Respondent before seeking his dismissal.

Removal of a tenured teacher is a serious action. Before a tenured teacher is removed, the District must adhere to the provisions contained under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10. Because the Petitioner failed to observe the guidelines, the Respondent's opportunity to remove any alleged deficiencies was denied. The standard of proof is significant in the removal of a tenured teacher. As described in the following decision:

> "Tenure protects employees from unfounded dismissals. Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65, 71 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S. Ct. 508, 9 L. Ed 2d 502 (1983). Tenure statutes are 'designed to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording to [covered employees] a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service.' Viemeister v. Bd. of Educ. of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). Further, tenure laws 'should be given liberal support, consistent, however, with legitimate demands for governmental economy.' Ibid."

The just cause standard requires that the Petitioner prove by a preponderance of evidence that the dismissal of a tenured teacher was warranted. In a 2009 decision, In the Matter of the Tenure Hrg. of Lisa Weaver State Operated Sch. Dist. of the City of Paterson, Passaic County, 159-, 2009 WL 1108536, at *21 (N.J. Adm. Apr. 20, 2009).

> "Evidence is said to preponderate 'if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.' 'Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423. (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case-by-case basis."

The Petitioner's failure to conduct observations and post-observation conferences had a negative impact on Mr. Pickney's efforts to correct alleged insufficiencies. This failure had a detrimental impact on Respondent's evaluations. The Petitioner's multiple violations of the Stature prompted Mr. Pickney to file grievances. As stated previously, the rescheduling of observations resulted in two observations (April 2 and 7, 2014) within five (5) days, with no post-observation held in between. The post-observation meeting was not held for both observations until April 28, 2014.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10, the Petitioner was not permitted to convene one post-observation meeting for two separate observations. One post-observation can be combined with a teacher's summary conference only if it is "within the required 15 teaching staff member working days following the observation for the purpose of evaluation." If two post-observations were permissible, it would have been specifically stated in the regulation.

The negative impact of the combined post-observations is confirmed by the fact Mr. Pickney received the same exact numerical score for the April 7, 2014 evaluation as he did for the April 2, 2014 evaluation. Without feedback of any deficiency noted in the April 2 observation, he was at a disadvantage when he was observed on April 7.

After the post-observation session was held, the Respondent was then able to improve his rating when observed on May 19, 2014. While the Petitioner noted that Mr. Pickney consented to the scheduled observations in April, he believed that he did not have a choice.

Mr. Pickney testified that he was not consulted or had any input prior to the implementation of the CAP in the 2014-2015 school year. The absence of a teacher's input is a violation of N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-2.5 (a).

> "A corrective action plan shall be developed by the teaching staff member and a teaching staff member serving in a supervisory capacity to address deficiencies outlined in the evaluation when the employee is rated ineffective or partially effective. The corrective action plan shall include timelines for corrective action and responsibilities of the teaching staff member and the school district for implementation of the plan."

Respondent's attorney took issue with the actual number of countable observations conducted during the 2014-2015 school year. The end of the year summative evaluation lists four observations although the first observation on October 20, 2014 did not result in a post-observation conference, thereby nullifying this observation.

There was also confusion concerning observations conducted in the 2013-2014 school year. The December 17, 2013 observation was not relevant because the post-observation conference was not held within the 15-day window. Since the October 20, 2014 observation score was not revealed, its possible impact on the end of the year Summative Evaluation cannot be assessed.

If the nullified December 7, 2013 observation was permitted to stand, Respondent was observed four times in the 2013-2014 school year. Therefore, Respondent should have been observed five times in 2014-2015, since under the CAP a teacher is to be observed one additional time over the previous year.

The final, or technically third observation, for the 2014-2015 school year took place during the last teaching week of the year on June 15, 2015. This observation took place before the May 29, 2015 post-observation conference convened on June 17, 2015. This was the second time that the Respondent was denied the opportunity to receive constructive suggestions on a timely basis.

The post-observation conference for the June 15, 2015 observation was scheduled for July 10, 2015, when Respondent had already left for his summer vacation. Thus, there was never a post-observation conference.

An observation scheduled for the last week of classes and the failure to conduct a post-hearing conference by June 30, 2015 meant the Petitioner was not in compliance with the Statute. Whatever the reason, the Petitioner did not attempt to comply with the applicable regulation.

Timeliness is relevant since recollection of an observation diminishes over time. The Petitioner noted that the Respondent had rescheduled several "benchmark" meetings as required under his CAP. However, each time a benchmark CAP meeting was rescheduled, it was for just a few days. There is no evidence that Mr. Pickney sought to intentionally avoid these meetings.

Counsel for the Respondent took issue with various letters of reprimand that were placed in Respondent's personnel file. These documents were inadmissible since they were not plead in the Statement of Charges prepared by the Petitioner.

The Respondent was not put on notice for these alleged incidents. Although the documents were contained within the Petitioner's Statement of Evidence, Mr. Pickney was not specifically charged. Thus, the Respondent cannot be found guilty for incidents for which he was not charged.

The Petitioner's inclusion of the letters of reprimand amounts to double jeopardy. These letters were not contested because the Respondent did not believe, at the time, they necessitated further action. The District's reliance on these letters constitute punishing Mr. Pickney twice for the same incidents. Although the Petitioner considered the letters warranted just cause, they did not remove the Respondent until they charged him with inefficiency.

If the letters of reprimand qualify under just cause, then the Petitioner was obligated to impose progressive discipline prior to a discharge. Except for two letters concerning an inappropriate song, none of the letters indicate repeated violations of policy.

In addressing the matter of just cause and progressive discipline, Respondent's attorney argued that the District never considered a suspension before filing tenure charges. None of the letters of reprimand rise to the level for the removal of the Respondent.

After being issued a letter of reprimand, the Respondent corrected his behavior. Although Mr. Pickney believed the Roots video was appropriate during Black History Month, he discontinued using this video when told it was unacceptable. When he was informed the song he played in class showed poor judgment, he no longer used this song. In response to any possible objection to a video, the Respondent listed those selected in his lesson plans. Listing the title of a video in his lesson plan provided his Supervisor with the opportunity to review what he selected before it was shown in class.

The Respondent also stated that the song his superiors considered inappropriate did not actually contain the lyrics. Mr. Pickney testified that when he met with his supervisors they admitted there were no lyrics played in class. The reference to lyrics did not surface until one month after the write up of the incident. The song, "Fancy," by Iggy Azalea, was a popular song at the time and one the students listened to before he played it in class.

In addressing the District's action, the Respondent's attorney stated that teachers have been suspended for reasons far worse than the charges leveled against Mr. Pickney.

The Respondent, it was argued, was subjected to a level of discipline that exceeded the charges. "At the very worst, Respondent should be suspended for a minimal amount of time." By not even considering suspending the Respondent, Petitioner has displayed an unwillingness to uphold the principles of just cause.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Under N.J.S. A: 6-17. 2, the arbitrator is required to observe the following criteria when deciding the dismissal of tenured teachers for inefficiency.

(1) (if) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;

(2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;

(3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or

(4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.

b. In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraph (1) through (4) of subsection a. of this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affect the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed.

c. The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review.

d. The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met.

The Petitioner submitted four (4) evaluations for the 2013-2014 school year. They were conducted on December 17, 2013, April 2, 2014, April 7, 2014 and May 14, 2014. The 2013-2014 school year Summative Assessment Report showed an overall "unsatisfactory" assessment score of 1.43.

In the event that a teacher is deemed to be Ineffective or Partially Ineffective, the District is required to develop a Corrective Action Plan (CAP). As stipulated under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-2.5. and described in a New Jersey Department of Education guidance Summary of Legal Requirements for Evaluation and Tenure Cases, a CAP should adhere to guidelines that address timeliness and minimum number of observations.

District Supervisor of Social Studies Teresa Steele-Hunter testified that she observed Mr. Pickney on December 17, 2013 and rated Respondent unsatisfactory. She recommended that Respondent enroll in a Professional Development course. Ms. Steele-Hunter also listed classroom management, differentiation of instruction, student engagement and instructional strategies deficiencies.

Ms. Steele-Hunter observed the Respondent again on April 2, 2014. Like the December observation, it had been announced in advance. Prior to an announced observation, the observer schedules a pre-conference with the teacher. Ms. Steele-Hunter stated that the Respondent failed to complete a required pre-conference form before meeting with her. Mr. Pickney was given an Unsatisfactory rating. Supervisor Steele-Hunter testified that her visitation revealed that the Respondent had not shown meaningful improvement since her last observation in December.

A third observation took place on April 7, 2014. Attorney for the Respondent argued it was unfair to schedule an observation just five (5) days after the previous classroom visitation. Ms. Steele-Hunter testified she had been on medical leave from December until April and found it necessary to schedule an observation on April 7, 2014. She stated the Respondent was informed he had the option to reschedule it to a later date but agreed to the April 7, 2014 observation. Even if the April 7th observation is discounted, the Respondent received an Unsatisfactory rating for the April 2nd observation.

As required under N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-2.5, a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) was developed for the 2014-2015 school year. Assistant Principal Chinaire Simons was selected to coordinate the implementation of the CAP. Ms. Simons testified that the Respondent did not meet the criteria in any of the four designated domains. Ms. Simons contended that Respondent failed to complete assignments or attend monthly meetings on a timely basis

The hearing record reveals that not all monthly CAP meetings were convened within a specific time period. Both the Petitioner and Respondent were at times responsible for rescheduled meetings. There is no evidence that rescheduled meetings had a negative impact on the CAP. However, the Petitioner considered the postponement as indicative of Respondent's commitment to correct deficiencies.

In the 2014-2015 school year, Respondent was observed on December 12, 2014, and was given a "Developing" rating. Director Steele-Hunter noted in her comments that Mr. Pickney had shown some progress but indicated there were areas that needed further improvement. In particular, Respondent was encouraged to design lessons with more rigorous activities.

On May 29, 2015, Middle School Principal Andrea Tucker and Superintendent Hackett conducted an unannounced evaluation. The observation which did not require a post-observation conference resulted in an Unsatisfactory rating.

Ms. Steele-Hunter observed the Respondent on June 15, 2015. Ms. Steele-Hunter testified that her observation was delayed because a prior evaluation had been completed not long before her classroom visitation. Ms. Steele-Hunter wrote that there was no discussion, no collaboration or reading of any articles. The class drew and colored pictures. She rated Respondent's evaluation Unsatisfactory. There was no post-conference held, although the Director attempted to meet with Mr. Pickney on the last day of the school year. The Respondent in an exchange of e-mails with Ms. Steele-Hunter explained he would be in and out of New Jersey and unable to meet with her.

Ms. Steele-Hunter testified that the Respondent had incorrectly completed an end-of-the-year Student Growth Objective report in 2015. As a result of completing the document incorrectly, Ms. Steele-Hunter suggested it was useless to the District.

Superintendent Hackett testified that the decision to revoke Respondent's tenure was based upon a history of poor performance. Dr. Hackett stated, prior to her appointment as Superintendent, Respondent received several letters of reprimand and an increment that was withheld. She also testified that Respondent was issued a letter of reprimand when he failed to record grades for two months. There were additional letters of reprimand cited in Mr. Pickney's personnel record. Attorney Branigan argued that these letters of reprimand were not germane to the charges. This argument is relevant to the extent that certain letters of reprimand did address past violations of rules and policies that occurred several years ago.

In a letter of reprimand drafted by the former Assistant Superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction, Dr. Angelica Allen, dated September 29, 2014, Respondent was criticized for playing the song "Fancy." Dr. Allen stated that the song contained inappropriate lyrics that had no place in a classroom. Mr. Pickney contended he played only the music and not the lyrics. However, the inappropriate language was confirmed in an arbitration award issued after the letter of reprimand was grieved.

The Respondent's record reveals in 2011-2012 Mr. Pickney's increment was withheld. Yet, attorney for the Respondent argued that Mr. Pickney had received satisfactory evaluations prior to the years identified by the District. Attorney Branigan contended that earlier evaluations should be given weight. As stated previously by Respondent's attorney, just cause demands that a suspension should precede removal.

Superintendent Hackett described a pattern of behavior that started several years ago and has continued into the present. She cited a reprimand in 2006 for a lack of a lesson plan, and in 2015 Respondent again did not submit an acceptable lesson plan. In spite of available professional development resources, Dr. Hackett contended, the Respondent had not demonstrated improvement or shown a willingness to change. Furthermore, she testified that the requirements contained in the CAP had not been followed by the Respondent. Superintendent

Hackett stated that Mr. Pickney was advised to attend workshops and collaborate with teachers who are considered effective.

The Respondent testified he had been told he could postpone the April 7, 2014 observation. However, he believed he had little choice in permitting two observations within five (5) days. Both observations were rated as Unsatisfactory. The Respondent stated that he was denied an opportunity to improve on April 7th since the post-observation conferences were combined. He contended that any deficiencies observed on April 2nd would have been repeated again on April 7th without the benefit of a post-observation between both visitations, Respondent noted that he did show improvement (Developing) in an unannounced classroom visitation on May 19, 2014. However, as I stated previously, Mr. Pickney's April 2nd observation was nonetheless rated "Unsatisfactory."

The Respondent testified that the song in question was played without lyrics. He argued that Ms. Steele-Hunter and Ms. Tucker acknowledged they did not hear the lyrics. Both administrators contended they heard lyrics.

Mr. Pickney did not dispute that he had not followed the directions for the essay contest. Respondent allowed his students to create posters when the assignment specified written submissions. He was also reprimanded for not first submitting his student's work to an administrator for approval.

The Respondent testified that he did not complete the Student Growth Objectives (SGO's) correctly at the end of the school year. He acknowledged he received SGO training on more than one occasion, but contended he was not sufficiently instructed in regard to "Methodology" changes instituted during the year. The attorney of the District noted that the Respondent failed to request assistance.

The comments contained in the observation of May 29, 2015 referred the same routine on a daily basis. Respondent's lesson plans included the same activities encompassing ineffectively what is known as the Kagan strategies. The plans did not list any additional activities that were appropriate for a Social Studies class. In particular, the observer found no graphic organizers or written assignment related to the subject. Ms. Steele-Hunter wrote that ELL students were merely copying from a textbook the names of countries and dates. Mr. Pickney did not dispute the comments but considered his approach effective. The Respondent cited for low standards argued the charge his teaching was not rigorous was without merit.

Attorney Hunt stated the Respondent had an opportunity to grieve any observations he considered inaccurate or unfair. The Respondent testified that when he returned in September 2015, he received the tenure charges and was denied the option of filing a grievance. In particular, the April 2nd and April 7th, 2014 observations were not grieved although Mr. Pickney was aware of the content. The District also argued that the Unsatisfactory ratings were given during the period of the CAP when Respondent was under an improvement plan.

As argued by the Respondent's attorney, the District did not conduct an additional observation while subject to the CAP in the 2014-2015 school year. As stated under N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17. 2, "the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process... In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that this is applicable, "the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed."

As argued by the Respondent's attorney, the District did not conduct an additional observation while subject to the CAP in the 2014-2015 school year. As stated under N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17. 2, "the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process… In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that this is applicable, "the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed."

As previously noted, the Respondent's attorney argued that Mr. Pickney should be reinstated since the District failed to conduct a fourth observation in 2014-2015. The statute directs the arbitrator to consider if the District "failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process." While the District did not conduct a fourth observation and complete each post-observation meeting within fifteen days, I do not believe it materially affected the outcome of the evaluation process.

There were a total of seven (7) observations in a two-year period. The December 17, 2013 was nullified because a post-observation meeting was not scheduled until the end of January 2014. In each observation Respondent failed to achieve a satisfactory rating. During 2014-2015, Respondent was provided a Corrective Action Plan and, according to the testimony of his supervisors, was encouraged to take advantage of assistance within and outside the District. Respondent's supervisors indicated he resisted attempts to eradicate deficiencies and improve his performance in the classroom. Superintendent Hackett, Social Studies Supervisor Steele-Hunter and Assistant Principal Simons each testified that Respondent did not meet the standards necessary to retain his employment in the District.

Based upon the hearing record, I have determined that the District has met its burden of proof. The tenure charges filed in Agency Docket No. 303 -10/15 are sustained.

AWARD:

The tenure charges filed by the Irvington School District against David Pickney, Agency Docket No. 303 – 10/15 shall be sustained

The record of this matter, the proposed Settlement Agreement (Agreement) and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner observes that it is not clear from the Agreement who signed the document on behalf of the petitioners. The Agreement was not signed by the petitioners' attorney, who is the petitioners' duly authorized representative in litigation, nor does the file contain any evidence indicating that the petitioners authorized an individual to sign the Agreement on their behalf. Therefore, the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Agreement consistent with the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to hearing.

Record Closed: April 18, 2016 Decided: April 25, 2016

BEFORE EVELYN J. MAROSE, ALJ:

On August 24, 2015, the Board of Education of the High Point Regional High School District, Sussex County ("High Point") v. Board of Education of Montague, Sussex County ("Montague") and Port Jervis School District, Board of Education, Orange County, New York ('Port Jervis"), Docket No. EDU 12765-15 was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on a Motion for Emergent relief pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13. On September 2, 2015, an Order was entered denying Emergent Relief. The Order was forwarded to the Commissioner of Education, who reversed, granted Emergent Relief and directed that the case proceed at the OAL to resolve the underlying claim on the merits. On November 16, 2015, the matter was placed on the inactive list, at the request of the parties, to allow the parties to address the ancillary issues critical to proceeding to hearing. On October 29, 2015, Montague v. High Point, Docket No. EDU 00111-16 was filed. On February 23, 2016, Montague v. High Point, Docket No. EDU 02599-16 was filed, with a request for consolidation with Docket No. EDU 12765-15, whose time on the inactive list had expired, and Docket No. EDU 00111-16, which was pending. Thereafter, the parties agreed to a settlement of all issues of all three matters. A Consent Order memorializing the terms of the settlement is attached hereto as Exhibit A.

I have reviewed the record and terms of the settlement and FIND:

1. On June 18, 2013, Montague made an application to the New Jersey Department of Education seeking the withdrawal of the Commissioner's consent for Montague to send its high school students to Port Jervis pursuant to a Send/Receive Agreement.

2. On June 24, 2013, the Commissioner granted Montague's application and granted permission for Montague to enter into a new send/receive relationship with High Point, an in-state District, pursuant to an agreed upon transition plan.

3. On November 12, 2013, Montague submitted its initial application to the Department of Education to facilitate the withdrawal of the Commissioner's consent to the out of state Send/Receive agreement with Port Jervis for the education of its seventh and eighth grade students. The Commissioner granted the request conditioned upon Montague's demonstration that it had suitable facilities to house these grade levels. Based upon material provided to the Commissioner, Montague's request was granted.

4. The Commissioner stated "beginning with the 2015-16 school years, all students in grades kindergarten through eight will attend Montague, and all students in grades nine through twelve will attend High Point consistent with the agreed upon transition plan."

5. No appeal of the Commissioner's withdrawal of consent was filed. However the then current Montague Board of Education favored continuing a send/receive relationship with Port Jervis, as did certain parents with age relative students.

6. The Sussex County Interim Executive Superintendent advised Montague that the Board had an obligation to comply with the Send/Receive Agreement with High Point and with the transition plan for seventh through twelfth grade students. Montague was not to be responsible for any tuition for students attending school in Port Jervis beyond the transition plan.

Any parents who wished to send their children to Port Jervis for education had to be personally responsible for their tuition.

7. Various litigation followed, including actions filed by Montague on October 29, 2015 and January 29, 2016. Montague sought a declaration that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-21.1, certain Montague students should be permitted to attend school in Port Jervis through graduation. That statute provides in pertinent part, "Any secondary student in the sending district at the time of the termination of the sending/receiving relationship shall be permitted to complete his secondary education within the receiving district. The sending/receiving relationship shall be continued for these students." High Point disputes Montague's interpretation of "secondary student". High Point essentially argues that at the time of the termination of a send/receive relationship a student can choose to complete his or her education in the school they attended, such as middle school, but cannot choose to complete his or her education by moving through various schools in that district.

8. Numerous Montague students are presently attending school in Port Jervis in reliance on Montague's interpretation of its statutory obligation to allow them to complete their education in Port Jervis to graduation. However, based upon the pending litigation and the Commissioner's direction, tuition for those students has not been paid by Montague. Accordingly, Port Jervis served disenrollment letters concerning those students. Port Jervis is also asserting in a federal complaint that Montague breached its Send/Receive Agreement when Montague applied to the Commissioner to end their relationship, without providing the notice provided in their agreement.

9. If the pending matters are adjudicated in their present venue, numerous appeals will be possible, even likely. Accordingly, seeking repose, the parties have engaged in numerous discussions and have voluntarily agreed to terms and conditions that will resolve all pending claims asserted in the three matters, as evidenced by the signatures of the parties or their representatives' signatures on the attached Consent Order.

10. The Consent Order is contingent upon the approval of the Commissioner of Education.

11. The Consent Order fully disposes of all issues in all three captioned matters and is consistent with law. Montague reserves its right to pursue a previously filed ethics grievance against an individual who acted in a professional capacity on behalf of the district.

I CONCLUDE that the Consent Order meets the safeguard requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms of the Consent Order and that all three OAL proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SUMMARY OF FACTS:

The genesis of all these charges relates to an incident that occurred between Mr. Ajayi and a student identified as student as A.H. on March 27, 2014, in Mr. Ajayi's Science class at Cleveland Elementary School. The then Principal,

Barbara Ervin, testified about the investigation she conducted concerning the March 27, 2014, incident. The record also reflects that an incident occurred on October 23, 2013, between Mr. Ajayi and A.H. The results of that incident will be incorporated into the Positions of the Parties, as well as the testimony of the students.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES:

For the Petitioner

The District argues that the uncontroverted evidence presented during the hearing clearly established that Mr. Ajayi, without justification, grabbed A.H., pulled him out of his seat, twisted his arm and pushed him. This violent and disturbing incident leaves no doubt that Mr. Ajayi is unfit to be a teacher. Additionally, the incident clearly showcased the Respondent's poor classroom management skills, short temper and complete lack of judgment and this type of behavior by a teacher has absolutely no place in a school setting.

The District strongly argues that the inappropriate physical contact with A.H. was not a recent development and approximately five (5) months before the March 27, 2014 incident, the Respondent was counseled about his inappropriate physical touching of other students.

In November, 2013, the Respondent met with Ms. Ervin on two separate occasions over a three-day period to address student complaints; namely that Mr. Ajayi grabbed and twisted one student's arm, that Mr. Ajayi grabbed another student by his neck and then "yoked" him up. Indeed, Mr. Ajayi was specifically advised by his Principal to refrain from touching students and to send students to the office or contact the office to call for building security. Yet, just a few months later, Mr. Ajayi ignored this directive when he again engaged in reckless and inappropriate behavior in the incident with A.H. in March 2014.

The District references the testimony of students A.H., H.A. and L.S. in defense of its position that those students corroborate the District's position that Mr. Ajayi was the aggressor and assaulted A.H. and, as a result, the tenure charges were filed.

In fact, after Principal Ervin's investigation she concluded and testified,

"Although there is some discrepancy over who threw what and what was thrown, the physical contact is pretty much throughout. Teacher grabbed student and tried to push him out of the room." Tr. 2[1]

The District asserts that they have proven the tenure charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. They acknowledge that to "prevail in this case they must establish the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence and they go on to define preponderance as the greater weight of the credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power."

The District strongly argues that the preponderance of the credible evidence in the record establishes that charges One through Five must be sustained.

Mr. Ajayi is guilty of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member by grabbing A.H., twisting his arm and pushing him on March 27, 2014. The District acknowledges that while unbecoming conduct is not specifically defined in the statute or regulations, case law from the Commissioner of Education and the court system, the touchstone of the charge is the teacher's fitness to discharge the duties and functions of his/her position. Indeed, "unbecoming conduct encompasses many categories of inappropriate behavior by tenured teachers."

"Conduct unbecoming a public employee has defined as an elastic standard that incorporates any conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the district, or which has the tendency to destroy public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services."

The District relies heavily upon the decisions by the Commissioner of Education and under the Teach NJ determinations, which have been effective since August of 2012. In fact, the District references that the Commissioner has often stressed that those persons who went into the teaching profession exercise a significant influence on those who teach and... must exhibit a high degree of exemplary behavior.

In the instant matter, there can be no doubt that Mr. Ajayi's actions on March 27, 2014, constitute conduct unbecoming, thereby warranting his removal from his tenured position. The testimony of A.H. establishes without reservation that he asked one of his classmates for a piece of candy. From there, the situation morphed to the Respondent approaching A.H. and asking him multiple times why he threw the candy. Yet the Respondent testified that he asked A.H. once why he threw the candy and then asked him at least three times to give him the piece of candy. At that point, despite A.H.'s denial of throwing the candy, the Respondent grabbed A.H.'s right arm and pulled him out of his chair causing

A.H.'s untied boot to come off. He also grabbed and twisted A.H.'s arm, pushed him and forced A.H. to the door.[2]

In fact, A.H.'s testimony made it specifically clear that he did not initiate any physical contact; rather, Mr. Ajayi became frustrated and became unnecessarily physical with A.H. Additionally, both A.H. and L.S. credibly testified that after A.H. denied throwing the object (whether it was candy or juice box), the Respondent got really impatient and angry and grabbed A.H. by his arm. It was at that point, as referenced above, the Respondent grabbed and twisted A.H.'s arm and pushed him toward the door.

On the other hand, Mr. Ajayi's version of the event simply was not credible. According to the Respondent's testimony, after A.H. refused to give him the object, A.H. stood up and said "Fuck. I didn't throw it" and then pushed Mr. Ajayi.[3]

The Petitioner contends that Mr. Ajayi did not produce any witnesses to corroborate his version of the events. Interestingly, even the investigator from the Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit (IAIU) and supervisor determined that Mr. Ajayi was the aggressor. Indeed, both wrote in the joint letter that statements received from those present during this incident determined that the teacher, Vincent Ajayi, had grabbed A.H. by his collar and arm for being disruptive in the classroom. Furthermore, there is absolutely no mention of any aggressive physical action taken by A.H. against Mr. Ajayi. See Respondent Exhibit Q (RVA-19 and RVA-20).

[2] TR 1, 14:13-16, 16:10-18.
[3] TR 3 , 11:12-23

The Petitioner contends that even if it is determined that A.H. pushed Mr. Ajayi in the classroom on March 27, 2014, there was absolutely no need for Mr. Ajayi to grab and push A.H. The Respondent clearly had the opportunity and ability to step back and take proper administrative action, rather than to take physical action against a seventh grade student. There was no attack by A.H. Instead of backing away or calling the main office or security, Mr. Ajayi chose grab both of A.H.'s hands and push him.[4]

Moreover, Mr. Ajayi acknowledged that the March 2014, incident with A.H. was very similar to what transpired with R.H., which was documented in the November 2013 memorandum.[5] In the November 2013 incident with R.H., the Respondent grabbed the student by his neck when he refused to give Mr. Ajayi a basketball. (See District Exh. 8).

Based upon what had occurred since Mr. Ajayi's short time at Cleveland Elementary School, he has established a horrifying and inappropriate pattern of handling situations with dangerous physical contact. There is simply no rational defense for the Respondent's action, and it is inexcusable that he used physical force in grabbing A.H., twisting his arm and pushing him, especially since he was on notice to refrain from touching students.

Mr. Ajayi's actions on March 27, 2014, constitute corporal punishment. The District references N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1, which defines corporal punishment. Dealing with the instant matter, the Petitioner argues that,

"The record demonstrates that none of the exceptions to the corporal punishment statute apply to the incident involving A.H. There was no attack by A.H. Mr.

[4] TR 3, 12:8-10
[5] TR 3, 31:18-25; 32:1-7

Ajayi, to the extent he wanted A.H. out of the classroom, could have and should have called the main office or a security guard for assistance. There was no emergent situation in the classroom requiring Mr. Ajayi to use physical force on A.H."

The District references a Teach NJ decision in Franklin Township Board of Education and Dorrell Hilliman, DOE 65-3/13. In that case, Arbitrator Licata decided that even though the student initially threw a book, the teacher lost the ability to raise a self-defense argument when he threw books back at the student. Arbitrator Licata upheld the school district's request for the teacher's termination.

Mr. Ajayi's actions on March 27, 2014, constituted assault and battery. In regard to that argument, the District contends that to establish a "tort of assault, a victim must show that the aggressor acted with intention to cause harm or offensive contact and that the victim was put in imminent apprehension." As the record established, there can be no dispute that Mr. Ajayi's action on March 27, 2014, constituted an assault and battery upon A.H. when he grabbed A.H.'s right arm and pulled him out of his chair causing A.H.'s untied boot to come off. Clearly, Mr. Ajayi's actions were both an offensive and non-consensual touching, which placed A.H. in imminent apprehension. The weight of evidence therefore warrants sustaining Count III of the tenure charges and Mr. Ajayi's removal from his tenured teaching position.

The proper penalty is removal of Mr. Ajayi from his tenured position because unbecoming conduct is conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the agency to which the employee is a member, which has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and confidence in the operation of governmental services or which violates an implicit standard of good behavior.

The District contends that,

"A finding of unbecoming conduct does not require that any specific rule or regulation has been violated but may be based primarily on a violation of an implicit standard of good behavior. In an educational setting, unbecoming conduct has been held to be demonstrated by a series of incidents indicating a pattern of behavior, or by a single incident sufficiently flagrant."

In support of this, the District references Redcay v. State Board of Education, 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd, o.b. 131 N.J. 326 (E.A. 1944).

The District argues that the instant matter does not involve an isolated incident with Mr. Ajayi; rather, it involves a pattern of unacceptable conduct that culminated in a violent incident which was witnessed by an entire class. Mr. Ajayi's attempt to characterize A.H. and other students as disciplinary problems cannot provide an excuse for the use of violence or corporal punishment.

The District contends that the statutes and case law are clear and that Mr. Ajayi as a teacher was to serve as a model of appropriate behavior during his daily interactions with students. The March 2014 incident, along with his pattern of improper physical contact with students at the Cleveland Elementary School, leaves no doubt, and no alternative, that Mr. Ajayi is not fit to serve as a teacher and must be removed from his position as a tenured teacher.

For the Respondent

The Respondent is "charged in four (4) counts with conduct unbecoming a teacher / just cause and in one (1) count with engaging in a pattern of conduct constituting unbecoming conduct." It is alleged in Four Counts (Counts One,

Two, Three and Five), that Mr. Ajayi used unnecessary and/or inappropriate physical contact in dealing with the students identified as A.H., F.K., and A.A., that he inflicted corporal punishment on those same children, that he committed assaults and batteries upon these students and that he violated N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1.

In response to those arguments, the Respondent contends that "The District has grossly overstated its position in preparing the sworn tenure charges against the Respondent and it has taken what is essentially one allegation; that of inappropriate contact, and transformed it into four separate and distinct counts."

The Respondent further contends, "Additionally, this has been done in the hope of obtaining some compromise verdict from the finder of fact. Rather than considering such compromising coming to a final conclusion, it is respectfully urged that the Arbitrator contemplate merger of the nearly identical counts referenced and consider them only as one real allegation."

The second observation to be highlighted in the defense of the Respondent is the failure of the District to establish one (1) of the four (4) allegations by the applicable standard under the law for all intents and purposes and amounts to a failure of proof as to all of the allegations involving inappropriate contact with Mr. Ajayi. Stated in another way, in the event that it is decided that the conduct that is alleged by the District was undertaken by Respondent in self-defense, defense of others, to quell a disturbance that was in large measure incidental to redirecting a student or students who were physically acting out, all the charges describing assault of, unnecessary and/or punitive conduct by Respondent should not stand.

Moreover, the District has patently demonstrated its own uncertainty about and discomfort with the facts it seeks to rely upon to approve the allegations comprising its case. "The shotgun approach adopted by Petitioner, whereby an attempt is put forth to buttress blanket allegations with unsupportable and unfocused evidence, belies the inherent weaknesses presented in the District's theory." Accordingly, the Respondent contends that the District has failed to prove any of the allegations contained in Counts One, Two, Three or Five.

Count Four of the tenure charges filed against the Respondent allege a pattern of unbecoming conduct by Respondent. As to this charge, the District asserts a pattern of unbecoming conduct by Mr. Ajayi, erroneously relying upon a series of infractions which remain unproven and in most cases, unmentioned by witnesses.

As to the present incident viewed as a whole, there are insufficient proofs to substantiate any kind of pattern whatsoever. "First, it should be noted that the other two (2) students allegedly involved in the March 2014 situation did not testify and consequently, there is no direct evidence from either F.K. or A.A. as to any inappropriate contact perpetrated by the Respondent. Second, A.H., during the course of his testimony concerning the present matter, either on direct or cross-examination, mentions nothing of any relevance as to any interaction Mr. Ajayi had with either F.K. or A.A. Third, the other two (2) eyewitnesses to the

March 27, 2014, allegations, H.A. and L.S. likewise did not testify to anything about Respondent touching F.K. or A.A."

The Respondent argues that any effort by the District to establish a pattern of unbecoming conduct by relying upon incidents occurring prior to March 27, 2014, fails based upon the evidence and the testimony in the record, particularly testimony from students.

The Respondent argues that any matters which allegedly took place on November 19, 2013, and November 21, 2013, which are specifically cited in the Petitioner's complaint, neither of the purported victims (i.e. T.E. and R.H.) testified at the arbitration hearing. As such and given the totality of the District's proofs, there is no residuum of competent evidence to support any hearsay evidence admitted as to these students and/or the proof of Count Four.

The Respondent also contends that the internal investigation conducted by Principal Ervin was insufficient to say the least. She accepted the complaints by T.E. and R.H. at face value with little, if any, further inquiry. She then, in a rush to judgment, accused Mr. Ajayi of inappropriate contact without properly considering his Staff Incident Report at to T.E. (RVA-4) or the "absolute absurdity of R.H.'s allegation that the Respondent inexplicably grabbed him because another student was bouncing a basketball." (see RVA-18)

The Respondent argues that the incidents were so weak and lacking in substance that they did not even rise to the level of prompting formal administrative allegations against Mr. Ajayi. In fact, after Ms. Ervin advised the authorities of the facts surrounding the November 2013 student reports, the NJ

Division of Children and Families specifically found no reason to even take the initial step of conducting a formal inquiry as to either circumstance. (See RVA-19).

The Respondent contends that even giving the District the benefit of its evidence and all of the reasonable inferences to be drawn from that evidence, a pattern of unbecoming conduct cannot be established either by limiting the assessment of facts pertaining only to the March 27th incident or by expanding consideration of any legally sufficient evidence presented from November 2013 and synthesizing that with the later proofs of the March 27, 2014, encounter.

The Respondent also argues, as the District did, that the standard of proof in the instant matter is the preponderance of credible evidence. The Respondent contends that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 was not violated by the Respondent because "At all times and under all circumstances of the present case he acted reasonably, without the use of unnecessary force and in compliance with both the letter and spirit of N.J.S.A. 18:A6-1."

The Respondent argues that A.H. is presently a 15 year old student at Shabazz High School in Newark and was previously enrolled at Cleveland Elementary School where during the 7th grade he was taught Science by the Respondent. A.H. testified that he did not throw any candy or a juice box in the vicinity of the Respondent, yet the Respondent grabbed and twisted his arm and as he was holding A.H. he was moving A.H. toward the door forcing the student out of the room. A.H. testified that the Respondent let go of the student when a Child Study Team member entered the classroom and took A.H. downstairs.[6] Contrast that with the testimony of the students.

Furthermore, A.H. denied touching Mr. Ajayi during the March 27th incident because he did not want to get in trouble again and learned his lesson.[7] In fact, A.H. denied that the Respondent asked him for the candy after he picked it up, and he is unsure whether he provided a written statement to Ms. Ervin concerning the March 27, 2014, incident. A.H. knew that if he ever put his hand on the Respondent again after the October 2013 assault, "Mr. Ajayi could press charges on me and face a whole bunch of stuff, and face penalties including the possibility of expulsion from school."[8]

The testimony of H.A., a 16 year old Ninth Grade student presently enrolled at American History High School in Newark who was formerly enrolled in Cleveland Elementary School, where she was a pupil in Mr. Ajayi's Science class. Her testimony indicates that someone threw a juice box at Mr. Ajayi and that Mr. Ajayi told A.H. to get out of the classroom and A.H. refused. She further testified that the Respondent grabbed A.H. by his arm and tried to take him out of the class. A.H. was swearing a little and subsequently AH pushed Mr. Ajayi away. She also testified that she was escorted to the office by the Vice Principal, Mr. Davis, and she spoke with Ms. Ervin.[9]

[9] TR 2, 113:1-16

H.A. testified that Ms. Ervin prepared the written statement and she signed it.[10] She also testified that A.H. eventually left the room when the security guard took him outside.[11]

L.S., presently a 15 year old Ninth Grade at Bars High School in Newark, was previously a student at Cleveland Elementary School and was in Mr. Ajayi's Seventh Grade Science class. She testified that a piece of candy was thrown that hit Mr. Ajayi, who thought that A.H. had thrown it at him and grabbed his shirt. A.H. tried to get away, and Mr. Ajayi grabbed his wrist and twisted it.[12] She also testified that she was not sure what had happened,[13] and A.H. left the classroom after the incident by slamming the door and she thinks he went to the office.[14]

L.S. also testified that she never got a chance to speak to anyone about the incident because apparently A.H. told her mother what had occurred and her mother reported the incident to the school office.[15] Most importantly, L.S. testified that she never spoke to Ms. Ervin about the incident, although a written statement allegedly authored by L.S. and prepared by Ms. Ervin was submitted as evidence in the case and marked D-7. [16] Incredibly, L.S. testified that "she did not review the statement submitted under her name until I think this month."[17]

Barbara Ervin, the then Principal of Cleveland Elementary School, testified that there were student complaints regarding physical incidents with the Respondent which were described as pulling, snatching, grabbing and pushing.[18] She also testified that the first two (2) times these matters were referred to the Department of Children and Families (DCF), who found that the alleged actions by the Respondent did not rise to anything beyond administrative meeting with the teacher and providing strategies.[19] A memorandum of those incidents (see Respondent D-8) was prepared and issued to the Respondent.

The Respondent has been a teacher in the Newark Public Schools for 15 years and prior to his suspension taught Science at Cleveland Elementary School. Prior to that he was a Science teacher at Samuel Berliner School and aside from the present situation has never been the subject of disciplinary charges. He testified that a list of students in jeopardy of failing was compiled by him prior to March 27, 2014 and A.H. is on that list. A letter was sent to the parents of all of the individuals on the list, and the Respondent signed it as did Ms. Ervin.

The Respondent testified that on March 27, 2014, his back was turned to the class, and something struck him in the back of his leg and he turned and saw that A.H. was picking up the object. He asked A.H. whether he threw the object and then asked him to hand him the object, which A.H. refused to do. The Respondent testified that he asked A.H. three times to give him the object but he refused to do so. At this point, A.H. stood up and said "Fuck, I didn't throw it" and pushed the Respondent with both hands, and the Respondent fell back.[20] Fearing that A.H. would kick him and hurt him as he did before (referencing the October 2013 incident), the Respondent grabbed both of his hands.[21] A.H. at this point began to swing around and as he was not holding A.H. tightly he let him go. The situation escalated as A.H. struck the Respondent more than twice on his lower left side and, in response Mr. Ajayi again grabbed A.H.'s hand and turned him toward the door. A.H. became very aggressive; the Respondent did not want A.H. to hurt him again or hurt anyone else. In particular, the Respondent was concerned about the dangerous materials in the classroom.[22]

The Respondent was unable to summon help using the intercom system because it had been broken by a student and was inoperable for at least a two month period. However, he did send two emails requesting that it be repaired and those were introduced as RVA-1 and RVA-2. Mr. Ajayi also denied that there was a security guard stationed on the third floor and he was unable to summon help utilizing the cell phone because of the suddenness of the attack.

The Respondent testified, "A.H. was a disruptive and angry student who disrupted his class almost on a daily basis; he would not stay in his seat, he would throw things at students and he would touch students inappropriately."[23]

The October 23, 2013, incident was a serious behavioral issue that arose with respect to A.H. walking around the classroom and being told by the Respondent to go back to his seat. A.H. suddenly became aggressive,

[20] TR 3, 11:16-25
[21] TR 3, 12:1-10
[22] TR 3, 13:9-14:10
[23] TR 3, 17:19-18:3

Additionally, after the October 2013 incident, which caused A.H. to be suspended for several days, he was cautioned by Principal Ervin as to what potential consequences could befall him should he put his hands on Mr. Ajayi again. Among those was not only an administrative punishment directly related to his continued attendance at Cleveland Elementary School, but also the possibility of criminal charges being filed. Put succinctly, A.H. does not want to face these consequences.

The Respondent contends that it could be argued that the received warning would be a strong reason for A.H. to not confront Respondent in the first place, but a look at the facts presented by the case quickly dissolves this position. A.H. was, by all measures, an undisciplined and disruptive student who was not in firm control of himself. He was constantly out of his seat, disturbing and touching other students in class, and even admitted that his misbehavior in class included being too talkative and getting into fights. He was not doing well academically as evidenced by the March 14 letter. It is likely that rather than assuming a submissive stance when he was confronted by Respondent after he picked up the thrown candy, he adopted an aggressive posture and impulsively assaulted the teacher in the same manner as he had done before. Any admonitions issued by the Principal were long forgotten by the time he assaulted the Respondent.

A.H.'s testimony must be viewed with a jaundiced eye given his strong motivations to lie, but even absent those motivations, his testimony fails to contribute to the desired result sought by the District. His testimony simply does not make common sense. A.H. would have us believe that after leaving his seat to retrieve a piece of candy which he requested be thrown to him by another student, the teacher repeatedly accused him of throwing the candy and then, without provocation, grabbed and twisted his right arm. As the teacher was moving A.H. toward the door in this fashion, a Child Study Team member entered the room at which point Mr. Ajayi released A.H. who was then escorted to the office. A.H.'s denial that as part of the interaction with the teacher he was asked to turn over the object is incredible. The Respondent, a seasoned teacher, could not have been interested the escalating the incident to the threshold of physical aggression and beyond. Mr. Ajayi had been punched and kicked by A.H. only a few months before, and the Respondent had been sent at least one (1) memo admonishing him to act with care and circumspection in handling students, as he had done in the past. It is highly unlikely that the Respondent, an educator of 15 years with an excellent record, wanted to subject himself not only to be beaten up again but also the possible administrative sanctions. Rather, "It is far more likely that the teacher was interested in getting his students back on task after he was struck by the candy. The incident surely would have come to a conclusion if A.H. had been more cooperative and given the object to the Respondent."

A.H.'s denial that he ever touched the Respondent during the March 27th incident seems most unlikely given his prior assault on the teacher, his constant acting out in class, and the aggressive posture he assumed in the exchange with the Respondent. If A.H. truly wanted to avoid a confrontation, he would have been more respectful, cooperative and demure when Mr. Ajayi asked him whether he tossed the candy. Instead, A.H. acted to goad the teacher into a more serious encounter.

Moreover, A.H.'s admission that he learned his lesson from the October 2013 incident does not ring true. As the record established, "A.H. was a daily source of frustration for Mr. Ajayi and he was an integral part of the chaos which all too often define a Seventh Grade Science class, which was the focus of this incident."

H.A. testified that despite identifying A.A. as the person who threw the object to A.H., she did not actually see A.A. make the toss. Her own words require a very careful review of her testimony. She stated, "We have this thing of getting into groups in class and talking about what happens during class. My friend kept saying, A.A., A.A., A.A. actually did see it was her so it was her." [24] She also testified that she only knows who had thrown the object from what other people told her.[25]

The Respondent contends that the impact of this astonishing testimony is that it calls into question all other parts of her testimony pertaining to the description of the event. "We simply do not know, nor can we determine, with any degree of certainty, what portion or portions of her testimony are based upon what she herself observed or what other students may have told her. This doubt makes all of her statement under oath unreliable. In short, her testimony as a corroborating witness deserves little, if any, weight."

[25] TR 2, 117:7-11

L.S. testified that she did not give a statement as to what had occurred and that it was her mother who had reported the information. Her mother had found out what had occurred from A.H. She also testified that she never drafted any statement or gave any written statement to Ms. Ervin and only saw a statement that she was supposed to sign, but she never was involved with the drafting of that statement and never signed the statement.

The Respondent argues that the investigation conducted by Principal Ervin was flawed to say the least. The Principal did everything in her power to make certain that the investigation turned out exactly as she wanted and that the conclusions she reached were not as a result of a full, fair and neutral inquiry, but rather nothing more than a rush to the judgment of finding that the Respondent committed the assault alleged without conducting any kind of real analysis of the facts presented.

Support for this argument can be found in the fact that Mr. Ervin testified that she had supervised A.H. since the Fourth Grade and he was not, in her opinion, an aggressive child, even as a Seventh Grader, as were some of the other students in the classroom. She had come to this conclusion despite the fact that A.H. had punched and kicked the Respondent once before and had been suspended from school as a result. She further mistakenly assumed that A.H. had learned his lesson from the first incident and that based upon the conversation she had with him after the initial assault in 2013, "A second time he did not swing or hit the Respondent." Giving the Respondent's uncontroverted testimony that A.H. was disruptive on a daily basis, and A.H.'s admission that he was often involved in fights, Ms. Ervin's opinion as to the non-violent nature of A.H. is clearly erroneous, and her reliance upon that mistaken opinion in coming to an investigative conclusion is misguided.

Secondly, the fact that Ms. Ervin came to the final conclusion that she did before the inquiry even commenced and based upon pre-conceived notions is evident from the cross-examination conducted concerning the method in which statements were taken from student witnesses and a comparison of those statements. The undisputed facts in evidence show that Ms. Ervin received information from students and she alone selected and then placed that information on paper, utilizing her own words and placing her own spin on what the students told her. Needless to say, that does not make for an accurate description of an event by a witness.

It actually provided the Principal what she was looking for to document a case against the Respondent. Moreover, she refused to admit that the statements taken by her were, to put it mildly, inconsistent. She took no codified statements from A.H., F.K. or A.A. instead incorporating their versions into her description of the incident, a narrative which again did not fit the way the incident actually occurred.

Third, and most egregiously, Ms. Ervin submitted a written statement into evidence as attributable to a witness who, in fact, did not give that statement. Under oath Ms. Ervin stated that she spoke with L.S., a student witness, after the incident and even though that statement was unsigned, it was consistent with the information provided by L.S. At the arbitration hearing, L.S. testified that she never spoke with Ms. Ervin, but rather the factual version of the incident reflected in her statement was provided by her mother. This certainly calls into question what the Principal testified to as to L.S., but based upon the legal principle of false in one, false in all.

Accordingly, the Respondent asks that Ms. Ervin's testimony should be discounted in its entirety.

Mr. Ajayi's testimony of what had occurred on March 27, 2014, makes the most sense of any testimony adduced at the hearing. He testified that after he was hit with an object, he asked for the object and A.H. refused to give it to him, and while he was standing A.H. adopted an aggressive posture as he had done in the past. He shoved the Respondent who fell back. As previously indicated, fearing that the matter would escalate and creating a danger to himself and other students in the classroom, especially in light of the chemicals, breakables and equipment present, the Respondent took hold of A.H.'s hands and tried to move him toward the door in an effort to eject him from the class. A.H. resisted and given the speed in which the situation had developed, the broken intercom, the unavailability of his own cell phone, this was the Respondent's best and only alternative. A.H. broke free and struck the Respondent at least twice in the left side and the Respondent's fear of being punched, kicked or worse, was realized. He again grabbed A.H. to protect himself, his students and to continue to remove A.H. from the class when the Child Study Team member entered and the incident came to a conclusion.

Under the statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1, the Respondent had the absolute right to employ the minimum amount of force, which he did exert upon A.H. to not only quell the disturbance which the student created, threatening physical injury to others, but to protect himself and the rest of his class from personal injury.

Given the circumstances in the case in the instant matter, the Respondent's actions in taking control of the situation were more than reasonable as he utilized a minimal amount of force to halt the attack with no resulting harm to A.H., himself or anyone else. There is absolutely no indication that Mr. Ajayi's actions were retaliatory in nature. The Respondent argues that it has been held that the exertion of physical control over an insubordinate and insulant pupil in order to quell a disturbance is not unreasonable and not in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1. In support of that, the Respondent references the tenure hearing of Calabrese, Ridgefield, C.D. 304-82, 29 Oct. 82.

The Respondent contends that in the case at bar, his actions were reasonable and should not be held illegal. Additionally, the Respondent's lack of disciplinary history and his service to the District, including exemplary evaluations and certificates for attending a variety of different training programs, establish that this is not a case where the Respondent decided that he was going to retaliate against A.H.

For all of the above reasons, the Respondent argues that the District has failed to prove the tenure charges brought by preponderance of credible evidence. Petitioner's proof do not establish that the allegations contained in the tenure charges are more probable than not, nor does its evidence carry the power to convince. Stated another way, the case against Respondent does not permit a finding of either conduct unbecoming a public school teacher or engaging in a pattern of such conduct grounded in probability supported by common experience and, hence, should fail.

The Respondent asks that he be returned to work with full back pay and all emoluments of employment.

DISCUSSION AND OPINION

Both parties insist that the fact pattern in evidence clearly establishes that their positon is correct concerning the instant matter. However, the unique facts of each case can and do control how a particular set of tenure charges filed against a teacher will be adjudicated. The facts in evidence clearly and unequivocally establish that both parties have flawed positions. The most damaging position for the Respondent is the November 21, 2013, memo from Principal Ervin concerning student complaints. In that document, Mr. Ajayi was admonished for putting his hands on students. (see RVA-18/ D-8) Principal Ervin stated,

"...Please refrain from touching your students since you have not established a rapport that will allow you any kind of physical contact. Effective immediately, you are to send students to the office as you have done since the beginning of the school. In addition, you are to contact the office to send security for students that refuse to leave as the Principal, Vice Principal, Chief Innovative Office, Guidance Counselors and Social Workers and all three Security Guards have escorted students from your class in the past without incident."

Yet, despite that admonition, a situation occurred five months later, on March 27, 2014, dealing with the Respondent putting his hands on AH.

The major flaw in the Petitioner's position is the improper investigation conducted by Principal Ervin. Even though the Principal interviewed some of the students who were in the classroom at the time of the incident, the students did not submit any written statements. Principal Ervin indicated in her testimony that many times our students do not read and write well. Therefore, she asked them what occurred and she wrote down everything they told her.[26] Unfortunately, from what was said to what was written down, there was a gap based upon the testimony of those students, which will be discussed below.

The most egregious of the interviews conducted by Principal Ervin was the interview with student L.S. That document was introduced but was unsigned. The student testified on March 31, 2016, and the incident occurred on March 27, 2014, almost two years before her testimony.

L.S. testified that she never met with Principal Ervin and, in fact, A.H. told her mother about the incident and her mother reported it to the school officials.[27] Therefore, Exhibit D-7, which is the witness statement submitted by Principal Ervin on March 27, 2014, can't be utilized in these proceedings because, as testified to by L.S. she never gave the information to the Principal.

The introduction of D-7 does a lot of damage to the credibility of Principal Ervin because she tried to introduce a document that was fraudulently obtained. There is no signature on the document, and as L.S. testified, she never met with the Principal. Therefore, the only way the students' version of what occurred must come from the testimony in the record as testified to at the hearing and recorded by the court reporter.

[26] TR 2, 69:2-7

While Principal Ervin is well meaning, she is not an investigator; there was nothing introduced to show that she is a trained investigator and, more importantly, she still remembers A.H. as a very nice, non-aggressive fourth grade student. Unfortunately, we are dealing with a seventh grade situation where, based on the October 2013 incident, he was aggressive. She admonished him about his aggressiveness and warned him about the potential consequences of his continued aggressive behavior. It is apparent that while he believed he was paying attention to Principal Ervin's admonitions, what happened on March 27, 2014, clearly establishes he ignored what she told him might occur if he continues with his errant behavior. Nevertheless, A.H. testified "that he was disruptive in class and did get into a lot of fights in the classroom."[28]

Petitioner Exhibit 8, introduced as D-8, which is a November 21, 2013, memo from Principal Ervin to the Respondent. The Respondent was assaulted by a student and, yet, no legal action was taken against the student. The record is devoid of the Respondent filing a grievance or a police report about the incident. The record is also devoid as to any legal action Principal Ervin took against A.H. Nevertheless, another situation occurred of a physical nature approximately five (5) months after the memo from Principal Ervin to the Respondent. I have a difficult time accepting the Respondent's argument that his action in the instant matter was nothing more than self-defense. He is the responsible adult, the teacher in charge of that class. Even though the record clearly and unequivocally establishes that the intercom was not working, he could have used his cell phone, he could have asked for assistance from the Child Study Team members whose office was next to his classroom, or he could have sent a student to the office to request assistance in the room. Even though it is probably unpopular and not a good idea to have a student walking through the corridors, in that existing emergent situation, that was a viable option, but Mr. Ajayi did not take advantage of any options other than of a physical nature. If Mr. Ajayi was so concerned about the safety of other students and about how difficult A.H. was in his classroom, there is nothing in the record to establish that he had A.H. removed or recommended for assistance by the Child Study Team, or recommended that A.H. have counseling. If that did occur, it is not in the record, and most importantly, it should be in the record.

Referencing the October 23, 2013, incident, the Respondent had an obligation to pursue the matter because he was assaulted by a student. The record is unclear and, in fact, there is no record as to why he did not pursue any legal action against A.H. or request of the Principal for legal action to be taken against A.H. That has to be on Mr. Ajayi. Mr. Ajayi had an opportunity back in October of 2013 to begin to address the aggressiveness of A.H. and he failed to do so. That failure escalated into the March 27, 2014, incident.

The testimony of the students in the record is varied at best and, in fact, there is no clear, consistent testimony as to what actually occurred in Mr. Ajayi's Science classroom in Cleveland Elementary School on March 27, 2014, except the physical altercation between Mr. Ajayi and A.H.

