Record Closed: February 8, 2000 Decided: February 23, 2000

BEFORE: ELINOR R. REINER, ALJ:

On or about June 24, 1999, the School District of the City of Elizabeth certified charges of incapacity, incompetency, excessive absenteeism and unbecoming conduct due to unauthorized absence and abandonment of position against respondent, Danita Wilson, a tenured instructional enhancement teacher. On July 1, 1999, respondent filed an answer denying the charges.

On July 9, 1999, the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was assigned to the undersigned judge on July 14, 1999, and a telephone prehearing conference scheduled for July 20, 1999. During the prehearing conference held on that date, the issues were isolated, and a hearing scheduled for September 9 and 10, 1999 at 9:00 a.m. at the Office of Administrative Law, 185 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey. As a result of settlement conferences held between the parties, a settlement was reached and the hearing was adjourned.

The undersigned filed an Initial Decision on September 1, 1999 with the Commissioner of Education, recommending approval of the filed settlement agreement. On October 18, 1999, the Commissioner of Education issued his decision in this matter. The Commissioner rejected the agreement since he could not be satisfied that the proposed settlement met the standards for settlement of tenure matters as set forth in In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, aff'd State Bd. of Educ. (April 6, 1983), 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846. Specifically, the Commissioner determined that there was no indication in the settlement agreement that the within teaching staff member was advised of the Commissioner's duty, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, to refer tenure determinations for possible revocation of certificate. The Commissioner remanded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for revision of the documents, consistent with the concerns set forth above. He noted that if the parties were unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter should proceed to a hearing on the merits.

On December 29, 1999, this case was remanded to the undersigned judge in accordance with the Commissioner's decision. Thereafter, the parties signed and filed a revised settlement agreement. Of import, the amended agreement indicates that the signatories acknowledge that respondent was advised of the Commissioner's duty, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, to refer tenure determinations for possible revocation of respondent's teaching certificate. In light of the amended settlement agreement, I FIND:

1. The settlement agreement complies with the requirements of In re Cardonick, supra.

2. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement, as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

3. The settlement agreement is in the public interest.

4. The settlement agreement is in conformity with the Commissioner's decision of October 18, 1999.

5. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that the revised agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved.[1] I approve the settlement and, therefore, ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

[1] It is noted that although the signatories acknowledged that the Commissioner of Education may still make a determination on the charges that were filed against respondent, this determination would only be made if the matter was heard by the undersigned judge and an Initial Decision filed with the Commissioner of the Department of Education for consideration. In light of the settlement agreement, this matter has not been heard by the undersigned judge.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :

HEARING OF RANDALL DUNHAM, :

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF POINT : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

PLEASANT BOROUGH, OCEAN : DECISION

COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

The Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent middle school teacher for allegedly leaving vulgar and obscene messages on an answering machine for two pupils in the school system, M.L. and D.L.

In light of the record and the testimony of witnesses, the ALJ found and concluded that the Board had proven the charge of unbecoming conduct. Respondent admitted making the telephone calls and admitted the content of each call, blaming his behavior on a drug interaction with a small amount of alcohol. The ALJ questioned respondent's veracity as to the quantity of alcohol he consumed on the date of the incident and found that his defenses lacked substance. Citing In re Sammons and Redcay, the ALJ noted that respondent engaged in inexcusable behavior for a teacher and the incident was sufficiently flagrant to warrant his dismissal from his teaching position. The ALJ ordered his removal from his position as of the date of the final decision in this matter.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that respondent's behavior was sufficiently flagrant to warrant dismissal from his teaching position. Even after considering respondent's lengthy, apparently unblemished record with the Board, along with his proffered defenses, the Commissioner found these factors were greatly outweighed by the seriousness of respondent's admitted conduct. The Commissioner ordered respondent dismissed from his teaching position and transmitted the matter to the State Board of Examiners for action, as that body deems appropriate, against respondent's certificate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF RANDALL DUNHAM, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF POINT PLEASANT BOROUGH,

Daniel S. Popovitch, Esq., for petitioner (Popovitch & Popovitch, attorneys)

Stephen B. Hunter, Esq., for respondent (Klausner, Hunter & Rosenberg, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 26, 2000 Decided: February 28, 2000

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

The Point Pleasant Borough Board of Education certified charges of unbecoming conduct against Randall Dunham, a tenured teaching staff member.

The matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. After notice, a prehearing conference was held on August 3, 1999. Among other things, it was settled that hearing would commence at 9 a.m. on October 25, 26, 28 and November 3, 1999. Hearing began on October 26, and was continued to and completed on October 28, 1999. Counsel gave notice to the judge that they were to order transcripts. N.J.S.A.

52:14B-10.1(d). The reporting company did not provide transcripts within fifteen days as provided in the statutory provision just cited. This disrupted the history of strict adherence to the statutes that had occurred to that point. Although the delay was not occasioned by either party, I requested that they accelerate their submissions and cut two weeks from the time allotted for the judge's preparation of an initial decision.

The respondent does not challenge any procedural aspect of this case. The matter rests on substantive facts and the law.

THE CHARGES

Randall Dunham is charged with conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member. The charge is based on information and belief presented to the Board of Education by its superintendent of schools. In statements sworn and subscribed on May 7, 1999, the superintendent states that he was contacted by a Mr. M.L. [1] on Monday, April 12, 1999. M.L. told the superintendent that he had been the subject of messages left at his home on the previous day, Sunday, April 11, 1999. M.L. stated that the respondent left the messages on M.L.'s home answering machine. As a result of investigation by the Point Pleasant Police Department, the tape recording of these messages was turned over to the superintendent together with a transcript of their contents. Upon review, the superintendent believed that the messages were directed at two pupils in the school system, M.L. and D.L.

On April 16, 1999, the respondent and a union representative appeared before the superintendent. The respondent admitted making telephone calls to the L. residence, but stated he did not remember what he had said. The respondent denied he had been drinking. He claimed the telephone call was the result of a reaction to medication. He also stated he had been attending anger management counseling.

[1] Because of the involvement of minor children whose identification is neither necessary nor desirable, most names of persons in this initial decision will be represented by initials.

School records reflect that in 1997, the respondent was on leave from March 18 through the end of the school year because of psychiatric treatment related to emotional problems. He was authorized to return to school by a psychiatrist as of August 13.

The respondent was assigned to a middle school attended by D.L., one of the pupils to whom the messages were directed. The girl's father has stated that his daughter is now fearful of attending school and particularly fearful of the possibility of contact with the respondent.

M.L. also stated that his daughter believes the respondent has gone out of his way to put himself in a position where he can have eye contact with her and that she believes the respondent has stared at her. M.L. also claims that the respondent has been observed outside the L. home which has served to heighten D.L.'s fears.

The fact of the telephone messages is conceded by the respondent, although he claims to have no knowledge of the content. The messages were directed toward the two pupils. There were four messages over a four-hour period which would appear to indicate an extended angry outburst. The respondent has conceded he has problems with anger management and has sought counseling for the problem. The superintendent concluded that the conduct is clearly unbecoming and, if true in fact, that it warrants dismissal from position. The Board of Education agreed and certified the charges to the Commissioner of Education on June 24, 1999.

PAROL AND DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

M.L. appeared at hearing and testified, under subpoena. He has two daughters, N.L. and D.L. D.L. is a pupil in the middle school in which the respondent taught. In the 1997-98 school year, D.L. had the respondent as a teacher in a six-week course.

Before April 11, 1999, the respondent tried to contact M.L.'s house. The witness twice saw on his caller identification device the name Clinton Dunham with a telephone number. Clinton Dunham is the respondent's father.

Before April 11, D.L. told her father that the respondent peered into her room at school about ten days before the incidents that underlie the charges here. D.L. stated she had not seen the respondent there before and D.L. stated the respondent stared at her.

On Sunday, April 11, the witness returned to his home with his daughters. The girls almost immediately checked the telephone answering machine. The first three messages were on the machine. The witness immediately called police who came and recorded the messages. The witness then took his children to dinner and, upon returning home, discovered one further message.

The parties stipulated the contents of the messages. The witness stated that the effect on his daughters was devastating. D.L. was physically sick and afraid to go to school. The witness took his daughter to a physician and a psychiatrist. His daughter continued to wake at night.

The effect was not as severe on N.L. M.L. stated that the respondent was observed outside their house. N.L. was afraid to go home for lunch. The witness went to see the middle school principal. He called police and he testified he saw the respondent twice more, which he reported to a neighbor who is a policeman.

On April 12, 13 and 14, D.L. attended school. On April 14, the Wednesday, D.L. went to the principal's office at approximately 1 p.m. in tears. She stated the respondent was looking into her classroom at her. D.L. then missed one week of school.

The witness stated his home is two-three blocks from the middle school. He did not observe the respondent in the area before the April 11 telephone calls.

M.L. also testified he has been divorced for approximately ten years and the girls live with him. Originally, he and his former wife had joint custody.

On April 11, 1999, the witness had known Karen Dunham, the respondent's wife, for five or six weeks. They met at a gymnasium. The witness's daughters had had Karen Dunham as a teacher in a gifted and talented program some years before. When the couple first met at the gymnasium, each did not know the marital status of the other. Karen Dunham told M.L. of her status, that a divorce was in process and that the respondent was under legal restraint.

M.L. also testified that Karen Dunham lives in another municipality. He does not know what part, if any, of her living expenses the respondent paid. The witness stated he did not sleep at Karen Dunham's home in March or April of 1999 and stated he never invited one of Dunham's children into bed with Karen Dunham and him.

On or about April 16, M.L. called a reporter and discussed the case with him. He played the telephone recording tapes for the reporter. An article appeared in a local newspaper which his children read. He discussed the article with his children. The reporter called to follow up on the story.

M.L. stated he did not know if a Point Pleasant Borough patrolman is also a board of education member. The witness gave his information to the patrolman because he stated he was "getting nowhere" with local police concerning complaints about telephone calls and the respondent's appearances outside his home. M.L. knew that the patrolman was involved in town affairs and he invoked the patrolman's good offices. He contacted the reporter at about the same time. The parties stipulated that Larry Williams was a member of the local board of education in 1998-99 and will continue to serve in the 1999-2000 school year. The witness denied speaking to any other board members.

Exhibits J-1, J-2 and J-3 were admitted in evidence. The first is the statement of evidence and charges by the superintendent of schools dated May 7, 1999. The second is the affidavit of Randall Dunham in opposition which is dated May 20, 1999. J-3 is the certification of determination of the board of education with an accompanying resolution dated June 24, 1999. M.L. testified he believes the statement of evidence and charges is inaccurate because he made clear to the middle school principal that the messages were directed to his daughters, not to him. See paragraph 2, exhibit J-1.

M.L. also challenges the accuracy of paragraph 5 in exhibit J-1. One sentence of the paragraph reads, "Although Mr. Dunham has not had this student in any of his classes, and Mr.

Dunham has denied specifically knowing the child, it is obvious that the student has to be in the same building with Mr. Dunham." M.L. insists that the respondent did have his children as pupils.

On Monday morning, April 12, M.L. met with the principal. He did not tell Principal Feldman that D.L. had been taught by Dunham. The witness states he believed he talked to Superintendent Ciliento on Wednesday, April 14, and gave him the same information. He asked to meet with Mr. Dunham to discuss the matter. School authorities did not arrange a meeting. M.L. had no contact with school persons between his meeting with Ciliento on April 14 and the Thursday before this hearing began (October 21, 1999) when he was contacted by the Board's attorney. The attorney did not go over particular questions that might arise in hearing. The witness stated his only concern was for his children.

M.L. also stated that two calls from R.D. were recorded on his business caller identification machine. No messages were left. In response to a question about when Karen Dunham told M.L. that she had informed Randall Dunham about their relationship, M.L. stated that, to his knowledge, Karen Dunham had never said anything to Randall Dunham because of Dunham's record of anger. The witness testified further about reports from his daughter that Dunham appeared in or looked into her music class at least three times in the period March 10-April 16, 1999. She reported nothing to her school principal, but told her father.

Before April 11, M.L. instructed D.L. to stay out of Dunham's way. After April 11, on April 14, D.L. reported that the respondent had peered into her classroom at her. On April 12, Principal Feldman had said that if D.L. perceived any problem with the respondent, she was to go directly to his office. In the week beginning Monday, April 12, D.L. was out of school part of Monday and all of Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. She missed at least Monday through Thursday, April 19-22.

M.L. determined just before hearing that D.L. was Dunham's pupil in the sixth grade (1997-98 school year). When the principal and superintendent asked D.L. if she had been in Dunham's class in the 1998-99 school year, she honestly answered no.

D.L. testified. She is a thirteen-year-old pupil in the eighth grade at Memorial Middle School. She knew the respondent was a teacher in the school. She was his pupil in a six-week exploratory course while in sixth grade. The course met twice per week for forty-five minutes each period. D.L. did not have Dunham as a teacher again.

The witness often saw Dunham in and near the school. In spring 1999, most of her classes were in the seventh grade wing. Her social studies class was located between the sixth and seventh grade wings. Dunham entered that classroom after the telephone messages had been received and he peered into several other rooms where D.L. was in attendance. D.L. told her father and her father advised her that Dunham was a teacher and might have a need to be there. In effect, he advised D.L. not to make a mountain of a molehill. D.L. maintained that being stared at made her uncomfortable.

D.L. heard the telephone messages left by Dunham. After a Sunday soccer game, she, her father and sister returned home. The girls went to the answering machine immediately. They heard the messages Dunham left. The witness was in the room ahead of her father. Her sister was not then in the room. The messages contained vulgar language and scared D.L.

D.L. went to school late on Monday, April 12. She did not want to attend at all. She knew that Dunham could come into her class at any time because he was a teacher.

D.L. met with her father and the school principal. The principal told her nothing would happen, advised her not to worry and gave her permission to come directly to his office if she perceived a problem. On Wednesday, April 14, Dunham peered at the witness in her music class. She did nothing about it at that time. Between two other classes, Dunham stared at her again and she went directly to Principal Feldman's office. It was approximately 1:25 p.m.

The principal told D.L. not to worry and assured her that she was safe in the office. The principal also stated that Dunham had not had a drink in a month. The witness asked for her father to be called. Her father could not be reached, but her grandparents were contacted. Her grandmother came to take her home. In the meantime, her father arrived and she and he went to the principal's office. A policeman appeared. The witness stated Dunham had frightened her.

On Thursday and Friday, she attended most of the school day. She missed all of the following week, however, suffering from stomach pains and frequent vomiting. She stated she did not want to go to school and she was still afraid of seeing Dunham or having any problems with him.

D.L. did not know of newspaper coverage until friends informed her on the following Monday when she returned to school. She then read the article. The article did not bother her as much as the telephone calls. The witness actually felt a bit more comfortable knowing that people in town knew the situation and would be looking out for her.

The witness was clear that Dunham had stared into her classroom and, she believes, at her, both before and after the April 11 telephone calls.

N.L. testified. She stated that when she returned to the family home after working in a local restaurant on Sunday, April 11, 1999, D.L. told her that Dunham had left messages. N.L. listened to the messages with her father's consent. N.L. had not had Dunham as a teacher, but knew who the respondent was. N.L. also knew that her father had been dating Karen Dunham for approximately one month. She knew Mrs. Dunham through school. She had had Mrs. Dunham as an enrichment teacher and, in 1998-99, as guidance counselor.

The messages made her extremely nervous and unsure of what would happen or could happen. N.L. did not see the respondent after the messages were received. She occasionally went home for lunch after the messages were received, but did not want to be at home alone.

N.L. is presently a tenth grade pupil at Point Pleasant Borough High School.

Superintendent of Schools Robert Ciliento testified. This matter came to his attention on April 12, 1999 when a man appeared at his offices and asked to speak with the superintendent. The man was M.L. He was visibly upset. The two men discussed the safety of his child in the middle school, that M.L. was seeing Mrs. Dunham and that the respondent taught in the middle school. The superintendent also became aware of the messages left on an answering machine by the respondent. He did not at that time listen to the messages. He referred the matter to the middle school principal. On Thursday, April 15, a police officer-board member came in and showed a transcript of the messages to the superintendent. The superintendent believed the messages were aimed at the girls. The police officer and board member told the superintendent that he should see the transcript. The superintendent read the material and immediately called Principal Feldman. He instructed Feldman to instruct Dunham to report to the superintendent's office with his union representative at the opening of business the next day.

The superintendent met with Dunham, two representatives and his assistant superintendent. He told Dunham how disappointed he was in Dunham's behavior. He mentioned vile and vulgar actions. He stated that this matter should have been kept between adults.

The witness stated he asked the respondent if the respondent had been drinking at the time of the calls. Dunham denied this but said he was suffering a reaction to medication at about the same time. Dunham remembered making the telephone calls but said he could not remember the contents. The superintendent informed the respondent to leave school immediately and that he was suspended. None of the respondent's representatives asked to see the transcript. The respondent denied knowing who D.L. and N.L. were. A week before hearing, board counsel advised the respondent that he had had D.L. for a six-week exploratory course.

The superintendent stated he was repulsed by the thought that the girls had been exposed to such language. He had his secretary type the messages (J-1, Ex. A). The message designated three on the machine, but the second received from Dunham, begins, "Hi, [N.], [D.]." Near the end of the message, Dunham states, "I teach in Point Pleasant too. . . ."

Since the incident, the superintendent has become aware of the newspaper coverage and he disagrees with M.L. about going public with the matter. However, the superintendent also stated he received no pressure from M.L. and did not see M.L. again until the first day of hearing. The superintendent was also angered at an assertion in the article that nothing was being done. In order to protect Dunham, the witness said nothing to the media. It seemed to him that the children were being ignored by all sides.

Concerning allegations that Dunham had been seen outside the L. home and had peered at D.L. in school, the superintendent advised M.L. to contact the police if Dunham appeared outside his home and to contact Principal Feldman about any incident arising in school. When the superintendent learned the message contents, he believed his first duty was to protect D.L.

At the conclusion of the April 12 meeting, when M.L. left, the superintendent called Principal Feldman and warned against any involvement in the marital problem. He also told the principal to be available to D.L. On or about Wednesday of that week, the principal called M.L. and asked him to come to school. M.L. called the police and went to the school.

The superintendent reviewed the respondent's personnel file after meeting with the respondent. He became aware of prior problems. Dunham's leave had occurred before the witness came to the district. The superintendent refused a meeting between M.L. and Dunham, believing the matter to be a domestic problem. After reviewing the transcript of the telephone messages, he changed his mind. It appeared that Dunham had behaved in an unacceptable manner and it was now a tenure matter. However, the superintendent still believed there was nothing to be gained by a meeting between M.L. and the respondent.

The superintendent did not remember knowing of a possible tort claim action against the Board prior to May 7, 1999. While speaking with the respondent, he did not ask if Dunham had gone by the L. home. Nor did he recall Dunham saying that Dunham power walked in that area. The superintendent did not require Dunham to take a physical or psychiatric examination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2, because it was after the fact. His actions warranted tenure charges. The superintendent also stated he did not know about anger management counseling until Dunham told him that Dunham was attending sessions.

On the respondent's case, Robert C. Bransfield, M.D., testified. He has from time-to-time served the Point Pleasant Board by doing psychiatric evaluations for its child study team. Dr. Bransfield knows Dunham as a patient. He saw him first in March 1997. At that time, Dunham complained of stress. Dr. Bransfield has seen the respondent approximately twelve times. In March 1997, his diagnosis of the respondent was adjustment disorder with mixed emotions. This appeared to be triggered by separation from his wife and children. The doctor suggested that Dunham take a leave from duties through May and June 1997.

Dr. Bransfield cleared Dunham to resume work in September 1997. His matrimonial situation seemed to have improved and his ability to deal with the everyday things in life also seemed to improve.

During the 1997-98 school year, the witness saw Dunham twice. After June 1998, he continued to treat Dunham. From the end of June 1998 through April 10, 1999, the doctor saw Dunham in person on August 17 and spoke to him by telephone sometime in February. Dunham appeared to be having some problems and the witness adjusted Dunham's medications. He believed the respondent was stabilized as of February 19, 1999.

The witness has read the tenure charges and the respondent's answer and evidence. He saw the respondent on April 15, 1999 and concluded that Dunham was reactive and was attending Alcoholics Anonymous. He continued the respondent's medications and encouraged Dunham to return on April 27. On April 27, Dunham described what had happened on April 11. He told the doctor that he was working on a boat, drank one-half can of beer, his wife brought his children to his house, his wife accused him of being drunk and left with the children. Thereafter, a neighbor telephoned and told Dunham that someone was staying at his wife's house.

The physician discussed medications with Dunham. He also discussed the telephone calls Dunham had made. Dunham stated that the beer he ingested on April 11 was the first alcohol he had consumed since the prior December. According to the witness, the respondent exhibited more systems, more stress, did drink and did show uncharacteristic anger.

At a session on May 13, 1999, Dunham spoke about his job, stated that his wife's boyfriend had gone to the Board and that tenure charges had been filed against him. Dunham said his wife had told him she was sleeping with someone else. He found this upsetting, but it also helped him to "separate." Dunham also stated he believed one or both of his sons had climbed into bed with his wife and M.L.

Dr. Bransfield identified a letter he sent to Dunham's counsel under date of June 7, 1999 (R-58). The doctor's opinion is that Dunham was under several stresses on April 11. The doctor states that Dunham reported his three and one-half-year-old twin children had mentioned climbing into bed with mommy and M.L.. After hearing this, Dunham was away until April 10. Upon his return, he reported being told by his wife that she had a right to have a relationship and that she had known her current boyfriend for six years. The next day, a neighbor told Dunham that M.L.'s car was in his wife's driveway overnight while the two small children were in the house. Shortly thereafter, Dunham's wife walked into his current residence, screamed at him and then left the premises. At that time, the respondent had been on different prescribed medications and stated he had had one beer. He called and left the messages as described.

There may have been an unknown and possibly contributory drug-alcohol interaction. The respondent was taking blood pressure, antidepressant and antibiotic medications at the time. His physician had previously advised against any alcoholic consumption. The antibiotic had been prescribed for sinusitis. Some persons react to this medication and it is possible that Dunham did. It is possible that during the course of a bacterial infection, dead bacteria release an endotoxin which, in turn, affects the patient's neurology.

Dr. Bransfield believes the respondent's prognosis is good. A divorce does not last forever. Dunham seems to be accepting the fact that his marriage is over. This removes the "reactive" stressors to some extent. The patient also exhibits heightened awareness of his alcohol problem and the need to continue with AA and abstinence. The physician believes that Dunham is genuinely remorseful.

Dr. Bransfield also testified that Dunham stated that he had once fallen down stairs, lay helpless for hours while his wife was present, but she offered no assistance. Dunham conceded he had been drinking at the time of the incident and "blanked out." Dr. Bransfield believed at least the alcohol abuse. A history of blackouts indicates an alcoholic condition. All drinking is highly contraindicated for the balance of Dunham's life.

His review of the case shows that the respondent often met the criteria for major depressive illness. The physician cannot predict recurrence with certainty. Things presently look good for Dunham. The doctor is equally sure that Dunham had days when he was dysphoric, although not necessarily pathological. This seemed to come from his life situation and his reaction was not out of proportion, yet he was unable to cope at the time.

Histories, as reported by patients, are not always taken at face value. The doctor testified about a drug he had prescribed. If Dunham took two 150 milligram tablets, a few hours apart, there would be no problem. Three hundred milligrams per day is the recommended dosage. The events of April 11 could have been the result of alcohol ingestion as easily as a drug interaction. The doctor read the transcript of the telephone messages and cannot surely attribute these to one cause. He has no reason to doubt Dunham's statements in general. A doctor develops a sense of credibility. However, he doubted the statement that Dunham had only one-half can of beer of April 11. He was not able to evaluate whether Dunham had not consumed alcohol since December 1998. The physician testified further about Dunham's specific progress from August 1997 through April 1999, including medications and dosages. Although questioned extensively, the doctor's testimony remained essentially consistent.

Randall C. Dunham testified. He has been a teacher in the Point Pleasant system for twenty-five years without significant problems. He has taught mathematics, social studies, language and reading, usually to sixth grade pupils. Exhibits R-2 through R-53 are complete and accurate records of his evaluations. Exhibit R-1 is a true copy of his teaching certificate. He has been involved in extracurricular activities. He has been involved in his local education association.

The witness married in 1989. In December 1995, his wife gave birth to twin boys. In March 1997, his wife, on sabbatical leave, was pursuing a master's degree. She left with the children and moved into her parents' home. He was depressed and sought help. He saw a psychiatrist and had some counseling with his wife. He then saw the psychiatrist, Dr. Bransfield. He began to take prescribed medications. He agreed to and applied for a medical leave of absence from mid-March through June 30, 1997. In August 1997, Dr. Bransfield approved him to return to teaching in September. The Board accepted the physician's recommendation. Dunham did teach in the 1997-98 school year. He was observed and evaluated (R-51, R-52).

Prior to April, he had no problems. He was seeing the psychiatrist and the psychologist regularly. He and his wife were officially separated and legal papers had been filed in December 1998.

On April 10, 1999, he returned from a two-day drive from Florida. He arrived home late on Saturday evening, April 10. He contacted his wife and arranged to see his sons the next day. Dunham states his wife then told him about the relationship with M.L. Dunham stated that his wife said she had known M.L. for perhaps six years, but only recently had the relationship become serious. He also says she stated that who she saw was none of his business. Prior to this, Dunham knew his wife was seeing someone, but did not know who the person was. In late March one of his sons had mentioned something about bunk beds and said something about climbing into bed with mom and M.L.

On Sunday, April 11, the respondent wanted to work on his father's boat. He left home at about 6 a.m. and worked until rain began at about 11:15 a.m. He "had a beer with a neighbor" although he had been told not to drink while taking medication.

Dunham stated that he was taking several medications including an antibiotic. He took one 150-milligram antidepressant tablet. When he returned to his parent's home, he was tired. To the best of his recollection, he lay on a bed and went to sleep. At about 1:30 p.m. his wife arrived with the children. He states he was "groggy." His wife was upset. She stated she believed he had been drinking, took the children and left.

At that time, he and his wife had an arrangement under which he saw the children on Sunday afternoons. When his wife left, Dunham was upset and took another antidepressant tablet.

He received an anonymous phone call from someone in Spring Lake Heights. This person questioned the presence of M.L. in his wife's home overnight. Dunham believed he was unable to think clearly. He made a series of telephone calls trying to express his anger to M.L. He does not remember what he said.

Dunham states he knew nothing about M.L.'s children at the time. On the night before, April 10, his wife had stated she had counseled one of M.L.'s girls. Dunham had been D.L.'s teacher for six to eight weeks in her sixth grade year. He recalls the child did well.

After April 11, he was interviewed first by his principal. He assured the principal he did not know D.L. On the sixteenth, he was interviewed by the superintendent and assistant superintendent. He had two union representatives with him. The superintendent asked if he had made the calls and Dunham admitted that he had. Dunham stated he could not recall the contents. Dunham states he did not read the transcript. He also states there were no references made to a meeting between M.L. and him. He would have been willing to meet with M.L.

The tenure charges refer to D.L.'s statements that R.D. had been staring at her and following her. He denies this. He did go into a room in which the girl was a pupil, but it was on school business. He would also normally be in the hallway late in the day. He denies walking by the L. residence deliberately. In January, February, March and the beginning of April, he went walking each lunch period. On Monday, April 12, while doing his walking, he noticed M.L.'s truck and avoided that street thereafter.

Dunham states he has never had spillover behavior in the classroom and that his problems have nothing to do with pupils. He saw Dr. Bransfield first in 1997 and saw him more intensively after the April 11, 1999 incidents. In 1997, 1998 and 1999, he was seeing a psychologist to deal with his anger problems and attending Carrier Foundation six hours per week and two AA meetings per week.

The witness read the transcript of the telephone messages he had left and concedes that they are inappropriate. He wishes he had not made the calls, especially because the girls heard what he said.

The witness testified about the anonymous telephone call he received that weekend. He believes a neighbor or at least someone in the area made the telephone call. He received the call immediately after his wife left with the children. He was intoxicated when the call came in. He has recollection of consuming one can of beer. He told the superintendent that he was not drinking because he did not consider the consumption of one can of beer to constitute drinking.

The respondent recalls no drinking problem on April 11, 1999. He heard the tape of his messages played. His speech was, indeed, slurred. However, Dunham is not sure why. He states he could have blacked out.

The respondent recognized D.L. at hearing. The Memorial Middle School has thirty-five to forty classrooms. He did not notice D.L. when he entered a room in which she was a pupil.

Dunham believes he is a good teacher and truly involved with children. He knew D.L. simply as D., and did not connect her with M.L. until later. He marked at least two of her papers and went over them with her.

The respondent denies he was trying to use the girls to get at M.L. He denied that the anonymous telephone call came from a best friend who had given him other information about "goings on" at the Dunham marital home. He also denied calling M.L.'s business prior to April 10.

Dunham further stated that he agrees the messages were inappropriate. If he were sober, he would not have said those things. He did not control his inebriation and takes full responsibility.

Before April 11, he walked by the L. home everyday during his power walk exercises. On April 12, he knew he had made some inappropriate telephone calls and avoided going by the home because of embarrassment. Dunham stated he was aware he had done something inappropriate even though he could not remember the contents of the messages. He presumed, because he had blacked out, that he had done something inappropriate. He stated there was one earlier incidence of blacking out in December 1998. He believed there had been an inappropriate incident with his wife while he was undergoing a blackout.

Karen L. Dunham was called by the Board on rebuttal. She had a telephone conversation with the respondent on April 10 concerning a visit on Sunday, April 11. Both had been on vacations the week before. She said nothing to the respondent about M.L. Dunham complained about her behavior without reference to anyone in particular. Prior to April 10, there had been no mention of M.L. by her to Dunham or by Dunham to her.

On April 11, she took the children to Dunham's for visitation. He had just moved to that address. Karen Dunham arrived at about 2:30 p.m. She rang the bell but got no response. The door was open, keys in the lock. She knocked and received no answer. She called in and Dunham asked who it was. She twice stated, "It's me, Karen." Dunham appeared, holding onto the wall and partly undressed. She stated to him that he had been drinking and left. She did not smell his breath.

The first time the respondent mentioned M.L. to the witness was Sunday, April 11. When she returned to her home, there were already three messages on her machine from Dunham referring to M.L. He was quite angry. He accused her of fooling around. As of that day, she and M.L. had dated a few times, M.L. had not stayed at her house at any time and she denied that the children ever were in bed with her and M.L.

The witness had no doubt that Dunham was intoxicated on April 11. He was not capable of caring for the children. She had to identify herself twice before he made himself visible.

DETERMINATION AND ORDER

The facts are not in dispute. The messages were left on M.L.'s recording machine. The only dispute is concerned with what to do about the facts. The respondent argues that he has a twenty-five year record of outstanding performance within the school district. A chain of events including service of divorce papers by his wife led up to the April 11 telephone calls.

Dunham testified that before making the calls, several things had happened. He had ingested alcohol. He had taken at least one and probably two 150-milligram tablets of an antidepressant drug. He had received an upsetting telephone call from a neighbor. His wife had come, with their children, to visit him but she had immediately left with the children when she perceived Dunham to be intoxicated.

Over a period of several hours, Dunham called the M.L. residence and left four messages, at least one of which is clearly directed at D.L. and N.L. Dunham asserted that he could recall making the telephone calls and had an uncomfortable feeling that he had made inappropriate statements, but he could not recall the substance of any of the telephone messages.

Dunham also argues that although approximately twelve words he used during the course of the telephone messages were clearly profanities, the only fair reading of the messages clearly establishes that his only objective was to speak to M.L. Neither D.L. nor N.L. was in the home when the telephone messages were received. Although M.L. said he filed complaints with the local police department, no criminal charges were in fact filed against him. The police department did not pursue an investigation regarding M.L.'s claims of alleged harassment. In addition, M.L. contacted a local newspaper and made available to a reporter a transcription of the telephone calls. Articles appeared in the newspaper that publicized the nature of the phone calls.

Dunham's psychiatrist testified that he advised Dunham not to ingest alcohol while on any medication. He further stated there could be psychiatric effects connected with certain antibiotics and that some people may have a specific reaction. Finally, the psychiatrist testified that he believed that what precipitated the telephone calls was related to ongoing matrimonial stress.

Dunham insists that any contact with D.L. in school was incidental and coincidental. He would normally be in areas that the girl would be or would be passing through. He denied peering at her at any time. He stated that, if he entered a classroom in which she was a pupil, it was on school business. He finally stated that he had walked past the L. residence for several months while exercising during his lunch period. He ceased using that route for his walks after April 11.

Dunham urges that he did not engage in conduct unbecoming a teacher. The telephone calls he made on April 11, 1999 were immediately and directly related to ongoing matrimonial problems. The telephone calls were placed when Dunham was in a highly inebriated and medicated state. He stresses that there was no anger directed at N.L. or D.L.

Dunham further argues that M.L. must share some blame for dissemination of the inappropriate messages. Had M.L. acted responsibly, he would have immediately stopped the answering machine after he heard the first obscenity directed at him. M.L. could have easily screened the rest of the telephone messages outside the presence of his daughter. And it was M.L. who caused the matter to appear in a local newspaper.

Dunham also appears to argue that it is wrong to maintain the messages were directed to D.L. and N.L. It must immediately be observed that each of the messages refers to "your father." In addition, the second message begins, "Hi, [N.] and [D.]."

Dunham also suggests that the Board and its agents somehow erred in not arranging a meeting between him and M.L. This must be rejected out of hand. The Board and its agents quite properly restricted their actions to those portions of the matter that dealt with Dunham, the pupils and the school. As the superintendent credibly testified, he regarded relationships between and among M.L., Randall Dunham and Karen Dunham to be beyond the school's purview.

Dunham further argues that a review of prior Commissioner of Education cases relating to more serious conduct supports his contention that even assuming that the charges at issue were sustained, they should not result in his dismissal. He cites In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Madelin Ribacka, 1978 S.L.D. 929; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Fred Brown, 1970 S.L.D. 239; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frederick Ostergrem, 1966 S.L.D. 185 and In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William H. Kittell, 1972 S.L.D. 535. He goes on to cite twenty-four additional tenure matters ending with In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William Koller, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (Edu. 157) (Nov. 15, 1986). For the reasons expressed below, I FIND and determine most of these matters to be distinguishable from today's case.

The Board argues that the charges certified by it to the Commissioner of Education are true in fact and that they warrant the respondent's dismissal. The defense offered by Dunham does not mitigate or justify his actions. He denies knowledge of the contents of the telephone calls, at least at the time he made them and claims he was in an intoxicated state created by an overdose of a prescription medication and the consumption of the half can of beer. Yet, in his response to the superintendent's charges and in his testimony, the respondent argued that the prescribed dosage of the medication on April 11 was a single 150-milligram tablet. His treating psychiatrist testified that on April 11 the prescribed dosage was one 150-milligram table taken twice per day and that dosage had been established in the prior August. The psychiatrist stated that after having treated Dunham in 1997, he saw him again in August 1998 and observed the respondent's mood to be worse. Dr. Bransfield increased the dosage from 150 milligrams per day to 300 milligrams per day. The psychiatrist also testified that two 150-milligram tablets separated by six to eight hours is not excessive dosage.

In his response to charges, Dunham blamed his intoxicated state on a drug interaction resulting from the alleged overdose of antidepressant with the consumption of one beer or half a beer sometime prior to the phone calls. The psychiatrist could not testify with certainty about any type of drug interaction with a whole or a half can of beer. Thus, Dunham's contention that his actions were caused by a drug interaction with a small amount of alcohol is not supported by any competent evidence.

The psychiatrist carefully avoided mention of a formal diagnosis of alcoholism in any of his reports. At hearing, however, he stated to a reasonable degree of medical certainty that Dunham is an alcoholic. The psychiatrist then qualified that by stating that Dunham was a recovering alcoholic, at least at the time of this hearing. Bransfield had treated Dunham for at least two years. Dunham had a history of at least one alcohol-related blackout in March 1998. The psychiatrist determined that alcohol was a problem in Dunham's life and that he should not drink at all. Yet his June 7, 1999 report (R-5) makes only tangential mention of Dunham's alcohol problems.

It is true that Bransfield cleared Dunham to return to work in August 1997 and that the Board never questioned or challenged his ability to return to work. However, the Board was never fully aware of Dunham's alcoholism by way of Bransfield's reports.

The Board further argues that Dunham claims there were three particular stressors that caused him to make the telephone calls. The psychiatrist testified that Dunham's remarks were not typical of a specific psychiatric illness, thereby ruling out any temporary mental disorder as a cause. The psychiatrist relates the telephone calls only to the acute stressors. Thus, if those stressors as alleged by Dunham did not occur, then Dunham's conduct is left without any excuse whatsoever.

The only information about the stressors comes from Dunham himself. The first incident referred to is an alleged statement by one of his children that he had spent time in bed with mom and M.L. Karen Dunham specifically denied any such incident could have ever occurred. Dunham also alleges an anonymous phone call from an unidentified male referring to M.L. staying at the respondent's Spring Lake Heights home overnight. This, too, lacks any corroboration whatsoever. The third stressor identified by Dunham was a telephone conversation between him and his wife. Dunham claims in this conversation, on Saturday, April 10, his wife told him of her relationship with M.L. Again, Mrs. Dunham specifically denied ever telling Mr. Dunham anything about M.L. either in a telephone conversation on April 10 or prior to that time.

Dunham recognized, even while making the calls, that his conduct was wrong. He conceded that he stopped walking past the L. house although he claimed that every day at lunch prior to that he had walked the same route. This indicates that Dunham knew where the L. household was prior to April 11. It also indicates that he did not dare walk past the house on April 12 because he knew that the calls he made were completely inappropriate, he was aware of their content and he knew whether they were made in an alcohol-induced state or not.

Dunham was also accused of conduct that amounted to stalking D.L. in school. He denied this. Yet there is no reason to disbelieve D.L.'s testimony and her perception that Dunham was going out of his way to create a situation she found frightening. This type of conduct destroys the basic trust that should exist between pupil and teacher.

The Board says Dunham's conduct warrants dismissal. Although he admits that the message machine identified all three names, M.L., D.L. and N.L., he directed the vulgar and obscene language only to the two children. Dunham admitted that at the time he made the telephone calls on April 11 and addressed the message to N.L., he knew she was a student at the high school. His defense has been to deny, excuse, obfuscate and fabricate. The facts warrant a finding that the only triggering incident on April 11 was Dunham's voluntary consumption of a quantity of alcohol sufficient to make him intoxicated and a determination fired by that alcohol consumption to get at M.L. through his children. Dunham knew at the time of the telephone calls that both children were enrolled in the Point Pleasant school system. It is an abuse of his position and it undermines any confidence the Board can have in his ability to continue to function as a teacher. The heart of the matter is that the respondent saw fit to use the pupils as a means of venting his rage at M.L. That type of conduct and abuse of a position of trust with pupils was never addressed by Bransfield except to say that it was not caused by any mental disease or illness. His denial of important facts surrounding the incident, such as his oral denial to the superintendent that he had even consumed any alcohol on April 11, strengthens the Board's position that Dunham's version of the facts is a sham.

The Board anticipates that Dunham would argue that these are strictly personal problems that have no effect on his teaching capacity. That is not all true; these same types of problems compelled him to take an extensive medical leave before the end of the 1996-97 school year and have led to the present incident. Dunham will further argue that there is no potential for his conduct to recur. Nevertheless, eight days after Bransfield's prognosis of June 7, 1999, Dunham had a relapse. The Board is not compelled to wait until a teaching staff member's conduct spills over again more directly into the classroom.

Even if the ALJ and the Commissioner do not agree that the conduct warrants termination of Dunham's employment, at the very least this conduct demands serious and substantial discipline by way of a long-term suspension, in years, without pay, and a return to teaching only upon condition of an independent physical and psychiatric examination with results satisfactory to the Board of Education.

After a complete review of the record and careful attention to the parties' briefs, I am satisfied that most of the cases the respondent cites are inapplicable to the present case. Ribacka, above, had to do with a pupil and teacher and their interactions throughout the pupil's sixth grade year. The Commissioner observed that pupil testimony in that matter was inconclusive and that the credible evidence presented was insufficient to support the charge against the teacher. In Brown, the Commissioner cautioned as he has in many cases that the testimony of children must be examined and weighed with great care. Further, the matter dealt with an alleged unwanted touching which was never established. Ostergren was a physical abuse matter. The Commissioner usefully observed in that case that in two earlier matters involving the infliction of physical indignities upon pupils he had both upheld dismissal and denied dismissal. At 1966 S.L.D. 188, the Commissioner states:

> The Commissioner finds significant differences between these two cases and the matter herein. The circumstances under which the episode occurred, its provocation, the nature of the incident itself, the age of the pupil, the teacher's record, his attitude and the prognosis for his continued effective performance and usefulness in the school system, varied materially in these cases. In the Commissioner's opinion each such matter must be judged in the light of all of the circumstances. The kind and degree of penalty will necessarily vary also according to the particular problem.

Applying this useful instruction to today's case, I FIND that none of the two dozen cases the respondent suggests support his position is particularly helpful. The two cases that come closest to resembling today's are In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Paul H. Wells, 1982 S.L.D. 158, aff'd State Bd. of Ed., 1982 S.L.D. 173, and In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William Koller, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (Edu. 157). In Wells, a school psychologist had been intoxicated during school hours and was immediately suspended. The psychologist admitted that he was an alcoholic. The Commissioner did not order his dismissal, however, because he found the respondent had joined AA and was, in the testimony of his counselor, in the recovery stage of the disease. The Commissioner also noted that dismissal would be inappropriate because the psychologist had received excellent evaluations even when his problem was at its worst. Unlike Dunham's case, the psychologist was not accused of any inappropriate behavior in connection with a pupil. The Koller matter is similar in that Koller had been intoxicated during school hours. Here again, however, there was no allegation that he had engaged in any untoward activity or conduct involving pupils. In fact, Koller was relieved of duty immediately before he was scheduled to teach a history class beginning at 1:03 p.m. A careful reading of Koller indicates that all interactions that day touching on the intoxication were between Koller and colleagues. The judge in K*oller* concluded that forfeiture of tenure under the circumstances would violate protections afforded by the Law Against Discrimination, N.J.A.C. 10:5-1 through -49. There is no such argument here.

Dunham can point to good evaluations, but the resemblance to the preceding two cases ends there.

Dunham has admitted making the telephone calls and has admitted the content of each call. There is no mitigation apparent. These calls were made over a four-hour period. No one forced Dunham to ingest what he says he did. Importantly, I am not convinced of his veracity as to the quantity of alcohol he consumed on April 11, 1999. The standard of evidence in an administrative proceeding is a preponderance of the credible evidence. Matter of Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). Where the standard is preponderance of the evidence, the evidence must be such as to "generate belief that the tenured hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

One factor that must be considered in a determination as to which parties' version of an incident has the "reasonable probability of truth" is that "the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness," may disbelieve his testimony. State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div. 1952) (citations omitted), certif. den. 10 N.J. 316 (1952). Importantly, "[a] trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony." Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Point Pleasant Borough Board of Education has proven the charge of conduct unbecoming a teacher as to the telephone calls certified against Randall Dunham. The respondent's defenses lacked substance. He offers a curious concatenation of events to explain his behavior. A trier of fact is at liberty within the bounds of reason to reject in whole or in part the testimony of a witness which does not convince the trier of fact of its merit even if that testimony is uncontradicted. N.B.O. Industries Treadway Companies, Inc. v. Brunswick Corp., 523 *F.*2d 262, 277 (3d Cir. 1975).

Charges five and six (J-1) go to D.L.'s fear of attending school with the concomitant possibility of contact with Dunham, even to the extent of passing him in the hallway. Notwithstanding Dunham's denial that he never made inappropriate eye contact with D.L. and that his presence in the hallway is incidental to his own schedule, I credit D.L.'s testimony. She is thirteen years old, articulate and intelligent. Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954) citing In re Perrone's Estate, 5 N.J. 514, 521 (1950). I am satisfied that D.L. told the truth during her testimony although it was, at times, uncomfortable for her.

As to the balance of charge six that Dunham was outside the L. home, without more I am not convinced that this was more than a coincidence. There is testimony in the record that on April 12, the day following the telephone calls, Dunham was aware of where the L. home was and carefully avoided it thereafter.

The several cases discussed above do not contain the elements present here. In this matter, a teacher, a person in a position of authority over a pupil, clearly addressed improper messages including profanity to a thirteen-year-old pupil and her older sister. It is not possible to explain away the direction of vulgar and obscene messages to two children. It is clear to this judge that Dunham knew he was addressing a high school pupil and a pupil in his own school. No matter what Dunham believed the provocations to be, this is inexcusable behavior. The respondent used two children as a means of getting at his perceived tormentor, M.L.

The Commissioner of Education long ago observed:

> [Teachers] are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, 197 S.L.D. 302, 321.

And in Redcay v. State Bd. of Ed., 130 N.J.L. 369, 371, our former Supreme Court stated:

> Unfitness for a task is best shown by numerous incidents. Unfitness for a position under the school system is best evidenced by a series of incidents. Unfitness to hold a post might be shown by one incident, if sufficiently flagrant, but it might also be shown by many incidents. Fitness may be shown either way.

The removal proceedings here have been in all respects proper and in accordance with statute. The Board cannot be said to have overreached in these circumstances. Good cause for removal having been shown, I ORDER the removal of Randall Dunham from position effective on the date of final decision in this matter.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF RANDALL DUNHAM,	:
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF POINT	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
PLEASANT BOROUGH, OCEAN	:	DECISION
COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions were submitted in accordance with the directives of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. The Board, for good cause shown, requested and was granted an extension of time within which to submit reply exceptions, and such submission was filed in conformance with the adjusted timelines. The parties' exception filings were fully considered by the Commissioner in making his determination herein.

Respondent's exceptions[1] object to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding him guilty of unbecoming conduct, charging that in so concluding the ALJ failed to consider and analyze any of respondent's advanced defenses and, moreover, neglected to even find these defenses "mitigating circumstances" in fashioning an appropriate penalty herein. (Respondent's Exceptions and Brief Submitted in Support of Exceptions, at 30) Initially, in this regard, respondent charges that the ALJ failed to consider and properly weigh hearing testimony establishing that respondent was a "recovering alcoholic" and that, due to his ingestion of four prescription drugs and alcohol, he was in a "highly intoxicated state" during the period on April 11, 1999 when he made the telephone calls at issue herein. (Id. at 31) As a consequence of this condition, respondent maintains, he was incapable of formulating any "intent" to involve D. and N. in his marital difficulties. (Id. at 33) It is "[in]explicable," respondent contends, that the ALJ would ignore "intent" in evaluating his conduct on this day, particularly in light of his "alcoholism disability" and the New Jersey Supreme Court's holding that "alcoholism is a handicap protected, in part, by the New Jersey State Law Against Discrimination." (Id. at 34) Clearly, he argues, the telephone calls he made were solely attributable to his alcoholism disability and the matrimonial-related stress factors that he faced during that time period. (Id. at 35) Respondent urges that "had the Administrative Law Judge properly evaluated the proffered facts in this matter a determination should have been made that [respondent] did not possess the capacity during the operative time period on April 11th to engage in any 'conduct unbecoming a teacher.'" (Id.)

Even assuming that a finding of unbecoming conduct could be sustained, respondent contends, the ALJ again erred by failing to accord proper weight and consideration to his 25-year excellent teaching record in the District and the fact that the conduct at issue here was not "work related," in evaluating a proper penalty. (Respondent's Exceptions and Brief Submitted in Support of Exceptions at 35-37) Respondent reproduces from his Post-hearing Brief a myriad of prior decisions of the Commissioner[2] which, he urges, stand for the proposition "that it is unprecedented that a teaching staff member, with the exemplary record that [respondent] had within the Point Pleasant Borough School District, would face removal from his position regarding conduct that was not work related and that, moreover, was not criminal in nature." (Id. at 38) Similarly, respondent asserts, the ALJ erred in failing to accord proper significance to his testimony with respect to the monumental matrimonial stress factors he was under on April 11 which precipitated the phone calls; his testimony expressing deep remorse for his actions; and testimony of his expert witness, Dr. Robert Bransfield, stating that respondent's prognosis was very positive and there was no reason he could not return to his teaching duties. (Respondent's Exceptions and Brief Submitted in Support of Exceptions at 38-45)

In conclusion, respondent urges that the tenure charges be dismissed or, should the Commissioner find "any 'conduct unbecoming a teacher,'" (emphasis added) the penalty imposed be limited, in recognition of respondent's excellent record and the likelihood that such behavior will not be repeated, to a one-year increment withholding. (Respondent's Exceptions and Brief Submitted in Support of Exceptions at 72)

In reply, the Board advances that although respondent "persistently argues" that he is remorseful for his actions, he continues to deny that such actions were directed at students, a contention fully belied by the transcript of the conversations at issue. (Board's Reply Exceptions at 6) Further, the Board advances that, curiously, respondent's exceptions fully fail to challenge the factual findings or conclusions with respect to his other conduct at issue herein, the "stalking" of D.L. "[Respondent] argues that he was remorseful for his actions, [the Board posits,] but apparently that remorse did not occur on the Wednesday after the phone calls when he was peering into two different classrooms at D.L., frightening her." (Id.)

The Board next observes that not only did respondent, himself, never previously agree or claim that his actions here were attributable to "alcoholism," such a "defense" was never argued before the ALJ below, and no medical basis was presented for such a conclusion.

(Board's Reply Exceptions at 9) Undoubtedly, the Board reasons, "[t]here would appear to be no question that [respondent] became intoxicated on the afternoon of the telephone calls, but it is unclear what substance or substances caused that state, inasmuch as [respondent] is the only one who knows what he consumed that afternoon." (Id.) Even assuming, arguendo, that alcoholism could be termed a legitimate defense here, the Board proffers, such condition does not address or explain respondent's subsequent stalking behavior which occurred days later. (Id. at 10)

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, which included transcripts of the two days of hearing conducted at the OAL[3], the Commissioner determines to affirm the Initial Decision of the ALJ, since he finds that the record before him amply establishes that respondent's behavior with respect to the incidents detailed in the Board's tenure charges constitutes conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member. He further concurs with the ALJ that, under the circumstances existing here, respondent's dismissal from his tenured teaching position is warranted.

In reaching his determination that the within charges have been established, the Commissioner observes that respondent's admitted conduct in this regard is serious and highly unprofessional. As observed by the ALJ:

> In this matter, a teacher, a person in a position of authority over a pupil, clearly addressed improper messages including profanity to a thirteen-year-old pupil and her older sister. It is not possible to explain away the direction of vulgar and obscene messages to two children. It is clear to this judge that Dunham knew he was addressing a high school pupil and a pupil in his own school. No matter what Dunham believed the provocations to be, this is inexcusable behavior. The respondent used two children as a means of getting at his perceived tormentor, M.L. (Initial Decision at 25)

[3]Hearing was held on October 26 and October 28, 1999.

Such behavior[4] is directly contrary and inimical to the expectations placed on teaching staff members and, undeniably, conduct unbecoming a teacher. It is well-established that the obligation and responsibilities of a public school teacher impose a heavy duty of self-restraint and controlled behavior "rarely requisite to other types of employment." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321. The Commissioner categorically dismisses respondent's exception contention that, because his faculties were impeded, he was, therefore, incapable of forming the "intent" to engage in unbecoming conduct, rendering it impossible for him to have committed such an offense. The within respondent admittedly engaged in conduct which is clearly unbecoming. Whether he did so purposely or intentionally is of no moment here. Although such mens rea may be considered by the Commissioner in fashioning an appropriate penalty, it does not operate to immunize respondent from guilt, or absolve him from the consequences of his actions. Likewise, the Commissioner rejects as untenable respondent's apparent claim of entitlement to the protections afforded a handicapped person by New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination (LAD) by virtue of his "alcoholism disability," which, it is noted was raised for the first time in his exceptions. Although it is well-established that alcoholism is a handicap under LAD, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 et seq., e.g., Matter of Cahill, 245 N.J. Super. 397 (App. Div. 1991), and even accepting, arguendo, that such a defense was properly before the Commissioner, i.e., previously advanced and argued in the proceedings below, the result in this matter would remain unaltered, as employers are not required to tolerate criminal or egregious conduct of employees, even if the conduct in question was caused by a disability. See Barbera v. DiMartino, 305 N.J. Super. 617, 640 (App. Div. 1997).[5]

Similarly, no credence can be afforded respondent's exception challenge to credibility determinations made by the ALJ and the weight he ascribed to proffered testimony. In this regard, the Commissioner is satisfied, based on the record as a whole, that the ALJ gave full consideration to all evidentiary proofs and testimony which comprise the record and weighed it according to the credibility of the witnesses and the plausibility of its content. The Commissioner finds no basis whatsoever in the record before him for overturning such findings or credibility assessments of the ALJ who had the benefit of observing the witnesses firsthand. In so concluding, the Commissioner was especially mindful that:

> Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself. It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances. (In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950))

Like the ALJ, the Commissioner's review persuades him that "[t]he respondent's defenses lacked substance. He offers a curious concatenation of events to explain his behavior," (Initial Decision at 24) which, the Commissioner observes, lacks persuasive evidential corroboration in the within record. Although it is axiomatic that in tenure matters a Board has the burden of proving its proffered charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence, it is, likewise, undeniable that a respondent in going forward with defenses, must present credible evidence of those defenses.

[5]In this case, the Court held that plaintiff's assault of a supervisor caused by a psychotic episode, was nonetheless a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for terminating and not rehiring him finding "We are in line with the federal authority that laws protecting the handicapped from employment discrimination are not intended to protect against crime or egregious conduct which, if committed by any other employee, would have warranted the adverse employment decision." (at 640

In considering the appropriate penalty in this matter, the Commissioner is again compelled to reiterate his long-standing belief that educators, by virtue of the unique position they occupy, must be held to an enhanced standard of behavior and must continually realize that they serve as role models to students and the community. The Commissioner, as did the ALJ, finds the prior decisions of the Commissioner cited by respondent in support of mitigation of penalty in consideration of what he claims is the "less serious" nature of his offense, his exemplary work record and his claim that his conduct here was not "work related," are not particularly beneficial to him in the context of this case. The Commissioner finds appropriate the ALJ's culling of guidance from Ostergren, supra, in this regard, namely:

> The Commissioner finds significant differences between these  cases and the matter herein. The circumstances under which the episode occurred, its provocation, the nature of the incident itself, the age of the pupil, the teacher's record, his attitude and the prognosis for his continued effective performance and usefulness in the school system, varied materially in these cases. In the Commissioner's opinion each such matter must be judged in light of all of the circumstances. The kind and degree of penalty will necessarily vary also according to the particular problem. (emphasis added) (Initial Decision at 23, citing Ostergren, 1966 S.L.D. 188)

Said differently, because in tenure matters each case is extremely fact sensitive, meaningful comparisons between cases can be difficult to make. The Commissioner's full review persuades him that the ALJ correctly concluded that none of the cases advanced by respondent is similar enough in nature or factual circumstances to the instant matter so as to provide precedential support for respondent's position.

The Commissioner, additionally, does not share respondent's belief that his offending actions here were not "work related." The within record establishes that the messages left by respondent were directed to two students in the District, one of which, D.L., was a former student of his and attended the very school where he was a teaching staff member. The record further contains credible testimony that D.L. became physically ill, experienced sleeping difficulties, and was fearful of the possibility of contact with respondent. At the very least, respondent's conduct had the effect of causing unwarranted disruption to and interruption of N.'s educational program. See In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Robert A. Dombloski, School District of the Town of Belvidere, Warren County, decided by the Commissioner June 23, 1999. The adverse effect upon the proper administration of the Point Pleasant Borough School system is, likewise, apparent. The incident resulted in negative newspaper coverage for the school (Initial Decision, at 9), and may have precipitated a possible tort claim action against the Board. (Initial Decision, at 10) Moreover, even accepting, arguendo, respondent's claim that his conduct was not work related, it does not necessarily follow that such situation calls for a mitigated penalty. The mere fact that misconduct occurred at a time and place entirely apart from school and even may involve people entirely unrelated to it does not immunize the offender from disciplinary sanction commensurate with his offense. Indeed, the Commissioner has not refrained from imposing the penalty of dismissal upon a tenured employee for unbecoming conduct "even if such conduct did not occur in the course of a teacher's employment," where it is otherwise warranted. Board of Education of the Township of Parsippany-Troy Hills v. Molinaro, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 268, 276, citing In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Robert H. Beam, School District of the Borough of Sayreville, 1973 S.L.D. 157. Also see In re Dombloski, supra.

Although duly considering respondent's lengthy, apparently unblemished record with the Board, along with each of his other proffered defenses, the Commissioner concludes that these factors, which ordinarily could serve to mitigate against respondent's dismissal, are greatly outweighed by the seriousness of his admitted conduct in this matter. Therefore, in light of the charges established herein reflecting respondent's clear violation of his obligation to conduct himself in a manner befitting a tenured teaching staff member, the Commissioner concludes that, under the particular circumstances of this matter, respondent's behavior is "sufficiently flagrant" to warrant his dismissal from his tenured position. See Redcay v. State Board of Education, 130 N.J.L. 369, 371 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944).

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, as expanded upon above, the Commissioner affirms the Initial Decision of the OAL, and hereby orders that Randall Dunham be dismissed from his teaching position with the School District of Point Pleasant Borough as of the date of this decision. This matter shall be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, for action, as that body deems appropriate, against respondent's certificate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :

HEARING OF CELESE SEGALL, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF : DECISION

ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY. :

Board certified tenure charges of (Charge 1) chronic and excessive absenteeism, incapacity, incompetency, unbecoming conduct and (Charge 2) abuse of sick leave against respondent teacher.

The ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision with respect to Charge 1 since there were no genuine issues of material fact in dispute between the parties and the moving party was entitled to prevail as a matter of law. (Brill) The ALJ concluded that the Board gave due consideration to the particular circumstances of respondent's absences, not merely their inordinate number. The ALJ found that the principal was in frequent contact with respondent regarding her 720 days of absence in seven years and the negative impact of those absences on the continuity of instruction. Thus, the Board met the three-prong standard for termination of a tenured employee for excessive absenteeism established by In re White. The ALJ dismissed Charge 2 as duplicative of Charge 1 and lacking documentary evidence. The ALJ ordered respondent dismissed from her tenured employment.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's decision to sustain Charge 1 against respondent relative to chronic and excessive absenteeism and to dismiss Charge 2 (abuse of sick leave) for the reasons well-stated in the Initial Decision. Citing In re White, among other cases, the Commissioner emphasized that it is well-settled law that excessive absenteeism warrants dismissal of a tenured teacher even when the absences have been excused or caused by legitimate illness. The Commissioner ordered respondent dismissed from her employment and directed a copy of this decision be transmitted to The State Board of Examiners for action as it deems appropriate.

Record Closed: February 18, 2000 Decided: February 25, 2000

BEFORE THOMAS E. CLANCY, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

In this matter, the Elizabeth Board of Education filed two tenure charges against the respondent. Charge #1 was for alleged chronic and excessive absenteeism, incapacity, incompetency and unbecoming conduct. Charge #2 was for alleged abuse of sick leave. After transmittal to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on January 7, 2000 for resolution as a contested case, petitioner filed a motion for summary decision on February 8, 2000. The respondent's letter-brief in opposition to the motion was received by the undersigned on February 18, 2000, at which time the record was closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Relative to the charges filed, the respondent did not dispute the following, which I FIND to be the pertinent FACTS of this case:

1. Respondent, Celese Segall, is a tenured teacher employed by the Elizabeth Board of Education (hereinafter the Board) since December 4, 1989. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimanta Bitenas, para. 4).[1]

2. Ms. Segall's most recent assignment with the Board is to teach mathematics enhancement to grades 7 through 9 at Alexander Hamilton Middle School. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 4).

3. Pursuant to Article VIII of the Agreement between the Board and the Elizabeth Education Association, teachers are allocated 12 sick days per school year, 2 personal days per school year and 1 family day per school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 3).

4. Ms. Segall did not report to work in the 1999-2000 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 13; Tenure Charges Exhibit B, Affidavit of Linda Lee Kelly para. 3; Tenure Charges Exhibit C, Affidavit of Joseph D. Harris para 3).

5. Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 147 days during the 1998-1999 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 12; Tenure Charges Exhibit B, Affidavit of Linda Lee Kelly para 3; Tenure Charges Exhibit C, Affidavit of Joseph D. Harris para 2; Tenure Charges Exhibit E, 1998/1999 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

6. Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 110 days during the 1997-1998 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 11; Tenure Charges Exhibit J, 1997/1998 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

7. Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 34 days during the 1996-1997 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 10; Tenure Charges Exhibit K, 1996/1997 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

8. Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 174 days during the 1995-1996 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 9; Tenure Charges Exhibit L, 1995/1996 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

[1] all exhibit references are the exhibits attached to the tenure charges filed against Celese Segall.

9. Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 126 days during the 1994-1995 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 8; Tenure Charges Exhibit M, 1994/1995 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

10 Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 71 days during the 1993-1994 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit N, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 7; Tenure Charges Exhibit N, 1993/1994 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

11. Ms. Segall was absent from her teaching position for 24 days during the 1992-1993 school year. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 8; Tenure Charges Exhibit O, 1992/1993 Personnel report for Celese Segall).

12. From September 1992 to October 28, 1999, Ms. Segall was absent 720 days from her tenured teaching position. (Tenure Charges Exhibit A, Affidavit of Rimantas Bitenas para. 5).

ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

Summary decision may be granted "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b).

The standard for granting summary judgement (decision) is found in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995). In Brill, the Court looked at the precedents established in Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. Ltd. V. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574 (1986), Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S, 242 (1986), and Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317 (1986), wherein the Supreme Court adopted a standard that "requires the motion judge to engage in an analytical process essentially the same as that necessary to rule on a motion for a directed verdict, i.e.; 'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law.'" Brill, supra, at 533 (quoting Liberty Lobby, Inc., supra, 477 U.S. at 251-252). The Court stated that under the new standard:

> A determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact-finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial."

The Brill standard contemplates that the analysis performed by the trial judge in determining whether to grant summary judgment should comprehend the evidentiary standard to be applied to the case or issue if it went to trial. "To send a case to trial, knowing that a rational jury can reach but one conclusion, is indeed 'worthless' and will 'serve no useful purpose." Id at 541.

(B)

In addressing whether the Brill standard has been met in this case, further guidance is found in Rule 4:46-2:

> An issue of fact is genuine only if, considering the burden of persuasion at trial, the evidence submitted by the parties on the motion, together with all legitimate inferences therefrom favoring the non-moving party, would require submission of the issues to the trier of fact.

Relative to the foregoing, it is well settled law that a teacher's chronic and excessive absenteeism constitutes both "unbecoming conduct" and "incapacity" such as amount to "just cause" which warrants the termination of a teacher under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jerome Kacprowicz, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU 1147, 151 citing Trenton Board of Education v. Williamson, OAL DKT. EDU 7335-85 (Apr. 14, 1986), aff'd by Commissioner (May 28, 1986). Excessive absenteeism warrants the dismissal of a tenured teacher even when the absences have been excused or caused by legitimate illness. State-Operated School District of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 267, 269.

Nevertheless, in order for a Board of Education to terminate a tenured employee for excessive absenteeism, the Board must demonstrate that:

> There was consideration of (1) the particular circumstances of the absences and not merely the number of absences, (2) the impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time the absences occurred, not merely after the fact and (3) that there be some warning given > to the employee that his or her supervisors were dissatisfied with the pattern of absences. (See In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lena White, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 157, 161.

In these regards, the undersigned has gleaned from the documentary evidence and its omissions these additional FACTS:

1. respondent supplied the Board with virtually no explanations for her prolonged absences over a lengthy, seven year period of time;
2. during 1998 and 1999, the Board supplied its examining physician with certain data to evaluate whether respondent could return to work (see Exhibits G and H);
3. the doctor saw "no reason why she is unable to work based upon her work-related injury as reported" (see Exhibit G);
4. the doctor also stated that there was "no reason why Ms. Segall should continue to stay out of work. If she alleges that injuries sustained at work caused her to miss further work, then she should be evaluated by a work[ers'] compensation physician (see Exhibit H);
5. the Board unsuccessfully attempted to have Ms. Segall submit to a medical exam in March 1999 (see Exhibit F); and
6. in September 1999, when respondent found out about the proposed exam, she did not take the initiative to make whatever arrangements were necessary to have it done (see respondent's certification).

Thus, I initially CONCLUDE that the Board gave due consideration to the particular circumstances of the respondent's absences and not merely their inordinate number. Given the respondent's failure to voluntarily and periodically disclose the reasons for her absences over a seven year period of time, the Board's consideration of her particular circumstances was about as diligent as it could have been.

Moreover, the negative impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the seven year period of time is uncontrovertedly established by the affidavit of the principal at the respondent's school (see Exhibit B):

> It is my opinion that Ms. Segall's absences have destroyed the continuity and delivery of instruction that only a continuous teacher can provide to her students.

> Ms. Segall was originally supposed to teach five Mathematics Enhancement classes this school year [1999]; however, I only assigned her to teach three classes due to the fact that I was unsure whether she planned on returning to school. Because Ms. Segall has not returned, I have been forced to find replacement teachers to instruct and monitor these classes.
> Due in part to Ms. Segall's absence, our school is now understaffed with teachers, and the students are the ones who have suffered most. Classes tend to be extremely large, especially in mathematics and the sciences. Some of these classes have over 35 students. I believe that classrooms as large as these, and at this tender age, detract from the individualized attention that students need to effectively learn.

Accordingly, I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner has satisfied the second prong of the Lena White case, supra.

With respect to the last prong of the Lena White case, supra, I CONCLUDE that it too has been met, because the principal at the respondent's school was in frequent contact with respondent regarding her absences (See undisputed Exhibit P). Certainly those contacts did not take place because the principal was delighted by the respondent's prolonged, unexplained absences over a seven year period of time. To the contrary, the undersigned has been inferentially persuaded that the principal expressed her dissatisfaction and frustration during those contacts and that her responses in effect constituted a warning to respondent that she should take corrective action or face the inevitable consequences. In this context of course, it is difficult for the undersigned to fathom how someone absent for 720 days in seven years would even need to be warned that their absenteeism is a problem.

(C)

Concerning all of the foregoing, respondent essentially contends that: (1) she never attended a Board arranged medical appointment in 1999 because she never received notification to do so; (2) after finding out in September 1999 that the Board had sought to have her examined the previous March, she assumed that the Board thereafter abandoned its request because she never heard from the Board again; and (3) she should soon be able to provide medical information to justify her absences.

However, this case is not materially about an unsuccessful attempt (for whatever reason) by the Board of Education to have respondent examined by its physician; nor is it materially about a current attempt to medically justify previously unexplained absences. The substantive materiality of this case consists of the chronic and excessive nature of respondent's absenteeism as well as its equivalence to incapacity and unbecoming conduct. Consequently, neither the conduct of an examination by the Board's physician nor the supplying of current medical information (to justify respondent's absences) would create any legitimate inferences in favor of the non-moving party. See, Rule 4:46-2. Succinctly put, no permissible inferences can be drawn from the competent evidential materials presented which would inure to respondent's benefit or allow a rational fact-finder to conclude that Ms. Segall was not chronically and excessively absent from her job during the seven years in question.

Having considered the competent evidential materials presented in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, I CONCLUDE that no genuine issue of material fact exists to preclude the grant of summary decision in this case (see Brill, supra at 540) and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. (See N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b).

Petitioner's motion for summary decision requested the undersigned to sustain its action concerning alleged chronic and excessive absenteeism. Since the motion included no such request vis-à-vis Charge #2, i.e., alleged abuse of sick leave, and since no documentary evidence was proffered in this regard, the DISMISSAL of said charge is warranted and appropriate at this juncture. For these reasons and because Charge #2 is duplicative of Charge #1, I hereby ORDER that Tenure Charge #2 BE (and is hereby) DISMISSED.

DISPOSITION

On the strength of the foregoing, I hereby GRANT petitioner's motion for summary decision with respect to Tenure Charge #1 since there are no genuine issues of material fact in dispute between the parties. Accordingly, I ORDER that respondent Celese Segall BE (and is hereby)DISMISSED as a tenured teacher by the Elizabeth Board of Education on account of her chronic and excessive absenteeism.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 1077-00
AGENCY DOCKET NO. 390-12/99

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF CELESE SEGALL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF	:	DECISION

The record and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto were timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent's exceptions essentially reiterate those arguments set forth in her brief in opposition to summary judgment which were considered by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ). In addition, respondent avers, inter alia, that the ALJ should have held that a material fact issue existed with respect to whether or not respondent was requested to attend an independent medical examination, arguing that the ALJ erroneously held that she had an obligation to ensure that she attended an appointment when the Board made the error of sending the letter to the wrong address. Respondent also avers that the ALJ completely ignored the fact that she was never warned regarding her continued absences and the effect her absences would have on her future employment with the District. In re Tenure Hearing of White, supra.

Respondent's exceptions further argue that the ALJ erred in relying on the alleged opinion of a physician who never examined her and in holding that she never gave the Board any information concerning the reasons for her absences. As to this latter point, respondent states:

> Ms. Segall received a medical leave of absence from the Board at least through August 1999. In addition, although the record does not contain direct evidence of the notes [respondent] submitted, she clearly must have given the Board medical information because the Board's doctor allegedly viewed some medical information prior to giving his opinion. The Board never stated that [respondent] failed to give the Board information on her medical condition. There is simply no basis in the record on which the ALJ could have made such a finding. (Respondent's Exceptions at 6)

Respondent also maintains that the ALJ erroneously relied on the Board's conclusory assertions about the impact of her absences on students and contends that no actual evidence was submitted to the record regarding this issue. She likewise contends that the ALJ completely ignored the fact that the Board had granted her a medical leave, a fact which she believes cuts against the assertion she was warned about her absenteeism.

In summary, respondent avers that there was absolutely no evidence submitted that her special circumstances were in any way considered by the Board, maintaining that her certification in response to the tenure charges sets forth that her medical condition was misdiagnosed and has now been correctly diagnosed. Respondent urges that she is on the road to recovery and will soon be able to resume her duties fully; thus, her special circumstances dictate that she should not be terminated and should at least be granted a hearing on the tenure charges.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, including the parties' exceptions, the Commissioner concurs with and adopts as his own the recommended decision of the Administrative Law Judge to sustain the first tenure charge against respondent relative to chronic and excessive absenteeism and to dismiss the second charge of abuse of sick leave for the reasons well-stated in the Initial Decision.

In so holding, the Commissioner concludes that the ALJ properly applied the standard for granting summary decision as set forth by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Brill, supra, and, therefore, adopts the ALJ's conclusion that no genuine issues of material fact exist in this matter which would require a plenary hearing. As correctly stated by the ALJ:

> The Brill standard contemplates that the analysis performed by the trial judge in determining whether to grant summary judgment should comprehend the evidentiary standard to be applied to the case or issue if it went to trial. "To send a case to trial, knowing that a rational jury can reach but one conclusion, is indeed 'worthless' and 'will serve no useful purpose.'" (Initial Decision at 4, quoting Brill, supra, at 541)

Moreover, the Commissioner is in full agreement with the ALJ's conclusion that:

> [T]his case is not materially about an unsuccessful attempt (for whatever reason) by the Board of education to have respondent examined by its physician; nor is it materially about a current attempt to medically justify previously unexplained absences. The substantive issue of this case consists of the chronic and excessive nature of respondent's absenteeism as well as its equivalence to incapacity and unbecoming conduct. Consequently, neither the conduct of an examination by the Board's physician nor the supplying of current medical information (to justify respondent's absences) would create any legitimate inferences in favor of the non-moving party. See, Rule 4:46-2. Succinctly put, no permissible inferences can be drawn from the competent evidential materials presented which would inure to respondent's benefit or allow a rational fact-finder to conclude that Ms. Segall was not chronically and excessively absent from her job during the seven years in question. (emphasis in text) (Initial Decision at 6-7)

The Commissioner further determines that the record supports the findings of fact set forth by the ALJ on page 5 of the Initial Decision and that the ALJ's legal analysis properly applied pertinent law relative to a teacher's chronic and excessive absenteeism. In re White, supra; State-Operated School District of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, supra; In re Kacprowicz, supra. As correctly noted by the ALJ, it is well-settled law that excessive absenteeism warrants dismissal of a tenured teacher even when the absences have been excused or caused by legitimate illness.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the Initial Decision, respondent is hereby dismissed from her tenured employment with the Board. A copy of this decision will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action as it deems appropriate.

STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT

Respondent.

Charles I. Auffant, Esq., for petitioner

Joseph Verga, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: March 14, 2000 Decided: March 15, 2000

BEFORE MARGARET M. HAYDEN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This case involved tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher certified by the State-Operated School District City of Newark (District) against Vyvian Felder under the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to –18.1.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) from the Department of Education on October 26, 1999, for hearing as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Prior to and at the hearing, settlement discussions were held and a settlement was reached, which has been reduced to writing and signed by both parties. (See J-1).

Vyvian Felder is a tenured math teacher employed by the District for 14 years. By resolution dated September 22, 1999, the District found the existence of probable cause to certify tenure charges, which, if true, were sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary. Basically, the District accused Ms. Felder of leaving her classroom without authorization, being in possession of a controlled dangerous substance, namely heroin, while on the school premises, and being arrested for same, and testing positive for cocaine following a random drug test.

The record reflected that after the charges Ms. Felder sought treatment and entered into a residential rehabilitation center. The criminal charges were disposed of by treating Ms. Felder as a first offender.

Under the proposed terms of the settlement, Ms. Felder would be restored to the District's payroll until the end of 1999-2000 school year. Along with the settlement, Ms. Felder signed a letter resigning effective the last day of school, June 26, 2000. Ms. Felder also agreed that she will never seek employment with the District.

The District stipulated that if a hearing was necessary the District would have to call several witnesses from out of state, which could cause a great deal time and expense. Moreover, although the District felt it would ultimately prevail in the matter, there were hotly contested facts and unsettled issues of law concerning the necessity to provide reasonable accommodation under the Law Against Discrimination.

Before entering into this agreement, Ms. Felder understood her rights and had adequate opportunity to speak with counsel. Ms. Felder is aware that pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, the Commissioner of Education may refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for any licensing action which it may deem appropriate.

I CONCLUDE that the terms of the settlement are in the public interest and the settlement disposes of all issue in controversy.

It is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that the proceedings are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

This matter arises from the filing of tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education on October 7, 1999, by The New Jersey Department of Corrections ("petitioner") against Joseph Brown ("respondent") alleging conduct violating appropriate guidelines and procedures to be employed relative to the orderly operation of details under his supervision, more specifically in regard to security procedures designed to ensure the safety of staff and inmates assigned to the details. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on November 5, 1999, for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A hearing in this case was partially held on January 26, 2000, and settlement is an appropriate resolution of the matter in light of the proofs and circumstances revealed at the hearing. The resolution properly considers the nature of Mr. Brown's conduct and the attending considerations.

The parties have agreed to settle this matter and have prepared the attached Settlement Agreement indicating the terms of settlement. The settlement properly balances the interests of all the parties.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy in this administrative forum and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

Re: Written Reprimand

On July 27, 1999 a knife and an altered hammer handle were discovered in your van. You told Investigator Leto that the knife had been discovered by an inmate on the grounds of Trenton High School and that you used it to open paint cans. You stated that you shortened the hammer handle after it was broken and used it to close paint cans. As you are aware, these items should not have been accessible to inmates as they create a security risk.

Your use of these implements and storage of them in your vehicle violated the following DOC and Garden State policies and procedures regarding the control of tools and reporting of contraband: NJAC 10A:3.0-6.1, NJAC 10A3-6.5, Human Resources Bulletin 84-17:B-2, B8, B-9, D-11, D-17, E-1 and Administrative Policy and Procedures #311-176.1, #GS 15.10.1, #GS 15.10.2. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNHIP OF BRANCHBURG, SOMERSET COUNTY,

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION ON REMAND

SYNOPSIS

In consolidated matters, the Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against teaching staff member for allegedly assaulting a student and Mr. Ercolano contested the withholding of his increment for the 1997-98 school year. ALJ concluded that Mr. Ercolano forfeited his teaching position due to his conviction. Moreover, the ALJ upheld the increment withholding. Commissioner reversed the initial decision in that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2, as amended by P.L. 1995, c. 250, the Commissioner does noes not have jurisdiction to enter orders of forfeitures of public employment, as such orders may now only be issued by the sentencing court. Commissioner remanded this matter to OAL to move forward on both the Board's tenure charges and the increment withholding challenge.

On remand, the ALJ concluded that Mr. Ercolano's conviction constituted conduct unbecoming a teacher and that he should be removed from his position. ALJ also concluded that Mr. Ercolano presented no convincing arguments to show that the Board's action as to the withholding of the increment for the 1997-98 school year was untimely or that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. ALJ ordered that Mr. Ercolano be removed from his position, that the decision to withhold his salary increment for the 1997-98 school year be affirmed and that he be paid salary payments retroactive to February 27, 1998, the date on which the stay of his salary payments ended.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own. Commissioner dismissed Mr. Ercolano from his tenured position as teacher and referred the matter to the State Board of Examiners for action against his certificate as it deemed appropriate.

David Rubin, Esq., for the Board of Education of Branchburg Township, Somerset County

David B. Rand and John E. Croot, Jr., Esq., for Neal A. Ercolano (Rand, Algeier, Tosti & Woodruff, P.C., attorneys)

Record Closed: August 24, 1999 Decided: March 13, 2000

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

This matter concerns the tenure charge of unbecoming conduct filed against Neal A. Ercolano and the withholding of Mr. Ercolano's salary increment for the 1997-98 school year. Both actions were taken after Mr. Ercolano was convicted of assaulting a student, a disorderly persons offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1(a). The case was initially transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as two separate cases in October 1997, EDU 8422-99 and EDU 8509-97. The cases were consolidated.