A review of the testimony in the record shows the following:

A.H. testified that he asked another student in the class to throw him a piece of candy which the student did and that candy ultimately hit Mr. Ajayi and landed at his foot. He went to pick it up and that is when the altercation with Mr. Ajayi occurred. "Mr. Ajayi came over to my seat and said that I threw it. I said I didn't throw it." He put his arms like this, his hand on my arm and flung me on my chair. That is when I went back to my seat to get my stuff so I could go downstairs and tell them he just did this. [29] He also testified that a Child Study Team member came in and took him to the Principal's office.[30]

H.A. testified that there was a juice box thrown at Mr. Ajayi, but it did not hit him.[31] "Mr. Ajayi thought it was A.H. who threw a juice box and told A.H. to get out of the class. A.H. said no because he did not throw the juice box. Mr. Ajayi got really impatient and grabbed A.H. by his left arm and tried to take A.H. out of the classroom."[32] Additionally she stated that "A.H. was standing at our table and he grabbed him by his left arm and kept pushing him towards the door." [33] She also testified that the security guard came into the room to see what had been occurring and escorted A.H. out of the room.[34]

L.S. testified that a piece of candy had been thrown and hit Mr. Ajayi in his head.[35] "He thought A.H. had thrown the candy and he kind of got mad at A.H. and grabbed his shirt and like lifted him up and stuff. Then A.H. tried to get away. He grabbed his wrist and then A.H. tried to get away again and he twisted here." [36] Furthermore, she testified that A.H. slammed the door when he left and she guessed he was going to the office.[37]

Mr. Ajayi testified that an object was thrown and hit him, but he never identified whether it was a piece of candy or a juice box. He did testify that he asked A.H. if he threw the object and A.H. said no. He then asked him three times to give him the object and A.H. refused to do so.[38] Furthermore, Mr. Ajayi testified that two (2) Child Study Team members came into the room when they heard the commotion and they took A.H. out of the classroom to the Principal's office.[39]

Clearly, the above record shows that while there is no consistency as to the genesis of what had occurred that led to the physical altercation between the Respondent and A.H., the common denominator is that the Respondent put his hands on A.H. and began to push him towards the door. However, whether it was a juice box or a piece of candy, an object was thrown and it hit the Respondent. Mr. Ajayi asked A.H. if he threw it, and the response was "no, I did not." He asked A.H. for the object and A.H. refused to give it to him. At that point in time, A.H. was being uncooperative and was challenging the Respondent's authority. He pursued the matter by refusing to give the object, whether it was a juice box or a piece of candy to the Respondent. The Respondent, as previously indicated, had options but chose not to utilize those options, and the next thing the record establishes is that a physical confrontation occurred. The record establishes from A.H., L.S. and H.A. that there was a physical confrontation and none of them could corroborate the Respondent's testimony that he fell back as he testified to. The Respondent testified that the aggressor in this entire matter was A.H. but the student testimony belies that comment.

A.H. testified that Mr. Ajayi never asked him for the object that had been thrown.[40] None of the other students testified as to whether or not Mr. Ajayi asked A.H. for the object that was thrown (we are addressing a piece of candy and in A.H.'s version it was a Reese's Peanut Butter Cup), but they do recall Mr. Ajayi asking A.H. if he threw the object. The person who threw the piece of candy, who has been identified as A.A. was not a witness at the arbitration hearing. That person was also a student in Mr. Ajayi's seventh grade Science class at Cleveland Elementary School.

We have in the record varied testimony as to how the altercation occurred. Mr. Ajayi testified that A.H. was the aggressor, and students testified that Mr. Ajayi became mad and upset that something had been thrown at him and he wanted A.H. out of his classroom. The alleged verbalization between A.H. and the Respondent was not clearly identified by the students who testified. Therefore, the students were not aware if Mr. Ajayi asked A.H. for the piece of candy on three separate occasions and if that led to Mr. Ajayi asking A.H. to leave the class.

A.H. testified that he wanted to leave the class, but he wanted to get his stuff and Mr. Ajayi would not let him get his stuff. That contradicts his statement when Mr. Ajayi asked him to leave the class. We do have in the record that Mr. Ajayi was reprimanded and admonished by Principal Ervin for touching students. That is clear, that is concise, and that is not refuted. The November 21, 2013, (see RVA 18/D8) memo from Principal Ervin to Mr. Ajayi was never challenged by Mr. Ajayi. He accepted at face value all of the words in that document which include, "Twice in the last three days, we have met to discuss complaints from students." Those complaints dealt with Mr. Ajayi grabbing a student and twisting her arm, and another student telling the Principal that he yoked him up when he refused to give him his basketball that another student was bouncing. That definitely shows the Arbitrator that Mr. Ajayi has a temper and that temper has to be controlled.

Moreover, the Respondent's argument that because the two (2) students, R.H. and T.E., did not testify all references to them cannot be utilized by the arbitrator. However, the legal argument of voir dire is now a component of the matter at bar. The November 21, 2013, (see RVA-18/D-8) memorandum from Principal Ervin to the Respondent was never challenged by Mr. Ajayi. The only logical conclusion to be drawn from his lack of action is that he accepted and agreed upon all of the words in that exhibit including the admonition from Ms. Ervin. Accordingly, the Respondent's argument about R.H. and T.E is set aside.

However, there are some documents in the record that establish that Mr. Ajayi had training on how to deal with these specific instances, but apparently he forgot what was addressed in the training sessions.

RVA-157 is part of the Respondent's documents, and it is a professional development document which indicates that on April 21, 2004, Mr. Ajayi attended a program entitled Non-Violent Crisis Intervention Training. The purpose of this workshop is to provide techniques and methods to diffuse explosive behavior and handle threatening or challenging situations. Mr. Ajayi was trained in how to deal with the situation on October 23, 2013, and March 27, 2014, and he failed in both instances. He resorted to physical confrontation. With this program, it is probably designed not to allow that to occur.

Additionally, RVA-162 is another professional development training certificate that Mr. Ajayi received for a training program, dealing with challenging behavior in young children, understanding and preventing and responding effectively. The purpose of that program was to identify challenging behaviors in children and learn effective strategies and techniques to prevent and respond to these behaviors in the classroom. That was dated March 25, 2004. Again, Mr. Ajayi did not utilize what he learned at that training session.

Finally, RVA-167, dated November 17, 2003, was another training program which was to deal with the implementation of the IEP maintaining a balanced curriculum. The purpose of that was to enhance the ability to create positive educational environments that are effective for teaching and learning in the classroom. What happened on the October 2013 and March 2014 incidents clearly was violative of this program.

While an argument can be made that no IEP was presented in the documentation with this case, it is important to review the testimony of Principal Ervin about the Samuel Berliner School. "The Samuel Berliner School is a special needs school that addresses behavioral problems of children. Students are evaluated and classified based upon academic and/or behavioral needs. That is a school where students whose behavior has exceeded what can be handled in a general education school. They are placed in Samuel Berliner for multiple disruptions, and it is the next step before we do an out-of-district placement or anything like that. It is a school for children who are consistently disruptive, consistently physical and consistently keeping other kids from learning."[41]

Mr. Ajayi's previous assignment was a school dealing with disruptive children, and Principal Ervin interviewed Mr. Ajayi for the position at Cleveland Elementary School and she accepted him to be a member of her teaching staff knowing full well what his background was and apparently wanted that type of a background in her classroom. There is nothing in the record to suggest that she did not want that type of academic background and/or school environment for one of her teachers.

She also testified that part of her responsibilities were to observe on a daily basis the educational program that was occurring in each classroom and when she would go into Mr. Ajayi's classroom, she observed students calling out, walking around, not participating in class, instruction that did not pull the students into the lesson. Generally, a disruptive classroom.[42] The record establishes that Mr. Ajayi was having a difficult time addressing the needs of A.H. within that classroom and in fact had a difficult time addressing the needs of a student on January 27, 2014, (see RVA-170) who could not control herself when she came into the classroom and ultimately ended up by pulling the intercom ear piece and receiver causing them to snap. That resulted in the intercom being inoperable, and the record also reflects on February 7 and 24, 2014, Mr. Ajayi did make a request for the intercom to be repaired and that did not occur.

As required by statute, Principal Ervin referred the March 27, 2014, incident to the Department of Children and Families (DCF). They conducted an investigation and on May 7, 2014 submitted their findings. They determined that no adjudicated findings have been made. The DCF Institution Abuse Investigation Unit review herein is solely investigative. They also indicated "[T]he appropriate licensing or supervising authority may take additional action as a result of this investigation." As a result of that investigation, the Newark Public Schools Talent Office/Employee Services Division conducted an internal investigation of the March 27, 2014, incident. In the report dated April 27, 2014, and signed by Michelle Takyi, Manager of Compliance and Tenure, it was determined that even though the matter had been referred to DCF and they returned a finding of not established, the internal investigation conducted by Mr. Takyi showed that Mr. Ajayi did not follow school policy and that based upon the March 27, 2014,. incident, tenure charges should be pursued against Mr. Ajayi.

A state agency made the investigation as required by statute and determined that based upon the evidence in the record, the students "are not abused children as defined by statute. Therefore, the charges against Mr. Ajayi were determined not to be established." The definition of not established from the Department of Children and Families (see Exh. RVA-21) states, "There is not a preponderance of the evidence that the child is an abused or neglected child by definition, but evidence indicates that the child was harmed or placed in harm." That alone was the basis for the District to pursue the tenure charges because they believe that A.H. was harmed.

The documentation in the record establishes that there is no clear concise testimony to determine who was the aggressor in the March 27, 2014, incident. However, the record is clear that Mr. Ajayi has had a problem with students in the past while he was at Cleveland Elementary School. There is nothing in the record to substantiate that he was in violation of District policies or that there was any inappropriate physical contact with students while he was at the Samuel Berliner School. Nevertheless, at Cleveland Elementary School there were at least three incidents of him inappropriately touching students and being physical with students. Even after receiving an admonition in November of 2013, he continued with his errant ways as evidenced by the March 27, 2014, incident. Corporal punishment is not allowed in the State of New Jersey and in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1, Mr. Ajayi may, within the scope of his employment, use and apply such amounts of force as is reasonable and necessary: (1) to quell disturbance, threatening physical injury to others; (2) to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of the pupil; (3) for the purpose of self-defense; (4) for the protections of persons or property.

I don't find that any of those above-mentioned standards have been met by Mr. Ajayi. I can't reach the conclusion that it was self-defense based upon the testimony of the student eye witnesses. The Respondent was annoyed that he had been hit by an object, which by the testimony of A.H., H.A., and L.S. was not deliberately thrown at Mr. Ajayi. Think of the enormity of that incident.

Mr. Ajayi, the responsible adult entrusted with the care of children, lost his temper was irate and became physical with A.H. There was no threatening physical injury to others; there was no possession of a need to obtain a weapon or other dangerous object, and the protection of persons or property because he was in a Science lab is far-fetched. The entire case that Mr. Ajayi presents is circumstantial at best. What the Respondent does not address is that once he touched A.H., the student resorted to self-defense.

Therefore, it is appropriate to review the charges to determine if Mr. Ajayi was in violation of what is expected of a classroom teacher and if he was in violation of conduct unbecoming or other just cause.

Charge Number One: Mr. Ajayi is accused of failing to exercise self-restraint and controlled behavior and using unnecessary and inappropriate physical contact in dealing with a student. Mr. Ajayi is accused of conduct unbecoming or other just cause warranting his dismissal.

Mr. Ajayi did not exercise self-restraint. The question is should that require his termination or is there another appropriate remedy? The District has met its burden of proof in Charge Number One, and it is sustained.

Charge Number Two: Mr. Ajayi is accused of inflicting corporal punishment upon A.H. The Petitioner is accusing Mr. Ajayi of inappropriate and unprofessional conduct, and they were sufficiently flagrant and egregious to warrant termination.

The District has met its burden of proof in Charge Number Two, and it is sustained.

Charge Number Three: Mr. Ajayi is accused of committing an assault and battery upon A.H. and he is accused of inappropriate and unprofessional conduct and placed A.H. at risk of physical and emotional harm, and he is accused of egregious conduct that warrants his termination.

The District has met its burden of proof in Charge Number Three and it is sustained.

Charge Number Four: Mr. Ajayi is accused of acts of misconduct described above, jointly and severable, which demonstrates a series of infractions, constituting a pattern of conduct unbecoming and/or just cause warranting Mr. Ajayi's dismissal and reduction in salary.

The District has met its burden of proof in Charge Number Four, and it is sustained.

Charge Number Five: Mr. Ajayi is accused of violating N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1.

The Board repeats what they have previously indicated on the other charges.

The District has met its burden of proof in Charge Number Five, and it is sustained.

There is no question that Mr. Ajayi has had inappropriate physical contact with students since he has been at Cleveland Elementary School. He started at Cleveland Elementary School in September 2013, and in October 2013 he was admonished by the Principal on two separate occasions of inappropriately touching students and actually grabbing a student and twisting her arm behind her back. No action was taken against Mr. Ajayi at that time. One has to wonder, why not? Why was there no action taken against Mr. Ajayi at that moment or why was that incident not sent to DCF as was the March 2014 incident.

This is not a simple matter where Mr. Ajayi states that it was self-defense. How could it be self-defense if we are dealing with a 15 year old student who was at the arbitration hearing the first day and did not appear to be a 250 pound student? I have no idea why Mr. Ajayi was saying it was self-defense. Mr. Ajayi was remembering what had occurred in October 2013 and was fearful. There is no report that he was fearful. There is no report to the Newark Police Department that he was fearful for his life or fearful for his safety or fearful for his well-being. There is nothing to that effect. We have a situation where Mr. Ajayi had been trained on how to deal with this type of incident and ignored that training.

Mr. Ajayi's pattern of conduct since October 2013 put him in harm's way. Discounting the incidents with F.K. and R.H there are still two (2) incidents of physical contact with the same student. Had the October 2013 or March 27, 2014, incidents been a stand-alone a different result would have been obtained.

For the foregoing reasons, and having duly heard the proofs and allegations of the parties, I Award:

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF

FELICIA A. PUGLIESE

AND

THE STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK
ESSEX COUNTY

Docket No. 272-9/12

Hearings were held in the above-entitled matter on November 20, 2012, December 5, 2012, and January 3, 2013 at the offices of the New Jersey State Board of Mediation in Newark, New Jersey, before Daniel F. Brent, duly designated as Arbitrator. Both parties attended these hearings, were represented by counsel, and were afforded full and equal opportunity to offer testimony under oath, to cross-examine witness and to present evidence and arguments. The Arbitrator issued an Award and Opinion, dated February 15, 2013, upholding the tenure charges against Respondent and granting the Petition of the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County.

criteria using all of the arguments and proofs previously submitted, as augmented by the subsequent written submissions of counsel for Respondent and for the District.

After the parties submitted briefs and reply briefs to the Arbitrator following the Appellate Division decision, the Arbitrator reviewed the evidentiary record in conformity with a mandate of the Appellate Division decision. The Arbitrator has complied with the instructions of the Appellate Division and of the Commissioner of Education, having revisited the record of the instant case, and reevaluated the testimony and other evidence as if the matter had been addressed solely under the previous tenure statute. The following Opinion and Order reflect this reconsideration.

APPEARANCES

For Petitioner, State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County:

Brenda C. Liss, Esq., of Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland, and Perretti, Esqs.

For Respondent, Felicia A. Pugliese:

Richard A. Friedman, Esq., of Zazzali, Fagella, Nowak, Kleinbaum and Friedman, Esqs.

OPINION

In the original Award issued in this matter on February 15, 2013, I discussed the Respondent's inability to demonstrate that the District's imposition of tenure charges terminating her employment had been arbitrary and capricious, the standard imposed by the new TeachNJ statute. Following the Appellate Division's remand of the instant matter to the Commissioner of Education for clarification and the Commissioner of Education's subsequent referral of the case back to this Arbitrator for reconsideration pursuant to the Appellate Division's decision, the undersigned Arbitrator reviewed the record and applied the standards in effect prior to the implementation of the TeachNJ statute. Under the prior statute, the District unequivocally bears the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of the evidence that an Employee's teaching performance as been ineffective or inefficient in two successive school years. The District has met that burden in the instant case.

The evidentiary record submitted by the District established by a preponderance of evidence that the Respondent was chronically unable to control her class after she received an assignment to teach in a setting other than the more structured computer learning center where she had previously been assigned. The record further established by a preponderance of evidence that Respondent was chronically unable to research social studies topics, assemble and transmit appropriate curriculum related materials, formulate lesson plans addressing the various skill and ability levels of her students, or consistently deliver to her students meaningful and engaging instruction covering the curriculum tailored to reach the various levels of students within each class. That many of the students in Respondent's classes suffered from manifest deficiencies in their prior educational preparation was also established by the evidentiary record. This circumstance has been incorporated into the Arbitrator's analysis.

Although the individual characteristics of her students may have presented formidable challenges to Respondent and thus complicated adequate performance of her duties, the District's negative evaluation of her performance relied, in a large measure, on her inability to organize her lessons or to formulate effective strategies for addressing the multiple student skill levels within her assigned classes. Respondent was not measured solely, or even primarily, on what her students learned given their individual characteristics and learning skills; she was not required to bring her students up to grade level understanding of the social studies curriculum. Respondent was judged on what material she presented to her students in order to motivate them to grasp the subject matter at each stage of the Social Studies Curriculum and how she presented the material.

After receiving satisfactory ratings during the years she taught language arts in a computer-based instructional setting to students whose classes came for a single period while their classroom teachers were afforded a preparation period, Respondent was reassigned to teaching in a full classroom setting, where she was required to prepare lessons for multiple levels of learners within each class. The evidentiary record established that this additional teaching burden, rather than the nature of the subject matter, was the primary cause of Respondent's failure to perform satisfactorily.

After reconsideration of the record, the Arbitrator concludes that the District has established persuasively by a preponderance of the evidence that the District has satisfied its burden of demonstrating that, despite multiple supportive interventions by District personnel, including Master Teachers, in repeated interactions and evaluations over a two-year interval, including during administration of a Professional Improvement Plan designed to address her weaknesses, the Respondent's performance did not improve significantly, nor did she adequately convey the subject matter in a meaningful way to her students, or demonstrate any foreseeable likelihood that her performance would improve with additional support. At issue is whether the procedural and substantive affirmative defenses interposed by Respondent invalidate the tenure charges and preclude terminating Respondent's employment.

Counsel for Respondent argued at the original hearings, and in the briefs filed after the Appellate Division decision remanded the matter for reconsideration, that Respondent had been illegally assigned to the classroom duties for which she was evaluated as ineffective because she was not rated "Highly Qualified" as required by the No Child Left Behind Act. Counsel further asserted that Respondent was not afforded a statutorily mandated Professional Improvement Plan (PIP) for the full ninety-day interval required by the then applicable statute, nor was she afforded an opportunity to participate in the formulation of this plan. In addition, Counsel asserted that the resources afforded to Respondent in connection with her Professional Improvement Plan were inadequate, as they were neither individualized nor created or provided solely for Respondent's benefit. On the basis of these procedural defects, Counsel contends that the decision to terminate Respondent's tenure and employment was unjust, improper, and illegal.

Respondent asserted that, based on her licensure, her assignment as a social studies departmentalized teacher was illegal, and thus any less than satisfactory performance ratings that she received for work performed in this assignment could not form a legitimate basis for tenure charges. Respondent further asserted that her assignment to teach social studies to elementary students violated both her licensure and the legal requirements established by the No Child Left Behind statute (NCLB), because Respondent had to be rated Highly Qualified to teach social studies in a departmentalized elementary school setting. This argument did not demonstrate a valid basis to invalidate the disputed assignment.

Teachers at the high school level must be certified as "Highly Qualified" to teach in their area of specialization, as defined by state statute and by No Child Left Behind (NCLB). Therefore, assigning a teacher in a departmentalized high school setting to teach outside of the area in which the teacher is subject matter certified and has been deemed Highly Qualified is patently improper, and such an assignment would preclude negative evaluations based on sub-standard performance in such an assignment. Respondent asserted that a similar prohibition governs at the elementary school level. This is not the case. Moreover, Respondent could properly have been assigned under her licensure to teach all elementary core subjects, including social studies, in a non-departmentalized elementary school setting.

According to the testimony, the student population Respondent was assigned to teach in her social studies classes required focused assistance in reading and absorbing social studies lessons and assignments, some at rudimentary levels. These deficiencies in reading and comprehending written social studies materials were within the Grievant's area of expertise to address. Grievant's skill and experience as a language arts teacher could have enhanced her ability to help her students understand appropriate social studies-related course materials, tailored to meet their reading comprehension levels, which should have been selected by Respondent from resources provided by the District.

The elementary school level Social Studies Curriculum requires that a teacher possess a general knowledge of history, government, sociology, and other related topics sufficient to understand and implement the curriculum. Respondent argued that she was improperly and illegally assigned to teach elementary school social studies because she was a sociology major in college, rather than a history, government, or social studies major. Although sociology is arguably only a minor component of the elementary school level social studies curriculum, nothing in the evidentiary record of the instant case outweighed the District's assertion that a former sociology major can grasp and convey the social studies curriculum intended for transmittal to elementary school students. Gaining command of such material may be less challenging for a former history or government major, but neither the NCLB law nor New Jersey statute then in effect expressly limited Highly Qualified designations for teaching social studies to those majors. Therefore, the nature of the material to be presented did not disqualify the social studies assignment in which Respondent was evaluated as complying with the legal standards applicable under state statute before the implementation of TeachNJ. Neither does the No Child Left Behind Act mandate such a result. Consequently, the nature of the subject matter she was assigned to teach in 2010-11 and 2011-12 does not mandate dismissal of the tenure charges.

Credible testimony by the Building Principal and other District witnesses, which was not effectively rebutted by Respondent, established persuasively that Respondent was invited to participate in the formulation of her Professional Improvement Plan, or to add input concerning the parameters of the PIP, but elected not to avail herself of this opportunity. Consequently, this aspect of the alleged District's defective procedure for assisting Respondent must be discounted.

In addition, Respondent contended that the truncated length of the mandated ninety calendar-day PIP interval, which was at most eighty-seven days long, was fatally deficient. Different interruptions may arise during a ninety-day PIP interval-- including teacher absences, intervening spring or winter recess, or other variables--that reduce actual classroom teaching time and student contact during the ninety calendar-day PIP interval. That several of the days during Respondent's PIP interval were devoted to standardized testing or to packing up classrooms in anticipation of the school year ending and the school closing, as Respondent asserted, did not invalidate the interval for several reasons. Students may also be focused on non-academic activities at other times during the school year; for example, in preparation for a holiday seasonal assembly, on field trips, or rehearsing for a dramatic production. The statutory ninety calendar-day plan length is intended to provide a long enough interval for a deficient teacher to absorb and integrate advice and suggestions, to address her deficiencies with expert assistance and support, and to demonstrate significant observable improvement in teaching performance before the expiration of the interval.

Moreover, the truncation of the ninety-day PIP interval by three days in the instant case was attributable to Respondent's refusal to meet with school administrators formally to accept and discuss tenure charges because her Union representative was not available at work on those days. Respondent was certainly entitled to Union representation, and no adverse inference can be, or has been, drawn from her insistence on waiting until such representation was available. Nevertheless, an employee cannot unilaterally precipitate an entitlement to an additional year's employment simply by delaying the meeting at which tenure charges are to be delivered or a PIP is to commence until fewer than ninety days remain in the school year. Ceding such leverage to an individual teacher would be untenable and contrary to the intent of the statute establishing the requirement of remedial assistance through a Professional Improvement Plan. Consequently, if the PIP was properly created, and if the school administration provided the requisite support materials, evaluations, feedback, and opportunity for Respondent to demonstrate improvement, the loss of three days would not invalidate an otherwise proper PIP interval.

Respondent did not demonstrate significant improvement in her performance during the eighty-seven day interval. Thus, the three extra days would not have altered the outcome. However, the District failed to provide tailored support for Respondent throughout the PIP interval, as the testimony established that no Master Teacher or other supporting expert assisted Respondent in improving her classroom performance after mid-May of the 2011-12 school year. The evidentiary record established that no remedial help was provided to Respondent after May 9, 2012, creating a potentially material defect in administering the PIP as required under pre-TeachNJ standards.

Although it was unlikely that Respondent would have been able to improve her ability to identify resources, implement multi-level lesson plans, and control her classroom to provide focused and appropriate activities and lessons for her students to an acceptable level even with such additional coaching, the District's failure to provide substantial assistance for almost half the PIP interval constituted a significant defect in the PIP process.

Respondent has not established as affirmative defenses that she was illegally assigned to the classroom duties for which she was evaluated as ineffective, or that she did not have an opportunity to participate in the formulation of her Professional Improvement Plan, or that the length of the plan was fatally deficient. Thus, the critical factors determining the outcome of this reconsideration of the prior record using the pre-TeachNJ standards are whether Respondent was deprived of remedial support to which she was legally entitled throughout the PIP interval and whether such defect materially affected the outcome of the instant case.

The District has the burden of demonstrating not only that Respondent was unsatisfactory as a teacher, but also that a meaningful Performance Improvement Plan, personalized to address Respondent's weaknesses, had been developed, implemented, and staffed by qualified support personnel. The District's failure to provide supervision and supplemental support after May 9, 2012 potentially eroded the essential purpose of the PIP. However, if Respondent believed additional direct assistance by the Master Teacher or other support resources provided by District officials would have been helpful in improving her performance, Respondent could have demanded more assistance from the Master Teacher and from her Principal or reached out for other District support services after May 9, 2012. The record did not establish to the Arbitrator's reasonable satisfaction that Respondent clearly requested such additional assistance and was rebuffed. No grievance was filed, nor did she enlist her Union's assistance to rectify this situation.

In evaluating the total context of the continued sub-standard caliber of Respondent's teaching performance throughout the PIP interval, the Arbitrator cannot ignore the help Respondent received during her Professional Improvement Plan in determining the weight to be afforded the insufficient level of remedial assistance provided Respondent after May 9, 2012. The preponderance of the evidence demonstrated to the Arbitrator's reasonable satisfaction that the limited interactions between Respondent and the Master Teacher assigned to assist in improving Respondent's performance and other resources provided by the District did not significantly impair Respondent's ability to demonstrate satisfactory teaching during the PIP interval. Given Respondent's election not to participate in crafting the Professional Improvement Plan and her inability to improve her performance during the 2012 PIP interval, the District's failure to provide more adequate assistance after May 9, 2012 was not a material defect in the Professional Improvement Plan invalidating the tenure charges solely on the basis of diminished Master Teacher interaction or insufficient provision of other support resources provided to Respondent after May 9, 2012. Therefore, the District met its minimum burden regarding the PIP. A different conclusion might apply in the case of a teacher who demonstrated discernible improvement before remedial help was diminished or discontinued.

This conclusion did not shift the burden to demonstrate non-compliance to Respondent, but recognizes that Respondent showed no discernible improvement during the first half of the PIP, when the District provided her at least the minimum required level of remedial assistance. The District established by a preponderance of the evidence that Respondent chronically and persistently failed to respond to the support that was offered before or during the PIP interval or to show any discernible improvement in her classroom performance during the first half of the PIP interval. Thus, absent any clearly articulated demand for more help from Respondent or any noticeable improvement in her teaching, the perfunctory support afforded to Respondent during the second half of the Professional Improvement Plan interval did not invalidate the District's compliance with the PIP requirement then in effect.

The District demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence, as required by then applicable statute, that Respondent's pedagogical skills--particularly effective lesson planning, classroom control, and coordinated presentation of multiple levels of curriculum-related tasks—consistently failed to satisfy minimum standards of teaching competence in her classes during two school years. The shortcomings repeatedly cited, and persuasively demonstrated, by the District as evidence of Respondent's teaching inefficiency involved her persistent inability to control her class or to craft and deliver lessons suitable for the multiple learning levels of students in her classes. The District has met its burden of evaluating Respondent's performance under the pre-TeachNJ standards, demonstrating by a preponderance of the evidence that Respondent was an unsatisfactory teacher in 2010-11 and 2011-12. Although Respondent has argued that a less stringent penalty, consistent with progressively severe discipline, is more appropriate than termination, the evidentiary record did not justify returning to the classroom, to the detriment of the District's students, a teacher whose pervasive shortcomings have been amply demonstrated.

ORDER

Based on the Arbitrator's reconsideration of the evidence and arguments submitted by the parties in the instant matter, applying the standards for deciding tenure charges in effect under the statutes and regulations in effect prior to the implementation of the TeachNJ statute, Petitioner State Operated School District of the City of Newark has demonstrated by a preponderance of the relevant evidence that the tenure charges brought by the District against Respondent Felicia Pugliese should be sustained. I so order.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured teacher employed in respondent's school district since 1990 – appealed the determination of the respondent Board to withhold her salary and adjustment increments for the 2013-2014 school year. This action was taken following an investigation of a June 2013 parental complaint that resulted in a letter of reprimand for unbecoming and unprofessional conduct. Petitioner had previously received a letter of reprimand in 2012 for engaging in inappropriate behavior toward another teacher in the presence of students. Petitioner contended that she received exemplary performance reviews for the 2012-2013 school year, and that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable, and contrary to legal precedent. The Board asserted that petitioner's increments were appropriately withheld pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. The parties filed cross-motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no genuine issues of material fact, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the Board properly considered petitioner's reprimands in determining to withhold her salary increment; the petitioner bears the burden of proving that the withholding of her increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; and petitioner's increment was withheld based on a reprimand in 2011-2012 and another in 2012-2013, both for conduct that occurred in the classroom and was deemed to be unbecoming and unprofessional. The ALJ concluded that the Board's actions were not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ granted respondent's motion for summary decision, denied petitioner's cross-motion, and dismissed the petition.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner rejected the ALJ's Initial Decision and remanded the matter to the OAL for a hearing on the merits. In so doing, the Commissioner noted that the petitioner's motion for summary decision was strictly based on a legal issue and did not suggest that there were no material facts in dispute. In light of the relief sought in this case, the factual dispute regarding the alleged conduct that resulted in the increment withholding is not insubstantial in nature, but rather is a genuine issue of material fact that precludes the disposition of this matter by summary decision.

| V. | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF FARMINGDALE MONMOUTH COUNTY, | : | DECISION |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, Margaret Wicks, and the Farmingdale Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.

This matter involves a claim by the petitioner – a tenured teaching staff member – that the Board's decision to withhold her increment for the 2013-14 school year was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. In granting summary decision to the Board, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the petitioner did not present sufficient evidence in opposition to the Board's motion to undermine the integrity of the Board's investigation. Therefore, the ALJ found that the petitioner has not demonstrated that the Board's decision to withhold her increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Upon a comprehensive review of the record, and for the reasons that follow, the Commissioner remands the matter to the OAL for further proceedings.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, a local board of education may withhold an employee's salary increment for inefficiency or other good cause. Probst v. Board of Education of the Borough of Haddonfield, 127 N.J. 518 (1992). The recommendation and decision to withhold an employee's increment is "a matter of essential managerial prerogative which has been delegated by the legislature to the board." Bernards Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Bernards Twp. Educ. Ass'n., 79 N.J. 311, 321 (1979). Moreover, a board of education's exercise of its discretionary powers "may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. Board of Education of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App Div 1960). Therefore, when a school employee challenges a salary increment withholding, the employee bears the burden of proof "of demonstrating that the decision was unreasonable, arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera, supra, at 297. In evaluating whether the increment withholding is reasonable, the issues to be determined are: (1) whether the underlying facts were as those who made the evaluation claimed, and (2) whether it was unreasonable for them to conclude as they did upon those facts, bearing in mind their expertise. Kopera, supra, at 296-297.

Although it is well established that the petitioner bears the burden of demonstrating that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, when there are facts in dispute the employee is entitled to a hearing on the merits in order to attempt to satisfy the burden. Under Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995), when a motion for summary decision is filed, the judge is obligated to conduct a thorough review of the record with all of the evidence viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party to determine whether there exists a genuine issue of material fact. Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540. The documents that were attached to the petitioner's certification in opposition to the Board's motion for summary decision clearly illustrate that there are genuine issues of material fact. Specifically, the petitioner's certification included two rebuttal memos that the petitioner submitted to the Board outlining the factual disputes regarding the alleged conduct that led to the petitioner's increment withholding.[1] The Commissioner is not persuaded by the Board's assertion that there are no material facts in dispute simply because nothing of probative value was recited in the so-called letters of rebuttal submitted by the petitioner. Therefore, in light of the relief sought in this case, the factual dispute regarding the alleged conduct resulting in the increment withholding is not of an insubstantial nature but rather is a genuine issue of material fact that precludes the disposition of this matter by summary decision.[2]

Accordingly the Initial Decision is rejected; and this matter is remanded to the OAL for a hearing on the merits.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 6/09/16

Date of Mailing: 6/09/16

[1] By a letter dated April 30, 2012, the petitioner disputed the Board's findings that were contained in a letter of reprimand concerning the petitioner's interaction with another staff member in the classroom. In another letter dated September 17, 2013, the petitioner disputed the Board's findings in connection with a complaint made by a parent that alleged inappropriate classroom behavior by the petitioner. The Board determined to withhold the petitioner's increment based on her failings and shortcomings as a teacher in consecutive school years.

[2] The Commissioner is mindful that the petitioner also filed a cross motion for summary decision with her opposition to the Board's motion. The cross motion by the petitioner was strictly based on a legal issue as to whether an increment can be withheld based on allegations relating to an incident that occurred prior to the immediately preceding school year. The cross motion for summary decision did not suggest that there were no material facts in dispute.

[3] Pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1), Commissioner decisions are appealable to the Superior Court, Appellate Division in accordance with the applicable Appellate Division rules.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Margaret Wicks appeals the decision of the Farmingdale Borough Board of Education ("respondent or the Board") to withhold her salary and adjustment increments for the 2013–14 school year after an investigation of a parental complaint.

The Commissioner of Education transmitted this contested matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on February 3, 2015. The Board filed a motion for summary decision and Wicks filed a cross-motion for summary decision. A conference was held on April 18, 2016, at which time it was confirmed that neither oral arguments nor further submissions were required.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Margaret Wicks is a tenured teacher who has been employed within the Farmingdale School District ("the District") since 1990.[1] She has primarily taught math and science in the second through eighth grades. (Certification of Margaret Wicks, dated July 31, 2015 ("Certification"))

During the 2011–12 school year, the Board reprimanded Wicks by letter dated April 19, 2012, for "inappropriate behavior toward a member of the faculty in the presence of students and in front of another teacher."[2] (Exhibit R-A.) It stated, "demonstrating anger towards a colleague, particularly in front of students, crosses a bright line that should never be crossed by a school teacher." (Ibid.) It further advised Wicks "to use better judgement and diplomacy in dealing with circumstances that may cause you to be upset about issues involving students or members of the faculty," and concluded as follows:

> This letter will be placed in your personnel file as a reprimand for professional misconduct. This type of behavior cannot occur again or I will recommend further action, which could have a negative financial impact on your earnings.
> [Ibid.]

[1] The District "is a K–8 one-building school district with approximately twenty-five professional staff, and a single administrator serving as both Superintendent of Schools and Principal." (Petition of Appeal ("Petition"), Exhibit A).

[2] The alleged incident occurred on March 26, 2012.

By letter dated April 30, 2012, Wicks submitted a rebuttal for inclusion in her personnel file. (Certification, Exhibit F.)

During the 2012–13 school year, Wicks was assigned as a second-through-fifth grade science teacher and an eighth-grade math teacher. (Petition, ¶ 3.) On June 12, 2013, the mother of two of Wicks' students complained about Wicks during a Board meeting, and by letter dated June 18, 2013, she detailed her allegations of inappropriate actions by Wicks during the 2012–13 school year. (Certification, Exhibit D.)[3] Yet, on June 20, 2013, superintendent and principal Cheri-Ellen Crowl ("Crowl") prepared Wicks' 2012–13 Teacher Evaluation and rated her "exemplary" in two of the ten major areas of evaluation and "commendable" in the remaining eight areas.[4] Crowl recommended that Wicks be reappointed and receive a salary increment. (Certification, Exhibit A.)

However, on or about June 27, 2013, the Board reviewed the mother's complaint. (Certification, Exhibit D.) Also, Crowl conducted an investigation and concluded, in part, that Wicks would have to "maintain an appropriate classroom management style."[5] (Ibid.) Based upon the investigation, Crowl revised her evaluation of Wicks' performance and recommended the withholding of her increments. Specifically, Crowl recommended that the Board withhold Wicks' salary and adjustment increments, starting with the first paycheck in the 2013–14 school year, due to her "failings and shortcomings" in consecutive school years as related in this [reprimand] letter." (Ibid.) On August 28, 2013, the Board voted to withhold Wicks' salary and

[4] The evaluation key lists five rating levels: exemplary, commendable, satisfactory, needs improvement and unacceptable. By definition, "exemplary" means "the performance is unique and extraordinary and shall serve as a model for colleagues," and "commendable" means "the performance exceeds expectations and is highly effective."

Wicks' "commendable" ratings were most notably in the areas of communication techniques/qualities; classroom/student management; interpersonal relationships; professional growth; and personal qualities/characteristics. In the evaluation, the superintendent recommended that Wicks be reappointed and receive a salary increment. (Certification, Exhibit A.)

adjustment increments for the 2013–14 school year. Wicks was so advised by Letter of Reprimand/Notice of Board Action, dated August 31, 2013, which concluded:

> This reprimand follows a reprimand that was given to you last year. Your failings and shortcomings as a teacher in consecutive school years as related in this letter constitute the reasons why I recommended withholding your salary increment and adjustments for the coming school year.
> [Ibid.[6]]

On September 17, 2013, Wicks submitted a rebuttal letter describing her disagreement with the August 2013 reprimand. (Certification, Exhibit C.) Wicks and the Farmingdale Teachers Association ("the Association") filed a grievance over the Board's denial of her increments with the Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC). On October 31, 2014, PERC ordered restraint of the arbitration sought by Wicks and the Association.[7] Wicks then filed the instant appeal seeking rescission of the Board's decision withholding her increments in the 2013–14 school year.

Based upon the parties' submissions, and for purposes of deciding respondent's motion for summary decision and petitioner's cross-motion for summary decision only, I FIND the above as FACT.

The Board asserts that Wicks' increments were appropriately withheld based upon deficiencies in her classroom performance and conduct during in the 2011–12 and 2012–13 school years, which the Board may legally consider in determining whether to withhold a teacher's increment. Wicks contends that she had exemplary performance ratings for the 2012–13 school year, and that the Board's action based upon two letters of reprimand, in the 2011–12 and 2012–13 school years, was arbitrary,

[6] This letter went into great detail describing the allegations made against Wicks and addressing each allegation with details of the investigation. Each allegation was followed by facts gleaned from the interviews, the standard that Wicks should have followed, and the ways in which the Wicks failed to meet such standards. (Ibid.)

[7] PERC concluded that its task was limited to determining whether Wicks' increment was withheld for reasons predominantly related to her teaching performance. (Petition, Exhibit A.)

capricious, unreasonable, and against legal precedent. She asserts that she thus is legally entitled to the requested relief (reinstatement of her increment) or, should her motion be denied, at least an evidentiary hearing.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Summary decision is appropriate "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). A material fact precludes summary decision if "the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995).

When a motion for summary decision is made and supported, the burden shifts to the adverse party to set forth, by affidavit, specific facts showing there is a genuine issue resolvable only by an evidentiary proceeding. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). Given this burden shift, a party opposing a summary-judgment motion "who offers no substantial or material facts in opposition to the motion cannot complain if the court takes as true the uncontradicted facts in the movant's papers." Burlington Cnty. Welfare Bd. v. Stanley, 214 N.J. Super. 615, 622 (App. Div. 1987). Failure of the opponent to make such a showing entitles the moving party to summary judgment. Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 529.

Pursuant to this standard, neither party here has presented a genuine issue of material fact. Wicks argues that her Certification establishes a genuine issue of material fact, but it actually merely outlines the issuance of the reprimands after positive evaluations, rather than states specific material facts in dispute. As discussed more fully below, it is not the Board's burden to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence that the allegations against Wicks are true. That would essentially convert an increment-withholding action into a tenure case and accordingly shift the burden of proof to the Board. Newsome v. Dumont Bd. of Educ., EDU 11390-06, Initial Decision (November 27, 2007), aff'd, Comm'r (January 4, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Instead, there is no reasonable dispute to the facts set forth in the above Factual Discussion.

Based upon the above undisputed material facts, the questions presented here are whether the Board properly considered Wicks' reprimands in deciding to withhold her salary and adjustment increments for the 2013–14 school year, and whether the Board's withholding of her increments, based upon those reprimands, was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable.

1. The Board properly considered Wicks' reprimands in making its decision to withhold her salary increment for the 2013–14 school year.

Salary increments are controlled by N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which provides, in pertinent part:

> Any Board of education may withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the Board of education. It shall be the duty of the Board of education, within 10 days, to give written notice of such action, together with the reasons therefor, to the member concerned. The member may appeal from such action to the commissioner under rules prescribed by him.
> [Ibid.]

An increment is not a statutory right but "a reward for meritorious service to the school district." N. Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. N. Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593 (1984). The statute was intended to vest local school boards "with the ability to withhold increments" from those who had "not performed well during the previous year." Probst v. Haddonfield Bd. of Educ., 127 N.J. 518, 526 (1992). A local board's exercise of its discretionary powers "may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J.

Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). The pertinent issues become the accuracy of the underlying facts, and the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the Board's conclusion based upon those facts, considering the Board's expertise. Id. at 296–97. Accordingly, Wicks has the burden of proof to demonstrate that the Board's decision was arbitrary and capricious. Gnatt v. Bd. of Educ. of the Manalapan–Englishtown Reg'l Sch. Dist., 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 589.

Wicks argues that the Board's decision to use incidents that occurred in the 2011–12 school year as part of the basis for withholding her salary increment for the 2013–14 school year was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable and in violation of prior Commissioner of Education precedent. In support of that argument, Wicks relies upon Giorgio v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Bridgeton, Cumberland Cty., EDU 8136-06, Initial Decision (January 3, 2008), adopted, Comm'r (February 19, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, and Pruitt v. Bd. of Educ. of Englewood, Bergen Cnty., Commissioner of Education No. 262-93 (October 25, 1993), affirmed with clarification, State Board of Education No. 67-93 (August 2,1995).

However, Wicks' reliance upon Giorgio and Pruitt is misplaced. In each of these cases, it was held that where a school board wishes to withhold an increment of a twelve-month employee, it must vote to do so prior to the commencement of the employee's twelve-month term. These cases address the timing of the school board's decision to withhold a teacher's increment. Here, instead, the issue is whether the Board may consider reprimands for a teacher's alleged conduct, in the last two school years, in making a determination with respect to the teacher's increments.

In the case of Guyet v. Caldwell-West Caldwell Bd. of Educ., 1989 S.L.D. 53, a tenured teaching staff member employed by the Caldwell-West Caldwell Board of Education filed a Petition of Appeal to challenge the action of the board in withholding his increments for 1988–89 school year on the basis of arbitrariness, capriciousness, bad faith, and contravention of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. Guyet argued that the alleged incidents of unprofessional conduct during the 1986–87 school year were unrelated to the alleged 1987–88 incidents and the Board should therefore be prohibited from utilizing them as a basis for its withholding action for 1988–89.[8] The Board argued that all incidents were related as a pattern of unprofessional conduct. The administrative law judge (ALJ) concluded that the pattern of Guyet's conduct over two academic years was indeed unprofessional and, therefore, related. Accordingly, the ALJ determined that all of the cited conduct was properly considered in the decision to withhold Guyet's increment.

Here, even if the Board considered Wicks' conduct in 2011–12 in making its decision to withhold her increment, such action is consistent with the holding in Guyet. To that end, Wicks was reprimanded in the 2011–12 school year for inappropriate behavior toward a member of the faculty in the presence of students and in front of another teacher. In the 2012–13 school year she was reprimanded after a parent complained that she ate in class in front of students, issued unreasonable reprimands to students, failed to review tests with students, and yelled at students. Both of the reprimands were for conduct that occurred in the classroom and that was "unbecoming and unprofessional for a member of the Farmingdale faculty." (Exhibit R-A.) The Board concluded that there was a recurrence of objectionable conduct in the 2012–13 school year, and the character of such conduct was reasonably similar to the objectionable conduct in the 2011–12 school year. Thus, the Board properly considered Wicks' reprimands in deciding to withhold her increments, notwithstanding her positive evaluations.

2. The Board's decision to withhold Wicks' salary increment for the 2013–14 school year was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Wicks also argues that the Board's decision to withhold the salary and adjustment increments for the 2013–14 school year was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, even if the Board did not take the 2011–12 conduct into consideration.

[8] The alleged unprofessional behavior was presented to the board as follows: September 1987—telling an off-color joke to an eighth-grade class; December 1986—sharing the content of a parent conference with a class; March 1987—speaking derogatorily about a colleague with a student teacher; and December 1987—dismissing a drama class before the scheduled time and leaving the class unattended due to poor student behavior.

She alleges that the Board ignored her receipt of exclusively "exemplary" and "commendable" evaluative ratings as part of her 2012–13 evaluation.

Wicks has the burden of proof to demonstrate that the Board's decision was arbitrary and capricious. In Newsome, supra, EDU 11390-06, Initial Decision (November 27, 2007), adopted, Comm'r (January 4, 2008), <httpp://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, Newsome, a teacher employed by the Dumont Board of Education, appealed the withholding of a salary increment for the 2006–07 school term. It was alleged and found by the ALJ that, during his classes in the 2005–06 school year, Newsome had disciplined students by requiring that they sit on a chair inside a storage closet. The ALJ further found that, during the same time period, he had used demeaning and derogatory names toward those students being disciplined.

Newsome claimed that the Board's decision to withhold his salary increment on the basis of those facts was arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable. The ALJ noted that the determination to be made was whether the district had a reasonable basis for its factual conclusion. The school district had no duty to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence that the allegations against him were true. Such a requirement would convert an increment-withholding action into a tenure case and accordingly shift the burden of proof to the board. The ALJ concluded, "while petitioner claimed the students were trying to get him in trouble, he failed to present any competent or credible evidence to support his contention." Newsome focused on attacking the credibility of the students and failed to present evidence that the action of the Board in withholding his increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

Similarly, Wicks has not demonstrated that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. First, it is noted that Wicks was given the benefit of a positive evaluation in spite of her reprimand in the 2011–12 school year. And in the 2012–13 school year, the parent's complaint was made just days before Crowl had issued Wicks' evaluation. Crowl promptly launched an investigation that included interviews with Wicks' students, as well as school faculty and staff. Significantly, Wicks was also given the opportunity to interview with Crowl and tell her side of the story regarding each allegation. After the investigation, Crowl issued a letter of reprimand, which discussed in detail each of the allegations, Crowl's investigatory findings, and the manner in which Wicks should have handled each situation. So, although Wicks received "exemplary" and "commendable" ratings as part of her 2012–13 evaluation on June 20, 2013, it was not unreasonable for Crowl to revise her evaluation of Wicks' performance and to amend her recommendation based upon the outcome of her investigation.

Related misconduct and deficiencies by a teacher occurring in consecutive school years may properly be considered by a board of education in a decision concerning the teacher's salary and adjustment increments. Here, the Board's decision was made after a detailed investigation of parental complaints that included input from Wicks. In opposing the Board's summary-decision motion, Wicks does not present sufficient evidence to genuinely undermine the integrity of the Board's investigation, and she has not demonstrated that its decision to withhold her increments was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board properly considered Wicks' reprimands in both the 2011–12 and 2012–13 school years, and its decision to withhold her salary and adjustment increments for the 2013–14 school year was not arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable.

SYNOPSIS

This case dates back to 2003, when the petitioning Board filed tenure charges of incapacity and excessive absenteeism against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate her employment with the district. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, but the tenure hearing was delayed for several years due to the pendency of a related workers' compensation case. The case was restored to the active list in January 2011. Thereafter, respondent failed to appear at a hearing scheduled for June 10, 2011. Respondent subsequently submitted a written explanation of her failure to appear, and the Commissioner found that the facts surrounding her absence did not warrant summary decision by default. The case was remanded to the OAL in August 2011 for fact finding and legal recommendations, with a directive from the Commissioner that respondent provide the OAL and petitioner with specific contact information for communicating with Ms. Gillespie, and that: "...respondent will not be excused if she fails to reply to notices, pleadings and communications sent to the phone numbers and addresses that she provides." The matter was eventually put on the inactive list pending resolution of the workers' compensation case, and reactivated in May 2015. Subsequently, OAL sent a notice to the parties that the remand hearing was scheduled for November 4, 2015. Respondent once again failed to appear, and also failed to offer any explanation of her non-appearance; shortly thereafter, OAL sent a Failure to Appear notice to the Commissioner, indicating that the case was being returned to the transmitting agency for appropriate disposition. The Commissioner remanded the matter back to the OAL for an ex parte hearing and Initial Decision on the merits of the tenure charges.

On remand, an ex parte hearing was held on March 1, 2016; Ms. Gillespie again failed to appear. The ALJ subsequently issued an Initial Decision, finding, inter alia, that there is ample proof in the record that respondent's absences were excessive, and she has, in fact, been out of work since September 1998; whether her absences were in whole or in part the result of actual medical problems, the undisputed facts show that respondent has been unavailable to teach for well over 15 years. The ALJ concluded that respondent is guilty of excessive absenteeism, absence without leave and unbecoming conduct, and the evidence in the record provides just cause for the termination of her employment. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed respondent from her tenured position as a teacher in Newark schools.

The Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusion of the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. Accordingly, the respondent was dismissed from her tenured position, and the matter was transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

| OF CHRISTINE GILLESPIE, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT | : | DECISION ON REMAND |
| OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, | : | |
| ESSEX COUNTY. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1] This case involves tenure charges brought by the Board against the respondent, Christine Gillespie, a tenured teacher in the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark.[2] The tenure charges filed against the respondent allege excessive absenteeism, absence without leave/abandonment of her position, and/or incapacity pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-39 et seq.[3] The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the respondent was guilty of excessive absenteeism, absence without leave and unbecoming conduct, and recommended that the respondent be removed from her tenured position.

[1] The Initial Decision was mailed to the parties on April 27, 2016; accordingly, exceptions were due on May 10, 2016. Without requesting permission to file late exceptions, on May 11, 2016, the respondent submitted untimely exceptions. The proposed exceptions were not considered herein because they were untimely filed. It should also be noted that the respondent did not appear at the March 1, 2016 hearing conducted at the OAL.

[2] The protracted and tumultuous history of this matter was fully explained in the Initial Decision and will not be repeated here.

[3] The tenure charges in this case were filed well before the enactment of the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TEACHNJ) Act, *P.L.*2012, *c.*26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.).

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ's determination that the Board has established that respondent is guilty of excessive absenteeism, absence without leave and unbecoming conduct. The Commissioner also fully concurs with the ALJ's fact-finding analysis and conclusions as to the truth of the Board's allegations, and finds the characterization of respondent's behavior to be fully supported by the record and consistent with applicable law. It has been found that excessive absenteeism can constitute "incapacity," "unbecoming conduct," and/or "other just cause" and thus can warrant dismissal. See, State-Operated School District of Jersey City, Hudson County v. Vincent Pellecchio, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 267. Further, a tenured teaching staff member can be dismissed for excessive absenteeism even if the absenteeism occurs for legitimate reasons, such as long-term poor health. Id. at 270. The details and the history of respondent's excessive absenteeism and unbecoming conduct are extensively outlined in the Initial Decision and need not be repeated here. However, the extent of the respondent's excessive absenteeism is quite evident based on the fact that the respondent has been absent from the District without any medical support or authorization since October of 2001.

Turning to the appropriate penalty in this matter, the Commissioner recognizes that the factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, any evidence as to provocation, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring. In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 422 (App. Div. 1967). Again, in light of the respondent's absence from the District since 2001, the Commissioner finds that the respondent is unfit to discharge the duties and functions of her

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 30, 2002, the District filed tenure charges against respondent Gillespie alleging excessive absenteeism, absence without leave/abandonment of position and/or incapacity as a teacher. Respondent answered the charges on January 7, 15 and 16, 2003. The tenure charges and respondent's answer were considered by State District Superintendent Marion Bolden pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-42(a)(3), as then in effect, in lieu of a board of education. The State District Superintendent determined that there was probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the tenure charges and further determined the charges and evidence were sufficient to warrant the dismissal or the reduction of salary of Christine Gillespie. Since Christie Gillespie was absent at the time without leave and without pay, she was not suspended in connection with the Certification of the charges. This is documented in the Certificate of Determination filed with the charges with the Commissioner. A Certificate of Determination was signed on February 25, 2003, and forwarded with the charges to the Department of Education for hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. The Commissioner subsequently transmitted the matter to the OAL on or about April 2, 2003, for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 14B-1 et seq. On or about September 17, 2003, respondent Gillespie's counsel submitted a letter requesting an adjournment of the tenure matter until after November 2003. The District consented to the request. On January 26, 2004, a copy of the Order of Inactivity placing the matter on the Inactive list pending the disposition of a pending Workers' Compensation case was entered. On June 24, 2005, respondent's counsel submitted a letter again requesting that the tenure matter be placed on the inactive list until the Workers' Compensation case was concluded. Respondent was copied on counsel's correspondence. An Order of Inactivity was signed July 21, 2005. On July 24, 2006, a letter was sent to all counsel apprising them that the Order of Inactivity had expired and asking counsel whether the tenure matter should be scheduled for a hearing or returned to inactive status.