David Rubin, Esq., on behalf of the Board of Education of Branchburg Township (Board) filed a motion for summary decision. Brian Miller Adams, Esq., who represented Mr. Ercolano at that time, opposed the motion. After reviewing the briefs of the parties, I issued an initial decision on April 7, 1998, and I concluded that Mr. Ercolano had forfeited his teaching position, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2, due to his criminal conviction, and that the Board's action as to the withholding of the increment was timely and was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

The Commissioner of the Department of Education (Commissioner) reversed my initial decision on June 25, 1998, and held that since the 1995 amendment to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2, the Commissioner does not have the jurisdiction to enter orders of forfeiture of public employment and that such orders may now only be issued by the sentencing court. The Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL. The Commissioner stated that the Board could again move for summary decision as to the tenure charge in the OAL matter or seek an order of forfeiture in an appropriate forum.

The matter was remanded to the OAL on July 10, 1998. I had telephone conferences about the case with Mr. Rubin, on behalf of the Board, and Russell J. Schumacher, Esq., who at that time represented Mr. Ercolano, on July 23, 1998 and September 16, 1998. David B. Rand, Esq., and John E. Croot, Jr., Esq., now represent Mr. Ercolano.

The Board again filed a motion for summary decision. Mr. Ercolano filed a response and a cross-motion for the reinstatement of his salary payments. After the receipt of the briefs from the parties, the record in this matter closed on August 24, 1999. At my request, the time for the issuance of my initial decision was extended until March 21, 2000.

FINDINGS OF FACT

I FIND that the facts in this matter are not in dispute.

Mr. Ercolano was a tenured teacher employed by the Board for more than twenty years. Prior to January 17, 1996, Mr. Ercolano was never accused of an improper touching of a student.

An incident occurred between Mr. Ercolano and J.F., a sixth grade student at the Branchburg Central School on January 17, 1996. During a meeting on January 18, 1996 with J. Harry Westerholm, a Vice-Principal, J.F. and his mother, Mr. Ercolano apologized but did not admit any wrongdoing. The only action taken by the principal, George T. Revasy, was to write a letter, dated January 25, 1996, to Mr. Ercolano recommending that Mr. Ercolano be more sensitive to the needs of the students and recognize that student's feelings are very easily offended (A-4). The matter was not referred to the Division of Youth and Family Services.

On or about October 10, 1996, J.F.'s mother filed a complaint against Mr. Ercolano charging him with a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1a, simple assault (R-1). Specifically, the complaint stated that on January 17, 1996, Mr. Ercolano assaulted J.F. by lifting him off the floor and slamming him against a wall in the Branchburg Central School. Mr. Ercolano pled not guilty and a trial took place before Municipal Court Judge William T. Kelleher, Jr., on April 23, 1997.

During the municipal court trial, J.F. testified that Mr. Ercolano was not one of his teachers. J.F. stated that he left the study hall on January 18, 1996 to go to the bathroom without first getting permission. When he was returning to the study hall, J.F. testified:

> Answer: I was - - I saw a friend, Jennifer Meyer, and I said, boo. And Mr. Ercolano said, if you do that again, this is what – this is what will happen to you. And he – and he pulled me over; like he called me over and I did, and I went over. And he tried to pick me up the first time, the second time, he –he picked me up and pushed me against the wall.

Question: Describe how he picked you up. What did he do?

Answer: Right underneath my arms, with his hands.

Question: And what did he do once he picked up?

Answer: He pushed me against the wall.

Question: How did it feel when he pushed you against the wall?

Answer: It hurt.

Question: And what were you thinking at that time?

Answer: I was afraid that he was going to hurt me.

According to J.F., he did not mention the incident to anyone at school but told his mother when he arrived at home (R-2 at page 8). J.F. stated that his back hurt him after the incident but he was not taken to see a doctor (R-2 at pages 7, 15-6).

M.F., J.F.'s mother, testified that J.F. was upset when he came home and told her about the incident (R-2 at pages 18, 24). On the next day, M.F. and her son met with Mr. Westerholm regarding the matter. Later, Mr. Ercolano joined them. According to M.F., Mr. Ercolano stated that he was kidding around, admitted that he made a mistake and had "screwed up," and apologized for his action (R-2 at pages 19-20). Based on his comments, M.F. assumed that Mr. Ercolano was admitting that he acted improperly (R-2 at pages 23-24).

During his testimony, Mr. Ercolano stated that J.F. was running towards him and that he reacted by grabbing J.F. by the arm and that J.F.'s momentum carried him into the wall (R-2 at pages 49-50, 57). Mr. Ercolano described it as a defensive reaction (R-2 at page 56). According to Mr. Ercolano, he has a bad back and denied that he could lift J.F., who weighed about 97 pounds (R-2 at page 50). Also, Mr. Ercolano denied doing anything wrong and denied that he was kidding around with J.F. (R-2 at page 65).

Also at the trial, Mr. Ercolano stated that he did not try to explain what had occurred when he met with J.F., J.F.'s mother, and Mr. Westerholm since J.F. and his mother were upset. He apologized for grabbing J.F. (R-2 at pages 52-3). Thereafter, in a conversation with Mr. Westerholm, he jokingly offered to cook a meal for J.F.'s family (R-2 at pages 65-6).

Mr. Westerholm stated that he wrote a memo after his meeting with Mr. Ercolano, J.F. and J.F.'s mother, and used that memo to refresh his memory. Mr. Westerholm stated that he spoke briefly to J.F. and his mother and then he spoke to Mr. Ercolano in the hallway and described J.F.'s accusation (R-2 at page 30). When he re-entered the room with Mr. Ercolano, Mr. Westerholm stated that he had J.F. restate his version of the incident. Mr. Westerholm testified that Mr. Ercolano stated that he was sorry, that it should not have happened, that he was just kidding and he apologized for his action (R-2 at pages 31-2). Mr. Westerholm stated that Mr. Ercolano later told him that he knew that he should not have touched a student and was sorry about the incident, and offered to cook a meal for the J.F.'s family (R-2 at pages 32-33). Mr. Westerholm stated that Mr. Ercolano never denied J.F.'s statement as to what had occurred (R-2 at page 33).

After hearing the testimony of the witnesses, Judge Kelleher rendered a decision on the record. He referred to the simple assault statute, N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1(a) which provides:

> Simple assault. A person is guilty of assault if he:
> (1) Attempts to cause or purposely, knowingly or recklessly causes bodily injury to another; or > (2) Negligently causes bodily injury to another with a deadly weapon; or > (3) Attempts by physical menace to put another in fear of imminent serious bodily injury.

Judge Kelleher held:

> I am satisfied, Mr. Ercolano, that the contact of touching between you and [J.F.] does constitute a simple assault. I'm not satisfied by the testimony that I've heard from you that indicates > that, defensively or reactively, you reached out to deflect this running child and subsequently at the meeting, when confronted with something altogether different, actively grabbing the child, you apologized and don't deny it.

> And maybe it should have gone away. And maybe, in a less complicated, less litigious world, it would have gone away. But I'm satisfied that, on the date in question, you grabbed the child and you pushed the child against the wall, and the child was placed in fear of bodily harm. Making those findings and being satisfied as to that, I find that there was a simple assault.

Judge Kelleher found Mr. Ercolano guilty of simple assault, which is a disorderly persons offense, and fined him $100.00 and imposed court costs and fees. Mr. Ercolano filed an appeal but later withdrew it.

Prior to the January 17, 1996 incident, Mr. Ercolano had asked for a voluntary leave of absence without pay, starting on January 27, 1996. This leave request was approved and the Board later approved Mr. Ercolano's request for an extension of the leave of absence for the entire 1996-97 school year (A-5).

At its June 16, 1997 meeting, the Board voted to withhold Mr. Ercolano's salary increment for the 1997-98 school year based on the assault conviction. Also based on the conviction, at its September 2, 1997 meeting, the Board certified the tenure charge against Mr. Ercolano.

Prior to the filing of the tenure charge, the Board asked the municipal court to declare Mr. Ercolano's position forfeited pursuant to N.J.S.A. .2C:51-2. Judge Kelleher did not consider the request until September 24, 1997. When informed that the tenure charge had been filed, Judge Kelleher declined to exercise jurisdiction over the issue and opined that the matter should be addressed by the Commissioner.

As stated, the Board certified the tenure charge on September 2, 1997, and suspended Mr. Ercolano without pay. After the lapse of the statutory 120 days, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:66-14,

Mr. Ercolano's salary payments resumed and continued until the payments were temporarily stayed pursuant to an agreement of the parties on January 17, 1998, to give Mr. Ercolano the opportunity to resolve the forfeiture issue on the municipal court level.

The Board has not reinstated Mr. Ercolano's salary payments. After the remand of the matter to the OAL, the Board filed another motion with the Branchburg Municipal Court seeking forfeiture and also filed a motion for summary decision in this matter.

It was agreed that the motion for summary decision and Mr. Ercolano's cross-motion as to his salary payments would be held in abeyance pending a decision of the Branchburg Municipal Court as to forfeiture.

On March 2, 1999, Municipal Court Judge William T. Kelleher, Jr., issued an order declaring Mr. Ercolano's employment forfeited as of April 23, 1997, the date of his conviction. Judge Kelleher held that the forfeiture was "mandatory as a collateral consequence of the conviction" and stated that while he found "this consequence perhaps unduly harsh" it was "mandated by the law" (R-3, letter to the parties from Judge Kelleher, dated March 2, 1999).

By letter dated March 4, 1999, Mr. Rubin argued that the matter before me was moot based on Judge Kelleher's order. By letter dated March 9, 1999, Mr. Rand disagreed, and stated that there were still several open issues and that Mr. Ercolano was considering an appeal as to Judge Kelleher's order.

Mr. Ercolano filed an appeal in the Law Division of the Superior Court and on July 2, 1999 the parties appeared before Superior Court Judge Leonard Arnold (A-10). Judge Arnold vacated the forfeiture order but did not foreclose another application. Judge Arnold held:

(1) The Board had no standing to ask the municipal court to consider forfeiture sometime after the finding of guilty pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2.

(2) Judge Kelleher incorrectly found that forfeiture was a mandatory collateral consequence of the assault conviction and that Judge Kelleher had the discretionary right to decide whether forfeiture was appropriate pursuant to N.J.S.A 2C:51-2.

(3) Judge Kelleher should have offered Mr. Ercolano a hearing as to the issue of whether the conviction touched on his employment consistent with Moore v. Youth Correctional Institute, 119 N.J. 256 (1990).

Judge Arnold appeared to have some concern about the fact that the possibility of forfeiture was not brought up during the hearing on the assault charge and the ability of the criminal court to make a judgment as to whether a criminal action touched on the person's public employment since the employer was not a party in the criminal case (A-10).

The Board filed an appeal with the Appellate Division in August 1999, and there has been no decision on the appeal.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

On behalf of the Board, Mr. Rubin argued that the matter is appropriate for summary decision since there are no factual disputes. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954), Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995).

Mr. Rubin disagreed with Mr. Croot's argument that Mr. Ercolano is entitled to a hearing in this case. He noted that the Commissioner in his remand recognized that a motion for summary decision could be filed as to a tenure matter. Mr. Rubin stated that the Commissioner in his final decision in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Alan P. Tighe, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 6704-98 (May 3, 1999) held that a plenary hearing is required only when there is a genuine issue of fact which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing. Also, Mr. Rubin noted that Administrative Law Judge Masin in Frank Carney v. Board of Education of the City of Union City, OAL DKT. No. EDU 9122-97, Agency Dkt. No. 287-8/97 (decided July 14, 1999), modified by the Commissioner (August 30, 1999) <http://www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.html>, denied the board's motion to remove an employee based on the forfeiture statute but noted that "the municipal court findings would likely serve to estop any dispute over the facts of the harassment and serve to support an application for summary decision."

As to the tenure charge, Mr. Rubin argued that Mr. Ercolano was found guilty of assault beyond a reasonable doubt in the Branchburg Municipal Court after a trial and that the conviction is depostive of the issue of whether an assault took place and cited the decision in the Matter of Goldberg, 105 N.J. 278, 280 (1978). Mr. Rubin noted that the court has held that a respondent in a tenure matter is estopped from relitigating the facts underlying a municipal court conviction, Matter of Tanelli, 194 N.J. Super. 492, 498 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 99 N.J. 181 (1984).

Mr. Rubin argued that Mr. Ercolano's conduct during the January 17, 1996 incident clearly constitutes unbecoming conduct since the assault conviction means that the municipal court judge concluded that Mr. Ercolano attempted to cause or purposely, knowingly or recklessly caused bodily injury to J.F., citing the provisions of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1(a). Mr. Rubin recognized that in some cases a fact finding hearing regarding the nexus between the offense and the employment is appropriate but argued that in this mater a hearing is unnecessary since Mr. Ercolano's assault of a student on school grounds during a school day clearly constitutes conduct unbecoming a teacher.

Mr. Rubin argued that Mr. Ercolano had a full and fair opportunity to present all relevant information, including any evidence of mitigation at the municipal court hearing. Also, Mr. Ercolano had the opportunity to appeal his conviction and decided not to pursue the matter. Even though Mr. Ercolano's record shows no prior similar discipline, Mr. Rubin argued that the courts have held that one incident if sufficiently serious warrants removal. Mr. Rubin argued that the assault conviction warrants Mr. Ercolano's removal pursuant to the tenure statute.

In addition, Mr. Rubin argued that since Mr. Ercolano was on a leave of absence without pay, there was no need to initiate the disciplinary actions until after the April 23, 1997 conviction.

Mr. Coots argued that a hearing is required as to the tenure charge and the withholding of increment, and that the case cited by the Board, Matter of Goldberg, is distinguishable on the facts. Mr. Croot noted that in the Tanelli case, the State Board of Education remanded the matter for a hearing as to whether the basis for the conviction constituted unbecoming conduct. Mr. Croots argued that the guilty finding in the municipal court is not res judicata, and even if the assault conviction is res judicata, Mr. Croots argued that Mr. Ercolano is entitled to a hearing on the nature and severity of the offense, mitigating circumstances, prior conduct and character in order to decide the severity of the discipline to be imposed, and cited the decisions in In re Addonizio, 95 N.J. 121, 123 (1984), In re Rosen, 88 N.J. 1, 3, (1981), In Re Tenure Hearing of Peter J. Romanoli, School. District of Willingboro, 1975 SLD 352, Bd. of Ed. of Wallington v. Thomas L. Harty, 1960-61 SLD 199, In re Tenure Hearing of Harry I. Buch, School District of Township of Delanco, 1977 SLD 95.

Mr. Croots argued that when Mr. Ercolano grabbed J.F. it was a reflex action intended to stop a running student and to protect himself and anyone else in the hallway. Mr. Croots argued that Mr. Ercolano's apology was not an admission of guilt but was offered as a means to defuse the situation.

Mr. Croot noted that even though Judge Kelleher found Mr. Ercolano guilty of assault he expressed a reluctance and stated that "in a less complicated, less litigious world, it would have gone away" (Transcript, p. 77 lines 7-9). Also in his forfeiture order, Judge Kelleher suggested that forfeiture was "perhaps unduly harsh" (R-3).

I agree with Mr. Rubin's arguments. I CONCLUDE that Mr. Ercolano's conviction constitutes conduct unbecoming a teacher and that he should be removed from his position. Mr. Ercolano was convicted of assaulting J.F., the municipal court judge found that Mr. Ercolano attempted to cause or purposely, knowingly or recklessly caused bodily injury to J.F. During the municipal hearing, Mr. Ercolano was given ample opportunity to present his version of what happened as well as any mitigating circumstances.

As to the penalty to be imposed, the courts have clearly recognized that one single isolated incident may be severe enough to warrant removal. Irvington Twp. School District v. Smith, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 526, Redcay v. State Bd. of Education, 131 N.J.L. 326 (E&A 1944). This is such an incident.

As to the withholding of Mr. Ercolano's salary increment for the 1997-98 school year, Mr. Rubin argued that the Board had more than sufficient justification for its action based on Mr. Ercolano's assault conviction.

In his petition regarding the increment withholding matter, Mr. Ercolano alleged that the notice of the Board's decision to withhold his increment was not timely, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, and that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

Having reviewed the arguments of the parties, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Ercolano has presented no convincing arguments to show that the Board's action as to the withholding of the increment was untimely or that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

In his cross-motion, Mr. Croot argued that Mr. Ercolano is entitled to back pay retroactive to February 27, 1998, the date the record closed as to my first initial decision in this matter.

Mr. Coot argued that Mr. Ercolano agreed to a temporary stay of his salary payments while there was an attempt to resolve the matter of forfeiture on the municipal court level and that this attempt ended as of February 27, 1998, when the parties and I agreed to close the record. Mr. Croot noted that in my initial decision dated April 7, 1998, I stated that there would be a stay of Mr. Ercolano's salary payments until a "decision is made to proceed with this matter" (A-3, p.2). Mr. Coot argued that Mr. Ercolano is entitled to salary payments pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, and he should be granted retroactive payments back to February 27, 1998.

In his certification, dated August 4, 1999, Mr. Rubin confirmed that during a telephone conference on December 18, 1997, it was agreed that Mr. Ercolano's salary payments would be stayed while his attorney attempted to get a waiver of forfeiture (A-3). Mr. Rubin memorized the agreement in a letter dated December 19, 1997 (letter attached to Mr. Rubin's certification). In this letter, he noted that it had been agreed that:

> In the meanwhile, the Board's obligation to continue Mr. Ercolano's salary will be stayed effective January 17, 1998 and > until the forfeiture issue is disposed of by either your honor or the municipal court judge.

> [A-3]

Mr. Rubin stated that Mr. Adams, who represented Mr. Ercolano at that time, never questioned his statement of the agreement.

Mr. Rubin argued that Mr. Ercolano is only entitled to the resumption of his salary payments as of March 2, 1999, the date on which Municipal Court Judge Kelleher decided the issue of forfeiture. Mr. Rubin argued that N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2(c) provides that if the forfeiture decision is reversed, reinstatement of compensation is only retroactive till the date of forfeiture, which in this case was decided on March 2, 1999. Mr. Rubin argued that this matter was further delayed because of the illness of Mr. Schumacher. Mr. Rubin argued that the Board is entitled to an offset for any income from substitute employment while Mr. Ercolano was suspended pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 and asked for discovery as to Mr. Ercolano's earned income during the period of suspension.

In response, Mr. Croot argued that Mr. Rubin's letter of December 19, 1997 misstated the agreement as to the duration of the stay and argued that it is not significant that no one questioned the contents of Mr. Rubin's letter. In his certification, Mr. Ercolano stated that his understanding was that his salary payments would resume in February 1998 (A-8). In his certification, Mr. Adams stated that the stay of Mr. Ercolano's salary payments was not a waiver and that Mr. Ercolano is entitled to salary payments retroactive to September 2, 1997 (A-9).

Mr. Croot admitted that Mr. Schumacher asked for several extensions, due to illness but denied that Mr. Schumacher acknowledged that these extensions would stay any salary payments due to Mr. Ercolano.

Further, Mr. Croot argued that the Board is not entitled to any set off pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. Mr. Croot stated that Mr. Ercolano has owned and operated the Brook Run Farm, a fruit, vegetable, nursing and landscaping business since 1977 and continued to operate it after his suspension. Mr. Croot stated that Mr. Ercolano did not assume any substitution employment during his suspension (A-8).

I agree with Mr. Croot's argument as to the duration of the temporary stay of Mr. Ercolano's salary payments. It was my directive that the stay would end when Mr. Adam's efforts to resolve the forfeiture matter on the municipal court level ended and I proceeded with a consideration of the case. This took place when the record initially closed on February 27, 1998.

I did not include the salary issue in my first initial decision since I ruled that Mr. Ercolano had forfeited his position upon conviction pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2(b)(1). Forfeiture is not an issue in this matter and as stated the case relating to the question of forfeiture is now pending in the Appellate Division.

Under the tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, Mr. Ercolano is entitled to a resumption of his salary payments after 120 days excluding all delays requested by Mr. Ercolano. The stay of Mr. Ercolano's salary payments ended on February 27, 1998, and he is entitled to salary payments retroactive to that date. There was never any decision to stay the salary payments due to Mr. Schumacher's illness. Further, there is no proof to dispute Mr. Ercolano's certification that he did not engage in any substitute employment during the period of his suspension.

Therefore, I ORDER that the tenure charge be upheld and that Mr. Ercolano be removed from his position. I ORDER that the determination to withhold Mr. Ercolano's salary increment for the 1997-98 school year be AFFIRMED. Also, I ORDER that Mr. Ercolano be paid salary payments retroactive to February 27, 1998.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF NEAL A. ERCOLANO, BOARD OF EDUCATION OF BRANCHBURG TOWNSHIP, SOMERSET COUNTY.	: And	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEAL A. ERCOLANO, PETITIONER,	:	DECISION ON REMAND
V.	:
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNHIP OF BRANCHBURG, SOMERSET COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Both the Board and Neal A. Ercolano ("Ercolano") submitted exceptions to the Initial Decision, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

The Board excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) award of Ercolano's back pay retroactive to February 27, 1998, without off-set, and urges the Commissioner to vacate that portion of the Initial Decision. In the alternative, the Board requests that the Commissioner stay the award of any back pay due Ercolano until the forfeiture issue is decided by the Appellate Division, since a decision rendered by that Court in the Board's favor will negate Ercolano's entitlement to any back pay. (Board's Exceptions at 2)

In his exceptions, Ercolano maintains that there are facts in dispute, since he and J.F. "gave conflicting accounts of the incident in their testimony before the Municipal Court," (Ercolano's Exceptions at 2) thereby rendering this matter inappropriate for summary decision. Additionally, he excepts to the ALJ's finding that he was given ample opportunity to present his version of the incident, along with mitigating circumstances, in his municipal court trial. Instead, Ercolano asserts that in the municipal court trial, the sole issue before the Court was whether he had committed the simple assault; whereas, in this forum, the issue is whether he engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher. (Id. at 3) In this connection, Ercolano reiterates that a plenary hearing is necessary to determine the appropriate penalty.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner affirms the findings and conclusions of the ALJ. Initially, the Commissioner notes that, under these particular circumstances, there is no meaningful purpose to be served by permitting Ercolano to relitigate the issue of his conduct on January 17, 1996, since this issue was fully and fairly litigated, and decided, in the prior criminal proceeding.[1] As such, the Commissioner draws his conclusion that Ercolano's conduct was, without question, unbecoming a teaching staff member,[2] based upon his conviction on April 23, 1997 for the simple assault of a sixth grade student while in school.[3]

[2] The Board specifically charged that "[r]espondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct by assaulting a student, for which he was subsequently convicted in Branchburg Municipal Court," (Board's Statement of Tenure Charge at 1)

[3] "It is well established that where no disputed issues of material fact exist, and administrative agency need not hold an evidential hearing in a contested case." Frank v. Ivy Club, 120 N.J. 73, 98, citing Cunningham v. Dept. of Civil Service, 69 N.J. 13, 24-25 (1975). "Moreover, disputes as to the conclusions to be drawn from the facts, as opposed to the facts themselves, will not defeat a motion for summary judgment." Contini v. Board of Education of Newark, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 196, 215, citing Lima & Sons, Inc. v. Borough of Ramsey, 269 N.J. Super. 469, 478 (App. Div. 1994). In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Andrew Phillips, School District of the Borough of Roselle, Union County, Commissioner's Decision No. 129-97, decided March 20, 1997.

The Commissioner also recognizes that his exclusive jurisdiction to hear and decide tenure matters requires a concomitant penalty determination. See In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 at 412. Factors to be considered in assessing penalty include the nature and gravity of the offense under all the circumstances involved, any evidence as to provocation, extenuation or aggravation, and the harm or injurious effect, if any, the teacher's conduct may have had on the maintenance of discipline and proper administration of the school system. (Id. at 422) In this connection, like the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that Ercolano was accorded ample opportunity at his municipal court hearing to offer his version of the facts, as well as mitigating circumstances. (Initial Decision at 10) Yet, significantly, Judge Kelleher found that Ercolano "grabbed the child and  pushed the child against the wall, and the child was placed in fear of bodily harm," (Initial Decision at p. 6), thereby rejecting Ercolano's contention that he was merely reacting to deflect a running child. (Id.) Moreover, as the Judge observed, when Ercolano was confronted the next day with an account of events which was altogether different from the version he later presented, Ercolano nonetheless apologized and did not deny J.F.'s account of the incident. (Id.) Thus, Judge Kelleher found that Ercolano "attempted to cause or purposely, knowingly or recklessly caused bodily injury to J.F." (emphasis added) (Initial Decision at 10)

Further, for the purposes of his penalty determination, the Commissioner accepts Ercolano's undisputed assertion that he has been employed by the Board for more than 20 years, "he was never the subject of any serious disciplinary action and, prior to January 17, 1996, was never the subject of an allegation that he improperly touched a student." (Brief on Behalf of Neal A. Ercolano in Support of Cross Motion and In Opposition to Motion for Summary Decision at 1) However, notwithstanding his apparently sound teaching record, like the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that that this incident is sufficiently flagrant to warrant Ercolano's removal from his teaching position[4]:

> It is the Commissioner's judgment that parents have a right to be assured that their children will not suffer physical indignities at the hands of teachers, and teachers who resort to unnecessary and inappropriate physical contact with those in their charge must expect to face dismissal or other severe penalty. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frederick L. Ostergren, School District of Franklin Township, Somerset County, 1966 S.L.D. 185, as cited in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Thomas Tiefenbacher, School District of the City of East Orange, 1982 S.L.D. 142, 150, aff'd with modification 1982 S.L.D. 157. (Teacher found to have pulled a student from his chair, pushed him so that he hit a cabinet, grabbed him by the neck and thrown him to the back of the room where he hit a table. Teacher also threatened student in the corridor. The ALJ concluded teacher's conduct was "so gross so as to impose the most severe penalty allowed ." Tiefenbacher, at 150. The Commissioner accepted the ALJ's findings of fact, but modified the penalty, asserting that "summary dismissal of respondent for a single offense is unwarranted in light of his prior unblemished record of teaching experience in the Board's employ ." Id. at 156. The State Board of Education vacated the Commissioner's penalty determination, dismissing respondent in accordance with the ALJ's decision. Id. at 157.)

With respect to the issue of Ercolano's back pay, in light of the July 2, 1999 decision of the Superior Court (Initial Decision at 7), the Commissioner, like the ALJ, must conclude that, at the time of this decision, respondent remains entitled to his salary and related emoluments retroactive to February 27, 1998, without off-set for substituted employment.[5] (Id. at 11-13)

[4] Although Ercolano asserts that In re Portia Williams, 1981 S.L.D. 931, is "a factually similar tenure case," (Brief on Behalf of Neal A. Ercolano in Support of Cross Motion and In Opposition to Motion for Summary Decision at 7), the Commissioner does not agree. There, respondent was found to have "hit various students in her class lightly on the hand with a ruler for disciplinary purposes ." In re Williams at 940. The ALJ, however, specifically found that Ms. Williams "did not intend to inflict any physical pain on her pupils," and further determined that "[t]here was no evidence of lack of self-control on the part of respondent." Id. at 941. In the instant matter, however, Judge Kelleher's findings are not consistent with those of the ALJ and the Commissioner in the Williams case.

[5] On April 10, 2000, the Board filed a Motion to Enlarge the Record to include information which, it attested, provided a basis on which to permit discovery in order to determine whether respondent's income derived from his landscaping business constituted "substitute employment." The motion was denied.

Finally, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that Ercolano has not met his burden of establishing that the Board's action to withhold his salary increment for the 1997-98 school year was arbitrary and capricious.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the ALJ is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein, and Ercolano is dismissed from his tenured position as a teacher in the Board's District. This matter is hereby referred to the State Board of Examiners for action against Ercolano's certificate as it deems appropriate.

William S. Cappuccio, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: April 20, 2000 Decided: April 25, 2000

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 27, 2000, petitioner, J.L, through her father, B.B., filed a Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) alleging, among other things, that J.L. a pupil in the public schools under the direction and control of the Board of Education of the Township of Weymouth (Board), had been improperly suspended from its schools and placed on home instruction. Petitioner seeks, among other things, her immediate reinstatement to the Board's schools and that the alleged offense be stricken and expunged from any school records.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was originally set down for an emergent relief hearing on April 11, 2000, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6 and N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5. However, B.B., the father, of petitioner requested an adjournment in order to seek legal counsel. The adjournment was granted and the matter was rescheduled for April 20, 2000. The hearing was held on April 20, 2000, at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. Petitioner did not retain legal counsel but, rather, appeared pro se.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the testimony and other evidence adduced at the hearing and having given fair weight thereto, and having assessed the credibility of the witnesses, I FIND the following FACTS.

First, I FIND that the Board's case against petitioner, J.L, was based entirely upon and hearsay and double hearsay.

J.L. is a 12-year-old female, attending the Board's seventh grade in its elementary school.

The credible testimony offered by a fourteen year old male pupil, M.S., is as follows: On March 14, 2000, pupils were gathered at or near petitioner's locker in the schoolhouse. M.S.

testified that a male pupil, N.L., was teasing petitioner where N. said that petitioner "stinks" and "did not belong there." M.S. told N.L. to stop teasing petitioner because M.S. did not want anything to happen as happened at the Columbine High School. N.L. did not respond, however, he did stop teasing petitioner. Petitioner said to N. "just leave me alone and stop bothering me."

In addition to petitioner, M.S. and N.L. being present at the locker, another female pupil identified as J.K., was also present.

Petitioner, J.L., testified credibility that upon leaving language class she approached her locker when pupil N.L. came up to petitioner and began to make fun of petitioner and called petitioner "grimy." Petitioner asserted that as she turned, her bookbag touched N.L.'s bookbag and N.L. is purported to have said that he would have to go home and clean his bookbag with bleach.

Petitioner asserted that those who were present at the locker included herself, M.S., N.L. J.K. and another male pupil identified as J.F. Petitioner testified that another female pupil, K.D'A., had been at the locker, however, she had left the scene. Petitioner stated that M.S. told N.L. not to make fun of petitioner because petitioner would end up like one of the Columbine pupils. Petitioner asserted that N.L. just laughed, however, he did not say anything. Petitioner asserted that she would not bring a gun to school. Female pupil J.K. heard the statement and left the locker area.

Petitioner contends that M.S. said to N.L. "she'll shoot your brains out." Whereupon N.L. is alleged to have responded to M.S. that, "she'll shoot yours out first." Male pupil J.F. just laughed, as did M.S. and N.L. Petitioner proceeded to her next class and went home at the end of the school day.

The Board's case against petitioner is grounded upon the testimony of Cynthia Donahue, the teacher-in-charge, on March 15, 2000, in the absence of Chief School Administrator, Marshall E. Behr, Jr. Ms. Donahue testified that on the morning of March 15, 2000, she arrived at the schoolhouse and a staff member advised Ms. Donahue to go to the school nurse office. Ms. Donahue did so, where the school nurse reported that a pupil had reported to the nurse that a conversation was overheard where petitioner was alleged to have said that petitioner was going to bring a gun to school and shoot another pupil. The nurse is alleged to have said that the pupil who made the report did not identify the pupil to whom petitioner was alleged to have directed the remark. All that Donahue heard was that petitioner was alleged to have made the statement.

Subsequently, Ms. Donahue called pupils to the school office including, M.S. and J.K., who were present at the locker on March 14, 2000. Ms. Donahue also called two female pupils, K.D'A. and C.C., pupils who were not at the locker when the alleged statement by petitioner was made. Ms. Donahue testified that she was aware that there were problems between petitioner and C.C. Ms. Donahue testified that her questioning of C.C. helped Donahue place the incident into perspective. Ms. Donahue did not explain what was meant by this testimony.

Ms. Donahue testified, among other things, that after she left the nurse's office she went to her office and immediately contacted the State Police and explained that she was the teacher-in-charge and that she was unaware of the proper procedure to follow. Ms. Donahue testified that she was advised that her actions were appropriate and soon thereafter a female State Trooper arrived, followed by a male trooper. Ms. Donahue advised the troopers that a pupil had overheard another pupil threatened a pupil in the school's hallway. Ms. Donahue considered it a serious matter and wanted the police involved.

The female trooper left and the male trooper remained with Ms. Donahue while she interrogated certain pupils concerning the alleged incident. Ms. Donahue asked the trooper's advice as to how to approach the matter. Ms. Donahue testified that the trooper stated to Donahue that it was not his role to offer advice. When petitioner was interrogated by Ms. Donahue, the trooper stated that he was not able to examine petitioner's bookbag. However, Ms. Donahue examined petitioner's bookbag and testified that she did not find a gun present.

Ms. Donahue testified that petitioner denied making any statement concerning a gun. Donahue asserted that petitioner told Donahue that M.S. made a statement, however, M.S. did not say he would bring a gun to school.

Ms. Donahue concedes that she based her action to recommend to her superior the suspension of petitioner upon the statements made to her by pupil J.K., who also made the statement to the school nurse.

Marshall E. Behr, Jr., testified on behalf of the Board and admitted that he was not present in the schoolhouse when the alleged incident occurred. He asserted, among other things, that he interviewed pupil K. D'A., who indicated to Behr that she heard the statement by petitioner, that petitioner would bring a gun to school and shoot female pupil C.C. Mr. Behr asserted that female pupil J.K. overheard the same conversation.

Mr. Behr testified that he reported the matter to the Board, however, he did not report the facts of the matter. He asserted that he only reported to the Board that petitioner had been suspended from school, not the details of the suspension.

Mr. Behr testified that C.C.'s mother is a member of the Board and, therefore, C.C.'s mother was excluded from any discussion concerning petitioner and his recommendation to suspend petitioner. Behr asserted that petitioner had been suspended for one day during the 1998-99 school year based upon petitioner's threats to another pupil. Petitioner served a one day in-school suspension for the offense. In another incident, Behr testified that petitioner had threatened a teacher. However, petitioner later apologized and no disciplinary action was taken. Behr reported these incidents to the Board when he made his recommendation to suspend petitioner.

Mr. Behr, admitted on the herein hearing record that he had no first hand evidence that petitioner, stated in fact, made the statement which was alleged she had made on March 14, 2000. Mr. Behr also admitted that he did not interview or question pupil M.S.

Mr. Behr asserted that he applied the Board's Policy No. 5114, when he determined to recommend to the Board the ten-day suspension of petitioner. In addition, to the ten day suspension, the parents were required to seek counseling for petitioner and a screening by the Board's Psychologist for an evaluation of petitioner's potential for violence and recurring threats.

In addition, the Board required that petitioner undergo a more comprehensive evaluation by a clinical psychologist.

Subsequent to a meeting with the Board, where petitioner was afforded the opportunity to challenge the Board's action, the Board voted to accept Mr. Behr's recommendation and suspended petitioner with conditions.

The parents of petitioner have resisted all of the Board's proposals and assert, among other things, that petitioner did not commit the offense alleged and seeks petitioner's immediate re-instatement to the Board's school.

The Board did not offer any direct evidence at the herein hearing of the alleged incident where petitioner is purported to have said she would bring a gun to the school and shoot another pupil.

CONCLUSIONS

Having found that the Board based its determination to suspend petitioner from its school on strictly hearsay evidence, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has met its burden of proof, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the suspension should be overturned and petitioner should be immediately re-admitted without any penalty. There was no direct evidence presented to the Board or this tribunal to substantiate the Board's action against petitioner.

This tribunal recognizes that hearsay evidence is admissible in administrative proceedings. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(a) provides, in part that:

> . . . Hearsay evidence which is admitted shall be accorded whatever weight the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, generally, its reliability.

The rule continues to state:

> (b) Notwithstanding the admissibility of hearsay evidence some legally competent evidence must exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness.

No such legally competent evidence to support the Board's hearsay evidence was proffered to this tribunal in support of its action to suspend petitioner. Therefore, the Board's hearsay evidence is rejected. In the Matter of Tanelli; 194 N.J. Super. 492 (App. Div. 1984), cert. den. 99 N.J. 181 (1984); Division of Medical Assistance v. Kares, 8 N.J.A.R. 517 (1983).

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the action by the Board should be reversed and petitioner immediately re-instated.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the action by the Weymouth Township Board of Education to suspend petitioner, J.L., is hereby REVERSED. It is ORDERED that petitioner be IMMEDIATELY REINSTATED to the Board's seventh grade, without any conditions.

Petitioner's other pleas for relief are not considered here.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The record of this emergent matter, which included audiotapes of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 20, 2000, along with the Initial Decision and Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) granting emergent relief have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner determines to affirm the decision of the ALJ since he is persuaded that, under the circumstances existing here, petitioner has satisfied the requisite standards for the granting of emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), i.e., the existence of irreparable harm absent the requested relief, settled legal principles governing the right to relief in the controversy, a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits, and a balancing of the relative hardships to the parties favoring the grant of temporary relief.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the ALJ granting petitioner's Motion for Emergent Relief is affirmed. This matter is being returned to the OAL for such further proceedings as may be necessary to bring it to conclusion.

HEARING OF DANIEL MC HARRIS,	:

TOWNSHIP OF NORTH BRUNSWICK,	:	DECISION
MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:

The Board certified a second set of tenure charges of unbecoming conduct, identical to ones previously dismissed on procedural grounds, against respondent teacher. Respondent submitted a motion to dismiss which raised threshold procedural issues that had to be decided before further proceedings could be conducted.

The ALJ found that the Board did not cure the defects noted. The ALJ concluded that the certification of tenure charges was once again not in accord with N.J.S.A. 6:18A-11. Thus, the certification of charges was defective and had to be dismissed without prejudice to the Board's further consideration of the charges pursuant to statute. The Board was ordered to pay all back wages and provide any benefits to which respondent would have been entitled had the Board taken no action against him.

The Commissioner determined to set aside the Initial Decision and to dismiss the charges since they were rendered moot by virtue of the State Board's recent decision in McHarris, which dealt with the Board's prior certification to the Commissioner of the exact tenure charges at issue herein. With respect to these initial charges, the Commissioner had found that the Board's failure to provide respondent with 15 days, as required by law, to respond to the charges was a fatal defect necessitating dismissal, without prejudice, of the charges. The State Board reversed the Commissioner's decision concluding that, because respondent's initial attorney had invoked his rights pursuant to Ott, the Board was restrained from completing certification of its tenure charges against respondent pending disposition of the criminal charges filed against him. Consequently, this matter, dealing with the Board's second attempt to certify the identical tenure charges had to be dismissed as moot.

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

This matter comes before the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") following transmittal of the tenure charges filed against respondent McHarris by the Board of Education of the Township of North Brunswick ("Board"). The Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") transferred the case without requiring that respondent file an answer, as he has raised procedural challenges to the Board's certification of charges to the Commissioner in a Motion to Dismiss filed on November 30, 1999, and the Commissioner has chosen to obtain an interlocutory ruling on those challenges from the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") rather than decide the issues directly. See letter to counsel from Deborah Antanaitis, Director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, dated December 28, 1999.[1]

The Board has certified six charges against respondent. The first Charge alleges that he "used excessive force and inappropriate professional judgment in connection with his students," for which the charge alleges he was issued a letter of reprimand dated January 4, 1999. The second Charge alleges that on May 13, 1999, he "used inappropriate and unprofessional language with four (4) students calling them "asshole" in the presence of remaining class members and a school aide." The third Charge asserts that he "used inappropriate and unprofessional language with one L.L., a minor student . . . making suggestive comments and offering to have sexual contact with her. Mr. McHarris placed his hands on her body touching her breasts and buttocks." The Charge notes McHarris' "supervisory and disciplinary power over L.L." It also notes that the statement of L.L. and the investigative report of the Middlesex County Prosecutor's Investigator are presently confidential and available only through the Prosecutor's Office. Charge Four claims that McHarris "violated his public office between September 1, 1998 and May 27, 1999 by acting to obtain a benefit for himself and to injure L.L., . . . by specifically committing an act of sexual contact upon L.L. . . ." between those dates. Once again the Charge refers to the statement of the student and the investigative report, their confidential nature and availability only from the Prosecutor. Charge Five is similar in language to Charge Three, except that it alleges similar sexual contact and suggestive comments to A.D., another minor student. Charge Six again alleges a violation of Mr. McHarris' public office in language similar to Charge Four, this time in regards to the purported conduct towards A.D. Both Charges Five and Six refer to the statement of A.D. and the Prosecutor's Investigator's report, each also confidential and available only from the Prosecutor.

The Statement of Evidence in support of these charges was prepared by Superintendent Alan G. Elko. It refers to and incorporates documentary evidence contained in an Appendix of Exhibits annexed thereto. This Appendix consisted of a January 4, 1999, letter of reprimand issued to McHarris; a May 27, 1999, letter to McHarris from Assistant Superintendent Skriloff notifying McHarris of his suspension with pay for three days due to his use of offensive language with students on May 13, 1999, and in addition, notifying him that a recommendation would be made to withhold his increment and relieve him immediately of his duties as an assistant football and assistant basketball coach and as head track coach; a June 29, 1999, letter from Board Counsel Vignuolo advising him that the Board had voted to withhold his increment for the 1999/2000 school year and to relieve him of his coaching responsibilities and advising him of his right to appeal those actions; a copy of a Complaint signed against him in the North Brunswick Municipal Court by Prosecutor's Investigator R. Colatrella charging him with violating N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3b and N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2 respectively, the former for his alleged criminal sexual contact and the latter for violating his public employment by the unauthorized exercise of his official functions, each in relation to minor L.L.; a second Complaint signed by Colatrella for the same criminal offenses, this time in regards to A.D.

[1] The Commissioner previously dismissed these tenure charges, without prejudice, based upon a challenge to a different procedural irregularity, which is not the subject of the present motion. See Commissioner's Letter Opinion dated October 21, 1999. The Board subsequently recertified the charges on November 16, 1999, and voted to suspend Mr. McHarris, without pay, pending the determination of the tenure charges.

The Board issued a Certificate of Determination, dated November 17, 1999, in which its Secretary reported that the Board had determined that "there is probable cause to credit the initial Tenure Charges and Evidence in support of the charges; and that the Charges and Evidence are sufficient, if credited, to warrant dismissal or a reduction in salary of Daniel McHarris, a tenured teacher." The Certification relates that the Board held a Special Meeting on November 16, 1999, with prior notice to McHarris and his counsel, and that at that meeting a determination was made to suspend him, without pay, pending a determination of the charges.

In his motion, McHarris argues that the tenure charges must be dismissed (1) because the Board failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 in that the Superintendent failed to submit evidence in support of the charges upon which the Board could certify the charges, citing In re Wallwork, 85 SLD 946 and (2) because the Board failed to articulate plainly the reasons for its determination that probable cause existed to credit the charges, citing the need for such articulation as emphasized in Manalapan-Englishtown Education Association v. Board of Education, 187 N.J. Super. 426 (App. Div. 1981).

In regards to the first point, McHarris asserts that the exhibits presented to the Board in support of the Charges showed only that the Board had previously resolved the issues alleged in Charges One and Two and that as to Charges Three thru Six, the investigative report of the Prosecutor's investigation and the statements of the two students were not presented, but were only referred to as confidential and in the Prosecutor's exclusive possession and besides this reference to undisclosed reports and statements only the copies of complaints signed against McHarris were presented. In regards to the second point, he claims that the Board's Certification of Determination filed with the Commissioner merely "parroted the required language of 18A:6-11" and therefore the Board failed to articulate its reasons for its conclusion that probable cause existed.

In addition to these positions, in its reply brief, counsel for McHarris contends that the presentation of evidence by the Superintendent to the Board at its November 16, 1999, closed session was violative of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and mandates dismissal of the charges. Further, McHarris seeks to recover full pay and emoluments and pre-judgment interest.

The Board responds to McHarris' attack upon its action by asserting that the evidence presented to the Board in support of the Charges was more extensive than that condemned in Wallwork and was sufficient to allow the Board to act and that the Board adequately articulated its determination. In addition, it defends the Superintendent's presentation at the Board meeting as well within the allowable limits.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 provides

> Any charges made against any employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the secretary of the board in writing, and a written statement of evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the board. The board of education shall forthwith provide such employee with a copy of the charge, a copy of the statement of the evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath with respect thereto. After consideration of the charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary.

In In re Wallwork, Administrative Law Judge Sybil Moses considered a case in which Wallwork, a tenured employee, was arrested and charged with five counts of aggravated assault, with possession of a controlled dangerous substance and with terroristic threats. The Board of Education issued tenure charges, which stated "On or about October 11, 1984, Michael Wallwork was charged with sexual abuse of a minor student, possession of a controlled dangerous substance and making terroristic threats." The Statement of Evidence in support of the charges was essentially the same as the charges themselves, only adding that (1) a statement had been filed with the Orange Police Department on behalf of each minor supporting the charges and (2) the complaints filed on behalf of the minors were reviewed by an Essex County assistant prosecutor and were found to charge indictable offenses and the charges were forwarded to the Essex County Grand Jury. No indictment had been returned by the Grand Jury and no criminal charges had ever been tried against Wallwork.

Judge Moses found that the Board had failed to comply with the requirement of N.J.S.A. 6A:18-11, as the evidence which purportedly supported the tenure charges, was not set forth in any detail and only referred to the charge and arrest. The Statement of Evidence did not state any details either, merely referring to a statement of the minors without any indication of the details of their allegations, and the complaints that had been reviewed and found to charge indictable offenses, in and of itself a statement of no evidential worth in establishing any of the details of the charges. Thus, she dismissed the tenure charges. The Commissioner affirmed, agreeing that at no time was Wallwork "provided with the 'evidence in support'" of the tenure charges pursuant to the provisions of the statute. He modified the initial decision to provide that the Board could use its discretionary authority under N.J.S.A. 6:18A-8.3 to suspend Wallwork with pay pending the investigation, or with or without pay if charges were brought "pursuant to law . . . as provided in chapter 6 . . . ."

In the present matter the charges brought against McHarris include Charges 1 and 2, which refer to matters that had been previously resolved by the Board without reference to the Commissioner. It appears that these previously resolved matters do not constitute the actual core of charges upon which dismissal or reduction in pay is sought, but are more akin to a statement of prior disciplinary history which could be used to enhance the penalty for the violations of professional responsibilities charged in the remaining Charges 3 through 6. Examination of Charge 3 and Charge 5 reveal that they refer to the use of inappropriate and unprofessional language during a specified period of time from the Fall of 1998 through May 27, 1999, and then specify that McHarris both made suggestive comments and offered sexual contact with two specifically identified (albeit by initials) minor students. Specific information as to the nature of the contact alleged to have occurred with each student is stated, that is, the placing of his hands on the female students' breasts and buttocks. The professional relationship to the students is stated and Charges 4 and 6 assert the violation of the teacher's public office by his specific act of sexual contact with the specified students. It is clear that the allegations in these charges go well beyond the Wallwork charges, as there is no indication in that opinion that the charges there did anything but recite that Wallwork had been arrested and charged with offenses. While the Statement of Evidence in Wallwork mentioned that statements from "each minor" were on file at the Police Department, neither the charge nor the Statement of Evidence identified the student(s) even by initial, much less stating the nature of the "sexual contact" (or as alleged in Wallwork, the "physical abuse") said to have occurred here. Thus, while it is unclear from the case law exactly how detailed the charge must be, the statement of the charges here is more detailed and at least to some degree more informative than the bare bones statement of the charge against Wallwork. As for the Statement of Evidence, here the picture is indeed unclear. In both cases, the Statement of Evidence refers to minors' statements in the custody of police or prosecutorial authorities, and in each case the actual statements were not supplied to the Board for examination. In each case copies of the complaints filed against the teacher were presented. Once again, in the present matter the evidence of the prior Board actions issued in response to McHarris' previous disciplinary matters appear more properly to be proof related to the degree of any sanction to be imposed if Charges Three through Six or any of the four were sustained. Thus while the specification of the allegations in the charges themselves were somewhat more specific and informative than what the Board in Wallwork said, the evidence presented to McHarris, the "evidence in support" of the essential tenure charges, was actually no more than that given to Wallwork.

Given that the "evidence in support" as set forth in the Statement of Evidence and as provided in documentary form to McHarris was no more sufficient than that found wanting in Wallwork, the next question is whether the Board could, and if so, whether it did, cure the deficiency by providing to the Board at its hearing something evidential which supplemented the documentation set out in the Statement of Evidence and which, either on its own or combined therewith, was enough to allow the Board to properly determine whether the charges should be certified to the Commissioner. In his Certification Superintendent Elko relates that both Charges 1 and 2, the "previous disciplinary actions," were investigated by Dr. Rimmer, the High School Principal, under Elko's supervision, and each had resulted in a hearing before the Board which had involved a discussion with the Board of the "details . . . of the specifics of this Charge." He further relates that Rimmer also received the complaint regarding McHarris' conduct towards students and was directed to investigate and to interview "affected students," including L.L. and A.D. "The contents of those written statements which I have seen and reviewed formed the basis of the continuing suspension of Mr. McHarris . . . They were also discussed with the Board . . . at the time of his suspension in June of 1999 and again at the time of its consideration of the Tenure Charges on November 16, 1999."

The Board points out that McHarris was notified of the date, time and location of the Board's November 16, 1999, meeting, the purpose of which was to consider the charges against him, and that he did not appear at the meeting and/or file any statement of position of any evidence. Therefore, the "evidence submitted to the Board is uncontroverted and is presumed to incorporate all of the evidence filed and presented into the Board's findings of probable cause."

The Board asserts that Superintendent Elko's statements to the Board in discussion of the information obtained from the two minor students was information which the Board could properly use in its assessment of the evidence against McHarris. It relies upon the approval of the use of hearsay evidence by a Board authorized in Matter of Tenure Hearing of Cowan, 224 N.J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988). In Cowan, the court analogized the Board's role in assessing the evidence prior to a decision as to whether to certify charges to the Commissioner as akin to that of the Grand Jury. The Grand Jury may rely upon hearsay, and so may the Board. However, the specific hearsay evidence presented to the Board in Cowan consisted of two sworn statements, one by the high school principal and the other by the vice principal. These sworn statements were first presented to Cowan as part of the statement accompanying the charges. In the sworn statements the affiants, who had not personally witnessed the events described, nevertheless presented a recitation of that which named people having personal knowledge of the events had reported to the affiants. The court found that the use of this sort of hearsay evidence satisfied the statutory requirements of N.J.S.A. 6:18A-11. Again referring to the Grand Jury, the court noted that the Grand Jury "may return an indictment based wholly on hearsay statements recounted or presented by a witness under oath, so long as the declarants of the statements had personal knowledge of the facts stated. State v. Vasky, 218 N.J. Super. 487, 491-92 (App. Div. 1987)."

In the present matter, Superintendent Elko made no written statement that was presented to the respondent as a part of the Statement of Evidence proffered by the Board to McHarris under its statutory obligation. There is no evidence that he made any sworn statement to the Board in June or on November 16, reporting therein what he had been told by investigating Principal Rimmer. Neither is it offered that Rimmer appeared before the Board and made any sworn statement, or that a sworn statement of Rimmer reporting the information gleaned from the two students was prepared and presented to the Board, or to McHarris. The facts here are not consistent with the allowance of hearsay as authorized in Cowan. The Board therefore has not cured the defects noted above. The Board's consideration of these tenure charges was once again not in accord with N.J.S.A. 6:18A-11. The certification of the tenure charges is therefore defective and the charges must therefore be DISMISSED, WITHOUT PREJUDICE to the Board's further consideration of the charges pursuant to statute. The matter is therefore remanded to the Board for such further consideration. As the charges have not been properly certified, Mr. McHarris is entitled to be paid until such time as a proper suspension without pay is accomplished. Therefore, the Board shall pay all back wages and provide any benefits to which he would have been entitled had the Board taken no action against him. The pendency of any review of the Commissioner's first order for back pay in regard to the dismissal of the first set of certified charges is irrelevant to this issue, which arises solely from the Board's failure to act properly regarding the second attempt to certify charges. However, while the Board did not act properly, I do not find that it acted in bad faith. The fact that it did not present an adequate case for certification in line with the guidance of prior case law, and that counsel for the respondent pointed out deficiencies, does not, without more, convert the Board's action to one tainted by "bad faith," or to one done "deliberately" in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. Therefore, no pre-judgment interest is awarded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions of both the Board and respondent were timely filed pursuant to the directives of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Upon his independent review, the Commissioner determines to set aside the Initial Decision and to dismiss the within charges since they have been rendered moot by virtue of the State Board's recent decision in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Daniel McHarris, School District of the Township of North Brunswick, Middlesex County, State Board Docket No. 45-99, Commissioner's decision No. 332-99L, which deals with the Board's prior certification to the Commissioner of the exact tenure charges at issue herein. In that prior matter, the Commissioner, by letter decision dated October 21, 1999, found the Board's failure to provide respondent with 15 days, as required by law, to respond to the charges was a fatal defect necessitating dismissal, without prejudice, of the charges. On April 5, 2000, the State Board reversed the Commissioner's decision concluding that, because respondent's initial attorney had invoked his rights pursuant to Ott v. Hamilton Township Board of Education, 160 N.J. Super.

333 (App. Div. 1978), cert. den. 78 N.J. 336 (1978), the Board was restrained from completing certification of its tenure charges against respondent pending disposition of the criminal charges filed against him. Consequently, the Board's second attempt to certify the identical tenure charges must be dismissed.[1]

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is set aside and the instant charges hereby dismissed as moot.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF BELMAR, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION

Petitioning parent challenged the Board's determination of suspension of her son, M.O'K., from school for three days and his permanent expulsion from the basketball team for alleged sexual harassment (inappropriate exposure of buttocks and remarks) in November 1999. Petitioner sought reversal of discipline and removal from M.O'K.'s school record.

In light of the testimony of witnesses and the record, the ALJ found that petitioner failed to establish by a preponderance of credible evidence that the allegations in the petition were true. Moreover, the ALJ concluded that the Board's actions were taken based solely on the incidents of November 1999 and were not connected to petitioner's earlier filing of a notice of tort claim. Petition was dismissed.

The Commissioner agreed with the ALJ's conclusion that petitioner had not met the burden of establishing that the Board's actions were arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. (J.M. v. Hunterdon Central Regional High School District) The Commissioner also found that the ALJ properly applied the law with respect to weighing the evidence in this matter, including conflicting testimony and assessment of credibility. The Commissioner agreed with the Board that M.O'K.'s inappropriate behavior fell within the prohibitions of the District's Student Code of Conduct against sexual harassment and that the sanctions it applied against M.O'K. were consistent with that Code. Commissioner further determined that the Board's action to exclude M.O'K. from participation on the school's basketball team must be reviewed in the context of prior decisions which have consistently held that participation in extracurricular activities is not an entitlement but a privilege. (Domacasse) The Commissioner adopted findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own.

D.K., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD

M.O'K.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE

BOROUGH OF BELMAR,

Respondent.

Nancy S. Martin, Esq., for petitioner (Kenney, Schaer & Martin, attorneys)

Kenneth B. Fitzsimmons, Esq., for respondent (Sinn, Fitzsimmons, Cantoli, West & Pardes, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 22, 2000 Decided: March 20, 2000

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

The petitioner challenges the respondent's determination suspending her son from school for three days and his permanent suspension from the basketball team. The matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 through -13.

A motion for emergent relief was heard on February 8, 2000 and denied on February 14, 2000. Through no fault of the parties they did not receive copies of the order denying motion. Thus, they were denied the opportunity to seek interlocutory review of the order.

The matter came on for plenary hearing on February 22, 2000, at the Office of Administrative Law, Trenton. Twelve persons testified and five documents were admitted into evidence.

PAROL AND DOCUMENTATRY EVIDENCE

D.K.

The petitioner testified that M.O'K. began attendance in Belmar in second grade. He has usually been a straight A pupil. He has been on the honor roll consistently. In sixth grade he began to participate in basketball. He won the award for best defensive player of the season. In seventh grade he repeated that honor as well as taking the best player award. He has had no suspension of any kind.

In March 1999, there were several assaults on M.O'K. on the school playground. The witness, through counsel, filed a tort claim notice (J-3). The matter is scheduled for hearing in early March 2000 and M.O'K. will testify.

Both M.O'K. and D.K. have sought counseling because of the assaults. The witness has notified the United States Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights.

D.K. received a copy of the Belmar Elementary School Code of Conduct for 1999-2000 (J-1) at some time at or near the beginning of the school year. She believes the discipline against her son is being meted out according to the provisions under sexual harassment on pages 6-7. The first offense calls for a conference, counseling and a three-day suspension. D.K. stated that no conference or counseling were provided in this case.

The alleged incident took place on Thursday afternoon, November 18, 1999. The witness received a letter dated November 22, 1999 (P-1) from the Superintendent of Schools explaining that M.O'K. was suspended from school for three days and suspended from participation on the basketball team indefinitely. The witness believes the penalty was applied before any investigation.

After the March 1999 playground incidents, the Board offered counseling with a certified psychologist and paid up to $1,000 for the parents and a similar amount for the pupil. M.O'K. attended six or seven sessions and D.K. separately attended, perhaps for six or seven sessions.

In November 1999, D.K. called the consulting psychologist and was told that the Board was not providing any further sessions. The witness concedes that this was incorrect and was the psychologist's error, not the Board's.

Principal Taggart contacted D.K. on November 19 in the early afternoon. He said that a basketball player and his mother had come in that morning and the boy accused M.O'K. of exposing his buttocks, making an obscene gesture described as humping and a remark. D.K. asked the principal what would happen next. The principal replied that he would talk to the basketball team. D.K. asked the principal to keep her informed.

The principal met with the team and then called her to his office at approximately 3:00 p.m. or 3:30 p.m. on Friday, November 19. She, her son, the principal and the superintendent met. She was informed that the administrators had spoken to the team and confirmed that M.O'K. had exposed his buttocks or mooned during a practice. The administrator had had to inform local police.

Later that day, D.K. participated in a telephone conference call. The call occurred at approximately 6:00 p.m. She, the principal, the superintendent and police Lieutenant Van Etten spoke. The witness was advised there would be a three-day suspension and an indefinite team suspension. The Lieutenant expressed the opinion that it appeared that M.O'K. had mooned other players during practice. The witness said she was not aware of what police did on the afternoon of November 19.

R.K.

R.K. is 14 years old and is a friend of M.O'K. He was at basketball practice on November 18, 1999. The coach taught defensive skills, particularly blocking out. The players were instructed to be aggressive and to put their backsides into the persons behind them. The witness saw M.O'K. do nothing inappropriate and he heard nothing inappropriate.

J.R.

J.R., is 13 years old. He is a friend of M.O'K. He attended the November 18 practice. He recalls being instructed to box out defensive players and to be aggressive. There was often contact between players. The players were instructed to put their backsides into their opponent's guts.

The witness saw M.O'K. do nothing inappropriate. He heard nothing inappropriate. He was not aware of any immediate complaints. After practice the next day he became aware that a team member had reported to the principal that M.O'K. had made a humping motion and some noises. He was not aware of any other team member making these allegations.

A.E.

A.E. is 13 years old and is a member of the basketball team. He was at practice on the day in question. He recalls being instructed to be aggressive, go after the ball, put pressure on the opponent and go "belly to butt" when on defense. A.E. stated that he was near M.O'K. most of the time. During a drill M.O'K. played on the witness. The witness saw and heard nothing inappropriate.

He stated that there were approximately 12 boys on the team. At the practice were the team members, the coach and a parent who was observing.

M.O'K.

M.O'K. testified in his own behalf. He stated that he had never been suspended from school, from the basketball team, or from any other activity. He recited his academic and athletic awards.

On November 18, 1999, the coach was teaching defensive techniques. The coach instructed K.J. to use his backside to box out M.O'K. This would cause touching.

M.O'K. was aware of no accusations on November 18. He learned of the accusations the next day, the 19th.

At practice he wears large, baggy shorts. On November 19 he learned that he was accused of mooning, making an obscene gesture and making a comment. He told Principal Taggart that he did not know what the substance of the comment meant. The comment included the phrase "beefy whale." The witness stated that until that day, he had never heard that term.

Peter J. Van Etten

Lieutenant Peter J. Van Etten has been a member of the Belmar Police Department since 1984. He is a Lieutenant in the Detective Bureau. He received a call from Superintendent Richens on Friday, November 19, 1999. He went to the school shortly after 4:00 p.m.

Superintendent Richens and Principal Taggart informed the witness of the allegations. They also represented that K.J. and his father would appear. They did.

The Lieutenant met with K.J. and with Richens. K.J. described the basketball practice of the previous day. At some point, M.O'K. was defending K.J. K.J. clearly stated that M.O'K. pushed his loins into K.J.'s buttocks three or four times. He also made some noises. Further, M.O'K. exposed his buttocks sometime after the first humping incident.

Lieutenant Van Etten identified the Belmar Police Department report (R-1) concerning the matter. The Lieutenant stated that he also interviewed D.A. who said he was at practice but observed no humping. He did see M.O'K. moon. The Lieutenant conducted no other interviews that day.

The witness interviewed J.S. on the following Tuesday. Because of the nature of the allegations, the superintendent and principal notified the Child Study Team and the interviews were scheduled for Tuesday, November 23. J.S.'s parent was present with J.S. and the superintendent and Lieutenant were present. J.S. stated that he did see the mooning incident, but did not see any lewd gestures or hear any sounds.

Lieutenant Van Etten took the formal statement of K.J. on Saturday, November 20 at police headquarters. K.J. and his father read the statement carefully and both signed it (R-1). The Lieutenant found K.J.'s statements generally consistent.

He met with the superintendent and principal after the interviews. As to the alleged humping incident, he found no criminal offense had occurred. What may have occurred was aggressive and/or inappropriate conduct while guarding an opponent in a basketball drill. As to the exposure, the Lieutenant was satisfied that there had been mooning, at least to some extent, because four students had observed it.

No one other than K.J. reporting the humping action or the comments or sounds. When the Lieutenant interviewed K.J. on November 19, he appeared upset, embarrassed and credible. M.O'K. seemed upset by the allegation. However, the coach saw nothing and a parent who was present saw nothing.

Thomas Cox

Detective Thomas Cox has been a member of the Belmar Police Department since 1991. He was involved in the November 23 interview process. He interviewed a pupil, B.B. B.B. stated that M.O'K. pulled his shorts down "not even full way" and kept them that way for a minute or two. B.B. testified that he and M.O'K. were laughing about the incident.

The Detective concluded that there was at least partial exposure of M.O'K.'s buttocks. B.B. seemed upset at the interview.

K.J.

K.J. stated that, on November 18, 1999, the coach was running an offensive drill. M.O'K. was guarding the witness. M.O'K. intercepted the witness at least once.

The coach told K.J. to box out M.O'K. As K.J. backed into M.O'K., M.O'K. made the humping motion and noises. It occurred more than once. Then M.O'K. played off K.J. After this, M.O'K. mooned the team.

Another pupil, J.S., asked M.O'K. what M.O'K. was doing when he made contact with K.J. M.O'K. stated, "Getting him off my beefy whale." K.J. stated that he felt embarrassed. He had never had a similar experience at practice.

K.J. went home directly after practice. He discussed the matter with is mother. K.J.'s father lives about one block away and K.J. saw him that evening. Although embarrassed at first, he told his father of the incidents.

On Friday, Mrs. J. called Principal Taggart. The Principal spoke to K.J. in the principal's office. The principal asked K.J. what had happened and K.J. recited the above facts.

K.J. was not present when the superintendent and principal interviewed the team. Lieutenant Van Etten questioned him while Principal Taggart was present. K.J. also recited the facts to Van Etten. He demonstrated to the Lieutenant what had happened. He also told about J.S.'s question and M.O'K.'s response.

On Saturday, he went to police headquarters and made a statement to Lieutenant Van Etten. He and his father read and initialed each page, made a correction and signed the statement. The statement contains virtually everything that he said the previous day.

K.J. acknowledged that boxing out usually involves contact. There were other players nearby when the humping actions occurred. The witness is aware that the other pupils deny any knowledge of the event. K.J. also stated that M.O'K. had his hands on his knees and was in a semi-crouching position while his pants were pulled about half way down his buttocks.

K.E.J., Sr.

K.E.J., Sr., testified. On Thursday, November 18, 1999, K.J. and his sister paid a regular visit to him. K.J. and the witness eventually talked. K.J. recited the above events including the inappropriate movements and sounds. K.E.J., Sr., stated that K.J. seemed quite bothered by the events. He asked K.J. why he had not told his father sooner. K.J. replied that he was embarrassed and bothered by the events.

On Friday, November 19, the witness went to school with his son. He was present while Lieutenant Van Etten interviewed K.J. On Saturday, November 20, he accompanied K.J. to headquarters. He was again present when Van Etten interviewed K.J. He and his son read and signed K.J.'s statements. The statements made orally on Friday and reduced to writing on Saturday were consistent with what K.J. had told his father on Thursday.

K.E.J., Sr., made no threat of complaint. He asked that the code of conduct be followed. He became aware that no other boy corroborated K.J.'s version of the humping and comments incidents. He asked for suspension for M.O'K. from the basketball team.

D.A.

D.A. was present at practice on November 18, 1999. He met with Principal Taggart after school on November 19, 1999, at 4:30 or 5:00 p.m. He was asked a series of questions by Lieutenant Van Etten.

D.A. told the Lieutenant that M.O'K. mooned the team. He pulled his pants down about halfway, pulled up his shirt and assumed an offensive position, which is a semi-crouch. D.A. has played with M.O'K. since the event and has not felt threatened.

Richard W. Taggart

Principal Taggart testified that he has been in the Belmar school systems for 29 years. On November 19, between 9:00 and 9:30 a.m., he returned a telephone call from K.J.'s mother. The mother reported what K.J. had told her, including all the details recited above.

The principal went to K.J. and inquired about events of the previous day. K.J. reported essentially what his mother had reported. There were no inconsistencies between the recitations.

The principal then went to J.F. J.F. stated nothing occurred at practice and that he saw M.O'K. do nothing untoward. But he did say that he told M.O'K. to "stop fooling around."

The principal then went to D.A. D.A. claimed to have seen nothing. The principal returned to his office and called M.O'K. to his office.

The principal explained the allegations to M.O'K. The pupil denied everything. The principal also advised M.O'K. that a parent had complained and that the principal was obliged to make the matter known to the superintendent of schools.

That afternoon, the principal brought the superintendent up to the moment on the matter and suggested a telephone call to M.O'K.'s mother in order to inform her of the allegations and to advise her that they would speak to the team that afternoon at about 3:00 p.m. K.J. and M.O'K. would be excluded from that meeting.

At the team meeting, the superintendent explained the complaint. J.S. stated M.O'K. had mooned. This was inconsistent with J.S.'s earlier statement.

The principal called Mrs. K. and asked to meet with her in the principal's office. The superintendent was also present when Mrs. K. arrived. The two men advised her of what had happened. The superintendent called Lieutenant Van Etten at or about 4:00 p.m. The lieutenant was at the school within ten minutes. M.O'K. and his mother had left. K.J. and K.E.J., Sr. had arrived.

Lieutenant Van Etten interviewed K.J. about the whole series of events. K.J. stated that M.O'K. had exposed himself three times. He also described the humping motion, the noises and the comment. After the K.J. interview, the lieutenant called in D.A. D.A. stated that he had seen M.O'K. mooning twice.

After the interviews, the principal, superintendent and lieutenant discussed the matter. They called Mrs. K. at approximately 6:00 p.m. She was advised that there would be a three-day suspension from school and then indefinite suspension from the basketball team.

The witness was aware last spring of a notice of tort claim and of the Office of Civil Rights complaint. He learned about the boxing out drill when lieutenant Van Etten interviewed K.J. The witness was aware that no other pupil verified the humping motions or the comment. He believes the coach was at one end of the floor with two pupils and the balance of the team was practicing at the other end of the gym. He also learned that at least one-half of M.O'K.'s buttocks were exposed.

Lester W. Richens

Dr. Richens has been in the district since 1973 and currently serves as superintendent of schools. He learned in the early afternoon of November 19 from Principal Taggart of the allegations made by K.J.'s mother. He decided that the school should contact M.O'K.'s mother, advise her of the allegations and advise her of how the school would proceed.

He met with the basketball team, excluding K.J. and M.O'K. One pupil said that M.O'K. had not exposed himself. Mrs. K. was called and asked to come in. She did. The witness and the principal filled her in on what had happened to that point. She was not advised of the suspension because that had not yet been decided. The matter was reported to the Belmar Police Department at approximately 3:45 p.m. through Lieutenant Van Etten. The investigation was turned over to him at that point. The superintendent recited the series of interviews and statements that Van Etten reported in his testimony.

The principal and superintendent called Mrs. K. while Van Etten was present. At this point, they advised her of the allegations, of the three-day school suspension and of the indefinite suspension from the team. The superintendent then advised Board of Education members by telephone and memorandum over the weekend.

On Tuesday, November 23, the witness was present at police interviews. J.S. corroborated that M.O'K. had exposed himself. The superintendent discussed the matter with Lieutenant Van Etten, Detective Cox and a Captain Hope. They found no criminality.

D.K.'s husband called the superintendent during the week of November 22. He was unhappy with the sanctions and asked for an appeal to a Board committee. The witness advised him that the appeal would be to the full Board.

The Board offices and schools were closed for the Thanksgiving holiday. In the following week, D.K., her husband, M.O'K. and an attorney appeared before the Board. They gave testimony as well as argument. Three pupils also testified. The superintendent and principal reported what they had done, observed, and learned. The Board after considering all of the information presented decided on a three-day school suspension and an indefinite suspension from the team.

Opportunity was made for D.K. to pick up M.O'K.'s work (P-1). Other arrangements were also made. The witness said there had been some confusion between the consulting psychologist and the witness' office. This was straightened out and on December 8, resumption of counseling was authorized. An appointment on December 9 was canceled by D.K.

The witness identified and discussed the code of conduct (J-1). Harassment calls for a three-day suspension and counseling. There has been only one incident since the events that underlie today's hearing. This involved a member of the wrestling team. He received a three-day suspension from school and permanent suspension from the team.

The penalties called for by the code are invoked where an allegation of contact is made. The witness knew that the Belmar Police Department still regarded the investigation as open when M.O'K. was suspended. The witness also knows of the tort claim and the Office of Civil Rights complaint that appeared to have been filed. The witness also stated that M.O'K. had no previous disciplinary record, seems to have been a good student and had received awards in the past.

SUMMATIONS

The petitioner stresses that no one other than K.J. corroborates the alleged humping actions and comments. M.O'K. did have some area of his buttocks exposed. However, pupils' testimony is inconsistent. The facts are far from clear. Further, there has been an overreaction to what was established. This constitutes retaliatory action. The Board acted before the police had completed their investigation. Thus, they have been arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious.

The Board argues that the report by K.J. to his parents, to school personnel and the police were consistent. Even though there was no corroboration, K.J.'s testimony is evidentiary and can be credited in whole or in part. Three pupils confirmed the mooning incidents. That it was "incomplete" is immaterial. The Board may and must consider the incident and address it.

The Board considered all testimony. The three-day suspension was consistent with policy and the team suspension was entirely proper. Since that time, a wrestler has received the same type of discipline.

The petitioner says that the discipline involved here is retaliatory because of a tort claim notice filed a year ago. M.O'K. was a victim last year. That matter was only brought to the Board's attention because of investigation of another matter, not because of a complaint by D.K. The mere existence of notice does not cause school business to stop. The school must administer education notwithstanding. In this matter, the Board and its agents did what needed to be done.

Because of a sexual contact allegation, the administration relied on the handbook and imposed a three-day school suspension and an indefinite team suspension.

At the special hearing before the Board, it heard all sides and made a decision. The petitioner still must carry the burden of showing that it was somehow arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. What happened here is serious. The Board has not abused its authority. Even though the petitioner wants to ignore the contact, the noises and the remark, they are part of the record. And K.J. did testify clearly. Thus, there has been no arbitrary decision. The decisions have been made on evidence. The Board carefully considered everything and M.O'K. was given multi-level reviews. He had a review of the principal's actions by the superintendent, he had the benefit of Belmar Police Department investigation and he had the benefit of Board consideration.

From a review of the entire record, I FIND:

1. During basketball practice on November 18, 1999, at the Belmar Elementary School, pupil M.O.'K. knowingly exposed the upper portion of his buttocks, either more than once or for several moments;

2. During the same practice session, M.O'K. knowingly brought his pelvis forward while defending K.J. so that he made contact with K.J.'s backside, particularly the buttocks;

3. The motions were accompanied by guttural sounds;

4. K.J. testified that another pupil, J.S., asked M.O'K. what M.O'K. was doing and M.O'K. replied, "Getting him off my beefy whale." J.S. did not testify. M.O'K. denies the exchange. K.J.'s testimony was the more credible;

5. K.J. reported the incidents to his parents that evening;

6. On the morning of November 19, K.J.'s mother telephoned the principal and informed him of the events of the previous day;

7. K.E.J., Sr., went to the school later in the day;

8. The principal went to K.J. and inquired about the incidents;

9. The principal also spoke to J.F. and D.A.;

10. The principal called M.O'K. to the office, explained the allegations and heard M.O'K. deny all assertions;

11. The principal informed the superintendent of schools and suggested that M.O'K.'s mother be telephoned and informed of the allegations and advised that the principal was going to speak to the team that afternoon outside of the presence of K.J. and M.O'K.;

12. The principal and superintendent did call in Mrs. K. and advised her of what had happened;

13. The principal and superintendent spoke with the team and heard their versions of the incidents;

14. Lieutenant Van Etten was called at approximately 4:00 p.m. and was at the school within ten minutes;

15. The lieutenant interviewed K.J. and another pupil, D.A.;

16. After the interviews, the principal and superintendent discussed the matter and telephoned Mrs. K. at about 6:00 p.m. advising of a three-day suspension from school and an indefinite suspension from the team for M.O'K.;

17. In further discussions with the lieutenant, a detective and a captain, the administrators agreed no criminality was involved;

18. Mrs. K.'s husband telephoned the following week, expressed dissatisfaction with the sanctions and requested an appeal to the Board;

19. Appearance before the Board was arranged for the following week. D.K., her husband, M.O'K. and their attorney appeared;

20. The Board heard the parties and affirmed the actions of the principal and superintendent;

21. Arrangements were made for M.O'K. to receive his school work during the three-day suspension and further arrangements were made in connection with counseling.

22. During basketball practice on November 18, 1999, at the Belmar Elementary School, pupil M.O'K. knowingly exposed the upper portion of his buttocks, either more than once or for several moments;

The first finding is grounded in the credible testimony of K.J. and the report of lieutenant Van Etten. The lieutenant's reference to an admission by J.S. that M.O'K. had mooned is hearsay. However, it is an accurate report of what J.S. said to the officer. It thus may be used to support K.J.'s testimony, which is legally competent evidence. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b). Findings 2 and 3 are similarly grounded. D.A.'s testimony corroborated that of K.J.

Of course, there is conflicting testimony in this case. New Jersey courts have held that testimony should be admitted even if it is suspect or tainted by motive or interest. Lazorick v. Brown, 195 N.J. Super. 445, 456 (App. Div. 1994). "[M]otive and interest go to the weight to be given to testimony, not its admissibility." And credibility does not depend on the number of witnesses. A fact finder is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). In an administrative hearing, testimony may be disbelieved, but it may not be disregarded. Middletown Tp. V. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962).

Nor do I FIND any reason to presume the testimony of the children in this matter is inherently unreliable. While I do not agree that all were equally truthful, I do not FIND that testimony from children of this age is to be credited only with caution. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Richard Wolf, 1987 S.L.D. 1447-1477.

In sum, the petitioner did not carry the burden of persuasion. The party bearing the burden of proof in an administrative hearing must prove the case by a preponderance of the evidence. In re Polk, 178 N.J. Super. 191 (App. Div. 1981). This tribunal, therefore, must "decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. D.L. and W.R.R., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). One factor that must be considered in a determination as to which party's version of an incident has the "reasonable probability of truth" is that "the interests, motive, bias or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony." State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div. 1952), certif. den. 10 N.J. 316 (1952). Further, "[a] trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony." Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

I further FIND and CONCLUDE that the actions of the Belmar Board of Education in respect of M.O'K. were taken based solely on the incidents of November 1999. There is no connection established in this record between the events of November 1999 and D.K.'s earlier filing of a notice of tort claim. The petitioner having failed to establish by a preponderance of the credible evidence in the record that the allegations in the petition of appeal are true, it is ORDERED that the petition be and is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF BELMAR, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION

The record and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto were timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner's exceptions in large part recast her arguments as raised before and considered by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), essentially contending that the discipline relating to M.O'K. should be reversed and removed from his school record. Petitioner also urges, inter alia, that:

> 1. The ALJ made findings and conclusions relative to J.S. Yet J.S. did not testify and the ALJ's findings are contrary to J.S.'s statements in the police report.
> 2. The ALJ made findings and conclusions that M.O'K. "knowingly" exposed the upper portion of his buttocks and "knowingly" brought his pelvis forward. These "knowingly" determinations are contrary to all the evidence presented.
> 3. The ALJ ignored that the School's Code of Conduct would not support a finding of sexual harassment, warranting a three-day suspension and permanent removal of M.O'K. from the school's basketball team. The School's Code of Conduct does not support a determination that the actions were sexual harassment.

4. The ALJ's findings that M.O'K. accompanied his contact with K.J.'s backside with guttural sounds is not supported by any of the evidence presented.

5. The ALJ's referring to another student who allegedly received the same discipline is inaccurate, as this incident regarding a member of the wrestling team, involved exposure of frontal nudity. Moreover, the wrestling season was concluding and the basketball season for M.O'K. had just begun.

6. The ALJ ignored the compelling evidence that the superintendent, the principal, and the Board, severely disciplined M.O'K because D.K. had filed a Notice of Tort Claim against them and others related to incidents that occurred in March 1999.

The Board's reply exceptions rebut each point raised in petitioner's six primary exceptions. The legal arguments advanced by the parties with respect to each of petitioner's exceptions have been duly considered by the Commissioner in reaching the final determination herein.

Upon a comprehensive and independent review of the record in this matter, including the parties' exceptions, the Commissioner agrees with and adopts as his own the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that petitioner has not met the burden of establishing that the Board's actions in the instant matter were arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. It is well-established "that actions of local boards of education which lie within the area of their discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." J.M. v. Hunterdon Central Regional High School District, 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU), 415, 419, citing Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960).

A major thrust of petitioner's exceptions attack findings and conclusions which are grounded in credibility determinations made by the ALJ. It is noted by the Commissioner that the record before him does not include transcripts or an audiocassette tape recording of the hearing conducted at the OAL. In the absence of transcripts or tapes from the hearing, due regard should be given to the person who heard the live testimony and assessed the witnesses' behavior at the hearing. Close v. Kordulak Bros., 44 N.J. 589, 599 (1965). Likewise, the Commissioner may not properly reject such findings of fact without reviewing those portions of the transcript(s) or tape recording of the testimony upon which the ALJ's findings were reached. Rowley v. Board of Education of Manalapan-Englishtown, 205 N.J. Super. 65, 75 (App. Div. 1985). In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 159 (App. Div. 1987).[1]

Having thoroughly examined the record before him, the Commissioner finds the ALJ properly applied the law with respect to weighing the evidence in this matter, including conflicting testimony and assessment of credibility. Lazorick, supra; In re Perrone, supra; Middletown Tp., supra; In re Wolf, supra; Jackson, supra; State v. Salimone, supra; and Congleton, supra. Moreover, the Commissioner finds no cause to challenge the credibility assessments made by the ALJ or to disturb the ALJ's findings of fact. Further, the Commissioner agrees with the Board's contention that, even though J.S. did not testify and he might have made a contrary statement in the police reports, this does not contradict the findings of fact made by the ALJ. As correctly stated by the Board, "the ALJ's findings relating to J.S.' statements to Lieutenant Van Etten are not misplaced. The ALJ's findings were grounded in what is characterized as the credible testimony of K.J. and the report of Lieutenant Van Etten [Initial Decision at 15]. The thrust of Petitioner's objections appear[s] to hinge upon whether the mooning was full or partial exposure. Neither act need be condoned by the Board of Education." (Reply Exceptions at 4)

The Commissioner is also in full agreement with the Board's position that the inappropriate conduct engaged in by M.O'K. may be deemed to fall within the prohibitions of the District's Student Code of Conduct against sexual harassment and that the sanctions it applied against M.O'K. were consistent with that Code. As to petitioner's exception with respect to M.O'K.'s discipline being more severe than that applied to the student wrestler, the Commissioner fully concurs with the Board's argument that "[i]nappropriate exposure of a student's private parts is unacceptable behavior. Petitioner attempts to excuse M.O'K.'s actions by trying to differentiate between partial and complete exposure, and whether exposure was frontal or rear nudity. Both violations warranted appropriate disciplinary action by the Board of Education." (Id. at 8) The Commissioner further determines that the Board's action herein to exclude M.O'K. from participation on the school's basketball team must be reviewed in the context of prior decisions which have consistently held that participation in extracurricular activities is not an entitlement but a privilege, which can be revoked for infraction of school rules or failure to act in accordance with Board policy. Martin A. Domacasse v. Board of Education of North Warren Regional School District, Warren County, State Board of Education decision dated April 17, 1996, citing Camden City Board of Education v. NJSIAA, Docket #A2802-91T2 (App. Div. 1992); Burnside v. NJSIAA, 1984 S.L.D. 1696 (App. Div. 1984), cert. denied, 101 N.J. 236 (1985). See also P.K., on behalf of R.K. v. Board of Education of the Morris Hills Regional School District, Morris County et al., decided June 17, 1998. The Commissioner's review of the record in this matter fails to demonstrate that the Board's disciplinary actions with respect to M.O'K. were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; therefore, his suspension for the entirety of the basketball season may not be disturbed.

[1] As held by the court in In re Morrison at 158-159, it is the responsibility of those challenging such determinations to provide the Commissioner with such portions of the transcript, and no obligation arises for the Commissioner to review them before issuing a final decision regarding the findings and recommendations of the ALJ.

Lastly, the Commissioner affirms the ALJ's determination that there is no connection established in the record of this matter between the events of November 1999 and D.K.'s earlier filing of notice of a tort claim against the Board and its agents.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is, hereby, adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons clearly articulated therein, and the Petition of Appeal dismissed.

Petitioning Board certified tenure charges of excessive absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and/or other just cause against respondent teaching staff member.

The ALJ found that in light of the number of days respondent was absent during the 1994-95, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years, such absences, on their face, constituted excessive absenteeism. Respondent had been given notice of the Board's goals regarding absenteeism, yet she was absent much more than the average teacher in the District. The number of absences and the fact that they had a substantial negative impact on her students warranted termination relevant to Charges one through four. The ALJ dismissed Charges five through nine and eleven through thirteen (failure to follow administrative directives and insubordination), concluding that the Board did not prove said charges by a preponderance of credible evidence. The ALJ did conclude that the Board proved Charge ten (noncompliance with Board directive on beepers and cellular phones) and that withholding of an increment was the appropriate penalty. The ALJ ordered respondent terminated relevant to Charges one through four and ordered respondent's personnel file to reflect the withholding of an increment regarding Charge ten.

Upon examination of the record, including the transcripts of the matter, the Commissioner found that the Board met the standard for termination of a tenured employee for excessive absenteeism. (In re Lena White) Moreover, the Commissioner found nothing in the record to indicate that the Board based its decision to certify tenure Charges one through four against respondent solely upon the application of a mechanistic, mathematical or statistical formula. The Commissioner noted that he was in agreement with the ALJ that action could be taken against a teacher for excessive absenteeism even if such were the result of work-related injuries. The Commissioner also agreed with the ALJ that the Board proved Charge ten but the Commissioner declined to accept the recommended penalty to the extent that such increment withholding was intended to be prospective. Commissioner ordered respondent terminated from her teaching position and a copy of this decision forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action as it deems appropriate.

BEFORE DIANA C. SUKOVICH, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 15, 1999, the Orange Board of Education (petitioner or Board) certified tenure charges against Grace Folger (Folger or respondent), a tenured teacher employed by the Board. Respondent filed an Answer and Affirmative Defenses with the State Department of Education (DOE) on June 29, 1999. The DOE issued a Notice of Referral to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 19, 1999 and transmitted the matter to the OAL on July 9, 1999 for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to 13.

An initial telephone prehearing conference was conducted on July 22, 1999; and a status telephone conference, on September 10, 1999. The discovery period was extended pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.1(b).

Hearings were conducted on October 25, October 26, and November 4, 1999. The parties subsequently obtained transcripts of the hearings. The last initial and reply briefs were filed on December 14 and 21, 1999, respectively. The record was closed on December 21, 1999. The deadline for the issuance of an initial decision was extended because of illness in the judge's family

NATURE OF THE PROCEEDINGS

Petitioner certified fourteen charges, alleging excessive absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal relevant to the 1994-95, 1996-97, 1997-98, and 1998-99 school years.

The ultimate issues, broadly, are whether petitioner has proven, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, the charges and, if so, what discipline, if any, should be imposed on respondent.

STIPULATIONS[1]

The parties stipulated to the following facts:

1. The Board is a body politic and corporate, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, which is entrusted with maintaining and conducting the public schools of the Orange School District.

2. On or about September 1, 1990, respondent was employed by the Board as a Special Education teacher at the Orange Middle School

[1] The stipulations and the attachments thereto are in evidence as Exhibit J-138.

(Orange Middle). Respondent worked at Orange Middle until June 30, 1995.

3. On or about September 1, 1995, respondent was transferred to the Park Avenue School (Park Avenue), where she presently remains.

4. Respondent received tenure as a Special Education teacher on or about September 2, 1993.

6. During the 1990-91 through 1994-95 school years, respondent's immediate supervisor was George Noble (Noble), Principal of Orange Middle.

7. During the 1995-96 through 1998-99 school years, respondent's immediate supervisor was Maxine G. Johnson (Johnson), Principal of Park Avenue.

8. During the 1994-95 school year, respondent was absent from work on 27 occasions.

9. During the 1995-96 school year, respondent was absent from work on 12 occasions.

10. During the 1996-97 school year, respondent was absent from work on 69 occasions.

11. During the 1997-98 school year, respondent was absent from work on 122.5 occasions.

12. During the 1998-99 school year, respondent was absent from work on 104 occasions.

13. On or about May 21, 1999, the Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Michael Cohn (Cohn), filed sworn tenure charges of excessive absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and/or other just cause against respondent, together with a sworn statement of evidence in support of the charges, with Ronald R. Lee (R. Lee), the Board Secretary. A copy of the charges was also served upon respondent.

14. On or about June 15, 1999, after consideration of the charges and evidence against respondent, together with her attorney's written submission, the Board determined to proceed to certify the charges to the Commissioner of the DOE (Commissioner) for a hearing, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq.

15. Thereafter, on or about June 17, 1999, the above charges, together with the sworn statement of evidence and a certificate of determination, were filed by the Board with the Commissioner and served upon respondent, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 6:24-5.1.

16. On or about June 28, 1999, an Answer was filed on behalf of respondent.

GENERAL FINDINGS

Certain facts are general in nature, provide context, relate to more than one charge, and/or relate to discipline. The following facts are not disputed by the parties.

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be facts.

There are approximately 250 students at Park Avenue, in pre-kindergarten through sixth-grade classes. The school has approximately 45 self-contained classes, which are attended by classified students. Classified students also attend a resource room.

Folger teaches a self-contained classroom. She therefore is responsible for all "base subjects," i.e., Reading, Language, Mathematics, Spelling, Science, Social Studies, and Computer Technology (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 80). Respondent's classroom was located on the second floor at Park Avenue. A teacher's aide was assigned to the class.

"Special Education students", in contrast to "regular students", are not necessarily assigned to a different class each year. (Id. at 81.) Classified students are assigned relevant to their chronological ages as well as their classifications. A student therefore is often in the same class for two or three years.

Johnson is certified as an elementary teacher, i.e., grades K through 8. She also is certified in Student Personnel Services and as an administrator, that is, a supervisor for grades K through 12. Johnson has a Bachelor's Degree in Elementary Education and a Master's Degree in Student Personnel Services. She was previously a teacher for fifteen years and an Assistant Principal for eight years. She has been Principal at Park Avenue for ten years.

Cohn is respondent's Assistant Superintendent of Operations and Human Resources. He holds certificates as an Administrator, a Principal, and an Elementary Teacher. He has been employed in education for 33 years. Cohn previously taught for ten years and was a Principal for sixteen years. He has been an Assistant Superintendent with the Board for seven years.

Cohn's responsibilities include hiring of personnel, maintenance of records, including attendance records, Human Resources matters, and the general daily operations of petitioner's schools, which number ten.

Respondent is a self-insured school district. Risk Enterprise Management (REM) is administrator for the Board's compensation plan. Stephanie James (James), an employee of REM, is responsible for petitioner's plan.

Every certified staff member of the Board must prepare an annual Professional Improvement Plan (PIP), stating goals and objectives for the coming school year, at the end of a school year. The PIPs are thereafter assessed mid-year and at the end of a school year to determine whether those goals and objectives have been achieved.

An observation of Folger's Science class was conducted on May 1, 1992. Pertinent to professional and personal qualities and relationships, Folger was rated "Strong" in two of the items; and "Effective", regarding the remaining five items (Exh. J-40, p. 1.) Respondent was rated as "Effective" in 10 of 11 items pertinent to professional ability; and as needing improvement regarding one item, meeting pre-planned objectives. Written comments noted that the activity presented " . . . stimulated pupil interest and students worked effectively with each other in teams" and that respondent continued " . . . to exhibit instructional strengths in her ability to structure and implement appropriate teaching strategies." Although lesson plans were apparently unavailable for review, it was also noted that respondent generally met pre-planned written objectives in her lesson plans. (Id. at 2.)

A classroom observation of Folger's Science lesson on November 9, 1992 resulted in an evaluation finding her strong in three categories pertinent to professional abilities; and effective, in the remaining categories. She was rated as either strong or effective regarding all categories pertinent to professional abilities and professional/personal qualities and relationships. The observation concluded that Folger " . . . consistently demonstrated her knowledge of the subject matter with a high degree of enthusiasm." Instructional techniques were appropriate, and content was on grade level. (Exh. J-42, p.2.)

A classroom observation of Folger was conducted on May 13, 1993. She was rated strong in all categories pertinent to professional abilities, except for one, in which she was rated effective. Folger was rated as strong or effective in all categories pertinent to professional/personal qualities and relationships. Written comments made by the principal noted, in part, that respondent continued " . . . to be a strong, original and effective teacher . . ." and that, relevant to her PIP, she had been " . . . an excellent Team Leader, even without the necessary District support for her team." The comments concluded that respondent was " . . . a pleasure to work with" and that the evaluator looked " . . . forward to working with her next year." (Exh. J-44, p. 3.)

Classroom observations of Folger were conducted in March 1994. Folger was rated as either strong or effective in all categories pertinent to professional abilities and professional/personal qualities and relationships. The written comments reflected that Folger was working within the scope of her PIP and that she served as the team leader for the Special Education program, working in that capacity consistent with the job description.

An observation of a Reading class was performed on March 1, 1995. Respondent was rated as either strong or effective in all categories regarding professional abilities and professional/personal qualities and relationships. Pertinent written comments noted, in part, that respondent's lesson plans " . . . were readily available an [sic] accurate." (Exh. J-46, p. 1.) The comments concluded that the lesson " . . . was an excellent example of how to prepare students for standardized tests and encourage critical thinking." (Id. at 2.)

Classroom observations of Folger were conducted on October 24, 1994 and March 1, 1995. The pertinent performance/evaluation report rated Folger as either strong or effective in all categories regarding professional activities and professional/personal qualities and relationships. Written comments were that respondent " . . . demonstrates excellent teaching techniques. She exhibits a genuine care for students [sic] welfare and her classes are both interesting and informative." (Exh. J-47, p. 3.)

Classroom observations were conducted on December 14, 1995 and March 8, 1996. Respondent was rated as either strong or effective in all categories regarding professional abilities and professional/personal qualities and relationships. Written comments stated that respondent continued " . . . to implement an excellent instructional program. She supports supplementary activities for her students. Letters have been written by parents commending her for their children's progress and achievements." (Exh. J-49, p. 3.) The observations were conducted by Clark and Johnson, and the pertinent Performance/Evaluation report was, on its face, prepared by Clark.

An observation of Folger's Mathematics class was conducted on January 14, 1997. The relevant Instructional Staff Observation report rated Folger as outstanding in all performance factor categories. Written comments regarding each category were consistent with those ratings. However, comments pertinent to effective organization and planning noted that although respondent's plan book was current, instructional groupings were not consistent with the students' IEPs goals and objectives should be evident in the teacher's section. The evaluation, which was prepared by Barbara Clark (Clark), petitioner's Director of Social Services, was dated January 19, 1997.

Johnson, Ken Wiggins (Wiggins), a New Jersey Education Association representative, Folger, and Clark attended a meeting on November 17, 1998. Clark and Johnson sent Cohn a memorandum dated November 18, 1998, requesting that a 90-day PIP be developed for respondent because she was " . . . in need of this PIP to improve her teaching performance and to help her to succeed." (Exh. J-27.)

The requested PIP was not the equivalent of an annual PIP. In Johnson's view, it was requested to "assist" respondent address concerns previously expressed. The memorandum referenced 90 days because such time period is the "indicator". (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 197.) That time period was agreed upon by Clark and Johnson during the November 17 meeting. At the time, Johnson, and apparently Clark, " . . . knew Ms. Folger could improve." (Id. at 198.)

Folger subsequently sent Johnson a memorandum dated November 19, 1998. Respondent noted that Johnson had agreed to provide examples of lesson plans from other teachers at Park Avenue meeting the "principal's expectations." Folger requested that she be provided some before the coming weekend so she could review them before preparing her lesson plans for the week of November 23. The memorandum, on its face, indicates that a copy was sent to Wiggins. (Exh. J-29.)

Wiggins sent Clark a memorandum, dated November 24, 1998, summarizing his understanding of the agreements reached during the meeting on November 17, 1998. Wiggins referenced lesson plans, text books, an observation to be conducted by Clark, personnel folders pertinent to respondent, and expectations that Folger would have input into the development of a PIP and that the final PIP would be the result of joint efforts by Folger, Johnson, and Clark. The memorandum indicated, on its face, that copies were sent to respondent and Johnson.

TENURE CHARGES

Most of the facts are not materially disputed. The disputes relate to the interpretations and connotations to be placed on various occurrences. Johnson and Cohn testified, relative to charges one through four, regarding the impact of Folger's absences on her students. Their testimony was not discredited on cross-examination, and I am persuaded by it.

Charges 1 - 4

Charges 1 through 4 allege excessive absenteeism during the 1998-99 school year, the 1997-98 school year, the 1996-97 school year, and the 1994-95 school year. The charges also aver that the absences resulted in a disruption of the proper operation of Park Avenue, interfering with the instructional process, resulting in a detrimental impact on the educational environment, and that the absences constitute excessive absenteeism and/or other just cause for dismissal.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

"State" monitoring regulations require each public school district in New Jersey to maintain a 96.5% attendance rate for certified staff. Stated another way, the "allowed" absentee rate is 3.5%. (Tr., 10/2/5/99, p. 13.)

The calculation of a district's absenteeism rate does not include in the number of absences "Worker's Compensation absences", "funeral days", "jury duty days", or "[P]rofessional days" (Id. at 71-73). Petitioner includes "personal days" in its own calculation of absences to determine if a 96.5% overall attendance rate has been achieved. (Id. at 73.)

If a district's absenteeism rate exceeds 3.5%, the DOE can delay certification of the district. The district is required to develop a "corrective action plan". (Id at 53.) Cohn is not aware of any "directive or rule" regarding discipline of individuals having an absenteeism rate exceeding 3.5%. (Id. at 54.)

Petitioner's school year consists of a minimum of 180 days. To satisfy the monitoring criteria, the average number of absences for each certified staff member would have to equal approximately four to five days annually. The "average" number of annual absences for a teacher is four days. (Id. at 14.) The overall absenteeism rate for certified staff at Park Avenue during 1998 was 3.4%. Park Avenue's cumulative absenteeism rate for the 1997-98 school year was 2.4%; and the district's cumulative absenteeism rate, 3.5%.

The "Worker's Compensation absences" not included in the total number of absences are those absences "submitted" and for which respondent has received "approval," i.e., those absences which have been "substantiated" and are to be put in a teacher's record as "being agreed upon."

Petitioner's business office monitors the status of employees' Worker's Compensation claims. Cohn's office eventually receives a form indicating whether an employee has been approved for compensation time. Until such is received from the business administrator, absences are treated as personal illness days (PIDs). The records are changed if a form is received stating the exact day that compensation commenced. Any such days relevant to Folger are currently "in litigation" in Workers' Compensation Court and are not "agreed upon". (Id. at 72.)

Petitioner does not "allow for light duty work" for teachers, although it makes accommodations if teachers have certain kinds of " . . . handicaps or whatever, to offset what the handicap was". However, such is not referred to as "light duty." The "full instructional program" is expected to be implemented. For example, if an employee utilizes a wheelchair, personnel will insure that one is available at a certain door to the school building. Such accommodations will always be made, "upon request." (Tr., 11/4/98, p. 55.)

Petitioner has a written attendance policy. Non-tenured teachers are allowed ten PIDs a year, and twelve-month, non-tenured teachers are allowed twelve PIDs yearly. Tenured teachers are allowed more than ten PIDs a year, depending on their years of experience. PIDs are cumulative. Both non-tenured and tenured teachers are allowed three personal business days (PBDs) yearly. All allowances are based upon contractual agreements.

Pursuant to petitioner's attendance policy, the school principal is to meet with an employee who has more than six days of "incidental absenteeism," i.e., non-consecutive days of absenteeism, to determine the "problem" and to be "as supportive as possible." The principal again meets with the individual after eight days and sends a form, "Form D", to Cohn, indicating that there is an "attendance problem". (Id. at 12 & 22.) If the employee has twelve days of incidental absenteeism, he/she may be required to meet with the Superintendent. Sanctions, including withholding of an increment or termination, may be imposed if there continues to be a problem.

Several "Form Ds" were completed regarding Folger, subsequent to her transfer to Park Avenue. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 22.) Those forms are not completed regarding long-term absences. If an employee is absent for one single day, the Board requires that he/she complete a form. Employees " . . . just put your name down - - and just that you are out for illness." (Tr., 10/26/99, p.32.)

Respondent employs a system, referenced as "Code-A-Phone", pursuant to which certified employees are required to call a certain phone number if they are going to be absent on a given day. (Tr., 10/25/99, p.65.) A full-time employee, "Ms. Blanton" (Blanton), receives the calls, generally on tape, makes efforts to arrange for substitute teachers, if possible, and informs the appropriate principal of the situation. (Id. at 151.)

Folger's PIP for the 1991-92 school year stated objectives regarding staff attendance to be to help maintain a 3.5% attendance rate at Orange Middle, as mandated by the "District/State." To achieve that goal, respondent would utilize personal days for "emergency matters"; and sick days, "for illnesses only." (Exh. J-39.) To petitioner's knowledge, such a goal was contained in the PIPs for all teachers. Respondent's PIPs for the 1992-93 and 1995-96 school years stated the same goal and methodology. The latter document stated that sick time would be utilized only when necessary; and personal days, only when "business cannot be conducted after school." (Exh. J-48.)

During the 1994-95 school year, respondent was absent on a Monday, a Friday, or a day before or after a holiday on ten different occasions, not including any Mondays, Fridays, or holidays during long-term absences of a week or longer. Of the 27 days Folger was absent during the 1994-95 school year, three were designated as personal days; eight as PIDs; and sixteen, as work-related injuries.

Folger was "Absent-Ill" on September 14, October 7, October 12, October 17, and November 14, 1994. (Exh. J.-138(a), pp. 1-4.)

While Folger was assigned to "lunchroom duty" on December 16, 1994, a Friday, during the fourth period, she was involved in an incident with students. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 10.) The next period, she attended her own lunch period. She taught her sixth-grade class, Mathematics. She thereafter went to the school nurse, reporting that she had been involved in an accident with students during lunch and that she needed "a form". (Id. at 11.)

Folger completed an Employee's Accident Report (EAR). She stated therein that at 11:30 a.m., two students, who were "fighting and running fast" in the cafeteria, "plowed into her", shoving her into a table, which she struck with her back right hip. (Exh. J-58.)

Respondent did not complete her seventh-period assignment, which was as an in-class support teacher. She returned to the nurse's office, reporting that she was in pain, and the nurse gave the EAR to Noble.

Noble interviewed Folger and, apparently, the students in question. At the end of the interviews, at approximately 3:30 p.m., Folger asked Noble if she "could go to the comp doctor that day." (Tr., 10/26/99, p.12.)

Respondent was absent on December 19 and 20, 1994. Ultimately, Folger was authorized to see Dr. James M. Lee (Dr. Lee), an Orthopedic Surgeon, who examined her on December 21, 1994, at approximately 2:30 p.m.

Respondent reported that an accident had occurred and that she had commenced experiencing pain on the right side of her hip, radiating down her leg. Dr. Lee diagnosed: "traumatic Contusion" and "Traumatic Sprain" of the Lumbar Spines L-4 - L-5 with Right Para vertebral Myofascitis. He recommended anti-inflammatory medication and physiotherapy and, because respondent lived "way up in Denville", that she rest for a week and that if she continued "to be symptomatic", she would start physiotherapy when returning to school. (Exh. J-62.) Dr. Lee completed a Disability Certificate indicating diagnosis of a sprain and that respondent would return to work on January 3, 1995.

Christmas recess commenced on December 23, 1994. Folger again saw Dr. Lee on January 3, 1995. Dr. Lee executed a Disability Certificate stating that Folger would be absent until January 13, 1995, a Friday, and would return on January 16, 1995 and that she was receiving physical therapy (PT.)

January 16, 1995 was a school holiday. Folger was absent on January 17 and returned on January 18, 1995. She was present on January 23, on which date she saw the school nurse at approximately 8:00 a.m. The nurse put a Band-Aid on Folger's knee and cleaned cuts on her hands. Folger completed an EAR stating that she had tripped and fallen on steps while coming into school, resulting in cuts and abrasions to her right knee and hand and that it was not a recurring injury. Respondent went to Orange Memorial Hospital (Orange Memorial) at approximately 2:30 p.m., where her right knee was stitched.

Dr. Lee completed a State Department of Labor (DOL) Division of Worker's Compensation Employer's First Report of Accidental Injury or Occupational Illness on January 23, 1995. He referenced cuts and abrasions to her right hand and knee. A health insurance claim form regarding the incident was subsequently completed by Rueben Nichols, M.D., apparently a physician at Orange Memorial, on February 18, 1995, pertinent to costs incurred by the hospital in treating Folger. The diagnosis was "open wound leg". (Exh. J-68.)

Folger was again authorized to see Dr. Lee, who completed a Workers' Compensation Medical Reference form on January 24, 1995, indicating that Folger would return to work, "Full Duty", on January 26, 1995. (Exh. J-69.) Folger was present at school on January 24 but was absent January 25 through January 27, 1995. She was present on January 30 and 31, 1995.

During the period from approximately January 25 to January 27, 1995, she saw her "private physician", Dr. Paul Spreiser (Spreiser). (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 20.). Spreiser is a "chiropractor," a "CHIROPRACTOR/APPLIED KINESIOLOGIST". (Id. at 6 & Exh. J-71). The pertinent attendance records list Folger's absences on December 19 and 20, 1994 and during January 1995 as "Absent Sch. Acc." (Exh. J-138, Exh. A., p. 5.)

Folger was "Absent-Ill" on February 1 and 2, 1995 and absent because of a PBD on February 6, 1995. (Id. at 7.) Dr. Lee examined Folger on February 8, 1995. He sent facsimile transmissions to James and an employee in Cohn's office on February 10, 1995, noting, in part, that:

> "Overall she is much better and she is to attend therapy three times a week for enhancement. She should be able to walk ¾ of a mile without significant problems. She is to be seen in follow up in 4 – 6 weeks.
> [Exh. J-70.]

Folger was absent on February 21, 1995, a personal injury day, and February 28, 1995, a PBD. Schools were closed for winter vacation from February 20 through 24, 1995. Respondent was absent because of a personal day on March 21, 1995. She was not absent during April 1995. Schools were closed for spring recess from April 17 through April 21, 1995. Folger was not absent in May and June 1995. June 23, 1995 was the last scheduled school day.

The 1996-97 school year commenced for staff on September 3, 1996; and for students, September 4, 1996. Folger was not absent during September 1996.

Folger was absent from October 2 through October 11, 1996, a Friday, which absences are designated on her attendance record as "Absent-Ill". (Exh. J-138(b), p. 3.) She saw Spreiser subsequent to October 2 "for other chiropractic work". (Exh. J-71.) Spreiser gave Folger a note, dated October 3, 1996, which respondent gave to Board employees. That note read as follows:

> Grace Folger has been under my care for a sprained ankle.
> She will be unable to return to work until 10/14/96.
> [Exh. J-71.]

Schools were closed on October 14 because of a school holiday.

Folger was not absent during November 1996. Schools were closed on November 28 and 29, a Thursday and Friday, respectively, for Thanksgiving recess. Schools reopened the following Monday, December 2, 1996. Respondent did not return that day. The pertinent attendance record designates that absence as "Absent-Ill". (Exh. J-18(b), p. 5.)

Schools were closed for winter recess from December 23, 1996 until January 2, 1997. Folger was not absent during January 1997. She was absent on February 3 and 4, 1997, taking PBDs, and was "Absent-Ill" on February 12, 1997. (Id. at 7.) Schools were closed from February 17 through February 21, 1997 for winter vacation. Respondent was "Absent- Ill" on March 6, 1997. (Id. at 8.)

At approximately 8:30 a.m. on March 23, 1997, consistent with the procedures at Park Avenue, Folger went from the school building to a playground to meet her class, which was lined up next to that of another teacher, a Mrs. Wilson (Wilson). An altercation developed between two students in Wilson's line. A school aide intervened, and when Folger went to assist the aide, she was hit in the face by one of the students. Respondent immediately went to the school nurse's office. Folger executed an EAR. The nurse transported respondent to the emergency room (ER) at Orange Memorial, where x-rays were taken.

On March 25, 1997, Johnson completed a Supervisor Accident Investigation Report (SAIR), indicating, in part, that a student punched Folger in the face and respondent's cheek was "Swollen and Deformed", her eye was "injured", and her teeth "hurt". (Exh. J-73.) Johnson also completed an Incident Report, indicating that two staff members were injured when attempting to stop students from fighting and that one of them suffered an injury to her hand; and the other, Folger, to her eye.

Folger was subsequently referred to Dr. Lee, who at some point completed a State Employer's First Report of Accidental Injury or Occupational Illness. Dr. Lee indicated that Folger's left cheek and eye were "SWOLLEN AND DEFORMED" and that her "TEETH HURT". (Exh. J-72.). The form contains a statement that the filing thereof does not constitute an admission of liability.

Folger consulted several physicians during this time period. She first saw her dentist, Dr. Donald Cousineau. She also consulted a "plastic surgeon" regarding swelling and her eye; and Spreiser, "continuously." (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 20.) Folger spoke with her "eye doctor," Dr. Donald Walker, "on the phone" and consulted Dr. Morton Wertheimer (Wertheimer), an Endontologist." (Id. at 41-42.)

In approximately mid-May 1997, the Board authorized Folger to see Dr. Lee. He saw her on May 15, 1997 and authorized PT at the Essex County Work and Sports Injury Center (Sports Injury Center).

Schools were closed from April 21 through April 25, 1997 because of spring vacation; and on May 26, 1997, because of a school holiday.

Spreiser executed a note, dated May 26, 1997, stating that Folger had been under his care since March 26, 1997 for a "severe neck trauma" and that she would "probably return to work at the end of June." (Exh. J-78).

During this time period, Folger contacted Board personnel, indicating that Wertheimer had determined that she required surgery relative to an abscess under her teeth and gum. She was told to obtain a referral from Dr. Lee. Folger saw Dr. Lee on May 15, 1997, advising that she had pain in her teeth and indicating that the Board had requested a referral. Dr. Lee referred her to Wertheimer. Wertheimer performed surgery on or about June 9, 1997. Respondent again saw Dr. Lee on June 18, 1997. Dr. Lee executed a Disability Certificate stating that Folger could return to "work full duty on June 19, 1997." (Exh. J-79.)

Folger was initially evaluated at the Sports Injury Center on June 19, 1997. Folger received PT on June 19, 20, 23, 25, and 27, 1997. However, respondent was apparently discharged on June 24, 1997.

On June 20, 1997, Folger reported feeling "very tight" in the cervical area and the area between her shoulder blades. On June 23, she indicated that she "felt a lot better" after the last visit. The next day, she reported that her neck "felt a little better." On June 25, Folger reported "soreness in the left cervical area upon awakening. On June 27, Folger indicated that she was "feeling a little better in the cervical area" and that she was leaving to go on vacation. (Exh. J-82.) The pertinent Discharge Summary, dated June 24, 1997, indicates that respondent had reported that her neck was "feeling much better" but that she was not progressing in certain respects and was not returning to PT. (Exh. J-81.) Folger felt, that as a result of services provided by the Sports Injury Center and Spreiser, she was "less painful." (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 48.)

On June 20, 1997, Folger saw an associate of Wertheimer, Gerald C. Selke, DDS (Selke). Selke executed an Excuse Slip, dated June 20,1997, stating that respondent was "out sick 6/19/97 because of infection". (Exh. J-80.) Folger did not return to work on June 20 and 23, 1997, a Friday and Monday, respectively. She returned on June 24, 1997, the last day of the school year.

Folger's absences from March 26, through June 23, 1997 are designated on the pertinent attendance records as "Absent-Sch. Acc." (Exh. J-138(b), pp. 9-11.) Folger was paid without loss of sick days, except that absences "not related" to the incident occurring on March 25, 1997 were "taken from" her "sick time." (Tr., 10/26/99, p.45.) Respondent followed the Code-A-Phone procedure regarding her absences during the 1996-97 school year.

Folger was not absent during September 1997. Respondent went to the school nurse's office on October 7, 1997, requesting a Band-Aid. She reported that while adjusting clips holding maps over a chalkboard, the clips "moved suddenly and then stopped", cutting a finger. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 49, & Exh. J-83.) Folger completed an EAR.

She was absent on October 8, 1997. That absence was not related to the incident occurring on the prior day. Respondent was absent because she " . . . was just not feeling well." (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 49.) Schools were closed on October 13, 1997, a school holiday. Folger was absent on October 27, 1997, taking a PID.

She was not absent during November 1997. Schools were closed on November 13 and 14 and 26 through 28 because of a teachers' convention and Thanksgiving recess, respectively. November 28 was a Friday, and schools reopened the following Monday, December 1, 1997.

Respondent was present on December 1 and December 2, 1997. Respondent was thereafter absent from December 3, 1997 through June 23, 1998, the last day of school. The pertinent attendance records reference the absences during that time period as "Absent-Comp." (Exh. J-138(c), pp. 5-11.)

Folger completed an EAR on December 2, 1997, in which she stated that she tripped over loose tile while walking down a hallway at 10:35 a.m., "flying" into a fire door and onto the floor. She described the relevant physical disability as: "severe pain rt. knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, unable to bear weight". (Exh. J-85, p. 1.) Johnson completed an SAIR stating that Folger had fallen/tripped on loose floor tile, that respondent had used common safety "sense", and that action had been taken to correct the floor tile. (Id. at 2.) Respondent was taken to Orange Memorial, where x-rays were performed.

Folger subsequently saw Spreiser, who took x-rays, and called Dr. Lee. She had a scheduled appointment with Dr. Lee on December 3, 1997, as a "follow-up" to the March 25, 1997 incident, and queried if she could still come in regarding the incident of December 2, 1977. Dr. Lee told Folger that he could not see her on the scheduled date because of the "intervening accident", until authorized to do so. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 52).

Folger saw Dr. Lee on January 13, 1998. Dr. Lee sent James a letter dated January 28, 1999, noting, in part, that Folger stated that she had sustained injuries to the right elbow and hand and still had pain in her right knee, arm and elbow. Dr. Lee summarized his examination as follows:

> Clinically, this patient has an internal derangement of the knee by history. Clinically she has a normal knee examination. I want to get an MRI to make sure there is no pathology that is seen. She has a sprain basically of the right knee, improved. She has a sprain of the right elbow and right hip. Sprain of the lower back.

> There is no significant pathology. No therapy is indicated at this time.

Dr. Lee recommended that if the MRI were negative, Folger continue her "normal activities" and return to see him "as necessary." (Ibid.)

Bertram M. Kummel, M.D. (Kummel) examined Folger on February 6, 1998, at James' request. Kummel administered x-rays. An MRI had not been taken as of that date. Kummel sent James a letter dated February 6, 1998. The content of that document is as stated in Exhibit J-89.

Folger reported that she experienced pain in her right knee on December 2, 1997, as well as on her entire right side from the shoulder to the leg. Apparently, x-rays of the right knee taken by Dr. Lee were negative.

Folger's "PRESENT COMPLAINTS" were headaches in 'different places', aching of the right shoulder, soreness in the back of her shoulder to the touch, burning in the right shoulder after usage of the arm, "itching and ringing in both ears", pain in the right elbow and under the right ribs, aching in the right knee, and pain in her right "big toe" when it was touched. (Exh. J-89, p. 3). She was taking medication, Motrin, as needed.

Kummel concluded that Folger " . . . suffered a contusion of the ribs" and had a "derangement of the right shoulder" and that if the shoulder did not improve, additional x-rays would be ordered. In addition, if Folger continued to have symptoms regarding the right groin and hip, additional x-rays in that area might be ordered. Kummel advised Folger that she would be treated "conservatively". (Id. at 6.) He also advised her it would be helpful if she lost weight. He referred her to a physical therapist and prescribed Naproxen.

As of February 6, 1998, Spreiser was administering "Manipulations" weekly, "tapering down to every other week." (Id. at 1.)

Philip K. Keats, M.D. (Keats), an associate of Kummel, examined respondent on February 27, 1998, on which date he sent James a letter. The content of that document is as stated in Exhibit J-90.

Respondent reported continued pain in her right shoulder, that her right knee "gives away without any locking", pain in the right knee "and a strange sensation", and continued chest and hip pain. Noting that Folger did not undergo physiotherapy as recommended by Kummel, Keats indicated that Folger had stated she was never told by the physician's office where to "actually go for the therapy or when." (Exh. J-90, p. 1.) Keats concluded as follows:

> Ms. Grace Folger is disabled from all of the activities required as a teacher. She would be capable of a purely sedentary type job that required no prolonged standing, walking, or stair climbing and required no lifting, pushing, or pulling over five pounds. Ms. Folger will be set up by my office for physiotherapy at St. Clare's Medical Center in Denville. She will have therapy three times a week for three weeks. She will be re-examined in two weeks. Further reports will be forthcoming.

Keats referred Folger to Life Performance Center (LPC) for PT, three times weekly for three weeks.

Folger returned to work on March 2, 1998, a Monday. Folger told Johnson that she was not able to walk and that the physician had told her that she was to "just come in and sit down someplace." Johnson indicated that she had no information in that respect and that she would "get back to respondent". (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 67.) Respondent went to a first-floor classroom and "sat down." She worked "very passively" with "a few of the students" of another special education teacher whose classroom was apparently located on the first floor of the building. (Id. at pp. 65-66.) At some point during the day, Johnson told respondent that Cohn wanted to meet with Folger.

Cohn was "shocked" to see Folger. He had received no communications from anyone, including the Board's business office and Johnson, regarding a return to work by Folger. Cohn was in the building because of a problem with a boiler, not in anticipation of greeting Folger. A teacher was already in Folger's classroom, and Folger was not assigned a classroom at Park Avenue.

Cohn greeted Folger and inquired why she was at school. Folger responded that she had been given authorization by her physician to return to work "under a light duty constraint" and that she needed to go for PT. (Tr., 11/4/98, p. 54.) Cohn asked Folger what "light duty meant" and if there were any accommodations that petitioner could implement in that regard. (Id. at 55.) He did not receive a response. Cohn told Folger that school personnel had no knowledge of any communications between James and the Board regarding limitations on Folger's functioning and that upon her return to work, she would be expected to perform her duties in the usual manner. Cohn also told Folger that it was important, to his knowledge, based upon communications with R. Lee, that PT be rescheduled for evening appointments or late afternoon. Folger indicated that she would attempt to do so.

After speaking with respondent, Cohn went to Johnson's office to ascertain if she had any information. Johnson had been "just as surprised" as Cohn, "if not more so," to learn that Folger was present. (Id. at 56.) Generally, Cohn, as principal, would advise Johnson if a teacher were returning after an absence.

At some point thereafter, R. Lee, who was present at Park Avenue, apparently because of the problem with the boiler, asked Folger to "just sit down". Johnson, R. Lee, and Cohn then went downstairs to the boiler room. Cohn's "expectation was to deal with the issue when I came upstairs." (Id. at 56.) When Cohn returned upstairs approximately one-half hour later, he learned that Folger was not present. Cohn, and apparently Johnson, were informed by a secretary, Annette Dreher (Dreher), that Folger had left because she "was reinjured." (Id. at 57.) Cohn did not speak to Folger again that day.

Folger called Keats' office regarding the matter, either that afternoon or the next day. Folger was absent on March 3, 1998.

Respondent was initially seen at LPC on March 3, 1998. Stephanie Edwards (Edwards), a physical therapist at LPC, sent Keats a letter dated March 10, 1998. The treatment plan at that time was for therapy three times weekly for three weeks. Edwards noted that Folger had been referred for treatment of her right shoulder, ribs, hip, and knee.

Keats again examined Folger on or about March 13, 1998, at James' request. He sent James a report, the content of which is as stated in Exhibit J-94.

Keats noted, in part, that Folger had reported returning to work on March 10, 1998 and that after sitting for three hours, she experienced "severe increase in right hip and leg pain as well as right shoulder pain" and that she did not return to work the next day because her pain was "too severe." Folger also reported that she went to her own physician, a chiropractor, who advised her that PT "is good but at the present time it is 'moving things around.' " Folger told Keats that 45 minutes after returning from her first PT session, she could not move and went to her chiropractor for "relief of her symptoms." (Exh. J-94, p. 1.) Keats concluded as follows:

> Ms. Grace Folger has multiple symptoms with minimal objective physical findings. She states that she cannot carry out the duties of a school teacher and that eight hours, even sitting with the ability to stand and walk causes severe pain. She states that the School Board will not allow her to work shorter hours. Therefore, based on her subjective complaints and the fact that one attempt to return to work produced increased symptoms, means to me that any attempts that returning to work at this point in time will be met with increased symptoms and inability to perform her job. Therefore, I would recommend that Ms. Folger continue her physical therapy and remain out of work until further diagnostic testing can be carried out. This would include an MRI of the right knee to rule out a torn meniscus or other intra-articular pathology; and MRI of the lumbo-sacral spine to rule out a herniated disc and an MRI of the right shoulder to rule out any damage to her rotator cuff. If no surgical condition is seen on any of these MRIs, then, further orthopedic treatment for her right condition and her lumbo-sacral spine condition would not be necessary. If her right shoulder MRI does not show a rotator cuff tear then she should have one injection of steroid into the subacromial bursa and then treatment would be finished and she would be at maximum medical benefit. For all these reasons I would respectfully request your authorization for these imaging studies since I do not believe there > will be any other way to resolve this situation to make definite diagnoses and determine what, if any, further treatment is medically reasonable and necessary.

Keats issued another prescription for PT, three times weekly for three weeks, and prescriptions for MRIs of the right knee and shoulder and the spine. Folger continued PT during this time period.

MRIs were taken at MRI Imaging of Morristown on March 24, 1998. Hal Ginsberg, M.D. (Ginsberg), wrote a report of the results. The content of that document is as stated in Exhibit J-97. Referencing an examination of the right knee, Ginsberg stated his "IMPRESSION" as: "MODERATE JOINT EFFUSION. MODERATE POPLITEAL CYST. ANTERIOR CRUCIATE LIGAMENT NOT SEEN AND PRESUMABLY TORN. GRADE II SIGNAL MENISCI." (Exh. J-97.)

Keats examined Folger on April 3, 1998 and sent a report to James that day. Folger reported to him that undergoing the MRIs resulted in "increased pain in her lower back and right shoulder" and "continued pain in her right shoulder and lower back with a feeling of instability in her right knee." (Exh. J-101, p. 1.) Keats recommended that Folger use a brace "when standing or walking for long periods of time" on her right knee. (Id. at 2.)

Keats noted, in part, his belief that there was a pre-existing "degenerative disc disease as well as a pre-existing spondylolisthesis of the lumbo-sacral spine which at most was aggravated by the work related fall of 12/2/97." The MRI of the right shoulder showed "some pathology involving the rotator cuff" but it was not clear whether there was a complete tear. However, Keats concluded that that condition was "causally related" to the incident occurring on December 2, 1997. (Id. at 2.) He concluded at follows:

> Ms. Grace Folger remains disabled from her normal occupation as a teacher. I believe she would benefit from additional physiotherapy for two weeks to improve her right shoulder and lower back conditions. If her right shoulder symptoms persist I > believe she would be a candidate for arthroscopic evaluation and if a full thickness rotator cuff tear was confirmed then she would require rotator cuff repair. Following this projected course of physiotherapy, I believe Ms. Folger would have reached maximum medical benefits for her lower spine condition. Once Ms. Folger was fitted for the appropriate brace for her right knee I believe she would be at maximum medical benefit for that condition as well. Ms. Folger will be re-examined in two weeks and further reports will be forthcoming.

Keats again examined Folger on April 17, 1998 and sent James a report. Keats concluded that the MRI of the right knee was "consistent with a tear of undetermined age." The findings of the MRI of the right shoulder were consistent with rotator cuff pathology, but not of a "complete or significant rotator cuff tear." The MRI of the lumbar spine showed no "surgical condition", evidencing changes of a pre-existing spondylolisthesis and degenerative changes. (Exh. J-103, p. 1.)

Keats' examination showed "minimally restrictive range of motion of the lumbo-sacral spine", that Folger was able to walk on her heels and toes, that the right knee evidenced "no effusion", and that the right shoulder showed "essentially full range of motion." Keats reported that he did not believe surgical treatment was required, that the only treatment indicated was a steroid injection into the subacromial bursa, and that Folger required a custom-made brace "to stabilize her right knee" prior to returning to her "normal occupation." Keats noted that although Folger was sedentary most of the time, "she does do stair climbing and has to walk in the hallways and my sense is that there would be another injury and fall unless a brace was on her knee." He therefore authorized her to be absent from work pending approval of a brace. Keats requested authorization for a custom-molded brace of the right knee, a "Townsend brace." Finally, he noted that Folger had indicated that she was taking her MRIs to obtain "other opinions regarding her conditions." (Id. at 2.)

Folger saw William Gomez, M.D. (Gomez), an orthopedist, on or about May 7, 1998 for a "second opinion", reporting "persistent pain in her right shoulder, right hip and right knee. She reportedly sustained an injury at work on December 2, 1997." (Exh. J-104, p. 1.) Gomez recommended, in part, that Folger undergo a PT program and use a brace. His summary of the examination indicates that a copy thereof was sent to "Workers Comp." (Id. at 3.)

Folger saw Keats on May 8, 1998. She received an injection of steroid and local anesthesia. Keats issued a prescription for a Townsend brace for respondent's right knee.

Respondent initially consulted with Garden State Orthopedic, Inc. (Garden State), upon referral by Keats, on May 20, 1998, on which date she was casted for a knee brace. (Tr., 10/26/99, pp. 79-80.) She received the brace on May 28, 1998, at which time it was fitted. Folger expressed concerns regarding the brace at that time, as well as in June 1998. Garden State returned the brace to Townsend on June 10, 1998 for an adjustment, and the brace was refitted on Folger on June 18, 1998.

In the interim, she saw Keats on May 22, 1998, reporting that she 'felt great' upon leaving his office on the prior visit, that she was in "severe pain" for two days after the local anesthesia wore off, and that "slowly her right shoulder got better", which "improvement" continued, although her right shoulder was starting to 'twinge'. Keats sent a report to James, noting, in part, that examination of the right shoulder demonstrated "full range motion". (Exh. J-108.)

Folger was again examined by Keats on June 5, 1998, on which date he sent a report to James. Keats noted that respondent reported that after wearing the knee brace for eight hours, she developed a skin breakdown and irritation behind her knee and had not been able to wear it. She advised that the brace was modified.

Folger also reported that she was experiencing 'tinges' of pain in her right shoulder. However, Keats found that she had "full mobility." Examination of respondent's right knee showed "an area of healing abrasion"; and an examination of her right shoulder, "full range of motion." (Exh. J-113, p. 1.) Keats concluded that:

> Ms. Grace Folger continues to be disabled from her normal occupation as she is not able to wear her custom knee brace until modifications are carried out and her skin breakdown heals. . . .

Keats sent another report to James by letter dated June 9, 1998, noting that Folger had developed a "skin breakdown secondary to the stabilization brace . . ." which had "disabled her from returning to work as a teacher because without the brace her knee would be unstable and she would likely sustain further injury to her right knee while at work." (Exh. J-14.) Keats concluded:

> In my opinion the stabilization brace for her right knee is the last treatment I have to offer her. She is at maximum medical benefit once the brace fits appropriately. I have no further treatment to offer her following that. If further problems continue it may be worthwhile to seek further opinion from another physician since I have nothing more to offer her. . . .

Keats sent a "final" report to James by letter dated June 19, 1998, on which date he examined Folger. He found that her right knee brace, with modification, "now fits appropriately." Folger was wearing a "cotton stockingette" under the brace to avoid "skin irritation and breakdown." Folger reported recurring "right shoulder symptoms", although she denied "any new history of trauma." (Exh. J-15, p. 2.)

Keats found that the skin irritation behind the right knee "has essentially resolved . . . ", that the brace "fits the knee appropriately", and that respondent "ambulates easily with the brace without any difficulties." (Ibid.) He injected medication for her shoulder symptoms and issued a prescription for post-injection pain. Keats concluded as follows:

> At this point in my opinion Ms. Folger has reached maximum medical benefit from orthopedic treatment. She is capable of her normal occupation with her right knee brace on starting 6/22/98. I have no further treatment to offer her either for her right shoulder or right knee condition.

Keats told Folger that she should wear the brace for one hour daily, until her skin "had adjusted" to it. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 83.)

Folger received her full salary for all days on which she was absent during the 1997-98 school year. She was paid for either "comp or sick" days. (Id. at 85.) During that school year, she contacted respondent regarding her absences, utilizing the Code-A-Phone procedure. She did not always call on a daily basis, usually calling either on a Friday or Sunday, regarding the following week.

Folger's Worker's Compensation attorney communicated with certain physicians by letter dated August 18, 1998, regarding charges related to ER treatment on March 25, 1997. Counsel expressed his opinion that the related charges should be paid by respondent. The letter, on its face, indicates that a copy was sent to James.

Cohn communicated with Folger by letter dated August 25, 1998, advising that he had been informed by "your doctor" that she had been released as of June 22, 1998 and that additional treatment was not necessary. The letter advised that:

> You are to return to work at Park Avenue School on September 1, 1998. I want to make it perfectly clear that if you do not report to your assignment on September 1, 1998, it will be a direct indication that you have officially abandoned your position.

The letter indicates that copies were sent to Dr. Columbus Salley (Salley), the Board's Superintendent at the time, R. Lee, Johnson, and respondent's personnel file.

Folger responded by letter dated August 31, 1998, indicating that she was "totally bewildered" by Cohn's correspondence. Folger also indicated that she had spoken to Cohn during the week commencing June 22, 1998, informing him of her medical status, which she then summarized. Folger noted that Keats had advised that she should continue to "adapt" to her knee brace and that if additional adjustments were needed, she was to contact Garden State. Additionally, if she "experienced further problems" with her "right side," she was to contact Keats. Respondent stated, additionally, that she had advised Keats, on at least three occasions, of continuing "problems" with her ears and that he had indicated he would "again" contact REM regarding a referral to a neurologist. (Exh. J-4, p. 1.)

Folger also expressed disappointment with REM's performance and James's "attitude," as well as a refusal by REM to pay Wertheimer's bill pertinent to an "assault" sustained by respondent on March 25, 1997, when she was struck in the face by a student with a "Bocce ball." Folger also referenced "outstanding" physician and/or hospital bills regarding the "March 25 assault" and the "December 2nd injury." (Ibid.) She expressed dissatisfaction for not being able to see Dr. Lee until six weeks subsequent to the December 2, 1997 incident. Folger also referenced, in part, telephone communications with Cohn on January 5 and January 9, 1998. She concluded that she was "abandoned and ostracized" by respondent and advised that she had retained counsel. (Id. at 2.)

Folger returned to work on September 1, 1998. During the first thirteen weeks of that school year, respondent was absent on a Monday, Friday, or a day before or after a holiday on six occasions. After the thirteenth week of school, Folger was essentially absent until May 1999.

Respondent was not absent during September 1998. Folger was absent on October 13, 1998, a Tuesday, which day followed a school holiday, Columbus Day. She was also absent on October 26 and 27, 1998, a Monday and Tuesday, respectively. Those three absences are designated on her attendance record as "Absent-Ill Days". (Exh. J-138(d), p. 3.)

She saw Dr. Karen Wirthshafter (Wirthshafter), an ear, nose and throat specialist, on October 13, October 19, and October 30, 1998. On October 13 and 19, Wirthshafter diagnosed "olitis externa"; and on October 30, an ear infection in the right ear. Wirthshafter prescribed medications. Folger saw Wirthshafter for the last time on December 10, 1999. Wirthshafter diagnosed "wax build-up", "gensorinaral hearing loss", and "tinnitius." (Exh. J-117.)

In mid-October 1998, Folger contacted the "Board office", requesting to be seen by "the comp. Doctor" again, assuming that she would see Keats. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 90.) However, authorization was given to see Kummel.

Petitioner filed two Worker's Compensation claim petitions with the DOL on November 9, 1998. One involved the incident on December 2, 1997. The pertinent petition states that the relevant injury regarded her "ENTIRE RIGHT SIDE", including the knee, leg, hip, shoulder, hand, elbow, ribs, back, and "DIZZINESS" and "RINGING IN EARS." (Exh. J-19, p. 1.) The other petition regarded the March 25, 1997 incident. The statement of injury referred to the head, face, left eye, jaw, teeth, neck, and shoulder, and "HEADACHES". (Id. at 2.)

Those matters are still pending in Worker's Compensation Court. At some point, Cohn requested that petitioner's business office advise him when they were resolved, because his office would need a final update to determine PBDs, PIDs, and "compensation days" to which the district would agree. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 16.)

Respondent was absent on November 23, 1998, taking a PBD day. She was also absent on November 30, 1998, apparently taking a PID.

Schools were closed because of Thanksgiving recess from November 25 through November 27, 1998. Folger was "Absent- Ill" the following Monday, November 30. (Exh. J-138(d), p. 4.)

She was examined by Kummel on December 2, 1998, at James' request. Kummel sent James a report, the content of which is as stated in Exhibit J-118.

Folger reported problems with her ears and right knee shoulder, elbow, thumb, and arm and exhaustion and headaches. She also told Kummel that commencing in October 1998, her left knee began to 'slide out' and she had pain in her left heel. (Exh. J-118, p. 2.) However, she reported no accidents nor injuries since Kummel's prior examination. He directed increased physiotherapy. Kummel concluded as follows:

> Disability with regard to the shoulder is equal to 2 ½ % of total. The history relates this to the 12/2/97 incident. At the present time the back demonstrates no clinical evidence of disability. There is the spondylolisthesis but this is a condition which existed prior to 12/2/97. The examination today shows that there has been no permanent aggravation of the previous existing condition. Therefore, there is no disability related to the back due to the 12/2/97 incident. Disability in relation to the right knee is equal to 7 ½% of the leg secondary to the anterior cruciate insufficiency. The history relates this to the 12/2/97 incident. In my opinion this lady has reached the maximum benefit from all treatment.

Folger called James on December 4, 1998 and several days thereafter, requesting authorization to see Kummel. On or about December 4, 1998, James told Folger that Kummel had advised that "he had nothing to offer" respondent. (Tr., 10/26/98, p. 98). Kummel told respondent that he was authorized to examine her but not to treat her. Respondent was absent from December 4, 1998, a Friday, until some time in June 1999.

Folger was authorized to see Dr. William Oppenheim (Oppenheim), an orthopedic and reconstructive plastic surgeon, who examined her on December 28, 1998. Oppenheim sent James a report, the content of which is as stated in Exhibit J-119. After relating extensive history reported to him by Folger, Oppenheim noted the results of his examination of respondent's left knee and foot and right shoulder.

He found that petitioner appeared to evidence a "positive impingement sign on the right shoulder side", and, noting that two prior injections appeared not to have long-term results, found that Folger had the option of undergoing "operative decompression." (Id. at 3.) He also noted that if she chose not to do so, it appeared that she "will have reached her maximum medical benefit as additional injections would only tend to weaken the rotator cuff and not provide her with longevity with regard to her recovery." Additionally, he noted that there appeared to be "some injury" to respondent's left knee, apparently related to the accident of February 2, 1997. Oppenheim concluded in that respect that respondent should have an MRI of the left knee and that bracing of the left side might "be able to be as successful as it was to the right side." Oppenheim also found, regarding Folger's left foot, "some degree of plantar calcaneal heel syndrome which could be attributed to her favoring the left side and could also be attributed to her size." He felt that a pair of orthotics, inserts in shoes to provide support for the feet, could be provided for that condition, as well as a course of medication, but felt, that based upon respondent's "response" to prior PT, a course of PT would not be beneficial.

Based upon an indication by Folger that she did not want to have an operation, Oppenheim concluded that subsequent to "these few conservative treatments", respondent would have reached her "maximum medical benefit". In light of "the number of complaints" which Folger had, it was uncertain whether she would be able to return to work, and Oppenheim felt that a "functional capacity evaluation could be obtained." (Ibid.) Respondent's left knee and foot had not "bothered her in prior years." (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 94.)

James subsequently authorized an MRI of Folger's left knee, which was performed on January 22, 1999 at the Northfield Imaging Center (Northfield.) Ronald C. Schliftman, M.D., a physician with Northfield, sent Oppenheim a report dated January 25, 1999, the content of which is as stated in Exhibit J-120. Schliftman's "IMPRESSION" was "JOINT EFFUSION WITH OSTEOARTHRITIS", "QUESTION OF ANTERIOR CRUCIATE LIGAMENT TEAR", and "TEAR OF THE POSTERIOR HORN OF THE MEDIAL MENISCUS." (Exh. J-120.)

Oppenheim thereafter examined Folger on January 28, 1999. Folger noted a "degree of discomfort within the right shoulder region, as well as the plantar fascia. The knee has been only occasionally somewhat bothersome." (Exh. J-21, p. 1.) Oppenheim issued prescriptions for orthotics and PT, referring her, in the latter respect, to Physical Therapy Services of Morristown (PTS). In his notes regarding the examination, Oppenheim concluded as follows:

> On this date, it was my feeling that she does require a pair of orthotics. It is hoped that this plus her therapy regimen for her shoulder, as well as her plantar fascia will eliminate these problems. She will be receiving a brace for the left side which she could use if she is going to exert herself. Other than this, I do not believe that any additional treatment would be indicated and this > was explained to her. At the time of evaluation, in addition, the MRI was reviewed with her. She will be re-evaluated in 3 weeks.

Folger was initially evaluated at PTS on February 2, 1999 and thereafter completed six PT sessions. Thomas Trezza (Trezza), a physical therapist at PTS, sent Oppenheim a report dated February 17, 1999. Trezza noted that if continued treatment were deemed appropriate, another prescription would be needed. He summarized the status of the PT sessions which had occurred as follows:

> Ms. Folger has had fair success with physical therapy. She is very deconditioned and has low exercise tolerance. Her left foot is less painful and she is tolerating Achilles and plantar fascia stretches well. She has poor body awareness and doing one exercise leads to strains and soreness in unrelated areas. Her gait is antalgic and rigid. She has full ROM at her shoulder but has much cracking and popping. Treatment has been focusing on her left lower extremity, to get her ambulatory with less pain and able to tolerate prolonged standing. He[sic] upper extremity is fair, with a painful arc and a positive impingement sign. Her left lower extremity is weak and tight. She has poor tolerance to lower extremity strengthening and stretching. Her poor tolerance to exercise has been problematic because when we attempt to an exercise for one body part she has other complaints of pain of muscle cramping at another area. She may benefit from a water based exercise program and orthotics.

> [Exh. J-125.]

In the interim, Nancy Glaser (Glaser), an employee of REM, communicated with Kummel regarding "more problems" being experienced by Folger. (Exh. J-123.) Kummel responded by letter dated February 4, 1999. He noted that Folger had "complaints" of pain in many joints as well as in the spine. He recommended that she be seen by a rheumatologist to determine if there were "some systematic condition causing these complaints" and that certain tests be authorized. (Ibid.) Folger was not advised at that time by REM of any further consultation with Kummel.

Folger was reexamined by Oppenheim on February 18, 1999. His notes regarding that examination concluded as follows:

> On this date, a discussion with her with regard to her orthotics was conducted and this is going to be built to her endurance. She does feel better than she did and it is also somewhat uncertain to what extent she will be able to improve from this point with regard to her overall conditioning particularly considering her size, physical condition and dedication if she only did make 6 therapy sessions in 3 weeks. It would be my feelings at this time that she should continue with her physical therapy. Discussion with regard to her weight were also conducted. Whether she will do anything with this is unclear. She will be re-evaluated in 3 weeks.

In the interim, in January 1999, Folger was diagnosed with breast cancer. Respondent underwent surgery on approximately March 3, 1999. She was able to drive by approximately March 14, 1999, but she was not able to attend PT for approximately three weeks because of the surgery.

Folger again saw Oppenheim on March 18, 1999. She inquired regarding the status of a brace for the left knee, and he responded that he thought it had already been ordered. He thereupon called James, who authorized the brace, and Oppenheim issued a prescription for it. Respondent also had not received the orthotics as of that date.

Respondent was casted for a left knee brace at Garden State on March 25, 1999. She failed to appear for an appointment on April 9, 1999 because of confusion regarding various appointments. The brace was fitted on April 14, 1999. It was "a very good fit". Folger was able to attend PT with it. "After a month's practice with it," Garden State did "a little adjustment on it" on May 14, 1999. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 102, & Exh. J-131.)

Oppenheim examined Folger on April 8, 1999. Folger reported that she had experienced "appreciable improvement" since obtaining her orthotic and that she did not encounter any problems taking medication. Although she still favored the left side "to a large extent", she mobilized "much better." Oppenheim concluded that respondent should continue PT three times weekly for the next four weeks and that it " . . . would be anticipated that between taking her Celebrex that she should be able to return to work, hopefully regular duty at that time." (Exh. J-132.) His notes indicate that he discussed that situation with Folger and that she would be re-evaluated in four weeks.

During this time period, R. Lee, or his designee, told Cohn that the absences in questions were "unauthorized." (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 39.) It was communicated that R. Lee was uncertain whether the days were "valid days", i.e., they would have to be deemed to be PIDs until they were "resolved". However, Folger was arguing that they were not PIDs. Since they were not approved comp days, they were, in that situation, deemed to be "unauthorized absences." Cohn felt he should "put Ms. Folger on record", i.e., advise her that they would be deemed to be unauthorized prospectively, "so she could do whatever she needed to do". (Ibid.)

Cohn communicated with Folger regarding her absences during the 1998-99 school year by letter dated April 8, 1999. He stated that petitioner's records indicated that she had been, and at that time was, absent without leave and not following proper procedures in requesting a leave of absence. Cohn directed that Folger return to work "immediately" and provide "official documentation" of the specific reasons for her absences, including medical verification of the exact nature of any condition which may have "hampered" her ability to return to "normal activity" at any time during the school year. (Exh. J-36). The letter also stated that a failure to respond within five days would constitute insubordination and evidence of abandonment, resulting in the filing of tenure charges of dismissal with the Commissioner.

Folger responded by letter dated April 14, 1999, stating, in part, that she had never been on, and was not on, a leave of absence, that she was under Oppenheim's care, and that Cohn and James had access to all medical information in light of the fact that Oppenheim was authorized to treat Folger for injuries resulting from the fall occurring on December 2, 1997.

Folger also addressed a conversation with Cohn on April 1, 1999, regarding a "withdrawal" from her checking account of her "electronically deposited paycheck." (Exh. J-37, p. 1.) She noted that Cohn had referred her to Faith Richardson and R. Lee and that Cohn, R. Lee, and the Board's counsel had met to discuss "this issue" for several months. Folger stated that Cohn had not advised her of any additional "procedures" to be followed regarding her "medical condition" and had not referenced any concerns regarding unauthorized absences. (Ibid.)

She also indicated that she had not received responses from Cohn to letters to him dated June 29 and August 31, 1998, nor responses to any of her "many telephone calls." She concluded as follows:

> . . . I am willing to fulfill my contractual obligations, but I must have some clarity to the issues.
>
> Please contact me as soon as possible so that we may resolve any perceived problems.

Folger included with the letter a note from Oppenheim, dated April 12, 1999, indicating that respondent would remain absent from work until May 13, 1999.

All absences in December 1998 are referenced on the pertinent attendance record as "Absent- Ill"; and all in January through April 1999, as "Absent-Comp". (Exh. J-138(d), pp. 5-9.)

Folger was absent from May 3, 1999 until May 18, 1999, absences designated as "Absent-Comp". (Id. at 10.) Folger went to the nurse's office on approximately May 19, 1999. The regular nurse was absent, and Folger saw a nurse assigned from a different school. Respondent was absent on May 20, 1999. The pertinent attendance record indicates "Absent-1/2 Personal Day" for May 24, May 25, June 1, and June 7, 1999, a Monday. (Ibid.)

Oppenheim examined Folger on May 13, 1999. He wrote a note, indicating that Folger should be allowed to leave work early on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays for PT. His notes regarding the examination are as stated in Exhibit J-135. Oppenheim concluded that Folger could return to employment at her regular position as a teacher and that when she did so, she would be released early, three times weekly, to continue therapy regarding her foot.

Oppenheim had placed no restrictions on Folger during this time period. Employees of respondent executed a Worker's Compensation Claim of Injury form on May 20, 1999, indicating that Folger was approved to return to work on May 17, 1999 and was "no longer on Workman's Compensation." (Exh. J-136.) The last day of school was June 23, 1999.

Folger was suspended on June 9, 1999, which suspension, to her understanding, was "rescinded." (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 116.) She has been continuously suspended since June 15, 1999.

Folger continued to consult with Oppenheim. He placed no limitations on her ability to return to work subsequent to May 17, 1999. However, Folger still has to "be careful", and she wears braces on both knees. (Id. at 116.) Folger continued PT from the end of March until approximately July 1999.

Folger was paid her full salary for all periods of absence until March 15, 1999. Her pay was withheld, commencing in March and continuing into April 1999. She subsequently was paid for March 15, 1999 and March 16, 1999 in the form of worker's compensation temporary benefits.

Orange Middle does not employ "long-term substitutes". (Tr., 10/25/99, pp. 20-21.) The school hires substitute teachers for up to a maximum of 20 days. If substitutes are certified, they can be hired for longer than 20 days.

Johnson did not have definitive information regarding Folger's anticipated return dates at all times. Sometimes respondent reported absences on a "weekly basis". Johnson was unable to obtain substitute teachers during the 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years. As a result of respondent's absences, her students had substitute teachers, sometimes substitutes who could work up to 20 days; and sometimes, numerous substitutes. If a substitute teacher were not available for one of respondent's classes, the class "would be split" among other special education teachers. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 151.)

The situation negatively impacted on the "continuity of instruction". (Id. at 20.) Many of Folger's students were assigned to her class for two to three years. Folger's students would most likely need "a great deal of remedial work" because of the number of respondent's absences. (Id. at 21.) Folger's students, who "were handicapped to begin with," would "never be able to make up that time that they lost relevant to their instruction". (Id. at 125. See also, Id. at 127.) It generally is very difficult for a substitute teacher to teach a "special education class" because of a lack of "continuity." (Id. at 126.) In general, the absences of Folger, who was a "special ed teacher with years of experience", had a negative impact on her students. (Id. at 63.)

It was never "reported to" Cohn that Folger had ever violated the Code-A-Phone procedure pertinent to any of her absences. (Id. at 66.) At some point, when Cohn believed he no longer had "an understanding" of respondent's long-term attendance, he asked the Superintendent for permission to offer a contract to an individual, not a "long-term situation". Respondent would pay extra funds regarding salary and benefits. However, Cohn did not believe that petitioner would be " . . . hiring individuals who had the expertise and ability to teach the children if she was there each and every day." (Id. at 64.) The school did not "budget" for having two individuals certified "in the same positions", thereby paying "benefits" to respondent as well as someone else. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 20.)

DISCUSSION

The Commissioner generally has jurisdiction to hear and determine controversies and disputes arising under the local school laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. A tenured local school employee shall not be dismissed, or reduced in compensation, except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, "or other just cause." Id. at § 6-10.

The Legislative will must be interpreted as written, "not according to some supposed unexpressed intention." Hoffman v. Hack, 8 N.J. 397, 408-409 (1952.) Accord International Broth. of Elec. Workers v. Gillen, 174 N.J. Super. 326, 329 (App. Div. 1980). In construing a statute, its language is the first indicator used. If a statute is by its terms clear and unambiguous on its face, ". . . we need delve no further than the Act's literal terms to define the Legislature's intent." State v. Butler, 89 N.J. 220,226 (1982).

Statutory language should be given its ordinary meaning " . . . absent specific intent to the contrary." Renz v. Penn Central Corp., 87 N.J. 436,400 (1981). Accord, International Broth., supra, at 329-330. Even if there is some ambiguity, the facial meaning of statutory language controls. International Broth., at 329. When the language of a statute is plain, there is no need to resort to the rules of statutory interpretation which come into play when the meaning of a statute is on its face doubtful. Caminetti at 485.

The plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1(b) prohibits withholding an increment because of absences resulting from an injury caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of employment. However, it does not prohibit, nor even address, the imposition of other sanctions, including dismissal, because of excessive absenteeism resulting from such an accident. It is not illogical for the Legislature to have determined that if a local board of education decides, for whatever reason, not to seek to terminate a tenured employee because of absences, that that employee should be deemed to have satisfactory performance, vis-à-vis attendance considerations, to justify the award of an increment, but not to preclude a district from determining that absences, even if resulting from a compensable injury or accident, warrant termination. Such is especially so in light of the long-standing principle that excessive absenteeism, whatever the reason, necessarily disrupts the continuity of education and that such, even if because of valid medical reasons or compensable accidents, can result in termination. Although, as Folger argues, the holding in Kacprowicz, which involved the withholding minimum of ten school days in any school year. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2. N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 addresses the withholding of increments.

Any charge made against any employee of a local board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the board, in writing, and a written statement of evidence under oath supporting the charge shall also be presented to the board. The board shall provide the employee copies of the charge and the statement of evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and evidence under oath. Id. at 11.

After considering the matter, the board shall determine whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether the charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary. If the board finds that probable cause exists and the charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant such action, it shall forward the written charge to the Commissioner for a hearing, together with a certificate of such determination. Ibid. The burden of proof in a case such as this is on petitioner by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See, Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

Chronic or excessive absenteeism may constitute incapacity and unbecoming conduct, as well as just cause warranting suspension or dismissal. Trenton Bd. of Educ. v. Williamson, 1986 S.L.D. 1462. State-Operated School District of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 269, aff'd, State Board of Education, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 30 (Pellecchio). Passaic Bd. of Ed. v. Viani, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 76.

The determination of what constitutes excessive absenteeism initially falls within the prerogative and discretionary authority of the local board of education. Pellecchio, supra. Dismissal may be warranted even without an opportunity to improve attendance. Board of Education of the City of Camden v. Rucker, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 190, aff'd, State Board of Education, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 350, (Rucker).

There are no absolute standards regarding when an absence becomes chronic or excessive. However, " . . . this boundary is crossed when the performance of students begins to suffer." In The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Monica Meade-Stephens, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 550, 553.

It is not necessary, however, for a school district to prove a direct correlation between student achievement and teacher attendance in order to validate concerns about the effects of a teacher's absence on the educational program. Kacprowicz, supra. As the Commissioner has recognized, " . . . the repeated absence of a teacher from his classroom, however legitimate, will have negative impact on instruction and compromise the basic purpose of the District and the most fundamental obligation of an educator to his student." In The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jerome Kacprowicz, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 147,153, aff'd, State Board of Educ., 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 604, aff'd, App. Div. 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 105 (Docket No. A-6211-92T3, dated December 21, 1994) (Kacprowicz). Excessive absenteeism of a teacher disrupts the continuity of the instructional process. In The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Catherine Reilly, School District of the City of Jersey City, 1977 S.L.D. 403.

Folger's argument that there is no requirement of the DOE that a violation of monitoring guidelines result in discipline of a tenured teacher is without merit. Those guidelines are relevant to the extent of establishing one reasonable standard for determining whether absenteeism is excessive.

As the Board argues, respondent's testimony regarding the reasons for certain absences was contradictory and suspect on its face. Folger also did not return to employment on dates reasonably expected by her physicians. In addition, the fact that respondent exhibited a pattern of absences occurring before and after weekends and school holidays also raises questions regarding her credibility. However, it is not necessary to reach issues in that respect.

Excessive absenteeism constitutes valid grounds for dismissal of a tenured teacher even if the absences were excused or caused by legitimate reasons of personal illness or were approved leave or sick days to which the teacher was entitled and even if the teacher's classroom performance was sufficient. Kacprowicz, supra. Pellecchio, supra. In addition, chronic or excessive absenteeism may be found to warrant discipline, including dismissal, even when the individual was entitled to days off pursuant to a contract. Rucker.

As petitioner argues, it has not yet been determined whether any of respondent's alleged school injuries arose out of and in the course of her employment, and such determination is within the jurisdiction of the DOL's Division of Workers' Compensation. Forgash v. Lower Camden County Sch., 208 N.J. Super. 461 (App. Div. 1985.) However, action may be taken against a teacher because of excessive absenteeism even if such is the result of work-related injuries. Kochman v. Board of Education of the Borough of Keansburg, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 154, State Board of Education, aff'd, App. Div., 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 212, Docket No. A-1510-93T2 (dated May 5, 1995). See also, Board of Education of the Twp. of Irvington v. Pearson, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 329.

Folger argues that N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1(b) prohibits the imposition of a sanction on a tenured school employee because of work-related absences. I am not persuaded by that argument.

The provision in question, which was effective June 5, 1997, provides that leave taken by an employee pursuant to subsection (a) shall constitute satisfactory service, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, and any other provision, statutory or contractual, relating to employment, adjustment, or other increments and shall not constitute inefficiency or other good cause for the withholding of an employment or adjustment increment. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1(b). Sub-section (a), in turn, provides that whenever an employee, who is entitled to sick leave, is absent as a result of a personal injury caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of employment, the employer shall pay the employee the full salary or wages for the period of the absence for up to one calendar year without having such absence charged to the annual sick leave or the accumulated sick leave. Id. at § (a).[2]

It is a long-standing principle of statutory construction that the plain and unambiguous terms of a statute are controlling. Caminetti v. United States, 61 L. Ed. 442, 455 (1916) (Caminetti). That standard has been adopted in New Jersey. Greenway Development Co., 185 N.J. Super. 86 (App. Div. 1982).

[2] N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2 provides that all individuals holding any office, position, or employment in a local school district who are "steadily employed" by the Board who are protected by tenure, except individuals in the classified civil service, shall be allowed sick leave with full pay for a of an increment, may no longer be valid, the general principles discussed hereinabove, relied on by the Board, are still applicable.

Respondent also argues that it is reasonable to conclude that the Board discriminated against her, vis-à-vis the filing of tenure charges, because she filed Worker's Compensation claims. I am not persuaded that the evidence supports such a conclusion.

It is unlawful for an employer to discharge, or in any way discriminate against, an employee regarding employment because the employee has claimed, or attempted to claim, worker's compensation benefits. N.J.S.A. 34:15-39.1. It is questionable, however, that the Commissioner has jurisdiction to consider such claims. Administrative relief is available from the DOL. Lally v. Copygraphics, 173 N.J. Super. 162 (App. Div. 1980), aff'd, 85 N.J. 668. In any event, it is not necessary to reach Folger's arguments in that respect. The tenure charges can be determined based on the evidence introduced regarding the substantive allegations.

If tenure charges are proven, factors relevant to a determination of discipline include the nature and length of a teacher's prior service. In Re Tyler, 13 N.J.A.R. 297. " . . . each such matter shall be judged in light of its particular circumstances. The kind and degree of penalty will necessarily vary according to the specific problem." In The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William H. Kittell, School District of the Borough of Little Silver, 1972 S.L.D. 531-541. Evaluation of tenure charges is generally a matter of total impression, "based upon observations made over a period of time." Newark Bd. of Ed., v. Burnside, 13 N.J.A.R. 867 (October 25, 1988).

In light of the number of days Folger was absent during the school years in question, such absences, on their face, constitute excessive absenteeism. Folger was given notice of the Board's goals regarding absenteeism, and she was absent much more than the average teacher in the district. The fact that she complied with Code A-Phone procedures is not relevant to the question of whether her absences were excessive. The number of absences, and the fact that they had substantial negative impacts on her students, argue for a penalty. I am persuaded that termination is an appropriate penalty relevant to Charges one through four.

CONCLUSIONS

I CONCLUDE that Charges one through four should be affirmed and that termination is an appropriate penalty.

INEFFICIENCY

Folger argues that Charges five through thirteen in effect constitute charges of inefficiency and should be dismissed because petitioner did not comply with pertinent procedural requirements. I am not persuaded by that argument.

If a tenure charge is one of inefficiency, prior to making a determination regarding certification, a local board of education must provide the employee a written notice of the alleged inefficiency, specifying the nature thereof, and allow at least 90 days in which to correct and overcome the inefficiency. N.J.A.C. 18A:6-11. Upon receipt of the charge and the written statement of evidence, the board shall cause copies to be transmitted to the employee within three working days. The employee must be informed, in writing, that unless the inefficiencies are corrected within the minimal 90-day period, or any longer period provided by the board, the board intends to certify the charge to the Commissioner. At the same time, the board shall direct that there be a modification of the pertinent PIP to assure that it addresses the specific charges of inefficiency and comports with the timelines established for correction. N.J.A.C. 6:24-5.1(c)2-4.[3]

Upon completion of the period for improvement, the individuals responsible for bringing the charges to the attention of the board shall notify the board, in writing, of [3] Every local board of education is required to adopt policies and procedures requiring the annual evaluation of all tenured teaching staff members by appropriately certified personnel. N.J.A.C. 6:3-4.3(a). An annual summary conference between supervisors and teaching staff members shall be held before a written performance report is filed. Id. at § (e). The resulting annual written performance report shall include an Individual Professional Improvement Plan developed by the supervisor and the teaching staff member. Id. at § (f).

what charges, if any, have not been corrected. The board of education shall thereafter notify the affected employee, in writing, that all of the inefficiencies have been corrected or, alternatively, which have not been corrected. Such notification shall be provided within 30 calendar days from the expiration of the improvement period. If certain charges have not been corrected, the employee shall have an opportunity to respond within 15 days of receipt of the notification of inefficiency by filing a statement of evidence under oath in opposition to the charges. The board of education shall thereafter determine, within 45 days, whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges and that such charges, if credited, are sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction in salary. If the board so finds, it shall file the written charges and the required certificate of determination with the Commissioner, in addition to proof of service upon the employee. Id. at §§ 5.9.