On August 14, 2006, counsel for the District submitted a letter enclosing a copy of an Order of Dismissal from the Workers' Compensation Court for lack of prosecution in connection with respondent's Workers' Compensation case and asking to activate the tenure case. Counsel for the District also requested that the court establish a timeline for submissions to permit petitioner to file a Motion for Summary Decision. On August 15, 2006, respondent's counsel submitted a letter again requesting that the tenure matter remain on the Inactive list due to the fact that the Workers' Compensation case had been reinstated. Respondent was again copied on this correspondence. On September 6, 2006, a letter to all counsel enclosing copies of an Order of Inactivity, signed September 1, 2006, was distributed. On February 12, 2009, counsel for the District again submitted a letter enclosing a copy of an Order of Dismissal from the Workers' Compensation Court, dated December 5, 2008. Subsequently, the matter was returned to the OAL docket and scheduled for hearing.

On June 16, 2009, the District submitted a Motion for Summary Decision. On or about January 12, 2011, respondent filed a brief in support of a Motion to Dismiss for lack of jurisdiction to entertain the tenure proceeding. A hearing was scheduled in January 2011. When respondent failed to appear for the hearing, the court rescheduled the hearing for February 4, 2011. At the hearing on February 4, the court heard the parties' arguments in support of their respective motions and instructed them to respond to each other's motions. The District filed its response to respondent's motion on February 22, 2011; respondent, however, failed to respond to the District's Motion for Summary Decision. At a status conference on February 23, 2011, respondent informed the court that she failed to reply to the District's motion because she believed that the court lacked jurisdiction to hear the tenure proceeding. The court renewed its instruction to respondent to respond to the District's motion; respondent did not do so, instead submitting a supplemental letter brief dated February 28, 2011, renewing her argument that the court lacked jurisdiction. The District did not reply or respond to respondent's supplemental brief.

On April 27, 2011, an opinion was issued denying respondent's Motion to Dismiss on grounds of jurisdiction and denied the District's Motion for Summary Decision due to the existence of factual issues. The Court scheduled a hearing for June 10, 2011, and noticed all parties. Respondent failed to appear. Respondent submitted correspondence denying that she had notice of the hearing. The Commissioner remanded the case back to the OAL for further proceedings and directed Ms. Gillespie to provide the OAL with a specific contact address for future notices. Ms. Gillespie complied with this request and all subsequent notices were sent to that address.

The tenure case was once again scheduled to be heard on December 14, 2011. The Court then attempted to schedule a hearing for May 9, 2012, to address the merits of the tenure charges but adjourned the hearing when respondent once again requested the Court to place the tenure proceeding on the OAL's Inactive list pending the disposition of her pending Workers' Compensation case and her appeal of the denial of her Motion to Dismiss. On or about May 5, 2012, respondent filed a Motion to Stay pending an Appeal filed in Superior Court. An Order of Inactivity was issued on May 18, 2012, and another on September 18, 2013, upon respondent's request due to a pending Workers' Compensation matter.

On January 6, 2014, the Appellate Division panel affirmed the April 27, 2011, written opinion/decision. On May 12, 2015, a letter to the parties was sent indicating that the Order of Inactivity had expired. Based upon the advice of the District's Workers' Compensation counsel that the Workers' Compensation matter had been dismissed for lack of prosecution, a tenure hearing was scheduled for November 4, 2015. Ms. Gillespie confirmed that there was no Workers' Compensation case pending but failed to appear at that hearing and the OAL transmitted the matter to the Commissioner for his review.

As a result of the respondent's failure to appear, on November 9, 2015, the Office of Administrative Law submitted Notice of Return – Failure to Appear indicating that this case was being returned to the transmitting agency for appropriate disposition.

On December 22, 2015, the Office of Controversies and Disputes advised the parties that on December 17, 2015, the Acting Commissioner of Education remanded the case back to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing with a new docket number, OAL Docket No. EDU 20524-2015. Respondent did not provide any explanation for the failure to appear. The Commissioner did not excuse the failure to appear, but rather sent it back for an ex parte hearing that would enable the OAL to render an Initial Decision on the merits of the tenure charges. Respondent was copied on this correspondence. On January 22, 2016, the Office of Administrative Law issued a new Notice of Hearing for March 1, 2016. Ms. Gillespie was copied on this correspondence. The hearing was conducted. Once again, Ms. Gillespie failed to appear. The District presented its proofs in support of the charges to the Court to permit the rendering of an initial decision in this matter. This post-hearing submission includes proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law in connection with same.

The following are proposed findings of fact based upon the evidence submitted to the Court in this matter and are now adopted as the uncontested facts of the case:

1. Ms. Gillespie was first employed as a teacher in the District on September 8, 1966. (Ex. 1.)

2. Ms. Gillespie's has been consistently absent from her teaching duties since September 1998. Ms. Gillespie attended only three (3) days of school during the 1998-99 school year and never returned to work after September 4, 1998. (See Ex. 1; Testimony of H. Breton.)

3. Ms. Gillespie filed a claim for Workers' Compensation benefits based upon an incident on September 4, 1998. She was ultimately awarded temporary benefits pending evaluation and treatment through September 22, 2000. (Ex. 5.)

4. During the 1999-2000 school year, Ms. Gillespie was compensated by the insurance company from 9/4/99 through 3/31/00 and no time was deducted, based on the Division of Workers' Compensation Court Order dated March 8, 2000. (Ex. 5.)

5. Pursuant to the Division of Workers' Compensation Court Order dated September 13, 2000, Ms. Gillespie was compensated by the insurance company from 7/9/00 through 8/31/00. (Ex. 5.)

6. Pursuant to the Division of Workers' Compensation Court's Order in September 2000, Ms. Gillespie was compensated by the insurance company through 9/22/00. (Ex. 5.)

7. However, Ms. Gillespie continued to be absent from her teaching duties after September 22, 2000. (See Ex. 1; Testimony of H. Breton.)

8. As evidenced in the medical certificates, following November 2000, Ms. Gillespie's medical condition(s) that prevented her from reporting to work were largely unknown and varying.

9. During the 2000-01 school year, Ms. Gillespie was absent for the school year, totaling over 185 days; of those 69 days were approved sick time based on the Employee's Medical Certificates.

10. During the 2001-02 school year, Ms. Gillespie was absent over 185 days; 27 days were approved sick time based on the Employee's Medical Certificates.

11. During the 2002-03 school year, Ms. Gillespie was absent over 185 days.

12. During the 2003-04 school year, Ms. Gillespie was absent 190 days.

13. Ms. Gillespie has failed to return to work at any point and continues to be absent from her position to the present day.

14. On October 5, 1998, former Principal William Demetroulakos sent a letter to Ms. Gillespie explaining that her presence for only three (3) days during the opening month of September "created havoc" among the first-grade students she was assigned to teach. In the letter he asked Ms. Gillespie to advise him when she planned on returning to school. At the time of the letter, Ms. Gillespie had not provided proper medical certification and was considered AWOL. (Ex. 2, 3.)

15. A letter, dated September 30, 1998, was submitted by the parents of Branch Brook School's first-grade class attesting to the adverse impact created by not having their first-grade teacher, Ms. Gillespie, present more than three (3) days in the first month of school in 1998. There was no representation as to when she would be able to return either. The letter was signed by thirty (30) parents. Ms. Gillespie did not return to work at all that year. (Ex. 4.)

16. Ms. Gillespie filed a claim for Workers' Compensation benefits based upon an incident on September 4, 1998. She was ultimately awarded temporary benefits pending evaluation and treatment through September 22, 2000. However, Ms. Gillespie continued to be absent from her teaching duties after September 22, 2000. (Ex. 5.)

17. As evidenced in the medical certificates, following November 2000, Ms. Gillespie's medical condition(s) that prevented her from reporting to work were largely unknown and varying. On November 14, 2000, Ms. Gillespie's absence due to pharyngitis was approved from October 24, 2000, through November 6, 2000. (Ex. 6.) On November 16, 2000, Ms. Gillespie was further absent until November 27, 2000, and this leave was approved by the District on December 19, 2000. (Ex. 7.) On December 21, 2000, the medical certificate, which was approved by the District on December 22, 2000, showed that Ms. Gillespie was absent from November 27, 2000, through December 3, 2000, for a major depression disorder. (Ex. 8.) From December 31, 2000 through February 28, 2001, she remained out for depression and anxiety; the medical certificate was approved by the District on February 2, 2001. (Ex. 9.) On March 8, 2001, one last medical certificate was issued by Ms. Gillespie seeking sick time from March 8, 2001, until May 1, 2001; on March 14, 2001, the District denied this request due to Ms. Gillespie's unavailability of sick days. (Ex. 10.)

18. On May 11, 2011, the District sent Ms. Gillespie a letter indicating that she had not been back at work as of March 14, 2001, and therefore, considered on unauthorized leave – AWOL. (Ex. 11.)

19. On September 27, 2001, the medical certificate was disapproved from September 4, 2001, through October 15, 2001, for lack of medical support. (Ex. 13.) Then, on October 11, 2001, Ms. Gillespie's absences from September 24, 2001, through October 6, 2001, were approved for "otitis externa." Later, on October 23, 2001, a medical certificate was approved from October 9, 2001, through October 23, 2001, for a sinus infection. (Ex. 14.) No further medical documentation has been provided since that time to support the continued absences.

20. On January 11, 2002, the District, once again, advised Ms. Gillespie that she was considered AWOL. (Ex. 15.) No documentation was provided to justify the continued absences. Accordingly, Ms. Gillespie was absent without leave. Ms. Gillespie's absence without leave interfered with the continuity of the District's educational program as she did not perform any teaching duties.

21. Ms. Gillespie's absences had a detrimental impact on students in the district as the District had to continue to secure replacements during periods of absence, including when respondent was a classroom teacher and when she provided home instruction; she was not available for those assignments. (See Ex. 1, Testimony of H. Breton.)

22. On or about December 30, 2002, the District filed tenure charges against Ms. Gillespie under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 based upon allegations of excessive absenteeism, absence without leave/abandonment of position and/or incapacity.

(Ex. 16.) These charges were then served upon Ms. Gillespie, who filed a 160-page response.

23. The tenure charges and Ms. Gillespie's response were considered by the State District Superintendent, Marion Bolden, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-39 in lieu of a board of education, and a Certificate of Determination was signed on February 25, 2003, forwarding the charges to the Department of Education for hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. (Ex. 17.) The charges were filed with the Commissioner of Education for hearing.

24. As reflected in the Certificate of Determination filed with the Commissioner of Education, Ms. Gillespie was not suspended upon certification of the charge as she was already absent and without leave; thus, she remained in an unpaid status. (Ex. 17, ¶ 7.)

25. Upon the filing of an Answer to the charges, the tenure matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on April 2, 2003, for further proceedings in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

26. The tenure charges were scheduled for hearing on several occasions, but were adjourned at the request of counsel for Ms. Gillespie due to the pendency of a Workers' Compensation proceeding involving Ms. Gillespie. (Ex. 18.)

27. On or about January 26, 2004, an Order of Inactivity was issued placing the tenure charges on the inactive list pending disposition of a pending Workers' Compensation case.

28. After a prolonged period of years, during which the Workers' Compensation case was being litigated, the tenure proceeding remained dormant.

29. On August 14, 2006, Cherie L. Adams, counsel for the Newark Public Schools, submitted a letter enclosing a copy of an Order of Dismissal from the Worker's Compensation Court in connection with Ms. Gillespie and asking to activate the tenure case. Ms. Adams also requested that a timeline be established in the tenure case to permit Petitioners to file a Motion for Summary Decision.

30. On August 15, 2006, respondents former counsel, Mr. Eugene Liss, submitted a letter requesting that the tenure matter remain on the inactive list due to the fact the that the Workers' Compensation case was reinstated. Ms. Gillespie was copied on this correspondence.

31. On February 12, 2009, Cherie L. Adams, counsel for the Newark Public Schools, again, submitted a letter enclosing a copy of an Order of Dismissal from the Worker's Compensation Court, dated December 5, 2008, in connection with Ms. Gillespie. The matter was returned to the OAL docket and scheduled for hearing.

32. The tenure matter was rescheduled for a hearing January 13, 2011. However, respondent failed to appear at that hearing and another hearing was scheduled for February 4, 2011. In connection with the new February hearing date, the parties submitted motions in January 2011. At the February 4, 2011, hearing, the parties were instructed to respond to each other's motions. Petitioner filed its response to respondent's motion on February 22, 2011. Respondent failed to respond to the motion for summary decision and at the February 23, 2011, status telephone conference. Gillespie stated that she did not respond because she believes that there is a lack of jurisdiction. Ms. Gillespie submitted an additional letter brief, dated February 28, 2011, regarding jurisdiction and did not respond to the petitioner's motion.

33. On or about April 27, 2011, an Order was submitted in connection to the Motion to Dismiss by respondent and Motion for Summary Decision by petitioner denying both motions. The ALJ found that fact issues required determination and referred it for hearing.

34. On May 9, 2011, the District received the May 3, 2011, Notice of Hearing scheduling the case for June 10, 2011, at 9 a.m. Again, Ms. Gillespie failed to appear at the June 10 hearing.

35. As a result, on June 21, 2011, the Office of Administrative Law submitted a Notice of Return – Failure to Appear indicating that this case was being returned to the transmitting agency for appropriate disposition. Respondent was indicated to address her explanation to the Department of Education. (Ex. 19.)

36. On June 29, 2011, Christine Gillespie submitted a letter to the Office of Controversies and Disputes, Department of Education with an explanation as to why she did not appear at the June 10 hearing. The District responded on July 8, 2011. (Ex. 20.).

37. On July 13, 2011, Ms. Gillespie filed a Notice of Appeal and Civil case Information Statement with the New Jersey Judiciary Superior Court-Appellate Division. Ms. Gillespie was appealing the April 27, 2011, decision denying her motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction.

38. On August 4, 2011, the Office of Controversies and Disputes advised the parties that on August 3, 2011, the Acting Commissioner of Education remanded the case back to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing with a new docket number, OAL Docket No. EDU 09195-2011. (Ex. 20, 21, 22.) Respondent Gillespie was instructed to provide a current address to which all notices would be sent. (Ex. 21, p. 3.) Ms. Gillespie provided same and all notices have been sent to this address. (Ex. 23.)

39. The tenure case was once again scheduled to be heard on December 14, 2011. However, this date was adjourned until May 8, 2012. On or about May 5, 2012, Ms. Gillespie filed a Motion to Stay pending the Appeal filed in Superior Court.

40. An Order of Inactivity was issued on May 18, 2012, and another on September 18, 2013, upon respondent's request due to a pending Workers' Compensation matter.

41. On December 18, 2013, the parties appeared before the Appellate Division panel to argue Ms. Gillespie's appeal. On January 6, 2014, the panel affirmed the April 27, 2011, written opinion/decision.

42. On May 12, 2015, a letter was sent to the parties indicating that the Order of Inactivity had expired. A response was requested in connection to same within ten (10) days of receipt. (Ex. 24.) As such, the District contacted Joseph Biancamano, Esq., counsel on behalf of the District for the Worker's Compensation matter, who advised that the matter had been dismissed for lack of prosecution. The District notified the Office of Administrative Law (Ex. 25). Respondent Gillespie responded and acknowledged in her letter that there was no current workers compensation petition. (Ex. 26, p. 4.) Accordingly, a tenure hearing was scheduled for November 4, 2015. (Ex. 27) This Notice went out on June 9, 2015, and was copied to Ms. Gillespie's current address. (Ex. 27.) Ms.

Gillespie failed to appear at that hearing. As a result of the Failure to Appear by Respondent, on November 9, 2015, the Office of Administrative Law submitted Notice of Return –Failure to Appear indicating that this case was being returned to the transmitting agency for appropriate disposition. (Ex. 28.) Respondent was instructed to address her explanation to the Department of Education. Respondent failed to submit any explanation.

43. On December 22, 2015, the Office of Controversies and Disputes advised the parties that on December 17, 2015, the Acting Commissioner of Education remanded the case back to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing with a new docket number, Docket No. EDU 20524-2015N. (Ex. 29.) Ms. Gillespie was copied on this correspondence. (Ex. 29.) At no time did respondent Gillespie provide any explanation for the failure to appear. The Commissioner did not excuse the failure to appear, but rather sent it back for an ex parte hearing so that an initial decision on the merits of the tenure charges could be rendered. (Ex. 29.) Respondent was copied on this correspondence.

44. On January 22, 2016, the Office of Administrative Law issued a new Notice of Hearing for March 1, 2016. Ms. Gillespie was copied on this correspondence. Once again, Ms. Gillespie failed to appear at the scheduled hearing on March 1, 2016. The District attended, presented documentary evidence and testimony from a District witness, Homere Breton.

LEGAL ARGUMENT

THE DISTRICT HAS PROVEN THE TENURE CHARGES AND THE UNCONTROVERTED FACTS DEMONSTRATE THAT RESPONDENT IS GUILTY OF UNBECOMING CONDUCT, INCAPACITY AND OTHER JUST CAUSE DUE TO CHRONIC AND EXCESSIVE ABSENTEEISM AND ABANDONMENT OF HER TEACHING POSITION.

I. THE COURT IS ENTITLED TO CONSIDER THE EVIDENCE PRESENTED BY THE DISTRICT AT THE EX PARTE HEARING AS UNREFUTED CONSISTENT WITH IN RE TENURE HEARING OF IRANDOKHT TOORZANI.

Respondent Gillespie has failed to appear at scheduled tenure hearing dates on multiple occasions, despite having been provided notice of the hearing date at the address she supplied to the Department of Education. She did not appeal from the Commissioner's decision of December 17, 2015, which remanded the matter to the OAL for an ex parte hearing. The hearing was set for March 1, 2016, yet she failed to appear despite receiving notice of same. Accordingly, consistent with In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Irandokht Toorzani, EDU 9713-11, Comm'r Decision No 49-12 (Feb 8, 2012), this court was entitled to conduct an ex parte hearing and accept proofs from the petitioner District in support of the tenure charges. Moreover, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(d), the judge may enter an initial decision on the merits based on the ex parte proofs, provided the failure to appear is memorialized in the decision. Ibid. (District required determination on its tenure charges and ALJ was well within authority to take ex parte proofs and render Initial Decision on the charges based upon the ex parte proofs).

II. RESPONDENT WAS CHRONICALLY AND EXCESSIVELY ABSENT FROM HER TEACHING STAFF POSITION THEREFORE WARRANTING HER DISMISSAL FROM THE DISTRICT.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 is entitled "Dismissal and reduction in compensation of person under tenure in public school system." In pertinent part, said statute provides that:

> No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation,
>
> (a) if he is . . . under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state . . . .
>
> * * *
> except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause.

"A survey of the relevant case law indicates that chronic or excessive absenteeism has been found to constitute both 'incapacity' and 'unbecoming conduct,' within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 such as to warrant dismissal from employment.'" State-operated School District if Jersey City v. Pellecchio, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 267. "It has also been held that chronic and excessive absenteeism amounts to 'just cause' under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 such as to warrant dismissal from employment." Pellecchio, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 267 (citing Trenton Board of Education v. Williamson, EDU 7335-85 (Apr. 14, 1986), aff'd, Comm'r (May 28, 1986)).

In In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Reilly, 1977 S.L.D. 403, the Commissioner of Education affirmed the dismissal of a teacher on the basis of incapacity and conduct unbecoming despite the claim that most of the absences were in connection with a physical ailment. See also Malley v. Bd. of Educ. of Pequannock Twp., EDU 1858-86 (Nov. 19, 1986), aff'd, Comm'r (Dec. 29, 2986), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (April 1, 1987).

Moreover, as set forth Pellecchio, supra., excessive absenteeism may warrant dismissal of a tenured teacher even if the absence were excused or caused by legitimate reasons of personal illness or were approved leave or sick days to which the teacher was entitled and even if the teacher's classroom performance was sufficient. Bd. of Ed. of the City of Camden v. Rucker, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 350 took it one step further and determined that chronic or excessive absenteeism may be found to warrant dismissal even in situations where the individual was entitled to days off under contract. Disciplinary action in fact may be taken against a teacher due to excessive absenteeism even if the cause of the absenteeism is the result of work-related injuries. Kochman v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Keansburg, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 154, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ., aff'd, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 212, A-1510-93T2 (App. Div. May 5, 1995)); See also, Board of Educ. of the Twp. of Irvington v. Pearson, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 329.

The point at which the absenteeism is judged to be excessive falls within the reasonable judgment and discretion of the local school district. Trautwein v. Bd. of Educ. of Bound Brook, 1980 S.L.D. 1539, certif. denied, 84 N.J. 469 (1980). In sum, excessive or chronic absenteeism of a tenured employee, even if related to legitimate medical or health problems, has been held to constitute incapacity, unbecoming conduct, and/or just cause within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, so as to warrant dismissal from employment.

Respondent's attendance was a repeated problem in that she has been consistently absent since September 1998. (Ex. 1, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15.) She did not provide any authorization for her absences and was considered AWOL since October 23, 2001. (See Ex. 15.) Ms. Gillespie attended only three (3) days during the 1998-99 school year and never returned to work after September 4, 1998. On October 5, 1998, respondent's former Principal, William Demetroulakos, sent a letter to respondent explaining that her presence for only three (3) days during the opening month of September "created havoc" among the first grade students she was assigned to teach. (See Ex. 2.) In the letter he asked respondent to advise him when she planned on returning to school. At the time of the letter, respondent had not provided proper medical certification and was considered AWOL. (See Ex. 3.)

A letter was submitted by the parents of Branch Brook School's first-grade class attesting to the adverse impact created by not having respondent present more than three (3) days in the first month of school in 1998 (see Ex. 4). There was no representation as to when she would be able to return either. The letter was signed by thirty (30) parents. Since that time, respondent has never returned to work.

As evidenced in the medical certificates, following November 2000, respondent's medical condition(s) that prevented her from reporting to work were largely unknown and varying. On November 3, 2000, respondent's absence due to pharyngitis was approved from October 24, 2000, through November 6, 2000. (See Ex 6.) On November 16, 2000, respondent was further absent until November 27, 2000. (See Ex. 7.) On December 21, 2000, the medical certificate showed that respondent was absent from November 27, 2000, through December 3, 2000, for a depression disorder. (See Ex. 8.) From December 31, 2000, through February 28, 2001, respondent remained out for depression and anxiety. (See Ex. 9.)

As of February 28, 2001, no further authorization was provided until September 2001. (See Ex. 10, 11.) Although she eventually did respond to the status of her varying medical conditions, it was not before the District sent respondent correspondence that she had not returned to work and was considered AWOL. (See Ex. 11.)

On September 24, 2001, the medical certificate was disapproved from September 4, 2001 through October 15, 2001, for lack of medical support. (See Ex 13.) Then, on October 9, 2001, respondent's absences from September 24, 2001, through October 6, 2001, were approved for "otitis externa." (See Ex. 12.). Later, from October 9, 2001, through October 23, 2001, she was out for a sinus infection. (See Ex. 14.) No further documentation was provided since that time. On January 11, 2002, the District advised respondent that she was considered AWOL. (See Ex. 15.) No documentation has been provided to justify the continued absences at any point from October 2001 forward to the present time.

The above uncontroverted facts demonstrate that the number of respondent's absences were excessive. In fact, she has been out of work since September 1998. Each year since that time, respondent has missed over 180 days of school and has been unavailable to provide instruction to children. It is also equally clear that the impact of the absences on the continuity of instruction was significant and adverse. Respondent was also on notice that her attendance was unacceptable that that she was absent without authorization.

In light of the foregoing, there are sufficient grounds to remove respondent from her tenured position as a teacher with the District due to her prolonged history of absences which adversely impacted the continuity of instruction of her students. Whether the absences are in whole or in part the result of actual illnesses or even a work-related injury, the undisputed facts show that respondent has been unavailable to teach for well over 15 years. Moreover, since at least 2001, these absences have been without any medical support or authorization. As such, respondent is guilty of excessive absenteeism, absence without leave and unbecoming conduct as a teacher, and the evidence on the record provides just cause for the termination of her employment with the District.

CONCLUSION

In light of the foregoing, the tenure charges filed against respondent is sustained. Therefore I CONCLUDE the appropriate penalty is dismissal of respondent from her employment as a teacher in the District.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that Christine Gillespie is DISMISSED from her position as a teacher with the City of Newark.

SYNOPSIS

In November 2015, pro se petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent Board that his child, N.P., did not reside within the school district, and was therefore not entitled to a free public education in Burlington Township schools for the 2015-2016 school year. The matter was transmitted to the OAL as a contested case. Subsequently, the Board filed a motion to dismiss, certifying that N.P. does, in fact, reside within Burlington Township. The petitioner opposed the dismissal, and oral argument was scheduled for April 26, 2016, at which time the parties jointly stipulated to the following facts: N.P. resides in Burlington Township with her father, B.P., and has resided there throughout the 2015-2016 school year; the Board conceded that N.P. is and has been domiciled within the Burlington Township School District throughout the current school year; and no reimbursement is or will be due from B.P. to the Board for N.P.'s attendance for 2015-2016.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the parties now concur that N.P. has resided with, and continues to reside with B.P. within the school district for the 2015-2016 school year; accordingly, B.P. has no obligation for tuition reimbursement for N.P.'s attendance in Burlington Township Schools for the current year; and the parties concurred that there is no further dispute in this matter. The ALJ concluded that dismissal of the appeal is warranted as there is no longer any controversy regarding petitioner's residency appeal relative to the 2015-2016 school year. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered the matter dismissed with prejudice.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions, and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that N.P. was and remains entitled to attend school in the Burlington Township School District for the 2015-2016 school. Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is adopted for the reasons expressed therein.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner B.P. challenges the residency decision of the Board of Education of the Township of Burlington, Burlington County (respondent or the Board), disallowing his minor child, N.P., from attending public school within respondent's school district. On November 23, 2015, B.P. filed a residency appeal with the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes and the Board filed its answer on November 30, 2015, denying that N.P. resides in Burlington Township. The Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on December 1, 2015, for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J..A.C. 6A:3-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15.

On April 4, 2016, the Board filed a motion to dismiss, certifying now that N.P. does reside within Burlington Township, and petitioner opposed. Oral argument was scheduled for April 27, 2016, at which time the parties jointly stipulated the facts set forth below.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The parties jointly stipulate and, accordingly, I FIND as FACT the following. First, N.P., a minor, resides in Burlington Township with B.P., her father, and has resided with him throughout the 2015-16 school year. Second, the Board thus concedes that N.P. is and has been domiciled within the Burlington Township School District (the District) throughout the 2015-16 school year. Third, no reimbursement is or will be due from B.P. to the Board for N.P.'s attendance at Fountain Woods, a public school within the District, for the 2015-16 school year.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Domicile has been defined as the place where a person has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent he has the intention of returning. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 250 (1955). The domicile of an unemancipated child is the domicile of the parent, custodian or guardian. P.B.K. ex rel. minor child E.Y. v. Bd. of Educ. of Tenafly, 343 N.J. Super. 419, 427 (App. Div. 2001). Thus, a child would routinely attend school in the district where his or her parents live.

Also, dismissal is appropriate where no contested issues remain, no further relief is sought, and the case is moot for lack of a justiciable controversy. N.J.A.C. 1:1-3.2, -19.2; Fox v. Twp. of E. Brunswick Bd. of Educ., EDU 10067-98, Initial Decision (March 19, 1999), aff'd, Comm'r (May 3, 1999), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; S.J. v. Bd. of Educ. of Mountain Lakes, EDU 07081-03, Initial Decision (October 7, 2003), aff'd, Comm'r (Nov. 17, 2003), aff'd, St. Bd. (Feb. 3, 2004), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

Here, the parties now concur that N.P. has resided with, and continues to reside with her father, B.P., within the District, for the 2015-16 school year. Accordingly, B.P. incurs no obligation for tuition reimbursement for N.P.'s attendance at Fountain Woods, a District school, for the 2015-16 school year. Thus, the parties agree that there are no remaining issues to be resolved and there is no further dispute in this matter.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that dismissal is warranted because there no longer exists any controversy regarding petitioner's residency appeal relative to the 2015-16 school year, and petitioner seeks no further relief.

DECISION AND ORDER

Therefore, this matter should be dismissed and I hereby ORDER that this case be and hereby is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY, | : | |

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of her children in August 2015, seeking a determination that T.S. and T.S. were entitled to a free public education in Hamilton Township schools. Respondent Board contended that a residency investigation concluded that petitioner and her children are domiciled in the City of Trenton and, accordingly, counterclaimed for tuition. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and scheduled for a hearing on January 4, 2016. Petitioner failed to appear on the scheduled date, and requested that the hearing be rescheduled. Petitioner again failed to appear on the rescheduled date of April 14, 2016, despite having received appropriate notice of the hearing, and offered no explanation for her absence.

The ALJ ordered the within petition dismissed for failure to appear and prosecute on the rescheduled hearing date of April 14, 2016, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:22-5.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.2. Further, the ALJ assessed tuition against petitioner for the period of ineligible attendance of the two children, in the total amount of $46,999 (rounded to the nearest dollar), and authorized the respondent school district to remove T.S. and T.S. in accordance with applicable law and the regulations of the New Jersey Department of Education.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ findings and conclusions, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petitioner was directed to reimburse the Board in the amount of $46,998.62, plus $73.13 for each day beyond April 14, 2016 that T.S. and T.S. remain enrolled in the District's schools.

| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY, | : | |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1] The parties did not file exceptions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding that because petitioner failed to appear at the April 14, 2016 OAL hearing without providing an explanation – after the court rescheduled the hearing following petitioner's previous failure to appear at the January 4, 2016 OAL hearing – the petition of appeal is dismissed with prejudice.

The Commissioner also agrees with the ALJ's assessment of tuition – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b – against petitioner for the period of ineligible attendance by her minor children in Hamilton Township, in accordance with the Board's counterclaim seeking tuition. Therefore, the Board is entitled to tuition reimbursement in the amount of $46,998.62[2] ($13,238 plus $73.13 per day for 137 days for the younger T.S. and $13,723 plus $73.13 per day for 137 days for the older T.S.) for the entire 2014-2015 school year and from the start of the 2015-2016 school year through April 14, 2016 – plus $73.13 per child for each day beyond April 14, 2016 that the minor children remain in Hamilton Township's schools.

[1] The Commissioner was not provided with a transcript of the April 14, 2016 hearing at the OAL.

[2] The ALJ found that the petitioner owed the Board $46,999 by rounding the calculation to the nearest dollar. The Commissioner has calculated the exact amount owed.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed. Petitioner is directed to reimburse the Board in the amount of $46,998.62 – plus $73.13 for each day beyond April 14, 2016 that T.S. and T.S. remain enrolled in the District's schools – for tuition costs incurred during the time period that the minor children were ineligible to attend school in Hamilton Township.

Petitioner, Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton, Mercer County, maintains that the respondent, O.V. on behalf of a minor child, A.V., owes tuition for his son's attendance in petitioner's schools from April 1, 2013 through June 30, 2013. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on September 8, 2015, for a hearing.

On October 28, 2015, an executed settlement agreement was received, and on April 18, 2016, the Board Resolution authorizing the settlement was received, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

Additionally, during a conference call held between the parties and the undersigned on April 13, 2016, the undersigned questioned a correction made by hand to the date by which agreed upon payments would end identified in paragraph 4 of the settlement agreement (J-1). The correction was not initialed by the parties but both acknowledged during the call that the correction reflects their intent in correcting a typographical error and was made at the time of execution. This discussion providing explanation was memorialized in a confirming letter (J-3) sent by counsel for the petitioner with copy to the respondent and received by the undersigned on April 18, 2016. Based on representations made during the call and its written memorialization without subsequent objection I am satisfied and FIND that the correction described reflects the intent of the parties at the time of execution of the settlement agreement.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

SYNOPSIS

The petitioners in this case had been employed under tenure as supervisors by the respondent Board when their positions were eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF), effective July 1, 2015. Petitioners were ultimately reassigned as teaching staff members based on their tenure and seniority, but were moved from twelve-month supervisor positions to ten-month staff positions and their salaries were reduced from $149,000 to approximately $110,000. Petitioners challenged the salary determination for their new titles, contending that they were transferred from twelve-month positions to ten-month positions, and consequently their new salary should be based on a prorating of their former twelve-month salary over ten months, which would result in an annual salary of $124,167. The Board asserted that the RIF was implemented for the purpose of saving money during an economic crisis, and that petitioners' salaries were appropriate to their new titles of guidance counselor and English teacher, respectively. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, a local board of education has the authority to reduce its teaching force for reasons of economy; the goal of a RIF is to reduce the budget by reducing staffing costs; tenured staff are not protected in a RIF, but such employees are placed on a rehire list; in the instant matter, the State-Appointed Fiscal Monitor for the Atlantic City School District – acting on behalf of the respondent Board – implemented a RIF in response to a budgetary crisis; the petitioners herein were effectively fired from their eliminated supervisor positions and rehired as teaching staff members in new titles, rather than reassigned or transferred; consequently, there is no basis to use petitioners' former supervisor salaries in determining their current salaries, as their prior positions were eliminated and they were subsequently rehired as staff members; to do otherwise would undermine the RIF statute and its overriding goal of providing school districts with the authority to control their budgets in times of fiscal crisis. The ALJ concluded that: the petitioners' supervisor positions were eliminated in a legitimate RIF; petitioners were rehired as teaching staff members; and their current salaries are appropriate to the titles under which they are now employed. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision in favor of the Board and denied petitioners' motion for summary decision.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's conclusion that the Board acted within its authority when it RIF'd petitioners for financial reasons in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, and that their current salaries are appropriate to the teaching staff positions which the petitioners now hold. However, the Commissioner disagreed with the ALJ's finding that the petitioners were fired and rehired; rather, petitioners were RIF'd and reassigned to new positions based on seniority, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-11. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision, as modified above, and the petition was dismissed.

| PETITIONERS, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| V. | : | DECISION |
| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY, | : | |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioners and the Board's reply thereto.

In their exceptions, petitioners argue that the ALJ failed to consider the legal authority they cited in support of their argument that although the Board was permitted to reduce their gross yearly compensation, it should have been prorated on a $10/12^{th}$ basis to conform their 12-month salary to a 10-month position. Specifically, petitioners argue that this matter is similar to Rocco DiMaggio v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, Commissioner Decision No. 219-99, decided July 8, 1999 and William Buckley v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, Commissioner Amended Decision No. 247+-99, decided September 16, 1999, in which DiMaggio and Buckley were reassigned from 12-month positions to 10-month positions as a result of a reduction in force (RIF), and the school board was permitted to reduce their annual salaries to a prorated amount. Petitioners also cite Frank D'Alonzo v. Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 162-85, decided May 13, 1985, aff'd State Board September 4, 1985, and Richard Stolte v. Board of Education of the Township of Willingboro, Burlington County, 1981 S.L.D. 770, for the proposition that petitioners' salaries should have remained the same following their reassignment.

Petitioners also contend that the ALJ erred in finding that petitioners were effectively fired and rehired in new titles. Instead, petitioners argue that they were subjected to a RIF, and as such, their tenure and seniority rights apply in this matter. Petitioners point out that they could not possibly have been "fired and rehired" because the Board would have had to file tenure charges against them prior to firing them, pursuant to the TEACHNJ Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq. As such, petitioners argue that the ALJ erred in finding that there was no basis to apply the petitioner's prior salaries to their new positions.

In reply, the Board argues that the ALJ appropriately concluded that petitioners were subject to a legitimate RIF and were not entitled to their former supervisor salaries after being bumped into the new titles of guidance counselor and English teacher. The Board asserted that it "has the legal ability to commensurately reduce the employees' salary onto the lower salary guide at a step that corresponds with their seniority rights and level of experience." (Board's Reply at 2) The Board points out that the reduction in salary for economic benefit is the purpose of the RIF, which would not be achieved if the salaries were not reduced. The Board argues that the Appellate Division has found that "seniority is not the same as salary and does not guarantee the tenured employee to maintain the level of salary." (Ibid., citing Edward Carpenito v. Board of Education of the Borough of Rumson, Monmouth County, 322 N.J. Super. 522, 531 (App. Div. 1999)).

The Board further contends that the cases relied upon by petitioners – i.e., Stolte and D'Alonzo – are distinguishable from this matter since those cases involved transfers and the petitioners' seniority rights were not triggered because they did not suffer a loss of employment benefits. Finally, the Board emphasizes that it acted within its authority and in good faith when it implemented the RIF for economic reasons.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board acted within its authority when it RIF'd petitioners for financial reasons, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. However, the Commissioner agrees with petitioners that they were not fired and rehired, but rather RIF'd and reassigned to new positions based on their seniority, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-11. Nevertheless, the Commissioner agrees with the Board that it had the authority to reduce petitioners' salaries onto a lower salary guide – at a step that corresponds with their seniority and level of experience – when it reassigned petitioners as part of a RIF from 12-month supervisor positions to 10-month positions as guidance counselor and teacher.

"When a school board deems it necessary to eliminate a position, 'seniority' is a right afforded to tenured employees entitling the employee to either continue in an existing job opening based upon their longevity of employment or to be placed upon an eligible list for reemployment when a new position becomes available." Carpenito, supra, 322 N.J. Super. at 531. When a Board implements a RIF and reassigns tenured employees to new positions, "a reduction in a tenured staff member's salary/compensation and benefits is permissible." DiMaggio, supra. As such, "when an employee of a board of education is transferred for proper reason to a position which has a lesser salary expectation, that employee is entitled only to the salary in the new position according to his/her appropriate step on the salary scale."

Claus Schwarzkopf v. Board of Education of the City of Camden and Charles Smerin, Superintendent of Schools, 1985 S.L.D. 130, 135.

Accordingly, the Board acted within its authority when it reduced the salaries of petitioners as part of a RIF. Petitioners were reassigned from supervisor positions to titles with a lower salary expectation: guidance counselor and teacher. As such, the Board was permitted to reduce their salaries to the appropriate step on the salary scale, in accordance with their experience and seniority. Despite petitioners' contention, the Board was not required to maintain their supervisor salaries – or pay them the same rate on a prorated basis – following the RIF, when they were reassigned to positions on a lower salary scale. Such a requirement would render a RIF ineffective at addressing a school's financial situation.

Petitioners rely upon DiMaggio and Buckley for the proposition that the Board must maintain petitioners' rates of salary on a $10/12^{th}$ basis to conform their 12-month positions into 10-month positions. However, these cases may be distinguished from the instant matter, as Buckley and DiMaggio's positions were not reduced to positions with a lower salary expectation. DiMaggio was reassigned from job placement coordinator to teacher of auto mechanics/small engines, while Buckley was reassigned from job developer to teacher of industrial arts. All of the positions involved were on the same salary guide. By contrast, petitioners held the higher title of supervisor and were RIF'd to guidance counselor and teaching positions.

Additionally, the facts of the D'Alonzo matter cannot be compared to petitioners' situation. D'Alonzo involved a transfer of a high school assistant principal to an assignment as a junior high school assistant principal, without a reduction in salary. Such a transfer to another assignment within the same tenured position title, without a reduction in salary, is a valid transfer – rather than a RIF – and has no bearing on the instant matter. See Williams v. Board of Education of Plainfield, 176 N.J. Super. 154 (App. Div. 1980), certif. denied, 87 N.J. 306 (1981). In the Stolte matter, the petitioner was transferred from an assistant principal position to a teaching position while maintaining his administrator salary, frozen at its previous level. Although the Board in Stolte kept his salary the same, there is no requirement that all Boards do the same in a RIF. It is clear that reductions in salary or compensation are permitted as part of a legitimate RIF.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL – as modified above – is adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners, tenured supervisors with the Atlantic City Board of Education (ACBOE), challenge their reduction in force ("RIF"). Petitioners were eventually "rehired" as teaching staff members after the RIF based upon tenure and seniority rights. But they moved from twelve-month employees as supervisors to ten-month employees as staff members. Their salaries went from $149,000 to around $110,000.

Petitioners contend they were transferred from twelve-month employees to ten-month employees and, as such, their former salaries should be prorated by dividing it over ten months ($149,000x 10/12$^{th)}$ which equals $124,167.

The ACBOE contends the RIF was intended to be "reduction in force", with the overriding purpose of saving money during an economic crisis. Petitioners were not transferred into new titles. They were fired (i.e. RIF'd) and rehired. Petitioners' salaries are appropriate for their new titles as guidance counselor (Vidal-Turner) and English teacher (Williams). They should not be awarded prorated supervisor salaries while performing staff duties otherwise the purpose of the RIF would be nullified.

The Commissioner determined to treat the matter as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on October 23, 2015, to be heard de novo.

The parties agreed to file cross-motions for Summary Decision. For the reasons discussed below, Summary Decision is GRANTED in favor of the ACBOE.

STIPULATED FACTS

1. Petitioner Lourdes Vidal-Turner (Vidal-Turner) was hired by Respondent Board of Education of Atlantic City, Atlantic County (Board) effective September 1, 1989, as a English as a Second Language Teacher (ESL). She currently possesses an Administrative Certificate with a Supervisor endorsement, an Instructional Certificate with a Teacher of ESL endorsement, and an Educational Services certificate with a Director of Student Personnel Services endorsement.

2. Petitioner C. Dedra Williams (Williams) was hired by the Board, effective September 1, 1994, as an English Teacher. She currently possesses an Instructional Certificate with an ESL endorsement, a Teacher of English endorsement, and an Administrative Certificate with a Supervisor endorsement.

3. Vidal-Turner was promoted by the Board, effective March 1, 2002, to the twelve-month position of Supervisor. In this position, Vidal-Turner was the Board's District Supervisor of the school district's ESL Teachers, Shelter Classroom Teachers, Bilingual Teachers, and World Language Teachers.

4. Williams was promoted by the Board, effective in or around July, 2007, to the twelve-month position of Supervisor. In this position, Williams supervised teachers of ESL, English, Social Studies, Media, and World Languages.

5. Vidal-Turner and Williams worked in these twelve-month Supervisor positions until the Board RIF'd their positions, until June 30, 2015.

6. During the 2014-15 academic year, Dr. Gary P. McCartney, the State-Appointed Fiscal Monitor for the Atlantic City School District (McCartney), proposed the school district engage in a RIF for financial reasons. McCartney recommended that the Board approve his recommended RIF. However, the Board voted to reject McCartney's recommendation. Pursuant to the powers a State-Appointed Fiscal Monitor possesses under New Jersey law, McCartney overrode the Board's vote an instituted a RIF, effective July 1, 2015.

7. As a result of the RIF, Vidal-Turner and Williams were RIF'd from their twelve-month positions as Supervisors for the 2015-16 academic year. Vidal-Turner was assigned to a ten-month Guidance Counselor position. Williams was assigned to a ten-month English Teacher position.

8. Effective July 1, 2015, the Board reduced Vidal-Turner's salary from $149,000/twelve-month year to $109,648/ten-month year, and reduced Williams's salary from $149,000/twelve-month year to $110,585/ten-month year.

CONCLUSIONS

The pertinent statute N.J.S.A.18A:28-9 entitled "Reduction of force; power to reduce and reasons for reduction" provides:

> Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article.

The ACBOE, through the State-Appointed Monitor, approved a reduction in force in July 2015. Consequently, petitioners' positions were intended to be eliminated not transferred. After the RIF they were effective rehired or bumped down to new staff positions based upon their tenure and seniority rights.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has recognized that a local board of education has the authority to reduce its teaching force as long as that reduction is genuinely `for reasons of economy. Impey v. Board of Educ. of Shrewsbury, 142 N.J. 388, 399 (1995). Whether those services are eliminated, reduced or modified, however, may be a relevant factor in determining whether abolition of a position genuinely advances the goals of economy and efficiency and was undertaken in good faith. Id. at 399-40.

The ACBOE has authority to determine if a RIF should be implemented for reasons of economy. In Re Maywood Board of Education, 168 N.J. Super. 45 (App. Div. 1979); cert. denied 81 N.J. 292 (1979). Furthermore, the RIF is non-negotiable and non-grievable. Jamison v. Morris School District Board of Education, 198 N.J. Super. 411 (App. Div. 1985). The RIF statute, if properly executed, "trumps" a non-teaching staff member's contract rollover provisions contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11. Therefore, so long as the RIF was performed in good faith and for economic reasons, a teaching staff member can be terminated. Substance, rather than the form of a change in employment, is the controlling factor in making this determination, and if a position is replaced with an identical position but a different title, that action does not constitute a valid RIF. See Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Educ, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949).

Courts have held that Districts have discretion in dealing with the management of the public schools.

> The School Law vests the management of the public school ... in the local boards of education, and unless they violate the law, or act in bad faith, the exercise of their discretion in the performance of the duties imposed upon them is not subject to interference or reversal. Kenney v. Montclair BOE, 1 938 S.L.D 647 (1935), aff'd., St. Bd. at 653.

A board of education has broad discretionary authority and its actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Quinlan v. North Bergen BOE, 73 N.J. Super. 40, 46 (App. Div. 1962); see also Schinck v. Westwood BOE, 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960). This presumption extends to a board's determination that, for reasons of economy, a tenured employee may be subject to a reduction in force. Jamison v. Morris Sch. Dist. BOE, supra. at 415. Actions of a board of education are entitled to a presumption of correctness, as well as a presumption that such actions will be upheld by the Commissioner of Education, absent a showing of bad faith, illegal motive or a lack of rational basis. See Kopera v. West Orange BOE, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960). Bad faith has been explained as meaning improper or evil purpose or motive. Thompson v. Pleasantville BOE, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 278, 282 (citation omitted).

While a District has the power and authority to reduce the work force, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, the courts have held that the Board's decisions are subject to review, to determine if the position was in fact abolished or merely transferred to another person in violation of the incumbent's tenure rights. See Viemister v. Prospect Park Bd. Of Ed., supra, at 215.

Here, the state monitor, acting on behalf of the BOE implemented a RIF due to a budgetary crisis. A RIF contains unique statutory features that override many other areas of school law. The goal of a RIF is reduce the budget as it relates to staffing costs. The tenure does not protect staff members from being RIF'd but it does require the RIF'd employee to be placed on a special rehire list. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12; N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1. In this instance, the RIF'd staff members were effectively fired and rehired in new titles to wit: guidance counselor and English teacher after being RIF's as supervisors. They were not reassigned or transferred by BOE under its general operational authority to manage staffing needs during ordinary times. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-1 et seq. So there is no basis to use the petitioners' former supervisor salaries at $149,000 x 10/12$^{th}$ and apply it to their current position, because their prior positions were eliminated. They were simply rehired as staff members. I so CONCLUDE. To rule as petitioner seeks would undermine the RIF statute and it overriding goal which provide school districts with "extraordinary authority" to control its budget in a time of crisis.

STANDARD FOR SUMMARY DECISION

The OAL rules governing motions for summary decision are found at N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. These provisions mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary decision should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits, which may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding.

I CONCLUDE that there are no genuine issues of material fact and that summary decision is appropriate for this case. The parties situated most of the material facts and agreed to proceed summarily. The facts presented were sufficient for me to proceed summarily.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that Summary Decision is GRANTED if favor of the ACBOE. Petitioner's Motion for Summary Decision, seeking an adjusted salary amount along with back pay and other emoluments is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

| IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE | : | |
| HEARING OF STEPHEN MAX, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF | : | DECISION |
| TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY. | : | |

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause against respondent – a tenured teacher under the Board's employ – and sought to terminate his employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on his behalf filed an answer to the tenure charges following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(c), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and overwhelmingly warrant the termination of the respondent from his tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from his tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

| IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE | : | |
| HEARING OF STEPHEN MAX, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF | : | DECISION |
| TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY. | : | |

For the Petitioner, Adam S. Herman, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, Stephen Max

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on April 29, 2016, through tenure charges of conduct unbecoming and other just cause certified by Lissa S. Johnson, Assistant Superintendent of the Trenton School District, together with supporting evidence against respondent, Stephen Max, a tenured teacher in the petitioner's employ. The petitioner provided respondent with written notice of such certification at the respondent's last known address, via overnight mail on April 28, 2016. The petitioner also served a copy of the tenure charges on the respondent's union representative.

On May 2, 2016, the Commissioner directed the respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. The certified mail copy that was sent to the respondent was returned as undeliverable; however, the notice sent via regular mail was not returned. No reply to the tenure charges was received from or on behalf of respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate that respondent is employed as a tenured teacher in the District. During the 2014-2015 school year, the respondent was absent from his employment for 23.5 days. The respondent reported to work on September 10, 2015, seven days after the 2015-2016 school year began. Between September 25, 2015 and November 20, 2015, the respondent called out from work on approximately 24 days. Finally, since November 20, 2015, the respondent has failed to report his absences, and has been AWOL from his teaching position.

Deeming the allegations to be admitted, and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against him, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's charge of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member has been proven and overwhelmingly warrants the respondent's dismissal. Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from his tenured position with the District. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release ("this Agreement") is entered into by and between Angela Jones ("Jones") and the Camden City School District (the "District"). Together, Jones and the District may be referred to herein as "the Parties."

WHEREAS, Jones is a teacher of Special Education;

WHEREAS, the District certified tenure charges against Jones to the Commissioner of Education for unbecoming conduct and incapacity based on excessive absenteeism and lateness;

WHEREAS, the Parties mutually desire to resolve this matter and believe this resolution is in the public interest;

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS HEREBY AGREED by and between the Parties as follows:

1. Effective Date: This Agreement shall take effect on the date it is fully executed by the Parties, and as such, deemed ratified by the State Superintendent as the authorized representative of the District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35.

2. Separation from Employment and Consideration:

(a) Jones has submitted or will submit a disability retirement application ("application") to the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund ("TPAF") for processing which contains an effective retirement date of February 1, 2016. As such she will begin receiving retiree health benefits as of that date and the District will no longer be responsible for covering Jones with regard to health benefits. Jones will take all necessary actions to ensure this occurs.

(b) Jones shall provide the District with an irrevocable letter of retirement immediately, through its counsel, Brown & Connery, LLP, to be attached to this Agreement in a form mutually agreeable to the parties. The retirement will become effective as of June 30, 2016; or the date Jones' application is initially granted, denied or withdrawn, whichever date is sooner. An appeal of any decision of TPAF on her application will not postpone the effective date of her retirement from her position with the District as set forth in the irrevocable letter, attached as Exhibit A to this Agreement.

(c) If Jones' application is approved, her retirement will be effective February 1, 2016.

(d) If Jones' application is not approved, Jones agrees she will irrevocably retire from her position as a teacher with the Camden City School District and that this retirement is not contingent in any way upon any specific action being taken by TPAF, subject to the terms in Section 2(b) above.

(e) In consideration for Jones' irrevocable letter of retirement and general release of claims and agreement not to sue in accordance with Sections 4 and 5 of this Agreement, the District will place Jones on an unpaid leave of absence until June 30, 2016 at the latest, pursuant to Section 2(b) above.

(f) The District will not be responsible for providing Jones with any pay whatsoever nor any benefits in accordance with Sections 2(a) and 2(c) above.

(g) The District agrees to comply with its obligations under the law with regard to Jones' application.

3. Dismissal of Tenure Charges: The District shall take all necessary actions with the Commissioner of Education or her designee to withdraw the tenure action against Jones bearing agency reference number 342-11/15.

4. General Release: Jones releases the District from all known and unknown charges, complaints, claims, grievances, liabilities, obligations, promises, agreements, controversies, damages, actions, causes of action, suits, rights, demands, costs, losses, debts, penalties, fees, and expenses (including attorneys' fees and costs actually incurred) of any nature whatsoever that Jones has, ever had, or may have had, against the District, whether or not apparent or yet to be discovered, or which may hereafter develop, for any acts or omissions relating to or arising from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. This includes, but is not limited to, any claims Jones asserted, or may have asserted, under the following: the National Labor Relations Act; the Civil Rights Act of 1964; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Employment Retirement Income Security Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Age Discrimination & Employment Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Occupational Safety & Health Act; the Family & Medical Leave Act; the Equal Pay Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Wage Payment Law; The New Jersey Minimum Wage Law; the Equal Pay Law for New Jersey; the New Jersey Worker Health & Safety Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; N.J.S.A. 18A; N.J.A.C. 6A; any constitution, statute, regulation, ordinance, executive order, public policy or common law; any written, verbal or implied contract; and any other authority or basis for seeking damages or relief of any kind. This release is intended to be broadly construed and applies to any and all claims and potential claims whatsoever, including those of which Jones is not aware, resulting from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement.

5. Covenant Not to Sue: Jones warrants she has not commenced any legal proceedings of any type (including but not limited to charges filed with any governmental agency) against the District other than her pending worker's compensation claim(s). Further, Jones agrees that she will not commence any legal proceedings against the District arising from or relating to anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. Should any such legal proceedings be commenced on Jones's behalf, Jones agrees that she will not seek or accept any relief or recovery therefrom. In the event of a violation of this paragraph, Jones agrees that the District shall be entitled to immediate dismissal of the legal proceedings, and that she shall be responsible for the District's attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection with those legal proceedings. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 4, Jones agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with this section.

6. Claims Not Released: Notwithstanding Sections 5 and 6 of this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that Jones is not waiving: (a) claims that were filed or could be filed under any state workers' compensation law; (b) any claim arising from a breach of this agreement; or (c) challenges to the validity of this Agreement under the Older Workers Benefits Protection Act. Jones represents that she is not aware of any present basis for such claims other than those bases represented in her currently pending worker's compensation claim. The District reserves its right to assert any and all defenses to the above claims which Jones has not released. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 4, Jones agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with Section 5, above.

7. Unemployment Disputes:

(a) Jones understands, acknowledges, and agrees that nothing in this Agreement shall limit the District's right to pursue any appeals, suits, disputes, or challenges to Jones' unemployment benefits compensation. Jones understands, acknowledges, and agrees that the District can freely appeal, file suit, dispute, or otherwise challenge Jones' receipt of, and application for, past, present, and future unemployment compensation.

(b) The District understands, acknowledges, and agrees that Jones can freely assert any and all defenses available to her in any appeal, suits, dispute, and/or challenge by the District for Jones' receipt of, and application for, past, present, and future unemployment compensation benefits.