The intent of the pertinent regulations is to promote correction of inefficiencies pursuant to carefully supervised specific guidelines established at the time a teacher has been formally apprised of the nature of inefficiencies. In The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Julio Triana, School District of the City of East Orange, 1987 S.L.D. 1691-1697. A failure to adhere to the regulations constitutes a "flaw fatal" to tenure charges of inefficiency, requiring dismissal. Id. at 1696.

As petitioner argues, the types of charges pertinent to the instant matter have not been deemed to constitute charges of inefficiency. The substantive merits of the tenure charges are addressed. (Initial Brief, pp. 45-54.)

Charge 5

This charge alleges that during the 1998-99 school year, Folger failed to follow a specific administrative directive requiring her to inform her principal of a scheduled attendance at a mandatory professional day and that such conduct constitutes unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and/or just cause for dismissal. Charge 5 references a memorandum from Johnson dated November 11, 1998.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

During the 1998-99 school year, Clark arranged for Folger to take a professional day so that respondent could observe another special education teacher, Sharon Fink (Fink), at the Board's Cleveland School (Cleveland). Clark had arranged the observation in efforts to provide assistance to Folger regarding concerns that Johnson, as well as others, had regarding Folger "relevant to working with her groups, writing her lesson plans, and managing her classroom relevant to the instructional level the students were to be instructed on . . ." (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 122.)

Clark and Johnson had previously discussed the matter with Folger on October 7, 1998. Johnson gave Folger a memorandum on or about October 7, 1998, apparently telling respondent that she should contact Blanton regarding the specific date. Folger subsequently spoke with Fink, and the two eventually agreed upon a date.

Folger went to Cleveland on October 19, 1998 to observe Fink. On that day, Johnson received communications, via the Code-A-Phone system, indicating that Folger was not at Park Avenue because of a "professional day, a conference day, or something . . ." (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 121, & Exh. J-24.) Folger had not previously communicated directly with Johnson regarding the scheduled day.

Johnson subsequently sent Folger a memorandum dated November 11, 1998, stating that respondent had not followed a "directive" of October 7, 1998 to advise Johnson of the scheduled professional day prior to attending. Johnson concluded that she continued ". . . to be concerned regarding your lack of professional responsibilities." (Exh. J-24.)

Folger responded by memorandum dated November 16, 1998. Respondent noted that she had been contacted by telephone by Clark regarding observing Fink, that Clark had told Folger to advise Clark when a day had been chosen, that respondent made the arrangements with Fink for October 19, and that she called Clark's office and left a message to that effect. Folger also noted that she had adhered to the "normal procedure" of arranging for a substitute by communicating with Blanton, stating that she had not informed Blanton that she would be attending a conference, but had told her it would be a professional day. (Exh. J-25.)

DISCUSSION

A failure to follow administrative directives constitutes insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of April Renee Bradley, Bd. of Ed. of the City of Newark, 1990 S.L.D. 790, aff'd. St. Bd. of Ed., 1991 S.L.D. 2521, (Bradley).

Folger testified that it was not her understanding that she was to notify Johnson of the specific date on which she would be observing Fink prior to doing so. Folger noted that Johnson, as well as Clark, were aware that she would be observing Fink and that respondent had never observed another teacher employed by the Board prior to that time. Johnson testified that she sent respondent a memorandum dated October 7, 1998, specifically instructing Folger to notify the principal, in advance, regarding the day on which respondent would be observing Fink.

In light of the conflicting testimony, I am persuaded that the Board has not met its burden of proof.[4] In addition, there is nothing in the record to indicate that respondent intentionally failed to follow a directive of Johnson. Her testimony that she did not believe she was required to notify Johnson in advance of the date in question was not discredited. The fact that she followed the proper procedures regarding the Phone-A-Code system supports her testimony.

[4] In its initial brief, respondent noted that the October 7, 1998 memorandum was not produced during the hearings nor moved into evidence. Petitioner indicated in its reply brief that that document was inadvertently omitted, noting the large amount of documents moved into evidence, and offered to provide a copy, if requested by this Judge. This Judge did not do so. It is noted that stringent time limits are placed upon tenure cases pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.1.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that the Board has not proven, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, Charge 5.

Charge 6

This charge asserts that during the 1998-99 school year, Folger failed to follow an administrative directive from Johnson, dated November 11, 1998, requiring all staff members to submit lesson plans in a timely manner and that such failure constituted unbecoming conduct, insubordination and/or other just cause for dismissal. As a review of the evidence demonstrates, this charge relates to an incident occurring on November 9, 1998.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

Consistent with her general practice, Johnson requires that lesson plans are "due" to her every Monday by 9:00 a.m. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 87.) Johnson discussed that requirement, as well as others, during a general staff meeting on or about September 1, 1998. Johnson is a "structured person", who advises her staff members every school year of her "expectations".

Johnson distributed a detailed agenda at the September 1998 meeting, which provided, in part, that lesson plans were to be submitted to her every Monday, by 9:00 a.m., commencing on October 5, 1998. That requirement is part of Johnson's "management system", i.e., her efforts "to stay on top of what's going on relevant to an instruction of student." (Id. at 88.) The agenda was discussed at the meeting.

Johnson did not receive Folger's lesson plan on November 9, 1998, a Monday, until 12:30 p.m. Folger " . . . had just forgotten to put" her lesson plan on the "desk downstairs", going directly upstairs to her classroom. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 189.) Johnson contacted respondent via the intercom communications system, "to remind her that her lesson plans were due." (Id. at 88.) Respondent was in a computer lab with her class when Johnson called.

Johnson sent Folger a memorandum dated November 11, 1998 regarding the matter. Folger responded by memorandum dated November 16, 1998. Folger noted that her class did not return from the lab to the classroom until subsequent to 11:00 a.m.; that her classroom aide was not available to take the lesson plan to the office; and that because Folger had no breaks on Monday, her lunch period was the first opportunity she had to go to the office, which she did at that time, bringing the lesson plan.

DISCUSSION

As noted hereinabove, failure to follow a directive can constitute insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct by a teacher. Bradley, supra. More specifically, a failure to timely file required documents constitutes insubordination. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ronald Richardson, OAL Dkt. EDU 5560-97, June 1, 1998, aff'd., Commissioner of Ed., July 15, 1998, aff'd. State Bd. of Ed., January 6, 1999.[5]

Folger testified that when Johnson contacted her via the intercom system, the lesson plan was in her locked classroom. Respondent noted that her aide was not present at the time and that she did not want to send a student with keys to unlock the classroom, locate the plans, and take them to Johnson. She therefore waited until she was free, at 12:30 p.m., to take the lesson plans to the office, which she did. Johnson testified that she contacted respondent at 9:00 a.m. and that respondent indicated she would bring the lesson plans to the principal as soon as possible.

I am persuaded that the Board has not proven Charge 6. Folger was candid in her testimony that she neglected to deliver the lesson plan to the principal's office. The record does not support a conclusion that her failure to do so was the result of an intentional determination to not comply with Johnson's directives, which had been communicated during the general meeting held in September, nor that respondent intentionally failed to immediately bring the lesson plan to the principal's office after being contacted by Johnson. Folger's testimony regarding the reasons why she did not do so was not discredited. Although not determinative, respondent's reliance upon the fact that there was no evidence indicating she had ever failed to timely provide a lesson plan prior to November 9, 1998, nor subsequent thereto, has merit, especially regarding the charge that her failure to do so on the date in question constituted unbecoming conduct. Petitioner's argument that Folger gave Johnson the impression she would immediately provide the lesson plan, when contacted by Johnson, is not supported in the record.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that the Board has not proven Charge 6 by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

Charge 7

Charge 7 alleges that during the 1998-99 school year, Folger abandoned her classroom to attend an education workshop without prior authorization from her principal and, in addition, failed to follow a specific administrative directive by ignoring the principal's request to immediately return from the workshop to her classroom. Charge 7 references a November 11, 1998 memorandum from Johnson and states that the conduct in question constituted insubordination and/or other just cause for dismissal.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

At a meeting on or about October 5, 1998, attended by Johnson, Clark, and respondent, Folger voiced concerns that "special education" had not been given the same "resources" that "regular classrooms" had, including attendance at various workshops, more specifically, curriculum workshops. (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 142.)

By memorandum of October 20, 1998 to "Elementary Principals", Mildred Cook (Cook), an employee in the Board's Department of Curriculum Testing, advised of a "Staff Development Session" to be conducted from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on November 4, 1998 at the Board's Colgate board room (Colgate). Colgate was the central administrative office at the time. Cook advised that the principals should contact her office by October 30, 1998 to confirm attendance by teachers.

The memorandum noted, in part, that a " . . . district-wide staff development session for Grade 4 regular teachers and special education resource center teachers" had been scheduled and that it was a "mandated workshop" which "staff were required to attend." However, in another section of the memorandum, Cook indicated that "Grade 4 Teachers, Special Education Teachers", were to attend the conference. (Exh. J-10, p. 1.) The memorandum indicated, on its face, that Clark, Cohn and "Grade 4 and Special Ed Teachers", as well as certain other individuals, had been sent copies. (Exh. J-10.) Folger was not listed as one of those individuals. Folger was not a Grade 4 "regular" teacher at the time, nor a special education resource center teacher. (Id. at 120.)

Folger received the memorandum in her school mailbox. It was in an envelope addressed to her.

Folger did not report to Park Avenue on November 4, 1998, but went to the conference at Colgate. Folger called Code-A-Phone regarding her attendance. She had also previously called Cook's office, leaving her name, with an indication that she would be attending the conference. The other "self-contained special education teachers" at Park Avenue did not attend the workshop. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 211). Folger was required to be in school at 8:15 a.m.

Johnson was advised, via the Code-A-Phone system, that Folger was at a "conference" and that a substitute for respondent's class was not available. Johnson "couldn't imagine where she was" because she had not previously approved a conference for that day for Folger. Aware that a workshop was being conducted at Colgate, "which should not have included Mrs. Folger," Johnson immediately called Colgate, between 8:15 and 8:30 a.m., and asked a secretary to ascertain if respondent were present. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 116.) The secretary did so, and advised Johnson that Folger was present.

Johnson then spoke to Folger, inquiring why respondent was at Colgate, noting that respondent's classroom was "uncovered" and that Folger had not previously been approved to attend the workshop. Folger responded that Clark had given her a "special invitation". (Id. at 117.)

Johnson thereafter called Clark, "a little after 9:00 a.m." (Id. at 18.) Clark indicated that she had no knowledge of Folger being invited by her to attend the workshop and that she would tell Folger to return to Park Avenue.

Clark informed Folger that she had not sent an "invitation" to respondent and that Folger did not have Clark's "approval" to attend the workshop. (Tr., 10/26/99.) Folger inquired what she should do, and Clark responded that respondent should return to Park Avenue. Folger advised Clark that respondent had to go home to obtain her brace for her right knee and that she would thereafter return to Park Avenue. She had not worn it to the workshop, which was conducted in a room on the first floor of Colgate.

Folger returned to Park Avenue at approximately 11:06 a.m. Folger's class had been "split" among other special education teachers." (Id. at 151.) She spoke to Dreher, who gave her a copy of a list of the classes among whom Folger's class had been divided. Folger went upstairs to retrieve her students, and Johnson announced over the public address system that all of respondent's students should go to her class. Respondent taught her class the rest of the day.

At the time, Folger resided in Mount Tabor, New Jersey. It takes approximately four minutes to travel between Colgate and Park Avenue by automobile.

There were a total of four self-contained special education classes at Park Avenue at the time. Dividing a class among special education teachers presents "a problem" because other teachers are not expecting the students in question, had no plans "regarding them" and, " . . . trying to get some materials together for those students to make sure they have a productive day, it – it's a problem." (Id. at 214.)

Depending on the circumstances, it may not be possible to divide a special education class among the other special education classes, in which situation students would be divided among a "split list". Folger's "split list" at the time in question included other special education classes as well as "regular classrooms". (Id. at 214.) Folger's aide could arrange for the "splitting", consistent with general practices. (Id. at 151.)

Johnson communicated with Folger regarding the matter by memorandum dated November 4, 1998. After reciting the events which had occurred, Johnson concluded that respondent's " . . . behavior was totally unsatisfactory." (Exh. J-16.)

Clark sent Johnson a memorandum dated November 5, 1998. Clark noted, in part, that she had been unaware that Folger was attending the conference; that she had not sent Folger any information regarding the workshop, nor had she discussed it with her; and that she had previously given respondent information regarding a conference regarding dyslexia, scheduled for October 23 and 24, but that respondent " . . . did not apply to attend." (Exh. J-17.)

Folger sent Johnson a memorandum dated November 9, 1998. Folger stated, in part, that she had received a copy of the notice regarding the November 4, 1998 workshop "addressed to me personally"; referencing the October 5, 1998 meeting, that she believed Clark had sent her the notice "specifically to remedy that situation"; that self-contained special education teachers from all other schools in the District were present, including Fink; that Folger had told Clark that respondent would have to return home to secure her leg brace; and that Johnson did not request that Folger speak with the principal at any time on November 4, 1998 after respondent returned to Park Avenue. (Exh. J-20.)

A teacher scheduled to attend a workshop or conference, even if the pertinent principal is aware of the matter, is required to contact the Code-A-Phone system because that is the method pursuant to which substitute teachers are provided.

DISCUSSION

Willful disobedience of a substantive nature by a tenured teacher towards a supervisor constitutes insubordination. Board of Ed. of the Borough of Edgewater v. Scarpignato, 1983 S.L.D. 311, 317, aff'd., State Board of Ed. 1983 S.L.D. 338, aff'd., App. Div. 1984 S.L.D. 2013 (Scarpignato). See also, Bradley, supra.

Johnson testified that she spoke to respondent at approximately 9:00 a.m., on November 4, 1998, directing Folger to return to Park Avenue, but that Folger did not do so until after 11:00 a.m. Johnson also testified that after speaking to Clark, she again called Folger, at Colgate, at approximately 9:15 a.m., directing respondent to return to Park Avenue immediately, but that respondent did not do so until 11:06 a.m. As found, Colgate and Park Avenue are located approximately four miles apart when traveling by automobile.

On cross-examination, Johnson testified that the October 20, 1998 memorandum "could have been circulated to special education teachers generally." (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 149.) She also testified on cross-examination that she could not recollect whether Clark had told her, on November 4, 1998, that Folger had told Clark that respondent had to go home prior to returning to Park Avenue.

Folger testified that the meeting in question commenced at 8:30 a.m. and that she had been in attendance approximately 15 to 20 minutes when she was asked to call Johnson. Approximately one-half hour later, Clark spoke with respondent. Folger also testified that when told to return to Park Avenue by Clark, she told Clark that she had to first go home to obtain her brace and that she would thereafter return to Park Avenue. Folger stated that her physician had informed her she needed to wear the right knee brace when traversing stairs or standing on her feet all day. She noted, as reflected in the above findings of fact, that the meeting was in a room on the first floor of Colgate. Respondent testified, in addition, that it took her approximately 20 to 25 minutes to travel from Colgate to her home, and that she left Colgate at approximately 9:30 or 9:45 a.m., changed into her brace, and returned to Park Avenue.

Folger testified on cross-examination that there are six or seven stairs to the outside entrance of Colgate and that she knew, prior to attending the meeting, that it would be conducted on the first floor of the building. She also stated that she did not bring her knee brace because she would not have to traverse "continuous stairs," as she usually did at Park Avenue, some "20 times a day," and that she would be seated throughout the day. (Tr., 11/4/99, p. 29.)

I am persuaded that petitioner has not proven this charge. As reflected in the above findings of fact, respondent's testimony that she received a copy of the October 20, 1998 memorandum in an envelope addressed to her, that she had previously expressed concerns to Clark and Johnson regarding the failure of special education teachers to be included in such conferences, and that she contacted Cook's office to advise that she would be attending was not discredited.

The Board's argument that respondent's testimony to the effect that she received a "special" invitation from Cook to attend the conference is contradictory with her position that the memorandum in question is ambiguous on its face has merit. However, the fact that Folger contacted Cook's office regarding her attendance at the conference and also followed the Phone-A-Code procedure regarding such lends credence to her testimony. In addition, as respondent argues, the October 20 memorandum is ambiguous on its face. The fact that none of the other recourse room teachers at Park Avenue attended the meeting does not demonstrate that respondent's attendance constituted an abandonment of her position. The record does not address the question of who sent the memorandum to respondent. However, in light of the fact that the burden of proof is on the Board, I am persuaded that the Board has not proven that respondent's attendance at the conference constituted unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and/or other just cause for discipline.

I am also persuaded that the Board has not proven that portion of Charge 7 regarding a failure by Folger to immediately return to Park Avenue when directed to do so. Respondent's testimony regarding why she did not wear her right knee brace to the conference, why she needed to return home to obtain it prior to returning to Park Avenue, and her communications in that respect with Clark was not discredited. Petitioner's reliance on the fact that Folger did not tell Johnson that respondent had to first return home has some merit, but does not support a conclusion that respondent intentionally failed to comply with a directive of Johnson. The Board argues that based upon respondent's own testimony, Folger should have returned to Park Avenue no later than 10:45 a.m. but did not do so, as found hereinabove, until 11:06 a.m. In light of the record regarding Charge 7, I am persuaded that that difference in time is de minimus.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not proven, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, Charge 7.

Charge 8

Charge 8, referencing a memorandum from Johnson dated October 28, 1998, avers that during the 1998-1990 school year, respondent failed to follow a specific administrative directive requiring all teachers to submit a list of core curriculum needs to the Intermediate Team Leader (ITC) and that such conduct constituted insubordination and/or just cause for dismissal.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

Intermediate teachers at Park Avenue teach grades 4, 5, and 7. Folger is an intermediate teacher. Carole Brotspie (Brotspie) is Park Avenue's ITL, a teacher who assists intermediate teachers and is responsible for insuring that all book orders are filled. Teachers are required to submit their book orders to Brotspie.

When respondent returned to work in September 1998, her classroom had been "stripped" of all textbooks that she generally used, a procedure which did not occur on an annual basis in special education classes. Folger therefore went to the "basement" and "scrounged up whatever" she could find. (Tr., 10/26/99, pp. 127-128.)

Folger submitted a book request, dated September 8, 1998, requesting six books for each grade level for grades second, third, and fourth. In addition, she requested a teacher's addition for each text, which is generally in the form of a loose-leaf binder. She also indicated on the order form that she had not yet received individual education plans (IEPs) for all students.

At some point, Folger subsequently requested ten books for each of grade levels 2, 3, and 4. At the time Folger had nine students in her class, who were at various grade levels. To clarify the situation, Brotspie asked Folger to provide a list identifying needs relevant to respondent's students. Because Folger was soon "out", the situation was rectified relevant to the individual who subsequently taught her class. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 109.)

Johnson communicated with Folger regarding the matter by memorandum dated October 28, 1998. Johnson noted that teachers were instructed to submit a list of core curriculum needs to Brotspie in September 1998; that Brotspie had indicated Folger did not do so; that during the prior week, Mr. King (King), the Board's Mathematics supervisor, indicated he had met with respondent; that King provided a list of mathematical materials to Johnson which Folger did not have, requesting that Johnson provide them; that Johnson asked Brotspie to obtain a list from Folger; and that Brotspie indicated that she had requested such but had not received a list.

Folger responded to Johnson by memorandum dated November 9, 1998, indicating that she had submitted a list of core curriculum needs to Brotspie on September 8 and attaching a copy of that list. Folger also specified the materials that were sent to her classroom. Folger stated that she had been told by Brotspie at the time in question that those were all "core materials that were available" and that she had not received any other materials to date. Additionally, Folger stated that she had requested King's assistance, that he had provided information regarding "the entire scope of the series," and that she had never been aware of such because "special education" has never been permitted to attend core curriculum workshops. (Ex. J-14)

Brotspie sent Johnson a note dated November 19, 1998. Brotspie noted that Folger was given the opportunity to order books in September 1998; respondent requested ten each for grade levels 2, 3 and 4; Brotspie could not "accommodate" ten books at each level and therefore sent respondent four each for each level; Brotspie received a memorandum in October from Johnson, indicating that Folger needed mathematics material; Brotspie thereafter asked Folger to send her a list of her needs, which respondent did not do; on November 10, Folger advised Brotspie that the latter had never sent her needed books and Brotspie indicated that she had never received a list; Brotspie "personally inventoried" Folger's books; respondent indicated she needed ten of each book at grade levels 3, 4, and 5 for Mathematics; and because respondent no longer needed grade 2 materials for Reading, "according to the group she set up," Brotspie removed the grade 2 Reading materials. (Exh. J-52.)

Subsequent to receipt of Brotspie's note, Johnson spoke with King, who indicated that respondent had advised him that she had not received needed Mathematics materials but that Folger had never given such a request to Brotspie.

DISCUSSION

Johnson testified that personnel attempted to obtain a list of needs "relevant" to the instructional levels of Folger students. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 109.) She noted in that respect that respondent did not have ten students in her class, ". . . much less ten working on any one grade level." She also testified that when Brotspie returned to Folger to ask for a list identifying the latter's needs relevant to her current students, Brotspie did not obtain a response. (Ibid.) However, Johnson did not reference how she had obtained such information, nor the specific or approximate dates of any such communications, and Folger requested specific texts, in September and subsequently, consistent with the Board's practices.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that petitioner did not prove Charge 8 by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

CHARGE 9

Charge 9, referencing a memorandum dated September 2, 1998 from Johnson, asserts that Folger failed to follow specific administrative directives requiring all teachers to attend a mandatory staff meeting and that such conduct constitutes insubordination and/or just cause for dismissal. The meeting in question occurred on September 2, 1998.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

Room 116 was Folger's classroom. At the beginning of the 1998-99 school year, a newly-hired special education teacher, Robin Gumkowski (Gumkowski), was assigned to Park Avenue "for about a day," Gumkowski was assigned to Room 116, an assignment which had been made by Clark. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 141.)

On the morning of September 1, 1998, the first day of school, all teachers in the district attended a meeting with Salley at Orange Middle. Upon returning to Park Avenue, Johnson told Folger to call Clark, which respondent did. Clark called Folger the next day.

A staff development meeting, a district-wide meeting, was scheduled for September 2, 1998, a Wednesday, at Park Avenue. Such meetings focus on preparing for the new school year and ensuring that all teachers receive instructions relevant to the Board's "direction" for the school year. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 112.) An announcement regarding the meeting was made over the intercom system on September 1, 1998. The intercom system, which operates throughout the building, including the playground, is "very loud." (Ibid.) The meeting on September 2 lasted all day; there was a recess for lunch.

Johnson "took attendance" at the meeting and realized that Folger was not present. (Id. at 11). Johnson subsequently inquired if respondent were present in school and was told that she was. Johnson then went "upstairs" and "found" Folger in room 16. (Id. at 111.) Johnson inquired why Folger was not at the meeting, referencing four announcements over the intercom. Respondent, at "first", stated that she did not hear the announcements because of an ear infection. (Id. at 112.) Folger also indicated to Johnson that she was packing her materials in Room 116 and that Johnson had told her to do so.

Johnson sent Folger a memorandum on or about September 2, 1998, concluding, after reciting the events occurring that day, that Folger's behavior was "totally unsatisfactory." (Exh. J-5).

Folger responded by memorandum dated September 11, 1998. Respondent stated that on September 1, 1998, Johnson had informed her that her teaching assignment at Park Avenue had been changed, effective August 31, and that respondent should pack her "personal possessions" in Room 116; that Folger commenced doing so the morning of September 2, 1998; that Johnson came to Room 116 at 9:15 a.m., inquiring regarding Folger's absence at the staff meeting; that Folger "reminded" her that she had been directed to pack her belongings; that Johnson indicated Folger should do both; and that respondent attended the staff meeting the remainder of the day, as well as the next day, September 3. (Exh. J-7.) Folger concluded that she had followed Johnson's directives at all times.

Respondent subsequently remained at Park Avenue, assigned to Room 16. Gumkowski was transferred to another school. Johnson does not have authority to transfer teachers.

DISCUSSION

A failure to attend a mandatory meeting constitutes insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of John Birch, School District of the Borough of West Long Branch, 1978 S.L.D. 63. Scarpignato, supra.

Johnson testified that when she asked Folger why respondent was not at the meeting on September 2, 1998, respondent "first" indicated that she did not hear the announcements regarding the meeting, possibly because of an ear infection. However, Johnson did not testify regarding any other explanations offered by respondent. Johnson also testified that there could not have been a "misunderstanding." (Tr. 10/25/99, p. 112.)

Folger testified that on September 1, 1998, she attended the staff meeting conducted by Salley. Folger also stated that upon returning to Park Avenue that day, Johnson told her to call Clark, because respondent's "position was being changed," i.e., she was being transferred to Orange Middle. (Tr. 10/26/99, p. 119.) Folger recollected that both Johnson and Clark had told her that. Folger also stated that when she called Clark, the latter told her that she "wanted to transfer me to the Orange Middle School."

Folger indicated that "it was really very short notice and that I had all my stuff at the Middle. . . at Park Avenue School." Clark then said that "she would think about it." (Id. at 120.) At that point, Folger stated that if Clark wanted to transfer respondent, she "would, of course, go." (Ibid.) Subsequent to speaking with Clark, respondent went to her classroom, room 116, and started organizing materials and looking for boxes in which to pack them. Gumkowski was present organizing the room, apparently for herself. Folger noted that Gumkowski advised respondent that Gumkowski had been assigned to room 116.

Respondent also testified that Clark called her the next day, stating that "they still wanted to transfer me to the Middle School, but that I would have to write a letter requesting the transfer." (Id. at 121.) Respondent replied that because she did not want to transfer, she would not write a letter requesting such, "but that they could transfer me if they wanted to." (Ibid.)

Although, as petitioner argues, respondent's testimony regarding why she did not initially attend the meeting in question was somewhat contradictory, I am persuaded that the Board has not proven this charge by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Folger testified that she told Johnson, when questioned regarding her non-appearance at the meeting, that she believed she was instructed to pack her belongings in her classroom because of an imminent transfer and that when further questioned by Johnson, she also told the principal that she did not hear announcements regarding the meeting because of an ear infection. The Board's reliance, in part, on Johnson's testimony that she did not have the authority to transfer Folger is not determinative. Folger's testimony was not discredited. I am persuaded that the Board has not proven a willful defiance of a directive by Johnson. The fact that Folger attended most of the meeting, missing approximately 45 minutes, although not conclusive, also lends support to such a conclusion.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that the Board did not prove, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, Charge 9.

CHARGE 10

Charge 10 alleges that during the 1998-99 school year, Folger failed to follow an administrative directive requiring all teachers to keep beepers and cellular telephones out of sight and to ensure that such were disengaged during the instructional day and that such noncompliance constitutes insubordination and/or other just cause for dismissal. The charge references a memorandum dated November 18, 1998.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

During the staff meeting conducted by Johnson in September 1998, the principal told the teachers at Park Avenue that they should not have cell phones or beepers "going off during the instructional day." Johnson noted that students were not allowed to do so and that staff members were "role models". (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 113.) In addition, in Johnson's view, beepers and cell phones operating throughout the day are a "problem." It has been a longstanding practice at Park Avenue that if a telephone communication to the office references an emergency, the teacher in question is advised immediately; "beepers and cell phones are relatively new". (Id. at 115.)

Folger and Johnson met in conference on October 13, 1998. During the meeting, Johnson heard a noise and concluded that a "beeper went off" on Folger. Respondent "reached down and she did something by her waist." Folger appeared to reach down towards "something under clothing". (Id. at 145). Johnson did not see any device. (Id. at 114.) Johnson reminded respondent, "in an informal way", that teachers were not to have beepers "going off". (Id. at 113.)

Johnson subsequently gave Folger a handwritten note, dated October 13, 1998, which read as follows:

> During our conference, your beeper went off, you are reminded to make sure it is not on during the instructional day. Teachers are role models.

Johnson met with Folger, Clark, and Wiggins on November 18, 1998. During the meeting, Johnson saw "something" on respondent's waist and heard a "beep, beep" noise. (Tr., 10/25/99 p. 145). Johnson asked: "Is that your beeper?" (Id. at 147). Respondent "reached down" and said that her daughter was "sick in the process reaching down to turn it off." (Id. at 114.) Respondent did not leave school early that day.

Johnson subsequently sent Folger a memorandum dated November 18, 1999, referencing the September 2, 1998 meeting, the occurrence on October 13, 1998, and the conference held on November 18, 1998. She concluded: "my concerns continue to escalate. You continue to disregard directives." (Exh. J-28.)

DISCUSSION

There is no dispute that Johnson communicated to teachers during the general meeting in September 1998 that cell phones and beepers should not be utilized during the instructional day. I found Johnson's testimony regarding this charge more credible than that of respondent.

Johnson was extremely specific in her testimony, with excellent recall, and she was not discredited on cross-examination. Johnson's statements to Folger, respondent's responses thereto, and Folger's physical gestures during the meetings in October and November 1998 support a determination that respondent had a beeper on her person, which was activated during those meetings. In addition, during cross-examination of Johnson, respondent's counsel activated what was described as a micro-cassette recorder. Johnson testified that the noise emanating from that device was not the noise she heard during the meetings in question and that the recorder was not the same size as the device she observed respondent touch at those meetings. Johnson's testimony that the noise emanating from the recorder was not a beeping noise was an accurate one.

The Board argues that, even assuming the noise Johnson heard during the meetings in question were caused by a micro cassette-recorder, secretly taping communications with a supervisor constitutes insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct. I am not persuaded by that argument. Respondent was not charged with such a violation, and petitioner cites no legal authority for its conclusion.

Respondent's failure to comply with Folger's directive relevant to beepers, subsequent to being given clear notice of such, constitutes insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct. See, Bradley, supra. This is especially so in light of the fact that respondent violated that directive on two occasions. Teachers " . . . teach, inform and mold habits and attitudes, and influence the opinions of their pupils. Pupils learn, therefore, not only what they are taught by the teacher, but what they see, hear, experience and learn about the teacher." In The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ernest Tordo, School District of the Township of Jackson, 1974 S.L.D. 97,98-99.

However, Folger was deemed to be an effective teacher, when present, as evidenced by the pertinent observations and PIPs, and she committed no other infractions, except regarding her attendance. I am therefore persuaded that the withholding of an increment, not termination, is an appropriate penalty regarding Charge 10.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has proven Charge 10 by a preponderance of the credible evidence and that the withholding of an increment is an appropriate penalty.

CHARGE 11

This charge alleges that during the 1997-98 school year, Folger failed to follow a specific administrative directive by her continued failure to utilize respondent's adopted texts and that such failure adversely affected the instruction provided her students and constitutes unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal. Charge 11 references a memorandum from Johnson dated December 13, 1997.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional facts.

Lesson plans ". . . indicate what's being taught . . . what should be taught. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 178.) Upon submission of lesson plans by teachers each Monday, Johnson reviews them. If everything is "fine" in a lesson plan book, she dates and initials it. If there are "questions or needs to be addressed," Johnson writes comments on the front page of the lesson plan book and dates and initials it. (Id. at 92.) Her expectation is that any such comments will be addressed by the next submission.

Johnson wrote a comment, on October 22, 1998, on Folger's lesson plan book for the 1998-99 school year, which comment stated, in part, that respondent should "Use Core Curriculum Material". (Id. at 96 & Exh. J-38, p. 1.) That comment meant that respondent should utilize materials adopted by the district.

In written responses on the lesson plan book to Johnson's comments of October 22, 1998, Folger referenced a schedule in the lesson plan which, on its face, listed text-books. The "Holt Mathematics Book" and "Scott Foresman" were referenced for Mathematics; "HBJ Treasury of Literature" and the "Boning Specific Skills Series" for Reading; "Silver Burdett & Ginn New Jersey, Yesterday and Today" and McMillan-McGraw Hill Social Studies" for Social Studies; and "Silver Burdett & Ginn Science Discovery Works", for Science. (Exh. J-38, p. 5.) The same schedule was referenced regarding October 28, 1998 comments of Johnson, which stated in part:

> HBJ Reading, Scott, Foresman Math Period, Silver Burdett Science, Macmillan-McGraw Hill Social Studies must be taught-(District's adopted texts).

"HBJ" refers to the publisher of the Reading series that was utilized by respondent at the time. "Scott Foresman" was the publisher of the Mathematics series utilized by the Board; and "Silver Burdett", of the science series utilized by respondent. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 97.) The Holt Mathematics book referenced in respondent's lesson plan was not the Mathematics book adopted by respondent. The Scott Foresman Mathematics Book and the HBJ Treasury of Literature were the Board's approved Reading material for Mathematics and Reading, respectively; and Silver Burdett was the approved series for Social Studies and McMillan McGraw-Hill, for Social Studies. Silver Burdett was the approved text for Science. The Holt Mathematics Book could have been used as a "supplemental." (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 181.) It was therefore proper for Folger to list the Holt Book in her lesson plan.

In her memorandum of October 28, 1998 to Folger regarding "core curriculum materials", Johnson concluded as follows:

> I continue to be concerned. All students are to be instructed using the District's adopted text/materials. You continue not to comply. This issue was addressed last year.
> [Exh. J-11.]

On or about December 3, 1997, Johnson went to respondent's classroom to assist a substitute teacher who had been assigned to the class. When the principal asked students to take their books out so she could determine which ones they had, the only books the students had were "Holt Math Books"; "Holt," refers to the publisher. The Holt Mathematics books were not the adopted series of respondent. The Board's approved Mathematics series was "Scott-Foresman." (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 89, & Exh. J-1, p. 103.)

Johnson wrote Folger a memorandum, dated December 3, 1997, addressing "Curriculum Expectations". Johnson noted, in part, what had transpired on December 3, 1997; that although it was acceptable to use Holt as a "supplement", all students should have the Board's adopted series in all subject areas; that Reading, Social Studies, and Science books were not available and Johnson did not observe any workbooks or spelling books; and that Johnson had subsequently arranged for text-books to be delivered to Folger's classroom. The memorandum also stated that respondent was ". . . expected to teach according to District guidelines. You are to use the district's adopted text." Johnson concluded that she was ". . . very, very concerned. This is totally unacceptable." (Exh. J-1.)

Johnson subsequently went to respondent's classroom on or about December 10, 1997 to assist an assigned substitute teacher. The principal sent respondent a memorandum, later that day, addressing "Students' Instructional Levels/Grouping". which stated, in part, that it was ". . . accepted that all students in the Orange School District receive instruction via the District's adopted text in all subject areas." (Exh. J-35.

Respondent's lesson plan for the week of November 16, 1997, regarding Language Arts included references to "HBJ Vocabulary Words", as well as another text. (Exh. J-38, p. 9.) The lesson plan relevant to Mathematics referenced "Applying Math 3" and "Class Exploring Math 4". (Id. at p. 10.) The lesson plan pertinent to Social Studies referenced "McMillan-McGraw/Hill social studies books," and "New Jersey Yesterday and Today". The McGraw-Hill/McMillan text was the approved series for Social Studies. (Exh. J-38, p. 11.) The lesson plans for Science that week referenced "Silver Burdett Ginn Science Discovery Works," the approved series for Science." (Ibid.)

Respondent generally receives internal memoranda in envelopes placed in her "mailbox" at school. Folger, who was absent during the time in question, did not retrieve any mail from her school mailbox subsequent to December 2, 1997. Apparently because of her absences, respondent did not receive Johnson's memorandum of December 3, 1997 until approximately April or May 1998; she received it at home.

Folgers' lesson plan for the week of January 9, 1998 regarding Language Arts referenced, in part, an "HBJ story." (Id. at 182 & Exh. J-38, p. 7.) Language Arts is incorporated in "Reading", and the Holt book was the approved Board series for Reading. (Ibid). Respondent's lesson plan for Mathematics for the same week referenced "Exploring Math 3" and "Exploring Math 4." There were different texts in the Mathematics series applicable to each grade level. Folger's class included students at different instructional levels. The "Exploring Mathematics" text generally was the series approved by the Board for Mathematics. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 184 & Exh. J-38, p. 8.)

DISCUSSION

A failure by a tenured teacher to utilize a district's adopted text books constitutes insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct. See, I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Peter Loria, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 7220-96, Octo. 30, 1997, aff'd, Comm'r of Educ. Jan. 26, 1998 (Loria).

CONCLUSION

Most of the evidence presented by the Board regarding Charge 11 did not address the 1997-98 school year.

Folger testified that she utilized the district's required texts in her teaching presentations regarding Mathematics, science, social studies, and Reading. She also testified that she commenced listing the text utilized in her lesson plans after being notified of concerns by Johnson. Respondent also testified that she continued to use the Holt Mathematics texts because she did not have a sufficient number of the "Exploring Math" text, although she had "some," and was ". . . having to Xerox things." She also noted that she did not have a teacher's edition "for most of the math materials." (Tr., 10/26/99, p. 172.)

As respondent argues, the lesson plans for the period in question referenced petitioner's approved texts. In addition, the Board did not prove that Folger did not utilize the approved texts in her class presentations.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner did not prove Charge 11 by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

CHARGE 12

Charge 12 alleges that during the 1998-99 school year, Folger continuously failed to follow administrative directives. The specifications of the charge are that respondent failed to keep and submit detailed, timely, and appropriate assessments of student progress (Specification A); to complete detailed, timely, and appropriate lesson plans (Specification B); to utilize district adopted text books (Specification C); to teach according to district guidelines (Specification D); to follow proper procedures prior to being absent from class (Specification E); and to attend mandatory Turn-Key Instructional Learning Session scheduled for all teachers (Specification F.) The charge also alleges that such constitutes insubordination and/or other just cause for dismissal.

DISCUSSION

Respondent argues in her initial brief that Charge 12 should be dismissed because it is redundant, i.e., the specifications therein are reflected in the other charges, including Charge 13, which is discussed hereinafter. Although discussing the merits of Charge 12 in its initial brief, the Board states in its reply brief that this charge is "withdrawn." (Respondent's reply brief, p. 30.) Folger's characterization of Charge 12 is accurate.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that Charge 12 should be dismissed.

CHARGE 13

Charge 13 alleges that during the 1997-98 school year, Folger failed to follow a specific administrative directive by failing to group students according to their IEP levels, such failure adversely affected the instruction provided to students in her class, and such constitutes insubordination and/or other just cause for dismissal. The charge references a memorandum from Johnson dated December 3, 1997.

FINDINGS

Based upon a review of the entire record, I FIND the following to be additional FACTS.

Students classified as Special Education Students have been evaluated by the CST, which determined that they were "handicapped". Students are assigned to special education classes, i.e., "work groups," by respondent's Department of Social Services. (Tr., 10/25/99, p. 82.) Johnson is not involved in that process.

Folger's class, at the time in question, was identified as "neurologically impaired." The "State" subsequently changed the classification to "Learning Disabled". (Id. at 81-82.) Students in a self-contained class are to be instructed according to their IEPs, which identify a student's instructional level for each subject taught. Teachers' lesson plans are to address the levels of those students relevant to the IEPs. (Tr., 10/26/99.)

DISCUSSION

A failure by a tenured teacher to group and teach students according to their IEP levels constitutes insubordination and/or unbecoming conduct. Loria, supra. Bradley, supra. However, the Board did not present evidence in this respect regarding the 1997-98 school year.

Johnson testified that most problems in this respect were experienced during the 1998-99 school year. Johnson also testified regarding Folger's lesson plan for the 1998-99 school year and the comments Johnson wrote thereon regarding the perceived deficiencies relevant to the instructional groupings of students.

Folger also addressed Charge 13 in her testimony, focusing on the 1998-99 school year. In fact, Folger testified that in prior years, she had not reflected specific assignments relative to instructional groupings in her lesson plans and had never, prior to the 1998-99 school year, received any memorandum from Johnson indicating that respondent's lesson plans were not acceptable. Folger additionally testified that during the time period in question, in October 1998, Johnson did not observe respondent teaching in her classroom.

Clark and Johnson met with respondent on October 7, 1998 to discuss their concerns regarding instruction. Johnson thereafter sent Folger a memorandum dated October 28, 1998, referencing the meeting.

Clark communicated with Johnson by memorandum dated October 7, 1998, regarding telephone communications from L.C., the guardian of N.C., a student in respondent's class. Clark indicated that L.C. had requested that N.C. be re-evaluated and transferred from Folger's class because the work was "too easy". (Exh. J-8.) Clark requested that Johnson investigate the matter. The memorandum, on its face, indicates that copies were sent to Folger and Cohn.

Johnson communicated with Folger regarding the matter by memorandum dated November 3, 1998. Johnson stated, in part, that Folger had indicated three Reading groups and three Mathematic groups but that respondent's lesson plans did not reflect plans for each group; that students were on various instructional levels, which should be addressed in the lesson plans; and that the lesson plans should reflect planning and instruction relevant to IEPs. Johnson had previously "identified informally" to Folger, by notations on the front of respondent's lesson plan book, that groupings relevant to students being instructed according to IEPs were required, as well as students being taught all subject areas. (Id. at 87.) Folger responded to Johnson by memorandum dated November 3, 1998.

Folger sent Johnson a memorandum dated November 9, 1998. Respondent indicated that the October 7, 1998 meeting was to develop a PIP for the 1998-99 school year, which had not been done. Folger also stated, in part, that her students were grouped according to their levels, as indicated in her lesson plans for Reading and Mathematics. Folger concluded by requesting "examples of teachers' lesson plans in our building that are meeting your expectations..." (Ex. J-13.) The memorandum indicates, on its face, that copies were sent to Cohn and Clark.

Johnson met with Folger, Wiggins, and Clark on November 17, 1998. Respondent subsequently sent Johnson a memorandum, dated November 19, 1998, which read as follows:

> At the meeting on November 17, 1998, you agreed to provide examples of lesson plans from teachers in our building that are meeting you (sic) expectations. I would appreciate receiving some before the weekend so that I may have time to study them before working on my plans for the week of November 23-27, 1998.

The memorandum indicates that a copy was sent to Wiggins.

At some point during the 1998-99 school year, Johnson spoke to Clark regarding concerns of the principal pertinent to the grouping of students in Folger's class. Clark had indicated that she would arrange for Mrs. Walwork (Walwork), the LDTC on the CST at Park Avenue, to perform an assessment relevant to groupings of students for instruction. Clark transmitted to Folger a copy of the instructional levels identified by Walwork by memorandum dated November 23, 1998. The referenced instructional levels, which were attached to the memorandum, listed each child in Folger's class and the functional grade level of each child in Word Recognition, Passage Comprehension, Computation, and Applied Problems.

Johnson again became concerned when she visited Folger's class on December 10, 1998 to assist a substitute teacher. Johnson sent Folger a memorandum regarding the matter, dated December 10, 1998. She noted therein that the substitute teacher assigned to respondent's class had indicated that there was no indication of groupings for instruction "on the proper materials"; that a memorandum from Clark dated November 23, 1998 indicated that instruction should reflect levels indicated by Walwork's testing and IEP information; that Folger did not "follow through"; that based upon the test results submitted by Walwork and information provided by Folger to Johnson during prior meetings, the principal had established Reading and Mathematics groups and had instructional materials delivered to Folger's classroom, "according to the students' instructional levels." Johnson also referenced an attached copy of the identified groupings and levels for Reading and Mathematics instruction. Johnson concluded that she continued "to be concerned with your lack of planning and organizing for effective instruction and that respondent's students " . . . are to be instructed in groups, according to their levels." She noted, finally, that such concern had been "addressed on many previous occasions." (Exh. J-35.)

In his memorandum of November 24, 1998 to Clark, Wiggins noted that it had been agreed that Johnson would provide sample lesson plans to respondent and that respondent would include all subjects in her plans and document groups in a sequence of skills for such groups; that Folger would be provided all "necessary books" for students as well as teachers editions for the various groupings in her class; that respondent would have input into developing a PIP, which would ultimately be a "joint effort" by Folger, Johnson, and Clark; that Clark would observe Folger subsequently during the school year; and that there would be one personnel folder with information regarding respondent and that matters in the personnel folder should also be in the district office. (Ex. J-34) The memorandum on its face indicates that copies were sent to Folger and Johnson.

I am persuaded that Charge 13 should be dismissed because the Board did not introduce evidence in that respect relevant to the 1997-98 school year.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not proven Charge 13 by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

AGENCY DOCKET NO. 163-6/99

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GRACE FOLGER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF	:	DECISION
ORANGE, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

The record and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1] Respondent's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto were timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) recommended Initial Decision that she be dismissed from her teaching position as a result of the absences set forth in Charges 1 through 4. She does not dispute the number of absences but does argue, however, that nothing in the ALJ's findings establishes that any of these absences were taken without medical cause. Further, respondent contends that, by definition, excessive absences must mean absences in excess of what can be justified by medical verification. She also avers that in suspending her in June 1999, the Board never gave her a chance to prove that she was healthy.

Next, respondent takes exception to the ALJ's finding at page 40 of the Initial Decision that the State monitoring guidelines are relevant to the question of the discipline of an individual for absenteeism, arguing that those guidelines may not be used as a standard to judge her absences. With respect to this, respondent contends that the Orange School District did not exceed the State's 3.5% guideline and that a mere statistical analysis based on State guidelines may not be applied to discipline an individual without considering the legitimacy of the reasons for those absences. In support of her position, respondent cites Montville Ed. Assoc. v. Bd. of Ed., 1984 S.L.D. 550, rev'd St. Bd. of Ed. 559, rev'd Appellate Division 1985 S.L.D. 1972, cert. denied 103 N.J. 500 (1986), decision on remand St. Bd. of Ed. 1986 S.L.D. 3113.

Respondent further excepts to the finding that she committed the offense listed in Charge 10 relative to possession of a beeper. She avers, inter alia, that the proofs were purely a matter of what a single Board witness heard, but never claimed to see, versus respondent's own testimony that she did not have a beeper, but was using a tape recorder that emitted a sound when the tape ran out. Moreover, it is respondent's contention that the penalty assessed for Charge 10 is moot because no increment can be withheld unless she is reinstated and, for the record, she states that a preponderance of evidence does not exist to support the charge.

The Board avers that the ALJ applied the appropriate standard in this matter and that the recommended decision is correct. The Board further maintains that, even though respondent claims to be fit to return to work, her absences in the past have clearly had a negative impact on instruction and compromised her students' education.

As to respondent's exceptions regarding the State's 3.5% monitoring guidelines for staff absenteeism, the Board contends that the ALJ properly found them relevant to the question of a school employee's absenteeism, urging, inter alia, that the statistical analysis was not an isolated consideration in judging respondent but only one factor of many. In response to the exceptions relative to Charge 10, the Board argues that the testimony as to whether or not respondent committed the offense listed in that charge is based on a matter of credibility and reliability. It further avers that the ALJ appropriately reached a determination to sustain Charge 10, urging that the ALJ had the right to hear the evidence, weigh the evidence, and make a determination that respondent was insubordinate for her noncompliance with the school rules regarding such items as beepers and cellular telephones.

Lastly, it is the Board's position that the ALJ had the power to withhold respondent's increment even if she is terminated, arguing that the preponderance of the evidence supported Charge 10 and the ALJ was not precluded from making determinations regarding each individual charge.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner agrees with and adopts the ALJ's findings and conclusions with respect to the charges certified against respondent, except as modified below. As to respondent's exceptions with respect to the four charges involving chronic and excessive absenteeism, the Commissioner finds meritless her argument that, by definition, excessive absenteeism must mean absences in excess of what is justified by medical verification. As correctly determined by the ALJ:

> Excessive absenteeism constitutes valid grounds for dismissal of a tenured teacher even if the absences were excused or caused by legitimate reasons of personal illness or were approved leave or sick days to which the teacher was entitled and even if the teacher's classroom performance was sufficient. Kacprowicz, supra. Pellecchio, supra. In addition, chronic or excessive absenteeism may be found to warrant discipline, including dismissal, even when the individual was entitled to days off pursuant to a contract. Rucker. (Initial Decision at 40)

Likewise, the Commissioner is in full agreement with the ALJ's determination that "action may be taken against a teacher because of excessive absenteeism even if such is the result of work-related injuries. Kochman v. Board of Education of the Borough of Keansburg, [supra]. See also, Board of Education of the Twp. of Irvington v. Pearson, [supra]." (Id. at 41) As aptly stated by the Board in the present matter, "From the students' point of view, it does not matter whether their teacher is absent for an excessive amount of time due to work related injuries, approved leaves of absence, legitimate medical excuses or illegitimate excuses. The bottom line is whether the regularly scheduled teacher is present to teach or whether he/she is absent a majority of the time." (Board's Post-hearing Brief at pp. 37-38)

As to respondent's exception contending that the ALJ erred in finding the State's 3.5% monitoring guideline for staff attendance to have relevance in the instant matter, the Commissioner finds that, even accepting her contention arguendo, it would be of no consequence in reaching a final decision herein. Clearly, the factual circumstances in the present matter are vastly different than those in Montville, supra, the case respondent cites in support of her exception. In the Montville case, the board of education added to the district's annual teacher's evaluation an attendance component which correlated the number of days absent with ratings of "satisfactory," "needs improvement," or "unsatisfactory." Even though there was a narrative section included which allowed for an explanation of the absences, the ratings themselves were not affected by the narrative explanation. After a rather tortuous path of litigation, the New Jersey Appellate Court agreed with the Commissioner's rejection of the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the board policy. The Commissioner determined, inter alia, that such a policy was not reasonable because the teacher's attendance evaluation was based solely on a cumulative number of days of absence. The State Board reversed the Commissioner's determination but the Court affirmed the Commissioner, holding that, irrespective of the narrative explanation, the assigned rating was mathematical and unaffected by the reason for the absence.

In the instant matter, the Commissioner finds nothing in the record indicating that the Board based its decision to certify tenure Charges 1-4 against respondent solely upon application of a mechanistic, mathematical or statistical formula. As stated by the Board:

> Respondent incorrectly asserted the Board's position with regards to the State's mandated attendance guidelines (Respondent's Brief, at 28). [Assistant Superintendent] Cohn testified that the State requires a 96.5% attendance rate for all of the certificated staff in the district as an entire unit [T1, 53:1-54:5]. [He] never testified that each teacher could not be absent for more than 3.5% of any given school year. Rather, he clearly testified that this 3.5% ratio was a district-wide average. Nonetheless, those guidelines are not "irrelevant to the proceeding," as Respondent incorrectly asserted [cite omitted]. Rather, Cohn testified as to the State's requirements in order to inform [the ALJ] as to the excessiveness of Respondent's absences. For the past five years, Respondent was absent from work on three hundred thirty-two and one-half (332.5) occasions, or thirty-six (36) percent of the time. If one were to only look at the four years included in the tenure charges, Respondent was absent from work on three hundred twenty-two and one-half (322.5) occasions, or forty-four (44) percent of the time. [footnote omitted] If one were to simply look at the past three years, Respondent was absent from work on two hundred ninety-five and one-half (295.5) occasions, or fifty-four (54) percent of the time. Finally, if one were to look at just the past two years, Respondent was absent from work on two hundred twenty-six and one-half (226.5) occasions, or sixty-two (62) percent of the time. Clearly, these amount[s] of absences are excessive. The State's 3.5% attendance guideline was introduced into evidence merely to provide [the ALJ] with a reference point as to what attendance ratio is generally deemed acceptable on a district wide basis. (emphasis in text) (Respondent's Post-hearing Reply Brief at pp. 6-7)

Contrary to respondent's assertions, the Commissioner finds upon full examination of the record, including the transcripts of the matter, that the Board has met the standard for termination of a tenured employee for excessive absenteeism set forth in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lena White, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 157, 161; i.e., that there was consideration of (1) the particular circumstances of the absences and not merely the number of absences, (2) the impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time the absences occurred, not merely after the fact and (3) that there be some warning given to the employee that his or her supervisors were dissatisfied with the pattern of the absences. See also, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Celese Segall, School District of the City of Elizabeth, Union County, decided April 17, 2000.

Lastly, as to Charge 10, which alleges violation of the District's beeper/cellular phone policy, the Commissioner finds the ALJ properly applied the law with respect to weighing the evidence in this matter, including conflicting testimony, and assessment of credibility. Lazorick v. Brown, 195 N.J. Super. 444, 456 (App. Div. 1984); In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950); Middletown Tp. v. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962); State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div. 1952), cert. den. 10 N.J. 316 (1952). Moreover, the Commissioner finds no cause to challenge the credibility assessments made by the ALJ or to disturb the ALJ's findings of fact with respect to this Charge.

Having sustained Tenure Charges 1-4 and 10 against respondent, the Commissioner accepts and adopts as his own the recommendation of the OAL that respondent be terminated from her tenured position as a special education teacher in the Orange School District. However, in light of such termination, the Commissioner declines to accept the recommended penalty assessed for Charge 10, to the extent that such increment withholding is intended to be prospective.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby terminated from her tenured teaching position in the Board's employ. Further, a copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, for review and action, if any, as it deems appropriate.

v.
MARK MULLEN,
Respondent.

Andrew Babiak, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: March 1, 2000 Decided: March 27, 2000

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

The within matter commenced on November 5, 1999, when the Board of Education of the Township of Chesterfield (hereinafter petitioner) filed tenure charges in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.2 and 18A:6-11 against Mark Mullen (hereinafter respondent). Petitioner certified charges alleging conduct unbecoming a chief school administrator, specifically the making of misrepresentations to petitioner, exhibiting incompetence in the handling of school board issues and in performing his duties as chief school administrator, as well as failing and refusing to adhere to school board policies, failing generally to supervise and direct fiscal operations and instructional programs, failing to facilitate negotiations between petitioner and the teacher's association and failing to ensure the safety and well being of pupils by relocating the nurse's office to a poorly accessible area of the school building and thereafter by failing to make provision for a substitute nurse in the absence of a full-time employee. On November 19, 1999, respondent filed an answer in which he denied any wrongdoing, and on November 23, 1999, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case, pursuant N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13.

A prehearing conference was conducted on December 7, 1999, at which time hearing dates were scheduled for April 3, 4, 5, 7 and 10, 2000. An in-person settlement conference was conducted on February 17, 2000, at which time the parties reached an agreement, subject to Board approval. Thereafter the parties forwarded a signed stipulation of settlement which was received on March 1, 2000 and which is attached hereto and made a part hereof as if set forth herein at length.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I CONCLUDE that in view of all of the circumstances, it would not be improper for the Commissioner of Education to approve the settlement as an appropriate voluntary resolution of this matter entirely consistent with the law and the philosophy expressed in Cardonick v. Board of Education of the Borough of Brooklawn, EDU 7093-81, 7094-81 and 100-82, decided April 6, 1983 by the State Board of Education. The parties have set forth in their written settlement agreement all of the circumstances which have caused petitioner to conclude that a hearing on the merits in this matter would probably not serve the public interest. Petitioner has determined that respondent is an unfit superintendent, but recognizes nonetheless that their charges must be established on the record by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence. A settlement agreement in this matter will cause the least disruption to petitioner's employees, who will not be called away from their regular duties to testify; it will avoid the uncertainty of litigation and a potentially lengthy and expensive process and possible appeals which would undoubtedly extend beyond the termination date in respondent's employment contract with petitioner, July 1, 2000.

Furthermore, if the tenure charges were to be upheld following a hearing on the merits, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:66-36 respondent would forfeit his rights to deferred retirement benefits. Although the Legislature has provided for absolute forfeiture of pension rights for those members removed for cause before they are eligible to actually receive retirement benefits, a voluntary resignation prior to removal for cause will permit respondent to avoid the effect of the mandatory forfeiture provisions on his deferred retirement benefits. Widdis v. Retirement System, 238 N.J. Super. 70 (App. Div. 1990). Preservation of pension rights is a legitimate concern for the Commissioner when considering proceedings involving tenure charges. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967).

In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.5, petitioner is required to notify the State Board of Examiners of the alleged conduct in cases where teaching staff members accused of unbecoming conduct resign or retire from their positions before tenure proceedings have been concluded. Pursuant to that regulation if the State Board of Examiners should determine to issue an order to show cause, it will be the responsibility of the district to cooperate with the Board of Examiners in ascertaining and presenting the facts underlying the allegations. Under all of the circumstances, the proposed stipulation of settlement appears to be an appropriate resolution of the matter.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby file this initial decision with the Commissioner of the Department of Education for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Erna Chirico (hereinafter "Petitioner"),7 Michael Avenue, Milltown, New Jersey 08850 and the Board of Education of the City of Trenton (hereinafter "Board"), stipulate and agree that, in consideration of the mutual promises of the parties and in exchange for the consideration more particularly noted below, it is hereby agreed:

1. In return for compliance with the Agreement, the petitioner agrees to the dismissal, with prejudice, of the above-captioned litigation. The petitioner releases and waives any and all claims to back salary and/or back benefits, except as provided in this Agreement.

2. In return for compliance with this Agreement, the Board agrees as follows:

   (B) The petitioner will be employed in this position assuming satisfactory work performance from November 1, 1999 and for as long as it takes the petitioner to accrue 25 years of service with the Public Employee Retirement System (P.E.R.S.), to be thereafter employed at the sole discretion of the Board.

(C) The position of general aide is a ten (10) month position presently paying $9.50 per hour. (F) Within thirty (30) calendar days of the execution of this Agreement, the Board will pay to petitioner the sum of Three Thousand Five Hundred ($3,5000.00) Dollars.

3. The undersigned representatives of the Board hereby acknowledge that they have been duly authorized to sign this Agreement and bind the Board to its terms.

4. The parties recognize that each has been represented by legal counsel of his or its own choosing and that they sign this Agreement as their own voluntary act and deed, and that they fully understand the duties and obligations enumerated herein.

5. This Agreement shall be subject to the laws of the State of New Jersey.

6. All terms of this Agreement are deemed material. This document may not be altered, amended or modified except by an instrument executed in writing by the parties. However, if it is determined in the future that there has been miscalculation of damages set forth in paragraph 2 above, the parties agree to correct any errors regardless of which party gained the benefit(s) thereof.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT is made this 10th day of January, 2000, by and between the NEW MILFORD BOARD OF EDUCATION, with offices at 145 Madison Avenue, New Milford, New Jersey 07646 ("the Board")

AND

MR. RUSSELL RIEGER ("Rieger"), residing at 46 Mary Street, Lodi, New Jersey 07644.

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, at its May 24, 1999 meeting, the Board voted to withhold Rieger's salary increments for the 1999-2000 school year, based on alleged deficiencies in performance in the 1998-1999 school year, and

WHEREAS, on or about August 4, 1999, Rieger filed a verified petition appealing said increment withholding with the Commissioner of Education [Agency Docket No. 2438/99]; and

WHEREAS, on or about September 14, 1999, said petition was transmitted by the Commissioner of Education to the Office of Administrative Law for disposition under [OAL Docket No. EDU OR 09628-99N]; and

WHEREAS, on or about September 8, 1999, the New Milford Education Association filed a grievance on Rieger's behalf, protesting the withholding of his salary increment for the 1999-2000 school year; and

WHEREAS, Rieger has been a teacher in the New Milford School District for over 29 years, serving in the capacity of teacher with tenure;

WHEREAS, the parties wish to fully resolve these disputes by mutual agreement; and

WHEREAS, Rieger has indicated his desire to resign from all employment with the Board effective June 30, 2000, upon certain terms and conditions to be stipulated in this Agreement; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises of the parties and in exchange for the consideration more particularly set forth below, it is hereby agreed:

1. In return for full compliance with this Agreement, Rieger agrees to sign an irrevocable letter of resignation from all employment with the Board, to be effective June 30, 2000. The Board shall, by separate resolution, publicly accept this resignation at its next regularly scheduled Board meeting. The form of said resignation is attached hereto. Once said resignation is publicly accepted by the Board, it is binding and irrevocable and is not subject to modification or recision.

2. Rieger's salary increment for the 1999-2000 school year shall be restored, retroactive to September 1, 1999, for the entirety of the 1999-2000 school year, in the amount of $1,828, thus bringing his salary for the 1999-2000 school year to $69,730 (step 19). In addition, Rieger' longevity pay shall be adjusted to reflect that he is serving his thirtieth year with the District, thus increasing his entitlement from 4% of his salary at step 18, to 6% of his salary at step 19. As adjusted, Rieger is entitled hereunder to receive a differential of $1,468 in longevity pay. These combined benefits (increment and longevity differential) shall be paid to Rieger in the total amount of $3,296, less all applicable deductions, including check offs for taxes, F.I.C.A., and T.P.A.F. contributions. He shall receive one prorated lump sum payment to cover the period from September 1, 1999 until the time his salary is adjusted in accordance with this Agreement. The remainder shall be included in his regular paychecks in the appropriate prorated amount.

3. Upon his resignation, Rieger shall be entitled to all benefits available to him under the current collective negotiations agreement between the New Milford Education Association and the Board. The Board shall at that time remove any and all reference to the subject increment withholding from Rieger's personnel file, including any notices informing Rieger that such action is being considered, has been proposed or is being implemented.

4. The compensation and benefits specified in paragraph 2 of this Agreement are to be provided in consideration for Rieger:

a. withdrawing his petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education, [Agency Docket No. 2438/99; OAL Docket No. EDU OR 09628-99N] with prejudice;

b. withdrawing the September 8, 1999 grievance of the increment withholding, with prejudice;

c. executing both a General Release in favor of the Board releasing the Board from all claims, liabilities or expenses to which it may be subject, arising from the rights or claims of Rieger; and

d. tendering his resignation effective June 30, 2000 and relinquishing his status as a tenured employee in the form accompanying this Agreement. However, nothing in this Agreement, or the General Release given by Rieger shall preclude either party from bringing an action to enforce performance of any term of this Agreement should there be a default in performance.

5. Notwithstanding the foregoing, nothing in this Agreement, or the General Release give by Rieger shall preclude either party from bringing an action to enforce performance of any term of this Agreement should there be a default in performance.

6. Rieger acknowledges that he has consulted with an attorney or a representative of his own choosing prior to signing this Agreement, and that he signs this Agreement as his own voluntary act and deed, and that he fully understands the duties and obligations enumerated herein. This Agreement shall be subject to the laws of the State of New Jersey.

7. The undersigned representatives of the Board hereby acknowledge that they have been duly authorized by the Board to sign this Agreement and bind the Board to its terms.

8. All terms of this Agreement are deemed material. This document may not be altered, amended, modified or revoked except by an instrument executed in writing by the parties.

9. In the event that the Board is prevented from, or unable to fulfill the terms of this Agreement, for any reason, Rieger's resignation shall be rendered null and void and of no force or effect, regardless of whether it has been accepted by Board resolution. In that event, Rieger's tenure and employment rights shall return to the status existing prior to the execution of this Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have hereunto set their hands and seals the date and year aforesaid.

understanding or negotiations respecting such subject. No change to or modification of this Settlement Agreement shall be valid or binding unless it is in writing and signed by MS. BEUMEE and a duly authorized officer of the BOARD.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF JAMES JOHNSON, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT HUDSON COUNTY.

Sanford R. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent
(Balk, Oxfeld, Mandell & Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 4, 2000 Decided: April 5, 2000

BEFORE KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of Facts

This matter involves tenure charges of unbecoming conduct or other just cause certified by the State-Operated School District of the City of Jersey City ("District") against James Johnson under the Tenure Employee's Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to –18.1. James Johnson was a tenured teaching staff member employed by the District. By certification adopted on January 29, 1999, the state district superintendent found evidence of probable cause to certify tenure charges, which, if true, are sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary. Basically, the charges allege that Mr.

Johnson was guilty of excessive absenteeism and chronic tardiness over the course of six years.

On December 1, 1999, the District filed its written tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner"). Despite repeated inquiry by the Commissioner, respondent failed to submit an answer to the tenure charges against him. Consequently, on December 23, 1999, the Commissioner deemed the charges to be admitted and issued summary decision dismissing Mr. Johnson from his tenured position. Thereafter, on January 4, 2000, respondent's attorney filed a notice of motion for reconsideration, together with Mr. Johnson's supporting affidavit and a letter from his physician. On January 7, 2000, the Commissioner vacated his summary decision order and forwarded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing on the underlying tenure charges.

At a conference telephone conversation on February 4, 2000, the OAL fixed March 3, 2000 as the date for completion of all discovery. When respondent failed to answer initial interrogatories, the District moved on March 20, 2000 for extension of the time for discovery. In denying that request, the OAL noted that, "at the hearing the Board may object to the admissibility of any evidence that was not produced in response to petitioner's interrogatories."

Meanwhile, on or about March 8, 2000, Mr. Johnson wrote a letter to the District offering to resign from his position effective immediately.[1] By letter dated March 29, 2000, the District sought "to withdraw the tenure charges filed against James Johnson in light of his retirement[.]" The District urges that it "should not be compelled to waste its time and resources to prepare for and then litigate a matter which is moot." Moreover, the District contends "that enough time and resources have already been wasted with Mr. Johnson, who has demonstrated little or no interest in participating in his own case."

[1] During a conference telephone conversation held on April 4, 2000, Board counsel advised that the state district superintendent has accepted Mr. Johnson's resignation and, therefore, that respondent is no longer employed by the District.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that they tenure charges have become moot and that no useful purpose would be served by conducting a tenure hearing.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 authorizes a local school district to file charges seeking to dismiss a tenured employee "for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." When a board of education brings the charges, the Commissioner possesses jurisdiction to hear and decide the entire controversy. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 410 (App. Div. 1967). Once the school district has filed tenure charges, it cannot unilaterally withdraw them without the Commissioner's approval. In re Fulcomer, at 412.

Nonetheless, the Commissioner may consent to withdrawal of tenure charges under appropriate circumstances. Recently, the State Board declared that the Commissioner may accept a withdrawal if the school board has decided to impose minor discipline rather than to pursue formal tenure charges. In re Tenure Hearing of Elaine Frost, EDU 11545-96, Final Decision, State Board (July 6, 1998) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. Similarly, a withdrawal should be allowed in this case, where the District has already achieved the relief it is seeking and the pleadings do no suggest any substantial misconduct such as physical or mental abuse of a child.

Voluntary withdrawal of the tenure charges does not preclude the State Board of Examiners from taking further action, if appropriate, against respondent's teaching certificates. N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.5 requires the District's chief school administrator to report charges of unbecoming conduct to the State Board of Examiners "either before tenure proceedings have been brought or prior to the conclusion of such proceedings."

Order

It is ORDERED that the District's request to withdraw its tenure charges is hereby granted.

And further ORDERED that such withdrawal shall not be construed as constituting factual findings on the validity of the tenure charges.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 1119-00
AGENCY DKT. NO. 354-12/99

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING JAMES JOHNSON, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions.

Upon careful and independent review of the record, the Commissioner determines to adopt the Initial Decision of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) approving the District's withdrawal of the instant tenure matter. Under these circumstances, where respondent unilaterally resigned his position as a Crisis Intervention Teacher on March 8, 2000, having, therefore, abandoned his tenure acquired with the District, and given the nature of the charges against respondent, the Commissioner will not compel the District to prosecute charges against respondent.

The Commissioner is mindful that the within tenure charges for excessive absenteeism and unbecoming conduct were brought against respondent for his having been absent a total of 311 days from the start of the 1993-94 school year through the end of the 1998-99 school year, for his failure to report to work from March 1999 until the end of the 1998-99 school year, despite clear directives from the District's administration to do so, and for his failure to report to work for the 1999-2000 school year. Respondent denied both charges.

Accordingly, having made no findings with regard to the facts in this matter, the Commissioner adopts the recommendation of the ALJ that this matter be withdrawn. The Commissioner underscores that such withdrawal is subject to the District's compliance with N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.5, which requires, upon the resignation of a teaching staff member accused of unbecoming conduct prior to the conclusion of the tenure proceedings, that the chief school administrator, or State District Superintendent in this case, report the alleged conduct to the State Board of Examiners, to which a copy of this decision is being forwarded.

Petitioning parents alleged that the Board's assignment of an unsafe, distant bus stop for their daughter was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. There was no question that petitioners' child lived more than two and a half miles from school and was entitled to free transportation. The issue was the suitability of a bus stop at a closed landfill. Petitioners contended that walking to the stop presented a threat to their daughter's safety – the narrowness of the roadway, blind curves, absence of streetlights, lack of sidewalks or shoulders, and the wooded sparsely populated nature of the area known as a feeding place for bears.

The ALJ noted that school districts have broad discretion with respect to selection of bus routes and placement of bus stops, and that the Commissioner will not second-guess such exercise of discretion unless it is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. Here, the Board repeatedly denied petitioners' request, without explanation, for an extension of the Board's bus route to accommodate a different bus stop. The record demonstrated that the road was dangerous and the landfill was near the woods frequented by bears, seasonal hunters and strangers driving all-terrain vehicles and motorcycles. Having found that the landfill area was an unsuitable location for a bus stop because of the high risk to the safety of students assigned to it, and noting that other routes could bring a District van close to petitioners' property, the ALJ concluded that the location of the school bus stop at the landfill area was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The ALJ ordered that the Board immediately discontinue using the abandoned landfill site as a bus stop, and that the Board select one of the proposed alternatives for extending van service to petitioners' home.

The Commissioner affirmed the ALJ's conclusion that, under the particular circumstances of this matter, petitioners have demonstrated that the Board's refusal to accommodate their request to locate an alternative bus or van stop for C.N. was arbitrary and capricious.

Record Closed: December 21, 1999 Decided: April 4, 2000

BEFORE: KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of the Case

This is a complaint about the location of a stop for a bus transporting students to and from high school. Both sides concur that petitioner lives more than two and-a-half miles from school and, consequently, is entitled to free transportation. Basically, the issue is whether the regional school district acted arbitrarily, capriciously and unreasonably when it designated a particular location for a bus stop used by petitioners' daughter. Petitioners allege that the bus stop placed at a closed landfill is dangerous and unsafe. They request that the bus be rerouted to pick up and drop off their daughter at the end of their driveway. The district maintains that it carefully considered all alternatives and that the route suggested by the parents would jeopardize the safety of all occupants of the school bus by requiring that vehicle to travel a portion of an unpaved and substandard roadway. For the reasons that follow, the designated bus stop poses an unacceptable safety risk and the district must make other arrangements for meeting its legal obligation to transport petitioners' daughter.

Procedural History

On March 18, 1998, petitioners James and Jean Neilson filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") seeking reassignment of the bus stop for their child. Respondent Board of Education of the Morris Hills Regional District ("Board" or "Morris Hills") filed its answer on April 16, 1998. Subsequently, on May 11, 1998 the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case.

The OAL held extensive hearings ending on March 8, 1999. Both parties filed briefs on April 20, 1999. Thereafter, at the request of the parties, the OAL reopened the hearing to supplement the record with additional testimony. Ultimately, the record closed on December 21, 1999.

(1) General Background

Many of the background facts are undisputed. James and Jean Nielsen are the parents of two minor children. The family lives together in Rockaway Township, one of the constituent districts of the Morris Hills Regional School District. At the time of the hearing, the oldest child, Claire, then fifteen-years old, was a sophomore at Morris Knolls High School, located in neighboring Rockaway Borough and operated by the Board. Her younger brother James III, ten-years old and in fifth grade, went to a school operated by the local elementary school district.[1] When Claire Nielsen attended elementary and middle school, the Rockaway Township School District provided van service from her driveway to school and back. Likewise, the elementary district continues to provide van service for her younger brother, along the same roadway that the regional district contends is unsafe.

The Nielsen residence is located at 130 Jacobs Road, approximately one-half mile south of the entranceway to the closed Rockaway Township landfill and an abandoned railroad lot. This landfill entrance is utilized by the Board's bus as a turnaround point and also as the drop-off stop for Claire Nielsen. Generally, the surrounding area is rural and heavily wooded. To get from the landfill to her home, Claire must walk north along Jacobs Road. There are no sidewalks or streetlights on this portion of Jacobs Road.

Originally, the Board had assigned Claire Nielsen to a bus stop at the corner of Elizabeth Lane and Timberbrook Road, located a considerable distance from her house. In August 1997, her father wrote the Board requesting that the bus route already scheduled to proceed north on Jacobs Road to the landfill turnabout "be extended .6 mile further to go past our house." By letter dated September 11, 1997, the Building, Grounds and Transportation Committee ("Committee") of the Board denied the Nielsens' request.[2] The letter fails to provide any reasons for the Committee's decision. Testimony indicates that the Committee relied on the advice of Business Administrator/Board Secretary Manuel Deus, who had visited the site and recommended against bussing. Instead, the Committee proposed to pick up the Nielsens' daughter at the landfill "where the bus turns around."

After receipt of this denial, Mr. Nielsen again wrote to the Board on October 20, 1997 seeking reconsideration of his request for an extension of the existing bus route. In this letter, he stated that, "Since the start of the school year we have delivered our daughter via car to a bus stop [at 59 Jacobs Road] that is about (1.75) miles from our home." He pointed out that, "After our daughter boards the bus, we witness the bus pass our residence driveway daily." While the Board acknowledged that a school bus carrying Claire Nielsen continued past her house during September and October 1997, it insists that the route was unauthorized and that the practice was discontinued as soon as the Board became aware of its existence.

[1]Although Claire is now old enough to drive and is nearly in her senior year, the dispute will not become moot since James III will soon be of high school age.
[2] Only four of the full Board's eight members sit on this standing committee.

Minutes for a meeting on November 3, 1997 reflect that the Committee reviewed Mr. Nielsen's request and that Board President Jeffrey Biggs "offered to go out and look at the bus stop with Mr. Deus." On November 18, 1997 Mr. Deus sent a letter to Mr. Nielsen that the Committee was "still unable to honor your request." Again, no reasons were given.

An attorney representing Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen wrote to the Board on January 12, 1998 objecting to requiring a teenage girl to walk half a mile alone "in the pre-dawn darkness on an unlit and deserted road" and asking that the matter "be placed on the agenda for discussion at the next Board meeting." In a closed session on January 19, 1998, Board members "further discussed the matter" and directed Mr. Deus to respond that they "had not changed their position." Accordingly, Mr. Deus notified the attorney on February 18, 1998 that the Board "feels it is inappropriate to move the bus stop to the requested location."

(2) Suitability of the Bus Stop at the Closed Landfill

Municipal officials support the Nielsens' claim that the bus stop at the landfill presents a threat to their daughter's safety. Officer Stephen Machuga, a traffic safety officer employed by the Rockaway Township police department, testified for petitioners as an expert witness. He has served as a police officer for ten years and has completed several courses in automobile-accident investigation and traffic engineering. Familiar with Jacobs Road, he described the terrain between the Nielsen residence and the existing bus stop at 59 Jacobs Road as "narrow and windy," with blind curves, overgrown vegetation and houses set back from the road. The landfill had formerly been a depository for solid waste, which was "put in a hole and filled over with dirt." A large population of bears inhabits the Jacobs Road region. Bears are particularly attracted to the landfill, where the municipal animal control officer dumps the carcasses of road kill.

Although the landfill turnaround is closer than 59 Jacobs Road to the Nielsen residence, the walking route is not any safer. Heading north from the landfill, the road becomes unpaved, graveled and narrow. Since Jacobs Road does not have shoulders, pedestrians must walk on the roadway itself. In the early morning dawn or late afternoon, drivers "would have a hard time seeing pedestrians." During hunting season, deer and duck hunters frequent the area, and the police department "gets reports of shots being fired all the time." Off-terrain vehicles and motorcycles cut in and out of the wooded paths that intersect with Jacobs Road. Mayor John Inglesino of Rockaway Township contacted the Board on behalf of the Nielsens expressing concerns about the isolated locale of the bus stop. He noted that "[t]he absence of homes and vehicular traffic in the area, in addition to the presence of seasonal hunters, combine to pose a threat to [Claire Nielsen's] safety."

Both parents testified about their fear for their daughter's life. Mr. Nielsen explained that the area was "desolate," and he worries that a young woman could be abducted on her way to the landfill. When the school bus picks up his daughter at 6:30 a.m., it is still dark outside during most of the school year. Hidden trails going off to an adjacent watershed area crisscross Jacobs Road at several places. Strangers drive all-terrain vehicles or motorcycles along these intersecting paths. Although the speed limit near his house is 35 miles per hour, he has complained to the police about motorcycles traveling at much faster speeds. Whenever he has posted no hunting signs on his property, hunters have torn them down. Due to such unsatisfactory conditions, he and his wife will not let their daughter walk to and from the bus stop. Usually, his wife drives Claire to the collection point at 59 Jacobs Road in the morning and picks her up at the landfill after school.

Jean Nielsen is unwilling to drop Claire off at the landfill in the morning because the area is "dark and creepy." Waiting for her daughter in the afternoon, she occasionally sees men emerging from the woods reflected in her car's rearview window. Often she is unaware of their presence until they are near her car. On two or three occasions, Mrs. Nielsen has observed the school bus get stuck as it attempts to turn around in the landfill. Once, the bus pulled into the landfill at an unusual angle and "grazed" the front of her stationary vehicle.

Mrs. Nielsen also testified about the great inconvenience that existing arrangements have caused to her family life. Because her husband makes frequent business trips, Mrs. Nielsen bears the burden of delivering her daughter to the bus stop. She works for a patent attorney at home and must interrupt work to perform this chore. Sometimes she must wake up her sleeping son early and take him along to her daughter's bus stop to avoid leaving him home alone. If the bus is late at the end of the day, she must return home to pick up her son and go back to the landfill to wait for her daughter.

Morris Hills does not genuinely dispute that the landfill is not a proper location for a bus stop. To the extent that its own witnesses confirm the narrowness of the roadway, the blind curves, the absence of streetlights, the lack of sidewalks or shoulders and the wooded, sparsely-populated nature of the area, their testimony only underscores the unreasonableness of requiring a child to walk that route in the early morning or late afternoon. Indeed, Board President Jeffrey Biggs conceded on cross-examination that he would be concerned about letting his own children wait at a bus stop known as a feeding place for bears.

Much of the Board's proofs involve the perceived dangerousness of permitting a school vehicle to travel the same route that it expects Claire Nielsen to walk by herself. Jeffrey Biggs, who, in addition to being president of the Board, is a professional engineer specializing in municipal planning, took a personal interest in the bus-stop controversy. He visited the scene four different times and prepared a detailed report, complete with charts and glossy photographs. Mr. Bigg's main objection to letting a school vehicle continue past the landfill to the Nielsen driveway is the existence of the unpaved and graveled portion of Jacobs Road. Versions differ slightly as to the actual distance of this section. Mrs. Nielsen estimated that the paved portion of Jacobs Road continues north of the landfill until it stops roughly 380 feet from the entrance to her driveway. Using a wheel and odometer, Mr. Deus measured this unpaved portion as approximately 400 feet (the unpaved road then continues north beyond the Nielsen home for a total distance of about 2/10 of a mile.) To put things in perspective, the unpaved portion over which a vehicle must travel to reach the Nielsen residence would be only slightly greater than the length of a football field.

Unable to obtain any Township standards for road construction, Mr. Biggs referred to other recognized standards such as the Residential Site Improvement Standards ("RSIS") set forth in the New Jersey Administrative Code, N.J.A.C. 5:21-1.1 to –8.1.[3] Utilizing the "hierarchy-of-roads" definitions contained in the RSIS, he decided to apply the standards for a "rural residential lane," which has less stringent criteria than other possible designations.[4] Essentially, Mr. Biggs compared conditions on Jacobs Road to RSIS standards in terms of pavement, road width, grade and sidewalk/shoulder requirements.

With respect to pavement, the standards require some sort of paving of varying degrees of thickness.[5] Mr. Biggs emphasized that the 400 feet or so of graveled or loose-stone roadway leading to the Nielsen residence, which creates a "washboard effect" and has caused traction and drainage difficulties. He agreed with Officer

[3] While it is valid to look for relevant standards, it should be pointed out that the RSIS does not apply to the roadway abutting the Nielsen property. Operative in June 1997, the RSIS governs site improvements required to be carried out in connection with new applications for residential subdivision, site plan approval or variance before any planning board or zoning board of adjustment. N.J.A.C. 5:21-1.5(a). The Nielsens received zoning board approval to build on an "unimproved road" in 1983, so their development constitutes a prior nonconforming use.

[4] Mr. Biggs acknowledged that he needed a count of "average daily traffic" in order to classify a road under the RSIS hierarchy. See Table 4.2 at N.J.A.C. 5:21-4.1. He also admitted that he neglected to perform such a study.

[5] A close look at the RSIS guidelines renders it doubtful whether the pavement standards apply to Jacobs Road. N.J.A.C. 5:21-1.6 makes clear that the standards are not intended to address certain areas in Northern Jersey covered by limestone or other carbonate rocks, "which pose unusual and complex problems in relation to development activities." Rockaway Township is expressly identified as a "limestone area." Appendix at N.J.A.C. 5:21-1.11.

Machuga that the roadway on which Claire Nielson must walk is "curvilinear" rather than straight, which presents sight-distance problems.

Pursuant to the RSIS, a rural residential lane must have a minimum width of 18 feet. According to Mr. Biggs and Mr. Deus, the paved portion of Jacobs Road tapers down to a width of 16 feet at a point north of the landfill near where the paving ends. Moreover, the yellow centerline striping does not extend to the graveled roadway. Mr. Biggs expressed his opinion that the roadway must be widened and stripping added in order for the route to meet minimum standards.

RSIS specifies that the maximum grade for a rural residential lane is 12%. Curiously, Mr. Biggs did not measure the grade of Jacobs Road between the landfill and the Nielsen residence. He did, however, measure the grade at a top of a hill much further north of the Nielsen property, where a guardrail runs along one side of the road and a rocky ledge protrudes on the other side. There, he measured a "vertical drop" of 16.3 feet.

Lastly, Mr. Biggs indicated that Jacobs Road fails to comply with the RSIS requirement of a four-foot wide sidewalk on one side of any street within 2,500 feet of a school-bus stop. On cross-examination, however, he conceded that sidewalls were designed for the protection of pedestrians and not for the benefit of vehicular traffic.[6]

Uncontradicted testimony discloses that a van operated by the Board routinely pulls in and out of the driveway of another student's home. The shortest route for providing door-to-door service to Claire Nielsen would be for a van to continue north on past the landfill to the Nielsen residence, turn around in her driveway and retrace its route south toward Timberbrook Road. Most of the Board witnesses had never personally driven in or out of the Nielsen driveway, but still offered their views on the practicality of such maneuver. Manuel Deus commented that the Nielsen driveway is not level with the road, so that the rear or front of a van pulling into the driveway would point downward.[7] Similarly, Jeffrey Biggs described the driveway as flat for ten to twenty feet and then sloping downward at approximately a 10% grade. Miriam Diltz, the district's transportation coordinator, backed a midsize car into the Nielsen driveway during a site visit in September 1997. As she was exiting the driveway, she could not see for a distance of at least three hundred feet looking south.[8] Nonetheless, she does not remember encountering any difficulty in making the turn. Mrs. Nielsen, who uses her driveway several times per day, estimates that the visibility south from the top of the driveway is "between 250 and 275 feet."

Significantly, the route traveled by the district's van #4 already takes it close to the Nielsen property and it would require no more than fifteen extra minutes to pick up the Nielsen child. Van #4 is running at half capacity, so there is plenty of room for one more passenger. Currently, Van #4 makes its first pick-up at 6:26 a.m. and arrives at Morris Knolls High School by 7:15 am. in time to discharge its passengers for the opening of school. Ms. Dilts' opposition to using van #4 for transporting Claire Nielsen is not for safety reasons, but because the added time might increase the total time of the ride beyond one hour.[9] Only Claire Nielsen would be likely to suffer the consequences of a longer ride, since Ms. Dilts contemplates that she would be picked up first and dropped off last.

If the school van does not turn around in the Nielsen driveway, the alternative would be to proceed north on Jacobs Road until it intersects with Green Pond Road. Jacobs Road remains unpaved for an additional 700 feet or so. Continuing past the Nielsen residence, Jacobs Road climbs up a steep incline until the crest of a hill, where the pavement resumes and the roadway descends sharply downward. Photographs depict that, heading north, the roadway approaches a point with a rock ledge on one side and a guardrail on the other.

[7] "Uphill stops are discouraged due to the hazard of uncontrolled backing if engine or bake failure should occur." Policies and Procedures Manual for Pupil Transportation (Oct. 1986) at 35.

[8] "[W]herever possible, a stopped bus [should] be visible in both directions for at least 300 feet." Ibid.

[9] Apparently the one-hour limitation on the length of a bus ride is an "unwritten rule" of the district, adopted for the comfort and convenience of students.

Near a telephone pole at this approximate location, Mr. Biggs measured the road width in December 1998 and ascertained it to be 12 feet wide. During the course of the hearing, however, he changed testimony regarding road width. In February 1999 he remeasured the road at the same location and found it to be 14½ feet wide. Conditions had changed over the intervening period that may explain the difference. Mr. Biggs indicated that the Township had regraded the road and may have "widened it somewhat." Conflicting evidence was presented on whether two large vehicles approaching from opposite directions on Jacobs Road north of the Nielsen house would be able to pass each other. About the best that can be said is that the vehicles could pass, but that one of the vehicles might have to slow down or pull over to the side of the road.

Subsequent to the original hearing, Rockaway Township made road improvements that alleviate some but not all of the Board's safety concerns. Rockaway Township performed this work as a dust-abatement project in response to complaints by residents that the roadway was too dusty. Edward Hollenbeck, the Township's supervisor of public works, testified that over the summer of 1998 his department paved the dirt portion of Jacobs Road, including the 380 to 400-foot portion, with "millings." Mr. Hollenbeck explained that "millings" are a product created when an asphalt road is ground down to be resurfaced. Once the millings were spread on the roadway, his workers used heavy rolling equipment to compact the granules. Then the hot summer sun congealed the particles into a hard black surface that resembles asphalt. The Township also put a single yellow median line in the roadway approaching the Nielsen driveway from the landfill, signifying that passing another vehicle traveling in the same direction is prohibited.

Mr. Hollenbeck candidly admitted that millings are not as durable as asphalt and that their use represents "a compromise" to save money. In his words, "the surface is better than it was and that's all we expected." Reluctantly, Mr. Deus agreed that traction is better than it had been on the dirt surface. He insisted, however, that the ruts on roadway are "a little worse," contradicting earlier testimony by Mr. Biggs that improvements to Jacobs Road had "eliminated some of the ruts" and made for a smoother ride. Like any paved surface, potholes may be formed when water gets into cracks and freezing weather causes the liquid to expand. Nonetheless, Mr. Hollenbeck acknowledged that his department is responsible for maintenance of Jacobs Road and would repair any potholes that develop.

I FIND that the landfill area is an unsuitable location for a bus stop because of high risk to the safety of students assigned to it. Proofs establish that blind curves, lack of sidewalks or shoulders, no lighting, and isolation from neighbors characterize the walking route. As a result, Claire Nielsen must walk on the dark unlit traffic lane in order to reach her destination. Surrounding thick woods conceal joy riders, who dart in and out of Jacobs Road. Hunters frequent the area and the sound of gunshots is a common occurrence. Responsible Township officials verified that the danger is real and that a young woman should not be required to take this route to her bus stop. Worse yet, the bus stop is at an abandoned landfill known as a feeding ground for bears. Due to the nature of the area, a child waiting for a bus would have little warning if someone were suddenly to jump out of the woods and grab her.

Given that the location of the designated bus stop is unacceptable, the selection as to the best bus route rests within the sound discretion of the Board. From the evidence presented, it appears relatively safe for a school van to travel the short distance beyond the landfill, pick up Claire Nielsen at her house, and turn around in her driveway, especially now that the Township has upgraded and striped the formerly dirt section of Jacobs Road. Since its van already turns around in another student's driveway, the district cannot claim to have a uniform policy against turning around in private driveways. For many years, the elementary school district van has successfully utilized the longer route north past the Nielsen house to Green Pond Road, which takes it up a steep incline and through a narrow pass. Even Morris Hill's own bus driver considered the longer route safe enough for a full-size school bus to use, until the Board directed him to discontinue that route and turn around at the landfill.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that Morris Hill's location of a school bus stop at the landfill area was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

N.J.S.A. 18A:39-1 provides that whenever there are "secondary school pupils who live more than 2½ miles from their public school of attendance, the district shall provide transportation to and from school for these pupils." Claire Nielsen lives more than two and-a-half miles from Morris Knolls High School. Thus, the issue is not whether Claire Nielsen is entitled to bussing, but rather how she is to be bussed.

Undeniably, school districts have broad discretion with respect to selection of bus routes and placement of bus stops. The Commissioner will not second-guess such exercise of discretion unless it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. See Lemma v. Branchburg Bd. of Educ., EDU 8953-97, Initial Decision (July 22, 1998), adopted, Comm'r (Aug. 28, 1998) http://lawlibrary.rutgers/edu.oal/search.html (upholding local district's refusal to change bus stop); Mandaglio v. Mendham Twp. Bd. of Educ., 1990 S.L.D. 1380, 1384 (Comm'r 1990) (upholding uniformly-applied school policy prohibiting schools buses from turning around on dead-end streets); J. O'D. v. Peapack-Gladstone Bd. of Educ., 1989 S.L.D. 1303, 1313 (Comm'r March 15, 1989) (upholding appropriateness of local district's bus stop and rejecting proposed alternate route as "patently dangerous.")

Of course, responsibility for removal of traffic safety hazards belongs to the municipal governing authorities rather than to school boards. Schrenk v. Ridgewood Bd. of Educ., 1961 S.L.D. 185, 187 (Comm'r April 15, 1961). See also, Yedwab v. Fairlawn Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. 7765-80 (June 22, 1981), adopted (Comm'r Aug. 4, 1981). A local school district has no obligation to enforce traffic laws or to provide sidewalks, traffic lights, crossing guards, police patrols, overpasses, etc. to meet the requirements of safe travel for school children. Nichols v. Wayne Twp. Bd. of Educ., 93 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 701 (Comm'r Sept. 3, 1993), adopted 94 *N.J.A.R.*2d 277 (St. Bd. Feb. 2, 1994), aff'd 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 157, No. A-3526-93T5 (N.J. App. Div. March 3, 1995), certif. den. 142 N.J. 449 (1995). Recognizing its responsibility, Rockaway Township has made some improvements to the unpaved surface of Jacobs Road and has expressed its willingness to maintain the roadway by repairing potholes.

It does not follow, however, that the Board has no duty to select safe locations for its bus stops. "The bus stop should be at a location where pupils can wait in safety." Policies and Procedures Manual for Pupil Transportation (Oct. 1986) at 35. Certainly student safety is a factor to be considered in assessing whether the Board acted reasonably. Wayne Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Kraft, 139 N.J. 597, 604 (1995). Whether a walkway or a bus stop is safe depends on the surrounding facts. Kraft, at 602. Compare Board of Educ. v. Bailey, 1984 S.L.D. 1165 (St. Bd. 1984) (finding it unsafe for children to walk on an isolated path through a county park) with Mangieri v. Board of Educ., 1991 S.L.D. 69 (St. Bd. 1991) (finding it safe for children to use a walkway across railroad tracks). In Nicols, for example, the Appellate Division agreed that it is unsafe for a school child to be required to walk on the wrong side of the road or to ignore marked crosswalks. "School routes are not some theoretical abstraction, but must be capable of being walked by real children." Nicols, slip op. at 6.

Recently, the State Board of Education held that a school board's refusal to extend minibus service to a child's home "was arbitrary and capricious under the circumstances." Shrewsbury v. Holland Twp. Bd. of Educ., 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 795 (Comm'r June 21, 1996), rev'd 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 416 (St. Bd. April 2, 1997). Noting that bends in the road and a drop in grade made it dangerous for a child to walk between home and the bus stop, the State Board accepted the ALJ's finding that the same route "does not appear to be particularly perilous for a minibus." Shrewsbury, at 417. While the State Board took cognizance of the parents' offer to construct a turnaround on their own property, the outcome does not turn on any single fact. Rather, the State Board examined the entire circumstances in determining that the school board's refusal to provide minibus service was unreasonable.

Like the Shrewsbury case, the record here demonstrates that it is dangerous for Claire Nielsen to walk on a curved country road without sidewalks or shoulders. Not much foresight is needed to know that a bus stop should not be placed at a lonely clearing in the woods where bears come to eat. Although none of the alternatives are ideal, the use of a van which either turns around in her driveway or continues north past her house does not seem "particularly perilous." A van carrying elementary school children routinely takes the longer and purportedly more dangerous route. Under the totality of circumstances, the Board's refusal to accommodate Claire Nielsen by extending van service to her driveway is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

Order

It is ORDERED that Morris Hills immediately discontinue using the abandoned landfill site as a bus stop.

And it is further ORDERED that Morris Hills select one of the proposed alternatives for extending van service to the Nielsen home.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

J.F.N., Jr., and J.N. on behalf of minor child, C.N., PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MORRIS HILLS REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MORRIS COUNTY, RESPONDENTS.	:	DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The Board's exceptions and petitioners' reply thereto are duly noted as submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

On exception, the Board points to statements in the Initial Decision which, it finds, did not fully comport with the testimony, citing these as either erroneous findings by the ALJ or omissions from his summary of the testimony adduced at the hearing. Additionally, the Board clarifies that, contrary to the ALJ's statement on page 6 of the initial decision, it "does dispute any finding that the landfill is not an appropriate stop." (Board's exceptions at 2) (emphasis added) Moreover, the factors identified by the ALJ as contributing to the danger of the bus stop near the landfill, are, according to the Board, "factors within the express control of the Township." (Id. at 3) Still central to the Board's position is its contention that, due to safety concerns, it has not provided bus or van transportation over unpaved roads since an accident occurred on such a road more than ten years ago. As before the ALJ, the Board maintains that the case law supports its stance.

In reply, petitioners generally submit that the ALJ's findings are supported by the record herein, noting, inter alia, that respondent's own witness, Board President Jeffrey Biggs, testified that he would not want his children waiting at the bus stop assigned to C.N. (Petitioners' Exceptions at 2) Petitioners further argue that, "[r]egardless of who is responsible for the 'bear problem,' Judge Springer correctly concluded that this is a dangerous situation and in weighing all of the evidence, he found that it is in the best interest of both the Respondent and the Petitioners for the bus stop to be relocated." (Id. at 3, 4) Petitioners assert that the ALJ's conclusions of law are proper and urge the Commissioner to affirm the Initial Decision.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, including all documentary, photographic and videotaped exhibits, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that, under the particular circumstances of this matter, petitioners have demonstrated that the Board's refusal to accommodate their request to locate an alternative bus or van stop for C.N. was arbitrary and capricious.[1]

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the ALJ is adopted for the reasons expressed therein. The Board is directed to select a suitable alternative route allowing for van service to C.N.'s driveway.[2]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

DEANNA HOOVER AND K. H., ON BEHALF OF HIS MINOR DAUGHTER, S. H., Petitioners,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CAMDEN COUNTY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 1,

Respondent.

Kenneth E. Smith, Esq., on behalf of the petitioners (Wade & Wood, attorneys)

Barry Chatzinoff, Esq., on behalf of the respondent (Weinberg, McCormick, Chatzinoff & Paul, attorneys)

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

This matter concerns the petition filed by the petitioners, with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) on April 24, 2000. The petitioners request that the Commissioner find that Deanna Hoover, as of the start of the 1999-2000 school year, had successfully completed the requirements for the eleventh grade and that she be allowed to graduate from the Edgewood Senior High School at the end of the 1999-2000 school year. Also, that the Commissioner find that S.H., as of the start of the 1999-2000 school year, had successfully completed the requirements for the tenth grade and that she was properly placed in the eleventh grade for the 1999-2000 school year. In addition, the petitioners filed a request for emergency relief on behalf of both Deanna Hoover and S.H.

The matter was transmitted on April 27, 2000, to the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-t o –13, prior to the filing of any papers by the respondent, since the petitioners are requesting emergency relief.

The matter was scheduled for an oral argument as to the motion for emergency relief and for a hearing on May 11, 2000.

This order deals only with the motion for emergency relief.

Emergency relief is an extraordinary equitable remedy and the burden of proof is on the petitioners to show that (1) there is a threat of immediate and irreparable harm to the petitioners, (2) there is a probability that the petitioners will eventually succeed on the merits, and (3) that the inconvenience or loss to the Board will be nominal. Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982); New Jersey Bar Association v. Northern New Jersey Mortgage Associates, 22 N.J. 184 (1956); N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6; N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5.

Based on the petition and the record developed at the hearing, I FIND that the facts pertinent to this motion are not in dispute.

Deanna Hoover attended St. Joseph High School for three years and S.H. attended St. Joseph High School for two years. At the end of the 1998-99 school year, Keith Hoover, the father of Deanna Hoover and S.H., enrolled his daughters with the respondent. Because of a financial dispute as to tuition, St. Joseph High School refused to send the school records of Deanna Hoover and S.H. to the respondent. Both Deanna Hoover and S.H. past the Grade 11 High School Proficiency Test (P-9, P-8), and the respondent placed Deanna Hoover in the twelfth grade and S.H. in the eleventh grade at the Edgewood Regional Senior High School for the 1999-2000 school year. Without the school records from St. Joseph High School, Michelle Ferner, the principal of the Edgewood Regional Senior High School testified that she cannot certify that Deanna Hoover has the necessary credits needed for graduation or that S.H. has the needed credits for advancement to the twelfth grade.

Kenneth E. Smith, Esq., on behalf of the petitioner, argued that Deanna Hoover and S.H. would suffer irreparable harm if the motion for emergency relief is not granted. Deanna Hoover wants to graduate with her class and the graduation ceremony is scheduled for June 14, 2000. Both Deanna Hoover and S.H. are anxious to have their educational status determined so that they can make future plans.

Mr. Smith argued that there is a strong likelihood that the petitioners will prevail in the matter. Mr. Smith stated that the facts in this matter are similar to those in M.C. on behalf of L.C., a minor child v. Board of Education of the Freehold Regional High School District, Monmouth County, EDU 8229-98, Initial Decision, (October 29, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal /search.html>, adopted, Comm'r. (February 20, 2000). This case dealt with the high school placement of L.C. who had been home schooled for a period of time. The Commissioner emphasized that the decision regarding the placement of L.C. should not have focused on the equivalency of L.C.'s home school instruction to the school's program but rather on L.C.'s level of proficiency as determined by appropriate testing. In this matter, the respondent placed Deanna Hoover and S.H. based on their scores in the eleventh grade proficiency test. At the hearing, Deanna Hoover testified that she had successfully completed the eleventh grade at St. Joseph High School and S.H. testified that she had successfully completed the tenth grade at St. Joseph High School. Additionally, Mr. Smith submitted the affidavit of Robert Cizozzi, who had been a teacher at St. Joseph High School, indicating that Mr. Cizozzi was one of Deanna Hoover's teachers during the 1998-99 school year and that she had successfully completed the eleventh grade at St. Joseph High School (P-10).

Mr. Smith argued that the granting of the motion will not cause any inconvenience or loss to the respondent.

Barry Chatzinoff stated that without the previous school records the respondent cannot determine if Deanna Hoover has sufficient credits to graduate and S.H. has sufficient credits to advance to the twelfth grade consistent with the respondent's policy (J-1) and N.J.A.C. 6:3-4A.1(d)ii(3).

I am persuaded by Mr. Smith's argument that Deanna Hoover would suffer irreparable harm if she is not permitted to graduate with her class, that there is a likelihood that the petitioners will succeed in this matter and that there is no inconvenience or loss to the Board if Deanna Hoover is allowed to graduate with her class. I hereby ORDER that Deanna Hoover be permitted to graduate provided that she passes the required courses necessary for graduation. Also, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Smith has not shown an irreparable harm to S.H. if emergent relief as to her educational status is not granted. The court in the Crowe case stated that the relief granted should not be broader than necessary pending a final decision. The hearing in this matter was handled on an expedited basis and I am confident that a final decision will be rendered in sufficient time to allow S.H. to make plans for the next school year. Deanne Hoover's position is different since the final decision in the matter may not be issued prior to the graduation ceremony. Therefore as to S.H., I DENY the motion for emergent relief.

At the hearing, both parties waived the right to file exceptions.

This order as to the motion for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without due delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergency relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 2851-00

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF HADDONFIELD,

Respondent.

Thomas J. Hagner, Esq., for petitioner (Kenney & Kearney, attorneys)

Susan S. Hodges, Esq., for respondent (Capehart & Scatchard, attorneys)

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

An eighteen-year-old high school senior challenges a board of education's decision to suspend him for the balance of the school year for committing vandalism.

Nicholas Dentino filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 and N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 through -1.5 alleging the Haddonfield Borough Board of Education arbitrarily and unreasonably suspended him from attendance on April 6, 2000 for the balance of the school year. The petition contained a request for emergent relief in the form of expedited hearing because the suspension runs to the end of the petitioner's senior year and he will be unable to return unless the matter is resolved.

The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A 52:14F-1 through -13. After notice, hearing was held on Monday, May 15, 2000, at the Office of Administrative Law, Trenton.

THE ARGUMENTS

In essence, the petitioner alleges principals and superintendents have discretion in dealing with pupil violations of duly adopted school rules and policies, but the discretion is not unfettered and, in his case, overreached. On its face, a suspension of more than forty school days is too severe under the circumstances and in relation to other infractions listed in the Memorial High School Handbook (P-1). As of this hearing, Dentino had served approximately half of the suspension.

The petitioner also alleges he has received only two hours of home instruction since suspended. He asserts the principal has waived Dentino's physical education requirement. Presumably, this would remove an impediment to his graduation, provided he passes all subjects and has at least the minimum number of credits required for graduation. Dentino stresses that he has been accepted by two colleges for autumn attendance.

The petitioner also asserts the Board was split as to whether the subject penalty should be imposed (P-3) and a juvenile officer suggested that the Municipal Court impose no penalty in light of the severity of the school's punishment. Furthermore, the suspension of more than forty days is clearly excessive, Dentino did not act in retribution for a previous suspension, his actions were not premeditated but happened on the spur of the moment, the high school principal's contention that the vandalism destroyed any trust that existed between him and these pupils is far fetched and the Board fails to recognize that Dentino went to police and admitted his part in the incident. In short, the school does not want to deal with Dentino and the other two involved pupils.

The Board counterargues that the other two young men involved received precisely the same penalty as Dentino did. Dentino, when questioned by police, denied any involvement in the incident. Only later did he go to the authorities and admit his participation.

The petitioner is receiving home instruction, will be given all final examinations and, if academically qualified, will receive his diploma although he will not be permitted to participate in graduation exercises.

The Board did grapple with its decision here. It looked at all facts and options. Among the facts are: Dentino violated a behavioral contract while on a class trip and was serving a suspension for that when he participated in the vandalism; it was not an impulsive act because he and the others went to a store and purchased eggs that they subsequently threw at the school; after the incident began, a tire iron was retrieved from the car the group traveled in and Dentino threw it at a school office window, breaking it and, in addition to all of this, pulled up some shrubs that were part of the school's landscaping. Dentino will miss some desirable privileges. He will not participate in either the prom or the graduation exercises. But he broke rules and knew he was breaking rules. He cannot claim surprise when punishment follows.

The Board acted carefully and appropriately. It did not merely uphold an administrator's decision. As the minutes show (P-3), the matter was duly deliberated. And it must be noted that, while the vote was not unanimous, it was 5-2 to support the suspension, hardly an even split.

DECISION AND ORDER

There is no contention of procedural defect here. The pupil had a hearing by the Board of Education in a timely manner. Graham v. Board of Education of the Township of Ocean, 1978 S.L.D. 810. There is no dispute as to culpability. The only matter in difference is penalty.

This incident, clearly the most egregious, was far from the first contact the petitioner had with the disciplinary system. Exhibit P-2 illustrates a dozen "interventions" with the assistant principal and principal related to behavior. Quite recently, Dentino was disciplined for misbehavior on the senior class trip. All participants in the senior trip signed contracts beforehand in which they agreed to comply with certain standards of behavior. Importantly, each pupil knew what constituted improper behavior. Dentino acted inappropriately – broke his contract – and received a two-day suspension. That is lamentable.

The vandalism is deplorable. It cannot be rationalized. School officials, Board members and the public were understandably shocked by the act. The Board properly considered his disciplinary record when considering penalty. D.D. v. Lenape Regional High School Board of Education, 1984 S.L.D. 1562. Exclusion from attendance at graduation exercises, because it is a privilege and not a right, has long been upheld in discipline cases. See, e.g., B.G., B.B. and Deborah Van Pelt v. Board of Education of the Borough of Elmwood Park, 1974 S.L.D. 611. The precedent as to other privileges such as proms is equally strong.

What must be addressed is the educational aspect of the matter. An exclusion in early April for the balance of the school year is as extreme a remedy as expulsion. And the Commissioner and State Board of Education have long held that even the most drastic of penalties, expulsion, should not strip the pupil of educational opportunity. Scher v. Board of Education of West Orange, 1968 S.L.D. 92. In fact, most long-term suspensions and expulsions do not constitute a permanent removal of a pupil from a school system. See, e.g., J.W. v. Hammonton Board of Education, 1975 S.L.D. 776. The Commissioner may restrict exclusion to a specific period. G.C. v. Egg Harbor Board of Education, Comm'r decision, May 1980 (unpublished).

In today's case, the petitioner has engaged in antisocial and possibly criminal behavior. As wrong-minded as his recent acts have been, he still is entitled to an education that will allow him to complete his high school requirements. Therefore, and in consideration of the whole record, it is ORDERED that the Board's withdrawal of Nicholas Dentino's prom and graduation privileges is hereby upheld as appropriate under the circumstances and clearly not an abuse of the Board's legislatively-invested powers. It is further ORDERED that home instruction of not less than ten hours per week be provided immediately if not already in place. It is further ORDERED that high school staff administer final examinations to Nicholas Dentino at the same time and it is the same manner as to other pupils. It is my opinion that these arrangements will create no undue burden on either party and may afford school personnel some administrative convenience, while providing for examination of the petitioner is as nearly normal a manner as is possible under the present circumstances.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If (title of agency head) does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOROUGH OF SOMERVILLE,
Respondent.

Kevin P. Kovacs, Esq., for petitioner (Purcell, Rise, Shannon, Mulch & O'Neill, attorneys)

Michael J. Rogers, Esq., for respondent (McDonald, Rogers & Rizzolo, attorneys)

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

A high school junior, through his parent, appeals a ten-day suspension from school and school-related activities because he allegedly threatened a teacher.

The matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on May 17, 2000, with the filing of a verified petition of appeal. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The petition included a request for emergent relief. N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5 and N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, without Answer, on the same day. N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. Oral argument on the question of emergent relief and/or stay of the Board's action was heard at 11 a.m. on Friday, May 19, 2000. The Board filed its Answer at that time.

THE ARGUMENTS

The petitioner argues that his action must be distinguished from cases involving violence and that there was no deliberation behind his remark, which he concedes was inappropriate. The context was a creative writing class. The time was 7:30 a.m. on a Friday morning. The teacher directed pupils to write about how they wanted to be famous and why. M.S. said, out loud, that he wanted to be famous for killing his teacher, Ms. R.

The petitioner also argues that the teacher did not feel threatened, that he went through the balance of the school day without the matter being raised again, that he attended his prom during the weekend and only on the following Monday, May 15, was called before the school disciplinarian. He was advised that he would be suspended from school and school-related activities for ten days, effective May 15.

It is also asserted that pupils were never advised of Board of Education policy on matters such as this. M.S. says he was not allowed to respond to the allegation against him, school officials demonstrated a knee jerk reaction to the matter, no mitigation was considered and, therefore, a ten-day suspension is excessive on its face.

At this point in the school year, a suspension is particularly harmful because junior year grades are an important factor in college acceptance decisions and because he is a member of the school's baseball team. The team will play one or more games before M.S.'s suspension is over and college scouts will attend those games.

The petitioner cites Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and says he will be irreparably harmed by this suspension, the legal right under his claim is not unsettled and he is likely to prevail on the merits. Thus, the temporary relief he seeks should be granted. If upon plenary hearing he should not prevail, he can serve the balance of the suspension in September.

The Board of Education argues the actual intent of M.S.'s remark is not germane. The words were the words. The suspension was not imposed until after the disciplinarian had an opportunity to look into the matter and, as copies of memoranda indicate, to speak with those involved. Ms. R. memorialized the event. Exhibit A. Principal O'Halleran provided a written summary of what happened to Board counsel. Exhibit B.

The suspension not being for more than ten days, the pupil received all process that was due. The timing of the suspension is of the petitioner's making, not the Board's. The petitioner is being treated as would a nonathlete.

M.S. knew or should have known that a threat of any sort could result in discipline. Each pupil receives and signs a receipt for the student handbook (see excerpt, Exhibit D) that clearly prohibits > 10. Assault or Violence Directed Toward Any School Employee: No student shall assault, cause bodily harm to or threaten any school employee. Assault is interpreted as threatening language, signs or gestures. This rule applies during all school-sponsored activities before, during or after regular school hours, on campus or away, in route to or from school or on the school bus. Besides a violation of student behavior guidelines, such acts of violence or intent to cause bodily harm are in violation of state criminal laws.

> [Handbook at 14.]

There was a threat made. They looked into the incident (and would have been open to criticism and/or liability if they did not) and made a judgment. That judgment should be left undisturbed. A ten-day suspension is not excessive in these circumstances. Thus, it cannot be said the petitioner is likely to prevail.

DETERMINATION AND ORDER

First applying the test from Crowe v. DeGioia, above, it is clear that if harm exists here, it is to some extent irreparable. Preparation for an examination can be made up; participation in an athletic contest cannot. There is a critical distinction, however. Education is a right, not lightly set aside even in expulsion cases. Extracurricular activities are a privilege and may be withheld for good cause. If this petitioner prevails on the first prong of the test, it is by a paper-thin margin and then only as to academics.

The second criterion does not come into play. The legal rights to education and to extracurricular activities are quite clear, having been litigated many times and the outcomes being consistent; education is a right founded in the New Jersey Constitution and extracurricular activities are privileges that must be earned and can be lost for a number of legally acceptable reasons.

Most importantly, the petitioner cannot show a reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits. As the Commissioner has made abundantly clear:

> [I]t is not a proper exercise of a judicial function for the Commissioner to interfere with local boards in the management of their schools unless they violate the law, act in bad faith (meaning acting dishonestly), or abuse their discretion in a shocking manner. Furthermore, it is not the function of the Commissioner in a judicial decision to substitute his judgment for that of the board members on matters which are by statute delegated to the local boards. Boult and Harris v. Board of Education of Passaic, 1939-49 S.L.D. 7, 13, aff'd State Board of Education 1939-49 S.L.D. 15, aff'd 135 N.J.L. 329)(Sup. Ct. 1947), 136 N.J.L. 521 (E.& A. 1948).

I cannot say on this record that the subject suspension is inappropriate at all, let alone inappropriate to a degree that would require the Commissioner or this judge to substitute his judgment for that of the local Board of Education. Nor can I find that the time between the threat and the suspension was excessive under the circumstances.

Accordingly, the request for emergent relief is DENIED. It is so ORDERED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If (title of agency head) does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Education Association alleged that the Board's use of a teacher through closed circuit TV, who did not hold New Jersey certification, was unlawful, as was subcontracting with a private vendor, Limited Star Distance Learning Consortium (STARNET), to provide distance learning credit courses in Latin at the Neptune Township Senior High School.

The ALJ found that the Latin instruction provided through the Board's distance learning program could not lawfully be delivered by a person not in possession of appropriate New Jersey certification. (Guttenberg) The ALJ ordered the Board to cease provision of Latin instruction via STARNET, effective July 1, 2000. The ALJ declined to order that the Board use its own employees to provide Latin instruction and did not order the Board to cease and terminate all subcontracting arrangements with STARNET if they are otherwise lawful.

The Commissioner affirmed the ALJ's conclusion holding that the State Board of Education decision in Guttenberg controls in this matter, thus precluding the Board from providing Latin instruction by an uncertified teacher through the distance learning program in dispute. The Commissioner found it unnecessary to reach further issues under the facts of this matter.

Record Closed: February 7, 2000 Decided: March 23, 2000

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

On August 28, 1998, the Neptune Township Board of Education, with the approval of the Monmouth County Superintendent of Schools, entered a contract with Limited Star Distance Learning Consortium ("STARNET"), to provide distance learning credit courses in Latin I, II, and III, at the Neptune Township Senior High School.

On November 30, 1998, the Neptune Township Education Association ("Association"), filed a petition of appeal before the Commissioner of Education seeking a ruling from the Commissioner terminating the Board's contract with STARNET on the grounds that the contract was ultra vires and unlawful.

On January 8, 1999, the Board filed its answer, denying the allegations of the petition and raising several procedural defenses.

On January 27, 1999, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through –13.

On August 19, 1999, the parties agreed to a stipulation of facts. The Board reserved the right to supplement the stipulation, if necessary, by including omitted portions of abridged documents contained in or attached to the stipulation. It appears that no such supplementation was necessary.

On November 3, 1999, Kathleen A. Naprstek, Esq., of Zazzali, Zazzali, Fagella & Nowak, filed a motion to participate in the matter on behalf of the New Jersey Education Association. On November 23, 1999, the judge entered a Letter Order granting the motion and permitting the NJEA to participate by filing a brief and filing exceptions to the initial decision with the Commissioner of Education.

The petitioner Association and respondent Board had filed cross motions for summary judgment.

STIPULATIONS OF FACT

The parties submitted the following thirty-three stipulated facts.

1. Petitioner, Neptune Township Education Association, is the majority representative of all certified non-administrative staff employed by the Respondent, Neptune Township Board of Education, including but not limited to teachers of foreign languages.

2. The Respondent is the Board of Education of the Township of Neptune which is responsible for the administration and operation of the schools in the Township of Neptune. The Board is required to comply with all of the provisions of Title 18A of the revised statutes and to not exceed its authority thereunder.

3. Pursuant to the thorough and efficient education provision of the New Jersey Constitution and the relevant Title 18A statutory provisions the Respondent Board provides instruction of various academic disciplines for academic credit, including but not limited to the teaching of Latin.

4. For the 1985-1986 school year the Board of Education employed Natalie Smith primarily to teach Latin at the secondary level at the Neptune Township High School. Ms. Smith, in pertinent part, possessed secondary endorsements in English and Latin on her teacher instructional certificate. Ms. Smith's assigned classes from the 1985-1986 school year through the 1997-1998 school year (along with the approximate number of students taught) were as follows:

1985-1986 - one class Latin (four English classes).

1986-1988 (2 years) - four classes Latin (one English class).

1988-1992 (4 years) - five classes of Latin including two sections each of Latin I and Latin II (approximately 23 students in each class).

One section of Latin III (approximately eleven students).

1992-1997 (5 years) - again five classes of Latin.

Two sections each of Latin I and Latin II (approximately 23 students in each class).

One combination Latin III/IV class (approximately 7 students).

1997-1998 - one section of Latin I (approximately 24 students).

One section of Latin II (approximately 18 students).

One section of Latin III (approximately 7 students).
Two English classes.

5. All of the Latin classes taught by Ms. Smith during the period between 1985-1986 through 1997-1998 were for five academic credits and were taught during the entire academic year (September through June).

6. For the 1998-1999 school year Natalie Smith was assigned five English classes and was not assigned any Latin instruction within the Neptune Township School District.

7. On or about September 1, 1998 Respondent Board of Education began to utilize the services of Star Net Corporation to provide, through the use of closed circuit television, "Latin instruction" to students in grades 9-12 for credit towards graduation. The "teacher" who presented the Latin instruction to Neptune Township High School students during the 1998-1999 school year did not hold a New Jersey standard teaching certificate. (See Exhibit "A" which consists of a February 9, 1999 letter from Patricia Riley, Instructional Coordinator for Star Net, to Michael Mixon, Vice Principal of the Neptune High School, which refers to the Curriculum Vitae of Dr. George H. Thompson, who provided the Latin instruction to Neptune Township students during the 1998-1999 school year). The only alleged teaching certification in the area of Latin presently maintained by Dr. Thompson is in the State of Texas.

8. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "B" is a copy of a July 23, 1998 letter from Dr. Michael T. Lake, Superintendent of Schools, to Michael Maddaluna, Monmouth County Superintendent of Schools. The letter relates, in part, to the Neptune Township School District's interest in "entering into a contract with Limited Star Distance Learning Consortium to provide the above credit courses (i.e. Latin I, II and III) for the 1998-1999 school year". It is significant that this letter stated, in part, that the Board "...[W]ill assign a certified teacher to monitor the pupils during the broadcast phase and E-mail cycle of the program".

9. In a letter dated August 4, 1998 from Michael Maddaluna, County Superintendent of Schools, to Dr. Lake (Exhibit "C") the County Superintendent approved the Board's request "...For a distance learning arrangement for three high school courses: Latin I, Latin II and Latin III" but added, in pertinent part, that "It would also be advisable for you to assign foreign language certified teachers to monitor the broadcast and E-mail phases of the program since personnel with a language background might be most able to actively participate in guiding students during study".

The one Latin certified teacher employed at the Neptune Township High School as of the 1998-1999 school year i.e. Natalie Smith, was as previously noted reassigned from Latin instruction to an English position for the 1998-1999 school year. The two Department Chairpersons assigned to "monitor" Latin classes taught pursuant to distance learning were not certified in any foreign language. (Annexed hereto is Exhibit "C" which is an August 4, 1998 letter from Maddaluna to Michael Lake and Exhibit "D" which consists of a summary of the certificates/endorsements held by the assigned Department Chairpersons; i.e. Stephen Donley and Bertha Williams).

10. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "E" is a copy of the portion of the August 25, 1998 Board of Education meeting minutes approving Star Net, in pertinent part, as the distance learning provider for High School Latin I, II and III instruction within the Neptune Township School District.

11. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "F" is a Neptune Township High School 1998-1999 Course Description Guide which notes, in part, that the distance learning courses of Latin I and Latin II would be provided to Neptune Township school children. Significantly, this course description guide provided by the Board of Education makes reference to students being granted five credits each for Latin I and Latin II. During the 1998-1999 school year only 7 students were enrolled in the Latin I Distance Learning Class which began in August, 1998 and ended in January, 1999. The Latin II Distance Learning Class consisting of 9 students began in February, 1999 and ended in May, 1999. No Latin III was offered by the District except by the use of a correspondence course delivered to the student's home, which option was exercised by one student.

12. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "G" is a copy of a Latin I Distance Learning Roster for the 1998-1999 school year.

13. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "H" is a copy of a Latin II Distance Learning Roster.

14. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "I" please find Course Description Guides for the 1997-1998, 1996-1997, 1995-1996 and 1994-1995 school years. During this four year period of time a properly certificated teacher, Natalie Smith, provided Latin I, Latin II and Latin III/IV instruction to students within the District as part of a full year five credit course.

15. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "J" is a copy of the Neptune High School Foreign Language Curriculum. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "K" is a copy of a document supplied by the Board of Education to the Association entitled "Star Net 1997- 1998 Program and Course Guide which, in pertinent part, at pages 37 through 39 makes reference to the High School distance learning instruction provided in Latin I, Latin II and Latin III. (N.B. The Board only provided the Association with the pages that are annexed to this Stipulation of Facts). The following sections of the "Foreign Language Curriculum" are specifically noted by the Neptune Township Education Association:

1. On page 6 of the Foreign Language Curriculum statement is made that the "Foreign Language curriculum at Neptune High School has been revised to correlate directly to the State of New Jersey Department of Education mandates regarding the Core Course Proficiencies". The information provided by Star Net regarding the Latin curriculum provided pursuant to distance learning (see pages 37-39 of Exhibit "K") does not establish that the distance learning instruction regarding either Latin I or Latin II met the New Jersey Core Course Proficiencies in Latin I and Latin II.

5. On page 7 of the "Foreign Language Curriculum" reference is made to the issue of "Teacher Attitudes". The requirements set forth within this Neptune High School Foreign Language Curriculum could not possibly be realized with the use of distance learning instruction and were not realized.

3. None of the Core Course Proficiencies set forth on page 9 of the "Foreign Language Curriculum" could be met through the utilization of distance learning since essentially all of the listed proficiencies required classroom discussion between students and a properly certificated Latin language teacher.

4. On page 10 of the "Foreign Language Curriculum" in a section titled "Program Objectives" a statement is made that students would "use modern technology to enhance the classroom activities..." an objective that cannot be satisfied when technology is not utilized as enhancement in foreign language instruction but as a replacement for classroom instruction.

5. On page 10 of the "Foreign Language Curriculum" titled "Program Objectives" a statement is made that teachers in foreign languages would "correlate the curricula of all foreign language courses in our elementary and secondary schools with the New Jersey mandated Core Course Proficiencies". The limited Latin I and II instruction provided pursuant to distance learning within the Neptune School District during the 19981999 school year did not satisfy New Jersey mandated Core Course Proficiencies in Latin I or Latin II.

6. As part of the "Course Content" section of the "Foreign Language Curriculum" at pages 19 through 22 detailed Latin course content factors and objectives are delineated. Said "Course Content" objectives were not in any way satisfied through the distance learning provided to students in the Latin program within the Neptune School District during the 1998-1999 school year.

16. Within the Neptune High School Foreign Language Curriculum at page 12 reference is made to one year of Latin I instruction being provided, one year of Latin II instruction being provided and one year of Latin III instruction being provided. The Distance Learning Provider, Star Net, as previously noted, provided only one-half year of instruction in Latin I and only one-half year of instruction in Latin II while Latin III course materials through Star Net were provided through only "mail correspondence" to one student.

17. As part of the Foreign Language Curriculum at the Neptune High School (see Exhibit "J" again) a section of the Foreign Language Curriculum was devoted to the issue of "evaluating students' progress" regarding both modern and classical languages including Latin (page 24). The noted criteria as part of the evaluation process, which included a review of students' notebooks, class participation, reports, writing portfolio work and being involved in cultural projects were not effectuated pursuant to the distance learning of Latin within the Neptune Township School District during the 1998 1999 school year.

18. The "Time Allocation" standards of the Neptune High School's Foreign Language Curriculum (see page 23) regarding Latin instruction were not met through distance learning by Star Net during the 1998-1999 school year.

19. None of the Latin foreign language materials listed in the "Resource Materials" section of the Neptune High School Foreign Language Curriculum (at pages 26-28) were available for Latin students at the Neptune High School during the 1998-1999 school year. The resources/books provided through Star Net were not that of the approved curriculum within the District.

20. As an important part of the Neptune High School Foreign Language Curriculum (see again Exhibit "J") there were "scope and sequence" lists promulgated by the District to evaluate the instruction of students enrolled in language programs (see pages 32-35). The "sequencing" of the learning materials presented by the Latin Distance Learning Teacher, Dr. Thompson, was not consistent with the Board approved sequencing of Latin.

21. As part of the Star Net General Information packet (Exhibit "K") for the 1997-1998 school year references were made to the use of "teacher facilitators" at the school to be used in conjunction with distance learning which strongly supported the Association's contention that the facilitator r have the appropriate Latin subject matter endorsement. (See pages 3-12).

22. At page 12 of the Star Net Program and Course Guide references were made to Star Net's ability to accommodate individual school calendars and to assign grades based on "each school's unique time frame". It is significant that in all years prior to the present 1998-1999 school year the Latin I, Latin II and Latin III courses were all offered as full year five credit courses by in district New Jersey Latin certificated teaching staff members. During the 1998-1999 school year the Star Net calendar which provided Latin I and Latin II in half year instructional segments was utilized and no effort was made by the Board and Star Net to provide full year Latin I or Latin II instruction in contravention of the Board of Education's Foreign Language Curriculum and past practices within the District.

23. As part of the Star Net Program and Course Guide materials (Exhibit "K") at pages 37 through 39 reference was made to the Latin I, Latin II and Latin III instructional units providing one unit of credit, contrary to the five credits provided by the Neptune Township Board of Education in the past to students satisfactorily completing Latin I, Latin II and Latin III full year courses.

24. The determination of the Neptune Township Board of Education to credit students with five credits this year for completing the Latin I and Latin II half year courses provided through distance learning represents a falsification of the Latin students' records by crediting them with five credits for a one credit half year course.

25. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "L" is a copy of a letter dated February 22, 1999 from Dr. Lake to Janis Jensen of the New Jersey Department of Education regarding the topic of "Distance Learning - Spanish/Latin". The Association notes that this February 22, 1999 letter fails to note that the Neptune Township School District employed a certificated Latin teacher who was available to teach the Latin classes at issue during the 1998-1999 school year.

26. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "M" is a copy of a March 3, 1999 letter from Janis Jensen of the Department of Education to Dr. Lake which while stating that "Distance learning teachers are not required to have certification in the State of New Jersey" notes, in pertinent part, that "Research has shown that when the instructional process and goals of the program are properly monitored by a certified teacher, distance learning is compatible with second language learning, can accommodate a wide variety of student needs and interests and can increase student motivation to learn". The Association submits that the reference in this paragraph to "a certified teacher" represents the Department of Education's acknowledgement that any teacher facilitator involved in distance learning for foreign language must possess the appropriate subject matter foreign language endorsement.

27. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "N" is a copy of a January 26, 1999 memorandum from Ellen Schechter, Assistant Commissioner for the Division of Academic and Career Standards, which was forwarded, in pertinent part, to all Chief School Administrators throughout the State regarding the issue of "certification for world languages and visual and performing arts". None of the seven "staffing options" referenced in the January 26, 1999 memorandum referred to any "distance learning" option to be utilized in foreign language instruction within the State. Moreover, in the second paragraph of the January 26, 1999 memorandum the Assistant Commissioner stated as follows:

> Upon further assessment of the candidate pool with respect to the availability of appropriate staff in the areas of world languages and visual and performing arts, it has been determined that there is not an immediate need to use the emergency certification option. However, the Department will continue to monitor the situation and may approach the State Board of Education sometime in the future to request consideration for the expanding of the subject areas outline in N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.3 for the granting of emergency certification.

Implicit in this certification memorandum was the Department of Education's understanding that if appropriate New Jersey certified foreign language teachers were available within a local school district to provide foreign language instruction this was the preferred option in the delivery of foreign language services within a local school district.

28. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "O" is a copy of a March 1, 1999 letter from Dr. Michael Lake to Ellen Schechter, Assistant Commissioner which questioned, in pertinent part, why the January 26, 1999 memorandum had not referred to "distance learning as a curriculum option". It is significant to note that when the County Superintendent Michael Maddaluna approved the use of distance learning within the Neptune School District he had never been apprised of the fact that there was an appropriately certificated Latin language teacher still employed within the Neptune Township School District who was available to provide the Latin instructional services to Neptune School District students during the 1998-1999 school year.

29. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "P" is a copy of a March 10, 1999 letter from Ellen Schechter to Dr. Michael Lake stating, in part, that it was an "oversight" that there was no reference made in her January 26, 1999 memorandum to the use of "distance learning" as "an excellent mechanism for providing world languages to students of all grades". The Association submits that it is significant that Ms. Schechter was never made aware that there was a teacher within the Neptune Township School District with a Latin endorsement on her instructional certificate who was available to teach the Latin courses at issue during the 1998-1999 school year and who had successfully taught Latin I, Latin II, Latin III and Latin IV courses for well over a decade within the District.

30. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "Q" is a copy of a document entitled "Educational Technology in New Jersey - Vision and Benchmarks by 2002", a document that was provided by the Board of Education during the discovery phase of this litigation. The following statements within this "Educational Technology" document relied upon by the Board of Education in entering into the distance learning contracting relationship with Star Net for the 1998-1999 school year strongly support the Association's factual and legal contentions in the instant matter:

    1. On pages 11 through 13 of this "Educational Technology" document references are made, in pertinent part, to the use of distance learning or media based programs only when there is a "lack of available qualified teachers...". On page 13 of this "Educational Technology" document the following statements are made:

        ...Historically, media based programs used as the sole vehicle for world languages instruction have had disappointing results and have not been an adequate substitute for > classroom interaction with the world languages teacher. The key to a successful media program is the quality and intensity of follow-up by a language specialist. Media based programs supplement, but cannot replace, interactions that take place between the teacher and students. Note the following considerations:

>
> * Media based programs may not provide the meaningful interaction necessary for successful language learning.
>
> * Media based programs may not address the learning styles and needs of all students.
>
> * High quality media based programs that meet the criteria for effective standards based world languages instruction are difficult to find. In addition, specialized knowledge is needed to evaluate their potential benefit for both immediate use and long term effectiveness.

2. At the top of page 16 of this "Educational Technology" document the following statement is included:

> It is important to interject that new technologies cannot replace teacher-student or student-teacher interactions. Oxford (1998) cautions that technology can assist in creating a meaning focused, communicative language learning environment only if it becomes an integral part of the broader curriculum. Teachers must focus on learning objectives and then choose the type of technology and the tasks that meet the objectives. ...The role of the teacher as the facilitator in setting goals, providing guidelines and resources, and providing suggestions and support to the student is a key factor in successful computer assisted instruction.

3. On page 21 of the "Educational Technology" document reference is made to the importance that any technological assistance consider and accommodate a school district's mission statement and philosophy, school board goals, goals of the world language programs, and staff/specialists qualifications. The Association submits that these goals and objectives have not been met by virtue of the Neptune Township Board of Education's implementation of distance learning instruction in Latin during the 1998-1999 school year. In pertinent part, a one credit half year course in both Latin I and Latin II is being utilized by the district in satisfying a five credit full year requirement outlined within the Board of Education's foreign language curriculum.

4. On page 22 of the "Educational Technology" document a statement is made regarding the need to evaluate what opportunities are offered to the students in teaching a subject to "interact face to face" with a teacher. In providing only distance learning instruction to Latin students within the Neptune Township School District the Board is denying these students "face to face" interaction with their foreign language teacher.

5. On page 25 of the "Educational Technology" document provided by the Board of Education one of the recommendations for administrators and program planners within the District is as follows:

> There is assurance that when the program is delivered by the classroom teacher, nonspecialist teacher/volunteer, or media-based programs, it is designed and coordinated with a world languages teacher/specialist or supervisor well-versed in standards-based methodology. (It is submitted by the Association in the instant matter that this recommendation certainly has not been implemented by the Neptune Township Board of Education inasmuch as the distance learning program is not designed and/or coordinated with an appropriately certificated foreign language teacher or supervisor well-versed in standards-based methodology).

6. On page 33 of the "Educational Technology" document references are made to a series of "assessment alternatives" that clearly establish that all of the noted assessment alternatives require direct involvement between students and a certified classroom teacher; which involvement is missing in distance learning environments.

7. On pages 38 through 44 of the "Educational Technology" document reference is made to the issue of professional development of classroom teachers. It is made very clear that the use of technology is a resource to be used by a properly certificated classroom teacher and is not to be used to supplant certificated classroom teachers. (Emphasis supplied).

31. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "R" is a copy of a State Board of Education decision dated March 3, 1999 in the matter of Guttenberg Education Association vs. Board of Education of the Borough of Guttenberg, which concludes, in pertinent part, that employment as a foreign language teacher is of such a character that the qualifications for such service require appropriate State certification. (Citing N.J.A.C. 6:116.3(a)(9)). The Association cites this State Board of Education decision as conclusively establishing that the use of non-certificated teaching personnel providing limited foreign language services through distance learning for academic credit violates the aforementioned regulations that require that foreign language instruction be provided only by appropriate State certified subject area foreign language teachers.

32. Annexed hereto as Exhibit "S" is a copy of a Newark Star-Ledger article from March 19, 1999 establishing that Latin language instruction is becoming more popular throughout the State of New Jersey again. As the rest of the State moves forward in promoting Latin in our schools the Neptune Township Board of Education has moved backwards in diminishing the services and quality of instruction for Latin within the Neptune Township School District.

33. Both the students and parents of students involved in the Latin I and Latin II instructional programs offered by Star Net as part of the District's Latin distance learning experience during the 1998-1999 school year have expressed significant dissatisfaction with the "educational services" provided by Star Net. One Latin I student was advised that he had failed Latin I only because numerous assignments that had been turned in by the student to the Department Chairperson "monitoring the Latin I course" had apparently not been transmitted for grading purposes by the Department Chairperson to Dr. George Thompson who is providing said Latin instruction.

ADDITIONAL ASSERTIONS OF FACT

The Association relies on the joint stipulation of facts. The Board asserts, in addition, that the nature and contents of exhibits cited in the stipulation create additional, necessary facts.

On July 23, 1998, the Neptune Superintendent of Schools wrote to the Monmouth County Superintendent of Schools requesting approval of a distance learning program at the high school for the 1998-99 school year in the areas of Latin I, II and III, through a contract with STARNET. The Neptune Superintendent advised the County Superintendent that the Board "will assign a certified teacher to monitor the pupils during the broadcast phase and e-mail cycle of the program" and that the Board's "current Latin Curriculum and grading procedure will be interfaced with the Distance Learning Program." Exhibit B.

On August 4, 1998, the County Superintendent wrote to the Neptune Superintendent and approved the Board's request "for a distance learning arrangement for three high school courses: Latin I, Latin II and Latin III." Exhibit C. On August 28, 1998, the Board approved STARNET as the distance learning provider for Latin I, II and III. Exhibit E.

The STARNET Distance Learning Program provides student instruction via direct television broadcast and videotape programs. Exhibit K. STARNET provides collateral materials including calendars and lesson plans as well as text books, laboratory apparatus, resource materials, work books, language audio tapes and other instructional materials. Exhibit K. STARNET requires the district to assign a classroom facilitator for high school credit courses. Exhibit K. STARNET offers training for facilitators. Exhibit K. Facilitators "report certain classroom activities to the STARNET instructional staff. The Facilitator is also responsible for sending student tests, assignments and other projects to STARNET." Facilitators are required to "monitor student progress and report any difficulties to the student, parents and school administrators." Exhibit K.

The District assigned Department Chairpersons Stephen R. Donley and Bertha L. Williams as facilitators for the high school Latin I, II and III distance learning courses. Both Mr. Donley and Ms. Williams are full-time teaching staff members employed by the Board. Both are holders of standard instructional certificates. The various endorsements to their instructional certificates are set forth in the statement of facts (Exhibit D). Neither Mr. Donley nor Ms. Williams are holders of a foreign language endorsement issued pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.2(a)(9).

STARNET assigned George H. Thompson, Ph.D, as the instructor for the Board's Latin I, II and III courses. Dr. Thompson holds teaching certificates issued by the states of Texas and New Mexico. He does not hold a teaching certificate issued by the State of New Jersey. Thompson's curriculum vitae is in the stipulation of facts at Exhibit A.

On February 22, 1999, Neptune's Superintendent wrote to Ms. Janis Jensen, World Language Coordinator, Office of Standards and Professional Development, New Jersey Department of Education, requesting a review by the Department of the District's High School Distance Learning Latin Program. Specifically, the Superintendent sought review of "the contention of our Association that the distance learning teacher must be a New Jersey Certified Foreign Language Teacher and the Classroom Teacher monitoring the downlink classroom in Neptune must be a New Jersey certified Foreign Language Teacher." Exhibit L.

On March 3, 1999, Ms. Jensen wrote to the superintendent and advised that "Distance Learning Teachers are not required to have certification in the State of New Jersey." Ms. Jensen also said that "Distance Learning is recognized in the field as a viable alternative model for delivering world language instruction and is recommended as an option by the New Jersey World Languages Curriculum Framework." Exhibit M.

The Latin Distance Learning Program has been in operation in the Neptune Senior High School from September 1998 to the present.

THE ARGUMENTS

The Association

The Association asserts that the Board may not use non-certified teaching personnel to provide foreign language instruction for academic credit to its high school students. The Board began using STARNET on or about September 1, 1998. The "teacher" who presented the Latin instruction does not hold a New Jersey Standard Teaching Certificate. The Board at all times pertinent to this case employed a person properly certified in Latin.

N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2, N.J.A.C. 6:8-6.2 and N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.1 all require possession of the New Jersey State Teacher's Certificate in order to provide instruction for academic credit to school children in New Jersey. N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.3(a)(9) clearly requires that a Latin teacher possess the required foreign language endorsement on that teacher's teaching certificate. Since September 1998, Dr. George Thompson has provided Latin instruction to Neptune Township High School students for academic credit although it is uncontroverted that he does not hold any New Jersey teaching certificate.

Further, the two Department chairpersons were assigned to monitor the Latin classes taught by a television. However, neither of these persons has a foreign language endorsement.

On March 3, 1999, the State Board of Education decided Guttenberg Education Association v. Board of Education of the Borough of Guttenberg, St. Bd. decision (March 3, 1999) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html, which held that employment as a foreign language teacher is of such a character that the qualifications for that service require appropriate State certification. N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.3(a)(9). The Association relies on this decision as conclusively establishing that the use of non-certificated teaching personnel providing limited foreign language services through distance learning for credit violates the regulations that require that such instruction be provided only by appropriate State-certified subject area foreign language teachers.

Referring to Guttenberg, the Association points out that the State Board reversed the decision of the Commissioner to grant the Guttenberg Board's application for an "equivalency" pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(c) to "permit persons with a County Substitute Certificate and subject matter experience to provide world language instruction." The Guttenberg Board had advised the Commissioner that it had approved the use of instructors employed by Berlitz International to serve as "world language teachers" and that the Board requested an equivalency "because the Berlitz Teacher/Program is not certified . . ."

The Commissioner had granted Guttenberg's requested equivalency on January 9, 1998 for a period of three years. The Commissioner also indicated that the Guttenberg Board could submit a request for the continuation of the equivalency at the end of that period.

A notice of appeal challenging the equivalency was filed with the State Board on February 4, 1998. In rejecting the grant of the equivalency, the State Board cited the statutes and regulations that the Neptune Association relies on here.

The Association reasons that if a local board of education cannot provide foreign language instruction through the use of non-certificated instructional personnel who only possess county substitute certificates, then all the more a board such as the Neptune Township Board can not use the services of a non-certificated individual to provide Latin instruction for academic credit through a television teaching arrangement. It cannot be maintained that the Guttenberg arrangement with Berlitz International would have been validated the State Board if the Berlitz instruction is provided to pupils through a closed circuit television arrangement instead of through the services of an individual who would be physically present in the classrooms.

The Board appears to argue that this case is distinguishable from Guttenberg inasmuch as departmental supervisors were assigned to monitor the Latin instructional classes. The Association counters that argument by pointing out that it is uncontroverted that the department chairpersons assigned to monitor the Latin classes do not posses any foreign language certification. Their function in the classroom was simply to ensure the attention and good behavior of pupils in the classroom.

The Association also urges that there may be many instances in which distance learning can be used by properly certificated classroom teachers, meaning those with appropriate subject area endorsements, to enrich the instruction rendered by classroom teachers.

However, the Association strongly urges that, in light of the cited statutes and regulations and the Guttenberg State Board of Education decision, a board education cannot completely supplant academic construction by properly certified teaching staff members by way of entering into contracts to provide instruction for academic purposes through the use of closed circuit television. If the Board's arguments are sustained and the existing Latin distance learning venture is approved by the Commissioner, there will certainly be an increasing number of situations in which public school students in New Jersey will only receive instructional assistance, via a distance learning techniques, from non-certificated persons to the detriment of the entire educational process.

The Association also asserts that the facts and relevant exhibits establish that the Latin instruction provided through closed circuit television by a non-certificated individual, failed to meet even the required curriculum standards of the Board. Furthermore, the instruction does not provide a thorough and efficient education to the school children in the district who sought Latin instruction for academic credit.

At the August 25, 1998 Board of Education meeting, the Board approved STARNET as the distance learning provider for Latin I, II and III instruction within the district. Exhibit E.

The 1998-99 Course Description Guide (Exhibit F) notes that the distance learning courses of Latin I and Latin II would be provided to Neptune Township pupils. This course description guide provided by the Board refers to students being granted five credits each for Latin I and Latin II. During the 1998-99 school year, only seven students were enrolled in the Latin I distance learning class which began in August 1998 and ended in January 1999. The Latin II distance learning class, consisting of nine students, began in February 1999 and ended in May 1999. No Latin III was offered except by use of a correspondence course delivered to the student's home, which option was exercised by one student.

Exhibit I includes the Course Description Guides for the 1997-98, 1996-97, 1995-96 and 1994-95 school years. During this four-year span, a properly certificated teacher, Natalie Smith, provided Latin I, Latin II and Latin III/IV instruction to students within the district, each as a full year, five credit course.

Exhibit J is a copy of the Neptune High School Foreign Language Curriculum. Exhibit K is a copy of the documents supplied by the Board to the Association entitled "STARNET 1997-98 Program and Course Guide" which, at pages 37-39 makes reference to the High School Distance Learning Instruction provided in Latin I, Latin II and Latin III. A comparison of the two documents reveals that the Board's Foreign Language Curriculum asserts that "Foreign Language Curriculum at Neptune High School has been revised to correlate directly to the State of New Jersey, Department of Education mandates regarding the Core Course Proficiencies." The information provided by STARNET regarding the Latin curriculum to be supplied pursuant to the distance learning arrangement does not establish that the distance learning instruction regarding either Latin I or Latin II met the New Jersey Core Course Proficiencies for Latin I and Latin II.

The Board's Foreign Language Curriculum refers to teacher attitudes. The requirements set forth in this curriculum cannot be realized through the distance learning instruction mechanism.

None of the Core Course Proficiencies set forth in the Board's Foreign Language Curriculum could be met through the distance learning technique because essentially all of the listed proficiencies require classroom discussion between students and a properly certificated Latin teacher.

The Board's Foreign Language Curriculum, in a section titled "Program Objectives," states that students would "use modern technology to enhance the classroom activities . . . ." An objective can not be satisfied when technology is not used as an enhancement, but as a replacement for classroom instruction.

The Board's Foreign Language Curriculum, in the section titled "Program Objectives" states that teachers of foreign languages will "correlate the curricula of all foreign language courses in our elementary and secondary schools with the New Jersey Mandated Core Course Proficiencies." Association urges that the limited Latin I and II instruction provided under the distance learning mechanism did not satisfy mandated Core Course Proficiencies in either Latin I or Latin II.

As part of the Course Content section of the Board's Foreign Language Curriculum, detailed Latin course content factors and objectives are spelled out. These objectives were not in any way satisfied through the distance learning mechanism provided to students in the Latin program in the Neptune School District during the 1998-99 school year.

The Foreign Language Curriculum makes several references to one year of Latin I instruction being provided, one year of Latin II instruction being provided and one year of Latin III instruction being provided. STARNET provided only one half year of instruction in Latin I and one half year instruction of Latin II, while Latin III course materials were provided only by "mail correspondence" to one student.

The Foreign Language Curriculum devotes a section to evaluating progress in modern and classical languages, including Latin. The noted criteria including a review of students' notebooks, class participation, reports, writing portfolio work and being involved in cultural projects, were not done under the distance learning scheme in the 1998-99 school year.

The Time Allocation standards expressed in the Foreign Language Curriculum were not met through the distance learning mechanism in the 1998-99 school year.

None of the Latin foreign language materials listed in the "Resource Materials" section of the Foreign Language Curriculum were available for Latin students at the Neptune High School in the 1998-99 school year. The resources and books provided through STARNET were not those of the approved curriculum. Nor did the scope and sequence of the learning materials presented by STARNET match the Board-approved scope and sequence lists.

The STARNET general information package (Exhibit K) for 1997-98 referred to the use of "teacher facilitators" at the school in conjunction with distant learning. The Association asserts this supports its contention that the facilitator would have to posses the appropriate Latin subject endorsement.

The STARNET Program and Course Guide refers to STARNET's ability to accommodate individual school calendars and to assign grades based on "each school's unique time frame." In all years prior to introduction of distance learning, Latin I, Latin II and Latin III courses were all offered as full year-five credit courses by in-district New Jersey certified Latin teachers. During the 1998-99 school year, the STARNET calendar provided Latin I and Latin II in half-year instructional segments and no effort was made by the Board or STARNET to provide full year Latin I or Latin II instruction. This contravenes the Board's Foreign Language Curriculum and its past practice.

The STARNET program and course guide materials refer to the Latin I, Latin II and Latin III instructional units providing one unit of credit, contrary to the five credits provided by the Neptune Township Board in the past to students who satisfactorily completed Latin I, Latin II or Latin III full-year courses.

The Board's determination to credit students with five credits this year for completing Latin I and Latin II half year courses provided through distance learning represents a falsification of the Latin students' records by crediting them with five credits for a one credit, half year course.

Exhibit Q is a document entitled "Educational Technology in New Jersey – Vision and Benchmark by 2002," supplied by the Board to the Association in discovery. The following statements within the documents, relied upon by the Board in entering into the distance learning relationship with STARNET, support the Association's factual and legal contentions:

1. On pages 11 through 13 of this "educational Technology" document references are made, in pertinent part, to the use of distance learning or media based programs only when there is a "lack of available qualified teachers. . .". On page 13 of this "Educational Technology" document the following statements are made:

>
> * Media based programs may not provide the meaningful interaction necessary for successful language learning.
>
> * Media based programs may not address the learning styles and needs of all students.
>
> * High quality media based programs that meet the criteria for effective standards-based world languages instruction are difficult to find. In addition, specialized knowledge is needed to evaluate their potential benefit for both immediate use and long term effectiveness.

2. At the top of page 16 of this "Educational Technology" document the following statement is included:

> It is important to interject that new technologies cannot replace teacher-student or student-teacher interactions. Oxford (1998) cautions that technology can assist in creating a meaning-focused, communicative language learning environment only if it becomes an integral part of the broader curriculum. Teachers must focus on learning objectives and then choose the type of technology and the tasks that meet the objectives. . . . The role of the teacher as the facilitator in setting goals, > providing guidelines and resources, and providing suggestions and support to the student is a key factor in successful computer-assisted instruction.

3. On page 21 of the "Educational Technology" document reference is made to the importance that any technological assistance consider and accommodate a school district's mission statement and philosophy, school board goals, goals of the world language programs, and staff/specialists qualifications. The Association submits that these goals and objectives have not been met by virtue of the Neptune Township Board of Education's implementation of distance learning instruction in Latin during the 1998-1999 school year. In pertinent part, a one credit half year course in both Latin I and Latin II is being utilized by the district in attempting to satisfy a five credit full year requirement outlined within the Board of Education's foreign language curriculum.

4. On page 22 of the "Educational Technology" document a statement is made regarding the need to evaluate what opportunities are offered to the students in teaching a subject to "interact face to face" with a teacher. In providing only distance learning instruction to Latin students within the Neptune Township School District the Bard is denying these students "face to face" interaction with their foreign language teacher.

5. On page 25 of the "Educational Technology" document provided by the Board of Education one of the recommendations for administrators and program planners within the District is as follows:

> There is assurance that when the program is delivered by the classroom teacher, nonspecialist teacher/volunteer, or media-based programs, it is designed and coordinated with a world languages teacher/specialist or supervisor well-versed in standards-based methodology. (It is submitted by the Association in the instant matter that this recommendation certainly has not been implemented by the Neptune Township Board of Education inasmuch as the distance learning program is not designed and/or coordinated with an appropriately certificated foreign language teacher or supervisor well-versed in standards-based methodology).

6. On page 33 of the "Educational Technology" document references are made to a series of "assessment alternatives" that clearly establish that all of the noted assessment alternatives require direct involvement between students and a certified classroom teacher; which involvement is missing in distance learning environments.

7. On pages 38 through 44 of the "Educational Technology" document reference is made to the issue of professional development of classroom teachers. It is made very clear that the use of technology is a resource to be used by a properly certificated classroom teacher and is not to be used to supplant certificated classroom teachers.

The Association points out that newspapers and other publications have remarked about the growth of Latin language instruction in New Jersey. Both the students and the parents of students involved in the Latin I and Latin II instructional programs via STARNET expressed dissatisfaction with the "educational services" provided. One Latin I student was advised that he had failed Latin I only because numerous assignments that had been turned in by the student to the Department chairperson had apparently not been transmitted for grading purposes by the chairperson to Dr. George Thompson, who is providing the controverted Latin instruction.

In summary, the Association asserts its arguments clearly establish that the instruction provided through distance learning by an uncertificated teacher fails to accommodate or even acknowledge the curriculum objectives established by Neptune Township High School and the Neptune Township Board of Education. Moreover, the Latin instruction, such as it is, is substandard and antithetical to the objectives of a thorough and efficient education.

The Board

The Board argues that the Association alleges its contract with STARNET is ultra vires and unlawful. The thrust of the Association claim is that the Thorough and Efficient Education provisions of the New Jersey Constitution, together with various provisions of Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes and Title 6 of the New Jersey Administrative Code require the Board to provide foreign language instruction only through the use of certified teachers employed by the Board. The Association would like a ruling not only declaring the Board's contract with STARNET void, but also compelling the Board "to provide foreign language instruction through the use of the Board's own employees" and prohibiting the Board from procuring Latin instruction services from private contractors, vendors, corporations, persons or other entities.

These allegations and claims for relief are based on the provisions of education law that govern employment contracts between district boards of education and certified staff. N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2 speaks of teaching staff members "employed in the public schools by any board of education." N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1 defines teaching staff member as "a member of the professional staff of any district or regional board of education, or any board of education of a county vocational school, holding office, position or employment. . . ." And there are other references to holder of position, employing board of education and employment. But education laws do not limit district boards of education to providing pupil instruction only by means of classroom teachers employed by the Board.

In Impey v. Bd. of Ed. of the Borough of Shrewsbury, 142 N.J. 388, 390 (1995), the New Jersey Supreme Court recognized that boards have considerable latitude in providing essential educational services. The Court held that the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:46-1 through -46, Classes and Facilities for Handicapped Children, and the regulations of the Commissioner and State Board of Education, specifically N.J.A.C. 6:28-7.4(a), "authorize a local board of education to enter into a contract with an educational services commission to obtain speech correction services for its eligible pupils." 142 N.J. at 396.

Further, N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2 authorizes boards to enter into contracts with properly licensed commercial drivers' schools for the purpose of providing behind-the-wheel instruction as part of a regular driver education course. These contracts are governed by the provisions of the Public School Contracts Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-1 through -59. The Public School Contracts Law excludes contracts of employment from its provisions. "Contract" for the purpose of this chapter means contracts or agreements for the performance of work or the furnishing or hiring of services, materials, or supplies as distinguished from contracts of employment. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(c).

The Board's contract with STARNET to provide distance learning Latin courses is a contract for "the furnishing or hiring of services" within the meaning of the Public School Contracts Law. Thus, it is distinguished from contracts of employment. As such, the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-2 and N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.1 do not apply.

The Board's authority to contract with STARNET to provide Latin instruction components is inferable from the provisions of the Comprehensive Educational Improvement and Financing Act of 1996 and the rules adopted by the State Board of Education and the Commissioner to carry out the Act. At N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-2(b), the Act provides:

> 5. The Legislature, therefore, provides and establishes:
> a. A definition of a thorough and efficient system of public education which is uniformly applicable to all districts in the State and specifies what must be learned with reference to academic standards that must be achieved by all students.
>
> b. The types of programs and services that will accomplish these goals in a manner that is thorough and efficient.
>
> c. A level of financial support sufficient to provide those programs and services.
>
> d. A funding mechanism to ensure that support.
> e. A system which ensures that the expenditure of public funds will be undertaken both with prudence and sound management and with accountability that includes mechanisms for enforcement in the event a district fails to meet the substantive standards established as set forth herein.

The Act also establishes procedures, implemented by the State Board, for defining the substantive content of a thorough education in the form of what are described as rigorous Core Curriculum Content Standards. These are to be uniformly required of each district in the State. On May 1, 1996, the State Board adopted seven academic and five workplace readiness areas as Core Curriculum Content Standards. The Act also establishes mechanisms for setting and maintaining standards for the efficient delivery of programs and services to accomplish the goal. N.J.A.C. 6:19-1.1.

The Act also requires the Commissioner to develop and establish efficiency standards that define the types of programs, services, activities and materials necessary to achieve a thorough and efficient education. The efficiency standards must be reviewed every two years and revised as appropriate. The Commissioner established standards that are set forth in the biennial report on the cost of providing a thorough and efficient education. N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-4(c)(3) requires the biennial report to address the cost of providing the distance learning network component of a thorough and efficient education.

The Act requires the State Board to define the content of a thorough and efficient education in the form of Core Curriculum Content Standards. The standards adopted by the State Board include world languages.

The Neptune Board's foreign language curriculum must comply with the Core Curriculum Content Standards. The Board's authority to contract with STARNET for distance learning services to provide the Latin I, II and III components is inferable from the provisions of the Act. This conclusion is also supported by legislation and regulations adopted after the filing of the present petition. In 1999, the Legislature enacted L. 1999, c.110, which designated Neptune Township as an "Abbott district." Under this designation, the Board is subject to the rules of the State Board and the Commissioner effective September 10, 1999, and which were adopted to insure the provisions of a thorough and efficient system of education as defined by the Core Curriculum Standards to pupils attending public schools in the Abbott districts. N.J.A.C. 6:19A-1.1.

Under these rules, the Board must submit to the Department of Education a plan for implementation of a research-based whole school reform model or a whole school alternative program design or a comprehensive strategy that uses research-based supplemental programs that address the Core Content Standards no later than May 2000. N.J.A.C. 6:19A-4.1(d) requires:

> 5. Educational technology: Educational technology shall be infused in all aspects of curriculum and instruction, throughout the entire WSR [whole school reform] model, to support achievement of the Core Curriculum Content Standards pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:19A-1.4(f) and -2.2(b).

> 6. Educational technology includes acquisition and maintenance of necessary equipment and infrastructure, provision of appropriate professional development activities and designation of appropriate staff to implement plans and activities.

The Board insists that its distance learning Latin program is an essential element of its WSR model.

The Board also argues that the certification provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.1 et seq. do not apply to distance learning programs adopted to achieve Core Curriculum Content Standards. The Association's reliance on Guttenberg, above, is misplaced. The issue of the legality of providing foreign language instruction by subcontracting with a private vendor for instructional services was not addressed in the decision. Second, unlike the contractual arrangement with Berlitz International that was the subject of the Guttenberg Board's application for an equivalency, the Neptune Board's distance learning Latin program is specifically authorized by statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-4, as an efficient program by which to achieve the Core Curriculum Content Standards.

The Department of Education recognizes distance learning as a viable alternative model for delivering language instruction. Exhibit M. The Board's distance learning Latin program conforms to the distance learning model for world languages contained in the World Languages Curriculum Framework Second Draft, Exhibit Q.