8. Older Workers Benefit Protection Act: The releases in section 5 above include a waiver and release of all claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act ("ADEA") and the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act ("OWBPA"). Therefore, pursuant to the requirements of the ADEA and OWBPA, Jones specifically acknowledges that:

(a) She has been advised to consult with an attorney of her choosing concerning the legal significance of the Settlement Agreement and Release and has done so;

(b) The Settlement Agreement and Release are written in a manner that she understands;

(c) The consideration set forth this Settlement Agreement consists of benefits to which she is not otherwise entitled and is adequate and sufficient to support her promises, covenants and releases as set forth in this Release;

(d) She has been afforded twenty-one (21) days to consider the Settlement Agreement and Release before executing it, that any changes thereto subsequently agreed upon by the parties, whether material or immaterial, do not restart this period for consideration, and that by signing and returning the Settlement Agreement and Release before the end of the twenty-one (21) day period she will have knowingly and voluntarily waived the right to consider the Settlement Agreement and Release for the full consideration period; and

(e) She has been advised that during the seven (7) day period following her execution of the Settlement Agreement and the Release, she may revoke her acceptance of this Agreement by delivering written notice to counsel for the District (as identified below), and that the Settlement Agreement and the Release shall not become effective or enforceable until after the revocation period has expired:

9. Not Eligible for Rehire: Jones acknowledges and agrees that her employment with the District will, in accordance with this Agreement, be irrevocably severed at some point and that she is ineligible for re-hire as an employee of the District. Jones agrees not to apply for re-employment with the District. If, for some reason, the District receives an application for Jones's employment, the District shall have no obligation to consider or review her application for employment.

10. No Admission of Liability: This Agreement is not, and may not be construed as, an admission of liability by either Party.

11. Entire Agreement: This Agreement encompasses the sole and entire agreement between the Parties and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by the Parties, and expressly stated to represent an amendment or supersession to this Agreement.

12. No Contingencies: The effectiveness of this agreement shall not be contingent on any event not articulate herein, including but not limited to any applications Jones may file with the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund for retirement. Jones understands the District has no control over the approval or denial of any such applications and she cannot revoke this Agreement based upon same.

13. Severability: If any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder will be fully enforceable.

14. Applicable Law and Construction: This Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey; however, since each party to this Agreement and their counsel have reviewed and negotiated this Agreement, the general rule of construction that any ambiguity or uncertainty in a writing shall be interpreted against the party drafting the writing shall not apply to any action relating to this Agreement. Any action to enforce or interpret this Agreement shall only be brought in a court of competent jurisdiction in Camden County, New Jersey.

15. Counterparts: This Agreement may be exercised in more than one counterpart and each counterpart shall be considered an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same.

16. Individuals Bound: This Settlement Agreement and General Release is binding upon and shall inure to the benefit of the parties hereto and their respective heirs, executors, administrators, personal or legal representatives, successors and/or assigns.

17. Arbitrator Approval: This Settlement Agreement and General Release is subject to approval by the Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, and will become effective only upon approval of the Arbitrator. Counsel of the parties shall jointly request the Arbitrator's approval of this Agreement and each shall take any and all necessary steps to effectuate dismissal of the tenure charges.

18. Breach: Jones understands that if she breaches any provision of this Agreement, the District will file an action to enforce this Agreement.

RE: Camden City School District Tenure Charges
Against Angela Jones
Our File No: 1341-643A-15

Dear Ms. Humma:

As you are aware, Zeller & Wieliczko, LLP represents Angela Jones with regard to the above referenced matter. As previously discussed, this letter will constitute an addendum to the Settlement Agreement between the Camden City School District and Ms. Angela Jones which was executed by Ms. Jones on February 19, 2016. This modification in limited part modifies and supersedes the Settlement Agreement and Release signed by Ms. Jones on February 19, 2016. A copy of same is attached hereto.

Whereas, it came to the attention of the District that Ms. Jones owed insurance premiums for the months of December 2015 and January 2016 in the amount of $1,135.88.

Whereas, Ms. Jones may have been entitled to a payout of accrued sick time at the time of the effective date of her TPAF retirement, if approved, or June 30, 2016, the end of the 2015-2016 academic year.

Now, therefore the Parties agree as follows:

Ms. Jones has agreed to forego any claim to a payout for any accrued leave time in exchange for the District not seeking recoupment of insurance premiums incurred by her but paid by the District during the months of December 2015 and January 2016 in the amount of $1,135.88.

The parties intend to be legally bound by this modification to the Settlement Agreement and Release as indicated by their signatures below.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Very truly yours,

On September 18, 2015, the Board found probable cause to allow Sworn Tenure Charges as well as Sworn Statement of Evidence in support thereof against Respondent James Dunckley to warrant his dismissal. Thus, the Board certified and filed the Charges with the Commissioner of Education. On August 31, 2015, Respondent Dunckley was suspended but with pay.( See P-31) That is, his salary increment for the upcoming year will be withheld. The Respondent answered the Charges on October 7, 2015.

Subsequently, the Commissioner submitted the Tenure Charges to this Arbitrator on October 19, 2015.

The Sworn Tenure Charges allege that Respondent Dunckley engaged in conduct unbecoming of a teacher, in violation of the Board Policy, as well as State Law, by his inappropriate conduct exhibited towards his special education students. This conduct included acts of inappropriate touching of certain young females repeatedly.

During the four (4)-day hearing from December 14 and 15, 2015 and January 5 and 6, 2016, the Board presented fifteen (15) witnesses over a three (3)-day period. The Respondent presented approximately eight (8) witnesses. However, Respondent Dunckley did not testify in his own defense. Both Parties were afforded full opportunity to examine and cross-examine witnesses, submit evidence, and present arguments in support of their respective positions. Subsequently, the Parties submitted Post-Hearing Briefs on February 5, 2016. An extension was granted to the Arbitrator for submission on July 6, 2016.

BACKGROUND INFORMATION COMMON TO ALL CHARGES

Respondent, James Dunckley, commenced employment with the Board in the 1976-77 school year. He subsequently obtained tenure in his position. He is certified as a teacher of the handicapped and an elementary school teacher. Since September 1, 1996, Respondent has been assigned as an instructor of students with multiple handicaps at the Copeland Middle School. Over the years, he has been responsible for the education and welfare of many students. As a member of the professional staff, Respondent was obliged, among other things, to ensure the implementation and enforcement of all Board of Education policies and generally to safeguard and promote the well-being of the students entrusted to his care.

Respondent has a history of inappropriate and unprofessional conduct towards others. By way of example, without limitation, in 2012, an affirmative action complaint was filed against him by Donna Friedberger, a teacher who alleged Respondent engaged in harassing, threatening and hostile behavior toward her. It was resolved by Respondent agreeing to act in a professional manner, and to cease communicating with the teacher to ensure he would not retaliate against her. But, because of Respondent's additional and ongoing failure to conduct himself in an appropriately professional manner, the District is now compelled to file the instant charges.

The present charges are the result of recurring complaints, made by minor female children who are or were students of Respondent. Respondent touched them inappropriately and repeatedly, without their consent, despite requests not to do so, and otherwise treated them inappropriately, causing them substantial anxiety, discomfort and disruption.

As more fully set forth below, following an initial complaint which was first brought to the District's attention by parents of various female students, in or about December 2009, Respondent was admonished to cease and desist from engaging in the offensive behavior. Nonetheless, Respondent continued in his reprehensible course of conduct into the present, resulting in further complaints of a similar nature involving additional female students. The similarities between the past and present occurrences are troubling. In both cases, the affected female students reported that Mr. Dunckley's unwelcome advances made them feel anxious and uncomfortable. In both cases, the girls who were targets of Mr. Dunckley's unwanted attention and physical contact, experienced anxiety, discomfort and disruption. Both the prior and present misconduct by Respondent, as more fully described below, was unbecoming of a teaching professional, and violative of numerous Board Policies, of which Respondent knew or reasonably should have known.

SPECIFICATION OF CHARGES

CHARGE I

CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE REGARDING RESPONDENT'S INAPPROPRIATE CONDUCT TOWARDS A STUDENT, "TA"

The foregoing Background Information and the facts alleged therein, are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. At all times relevant to the facts set forth below, TA, was a 13-year old girl and a student in Respondent's class at Copeland Middle School, located at 100 Lake Shore Drive, Rockaway Township, New Jersey.

Count 1

On a recurring basis since on or about December 2014, through April 10, 2015, during class and without TA's consent, Respondent more than once touched TA on her shoulders, on her leg above her knee, knee, back, and "in the area of [her] chest." Respondent also touched TA on her collarbone. Respondent's touching focused primarily on TA, and to a lesser extent upon a second female classmate, ALR (see Charge II, supra). When Respondent touched TA, it made her feel uncomfortable.

Count 2

Respondent called TA his "buddy," said she was "mature," and that TA was "different than other kids." Respondent's characterization of TA as "mature" and as his "buddy" were made to TA's mother in or about the beginning or middle of the 2014-2015 school year, during a telephone conversation about TA's grades and performance in class. This caused TA's mother to become concerned about exactly what Respondent's intention was by the use of the term "mature." TA's mother found Mr. Dunckley's statements to be very odd; she was taken aback by them and felt very uncomfortable with the conversation.

Count 3

When he touched her, Respondent typically asked TA if she was "OK." This made TA feel uncomfortable because there was no reason for Respondent to ask TA if she was OK.

Count 4

Despite repeatedly touching TA without her consent, Respondent throughout the 2014-2015 school year said, "I don't touch kids." On or about March 25, 2015, TA said to Respondent, "Don't touch me," whereupon Respondent "dropped whatever he was doing" and said he "didn't mean it like that." Respondent's overt and exaggerated pronouncement, in direct contravention of his actions was perplexing and made TA feel uncomfortable.

Count 5

TA informed Respondent, "I don't feel comfortable when you put your hand on me." Yet, two days later, Respondent touched TA's shoulder.

Count 6

Respondent's foregoing conduct eventually took its toll on TA. Her mother reports that, about a month or two before the 2014-2015 school year ended, TA began to "appear anxious, seemingly more quiet and began changing her dress wear for school in the way of being much more conservative." When TA's mother "confronted [TA] about this change in her, [TA], after initially saying nothing was wrong, told her mother that Mr. Dunckley had been touching her on several different occasions on her shoulder, arm and knee, and that this had made [TA] feel very uncomfortable with him and being in his class."

TA reported to her guidance counselor, Sonya Patel, that she "feels as if she is depressed" and was "feeling threatened/bothered by Mr. Dunckley."

On or about April 3, 2015, TA "broke down" at home and told her mom that she was feeling "too much pressure" and was "feeling a lot of anxiety." This caused TA's mother to notify the school, and caused the administration promptly to have TA moved to another class.

After she became aware of the incidents involving Respondent repeatedly and inappropriately touching TA without her consent despite TA telling Respondent to stop, TA's mother, toward the end of the 2014-2015 school year, took TA to see a doctor due to her "anxious and changing behaviors." After being informed of the incident(s) in school with her teacher, the doctor informed TA's mother that the behavior change could most certainly be explained from her experiences with Mr. Dunckley.

The foregoing acts and omissions by James Dunckley, individually and cumulatively, constitute conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member and/or just cause warranting dismissal.

CHARGE II

CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE REGARDING RESPONDENT'S INAPPROPRIATE CONDUCT TOWARDS A STUDENT, "ALR"

The foregoing Background Information, Charge, Counts and the facts alleged therein, are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. At all times relevant herein, ALR, was a 13-year old girl, and a student in Respondent's Science and American History classes at Copeland Middle School.

Count 1

On a recurring basis throughout the 2014-2015 school year, until he was placed on administrative suspension on April 10, 2015, during class and without ALR's consent, Respondent touched ALR on her arms, shoulders, knees and legs. For example, without limitation, Respondent would touch ALR's shoulders when she asked to go to the bathroom, asking her if she was okay. When Respondent touched ALR, it made her feel "uncomfortable and weird." ALR noticed that Respondent's inquiry sounded "sweeter than it should" leading her to believe that the touching was sexual in nature.

Count 2

Despite repeatedly touching ALR without her consent, Respondent also repeatedly pronounced: "I don't touch kids!" ALR found this to be "weird" because Respondent was, in fact, touching her and others. She concluded that Respondent was trying to "hide something." This also made ALR feel uncomfortable.

Count 3

When they watched movies in class, Respondent would sometimes sit "really close" to ALR and touch her shoulder. This caused ALR to "feel uncomfortable and weird."

Count 4

When Respondent was at his computer and ALR's back was toward him, ALR felt "like he is staring at [me]" such that, "every morning," ALR moved her desk so she could see Respondent.

Count 5

The foregoing conduct of Respondent caused ALR to consider "moving out of the class," despite the fact that ALR was "scared of being in a big class."

The foregoing acts and omissions by James Dunckley, as set forth in the above Counts, individually and cumulatively, constitute conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member and/or just cause warranting dismissal.

CHARGE III

CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER, AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE FOR DISMISSAL RELATED TO RESPONDENT'S RECURRENT PATTERN OF MISCONDUCT

All of the foregoing Background Information, Charges, Counts, and the facts set forth therein are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. It is well established that the Commissioner of Education and the Courts recognize that the totality of a pattern of conduct may constitute unbecoming conduct, even when the individual acts comprising it, standing alone, may not. See, e.g., Cowan v. Bernardsville Bd. of Educ., Tenure Hearing of Greg Young, and Tenure Hearing of Donald Dudley.

The course of misconduct set forth in the within Charges and Counts, jointly and severally, based on numerous and ongoing infractions over an extended period of time, notwithstanding Respondent's prior history, constitutes such a pattern of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member. This pattern and course of unbecoming conduct during an extended period of time, and the emotional damage and disruption Respondent has caused to his students manifestly demonstrates his recalcitrance and general unfitness to continue to serve in a position of trust as a public school teaching staff member, warranting his immediate dismissal.

ISSUES

1. Whether or not James Dunckley engaged in acts or omissions constituting unbecoming conduct and/or other just cause, including: inappropriate touching of students?

2. If so, does the conduct warrant dismissal from his employment with the Board?

PERTINENT PROVISIONS

THE CHARGES AND SPECIFICATIONS:

SPECIFICATIONS

In Particular:

District Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, provides, "Inappropriate conduct and conduct unbecoming a school staff member will not be tolerated in this school district," and further that "School staff shall not engage in inappropriate conduct toward or with pupils ... [and] shall not engage or seek to be in the presence of a pupil beyond the staff member's professional responsibilities." (P-23.)

District Policy 5751, Sexual Harassment, provides that the Board "will not tolerate sexual harassment of pupils by school employees," defined as "unwelcomed sexual advances ... or other verbal, nonverbal, or physical conduct of a sexual nature ... that is sufficiently severe, persistent, or pervasive to limit a pupil's ability to participate in or benefit from an educational program or activity, or to create a hostile or abusive educational environment." (P-24.)

District Regulation 5751, Sexual Harassment of Pupils, further provides, when "elementary or middle school (grades K-8) pupils are involved, welcomeness will not be an issue. Sexual conduct between a school employee and an elementary pupil will not be viewed as consensual;" and further provides, "In determining whether conduct is sufficiently severe, persistent, or pervasive, ... all relevant circumstances should be considered ... based on the totality of the circumstances;" and further provides, "Appropriate steps will be taken to end the harassment such as counseling, warning, and/or disciplinary action ... A series of escalating consequences may be necessary if the initial steps are ineffective in stopping the harassment." (P-25.)

District Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, requires the educator "to attain and maintain the highest possible degree of ethical conduct," and further provides that in "fulfillment of the obligation to the pupil, the educator ... [s]hall make reasonable effort to protect the pupil from conditions harmful to learning or to health and safety," and "[s]hall not intentionally expose the pupil to embarrassment or disparagement." (P-20.)

District Policy 3280, Liability for Pupil Welfare, provides that "[t]eaching staff members are responsible for supervision of pupils and must discharge that responsibility with the highest levels of care and prudent conduct." (P-22.) District Regulation 3280, Liability for Pupil Welfare, further provides, "A teaching staff member must maintain a standard of care for supervision, control, and protection of pupils commensurate with the member's assigned duties and responsibilities." (P-23.)

District Policy 3150, Discipline, "directs all teaching staff members to observe statutes of the State of New Jersey, rules of the State Board of Education, policies of this Board, and duly promulgated administrative rules and regulations governing staff conduct," and further states, "Violations of those statutes, rules, policies and regulations will be subject to discipline." (P-19.)

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

It is the position of the Respondent that Charge I and Charge II provide "plain notice" of what one is being charged. Thus, Charge I and Charge II are legitimate, the Respondent reasons, and not procedurally defective. However, Charge III lacks specificity and "plain notice" is absent. Therefore, Charge III, the Respondent asserts, functions as an umbrella charge and should be dismissed by this Arbitrator. Three assessments are set forth in West New York v. Bock, 38 NJ 500 (1962), the prevailing case law, the Respondent contends, which shall be analyzed by this Arbitrator in the Findings and Discussion along with other related case law such as: Buglovsky v. Randolph Board of Education case of Arbitrator Licata, Esq. (Docket No: 265-9-12), decided December 21, 2012.

In regards to Respondent Dunckley's 2009 incident, the Respondent asserts that he has no prior disciplinary record. Moreover, he has never had an increment withheld nor a letter of warning or a reprimand. The Respondent, again citing Bock, op. cit., asserts that "while prior disciplinary actions can serve as a basis for an increased penalty in a future case," "it cannot serve as a basis for future disciplinary charges." Based upon the above, the Respondent reasons that since Principal Allshouse did not impose discipline on Respondent Dunckley and that to consider this 2009 incident is against the concept of industrial double jeopardy. The Respondent explains that such a principle is derived from the basic elements of due process and fairness inherent in just cause, citing Arbitrator Biren's Award, In the Matter of John Carolomagno v. School District of Hillside (Agency No: 180-8-13, decided December 20, 2013). The Respondent reiterates that since the Petitioner through Principal Allshouse testified that no action was imposed, as evidenced in his report, then the 2009 incident should not be viable for these reasons.

Focusing on Charges I and II regarding T.A. and A.L.R. with Respondent Dunckley, the Respondent challenges the credibility of these witnesses as well as the lack of corroboration of other students in the class, who were not fully investigated.

The Respondent points out that T.A. and A.L.R. are both very close friends who mirrored each other's testimony and operated as a clique. However, the Respondent contends that there was no corroboration of their version of events with other students in the classroom nor from other adults such as the classroom aide nor any administrator who visited Respondent Dunckley's classroom. Specifically, the Respondent notes that Principal Allshouse visited twice weekly with no advanced notification but did not see any of the alleged conduct testified to by T.A. or A.L.R.

The Respondent also asserts the inconsistencies of T.A.'s statements to the District's Investigator taken in August 2015 compared with her statements taken April 10, 2015, which occurred after the alleged conduct. For example, the Respondent notes that T.A.'s first response to the Investigator states that Respondent Dunckley "touches her" when she is "mad and upset." Then, T.A. says that he concurrently asked her if she "was okay." However, in the second interview with the Investigator, in contrast, she elaborates on the touching and its frequency. The Respondent also adds that T.A.'s response was as follows: "He would just say [']are you okay[?'] but there is no reason for him to ask me if I'm OK." When the second Investigator asked T.A. when Respondent Dunckley said this, T.A. responded as follows: "He would bump into me and say [']I'm sorry[,] I don't touch kids[,'] I just find it weird."

Another inconsistency, the Respondent asserts, is the testimony of T.A. in comparison with another classmate, C.P. For example, during the second interview, T.A. mentions that C.P. "freaked out," when Respondent Dunckley "touched her shoulder." However, C.P. testified at the hearing that this was untrue and she was greatly troubled by the fact that she could have gotten Respondent Dunckley in trouble.

In regards to the lack of corroboration from teachers, the Respondent offers the testimony of the elementary teachers, S. Culleny-Peer and D. Marchese. Apparently, the Respondent asserts that both taught T.A. in the past, nonetheless T.A.'s comments to them regarding the allegations against Respondent Dunckley were divergent from her prior statements made to the District Investigators. In particular, the teachers testified that T.A. told them that Respondent Dunckley put his hand on her thigh, indicating a rubbing motion. The Respondent points out that this is a significant omission from T.A.'s earlier investigation with the Division of Youth and Family Service (DYFS) investigator, when she failed to mention this touching of the thigh incident.

Focusing now on the lack of credibility of A.L.R., the Respondent contends that A.L.R.'s response to her allegations against Respondent Dunckley that both T.A. and E.D. said that he was "weird" and he made them feel uncomfortable. In contrast, E.D. testified at the hearing, the Respondent asserts, and she denied these allegations. Thus, for all the foregoing, the Respondent strongly asserts that T.A. and A.L.R. lack credibility.

In regards to the lack of a thorough investigation of the School District, the Respondent points to the failure of the District to interview School Aide Ciampitte. She was Respondent Dunckley's aide during the school year at issue. Essentially, the Respondent asserts that she corroborated C.P.'s testimony, stating that "he does not touch kids." Most importantly, the Respondent maintains that Aide Ciampitte never witnessed Respondent Dunckley inappropriately touching any student. This again, the Respondent contends, supports the synopsis of Principal Allshouse's version of events, when he made unannounced pop-ins on Respondent Dunckley while class was in session. In summary, the Respondent concludes that not one witness, student, principal or aide can corroborate the allegations of T.A. and A.L.R.

In response to the Petitioner's reliance on the Davis case, the Respondent rebuts that the Davis case differs from our case. In particular, the Respondent points out that there was independent corroboration that School Custodian Davis touched the student's hair. That is, it was done in front of the mother of the student. She noticed that her daughter was uncomfortable with the stroking and fondling of her hair. However, there is no similar corroboration of any student's testimony, the Respondent asserts. Besides, the Respondent notes that there was no factual dispute in the Davis case, as here.

In addition, the Respondent further asserts that the School Custodian Davis admitted to fondling the student's hair, but these factors are absent in our case with Respondent Dunckley. Based on the foregoing, the Respondent requests that the Arbitrator restore Respondent Dunckley to his prior position with full back pay because the charges are baseless and to expunge his record.

On the other hand, it is the position of the Petitioner that this is a tenure case concerning a special education teacher who chose not to appear as a witness in his own hearing. The Petitioner asserts that he is a danger to young girls and has recently touched two (2) thirteen (13)-year-old girls on numerous occasions. The Petitioner further asserts that Respondent Dunckley has touched other girls in the past. Specifically, the charges reflect that he touched T.A. and A.L.R. on various body parts, including shoulder, thigh or leg above the knee, back, chest area, collarbone, arms, knees and legs, during the 2014-2015 school year, despite being told to stop by these young girls. Paradoxically, the Petitioner points out, Respondent Dunckley verbally exclaimed that he doesn't "touch kids," much to the confusion of the girls who he continues to touch. Thus, the Petitioner contends that T.A. and A.L.R. were made to feel uncomfortable and causing substantial anxiety, discomfort and disruptions by his conduct. Based on Respondent Dunckley's conduct, the Petitioner adds that one of the female students was transferred to another class. He was placed on administrative leave pending the outcome of the District's Investigation.

Most importantly, the Petitioner maintains that the conduct exhibited by Respondent Dunckley in 2014-2015 was not the first time he has acted inappropriately and in a disturbing manner toward minor female special education students placed in his care. That is, in 2009, two (2) girls and parents came forward and complained of the exact same conduct, forcing the administration to remove two (2) female students (J.W. and A.R.) from Respondent Dunckley's class. Thus, the Petitioner contends that he disrupted the continuity of the girls' education. At that juncture, the Petitioner points out, that Respondent Dunckley was warned and instructed to cease and desist from engaging in offensive behavior toward young girls. Based upon the conduct described, the Petitioner surmises that the Respondent is a real danger to young girls and should not be permitted to continue working with children and subjecting them to this behavior. The Petitioner asserts that three (3) cases, in particular, epitomizes this conclusion and their dismissal is required. They are as follows: In the Matter of Tenure Hearing of Marvis Davis, Agency Docket No: 22-1/4 (May 15, 2014, Arbitrator Symonette); In the Matter of Tenure Hearing McClelland (March 25, 1983, affidavit State Board, July 6, 1983 affidavit, A-152-83T2, app. Div. 1984; and In the Matter of Grace Colon v. City of New York Department of Education, 2010 NY Slip Op 33211(U) (New York Supreme Court, 2010), Arbitrator Dr. McKissick.

In the Davis case, the Arbitrator sustained a dismissal of a school custodian when he touched the hair of female students, making them feel "weird" and uncomfortable. This was the holding, despite a Department of Children and Family (DCF) finding that sexual abuse was unsubstantiated. In the McClelland, this case was upheld of a dismissal of a tenured fifth grade teacher who engaged in improper touching with five (5) female students. In the Colon arbitration, the Arbitrator found that the special education teacher engaged in conduct unbecoming, which included ongoing physical and verbal abuse of students and faculty members. Here, dismissal was the appropriate remedy notwithstanding the teacher's unblemished record. In sum, the Petitioner urges the Arbitrator that given the Respondent's prior history as well as the recent events in 2014-2015 that there is no alternative except dismissal.

Focusing upon Charges I and II, T.A. testified to the unwanted touching and this was corroborated by A.L.R. More significantly, such actions were testified to by N.A., a classmate, and former elementary school teachers, Culleny-Peer and Marchese. Both teachers taught T.A. in the past. All support the allegations of T.A. and A.L.R. as does Dr. Greg McGann, the superintendent, and Dr. Dempsey, the school psychologist. In particular, Dr. Dempsey concluded from his analysis that T.A. and A.L.R. were greatly damaged by this traumatic experience with Respondent Dunckley who sexualized this relationship with these young pre-adolescent females.

Regarding the Petitioner's request for an adverse inference, the Petitioner points out that this is not a criminal proceeding and that no constitutional rights are at issue.

Instead, Respondent Dunckley is the only person with personal knowledge of what occurred besides the girls themselves. Nonetheless, he has chosen not to offer any material facts or to contradict the factual testimony of the victims, T.A. and A.L.R. Here, the Petitioner adds that no witnesses were presented by the Respondent to contradict the analysis and conclusions of Dr. Dempsey, the school psychologist.

Moreover, the Petitioner notes that in State v. Clawans, 38 NJ 162, 170-171 (1962), New Jersey's highest court established the appropriateness of such inferences. That case held that the failure of a party to testify raises a "natural inference" that the "party fears exposure of unfavorable" facts would be presented against him.

Looking at the totality of evidence and egregious conduct of Respondent Dunckley, the Petitioner concludes that he has failed to satisfy the standards of the teaching profession. That is, the Petitioner adds that Respondent Dunckley has blatantly breached his fiduciary duty and wreaked havoc on lives of the young female students involved. Thus, the Petitioner reasons that Respondent Dunckley deserves no additional chances as he was forewarned in 2009, yet repeated the same behavior with other young female students. Based on the foregoing, the Petitioner requests that Respondent Dunckley be dismissed.

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

The appropriate evidentiary standard that applies to making findings of fact requires the Petitioner to prove its case by a preponderance of credible evidence. That is, it is more probable than not that the Respondent engaged in conduct set forth in the charges. In accordance with these requirements and consistent to the above evidentiary standard, the following Findings of Fact and Conclusions are so delineated.

CHARGE I

CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE REGARDING RESPONDENT'S INAPPROPRIATE CONDUCT TOWARDS A STUDENT, "TA"

P-3 reflects T.A.'s handwritten comments regarding the substance of this charge, when she answers questions from Investigator J. R. Keney on August 19, 2015. She writes that she is a student of Respondent Dunckley during the school year 2014-2015 and that he made her feel uncomfortable. Specifically, she writes that he "touched my leg above the knee," her "shoulder and back." He also touched her "chest." She also adds "his actions were different than his words." P-3 at p. 3 also mentions that T.A.'s friend, A.L.R., was moved from his class. P-4 is also a handwritten statement written by A.L.R. It is also reflective of questions asked of A.L.R. by Investigator J. R. Keney on August 22, 2015. In that statement, A.L.R. also writes that Respondent Dunckley's actions made her feel "uncomfortable." She also writes that Respondent Dunckley sat next to her "during videos" and that he would "touch my shoulders." P-6 reflects that events written in a memo from Social Worker P. Dafgek, dated April 9, 2015 concerning a call from T.A.'s mother.

This memo was directed to Principal Allshouse where the social worker Dafgek reveals the substance of T.A.'s mother's call regarding Respondent Dunckley's touching T.A. as well as other students: "A.L.R., C.P. and E.D." In this memo, T.A.'s mother states that she contacted Respondent Dunckley who stated that T.A. was "different than other kids, more mature and is a buddy." T.A.'s mother reported that the teacher was more "sexual" with her daughter, T.A., as well as A.L.R., because they were "more developed" than other girls in the class (see P-6 at 2).

P-7 is a memo from Guidance Counselor Sonya Patel who recorded her conversation with T.A.'s mother, dated March 26 and March 27, 2015. She relates to the guidance counselor that T.A. now has anxiety attacks and she has flashbacks of earlier incidents in her life. In addition, T.A.'s mother repeats that T.A. said to Respondent Dunckley, "Don't touch me." However, he responded to T.A. by saying that "I don't touch kids." The memo continues that Respondent Dunckley has continued to touch her on the shoulder, collarbone, and back.

P-10 is a handwritten assessment of Dr. Dempsey, the school psychologist, relating that Respondent Dunckley exhibited "abusive behavior" towards "two female students," dated August 21, 2015. He continued to describe this behavior of Respondent Dunckley as "sexualizing the relationship" between these two female students, "imposing a traumatic and damaging experience upon them."

P-12 reflects an affidavit written by T.A.'s prior school teacher, S. Culleny-Peer, regarding her conversation with T.A. She further relayed the information conveyed by T.A., including that Respondent Dunckley put his hands "on my thigh," while saying "good job." Again, T.A. relates to her school teacher, Culleny-Peer, that his touches made her feel uncomfortable.

P-13 reflects the affidavit dated September 8, 2015 of T.A.'s former teacher, D. Marchese, who she encountered while the teacher was performing "Bus Duty." Former Elementary Teacher Marchese conveyed that T.A. seemed to be "visibly upset and shaken" as she told her about the conduct of Respondent Dunckley as he "rubbed her thigh." Collectively these various allegations encompassed Charge I, Counts 1 through 6. Implicit through these corroborations are the words of T.A., A.L.R., plus the guidance counselor, the school psychologist, and 2 (two) former elementary teachers. All of this evidence was again consistent with their testimony before this Arbitrator at the hearing.

CHARGE II

CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE REGARDING RESPONDENT'S INAPPROPRIATE CONDUCT TOWARDS A STUDENT, "ALR"

P-4 comprises an interview with A.L.R. by Investigator Keney where A.L.R. explicitly writes that Respondent Dunckley "made her feel uncomfortable." She also writes that he sits close to her during movies in class and touches her shoulder. This was written in her own handwriting and signed by A.L.R. on August 22, 2015.

Even more striking events occurred on April 9, 2015. This was reflected in the written memo by the school guidance counselor, Patel (P-8). In detail, she recounts the events narrated by A.L.R. that Respondent Dunckley makes her feel "uncomfortable and weird." She further "believes it may be a little sexual in nature." Moreover, she explained that the touching often occurs when the class watches a movie in class or while she is on the computer. Specifically, A.L.R. adds that she told Respondent Dunckley "to stop touching her." Nonetheless, she reports that it continues to occur. Lastly, she related to School Counselor Patel that "they [the students] feel like he is staring at them." Thus, "they move their desk and seats so they can see him." Based on the foregoing, these collective recollections are consistent with their testimonies at the arbitration hearing. Accordingly, such specific details comport with Charge II, Counts 1 through 5.

CHARGE III

CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER, AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE FOR DISMISSAL RELATEDTO RESPONDENT'S RECURRENT PATTERN OF MISCONDUCT

Charge III focuses upon Background Information of Charge I and II as set forth by Dr. McGann, the superintendent. Thus, he draws a nexus between prior behavior of Respondent Dunckley and these current charges. In particular, he focuses on the similarity of Respondent Dunckley's conduct in the school year 2009-2010 involving two (2), then-minor female students, J.W. and A.R. During a series of incidents, it was alleged that Respondent Dunckley inappropriately touched their hair; stroked their shoulders, arms and back. Although both girls asked the Respondent to stop, the record reflects that it continued. As a consequence, A.R. was removed from his class. The school psychologist, Dr. Dempsey, wrote of these incidents in P-11. His analysis of these incidents was that this consisted of the "same pattern of abusive behavior" that was displayed by Respondent Dunckley with said students. Moreover, Dr. Dempsey in P-11 concluded that Respondent Dunckley displayed a "persistent and ongoing pattern of hostile bullying behavior towards children ...." In sum, Dr. Dempsey states that there was "compelling evidence" to suggest that he was "sexualizing the student-teacher relationship."

In P-15, Director Swierc states that Respondent Dunckley was to be "counseled about appropriate parent-teacher interaction." This was referring to the series of 2009 incidents regarding J.W. and A.R.

P-16 reflects Principal Allshouse's recollection of events of 2009-2010 involved the same students. At that juncture, Principal Allshouse "removed the two students from Mr. Dunckley's classes to eliminate the possibility of future issues." This memo was dated January 8, 2010. Notwithstanding being counseled and warned, the present charges of 2014-2015 constitutes a continuing pattern of conduct unbecoming a staff member. As such, the conduct exhibited by Respondent Dunckley was emotionally damaging to the students who were inappropriately touched by him.

In response to the Respondent's argument that Charge III does not provide "plain notice" or that the charge lacks specificity, this Arbitrator must disagree. To the contrary, the charge sets forth that it compasses the totality of conduct of Respondent Dunckley. It also specifically deals with a pattern of conduct, where background information provided by Dr. McGann regarding prior conduct can be considered in deliberating at the penalty stage. Accordingly, Charge III is viable and shall not be dismissed for the above reasons. Thus, West New York v. Bock, 38 NJ 500 (1962) was correctly applied to our case on this issue.

OMISSION TO TESTIFY AND ADMISSIONS

Since Respondent Dunckley chose not to testify in his own defense, it is necessary to more carefully analyze his responses to specific questions posed in the Answer. As to Charge I, Count 1, Respondent Dunckley "admits" that on "one occasion he touched T.A. on the leg when her leg was upon on a desk." He also "admits that he would praise students by touching them on the shoulder" or "to get the student to pay attention." However, he adds that "it was never sexual."

As to Charge I, Count 2, the Respondent Dunckley denies using the word "buddy." However, he "did state to the mother that T.A., as compared to other students age-wise, [T.A.] was more mature."

As to Charge I, Count 3 and Count 4, Respondent Dunckley denies these allegations "except on March 25, 2015, when T.A. was not paying attention, he did touch her arm." He also "admits" that "T.A." stated "at that time, 'Don't touch me'."

As to Charge I, Count 5 and Count 6, Respondent Dunckley denies because he was suspended on April 10th. Thus, he was not in school the last two (2) months of school.

As to Charge II, Count 1, Respondent Dunckley admits stating that "I don't touch kids." However, he denies Count 2, Count 3, Count 4, and Count 5 of Charge II. As to Charge III, Respondent Dunckley also denies these allegations in full.

At variance to Respondent Dunckley's responses above, A.L.R. tells the New Jersey Department of Children and Families, dated May 16, 2013 (D-3 at 11), the following: "He touched her [shoulder and leg]" "maybe more than 10 times, like twice a week ...." When asked by Investigator Nuñez, whether A.L.R. saw him touch anyone else in the class. A.L.R. responded, Yes, "My friend, T.A." She then responds that "he does the same thing to me but sometimes he touches her thigh." When further questioned as to when this occurred, A.L.R. responded as follows: "It was when we had our feet up on the desk and he touched her [T.A.'s] thigh and asked her if she was OK." It is important to note that D-3, a composite of several persons who were investigated, also corroborates T.A. and A.L.R.'s version of events by the school guidance counselor Patel as well as the social worker Dafgek. As noted earlier and again in D-3, the school psychologist makes negative assessments concerning the Respondent Dunckley's chronic misbehavior and he validates the testimony of A.L.R. and T.A.

In response to the Respondent's argument that T.A. and A.L.R. are not credible witnesses, this Arbitrator must disagree based upon the specific questions answered and corroborated by the school guidance counselor, social worker, school psychologist, as well as other elementary teachers. Although the Respondent rightly points out that they are close friends, this Arbitrator does not find that the allegations of A.L.R. and T.A. were untrue.

In regards to the Respondent's witnesses, Classroom Aide Ciampitti and Aide Bartholomew, the record reflects that neither were employed in Spring of 2015, the timing of these events. Since they were not physically present, both were unable to offer viable evidence to counter the Petitioner's witnesses. As to the Respondent's student witness, C.P., she testified favorably but seemed emotionally intimidated by Respondent Dunckley; afraid to offend him. Thus, her testimony also was not viable to his case. Although Principal Allshouse stopped by twice a week to observe, the exact timing of this misconduct did not occur during these exact intervals. Thus, his testimony does not rebut these occurrences of the misconduct.

In response to the Respondent's argument that to consider the 2009 incident, when Principal Allshouse did not impose a formal charge, constitutes a breach of industrial double jeopardy, this Arbitrator must again disagree. That is, Charge III specifically states "Respondent's recurrent pattern of misconduct." Thus, Dr. McGann had a right to set forth the analysis of prior misconduct exhibited in the 2009 incident. Respondent Dunckley was counseled and warned not to engage in similar misconduct of inappropriate touching (see P-31). Nonetheless, this misconduct continued and escalated and eventually culminates in his behavior with A.L.R. and T.A. in the 2014-2015 school year. It is also important to note that the withholding of one's salary increment and concurrently filing tenure charges is a part of the broad, continuing spectrum of progressive disciplinary actions since such actions do not impose separate penalties, thus industrial double jeopardy will again not apply. Here, Superintendent McGann in P-31 specifically noted the following:

> The Rockaway Board of Education voted on August 31, 2015 to withhold your employment and salary increment for the upcoming year. Therefore, your salary will be frozen during the 2015-2016 school year and will not be reinstated unless action by the Board to do so is taken in the future. Additionally, the Board is determined to continue your present suspension with pay pending further investigation and possible disciplinary action.

Accordingly, this is one transactional act, but divided into two (2) parts, as noted above. Thus, In the Matter of John Carolmagro v. School District of Hillside, supra is not applicable. In concurrence with the analysis of this Arbitrator regarding industrial double jeopardy, see Arbitrator De Treux's input on this topic, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Richard Graffanino River Dell Regional School District, Bergen County, New Jersey, Agency Docket No: 233-9/13 at 25-26, January 31, 2014.

In response to the Petitioner's request for the utilization of an adverse inference, this Arbitrator must agree. Since Respondent Dunckley chose not to testify, it is fair to make a legitimate inference that he likely fears exposure to adverse facts which would be unfavorable to his case. This natural inference is clearly supported by In the State v. Clawans, 28 NJ 162 at 170-171(1962), New Jersey's highest court. Although Clawans is a criminal case, this principle is equally applicable to civil cases, as here.

PREVAILING CASE LAW REGARDING CHARGE I, CHARGE II, AND CHARGE III AND THE APPROPRIATE PENALTY

A case directly on point is: In the Matter of the Tenure of Marvin Davis and the School District of Asbury Park, Monmouth County, New Jersey, op. cit., Arbitrator Symonette, Esq., May 15, 2014. In that case, a school custodian was charged with conduct unbecoming a staff member when he continued to touch the hair of several young female students against their will. The custodian made this admission by way of an investigation on June 13, 2013 during an interview. This was the basis of Specification 6, the Admission. However, in the Answer, the custodian denied the charges. That is, he claimed that he did not engage conduct unbecoming and that he did not engage in inappropriate physical contact with young female students.

Two (2) students corroborated the testimony of J.R. Also, J.R.'s mother witnessed the incident which she reported to the District. The Arbitrator in that case dismissed Davis, the school custodian, although he was remorseful and promised not to engage in such behavior again. It is important to note that there was at least one (1) prior incident of this recurrent misconduct before this current case came to fruition of the respondent custodian's proclivity to engage in inappropriate touching, when the students told him to stop.

Comparing the Davis case to our current case with Respondent Dunckley, both cases dealt with inappropriate touching of young girls who described such misconduct as acts which made them feel "uncomfortable" and "weird." Both respondents had engaged in prior misconduct, involving the same acts of repeated inappropriate touching of female students. Both respondents were warned before tenure charges were brought by their Districts. Clearly, the admission of the respondent custodian differs from our case with Respondent Dunckley. However, Respondent Dunckley made some limited admissions in his responses to the Answer, as noted earlier. Both respondents were asked to stop their behavior towards these young girls, but such misconduct continued. In the Davis case, supra, the respondent testified in his own defense and expressed regret and remorse. With our case, Respondent Dunckley chose not to testify nor did he rebut the findings of the school psychologist, Dr. Dempsey, on the traumatic harm that his misconduct caused the students, T.A. and A.L.R.

In regards to the appropriate penalty, it is helpful to analyze In the Matter of Colon v. New York Department of Education, Docket Number: 118161/2009, decided upon by this Arbitrator. In that case, Respondent Colon, a special education teacher, was charged with verbal and corporal abuse of her students. She was a long-term employee who was charged with a total of eighteen (18) Specifications of misconduct. This Arbitrator upheld Specifications 1, 2, 4, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17, but Specifications 3, 5, 8, 12, and 18 were dismissed. This Arbitrator discharged Respondent Colon due to the severity and the egregiousness of the collective charges, notwithstanding her unblemished record.

Comparing the Colon's holding to our case, both dealt with the physical touching and abuse of special education students from a teacher on multiple occasions. Although Respondent Dunckley was not formally charged in the 2009 incident, the record reflects that he was counseled and warned of this continuing misconduct. Moreover, it is important to note that prior misconduct can be considered at the penalty stage, as here. Due to the egregious nature of these collective acts of 2009 and culminating in the misconduct of 2014-2015, the penalty of dismissal is not excessive. As the appellate court held in the Colon case, supra, "the penalty of termination is not shocking to the conscience." This Arbitrator, in particular, credits the graphic testimony of Dr. Dempsey, the school psychologist, in his analysis of the continuing harm upon T.A. and A.L.R. in reaching the conclusion of dismissal.

Lastly, the case also akin to the Davis and Colon cases is: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of George McClelland, School District Washington Township, Mercer County, New Jersey, No. Edu: 5284-82: Agency No: 130-4/82A, ALJ Erickson, February 10, 1983. Respondent McClelland was charged with inappropriate behavior with minor female students, which included: reciprocal hugging, touching and caressing of these students. All of these allegations were corroborated by school personnel and students. Although Respondent McClelland testified and denied these allegations, the evidence was substantially against him. Finally, it was the Commissioner of Education, on March 25, 1983, who dismissed him. As with the other respondents in Davis and here, Respondent McClelland had been warned to cease such misconduct. Accordingly, the penalty of removal was appropriate.

AWARD

Respondent Dunckley is hereby terminated with just cause due to the substantial, credible evidence presented against him. Charge I, Counts 1 through 6, is sustained. Charge II, Counts 1 through 5, is sustained. Charged III is also sustained for reasons set forth in the Award.

AFFIRMATION

I, Dr. Andrée McKissick, do hereby affirm that I am the individual described in and who executed this instrument, which is my Opinion and Award.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners challenged the March 2014 action of the respondent, the Gloucester County Institute of Technology (GCIT), denying J.S. entry into the school's Fall 2014 Cosmetology Program based on petitioner's failure to meet the eligibility criteria. The respondent filed a motion for summary decision, seeking dismissal of the petition on the grounds that petitioner failed to file within the ninety-day time limit for the filing of appeals, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Petitioner claimed, inter alia, that the respondent's action was a denial of equal protection of the laws under the U.S. and N.J. constitutions, and sought a waiver of the time restriction based upon this argument.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the petitioner had notice of the Board's determination denying J.S. admission into the cosmetology program on March 15, 2014, but did not file the petition until November 26, 2014 – well beyond the ninety-day time frame set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i); the facts in this case show that GCIT properly determined that J.S. did not meet the school's admission criteria for the cosmetology program; GCIT did not act in an arbitrary or capricious manner in considering J.S.'s eligibility for the program; and petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to a waiver of the 90-day time limit for the filing of an appeal. The ALJ concluded that the within petition was not timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i); accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision, and dismissed the petition.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ; accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition was dismissed.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioners and the Gloucester County Institute of Technology's (GCIT) reply thereto.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the petition of appeal was time barred under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Although it is undisputed that the petition was filed well beyond the 90-day limitations period, the petitioners maintain that the 90-day period should be relaxed because this matter involves constitutional issues of public concern. Despite their claim to the contrary, the petitioners have failed to present any exceptional circumstances that might justify a finding that strictly adhering to the 90-day rule would result in injustice. Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Tp., 131 N.J. 572, 590 (1993); N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16. The Commissioner is also not persuaded that the exceptions submitted by the petitioners dictate a different result, as the arguments advanced by the petitioners in their exceptions were considered and fully addressed by the ALJ in the Initial Decision.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is dismissed.[1]

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner A.S. and M.S. o/b/o J.S. (J.S.) challenges the March 14, 2014, action of respondent Gloucester County Institute of Technology (GCIT) denying petitioner, a seventh grader at the time of the application, a place in the Fall 2014 Cosmetology

Program. Respondent denied petitioner one of 350 places based upon petitioner's failure to rank sufficiently to meet the eligibility criteria. That criteria is based upon the applicant's: i.) declaration of career focus, ii.) attendance profile, iii.) academic record, and iv.) standardized assessment. Other criteria require a shadow visit. Petitioner opposes the respondent's denial as a denial of equal protection of the laws under the Federal and New Jersey Constitution, and a denial of a Free Access to Public Education (FAPE) in the Least Restrictive Environment (LRE), based upon GCIT's failure to consider petitioner's status as a student entitled to an Individual Education Plan (IEP). Respondent raises grounds for the dismissal of the petition herein based upon a failure of petitioner to file a petition within ninety days of the action of GCIT, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(4)(i). Petitioner seeks a waiver of the time restriction based upon the equal protection argument. Respondent maintains that it processes applications based upon a procedure authorized under N.J.A.C. 6A:19-2.3(b). Respondent maintains that petitioner must show by a preponderance of the evidence that the admission procedure is arbitrary or capricious.

On January 7, 2015, the New Jersey State Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-8.2. The respondent moved for summary decision, seeking dismissal of the petition. Petitioner opposed said motion. The record on the application for summary disposition closed on November 4, 2015. The Acting Director and Chief Administrative Law Judge granted extensions of time for the Initial Decision on December 18, 2015, February 3, 2016, and March 21, 2016.

DISCUSSION

Initially, I note that petitioner provided no certification or affidavit in opposition to the respondent's motion in this matter. For this record, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) will rely on respondent's excerpts of petitioner's August 20, 2015, certified answers to interrogatories, and the initial eight paragraph Petitioner's Request for Hearing[1]. The pertinent paragraphs of the petition are three, four, five, six and seven. Paragraph three identifies J.S. as a special education student. Paragraph four claims that GCIT refused to consider all relevant documents (the IEP) in making its admission decision as to J.S. Paragraph five claims that GCIT failed to properly communicate with A.S. and M.S. regarding the process. Paragraph six claims that GCIT failed to properly maintain student records related to J.S. and failed to provide same to A.S. and M.S. Paragraph seven claims that as a result of the denial of admission to the cosmetology program, GCIT denied J.S. a FAPE in the LRE. Petitioner in interrogatory answer thirteen, acknowledges the rejection letter on March 15, 2013. Petitioner in interrogatory answer twenty-four, acknowledged that GCIT advised her that they processed applications through a rubric and did not look at an applicant's IEP's until after it determined acceptance. That answer went on to identify the percentage of students that were special education over the last few years. The percentage totals approximately fourteen percent, or somewhere between forty to fifty special education students per year, 166 of a total enrollment of 1,286. That interrogatory answer claims that GCIT "may use" the IEP to screen the students; it also claims that A.S. believes that J.S. "should be exempt from the process and eligible for a placement based on the fact that she has and (sic) IEP."

Michael C. Dicken (Dicken) is the superintendent of the GCIT, and familiar with the admission process. He swears that annually there are approximately 950 applicants for 350 positions at GCIT. The admission criteria looks to the items identified above and the final grades from 7th grade and the first marking period of 8th grade; guidance assessment and application. GCIT does contact the guidance office of the local school for necessary student records, including IEP's, child study team records and the 504 plan, if any. Only after an affirmative decision is made on accepting an applicant does GCIT review an IEP or similar records. Dicken testified that the admission criteria is the same for all applicants, J.S. did not receive an affirmative placement but wait listed.

[1] Note that this document is signed by counsel and the petitioner's parents. However, petitioner's parents did not make a certification or verification of the statements contained therein. They appeared to have sworn to the statements made therein. However, the format does not show that they were administered an oath. Further, the statements made are to the best of their knowledge and belief. See N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4(a)

FACTS

The following facts are not disputed, and I FIND:

1. On October 1, 2013, J.S. applied for admission at GCIT in its cosmology program. On March 14, 2014, J.S. received notification of her placement on the wait list. On November 26, 2014, more than ninety days after March 14, 2016, J.S., through her parents, requested a hearing on GCIT's denial of admission to J.S.

2. GCIT applied its admission standard to J.S.'s application without consideration of J.S.'s disability, based on J.S.'s stated career focus, her academic and attendance records, and standardized testing. This resulted in a denial of admission. GCIT wait listed J.S., however, no placement became available.

3. The petitioner recognizes that approximately fourteen percent of the student body, represents special education students accepted at GCIT.

ADDITIONAL FACTS FOUND

Based upon the review of respondent's certification and moving papers including excerpts of the certified answers to interrogatories, and the request for hearing, I FIND the following as additional FACTS:

4. Petitioner's certified answer to interrogatory twenty-four, makes an unsupported claim that GCIT "may use" an IEP as a screen mechanism.

4. Petitioner presented no evidence of the denial of admission to J.S. based upon the equal protection of the law.

5. Petitioner presented no evidence of arbitrary or capricious actions of the respondent in its decision to deny J.S. a placement at GCIT.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Summary decision, or as it is known in judicial matters, summary judgment, is a well-recognized procedure for resolving cases in which the facts that are crucial to the determination of the matters at issue are not actually in dispute and the application to that set of material facts of the applicable law and standard of proof lead to a determination of the case without the necessity of a hearing at which evidence and testimony need be taken. The procedure is equally applicable in judicial and executive-branch administrative cases. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. The standards for deciding motions for summary decision are contained in Judson v. People's Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74–75 (1954). The Supreme Court later elaborated on the motion and its standard in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995). Under the Brill standard, as in Judson, a motion for summary decision may only be granted where there is no "genuine issue" of "material fact." The determination as to whether genuine issues of material fact exist is made after a "discriminating search" of the record, consisting as it may of affidavits, certifications, documentary exhibits and any other evidence filed by the movant and any such evidence filed in response to the motion, with all reasonable inferences arising from the evidence being accorded to the opponent of the motion. In order to defeat the motion, the opposing party must establish the existence of "genuine" issues of material fact. The facts upon which the party opposing the motion relies to defeat the motion must be something more than "facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious.'" Judson, supra, 17 N.J. at 75 (citations omitted). The Brill decision focuses on the analytical procedure for determining whether a purported issue of material fact is "genuine" or is of an "insubstantial nature." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 530. Brill concludes that the same analytical process used to decide motions for a directed verdict is used to resolve summary-decision motions. "[T]he essence of the inquiry in each is the same: 'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law.'" Id. at 536 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251–52, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 214 (1986)). In searching the proffered evidence to decide the motion, the judge must be guided by the applicable substantive evidentiary standard of proof, that is, the "burden of persuasion" that would apply at trial on the merits, whether that is the preponderance-of-the-evidence standard or the clear-and-convincing-evidence standard. If a careful review under this standard establishes that no reasonable fact finder could resolve the disputed facts in favor of the party opposing the motion, then the uncontradicted facts thus established can be examined in the light of the applicable substantive law to determine whether or not the movant is clearly entitled to judgment as a matter of law. However, where the proofs in the record are such that "reasonable minds could differ" as to the material facts, then the motion must be denied and a full evidentiary hearing held. Id. at 535 (citation omitted). Here, the petitioner's proofs are severely lacking in evidential value.

The certified answer to interrogatory only suggests that the GCIT "may use" the IEP as a screening mechanism. This statement is belied by the fact that approximately fourteen percent of the student body at GCIT fall into the classification of special education students. Petitioner posits that J.S. "should be exempt from the process and eligible for a placement based on the fact that she has and (sic) IEP" However, petitioner provides no analysis as to the scoring of the group of special education students that were admitted to GCIT. Petitioner has had opportunity to attempt to seek this information through discovery. If obtained, petitioner's certification would have brought to the attention of this tribunal something to analyze, factually. In the absence of such information, petitioner does not show that J.S.'s denial violated the equal protection of the laws of the Federal or New Jersey State constitution.

Even if a factual showing demonstrated a questionable action, a petitioner must show that the action of the admission unit had to be arbitrary and capricious. Discretionary actions of a local board of education "may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294-96 (App. Div. 1960). "In order to satisfy the arbitrary and capricious standard, petitioner must prove that respondent acted in either bad faith or in disregard to the circumstances." T.B.M. v. Moorestown Bd. of Educ., EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Petitioner, has not alleged any factual information to support a finding that GCIT's actions were arbitrary or capricious. The petitioner's position that J.S.'s denial of admission to the GCIT cosmology program, is arbitrary and capricious without any factual basis for the position, cannot support such a conclusion.

The petitioner requests a waiver of the ninety-day rule under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(4)(i) to bring the petition out of time as a result of a constitutional question that will affect others than J.S.

Petitioner acknowledged that the GCIT determination occurred on March 15, 2014, J.S. filed the petition on November 26, 2014, eight months after notice of the decision. Petitioner has not demonstrated that any constitutional question exists. Nor is there any explanation of the delay. To relax the ninety-day rule the circumstances must be exceptional or the reason must be compelling. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16. Respondent cites Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley Twp., 131 N.J. 572,590 (1993); and DeMaio v. New Providence Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 449, 453, in support of their position. These cases involved employment/tenure rights not special education situations but, there is no meaningful distinction in the areas of law covered.

Respondent has addressed the New Jersey Attorney General's Office position requiring the Cape May School District consider admissions without consideration of special education status of the applicant. Specifically, respondent argues that to include special education into the admission criteria would inappropriately bring into consideration a criteria fraught with allegations of discriminatory action either for or against a special education student. The present criteria respondent argues is neutral, and does not violate the law.

The Commissioner of Education promulgated N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(4)(i), as requiring a petition be brought within ninety days of notice of the action. J.S. did not do that here. J.S did not substantiate any exceptional or compelling reasons for the failure to file. Further, J.S. did not demonstrate on the record a constitutional question this tribunal can address.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that the GCIT properly exercised its right to determine the admission status of J.S. under its admission criteria.

I CONCLUDE that J.S. did not bring facts to the attention of the tribunal that a constitutional question exists.

I CONCLUDE that GCIT's did not act in an arbitrary or capricious manner to the detriment of J.S.

I CONCLUDE petitioner is barred by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(4)(i), from bringing this petition out of time.

I CONCLUDE petitioner has failed to demonstrate that she is entitled to a waiver of the time period of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(4)(i).

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED, and petitioner's petition is DISMISSED and DENIED in all respects. This Initial Decision disposes of all issues in controversy in this matter.

SYNOPSIS

The petitioner challenged the determination of the respondent Board that B.A. was not the victim of harassment, intimidation or bullying (HIB) under the provisions of the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 to -32.1 (the Act). The Board contended that the incident in question constituted student conflict and did not meet the definition of HIB pursuant to the Act. The parties filed cross-motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the main issue for resolution in this case is whether the Board's finding that there was no HIB was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; the Act applies to any gesture, or any written, verbal or physical act, or any electronic communication – whether it be a single incident or a series of incidents – that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by an actual or perceived characteristic, such as, inter alia: race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or any other distinguishing characteristic; in the instant matter, the petitioner alleged that there had been intermittent incidents involving a group of friends that B.A. perceived to be harassment, beginning in 2013 – when the girls were in sixth grade – after B.A. was invited to a birthday party when the other friends were not, and culminating in a January 2015 incident involving B.A.'s lunch bag allegedly being kicked out of a classroom and then pushed back in; the Board's investigation into the allegations was inconclusive as to the intent of the girls involved, and not all of the girls involved in the January 2015 incident had been involved in prior alleged incidents; further, there were no allegations that a distinguishing characteristic of B.A., either actual or perceived, motivated any of the conduct by the girls. The ALJ concluded that it was reasonable for the Board to conclude that the circumstances in this case – which certainly showed personal conflict between B.A. and the other girls, but not conduct based on any distinguishing characteristic of the victim – did not rise to the level of HIB. Accordingly, the Board's motion for summary decision was granted, the petitioner's cross motion was denied, and the petition was dismissed.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusion of the ALJ; accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner R.A., on behalf of minor child B.A., appeals respondent Hamilton Township Board of Education's (Board's) determination that B.A. was not the victim of harassment, intimidation or bullying (HIB) under the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act, (Anti-Bullying Act or ABA), N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 to -32.1.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On February 28, 2015, the respondent's anti-bullying specialist, Ms. Hart, submitted her investigation report to the Board at its public meeting. The Board concluded that the incident in question was student conflict and thus did not meet the definition of an incident of HIB under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. Thereafter, petitioner requested a hearing before the Board regarding its determination. On March 25, 2015, the Board of Education conducted a closed-session hearing. Following the hearing, the Board affirmed the superintendent's decision that the petitioner was not a victim of HIB per the Act. On June 22, 2015, petitioner filed an appeal with the Department of Education's Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, which filed it with the Office of Administrative Law on July 16, 2015.

The Board filed a motion for summary decision with exhibits with the undersigned on January 27, 2016. Petitioner filed a cross-motion for summary decision and a response to the Board's motion for summary decision on February 1, 2016. The Board filed a reply brief in opposition on February 4, 2016. On February 10, 2016, I held oral argument.

ISSUE

The issue is whether the Board's determination that the conduct petitioner complained of did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14 was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

STIPULATED FACTS

1. During the 2014–15 school year, B.A. was an eighth-grade student in Crockett Middle School.

2. Crockett Middle School is one of three middle schools under the control of the Hamilton Township Board of Education.

3. This matter arises from a Petition of Appeal filed by B.A. wherein petitioner seeks to reverse the finding of respondent that B.A. was not subject to HIB. (Exhibit M.)

4. Respondent, per its statutory obligation, adopted Board Policy 5512, which sets forth: the definition of HIB; the procedures for making a complaint of HIB; the procedures for investigation of a complaint of HIB; and the Board's obligations to respond to a complaint of HIB. (Exhibit A.)

5. Petitioner initiated a complaint of HIB through her mother, R.A., via email on January 13, 2015, when she emailed Roger Bigos, Crockett Middle School principal; Charles Eyster, teacher; Beth Maddalon, guidance counselor; Donna Sarver, guidance counselor; and Sue Niedrach, substance awareness counselor. (Exhibit B.) R.A. previously complained of bullying in June 2013 to guidance counselor Beth Maddalon when students threw a blown-up paper bag in B.A.'s face and called her names. B.A. explained that such acts started after she was invited to a birthday party when other students, J.S., M.D., M.M. and C.R., were not.

6. R.A. indicated that petitioner had been subjected to bullying by other female students, M.M., C.R., and J.S., for the past two years. (Exhibit B.)

7. Petitioner did not file an HIB complaint relative to the alleged incidents during the prior two years.

8. Beth Maddalon, guidance counselor at Crockett Middle School, documented her recollection of the prior years' events. (Exhibit C.)

9. Ms. Maddalon recalled that at the end of April of B.A.'s sixth-grade year, B.A. advised that her friends were upset with her for having attended the birthday party of another girl, H., who attends Reynolds Middle School. B.A. went to the party and her friends attended a Trenton Thunder game. B.A. said that her friends were texting her and H. during the party, being sarcastic, and that someone drove them past the party and that they honked the horn while driving by. B.A. claimed she was confronted by the girls and that some name-calling occurred. (Exhibit C.)

10. Ms. Maddalon interviewed the other girls and they admitted to texting, but indicated it was along the lines of "Happy Birthday. I hope you had fun." The girls also admitted that they were driven by the home and the horn was honked, but it was done to say "Hi." The girls claimed that B.A. ignored them at the bus stop the next day. Finally, the girls denied any name-calling. (Exhibit C.)

11. There were no allegations that a distinguishing characteristic of B.A., actual or perceived, motivated any of the conduct by the girls.

12. An HIB complaint was not filed by petitioner. Thus, an HIB investigation did not occur. However, petitioner disputes that the policy requires that the students or their parents file a written HIB complaint for an investigation to be mandated. (Exhibit C.)

13. During the following school year, Donna Sarver was the guidance counselor for B.A. (Exhibit C.) In or about February 2014, it was conveyed to Ms. Sarver that two of the girls who were friends with both B.A. and the other group of girls felt "put in the middle." Ms. Sarver made an attempt to get B.A. and M.M. on good terms, but was unaware of the incident during the prior school year. (Exhibit C.)

14. In an email of February 25, 2014, R.A. contacted Ms. Sarver, expressed her dissatisfaction with Ms. Sarver's involvement in the situation, and advised that she did not want B.A. to be friends with M.M. or J.S. under any circumstances. (Exhibit D.)

15. Also in or around February 2014, B.A. wanted to share her situation at the Bully Free Friends Night. Ms. Maddalon advised Sue Niedrach that this would not be a good idea because it would cause the other girls and their parents to be upset. (Exhibit C.)

16. Although R.A. did not want her daughter to speak at the Bully Free Friends Night either, she wrote that she would not discourage her daughter from speaking, on the belief that it was an outlet for her to confront the situation and become a stronger person. (Exhibit D.)

17. In R.A.'s email of February 25, 2014, R.A. directed that the counselors not request B.A. to be friends with any of the girls—J.S., M.M., M.D., and C.R. Further, she directed that the counselors not speak with B.A. regarding the issues with the girls because it pulled her out of valuable class instructional time. Finally, R.A. indicated that she instructed B.A. not to have any further contact with the two girls that found it "difficult" to be friends. (Exhibit D.)

18. In January 2015, R.A. submitted a complaint via email indicating that B.A. had ignored the "glaring stares" during the year, but that on January 13, 2015, B.A. alleged that the three students stomped and kicked her lunch. (Exhibit B.)

19. Upon receipt of the complaint, Principal Bigos directed Drew Acquaviva, vice principal, to investigate the incident. (Exhibit E.)

20. Vice Principal Acquaviva, along with Ms. Maddalon and Christine Hart, anti-bullying specialist, met with B.A. on the morning of January 14, 2015. (Exhibit E.)

21. At the meeting, B.A. described the incident and her observations, including that she was in the lavatory when the lunch bag was kicked into the hallway and then pushed back into the room. (Exhibit E.)

22. Following the meeting with B.A., Vice Principal Acquaviva and the others met and interviewed all students involved in the incident. (Exhibit E.)

23. Later on January 14, 2015, during lunch, B.A. alleged that M.D. engaged in name-calling in the hallway. (Exhibit E.)

24. Mr. Acquaviva writes in his memorandum that he reviewed the tape of the hallway and determined that an exchange between B.A. and the alleged harasser did not take place. Further, Mr. Acquaviva documented that he spoke to a "friend" of B.A.'s that allegedly witnessed the incident who denied that anything was said. (Exhibit E.)

25. Similarly, Principal Bigos writes in his memorandum that he spoke with B.A.'s friend and that she said that she did not hear anything. (Exhibit N.)

26. Per Board Policy 5512, Ms. Hart, conducted an investigation and memorialized same in a written report dated January 16, 2015, and submitted to Principal Bigos on January 21, 2015. (Exhibit F.)[1]

27. On January 14, 2015, R.A. filled out the HIB Report. (Exhibit F.)

28. B.A.'s written statement of the events is set forth at Exhibit G.

29. The written statements of the seven witnesses/alleged harassers, M.M., C.R., C.L., J.S., M.D., S.L., and O.D., are attached at Exhibit H.

30. Students M.M., C.R., C.L., J.S., S.L., and O.D. uniformly indicated that M.M. and C.L. were in Mr. Eyster's room to see their other friends. At that time, petitioner was not in the room. After a few minutes, M.M. and C.L. tried to leave

[1] By agreement of counsel with the involvement of the judge via phone conference, the complete report was provided to petitioner on or about November 30, 2015, with the understanding that the contents thereof are confidential. However, due to the State privacy regulations related to student records and confidentiality of student records under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act, only the redacted report is submitted with this motion.

when another student, G., held the door, preventing them from leaving. M.M. and C.L. pushed the door from one side while G. held the door on the other. At some point, G. relented and M.M. and C.L. lost their balance, causing C.L. to kick a brown paper bag, later identified as B.A.'s lunch, out of the room. C.L. then used her foot to push the bag back into Mr. Eyster's room. (Exhibit H.)

31. With regard to the second alleged incident occurring on January 14, 2015, student M.D. indicated in her statement that C.L. saw B.A. in the hall and related that she was called down to B house, and that B.A. had told her mother about C.L. tripping over B.A.'s lunch. (Exhibit I.)

32. B.A. identified to Mr. Acquaviva another student, S., as a "friend" that allegedly witnessed the name-calling by M.D. As referenced in Mr. Acquaviva's March 16, 2015, memorandum, he spoke to S. regarding the incident of January 14, 2015, and she indicated that the alleged harassers "did not say anything." (Exhibit E.)

33. Prior to the submission of the investigation to the Board of Education, B.A. withdrew from Crockett Middle School.

34. On February 28, 2015, Ms. Hart's investigation report was provided to the Board of Education at its public meeting. The conclusion was that the incident in question was student conflict and thus did not meet the definition of an incident of HIB under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14.

35. Thereafter, petitioner requested a hearing before the Board of Education relative to the determination.

36. On March 25, 2015, the Board of Education conducted a closed-session hearing. The Board first heard from Christine Hart and Drew Acquaviva, and then heard from B.A. and R.A. (Exhibit J.)

37. R.A. provided the Board with a packet of materials, attached hereto as Exhibit K.[2]

38. Following the hearing, the Board affirmed the superintendent's decision that B.A. was not a victim of HIB per the statute. (Exhibit L.)

ADDITIONAL FACTS

R.A. clarified some of the facts set forth in the Board's statement of facts. At the time of the initial alleged bullying incident, Ms. Maddalon spoke to the students involved. (See Tab 1 to R.A.'s Certification (e-mail from F.S., parent of J.S., regarding Maddalon's inquiry into bullying accusations).) B.A. discussed with guidance counselor Beth Maddalon that her friends were upset with her because she had refused an invitation to a ball game to go to a party instead. She explained to Ms. Maddalon that they had sent her inappropriate texts, driven past the party, and honked and called her names. The other girls admitted to driving past the party, but denied calling B.A. names. (See Carrigg Cert., Exhibit C at BA 194; R.A. Cert., Tab 1 at 2.)

R.A. provided independent third-party corroboration of the birthday-party incident to the Board. (See R.A. Cert., Tab 1 at 4.) However, Ms. Maddalon did not commence a bullying investigation because "Mrs. A. did not file official HIB paperwork," and she unilaterally determined that this was a "conflict and not an incident of [HIB]." (See Carrigg Cert., Exhibit N at 1.)

Hamilton's policy requires an employee who receives a verbal report of bullying to submit a report in writing to the principal within two days. (See Carrigg Cert., Exhibit A.) Ms. Maddalon did not submit a written report to the principal, and, thus, did not follow Hamilton's HIB policy in June 2013.

[2] Respondent withheld a portion of the packet to maintain student confidentiality. Petitioner has supplied the additional fourteen pages so that Exhibit K is the complete copy of documents provided to the Board.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(a), a party may move for summary decision upon all or any of the substantive issues in a contested case prior to a hearing. A motion for summary decision shall be granted where the papers and discovery together with affidavits show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). When a motion for summary decision is made and supported, an adverse party, in order to prevail, must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue that can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. Ibid. In the present case, although petitioner denied some of the statements of fact submitted by the Board, both parties agreed that there were no genuine issues of material fact and that the case was ripe for summary decision, and I so CONCLUDE.

That issue having been resolved, the main issue for resolution is whether the Board's finding of no HIB was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, in light of the information that the Board possessed when it made its determination. The HIB Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14, sets forth:

> "Harassment, intimidation or bullying" means any gesture, any written, verbal or physical act, or any electronic communication, whether it be a single incident or a series of incidents, that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory disability, or by any other distinguishing characteristic, that takes place on school property, at any school-sponsored function, on a school bus, or off school grounds as provided for in section 16 of P.L.2010, c.122 (C.18A:37-15.3), that substantially disrupts or interferes with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of other students and that:
>
> > a. a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of physically or emotionally harming a student or damaging the student's property, or placing a student in reasonable fear of physical or > emotional harm to his person or damage to his property;

>
> b. has the effect of insulting or demeaning any student or group of students; or
> c. creates a hostile educational environment for the student by interfering with a student's education or by severely or pervasively causing physical or emotional harm to the student.

The Board argues in its motion for summary decision and oral argument that the investigation into the January 2015 incident was inconclusive as to the intent of the girls. The alleged harassers, not all of whom were involved in the prior alleged incidents, said they had no knowledge of whose lunch it was. Further, there were no allegations that a distinguishing characteristic of B.A., actual or perceived, motivated any of the conduct by the girls. The vice principal, who has no stake in whether there is a finding of HIB, conducted the investigation, but did not conclude that there was bullying. The superintendent recommended this finding to the Board. Thus, the Board argues that it correctly determined that the conduct described and investigated by the Board did not rise to the level of HIB.

Petitioner argues that the "bullies" victimized B.A. because of the distinguishing characteristic that she was invited to a party to which other girls were not invited. (See response to respondent's statement of facts at #11.) She argues that there was a power differential back in June 2013 when B.A. complained about the alleged harassers' conduct. Despite the Board's policy requiring it to conduct an HIB investigation, the Board did nothing. In 2014, the guidance counselor told B.A. to be friends with the girls who were bullying her. By 2015, R.A. argues, the Board had information that B.A. had severe emotional distress and that this was not a mere conflict but a power differential with a negative impact on the student with less power. R.A. urges reference to the Task Force report on bullying rather than the law itself to see that the power imbalance must be considered. She argues that the Board applied the wrong standard. Last, she argues with regard to the name-calling incident that it was wrong for the Board not to preserve the videotape, yet use it against her to say that it did not show what B.A. said it would show. If it was not recorded over for thirty days and B.A. reported the incident the day after, it is unfair not to preserve the videotape, and she argues that an adverse inference should be taken from the failure to preserve it.

In K.L. v. Evesham Township Board of Education, 423 N.J. Super. 337, 351 (App. Div. 2011), the Appellate Division noted that the offending conduct for purposes of HIB must be motivated by a distinguishing characteristic. It noted that the statutory definition of HIB "does not include all violent or aggressive conduct against a student," but it has consistently required that the perceived motivation be a distinguishing characteristic. 423 N.J. Super. at 350–51. The court also provided a summation of what does not constitute HIB:

> Thus, harmful or demeaning conduct motivated only by another reason, for example, a dispute about relationships or personal belongings, or aggressive conduct without identifiable motivation, does not come within the statutory definition of bullying.
> [Id. at 351.]

By its plain terms, the Legislature made clear that courts and school districts should not limit the scope of the statute to the more classic protected characteristics such as race or religion, and they intended instead that the statute apply whenever the harassment at issue was motivated by any distinguishing characteristic of the targeted student. Instead of providing a longer list, the Legislature in the ABR intentionally included a very open-ended phrase, "any other distinguishing characteristic," to signal that the Act would apply to a broad, unlimited range of distinguishing characteristics, so long as the distinguishing characteristic motivated the bully to harass the targeted student.

For example, in J.M.C. ex rel A.C. v. Board of Education of East Brunswick, EDU 04144-12, Initial Decision (November 27, 2012), adopted, Comm'r (January 9, 2013), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, the Commissioner found that a single incident in which a male student was demeaned by a statement that he "danced like a girl" was a violation of the Act because it was an act of bullying based on the distinguishing characteristic of the perception of the targeted student's dancing.

Furthermore, in C.C. ex rel S.C. v. Board of Education of Jefferson, EDU 10872-14 (April 6, 2015), adopted, Comm'r (May 12, 2015), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, the Commissioner ruled that a perception that the targeted student was not a good athlete was sufficient to trigger the protection of the Act. The Commissioner noted that "the HIB statute is intended to drive home the principle that cruel words will not be tolerated in a school environment." Similarly, in W.C.L. and A.L. ex rel L.L. v. Board of Education of Tenafly, EDU 03223-12, Initial Decision (November 26, 2012), adopted, Comm'r (January 10, 2013), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, the Commissioner held that even a single and true comment by a student that the targeted student had dyed her hair because she had head lice violated the statute.

However, courts have addressed situations where an act is not considered to be bullying motivated by a "distinguishing characteristic." In L.B.T. ex rel K.T. v. Board of Education of the Freehold Regional School District, EDU 7894-12 (January 24, 2013), adopted, Comm'r (March 7, 2013), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, there was a mutual dispute between two students about their respective roles on the swim team. The judge held that if a victim was targeted because of a dispute between the two people involved—such as a relationship falling apart between former friends, a fight over a piece of property, or some form of personal vendetta of one against another—such conduct would not be based on a "distinguishing characteristic" of the victim and would not be a violation of the statute. This is because a personal breakdown in the relationship between two students is a mutual non-power-based conflict that is not about a characteristic of the targeted student.

Similarly, here, the factual record shows that there was a history of sporadic conflict between these students. It started with the incident where B.A. told the guidance counselor that her friends were upset with her for attending a birthday party to which they had not been invited. Then, in February 2014, the animosity between B.A. and the other girls resurfaced when two other girls that were friends with both B.A. and the alleged harassers indicated that they felt in the middle of the conflict. The guidance counselor tried to get the girls to talk to each other, which B.A. believed made things worse. As a result of this incident, B.A.'s mother advised the school counselor not to intervene in any issues between B.A. and the girls. Also, B.A.'s mother told B.A. not to try to be friends with the girls that felt like they were in the middle. There were no specific allegations of any distinguishing characteristic at the time.

In the last incident, B.A. alleged that the other girls purposefully kicked her lunch out of the classroom where B.A. was eating. However, B.A. did not actually witness the lunch bag being kicked out of the classroom because she was in the lavatory at the time. The alleged harassers that were present when the lunch was kicked indicated that the bag was kicked accidentally and that they did not know whose bag it was at the time, as they did not see it when they entered the classroom. Petitioner argues that the statements were conflicting, which they were on minor points, but no one corroborated B.A.'s complaint that they purposefully kicked the lunch knowing it was hers. Following the lunch incident, B.A. alleged that M.D. called her a slut in the hallway. However, B.A.'s friend "V." advised the principal that this comment was never made. Later, at the Board hearing, B.A. offered text messages from her friend "V." indicating that "V." did tell Mr. Bigos that M.D. was "saying mean things and bad words about [B.A.]." Although the hallway had a video camera, the videotape did not have audio and the Board did not preserve the tape, as it recycles itself every thirty days.

The events between B.A. and the other female students as set forth do not appear to have been "motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory disability, or by any other distinguishing characteristic." N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14. Although the law originated from the Task Force report, the Legislature made it a requirement that the bullying be based on a distinguishing characteristic, not just a perceived power imbalance. Petitioner is correct that the guidance counselor should have followed up B.A.'s verbal complaint to her in 2013 with a written report to the principal pursuant to the school's HIB policy. However, the outcome would have been the same had she filed the report with the principal, because being invited to a party is not a distinguishing characteristic that is actionable under the Anti-Bullying Act. The last incident, the kicking of the lunch bag, which is the incident that precipitated the official HIB complaint and investigation, also was not motivated by a distinguishing characteristic. The allegations contained in B.A.'s written statements, as well as those gleaned from her mother's email, fail to reference any actual or perceived characteristic. Also, the Board had seven written statements saying that the girls did nothing to harm B.A. The allegation regarding B.A. reporting that the girls called her a bad name in the hallway following the lunch incident also could not be substantiated. B.A. and the alleged aggressors were friends before the incidents complained of, and then the relationship deteriorated when B.A. attended a party to which the other girls were not invited. It was reasonable for the Board to conclude that the circumstances, which certainly showed a conflict between B.A. and the girls, did not rise to the level of bullying.

As noted above, a dispute between students such as a relationship falling apart between former friends, a fight over a piece of property, or some form of personal vendetta of one against another is not conduct based on a "distinguishing characteristic" of the victim and, thus, does not constitute a violation of the Act. This is because a personal breakdown in a relationship between students is a mutual non-power-based conflict that is not about a characteristic of the targeted student. Although petitioner feels that the conflict escalated into a power-based conflict, as the initial girls turned B.A.'s friends against her, there still is no distinguishing characteristic. Further, the administration could not substantiate the alleged act of bullying because B.A. did not witness it herself, and no one who saw the kicking of the lunch supported her belief that the action was directed at her. Petitioner did not allege any "distinguishing characteristic" about which the aggressors were motivated to bully B.A. Therefore, the petitioner has not demonstrated that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Board has demonstrated that there are no facts in dispute and that it is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law. Petitioner has not demonstrated entitlement to judgment as a matter of law. The Board applied the standard in the law that the comments and actions alleged must be motivated by a distinguishing characteristic and not just a perceived power imbalance. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the action of the Board in determining that the conduct does not constitute harassment, intimidation, or bullying within the meaning of the Act was not arbitrary, capricious or against the weight of the evidence.

For the foregoing reasons, I GRANT the Board's motion for summary decision and DENY petitioner's cross-motion for summary decision. The petition is DISMISSED. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter, the proposed settlement agreement, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner notes that the settlement agreement also resolves an Office of Special Education Programs (OSEP) matter which was transmitted to the OAL concurrently with this matter – docketed as EDS 06779-16 – and that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued a Final Decision in that matter on May 11, 2016, approving the terms of the settlement agreement.* As the issues resolved in the settlement agreement were within OSEP's jurisdiction – and as a Final Decision has already been issued approving the settlement terms – there is nothing left for the Commissioner to determine. Accordingly, the case is hereby dismissed as moot.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

| ASHLYNN DIAZ, | : | |
| PETITIONER, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| V. | : | DECISION ON |
| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF WEST NEW YORK, HUDSON COUNTY, | : | APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

In so concurring, however, the Commissioner is compelled to clarify that petitioner has met the threshold standard of irreparable harm.[1] Although the participation in graduation exercises is a privilege rather than a right, the opportunity to participate in such an event cannot be regained once it is lost, and the dismissal of an emergent application on this criterion alone would effectively insulate a school district's actions in matters of this type from any meaningful review.[2]

[1] The Commissioner notes that irreparable harm is a separate and distinct requirement from likelihood of success on the merits.

[2] The Commissioner is fully aware of the well-established principle that a prohibition from attending events of this type does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant extraordinary remedy. However, harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In past cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity of the harm have frequently been addressed as a totality, as they were by the ALJ herein; they are, however, two separate factors, and it is on the basis of the severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of interests – and not its irreparable nature that

That being said, the fact remains that petitioners seeking emergent relief must additionally demonstrate that they have a likelihood of success on the merits of their underlying appeal. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b). The Commissioner agrees with the ALJ – for the reasons stated in her decision – that the petitioner has failed to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits. Therefore, in light of the fact that all of the Crowe prongs must be met in order for emergent relief to be granted, it is not necessary to analyze the two remaining factors.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted for the reasons expressed therein, as modified above. This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

A.D.,

Petitioner,

v.

TOWN OF WEST NEW YORK BOARD OF EDUCATION, HUDSON COUNTY,

Respondent.

Mario M. Blanch, Esq.

Michael Goldman, Esq., for respondent

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

In this case, petitioner A.D. is a high school senior seeking emergent relief to allow her to attend and participate in the high school graduation ceremony scheduled for June 23, 2016 as well as Project Graduation on that same evening. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case on June 17, 2016, on petitioner's application for emergency relief. The matter was scheduled for oral argument at 10:00 a.m. on June 21, 2016 and heard on that date. At the conclusion of the hearing, the record closed with respect to the emergent relief, which is the only relief being sought.

Petitioner, an honor roll senior at Memorial High School in West New York, New Jersey, requests emergent relief from the Commissioner of Education in regards to an incident occurring on May 19, 2016, while in route to and attending Memorial High School's senior class prom. Prior to the prom, the Principal met with the seniors to advise them of unacceptable behavior such as drinking at prom will result in a suspension and not walking at the graduation ceremony.

Petitioner took a rented shuttle bus with approximately twenty-seven other students to the prom. The driver, suspecting alcohol or drug use among the students when finding an empty alcohol bottle, reported to school officials his/her suspicion. District staff, including the Principal Scott Wohlrab, then searched the contents in the bus and found alcohol and contraband. School officials then escorted all the students on the bus to the hospital to be blood tested for drugs and alcohol. All students were handed the results at Palisades Hospital. Four of the seniors and one junior tested positive for alcohol. Petitioner states the hospital tests found that she tested positive for alcohol, which could possibly be a result of petitioner's use of Listerine before attending the prom, the alcohol swab used at the hospital or food she may have consumed. Test results used reflected a ten being the lowest of a positive reading with petitioner having a reading of thirty. As a result of this test result, the school suspended petitioner and the other four students for five days. She attended and completed an alcohol treatment program. Petitioner and the three other seniors are barred from attending Project Graduation and from walking at graduation because they tested positive for alcohol.

Petitioner must meet the requirements for emergent relief set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b), and must show that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably in denying petitioner's intended guest's attendance at the prom.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 sets forth the standards governing motions for emergent relief. The regulation instructs in salient part:

> A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

[N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).]

Irreparable harm

As to the irreparable harm requirement, there are a number of cases holding that a prohibition from attending a graduation ceremony or other similar events does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant the extraordinary remedy being requested. Nevertheless, the Commissioner has recently pointed out that there is no adequate after-the-fact remedy that can adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over.

The issue in this matter is whether the petitioner is entitled to participate in the graduation ceremony. It is only where the petitioner can show such entitlement and is being prevented from participation that she is being irreparably harmed. See D.S. o/b/o D.C. v. Bd. Of Educ. of Parsippany Troy Hills, OAL Doclet No. EDU-90055-96, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 697 (June 14, 1996). Therefore, the key issue is whether she can show a likelihood of success on the merits. Petitioner participating in a graduation ceremony is clearly a privilege and not a right. Petitioner asks that the respondent take into account that this is her only infraction; she is an honor student with a full scholarship to Kean University and a volunteer. Petitioner had notice of consequences of unacceptable behavior at the prom. In the absence of a showing of a likelihood of success on the merits such as here, I FIND that petitioner has failed to establish irreparable harm and cannot satisfy this first prong.

Although petitioner must satisfy all requirements of Crowe and I need not address the remaining three prongs, I will nevertheless address the remaining three prongs.

Right to underlying claim must be settled

As to the requirement that the right to the underlying claim being settled, it is clear that each school district is obligated to provide a thorough and efficient system of education to all children residing in its school district. N.J. Const. (1947), Art. VIII, 1, N.J.S.A. 18A:33-1. To carry out this policy, local boards of education have been granted discretionary authority at N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1C. The boards adopt rules for the management of the public schools of the district, and to perform all acts and do all things necessary for the lawful and proper conduct of the public schools of the district.

In the present matter, counsel for respondent has represented that the District's drug and alcohol testing procedures are permissible in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-12 which requires personnel who suspects a student is under the influence of alcohol or drugs, report the matter to the school nurse, medical inspector or principal or their designee. That individual will notify parents, and if a doctor is not available, the student will be transported to the emergency room accompanied by school staff. Here, petitioner's parents were notified. Their consent is not necessary. See Gutin v. Washington Township Bd. Of Educ., 467 F.Supp. 2d 414 (D.N.J.) 2006. Under the Board's duly adopted policies, the petitioner is clearly subject to the discipline imposed.

In general, a board of education's actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Where board actions are challenged, the challenger bears the burden of proving that such actions were unlawful, arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Schuster v. Ed. of Educ. Montgomery Twp., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 670, 676 (citing Schnick v. Westwood Ed. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960), and Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962). The "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" standard of review imposes a heavy burden on challengers of board actions. This standard has been defined by the New Jersey courts as having no rational basis. Piccoli v. Ed. of Educ. of Ramapo Indian Hills Regional School District, OAL DKT. EDU 1839-98 (January 22, 1999) (citing Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dent. of Envir. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).

In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of the board of education. Massaro v. Bd. of Educ. of the Boro.of Begenfield, 1 965 S.L.D. 84, 85. In Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960), the Appellate Division stated, "the well-established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently without rational basis or induced by improper motives."

Based upon the foregoing, I FIND there is a rational basis for the respondent's action when alcohol and drugs were found on the bus and the students were transported to be tested since they were at a school activity. The right underlying petitioners' claim is settled against the petitioner's position. Petitioner was not singled out. All seniors who tested positive had the same disciplinary action taken. Therefore, I FIND that petitioner has failed to establish the right to relief in the absence of a full evidentiary hearing showing that the action of respondent is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

Requirement to show reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits

The petitioner must show that respondent's actions in this matter are arbitrary and capricious and unreasonable. At this point, it has been acknowledged that the petitioner tested positive for alcohol no matter what the amount. In view of this, I cannot make a determination that the petitioner at the age of eighteen is not guilty of illegally consuming alcohol in the absence of a full hearing on the merits. Therefore, I FIND that petitioner has failed to show the likelihood of prevailing on the merits.

Relative hardship to the parties

The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief in order to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits. While neither party specifically addressed this factor, it appears that more hardship will fall upon petitioner and his family rather than upon respondent school district, and I so FIND.

CONCLUSION

Based on the above, I have found that for purposes of deciding this application for emergency relief, petitioner has failed to establish the existence of irreparable harm, that petitioner's claim is based upon a settled right, or that petitioner is likely to prevail on the merits. In view of the fact that petitioner has failed to establish the four requirements for emergency relief, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's request should be DENIED. Since the emergent relief was the only relief being requested in this matter, I CONCLUDE that this matter should be dismissed.

DECISION ANDORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergency relief is hereby DENIED and DISMISSED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of Education, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

On August 20, 2015, the Petitioner State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, in the County of Essex ("State District"), filed a Notice of Tenure Charge of Inefficiency against Respondent Shirley King in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, and same was served on Respondent with notice of opportunity to submit evidence and argument in opposition to the Charge. Following his review of the Charge and any opposition thereto, State District Superintendent Christopher Cerf, by Determination dated September 16, 2015, found probably cause to credit the evidence in support of the Charge and, accordingly, on September 17, 2016, the State District submitted same to the Commissioner of Education for a hearing. Respondent was suspended, effective September 16, 2015, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

On or about October 8, 2015, Respondent, through counsel, filed her Answer and Affirmative Defenses denying the State District's charges of inefficiency. On October 19, 2015, I was appointed Arbitrator to hear and decide this tenure matter. A Pre-Hearing Conference was convened on December 10, 2015, at which time the parties discussed discovery issues and potential settlement of the Charges. Hearings were scheduled for the first week of February 2016.

Thereafter, the parties informed me they had reached agreement settling this case, and on February 10, 2016, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, they forwarded to me for review and approval a fully executed copy of their Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement").

I have carefully reviewed the Agreement and I determine it satisfies the statutory requirements for withdrawal and settlement of tenure charges, as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6. In particular:

1. The nature of the Charges are part of the record of this proceeding and were known to all parties to the Agreement;

2. The circumstances justifying settlement and withdrawal are incorporated into the Agreement. For the Respondent, the State-District agrees to dismiss the Charge and to confer upon her certain financial benefits; for the State-District, Respondent has agreed to resign her tenured position, to waive any right to re-employment with the State-District, to withdraw any pending claims or suits against the District, and to release and discharge the State-District and its Board, officers, employees, representatives, agents, successors and assigns, with respect to any claims or rights she may have against them.

3. The Agreement advised Respondent of her rights under the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, in particular of her right to revoke and rescind her execution of the Agreement within seven (7) calendar days after she signed it on February 1, 2016.

4. The Agreement is signed by the parties and their representatives, and contains the State District's Certification of Consent to Settlement pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(b), and Respondent's Certification she entered into the Agreement freely and voluntarily, with a full understanding of her rights following full, satisfactory and unimpeded discussions with her representative which were conducted without duress, coercion or pressure.

5. The Agreement does not contain terms which restrict access to information or records deemed public by law, accurately represents the circumstances of Respondent's resignation and is in the public interest.

I approve the Agreement.

| In the Matter ofSHIRLEY KING,STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, IN THE COUNTY OF ESSEX | : | SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT |

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made by and between the STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, with an address at 2 Cedar Street, Newark, New Jersey 07102, ("School District"), and SHIRLEY KING ("Employee") (collectively, the "Parties").

WHEREAS Employee is a tenured teaching staff member employed by the School District as a teacher;

WHEREAS the State District Superintendent of the School District ("Superintendent") certified tenure charges of inefficiency to the Commissioner of Education of New Jersey, captioned In the Matter of Tenure Charge Against Shirley King, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County ("Tenure Charge"); and such charge was assigned Docket No. 276-9/15; and the Commissioner of Education referred the matter to Arbitrator Earl Pfeffer ("Arbitrator") for a hearing;

WHEREAS the Parties wish to resolve this matter in accordance with the terms set forth herein;

NOW, THEREFORE, subject to approval by the Arbitrator, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. This Agreement shall be and is subject to final approval by the Arbitrator, and shall be effective only upon the School District's receipt of a copy of this Agreement, executed by the Arbitrator to indicate his approval. The effective date of this Agreement ("Effective Date") shall be such date of the School District's receipt of this Agreement, approved by the Arbitrator, or the eighth day after the School District's receipt of this Agreement, executed by Employee, whichever is later, provided that Employee has not exercised her right to rescind this Agreement in accordance with paragraph 12 below. In the event of disapproval by the Arbitrator or any failure to act on such approval, this Agreement shall be void and of no effect, and both Parties shall have the right to pursue any and all matters relating to the other, including but not limited to the Tenure Charge.

2. Employee hereby agrees to resign from her tenured position effective on the 37th work day following the effective date of this Agreement. For purposes of this Agreement, a "work day" shall be a day on teachers are required to be present for school, staff development or other work-related purpose. Attached as Exhibit A is a copy of Employee's signed letter of resignation. Employee's separation from employment will be deemed a voluntary resignation in good standing. Upon inquiry from any third parties, the School District will be limited to confirmation of Employee's employment, position, title, salary and dates of employment.

3. Employee agrees to withdraw with prejudice any and all claims or suits that she may have previously filed against the School District that are pending in any and all courts and/or before any and all agencies with the exception of workers compensation claims. This settlement is intended to be the final resolution of all outstanding matters between the School District and Employee. Should Employee fail to submit letters of withdrawal and/or stipulations of dismissal for any such pending claims or suits, this Agreement will serve as Employee's formal written notice of withdrawal of those pending claims or suits, except for workers compensation claims.

4. Commencing on the first work day following the Effective Date, Employee will be placed on administrative leave with pay for thirty-six and one half (36.5) work days, and will remain in such status until the effective date of her resignation ("Resignation Date"), which shall be the 37th work day following the Effective Date. As of the Resignation Date, all of Employee's employment rights, including but not limited to salary, insurance coverage, tenure and seniority, will permanently end.

5. Other than the salary and benefits that she receives up to the Resignation Date, Employee will not receive any further compensation or other monies from the School District in exchange for this Agreement. Except for such salary and benefits, Employee waives any right or claim she may have to additional compensation by the School District, including any claims for fees or other monetary relief, with the exception of workers' compensation claims.

6. Employee agrees that she will not apply for reemployment with the School District at any time. Specifically, Employee will be considered to have permanently resigned from her tenured position as a result of this Settlement Agreement. If Employee does apply for reemployment with the School District and is approved for employment, the terms of this Agreement shall control and be grounds for immediate termination of Employee's employment.

7. The School District agrees to dismissal of the Tenure Charge upon approval of this Agreement by the Arbitrator.

8. This settlement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other employees.

9. By entering into this Agreement, and in exchange for good consideration as set forth in Paragraph 4 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Employee hereby releases and discharges the School District, its Advisory Board of Education and its Advisory Board members, the Superintendent, and any and all other School District officers, employees, representatives, agents, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Released Parties") with respect to all claims or rights that she has or may have against the Released Parties, or any of them. This includes, without limitation, any and all actions, claims, and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, directly or indirectly related to Employee's employment with the School District and separation from employment with the School District. It specifically includes, without limitation, all claims which Employee may have regarding tenure, withholding of increment, discrimination on any basis, any federal or state civil rights law, any alleged violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Worker Benefits Protection Act; Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Fair Credit Reporting Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act; the Employee Polygraph Protection Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the retaliation provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002; the Federal False Claims Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the New Jersey Equal Pay Law; the New Jersey Occupational Safety and Health Law; the New Jersey Smokers' Rights Law; the New Jersey Genetic Privacy Act; the New Jersey Fair Credit Reporting Act; New Jersey Wages and Hours Law, unemployment compensations laws, disability benefits laws, the retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law (and including any and all amendments to the above), the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution and/or any other alleged violation of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance, common law and/or contract or implied contract or collective bargaining/contractual or tort claim or public policy or whistleblower claim, and any claim having any bearing whatsoever on her employment by and the termination of her employment with the District, including but not limited to any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, front pay, vacation pay, sick pay, wage, commission or bonus payment, attorneys fees, costs, and/or future wage loss, except for workers compensation claims. Employee agrees to save, hold harmless and indemnify the School District for any legal costs and attorneys fees associated with the enforcement of the terms of this Agreement should enforcement become necessary.

10. Notwithstanding Paragraph 9 of this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that the Parties are not prohibited from communicating with or participating in any administrative proceeding before the United States Department of Labor, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, or any other federal, state or local law agency.

Should any entity, agency commission or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Paragraph 9, Employee agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever.

11. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990 ("Act"), if applicable, this Agreement advises Employee of the legal requirements of the Act, and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Agreement. Accordingly, by executing this Agreement, Employee acknowledges that she: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Agreement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Agreement; (iii) specifically waives her right to pursue any current claims she may have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; (iv) has been given sufficient time within which to consider this Agreement; and (v) has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this Agreement to revoke it. King understands that she may rescind this Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the School District either by hand or by certified mail within the seven-day period.

12. The Parties respectively acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Agreement and that each is signing this Agreement freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion or pressure from the other party.

13. This Agreement constitutes the full agreement between the parties, and shall be construed and enforced in accordance with New Jersey law.

14. If any provision or portion of a provision of this Agreement is held by a court of competent jurisdiction, or determined under applicable federal or state law to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions or remaining portions of a provision will continue and remain in full force and effect.

On April 7, 2016, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner found M.M. liable for tuition in the amount of Five Thousand Three Hundred Nine Dollars and Forty Four Cents ($5,309.44), representing tuition for a period of ineligible attendance by her child, V.H.A., in the Board's school district between June 1, 2015 and November 30, 2015. The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that M.M. has failed to comply with the decision and requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the assessments on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. M.M. offered no reasons why the judgment against her should not be so docketed, although given an opportunity by this agency to do so.

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, Mayra Mizhquiri is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $5,309.44, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

SYNOPSIS

In December 2014, the Commissioner of Education issued an Order to Show Cause requiring respondent to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending his teaching certificate for unprofessional conduct pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 for resigning his position without giving the required 60 day notice. The respondent contended that he resigned because he was appointed as an FBI agent and had to begin his training immediately. Respondent further asserted that he had requested a leave of absence, but the Board denied his request; he therefore had no alternative but to resign immediately. The Board sought an order suspending Im's teaching certificate for one year, and filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 provides that any tenured teaching staff member who wishes to leave their position "shall give the employing board of education at least 60 days written notice of his intention, unless the board shall approve of a release on shorter notice"; the statute further provides that any tenured teacher who fails to give such notice "shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct and the commissioner may suspend his certificate for not more than one year."; the wording of the statute is clear, and does not allow the Commissioner discretion in finding "unprofessional conduct"; there is, however, discretion allowed as to what penalty is imposed; the purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 is to protect students from unnecessary disruption of their education caused by the teachers leaving their posts on short notice; there are no disputed material facts as to the issue of unprofessional conduct in the instant matter, and the Board is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. The ALJ concluded that the respondent is guilty of unprofessional conduct, but on the issue of the penalty, there are questions of fact still outstanding that require testimony as to mitigation. Accordingly, the ALJ granted partial summary decision to the Board on the issue of unprofessional conduct, and ordered that the length of the respondent's suspension be determined following additional testimony at a prospective hearing.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the respondent is guilty of unprofessional conduct pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's recommended Order on Partial Summary Decision, and ordered the matter to continue at the OAL for a hearing to determine if the respondent's certificate should be suspended for failure to give the required notice.

| IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION | : | |
| OF THE CERTIFICATE(S) OF | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| CHAE HYUK IM, SCHOOL DISTRICT | : | DECISION |
| OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WAYNE, | : | |
| PASSAIC COUNTY. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Partial Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the respondent, Chae Hyuk Im, and the Wayne Board of Education's reply thereto.[1] This matter involves a determination as to whether the respondent's certificate(s) should be suspended pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 for his failure to provide the Board with the requisite notice prior to resigning from his teaching position. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued a Partial Order on Summary Decision wherein she found that the respondent is guilty of unprofessional conduct for failing to provide the Board with the 60-days notice required under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 when he voluntarily choose to pursue a career with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). The ALJ further found that since there are facts in dispute with respect to mitigation, a hearing is required before a penalty determination can be made.

Upon a comprehensive review of this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons outlined in the Partial Initial Decision – that the respondent is guilty of unprofessional conduct pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8. Under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8, [1] Before the ALJ submitted the Partial Order on Summary Decision to the Commissioner for review under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(e), the respondent filed a request for interlocutory review of the ALJ's Order. The request for interlocutory review was subsequently denied on May 27, 2016. Thereafter, the parties both requested that their respective papers – which were submitted in the context of the request for interlocutory review – be considered as respondent's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto.

> any teaching staff member, under tenure of service, desiring to relinquish his position shall give the employing board of education at least 60 days written notice of his intention, unless the board shall approve of a release on shorter notice and if he fails to give such notice he shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct, and the commissioner may suspend his certificate for a period not exceeding one year. [N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 (emphasis added); See also N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10]

Despite the respondent's arguments to the contrary, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that the wording in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 is quite clear: when the requisite notice is not provided, the employee "shall" be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct. A plain reading of the statute provides that the Commissioner is not afforded any discretion on the finding of unprofessional conduct when 60 days notice is not provided. In contrast, the use of the term "may" in connection with the penalty establishes that there is undoubtedly discretion afforded to the Commissioner to determine whether the lack of requisite notice warrants a suspension of the employee's certificate. The Commissioner is not persuaded that the cases relied on by the respondent support his assertion that the Commissioner has discretion to decide whether a teaching staff member is guilty of unprofessional conduct when it is undisputed that the employee did not provide the requisite notice under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8. Instead, the cases cited by the respondent stand for the proposition that mitigating factors may exist which may warrant the suspension of a certificate for less than one year or even no suspension at all. See, Board of Education of the Township of Clifton, Hunterdon County v. Robert Burgess, 1983 S.L.D. 183; Board of Education of the Black Horse Pike Regional School District, Camden County v. Janice Mooney, 1984 S.L.D. 810, adopted 1984 S.L.D. 821.

The Commissioner also finds that the ALJ properly decided that the respondent is guilty of unprofessional conduct on a motion for summary decision.[2] The respondent maintains that the ALJ erroneously issued a Partial Order on Summary Decision because it effectively barred him from presenting evidence at a hearing with regard to the impact that a finding of "unprofessional conduct" will have on his future ability to testify in court in the course of his employment as an FBI agent. Respondent's argument is misguided because there is no genuine issue of fact as to the respondent's failure to provide the Board with the requisite notice; the material facts in dispute only pertain to the mitigating circumstances that could impact the potential suspension of his certificate. See, In the Matter of the Suspension of the Certificate of Jacqueline Bordon, School District of the Township of Edison, Middlesex County, EDU 12810-14, Initial Decision (June 18, 2015), adopted Commissioner Decision No. 247-15, decided July 29, 2015 (The teaching staff member's abrupt departure was "unprofessional conduct" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10; however, based on the mitigating circumstances only a three-month certificate suspension was warranted). Notwithstanding the finding of unprofessional conduct, the respondent will be afforded a hearing to determine whether a certificate suspension is appropriate in this case. To that end, the respondent will be given a full opportunity to present evidence of mitigation, including the fact that he left his teaching post to take a job with the FBI.

[2] The Commissioner also agrees with the ALJ's determination – for the reasons stated in the Partial Initial Decision – that the justification of "necessity" does not dictate a different result in this case.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL is adopted for the reasons expressed therein. This matter shall continue at the OAL for a hearing to determine if the respondent's certificate should be suspended for failure to give the 60 days notice required by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8.

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATE OF CHAE HYUK IM, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WAYNE, PASSAIC COUNTY.

Christine Bernacki Smith, Esq., for petitioner, Wayne Board of Education (Machado Law Group, attorneys)

Louis P. Bucceri, Esq., for respondent, Chae Hyuk Im (Bucceri & Pincus, attorneys)

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ,t/a:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, the Board of Education of the Township of Wayne (the Board), seeks an order suspending the respondent's teaching certificate for a period of one year, contending that he resigned from his teaching position with inadequate notice. Respondent, Chae Hyuk Im, replies that he resigned because he was appointed as an FBI agent and had to begin his training immediately. When he asked the Board for a leave of absence, it denied his request. He therefore had no alternative but to resign immediately.

On December 1, 2014, at the request of the Board, the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) entered an Order directing Im to show cause why his teaching certificate should not be suspended for unprofessional conduct, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8. Im filed a pro se answer on December 29, 2014. On January 21, 2015, the Commissioner transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case. On February 6, 2015, the matter was assigned to Judge Irene Jones. On August 13, 2015, the petitioner filed a motion for summary decision. On September 3, 2015, the respondent filed his responsive brief. On September 10, 2015, the petitioner filed a reply brief. On April 4, 2016, this matter was transferred to Judge Carol I. Cohen.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

The underlying facts are fairly straightforward, and generally uncontroverted.

The Wayne Board of Education is a public school district in Passaic County. The respondent was employed as a tenured chemistry teacher at Wayne High School from September 2005 through October 2014. His last day of teaching was October 17, 2014. The Board's Policy 3141 states that "the Board may notify the Commissioner of Education of any tenured teaching staff member who terminates his/her position without having given sixty days' notice to the Board and without the express permission of the Board." A letter to Im from the superintendent of Wayne schools dated May 15, 2014, which indicated what his salary for the following year would be, stated, "should you have reason to believe that you will be unable to serve the entire 2014–2015 school year, please write and inform this office immediately."

In late July 2014, Im met with human resources specialist Claudia Olivo and stated that there was a chance that he would be joining the FBI effective September 1, 2014, and requested a leave of absence, although he was not sure he would be accepted into the program. Im had applied for a position with the FBI several years before, but had not been offered a potential position until the summer of 2014. On July 23, 2014, Im sent a letter to the superintendent requesting a "potential leave of absence" for a period of one year from September 2014 through June 2015 to pursue a "new opportunity." The one year would give him the opportunity to return to teaching if necessary. Im stated that the leave was "potential" because he was awaiting "definitive terms" from the FBI. In the interest of his students, he wanted to give the district time to get an adequate replacement.

As part of the special-agent application the applicants had to pass a physical-fitness test within sixty days of reporting for training. On August 7, 2014, Im failed the test. In late August 2014, Im informed Ms. Olivo that he was not chosen for the September 2014 class and therefore did not need the leave of absence. Im started the September 2014 school year. Later in August, Im was advised by the FBI that if he took the physical exam again and passed, he could be added to the training class. He did not feel confident that he could pass the September test, so he waited until October. On October 9, 2014, Im took the physical-fitness test again. This time he passed. On that date he contacted the Board and informed the Board that he had passed the test and was accepting an offer from the FBI, and would be starting at the FBI the following Monday. He then requested a leave of absence from the new superintendent, Dr. Mark Toback. Dr. Toback denied his request. Im requested a meeting with Dr. Toback, who again denied his request. Toback also told Im that action could be taken to suspend his license because of untimely notice of resignation. On October 10, 2014, Im received his official appointment letter from the FBI, and he accepted the appointment on October 11, 2014. On October 15, 2014, Im tendered a letter of resignation to the superintendent stating that he had received a job opportunity that he could not pass up. A Board of Education meeting was held on October 16, 2014. Im was given a "Rice" letter, and the Board discussed his application for a leave in closed session. The Board denied his request. Im's last day of employment with Wayne was Friday, October 17, 2014. He commenced his FBI training on October 19, 2014. On December 8, 2014, the Board filed an Order to Show Cause to suspend Im's teaching certificate for unprofessional conduct.

Four separate teachers covered Im's classes from October 20, 2014, until a permanent teacher was hired on January 19, 2015. These teachers were teaching five other classes. They were asked to teach a sixth class to cover Im's classes. They received an additional stipend for covering these classes. In addition, the district paid a substitute teacher who covered one of Im's classes $100.00 per day, for a total of $4,000.00. The total paid to these teachers was $9,535.24 for the sixty-day period from October 20, 2014, through December 20, 2014. The respondent's gross monthly salary in September 2014 was $5,952.00. Multiplying by two, the total that Im would have made in that sixty-day period was $11,904.00. Therefore, there was a net financial gain to the district of $2,368.76.

LEGAL ARGUMENTS

Argument of the Board

N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 provides that

> [a]ny teaching staff member, under tenure of service, desiring to relinquish his positon shall give the employing board of education at least 60 days written notice of his intention, unless the board shall approve of a release on shorter notice and if he fails to give such notice he shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct and the commissioner may suspend his certificate for not more than one year.

The Board argues that in terms of statutory construction, the use of the term "shall" denotes something that is mandatory and is inconsistent with a concept of discretion. Black's Law Dictionary 1375 (6th ed. 1990). As a consequence of a failure to provide notice, and as a method of deterrence, the Legislature instructed that the staff member "shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct." The length of the suspension is the only portion of the statute that is discretionary. The Board distinguished Board of Education of Clinton v. Burgess, 1983 S.L.D. 193, 190, relied upon by Im. It pointed out that the district in that case was able, within five days of Burgess's formal resignation, to employ a full-time teacher to fill the vacancy he left. In his decision, the Commissioner stated that the Board failed to fulfill a promise to Burgess to do all within its power to replace him in a timely fashion. In addition, only two substitutes were required to cover Burgess's classes. Further, the Commissioner said that in deciding to suspend a teaching certificate, all the "attendant circumstances" must be considered. Burgess, supra, 1983 S.L.D. at 190. The Board here went on to discuss the "attendant circumstances" in this case, including the monetary impact on the district; that Im delayed until 2014 telling the Board of his intention to join the FBI, even though he had applied for the special-agent position in 2011; and the fact that Im valued serving the public as an FBI agent above serving the students of the district.

The district also asserted that Im's invocation of the doctrine of necessity was misplaced, because it should only be invoked where there is a need for pressing public action. See Griggs v. Princeton Borough, 33 N.J. 207, 220–21 (1960); Cranberry Lake Quarry Co. v. Johnson, 95 N.J. Super. 495 (App. Div. 1967). The Board argued that Im had four years to make the Board aware of his intent to seek employment elsewhere, and chose to take his re-take physical-fitness test in the fall of 2014, after the commencement of the school year. The Board argued that "[t]he Respondent chose to accept the FBI's offer for a position without notifying his superiors; he was made aware of the statute requiring sufficient notice on numerous occasions and should have known, as a teacher within the District for many years, of the potential effects of his departure on his students." Therefore, the doctrine of necessity did not apply.