The inherent nature of a distance learning program, that is, enabling students to take courses offered in other schools or universities, to collaborate on projects with remote peers or mentors, and to access a wide array of electronic services for achievement of the Core Curriculum Content Standards infers that the certification provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.1 and other sections do not apply to distance learning programs adopted by district boards of education pursuant to the Comprehensive Education Improvement and Financing Act of 1996. Our courts recognize that administrative agencies must have flexibility to respond to changing conditions and technologies. In Radiological Society of New Jersey v. N.J. State Dept. of Health, 208 N.J. Super. 548, 559-560 (App. Div. 1986), the court decided an appeal from a determination requiring that providers obtain a certificate of need as a prerequisite to reimbursement for coaxial scanning and magnetic resonance services furnished to hospital patients. The Appellate Division held that the contested determination was "inferable from the enabling statutory authority." The court went on to state in its conclusion that it was guided by the administrative agency's need for flexibility:

> Nevertheless, we also recognize that administrative agencies must possess the ability to be flexible and responsive to changing conditions. Texter v. Human Services Dept., supra, 88 N.J. at 385 (1982). This flexibility "includes the ability to select those procedures most appropriate to enable the agency to implement legislative policy. Ibid. Toward that end, "courts and commentators have encouraged hybrid agency proceedings as a way of producing more reasoned agency decision, especially in complex and controversial policy areas." Ibid. While this discretion is not unlimited, we must defer to the choice made as long as the selection is responsive to the purpose and function of the agency. Id. at 385-386. We perceive no justifiable basis to disturb the agency's determination here. N.J. School Boards Ass'n v. State Health Benefits Comm'n, 183 N.J. Super. 215 (App. Div. 1981; Equitable Life Mort. v. New Jersey Div. of Taxation, 151 N.J. Super. 232 (App. Div. 1977).

The Department of Education's determination that distance learning teachers are not required to have certification in the State of New Jersey (Exhibit M) is responsive to the purpose and function of the Department's statutory mandate under N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-4 to establish procedures for setting and maintaining standards for efficient delivery of programs and services that will accomplish the goals established by Core Curriculum Content Standards. The Department's determination was appropriate to carrying out legislative policy.

The Board also argues that the Association's claim is time-barred by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). The petition challenges the Board's contract with STARNET to provide distance learning credit courses in Latin I, II and III. The Board approved the contract and courses on August 28, 1999. Exhibit E. The petition challenging the Board's action was filed on November 30, 1999, beyond the 90-day limit established by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c).

The Participant

The New Jersey Education Association filed a letter brief on January 7, 2000. The state association argues largely as does the local association. The NJEA asserts that, although the Board may argue this case involves issues of the implementation of world language instruction and the increased use of educational technology, the real issue is whether a board is permitted to provide foreign language instruction to its students for graduation credit through the use of non-certified personnel. The issue has been determined by the State Board of Education in Guttenberg Education Association v. Board of Education. of the Borough of Guttenberg, St. Bd. decision (March 3, 1999) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html, in which it concluded that "employment as a foreign language teacher is of such character that the qualifications for such service require appropriate certification" (slip op. at 6). In Guttenberg, the Board entered into a contract with Berlitz International, Inc., a private contractor, for provision of world language teaching. Because the Berlitz teachers did not hold the appropriate teaching certificates that would entitle them to teach foreign language classes in the New Jersey public schools, the Board applied to the Commissioner for an equivalency waiver from the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(c). Specifically, the Guttenberg Board sought permission to use county-certified substitute teachers to replace academic classroom teachers in foreign language instruction. While the equivalency application was pending, the Board employed a county-certified substitute teacher who did not hold the requisite standard teaching certificate to teach Spanish on a regular basis. This individual did not replace a teacher on leave, but filled a vacant position.

After the Commissioner granted the equivalency waiver for a three-year period, an appeal was filed with the State Board contesting the legality of permitting individuals having only county substitute certificates to deliver world language instruction. The parties submitted a proposed settlement of the appeal that indicated that the Board had determined not to "use the equivalency" that it had been granted and would refrain from employing an individual with a county substitute certificate to teach any foreign language. Nevertheless, the State Board of Education determined it was necessary to resolve the underlying certification issue. In invalidating the equivalency waiver, the State Board declared:

> [W]e have concluded that the responsibility of the State Board of Education for the general supervision of public education, N.J.S.A. 18A:4-10, and for the enforcement of the education laws of this state, N.J.S.A. 18A:4-15, preclude us from permitting the Commissioner to exercise the authority we have delegated him by the adoption of N.J.A.C. :3A-1.1 et seq. to set aside certification requirements that would otherwise apply. In that the equivalency granted by the Commissioner in this case would have such an effect, we conclude that it is invalid (slip op. at 4).

The State Board noted that the Guttenberg Board had been granted an equivalency waiver to N.J.A.C. 6:29-3.3(c), which permits the holder of a county substitute certificate to serve as an athletic coach in the school district in which that individual is employed, provided the chief school administrator can demonstrate that there is no "qualified and certified" applicant for the position. An argument was made on appeal that the Commissioner was justified in granting Guttenberg's equivalency waiver as it enabled the district to meet its need to develop a world language program. Nevertheless, the State Board recognized both the error made in issuing a waiver of the certification requirements for a foreign language teacher under the regulation governing coaches, for whom there are no certification requirements, as well as the error of issuing a waiver of the certification requirements established by the State Board of Examiners for service as a foreign language teacher. The State Board stressed in its decision "employment as a foreign language teacher is of such character that the qualifications for such service require appropriate certification." Even the district's need to develop a world language program did not justify setting aside the certification requirements.

As did the Guttenberg Board, the Neptune Township Board is trying to thwart the certification requirements established for a foreign language teacher. In using STARNET's services, the Board is permitting its students to be taught Latin by an individual who does not hold the requisite foreign language certification. This is further exacerbated by the fact that the Latin lessons that are being transmitted to the Neptune students via closed circuit television are being "monitored" by individuals who do not hold the necessary foreign language certification to teach Latin. What makes the Board's actions particularly egregious is the fact that the Board has a teacher in its employ who possesses the appropriate certification to teach Latin, the same teacher who provided Latin instruction in the district for more than ten years.

The State Board of Education recognized in Guttenberg:

> [C]ertification requirements establish the threshold qualifications for teaching staff members employed in the public school system throughout the state. N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1; N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2. As such, and under the current statutory framework embodied in Title 18A, the certification process is critical to assuring the provision of a thorough and efficient education. . . . Since certification requirements are at the core of the current structure governing the delivery of all education programs under our jurisdiction, setting aside the standards embodied in our certification rules unnecessarily risks such a compromise. (Slip op. at 7).

DETERMINATION AND ORDER

Today's case is on all fours with the State Board of Education decision in Guttenberg in major respects. In Guttenberg, however, a circumstance existed that is not present here. The Guttenberg Board had been unable to employ a properly certificated foreign language teacher. Notwithstanding the Board's claim that there were emergent circumstances and that the use of non-certificated foreign language teacher was justified by emergency, the State Board decided that the Guttenberg Board could not legally employ the services of a person within the district who did not possess the appropriate New Jersey instructional certificate and the appropriate foreign language endorsement.

In Neptune Township, by contrast, there is a properly certified teacher of Latin. The Board decided not to employ Ms. Smith as a Latin teacher during the 1998-99 school year and the present school year. It decided to use the services of a private corporation. The corporation, STARNET, would provide through distance learning an instructor who did not possess a New Jersey State certificate. If it was not proper in an emergency situation to use a non-certificated teacher to provide foreign language instruction, then all the more, a local board of education cannot properly replace an appropriately certificated language teacher with a program via television.

The Guttenberg decision controls. Distance learning and other techniques, if employed to supplement academic instruction provided by certified teachers, are appropriate. The State Board of Education has declared that these mechanisms may not supplant a properly certified teacher.

It may be useful to momentarily put aside the statutes and regulations and look at what caused the petition of appeal to be filed. Pupils who want to study Latin at Neptune High School meet at a designated time and watch television programs containing Latin instruction presented by a person not the holder of a New Jersey teacher certificate, let alone a foreign language endorsement on a New Jersey teacher certificate. The pupils in the room are supervised or monitored by Department chairpersons who do not hold foreign language endorsements on their teaching certificates. It is not known if either or both of these persons ever studied Latin. Obviously, the television instructor cannot be asked questions. There is no interactivity.

On the question of credits awarded for the Latin courses under the former arrangement and the new arrangement, I am not provided enough information to find that the term "credit" has the same meaning in both contexts. Nor is the important issue of time devoted to instruction sufficiently developed to allow findings. It may be that what STARNET calls one credit is what the Department of Education used to call one unit. It may also be that instructional time is equal or substantially equal under the two regimens. In light of the ultimate holding herein, it may not be necessary to decide these questions.

From an insurance liability point of view, the presence of certificated persons in the room suffices. In educational terms, it does not. N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.1 makes clear that "each teaching endorsement is required for the corresponding teaching assignment." It is not denied that the television teacher is not appropriately certified. Thus, if an appropriately certified teacher were conducting the course and using the television programs as a supplement, there would be no problem. However, the television instruction is being used to supplant rather than supplement the program of Latin instruction. This is different from the situation in Impey, above. There, the Court held that a local board of education could enter into a contract with an educational services commission to obtain speech correction services for its eligible pupils. 142 N.J. at 396. It is obvious that Impey deals with speech correction services, not instruction. Further, the persons employed by the educational services commission to provide speech correction services held appropriate New Jersey certificates.

Nor can I agree with the respondent's reading of the Public School Contracts Law. While it is true that the law excludes contracts of employment, and does permit contracts for the performance of work or hiring of services, the law must be read as a whole. At N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(c), the following: "Contracts" for the purpose of this chapter means contracts or agreements for the performance of work or the furnishing or hiring of services, materials, or supplies as distinguished from contracts of employment. At N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(h), "Professional services" means services rendered or performed by a person authorized by law to practice a recognized profession and whose practice is regulated by law and the performance of which services requires knowledge of an advanced type in a field of learning acquired by a prolonged formal course of specialized instruction and study as distinguished from general academic instruction or apprenticeship and training. Professional services also means services rendered in the performance of work that is original and creative in character in a recognized field of artistic endeavor. The plain words in these definitions do not support the Board's arguments.

Teachers supply professional services. They are persons authorized by law to practice a recognized profession which is regulated by law. The performance of that profession requires knowledge of an advanced type in a field of learning acquired by a prolonged formal course of specialized instruction and study. More than that, however, every teaching staff member in New Jersey public schools must possess a valid certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners.

Plain reasoning dictates that the requirements are not met in the distance learning arrangement at Neptune High School for Latin instruction. The Board's authority to contract with STARNET is not properly inferable from the provisions of the Comprehensive Educational Improvement and Financing Act. It must be noted that the Board appears to have acted in good faith and to have acted in great part upon information provided by the Department of Education.

This reliance does not excuse the failures of the program. The Association would like the Board ordered to provide foreign language instruction through use of the Board's own employees. The Association also asks that the Board be ordered to cease and terminate all subcontracting arrangements with STARNET. Further, the Board should be prohibited from procuring Latin instruction services from private contractors, vendors, corporations, persons who are entities. This is perhaps too much. Certification requirements establish the threshold for teaching staff members employed in the public schools. Under the current statutory framework, the certification process is critical to assurance of the provision of a thorough and efficient education. A new delivery system, a new technique or an innovative approach, while all should be encouraged, cannot properly push aside certification requirements.

Exhibit N is a January 26, 1999 memorandum to chief school administrators from the Assistant Commissioner of Education for Academic and Career Standards addressing certification for world languages. Under "Staffing Options," seven possibilities are suggested. The first five state or imply that staff must be appropriately certified. Options six and seven are instructive:

> Option 6: Employment of paraprofessionals who possess the necessary skills to assist with the delivery of language instruction may be considered provided that they are under the supervision of a certificated staff member in the classroom.
> Option 7: Districts may use resource persons in conjunction with a certificated staff member in the classroom to assist in implementing a program similar to the program process outlined in N.J.A.C. 6:29-4.2(g) for family life education. College students, pre-service teachers, parents, or other interested and qualified members of the community with the necessary language skills may be considered. This person shall be under the supervision of the certificate (sic) staff member in the classroom.

The documents very clearly speaks for itself.

Even reliance on the World Languages Coordinator's letter of March 3, 1999 to the Neptune Superintendent is unavailing because the Coordinator states "Research has shown that when the instructional process and goals of the program are properly monitored by a certified teacher, distance learning is compatible with second language learning, ..." [Emphasis by this writer.] Exhibit M. It would make little sense to read this as implying that any certified teacher could do the job. Only an appropriately certified language teacher can reasonably be expected to address properly the many things and questions that inevitably arise in the classroom.

The present petition is not untimely. The Board acted to enter a contract with STARNET on August 26, 1998. Exhibit E. The petition was filed with the Commissioner of Education on November 25, 1998, ninety-one days after the Board adopted the resolution approving an arrangement with STARNET. The president of the Association avers that she, the Association and Natalie Smith did not know on August 26 that the Board did not intend to employ a teacher holding a Latin endorsement on a valid teaching certificate. This was not known until the week beginning September 7, 1998. And it took until November 9, 1998 to determine that the television instructor lacked appropriate certification. Inasmuch as N.J.S.A. 18A:27-2 forbids employment of a person to teach unless the person is the holder of an appropriate certificate, the ninety days contemplated in N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.3(c) began to run on the first day the distance learning arrangement was used and began to run on each day thereafter the arrangement was used.

Even if the violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-2 is not deemed a continuing violation, the subject of the case is of such gravity as to justify relaxation of the 90-day rule. The Board says information regarding the STARNET contact was available to the public (including the Association) on August 26. The Appellate Division, the State Board of Education and the Commissioner have each rejected such narrow construction of the rule. In Meyer v. Board of Education of Wayne, 1986 S.L.D. 3094, the State Board observed, inter alia, at 3098, "in the absence of actual knowledge, the cause of action accrues only upon notice sufficient to alert the teaching staff member who has been adversely affected . . . ." In Myer, a reduction in force was at question.

> We disagree with Kaprow's contention that the Local Board's lawyer's letter of June 14, 1988 constituted the order, > ruling or action taken by the Local Board on his claim. The final order, ruling or other action by the Local Board occurred when it appointed nontenured persons to positions to which Kaprow claims tenure rights. Ciliento was appointed Assistant Superintendent of Administrative Services in 1986 and Ms. McGuckin was appointed District Supervisor of Elementary Education in 1987. However, because of the Local Board's unexplained failure to create a preferred eligibility list at the time Kaprow was riffed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, and failure to notify him of these openings pursuant to the local board's attorney's letter dated September 22, 1981, Kaprow had no notice of the openings nor of the Board's final order, ruling or other action filing those openings. But, on February 23, 1998, Kaprow was clearly advised by the Local Board's secretary of these appointments, to which he promptly responded by asserting his claims. Thus, we agree with the State Board that it was at that time that the controversy or dispute came into being and Kaprow was obliged, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c), to file his petition no later than 90 days from the receipt of the letter from the Local Board's secretary dated February 23, 1998. Yet, he did not file the petition until August 1, more than five months after receipt of the February 23 letter and two and half months after the deadline he himself had established for the Local Board to respond to his follow-up letter of April 25, 1988. Thus, his claims were time barred as found by the State Board. [Emphasis added.]

Accordingly, I ORDER the Neptune Township Board of Education to cease provision of Latin instruction via STARNET effective July 1, 2000. Because there may be other lawful methods for providing this instruction, I do not ORDER that the Board use its own employees to provide Latin instruction. There would be some relationship, of course, between the Board and any person or persons providing Latin instruction. That relationship is secondary, however, to appropriate certification.

The Association also wants an order directing the Board to cease and terminate all subcontracting arrangements with STARNET. This, too, overreaches. There may be lawful and appropriate arrangements between STARNET and the Board that do not violate either statute or code. For example, much of what has been provided via STARNET in the last two school years might appropriately supplement Latin instruction provided by a properly certified teacher.

Nor am I willing to order that the Board be prohibited from procuring Latin instruction services from private contractors, vendors, corporations, persons or entities. Again, it is not the character of the provider that controls. Rather, it is the possession of appropriate certification. The prohibition the association seeks would be overly broad.

In consideration of the foregoing, the petition of appeal of the Neptune Township Education Association is GRANTED. The appropriate remedies are found in the orders, above.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF NEPTUNE, RESPONDENT.	:	DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the petition of appeal should not be dismissed as untimely. The Commissioner further concurs that the holding of the State Board of Education in Guttenberg, supra, controls in this matter, so that the Latin instruction provided through respondent's distance learning program could not lawfully be delivered by a person not in possession of appropriate New Jersey certification.

Accordingly, the Commissioner affirms the order of the OAL directing respondent to cease its current means of providing Latin instruction through STARNET. Like the ALJ, the Commissioner does not find it necessary under the facts presented in this matter to reach further issues.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Burlington Board contested the determination of the Department that the Board was responsible for tuition costs and expenses for R.E., a special education student placed in a residential facility.

The ALJ determined that R.E.'s mother, also R.E., lived in respondent's District at the time of placement. The Board admitted that R.E. lived in the District from February 1996 until June 1996, but contended that R.E. was never a legal resident since she lived with a friend temporarily. The ALJ determined that the district of residence for the purposes of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, N.J.A.C. 6:5-1.1 through 5-1.10, and N.J.A.C. 6:24 was Burlington, on the date of the child's placement in a residential facility. Petition was dismissed.

The Commissioner adopted findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own.

INITIAL DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 6011-97

AGENCY DKT. NO. 160-5/97

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF BURLINGTON, BURLINGTON COUNTY,

Petitioner,

v.

NEW JERSEY DEPARMTNET OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF FINANCE,

Respondent.

Thomas J. Scattergood, Esq., for petitioner

Robert Bates, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (John J. Farmer, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 9, 2000 Decided: April 13, 2000

BEFORE KATHRYN A. CLARK, ALJ:

In this matter, the Board of Education of the City of Burlington, Burlington County (petitioner) contests the determination of the Department of Education, Bureau of School Finance (respondent). The issue involved the placement of a special education student by the Division of Youth and Family Services in a residential facility. The respondent had determined that the district of residence of the parent of this special education student at the time of her placement was the City of Burlington, and that, accordingly, petitioner is responsible for the tuition costs of providing the student with a free, appropriate public education. N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12, N.J.A.C. 6:20-5.3 and N.J.A.C. 6:20-5.4.

Respondent determined that R.E. was a resident of 522 B. Road, Burlington, N.J., at the time of the placement of her daughter. The daughter of R.E. (whose initials are also R.E.) was placed in Willowglen Academy, a group home, under a voluntary residential placement agreement on February 6, 1997. At the time of the placement, R.E. gave DYFS the address of 522 B. Road. For her and her daughter's residence.

Petitioner's position was that 522 B. Road is a single family house owned by RJT Enterprises of Burlington, and that this house was leased to J. and D. W., by assignment of the original lease, from R.L., the original leaseholder P-5. D.W. lives there now with her 3 minor children.

Petitioner admitted that R.E. lived in Burlington City from February, 1996 until June, 1996. Petitioner said that R.E. now resides at 222 U. Street, Beverly, N.J., and has done so since about May, 1997. R.E. was in Burlington City, on April 18, 1997.

Petitioner's witness, John A. McBride, said that the Burlington City housing ordinance (P-1) required a certain amount of space in a residence for the number of people in residence, and that 522 B. Road could not legally hold R. E., her daughter, and the legal tenants, J. and D. W. (neé D.S.), and D.W.'s three children. The landlord said that he had no knowledge that R.E. and her daughter lived at 522 B. Road, and D.W. said that R.E. does not live there now.

Joanne Fadol, of the Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS), said that the information that R.E. lived at 522 B., Bordentown, from July, 1996 through July, 1997 came from the client, R.E., herself. She said no one from her agency performed a home visit or otherwise went to the reported address to verify that R.E. lived there.

Burlington City says that R.E. was never a legal resident of 522 B. Road, but there is no requirement in the law that she be legally a tenant, or that her presence in the house she occupied be in accordance with a municipal ordinance, or that she be known to the landlord.

Evidence was presented that R.E. lived in Burlington City on February 21, 1996. Her residence on the critical date of February 6, 1997, is known only from the statement she gave to DYFS in arranging her daughter's placement.

The petition of Burlington City itself states that "the tenant was a friend of R.E. and permitted her stay temporarily at these premises in February, 1997 for a couple of weeks while she was in transit searching for an apartment and a permanent address."

I believe that petitioner's statement is true. R.E. lived with a friend temporarily. While she and her child were living with that friend, her child was placed in residential care. The district of residence for the purposes of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, N.J.A.C. 6:5-1.1 through 5-1.10, and N.J.A.C. 6:24, was Burlington, on the date of the child's placement in a residential facility. Board of Ed. of Maurice River v. Board of Ed. of Wildwood, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 895, interpreting N.J.A.C. 6:3-8.3(b)(6), recodified as N.J.A.C. 6:5-1.8.

The appeal of Burlington City is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF BRUCE WHITE, :

EWING TOWNSHIP BOARD OF : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

EDUCATION, MERCER COUNTY. : DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Citing In the Matter of Frank Pannucci, the School Ethics Commission concluded that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act when, as a Board member, he negotiated and voted on a contract with a local bargaining unit where his wife was a member of the same statewide general union. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner impose a penalty of removal from the Board.

During the pendency of the administrative proceedings, the State Board of Education reversed the Commission's decision in Pannucci. The Commissioner found that, given the change in law that had occurred during the ongoing proceedings in this matter, he could not adequately assess the Commission's recommended penalty without having the benefit of that body's review of its decision in light of the State Board's ruling in Pannucci. The Commissioner, therefore, returned the matter to the Commission so that it could determine what effect, if any, the State Board's reversal of prior decisional law might have on its finding of violation and recommended penalty.

In its decision on return, the Commission considered the effect of the Pannucci decision on its finding of a violation and the penalty recommendation. The Commission reaffirmed that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act and added that the facts also established a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a) and (b) and reaffirmed its recommendation that the Commissioner impose a penalty of removal from the Board.

The Commissioner reiterated that the findings and conclusions of the Commission as to what occurred or whether it was a violation of the School Ethics Act are outside the scope of the Commissioner's review and must be accepted by him in reviewing the Commission's recommended penalty. The Commissioner determined that the violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) and (c) found by the Commission were insufficient to warrant the extreme result of respondent's removal from elected office. The Commissioner determined that the appropriate penalty to be imposed upon respondent as a school official found to have violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a), (b) and (c) of the School Ethics Act, under the circumstances set forth by the Commission, was suspension from the Ewing Board of Education for a period of 45 days.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 4036-00

AGENCY DKT. NO. 161-5/00

C. C. ON BEHALF OF HER MINOR SON, R.S.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF RIVERTON,

Respondent.

C. C., petitioner, pro se

Frank P. Cavallo, Jr., Esq., on behalf of the respondent (Parker McCay & Criscuolo, P.A., attorneys)

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

This matter concerns the petition filed with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) on May 16, 2000. The petitioner raises a number of issues and asks for emergent relief to stay the proposed detention of R.S., which C.C., his mother, alleges was improperly imposed.

The matter was transmitted on May 16, 2000, to the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-t o –13, prior to the filing of any papers by the respondent, since the petitioner is requesting emergency relief.

The oral argument as to the motion for emergency relief took place on June 1, 2000.

This order deals only with the motion for emergency relief.

Emergency relief is an extraordinary equitable remedy and the burden of proof is on the petitioner to show that (1) there is a threat of immediate and irreparable harm to the petitioner, (2) there is a probability that the petitioner will eventually succeed on the merits, and (3) the legal rights are settled; and (4) that the inconvenience or loss to the Board will be nominal. Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982); New Jersey Bar Association v. Northern New Jersey Mortgage Associates, 22 N.J. 184 (1956); N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6; N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5.

Based on the petition and the oral arguments, I FIND that the facts pertinent to this motion are not in dispute.

On or about April 5, 2000, a teacher reported that R.S. was copying homework answers from another student's book in the school's hallway between classes. The teacher sent a note to C.C. stating that R.S. had cheated and that he was going to receive an incomplete for the assignment and would be kept after school the following Thursday so that he could complete the homework. It was estimated that this after-school detention would be for about 20 minutes.

C.C. spoke to her son and R.S. denied that he was cheating. R.S. told his mother that he had not completed his homework and that he was doing it in the hall. C.C. also spoke to the other student involved who also denied that R.S. was copying his homework answers.

C.C. spoke to the teacher and then to the superintendent and was told that R.S. would have to serve the detention which had been increased to 45 minutes. C.C. refused to allow her son to serve the detention. C.C. then spoke to the President of the Board of Education who arranged for a hearing as to the detention matter on May 2, 2000. The Board affirmed the detention and the petition in issue was therefore filed with the Commissioner.

C.C. argued that the teacher's observation was faulty, that her son was not cheating and that he should not serve any period of detention. C.C. stated that there have been several incidents at school involving her son which have resulted in a bad relationship between her and school's personnel. These incidents have affected R.S. and her son has seen a doctor for stress-related problems. C.C. thinks that R.S. is afraid of his teacher.

C.C. argued that it would be harmful to her son to be required to serve the detention prior to a hearing to determine whether or not he cheated as to his homework assignment. Also, C.C. was confident that at the hearing it would be shown that her son did not cheat as to the homework.

Frank P. Cavallo, Jr., Esq., on behalf of the respondent, argued that there is a strong likelihood that the petitioner will not prevail in the matter. Mr. Cavallo stated that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-1 students are required to comply with school rules and he argued that the Board correctly affirmed the detention in the matter. Mr. Cavallo argued that the petitioner has not shown any irreparable harm will result if R.S. served the detention. Mr. Cavallo argued that the granting of the motion will cause a problem to the Board since the Board is concerned about the upholding of its right to discipline students and to be consistent with its discipline.

I have a concern regarding the increase in the length of the detention imposed on R.S. The Board's position is that the increase is consistent with the Board's rules. I question the increase which apparently was imposed because R.S.'s mother has refused to allow her son to serve the detention. However, I recognize that it has been clearly established that the Commissioner should not interfere with the management of schools by the local boards and to substitute his judgment for that of the local boards as to matters delegated to the local boards by statutes. Boult and Harris v. Bd. of Ed. of Passaic, 1939-49 S.L.D. 7, aff'd, State Bd. of Ed. 1939-49 S.L.D. 15, aff'd, 135 N.J.L. 329 (Sup. Ct. 1947), aff'd, 136 N.J.L. 521 (E.&A., 1948).

I am persuaded by Mr. Cavallo's argument that R.S. would not suffer any irreparable harm and that there is a likelihood that the petitioner will not succeed in this matter. Since I have CONCLUDED that the petitioner has not shown irreparable harm or a likelihood of being successful in this matter, I DENY the motion for emergent relief.

This order as to the motion for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without due delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergency relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The audiocassette tape of the emergent hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law on June 1, 2000, and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions were timely submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and were duly considered by the Commissioner in rendering his determination herein.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs that petitioner has failed to satisfy the four-pronged standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) for obtaining emergent relief. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, a grant of emergent relief is considered an extraordinary remedy which may only be issued where petitioner has demonstrated that the relief is necessary to prevent irreparable harm, where the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled, where there is a likelihood of success on the merits and where the relative hardship to the moving party favors granting such relief. Crowe at 132-34.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the ALJ is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein. Petitioner's request for emergent relief is denied. This matter shall continue at the OAL for further proceedings on the merits of petitioner's claim as may be deemed necessary.

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, June 8, 2000

For the Petitioner-Appellant, C.C., pro se

For the Respondent-Respondent, Parker, McCay & Criscuolo (Frank P. Cavallo, Jr., Esq., of Counsel)

Appellant, the parent of a student attending school in the Riverton school district, filed a petition of appeal and a request for emergent relief with the Commissioner of Education challenging the Riverton Board's determination to uphold the after-school detention imposed against her son for allegedly copying homework answers from another student. On June 8, 2000, the Commissioner of Education denied the appellant's request for emergent relief, finding that she had failed to satisfy the standard for such relief set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

On June 15, 2000, the appellant filed a notice of appeal with the State Board of Education from the Commissioner's denial of her request for emergent relief.

SEPT. 6, 2000

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.11(a), the appellant's brief in support of her appeal was due on July 5, 2000, 20 days after she filed her notice of appeal. The appellant, however, failed to file a brief by that date. By letter dated July 13, 2000, the Director of the State Board Appeals Office notified the appellant of her failure to file a brief and informed her that this matter was being referred to the Legal Committee of the State Board for consideration of her failure to perfect the appeal.

The appellant has still failed to file a brief in support of her appeal, nine weeks after the deadline for such filing and eight weeks after she was notified of such failure. Nor has she offered any explanation for her failure to file or requested an extension of time for such filing. As a result, we dismiss the appeal in this matter for failure to perfect. SYNOPSIS

Petitioners challenged the Board's adoption of a policy prohibiting the possession and use of portable paging or telecommunication devices by employees during school hours. Subsequent to the initiation of the petition, the parties agreed that the employees would place their cellular phones and pagers in a mutually agreed-upon location, e.g., an administrative office, and could use those devices during their lunch periods. A hearing was held on the remaining issue regarding employee use of cellular phones during their preparation or professional periods.

Initially, the ALJ concluded that petitioners challenged the policy as applied and that the case was properly before the Commissioner of Education and the Office of Administrative Law. The ALJ concluded that there is no constitutional right to cellular telephones and pagers and that there is no constitutional right specifically affected by their prohibition. The ALJ also concluded that the Board's policy was not vague as charged, since the conduct prohibited was clear and all employees received a copy of the policy and the superintendent's memorandum noticing employees that violation of the policy might result in appropriate disciplinary action. Finally, the ALJ concluded 1) that the Board had reasonable rationale to adopt the policy, 2) that there was insufficient reason to nullify the policy because it permits the superintendent on a case-by-case basis to allow personnel to have a portable pager or to issue disciplinary action for violating the policy and 3) that petitioners failed to demonstrate that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably in adopting a policy which forbids the employees from possessing cellular telephones and pagers during preparation or professional periods. Petition was dismissed.

The Commissioner adopted findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own.

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners North Bergen Federation of Teachers, Local 1060, American Federation of Teachers, and AFL-CIO challenged the policy adopted by respondent Board of Education of the Township of North Bergen (Board) that prohibits the possession and use of portable paging or telecommunication devices by employees during school hours. Petitioners assert that the policy is ultra vires, arbitrary and capricious and violates free speech.

On October 21, 1997, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The undersigned held several settlement conferences and on November 3, 1999, the parties placed on the record a partial settlement; they agreed that employees could use cellular phones during their lunch periods. A hearing was held on the remaining issue regarding employee use of cellular phones during their professional periods.

The parties filed post-hearing briefs and the record closed on January 20, 2000. Due to the voluminous case load of the administrative law judge (ALJ) an order of extension was granted for filing the Initial Decision to April 20, 2000. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8.

UNDISPUTED FACTS

The relevant facts are undisputed:

On May 16, 1997, respondent school board adopted a policy, effective September 1, 1997, governing the possession and use of portable paging and telecommunication devices by its employees. The policy provides as follows[1]:

> PORTABLE PAGING OR TELECOMMUNICATION DEVICES (STAFF)
> A paging or telecommunications device is a device that emits an audible signal, vibrates, displays a message, or otherwise summons or delivers and sends a communication to the possessor. Receipt or transmission will constitute use.
>
> No Board employee shall use a portable paging or telecommunications device while on school property, during instructional or other assigned work time.
> No Board employee shall possess a portable paging or telecommunications device while on school property unless the device has been registered in the office of the Superintendent and approved in > writing by the Superintendent. At the time of registration, the individual will acknowledge this policy on form prepared for this purpose.

>
> A person using or possessing a telecommunications device in violation of this policy will meet with the Superintendent to discuss the violation. The Superintendent will take any action deemed appropriate. A subsequent violation will be reported to the Superintendent and Board for appropriate disciplinary action.

Additionally, on May 19, 1997, the superintendent of schools issued the following memorandum:

> MEMORANDUM
> TO: ALL STAFF MEMBERS
> FROM: LEO C. GATTONI, JR., SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS
> DATE: MAY 19, 1997
> RE: PORTABLE PAGING OR TELECOMMUNICATION DEVICES (STAFF)
>
> Please be informed that the Board of Education has put into effect starting September 1, 1997, the attached policy #4152 entitled "Portable Paging or Telecommunication Devices." Also, be aware that disciplinary action may be taken for a violation of said policy.
> Please sign the attached sheet indicating that you have read the resolution and policy and that you understand the consequences if you violate this policy.

The parties have agreed that employees would place their cellular phones and pagers in a mutually agreed-upon location, e.g., an administrative office, and could use those devices during their lunch periods.

I

SUMMARY DECISION

On May 11, 1998, petitioners moved for summary decision and contended that the policy is void, ultra vires, arbitrary and capricious, and unreasonable. Also, petitioners alleged that the policy is contrary to the best interests of the personnel of the North Bergen School System, and is an improper exercise of the Board's discretionary authority. Petitioners further argued that the policy unduly restricts, hinders, and interferes with free speech and other rights of staff members. Petitioners also contended that the policy is overbroad, vague, and an abuse of discretion because it lacked guidelines to implement the policy or to determine penalties. Additionally, petitioners contended that the superintendent's memorandum concerning the policy is "arbitrary, capricious, engendered by improper motives, illegal, and/or unreasonable." The Board filed a cross-motion to dismiss the petition.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), summary decision is appropriate > if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law.

Summary decision in administrative proceedings parallels summary judgment in the courts. Summary judgment is > designed to provide a prompt, businesslike and inexpensive method of disposing of any cause which a discriminating search of the merits in the pleadings, depositions and admissions on file, together with the affidavits submitted on the motion clearly shows not to present any genuine issue of material fact requiring disposition at a trial.

> [Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Company of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954).]

In administrative proceedings, as in the courts, it is "the movant's burden to exclude any reasonable doubt as to the existence of any genuine issue of material fact." Ibid. Thus, "[a]ll inferences of doubt are drawn against the movant in favor of the opponent of the motion. The papers supporting the motion are closely scrutinized and the opposing papers indulgently treated." Id. at 75.

The New Jersey Supreme Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520, 539-40 (1995), applied the summary judgment standard employed by the federal courts. Under Brill, once the movant has presented competent evidence tending to show the absence of any genuine issue for trial, the nonmovant must do more than simply create some doubts as to the material facts. Moreover, the nonmoving party cannot rely on disputed issues of fact that are insubstantial. Rather, Brill requires the nonmovant to raise a factual issue substantial enough to sustain a reasonable conclusion in the nonmovant's favor if a hearing were held. If the evidence, along with reasonable inferences, could sustain a judgment in favor of the nonmovant the motion must be denied.

Essentially, the Board's action forbids its employees to use personal cellular telephones and pagers during instructional or other assigned work time. Also, the policy prohibits employees from possessing portable paging or telecommunication devices on school property unless they obtain permission from the superintendent. However, the parties have agreed that employees would place their cellular phones and pagers in a mutually agreed-upon location, e.g., an administrative office, and could use those devices during their lunch periods. Thus, the remaining issue is whether the Board's policy forbidding the employees from using personal cellular telephones and pagers during their instructional and preparation periods is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

On July 9, 1998, the undersigned issued an oral ruling on the parties' motions. For the reasons discussed herein I CONCLUDED that the policy adopted by the Board was not void on its face. Further, I CONCLUDED that the matter may be brought before the OAL to determine whether the Board's action to restrict the time, place and manner in which staff may use cellular telephones to communicate was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or vague. According, I CONCLUDED that there existed genuine issues of material fact and DENIED the parties' motions for summary decision.

II

ISSUE

The issue is whether the Board's policy that forbids the employees from possessing cellular telephones and pagers during instructional and preparation periods is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.[2]

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a review of the relevant evidence I FIND the following FACTS:

1. North Bergen School District includes one high school and six elementary schools.

2. North Bergen High School includes approximately 2,400 students, 172 teachers, and 17 other employees.

3. North Bergen High School contains three to four telephones that are available for use at all times. One of the phones is located in the teachers' lounge for their exclusive use. The other three phones are located in the building's hallways. They are available for use by all persons in the building.

4. Franklin School, grades K-8, includes 612 students, 44 teachers and 24 other employees and has one public telephone.

5. McKinley School, grades K-8, includes 349 students, 29 teachers and 18 other employees. There are no public telephones in the building.

6. Kennedy School, grades K-8, includes 618 students, 42 teachers and 30 other employees and has one public telephone.

[2] Because the parties have stipulated that employees may use their cellular phones and pages their lunch periods, that question will not be discussed.

7. Fulton School, grades K-8, includes 1,072 students, 70 teachers and 15 other employees and has two public telephones.

8. Lincoln School, grades K-8, includes 713 students, 45 teachers and 46 other employees and has one public telephone.

9. Horace Mann, grades K-8, includes approximately 1,300 to 1,400 teachers and personnel and has three public telephones.

10. Employees have not requested that additional telephones be installed in the schools. They have requested, however, a replacement telephone for the McKinley School.

11. Prior to May 1997, there was no policy that prohibited the employees from using cellular telephones.

12. Currently, employees are permitted to use cellular phones and beepers before and after the school day and during their lunch periods. During the school day they must leave their phones in the school office. In the event of an emergency situation, employees may retrieve their phones from the office. In the event of a long-term personal or family emergency, applications can be made to the superintendent for permission to carry their phones on their person. Approval is made on a case-by-case basis.

13. Prior to the teachers having access to personal cellular phones, emergency telephone calls would be made to the main office and a staff member would contact the teacher at his or her classroom. The teacher would be relieved to respond to the emergency telephone call.

14. Teachers employed at the high school work from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a forty-minute lunch period. Two police officers provide security to the staff and students. Teachers have ten professional or "prep" periods each week. Each "prep" period is forty minutes. Teachers may take their "prep" periods in the faculty lounge, the media room or their classroom. They use that period to prepare lessons, grade papers, and obtain equipment for classes.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Petitioners presented Phillip Steinberg and Monica Coyle, the former and current president of the Federal Teachers' Union, and Stephen Ludwig, a teacher employed by the District. Steinberg has taught at the high school for thirty-six years and he has served as the grievance representative for teachers and clerical employees. Steinberg received one complaint from the Board that two elementary school teachers used their cellular phones to have a personal conversation.

Steinberg, Coyle and Ludwig testified that there are too few public telephones available for employees. Further, a teacher cannot hold a private conversation because the phones are installed on the walls, not in telephone booths. Moreover, some of the phones are not readily accessible because they are located in remote areas of the buildings. Also, the witnesses believed that teachers should be allowed to carry phones for safety. For example, emergency situations may occur and the teacher may need to call 911, police or security.

Peter J. Fischbach is the superintendent of schools and has been employed by the school district for forty years. Fischbach testified that the Board adopted "Policy 4152, Portable Paging or Telecommunication Devices" in response to complaints that teachers and students were using cellular phones and beepers during class time. Some teachers left classrooms to make calls; others used the phones while they were in classrooms instructing pupils. Fischbach believed that the policy was consistent with the employment contracts that identify the time periods for teachers to instruct pupils. Thus, the Board believed that the devices, when in use, would interfere with the teachers' performance of their job duties. Also, the discharge of pagers and cellular phones during class time would compromise the health and safety of the students. Additionally, the Board believed that using cellular phones during professional periods would interfere with the teachers' duties and disrupt persons who were working within close proximity of the person making the personal telephone call. Fischbach also noted that state law prohibits students from carrying beepers in public schools, unless there is a medical or an emergent reason. Thus, he believed that teachers should set an example for their students.

I have considered petitioners' allegation that the policy violates their constitutional rights. Petitioners' contend that the policy is unconstitutional, overbroad and vague. Thus, it must be declared null and void. Respondent argues that the policy is not vague on its face and passes constitutional muster.

The Commissioner has "fundamental and indispensable" jurisdiction over all disputes and controversies under the school laws. Theodore v. Dover Bd. of Educ., 183 N.J. Super. 407, 412-13 (App. Div. 1982). Moreover, it has been established that the Commissioner's jurisdiction extends to matters involving constitutional issues so long as the issues advanced to him are not novel in nature and have already been adjudicated by a court of competent jurisdiction. Matter of Tenure Hearing of Sciarrillo, School Dist. of the City of Garfield, 1977 S.L.D. 197, 202; Schults v. Board of Educ. of Teaneck, 86 N.J. Super. 29 (App. Div. 1964). Generally, in administrative proceedings, rules may be attacked as applied, but not facially. 37 New Jersey Practice, Administrative Law and Practice § 93 (Steven L. Lefelt) (1999). However, if an issue is especially fact sensitive and related to important matters of educational practice and policy, it may be necessary first to submit some facial constitutional challenges to the administrative agency. Abbott v. Burke, 100 N.J. 269 (1985), appeal after remand, 119 N.J. 287 (1990).

Here, the subject being regulated is when and how school employees may communicate with people outside the classroom. No protected speech is targeted and no particular association prohibited. Rather, petitioners challenged the Board's authority to restrict the time and manner of communication. Whether the policy compromises constitutional protections requires an examination of the particular conditions of the school environment both generally and at the specific schools involved. I CONCLUDE that the petitioners have challenged the policy as applied and that the case is properly before the Commissioner of Education and the OAL.

To survive constitutional scrutiny, a regulation must be content neutral, not directed at any particular message, idea, or form of speech, and must serve a significant government interest. International Society for Krishna Consciousness, Inc. v. Lee, 505 U.S. 672, 706, 112 S. Ct. 2701, 2722, 120 L. Ed. 2d 541, 568 (1992). The policy addresses no specific speech content. Further, it does not directly contravene freedom of association. Rather, the Board has imposed restrictions on the time, place and manner in which staff may use cellular telephones to communicate.

I CONCLUDE that there is no constitutional right to cellular telephones and pagers. I further CONCLUDE that there is no constitutional right specifically affected by their prohibition. While staff may communicate with others, they may not have unrestrained access to personal telephones in the classroom. Although behavior is constrained, with a limitation of choices and liberty to act at any given moment, the constraint does not implicate constitutional guarantees.

Petitioners challenge the manner in which the Board is implementing its interest in controlling the schools. Petitioners argue, and I agree, that distractions are inherent in the lounge, where most teachers spend their "prep" periods. Further, the use of cell phones would provide convenience and privacy. Indeed, portable communication devices would allow communication, which might not otherwise be possible. Although the Board provides office and public telephones for employees, a quick call between classes might not be possible if the pay phone or office phone is too far away, or in use at the time needed. Moreover, a pager can more quickly indicate that a call is required and allow for more efficient communication, particularly when care of other family members or other exigent situations may be involved.

However, the arguments in favor of permitting teachers to carry phones and beepers during instructional periods and to use those devices during "prep" periods do not outweigh the Board's reasonable exercise of the power to administer the school. Teachers are being required to communicate at particular times by particular means. The authority to establish and maintain standards of teachers' conduct is conferred on boards of education by N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1. Indeed, the need to control the schools is a significant government interest. For example, in a matter impacting on teachers' expression, the court found that creating an atmosphere of respect within a dignified environment conducive to discipline and learning was a reasonable basis for a policy specifying a narrow dress code for teachers. Carlstadt Teachers Ass'n v. Board of Educ. of Borough of Carlstadt, No. A-1469-80 (App. Div. March 26, 1982). The court analyzed the dress code and found that fifteen different combinations of wearing apparel were acceptable to the board, and that provided sufficient flexibility allowing for individual teacher tastes. Id. at 4-5.

Further, I reject petitioners' argument that the policy "is not fully comprehensive of its intent" and vague because it fails to specify its rationale or purpose, and that its intent is unclear. Moreover, petitioners' reliance on Romeo v. Board of Education of Madison, 1973 S.L.D. 102, is misplaced. In that matter the Commissioner stated that, "In ascertaining the meaning of a policy, just as of a statute, the intention is to be found within the four corners of the document itself." 1973 S.L.D. at 106. However, Romeo makes clear that the language should be given its ordinary and common significance. Ibid.; see, e.g., Lane v. Holderman, 23 N.J. 304 (1957) (meaning of a statute primarily ascertained by reading the language in its common significance); Sperry & Hutchinson Co. v. Margetts, 15 N.J. 203 (1954) (particular words are to be made responsive to the reason and spirit of the enactment). Thus, Romeo does not imply that a policy statement must comprehensively describe its aim or intent within the four corners of the written document. However, the Board is required to show a reasonable purpose for the regulation.

Also, I reject petitioners' arguments that the policy is vague and overbroad. "To avoid the pitfall of vagueness, the terms of a zoning ordinance must enable a person of 'common intelligence, in light of ordinary experience' to understand whether contemplated conduct is lawful." State v. Cameron, 100 N.J. 586, 591 (1985), quoting State v. Lashinsky, 81 N.J. 1, 18 (1979). The standard to determine the vagueness of a law is not mechanical. Vagueness is determined within the contextual background of the particular law and with a firm understanding of its purpose. Village of Hoffman Estates v. Flipside, Hoffman Estates, 455 U.S. 489, 498, 102 S. Ct. 1186, 1193, 71 L. Ed. 2d 362, 371 (1982). "The degree of vagueness that the Constitution tolerates – as well as the relative importance of fair notice and fair enforcement – depend in part on the nature of the enactment." Cameron, supra, 100 N.J. at 591.

Here, petitioners' vagueness charge requires only "that the rule fail to proscribe clearly the conduct against which it is being enforced in the matter before the court." 37 New Jersey Practice, Administrative Law and Practice, supra, § 94. "[I]n the area of occupational restrictions, any imprecision in drafting must be assessed with a recognition that the governing body of the occupation or profession is uniquely qualified to assess the meaning of the language." Ibid., quoting Moiseyev v. New Jersey Racing Comm'n, 239 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1989). The disputed policy proscribes teachers from possessing and using cellular telephones and portable pagers during instructional and "prep" periods. The devices may be used before and after school and during lunch periods. "That there may be a borderline area where application of the law is vague does not render the entire statute void for vagueness unless that borderline area is so broad that it covers practically the entire statute." Town Tobacconist v. Kimmelman, 94 N.J. 85, 124 (1983).

Here, no broadness is evidenced in the policy. The record reveals that all employees received a copy of the policy and the superintendent's memorandum. Both documents gave sufficient notice to employees that violation of the policy may result in appropriate disciplinary action. Petitioners further complain that permission for cellular telephones or pagers may be granted only at the unfettered discretion of the superintendent. "The mere fact that subjectivity may be part of the process does not establish any taint." J.B. and N.B. for J.B. v. Board of Educ. of Jefferson, EDU 2826-95, Initial Decision (Oct. 1, 1997), aff'd, Comm'r (November 14, 1997) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; see also Dangler v. Yorktown Central Schools, 771 F. Supp. 625 (S.D.N.Y. 1991) (criteria for election of student by faculty to membership in National Honor Society legitimately subjective). In individual determinations, the superintendent is also constrained by the requirement of reasonableness. Frisby v. United States Dep't of Housing and Urban Dev., 755 *F.*2d 1052 (3d Cir. 1985). I CONCLUDE that the policy is not vague.

Based on the whole of the evidence I CONCLUDE that the Board's interest in eliminating distractions for teachers in the classroom and during instructional and preparatory periods provides a reasonable rationale to adopt the policy limiting the use of cellular phones and pagers. I CONCLUDE that it is insufficient reason to nullify the Board's policy because the policy permits the superintendent on a case-by-case basis to allow personnel to have a portable pager or to issue disciplinary action for violating the policy. Further, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have failed to demonstrate that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably in adopting a policy that forbids the employees from possessing cellular telephones and pagers during instructional and preparation periods.

ORDER

It is ORDERED therefore that the petition filed by North Bergen Federation of Teachers, Local 1060, American Federation of Teachers, and AFL-CIO be DISMISSED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties filed no exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon his careful and independent review of the within record, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that petitioners have failed to establish that the Board's adoption of a policy prohibiting the possession and use of portable paging or telecommunication devices by school staff during preparation or professional periods was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or a violation of their constitutional rights. Therefore, the Board's imposition of such restrictions was a reasonable exercise of its discretionary authority not subject to disturbance by the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is affirmed for the reasons stated therein and the within Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

In consolidated matter, petitioner challenged the Board's action withholding her increment for school year 1994-95 and sought reinstatement to her former position of Assistant Board Secretary/Director of Administration. Petitioner contended the Board's actions withholding her increment and reassigning her supervisory duties to a new position of comptroller were arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and motivated by bad faith (retaliation for her objections to allegedly improper budget-related actions in 1994). The Board argued that petitioner's appeal was untimely filed.

Initially, the ALJ concluded that the first petition was timely filed but that Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA) claims are beyond the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Education. The ALJ concluded that the Board's decision to withhold petitioner's salary increase was arbitrary because the Board failed to give petitioner sufficient notice that her work was deficient, failed to afford her an opportunity to take corrective action, and failed to articulate the criteria used to reject the recommendation of her supervisor. The ALJ did find that the Board complied with the requirements of the Open Public Meetings Act and acted within its discretion under the Tenure Act. The ALJ concluded that the Board did not act in bad faith, had reasonable grounds to establish a comptroller position with fiscal supervisory duties formerly assigned to petitioner and to demote her on the District organization chart. The ALJ reversed the Board's decision withholding petitioner's salary increase for the school year 1994-95 and affirmed the Board's decision establishing the comptroller position and demoting petitioner.

The Commissioner affirmed in part, modified in part the Initial Decision. The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petition was timely filed and that the Board did not act in bad faith in establishing the comptroller position and demoting petitioner. As to the denial of salary increases, the Commissioner noted that since petitioner was not a teaching staff member subject to payment on a salary guide, the Board's actions in twice denying her a salary increase were not reviewable by the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. However, since petitioner was not a member of a collective bargaining unit or party to an agreement which might provide a mechanism to resolve such disputes, the Commissioner considered her claim that the Board's actions were taken for retaliatory reasons, but could not find that the Board acted improperly. Petition was dismissed.

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Helen Cheloc, challenges the action of respondent Elizabeth Board of Education (Board) to withhold her increment for school year 1994-95 and seeks reinstatement to her former position of Assistant Board Secretary/Director of Administration.

On May 17 and October 24, 1995, the Department of Education transmitted the petitions to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as contested cases pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to-15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Hearings were scheduled for December 6, 1995, September 9 and 10, 1997, February 6 and 7, 1997, February 20, 1997, April 3, 7, and 8, 1997, November 24 and 25, 1997, December 8, 9, and 10, 1997, January 29, 1998, and February 1999. At the parties' request and for good cause many of the hearing dates were adjourned. Hearings were held on February 6 and 7, 1997 and February 10, 1999. The parties filed post hearing briefs and the record closed on March 7, 2000.

FACTS

Based on a review of the relevant evidence I FIND as FACT:

1. In December 1985, Cheloc began her employment with the Board as assistant board secretary/director of administration. Her responsibilities included supervising the departments of purchasing, payroll, accounting, and workers' compensation. Also, Cheloc assisted the board secretary/business administrator, Linda King.

2. Cheloc holds tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2.

3. Cheloc earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in economics, a Master of Arts in Education Administration and holds an administrative certificate.

4. During the 1990-91 school year, the budget for the Elizabeth school district increased by approximately forty percent to $150 million. As a result, the accounting functions of the district grew in volume and complexity.

5. The district adopted a reporting method in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles (GAAP).

6. Also, the district adopted a "site-based management" model of school governance and delegated to the schools much of the responsibility for budgeting and bookkeeping.

7. May 1994, Cheloc attended a meeting with various district personnel to discuss a budget surplus of approximately $3 million. Specifically, district personnel were concerned that any surplus in the 1993-1994 fiscal year might reduce its funding from the State for the following year. Cheloc testified that at the meeting, someone proposed that the surplus problem could be remedied with purchase orders addressed to "vendor variable." This was an improvised method of allocating the surplus funds to vendors and projects and purchases that had not yet been approved by the Board. Cheloc objected to this proposal.

8. A subsequent meeting was held with Ernst & Young, the Board's accountants/auditors. Cheloc maintained that the auditors approved of the vendor variable plan. She, however, continued to voice her objection.

9. In August 1994, Cheloc attended another meeting to discuss a project deficit problem. Specifically, funds allocated for certain maintenance projects were spent, but the maintenance work was still incomplete. Someone suggested that the Board hire the contractors as employees until the work was completed. Cheloc objected on the grounds that the contractors would be able to sign off on their own vouchers and receive benefits as district employees.

10. The Board hired the contractors to complete the maintenance work.

11. In December 1994, King held a meeting with the district's business directors. Cheloc testified that King told them that they would all be recommended for salary increases, including Cheloc.

12. The salary increases were not part of a collective bargaining agreement, and Cheloc was not on a salary schedule.

13. On December 15, 1994, Cheloc received a letter from the Board informing her that it intended to "discuss a matter involving your employment" at a meeting on December 21, 1994. Also, the Board informed Cheloc that it would be discussing the issue in private session and offered her the option of a public session. Cheloc did not exercise that option.

14. On December 21, 1994. Cheloc attended the Board meeting. The Board went into Executive Session and voted to award all business directors except Cheloc a salary increase.

15. On December 22, 1994, King informed Cheloc that her salary increase had been denied.

16. As a result of the district's increased budget and financial reporting responsibilities, the Board commissioned an independent audit of the district's business operations. The auditors recommended that the Board appoint a certified public account to the central business office.

17. On July 7, 1995, the Board informed Cheloc that it intended to discuss her employment status at a meeting on July 12, 1995.

18. On July 12, 1995, the Board voted to establish the position of comptroller and reassigned the fiscal supervisory duties performed by the assistant board secretary/director of administration, Cheloc's position, to the comptroller position.

19. The position of comptroller replaced the position of the assistant board secretary/director of administration on the organization chart.

20. Cheloc retained her title as director of administration, her salary level and responsibility over the workers' compensation department.

21. On September 20, 1995, Cheloc alleged that the Board violated her tenure rights by "abolishing her position, in effect, and reassigning her duties to the comptroller.

ISSUES

1. Whether the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious, or induced by improper motives when it voted to withhold Petitioner's salary increase.

2. Whether the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious, or motivated in bad faith when it voted to establish the position of comptroller, to reassign Petitioner's supervisory responsibilities to that position, and to demote her on the district organization chart.

DISCUSSION

There are two preliminary matters. First, the Board argues that Petitioner did not timely appeal the decision to withhold her salary increase. Second, Petitioner argues that the Board retaliated against her for objecting to allegedly improper budget-related actions in 1994, in violation of the Conscientious Employee Protection Act ("CEPA"), N.J.S.A. 34:19-1 to -8.

Timeliness of Filing

N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) requires that a petition be filed within 90 days of receipt of notice of a final order, ruling or other board action. Specifically, the 90-day rule provides that:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.
> [N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c)]

In Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley, 131 N.J. 572 (1993), the New Jersey Supreme Court held that the Commissioner and the State Board have the authority to establish a time limitation of the resolution of disputes arising under the school laws. The court stated that, "adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Kaprow, supra. 131 N.J. at 587. Thus N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) respresents a fair and necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes arising under school laws. Kaprow, supra. 131 N.J. at 582. Therefore, I have carefully considered the timeline of events and facts to determine if the petition was filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c)

The Board denied the salary increase on December 21, 1994. Cheloc was informed of the Board's decision on the following day, December 22, 1994. She filed her petition 90 days later, on March 22, 1995. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that her first petition was filed timely.

CEPA

Petitioner contends that the Board retaliated against her for objecting to allegedly improper budget-related actions in violation of the Conscientious Employee Protection Act ("CEPA"), N.J.S.A. 34:19-1 to -8. Specifically, Petitioner argues that the Board's actions in withholding her salary increase, establishing the position of comptroller, reassigning her responsibilities to that position and demoting her on the district organization chart were in retaliation for her objections to allegedly improper budget-related actions in 1994. CEPA claims are beyond the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Education. See Picogna v. Bd. of Educ. of the Township of Cherry Hill, 249 N.J. Super. 332 (App. Div. 1991). The OAL has jurisdiction over contested cases that are transmitted by "the State agency with appropriate subject matter jurisdiction." N.J.A.C. 1:1-3.1. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the OAL lacks jurisdiction to hear these issues under the Conscientious Employee Protection Act.

Denial of Salary Increment

Petitioner alleges that the Board's decision to withhold her salary increase was arbitrary, capricious, or induced by improper motives.

N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 provides that a teacher's salary increment may be withheld for inefficiency or other good cause. Conversely, the approval of a "salary increment is 'a reward for meritorious service.'" Probst v. Haddonfield Bd. of Educ., 127 N.J. 518, 527 (1992). Indeed, the purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 is "to reward only those who have contributed to the educational process thereby encouraging high standards of performance." Bernards Twp. Bd. of Ed. v. Bernards Twp. Ed. Ass'n, 79 N.J. 311, 321 (1979). Consequently, an annual increment is not a statutory right; it is a reward for good performance and the acknowledgment that the teacher's overall performance has met the high standards of performance required by the District. North Plainfield Ed. Ass'n v. North Plainfied Bd. of Ed., 96 N.J. 587, 594 (1984)

The Legislature has vested local boards and state district superintendents with the power to withhold increments from teachers who have not performed satisfactorily during the previous year. Probst v. Haddonfield Bd. of Educ., supra, 127 N.J. at 526. Indeed, a decision to withhold an increment is a matter of management prerogative. North Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. North Plainfield Bd. of Educ., supra, 96 N.J. 587; Bernard Twp. Bd. of Educ., v. Bernard Twp. Educ. Ass'n, supra, 79 N.J. 311. Accordingly, the Commissioner is prohibited from substituting his judgment for that of the board or state district superintendent.

The scope of review on appeal is limited to whether there exists a reasonable basis for the District's decision. The exercise of discretionary powers may not be upset unless it is patently arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or induced by improper motives. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960). Thus, the Commissioner must determine: "(1) whether the underlying facts were as those who made the evaluation claimed, and (2) whether it was reasonable for them to conclude as they did upon those facts, bearing in mind that they were experts." Id. at 296-97. The burden of proving that the increment withholding was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable rests with the person challenging the decision. Kopera at 297.

Nevertheless, a school board cannot withhold a salary increase from a tenured employee without according that employee the minimum procedural due process. For example, in Basile v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Elm Park, 1 N.J.A.R. 199 (Dep't of Educ. 1980), the petitioners were tenured teachers who were recommended for salary increments by their supervisors. After reviewing the written evaluations and oral reports, the superintendent applied his own standard and recommended the salary increments be withheld. The local board of education acted on the superintendent's recommendation without discussion.

In a subsequent appeal, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") ruled, inter alia, that the board's action was arbitrary because the teachers were not furnished with the superintendent's evaluation criteria in advance.

On December 15, 1994, Cheloc was notified in writing that the Board intended to "discuss a matter involving" her employment. This notice was sufficient to satisfy the adequate notice requirement of the Open Public Meetings Act at N.J.S.A. 10:4-8(d). However, there is no evidence to that. Cheloc was given any notice of her work-related deficiencies prior to the Board meeting on December 21, 1994. King testified that Cheloc did not adapt well to the site-based management model and that instructional directors in the district complained that Cheloc and her departments were uncooperative and excessively rigid. Further, when King attempted to discuss the problem, Cheloc would storm out of her office or hang up the phone. Despite these alleged work-related deficiencies, King did not provide Cheloc with any written evaluations, negative or positive, and always recommended her for a salary increase. In fact, King was Cheloc's supervisor and she recommended to the superintendent that Cheloc receive the salary increase. However, the Board chose to reject King's recommendation and withhold Cheloc's increase. Consequently, the Board's action came as a complete surprise to the Cheloc. Compare Sturn v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of South Plainfield, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 661, 669 (teacher was on notice of alleged deficiencies through written observations and was afforded the opportunity to take corrective action).

The record discloses that the Board failed to give the Cheloc sufficient notice that her work was deficient, thereby affording her an opportunity to take corrective action. Also, the Board failed to articulate the criteria used to reject King's recommendation and instead, denied the salary increase at the meeting on December 21, 1994. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board's decision to withhold Cheloc's salary increase was arbitrary.

Abolishment of Petitioner's Position

Petitioner contends that establishing the position of comptroller and reassigning her duties to that position violated her tenure rights and was arbitrary and unreasonable. A local board of education is entitled by statute to abolish a position "for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization" or for other good cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. In Wollman v. Bd. of Educ. Of the City of Trenton, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 20, petitioner was a tenured assistant director of buildings and grounds whose position was abolished by the local board of education, pursuant to the recommendation of an accounting firm's efficiency study. The ALJ found that the local board was entitled to abolish a position for reasons of economy and its actions were to be accorded a presumption of correctness. Further, the ALJ concluded that petitioner had failed to prove the board's action was arbitrary, capricious, undertaken in bad faith, or contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.Indeed, "a local Board's decision concerning reduction in force are properly reviewable 'to determine whether the position ostensibly abolished has not in fact been abolished but merely transferred to another in violation of the incumbent's tenure and seniority rights...'" Cochran, et al. v. Watchung Hills Board of Education, No. A-2327-85T7 (App. Div. Dec. 22, 1986) (citation omitted). Thus, when a board abolishes a position for reasons of economy, the abolition must be one of substance and not merely of appearance. Viemeister v. Board of Education of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super. 215 (App. Div. 1949). A petitioner who opposes the abolition must prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the board's decision was arbitrary, capricious or motivated in bad faith.

The Board argues that the petitioner's position was not abolished because she retained her salary and job title. The argument is untenable. The Board established the position of comptroller and assigned to the comptroller the duties previously performed by petitioner as assistant board secretary/director of administration. Indeed, before the Board created the comptroller position, Cheloc was responsible for managing the departments of purchasing, payroll, accounting and workers' compensation. And, she supervised a staff of 25 people. She reported directly to Linda King, the board secretary/business administrator. After the comptroller position was established, Cheloc had only the workers' compensation department and supervised a staff of two. She was supplanted on the district organization chart. The Board effectively "abolished" petitioner's position. Thus, the issue is whether the Board had reasonable grounds for its action.

The evidence reflects that the Board made changes in response to recommendations from an independent accounting firm. In school year 1990-91, the budget for the Elizabeth school district increased by approximately forty percent to $150 million. The district's accounting firm studied the business operations and made recommendations. In response, the district adopted a new reporting method, established the position of comptroller and appointed a certified public accountant in the central office. Petitioner is not a CPA and does not have a public accounting background or degree.

Based on the evidence presented, I CONCLUDE that the Board had reasonable grounds to establish the comptroller position and assign fiscal supervisory responsibilities formerly assigned to petitioner.

Further, I CONCLUDE that petitioner failed to prove that the Board abolished her position in bad faith. Specifically, Cheloc failed to prove a connection between her objections to allegedly improper budget-related actions in 1994 and the abolition of her position in 1995. Although the Board's decision to withhold her salary increase on December 21, 1994 was arbitrary for lack of adequate notice, as discussed, supra, the Board complied with the requirements of the Open Public Meetings Act and acted within its discretion under the Tenure Act. Petitioner's supervisor provided credible evidence that Cheloc lacked the adaptive skills and expertise to retain her fiscal supervisory responsibilities. Thus, the Board replaced her position in July 1995 with the position of comptroller, and required the person in that position to have an accounting background. Subsequently, the Board hired a C.P.A. for the position of comptroller.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the whole of the record, I CONCLUDE that the Board's decision to withhold petitioner's salary increase was arbitrary because it failed to give petitioner sufficient notice that her work was deficient and afford her an opportunity to take corrective action. Further, the Board failed to articulate the criteria used to reject the recommendation of petitioner's supervisor.

Further, I CONCLUDE that the Board's decision to establish the position of comptroller, to reassign petitioner's supervisory responsibilities to that position, and to demote her on the district organization chart was based on reasonable grounds and was not motivated in bad faith.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the decision of the Board to withhold petitioner's salary increase for school year 1994-95 be REVERSED.

Further, it is ORDERED that the decision of the Board to establish the position of comptroller and reassign supervisory responsibilities to petitioner, and to demote her on the district organization chart be AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

HELEN CHELOC,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Both petitioner and the Board filed exceptions and replies in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

The Board initially excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) treatment of petitioner's denial of a salary increase in December of 1994 as an "increment withholding." In this regard, the Board contends that:

> [I]t is undisputed that Petitioner is an administrator and is not part of any bargaining unit that has entered into a collective bargaining agreement with the Board which sets forth her annual salary and subsequent salary increases for specific years. Furthermore, Petitioner is not part of any salary schedule established by the Board.  It is also undisputed that Petitioner is not a teacher, and as such, does [not] fall within the statutory mandates of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-4.1. Instead, Petitioner's salary is set forth by the Board. (See Exhibit P-1). The Board also has the authority to determine whether Petitioner is entitled to a salary increase. Unlike teachers or other members of a collective bargaining unit, Petitioner is not guaranteed any predetermined increment each year. Therefore, Petitioner was never legally entitled to an "increment." (Board's Exceptions at 3)

The Board further argues that, contrary to the ALJ's finding, petitioner was not without notice that she would be denied a salary increase, even assuming such notice was a prerequisite for the Board's action. The Board then cites to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which it points out, "has no requirement for advance written notice of the intent to withhold. Rather, it requires that within 10 days following its action a board must notify the employee of the reasons why the increment is being withheld." (Id. at 4) Further, to the extent notice is required, the Board contends that the record clearly demonstrates that petitioner knew, or should have known, that the Board had concerns about her work. Here, the Board reflects on the testimony offered by Linda King, the School Business Administrator/Board Secretary to whom petitioner reports, noting that Ms. King testified that she had to speak with petitioner a number of times about her failure to cooperate with the instructional directors in order to effectuate a successful site-based management system. (Id. at pp. 6-8) The Board concludes that its decision to deny petitioner a salary increase in December of 1994, in light of the testimony, was clearly reasonable. (Id. at 9)

Petitioner initially objects to the ALJ's conclusion that the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to consider her claim that the Board's actions violated the Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA), N.J.S.A. 34:19-1 et seq, reasoning, instead, that such claim is "colorable under State Education Law." (Petitioner's Exceptions at 17) Additionally, petitioner notes that the Initial Decision failed to consider her claim that she was denied a second salary increase for the 1995-96 school year in July of 1995. (Id. at 17-18)

Petitioner further asserts that the ALJ incorrectly concluded that the Board's decision to abolish her position in July 1995 was not improper. Here, petitioner argues that the ALJ cites N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, the statute establishing the standard for abolishing the positions of teaching staff members, which she was not. Citing N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, petitioner contends that as a tenured assistant board secretary, she could be dismissed only for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. (Id. at 20, 22) However, to the extent the Commissioner should consider the Board's action under the "arbitrary and capricious standard," as did the ALJ, petitioner underscores that "the abolition must be one of substance [and] not merely appearance." (Id. at 21, citing to the Initial Decision at 10, citing to Viemeister v. Board of Education of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super. 215 (App. Div. 1949))

In response to the Board's exceptions, supra, petitioner maintains that her salary increases were arbitrarily denied, notwithstanding that she was not on a salary guide. (Petitioner's Reply at 1) Further, underscoring that N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 is not applicable to the instant matter, although the Board cites to its relevance, petitioner notes that, if that provision is applicable, she never received written notice of the Board's action within 10 days of such denial. (Id. at 2) Moreover, petitioner highlights her testimony affirming that she had no notice of deficiencies in her work.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, which included transcripts from the hearings conducted at the OAL on February 6, 1997, February 7, 1997 and February 10, 1999[1], the Commissioner affirms in part, and modifies in part, the Initial Decision of the ALJ, for the reasons set forth herein.

Initially, the Commissioner finds, for the reasons set forth by the ALJ, that the petition filed on March 22, 1995 was timely. Additionally, as a preliminary matter, while petitioner contends that the Board retaliated against her in violation of the Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA), N.J.S.A. 34:19-1 et seq., inasmuch as petitioner's counsel asserts that petitioner does not seek "the benefits of that statute in this forum," but, rather, attempts to argue "that as a consequence of improprieties pointed out to the Board" by petitioner, she suffered reprisals with respect to her position, (T1 at 143, 144), the Commissioner determines to consider such claims of retaliation within the context of petitioner's general assertion that the Board's actions herein were taken in bad faith.[2]

[1] Hereinafter, the transcripts shall be referenced in the following manner: T1 is the transcript for February 6, 1997; T2 is the transcript for February 7, 1997; and T3 is the transcript for February 10, 1999.

With respect to the Board's decision to deny petitioner her salary increases on December 21, 1994 and July 12, 1995, the Commissioner notes that the parties do not dispute that petitioner is not a "teaching staff member" subject to payment on a salary guide.[3] Consequently, the Board's actions on the aforementioned dates are not reviewable by the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. However, inasmuch as petitioner is not a member of a collective bargaining unit or party to an agreement which might otherwise provide a mechanism to resolve such disputes with the Board, s*ee Randolph Bd. of Educ. v. Educ. Ass'n*, 328 N.J. Super. 540 (App. Div. 2000), the Commissioner herein considers her claim that the Board's action to twice deny her salary increases was taken for retaliatory reasons.

In this regard, however, where the Board contends, and the record substantiates, that petitioner failed to adapt to its site-based management plan, and was too rigid in carrying out her duties, (Board's Post-hearing Brief at 11) the Commissioner cannot find that petitioner has demonstrated that the Board's decision on December 21, 1994 was made for retaliatory reasons. With respect to the Board's denial of petitioner's salary increase in July 1995, after the reorganization of the business office, see infra, and after the formal evaluation, on which

[2] In so doing, the Commissioner does not reach the ALJ's findings with respect to the Commissioner's jurisdiction to hear and determine CEPA claims. (Initial Decision at 7)

[3] The job description for the Assistant Board Secretary/Director of Administration did not require certification (P-1). Petitioner affirmed in her testimony that, when she was hired in 1985, there was no certification requirement and she did not then possess a certificate (T2 at 21, 22). See N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1, and the definition of "teaching staff member."

petitioner did not receive any "above average" or "outstanding" scores (Board's Post-hearing Brief at 3)[4], the Commissioner finds that petitioner has similarly failed to meet her burden.

Turning to the issue of the Board's reorganization of its business office in 1995, the Commissioner assumes, for the purpose of this discussion, that petitioner was tenured in her prior position as Assistant Board Secretary/Director of Administration (Initial Decision at 2).[5] Like the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that the record supports the conclusion that the Board abolished her prior position subsequent to its reorganization and created the comptroller's position to "provide greater assurance of fiscal responsibility."[6] (Board's Post-hearing Brief at 4) The Board also noted that "to break apart the areas and hire a [comptroller] for some of the duties that Petitioner had been in control of would [help] the district meet all of the state guidelines and regulations in that area." (Id.) The job description for the Comptroller position (P-30), when compared with that of petitioner's prior position (P-1), demonstrates that the Comptroller was assigned a greater breadth of responsibility and accountability within the District. Additionally, the holder of the new position is required to possess "a valid certificate as a Registered Municipal Accountant or Certified Public Accountant issued by the New Jersey Board of Certified Public [Accountants]," (P-30), a credential which petitioner does not possess. Consequently, the Commissioner cannot find on the record before him that the Board's abolishment of petitioner's prior position, its creation of a new Comptroller position and/or its hiring of a properly credentialed individual to fill the new role were arbitrary and capricious.

[4] The Board indicates that, "[o]f the 20 subparts [to the evaluation], Petitioner received 14 "needs improvement" and 6 "averages." (Board's Post-hearing Brief at 3)

[5] Although the Board asserts in its post-hearing submission to the ALJ that petitioner did not acquire tenure rights in her prior position (id. at 16), it did not object to the ALJ's finding to the contrary.

Neither can the Commissioner conclude that the Board's actions were retaliatory or otherwise carried out in bad faith. Additionally, like the ALJ, the Commissioner finds this record insufficient to establish a connection between petitioner's stated concerns about the Board fiscal practices and the Board's consequent reorganization in July of 1995.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the ALJ is affirmed in part, and modified in part, as set forth herein. The Petition of Appeal is dismissed.[7]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[8]

[6] The Board points out that, as a result of the reorganization of its business office, "many new positions were created." (Board's Post-hearing Brief at 5) A second reorganization took place in July of 1996, with emphasis on the instructional positions in the District. (Id.)

[7] In accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10(j), the Commissioner affirms the ALJ's Interlocutory Order of February 11, 1999.

[8] This decision, as the Commissioner's final determination, may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq., within 30 days of its filing. Commissioner decisions are deemed filed three days after the date of mailing to the parties.

PETITIONER,

V.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MORRIS SCHOOL DISTRICT, MORRIS COUNTY, THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS AND THE ADMINISTRATION OF MORRISTOWN HIGH SCHOOL,

RESPONDENTS.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent alleged the Board improperly required high school student B.B. to be referred to the Board's Core Team for further investigation into possible chemical dependency. B.B. had been one of the students found to be in attendance at a "senior cut day" party where extensive drinking had taken place. The Board contended it was complying with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-8 through -21 (Act).

The ALJ concluded that, as a matter of law, it was reasonable and not an abuse of the District's discretion to determine that this was a high-risk situation and to refer B.B. to the Core Team for further investigation. The ALJ also concluded that the District was required to carry out its obligations under the Act, and the regulations and policies promulgated thereunder, even if the perceived risk to a student did not occur on school premises. The ALJ found it reasonable for the school officials to suspect that B.B. might be at risk for substance abuse regardless of whether she actually consumed alcohol on the date in question. Thus, the District implemented its required procedures outlined in its substance abuse policy and, only if the Core Team determined that there was reasonable suspicion to believe that B.B. was affected by substance abuse would she be required to have a chemical dependency assessment and urine drug screen. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that as a matter of law under the circumstances of this case, the District did not exceed the parameters of its lawful authority nor did it violate any of B.B.'s constitutional rights. The ALJ concluded that the District was entitled to summary decision dismissing the appeal and petitioner was entitled to no relief in this forum. The ALJ ordered the evaluation of B.B. by the Core Team to proceed at the earliest possible time.

The Commissioner concurred that the matter was ripe for summary decision since there was no genuine issue as to any material fact. The Commissioner found that petitioner failed to demonstrate that the Board abused its discretion when it applied its policy which was adopted pursuant to the Act. The Commissioner granted summary decision to the Board. Petition was dismissed.

D.B., on behalf of B.B., petitioner, pro se

Record Closed: March 29, 2000 Decided: May 4, 2000

BEFORE EDITH KLINGER, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 2, 1999, petitioner, D.B., filed a Verified Petition with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) seeking a declaratory judgment to prevent the respondents, the Morris School District Board of Education, the Superintendent of Schools, and the administration of Morristown High School, from complying with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-8 through -21 (Act) with respect to his daughter, B.B., a senior at Morristown High School. On December 3, 1999, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

D.B. made an emergent application for a stay to prevent the District from carrying out its obligations under the Act. The emergent application was heard by Administrative Law Judge August E. Thomas, t/a, who issued an Order, dated December 6, 1999, staying the District from taking any further action with respect to B.B. pending the outcome of a plenary hearing.

The matter was assigned to the undersigned for plenary hearing. The District then made a motion for summary decision to allow it to proceed with its obligations pursuant to the Act. Petitioner made a cross-motion for summary decision to permanently enjoin the District from carrying out its procedure. Both sides submitted briefs and the motions were argued on the record before the undersigned on March 29, 2000. The record closed on that date.

THE APPLICABLE LAW

This appeal involves the application of the following statute:

N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-10 Comprehensive substance abuse intervention, prevention and treatment referral programs in public elementary and secondary schools; establishment; policy statement

> Each local board of education shall, pursuant to guidelines developed by the Commissioner of Education, in consultation with the Commissioner of Health, establish a comprehensive substance abuse intervention, prevention and treatment referral program in the public elementary and secondary schools of the district. The purpose of the program shall be to identify pupils who are substance abusers, assess the extent of these pupils' involvement with these substances and, where appropriate, refer pupils and their families to organizations and agencies approved by the Department of Health to offer competent professional treatment. Treatment shall not be at the expense of the local board of education.

> Each school district shall develop a clear written policy statement which outlines the district's program to combat substance abuse and which provides for the identification, evaluation, referral for treatment and discipline of pupils who are substance abusers. Copies of the policy statement shall be distributed to pupils and their parents at the beginning of each school year.

For purposes of the Act, "substance" includes alcoholic beverages. N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-9.

Further, in regulations promulgated pursuant to the Act, the New Jersey Administrative Code instructs local districts to implement policies and procedures relating to the prevention of substance abuse. N.J.A.C. 6:29-6.3(a) states in relevant part:

> District boards of education shall adopt and implement policies and procedures for the evaluation, intervention and referral to treatment of pupils whose use of alcohol and other drugs has affected their school performance or who possess, consume or who on reasonable grounds are suspected of being under the influence of the following substances in school or at school functions.

In order to comply with the requirements of the Act and the regulations, the District developed the following written policy statement outlining its program (Regulation, File Code: 5131.6):

> B. Procedure when a student is suspected of having a chemical abuse problem:
>
> 1. When a student has observable physical or behavioral changes that may be indicative of a substance related problem, or is at high risk for a substance abuse problem, the staff member shall refer the student to the SAC, Core Team and/or principal. A behavioral checklist designed to identify possible substance abuse shall be distributed to appropriate staff members. The Core Team shall review the results of the checklists along with attendance, academic and disciplinary information.
> 2. If the Core Team's assessment indicates that it is probable that the student is affected by substance use, the Core Team chairperson shall notify the principal immediately. A conference with the student, parents/guardians, SAC, or members of the Core Team, and/or principal as appropriate will be arranged by the chairperson. The Core Team shall refer the student to an outside resource agency recommended and approved by the New Jersey Department of Health and the school district for a chemical dependency assessment and urine drug screen. The SAC shall make the arrangements for the assessment as soon as possible and shall provide assistance to the parents/guardians and student in making appointments. Parents/guardians who wish to obtain an assessment and urinalysis through a provider other than the agency recommended by the Core Team may do so at their own expense; in such a case, the assessment initiated by the parents shall be in addition to the assessment required by the District, unless the Core Team agrees to approve the parent's/guardian's request in place of its recommendation.