Argument of the Respondent

Im argued that the standards used in cases arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 are analogous to the defense of "necessity." N.J.S.A. 2C:3-2, entitled "Necessity and other justifications in general," provides:

> a. Necessity. Conduct which would otherwise be an offense is justifiable by reason of necessity to the extent permitted by law and as to which neither the code nor other statutory law defining the offense provides exceptions or defenses dealing with the specific situation involved and a legislative purpose to exclude the justification claimed does not otherwise plainly appear.

Similarly, the governing education law does not exclude the claimed exception due to "justification" because the statute gives the Commissioner discretion in imposing a penalty or not doing so. Im claimed that "when he was notified of a second chance to take the physical exam, he had no choice but to accept it with the resulting lack of advance notice to the Board, or give up his goal of serving his adopted country as a member of the [FBI]." During oral argument, the respondent analogized his situation to that of a soldier drafted into the service. In both cases there is a necessity that the individual report for duty at a certain time, and therefore the statute does not apply.

Im also argued that as an immigrant, it was his life-long ambition to join the FBI and serve his country.

The respondent also argued that, despite the fact that the statute used the word "shall," the Commissioner in fact had discretion to find Im guilty of "unprofessional conduct." He based this on the fact that in the Burgess decision, even though the teacher did not give sixty days' notice, there was no finding of unprofessional conduct.

Finally, Im argued that the record of "unprofessional conduct" would affect his ability to testify in trials as an FBI agent and might affect his ability to obtain promotions.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Summary Decision

The rules governing practice in the OAL provide that a motion for summary decision may be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary decision should be based on the papers presented, as well as any affidavits that may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving, party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact that can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding.

This provision mirrors the summary-judgment language of R. 4:46-2(c), which states:

> The judgment or order sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law. An issue of fact is genuine only if, considering the burden of persuasion at trial, the evidence submitted by the parties on the motion, together with all legitimate inferences therefrom favoring the non-moving party, would require submission of the issue to the trier of fact.

This rule was further elaborated on in the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954), and clarified in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), which sets forth the standard to be applied when deciding a motion for summary judgment.

> [T]he determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party . . . , are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

If the non-moving party's evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative, summary judgment should not be denied. See Bowles v. City of Camden, 993 F. Supp. 255, 261 (D.N.J. 1998).

I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for partial summary decision as to the issue of "unprofessional conduct." There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing, and the Board is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8

The Commissioner has held that the central purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-8 is "to provide notice to the school so that a suitable replacement can be hired without adversely impacting students." See: Penns Grove-Carneys Point Bd. of Educ. v. Leinen, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 405, 407, which analyzes the concept of notice upon resignation under a comparable statute, N.J.S.A. 18A: 26-10.

The statute is quite clear in the wording that the employee "shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct." There is nothing in the wording about discretion by the Commissioner to find "unprofessional conduct." Where the discretion of the Commissioner lies is as to what penalty should be imposed. The fact that Burgess did not make a finding as to "unprofessional conduct" and merely glossed over the issue and dealt with penalty does not give license to ignore the plain language of the statute. There is a reason for the statute, which is to protect students from unnecessary disruption of their education caused by the precipitous leaving of one of their teachers. It is to penalize a teacher for doing so that is at the heart of the matter. While the district was able to piece together a program for the students, it is uncontroverted that a full-time replacement for Im was not hired until January 2015.

Im's argument about "necessity" is equally unpersuasive. The respondent attempted at oral argument to analogize his position to that of a soldier called up to service. That analogy does not hold. The soldier has no choice but to go when he is called. Im had a choice, albeit a difficult one. He could have decided not to start the school year and waited to take the retest and see if he passed the exam, or he could have told the FBI that he could not leave his students mid-year and see if he could reapply later. He could have chosen to take the physical test again at the beginning of September, possibly before the school year had begun. The necessity that the respondent speaks of was based on the choices that Im decided to make. As the district pointed out, "the Respondent chose to accept the offer for a position without giving sufficient notice and being aware of the notice requirement." The doctrine of necessity is inapplicable because there is no pressing public interest in not imposing the statute.

Additionally, Im's argument about his joining the FBI as a noble cause is equally inapplicable. The respondent is asking this judge to decide that becoming an FBI agent is somehow more important and more noble than being a chemistry teacher. I decline to make such a determination. While being an FBI agent may be more important to Im than being a teacher, that is a personal choice. The respondent can make that choice, but there are consequences. When questioned about the decision in In re Montalbano, EDU 3588-00, Initial Decision (April 24, 2001), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, which dealt with a teacher who left to become a police officer and gave 12 days' notice, the respondent claimed that a police officer was not the same as an FBI agent. Further, the decision did not discuss whether Montalbano could have waited to join the force. One could assume that if Montalbano could have waited to take the job, he would have done so, to avoid suspension. More importantly, it is a dangerous path to start deciding what jobs are more important and therefore worthy of more consideration. The statute does not make exceptions for FBI agents, and I also decline to do so.

The respondent presented no proof that the finding of "unprofessional conduct" would have any impact on his ability to testify or even be allowed to impeach his testimony. N.J.R.E. 404 deals with admission of prior bad acts. The fact that Mr. Im left his job without proper notice could not be used to attack his credibility at trial, nor would it be considered relevant to testimony in a criminal case. Other than an assertion on the respondent's part, no evidence has been presented showing that the finding would have any impact on his ability to perform his job or get promotions. The certification presented by Im from Special Agent Eric A. Parisi throws no light on the subject. Special Agent Parisi stated, "I am advised that the suspension of Special Agent Im's teaching license would require a finding of 'unprofessional' conduct. It would appear that such a consequence should be avoided in the absence of overwhelming proof of the alleged existence of truly unprofessional conduct." This commentary is presumptuous at best, and far outside his area of expertise.

Therefore, based on the papers submitted and the argument of counsel, I CONCLUDE that the respondent is guilty of unprofessional conduct. As to the issue of penalty, that will have to be decided after a hearing, because there are questions of fact that are still outstanding, and that will require testimony on the issue of mitigation.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, partial summary decision is GRANTED to petitioner on the issue of unprofessional conduct. The length of respondent's suspension is to be determined following receipt of additional testimony at a hearing.

This order GRANTING partial summary decision is being submitted under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(e) for immediate review. This recommended order may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make the final decision in this matter. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended order shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this order was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured teacher employed in respondent's school district – asserted that the respondent Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner when it withheld his salary increment for the 2013-2014 school year. The Board contended that petitioner's increment was withheld for good cause – specifically for performance and attendance issues – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner was absent from work for twenty-three days during the year in question, exceeding his yearly absentee allotment by seven days; his absences required the retention of a substitute teacher and negatively impacted the education of his students on twenty-three days during the 2013-2014 school year; petitioner was evaluated during this period as "partially ineffective" in a number of areas, and "ineffective" in several others, including managing student behavior, communicating with students, and engaging students in learning, among others; petitioner failed to produce any evidence that he provided meritorious service that entitled him to an increment; petitioner also failed to show that the Board's decision to withhold his increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; a salary increment is a reward for meritorious service, not an entitlement; pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, a board of education may withhold an employment increment in any year for inefficiency or other good cause, and a decision to do so is a matter of management prerogative and entitled to a presumption of correctness; the petitioner herein failed to carry his burden of proving that the withholding of his increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, while the Board presented sufficient, credible and convincing evidence that petitioner's attendance and performance were unsatisfactory during the 2013-2014 school year. The ALJ concluded that the Board's actions were not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; accordingly, petitioner is not entitled to restoration of his salary increment.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusion, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. In so doing, the Commissioner rejected the petitioner's exceptions, emphasizing that increment withholdings and tenure matters are separate proceedings with individual requirements; accordingly, the statutes and regulations governing tenure charges do not apply in the context of the withholding of a salary increment. The petition was dismissed.

| PETITIONER, | : | |
| V. | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY, | : | DECISION |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner. The Board's reply was not timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and was therefore not considered by the Commissioner.

In his exceptions, petitioner argues that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) failed to consider a March 5, 2015 letter that informed the District's staff that during the 2013-2014 school year, teacher evaluations, teacher summative and SGO scores were not properly completed in accordance with AchieveNJ, and that all teachers would therefore be classified as "teacher not evaluated" for that school year. (Exhibit P-1) Accordingly, petitioner contends that the evaluation conducted by David Radulich – which the ALJ relied upon – was improper, as the Board had previously determined that the evaluations conducted during the 2013-2014 school year would not count. Petitioner maintains that the ALJ failed to abide by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-118, the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TEACHNJ) Act. Specifically, petitioner argues that the Board failed to observe him multiple times during the 2013-2014 school year, nor did it provide him with an opportunity to improve his effectiveness as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(7) and (9).

Additionally, petitioner contends that the ALJ speculated as to why petitioner's increment was withheld because there was no testimony as to the reason. Petitioner also points out that there was no testimony that his absences were excessive, and that all of his absences were approved by the District and used his own sick leave. Petitioner further argues that the ALJ failed to recognize N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 et seq., which guides Boards in establishing evaluation rubrics for evaluating the effectiveness of teachers. Petitioner maintains that only one short observation by his supervisor, and the subsequent lack of follow up on perceived shortcomings, fails to satisfy the intent of the regulation. Accordingly – citing a string of cases that were presented to and addressed by the ALJ – petitioner emphasizes that the Board acted arbitrarily in withholding petitioner's increment.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons thoroughly expressed in the Initial Decision – that the Board's decision to withhold the petitioner's increment for the 2013-2014 school year was not arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The Commissioner is also in accord with the ALJ that the Board presented sufficient, credible and convincing evidence that petitioner's absences were excessive and his performance was unsatisfactory during the 2013-2014 school year.

The Commissioner is not persuaded by petitioner's exceptions. An increment withholding and tenure matters are separate proceedings with individual requirements, and accordingly, the statutes and regulations governing tenure charges do not apply in this context. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, boards of education have the authority to withhold an employee's increment for "inefficiency or other good cause." Although the statute uses the word "inefficiency," it does not require compliance with the requirements for filing tenure charges of inefficiency. See Margaret Sidberry v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, OAL Docket No. EDU 06610-09, Initial Decision, dated September 24, 2010 (noting that "[t]he decision to withhold an increment does not require a showing of shortcomings sufficient to justify dismissal under the Tenure Act" (citing Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 1960-61 S.L.D. at 62)). As such, the statutes and regulations cited by petitioner are irrelevant to this matter, as is the March 5, 2015 letter that petitioner relies upon.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, John Baran (Baran), asserts that the Board of Education (BOE) of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County, was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable when it withheld his salary increment for the 2013-2014 School Year. The BOE asserts that petitioner's increment was withheld for good cause pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-4.

The New Jersey State Department of Education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on November 14, 2014. A hearing was held on March 31, 2015. The record closed on June 23, 2015, upon receipt of written summations. Due to a voluminous caseload and medical leave, time for the issuance of this Initial Decision was extended until June 20, 2016.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Respondent's Testimony

David Radulich (Radulich), Performing Acts Supervisor for the Jersey City School District (District) and Baran's direct supervisor for the eight years that Baran has taught in the District, evaluated Baran annually and provided him with support activities. In the year at issue and in accordance with the request of the school principal, Radulich observed Baran teaching on at least a dozen occasions. Radulich conducted one formal written observation. (R-3.) On the other occasions, in accordance with a change in District policy that provided for no written documentation of informal classroom observations, Radulich provided Baran with verbal feedback regarding his observations.

Radulich described what he observed during his unannounced Formal Short Observation on December 3, 2014. The educational classroom setting was negative. Positive instruction was not taking place. Baran's lesson consisted of a very long skit that involved only one or two students at a time. The rest of the class was not engaged with the skit. The students were not in their seats. They were running around, acting out, and hitting and pushing each other. The class was also talking out of turn and cursing. Baran did not attempt to adjust his lesson in response to the student confusion. Baran's attempt to gain control of the class by screaming at them was totally unsuccessful. The classroom atmosphere was so chaotic that Radulich feared for Baran's and the students' physical safety. Radulich had no control over the students and the students showed him no respect. (R-3.) Radulich provided Baran with verbal feedback as to how to improve, provided him (as well as other drama teachers) with professional development opportunities and encouraged Baran to observe and confer with other colleagues who had good discipline and good classroom management. Radulich provided Principal W. Michael Yorker (Principal Yorker) with a copy of his written evaluation, which was also part of Baran's permanent file. Radulich did not make the decision that Baran's increment should be withheld.

Frank Borroto has been the Assistant Principal at Baran's school throughout his employment. One of his duties is keeping track of staff attendance. While teachers are provided with thirteen sick days and three personal days per year, the allotted days should be used as "needed" and not as a "given." Further evidence of the intent that such days only be used as needed is that they are not a "use or lose" benefit. Unused days "roll over" yearly.

If a teacher is absent, the District incurs the expense of paying for a "substitute" in addition to the teacher's salary. However, classroom management and learning is not on the same level when a substitute teacher must be obtained. Borroto described good staff attendance as essential not only for learning but also for student safety.

In accordance with school protocol, Borroto received copies of letters sent to Baran by the principal expressing concern that his attendance was excessive during the 2013-2014 school year. During that year, Baran was absent twenty-one days for illness, took two personal days, and was late on one occasion. (R-1, R-2.) Baran did not request, nor was he absent during that year, for a medical leave. While Borroto kept track of Baran's attendance, he did not make the decision to withhold Baran's increment.

Petitioner's Testimony

Baran is certified as a Teacher of English (for middle and high school), a Teacher of Dramatic Arts and Speech (for kindergarten through twelfth grade) and a Teacher of Elementary Education. He has been employed by the District since 2006 and worked at P.S. #15 since 2011. From 2011 to February 2015, and accordingly during the school year at issue, he was the only Drama teacher at P.S. #15. Baran taught thirty different classes per week usually consisting of eighteen to twenty three students per class. However some classes with inclusion children might consist of up to thirty five students.

Baran admitted that he received a letter stating that his increment was being withheld because of his attendance and performance during the 2013-2014 school year. Baran stated, however, that he never received a performance improvement plan at the end of that year and that, upon calling the Jersey City Central Office, he learned no more details as to his alleged negative attendance and performance than was contained in the notification letter.

Baran acknowledged that during the 2013-2014 school year he was absent for twenty-three days and late on one occasion. He states that all of his absences were based upon medical need, and while under the care of both his primary care physician and a pulmonary specialist for chronic bronchitis and asthma. Baran was always paid for the days he was absent through his annual sick-day allotment and/or his banked sick-day benefits. Baran denied receiving one of the letters produced by the District, dated May 7, 2014, that was addressed to him and that advised Baran that the District was concerned about his attendance. (R-2.) He further complained that his classroom assignment in the basement was environmentally the cause of, or instrumental in the severity of, his pulmonary issues.

Baran acknowledged that he found his teaching assignment difficult in P.S. #15. Though he was certified to teach dramatic arts to kindergarten through twelfth grade and certified to each elementary education, since most of his teaching experience had been in high school, Baran said he had difficulty from the time that he was assigned to P.S. #15 in 2011. Since the school contained only grades kindergarten through fifth grade, he was assigned to teach kindergarten through third grade. Baran also complained that, some time after his arrival at P.S. #15, he learned that he was the third Drama Teacher in the school within seven or eight years.

Initially since Baran took over a teaching assignment mid-year, he found Radulich responsive and helpful when he reached out to him. However, Baran denied receiving any help when he reached out to Principal Yorker. He asserted that the principal directed him, as a professional, to find his own solutions. Baran acknowledged that Radulich recommended in the one written Short Term Evaluation that he received on December 3, 2013, that he "seek assistance from colleagues in his building that implement successful classroom management skills." Baran stated that he did approach his colleagues, as was suggested. Sometimes their advice was helpful and other times it was not.

Baran acknowledged that Radulich and Principal Yorker came into his classroom on several occasions during the 2013-2014 School Year and observed his teaching. However, Baran denies ever receiving help or assistance, one-on-one, from any administrator or other educational professional to improve his teaching during the 2013-2014 School Year. Baran complained that the school administration in P.S. #15 was not as diligent in working with teachers to establish student discipline as the school administration had been in his prior District assignment, P.S. #41. Baran also complained that students sometimes arrived to his classroom "out of control" from their prior teacher, as they did on the day when Radulich made his written observation.

Based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses, in addition to the stipulated facts, I FIND the following pertinent FACTS:

While neither Radulich nor Borroto made the decision to withhold Baran's increment for the 2013-2014 School Year, both provided a factual basis for the determination, of which Baran acknowledged he was advised in writing, that his increment was being withhold for attendance and performance reasons.

Baran certainly was aware of his own attendance. However, Borroto, the person in charge of tracking teacher attendance, provided testimony and documentation that, during the year at issue, Baran was absent twenty-three days and late on one occasion. Thus, his yearly attendance exceeded, by seven days, his yearly absentee allotment.[1]

[1] Naturally, teachers are not provided with any allotted day when they may arrive late.

Although Baran had sufficient banked days to be paid for all days he was absent that school year, as noted by Borroto, Baran's absence required the retention of a substitute teacher and negatively impacted the teaching provided to his students for twenty-three days that school year.

As to Baran's performance, in his own testimony, Baran stated that from 2011 to the year at issue, he found his teaching assignment difficult. He complained that he had to teach some thirty different classes of children from kindergarten to third grade, when all of his other teaching experience was with older children. He complained that the teaching support and school discipline that the administration provided was insufficient. While he complained of not being given more written evaluations, he never alleged that his performance improved from December 2013, when he received a detailed performance evaluation noting that he was only partially effective in creating an environment of respect and rapport, partially effective in establishing a culture for learning, partially effective in managing classroom procedures, partially effective in organizing physical space, ineffective in managing student behavior, ineffective in communicating with students, ineffective in using questioning and discussion techniques, ineffective in engaging students in learning, ineffective in using assessment in instruction, and ineffective in demonstrating flexibility and responsiveness. No areas of strength, mastery of content, or areas of growth were noted on the evaluation.

I FIND that Baran failed to produce any evidence that he provided meritorious service that entitled him to an increment or that the District's decision to withhold his increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. In contrast, I FIND that the District presented credible and convincing evidence that Baran's attendance and performance were unsatisfactory during the 2013-2014 School Year.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

A salary increment is a reward for meritorious service, not an entitlement. N. Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593 (1984). Any board of education may with withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year. N.J.S.A.

18A:29-14. A local school board's decision to withhold a salary increment is a matter of management prerogative and is entitled to a presumption of correctionness. Fogerty v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of the City of Jersey City, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 439; Kaska v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Trenton, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 55.

When challenging an increment withholding, the teacher has the burden of proof to show that the board of education acted arbitrarily without rational basis or was induced by improper motives. Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). In the absence of clear and convincing proof that a board of education acted unreasonably or in a cursory manner in withholding an increment, the Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for the board of education's judgment. Id. at 296. A board of education must simply be able to demonstrate that the recommendation to withhold is factually supported by observation reports or other reliable evidence. Id. at 296-97.

Thus, by statute, among other things, a board of education can withhold an increment for inefficiency or other good cause. The standard is not a certain number of evaluations. The standard is not a showing of an unsatisfactory evaluation, teacher summative or score or compliance with any provision of Achieve NJ. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 et seq. (P-1.)

I note that Baran's argument of numerous cases, with no precedential value to this matter, is unpersuasive, as is his argument that the Chief Academic Officer of The District's letter to P.S. #15 Staff Members dated March 5, 2015, can prevent the withholding of increments to non-meritorious performers. (P-1.) The issue in this matter is not whether Baran received a certain number of evaluations to be considered "evaluated" but rather whether Baran's performance was meritorious.

As noted above, Baran failed to sustain his burden in showing that the District's action in withholding his increment was arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious. Further, the District presented sufficient, credible and convincing evidence that Baran's attendance and performance were unsatisfactory during the 2013-2014 School Year. I CONCLUDE that Baran is not entitled to restoration of his salary increment.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that Baran's challenge of the withholding of his increment for the 2013-2014 School Year is hereby DENIED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. ## SYNOPSIS

Petitioner AAA School, LLC (AAA) – a company that provides transportation services to public schools – owns six (6) seven-passenger minivans. Petitioner has bid a number of times for business from the respondent, Passaic County Educational Services Commission (Commission), and has filed several appeals before the Commissioner prior to the instant case, which was remanded for a hearing on the merits. Petitioner challenged the award of bids on four school bus routes, claiming that AAA School was the lowest bidder and had the appropriate vehicles to handle the routes in question. A hearing was held on May 11, 2016, on which date the record closed. The Commission presented the testimony of four witnesses; petitioner was present at the hearing, but did not testify, nor did it provide any witnesses.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: most of the facts in this matter are not in dispute; the Commission presented the testimony of four credible witnesses; in June 2014, petitioner submitted a bid specification and challenged the Commission's sixteen-passenger bus routes, even though he did not own sixteen-passenger buses; petitioner requested that those routes be modified to allow the use of a seven-passenger minivan, which he does own; however, the routes in question involved two school districts and the sixteen-passenger yellow bus was not optional; although petitioner was the low bidder, it did not conform to the bid requirements; the sixteen-passenger yellow school bus is the default vehicle for the Commission's bus routes for safety and reliability reasons; the fact that the vehicle is yellow and clearly marked as a school bus enhances its safety over that of an unmarked minivan; the selection of a yellow sixteen-passenger school bus is at the discretion of the district; such a vehicle is considered the safest for transporting students; and petitioner's allegations that the bid requirements are against the law – as it should be up to taxpayers to determine the form of transportation used by the Commission – are without merit. The ALJ determined that the petitioner has not proven by a preponderance of any credible evidence that the action of the Commission in awarding the bids to operators who conformed to the requirement of a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus for the four bus routes was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered the within petition dismissed with prejudice.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ – for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision – that the Commission's decision to require the sixteen-passenger yellow school bus for the bus routes in question was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter.

| PETITIONER, | : | COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION |
| V. | : | DECISION |
| PASSAIC COUNTY EDUCATIONAL SERVICES COMMISSION, | : | |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, the AAA School, LLC.[1] This case is one of a series of petitions filed by the petitioner in which it is alleged that the Passaic County Educational Services Commission (Commission) improperly denied it a contract after it submitted bids for transportation services that require a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus. In this matter, the petitioner claims that he was the lowest bidder and had the appropriate vehicles (seven-passenger minivans) for school bus routes 8029, 8038, 8039 and 8106. After a hearing on the merits,[2] the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the Commission's decision to require sixteen-passenger yellow school buses for routes 8029, 8038, 8039 and 8106 was not arbitrary capricious or unreasonable.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision – that the Commission's decision to require a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus for the bus routes in question was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, and that the petitioner should not be awarded the transportation routes. The Commissioner also finds no basis in the record to reject either the ALJ's recitations of testimony or her determinations of witness credibility. The ALJ found that the testimony of the Commission's witnesses was "compelling and credible" and "[t]hey were forthright and detailed in their testimony concerning the safety and choosing of the sixteen-passenger yellow school bus." (Initial Decision at 4) On the other hand, the petitioner did not present any witness testimony at the hearing, but rather simply provided a summation at the end of the hearing. The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the witnesses who appeared before her, and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. It is well established that the Commissioner must defer to the credibility findings of the ALJ unless these prove to be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, or are not supported by sufficient, competent and credible evidence in the record. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

[1] The record does not include a transcript from the hearing that was conducted at the OAL on May 11, 2016.

[2] This matter was remanded to the OAL to afford the petitioner the opportunity to have a hearing on the merits based on the disputed factual issues.

It is undisputed that the petitioner does not own a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus; however, it fervently argues that sixteen-passenger yellow school buses are not necessary for certain routes, and that the Commission cannot require them in the bid specifications. Despite the petitioner's assertions, based on the testimony provided at the hearing, the ALJ found that it is the individual school districts that have the discretion to determine whether a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus is used for their transportation routes, not the Commission.[3] If a school district does not request the type of vehicle to be used on the Student Transportation Information Sheet, the Commission automatically provides a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus. Ultimately it is the decision of the school district to accept the type of vehicle before contracting and paying for the transportation service. The record in this matter is devoid of any evidence to the contrary or any evidence to suggest that the Commission's decision to reject the petitioner's bid was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The Commissioner also finds the exceptions submitted by the petitioner to be unpersuasive. The petitioner's exceptions largely replicate the arguments advanced at the OAL that were fully considered and appropriately addressed by the ALJ in the Initial Decision.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

El Eldesouky, petitioner, pro se (AAA School, LLC)

Deryls Gutierrez, Esq., for respondent (Adams, Stern, Gutierrez & Lattiboudere, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 11, 2016 Decided: May 23, 2016

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

Petitioner, the owner of AAA School, LLC, a bus company, initially brought this action on June 26, 2014 seeking emergency relief in challenging the decision of respondent, Passaic County Educational Services (PCES), an educational services commission that provides coordinated transportation services to school districts, in refusing to accept his bid, which was the lowest, on four sixteen passenger school bus routes. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on June 27, 2014 for hearing. On July 7, 2014, oral argument was presented before the undersigned. The emergent relief sought was denied.

This remand addresses the merits of petitioner's petition. Petitioner challenges school bus Routes 8029, 8038, 8039 and 8106, claiming he was the lowest bidder and had the appropriate vehicles. The matter was heard on May 11, 2016, on which date the record closed.

Most of the facts surrounding this matter are not in dispute. PCES presented testimony from four credible witnesses. PCES Transportation Supervisor Janette Silva testified that petitioner came to her office during or about May 2013 requesting bid specifications for a summer bid. As part of her duties, she coordinates routes for township school districts in Passaic County and described how districts apply should they want PCES to bid for them. PCES sends a Coordinated Student Transportation Information Sheet to each district to be completed for each student in need of transportation. R-1 This application form requires the name of the student, telephone number, classification, request for equipment, the need for an aide or any other special conditions and the type of vehicle needed. If there is no vehicle type requested, PCES provides a sixteen passenger yellow school bus. If there is a "straggler", that is, a student during the school year that now needs transportation, Silva sends out a notice for bidding for that student if an additional route is needed.

The form prior to the 2014-2015 school year did not have a section specifying that a sixteen passenger school bus would be provided if the type of vehicle were not specified. Silva provided these revised forms to the districts in February 2014 by via email. However, a few of the districts continued to use the old form for the 2014-2015 transportation requests. Because of the complaints filed by petitioner against PCES, they changed their forms to reflect that a sixteen-passenger school bus would be provided if no type of vehicle were chosen. Most of the school districts opt for the yellow school bus because it is safer and is the standard vehicle used. The district makes the decision on the type of vehicle sought. If a minivan is requested, a bid is required, same as the sixteen-passenger bus. Petitioner's bid was accepted for the minivan.

On June 11, 2014, petitioner submitted a bid specification and challenged PCES' sixteen passenger bus routes even though he did not own sixteen passenger buses, requesting that these routes be modified to allow for a seven-passenger minivan. Although he was the lowest bidder on the four school routes challenged here, those routes required a sixteen passenger yellow school bus since a jointure route was involved with two school districts and the safety of the children required that the yellow school bus be chosen. Silva allowed petitioner a few weeks to obtain a sixteen passenger yellow school bus so that he could bid on these routes, but he was unable to do so.

Oneida Phillip, transportation assistant with PCES, confirmed that the yellow sixteen passenger school bus is safer for children because it is large, more visible and loud. She also noted and that it is the ultimate decision of the district to accept this vehicle before contracting and paying for it. She also confirmed that some districts continued to use the incorrect form for the 2014-2015 and further stated that if a type of vehicle is not specified, the sixteen passenger yellow school bus will be chosen for bid. That initial decision is at the discretion of PCES.

Kathleen MacDonald, transportation supervisor for the Clifton Board of Education testified that district procedure requires the case manager to complete the transportation form and forward it to her so that she can forward it to PCES. She always requests the sixteen passenger yellow school bus because of its safety. MacDonald will request the yellow school bus even if it is for only one child. As vice president of the transportation supervisors of the State of New Jersey, she is aware of the steel construction of these vehicles and the installed warning signals, making these vehicles safe for students.

Lastly, Aida Esquilin, Passaic Board of Education transportation manager, testified, confirming that the sixteen passenger yellow school bus is the most reliable and safest.

When facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings. Credibility is the value that a finder of fact gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, its internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (8th Cir. 1963). Based upon these principles, I FIND that the testimony of all PCES witnesses was compelling and credible. They were forthright and detailed in their testimony concerning the safety and choosing of the sixteen passenger yellow school bus. Petitioner did not testify nor did it provide any witnesses, only providing a summation at the end of the hearing.

Based upon the credible testimony of the witnesses presented by PCES at the hearing, I FIND that when choosing the sixteen passenger yellow school bus, it is at the discretion of the district, since it is, in its opinion, the safest for transporting students. It is clearly marked and identifiable as a school bus, among other reasons offered by witnesses who testified.

Petitioner has filed three emergent applications addressing the same issue and has been denied relief on all three. The Commissioner issued a final decision in this matter on July 10, 2014 affirming the denial of emergent relief, reasoning that petitioner cannot be successful on the merits. The Commissioner also affirmed the Initial Decision (OAL DKT. NO. EDU 08740-15) of Judge Michael Antoniewicz in granting summary decision, concluding that petitioner did not fit the requirements of the bidding specifications, and therefore was not entitled to the bid.

The testimony presented on the merits before me on May 11, 2016 does not change the facts. They remain the same. It is undisputed that petitioner did not own a sixteen-passenger yellow school bus during the bidding on the four routes in question. This was the type of school bus approved by the districts. Petitioner only owned a minivan. Petitioner alleges that the bid requirements are against the law, arguing that it should be up to the taxpayers to determine which form of transportation should be provided by PCES. Petitioner further claims that the requirement of a sixteen-passenger yellow bus is "illogical."

The practice of competitive bidding is "rooted deeply in sound principles of public policy." Hillside Twp v. Sternin, 25 N.J. 317, 322 (1957). The purpose of public bidding requirements is to secure for the public the benefits of unfettered competition, and to guard against favoritism, improvidence, extravagance and corruption. National Waste Recycling, Inc. v. Middlesex County Imp. Authority, 150 N.J. 209, 219 (1997). Public bidding statutes exist for the benefit of taxpayers, not bidders, and are to be construed with sole reference to the public good. Id at 220. The major objective of all public bidding statutes has been to promote honesty and integrity of those bidding and of the system itself. Keyes Martin & Co. v. Director, Div. of Purchase., 99 N.J. 244, 256 (1985). The bid specifications to which petitioner cite N.J.A.C. 6A:27-9.3(a) reads:

> Specifications drawn for purposes of competitive bidding shall be drafted in a manner designed to encourage free, open, and competitive bidding. Specifications shall not knowingly discriminate; exclude prospective bidders by reason of the impossibility of performance, or bidding by any one bidder. All bidding practice shall be designed to prevent fraud, favoritism, and extravagance, to safeguard the taxpayers, and protect the lowest responsible bidders. The bid specifications shall be definite, precise, impose common standards, and protect against discrimination in accordance with N.J.S.A. 10:5-31 et seq. When bid specifications are formed to deter rather than invite genuine competition, an award to the favored bidder shall be set aside.

Petitioner has not presented any proof of discrimination against it when it failed to secure four bids as the lowest bidder since it did not own sixteen passenger buses. PCES even gave petitioner additional time to secure a sixteen passenger yellow school bus so that it could bid for the four routes in question. It is evident from the compelling testimony of the witnesses that the sixteen passenger yellow school bus is the safest form of transportation, and in the discretion of the district is the school bus of choice. It is also evident that PCES is not the ultimate decider of the bus sought. It is the district which decides whether or not to accept a bid, irrespective of the wording on the forms provided by PSEC.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not proven by a preponderance of any credible evidence that the action of PCES was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable when it was ultimately determined and agreed to by the district that only sixteen passenger yellow school buses, being the safest for the children, which petitioner did not own, be used for Routes 8029, 8038, 8039 and 8106.

Opinion and Award

Tia Schneider Denenberg, Arbitrator

APPEARANCES

FOR THE DISTRICT:

Albert C. Buglione, Buglione, Hutton & Deyoe, L.L.C

FOR THE TEACHER:

Lesley Etheridge, Pro se

BACKGROUND

This dispute initially concerned 22 charges, dated April 23, 2015, involving inefficiency and unbecoming conduct.[1] They were brought against tenured teacher Lesley Etheridge[2] under Section 25 of the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. The charges, as scanned by the district, are appended [Exhibit 1]. Charge 1 alleges inefficiency for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. The remaining 22 charges are allegations of conduct unbecoming a teacher during the same period.[3] The respondent has denied all charges.

[1] For ease of reference the arbitrator has cited the date on which each document was created, rather than the date on the DOE stamp. In this matter there is no allegation of failure to comply with time limits.

[2] The teacher was hired as an electronics instructor on September 1, 1996. Holding a standard certificate in that subject, she taught Electronics 1 and Electronics 3 [Petitioner Exhibit 1]. In the documentation, her name is given in several different forms.

[3] No. 22, the penultimate charge, was intentionally dropped by the district.

The pre-hearing phase of the proceeding was prolonged by the teacher's struggle to find and retain satisfactory counsel.[4] She was given ample opportunity to do so, inasmuch as the arbitrator believed that she should be represented by a qualified advocate, if at all possible. As a result, a case that was referred to the arbitrator in June, 2015, could not begin to be heard until late November of that year. Apart from a brief period, the teacher was unrepresented. She was cautioned that, while representing herself, she must comply with statutory requirements, including deadlines.[5]

When the arbitrator received this dispute from the Commissioner, in a letter dated June 26, 2015, she discovered that some of the accompanying documents needed to be reproduced in color for the sake of legibility. The arbitrator also noted that three exhibits listed in the initial submission were missing: Corrective Action Plan Self-Evaluation Progress Report [Exhibit 1.17], Corrective Action Plan Interim Report [Exhibit 1.18], and Pre-Observation Conference Record [Exhibit 1.19], which was divided into:

a) 2014-2015 Formal Classroom Observation Forms.
b) 2014-2015 Corrective Action Plan Reports.
c) 2014-2015 Corrective Action Plan Self-Evaluation Progress Report.
d) 2014-2015 Corrective Action Plan: Interim Report.

The arbitrator denied a motion by the teacher for dismissal of the charges, owing to the omissions. The district promptly rectified the deficiencies in the submissions.

In July, the arbitrator proposed the dates of August 3 and August 4, 2015, for a hearing. The district was prepared to go forward, but the teacher objected. She maintained that she needed more time to obtain counsel. A conference call was conducted on July 17, 2015, and transcribed for the official record.[6] During the call, the teacher moved for an "adjournment so that I may have an attorney present with me at this hearing so that I may [4] The arbitrator has not attempted to give an exhaustive account of the many motions that she ruled upon during the pre-hearing phase. The rulings were generally transmitted to the parties by email for the sake of efficiency.

---

[5] The teacher was also advised that she could be accompanied and supported by someone who was not legally qualified [Tr. , 20]. Her husband, who is a fellow electronics teacher, attended portions of the hearings.

[6] Participating in the call were the teacher, the arbitrator, Mr. Buglione, and Mr. Parent, the district principal. At the arbitrator's request, Howard A. Rappaport, Certified Court Reporter, was at Mr. Buglione's office, transcribing the call for the official record. The teacher emailed the following message on July 16: "I will record every conference call and every contact I have with you and the board attorneys." The parties were informed that any material provided to the arbitrator should be sent to the opposing party as well and that phone calls, other than conference calls, were to be avoided.

have an opportunity for a fair and meaningful hearing as required under the law" [Tr., pp. 3-4].

At the time of the phone call, all statutory deadlines had been met, in the arbitrator's view, although the district questioned the sufficiency of the teacher's response: "the respondent hasn't filed the required list of witnesses and summaries of testimony according to New Jersey Statute Annotated 18:A6-17.1 subpart B, subpart 3" [Tr., p. 26]. The parties agreed that a thorough response[7] would arrive by July 31 and include a witness list and summary of testimony [Tr., p. 38]. These documents were also needed as an accommodation to the district counsel, who suffers from a speech-related disability. To avoid stuttering, he normally studies the advance summary of testimony carefully and writes out the questions he wishes to ask the witnesses [Tr., pp. 48-49].

The teacher, too, asked for a disability accommodation. She believed that her asthma would be aggravated by recent construction in the district [Tr., p. 54]. The district counsel pointed out that construction had ended, and new air-conditioning had been installed. In addition, he said, food could be brought into the hearings, which would ensure both comfort and efficiency [Tr., pp. 55-56]. The parties ultimately agreed to hold the hearing at the district counsel's law office in Wayne, New Jersey [Tr., p. 61].

The arbitrator summarized the hearing arrangements in an email to the parties, dated July, 22, 2015:

> Thank you for your participation in the conference call on Friday. As promised, attached is a notice of hearing, as well as hearing guidelines and a digital style sheet that you may find useful. Below is my brief summary of the arrangements we made for hearings on September 21, 22 and 23.
>
> We will begin each day at 10:00 AM. The parties should be prepared to stay into the evening, if necessary to finish in three days. We thank Mr. Buglione for agreeing to host the hearings as an accommodation to Ms. Etheridge.
>
> Ms. Etheridge is encouraged to familiarize herself with the statutory requirements. Our discussion on Friday was not intended as legal advice but as a reminder that each party is responsible for ensuring its compliance with the statutory framework and deadlines for pre-hearing exchange of information. Attention must be paid to:
>
> > P.L.2012, CHAPTER 26 11
> > (3) Upon referral of the case for arbitration, the employing board of education shall provide all evidence including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employee or the employee's representative. The employing board of education shall be > precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses. At least 10 days prior to the hearing, the employee shall provide all evidence upon which he will rely including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employing board of education or its representative. The employee shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses.

[7] The arbitrator reminded the district that a respondent has no obligation to produce witnesses or other evidence; the district bears the burden of proving its case without her help.

> Discovery shall not include depositions, and interrogatories shall be limited to 25 without subparts.

We have agreed that Ms. Etheridge will be submitting on or before July 31, 2015, her list of witnesses and summaries of their testimony, as well as the evidence she intends to introduce at the hearing. Ms. Etheridge hopefully will secure counsel in time for the hearing, but I intend to proceed even if she is unable to do so.

My preference is to receive all material in digital format as well as hard copy (see attached digital style sheet). A format that is readable in Word or PDF, allowing excerpting, will be the most convenient. Filing by email will suffice to meet a deadline, so it is not necessary to send material to me by overnight delivery with signature required.

The next day the teacher moved to postpone the hearing for health reasons. The arbitrator denied the motion and on August 18 emailed the following ruling to the parties:

I have reviewed the materials the parties have submitted. To the extent that either party has reargued an issue which was previously decided, please note that you have a standing objection to the ruling. It need not be reiterated. All other issues raised in the submissions have been taken under advisement until the hearing.

The parties should focus on the issues at hand. Ad hominem comments or asides are out of place in an arbitration. After the hearings are complete and the transcript is available, the parties will be afforded an opportunity to submit final arguments.

The district was ready to begin the hearing on August 3 and 4. Over the district's objection, the arbitrator consented to reschedule hearings on September 21, 22 and 23 in order to allow the respondent additional time to secure counsel and to prepare her case. The hearing will go forward as scheduled. The district is asked to provide the court reporter with a list of acronyms, names, titles, buildings, or programs that are likely to be mentioned during the hearing.

Consistent with the statute, the district is permitted to extend the respondent's time off the payroll for an additional 49 days.

Outside the hearings, communication with the arbitrator should occur only via email. If a message is more than one page, also send a hard copy and attachments through the postal service. I do not expect to receive any submissions until we meet. I will be out of town for an extended period and will be unreachable.

I look forward to spending productive time in September.

The hearings scheduled for September were postponed, however, at the request of the respondent when she secured the services of Nancy I. Oxfeld as her counsel. After a brief conference call between the attorneys and the arbitrator on September 11, the hearings were rescheduled for November 30, December 1, and December 2, 2015.

Since the teacher was responsible for delay of the proceeding, the arbitrator allowed the district to extend her time off the payroll. The teacher understood, according to Ms. Oxfeld, that her pay would continue to be tolled.

On November 12, Ms. Oxfeld made a motion to be relieved as counsel, because of incompatibility with the client. The respondent opposed the motion. Since the hearings were due to start in two weeks, the motion was denied on November 17. The hearings already had been delayed for 119 days by the representation issue; the district had been ready to proceed on the hearing dates scheduled in August and September, 2015.

At the outset of the hearing (November 30, 2015), Ms. Oxfeld described on the record her discomfort in representing the respondent. She asserted that her client had directed her to act in a manner which was inappropriate and inconsistent with ethical and professional standards. Before the district called its first witness, the teacher dismissed Attorney Oxfeld:

> I'd like to say Ms. Oxfeld, I'm allowing you to recuse yourself because this hasn't been going in my favor at all. So, you can leave. It was nice knowing you. I can handle it from this point on. Because you said a few things that are untrue [Tr., p. 111].

The parties were afforded a full and fair opportunity to present evidence and argument on the November and December hearing days, which spanned a total of approximately 25 hours. The arbitrator confirmed that the transcript ordered by the district was the official record and that the teacher would receive a copy without charge. The arbitrator granted the district's motion to preclude the teacher's recording the proceedings herself.

The following administrators of Passaic County Technical Institute testified under oath or affirmation for the district:

Michael Parent, Principal

Lydia Yikon'a, Curriculum Instruction Supervisor

Joseph Sabbath, Assistant Principal

Robert Gray, Assistant Principal

Briefs were filed by both parties, who agreed to admit without comment the respondent's previous grievances and formal complaints, along with the replies [Tr., p. 750]. The arbitrator also requested that the exhibits be reorganized for better access, adding attachments to district documents, already in evidence [Tr., p. 520]. The reorganization was accomplished by the court reporting service. The commissioner granted an extension until June 27, 2016 to issue the decision.

DISCUSSION

The tenure charges filed against the respondent alleged inefficiency, inappropriate grading practices, inappropriate conduct, and insubordination. In support of the charges, the district presented the testimony of its four witnesses and entered numerous exhibits into the record. The respondent cross-examined the district's witnesses and advanced arguments but produced no witnesses or documentary evidence.[8] She also declined to testify on her own behalf. The following dialog between the respondent and the arbitrator occurred during the hearing:

THE RESPONDENT: I'm a Christian, and as a Christian I do not believe in oaths to anyone.

THE ARBITRATOR: It's an oath or affirmation.

THE RESPONDENT: I don't believe in it.

THE ARBITRATOR: An affirmation?

THE RESPONDENT: None of those.

THE ARBITRATOR: Do you promise to tell the truth?

THE RESPONDENT: I only make promises to my Father in heaven, not to human beings.

THE ARBITRATOR: So, when you testify --

THE RESPONDENT: I don't testify. I already told you all this. I never testify.

THE ARBITRATOR: So you're not going to give evidence in this hearing?

THE RESPONDENT: I'm only going to question these people, but I'm not going to testify to anything.

[Tr. 98-99]

[8] The teacher was cautioned that her questions were not evidence per se, and her attempt to submit new evidence after the hearing, to which district objected, was not permitted.

Charge 1–Inefficiency

The burden in this proceeding is on the district to demonstrate by a preponderance of the record evidence that the tenure charges should be sustained. Under TEACHNJ, if a tenured teacher is rated "ineffective" or "partially ineffective" in two consecutive summative annual evaluations, the teacher becomes subject to loss of tenure.

The arbitrator's authority to review tenure charges is limited. If a district brings charges against a teacher, the arbitrator may not consider the merits of the decision but must instead determine, based on the evidence, whether:

(1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan (CAP);
(2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
(3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by state or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by state or federal law;
(4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.

[NJSA 18:A-6-17.2]

The district used a state-approved system—the Stronge Evaluation Model—to evaluate teachers' performance. The model consists of seven performance standards: (1) professional knowledge; (2) instructional planning; (3) instructional delivery; (4) assessment of and for student learning; (5) learning environment; (6) professionalism; and (7) student academic progress. Each performance standard includes a number of indicators that help calculate a teacher's effectiveness on his or her annual summative evaluation. Administrators examine several data sources—classroom observations, a documentation log, and Student Growth Objectives (SGOs), a tool for measuring learning—in developing an annual summative rating for a teacher. In each year the respondent received classroom observations, three in 2013-2014 and four in 2014-2015, including one that was announced in advance. In some instances, there were co-observers [Tr., pp. 126, 233, Exhibits 1.1.F and 1.22].

School Year 2013-2014

The respondent was trained on the components of the Stronge Evaluation Model at the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year. Formal observations of the respondent were conducted by Ms. Yikon'a on October 30, 2013 [Exhibit 1.1A] and February 6, 2014 [Exhibit 1.1B] and by Administrator Nicola Bucci on March 25, 2014 [Exhibit 1.1C]. Both Ms. Yikon'a and Administrator Bucci were certified annually to complete summative evaluations of the district's teachers.

For the 2013-14 school year, the respondent received the following performance ratings for each standard in her summative report:

(1) Standard One - Professional knowledge - effective;
(2) Standard Two - Instructional planning - partially effective;
(3) Standard Three - Instructional delivery - effective;
(4) Standard Four - Assessment of and for student learning - effective;
(5) Standard Five - Learning environment - partially effective
(6) Standard Six - Professionalism - ineffective; and
(7) Standard Seven - Student Academic Progress - highly effective.

[Exhibit 1.1.F]

Applying the weighting protocol to the performance standards, the district reached an annual summative rating for the teacher of "partially effective" for the 2013-14 school year [Exhibit 1.1.F]. The annual rating listed the following areas as needing improvement:

> Improve on collegial interactions with peers outside the department and also with administration.
>
> Cease unnecessary combativeness.
>
> Be receptive to constructive criticism.
>
> Be less combative in communicating with others.
>
> Be self-reflective in order to be aware of behaviors that are construed as conduct unbecoming a teacher.

[Exhibit 1.1.F]

School Year 2014-2015

On June 6, 2014, the respondent was notified that she would be placed on a CAP for the 2014-2015 school year and expected to correct deficiencies in three performance standards:

(1) Standard Two - Instructional planning;
(2) Standard Five - Learning environment;
(3) Standard Six - Professionalism.

She was instructed to attend workshops on enhancing communication skills and improving other capabilities.

Following an observation of the respondent on October 21, 2014, her supervisor, Ms. Yikon'a, told her that, in keeping with the CAP, she was expected to meet all timelines, adopt improvement measures, and adhere to recommendations [Exhibit 1.19.A]. During the rest of the year, the teacher received numerous messages and reports about her performance from administrators, including classroom observers:

- On October 28, 2014, the respondent, along with other teachers at PCTI, was notified that SGO drafts must be delivered to supervisors by November 7 [Exhibit 1.11]. The respondent missed that deadline.

- On November 12, 2014, Ms. Yikon'a informed her that a self-evaluation report for the CAP must be submitted by November 21.

- On November 14, the respondent was directed to complete her SGO draft in one week [Exhibits 1.6]. Ten days later (November 24), the supervisor memorialized the lack of a draft.

- On December 16, 2014, a pair of assistant principals observed the respondent's Electronics 3 class and made recommendations for improvement in their report. [Exhibit 1.19B]. The observers found that the teacher "jumped from topic to topic in rapid succession" and "provided little opportunity for students to actively participate in discussions." An oral quiz "resulted in answers being shouted out from around the room." The recommendations included an instruction to develop activities "conducted in a logical sequential order" and assignments "directly related to the objective of the day." The respondent did not file a rebuttal to the report or acknowledge the recommendations.

- On December 17, 2014, Dr. Parent informed the teacher that, despite five reminders, she had not submitted the SGO draft and the CAP Self Evaluation Report:

> Your inactions are inappropriate, defiant and insubordinate, demonstrate a blatant disregard of and open defiance of administrative directives, and are nothing more than your attempt to deflect from the real issue that you refuse to conform to TEACHNJ.
> [Exhibit 1.11]

- On January 12, 2015, Dr. Parent reminded the teacher that several reprimands had been issued since September, 2014, for missing important deadlines and failing to complete required tasks [Exhibit 1.13]. In order to assist the respondent, he wrote, a member of the School Improvement Panel would meet with her weekly. No meeting with a panelist took place, according to the district.

- On January 21, 2015, Ms. Yikon'a wrote to the teacher about her need to improve classroom management:

> During my walk-through on January 20, 2015, three students were working on unrelated activity you gave the class (Geo physical science). I spoke to them about following your directives and being engaged on the assigned task. Two of the students went back to what I assume were their seats but one student stayed on and continued to work on an assignment from another class.
>

The respondent did not acknowledge receiving the memorandum.

- On January 26, Ms. Yikon'a transmitted the CAP Interim Report, which the respondent also did not acknowledge [Exhibit 1.18]. In the report Ms. Yikon'a noted that the teacher still had not submitted the SGO draft or the CAP Self Evaluation Report and had not "followed up with any of the recommendations outlined" in the CAP. The supervisor also criticized her for misusing lesson plans, failing to submit grades, recording "grades unrelated to the electronics program in Electronics 1 prompting the administration to revoke online grade book privilege on December 2, 2014," refusing "to adhere to school policy," ignoring the curriculum, lacking professional ethics, hindering "all aspects of student learning," leaving "instructional tools all over the classroom," and coaxing students "to write petitions against the administration based on false information."

- On February 19, 2015, Dr. Parent and Assistant Principal Paterson observed the respondent's Electronics 1 class [Exhibit 1.19D]. In their report, they criticized the teacher for "pontificating" on extraneous matters, for keeping an untidy classroom, and for permitting the walls to be "[de]void of student work" and "decorated with inspirational posters." The observers noted that only ten of the 22 students were taking notes. They also mentioned a need to "modify her erratic behavior and improve her combative interaction towards her colleagues and school community." The respondent did not acknowledge the observation report.

- On March 17, 2015, the respondent's supervisor and Dr. Parent observed her Electronics 3 class [Exhibit 1.19E]. They faulted the teacher for not giving students an "opportunity to use higher level thinking skills" and for a "lack of understanding of the intellectual, social, and emotional development of this age group." They also criticized her for not submitting lesson plans for the week and asserted that "suggestions for using effective [teaching] strategies are met not only with resistance, but extreme hostility." Again, the respondent never acknowledged the observation report.

- On April 21, 2015, the respondent's supervisor submitted a final CAP report [Exhibit 1.20]. The report stated, in part:

Throughout the 2014-2015 school year, Mrs. Etheridge was the perpetrator of abuse of the district's grading system, inappropriate conduct, desertion of professional responsibilities, and insubordination for neglect of duty.

Mrs. Etheridge has not completed the following:

- SGO drafts (due October 2014)
- Corrective Action Plan Self Evaluation Progress Report
- Furthermore, Mrs. Etheridge has been issued reprimands for the following:
- Misuse and abuse of the grading system
- Failure to complete your SGO draft
- Failure to complete your Corrective Action Plan Self Evaluation
- Showing inappropriate and unapproved films
- Poor Lesson Planning
- Abandonment of Duty
- Discourteous correspondence
- Mrs. Etheridge has not followed up with any of the recommendations outlined in the Corrective Action Plan:
- Attend workshops that would modify her erratic behavior and improve her combative interaction towards her colleagues and school community.

Mrs. Etheridge needs improvement in the following areas based on the evidence and the recommendations outlined by observers:

1. Professional Knowledge
2. Instructional Planning
3. Instructional Delivery
4. Assessment of and for Learning
5. Learning Environment
6. Professionalism
7. Student Academic Progress

Final recommendation based on outcome of Corrective Action Plan:

The deficiencies were not corrected: The teacher is recommended for non-renewal/dismissal. [Exhibit 1.20.]

- On May 8, 2015, the district sent the respondent her Teacher Summative Report for the year [Exhibit 1.22], which is dated April 22, 2015. Applying the Stronge Evaluation Model, the district rated the respondent as "ineffective" for the 2014-2015 school year in all seven standards, each of which comprised four to nine performance indicators. Her annual summative rating therefore became"ineffective." The following comments in the report indicate the significance of the rating for each standard:

Standard 1—The teacher bases instruction on material that is inaccurate or out-of-date and/or inadequately addresses the developmental needs of students.

Standard 2—The teacher does not plan, or plans without adequately using the school's curriculum, effective strategies, resources, and data.

Standard 3—The teacher's instruction inadequately addresses students' learning needs.

Standard 4—The teacher uses an inadequate variety of assessment sources, assesses infrequently, does not use baseline or feedback data to make instructional decisions and/or does not report on student academic progress in a timely manner.

Standard 5—The teacher inadequately addresses student behavior, displays a harmful attitude with students, and/or ignores safety standards.

Standard 6—The teacher demonstrates inflexibility, a reluctance and/or disregard toward school policy, and rarely takes advantage of professional growth opportunities.

Standard 7—The work of the teacher does not achieve acceptable student academic progress.

Charges 2 to 23—Conduct Unbecoming a Teacher

Charge 23 addresses "conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member and other just cause." This charge repeats and incorporates all of the allegations contained earlier in the complaint and alleges that "all of these foregoing charges considered as a whole demonstrate a pattern of inappropriate and insubordinate behavior that is wholly improper in a public school setting and constitute(s) conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member and/or other just cause for termination."

Specifically, Charge 2 alleges that the respondent falsified grades and engaged in inappropriate grading practices. Charges 3 through 7 allege that the respondent engaged in inappropriate staff conduct by: coercing students (Charge 3); engaging in unprofessional conduct during an affirmative action meeting (Charge 4); engaging in unprofessional conduct during a parent-teacher meeting (Charge 5); showing an unauthorized film (Charge 6); and by engaging in unprofessional conduct during a parent-teacher meeting (Charge 7).

Charges 8 through 21 allege that certain of the respondent's actions constituted desertion of professional responsibility. Specifically, the district asserts that the respondent failed to report to her Period 1 co-teaching assignment on October 22, 2014 (Charge 8); the respondent left her Period 2 students unattended on December 8, 2014,without providing notice to her immediate supervisor or an administrator (Charge 9); the respondent's immediate supervisor issued a memorandum on February 4, 2015, indicating that the respondent had left campus without permission or following proper notification and sign-out procedures (Charge 10); the respondent failed to report to her Period 1 co-teaching assignment on February 18 (Charge 11) and on February 19, 2015 (Charge 12); the respondent failed to report to her Period 1 co-teaching assignment in a timely manner on March 9 and March 10, 2015 (Charges 13 and 14); the respondent failed to remain in her Period 6B-7A co-teaching assignment on March 17, 2015 (Charge 15); the respondent failed to report to her Period 1 co-teaching assignment on March 19, 2015 (Charge 16); the respondent failed to report to her hall duty, as required, on November 21 and November 24, 2014 (Charges 17 and 18) and on January 13, 2015 (Charge 19).

Charge 20 alleges that on December 8, 2014, the respondent was issued a formal reprimand by her immediate supervisor for failure to complete and submit lesson plans, and that on December 17, 2014, she was issued a memorandum by the principal accusing her of insubordination for failure to adhere to the required lesson plan format and mandates outlined by her immediate supervisor. This charge also alleges that on January 21, 2015, the respondent was issued a memorandum by her immediate supervisor reminding her to complete and submit appropriate lesson plans, and that the respondent refused to read or sign the memorandum.

Charge 21 alleges that, contrary to established district policy, the respondent had composed and sent 14 emails to the administration from September 2 through October 30, 2014, during scheduled instructional time. This charge also alleges that on October 30, 2014, Dr. Parent sent an email to the respondent regarding the time-stamps of her emails to administration; that on November 5, 2014, he issued her a memorandum regarding the tone of her emails that she sent to the administration; and that on January 8, 2015, he issued her a memorandum regarding the tone and demeanor of emails that she had sent to the administration.

In sum, the record contains substantial evidence supporting the charges relating to unbecoming conduct. Some of the events figured in the discussion of Charge 1 and were taken into account in her effectiveness evaluation. Viewed in their entirety, the allegations demonstrate a consistent pattern of insubordinate conduct and behavior inappropriate for a tenured teacher. Therefore, the charges are upheld.

Conclusion

The respondent was notably uncooperative with the district's effort to improve her teaching during the 2014-2015 school year, as evidenced by her disregard of the CAP and SGO requirements. Detailed critiques by classroom observers went unanswered. The respondent's failure to comply with explicit instructions and recommendations from the school administration, and, in some instances, even to acknowledge them, reflects an inability and/or unwillingness to perform as befits a tenured teacher.

In addition, the respondent has failed to establish any of the four limited bases set forth in TEACHNJ under which an arbitrator may reject a district's tenure determination. Specifically, the respondent has not shown that her annual summative evaluation for the two pertinent years failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process. Although both in her cross-examination of witnesses and in her post-hearing brief the respondent challenged the timing and manner in which the CAP was developed, her contentions do not demonstrate any statutory violation by the district in this regard.

Further, the respondent has not shown that a mistake of fact tainted the evaluation or that the tenure charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by state or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by state or federal law. Finally, contrary to the respondent's contentions, she has not shown that the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious. The record indicates that the district complied with applicable procedural requirements designed by statute to provide teachers with due process in the evaluation process. The district carefully documented her pedagogical failings, used a wide variety of qualified evaluators, and accorded her opportunities to correct the deficiencies. But she did not take advantage of them, often refusing even to respond to observation reports, evaluations or suggestions for improvement.

The teacher contended in her post-hearing brief that she was a victim of unfair treatment, claiming that the district's "actions are discriminatory and malicious," having little to do with her teaching ability. The "motive is to inflict both financial hardship and to ruin Mrs. Etheridge's professional reputation," according to the teacher. But she adduced no compelling evidence to substantiate her accusation or explain her lack of cooperation with the reasonable demands of school administrators.

The district believed that the "few deficiencies" shown by the respondent during the 2013-2014 school year "could be remedied through cooperation and through very simple remedial measures on both our part and Ms. Etheridge's part," Dr. Parent testified [Tr., 143]. However, he added that > [w]hat was unfortunate was that at the end of the 2014-2015 school year, in all of the seven standards, minus possibly one, Ms. Etheridge rated ineffective. Completely—a complete downturn, right from the beginning of the school year, with regard to cooperation, with regard to communications with the District.

It is regrettable that a teacher who was rated "highly effective" for student academic progress in 2013-2014 and had the potential to contribute much to her students and the school community failed so dramatically the following year. That disastrous outcome seems to have been a consequence of displacing blame onto others and ignoring constructive criticism.

The Commissioner has previously ruled that "outrageously inappropriate behavior," combined with lack of "remorse or contrition" and a likelihood of repeating the behavior are factors that may be taken into account in assessing a penalty for a non-teaching employee.[9] Those factors are present here. Consequently, all the charges are sustained, which warrants loss of tenure and dismissal from the school district.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Respondent Roslyn Turner-Ince has been employed by the School District of the Township of Irvington since September 2003. She was assigned to the Grove Street School as a Fourth (4th) Grade school teacher. The charges at issue were served by the District on February 5, 2016. The Superintendent of Irvington Public School, Dr. Neely Hackett, charged Respondent Turner-Ince with the following charges:

1. On or about October 1, 2003, the Respondent was reprimanded for hitting two (2) students.
2. On or about May 3, 2011, the Respondent was reprimanded for throwing coffee on a student.
3. On or about October 26, 2015, the Respondent was reprimanded for failing to provide proper treatment to her students.
4. On or about December 28, 2015, during the New Jersey Department of Child Protection and Permanency (DCPP) Investigative Unit, Investigation, at Grove Street Elementary School regarding an unrelated event, the Respondent was observed by the DCPP worker inappropriately handling a student.
5. As a result of the information set forth above, which some shall be specifically set forth below, the Respondent's conduct is in violation of various state and district laws and policies.
6. The Respondent's conduct constitutes just cause for her termination.
7. Moreover, the Petitioner believes that when staff members receive continuous reprimands for physically abusing children, such actions are unacceptable because it endangers the welfare of students, and it negatively affects the academic development of students.
8. Thus, there are just causes to terminate the Respondent by way of tenure charges.

The record reflects that on February 18, 2016, Respondent Turner-Ince received a letter from Dr. Hackett indicating that the tenure charges were certified by the Board and that she was removed from the payroll. Yet on February 19, 2016, the record reveals that Respondent Turner-Ince submitted her answer through her attorney. Nonetheless a day before her answer, the Certificate of Determination had been forwarded to her in contravention to NJ.AC 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (4).

The record further reflects that on March 7, 2016, Respondent Turner-Ince submitted a timely-filed Answer to the tenure charges with a Motion-to-Dismiss for the Commissioner's consideration. This motion for dismissal was requested for two (2) reasons: the District apparently failed to consider the Respondent's Answer before certifying the tenure charges violative of NJ.AC, 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (4) and because charges contained information relative to our Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit (IAIU) investigation without authorization were also violative of NJ.SA 9: 6-8.10 (a). The District submitted an Opposition to the Motion-to-Dismiss on March 10, 2016. On that date, the record further reflects that the Commissioner issued an Order sealing the tenure charges and any related IAIU records pending further action by the arbitrator.

On March 15, 2016, this Arbitrator was assigned this case. On March 17, 2016, the Commissioner formally forwarded the sealed charges with the Respondent's Answer and the Motion-to-Dismiss to the Arbitrator. The record further reflects that the Respondent has yet to receive the following: the record of evidence including the list of witnesses and a complete summary of this testimony at variance with NJ.SA 18A: 6-17.1 (b) (3), as required. Briefs regarding the Motion-to-Dismiss were to be mailed on April 18, 2016. The Arbitrator received the Respondent's brief on that date. However, the Petitioner was granted an extension to May 31, 2016, when his brief was submitted.

ISSUE

Whether or not the Motion-to-Dismiss should be granted without prejudice, allowing the Petitioner to re-file charges?

If not, what shall the remedy be?

PERTINENT PROVISIONS

Upon receipt of the tenured employee's written statement of position and evidence under oath, or upon expiration of the allotted fifteen (15)-day time period, the District Board of Education shall determine by a majority vote of its full membership, or the State District Superintendent shall determine, within forty-five (45) days whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges and whether such charges, if credited, are sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary.

NJ.AC 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (3) states, in pertinent part:

An employee "shall have an opportunity to submit to the District Board of Education or the State District Superintendent a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence both of which shall be executed under oath with respect thereto within fifteen (15) days of receipt of the tenure charges."

NJ.SA 9: 6-8.10 (a)

Records of child abuse reports; confidentiality; disclosure.

NJ.SA 18A: 6-7 (a) states, in pertinent part:

When a complaint made against a school employee alleging child abuse or neglect is investigated by the Division of Youth and Family Services, the division shall notify the school district and the employee of its findings. Upon receipt of a finding by the division that such a complaint is unfounded, the school district shall remove any references to the complaint and investigation by the division from the employee's personnel records. A complaint made by the Division of Youth and Family Services shall not be used against the employee for any purpose, relating to employment, including, but not limited to, discipline, salary, promotion, transfer, demotion, retention or continuation of employment, termination of employment, or any right or privilege relating to employment.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

It is the position of the Petitioner that the Motion-to-Dismiss should be granted, but without prejudice. That is, the Petitioner argues that this result would allow the District to re-file the charges and the Respondent should then submit an Answer consistent with NJ.SA 18A: 6-11. Moreover, the Petitioner also contends that the Respondent should be afforded the right to be heard. Specifically, the Petitioner agrees that she was deprived of the right due to an error in calculation as to when the charges were sent to the Respondent (see NJ.AC 6A: 3-51 (b) (3)).

In response to the Respondent's argument that the Petitioner failed to comply with disclosure obligations, the Petitioner disagrees (see NJ.SA 18A: 6-17.1 (3)). In addition, the Petitioner contends the procedural defects are generally dismissed without prejudice, which allows the District to remedy its defects (see I/M/O Frank King, Agency Docket No. 117-4/07).

The Petitioner argues that it is important to note that tenure charges against the Respondent can be filed, notwithstanding a determination of "unfounded" by the Department of Children and Families (DCF) regarding the Respondent's conduct. In support of this premise, the Petitioner cites In Re Young, 202 NJ 50 (2010).

Although the Respondent relies on I/M/O Kevin Garifine, Agency Docket No. 317-10/15 on the issue that a dismissal with prejudice is warranted, the Petitioner rebuts that the respondent Garifine differs significantly from our Respondent Turner-Ince. Here, the Petitioner notes, Respondent Turner-Ince has three (3) reprimands prior to the current October 2015 incident. Moreover, the "unfounded" determination from the DCF's Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit (IAIU) was uncontested in the Garifine case, unlike our case. Notwithstanding that the Garifine case was dismissed with prejudice, the Petitioner points out that it was not because of just the IAIU's finding solely. Instead, the case was dismissed with prejudice as the result of several investigations by the Board, the police, and the IAIU. That is, the Petitioner asserts, that Respondent Garifine did not commit any misconduct on the day at issue. The Petitioner reasons that the Respondent's request to dismiss Count 4 of the charges with prejudice should be denied for all the above reasons.

The Petitioner vehemently argues that the concept of industrial double jeopardy does not bar the consideration of prior reprimands, when analyzing the determinants of just cause in a termination case. The Petitioner relies on Linden Board of Education v. Linden Education Association John Mizichko, 202 NJ 268 at 267 (2010). In particular, the Petitioner maintains that progressive and corrective discipline is an integral part of the concept of just cause. As to a discussion on the applicability of progressive discipline, an element of just cause, the Petitioner points to I/M/O John Carlomagno, Agency Docket No. 180-8/13. In particular, the Petitioner asserts that all prior reprimands are relevant to the just cause determination in making an evaluation in a dismissal case. Based upon the foregoing, the Petitioner requests that the arbitrator should not dismiss Counts 1, 2, and 3, as the Respondent requests.

On the other hand, the Respondent contends that Respondent Turner-Ince's procedural due process rights have been breached. Although she submitted her statement of position to the District in a timely manner, nonetheless her tenure charges were certified by the Commissioner before her statement of position was even considered (see NJ.AC, 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (3)). Thus, the Respondent maintains that the tenure charges must be dismissed with prejudice and that Respondent Turner-Ince should be made whole for all compensation and benefits lost during the pendency of this proceeding. The Respondent relies on I/M/O Frank King, Agency Docket No. 117-4/07 as a comparable case. As to the application of NJ.AC, 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (3) and NJ.AC, 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (4) (5), the Respondent points to the mandatory language used as noted in Aponte-Correa v. Allstate Insurance Company, 162 NJ 318 (2000) citing Harvey v. Board of Chosen Freeholders of Essex County, 30 NJ 381 at 391 (1959).

The Respondent points out the Petitioner's failure to comply with the disclosure obligations as mandated by NJ.SA 18A: 6-17.1 (3). Specifically, the Respondent delineates the failure of the Petitioner to supply Respondent Turner-Ince the following: statement of witnesses, list of witnesses, and a complete summary of their testimony prior to the hearing. That is, the Respondent maintains, that the Board of Education must furnish the entire record of evidence on the date that this case was referred to this Arbitrator (March 17, 2016). However, the Respondent asserts that Respondent Turner-Ince was not advised of the list of witnesses nor was sent the complete summary of their testimony, as required. Thus, the Respondent reasons that these omissions to supply these statutorily-mandated disclosures renders the Respondent virtually impossible to mount a defense to the charges. Thus, for all the foregoing reasons, the Respondent requests the Arbitrator to grant this Motion-to-Dismiss with prejudice. The Respondent offers the I/M/O Michael Wilson, Agency Docket No. 302-10/15 (final decision, December 12, 2015) as a comparable case on this issue.

In violation with NJ.SA 9: 6-8.10 (a), the Respondent notes that the investigative testimony may not be disclosed in a tenure proceeding (see also Tyler, 236 NJ Super 478 (App. Div. 1989 Certif. denied, 121 NJ 615 (1989)). In spite of this prohibition, Count 4 incorporates information relative to an investigation conducted by the IAIU, a division of DCF. Thus, the Respondent explains is prohibited information and must be dismissed with prejudice by this Arbitrator (also see NJ.SA 9: 6-8.10 (b), which prohibits dissemination and constitutes a punishable offense, up to three (3) years imprisonment).

Lastly, the Respondent adamantly urges the Arbitrator to dismiss Counts 1, 2, and 3 because they comprise the three (3) reprimands prior to the current charge of October 2015. Based on the concept of industrial double jeopardy, the Respondent reasons that these counts should be dismissed. That is, it would be unjust not to because it would subject Respondent Turner-Ince to being punished for the same offenses twice. The Respondent points to a line of cases such as: In the Matter of Victor Onwuzuruike (MSB, decided 2006); I/M/O John Carlomagno, Agency Docket No. 180-8/13 (December 20, 2013); I/M/O Jill Buglovsky, Agency Docket No. 265-9/12 (December 21, 2012) and I/M/O Nikita Clarke-Huff, Agency Docket No. 290-9/15 (November 16, 2015) as being exemplary of this issue. In summary, the Respondent maintains that it would be manifestly unfair to Respondent Turner-Ince for her to face additional punishment for the same underlying conduct.

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

After a careful review of the briefs in support of your positions regarding the Motion-to-Dismiss, this Arbitrator finds that this motion should be granted but without prejudice for the following reasons, except as specified with prejudice.

First, the record reflects that NJ.AC 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (3) provides a fifteen (15)-day window for the Respondent to answer to the Charges presented. However, prior to Respondent Turner-Ince's Answer, the Board certified the tenure charges in contradistinction to the above regulation (see Exhibit I). That is, without considering Respondent Turner-Ince's Answer and prior to the fifteen (15)-day duration, the Board removed her from its payroll on the day of certification, February 18, 2016. Thus, such premature actions from the District are violative of NJ.AC 6A: 3-5.1 (b) (4).

Second, NJ.SA 18A: 6-17.1 (b) (3) provides that the District shall send a record of evidence which includes the following: a list of witnesses and a complete summary of their testimony. However, neither were provided to Respondent Turner-Ince violative of the above provision. Such submissions were to be presented on March 17, 2016, the date this grievance was sent to this Arbitrator (see Exhibit M). These omissions are significant because of its corrosive effects on the Respondent's ability to respond to the charges presented against her.

Third, as to whether the remedy shall be with or without prejudice due to procedural defects, let us look at the prevailing case law. For instance, In the Matter of Arbitration Regarding Tenure Charge for Inefficiency, Michael Wilson and the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Docket No. 302-10/15, December 12, 2015, Arbitrator Amis held that some of the same safeguards were violated, namely the omission to supply the witness list and a summary of the testimony to be presented. However, the time requirements were not strictly complied with, as required. Since the District failed to observe statutory guidelines and offered no explanation for the delay, Arbitrator Amis also granted the dismissal for the District's violation of NJ.SA 18A: 6-17.1 (b) (3). Respondent Wilson was reinstated as a teacher with full back pay and benefits. Our Respondent correctly notes that the Wilson grievance was not nearly as egregious as here with Respondent Turner-Ince in terms of the gravity of omissions, as noted earlier.

In three (3) cases, all involving motions to dismiss, the arbitrators granted the motion, but without prejudice for various reasons. These cases are most analogous to our case involving Respondent Turner-Ince as it relates to statutory violations.

In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Carol Beam, School District of the Township of Mantua, this case is substantively related to our case because it was based on NJ.SA 18A: 6-11. In the Beam case, the respondent was not given time to answer the charges. Also, the certification was defective. In sum, the Board failed to comply with the procedural mandates. Since the tenure charges were improperly filed, the Arbitrator granted the Motion-to-Dismiss, but without prejudice.

Another case which dealt with the failure to comply with statutory mandates is: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frank King, School District of the City of Salem, Salem County, OAL DKT No. Edu. 448907: Agency Docket No. 117-4/07, 2007 NJ Agen Lexis 584, August 22, 2007. In King, no statement of evidence was submitted to the respondent, as required. Moreover, Respondent King was never served with charges prior to the Board's consideration as required by NJ.SA 18A: 6-11. Thus, the Administrative Law Judge dismissed the charges but without prejudice.

Still another case, where the tenure charges were dismissed as premature, is: In the Matter of Marie Ebert State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Docket No. 267-9/14. Here, Arbitrator Denenberg held that the District failed to provide a list of witnesses and no summary of testimony of witnesses until one (1) week before the scheduled hearing. It did not allow adequate time for the respondent to prepare a viable response. Thus, this was found to be in violation of NJ.SA 18A: 6-17.1 (b) (3). Accordingly, the arbitrator granted the Motion-to-Dismiss without prejudice on January 20, 2015. This allowed the District to re-file the charges. Based on this analysis of procedural defects, it seems fair to allow the District to remedy the violations by re-filing. Thus, these aforementioned statutory violations shall be dismissed without prejudice.

Fourth, in response to the Respondent's argument that Count Four should be stricken, this Arbitrator agrees. This count was derived from the investigation by the New Jersey Department of Child Protection and Permanency (DCPP) unit. The record reflects that the Department of Children and Families (DCF), Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit (IAIU) found that the evidence did not support a finding that a child was harmed or placed at risk of harm. Accordingly, the complaint was deemed "unfounded." NJ.SA 18A: 6-7 (a) governs this matter. It, in essence, asserts that such findings, characterized as "unfounded", are precluded from usage against Respondent Turner-Ince as it relates to her employment. This includes disciplinary actions.

In the Matter of the Tenure Charges of: Board of Education, City of Long Branch, Monmouth County v. Kevin Garifine, Agency Docket 317-10/15, February 15, 2016, Arbitrator Weiss dismissed the tenure charges with prejudice based on NJ.SA 18A: 6-7 (a). In sum, this statute states as follows: "upon receipt of a finding by the Division [of Youth and Family Services] that such a complaint is unfounded, the school district shall remove any references to the complaint and investigation by the division from the employee's personnel records." Moreover, this statute goes on to say that a complaint "shall not be used against the employee for any purpose relating to employment, including but not limited to, discipline, salary, promotion, transfer, demotion, retention or continuance of employment, termination of employment or any right or privilege relating to employment" (also see In Re Young, 202 NJ at 72). Based on the foregoing, this Arbitrator finds that Count 4 must be dismissed.

Fifth, in regards to the Petitioner's argument that Counts 1, 2 and 3 should not be dismissed, this Arbitrator must disagree as to Count 2, the coffee incident on May 3, 2011. Here, Counts 1, 2 and 3 are the specified reprimands delineated as three (3) separate charges. Since these are written reprimands, Respondent Turner-Ince has these reports in her permanent file. However, applying the doctrine of industrial double jeopardy, Respondent Turner-Ince was essentially disciplined twice for Count 2, when she was suspended and reassigned. Such actions are against the concept of fundamental fairness, the basis of just cause, because she is being punished twice for the same conduct involving the coffee incident of 2011 (see Exhibit D). Also see In the Matter of Victor Onwuzuruike Merit System Board, decided 2006; I/M/O Jill Buglovsky, Agency Docket No. 265-9/12, final decision (December 21, 2012) and I/M/O Nikita Clarke-Huff, Agency Docket No. 290-9/15, final decision (November 16, 2015).

Although the Petitioner rightly points out that prior disciplinary actions can be considered when making a determination of punishment, this Arbitrator fully agrees. Notice that Count 1 and Count 3 were written reprimands that were utilized only by keeping them in her permanent file. However, Respondent Turner-Ince was suspended and reassigned, solely for the coffee incident of May 3, 2011. Thus, Counts 1 and 3 are not dismissed and are viable (see Linden Board of Education v. Linden Education Association John Mizichko, 202 NJ 268 at 267 (2010); also see I/M/O John Carlomagno, Agency Docket No. 180-8/13, final decision (December 20, 2013)).

AWARD

This Motion-to-Dismiss is granted without prejudice due to violations of the statutory mandates, as noted. Moreover, Count 4 is dismissed based upon the breach of NJ.SA 18A: 6-7 (a). Lastly, Count 2 shall be dismissed with prejudice, as violative of industrial double jeopardy for the reasons stated herein. However, Count 1 and Count 3 are not dismissed but remain viable. Accordingly, Respondent Turner-Ince shall be reinstated as a teacher with full back pay and benefits.

AFFIRMATION

I, Dr. Andrée McKissick, do hereby affirm that I am the individual described in and who executed this instrument, which is my Opinion and Award.

BACKGROUND

The Pleasantville School District approved tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A 18A:6-10 and 6-11 against the Respondent, Daniyelle Lyles-Barnes, a tenured support staff member in the curriculum and instruction office, on December 15, 2015. The formal charge against Barnes placed before the Commissioner of Education and dated December 23, 2015 was that she engaged in conduct unbecoming a staff member. Specifically, she was accused of using "crass and vulgar language toward another staff member" which confrontation devolved into a physical altercation with that staff member. The incident leading to the Respondents tenure charges and termination occurred on September 14, 2015, and is described as follows in the formal charge:
During the lunch break the Respondent was in her normally assigned area, the office of the vice principal, Dr. Bailey. The other actor, Havanna Berry, had been asked by another employee, who otherwise is not involved in this matter, to deliver a bottle of salad dressing to Bailey. Berry in making her delivery entered Bailey's office. Berry recently had been promoted to the position of Director of the C.A.R.E. program in the district and had some control over who was assigned to work in the program.[1] While Berry was in the office, Barnes asked why she was not on the C.A.R.E provider list. Berry responded that everyone knows she (Barnes) does not like children. Berry then returned to the C.A.R.E. office.

[1] The C.A.R.E. Program conducts educational enrichment programs after school and at a summer camp under the auspices of the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001.

Shortly thereafter, Barnes went to the C.A.R.E. office and confronted Berry about the remark she had made that Barnes did not like children. According to Barnes, Berry said, "I'm a bitch that say what I mean and mean what I say." Berry then accused Barnes of speaking negatively about her. Barnes denied the accusation, saying, "Bitch, I don't give a fuck about you." Berry said, "Who are you talking to?" Barnes replied, "I'm talking to you."

Berry then got up from her desk, walked around a nearby credenza and headed toward Barnes, who was standing before the office door. Berry slapped Barnes in the face, and the two started to wrestle, punching, pushing, and pulling hair. The two shortly were separated by security employees.

The Petitioner School District concludes its charge:

> Respondent's vulgar and crash(sic)language and her participation in a physical altercation interfered with the quality of the educational and professional environment of the school, the students' education, and created an unsafe working environment for other District employees, and thus is conduct unbecoming a staff member.
> WHEREFORE, Respondent should be terminated for unbecoming conduct.
>
> December 23, 2015. /s/Leonard Fitts PhD
> Superintendent

Barnes filed assault charges against Berry with the local police, and the school district filed similar charges against Barnes. Both later dropped those charges. The School District, however, filed tenure charges against both employees, seeking to terminate their employment.

According to Barnes, her conversation with Berry about getting a position in the C.A.R.E. program and her remark about not liking children began as an innocent joke some weeks earlier and that Berry had said that when she returned from vacation she would discuss Barnes' being placed on the program. It was with the thought of clarifying this matter, Barnes stated, that she approached Berry on September 14 following their exchange in the curriculum and instruction office. Barnes characterizes Berry's behavior as becoming more and more confrontational. Essentially, she does not contest the description of events as set forth by the district.

It is noted that the events described here took place away from the direct observation of students and teaching staff. The C.A.R.E. office, however, is located near at least two or three active classrooms. No evidence was presented showing any immediate disruption or disturbance of classroom routines because of the altercation between Barnes and Berry. I may be presumed, however, that knowledge of the matter spread quickly through the district.

The School District contends that following N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and 18A:6-11, there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the tenure charges against the Respondent, showing that she engaged in conduct unbecoming an employee and neglected her duties. Further, the School District argues that the charges and supporting evidence herein are sufficient to warrant dismissal.

The Respondent contends that there is no creditable evidence that she engaged in conduct unbecoming an employee or that she was negligent in her duties. Rather, the Respondent states, she became embroiled in the altercation described here only to defend herself from attack by the other employee. For that reason, Respondent would have all charges dropped and all lost wages and benefits reimbursed.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

This is one of those termination cases that did not have to happen. The issue here involves only one of the participants in the altercation here at issue, but it is clear from her behavior that she became too deeply embroiled in the argument preceding the fight to allow her to escape significant responsibility for the incident on September 14, 2015.

It was reasonable for the Respondent to inquire about a position in the C.A.R.E program while Berry was in the curriculum and instruction office. When Berry apparently brushed off her question, it was still reasonable for her to go to the C.A.R.E. office looking for an explanation. Her opening remark there was confrontational, but not on its face sufficient to warrant Berry's response: "I'm a bitch that say what I mean and mean what I say." That clearly crosses the line of acceptable behavior. Instead of backing off, however, the Respondent responded in kind, using "fighting words", and the matter escalated to physical violence. The evidence is clear enough that Berry threw the first punch or slap, but the Respondent also became fully engaged. She had plenty of opportunity to back off, not retaliate, verbally or physically. She did not choose the peaceful course; therefore, she cannot be exonerated or relieved of responsibility for engaging in the fight with Berry.

It goes without saying that violence in any workplace need not be tolerated. This principle is especially relevant in an educational setting where a core value should be the use of reason as opposed to irrational force to resolve differences. The Respondent's argument that there were no repercussions from the altercation that affected the pedagogical and administrative stability of the district, is without merit. Even though there were no student witnesses, the fight was a public event in a public setting, and it was highly publicized. The district had no choice but to respond firmly, as it did. The Respondent's dismissal, therefore, will be upheld.

AWARD

The Petitioner, Pleasantville Board of Education, had probable cause under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 to institute tenure charges against the Respondent, Daniyelle Lyle-Barnes. The charges against the Respondent warrant dismissal; therefore, her appeal is denied.

| STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY, | : | DECISION |
| RESPONDENT. | : | |

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner sought reinstatement of his salary and benefits as a former teacher in the Newark School District, retroactive to the 121st day after he was suspended without pay while tenure arbitration proceedings were ongoing, as required by the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The school district asserted that the Appellate Division's remand of this matter was not a reversal of the original arbitration decision, and that when tenure charges have been sustained on the original hearing, the suspension may be continued unless and until that determination is reversed. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision. The petitioner herein had been removed from his tenured position subsequent to an arbitrator's decision in February 2013, which sustained tenure charges of inefficiency. Following appeal proceedings, the Appellate Division issued a decision entitled Felicia Pugliese v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark and Edgard Chavez v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, 440 N.J. Super 501 (App. Div. May 19, 2015), which remanded the matter to the Commissioner with directions to provide certain guidance to arbitrators in tenure cases. The Commissioner reassigned the petitioner's case to Arbitrator Timothy Brown, who had issued the original decision sustaining the tenure charges in 2013. In March 2016, Arbitrator Brown issued a second decision, which considered the tenure charges once again, sustained them once again, and removed the petitioner from his tenured position.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 provides that if a tenure charge is sustained on the original hearing or on an appeal therefrom, the suspension may be continued unless the determination is reversed; the Appellate Division did not question the arbitrator's decision to sustain the tenure charge, and never reversed that decision within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; in fact, the same arbitrator revisited the matter on remand and once again sustained the charges of inefficiency; as the Commissioner previously found in a companion case, 120-day cases that preceded the implementation of TEACHNJ are inapposite in that administrative law judge decisions before TEACHNJ were recommendations rather than final decisions – unlike the final and binding decisions of arbitrators pursuant to TEACHNJ. Accordingly, as there has never been a dismissal of the charges before or after the Appellate Division decision regarding the petitioner, he is not entitled to the restoration of his pay under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The ALJ concluded that the Board is entitled to summary decision in its favor.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the petitioner is not entitled to restoration of his pay under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; further, the Commissioner determined that petitioner's exceptions were without merit, as the arguments advanced therein were considered and fully addressed by the ALJ in the Initial Decision. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision, and the petition was dismissed.

| RESPONDENT. | : | |

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, Edgard Chavez, and the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark's (District) reply thereto.

This matter involves a request by the petitioner for full salary and benefits retroactive to the 121st day after he was suspended without pay[1] while tenure arbitration proceedings are ongoing. The stipulated facts and the procedural history were thoroughly outlined in the Initial Decision and will not be repeated here; however, a brief summary of the procedural history is required to provide the necessary context for the instant matter. On February 6, 2013, Arbitrator Timothy Brown issued a decision sustaining tenure charges filed against the petitioner and removing the petitioner from his tenured position with the District. The petitioner appealed the February 6, 2013 decision to the New Jersey Superior Court Chancery Division, who confirmed Arbitrator Brown's award. Thereafter, the petitioner filed an appeal with the Superior Court, Appellate Division. On May 19, 2015, the Appellate Division issued a decision remanding the matter to the Commissioner with directions to provide certain guidance to arbitrators in tenure cases. Felicia Pugliese v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark and Edgard Chavez v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, 440 N.J. Super 501 (App. Div. May 19, 2015). After receipt of the Appellate Division's decision, the Commissioner reassigned the tenure charges against the petitioner to Arbitrator Brown for further proceedings. On March 17, 2016, Arbitrator Brown issued a decision again sustaining the tenure charges filed against the petitioner and removing the petitioner from his tenured position with the District.

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the petitioner is not entitled to the restoration of his pay under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 for the period from the 121st day of his suspension until Arbitrator Brown issued his second decision on March 17, 2016. The ALJ further found that the Commissioner's decision in Felicia Pugliese v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 144-16, decided April 12, 2016, is dispositive of the issues in this matter and as a result the District is entitled to summary decision.

In his exceptions, the petitioner reiterates the arguments advanced below to contend that the ALJ incorrectly interpreted the decision of the Appellate Division remanding the case to the Commissioner. The petitioner maintains that the February 6, 2013 decision of Arbitrator Brown was reversed by the Appellate Division, thereby rendering it of no force or effect. The petitioner emphasizes that upon remanding the matter, the court directed the Commissioner to "inform the arbitrator what legal standards to utilize, after which the arbitrators must review the facts anew within this legal framework." Therefore – because there was not a determination on the charges by Arbitrator Brown until March 17, 2016 – pursuant to

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, the District was without discretion to deny the restoration of the petitioner's salary starting on the 121st day of his suspension through March 17, 2016. As a result, the petitioner submits that the ALJ committed reversible error and the Initial Decision should be rejected.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the petitioner is not entitled to the restoration of his pay under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 for the period from the 121st day of his suspension until Arbitrator Brown issued his second decision on March 17, 2016. The Commissioner is also not persuaded that the exceptions submitted by the petitioner dictate a different result, as the arguments advanced by the petitioner in his exceptions were considered and fully addressed by the ALJ in the Initial Decision.

It is undisputed that under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, tenured employees are entitled to receive full salary and benefits starting with the 121st day of their suspension until a determination on the tenure charges is made by an arbitrator. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 also provides that, "[s]hould the charge be sustained on the original hearing or an appeal therefrom, and should such person appeal from the same, then the suspension may be continued unless and until such determination is reversed, in which event he shall be reinstated immediately with full pay as of the time of such suspension." In this case, there was a determination by Arbitrator Brown on February 6, 2013 sustaining the charges of inefficiency at the original hearing. Those charges were not dismissed on appeal, and therefore did not trigger the reinstatement of the petitioner with full pay as of the time of her suspension pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; rather, the matter was remanded as a part of the petitioner's appeal process. As was stated in Pugliese, supra:

> A tenured employee who is appealing from sustained charges may not fall back on the 120-day provision during the appeal process;

> instead, if the employee is successful in getting charges dismissed the employee is entitled to be reinstated with full pay as of the date of suspension. Moreover, the Appellate Division's reversal and remand of these proceedings did not re-trigger the 120-day rule because there is no mechanism for such contained within N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

As a result, the petitioner is not entitled to the restoration of his pay under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 for the period from the 121st day of his suspension until Arbitrator Brown issued his second decision on March 17, 2016. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Edgard Chavez, seeks the reinstatement of his salary and benefits as a former teacher with the Newark Schools (District) retroactively to the 121st day from the start of his suspension without pay while appeals from an adverse arbitrator's opinion and order are pending.

Chavez filed his Petition with the Commissioner on or about July 31, 2015, to which the District filed an Answer on September 14, 2015. The Bureau of Controversies and Appeals transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on September 17, 2015, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, for determination as a contested case. On December 24, 2015, Chavez filed a Motion for Summary Decision with supporting papers. The District filed a Cross-Motion for Summary Decision and Opposition to Chavez's Motion on January 15, 2016. On January 29, 2016, Chavez filed a Reply Brief and Opposition to the District's Motion. The record was closed on May 24, 2016.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The parties have stipulated to the following FACTS in support of their respective Cross-Motions for Summary Decision:

1. Chavez is employed as a teacher with the District.
2. Chavez acquired tenure in the District.
3. The District filed tenure charges against Chavez on July 23, 2012.
4. In its tenure charges, the District alleged that Chavez was inefficient in the performance of his duties. Chavez opposed the tenure charges.
5. The District certified tenure charges against Chavez to the Commissioner of Education on or about September 13, 2012.
6. As a result, Chavez was suspended without pay effective September 12, 2012, has been suspended without pay since then, and remains suspended without pay to date.

7. The Commissioner of Education transferred the charges to Arbitrator Timothy J. Brown (Arbitrator) for disposition under the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act (TEACHNJ), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et. seq.
8. The arbitration hearing was held on November 23, 2012, December 20, 2012, December 21, 2012, and January 18, 2013, and the Arbitrator rendered a decision on February 6, 2013, that upheld the tenure charges and terminated Chavez's tenured employment with the District.
9. After the Arbitrator rendered his decision, Chavez filed a summary action in the Superior Court, Chancery Division, under N.J.S.A. 2A:24-7 to 10, seeking to vacate the Arbitrator's Award. The District filed a Motion to Dismiss and for Confirmation of the Arbitrator's Award in the same court.
10. On September 16, 2013, the Chancery Division Judge, in an oral bench decision, and in a signed Order, confirmed the Arbitrator's Award and dismissed Chavez's Complaint.
11. Petitioner then filed a timely appeal of the Chancery Division decision with the Superior Court, Appellate Division.
12. The Superior Court, Appellate Division, issued a decision on May 19, 2015.
13. After receiving the Appellate Division's decision, on June 1, 2015, the Commissioner of Education re-assigned the matter to Arbitrator Brown for further proceedings.
14. On July 13, 2015, the District filed a Petition for Certification with the New Jersey Supreme Court, seeking to reverse the Appellate Division's decision, and in response, on July 29, 2015, Petitioner filed opposition to the Petition for Certification.
15. The District requested that the Arbitrator hold the matter in abeyance pending a decision on the District's Petition for Certification. Chavez opposed the District's request.
16. In response to the District's request that the Arbitrator hold the matter that had been reassigned to him in abeyance, the Arbitrator agreed to hold the matter in abeyance pending a determination by the Supreme Court on the District's Petition for Certification.

17. The District filed a Notice of Appeal with the Appellate Division on July 14, 2015, challenging the Commissioner of Education's action referring the matter to arbitration. That appeal is pending before the Appellate Division.
18. On or about August 4, 2015, Chavez filed this Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education.
19. After an extension to respond was granted, the District filed and Answer on September 14, 2015, asserting defenses and seeking dismissal of the Petition.
20. On October 26, 2015, the District's Petition for Certification was denied by the New Jersey Supreme Court.

As an additional undisputed FACT, Arbitrator Brown heard the matter as reassigned to him by the Commissioner of Education and issued a Decision Upon Remand on March 17, 2016, wherein he again sustained Chavez's discharge. Also, counsel for Chavez has represented that Chavez was provided with back pay from the 121st day of his suspension through the date of Arbitrator Brown's first Decision dated February 13, 2013.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This language is substantially similar to the guidelines for summary judgment under R. 4:46-2(c), which provides in part that the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law.

In order to defeat a summary decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing." Use of the summary procedure is aimed at "the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial." Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954).

The New Jersey Supreme Court has encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Id. at 540 (citations omitted).

I CONCLUDE, and the parties agree, that this matter is ripe for summary disposition. There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, which governs this matter, provides in relevant part as follows:

> Upon certification of any charge to the commissioner, the board may suspend the person against whom such charge is made, with or without pay, but, if the determination of the charge by the arbitrator is not made within 120 calendar days after certification of the charges, excluding all delays which are granted at the request of such person, then the full salary (except for said 120 days) of such person shall be paid beginning on the one hundred twenty-first day until such determination is made.
>
> Should the charge be dismissed at any stage of the process, the person shall be reinstated immediately with full pay from the first day of such suspension.
>
> Should the charge be dismissed at any stage of the process and the suspension be continued during an appeal therefrom, then the full pay or salary of such person shall continue until the determination of the appeal. However, the board of education shall deduct from said full pay or salary any sums received by such employee or officers by way of pay or salary from any substituted employment assumed during such period of suspension.

> Should the charge be sustained on the original hearing or an appeal therefrom, and should such person appeal from the same, then the suspension may be continued unless and until such determination is reversed, in which event he shall be reinstated immediately with full pay as of the time of such suspension.
> (emphasis added)

Chavez argues that, even if the arbitrator has made his determination within 120 calendar days, salary should be restored while an appeal is in progress particularly where, as he contends, the Appellate Division has vacated the Arbitrator's Decision thereby rendering it of no force or effect. Such was not the case. The Appellate Division did not reverse the Arbitrator's Decision sustaining the charge against Chavez. Pugliese and Chavez v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of the City of Newark, 440 N.J.Super 501 (App. Div. 2015). The Appellate Division did not question the Arbitrator's Decision to sustain the charge or the Chancery Division's confirmation of that Decision. Rather, the Appellate Division focused on the Commissioner's action referring the matter to arbitration, and it remanded the matter in order for the Commissioner to provide additional guidance to the arbitrators. Again, the Appellate Division never reversed the Arbitrator's Decision. In fact, upon remand, the Commissioner returned the matter to Arbitrator Brown with the guidance required by the Appellate Division; Arbitrator Brown revisited the matter; and he issued a Decision Upon Remand once again sustaining the charge against Chavez. Although the Appellate Division decision concludes by saying "reversed and remanded [to the Commissioner rather than the Chancery Division]," the Decision cannot reasonably be characterized as a reversal within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

A companion case to this one involving back pay after 120 days that was similarly remanded to the Commissioner by the Appellate Division with the same directive was decided by the Commissioner on April 12, 2016, while the parties were awaiting a Decision on Remand from the original arbitrator. Pugliese v. Newark School District, EDU 14409-15, Final Decision, (April 12, 2016) http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/. The Commissioner focused on the last rather than the first portion of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

> "In this case, there was a determination by [the arbitrator] sustaining the charges of inefficiency at the original hearing. Those charges have not been dismissed on appeal thereby triggering the reinstatement of the petitioner with full pay as of the time of her suspension pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; rather, the matter was remanded as part of the petitioner's appeal process." A tenured employee who is appealing from sustained charges may not fall back on the 120-day provision during the appeal process; instead, if the employee is successful in getting charges dismissed the employee is entitled to be reinstated with full pay as of the date of suspension. Moreover, the Appellate Division's reversal and remand of these proceedings did not re-trigger the 120-day rule because there is no mechanism for such contained within N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. Therefore, the remedy available to the petitioner at this juncture is reinstatement and back pay if she is ultimately successful in having tenure charges dismissed.
> Pugliese v. Newark School District, supra at p. 5.

This procedural history is no different than that of Chavez with the exception that Arbitrator Brown has once again sustained the charge against Chavez. As found by the Commissioner, 120-day cases that preceded the implementation of TEACHNJ are inapposite in that administrative law judge decisions before TEACHNJ were recommendations rather than final decisions unlike the final and binding decisions of arbitrators pursuant to TEACHNJ.

As there has never been a dismissal of the charge before or after the Appellate Division Decision regarding Chavez, he is not entitled to the restoration of his pay under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The Commissioner's Final Decision in Pugliese is dispositive of the issues in this matter. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the District, rather than Chavez, is entitled to Summary Decision in its favor.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the District's Motion for Summary Decision be GRANTED and the petition of Chavez be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson ["District" or "Petitioner"] certified tenure charges of inefficiency against Respondent Curtis Osborne pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. The Respondent filed an Answer opposing the charges filed against her.

On October 26, 2015, I received notice from M. Kathleen Duncan, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, New Jersey Department of Education, that the matter pertaining to Respondent Osborne was referred to me pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26 and P.L. 2015, c. 1.

> Please be advised that, following receipt of respondent's answer on October 16, 2015, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c. Upon review, the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed. The arbitrator's decision with regard to those charges shall be made pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2, subject to determination by the arbitrator of respondent's defenses and any motions which may be filed with the arbitrator.
> The balance of the charges have been reviewed and deemed sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary, subject to determination by the arbitrator of respondent's defenses and any motions which may be filed with the arbitrator, including, but not limited to, whether N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 and 6-17.3 now provide the exclusive mechanism for bringing inefficiency charges. The arbitrator shall review those charges brought pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 – which are not dismissed as the result of a motion – under the preponderance of the evidence standard.

With respect to Respondent Osborne, a settlement conference was conducted on November 5, 2015 at the Law Offices of Oxfeld Cohen in Newark, New Jersey. At that time the parties brought to my attention that there were global issues common to the cases of three (3) separate Respondents (Osborne, Long and Schaefer) that needed to be addressed. The Respondents' position is that "the manner in which Paterson Public Schools ("PPS") implemented its teacher evaluation system during the 2014-2015 school year violated New Jersey State evaluation statutes and regulations." (Respondents' brief, p. 1). More specifically:

> Respondents assert that PPS' actions in implementing Student Growth Objectives ("SGO") PPS' non-disclosure of key evaluation grading rubric information for its teachers' observations and evaluations, and PPS' failure to implement and enforce uniform and objective observation scoring rules all violated State statutes and regulations, thus bringing the integrity of all of PPS' 2014-2015 school year teacher evaluations into doubt. Id. at 2 (footnote omitted).

The parties mutually requested that I conduct a single hearing on the global issues in accordance with the following tentative schedule:

- Respondent will serve witness certification(s) in support of argument of defects in the District-wide implementation of its performance evaluation system and procedures by Monday, November 16th;
- Petitioner will serve witness certification(s) in support of the Paterson Public Schools' District-wide implementation of its performance evaluation system and procedures by Monday, November 23rd;

- A hearing in the Osborne case will occur before Arbitrator Gifford on Wednesday, December 2nd. This hearing will be limited to cross-examination (and rebuttal testimony) of the witnesses;

- The parties will file briefs regarding this issue only, due one week after receipt of expedited transcripts;

- Arbitrator Gifford will issue a decision regarding District-wide implementation of its performance evaluation system and procedures by January 13, 2016. (Ex. J-1, p. 1).

The parties and the Arbitrators who were addressing the charges against the other Respondents (Long and Schaefer) agreed to rely upon my interim decision for the District-wide implementation of its performance evaluation system and procedures, and for each case to then sequentially address the remaining issues.[2] (Ex. J-1, p. 2).[3]

The Respondents submitted certifications from Mary Chowhan – Treasurer of Paterson Education Association ("PEA") Executive of PEA Evaluation Committee, and Math Teacher; and Sasha Wolf – NJEA Field Representative. The District submitted a certification from Sandra Diodonet – Acting Associate Chief Academic Officer. The parties timely exchanged their witness certifications. (Exs. R-1 (Chowhan) R-2 (Wolf), SD-1 & SD-2 (Diodonet)). Then,

[2] The parties did not object to my request for an additional day to render the decision.

[3] The parties notified Director Duncan of the agreed upon tentative schedule. Director Duncan granted an extension of time for each Arbitrator to issue an Award.

two (2) days of hearing took place on December 2 and 8, 2015 in Paterson, New Jersey. A stenographic recording of the proceedings was taken in accordance with the tentative schedule above. Sworn testimony was received Chowhan, Wolf and Diedonet. The parties submitted post-hearing briefs on December 21, 2015. The record was closed upon receipt of the parties' briefs.

On January 14, 2016 I issued an Interim Decision that included findings of fact and addressed the global issues raised by the Respondent. After careful consideration I concluded that there was insufficient evidence in the record at that time to conclude that the District failed to satisfy the legal requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, and, therefore the arbitration proceedings for each individual Respondent would move forward. The interim decision is posted on the New Jersey Department of Education's website at http://www.state.nj.us/education/legal/tenching/2016/.

On April 3, 2016 Arbitrator Joel M. Weisblatt issued his Decision and Award (#168-16) with respect to Respondent Long. On April 30, 2016, Arbitrator Jeannette F. Drucker, Esq. issued her Decision and Award (#168-16) with respect to Respondent Schaefer. In each case, the Arbitrator sustained the charge of "inefficiency" and upheld the Respondent's dismissal after concluding that the District met its burden of proving that the Respondent received "partially effective" annual summative evaluations in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 and that

The District properly conducted the evaluations under the applicable laws and regulations. The decisions are posted on the New Jersey Department of Education's website at http://www.state.nj.us/education/legal/tenure/2016/.

With respect to Respondent Osborne, hearings were held on January 28, 2016, February 4, 2016, February 11, 2016, March 15, 2016, April 11, 2016, and April 15, 2016. A stenographic recording of the proceedings was taken. Testimony was received from Respondent Osborne, Principal Boris Simon, Vice-Principal Charla Holder, Kimberly Riedel – Supervisor of Literacy, and Principal Courtney Grover. Time extensions to hear and decide this matter were timely requested and granted.

RELEVANT PROVISIONS OF THE NEW JERSEY STATUTES

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Dismissal and reduction in compensation of persons under tenure in public school system

No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation,

(a) if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state, or

(b) if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency as a supervisor, teacher or in any other teaching capacity in the Marie H. Katzenbach school for the deaf or in any other educational institution conducted under the supervision of the commissioner except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing held pursuant to this subarticle, by the commissioner, or a person appointed by him to act in his behalf, after a written charge or charges, of the cause or causes of complaint, shall have been preferred against such person, signed by the person or persons making the same, who may or may not be a member or members of a board of education, and filed and proceeded upon as in this subarticle provided.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the reduction of the number of any such persons holding such offices, positions or employments under the conditions and with the effect provided by law.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2. Considerations for arbitrator in rendering decision.

23. a. In the event that the matter before the arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to section 25 of this act, in rendering a decision the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not:

(1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;

(2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;

(3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or

(4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.

b. In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection a. of this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed.

c. The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review.

d. The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met.

e. The hearing shall be held before the arbitrator within 45 days of the assignment of the arbitrator to the case. The arbitrator shall render a written decision within 45 days of the start of the hearing.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. Evaluation process, determination of charges.

25. a. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S. 18A:6-11 or any other section of law to the contrary, in the case of a teacher, principal, assistant principal, and vice-principal:

(1) the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency whenever the employee is rated ineffective or partially effective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated ineffective in the annual summative evaluation;

(2) if the employee is rated partially effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations or is rated ineffective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated partially effective in the annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency, except that the superintendent upon a written finding of exceptional circumstances may defer the filing of tenure charges until the next annual summative evaluation. If the employee is not rated effective or highly effective on this annual summative evaluation the superintendent shall promptly file a charge of inefficiency.

b. Within 30 days of the filing, the board of education shall forward a written charge to the commissioner, unless the board determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

c. Notwithstanding the provision of N.J.S. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

d. The only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c.26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.).

TENURE CHARGE

The District raised the following charges and specifications against the Respondent:

Tenure Charge: Inefficiency

1. Respondent has been rated Partially Effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations, as follows:

   a. Respondent was rated Partially Effective in her 2013-2014 annual summative evaluation. This rating was based on a teacher practice score of 2.00 and a student growth objective score of 1.80 for an overall score of 1.90.

b. Respondent was rated Partially Effective in her 2014-2015 annual summative evaluation. This rating was based on a teacher practice score of 2.00 and a student growth objective score of 3.60 for an overall score of 0.73 for an overall score of 2.53.

2. Respondent has demonstrated an inability to effective perform the duties of a teacher.

3. Respondent has failed to effectively prepare for instruction.

4. Respondent has failed to effectively use data to inform instruction.

5. Respondent has failed to effectively deliver quality instruction to her students.

6. Respondent has failed to effectively intervene to meet the diverse needs of her students.

7. Respondent has failed to effectively foster a safe, effective, respectful and collaborative classroom environment.

8. Respondent has failed to effectively exhibit leadership.

The parties presented proposed findings of fact in their post-hearing briefs. Having reviewed the entire record, I have adopted the proposed findings as modified below.

1. Respondent Carrie Osborne has been employed by the District as a teacher at School 26 since September 2001. (T3:362). Respondent earned tenure rights on or about the first day of the 2004-2005 school year. (T3:363). From 2012 through the filing of the tenure charges Respondent taught first grade at School 26. (T3:364).

2. To comply with the mandates of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(c), the School District developed, and the State District Superintendent adopted, a teacher evaluation rubric to be followed beginning in the 2013-2014 school year. (Id. at ¶4). The New Jersey Department of Education ("NJDOE") approved the School District's teacher evaluation rubric by letters dated September 7, 2012 and October 4, 2012. (Ex. SD-1(A)). NJDOE notified the District that "[i]f you release a new version [of the Teaching Practice Evaluation Instrument] or if a district employing your instrument makes substantial modifications to the approved version, this information must be submitted through the next review cycle for potential inclusion on the approved list." (Id.).

3. In 2013, the District held staff development programming regarding TEACHNJ and AchieveNJ. (Ex. SD-2, PPS SD-103). The staff was provided with an opportunity to submit questions to the District. On June 24, 2013 Deputy Superintendent Eileen Shafer provided staff members with a copy of the questions and answers. (Ex. SD-2 PPS-SD-104-152). The District later provided another opportunity for questions. The answers were provided in a September update. (Ex. SD-2 PPS-SD-104-153-157).

4. Pursuant to the District's teacher evaluation system, teachers are evaluated on either two or three components: Teacher Practice, Student Growth Objectives ("SGO" or "SGOs"), and Student Growth Percentages ("SGP"). (Wolf Certification Ex. 9-2 ¶ 13). For most teachers, the Teacher Practice Score ("TPS") and the SGO are the two components used to determine the summative ratings. ("2365" Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook PPS-SD-256). Teachers assigned to teach a non-tested area (subjects other than grades 4-8 math and English Language Arts) receive annual summative evaluation ratings comprised of two parts: (i) a teacher practice score based on their performance on the evaluation instrument; and (ii) an SGO score based on the academic growth shown by their students over the course of the school year. (Ex. SD-1 ¶ 10).

5. Teacher Practice Scores are calculated through the use of an evaluation rubric by measuring teaching performance according to seven components: (1) Preparation for Instruction, (2) Use of Data to Inform Instruction, (3) Delivers Quality Instruction, (4) Interventions to Meet Diverse Needs, (5) Classroom Environment, (6) Leadership, and (7) Professionalism.

(Ex. SD-1, PPS-SD-11; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-11; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-257.) Each standard is comprised of several indicators:

Standard 1: Preparation for Instruction

- Indicator 1a. Establish a culture of high expectations for learning and achievement.
- Indicator 1b. Use district-adopted curriculum and content knowledge to design coherent lessons.
- Indicator 1c. Post aligned lesson objectives and plan for demonstrations of learning.

Standard 2: Use of Data to Inform Instruction

- Indicator 2a. Focus on improving instruction using data.
- Indicator 2b. Use a variety of assessment methods when designing classroom assessments.
- Indicator 2c. Involve students in assessing their own learning.