3. The components of a comprehensive chemical dependency evaluation consist of:

   a. signed release forms permitting the school and evaluating agency to exchange information;

   b. substance abuse history;

   c. drug screen urinalysis;

   d. developmental, family/social, academic and behavioral histories;

   e. mental status evaluation;

   f. review of findings by a Team trained in substance abuse and treatment planning, including a psychiatrist;

   g. psychiatric evaluation when recommended by the chemical dependency evaluator and/or the Core Team.

In accord with the District's policy, checklist forms designed to identify possible substance abuse problems are distributed to the teachers of those students, such as B.B., believed to be at risk. The Morris School District, however, was required to stay any further action on the present matter pending the outcome of this appeal. If the District prevails here, the Core Team, composed of four administrators, three child study team members, one high school teacher, one SAC counselor and the school nurse, will review the returned checklists and any additional information with regard to B.B. It will then assess whether the matter should cease with no further action or whether there is reason to refer B.B. for a chemical dependency assessment and urine drug screen.

Only if the Core Team determines that it is "probable that the student is affected by substance use" does the Core Team refer the student for a "chemical dependency assessment and urine drug screen" (Regulation, File Code: 5131.6, sec. B.2). The only purpose of the whole process is to obtain evaluation and treatment for the child, if necessary. There is no disciplinary component of the evaluation process and only the school district, not the child, may be in violation of the Act. All results are confidential and do not appear on the student's record.

The Act is purely remedial. The Legislature of the State of New Jersey has determined that:

> a. A significant number of young people are unfortunately already involved in the abuse of alcohol and other drugs;
>
> b. Research indicates that particular groups of youngsters, such as the children of alcoholic parents, may in fact face an increased risk of developing alcohol and other substance abuse problems and that early intervention services can be critical in their prevention, detection and treatment; and, > c. School-based initiatives have proven particularly effective in identifying and assisting students at a high risk of developing alcohol and other drug disturbances and in reducing absenteeism, decreasing the consumption of alcohol and other drugs, and in lessening the problems associated with such addictions.
>
>
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-8.]

THE ASSUMED FACTS

For purposes of both motions, the material facts will be taken as set forth by D.B. This is appropriate since the District argues that it is required by law to apply the Act to B.B., even if the facts are as stated by D.B. In opposition, D.B has moved to prevent the District from having B.B. evaluated by the Core Team at the high school, and the District does not claim to have knowledge sufficient to counter his version of certain facts for purposes of his cross-motion.

On October 29, 1999, B.B. was given permission by her parents to miss school. That morning, she went to another classmate's home to celebrate that classmate's birthday and to watch the Yankees World Series parade. The parents of the host child had given their permission for their daughter to stay home and to have guests.

According to D.B., they were "celebrating the tradition commonly known as 'senior cut day.'"

Many other students arrived, some of whom had also cut their classes at the high school. At about noon, the principal of Morristown High School received an anonymous telephone call informing him that there was a party with alcohol present.

The principal called the Morris Township police. The principal and vice principal went to the home and found nine students, one of whom was B.B., still there. Twenty or thirty other students who had been in the house had already left by that time. There was evidence that alcohol was present and had been consumed.

The police arrived and, after investigation, took the remaining students into custody. D.B. claims that the police and the District personnel on the premises determined that B.B. had not been drinking and she was allowed to drive her car to the police station. He says that no charges were filed against her. The District has no evidence to contradict these statements.

In support of its motion, the District produced Morris Township Police Department Incident Report Number: 99-21217 and Supplementary Report giving the police account of the raid. This report was undisputed by D.B. The investigating officer wrote:

> I observed in plain view the following: sitting on center island of kitchen was open paper bag with remains of two six packs of Budweiser 12 oz. long neck bottles. On kitchen floor were paper bags filled with empty beer cans and bottles. Leaving the kitchen through open sliding door to patio area I observed open case box of Budweiser with remains of case. No persons there admitted knowledge of beer found.

Four male Morristown High School students were arrested and charged with underage possession of alcohol.

In a Supplemental Affidavit dated March 17, 2000, given in support of the District's motion, Michael Bruchac, vice principal at Morristown High School, stated that he was at the house on the day of the police raid and could see through the kitchen window that there was an open bottle of Bacardi rum next to a blender on the counter and two students were standing in the kitchen. He also noticed open beer bottles on the counter and beer on the steps by the side of the door. D.B. did not dispute these statements.

The only disciplinary action that was taken against B.B. by the District was a two-day suspension for cutting school, and this was reflected only on her attendance record, not on her permanent transcript.

D.B. claims that they were initially assured by the Superintendent that this would be the only action that would be taken against B.B. The Superintendent later reversed himself, possibly after being made aware of the District's board policy and its statutory obligations to its students, and directed the principal to refer B.B. to the Core Team. D.B. subsequently filed this appeal on behalf of B.B.

THE POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

The District argues that it was following the requirements of the Act and N.J.A.C. 6:29-6.3 and its own policy formulated under the Act by identifying B.B. as a possible child at risk. Its only action was to refer her to the Core Team for evaluation to see if there was any reason to suspect her involvement with alcohol or drugs. There was no attempt to refer her for a "chemical dependency assessment and urine drug screen," since that would have to await the Core Team evaluation (Regulation, File Code: 5131.6, sec. B.2).

D.B. argues that that the District is violating his daughter's constitutional rights by forcing her to submit to a Core Team evaluation. In support of his argument, he has submitted statements, documents and affidavits which testify to his daughter's good character and reputation and, allegedly, to demonstrate conclusively that she is unlikely to be involved in the use of substances illegally. At hearing on the motion, he argued that he and the child's mother know their daughter better than any Core Team could and they are satisfied that she is not engaged in any prohibited activity.

DISCUSSION OF LAW

Boards of education enjoy wide policy-making discretion and their decisions may not be disturbed unless arbitrary and capricious. Thomas v. Morris Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965); Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). Thus, the applicable standard of review in this case is whether the actions taken by the Board were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The petitioner has the burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the action taken by the local board was improper, that is, "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motive." L.B. v. Elizabeth Bd. of Educ., 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 110, 111. In Barna v. Irvington Bd. of Educ., 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 345, 347, the Commissioner of Education stated, "It is axiomatic that when a local board of education acts within its authority, its decision is entitled to a presumption of correctness and may not be disturbed absent a finding that it was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable." Consequently, if D.B. cannot show that the actions taken with respect to B.B. by the Morris School District following the October 29, 1999, incident were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable the Board's determination should not be disturbed.

In the present case, the District deemed B.B. to be a possible child at risk since she cut school and was caught during school hours in a raid by school officials and the Morris Township police in a home where underage drinking was openly and undisputedly taking place. I FIND, under the facts and circumstances as D.B. presented them or did not dispute them, that there are no relevant material facts that could be developed at plenary hearing to show that the District's view of the situation was "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motive." L.B., supra, 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) at 111. I therefore CONCLUDE, as a matter of law, that it was reasonable and not an abuse of the District's discretion to determine that this was a high-risk situation and to refer B.B. to the Core Team for further investigation.

Schools have a custodial and tutelary responsibility for their students. Vernonia Sch. Dist. v. Acton, 515 U.S. 646, 656, 115 S. Ct. 2386, 2392, 132 L. Ed. 2d 564, 576 (1995). They are responsible for their students during the school day as well as on the way to and from school. See N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2; N.J.S.A. 18A:38-27, -31. The Commissioner has extended this authority to reach out-of-school conduct. See F.G. v. Hamilton Township Bd. of Educ., 1982 S.L.D. 382, 390. The school's responsibility includes the obligation to see that its students do not engage in disorderly conduct during the school day. N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2. In R.R. v. Shore Regional High School District Board of Education, 109 N.J. Super. 337, 344 (Ch. Div. 1970), the court held that school officials have a right to suspend students for events happening out of school hours, "where such is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety and well-being, or for reasons relating to the safety and well-being of other students, teachers or public school property."

Even without the mandates of the Act, school districts are responsible for the safety and welfare of their students in conjunction with the duty to educate and discipline. In A.F. v. Holmdel Board of Education, 91 S.L.D. 914, 921, the Commissioner recognized the "degree to which alcohol consumption is prevalent among students and that its abuse has frequently led to tragedy." The Commissioner stressed that he "must strongly support in every way possible the efforts of school administrators and officials to prevent students from imbibing alcoholic beverages or partaking of other controlled dangerous substances." 91 S.L.D. at 921. In that case the Commissioner concluded that neither the student's unblemished record, her leadership role, nor her participation in Students Against Drunk Driving had any bearing on the fact that she failed to behave responsibly before and during a prom. Id. at 920-21.

Nothing in the Act, the regulations and policies promulgated pursuant to it, or the applicable case law, restricts the District's obligation to identify students at risk and make appropriate interventions only to situations occurring on school premises during regular school hours. Under certain circumstances, a District is required by statute to intervene even in a student's home, if necessary, to protect its children from substance abuse. N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-7.1. In this case, I CONCLUDE that the District was required to carry out its obligations under the Act, and the regulations and policies promulgated thereunder, even if the perceived risk to a student did not occur on school premises.

D.B. argues that B.B.'s constitutional rights were violated by her referral to the Core Team. Although a child does not shed his/her constitutional rights at the schoolhouse gate, it is clear that students do not have an absolute right of privacy. A child's interest in privacy is to be balanced against "the substantial interest of teachers and administrators in maintaining discipline in the classroom and on school grounds." Desilets v. Clearview Reg. Bd. of Educ., 265 N.J. Super. 370, 373 (App. Div. 1993) (citing New Jersey v. T.L.O., 469 U.S. 325, 339, 105 S. Ct. 733, 741, 83 L. Ed. 2d 720, 733 [1985]). Students "have a lesser expectation of privacy than members of the population generally." T.L.O., supra, 469 U.S. at 348, 105 S. Ct. at 746, 83 L. Ed. 2d at 739. School officials can conduct searches of students, including drug tests, when there is a reasonable suspicion. Vernonia, supra, 515 U.S. at 661, 115 S. Ct. at 2394, 132 L. Ed. 2d at 579. Reasonable suspicion is "the sort of 'common-sense conclusio[n] about human behavior' upon which 'practical people' – including government officials – are entitled to rely." T.L.O., supra, 469 U.S. at 346, 105 S. Ct. at 745, 83 L. Ed. 2d at 737; see also Hedges v. Musco, 204 *F.*3d 109 (3d Cir. 2000), in which the application of the Act is discussed.

B.B. chose to participate in senior cut day and to remain at a party where alcohol was freely and openly being consumed by underage people including her friends and classmates. Based on the conduct of B.B. and the decisions she made on October 29, 1999, I FIND it reasonable for the school officials to suspect that B.B. might be at risk for substance abuse regardless of whether she actually consumed alcohol on the date in question. Consequently, I FIND that the Morris School District implemented the required procedures outlined in its policy to curb the presence of substance abuse amongst the students in its school district, a valid concern that has sparked legislation at the state and federal level.

To suggest that B.B. should not have to go through the same procedure as other students simply because her parents believe that she has done nothing wrong ignores the legislative purpose behind the program, which is to require schools to identify pupils who may be at risk for substance abuse.

Pursuant to the District's policy, only if the Core Team determines that there is reasonable suspicion to believe that B.B. is affected by substance abuse will she be required to have a chemical dependency assessment and urine drug screen. This is within the acceptable limits of the District's authority pursuant to the Act and does not violate the constitutional rights of B.B. Hedges, supra, 204 *F.*3d 109.

If there is no reason to suspect B.B. of being at risk for substance abuse, as her father strongly maintains, she most likely will not reach the point in the program where she will have to submit a urine sample or have a chemical assessment. It is important to note that, in either case, any information concerning the involvement of B.B. in the school intervention or treatment program will remain strictly confidential. N.J.A.C. 6:29-6.3(b)(2).

The responsibility of D.B. for his daughter's welfare as a parent is separate and distinct from the statutory responsibility of the District under the Act. However, the arguments and evidence that D.B. puts forth in support of his motion, and the appeal itself, reveal an underlying assertion that he, as a parent, should be allowed to substitute his judgment for the objective evaluation of the Core Team. Alternatively, in the event a plenary hearing is held, the arguments and documents proffered by petitioner for consideration will, in effect, substitute the judgment of the undersigned and the Commissioner for that of the District's Core Team. Consequently, I CONCLUDE that there are no material facts in dispute here because the evidence as to the performance, record and reputation of B.B. offered for consideration by petitioner is exactly that which should first be considered by the Core Team pursuant to the Act.

I CONCLUDE that as a matter of law under the circumstances of this case, Morris School District has not exceeded the parameters of its lawful authority nor has it violated any of B.B.'s constitutional rights. Consequently, I CONCLUDE that D.B., and B.B., are entitled to no relief as a result of this appeal.

SUMMARY DECISION

The New Jersey Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules (N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1, -21.6) provide that a party may move for summary decision upon all or any of the substantive issues in a case at any time after a case is deemed contested. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). In considering respondents' motion for summary decision, this tribunal must determine whether "the papers and discovery . . . , together with the affidavits . . . , show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1.1-12.5(b).

The Supreme Court of New Jersey held that when deciding a motion for summary judgment under R. 4:46-2:

> a determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.
> [Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995).]

The essential question is "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require [a hearing] or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 533 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 214 [1986]); see also N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b) (stating,

"an adverse party [to a summary decision motion] in order to prevail must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding"). Therefore, through the application of summary judgment, a legal issue may be quickly and inexpensively disposed of where there is clearly no genuine issue of material fact necessitating disposition at a hearing. Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540.

When these standards are applied in this case, it is clear, based upon the arguments and the affidavits and documents submitted by the parties, and resolving all disputes in favor of the petitioner, that there are no material facts in dispute which require a hearing in this forum. Consequently, I CONCLUDE that the District is entitled to summary decision dismissing this appeal as a matter of law. I further CONCLUDE that petitioner is entitled to no relief in this forum.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that summary decision is hereby GRANTED to respondents and the petition herein is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. It is further ORDERED that the evaluation of B.B. by the Core Team proceed at the earliest possible time.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MORRIS SCHOOL DISTRICT, MORRIS COUNTY, THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS AND THE ADMINISTRATION OF MORRISTOWN HIGH SCHOOL,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENTS.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions[1] and the Board's reply thereto are duly noted as submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, and were considered by the Commissioner in reaching his decision.[2]

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs that this matter is ripe for summary decision, since there is no genuine issue as to any material fact. (N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5)

Initially, the Commissioner cautions that this matter is distinguishable from Hedges, supra, wherein the student was suspected of being under the influence of a controlled dangerous substance while in school and was thereafter required to undergo an immediate

[1] In addition to his exception arguments, by letter dated May 25, 2000, petitioner also requested an opportunity for oral argument.

Rather, the dispute herein arises upon application of the Board's policy which was adopted pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-10, and the regulations relevant thereto. (Initial Decision at 2, 3) Like the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), the Commissioner finds that, under these circumstances, petitioner has failed to demonstrate that the Board abused its discretion when it determined that B.B., who was found to be in attendance at a "senior cut day" party where extensive drinking had undisputedly taken place, was involved in a high-risk situation, thereby activating the policy which compelled her referral to its Core Team for further investigation. (Initial Decision at 9) Neither can the Commissioner find that the Board's application of its policy constitutes a violation of law.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the ALJ's findings and concludes that summary decision is properly granted to the Board. The within petition is dismissed,[3] thereby leaving undisturbed the Board's decision to refer B.B. to its Core Team. [4]

[4] The Order, issued by the OAL on December 6, 1999 granting an interim stay of Board action pending review of this matter on its merits (Initial Decision at 2) was not transmitted to the Commissioner for review. Accordingly, the Commissioner makes no finding herein as to whether petitioner would have satisfied the standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

NEWARK

VOLUNTARY SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT, WAIVER AND RELEASE

The State-Operated School District of the City of Newark ("Newark" or "District") and Hattie Black ("Black"), agree to the following terms in full resolution of this matter:

WHEREAS, Black disputes the allegations of the tenure charges, and

WHEREAS, the parties agree that it is in the public interest to enter into this agreement in resolution of said charges in order to avoid the uncertainty and expense of litigation, and

WHEREAS, the parties further agree that the terms of this agreement will not present any risk of harm to students and/or the safe operation of the school district,

NOW, THEREFORE, the parties agree as follows:

1. Black agrees to retire from employment with the District, effective April 1, 2000.

2. Black shall be placed on administrative leave, with pay, through March 31, 2000

3. Black shall waive any entitlement to lost wages for any salary lost during the 120 day suspension without pay period already served by Black

4 The District shall, upon approval of this Agreement by the State District Superintendent and the Commissioner of Education, withdraw the tenure charges filed against Black.

5. Black acknowledges that the payments reflected in this agreement constitute the full financial obligation of the District and that she shall receive no additional payments, except as set forth below. In exchange for the above consideration, Black, on behalf of herself, her heirs, successors and assigns, hereby fully releases and forever discharges the District, its representatives, agents, officers and employees, for any and all actions, claims and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, except as set forth below, that she has had or may now have against any of them, including without limitation any and all claims related to her employment with the District or the termination of that employment. Black does not waive her rights to any payments or benefits that she may be entitled to under the contract between CASA and the District and any claims or payment Black may be due pursuant to the negotiated contract as a result of retroactive salary adjustments at the conclusion of negotiations between the District and CASA, Black's bargaining unit, for the period up to her date of retirement and any payments Black may be due as a result of Grievance 1318 filed on her behalf by CASA.

6. The District shall certify the period from February 11, 1998 through March 31, 2000 as administrative leave with pay for pension purposes.

7. Black acknowledges, as required under In re Cardonick, that, despite the approval of this agreement, the issue of possible revocation of her teaching certificate may be considered by the State Board of Examiners. Ms. Black understands that the Commissioner of Education may accept, reject or modify this Settlement, and that the Commissioner of Education may forward this matter to the State Board of Examiners for consideration of revoking her certificate.

8. The parties agree that it is in the public interest to avoid the time, expense and uncertainty attendant to litigation. It is not in the District's interest to litigate the charges because Ms. Black disputes those charges

9. The parties further agree that the charges at issue do not represent a danger to the public welfare.

10. This Agreement is freely and voluntarily executed by each party hereto. Both parties have had the terms of this Agreement thoroughly explained by their respective legal counsel and understand such terms and the legal implications arising therefrom.

11. This Agreement is subject to the approval of the State District Superintendent and the Commissioner of Education. Should the Commissioner fail to approve the application for approval of the parties' settlement and withdrawal of the tenure charges, this Agreement shall be null and void.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 36-2/98

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF HATTIE BLACK,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX	:
COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) in the form of a Voluntary Settlement Agreement, Waiver and Release have been reviewed.

Upon careful and independent review of the full record of this matter and the terms of the proposed settlement agreement, the Commissioner is compelled to reject such agreement, since he cannot be satisfied that it meets the Cardonick standards for settlement of tenure matters. In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, affirmed State Board of Education April 6, 1983, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846.

Here, respondent, a school principal, is charged with unbecoming conduct by virtue of her alleged breach of security of the policies and procedures relating to the Elementary School Proficiency Assessment (ESPA), as well as her alleged unauthorized purchases, absent District approval. The District now affirms that:

> [I]t is in the public interest to avoid the time, expense and uncertainty attendant to litigation. It is not in the District's interest to litigate the charges because Ms. Black disputes those charges.

> The parties further agree that the charges at issue do not represent a danger to the public welfare. (Settlement at 3)

The Agreement provides, in relevant part, that respondent shall retire from employment in the District, effective April 1, 2000, and the District will withdraw its charges against her.

It is clear that where charges are made against any tenured employee of a District, the Commissioner anticipates that the charges are fully investigated and evaluated, vis-a-vis the evidence thereto, prior to the District bringing the weight of the legal process down on the teaching staff member:

> Certification of tenure charges by a [District] is predicated on the [District's] belief that the charges  and the evidence in support of the charges would be sufficient, if true in fact, to warrant a dismissal or reduction in salary. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.
> On the basis that the board believes the teacher is unfit, it makes the commitment to expend its monetary resources, provide [District] personnel, and hire legal counsel to obtain relief; i.e., dismissal or reduction in salary. Where the facts of a case are clear, using the settlement process to achieve either of the statutorily prescribed results is prudent. Where the facts are not clear, or in dispute, a settlement for less than dismissal may be justified, bearing in mind that settlement may be inappropriate in certain matters. Where it is in the public interest to fully determine the issues, a plenary hearing is required. (emphasis added) (Cardonick at 850)

Notwithstanding the parties' bare assertion that this settlement protects the public's interest, the Commissioner disagrees. In tenure matters such as this, where a teaching staff member loses tenure and/or is dismissed for inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming or other just cause, the case is forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for a determination as to possible revocation or suspension of the teaching staff member's certificate. Upon such referral, and after review of the record, the State Board of Examiners "shall determine by public vote whether or not the offense [as] proven is of such a nature as to warrant revocation or suspension consideration, or dismissal of the case." (emphasis added) (N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6) Therefore, although the within agreement acknowledges respondent's awareness of the Commissioner's duty to refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, absent any factual findings on the record with respect to the specific allegations, and noting that respondent continues to dispute such allegations, it is unlikely that the Board of Examiners would have any basis for meaningful review and determination. Thus, the Commissioner cannot find that the public good is served by the within agreement. In this connection, the Commissioner underscores that > the mere fact that one of the terms of a proposed settlement  calls for the teaching staff member's resignation does not in and of itself assure [the Commissioner] that the Cardonick standards have been met because concern for the public interest extends beyond the boundaries of the particular district certifying the tenure charges. (In re Robert Barnes Driscoll, Board of Education of Cape May County Vocational-Technical School District, Cape May County, decided November 10, 1999, Slip Opinion at 5)

Accordingly, the proposed settlement is rejected for the reasons expressed herein.[1] The Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the settlement documents consistent with the decision, which revisions shall specify that respondent will not oppose proceedings before the State Board of Examiners to suspend or revoke her certificate(s) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6. However, if the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on an agreement modified in this fashion for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to a hearing on the merits so that charges may either be proven, or respondent vindicated.

[1] To the extent the terms of the settlement have already been effectuated, the parties are admonished that settlement agreements of controverted matters are of no force and effect and may not be implemented absent the Commissioner's approval pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

This matter having come before the Court by way of Verified Emergent Relief Petition filed by Petitioners Samuel and Jayne Tuchman, Pro Se, against Respondent, the Springfield Board of Education (the "Board"); and the Board having filed opposition by and through its attorneys, Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, P.C.; and the parties having negotiated and amicably resolved this matter, it is hereby agreed as follows:

1. Petitioners are to pay the Board $2526.27 representing tuition payment for the enrollment of their daughter, Hara Tuchman, for the 1999-2000 school year at Jonathan Dayton High School. Petitioners have already paid $500 of the $2526.27 to the Board as a "good faith" offer. The remaining balance of the money will be paid according to the following schedule:

   a. $675 to be paid on March 1, 2000.

b. $675 to be paid on April 1, 2000.

c. $676.27 to be paid on May 1, 2000.

2. In exchange for the above, Petitioners agree to withdraw the within Petition with prejudice.

3. For and in consideration of the mutual promises set forth herein, Petitioners, for themselves and for their successors and assigns, fully, irrevocably, and unconditionally release and discharge Respondent from any and all claims, demands, causes of action and liabilities of any kind, including claims for fees and expenses, related to the matters at issue in this action. This release specifically includes any claims for injunctive relief, claims seeking reformation of the Tuition Agreement between the Board and the Petitioners and claims seeking a declaration that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or in bad faith.

4. The parties recognize and agree that their entering into this Consent Order is not intended to and does not constitute or imply an admission of liability or any type of wrongdoing by any party, or of any violation of any federal, state or local statute, regulation or ordinance, or violation of any other right by any party, upon any legal or equitable theory, whether contractual, common law, statutory or otherwise. The parties agree that this Consent Order may not be used in any future proceeding of any type whatsoever, and that it shall be inadmissible in any such proceeding, other than a proceeding to enforce or prove the existence of same.

5. This agreement is specifically contingent upon approval by the Springfield Board of Education by recorded roll call vote at a public meeting. If not so approved, this agreement is null and void, with the parties having reserved all rights. In the event that Petitioners fail to perform their obligations under this Consent Order, it is recognized and agreed that the Board retains all rights to initiate proceedings in the Superior Court of New Jersey to recover $7,894, the initial amount of tuition that was charged. In the event that such action is necessary, it is recognized and agreed that the Board shall be entitled to recover the costs of pursuing such an action.

6. This agreement is final only upon its approval by the Commissioner of Education. Should the Commissioner fail to approve this agreement, this matter may proceed on the merits.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parents challenged the Board's decision to suspend their daughter, M.F., for one day for allegedly writing inappropriate notes to her teachers. The Board had originally suspended M.F. for three days and referred matter to the Child Study Team.

In light of the testimony of witnesses and the provisions of the Student Handbook, the ALJ determined to affirm the suspension. The ALJ noted that M.F.'s First Amendment Rights were not violated since the concept of free speech can be subject to appropriate restrictions such as abusive behavior.

The Commissioner agreed with the conclusion of the ALJ that, under the circumstances herein, the Board's one-day suspension was not arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or a violation of her constitutional rights. Petition was dismissed.

BEFORE KATHRYN A. CLARK, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners challenged the Board of Education's determination to suspend their daughter for 1 day. The petitioners appealed to the Department of Education and on November 3, 1999, the Department of Education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing and determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52: 14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. After several adjournments, the matter was heard on April 7, 2000. The record closed upon transmittal of documents on April 13, 2000.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

M.F., a 7th grade student, left a note on a teacher's desk on May 13, 1999 which said "Have a nice summer. I hope you die" and "To Mrs. L., Roses are red. Violets are black. Why is your chest as flat as your back. From M. and S.". The school principal, Vincent Fynan, issued M.F. a 3-day suspension for inappropriate conduct, in accordance with the Student Handbook. (P-1, Handbook, at page 13.)

The parents of M.F. appealed to the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Wendy L. Schadt. On September 1, 1999, the Superintendent of Schools reduced the suspension to 1 day, and waived any referral to the Child Study Team. (The Student Handbook provides for a 2 day suspension for a 1st offense and a 3 to 5 day suspension for a 2nd offense of inappropriate conduct. The suspension was set at 3 days because this was a 2nd offense.)

WITNESSES

Lorraine Lodge said she was M.F.'s math teacher, and that she found the note in question on her desk on the last day of school in 1999. She said that she had told M.F. to "sit up because someone could see down (her) shirt." She also said she discussed the school's dress code with another teacher.

Vincent Fynan said that, as Principal of Helen A. Fort Middle School, he reviewed the incident, and determined that the appropriate suspension should be 3 days. He said that the Superintendent, upon review, reduced this to a 1-day suspension. He also said that the suspension has not yet been served, pending the resolution of the instant appeal.

DISCUSSION

Petitioners have several issues involving the school, however, the only one that has been transmitted to me for hearing, and the only one over which I have jurisdiction, is the 1 day suspension.

Petitioners, pro se, made the following arguments: "the board of education's inconsistent enforcement of the rules set forth in the student handbook; a hostile educational environment was created by the teacher's repeated remarks; the student's right to a fair and equal education was denied when she was removed from the class and sent to the library for that period without benefit of a tutor; student's 1st amendment rights were violated."

The "inconsistent enforcement" complained of was that the Board did not discipline another student (not the S. who co-authored the note), in a situation not identical to this one. This complaint cannot stand. Each student should be dealt with individually.

The "teacher's repeated remarks," presumably about M.F.'s posture or mode of dress, will only be addressed in that the parents contended that the remarks may have lead to the writing of the note. Comments or directions made by a teacher to M.F. about her posture or clothing in no way justify writing an inappropriate note.

Sending M.F. to the library during a class period is also not an issue in this case, as it is unrelated to the 1-day suspension.

As to the petitioners' First Amendment argument, it is also unavailing. The concept of free speech, revered as it is, can be subject to appropriate restrictions.

In Karins v City of Atlantic City 152 N.J. 532 (1998), the New Jersey Supreme Court rejected constitutional arguments concerning free speech and due process and held that a firefighter could be disciplined for directing an epithet at a police officer. The Court found that even applying a strict scrutiny standard because of First Amendment issues, the fire department regulations were neither unconstitutionally vague nor overbroad. The use of a catchall provision, in this case "conduct unbecoming," was permissible since it is impossible to predict every instance of proscribed conduct. The school's Student Handbook use of the phrase "abusive behavior" is comparable.

On the First Amendment issue, the Court balanced Karins' freedom of expression against the interest of the State as an employer in promoting the efficiency of public services. Since the comment was not related to an issue of public concern and could disrupt the harmony and working relationship between the two departments, it was not constitutionally protected. The penalty imposed by the appointing authority, a 48-day suspension, was reinstated. The school has a similar interest in promoting the efficiency of public education.

In Desilets v. Clearview Regional Bd. of Educ., 137 N.J. 585 (1994), the New Jersey Supreme Court found that local school authorities violated a junior high school student's First Amendment rights by deleting his R-rated movie reviews from the school newspaper without a legitimate pedagogical reason. Examples of legitimate pedagogical reasons include "speech that is . . . ungrammatical, poorly written, inadequately researched, biased or prejudiced, vulgar or profane, or unsuitable for immature audiences." Id. at 591 (quoting Hazelwood School District v. Kuhlmeier, 484 U.S. 260, 271, 98 *L.Ed.*2d 592, 605 (1998)), see also N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2 (habitual use of profanity or obscene language by pupils is cause for suspension or expulsion).

In J.G. v. Lakewood Bd. of Educ., 93 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 433, a parent appealed her daughter's three-day suspension from school for using profanity toward a teacher during class. Citing to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2 and the student handbook for the district (which stated that profanity was cause for suspension), the ALJ upheld the suspension, and the Commissioner of Education adopted the decision.

Thus, it is clear that a wish that someone die, coupled with immature doggerel, can raise a legitimate pedagogical concern and may be subject to reasonable restrictions, such as the Student's Handbook's prohibition against abusive, offensive behavior directed toward a teacher.

Appropriate school authorities have decided that the suspension to be served should be 1 day. I will not disturb this conclusion.

ORDER

The appeal of petitioners is DENIED. The school district may impose the 1-day suspension.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." BEFORE MICHAEL L. RAVIN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, the legal guardian of R.M., applies for emergent relief in the form of an order directing the immediate reinstatement of R.M. to a specific school in the district, Ferris High School. R.M. was suspended on March 29, 2000. On May 8, 2000, the district allowed him to return to school, but reassigned him from Ferris High School to another district public school, Dickinson High School. On the same day, petitioner filed this Notice of Motion for Emergent Relief. The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case on May 10, 2000. Oral argument was scheduled for and did take place on June 1, 2000. Despite the position taken in its brief, at the hearing, petitioner stipulated that the propriety of the initial imposition of the 10-day suspension by the district was not at issue. After hearing oral argument, the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The evidence considered in determining whether to grant or deny this application consisted of an Affidavit of Francis X. Dooley, the district's Associate Superintendent and a Petition prepared by counsel and verified by G.M., with attachments.

R. M. is seventeen years of age and is in twelfth grade. He has attended Ferris High School in Jersey City for the last four years. He has passed all of his academic subjects and been promoted year to year. He is a good student with no prior disciplinary problems. He has been accepted into college and has numerous letters of recommendation from his teachers at Ferris.

Some time between March 24, 2000 and March 29, 2000, R. M. submitted a paper in response to a required English class assignment. Part of it, in its original form (prior to the insertion of "corrections" by the English teacher), follows:

UNSPOKEN

> What most don't realize is the power in words and actions taken, for the sole purpose to cause pain to another. Though they do not fight back, so they are considered to be easy prey or push over's, but vengeance is truly sweeter then anything imagined.
>
>
> As I walked out of the school through the long walkway I could see many of my fellow students . . . We all had one thing in common though, for we all hated and despised Ms. Kar.
>
> The bell has rung and class is over, . . . and I was free from my prison known as Ferris High School . . . [O]f course this day was not a good, for when I almost made it to the main exit, their was that > insufferable woman as if she was almost waiting for me. There began the exact same speech since the beginning of the school year on September which was merely four months ago. I've heard this from Ms. Kar so many times I could mouth every word she was going to say. "Frederick", she said his name as if they were on friendly terms. She had suspended him three times before this date. I had so many curses just waiting to burst out as they have before, but a suspension now would ruin my plans. So Ms. Kar went on and on about his particularly sharp rings, almost satanic jewelry, and daily wear of black clothes.

> "Freddy!" Its Dad calling me. "Coming!. . . "Hey Dad, what's up." "I received a call from your principle." he said softly. "She said you were disrespectful today and that I should have a talk with you." He spoke in oddly calm voice. "But Dad." But before I could finish I was smacked a cross the face with such force that it knocked me right off my feet. "WHAT HAVE I TOLD YOU ABOUT THIS DAMN PRINCIPLE, I DID NOT WANT TO GET ANOTHER CALL FROM THAT BITCH."
> . . . . . Now Ms. Kar wants to challenge me, well lets see. Its only seven o'clock, this is about the time when she leaves the school. I think I'll a pay her a visit. I ran to the school hoping not to miss her. I passed the flag pole and ran into the schools parking lot. Thanks to luck, there she was making her way to her car. "Hello Ms. Kar." I said as soon as I was close enough to be heard. "Frederick! you scared me." she said after she turned around to face me. "Shouldn't you be Home?" She asked me. "You called my father." I said as I looked about the empty parking lot. She turned and began walking to her car again "Good night Frederick." With that said I grabbed the bitch in the back of the neck stopping Ms. Kar in her tracks. There came my other hand to completely rap around her neck and I began to squeeze. She was kicking and a trying to get a gasp of air, this only made me squeeze tighter. Soon her movement stopped and all I had in my hands was a dead corpse in a gray suit. I dropped it to the ground where I watched it lay.

It is crucial to emphasize that the paper specifically mentions Ferris High School on page 1, and describes acts of violence against a number of persons, including the Principal of Ferris High School who is named "Ms. Kar" in the paper. The Principal of Ferris High School is Georgina Rey Fauta. Ms. Karas is a teacher at Ferris who had R. M. in her science class during the 1997-98 school year. It is uncontradicted that in the paper, R. M. made reference to actual incidents while using, in the view of the district, thinly disguised pseudonyms. The actual incidents are the several times when the Principal spoke to him about his appearance.

Even more pivotal, as will be demonstrated, is that the paper specifically refers to searching for "Ms. Kar" in the school's parking lot, confronting her there and strangling her to death.

The English teacher gave R.M.'s paper to the school's guidance counselor, who apparently showed it to Principal Rey Fauta. As a result, on March 29, 2000, R.M. received a School Notice of Suspension for 10 days, signed by Principal Rey Fauta. The reasons cited were "Threats of Violence – Other – Terroristic Threats" and "Violent and/or Criminal Act – Other – Terroristic Threats."

On March 30, 2000, the day following his suspension, R. M. was seen at approximately 3:00 p.m. by a security guard in the parking lot of the school where the Principal and other school staff park their cars. Parking in this lot is restricted to school staff only. It is uncontradicted that R.M. knew he was forbidden from being on school property during his suspension. When Mr. Dooley learned of this incident, he assigned a security guard to accompany the Principal to and from her car and to be present in the Principal's office after school hours.

It is clear that there was some discussion between the district and petitioner concerning the necessity of receipt by the district of psychiatric "clearance" as a condition to lifting the suspension. However, it is in dispute exactly what was said, by whom, or when.

Attached to the verified petition is a "psychiatric care form" dated March 30, 2000 which refers to authorization by a Mobile Crisis Unit for R.M.'s return to school on March 31, 2000, without the need for additional treatment. This form was executed and signed not by a psychiatrist, but by a "mobile crisis worker".

It is without contradiction that on March 31, 2000 R.M. and petitioner met with Principal Rey Fauto regarding the suspension. R.M. was referred to Dr. Kahn, the school physician, who ordered, in written form, that R.M. should not be re-admitted to school until he had been evaluated by a psychiatrist.

On April 10, 2000, it appears from a report attached to the verified petition that R.M. was evaluated by Dr. Shams Qureshi, a psychiatrist. Dr. Qureshi did not generate a report until May 10, 2000 and petitioner provided no evidence as to when that report, which will be discussed below, was received by the district.

On April 13, 2000, petitioner's counsel wrote to District Superintendent Dipatri and Mr. Dooley. Counsel indicated that initially petitioner was advised that R.M. could return to class upon a showing of a satisfactory "psychological" evaluation. Counsel indicated that there were two such evaluations, that R.M. was still not being allowed to return and that he was "requesting immediate appeal" of the decision not to allow R.M. to return to school. It is worth noting at this juncture, that despite what counsel represented in his April 13th letter, no reports authored by any psychiatrist or psychologist prior to April 13, 200 were submitted with the verified petition.

The district's public schools were closed for spring break from April 17, 2000 to April 24, 2000.

According to Mr. Dooley's affidavit, he heard that petitioner "brought some papers regarding a psychiatric evaluation" to Principal [Rey Fauta] at Open House on April 25, 2000 and was advised to call Mr. Dooley at his office.

On April 28, 2000, according to counsel's moving papers, "a hearing was held" before Mr. Dooley. It is not in dispute that R.M. expressed regret at that hearing and that he intended no harm to anyone by his paper. R.M. stated that he was in the parking lot on March 30 because he was coming to choir practice. Mr. Dooley found that R.M.'s explanation made no sense.

On May 1, 2000, R.M. submitted a letter of apology to Principal Rey Fauta in which he indicated that his paper did not pertain to her, he did not intend for her or anyone else to be threatened by it, that his English teacher had told the class to be creative, that he has an interest in becoming a horror-film maker and that he was "sorry for all the trouble this fictional story had caused."

On May 4, 2000, Mr. Dooley wrote to petitioner's attorney. The letter reads, in pertinent part:

> As I mentioned at our meeting last Friday, we regard [R.M.'s] actions at Ferris as extremely serious and threatening. The Principal of Ferris has been so frightened that I assigned a security guard to protect her throughout the work day. The opportunity is being offered to [R.M.] to return to public school – at nearby Dickinson High School – in order to graduate this year. He may report to the Principal at Dickinson High School any time on or after Monday, May 8, 2000.

Mr. Dooley further advised petitioner's attorney, in part, that:

> (R.M.) is prohibited from being on the premises of Ferris High School at any and all times. He may not attend classes at Ferris nor may he participate in any after-school activities at Ferris High School. However, he can attend the prom and exit day luncheon for Ferris High School students, as these activities are held off the premises of Ferris High School.
>
> (R.M.) will graduate in Dickinson High School ceremonies, but he will receive a diploma issued by Ferris High School.

It is uncontradicted that between April 11, 2000 and May 8, 2000, R.M. received home instruction, although the amount of it is in dispute.

It is further uncontradicted that R.M. reported to Dickinson High School on Monday, May 8, 2000. According to his school records, he has earned 160 credits to date, which is more than the total number of credits (135) needed to graduate, but he still needs to complete one required course, English 4. He is enrolled in English 4 at Dickinson High School and will also be permitted to continue with any course in which he was enrolled in Ferris which is also offered by Dickinson. Petitioner does not dispute that he will be academically qualified to graduate on time.

On May 10, 2000, two days after this motion was filed, Dr. Qureshi wrote a one-page report concerning his April 10 psychiatric evaluation of R.M. In his report, which parenthetically, is not in the form of a sworn affidavit, he indicates that he reviewed R.M.'s paper with R.M. The young man told him about his "strong interest in horror movies" and that he wishes to pursue a major in film making. R.M. also told him that his paper was fictional and intended "no personal harm" to anyone.

According to Dr. Qureshi's report, R.M. told him that after he wrote the paper, he showed it to his mother and sister as he wanted to know if it was scary enough.

The report states, in pertinent part:

> [R.M.] has also advised that he is quite anxious with the amount of time he is missing from school; any impact this may have upon his acceptance to college; graduation with his classmates, along with how upset he is that his parents may not see him graduate with his class.

Dr. Qureshi's report concluded that:

> . . . . having reviewed the story [R.M.] submitted to English class and the findings of my objective examination, I find with a high degree of medical certainty that [R.M.] is able to return to his high school, as he is not a threat to himself or anyone else.
>
> Furthermore, I wish to point out that if [R.M.] is denied reinstatement to his high school and graduation with his classmates of the last four years, will in all medical probability be left with permanent psychological injury.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Emergent relief is authorized by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.5 and 1:1-12.6. The most recent statement of the standards for granting relief are found in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). It should not be granted except if:

1. Irreparable injury will result to the party if the injunction is not granted; and

2. the party has a reasonable probability of success on the merits; and

3. the relative hardship to the moving party outweighs the hardship to the non-moving part.
Id. at 132-134.

With regard to irreparable harm, petitioner correctly observes that the right to a thorough and efficient public education is a right guaranteed under the New Jersey Constitution, Article VIII, Section IV, paragraph 1. By the district not allowing him to return to Ferris High School, argues petitioner, he has irreparably missed a considerable amount of school time and has not been given sufficient home instruction in lieu of school instruction.

Because it is uncontradicted that R.M. has sufficient number of credits to graduate and in the absence of any assertion that he will be academically precluded from graduating, I CONCLUDE that irreparable harm to R.M. 's right to a thorough and efficient education has not been demonstrated.

In the same vein, petitioner argues that irreparable harm is being placed on R.M. because he is being forced to undertake his education with a new student body, new teachers and at a distant high school. While this may understandably cause R.M. anxiety and inconvenience, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not proven this would constitute irreparable harm.

Last, petitioner points to Dr. Qureshi's report as sufficient, credible evidence from which to find irreparable harm. Counsel states "the doctor has indicated that the actions taken to date ... [have] resulted in psychological injury." As I read the report, it refers to R.M. being "quite anxious" and "upset", which is quite understandable - I can certainly empathize. However, the report does not indicate any then-observed psychological injury. I also note that Dr. Qureshi's report is based on an evaluation which took place on April 10, which was prior to the district's decision allowing him to return to school, to attend the prom and to attend graduation ceremonies (albeit at Dickinson High School.) In other words, the report, although uncontradicted, is now stale and not deserving of much weight. Even if it were not stale, without more specificity as to the nature of the alleged "permanent psychological injury, I do not find the report particularly trustworthy. Rather, I find it bald and conclusory.

Even if one assumes that petitioner has proven irreparable harm petitioner has failed to meet the second prong of the Crowe v. DeGioia test, i.e., that there is a reasonable probability of success on the merits.

Petitioner first contends, in this regard, that R.M.'s right to procedural Due Process was denied by the District's refusal to allow R.M. to return to Ferris High School after ten days.

The procedural safeguards to which petitioner was entitled must be addressed in the context of the actions of the district. The district did not expel R.M., as expulsion refers to the total exclusion of a pupil from the schools of a district. See, e.g., Scher v. Board of Education of West Orange, 1968 S.L.D. 92, 97. Rather, the district transferred him to another public high school within the district after a suspension.

As noted at the onset of this decision, petitioner does not contend that the propriety of the district's initial 10-day suspension was imposed inconsistent with R.M.'s constitutional rights. Therefore, I need not recite, the causes for suspension listed in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2 or even decide whether or not R.M.'s conduct constituted "good cause" for same, since petitioner concedes the point.

While there is no statutory guidance, petitioner cites R.R. v. Bd. of Ed., Shore Reg. H.S., 109 N.J. Super 337 (Ch. Div. 1970) for the proposition that for any suspension beyond 10 days, a student is entitled to a formal hearing by the district within 21 days from the start of the suspension. By my calculation, the district's hearing in this case should have occurred on April 26, 2000. It in fact occurred on April 28, 2000. Petitioner argues the remedy for this 2-day delay is immediate reinstatement. Arguably, the district may deserve criticism for not holding the hearing within 21 days. However, this is not a situation of mistaken identity or particularly credible protestations of innocence and R.M., unlike R.R., did have a preliminary hearing. Therefore, this matter is factually dissimilar from R.R..

Just as important, the instant case must be distinguished from those cases in which during the period of suspension, the student received no education at all. R.M. received home instruction. Although the amount is disputed, it seems to have been sufficient enough to meet his academic requirements for graduation.

In order for petitioner to prevail, petitioner must ultimately demonstrate that R.M. has not only an inherent right to a thorough and efficient public education, which he does, but an inherent right to attend the particular school of petitioner's choice within the district. Petitioner cites no authority in support of this proposition, nor does my research disclose any.

Finally, petitioner must prove at this juncture there is a reasonable probability of proving that the district's decision not to allow R.M. to return to the premises of Ferris High School is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. It is well established that actions of local boards that lie within their discretionary powers may not be upset unless they are arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. 288 (App. Div. 1960). The position of the district, as expressed in its letter memorandum in opposition to this motion, is that:

> .... the student was not returned to his school of choice because of the legitimate fears that he instilled by the implicit threats in his story about killing the Principal of Ferris High School and his conduct, after his suspension, in being on the premises of the high school, in the area of the staff parking lot, the very place mentioned in his story as the site of the killing of the Principal. His return to a different high school allows him to complete his course work in a fresh environment and helps to subside the fears for the safety of the persons at Ferris High School.

Petitioner argues that in light of Dr. Qureshi's report, the district's position is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. I would find petitioner's argument compelling, perhaps, if after its receipt of the report, the district refused to permit R.M. to return to any school within the district. At this juncture, however, based on the record before me and the fact that the district has allowed R.M. to return to a district public school, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not demonstrated a reasonable probability of showing that the district's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

With regard to the third prong of the Crowe v. DeGioia test, I CONCLUDE that the relative hardship to petitioner if R.M. is not immediately reinstated to Ferris High School does not outweigh the hardship to the district. The hardship to the district, based on the record before me, is that the Principal has a legitimate fear for her safety if R.M. is on the premises. Even if Dr. Quereshi reports that R.M. poses no threat to Principal Rey Fauta, in light of the lack of satisfactory proof as to why R.M. was in the very vicinity where the fictitious murder was to take place, it is not reasonable to expect that the Principal should be required to work in an environment of fear so that R.M. can complete his senior year studies with his fellow classmates.

I realize that the practical effect of this decision could preclude a full plenary hearing before the end of the school year unless petitioner has access to such a hearing quickly. Accordingly, by telephone, I invited petitioner's counsel to immediately contact the Clerk of the OAL so that one may be scheduled as soon as practicable.

ORDER

I ORDER that petitioner's Application for Emergent Relief be and hereby DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The audiocassette tape of the emergent hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 1, 2000, and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions were timely submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and were duly considered by the Commissioner in rendering his determination herein.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs that petitioner has failed to satisfy the four-pronged standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) for obtaining emergent relief. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, a grant of emergent relief is considered an extraordinary remedy which may only be issued where petitioner has demonstrated that the relief is necessary to prevent irreparable harm, where the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled, where there is a likelihood of success on the merits and where the relative hardship to the moving party favors granting such relief. Crowe at 132-34.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the ALJ is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein. Petitioner's request for emergent relief is denied. This matter shall continue at the OAL for further proceedings on the merits of petitioner's claim as may be deemed necessary.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF MORRIS KIMBLE,	:
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

The record, Settlement Agreement, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review of the proposed agreement reached by the parties and the nature and gravity of the tenure charges, and, notwithstanding the susceptibility of this matter to dismissal on procedural grounds, the Commissioner determines that he is unable to approve the settlement terms because there is insufficient information in the record to conclude, at this juncture, whether or not the terms of the settlement comport with the Cardonick standards for review of settlements in tenure matters. In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, aff'd State Board April 6, 1983, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846; N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a).

First, the record of the matter provides no information as to what position respondent will actually hold between his resuming employment with the Board and the effective date of his retirement on June 30, 2001. Second, the Commissioner is unable to ascertain from the record precisely how the sum of $210,000[1] for payment of accumulated sick days, vacation days and personnel leave days was calculated vis-à-vis specific provision(s) of the collective bargaining agreement between the Board and the Trenton Administrators and Supervisors Association. Third, the payment of $210,000 appears, by the wording of the settlement term, to be a sum certain which does not contain a provision for any contingency arising during the 2000-2001 school year which could require respondent to draw on his accumulated leave.

Accordingly, the matter is hereby remanded to the OAL for supplementation of the record and modification of the settlement terms, as may be needed, to address the Commissioner's concerns expressed above, such that the record has sufficient information for him to reach a final determination with respect to the proposed Settlement Agreement in light of the Cardonick standards of review for the settlement of tenure matters.[2]

IT IS SO ORDERED.

[1] Term 7 of the Settlement Agreement stipulates that respondent agrees to accept payment for all of his accumulated sick days, vacation days and personal leave days in six equal installments consisting of $35,000 each, on an annual basis commencing on July 1, 2001.

[2] This decision may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq., within 30 days of its filing. Commissioner decisions are deemed filed three days after the date of mailing to the parties.

The record of this matter, returned by the Office of Administrative Law, has been reviewed. While this matter was apparently returned pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1(c) and (d), the regulatory provisions which establish that when the agency head is a party to the matter the stipulation of settlement is deemed the final decision, the Commissioner notes that he is not a party to the within matter.

This matter arose from a complaint alleging that respondent Assistant Superintendent of Schools violated the School Ethics Act (Act) in connection with his part ownership of Study Hall, Inc., a daycare facility located in the District.

The Commission found that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) of the Act: 1) when he set forth that the District would have to use all daycare centers in order to obtain an opinion to allow him to provide daycare to the District and then sent the letter to the New Jersey Department of Human Services to ensure that those facts would remain the same; 2) when he sent a May 18, 2000 correspondence to the residents of the District using his title; and 3) when, by doing so, he contravened the representations he made in a request for an advisory opinion from the Commission and violated the Commission's caution to him. Having considered any mitigating and aggravating factors, the Commission determined that the violation of section 24(b), the use of one's official position to secure unwarranted privileges for oneself, is a very serious offense for which reprimand or censure would not be appropriate unless there were mitigating circumstances. Respondent's requests for advisory opinion did not provide mitigating circumstances because he sought an advisory opinion and then acted contrary to its advice. The Commission recommended that the appropriate penalty for a school official's use of his position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself is a suspension for one month.

Initially, the Commissioner emphasized that the determination of the Commission as to violation of the Act is not reviewable by the Commissioner. The Commissioner's jurisdiction is limited to reviewing the sanction to be imposed following a finding of violation by the Commission. Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner found and determined that the Commission's recommended penalty to suspend respondent for one month was an appropriate penalty. The fact that the suspension may be the harshest penalty thus far levied against a school administrator for a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) in no way mitigates against application of such penalty as long as the penalty is deemed proportional to the violation. Further, the Commissioner concurred with the Commission that "[o]ne cannot seek an advisory opinion and then act contrary to its advice without consequences." The Commissioner determined that a one-month suspension, without pay, is neither "Draconian" nor contrary to legislative intent simply because it has punitive, as well as remedial/deterrent, effects. Thus, the Commissioner ordered respondent suspended for one month without pay from his position as Assistant Superintendent. However, in light of respondent's responsibilities as Assistant Superintendent in an Abbott District, implementation of the sanction is deferred pending appeal to the State Board of Education.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The above matter arises from a complaint filed by Thomas Kinsella on July 30, 1999. Therein, he alleged that Harrison School District Assistant Superintendent Frederick Confessore violated the School Ethics Act in connection with his one-third ownership of Study Hall, Inc., which is a day care facility located in the Harrison. The complainant initially alleged that Mr. Confessore's conduct violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a), (b), (c), (d) and (f). However, at its meeting of January 25, 2000, the School Ethics Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that Frederick Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) of the School Ethics Act and dismissed charges that he violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a), (c), (d) and (f) of the Act. At its April 25, 2000 meeting, the Commission voted to find that Mr. Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) and to recommend that the Commissioner of Education impose a penalty of a one-month suspension.

Mr. Confessore filed his answer to the complaint on September 10, 1999, pursuant to an extension, admitting his one-third ownership of the center, but denying any violation of the School Ethics Act by virtue of his ownership or his conduct in relation to his position with the district or his ownership of the center.

The parties were invited to testify at the Commission's October 26, 1999 meeting. Both parties appeared with counsel. Following the October meeting, respondent submitted supplemental affidavits in response to testimony presented at the meeting. At the Commission's next meeting on November 23, 1999, the Commission heard additional testimony from Gene Barisano of the ABC Learning Center who had previously submitted an affidavit in support of the complaint, but later asked the Commission to withdraw it. The parties also appeared at that time to hear and, if necessary, rebut the testimony of the witness.

When the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegations that Frederick Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b), it set forth its belief that no material facts were in dispute with regard to the charge. Therefore, the Commission asked the parties to file written submissions by February 29, 2000 setting forth whether the Commission should find Mr. Confessore in violation of the Act and, if he is found in violation, what the sanction should be. Mr. Confessore's attorney asked for an extension to file, which was granted until March 10, 2000. The Commission received timely submissions from both parties.

For the reasons set forth below, the Commission now finds that Frederick Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) of the School Ethics Act and recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a penalty of a one-month suspension.

FACTS

The Commission finds the following material facts to be undisputed. These facts were substantially set forth in the Commission's probable cause determination. The parties had the opportunity to indicate if they disagreed with any facts and why those facts were material to the case. These facts have been modified to reflect respondent's arguments.

At all times relevant to this complaint, respondent has served as Assistant Superintendent of Schools in the Harrison School District. As such, he oversees technology programs related to curriculum and instruction. The Harrison School District is an Abbott[1] district. Respondent was also, and continues to be the owner of one-third of Study Hall, Inc. Study Hall, Inc. is a day care facility located in Harrison, New Jersey. It was established in 1988 and licensed by the New Jersey Department of Human Services Bureau of Licensing. Mr. Confessore's ex-wife, Carmella Confessore, and Anita Natalini own the other two-thirds equally. In addition to Study Hall, the owners also operate The Tot Spot, which is located in Kearny, New Jersey.

Kidz Academy is a day care center owned by Mr. Kinsella that is also located in Harrison. The New Jersey Department of Human Services licensed it to provide day-care services in the summer of 1999.

On December 18, 1997, Mr. Confessore requested an advisory opinion from the Commission as to whether he would have a conflict of interest in bidding on a contract with the Board to provide private day care services to the children of Harrison. The request was specifically related to Harrison's designation as a special needs district under Abbott and the anticipated mandate to provide pre-kindergarten education to children in such districts. Mr. Confessore asked a separate question as to whether his center could contract with the district in the event that the other centers could not adequately provide pre-kindergarten services.

The Commission, in response, issued Advisory Opinion A30-97 on February 26, 1998 advising that Mr. Confessore's proposed action would violate the Act. The Commission found that if Mr. Confessore's center were to bid on the project, the public could reasonably perceive that any decisions or recommendations that he made that had any impact on the pre-kindergarten services to be provided were made in the interest of the center rather than the district. Thus, it concluded that he would violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a) if his center were to contract with the district to provide pre-kindergarten services. The Commission declined to answer the second question, as it was too speculative.

Mr. Confessore requested a second opinion from the Commission on February 11, 1999 setting forth a change in circumstances. He explained that the Harrison School District planned to contract with the Urban League of Hudson County, Inc./Hudson Cares for Kids, to independently coordinate the three and four year old program. In his request, he stressed that the Urban League would be responsible for all phases of the plan inclusive of the initial contact of families to the ultimate placement and payment for services, based upon the parents' choice. He indicated that there would be no contracts or payments between the district and any local provider for childcare services. Rather, the district would pay all early childhood funds to the Urban League, which in turn would contract with the local providers. Mr. Confessore also submitted a letter from the Superintendent enclosing the results of a Rutgers survey that he said showed that his day care center was needed in order to meet the demand for district pre-kindergarten services.

In response to Mr. Confessore's second request, the Commission issued Advisory Opinion A02-99 on March 24, 1999. This opinion advised that Mr. Confessore's day care center could contract with the Urban League to provide pre-kindergarten services noting that the day care center was not contracting with the district, but with the Urban League. In this way, the Commission reasoned, the district would not be involved in the process of choosing day care centers and Mr. Confessore would be kept out of the process in his capacity as a district administrator. The Commission also based its opinion on the fact that the district had no choice but to use every available licensed provider of childcare services and thus, the Commission believed that all centers would be filled to capacity. The Commission cautioned however, that Mr. Confessore should not involve himself in his role as an administrator in Harrison in matters affecting his day care center.

Mr. Confessore was not involved with the presentation of the district's plan for pre-kindergarten education. Supervisor Dr. Brian Duffy, Assistant Superintendent Anthony Comprelli, Board Secretary Peter Higgins and Superintendent John DiSalvo prepared the district's plan and submitted it to the State Department of Education. The Department of Education conditionally approved the plan, but asked for additional information regarding statistics concerning children to be serviced and available providers.

In order to comply with the Department's conditions, the district entered into a contract in September 1998 to pay Rutgers University $24,250 to analyze Harrison's child population. On September 8, 1998, the Office of the Superintendent in Harrison sent survey forms to the directors of the Children's Studio, Study Hall, Inc., the ABC School and Holy Cross School. The memorandum indicated that "[o]nly those programs who return the survey by the deadline can be considered for this collaboration." The district and Rutgers ultimately identified three childcare centers in Harrison that were eligible to accept children under the new early childhood program. These were the ones to whom the surveys had been sent, except the Holy Cross School, which was not licensed.

On February 11, 1999, Superintendent DiSalvo provided the statistics on space availability to the Commission as part of Mr. Confessore's second request for an advisory opinion. The complainant's day care center was not licensed when the September 8, 1998 correspondence was sent and Rutgers performed its survey. Thus, it was not included in Rutgers' list of eligible facilities.

At a March 16, 1999 meeting of the Board, the Board voted to contract with the Urban League of Hudson County/Hudson Cares for Kids, to independently coordinate the three and four-year old pre-kindergarten program. However, no details of the contract were provided. The resolution stated in part, "Said Professional Services Contract is not available at this time but must be in place prior to the next scheduled meeting of this Board".

On April 20, 1999, Superintendent DiSalvo sent a letter to all parents of district students explaining that the Harrison School District was going to contract with the Urban League to provide a pre-kindergarten program. He listed the three providers identified by Rutgers. The program was described as a voucher subsidy program that the Urban League would coordinate for all three and four year olds who are legitimate residents of Harrison. He stated that the Urban League would make referrals of families to all local providers and would be responsible for placement and payment to providers for services, based on parental choice. The letter indicates that parents with questions should not hesitate to call Mr. DiSalvo.

The Urban League held a registration for the pre-school program at its facility from April 20-23. 1999. Mr. Confessore did not participate in the registration program.

On April 26, 1999, Mr. Confessore, in his capacity as a representative of Study Hall, Inc. wrote and signed a letter to an Assistant Commissioner in the New Jersey Department of Human Services. The letter indicated that he and the two other signatories, who were also representatives of day care centers, felt that the children of Harrison should only be referred to the centers that were part of the initial planning process, the Children's Studio, ABC Learning Center and The Study Hall. Therein, he states "We have spent time and money in order to service the district population. We can provide enough slots for the three and four-year old half-day programs." The signatories ask that the Assistant Commissioner send a copy of the response to Peter Higgins, the Board Secretary/School Business Administrator for the Harrison Board. The Director of the Office of Special Initiatives in the Department of Human Services responded to only Mr. Confessore, although there were two other signatories. She replied on April 28, 1999 that, "it is up to the school district to decide which child care centers it wants to contract with as long as sufficient space is available for all three and four-year olds who enroll." She copied only Mr. Higgins.

Each year, in or about the month of May, Study Hall holds an Open House and registers children for the coming Summer and regular year programs. Study Hall held this Open House on May 11, 1999. Study Hall registered students at that time.

On May 18, 1999, Mr. Confessore sent all residents of Harrison correspondence on behalf of Study Hall, Inc. that indicated that the Harrison Board of Education is contracting with the Urban League of Hudson County to run the preschool program for three and four year olds. Mr. Confessore obtained the names of the residents through a copy service, Sir Speedy. The letter provided in part, "...your child may be eligible for a full-day program at our center at no cost to you." (emphasis supplied) The letter provided that Mr. Confessore was an owner and operator of the center and identified him as an Assistant Superintendent with over 25 years of public school experience as a teacher, elementary and middle school principal. It noted that "[a]ll three owners are certified by the New Jersey State Department of Education." The letter enclosed a brochure that discussed admissions criteria, philosophy, standards, and other information regarding the Study Hall. The cover letter indicates that parents can register at the Study Hall from Monday through Friday.

On or about June 1999, Mr. Confessore attended a meeting of the Hudson County Coalition of Day Care Directors. This included about 100 day care providers, including those who were servicing the Abbott districts.

On July 13, 1999, Mr. Confessore and Carmelia Confessore attended a meeting with representatives of the Urban League and other preschool owners and directors where the preschool program was discussed. At this meeting, Mrs. Confessore stated that the Study Hall had already registered children, in reference to the registrations at the open house. One of the other attendees who questioned Mrs. Confessore's statement was under the impression that no children were to have been enrolled at that time.

In August 1999, the Urban League sent all parents a flier indicating that four day care centers were available including Kidz Academy, which was then licensed. The flier indicated that parents should contact the Urban League of Hudson County for information.

On August 30, 1999, the Board signed the professional services contract with the Urban League.

Assistant Superintendent Comprelli now serves as the contact person in the Superintendent's office, while one of his principals, Robert Grajewski, serves as the Urban League's contact. Mr. Grajewski also runs the three and four year old program with assistance from Dr. Duffy. According to Superintendent DiSalvo, Mr. Confessore has no involvement with the program in the district and is instructed to leave the Board caucuses if there is any discussion of the program.

ANALYSIS

The Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that Mr. Confessore's conduct violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b). It provides:

> No school official shall use or attempt to use his official position to secure unwarranted privileges, advantages or employment for himself, members of his immediate family, or others.

The Commission now concludes that Mr. Confessore used or attempted to use his official position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself in violation N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) in three ways: 1) when he requested an opinion from the Commission stating that his center would have to be used to meet the demand for services and then wrote a letter to the New Jersey Department of Human Services (NJDHS) to exclude other providers; 2) when he used his title in his correspondence of May 18, 1999 to the residents of Harrison promoting the day care center; and 3) when he acted contrary to the second advisory opinion by sending the May 18, 2000 letter. The Commission will discuss these in turn.

The first way in which the Commission finds that Mr. Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) is encompassed in his second advisory opinion request. In that request, he states that his center must be used in order to meet the demand for pre-kindergarten services in the district. Based largely on his representation, along with his representation that the Board would not be administering the program, the Commission allowed him to contract with the Urban League to provide pre-kindergarten services to the district. However, after receiving the Commission's opinion, Mr. Confessore wrote a letter to an Assistant Commissioner in the NJDHS asking the department to restrict the number of providers to only those who were included in the original study of Harrison's day care needs. He said that the three existing licensed centers "can provide enough slots for the three and four-year old half-day programs." Mr. Confessore specifically asked that the children not be referred to the two new centers that "are frantically trying to open." In sum, he presented as fact to the Commission that every provider would be needed in order to meet the pre-kindergarten demand and then wrote a letter to try to ensure that his factual scenario would not change and interfere with the opinion he had received. The Commission finds that Mr. Confessore's representations in his second request for an advisory opinion and his subsequent letter to the Department of Human Services constituted an attempt to use his official position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b).

The second way in which the Commission finds a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) is in the May 18, 1999 letter that Mr. Confessore sent on behalf of Study Hall, Inc. to the residents of Harrison.

Mr. Confessore's letter must be placed in context. On March 16, 1999, the Board approved a contract with the Urban League to administer its early childhood program.

The Board did not approve a professional service contract, but authorized paying the Urban League a set amount to coordinate a pre-kindergarten program for a certain amount of time. On April 20, 1999, the Superintendent sent a letter to the parents of students in the district explaining the contract with the Urban League. The letter was sent on the letterhead of the Office of the Superintendent with Mr. Confessore's name on it as Assistant Superintendent of Schools describing the program. Mr. Confessore's letter signed "Study Hall, Inc." followed on May 18, 1999. It closely mirrored the wording of the Superintendent's letter regarding the description of the contract with the Urban League. Mr. Confessore's letter indicates in the second paragraph that "Your child may even be eligible for a full-day program at our center at no cost to you." (emphasis supplied) The correspondence markets Study Hall directly to the residents of Harrison and invites them to register with Study Hall. However, according to what Mr. Confessore told the Commission in his second advisory opinion request, and what the Superintendent told parents in his letter, the Urban League was supposed to notify parents of their choices of providers and they would register through the Urban League. The actual details of the professional services agreement with the Urban League were revealed in a contract signed on August 30, 1999.

Mr. Confessore argues in his written submission that he did not use his official position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages by sending the May 18, 1999 correspondence. He states that he has used the same wording in brochures for many years and always lists the educational backgrounds of the principals to show that the facility only uses certified career educators. He further argues that there is no evidence to support the implication that the other providers were at a disadvantage because the Urban League contract was not executed until August 1999. He argues that all information regarding the three and four year-old program was in the public domain. Last, he argues that he did not possess any information regarding who constituted the parents of three and four year olds in the district and only sent his mailing to residents whose names he obtained from Sir Speedy.

The Commission finds that when Mr. Confessore's letter is viewed in the context of the other information coming from the Superintendent's office, he used the letter to seek an unwarranted privilege or advantage. The Superintendent had written to district parents in April and advised them that the Urban League would be registering parents for daycare. District parents would already know Mr. Confessore as a district Assistant Superintendent and if they did not already know, his title was prominent on the Superintendent's letterhead. Mr. Confessore then sent his letter in May highlighting that he is an owner of Study Hall and also an Assistant Superintendent. In addition to connecting his position to the day care center, Mr. Confessore goes on to note in the letter that his center can provide full day childcare at no cost to the residents. By using this language, he gives the misleading impression that his center is the only center that can provide the free preschool services, particularly the full-day, at no cost to them. Even worse, his correspondence may have given the impression that his is the center that children in the school district should use. The Commission therefore concludes that Mr. Confessore used his position to gain an unwarranted privilege or advantage in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) by using his title to try to get business and using wording that misleads readers to believe that his is the only center that can provide free pre-kindergarten services.

The third way in which Mr. Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) of the Act is by doing what he stated that he not would do in his advisory opinion request and also, doing what the Commission told him not to do in its opinion. Mr. Confessore represented to the Commission in his second advisory request that the Urban League would register parents and issue vouchers to parents to send their children where they wished. He said that the Board would not be involved. The Commission understood his statements mean that any opportunity for conflict would thereby be minimized. Mr. Confessore further represented that he would not have to be competing for business with the other centers because the great demand for services ensured that every center would be filled to capacity. Clearly, neither of these representations became the reality.

Mr. Confessore is an Assistant Superintendent in the Superintendent's office. From that office came a letter from the Superintendent in April to district parents explaining the Urban League contract and inviting them to call his office rather than the Urban League and providing its number. As a result of that letter, the Superintendent's office was placed in the position of receiving telephone calls from district parents who had questions about the pre-kindergarten program. In addition, the owner of a daycare center testified that he called Mr. Confessore at the Superintendent's office and discussed with him questions he had about the program, although he said he called Mr. Confessore in his role as daycare center owner. Thus, Mr. Confessore's role as an Assistant Superintendent became immediately entangled with his role as a daycare center owner because the program was not funneled exclusively through the Urban League as Mr. Confessore represented. Further, despite the representations that all the centers would be filled to capacity, the centers were indeed competing for business. Mr. Confessore was not to be soliciting pre-school children for his daycare center under the program as he described it to the Commission. Yet, this is exactly what he did by his May 18, 2000 letter in violation of the restraints he had placed on himself in seeking the second advisory opinion. Based on his May 18, 2000 letter and the other circumstances creating the appearance of impropriety, the Commission finds that Mr. Confessore used his position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b).

Furthermore, in its second advisory opinion to Mr. Confessore, the Commission cautioned Mr. Confessore that he should not involve himself in his role as an administrator in the Harrison School District in matters affecting his childcare center. Mr. Confessore's use of his title in his correspondence to Harrison residents as a means to get business when he had represented that there would not be a need for such correspondence in the first instance, was a misuse of his position in violation of the Commission's caution to him. The Commission therefore concludes that by his May 18, 2000 correspondence, Mr. Confessore used his position to secure unwarranted privileges and advantages in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b).

DECISION

For the foregoing reasons, the Commission finds that Mr. Confessore violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) of the School Ethics Act: 1) when he set forth that the district would have to use all daycare centers in order to obtain an opinion to allow him to provide daycare to the district and then sent the letter to the NJDHS to ensure that those facts would remain the same; 2) when he sent his May 18, 2000 correspondence to the residents of Harrison using his title; and 3) when, by doing so, he contravened the representations he made in his request for an opinion from the Commission and violated the Commission's caution to him.

PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

The Commission has carefully considered the conduct of Mr. Confessore and now believes that the appropriate penalty to recommend to the Commissioner of Education is a penalty of a one-month suspension.

In determining the appropriate penalty, the Commission considers both the conduct involved in the violation as well as any mitigating and aggravating factors. Mr. Confessore urges the Commission to find as a mitigating factor that Mr. Confessore sought an advisory opinion from the Commission in good faith and acted in accordance with the advisory opinion. Thus, he argues, if any violation is found, the violation should be deemed inconsequential or "de minimus." The Commission disagrees.

The violation of section 24(b), the use of one's official position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself, is a very serious offense for which reprimand or censure would not be appropriate unless there were mitigating circumstances. Mr. Confessore's requests for an advisory opinion do not provide those mitigating circumstances.

Mr. Confessore indeed sought an advisory opinion from the Commission, which initially said that he would be in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a) if he were to attempt to contract with the Board to provide day care services to the district. Mr. Confessore later requested a second opinion by setting forth a change in circumstances. The Commission's second advisory opinion said that he could contract with the Urban League to provide the daycare services, but based on the facts that no one in the Board offices would be involved with the program and that pre-kindergarten programs were in such short supply that there would be no competition for students. The evidence before the Commission has demonstrated that neither fact was correct. Moreover, the Commission found that he violated the caution it set forth at the conclusion of its advisory opinion. One cannot seek an advisory opinion and then act contrary to its advice without consequences. Therefore, the Commission does not find Mr. Confessore's requests for an advisory opinion to be mitigating circumstances.

The Commission believes that the appropriate penalty for a school official's use of his position to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself is a suspension from his position. The Commission believes that a suspension length of one month will have the necessary punitive and deterrent effects.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 150-5/00
SEC DKT. NO. C17-99

IN THE MATTER OF FREDERICK	:
CONFESSORE, BOARD OF EDUCATION	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF HARRISON, HUDSON COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The record of this matter and decision of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions were timely submitted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.3. No response to respondent's exceptions was filed by the Commission.

In his exceptions, respondent requests that the Commissioner reject the sanction of a one-month suspension recommended by the School Ethics Commission and that he reduce the penalty to one which accomplishes the legislative mandate of the School Ethics Act (Act). Respondent also requests that the implementation of a sanction, if any, be stayed during the pendency of his exhaustion of all applicable administrative remedies and appeals.

Respondent avers, inter alia, that the Commission failed to consider adequately the mitigating circumstances proffered by him and alleges that the Commission committed a due process violation in its zeal to justify the sanction. He argues that the Commission has trivialized his proofs that he twice sought advisory opinions from it, and maintains that he has complied with the spirit and letter of the second advisory opinion by the Commission.

Further, it is respondent's position that the recommended sanction is violative of the statutory scheme, is inconsistent with the School Ethics Commission's prior rulings, and is punitive rather than remedial in nature. As to this point, respondent argues that the touchstone of any sanction by the Commission is proportionality to the offense, stating, inter alia, that nowhere is legislative authorization bestowed upon the Commission to enact punitive, "Draconian," sanctions to effectuate its charge. Respondent asserts that the recommended one-month suspension would constitute the harshest sanction ever imposed by the Commission against a school administrator for violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b), and perhaps even the harshest in the history of the Act for a violation of that particular subsection. As such, respondent maintains that he has been treated in a disparate fashion. (Respondent's Exceptions at 6) In support of his position, respondent essentially reiterates the legal arguments regarding penalty presented to the Commission in his March 8, 2000 letter brief, adding several other cases wherein the Commission determined a violation of subsection (b) occurred and recommended only a censure. In the Matter of Raymond Bonker, Lenape Valley Regional Board of Education, decided by the Commissioner May 22, 1998 and In the Matter of Lawrence James, Chesilhurst Board of Education, decided by the Commissioner February 9, 1999. (Id. at 7) Moreover, respondent avers that his conduct does not rise to the level of any of the violations in School Ethics cases; yet, in his estimation, he would be punished more severely, even than in those instances where a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) was found by the Commission.

In his arguments relative to violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c), respondent maintains that a strong inference may be drawn from the plain language of the Act that a violation of this subsection warrants a much greater sanction than a violation of subsection (b) because subsection (c) requires the school official to "act" in his/her official capacity. Respondent points out that those counts of the present matter filed against him relating to subsection (c) were dismissed by the Commission. (Id. at 8) In support of his position that prior School Ethics decisions dealing with subsection (c) violations militate against acceptance of the Commission's recommended penalty, respondent cites Irvington Municipal Council v. Steele, 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 123, a matter wherein the functions and duties as school business administrator were found to be inherently antagonistic to functions and duties as Mayor, thus warranting a one-year suspension; Scannella v. Scudillo, 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 190, rev'd and remanded State Board 195, decided by the Commissioner June 10, 1997, wherein a Board member cast the deciding vote for her son-in-law as superintendent and sold gloves to district employees, which, after a tortuous administrative journey, ultimately resulted in a censure[1]; In the Matter of John Harrison, Ewing Township Board of Education, 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 553, wherein a board member whose firm did work for the board architect voted to extend the architect's contract at the request of the general contractor, which resulted in the Commissioner rejecting the Commission's recommended penalty of censure and imposition of a reprimand[2]; and In the Matter of Kenneth Seppelt, Roselle Park Board of Education, decided by the Commissioner July 1, 1996, wherein a Board member voted on a payment of a bill for a bakery in which he was a partner, a violation which eventually, by way of a consent order, resulted in a reprimand.

Respondent next avers that the recommended sanction of a one-month suspension would have a devastating effect on him, because, unlike when a board member is suspended, his suspension could be without pay. Respondent further argues with respect to his suspension that:

[1] The Commissioner notes that at the time when the penalty for violation of the Act was ultimately determined in the Scudillo matter, Ms. Scudillo was no longer a member of the Board, so that the penalties of suspension or removal from office were recognized as being no longer possible as sanctions to be levied against her for violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c).

[2] In the John Harrison case, the Commissioner levied the sanction of reprimand because respondent was a new board member who had not yet received the board member training course; he had sought and received a legal opinion with respect to the facts of the matter before the filing of the complaint; the board at a subsequent date unanimously approved the prior vote, absent participation by Harrison; and the record confirmed that there was an extremely remote connection between the interests of Harrison's company to the particular vote in dispute.

> In an Abbott district such as Harrison, the loss would be particularly acute. [Respondent] is an Assistant Superintendent, overseeing technology programs. This involves him with all technology-related curriculum and instruction, and the purchase, installation and networking of hardware and software. He is also responsible for the mandated Professional Development Program. Additionally, he writes the district's competitive grants, which has resulted in the awarding of almost $1,000,000.00 Ultimately the real cost of [respondent's] suspension would be paid by the students.
> Moreover, the penalty is harsh, punitive, and self-serving. This conclusion is supported by the Commission's own words. At page 9 of the April 25th decision, it states: "...one cannot seek an advisory opinion and then act contrary to its advice without consequences." At page 10, it goes on to say: "...The Commission believes that a suspension length of one month will have the necessary punitive and deterrent effects." (Respondent's Exceptions at 9-10)

Lastly, respondent contends that the desired deterrent effects have already occurred, avowing that all procedural safeguards have been put in place at the Study Hall by him following the filing of the complaint. Of this he states: "Suffice to say, the [Commission] has gotten Mr. Confessore's attention. The only effect of the recommended sanction will be to punish him more than any other school administrator since the inception of the Act, for a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b). Such a result is not supported by the legislative history of the Act, nor in keeping with the spirit or the letter of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22." (Id. at 10)

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

Initially, it must be emphasized that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.14 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-9.1, the determination of the Commission as to violation of the Act is not reviewable by the Commissioner herein. Only the School Ethics Commission may determine whether a violation of the School Ethics Act occurred. The Commissioner's jurisdiction is limited to reviewing the sanction to be imposed following a finding of a violation by the School Ethics Commission. Therefore, this decision is restricted solely to a review of the recommended penalty and its implementation.

Upon independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner finds and determines that the Commission's recommended penalty to suspend respondent for a period of one month from his position as Assistant Superintendent for violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) is, under the factual circumstances presented herein, an appropriate penalty for his violation of the School Ethics Act.

It was well-established by the record that the Commission in its second advisory opinion to respondent on March 24, 1999 made it abundantly clear to respondent that the Urban League could contract with his daycare center to serve Harrison School District students based solely on the information that he set forth in his February 11, 1999 request for an advisory opinion. That information included, but was not limited to, representations that (1) the Urban League of Hudson County would be responsible for every phase of the early childhood plan, from the initial contact of families to the ultimate placement and payment of services, based on parental choice and (2) if his daycare center was ineligible to service Harrison's preschool students, it would be impossible for the District to serve its early childhood students locally because of insufficient space in the two other local daycare centers; i.e., respondent would not have to compete for business with other centers because the great demand for services ensured that every center could be filled to capacity and only the Urban League would have any role or involvement in the placement process and payment of students in preschool programs, based on parental choice.

On April 26, 1999, a month following issuance of the Commission's advisory opinion, respondent wrote to the Department of Human Services seeking to foreclose the referral of preschool students to two new centers trying to open in Harrison, and, in a letter dated May 18, 1999 sent to Harrison residents, he engaged in the direct marketing of his daycare program to parents of preschool students in a document which describes him as an "Assistant Superintendent of Schools with over 25 years of public school experience as a teacher, elementary and middle school principal." Consequently, on this basis, as well as for the other reasons delineated in the Commission's decision, the Commissioner finds and determines that such actions taken in contravention of the Commission's second advisory opinion and in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A: 12-24(b) warrant a one-month suspension.