Standard 3: Delivers Quality Instruction

- Indicator 3a. Instruct bell to bell.
- Indicator 3b. Use a variety of instructional strategies to focus instruction.
- Indicator 3c. Engages students in learning.
- Indicator 3d. Continually checks for understanding.
- Indicator 3e. Deliver rigorous and relevant content.
- Indicator 3f. Integrate 21st Century Skills in instruction.
- Indicator 3g. Provides feedback about student proficiency.

Standard 4: Interventions to Meet Diverse Needs

- Indicator 4a. Differentiate instruction based on student needs and background.
- Indicator 4b. Implements interventions with fidelity and adjusts interventions based on results.
- Indicator 4c. Adapt and modify instruction for the unique needs of learners.

Standard 5: Classroom Environment

- Indicator 5a. Contribute to a safe and orderly learning environment.
- Indicator 5b. Use effective classroom management procedures.
- Indicator 5c. Effectively manage student behavior.
- Indicator 5d. Foster collaboration and self-regulation in students.
- Indicator 5e. Promote positive and respectful rapport.

Standard 6: Leadership

- Indicator 6a. Understand their role and responsibility in implementing the District and/or Building Action Plan.
- Indicator 6b. Promote the concept of Professional Learning Communities/ Professional Forums through collaboration and purposeful involvement.
- Indicator 6c. Continue professional growth.

Standard 7: Professionalism

- Indicator 7a. Adhere to federal laws, state statutes and regulations pertaining to education, Board of Education (BOE) policies and school rules.
- Indicator 7b. Demonstrate professionalism.
- Indicator 7c. Effectively communicates and solves problems.

(Ex. SD-1, ¶11; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-10 through 38; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-169, 257).

6. For each sub-indicator, there are three (3) sub-indicators. (Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-10 through 38; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-196 through 222).

7. In order to evaluate teacher performance observed in classroom observations, the administrators (i.e. principal) assigned ratings for each of the indicators being measured in that observation. (Ex. SD-1, ¶12; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-64). The ratings ranged from "exemplary" (or highly effective) to "unsatisfactory" (or ineffective). Evaluation categories were as follows:

> Unsatisfactory (Ineffective, 1 point)
> Progressing I (Partially Effective, 2 points)
> Progressing II (Partially Effective, 3 points)
> Proficient I (Effective, 4 points)
> Proficient II (Effective, 5 points)
> Proficient III (Highly Effective, 6 points)
> "Exemplary" (Highly Effective, 7 points)

(Ex. SD-1, ¶12; Ex. SD-1(H), p. 11; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-64 & 66).

3. The numerical ratings for the seven performance standards (based on the rating of each component indicator) were then weighted with one to three points based on the following weights:

> Standard 1: Preparation for Instruction (2)
> Standard 2: Use of Data to Inform Instruction (2)
> Standard 3: Delivers Quality Instruction (3)
> Standard 4: Interventions to Meet Diverse Needs (3)
> Standard 5: Classroom Environment (2)
> Standard 6: Leadership (1)
> Standard 7: Professionalism (1)

(Ex. SD-1, ¶13; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-51 & 52; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-167). Performance Standard 6 (Leadership) was initially weighted once, but later changed to a weight of two (2) in the Spring of 2014:

> Standard 1: Preparation for Instruction (2)
> Standard 2: Use of Data to Inform Instruction (2)
> Standard 3: Delivers Quality Instruction (3)

Standard 4: Interventions to Meet Diverse Needs (3)
Standard 5: Classroom Environment (2)
Standard 6: Leadership (2)
Standard 7: Professionalism (1)

(Ex. SD-1 ¶13; T2:321; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-255 through 257).

9. With respect to the rubric, the decision between a Proficient 3 or Proficient 2 or other scores is left to the principal's/evaluator's discretion. (T2:277).

10. In order to calculate the annual Teacher Practice Score, the teacher's ratings in each observation were averaged, and the total point values in each of the seven standards were weighted as outlined above. (Ex. SD-1, ¶14; Ex. SD-1P4)). That final sum was then applied to the following chart:

| PPS Weighted Sum Intervals | Score |
|---|---|
| 14-27 | 1 |
| 28-55 | 2 |
| 56-83 | 3 |
| 84-105 | 4 |

(Ex. SD-1 ¶¶ 14 & 23.)

The same point values and weights were applied to calculate the summative ratings in the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. (Id. at ¶¶ 26 & 27). The ratings were inputted by the administrators into a computer software program ("Media-X") that was approved by the Commissioner of Education. (T7:1102-1103, 1160). The software program performed the necessary calculations and then generated an annual summative report. (T7:1102-1103).

11. In the Spring of 2014, teachers were given a PowerPoint presentation concerning the implementation of the teacher observation and evaluation system, specifically with respect to the weighting of the teacher practice standards. (Ex. SD-1(H)). The presentation explained how each of the seven (7) standards were weighed, the scoring of the summative rating, and when a particular standard was rated in more than one observation that the scores for the standard were added and averaged. (Ex. SD-1(H), p. 11).

12. In addition to evaluating their practice, teachers are evaluated on the extent to which they meet their SGOs each school year. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.2 defines "Student growth objective" as "an academic goal that teachers and evaluators set for groups of students." "SGOs are long-term academic goals for groups of students set by teachers in consultation with their supervisors." (See https://www.nj.gov/education/AchieveNJ/teacher/objectives.shtml). SGOs are required to be set by each teacher in collaboration with the principal or supervisor, with the principal having the authority to make the final determination. (N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4(c)3; Ex. SD-1 ¶17; T2:219-220; 267-268.) The teacher determines annual academic goals for a class or group of students and tracks the academic progress of that class or group toward the assigned goals during the school year. (Ex. SD-1, ¶17.) These goals are aligned with Common Core Standards, Core Curriculum Content Standards and school goals, and are based on student learning data from pre-assessments and post-assessments. (Id.). Student progress on an identified SGO is determined by an assessment of the increase in learning between two points in time, as indicated by: (i) acquisition of knowledge or skill from a particular starting point or readiness level; or (ii) development of a portfolio indicating a change in skill or knowledge over a period of time; and (iii) difference in learning on pre-assessments and post-assessments. (Id. at ¶ 18). Additional information concerning SGOs can be found on the New Jersey Department of Education's website in the AchieveNJ Home section.

13. On October 1, 2013 Assistant Superintendents Maria Santa and Aubrey Johnson issued a memorandum to all principals regarding the SGO Professional Development scheduled for October 4, 2013. (Ex. SD-113). The memorandum included an agenda for the October 4th meeting. Attached thereto were comprehensive materials related to the SGO PowerPoint presentation including, but not limited to, an SGO planning calendar, information addressing SGO specific best practices, SGO samples, and other SGO information from the New Jersey Department of Education. (Id.) The memorandum indicated that the purpose of the half day of development was "for teachers to actually write SGOs". (Id.). The training session was then held.

14. The Annual Summary Conference Form is the document that reports a teacher's annual summative evaluation rating. The form includes both the Teacher Practice Score and SGO score. In the 2013-2014 school year, teacher practice scores counted for 85% of a teacher's overall rating and SGO scores counted for the remaining 15%. In the 2014-2015 school year, teacher practice scores counted for 80% of a teacher's overall rating and SGO scores counted for the remaining 20%.

15. On the 2013-2014 Annual Summary Conference Form, the Teacher Practice Score and the SGO are listed in their raw data form, and the form indicates the weight given to each piece of data in the calculation of the final rating: 85% for the Teacher Practice Score, and 15% for the SGO. (Ex. SD-1, ¶21). Those scores were then weighted and the annual summative score determined. (Id.). The form also includes a summative rating scale in order to show teachers how this numerical summative rating ranks them as highly effective, effective, partially effective or ineffective. (Id.).

16. The data to establish the Teacher Practice Score is summarized in the Teacher Practice Summary Report that accompanies the Annual Summary Conference Form which shows the teacher's average scores in each of the seven performance standards from observations throughout the year. (Ex. SD-1, ¶22). This report also shows the weight given to each performance standard and includes a weighted sum interval chart. (See SD-2, PPS SD-256).

17. In the 2014-2015 school year, the District continued to use the evaluation rubric that had been approved previously by the Commissioner of Education. (Ex. SD-1, ¶26). The framework for evaluation was outlined again for teachers in the 2014-2015 Guidebook. (Id.; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook) The point values assigned to each indicator were the same as those that had been used in the 2013-2014 school year, as the 2013-2014 Guidebook had set forth. (Ex. SD-1, ¶27). The same calculation method was used in both 2013-2014 and 2014-2015. (Ex. SD-1, ¶15; T2:321).

18. As in the 2013-2014 school year, the 2014-2015 Annual Summary Conference Form contained a Teacher Practice Score and SGO score. (Ex. SD-1, ¶29). Also as in the 2013-2014 school year, the TPS was determined based on the ratings assigned for each performance indicator in classroom observations throughout the school year, and the weights assigned to each performance standard, while the SGO score was determined based on the calculations in the teacher's SGO goal-setting process. (Id.). On the 2014-2015 Annual Summary Conference Form, the Teacher Practice Score and SGO were listed as weighted data, rather than in their raw data form as in 2013-2014. (Id. at ¶30). The form also indicated the 60% weight given to teaching performance and 20% to student growth in the calculation of the final rating. (Id.). The weighted Teacher Practice and the SGO scores were added together to determine the summative evaluation score. (Id.).

19. In addition to formal classroom observations that were rated, the rubric requires administrators to observe teacher performance informally by doing informal "walkthroughs". (Id. at ¶34). A walkthrough identifies and informs teacher practice in the areas of classroom environment, instruction and student engagement. (Id.). Trained administrators debrief with the teacher and provide feedback and recommendations to improve teaching and learning. (Id.; SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-44-47). A walkthrough is a non-evaluative classroom visit of no more than ten (10) minutes. (Ex. SD-1, ¶34; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-163).

20. Toward the end of the 2013-2014 school year, principals, supervisors and teachers in the Paterson Public Schools were directed to begin drafting Corrective Action Plans ("CAPs") for those teachers who did not earn a summative rating of "effective" or "highly effective." (Ex. SD-1, ¶35). A CAP requires "[t]he teaching staff member to work with their supervisor to create a plan of professional development that is designed to correct the [] identified in their evaluation. The CAP includes timelines for corrective action and clearly delineates responsibilities of the teaching staff member versus the district in implementing the plan." http://www.state.nj.us/education/AchieveNJ/intro/TeachNJGuide.pdf. CAPs were to be drafted by principals in collaboration with teachers and supervisors, meaning that the teachers were to be provided with an opportunity to provide input into the content of their individual CAPs. (Ex. SD-1, ¶25).

21. The 2014-2015 Guidebook originally required that eight walkthroughs be conducted each year for teachers on a CAP, an expectation which was reduced later in the 2014-2015 school year. (Ex. SD-1, ¶35; Ex. SD-2, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-183).

22. As reflected by the guidebooks, training and guidance with respect to implementation of the new evaluation system was initially provided to teaching staff members, including school administrators and teachers, in the 2012-2013 school year and continued during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. (Ex. SD-1, ¶¶5, 8, 28). As a reference, the District produced manuals describing each aspect of the evaluation framework, which were distributed to all teaching staff in the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. (Ex. SD-1, ¶9; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook and 2014-2015 Guidebook). The District also distributed "District Updates" to further inform teachers on the new evaluation system. (Ex. SD-1, ¶7; Ex. SD-1(D); SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-87-100).

23. Teachers received training from the District's Office of Accountability during the 2012-2013 school year. (Ex. SD-1, ¶6; Ex. SD-1(B) & (C)). In the trainings conducted in May and June 2013, teachers were informed that the new framework would be the basis on which their performance would be evaluated beginning in the 2013-2014 school year. (Ex. SD-1(B) & (C)).

During these sessions, teachers were informed that at the end of the 2013-2014 school year, and in following years, each teacher would receive an annual summative rating of "highly effective," "effective," "partially effective," or "ineffective" based on a points rating system; and that if any teacher earned a summative rating of "ineffective" or "partially effective" in both the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, the District would be required to file a tenure charge of inefficiency after the 2014-2015 school year. (Id.).

24. Additional training sessions were conducted over several days in preparation for rollout of the system in the 2013-2014 school year. (Ex. SD-1, ¶5). At multiple training sessions, principals were instructed on how to train teachers on the purpose and implementation of the new evaluation framework. (Id.; T2:243-245). Principals were directed to train their teachers on the evaluation system. (Id. at ¶6; T2:243-245). Training was also conducted throughout the 2013-2014 school year for teachers and school administrators. (Ex. SD-1 ¶18; Ex. SD-1 (E), (F), (G), (H) & (I)).

25. The point values and the weights given to the performance standards were communicated to teachers in the 2012-2013 school year, prior to implementation of the evaluation system, and again in the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. (Ex. SD-1, ¶¶15, 27; Ex. SD-2, 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-51-52 and 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-167).

26. As to training on SGOs in particular, information about SGOs was delivered to all District principals on October 1, 2013. On October 4, 2013, a half day was devoted to district-wide professional development for the purpose of teachers drafting their SGOs with principals and supervisors. (Ex. SD-1, ¶19; Ex. SD-1(J)). The materials used on that training day are attached to Diodonet's Certification, Ex. SD-1(F). (T2:315-316). Additionally, information about SGOs was distributed to teachers in the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. (Ex. SD-1, ¶16; SD-2 2013-2014 Guidebook, PPS-SD-70 through 85, 2014-2015 Guidebook, PPS-SD-171 through 175).

27. The calculation of the Teacher Practice Score was explained in a March 2014 training provided by the District, which is a Junket PowerPoint slides with an audio explanation. (Ex. SD-1(H), Slides 10, 11, and 12; T2:326-327). In the 2014-2015 school year, principals and central office administrators continued to train teachers on the evaluation framework. (Ex. SD-1, ¶28; Ex. SD-1(K), (L) & (M)). The District also provided training to principals and that principals trained their teachers in March 2014 on the evaluation framework. (T2:326).

28. During the 2013-2014 school year, the District provided its teachers and the PEA with written explanations of how the District would calculate the TPS for annual summative evaluations. (Ex. R-2, ¶15). For instance, the 2013-2014 guide included a chart for calculating the raw scores for each of the seven Standards considered for the TPS. (Ex. SD-2, PPS-SD-64).

29. In both the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, Respondent was assigned to teach first grade at School 26 in the Paterson Public Schools. Her annual summative evaluation was conducted in both school years by Principal Courtney Glover. In both years, the District's teacher evaluation system provided for an annual summative evaluation rating for each teacher, consisting of a TPS and an SGO score. In 2013-2014, the teacher practice portion of Respondent's evaluation was based on observations conducted by Glover and Boris Simon who was an Assistant Principal at that time. In 2014-2015, the teacher practice portion was based on observations conducted by Glover, Assistant Principal Chaitu Holder and Kimberley Rieder - Supervisor of Literacy.

30. In addition to the formal observations conducted in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, informal walkthrough observations of the Respondent occurred throughout each school year. Some of walkthroughs were documented, and others were not.

31. Glover, Simon, Holder and Rieder received all of the training for administrators outlined and described in paragraphs 2-28 above. They testified to their familiarity with and use of the rubric. They described their frequent reference to the rubric and their reliance on it in rating teacher performance. They provided similar explanations of how ratings within the categories of "Progressing" or "Proficient" would be given, i.e., the differences between "Progressing 1" and "Progressing 2" and between "Proficient 1" and "Progressing 2". As testified, the differences in the ratings were a matter of judgment, degree and consistency. Their ratings of the Respondent were based on their professional judgment and application of the rubric, reflecting evidence obtained in the observations and/or presented by Respondent during post-observation conferences. They also described how co-observations required "calibration" to ensure consistency in observation ratings.

32. Respondent received all of the training for teachers outlined and described in paragraphs 2-28 above.

33. Respondent has been a member of the Paterson Education Association. She has served as an Association building representative since around the 2004-2005 school year. (T3:365). The Respondent claims that her union activity caused members of the District's administration to have "negative feelings" towards her. (T3:367). More specifically, she recalled during the 2011-2012 school year that Principal David Cozart stated to her in the presence of students and Holder, "You're a union rep. You should know better." (T3:367). The Respondent felt berated. She testified that Holder never disapproved, disavowed or apologized to the Respondent for Cozart's actions. (T3:370). Holder and Glover both testified that they were not aware of the Respondent's union activities. (T5:760; T7:1048).

34. Respondent received a summative evaluation rating of "partially effective" for the 2013-2014 school year. (Ex. SD-3(6)). This rating was based on the weighted average scores in seven standards (each with several indicators) and a measure of the SGOs. The scores were reflective of three (3) formal observations conducted during the 2013-2014 school year on October 18, 2013, January 27, 2014, and March 19, 2014. (Exs. SD-3(3); SD-3(3A); SD-3(4); SD-3(5)). Glover conducted the first two (2) observations, one (1) of which she was accompanied by Simon as a co-observer. (T.3:683). Simon conducted the third observation. Post-observation conferences occurred on October 23, 2013 (first observation), January 31, 2014 (second observation), and April 1, 2014 (third observation). Glover and Simon testified that during the post-observation conferences they afforded the Respondent with an opportunity to rebut the ratings and that her input, if any, was considered. The Respondent did not submit a written rebuttal to any of the 2013-2014 evaluations. (T.3:1275).

35. Respondent's rating of "partially effective" for 2013-2014 was based on a teacher practice score of 2.00, given 85% weight, and an SGO score of 1.30, given 15% weight, for an overall score of 1.90. The score of 1.90 was within the "partially effective" range, which was from 1.85 to 2.64.

36. Respondent's 2013-2014 IPS of 2.00 reflects the calculation required by the District's teacher evaluation process: the total of the weighted average scores received by Respondent on seven teacher practice standards. Her total score was 32.67, within the PPS weighted sum interval of 2 (on a scale of 1 to 4), which resulted in the IPS of 2.00. (Exs. SD-2; SD-3(6)).

35. Respondent's 2013-2014 SGO score of 1.30 reflects the calculation required by the District's teacher evaluation process for teachers assigned to grades and subjects in which no standardized tests were given: the average of two SGOs, based on objectives chosen by the teacher, either in math or language arts or both, based on a data set (whole group or [illegible] chosen by the teacher. (Ex. SD-2; T4:529-536, 547, 561-565).

36. Respondent testified that there were issues with her SGO for 2013-2014 that negatively impacted her summative evaluation ratings. The STAR assessment is a test given to students three (3) times per year in order to collect data and formulate the teachers' SGOs. (T3:371). The Respondent claims that the timed STAR assessment testing was flawed because she was directed to switch from English Language Arts ("ELA") testing to Math after the students had submitted completion codes stating the test. The Respondent indicated that her "lower achieving students" were unable to complete the testing and, therefore, were excluded from her baseline scores. As a result, her SGO goals were set artificially high. (T3:374-377). The Respondent claims that she was deprived of an opportunity to establish SGOs of her choosing (i.e. two (2) in Math or ELA.

or one (1) in each). The Respondent also points out that she did not have the same complement of students from the beginning to the end of the school year given that students moved in and out of the district. (T3:382-387). Holder and Glover testified that teachers were aware that they could request a re-test of their students. (T5:784-786, T7:1068-1069). The Respondent claimed that she was not initially aware of this option. (T4:540). Holder testified that the State's system has accounted for transiency. (T5:784). Glover testified that the Respondent's classroom did not experience higher transiency than others in the district. (T7:1049-1050). The Respondent eventually had her class retake the ELA assessment, but the test results were not obtained in time to use in the development of her SGO. (T3:375-376).

39. Respondent's summative evaluation rating of "partially effective," would not have changed even if she received the highest SGO score in the 2013-2014 school year. Her summative evaluation score would have been 2.30 calculated as follows:

Teacher Practice 1.7 [2.00 x 85%] + SGO .60 [4.0 x 15%] = 2.30.

40. Spencer testified that he mistakenly provided the Respondent with a higher score for Standard 5, Classroom Environment, as he inputted a rating of "Proficient 2" rather than "Progressing 2". (See SD-3(5), T5:739-740).

41. The Respondent testified that during 2013-2014 she had an unusually high number of student disciplinary problems in her classroom and this negatively impacted her overall rating for Classroom Environment. (T3:391-394). Simon testified that the disciplinary issues that the Respondent faced in her classroom were no different from those encountered by other teachers. (T4:599).

42. The Respondent was placed on a Corrective Action Plan ["CAP"] because of her "partially effective" rating for 2013-2014. Glover was the Respondent's CAP supervisor responsible for monitoring the Respondent's progress. (Ex. SD-3(7); T6:1128-1129, 1226). Glover met with the Respondent in June 2014 to discuss her CAP. (Ex. SD-3(7)). Three (3) areas for improvement were identified: planning and preparation, use data to inform instruction, and intervention to meet diverse needs. (Ex. SD-3(7)). The CAP also identified goals and the professional responsibilities of the Respondent and her supervisor. Glover discussed the CAP with the Respondent and she sought her input. (T7:1110, 1220-1221). The Respondent expressed some disagreement with the plan but did not suggest any alternatives. (T3:398; T4:571, 575, 595; T7:1117). Glover indicated that the Respondent did not express a lack of understanding of the plan. (T7:1119). The CAP form bears signatures from Glover and the Respondent. Expressly written above the signature lines provides, "My signature below indicates that I have received a copy of this Corrective Action Plan and that I understand and contributed to its contents." (Ex. SD-3(7)). The Respondent claims that she was not given an opportunity to make changes to the CAP or to provide any input into the contents of the CAP. (T3:398, T4:625). The Respondent also claims that she did not know that Glover was her CAP supervisor. (T3:402).

43. Rieder testified that Glover asked her to support the Respondent with the areas listed in the CAP. (T6:864).

44. Glover met with the Respondent to develop her SGO for 2014-2015 in the Fall of 2014. Despite Glover's testimony to the contrary, the Respondent claims that she was not given an opportunity to provide input into the SGO process. (T3:462, 465). Although Glover could not recall if the Respondent requested an amendment to her SGO, the evidence shows that the Respondent made such a request on February 13, 2015, and Glover approved it on February 17, 2015. (Ex. SD-3(11)).

45. Respondent received a summative evaluation rating of "partially effective" for the 2014-2015 school year. (Ex. SD-3(13)). This rating was based on a TPS of 1.60, given 80% weight, and an SGO of 0.73, given 20% weight, for an overall score of 2.33. The score of 1.60 was within the "partially effective" range, which was the same as in the 2013-2014 school year, from 1.85 to 2.64. This rating was based on the weighted average scores in seven standards (each with several indicators) and a measure of the SGOs. The scores were reflective of four (4) formal observations conducted during the 2014-2015 school year on September 23, 2014, November 20, 2014, January 21, 2015 and April 21, 2015. (Exs. SD-3(8); SD-3(9); SD-3(10); SD-3(12). Holder conducted the first observation, Glover conducted the second and fourth observations, and Rieder conducted the third observation. Post-observation conferences occurred on September 30, 2014 (first observation), November 20, 2014 (second observation), February 6, 2015 (third observation), and no later than May 18, 2015 (fourth observation).

46. Respondent's 2014-2015 SGO score of 3.625 (shown as 0.73 on the Annual Summary Conference Form, reflecting 20% weight) reflects the calculation required by the School District's teacher evaluation process, which was the same as in the 2013-2014 school year except for the increased weight given to the SGO score from 15% to 20%. (Ex. SD-3(11)).

47. Respondent's 2014-2015 teacher practice score of 2.00 (shown as 1.60 on her Annual Summary Conference Form, reflecting 80% weight) reflects the calculation required by the School District's teacher evaluation process, which was the same in 2014-2015 as in 2013-2014. The total score, based on the scores received by Respondent on all of the seven teacher practice standards, was 51.26. (T7:1182).

48. Respondent identified certain individual scores that she disagreed with and/or appeared to her to be incorrectly calculated for the formal observations in 2014-2015. (See generally T3:421-425, 439-440, 457-458; Exs.

SD-3(8), SD-3(10), SD-3(12)). Even assuming the individual scores had been as Respondent claimed they should be, the total of the weighted average scores received by Respondent on the seven teacher practice standards still would have been within the PPS weighted sum interval of 28 to 55, resulting in a TPS of 2. (Ex. SD-3(13) T4:600-601; see Exs. SD-5, P-12, R-14). Therefore, the Respondent's summative evaluation rating still would have been "partially effective". When asked on re-cross whether she knew that the adjustments to the purported errors "would have been enough for you to have obtained a rating of Effective rather than Partially Effective," the Respondent replied "I do not...." (T8:1352-1353; see T4:602-603). The Respondent did not submit a written rebuttal to any of her 2014-2015 evaluations. (T8:1275).

47. The Respondent claims that her formal observations on September 23, 2014, January 21, 2015 and April 21, 2015 were negatively impacted by the fact that during each observation there was an infusion of students into her classroom that she did not normally teach. The Respondent testified that these actions occurred with little or no notice. (T3:413-415, 433-441).

48. The observation form used in 2014-2015 shows the teacher's overall rating for each sub-standard (i.a., I.b., I.c., etc.) but does not show the overall score for each standard. Glover testified that the sub-standard ratings provided sufficient information for the Respondent to be aware of her progress:

> The obvious thing is ... if you have any progressing areas on your observations throughout the year, that would be an indication that, I'm not proficient, I'm not doing well. It's progressing. And you would see that ... at the post-conference, and note that progressing means progressing, progressing means not proficient.... That's an issue that should raise a flag or a level of concern. (T7:1167-1168).

51. Pindar testified that the Respondent was "upset" during the post-observation conference for the February 2015 observation "because there were a lot of progressings." (T6:943-944).

52. Each of Respondent's observations was followed by a post-observation conference. Post-observation conferences are supposed to be conducted within 15 school days after the observation. (See N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4(b)(1)). Two (2) out of the four (4) observations clearly complied with this requirement. As to the others, and assuming that there were no holidays between each formal observation and the post-observation conference, the post-observation for the formal observation in January 2015 took place two (2) school days beyond the 15 school day period, and the post-observation (assuming May 18th to be correct) for the formal observation in April 2015 took place four (4) school days beyond the 15 school day period. The Respondent claims that the delay affected the value of the conference because "the recall wasn't really there".

(T3:456). Rieder testified that the Respondent was upset about the "progressing" ratings. Rieder further testified that she agreed to change a few of the ratings based upon the input the Respondent provided during the post-observation conference. (T6:943-944).

53. The deadline for the Respondent's Interim CAP review was February 15, 2015. Glover did not conduct the Respondent's review until February 26, 2015. (Ex. SD-3(14)). The document that Glover used during the review was not presented during the hearing, but as the Respondent testified, it was similar to the Interim CAP review sheet that the Respondent signed in June 2015. (See Ex. SD-3(14), T4:592-594). The Respondent testified that her CAP did not change as a result of the meeting with Glover. (T3:412). She also testified that she did not propose any changes to Glover. (T4:595).

54. The Respondent contends that the District did not fulfill its obligations under the CAP. One of the tasks listed in the CAP is "Teacher will collaborate with data coach to develop data binders" and, correspondingly, "Data coach will assist Ms. Osborne with creating data binder." (Ex. SD-3(7)). Respondent claims that the data coach did not assist her in this task, but admitted that she had not collaborated with the data coach either, admitted that she needed no help in creating a data binder, and admitted that in any event she received assistance in this task from the math supervisor. (T4:590-592, 599). She also admitted that she had no evidence that her evaluation rating would have been higher if someone had met with her regarding the data binder. (T4:629). Rieder testified that she provided guidance to the Respondent on the data binder. (T6:868-869).

56. Other tasks listed in the CAP is "review plans and provide feedback using Lesson Plan Review Memo" and assistance on differentiated instruction. (ex. SD-3(7)). Rieder testified at length regarding the assistance and feedback she provided to the Respondent in these areas. (See generally testimony of Rieder, i.e. 16:864-869, 875-896, 909-919, 952-953). Respondent contends that the District did not satisfy its CAP responsibilities in the review of lesson plans because the five-hour estimate that Glover provided in the CAP had not been reached, the "Lesson Plan Review Memo" had not been used as often as was required under the CAP, and that Rieder's lesson plan reviews did not contain what Glover was looking for. Respondent admitted that she did not have evidence to show that her evaluation rating would have been higher if additional lesson plan reviews had been provided. (T4:629).

57. Another task listed in the CAP is "Conduct walk throughs (2 per month)." Glover testified that a "walk-through" is "about a 10 minute snapshot of what's happening in the classroom during that time." (T6:870). Although Glover testified that walk-throughs should be documented, Rieder sometimes created a written report of a walk-through and others times she would simply "take a pad and just write down some suggestions for the teacher". (T7:1138, T6:870). Rieder further testified that she conducted walk-throughs of Respondent's classroom "maybe twice a month." (T6:872). Respondent claims that this CAP requirement was not met because only seven (7) walk-throughs were documented. Rieder testified that, in her opinion, Respondent received sufficient support:

> Q. Were you able to tell whether it was a matter of Ms. Osborne not getting enough support or training on those issues and that's why she was not incorporating the strategies you had been working on into her teaching?
> A. In my opinion, I think that she was provided enough support to be able to. She did make an improvement in multiple response strategies and I think that she could have also improved on those questions. She had the Bloom's Taxonomy.... I explained to her how to put it in the book, how to put the different questions in there, into her read-aloud books. So I feel that, in my opinion, I think that she could have made more progress in differentiated instruction, in Ragan student engagement the questioning. Because she did it in multiple response strategies, so I really feel she could have. (T6:956-957).

57. The Respondent was required under the CAP to have monthly peer-to-peer lesson plan implementation observations. (Ex. SD-3(7)). She was only able to observe one other first grade teacher because of the fact that all of the first grade teachers had the same lunch and special subjects periods. (T8:1330). The Respondent addressed this issue with Glover. (T8:1328-1330).

The District's Position

The following is a summary of the legal arguments and conclusions of law that were presented in the District's post-hearing brief.

The District's evaluations of the Respondent, including her observations, SGOs, and CAO, substantially adhered to the evaluation process. Any deficiencies did not materially affect the outcome of the Respondent's evaluations in either 2013-2014 or 2014-2015. The evaluations did not contain significant mistakes of fact. Even assuming there were miscalculations in the Respondent's IPS for 2014-2015 they did not materially affect the outcome of her evaluation because her rating would not have improved from being "partially effective". Further, the tenure charges against the Respondent were not motivated by her union activity. The District's actions were not arbitrary or capricious as they were "consistent with the mandate of [E]ACHN[.] 'to raise student achievement by improving instruction.'" (District Brief p. 19).

The District has satisfied its burden of showing that the statutory criteria for the sole charge of "inefficiency" has been met. The evidence shows that the Respondent received two (2) consecutive "partially effective" summative ratings. The Respondent was provided with a full and fair opportunity to rebut the District's case, but she failed to show that she is entitled to the available defenses in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2a.

It is for the reasons above, and the entire record, that "the tenure charge of inefficiency against Respondent Carrie Osborne should be upheld, and Respondent should be dismissed from her employment with the School District." (District Brief, p. 19).

The Respondents' Position

The following is a summary of the legal arguments and conclusions of law that were been presented in the Respondents' post-hearing brief.

The District is required to provide the Respondent with a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony upon referral of the case for arbitration. (See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(b)(3)). In Wilson, Agency Dkt. No. 302-10/15 the arbitrator strictly applied the statute and dismissed the charges due to the school district's 14 day delay between the charges being referred to arbitration and presenting the list and summary. The arbitrator indicated that "any significant delay in the presentation of salient evidence by one party prejudices the other party's ability to represent its client." He concluded that the 14 day delay "significantly curtailed the time Respondent had to prepare and present its evidence which was due within ten days of the first hearing – a hearing that must be and was scheduled forty-five days after the arbitrator's appointment as provided in 18A:6-17.(b)(1)." Wilson at 7; see also Ebert, Agency Dkt. No. 267-9/14.

Similar to Wilson, the District in this case did not submit a witness list until two (2) weeks after the referral for arbitration. Even when the list was submitted it was incomplete because it lacked specificity as to the descriptions of the expected testimony from the District's witnesses. As a result the Respondent was denied "a meaningful opportunity to prepare against those witnesses expected to testify against [her]...." (Respondent's Brief, p. 4). For this reason, the District's non-compliance requires dismissal of the charges against the Respondent.

Aside from the procedural issue discussed above, there were issues with the District's evaluation system that materially affected the outcome of the Respondent's evaluations, caused the District to fail to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, and/or resulted in arbitrary and capricious actions. Additionally, the Respondent's evaluation ratings were "attributable at least in part" to the Respondent's union activity. (Id. at 53).

To begin, there were District-wide issues with the manner in which the District implemented and administered its evaluations that violated the minimum statutory and regulatory standards. The District failed to produce adequate documentary evidence to show how the rubric standards and scores therein were calculated. The District's reliance on witness testimony was insufficient as they simply did not explain how the MeriaX program calculated the scores. Consequently, the District failed to develop an effective scoring guide as is required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.2. The District failed "to share adequate information regarding the scoring of its evaluation standards." (Id. at 45).

There was also a lack of adequate training. The District's witnesses acknowledged that the grading rubric itself did not expressly describe how to differentiate between two scores such as a "Progressing I" and a "Progressing II". Further, there is nothing expressly written in the training materials that provide such an explanation.

The District also unilaterally implemented the Respondent's SGO. The evidence shows that Glover "did not include any outside input by Respondent or consider any outside factors which could have affected the SGO." (Id. at 46).

There were several problems with the SGO for 2013-2014 including, but not limited to the District "neglect[ing] to inform [Respondent] of the opportunity to amend the SGO", the Respondent being directed to switch test subjects during the middle of the STAR assessment rather than to reschedule the test, and "numerous changes in Respondent's class roster". (Id. at 49). As a result, the "Respondent's SGO goals bore no relationship to her teaching performance...." (Id. at 51).

The District's observations of the Respondent during the 2013-2014 school year failed to comply with State requirements. Glover and Simon lacked specific recollection of their formal observations and post-observations conferences. It is therefore "proper to conclude that Respondent did dispute her observation scores and that Simon was informed of Respondent talking outside classes relevant to her employment." (Id. at 52). The lack of consideration to these areas resulted in lower observations scores.

The Respondent's evaluation results were negatively impacted by her union activity as a building representative. This is shown through the scores in Holder's September 2014 observation report that "were far lower than any other observation report from the 14-15 school year." (Id. at 54). Had these scores been "even remotely close to the scores from the other observation reports, Respondent would have receive at least a 3 for the TPS and an overall effective rating." (Id.). Holder's consideration of the Respondent's union activity must be treated as inappropriate retaliation.

The Respondent's evaluations were also negatively impacted by the District's failure to support her with student discipline. The Respondent made efforts to control her students by sending them to the office. Rather than keeping them away from her classroom for the remainder of the day, as the District did with students with disciplinary issues in other classes, the District repeatedly sent the students back to the Respondent's classroom.

The District committed multiple violations in the creation and administration of the Respondent's CAP. Glover drafted the Respondent's CAP without her input, deprived the Respondent with an opportunity to amend the CAP by ignoring her suggested changes and failed to identify herself as the Respondent's CAP supervisor. Even if Glover was the CAP supervisor she neglected her duty to participate in all of the post-observation conferences (See N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4). By her own admission Glover only participated in two (2) of the Respondent's observations thus depriving the Respondent of the opportunity to receive feedback of her progress. The CAP simply was not tailored to the Respondent's deficiencies. In addition, the District never discussed the Respondent's CAP during her post-observation conferences which is a requirement of N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(f). Further, her interim CAP review took place 13 days after the February 15th deadline in violation of N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(j) – an issue that has been previously cited a deficiency by other arbitrators. (See Ehrart, Agency Dkt. No. 49-3/15 and Ojomoh, Agency Dkt. No. 239-9/15). The District did not provide an explanation for the delay.

The District did not perform the requisite number of walkthroughs that were expressly required in the Respondent's CAP. Although 20 were required, only seven (7) were documented. This was particularly troublesome given that only two (2) of the walkthroughs occurred in the second semester of 2014-2015 and they took place less than a week apart. The Respondent simply was not provided with the feedback that was needed for her professional development.

The District did not comply with the "supervisor responsibilities" outlined in the CAP. The Respondent only received two (2) lesson plan reviews in 2014-2015 rather than the required amount under her CAP. The Respondent provided lesson plans to Holder bi-weekly, but Holder never provided her with feedback.

The District also failed to assist the Respondent in the model lesson plan implementation. Riedel provided materials to the Respondent, but she did not testify "to modelling how to implement the lesson plans". (Resp. Brief, p. 65). Nor did Riedel's directive to visit another classroom nor her abbreviated visit to the Respondent's classroom fulfills the obligation to model. Riedel's lack of classroom supervisory school experience must also factor into whether she had the skill to assist the Respondent.

The District also failed to assist the Respondent with the creation of her data binder as evidenced by the fact that her data coach never reached out to her.

The CAP placed responsibilities on the Respondent and her supervisors. The evidence shows that the Respondent made good faith efforts to comply with the CAP but the District did not.

Turning to the District's observations during 2014-2015, they did not accurately capture the Respondent's teaching performance. They are flawed for the reasons that follow. The initial observation took place on September 23, 2014, which was only a few weeks into the school year. This did not give the Respondent sufficient time to implement her lesson plans, particularly in light of the fact that Rieder did not provide and review the lesson plans with the Respondent until September 26th. The initial observation also did not appropriately account for the Respondent's handling of a new student during the beginning of class or the lack of technology in the classroom.

As to the second observation, it took place before the Respondent was afforded an opportunity to meet with a supervisor to go over her CAP. And despite this, the Respondent "received superb marks in this observation". Id. at 72).

With respect to the third observation Rieder failed to take into consideration the fact that special education students were not pulled from her class as scheduled. The observation report is also unreliable because the post-observation conference, without any justification, did not occur within 15 working days of the observation. The Respondent's recall of her observed lesson was affected by the delay.

As to the fourth observation, Glover inappropriately criticized the Respondent's handling of middle school students in her classroom who were not her students. Further, this post-observation conference took place nearly four (4) weeks after the observation. It is emphasized that the fourth observation was the only time that the Respondent was rated on Standard 6.

The District violated N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(1) when it failed to provide multiple observers during the Respondent's observations in 2014-2015. It is undisputed that none of the Respondent's observations in 2014-2015 were conducted by co-observers and had that occurred it is likely that more consistency would have been provided to the "wild disparities, such as Holder's scoring in the September 2014 observation". (Resp. Brief, p. 77).

The observations in 2014-2015 also contain multiple calculation errors that reduced her weighted ratings by more than one (1) point. These errors must call all of Media-X's calculations into question. The following must be emphasized:

> Respondent was never provided a Teacher Practice Summary Report at the end of the 14-15 school year instead receiving only the Performance Standard and the Annual Summary Conference Form. (SD3-6; SD3-13). As Respondent never received official scores for her Standards, it is impossible for Respondent to verify if Media-X's calculations for Respondent's Standard scores were otherwise accurate or if it made even more mistakes in the process. Comparing the Performance Standard to the Annual Summary Conference form, though, must lead to the conclusion that Media-X made additional errors with Respondent's evaluation. (Resp. Brief, p. 78-79).

When all of the District's deficiencies and errors are considered, the Respondent's SGO score for 2014-2015, notwithstanding the District's unilateral reclassification of the objectives, is the "most trustworthy and objective measurement of Respondent's performance from the 2014-2015 school year" and "undeniable proof that Respondent could and did perform at an effective level throughout the school year". (Id. at 80). Further, if it were not for the District's "widespread failures" the Respondent would have received overall "effective" ratings. The cumulative effect of these errors require dismissal of the tenure charges. (See Ragland, Agency Dkt. No. 285-9/14). To summarize:

Upon reflection of the totality of District's actions, the only reasonable conclusion is that the District's actions materially affected the outcome of Respondent's 14-15 evaluation. The District admitted to violating numerous State statutes and regulations during the course of the 14-15 school year. Respondent has demonstrated numerous other violations by the District. The State statutes and regulations were drafted to ensure the conducting of a fair evaluation process and that teachers are given a fair opportunity to try to improve their teaching performance. Each statute and regulation must be found to have some impact on teaching performance or else that language is rendered meaningless. Even if each of the District's violations are treated as having had a minimal impact on Respondent's teaching performance, that would be enough to have cumulatively negatively impacted Respondent's sum of weighted ratings by more than 2 or 3 percent.

Respondent was an effective teacher during the past two school years, especially so during the 14-15 school year when even Respondent's supervisor acknowledged Respondent's improved performance. But for the District's non-compliance with State evaluation procedures, Respondent's evaluation reports would have reflected this truth. Thus, the only acceptable determination is that in consideration of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(a) and (b), the entirety of the problems related to the District's evaluations of Respondent materially affected the outcomes of Respondent's 13-14 and 14-15 evaluations, requiring the dismissal of Respondent's tenure charge. (Resp. Brief p. 83-84).

DISCUSSION

I have carefully reviewed the entire record of this proceeding. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 sets forth the "[c]onsiderations for arbitrator in rendering decision":

> 23. a. In the event that the matter before the arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to section 25 of this act, in rendering a decision the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not:
>
> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
>
> (2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
>
> (3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or
>
> (4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.
>
> b. In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection a. of this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed.
>
> c. The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review.
> d. The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met.

The New Jersey Department of Education has published on its website a document entitled "Summary of Legal Requirements for Teacher Evaluation and Tenure Cases". This document can be found at www.nj.gov/education/AchieveNJ/implementation/legalrequirements.pdf. As indicated therein, "this guide outlines the actions required in law before bringing an inefficiency charge based on the new tenure revocation process, including the following elements:

A. Minimum Requirements to Ensure Compliance with Evaluation Procedures
   I. Observation Requirements
   II. Student Achievement Requirements
   III. Summative Evaluation Requirements
   IV. Corrective Action Plan (CAP) Requirements
   V. Additional Requirements

B. Requirements for Filing an Inefficiency Tenure Charge

C. Streamlined Tenure Revocation Process."

[A] guide must be read in conjunction with the applicable laws, rules and regulations. (See N.J.A.C. 6A:10 et seq. ("Educator Effectiveness"); Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes ("Education")).

N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4 provides for the observation requirements for tenured teachers. The minimum observation schedule requires three (3) observations per year, [] at least 20 minutes (one in the first semester/first half of the year, one in first set and semester. One of these observations must be preceded by a pre-conference which must occur at least one but not more than seven work days prior to the observation. Each observation must be followed by a post-conference within 15 teacher work days where the teacher and supervisor/observer discuss data and evidence collected from the observation, as well as additional evidence brought to the conference related to the district's teacher practice instrument and the teacher's PDP or progress on a CAP, where applicable. An observation report is required for each observation and is signed by the observer and the teacher. The teacher may attach a written objection within 10 work days. The observers must be employed by the District, serve in a supervisory role, and possess an administrative certificate. For teachers on a CAP, there must be one extra observation for a minimum of 20 minutes with a post-conference, and at least two (2) observers must be used throughout the year.

With respect to the 2013-2014 school year, the evidence shows that the Respondent received three (3) observations: an unannounced 20 minute co-observation by Glover and Simon on October 18, 2013, followed by a timely post-conference [Ex. SD-3(3)&(3A)]; an announced 40 minute observation by Simon on January 27, 2014 preceded by a timely pre-conference and followed by a timely post conference [Ex. SD-3(4)]; and a 20 minute observation by Simon on March 19, 2014, followed by a timely post-conference [Ex. SD-3(5)]. The observation reports were signed by an observer and the Respondent. The Respondent did not file written objections to the contents of the observation reports.

With respect to the 2014-2015 school year, the Respondent was on a CAP. The evidence shows that the Respondent received four (4) observations required under the CAP: an announced 40 minute observation by Holder on September 23, 2014, preceded by a timely pre-conference and followed by a timely post-conference [Ex. SD-3(8)], an unannounced 20 minute observation by Glover on November 20, 2014 followed by a timely post-conference [Ex. SD-3(9)], an announced 40 minute observation by Rieder on January 21, 2015, preceded by a timely pre-conference and followed by a post-conference on or about February 13, 2015 [Ex. SD-3(10)] and an unannounced 20 minute CAP round observation by Glover on April 21, 2015, followed by a post-observation conference on May 18, 2015 [Ex. SD-3(12)]. The observation reports were signed by an observer and the Respondent.[4] The Respondent did not file written objections to the contents of the observation reports or to any delay in the post-observation conferences beyond the 15 work day period. The only concerns that the Respondent raised about time limitations during the post-observation conference process pertained to those in the collective bargaining agreement which she addressed orally. As noted by Arbitrator Weisblatt, "[t]he Arbitrator's jurisdiction in this dispute is derived from the TEACHNJ statute and the determinations herein are made within that structure." Weisblatt at 31.

Glover, Simon, Holder and Riedel are employed by the District, serve in a supervisory role, and possess administrative certificates. The evidence also shows that they were thoroughly trained by the District to conduct observations, discussed their ratings with the Respondent, considered the Respondent's concerns over her ratings and appropriately exercised their discretion and judgment in providing such ratings. Multiple observers were used in each year – two (2) in 2013-2014 and three (3) in 2014-2015.[1] The evidence does not support any claim that the observers failed to discuss the data and evidence they collected or to consider the Respondent's input concerning the ratings that they received. The evaluation documents include commentary and cite areas needing improvement. I conclude that the District satisfied the observation requirements under the rules and regulations. Respondent's evaluations in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 were based on information collected in observations conducted in accordance with applicable rules by appropriately qualified and trained District employees who exercised their best judgment in each instance. There is a lack of evidence to support any claim that the delay in any post-observation conference had a material effect upon the Respondent's ratings. With respect to 2014-2015, I am satisfied that the Respondent could have anticipated her annual evaluation rating (i.e. progressing, proficient) by noting the ratings given in each observation, because the overall scores are the result of the ratings given on each indicator in each observation. Furthermore, the observers discussed their ratings with the Respondent who was provided with an opportunity to ask questions and, if necessary, rebut the ratings. I also conclude that the observers objectively considered the Respondent's classroom issues (i.e. student behavior) in their ratings.

[1] N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.3(p) on its face does not require 3 observers for teachers on a CAP. It only requires that multiple observers be used during the CAP period.

The Respondent claims that the District unilaterally implemented Student Growth Objectives. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.2(e) provides:

> (e) Student growth objectives for teachers shall be developed and measured according to the following procedures:
>
> 1. The chief school administrator shall determine the number of required student growth objectives for teachers, including teachers with a student growth percentile. A teacher with a student growth percentile shall have at least one and not more than four student growth objectives. A teacher without a student growth percentile shall have at least two and maximum of four student growth objectives. By August 31 prior to the academic year in which the evaluation rubric applies, the Department shall provide on its website the minimum and maximum number of required student growth objectives within this range.
> 2. A teacher with a student growth percentile shall not use the standardized assessment used in determining the student growth percentile to measure progress toward a student growth objective.

3. Each teacher shall develop, in consultation with his or her supervisor or a principal's designee, each student growth objective. If the teacher does not agree with the student growth objectives, the principal shall make the final determination.

4. Student growth objectives and the criteria for assessing teacher performance based on the objectives shall be determined, recorded, and retained by the teacher and his or her supervisor by October 31 of each academic year, or within 20 work days of the teacher's start date if the teacher begins work after October 1.

5. Adjustments to student growth objectives may be made by the teacher in consultation with his or her supervisor only when approved by the chief school administrator or designee. Adjustments shall be recorded in the teacher's personnel file on or before February 15.

   i. If the SGO covers only the second semester of the school year, or if a teacher begins work after October 1, adjustments shall be recorded before the mid-point of the second semester.

6. The teacher's designated supervisor shall calculate each teacher's student growth objective score. The teacher's student growth objective score, if available, shall be discussed at the teacher's annual summary conference and recorded in the teacher's personnel file.

Section 3 above requires collaboration between the teacher and his/her principal or supervisor before an SGO is set. Establishing an SGO without input from the individual teacher would be inconsistent with the requirements of this provision. The evidence shows that the Respondent had the requisite number of SGOs in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015. The evidence also shows that the Respondent's SGOs were initially drafted by the District but that the Respondent was afforded with opportunities to provide input in both 2013-2014 and 2014-2015. In fact, the Respondent's request to amend her SGO in 2014-2015 was approved by Glover. The Respondent raised several issues concerning the development and implementation of her SGOs. Having reviewed the entire record the evidence does not show that the District failed to consider any of the concerns that the Respondent raised during the evaluation process. The Respondent's claims of deficiencies in her SGOs are unsupported by the evidence.

I now turn my attention to the Respondents' claims pertaining to the calculation of teacher observation and evaluation scores. To summarize, the Respondents claim that the District failed to disclose scoring rubric information utilized to explain the calculation of Standard scores for observations and the Annual Summary Report, and failed to implement and enforce objective observation scoring rules. With respect to the scoring on the evaluation rubric, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.3 defines and expresses the purposes of a "scoring guide":

> "Scoring guide" means a set of rules or criteria used to evaluate a performance, product, or project. The purpose of a scoring guide is to provide a transparent and reliable evaluation process. Educator practice instruments include a scoring guide that an evaluator uses to structure his or her assessments and ratings of professional practice.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2, paragraph 23(a) provides that "the evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review." However, the District must comply with fourteen (14) minimum standards set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123, paragraph 17.b including, but not limited to, "guidelines for school districts regarding training and the demonstration of competence on the evaluation system to support its implementation"; "a process for ongoing monitoring and calibration of the observations to ensure that the observation protocols are being implemented correctly and consistently"; and "a performance framework, associated evaluation tools, and observation protocol, including training and observer calibration resources".

During the arbitration proceedings, the District provided extensive information concerning the training that was provided to teachers during the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years. The District indicated that the evaluators received training on how to evaluate the teachers, and the use of the rubric. The District's witnesses testified to the training they received and how they were trained to use judgment in determining how to rate the Respondent which was a combination of degree and consistency. The Respondent testified that she did not agree with all of the ratings she received, but she did not file a single a written objection as is her right under the applicable rules and regulations. The evidence shows that the Respondent's input was considered by each evaluator and, at times, resulted in improved ratings.

As to the calculation of the scoring on the rubric, I am satisfied that the District's witnesses received appropriate training, exercised their professional judgment, and considered the Respondent's input. The Respondent challenged several ratings that were provided by Media-X, a software program approved by the Commissioner of Education. Although there appears to be some discrepancies in the scoring, the evidence does not show that the program is wholly unreliable. Moreover, even assuming the Respondent's ratings should have been higher in the areas that she testified to, the evidence does not support the assertion that her overall rating of "partially effective" for 2014-2015 would have changed.

Clover, Simon, Holder and Rieder were credible, persuasive witnesses notwithstanding the fact that they did not always have an independent recollection of the Respondent's performance during the formal observations that led to her ratings. Clover provided detailed testimony concerning the overall rating process and how it applied to the Respondent. (See generally, Testimony of Clover, T7:1041-T8:1313). The formal observation ratings included detailed commentary and suggestions. I am satisfied that the Respondent's ratings of the Respondent were based upon the judgment appropriately exercised by Glover, Simon, Holder and Rieder and represent an accurate reflection the Respondent's teaching performance.

The Respondent claims that her union activity had a negative impact upon her ratings. Holder and Glover both denied any knowledge of the Respondent's role with the PEA. I reject the Respondent's claim as it is speculative and unsupported by the evidence. I do not reach a conclusion that the Respondent's role with the PEA negatively impacted her ratings.

I have also thoroughly considered the Respondent's CAP concerns. I conclude that Glover afforded the Respondent with an opportunity during the CAP meeting to discuss the proposed CAP and provide input into the process, but I find that the Respondent simply did not avail herself of this opportunity. The Respondent's claim that she did not know that Glover was her CAP supervisor is simply unsupported by the evidence. I also conclude that the Respondent was provided with ample support during the CAP period as demonstrated through Rieder's testimony and the training opportunities that were readily available. The Respondent's CAP review did not occur on or before February 15th, but there is no evidence to support the assertion that the delay until February 26th had a negative impact on her final evaluation ratings as there was ample opportunity for her to improve her teaching performance before her fourth (and final) observation that did not occur until April 21, 2015. I have also considered the fact that there were only seven (7) documented walkthroughs in 2014-2015. The number of documented walkthroughs did not satisfy Glover's guidelines in the CAP, but I do not consider this to be a contributing factor in the Respondent's "partially effective" rating for 2014-2015.

Based upon the above, and the entire record, I conclude that the employee's evaluations adhered substantially to the evaluation process, there are no mistakes of fact in the evaluations that would have altered the Respondent's overall ratings of "partially effective," the charges were not brought as a result of the Respondent's union activities or any other prohibited basis, and the District's actions were neither arbitrary nor capricious. I have considered such factors as the timelines that the District may have missed (i.e. the CAP review, post-observations), but I do not conclude that these or other alleged deficiencies, either individually or their cumulative effect, had a material effect on the outcome of the Respondent's evaluations.

The parties filed motions (i.e. motion to dismiss, summary judgment) during these proceedings upon which I reserved judgment. In particular, the Respondent claims that the delay in the District's witness list requires dismissal of the tenure charges. I reject this motion because even assuming this was a procedural error on the part of the District I cannot conclude that it had a material effect upon this matter, particularly in light of the extensions of time provided and the Respondent's full and fair opportunity to develop the record in this case. I reject all of other motions as well and conclude that my discussion and analysis above amply addresses the District's tenure charges and the Respondent's defenses.

Accordingly, based upon the foregoing and the entire record, the District has met the burden of proving that the Respondent received "partially effective" annual summative evaluation ratings in 2013-2014 and 2014-2015. The District provided convincing evidence that the evaluations were properly conducted under TEACHNJ. The charge of "inefficiency" is sustained and the dismissal of the Respondent is upheld.

AWARD

For the reasons set forth in this Decision and Award, the Arbitrator finds that the District has met its burden of proving that the Respondent received "partially effective" annual summative evaluations for two (2) consecutive school years 2013-2014 and 2014-2015, and that the evaluations were properly conducted under the applicable laws and regulations. Therefore, the charge of "Inefficiency" is sustained and the dismissal of the Respondent is upheld.