The fact that the suspension may be the harshest penalty thus far levied against a school administrator for a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A: 12-24(b),[3] in no way mitigates against application of such a penalty in this matter, as long as the penalty is deemed proportional to the violation(s), as the Commissioner so finds herein. As such, the penalty does not constitute disparate treatment. Further, the Commissioner finds respondent's position to be without merit that the Commission failed to consider adequately the mitigating circumstances proffered by him or trivialized his proofs that he twice sought advisory opinions from the Commission. Upon review of the record, the Commissioner fully concurs with the Commission that "[o]ne cannot seek an advisory opinion and then act contrary to its advice without consequences." (Commission Decision at 9) The Commissioner further determines that a one-month suspension, without pay, is neither "Draconian" nor contrary to legislative intent simply because it has punitive, as well as remedial/deterrent, effects.

[3] It is noted by the Commissioner that there have been very few school ethics decisions involving the sanctioning of school administrators. As correctly noted by respondent at page 6 of his exceptions, the majority of the Commission's cases since inception of the Act pertain to school board members, not administrators. The Commissioner also agrees with respondent that the Act makes no distinction between these two categories of school

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Frederick Confessore be suspended for the period of one month, without pay, from his position as Assistant Superintendent in the Harrison School District based upon the findings of the Commission that he has violated the School Ethics Act. In so holding, however, the Commissioner determines that in light of the fact that respondent is an Assistant Superintendent who has responsibility for such critical areas as technology and professional development in a special needs Abbott district, respondent's request with respect to deferring implementation of the above sanction is HEREBY GRANTED during the pendency of an appeal to the State Board of Education.[4] officials with regard to sanctions; therefore, sanctions applied in previous Commission cases against board members are relevant to the instant matter.

[4] This decision, as the Commissioner's final determination in the instant matter, may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq., within 30 days of its filing. IN THE MATTER OF FREDERICK :
CONFESSORE, BOARD OF EDUCATION : OF HARRISON, HUDSON COUNTY. :

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

DECISION ON MOTION

Decided by the School Ethics Commission, April 25, 2000

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, June 16, 2000

For the Respondent-Appellant, Michael J. Pecklers, Esq.

For the Petitioner-Respondent, Thomas Russo, Deputy Attorney General
(John J. Farmer, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey)

On July 15, 2000, Frederick Confessore (hereinafter "respondent"), an assistant superintendent of schools, filed an appeal to the State Board of Education from a determination by the School Ethics Commission that he had violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) of the School Ethics Act in connection with his part ownership of Study Hall, Inc., a daycare facility located in the district, and from a determination by the Commissioner of Education that the appropriate penalty for such violation was a one-month suspension. The Ethics Commission concluded that the respondent had used or attempted to use his official position in the district to secure unwarranted privileges or advantages for himself.

On November 20, 2000, the respondent filed the instant motion to supplement the record on appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.9(b). The respondent seeks to supplement the record with an executed copy of a provider agreement between Study Hall and the Urban League of Hudson County. The respondent also seeks access to a number of documents included in the statement of items comprising the record in this matter, which he claims were never provided to him. The respondent requests to supplement the record with his response to those documents.

The School Ethics Commission filed a brief in opposition to the respondent's motion, and the briefing schedule has been placed in abeyance pending our determination of this motion.

After a review of the parties' submissions, we grant the respondent's request to supplement the record with a copy of the provider agreement between Study Hall and the Urban League, finding such document to be material to the issues on appeal.

In addition, we direct that the Ethics Commission provide the respondent with a copy of the requested documents included in the statement of items, i.e., Items 3, 22, 25, 32 and 34, Statement of Items Comprising the Record on Appeal, dated October 20, 2000, prepared by Thomas Russo, Deputy Attorney General. In so doing, we reject the Ethics Commission's contention that the respondent had no entitlement to have received certain documents generated during the proceedings below. We are particularly troubled by the fact that the respondent was never provided with a copy of the "position paper," containing the complainant's arguments and allegations against him, which was submitted to the Ethics Commission by the counsel for the complainant in March 2000. Id., item 32.[1]

[1] We note in that regard that the Ethics Commission provided a copy of the respondent's letter brief to the complainant. Id., items 33 and 34.

Certainly, the right of a respondent to confront the accusations against him is basic, and although nothing requires the School Ethics Commission to accept submissions from complainants after it has determined that probable cause exists to credit the allegations in the complaint, see N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq.; In the Matter of Frank Pannucci, decided by the State Board of Education, March 1, 2000 (the Ethics Commission, rather than the complainant, is charged with acting as the guardian of the public interest), the requirements of due process mandate that respondents in proceedings before the Ethics Commission be provided with all materials relied upon by the Commission in deciding the case, including any documents filed by the complainant.

Under the circumstances, however, we deny the respondent's request to supplement the record on appeal with an additional submission responding to those documents. Respondent will have a full opportunity to address the complainant's arguments, including those contained in the complainant's March 8, 2000 "position paper," in his brief in support of the instant appeal.

We direct that the briefing schedule be reestablished and that the respondent file a brief in support of his appeal within 20 days after his receipt of the above-mentioned items from the School Ethics Commission.

The record, Stipulation of Settlement, and Initial Decision issued in this consolidated matter[1] by the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms, except as clarified herein, and adopts the settlement as the final decision in this matter.[2]

The settlement terms relevant to Petitioner Siino stipulate the number of years of seniority she has accrued for service in Kearny under her instructional certificate. However, because the record does not contain a precise employment history, the Commissioner is unable to verify the legal correctness of the seniority determination agreed to by the parties as part of this settlement. For example, term 3 indicates that petitioner has been employed by the Board under her elementary endorsement since September 16, 1987; yet, term 5 indicates that she has acquired 7.48 years of seniority as an elementary teacher through June 30, 1999. In the absence of information in the record to verify the accuracy of this seniority calculation agreed to by the parties in order to reach amicable resolution of the instant dispute, the Commissioner finds and determines that the seniority calculation cannot be deemed binding or precedent setting for any future reduction in force in the District because it could impact on other teaching staff members not party to this consolidated matter.

[2] Notwithstanding the caption of the Stipulation of Settlement, the decision in this matter does not apply to Kearny Education Association v. Board of Education of the Town of Kearny (OAL Dkt. No. EDU 11367-95); therefore, it is noted for the record that the approval of the settlement in the within matter does not in any way constitute review or approval of settlement terms 14-21 pertaining to Sally Ann Roessler, a petitioner in the Kearny Education Association matter. As such, the parties are reminded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, settlement terms may not effectuated until such time as they have been submitted to and approved by the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to the parties' compliance with the applicable terms of the settlement as clarified by the Commissioner herein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Dear Judge Clancy:

The above matters all stem from a RIF by the KBOE in April of 1995 and have been consolidated. Enclosed please find a Partial Stipulation of Settlement which fully resolves OAL Docket Nos. EDU 11368-95; EDU 11221-96; EDU 07910-97 and EDU 09811-98. It also partially resolves the one remaining docket No. EDU 11367-95.

The parties are continuing to narrow the issues and to negotiate a possible resolution regarding the remaining claims. It is the hope of both counsel to have this matter concluded without the need for a hearing within the next several weeks.

I wish to acknowledge and thank Your Honor for the patience you have shown in this matter. Please contact my office in the event you have any concerns or require anything additional at this time.

White has been employed by the Board during the past four school years (1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99) and has acquired an additional 4.0 years of seniority as an elementary teacher and as a reading teacher. Thus, as of June 30, 1999, White has acquired 9.0 years of seniority as an elementary teacher and 7.0 years of seniority as a reading teacher.

certificate with endorsements as an Elementary School Teacher (K-8) and Nursery School Teacher.

11. Petitioner Van Oostendorp has been employed by the Board in a tenurable position since September 1, 1986. Pursuant to her service with the Board under her elementary and reading teacher endorsements, Van Oostendorp had acquired tenure status prior to June 30, 1995, which tenure status extends to all subjects that she is authorized to teach under all her endorsements to her instructional certificate.

12. As of June 30, 1995, Van Oostendorp had also acquired 6.0 years of seniority as an elementary teacher and 3.0 years of seniority as a reading teacher.

13. Van Oostendorp has been employed by the Board during the past four school years (1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1999-99) and has acquired an additional 4.0 years of seniority as an elementary teacher and as a reading teacher. 17. During the past four school years (1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99), and as a result of a reduction in force effectuated by the Board, Roessler has been employed outside the district as a full-time associate media specialist.

18. Roessler shall be reappointed to a full-time 10 month position as an elementary teacher in the Kearny School District for the 1999-2000 school year commencing September 1, 1999, subject to any 60 day notice which she may be contractually required to give to her current employer.

19. Roessler shall be credited with 4.0 additional years of seniority as an elementary teacher. Thus, as of June 30, 1999, Roessler has acquired 7.0 years of seniority as an elementary teacher.

20. Roessler sustained a significant salary loss as a result of her reduction in force and her subsequent employment outside the district.

21. In lieu of a cash settlement, the Board agrees to award Roessler 100 sick days and to place her on Step 15*/Equivalency 6 of the Salary Guide for the 1999-2000 school year, which shall be deemed to constitute back pay.

22. Neither the Board nor any agents, officers, representatives, or employees of the Board shall retaliate or take adverse action based upon the petitioners' filing or pursuit of this litigation.

The record, Stipulation of Settlement, and Initial Decision issued in this consolidated matter[1] by the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms, except as clarified herein, and adopts the settlement as the final decision in this matter.[2]

The settlement terms relevant to Petitioner Siino stipulate the number of years of seniority she has accrued for service in Kearny under her instructional certificate. However, because the record does not contain a precise employment history, the Commissioner is unable to verify the legal correctness of the seniority determination agreed to by the parties as part of this settlement. For example, term 3 indicates that petitioner has been employed by the Board under her elementary endorsement since September 16, 1987; yet, term 5 indicates that she has acquired 7.48 years of seniority as an elementary teacher through June 30, 1999. In the absence of information in the record to verify the accuracy of this seniority calculation agreed to by the parties in order to reach amicable resolution of the instant dispute, the Commissioner finds and determines that the seniority calculation cannot be deemed binding or precedent setting for any future reduction in force in the District because it could impact on other teaching staff members not party to this consolidated matter.

[1] Consolidated with OAL Dkt. Nos. EDU 11367-95, EDU 11368-95, EDU 7910-97 and EDU 11221-96.
[2] Notwithstanding the caption of the Stipulation of Settlement, the decision in this matter does not apply to Kearny Education Association v. Board of Education of the Town of Kearny (OAL Dkt. No. EDU 11367-95); therefore, it is noted for the record that the approval of the settlement in the within matter does not in any way constitute review or approval of settlement terms 14-21 pertaining to Sally Ann Roessler, a petitioner in the Kearny Education Association matter. As such, the parties are reminded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, settlement terms may not be effectuated until such time as they have been submitted to and approved by the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to the parties' compliance with the applicable terms of the settlement as clarified by the Commissioner herein.

Dear Judge Clancy:

The above matters all stem from a RIF by the KBOE in April of 1995 and have been consolidated. Enclosed please find a Partial Stipulation of Settlement which fully resolves OAL Docket Nos. EDU 11368-95; EDU 11221-96; EDU 07910-97 and EDU 09811-98. It also partially resolves the one remaining docket No. EDU 11367-95.

The parties are continuing to narrow the issues and to negotiate a possible resolution regarding the remaining claims. It is the hope of both counsel to have this matter concluded without the need for a hearing within the next several weeks.

I wish to acknowledge and thank Your Honor for the patience you have shown in this matter. Please contact my office in the event you have any concerns or require anything additional at this time.

Yours very truly

Statement of the Case

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on June 4, 1999 for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-13 et seq.

The parties have agreed to settle this mater and the respondent has prepared the attached letter memorializing the terms of settlement. At the hearing on April 28, 2000, Ms. Ralston testified that she understood and accepted the settlement terms.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

10 days pay for June 1998.
7 days pay for the pay period 9/28/98 – 10/9/98.
14 days pay for the period 10/10/98-10/29-98.

Re: Ralston v. Newark Public Schools
C.P. No. 94-030083
Your File No. 14085.00316-SBF

Dear Susan:

Confirming our conversation, we have completed our in-depth review of Ms. Joy Ralston's time reports for the periods of February 10, 1998 through June 23, 1998 and September 8, 1998 through October 29, 1998.

On March 28, 2000, Ms. Ralston presented a prima facie case that as of February 19, 1998, she had at least 65.5 sick days left and two personal days left. Ms. Ralston produced a pay stub relative to this information. However, at that time the Newark Public Schools was having problems with its' new payroll system (PeopleSoft), and the Leave Accrual file was one of the District's major problems. Consequently, the data that appeared on employees pay stubs was not always accurate.

According to the Newark Public Schools time reports, Ms. Ralston had 58.5 sick days and no personal days as of February 19, 1998. Please note that although the Court Order says we must reinstate Ms. Ralston's sick time from February 20, 1998, we are restoring her sick time from February 6, 1998 (additional seven days). The following is a summary of the restoration of Ms. Ralston's sick time.

- February 6, 1998 through June 23, 1998, we are restoring 65.5 sick days to Ms. Ralston.

ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY.	:

For The Board, George G. Frino, Esq.

This matter having been opened before the Commissioner of Education on May 18, 2000 through the certification of tenure charges by the Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City against respondent for excessive absenteeism, abandonment of position, unbecoming conduct and insubordination; and

The respondent, having been served, via regular and certified mail, with a copy of the charges, the Board's resolution, the Statement of Evidence and the Certificate of Determination on May 16, 2000; and

The Commissioner, having directed respondent, via both regular and certified mail on May 19, 2000, to file an Answer to the tenure charges certified against her; and

Whereas, there is no indication that respondent did not receive such communications which clearly provided respondent notice that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the date such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period will, absent granting of an extension for good cause shown, result in the charges being deemed admitted; and

Whereas, no reply has been received from respondent in response to the Board's charges, each count of the charges against respondent is deemed to be admitted; and

Whereas, the Commissioner's review of the tenure charges and the statement of evidence in support of those charges indicate that respondent has (a) been excessively absent and/or late from her position as custodian in the Atlantic City School District since November 1998, (b) left her work post, been late or not reported to work on numerous occasions without following proper procedures for informing a supervisor, thus, continually demonstrating a habit of failing to follow any chain of command when reporting lateness or absence from work, (c) received an evaluation of "unsatisfactory" for attendance and punctuality for the past two years and has been the subject of repeated disciplinary warnings, a suspension and disciplinary hearings due to behavior related to her poor attendance and failure to follow procedures; and

Deeming such tenure charges to be admitted, and noting that respondent has not replied to the specific allegations contained therein, the Commissioner finds that respondent's actions constitute excessive absenteeism, abandonment of position, unbecoming conduct and insubordination, warranting dismissal from her tenured position as custodian; now, therefore

IT IS SO ORDERED this 19th day of June that summary judgment shall be granted to the Board, and Michelle Kidd shall be dismissed from her tenured position as custodian in the Board's employ as of the date of this order. *

WHEREAS the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under Agency Docket No. 52-2/99;

WHEREAS, in light of the nature of the charges and potential for protracted litigation, it is in the best interest of the parties and the public to resolve the charges before the Commissioner of Education;

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 897-00
AGENCY DKT. NO. 59-2/00

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF LENORE M. ALLEN,	:
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF OLD BRIDGE, MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The record, Settlement Agreement, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon careful and independent review of the full record of this matter and the terms of the proposed settlement agreement, the Commissioner is compelled to reject such agreement, since he cannot be satisfied that it meets the Cardonick standards for settlement of tenure matters. In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, affirmed State Board of Education April 6, 1983, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846.

Here, respondent, a school librarian, is charged with unbecoming conduct by virtue of (1) her alleged use of corporal punishment, and her response to student behavioral issues with violence, and (2) her alleged failure to adopt recommendations for reducing stress at work, together with her inability to cope with personal conflicts, creating a volatile classroom environment. The District now affirms that:

> in light of the nature of the charges and potential for protracted litigation, it is in the best interest of the parties and the public to resolve the charges before the Commissioner of Education. (Settlement at 1)

The agreement provides, in relevant part, that respondent shall resign from employment in the District within 60 days from the date of the approval of this Agreement, and the District will withdraw its charges against her.

It is clear that where charges are made against any tenured employee of a District, the Commissioner anticipates that the charges are fully investigated and evaluated, vis-a-vis the evidence thereto, prior to the District bringing the weight of the legal process down on the teaching staff member:

> Certification of tenure charges by a [district] is predicated on the [district's] belief that the charges  and the evidence in support of the charges would be sufficient, if true in fact, to warrant a dismissal or reduction in salary. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.
> On the basis that the board believes the teacher is unfit, it makes the commitment to expend its monetary resources, provide [district] personnel, and hire legal counsel to obtain relief; i.e., dismissal or reduction in salary. Where the facts of a case are clear, using the settlement process to achieve either of the statutorily prescribed results is prudent. Where the facts are not clear, or in dispute, a settlement for less than dismissal may be justified, bearing in mind that settlement may be inappropriate in certain matters. Where it is in the public interest to fully determine the issues, a plenary hearing is required. (emphasis added) (Cardonick at 850)

Notwithstanding the parties' bare assertion that the instant settlement protects the public's interest, the Commissioner disagrees. In tenure matters such as this, where a teaching staff member loses tenure and/or is dismissed for inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming or other just cause, the case is forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for a determination as to possible revocation or suspension of the teaching staff member's certificate. Upon such referral, and after review of the record, the State Board of Examiners "shall determine by public vote whether or not the offense [as] proven is of such a nature as to warrant revocation or suspension consideration, or dismissal of the case." (emphasis added) (N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6)

Therefore, although the within agreement acknowledges respondent's awareness of the Commissioner's duty to refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, absent any factual findings on the record with respect to the specific allegations, and noting that respondent does not admit to the charges, it is unlikely that the Board of Examiners would have any basis for meaningful review and determination. Thus, the Commissioner cannot find that the public good is served by the within agreement. In this connection, the Commissioner underscores that:

> the mere fact that one of the terms of a proposed settlement  calls for the teaching staff member's resignation does not in and of itself assure [the Commissioner] that the Cardonick standards have been met because concern for the public interest extends beyond the boundaries of the particular district certifying the tenure charges. (In re Robert Barnes Driscoll, Board of Education of Cape May County Vocational-Technical School District, Cape May County, decided November 10, 1999, Slip Opinion at 5)

Accordingly, the proposed settlement is rejected for the reasons expressed herein. The Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the settlement documents consistent with the decision, which revisions shall specify that respondent will not oppose proceedings before the State Board of Examiners to suspend or revoke her certificate(s) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6. However, if the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on an agreement modified in this fashion for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to a hearing on the merits so that charges may either be proven, or respondent vindicated.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

* This decision, as the Commissioner's final determination, may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq., within 30 days of its filing. Commissioner decisions are deemed filed three days after the date of mailing to the parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF LENORE M. ALLEN,	:	STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP	:	DECISION
OF OLD BRIDGE, MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, June 19, 2000

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland & Perretti (James S. Rothschild, Jr., Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Bergman & Barrett (Michael T. Barrett, Esq., of Counsel)

This matter involves a proposed settlement of tenure charges that had been certified against Lenore Allen (hereinafter "respondent") by the Board of Education of the Township of Old Bridge (hereinafter "Board"). The charges of unbecoming conduct alleged that respondent had engaged in a pattern of threatening and violent behavior toward students during the 1999-2000 school year. The charges also alleged that, despite interventions and counseling efforts, respondent continued to exhibit signs of anger and frustration.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing. However, before such hearing occurred, the parties agreed to a settlement, which was reviewed by the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1. Finding that the parties had voluntarily agreed to the settlement and that the settlement both disposed of all issues in controversy and was consistent with the law, the ALJ concluded that the settlement met the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and should be approved.

The Commissioner rejected the ALJ's recommendation, stating that he was compelled to do so because he was not satisfied that the settlement met the standards set forth in In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner of Education, April 7, 1982, aff'd by the State Board of Education, April 6, 1983. The Commissioner remanded the matter to OAL for revision of the settlement, indicating that the matter need not proceed to a hearing on the merits if respondent agreed that she "will not oppose proceedings before the State Board of Examiners to suspend or revoke her certificate(s) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6." Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 7 (emphasis in original).

The Board appealed, arguing that there is no authority for the Commissioner to require respondent to relinquish her certificate as part of a settlement of tenure proceedings. The Board further argues that the decision will tax district boards with the responsibility of undertaking the risk and expense of litigating tenure disputes that they believe should be settled in the public interest.

We have reviewed the terms of the settlement proposed in this matter by the parties and find that it meets the standards established in Cardonick, supra. In Cardonick, a teacher filed a petition to the Commissioner challenging the withholding of his increment. In a separate action subsequent to the filing of that petition, the district board certified tenure charges against the teacher. The charges were transmitted to OAL with recommendations for consolidation.

While the matter was pending before OAL, the parties reached an agreement under which the teacher would resign but would receive a lump sum payment. The agreement was approved by the ALJ, and the parties executed it before approval was granted by the Commissioner. Stressing that the Tenure Employees Hearing Act had removed from district boards all power to impose a penalty in cases of tenure charges, the Commissioner found that the agreement in Cardonick was ultra vires because it had been executed without his approval.

The parties jointly appealed to the State Board. In its decision, the State Board observed that it was precluded from specific review of the terms of the settlement because the Commissioner's objections had been set forth in general terms. However, the State Board took the opportunity presented by the appeal to articulate the criteria that it considered important in reviewing tenure settlements. The State Board found that a proposed tenure settlement should be accompanied by supporting documentation as to the nature of the charges, circumstances justifying the settlement, consent by the district board and teacher to the agreement, and the ALJ's findings that the agreement is consistent with the public interest and was entered into by the teacher with a full understanding of his or her rights, including the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations to the State Board of Examiners for possible revocation of certification. Since it was not disclosed whether the teacher had received full salary during the suspension period or had other employment during that period, the State Board concluded that the ALJ should have rejected the proposed agreement and inquired into those matters. The State Board therefore affirmed the Commissioner's determination to remand in that case.

Review of the proposed settlement in the case now before us indicates that the criteria set forth in Cardonick have been met. All the required documentation has been submitted, and the parties have agreed that the lump sum payment made under the agreement will be limited to a sum representing salary for a sixty-day period between approval of the agreement and the effective date of respondent's resignation. This payment is reasonable under the circumstances and the amount is consistent with the public interest.

Most significantly, the proposed agreement provides that respondent acknowledges that she has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer the matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible action regarding her certification. In this respect, we recognize that the parties have interpreted the Commissioner's decision to require respondent to agree not to defend herself in proceedings before the Board of Examiners. After carefully reading the Commissioner's decision, we conclude that he did not mean to eliminate due process by barring respondent from defending herself and intended only to require respondent's express agreement not to oppose referral to the State Board of Examiners. Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 7. To the extent that the Commissioner's decision is ambiguous, we now modify it.

However, we find that it is not necessary for the proposed settlement in this case to include an express agreement by respondent not to oppose referral to the State Board of Examiners. Rather, we conclude that the acknowledgement of the Commissioner's duty to make the referral already included in the proposal is sufficient to insure that, as required by Cardonick, respondent understands that one of the implications of the settlement is referral to the Board of Examiners and, consequently, the potential for that board to initiate proceedings to revoke or suspend her certification.

We agree with the Commissioner that the public interest extends beyond the boundries of the particular district certifying tenure charges. Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 7. We also concur with him that the nature of the charges in this instance is such that the public interest dictates that the matter receive more than a cursory review by the State Board of Examiners. At the same time, we stress that dismissal from a tenured position and revocation of certification serve different purposes and that the responsibilities of the Commissioner under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 are distinct from those of the Board of Examiners under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38. E.g., In the Matter of the Revocation of the Teaching Certificates of John Ahern, rev'd and remanded by the State Board of Education, August 5, 1987 (subsequent history omitted).

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38 confers original jurisdiction on the State Board of Examiners to act under rules prescribed by the State Board of Education to revoke the certificates that it issues. Consequently, it is the determination by the State Board of Examiners that may preclude a teacher who has been dismissed from tenured employment from future employment in any school district in New Jersey. Accordingly, the pertinent regulations set forth procedures under which cases involving offenses of such nature as to warrant suspension or revocation of certification may be decided by the State Board of Examiners following an appropriate hearing. N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6. Those procedures include transmittal to the Office of Administrative Law, thereby enabling the State Board of Examiners to resolve cases involving disputes as to the material facts. Id. Such disputes may involve, where appropriate, facts relating to the conduct underlying the tenure charges. Id. Given the statutory authority possessed by the State Board of Examiners and the regulations we have adopted to implement that authority, we are confident that upon referral of this matter to the State Board of Examiners, that board will insure that the interests of the public are protected.

For the reasons set forth herein, we approve the settlement proposed by the parties in this case and direct that the matter now be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners. In view of our determination, we deny the motions made by the New Jersey School Boards Association and the New Jersey Education Association to appear as amicus curiae.

Roberta Van Anda abstained.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 69-2/00

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION	:
OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATE OF	:
ROSALIND McFADDEN, SCHOOL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
DISTRICT OF CHERRY HILL, CAMDEN	:	DECISION
COUNTY.	:

For Petitioner, Nicholas Celso, III, Esq. (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein, Celso & Kessler)

For Respondent, Rosalind McFadden, Pro Se

On February 8, 2000, the Cherry Hill Board of Education filed before the Commissioner of Education a Certification of Service, said certification confirming that Rosalind McFadden had been served with an Order to Show Cause, signed by the Commissioner on January 20, 2000, and an accompanying affidavit. The Order notified respondent that she had 20 days to submit a written answer addressing why an Order should not be entered suspending her certificate for unprofessional conduct, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10. On February 24, 2000, respondent filed a Certification in Opposition to the Board's Order to Show Cause. By letter of February 29, 2000, the parties were advised that it appeared that the material facts in this matter were not in dispute, thus rendering the matter ripe for summary judgment. Therefore, a briefing schedule was established, permitting the parties to submit briefs addressing the appropriateness of summary judgment and any additional information and/or legal arguments which the parties wanted to be considered by the Commissioner in rendering the within decision. On March 13, 2000, respondent filed a letter, dated March 10, 2000, which stated in its entirety:

> In response to your letter dated February 29, 2000, I can only say that I resigned "with cause," having made the decision not to pursue charges—that is why I resigned. As an employer, the Cherry Hill District has an obligation to its employees, the same as I had an obligation to them while they employed me. They had not fulfilled their responsibilities to me, therefore, I chose not to fulfill my responsibilities to them. I do not wish to take this any further. The decision is yours.[1]

By letter of March 21, 2000, respondent was asked to clarify her intent, specifically, whether she objected to the matter being decided on the papers filed (the Order to Show Cause and her reply thereto), or whether she believed that a hearing and/or further argument was needed for a fair determination in this matter. Respondent was further advised that if she wished to submit additional arguments, she must do so within 20 days of the letter's receipt, and that if no additional arguments were received by that date, her letter of March 10, 2000 would be considered as the entirety of the additional arguments submitted for the Commissioner's consideration. Respondent was also informed that she must properly serve the Board's attorney with both her March 10 letter and any additional submissions.

Respondent, however, submitted no further arguments nor did she provide the required proof of service of her March 10 letter.

BACKGOUND FACTS

The following facts are found to be true, based on the record. On June 30, 1999,

[1] In response to an acknowledgement of the receipt of this letter to the parties, the Board notified the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes by letter of March 17, 2000 that it had not been served with respondent's submission.

respondent signed a contract accepting employment with the Cherry Hill Board of Education as a Language Arts Teacher for the contract year of 9/01/99-6/30/00. The contract states in pertinent part:

> It is hereby agreed by the parties hereto that this contract may at any time be terminated by either party given to the other 60 days notice, in writing, of intention to terminate the same, but that in the absence of any provision herein for a definite number of days notice the contract shall run for the full term named above. (Board's Affidavit in Support of Application for Order to Show Cause, Exhibit A)

On or about December 10, 1999, respondent requested a three-week leave of absence, without pay, to take a trip to South Africa from February 7, 2000 through February 25, 2000. (Id., Exhibit B)

By memo of December 14, 1999, Thomas P. Christensen, Acting Assistant Superintendent, denied respondent's request for a leave of absence, stating:

> I have received your request for unpaid three week leave of absence from February 7 to 25, 2000. I cannot recommend the approval of this request due to the impact on the learning situation for the youngsters you teach at Beck. (Id., Exhibit C)

By memo of December 15, 1999, respondent tendered her resignation from her teaching position. Respondent's memo states, in full:

> This memo constitutes my 30 days notice of resignation from my position as English teacher at the Beck Middle School. I will be using up my sick days and personal days within this amount of time.
>
> A quick study, open-minded team player, who is willing to learn and try new teaching methods, I have never before been so harshly viewed and undervalued by an immediate supervisor as I have this year.
>
> Thank you for the opportunity to work with your most talented and interesting public that I have so > conscientiously worked with, trying to boost support for Beck with my 8-2 superior teaching team. (Id., Exhibit D)

By memo of December 16, 1999, the Acting Assistant Superintendent informed respondent that her letter of resignation violated the terms of the contract. That memo stated:

> I received your letter of resignation dated 12/15/99. I am writing to clarify some items mentioned in your letter. For all teachers, the contract calls for 60 days notice in resigning from a position not 30 days. Also, you are not entitled to "use up" your sick days and personal days once you give notice of your resignation. Personal days must be approved by your supervisor/principal/assistant principal. Sick days can only be used if you are sick and extended illnesses or an inconsistent attendance pattern could require a doctor's note.
> If you have any questions, regarding this memo, please contact me. (Id., Exhibit E)

By memo of December 19, 1999, respondent answered the Acting Assistant Superintendent's memo, as follows:

> In response to your letter dated 12/16/99 which stated your expectation that I provide 60 days notice, this correspondence is to inform you that I will work until the end of the school day on 12/23/99. This resignation is predicated on cause and is outside of the scope of the employment contract. I believe an expedient disengagement of our professional relationship is in the best interest of all.
> Thank you for your understanding and cooperation on this matter. (Id., Exhibit F)

At its meeting on December 21, 1999, the Board accepted respondent's resignation effective December 23, 1999, without prejudice to the Board's right to pursue legal action for respondent's failure to provide adequate notice of the resignation. (Id. at 2)

RESPONDENT'S POSITION

In her Certification in Response to Order to Show Cause, respondent claims that she had first inquired about the possibility of a leave of absence, without pay, three days into the school year and not receiving a response, confirmed that request in writing on or about November 10, 1999[2]. Respondent avers her December 10, 1999 request for the leave of absence was made at the behest of the building principal so he could have something to take to the Board office. Respondent claims that she never received a response to her requests until the December 14 memo from Thomas Christensen. Although dated December 14, 1999, respondent notes that she did not receive the denial of her request for a leave of absence until December 16, 1999, the day after she submitted her resignation. (Respondent's Certification at 1)

Respondent avers that the reasons for her resignation go beyond the denial of her request for a leave of absence. She asserts that when the Board failed to respond to her requests for a leave of absence, she notified the building principal by letter of November 15, 1999[3] that she was interpreting the District's lack of response as approval of her request for a leave of absence. Respondent claims that:

> It was only after my notice that they finally began to take any action on the matter. That action, was to pursue a deceptive strategy to deflect the focus from the real deficiency in this matter, the lack of attention and regard to my request by the Cherry Hill School Administration. (Id. at 2)

Without providing specifics, despite being provided the opportunity to do so, respondent claims that she resigned "with cause," having made the decision not to pursue

[2] This letter is not a part of the record.

[3] It appears that this is the same letter referred to as the November 10, 1999 letter above. However, this cannot be confirmed since respondent did not provide copies of the letter(s) referenced.

charges. She also claims that the Board had not fulfilled its responsibility to her, therefore, she chose not to fulfill her responsibilities to the Board. (Respondent's Letter of March 10, 2000)

BOARD'S POSITION

The Board asks the Commissioner to suspend respondent's teaching certificate for unprofessional conduct, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10, averring that respondent showed a blatant disregard for her contractual obligations and ignored the detrimental impact on her students' educational program by resigning abruptly. The Board states that it is having difficulty locating a suitable permanent replacement for respondent and has been compelled to assign a substitute teacher to cover the class at a time when the District is experiencing a shortage of substitute teachers. (Board's Affidavit in Support of Application for Order to Show Cause at 2, 3)

DISCUSSION

The Commissioner finds that the relevant and material facts in this matter are those stated, ante, as Background Facts. (See Collingswood Borough Board of Education v. Edward J. Cashel, 1988 *S.L.D.*1898.) These facts are not disputed. That respondent asserts that the District did not fulfill its responsibilities to her and that she resigned "with cause" is not determinative, even assuming it played a part in her decision to resign from the District.[4] In Penns Grove-Carneys Point Board of Education v. Leinen, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 405, a learning disabilities teacher consultant urged that her certificate should not be suspended when she failed to provide notice, because she claimed, inter alia, that her physical working conditions were "abhorrent" and caused her medical problems. (Penns Grove-Carneys Point, supra, at 406) Citing In re Cronmiller, 1970 S.L.D. 149, the ALJ underscored that if respondent's allegations were true, she had avenues of appeal which she failed to employ, such as contacting her union. Similarly, in the instant matter, even assuming, arguendo, that respondent's assertions that the Board did not fulfill its responsibilities to her to be true, respondent had other avenues of appeal to pursue. The Commissioner therefore finds those assertions irrelevant.

[4]Respondent's resignation memo refers to "never having been so harshly viewed and undervalued by an immediate supervisor." Despite being provided two opportunities to further explain her reasons for resigning, however, respondent did not cease the opportunity to do so.

There is no dispute that respondent resigned without proper notice to the Board. Neither does respondent defend her actions by claiming that she was unaware of her contractual obligations. Respondent was specifically advised of her contractual obligation to provide a 60-day notice by the Acting Assistant Superintendent in his memo of December 16, 1999. Rather than changing her letter of resignation to reflect the 60-day requirement, respondent reacted by shortening her notice from 30 days to 8 days.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10, the Commissioner has both the authority and the discretion to suspend a teacher's certificate for a period of up to one year for ceasing to perform her duties before the expiration of her employment. The Commissioner recognizes that "[t]he obvious purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 is to provide notice to the school so that a suitable replacement can be hired without adversely impacting students." (Penns Grove, supra, at 407, citations omitted) In the instant matter, the Board claims that respondent's lack of adequate notice has negatively affected her students because the Board has had difficulty finding a permanent replacement for respondent and there is a shortage of substitute teachers. However, even if the Board were able to find a replacement quickly, such replacement would not negate respondent's unprofessional conduct. (See In the Matter of the Suspension of the Teaching Certificate of Patricia Aiken, School District of the Township of East Amwell, Hunterdon County, 1986 S.L.D. 2816, 2821.) "The sudden departure of a teacher who has been working with a group of pupils for four months results in a disruption to the educational program to those pupils, if only because of a sudden change in teachers." (In the Matter of the Suspension of the Teaching Certificate of David T. Drake, School District of the Borough of Dunellen, Middlesex Co., 1987 S.L.D. 2016, 2019)

The Commissioner agrees with the Board that in resigning abruptly, respondent put her own self-interest above the interests of her students and her professional obligation to provide adequate notice to the Board. Accordingly, summary decision is granted to the Board in this matter. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10, respondent is deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct. The Commissioner determines to suspend the teaching certificate of Rosalind McFadden for a period of one year, which period shall commence upon the date of this decision. A copy of this decision is hereby forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for the purpose of effectuating the within decision and taking such further action, if any, as it deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[5]

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF ROBERT I. GRUNDFEST,	:
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF MADISON, MORRIS COUNTY.	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

The Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent tenured basic skills instructor for allegedly using a school computer to access and view pornography on the Internet during school hours. Respondent denied the charges, claiming that he accessed illicit material on the computer in question on only one occasion and that such access was inadvertent.

The ALJ credited the testimony of J.M., the student who made the allegations underlying the charges, and found that respondent's testimony was not credible. In light of the testimony centering on the computer and its contents presented at hearing, the ALJ relied on the Board's computer expert in determining that the Board had proven by a preponderance of credible evidence that respondent committed conduct unbecoming a teacher by using a school computer to intentionally access and view pornography on the Internet during school hours. The ALJ determined that because 1) the acts took place in school during school hours using school equipment, 2) respondent was willing to discredit a student, 3) respondent was unwilling to admit his conduct and 4) respondent attempted to erase his tracks on the computer, respondent's actions were sufficiently flagrant to justify his dismissal.

Upon an exhaustive review of the record, including the transcripts, the computer experts' reports and other evidentiary documents, the Commissioner determined to reject the recommended decision of the ALJ. Central to the Board's case were 1) the accusations of student J.M. and 2) the computer data evidence. The ALJ found J.M.'s testimony to be "somewhat inconsistent," yet he concluded the testimony was credible. The Commissioner, however, found J.M.'s overall testimony troubling. Not only was he unsure of the month(s) he observed respondent viewing sexually explicit material, but he was also inconsistent in recounting dates, times and number of instances. Moreover, he was the only one to accuse respondent of viewing the material. The three teachers who shared classroom 6A with respondent testified that they never saw him do anything inappropriate on the computer, nor did their students report seeing respondent do anything inappropriate on the computer. Furthermore, the Commissioner found incredible that although J.M. claimed to have observed respondent viewing the material over a three-month period, he did not confide in anyone – not a fellow student, a teacher, his principal, counselor or his parents that this was occurring until the end of the third month. Thus, after a review of J.M.'s testimony with due consideration to the ALJ's observations, and in light of the fact that there was no witness testimony to corroborate J.M.'s accusations, the Commissioner found that J.M.'s testimony lacked credibility. Moreover, the Commissioner determined that the contamination of the computer data evidence caused by the Board's handling of the computer in question (numerous individuals booted the computer, backdated it, etc., looking for evidence) and its failure to limit access to the computer both before the alleged incidents (the computer had no password or log-in procedure and the room was open to teachers, students, janitors and community groups) and after J.M.'s accusations were reported, were fatal to the Board's case. The Commissioner concluded that although there was evidence that pornographic sites were accessed on the computer, it was impossible to conclude with any degree of certainty from the computer data evidence whether the amount of pornography was consistent with any computer that has accessed the Internet, whether someone intentionally accessed the sites or whether any access was inadvertent. In addition, the Board was unable to identify a single specific date on which it was alleged that respondent accessed pornographic sites. Thus, the Commissioner determined that the Board failed to meet its burden of proof substantiating the charges of misconduct by respondent by a preponderance of credible evidence. The Commissioner dismissed the tenure charges and directed respondent's reinstatement with back pay for the period of his suspension at the level of pay that he would have received had the charges not been brought against him.

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF CASE

Respondent, Robert I. Grundfest, a tenured basic skills instructor at the Kings Road School in Madison, was charged by petitioner, Board of Education of the Borough of Madison ("Board"), with conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member for using a school computer to access and view pornography on the Internet during school hours. Grundfest denies the charges and claims that any access to illicit material was inadvertent. The hearing was nine days, held on August 26, October 4, 5, 7, 12, November 15, 16, 17, and 18, 1999.

BACKGROUND

Grundfest was licensed in 1984. His career with the Madison School District started in September 1989 as a history teacher. In 1995, Grundfest was transferred to the district's elementary school, the Kings Road School. He continued to coach soccer and lacrosse at the high school and serve as faculty advisor to one of its student clubs.

During his first year at the Kings Road School, Grundfest was assigned to teach the third grade. One of his students was J.M. It would be J.M.'s accusation which would lead to this proceeding. According to Grundfest, J.M. had behavioral and academic difficulties. Grundfest requested a child study team evaluation of J.M. J.M. was evaluated and diagnosed with Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder. He began receiving basic skills instruction the following school year.

Coincidentally, in 1996-97, Grundfest became a basic skills instructor and was assigned to Room 6A, a supplemental instruction room. He shared the room assignment with three other teachers: Nancy Croessmann, Marilyn D'Amelio, and Deborah L. Neely. The room was divided into four workspaces, one for each teacher. Grundfest's workspace was to the left of the room entrance, and consisted of a rectangular table and space for five chairs.[1] A Macintosh computer was against the wall adjacent to Grundfest's workspace. There were windows along the opposite wall. The Macintosh was visible through windows from outside the room. The Macintosh was also visible from Nancy Croessmann's workspace.[2]

During the 1996-97 school year, Grundfest tutored J.M. in basic math and language arts eight times a week.[3] According to Grundfest, J.M. began exhibiting increasingly insolent behavior, lashing out by throwing a pencil or slamming a book on occasion.[4] Grundfest testified that at some point in April or early May of 1997, during a one-on-one tutoring session (presumably), J.M. said, "I can get you fired, you know."[5] J.M. admitted in his testimony that he may have threatened Grundfest, although he had no recollection of it.[6]

In 1997-98, Grundfest returned as a basic skills instructor, and continued to tutor J.M. in basic math and language arts. Specifically, Grundfest tutored J.M. and a group of other students in basic math four days a week, and tutored J.M. and one other student in language arts three days a week: Mondays and Thursdays from 2 p.m. to 2:30 p.m., and Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. Nancy Croessmann had a similar schedule, and tutored students in her workspace on Mondays and Thursdays from 2 p.m. to 2:30 p.m., and Fridays from 11:15 a.m. to 11:45 a.m.[7] Marilyn D'Amelio also met with students in her workspace on Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 12 p.m.[8] Thus, Grundfest and J.M. were rarely (if ever) alone in Room 6A. Their language arts schedule always overlapped with either Ms. Croessmann's or Ms. D'Amelio's schedules.

In early December 1997, until February 27, 1998, Grundfest met with J.M. alone during the language arts periods. J.M. claims that it was during these periods that he saw Grundfest viewing images of naked women on the Macintosh.

J.M.'s testimony at the hearing was somewhat inconsistent. He testified on direct that Grundfest began viewing sexually explicit content ("porno stuff" and "naked people") "early in the year. . . . September. Like December. November. One of those."[9] With prompting by counsel for the petitioner, he clarified his testimony and stated that Grundfest began viewing pornographic sites after the other student transferred out of language arts in December 1997.[10] J.M. testified that he saw Grundfest viewing pornographic content almost "every time" he was in Room 6A between December 1997 and February 1998.[11] It is undisputed that Grundfest met with J.M. for language arts 11 times between December 1997 and February 27, 1998.[12]

During this time, J.M. was receiving psychological counseling after school to help him cope with an acrimonious custody battle between his divorced parents. According to J.M's father, M.M., they were sitting in a car after a counseling session in February 1998 when J.M. said that he was afraid of his mother in the same way he was afraid of Grundfest.[13] According to M.M., J.M. said he saw Grundfest viewing the Playboy Channel with naked people touching each other.[14]

Less than a week later, on Thursday, February 26, 1998, J.M.'s father met with Barbara Lippiett, principal of the Kings Road School, and told her of J.M.'s accusation. Principal Lippiett contacted Dr. Lawrence Feinsod, superintendent of the district, and told him about the conversation. They arranged for the director of special services, William Moesch, to observe a tutoring session with J.M. and Grundfest which was scheduled for that afternoon. At the end of the school day, Principal Lippiett and Mr. Moesch booted (i.e., turned on) the Macintosh and searched for incriminating files. They found none.[15]

Principal Lippiett also had a conference call with Dr. Feinsod and the board's attorney, David B. Rand, Esq., in which they decided that Grundfest should be questioned the following morning, February 27, 1998.[16]

In order to analyze the evidence subsequently recovered from the Macintosh, a timeline of Grundfest's activities on February 27, 1998 is helpful.

At approximately 9 a.m. February 27, 1998, Principal Lippiett called Grundfest to her office. After concluding a scheduled tutoring period, he arrived there at about 9:30 a.m. Principal Lippiett told him a "very serious" accusation had been made against him by "someone" who allegedly observed him viewing naked pictures on the computer. She did not reveal the identity of the "someone", anticipating that Grundfest would deny any accusation by a student. She subsequently was proven correct.[17] According to Grundfest, "the first thing out of my mouth was no. And then I said, the only thing that I could think of was – was [swimsuit issue] banner ads that I had seen . . . from the Sports Illustrated site or . . . little tiny swimsuit models."[18] Principal Lippiett testified that as soon as she informed Grundfest of the accusation, "his face got very red and he was quiet for a few moments, and then he said that, yes, it was true, but he had done it inadvertently, that sometimes when searching for other items an inappropriate image could come up on the screen".[19] He told her, by way of example, that he was conducting a search on the Internet, using the search term "Donner Party" and inadvertently pulled up an image for "party girls".[20]

Immediately after his conversation with Principal Lipiett, Grundfest returned to Room 6A and attempted to "gain some control, clear my head a little bit."[21] He then recalled an earlier incident when he used the Macintosh to search the Internet for "newsgroups" on amniocentesis:

> I clicked on the first header and it started at the bottom to unscroll . . . the head of a woman that maybe I assumed was a pregnant woman. I don't know. Or an ad for something. And as it got to about the top of the shoulder it didn't really look like she was going to have anything on. Then I said, I don't want to be here. I clicked on the next header, the next news header. And a different woman again started to unscroll. And we got to about here . . . . "Here" being the top of the shoulders. And it didn't look like there was going to be anything there. And I said, no, I don't want this." [Grundfest ¶ 144-146, 11/16/99.]

Grundfest sat at the computer table and attempted to reconstruct the amniocentesis search on the Macintosh. He then returned to Principal Lippiett's office and asked her to accompany him to Room 6A where he would demonstrate how sexually explicit content could be accessed inadvertently.

Principal Lippiett and Grundfest disagree over the time the demonstration began: she testified it began about 10 a.m.; he testified it began after 10:45 a.m.[22] At some point, either during the demonstration or at the earlier meeting in Principal Lippiett's office, Grundfest described a second incident when he used the school library computer to conduct an Internet search on the Donner Party:

> I went to a search engine, I believe it was Yahoo, and I typed in Donner Party in the little box where you can search. . . . And I got a whole listing of Donner Party. . . . And then there were some things on Richard Donner who was a film director. And then after it dropped Donner then it went to party. And I did see a listing, words on the page, for party girls. And under party girls it said, you know, XXX. [Grundfest ¶ 147-149, 11/16/99.]

Grundfest's attempt at demonstrating how sexually explicit content might be pulled up inadvertently during an innocuous Internet search was a failure. According to Principal Lippiett, Grundfest became distraught, almost to the point of tears, repeating that he knew how serious the accusation was and would never intentionally access pornography.[23] She told him she believed him and left the room.

Principal Lippiett left Room 6A and returned to her office between 10:15 to 10:30 a.m. She called Dr. Feinsod and followed up with a memorandum of the morning's events.[24] According to Grundfest, she left the room at about 11:15 a.m.[25] As discussed in more detail, infra, certain data files on the Macintosh containing evidence of Internet sessions were deleted at about 11:17 a.m. Grundfest remained in the room until about 11:45 a.m., then left the building and took a walk.[26]

Grundfest returned to the school and stayed in the teacher's lounge until about 1 p.m. when Principal Lippiett called him back to her office. When he arrived, she handed him a letter from Dr. Feinsod, requesting a meeting at 3 p.m. The letter advised Grundfest that his classes were canceled for the rest of the day.

Grundfest returned to Room 6A and remained there until 2:30 p.m., when the custodian turned off and unplugged the Macintosh, and brought it to Principal Lippiett's office.[27] That was the last time Grundfest had access to the Macintosh. He met with Dr.

Feinsod at 3 p.m. and was informed that he was suspended with pay, pending a decision by the Board.[28] He has remained on suspension ever since.

On March 2, 1998, Principal Lippiett filed tenure charges against Grundfest for conduct unbecoming a tenured teacher. The first charge alleged that Grundfest "inappropriately and unprofessionally utilized a computer during the course of his employment and accessed sexually oriented Internet sites for the purpose of viewing naked female images." The second charge, alleged that Grundfest failed to "attend to his instructional responsibilities by abusing access to the school computer and Internet during assigned instructional periods and by using such facilities for personal and inappropriate purposes not related to his school district duties."

On March 2, 1998, at Dr. Feinsod's request, Bruce Padian, principal of Madison High School, examined the Macintosh. He plugged it in and booted it up but did not connect the modem. Padian changed the computer clock from March 2, 1998, to February 27, 1998, the last date Grundfest had access to the Macintosh.[29] He searched the files on the hard drive, but found no sexually explicit content. He reset the computer clock and then shut it down.

The next day, March 3, 1998, School Business Administrator Michael Hayser took custody of the Macintosh and transported it to his office.[30] Two days later, March 5, 1998, at Mr. Hayser's request, Michael A. Ricciardi, a computer consultant for the Board, inspected the Macintosh. Mr. Ricciardi booted up the Macintosh and examined the files, but found no sexually explicit content. At Mr. Hayser's request, Mr. Ricciardi connected the modem to the Macintosh and accessed the Internet.[31] He then conducted a search on the Donner Party in an attempt to determine whether any sexually explicit content would emerge in the search [29] Padian ¶ 206-208, 10/4/99. Padian explained his rationale for backdating the computer clock: "[I]f I were to use the same date, which was March 2nd, . . . there's a chance if the parameters were right, that I would wipe out the History file. So, I wouldn't be able to use it. I wouldn't be able to see it." Padian ¶ 206, 10/4/99. As a technical matter, Padian was wrong; the data would not be "wiped out" unless he manipulated the data. More importantly, by backdating the Macintosh, he contaminated the integrity of the evidence, as it is now impossible to determine with independent certainty whether a time-stamp on a file in the Macintosh reading February 27, 1998, is the true date or the false date.

results.[32] According to Mr. Ricciardi, at least one listing in the search results was of a "sexual nature".[33]

Three weeks later, on March 23, 1998, Robert Hinchcliffe, a senior technical analyst with Fleet Securities and part-time computer consultant, inspected the Macintosh.[34] He booted up the Macintosh but did not connect the modem. As discussed in more detail, infra, Hinchcliffe found the "MagicCookie" file, which contained a partial listing of Internet Web sites previously accessed.[35] Respondent stipulates that six of the "domain names" listed in the MagicCookie file were pornographic in nature. The MagicCookie file was time-stamped with a creation date of February 27, 1998 at 1:57 p.m. Hinchcliffe connected the Macintosh to a printer, printed out the MagicCookie file, and advised counsel for the Board to send the Macintosh to Ontrack Data International, Inc. ("Ontrack"), a company specializing in data recovery.[36]

On March 25, 1998, the Macintosh was shipped to Ontrack. By stipulation of the parties, Victoria McNary, a computer evidence engineer for Ontrack, testified by telephone about the process used to recover deleted data on the Macintosh. Ontrack received the Macintosh on March 27, 1998 and started the recovery process on April 1, 1998. The hard drive was removed and copied on a sector-by-sector basis, resulting in a "mirror copy" of the hard drive.[37] A mirror copy is an exact duplicate of the hard drive, "down to the last byte," whether visible and accessible or not, as distinguished from a "cloned copy", which is a duplicate of accessible files only. Thus, whatever residue of deleted data that existed on the Macintosh's hard drive was copied onto the mirror copy.

[32] Ricciardi ¶ 86, 101-104, 10/5/99.

[33] Ricciardi ¶ 86, 103, 10/5/99. By conducting an Internet search on the Macintosh, the petitioner further contaminated the integrity of the evidence. Nevertheless, as discussed in further detail, infra, Mr. Ricciardi's brief Internet search is useful in assessing the quantity of pornographic data on the Macintosh.

[34] Hinchcliffe testified as a fact witness, not an expert witness.

[37] According to an Ontrack technical report prepared by Ms. McNary, dated October 4, 1999, the Macintosh was not booted in order to retrieve the hard drive data, as booting can "change the evidence, including the file count." Ex. R24. Ms. McNary testified that when a computer is booted, certain files and corresponding dates may be altered, although this alteration is usually limited to operating system files. The last date Grundfest had access to the Macintosh was February 27, 1998. It was booted at least three times before Ontrack recovered the deleted files.

Deleted data was recovered from the mirror copy by Ontrack. When a computer file is deleted, the operating system permits the disk space formerly occupied by the deleted file to be overwritten. Thus, the data in the file will continue to exist until it is overwritten. The Board's expert, Stanley H. Kremen, offered this example during the hearing: the deletion of a computer file is analogous to the removal of an index card from a library catalogue; even though the card has been removed, the book remains in the library.[38]

Ontrack recovered the deleted data in separate files and copied it onto CDs (compact disks), one in the Macintosh format, one in the PC format.[39] The hard drive was reinstalled and the Macintosh was shipped back to the Board on April 9, 1998.

On April 13, 1998, Grundfest submitted a 12-page certified statement to the Board. He contended that he "never intentionally accessed an inappropriate [Web] page." He recounted his version of the events on February 27, 1998:

> Barbara called me into her office at 9:30am, closed the door and said, "Someone has made a serious allegation against you. They say you were looking at pictures of naked women on the Internet." Well, I was shocked. I finally said, "No." [sic] but then added, "Unless it was a banner ad on a page. But that wouldn't be naked. Sometimes a site has a banner ad like Sports Illustrated, which might include a swimsuit model. But they would only be a quarter inch high." You must understand that when Barbara said "Someone," I was being asked to respond to a very general charge, I was never told who made the allegation or when it supposedly took place. It was inconceivable to me that it would be a student making this allegation. I could only assume that it was a colleague who may have seen something while I was doing research, and since people's views of appropriate images differ, I was willing to accept that someone might be offended by a quarter inch high swimsuit model or a similar banner. I then left Barbara's office and went back to my room, stunned and shocked. . . .
> At no time did I know who was making the allegation. At no time did I know it was a student. Had Barbara told me it was one of my students, or any student for that matter, I would have unequivocally told her it was untrue. Instead, I thought it might have been a colleague who found [38] Ontrack defines "deleted" data as data "that is no longer accessible to the computer operator. It may have been deleted by moving a file or directory to the recycle bin, highlighting the item and selecting the delete key, or removed with a utility or uninstall program. The file or directory may or may not be recoverable." Ex. R24.

[39] Ex. M12 (PC-formatted CD), Ex. M13 (Macintosh-formatted CD).

> something offensive, even though I never accessed a site which portrayed naked women.... [emphasis added.]
> I've taught teachers about the Internet and I know how inappropriate sites can come up. That's what I told Barbara. I did not admit guilt since I didn't even know the circumstances. Nor did I say that I ever accessed these sites. I discussed with her that these are possibilities, the theoretical way you could get lost on the Internet. But absent a specific charge by a specific person, I could not, and was not, admitting to anything. . . .

On April 14, 1998, the Board certified the tenure charges against Grundfest to the Commissioner of Education. Through counsel, Grundfest filed an answer, denying the charges. The Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case.

In May 1998, the Board hired Stanley H. Kremen, president of Data Processing Litigation Consultants, Inc., to conduct a forensic examination of the Macintosh and the Ontrack CDs. A year later, Kremen produced a report, explaining his examination methodology and detailing his findings and conclusions. According to the report, Kremen concluded the following: (1) "During the time period that GRUNDFEST had access to the COMPUTER, and only during that time, someone extensively accessed the internet for the purpose of searching for and viewing adult pornographic materials"; (2) between November 1997 and February 27, 1998, "someone using the COMPUTER accessed the internet for the purpose of searching for and viewing adult pornographic materials"; (3) in Kremen's opinion, "from the nature of the websites where visits were recorded, it is obvious that only a very small percentage of internet access on the COMPUTER by all who employed it was used for school related work"; (4) on February 27, 1998, after Grundfest was confronted by Principal Lippiett, potentially incriminating Internet-related data files were deleted on the Macintosh; (5) the MagicCookie file showed a creation date of 1:57 p.m., February 27, 1998, indicating that someone attempted (unsuccessfully) to delete the file prior to 1:57 p.m.; (6) the MagicCookie file contained pornographic Web sites accessed by the Macintosh; and (7) someone had conducted a search on the Internet using the search term "Donner Party" and accessed pornographic content during the "same continuous session".[40]

[40] Kremen also issued a supplemental technical report, dated September 21, 1999, narrating his examination of the Macintosh itself. Ex. M17.

On June 23, 1999, Dr. Serge J. Goldstein, computer consultant and director for academic services at Princeton University, examined the Macintosh on behalf of Grundfest. According to his report, when Dr. Goldstein booted up the Macintosh, he was greeted with a message on the screen reading, "Your clock is not set to the current time. Please set it."[41] He concluded that the battery backing up the Macintosh's clock was dead, or else the clock had been improperly reset.[42]

During the hearing, most of the testimony centered around the Macintosh and its contents. Kremen testified on six separate hearing dates, and reiterated the findings and conclusions from his treport. Dr. Goldstein testified on the last hearing date. In summary, and discussed in detail, infra, Kremen found that certain data files had been deleted on February 27, 1998, indicating that someone attempted to purge all residual evidence of past Internet sessions from the Macintosh. He opined that the data files recovered by Ontrack (as well as data files recovered during his own examination) contained extensive pornographic content—too extensive to have been accessed inadvertently. Dr. Goldstein testified that the data relied upon by Kremen to form his conclusions was unreliable, and several of Kremen's conclusions were erroneous.[43]

[41] Ex. R23.

[42] A computer "time-stamps" a data file with a creation date and a last-modification date. For example, one of the data files in this case, the "MagicCookie" file, shows a creation date of February 27, 1998 at 1:57 p.m. and a last-modification date of March 5, 1998 at 9:52 a.m. The accuracy of the time-stamps is critical to the Board's case. When Dr. Goldstein booted up the Macintosh, its clock read August 27, 1956 at 8:36 p.m. He admitted in his report that it is not possible to state with certainty that the Macintosh's clock was improperly set during the critical dates and times in this case. In all likelihood, the Macintosh's clock was disabled after it was shipped to Ontrack, perhaps due to Ontrack's removal and reinstallation of the hard drive.

[43] Dr. Goldstein also testified that the file count on the Macintosh's hard drive (2,425) was different from the file count on the Ontrack CDs (2,386), suggesting the CDs were imperfect mirror copies of the hard drive. Assuming arguendo the Ontrack CDs are imperfect mirror-image copies, the burden of proof in this matter is preponderance of the evidence, not beyond a reasonable doubt, and so the file count need not match exactly. The mere act of booting up a computer alters the file count, as does an operating system crash. A difference of 39 files out of 2,425 files is not significant. Even the respondent's myriad mistakes in preserving the integrity of the evidence on the Macintosh does not defeat its case. There is no allegation the Board doctored or fabricated the evidence against Grundfest. Therefore, instead of compounding the technical complexities in this case by analyzing the file count issue, the Ontrack CDs are assumed to be less-than-perfect copies of the Macintosh's contents (an assumption the respondent would challenge, no doubt).

As discussed in more detail, infra, Grundfest's testimony was consistent with his certified statement to the Board. Although he admitted to accessing pornography inadvertently on other computers, he claimed there was only one incident involving the Macintosh: his Internet search for amniocentesis-related newsgroups. He testified that J.M. was a belligerent, easily frustrated child with emotional issues. He recounted the incident in April or May of 1997, when he was admonishing J.M. for failing to complete assignments. According to Grundfest, J.M. lashed out by saying, "I could get you fired, you know." On direct, Grundfest adamantly denied deleting the data files that contained residual evidence of past Internet sessions on February 27, 1998.[44] On cross-examination, however, he equivocated somewhat, testifying that he did not "recall" deleting those files on that date.[45]

After the hearing, both parties submitted briefs and proposed findings of fact.

ANALYSIS

Tenure is intended to protect teachers from dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982) (*quoting Zimmerman v. An analysis of the evidence in this matter must include a basic primer on Internet technology.

As Dr. Goldstein testified, it is not possible to conclude with certainty from the evidence whether someone intentionally accessed pornographic Web sites on the Macintosh, or whether the access was inadvertent.[46] Although Kremen opined that the quantity of pornographic data found in the Macintosh was too voluminous to have been accessed inadvertently, he offered no objective basis for his opinion.[47]

When a browser accesses a Web page, the servers housing the Web page transmit the text, images, sounds and HTML that compose the page over the Internet in "packets" of data. As the different packets arrive, the browser stores (i.e., downloads) and reassembles the packets in the "cache", a temporary storage and staging area in the memory of the computer. The cache enables the browser to switch back and forth between stored Web pages without having to reload the pages. The computer also saves the cache data under a cache directory in its hard drive.

Netscape Navigator for the Macintosh saves its cache data in separate files under a cache folder (i.e., directory). For example, on March 5, 1998, computer consultant Michael Ricciardi conducted an Internet search using the Macintosh. As a result of this brief Internet

[46] Goldstein ¶ 130-131, 11/18/99.

[47] On cross-examination, Kremen admitted that he did not compare the Macintosh's contents with the contents of other computers in the school district. Kremen ¶ 10, 11/16/99. He also did not provide any evidence that someone used sexually explicit search terms to pull up pornography.

session, 51 separate cache files were generated and saved under the cache folder. These cache files contain the packets of data that composed the Web pages accessed by Mr. Ricciardi.

As demonstrated by Mr. Ricciardi's Internet session, cache files accumulate quickly. These files can be deleted manually (i.e., dragging the files to the Macintosh trash can or Microsoft Windows deletion bin), or as a menu option in Navigator that allows the user to "clear the cache" with a click of a button.[48]

When a browser connects with a Web site, the site's servers may send a "cookie"—a string of text characters—to the browser, which in turn stores it in a cookie file on the hard drive.[49] For example, if a browser accessed the Web site of Business Week magazine, the following cookie would be sent back to the browser's cookie file:

www.businessweek.com FALSE / FALSE 942189160 NGUserID cc9737b0-11099-885995505-1

The text characters following the domain name "businessweek.com" denote various information about the cookie, such as access privileges and the expiration date, but not the date, length of time, or sequential order the Web site was accessed by the browser.[50] A cookie file contains a list of cookies out of chronological order; in other words, the sequence of Web sites accessed cannot be ascertained by examining the cookie file. When a browser reconnects with the Business Week Web site, the server retrieves its previously deposited cookie. Cookies are used primarily for information-tracking purposes, and are unnecessary to the transmission of a Web page, so a cookie file identifies only those Web sites accessed by the browser which use cookies.

As Dr. Goldstein testified, one Web page can generate more than one cookie.[51] For example, the home page of the Business Week Web site might contain a banner ad from DoubleClick, a company specializing in Web site banner advertising. As a technical matter, it [48] According to Dr. Goldstein, Navigator automatically purges accumulated cache at certain intervals as part of its self-maintenance.

[49] Similar to cache data, the browser stores the cookie in the computer's memory during the Web session. When the session is ended, all cookie data is stored in a cookie data file in the computer's hard drive.

[50] This cookie is taken from Exhibit M11, the "MagicCookie" file.

[51] Goldstein ¶ 46-52, 11/18/99.

is unnecessary to select (i.e., click on) the banner ad in order to receive a cookie from the banner ad's server.

The Navigator browser for Macintosh stores its cookie data in a "MagicCookie" file. As a general rule, a MagicCookie file should register the same creation date as the date Navigator was installed in the Macintosh. If a person quits Navigator and then deletes the MagicCookie file, the browser will create a new MagicCookie file the next time Navigator is launched. If a person deletes the MagicCookie file while Navigator is still operating, however, the browser will restore the deleted MagicCookie file with a new creation date as soon as the file is needed.

B. The Evidence

The computer data evidence offered by the Board can be divided broadly into two categories: data files which were deleted and restored by the Macintosh on February 27, 1998; and data files which were deleted and recovered by Ontrack. This evidence is offered to prove the following: (1) after he was confronted by Principal Lippiett on February 27, 1998, Grundfest deleted all of the files that contained residual evidence of past Internet sessions; and (2) Grundfest intentionally accessed pornography on the Internet using the Macintosh. Each of these arguments will be addressed in order.

On March 23, 1998, during an examination of the Macintosh, computer consultant Robert Hinchcliffe accessed the MagicCookie file. The parties stipulate that the MagicCookie file contained six pornographic domain names: "www.private.sex.se"; "www.sex.se"; "www.lesbianlove.com"; "www.bollo.com"; "www.winset.com"; and "www.videosex-live.com". According to its time-stamp, the MagicCookie file was created on February 27, 1998 at 1:57 p.m.

The creation date of a cookie file corresponds to the date that Netscape Navigator was installed in the computer. Mr. Kremen testified that the cookie file is an integral part of the Netscape Navigator browser. If a cookie file is deleted while Navigator is open, the browser will restore the deleted cookie file with all of its cookie data intact. This restoration process will occur as soon as the cookie file is needed (i.e., someone is using Navigator to access the Internet), or when Navigator is exited.[52] The MagicCookie file must have existed when Grundfest conducted his failed Internet demonstration on the morning of February 27, 1998. Therefore, since the MagicCookie file is time-stamped with a creation date of February 27, 1998 at 1:57 p.m., someone must have deleted the file on that date, and Navigator subsequently restored it at 1:57 p.m.

It is evident that Grundfest deliberately deleted the MagicCookie file on February 27, 1998. At around 9:30 a.m. that day, Principal Lippiett confronted Grundfest with the accusation that "someone" saw him viewing naked pictures on the computer in Room 6A. He denied the accusation and proffered a weak explanation (the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue banner ad). He was stunned by the accusation. When he returned to Room 6A, after his conversation with Principal Lippiett, he sat down at the Macintosh and attempted to reconstruct an earlier Internet search on amniocentesis.[53] Several minutes later, he returned to Principal Lippiett's office and brought her back to Room 6A to demonstrate how sexually explicit content might be displayed inadvertently using innocuous search terms such as amniocentesis or Donner Party.[54] The demonstration was unsuccessful, and Grundfest became distraught. He denied the accusation again. The gravity of the dilemma he faced was apparent to him. He said to Principal Lippiett, "I know what this accusation – just the accusation can mean. . . . I'm scared."[55] When she left the room, Grundfest again turned his attention back to the Macintosh, exiting the Internet, putting the Macintosh into sleep mode, and leaving Room 6A at about 11:45 a.m., according to his testimony. The Macintosh's trash can was last modified at 11:17 a.m.[56] In other words, a file or files were dragged into the trash can or "emptied" at a time when Grundfest was using the Macintosh. At the hearing, on direct examination, Grundfest adamantly denied deleting any files that morning. On cross-examination, however, he testified that he did not "recall" deleting any files that morning.

[52] When Navigator is exited, the software will restore the cookie file as a final "housekeeping" function. If the cookie file is deleted while Navigator is closed, it will create a new cookie file the next time it is launched.

Grundfest was computer-literate. He took a course on the Internet in the summer of 1996. He gained a level of proficiency sufficient enough to instruct other teachers about the Internet in 1997.[57] He knew how to "clear the cache" in Netscape Navigator in order to save disk space, and in fact, cleared the cache on February 13, 1998. Presumably, he also knew about cookies and the residual data generated in a cookie file during an Internet session.

Based on his education and experience, I find that Grundfest not only knew how to delete the telltale files, he in fact had motive and opportunity to do so. The circumstantial evidence, the testimony of the witnesses, and the absence of any other evidence to explain the creation date of the MagicCookie file compel the conclusion that Grundfest deliberately deleted the MagicCookie file on February 27, 1998.

This conclusion is supported by the fact that two other Netscape Navigator files are also time-stamped with creation dates of February 27, 1998: the "CCache log" file at 1:22 p.m., and the "AddressBook" file at 2:20 p.m.[58] Apparently, these files were also deleted and subsequently restored by Navigator.[59] Equally incriminating is the absence of cache files in the cache folder of the Macintosh with creation dates of February 27, 1998. Grundfest's failed Internet demonstration should have generated at least one cache file. By way of comparison, the brief Internet session conducted by Mr. Ricciardi on March 5, 1998 generated 51 cache files. It is evident that Grundfest deleted the cache files, either manually or by "clearing the cache" in Navigator.

Accordingly, I find that on February 27, 1998, Grundfest deliberately deleted files in the Macintosh that contained residual evidence of past Internet sessions; sessions which he knew would reveal pornographic content. By deleting these files, he committed spoliation, the intentional destruction of evidence from which a fact finder may draw an unfavorable inference. Black's Law Dictionary 975 (6th ed. 1991); see also State v. Lizotte, 272 N.J.

[57] Ex. M26 at 10; Grundfest ¶ 111-112, 11/17/99.

[58] According to Kremen's testimony and his technical report, the "Netscape News" folder (i.e., directory) also shows a creation date of February 27, 1998. However, this folder could not be located on the Ontrack CD.

[59] Unlike the MagicCookie file, neither the CCache-log file nor the AddressBook file was restored with its original content intact.

Super. 568, 571 (Law Div. 1993). Grundfest's deleting of the files, together with the pornographic content found in the files, compels the finding that he deleted the files to erase all forensic evidence of sessions in which he accessed and viewed pornography.

Grundfest's response to the accusation made by Lippiett on February 27, 1998 was at the very minimum suspicious. When Principal Lippiett confronted him with the accusation that "someone" observed him viewing naked pictures on the Macintosh, he claimed there must have been a misunderstanding: the individual must have misinterpreted the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue banner ad he was viewing. He then proffered a second possible explanation: nude images were accessed inadvertently while he was searching the Internet for newsgroups on amniocentesis. Given these explanations, the identity of his accuser should have been irrelevant. As the Board asserts in its post-hearing brief, "the identity or status of the accuser should have no effect on Grundfest's candor or obligation to tell the truth." Yet in his certified statement to the Board on April 13, 1998, he stated that if Principal Lippiett told him the accuser "was one of my students, or any student for that matter, I would have unequivocally told her it was untrue. Instead, I thought it might have been a colleague who found something offensive, even though I never accessed a site which portrayed naked women." In other words, Grundfest would have denied the accusation unequivocally and discredited his accuser had he known his accuser was a student. Instead, assuming his accuser was a colleague, Grundfest proffered two alternative explanations that allowed for the possibility of a misinterpretation. His response to the accusation does not indicate candor and truthfulness.

Grundfest's testimony regarding inadvertent access was disingenuous. Although he testified to accessing pornographic materials on the Internet inadvertently on more than one occasion, he claimed that it happened to him only once on the Macintosh:

> [M]y sister-in-law was pregnant at the time. And my wife and I had been discussing amniocentesis as a--you know, as a relevant current events issue. And so I clicked to enter that newsgroup site. And what happens on the Netscape screen . . . is you get basically a three-pained window. . . . I clicked on the first header [of a newsgroup list] and it started at the bottom to unscroll . . . the head of a woman that maybe I assumed was a pregnant woman. I don't know. . . . And as it got to about the top of the shoulder it didn't really look like she was going to have anything on. Then I said, I don't want to be here. I clicked on the next header, the next news header. And a different woman again > started to unscroll. And we got to about here . . . . Here being the top of the shoulders. And it didn't look like there was going to be anything there. And I said, no, I don't want this. [Grundfest ¶ 145-146, 11/16/99.]

On cross-examination, he testified that the absence of bra straps led him to believe the image was nude, which is why he scrolled no further down than the shoulders.[60] Such prudishness indicates to me a lack of candor in Grundfest's testimony. An image of a woman's bare shoulders would not be an alert to questionable content. In addition, more often than not, the header of a newsgroup defines its contents. For example, Exhibit M19, discussed, infra, contains many pornographic newsgroup headers, such as "alt.binaries.pictures.erotica". Grundfest's carefully constructed testimony that his access was "inadvertent" and "accidental" was not credible.

Accordingly, I find that Grundfest committed conduct unbecoming a teacher by using the Macintosh to access and view pornography on school time.

Unbecoming conduct—the lack of fitness to discharge the duties of a position—is grounds for dismissal of a tenured teacher. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10; In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974) (citing Laba v. Newark Board of Education, 23 N.J. 364 (1957)). "[U]nfitness to remain a teacher may be demonstrated by a single incident if sufficiently flagrant." In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967) (citation omitted); Pietrunti Bd. of Educ. of Brick Tp., 128 N.J. Super. 149 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 573 (1974) (inflammatory orientation speech by tenured teacher attacking school administration warranted her dismissal).

The recent emergence of the Internet precludes on-point precedent. The closest analogous case law is public lewdness. Compare Town of West Orange Bd. of Educ. v. Lieb, 1985 S.L.D. 933 (teacher's conviction for public lewdness constituted conduct unbecoming); Bd. of Educ. Township of Old Bridge v. Pappa, 1988 S.L.D. 542 (teacher's flagrantly lewd act at a rest area along the Garden State Parkway constituted conduct unbecoming). Grundfest's conduct was not the criminal equivalent of public lewdness, N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4(a) (a flagrantly offensive act which is likely to be observed by nonconsenting persons), but it was the functional equivalent. By misusing a school computer during school hours to access and view pornography on the Internet, he committed a flagrantly lewd act which he should have known might be observed by a student. In fact, his lewd actions were observed at least once by J.M., an 11-year-old boy who was made to suffer the subsequent anxiety of revealing the incident and the trauma of testifying at the hearing. Furthermore, Grundfest's intentional access of pornography at the school created an offensive working environment. Compare Olivant v. Dep't of Envtl. Protection, Initial Decision, (April 12, 1999), modified, Merit System Bd. (September 9, 1999))<http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/> (appellants' distribution of sexist humor over electronic-mail system constituted sexual harassment and misuse of public property). His misconduct is even more aggregious than the misconduct penalized in Bd. of Educ. v. Pappa and Bd. of Educ. v. Lieb because it took place in school during school hours using school equipment. His misconduct should also be assessed in light of the fact that he was the part-time coach of the girl's junior varsity lacrosse team at Madison High School. His willingness to discredit a student (actually any student) as a liar, his unwillingness to admit to what appears obvious from the evidence, and his attempts at erasing his tracks on the Macintosh mandate a harsh penalty. Teachers have been entrusted with the care and custody of children, and so their duties require "a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment." In re Tenure Hearing of Lucarelli, 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 537, 541, quoting In the Matter of Tenure Hearing of Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321. In this matter, Grundfest demonstrated an alarming lack of self-restraint and judgment.

Grundfest has been a teacher for 14 years. His teaching ability is unquestioned and his disciplinary record is clean. Nevertheless, his intentional access of pornography at the Kings Road School using a school computer, his unwillingness to admit to his conduct, his willingness to discredit a student, and his attempts at erasing his tracks on the Macintosh are all sufficiently flagrant to justify his dismissal.

CONCLUSION

The Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Grundfest committed conduct unbecoming a teacher by using a school computer to intentionally access and view pornography on the Internet during school hours. His actions are sufficiently flagrant to justify his dismissal.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :
HEARING OF ROBERT I. GRUNDFEST, :
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF MADISON, MORRIS COUNTY. : DECISION

The record of this matter, including hearing transcripts, and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The Board's exceptions, respondent's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto were considered by the Commissioner in rendering his decision herein.

In its exceptions, the Board urges the Commissioner to adopt the recommended decision of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), emphasizing that the ALJ's decision was predicated on an assessment of the credibility of witnesses which was supported by the evidence adduced at hearing. (Board's Exceptions at 1)

Respondent presents his exceptions in two parts. Section I sets forth Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions, and Section II contains specific exceptions to the Initial Decision. In his introductory statement, respondent asserts that the student's (J.M.'s) testimony was so incredible that the ALJ could not rely on critical portions of that testimony, and that the Board so mishandled the computer in evidence that respondent was denied a fair hearing. Respondent argues that, in the place of reliable evidence, the ALJ relied on what he saw as respondent's insufficient responses to the allegations. (Respondent's Exceptions, at Introduction)

Respondent's Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions contains a summary of his teaching background, an explanation of his transfer to the Kings Road School in 1995 and the details of his teaching assignment for the 1997-98 school year. He also explains his disputes with the principal with respect to his teaching evaluations, his coaching responsibilities, and his assignment as substitute teacher when the classroom teachers were absent. (Id. at 1-3)

Respondent claims that J.M., while in his classes, had behavioral problems which necessitated disciplinary measures, such as "time outs," in-school suspensions and visits to the principal's office. (Id. at 3-4) Respondent also claims that J.M. had threatened him with respect to his continued employment, as reflected in testimony at hearing:

> The student had many behavioral problems at the school. Most critically, one day while in 4th grade, the student lashed out at Bob Grundfest, saying, "I can get you fired, you know." He said this after Mr. Grundfest had been strict with him for failing to do his homework. (11/16/99, p. 77-1 to 78-22)
> The student admitted on direct examination that he "may have" threatened Mr. Grundfest and "could have" told him he wanted to see him fired. (10/12/99, p. 76-14 to 22) (Id. at 3)

Continuing his Proposed Findings of Facts and Conclusions, respondent explains that his classroom, Room 6A, was a small classroom that had windows to the outside and windows in the door and had been converted for use by four instructors by the addition of low dividers. Besides the four teachers assigned to the room, two other teachers used the room on a regular basis. He argues that despite the fact that staff, students and faculty frequently walked in and out of the room, no one except J.M. testified to seeing respondent do anything inappropriate with the computer, including fellow teacher, Nancy Croessmann, who was scheduled for classes in the room at the times when respondent taught J.M. and had a direct view of the computer screen from her work area. Likewise, the computer was shared by the six teachers who regularly used the room, plus it was available to any additional teachers and students who wanted to use it. The computer was not password-protected and had no log-in procedure to identify the user, and there was open access to the room in which the computer was located not only for staff and students, but also for community groups who used the school evenings and weekends.[1] Thus, respondent concludes, anyone could access the Internet who wanted to do so. (Id. at 4-7)

Citing extensively to testimony, respondent explains in detail the events of February 26 and February 27, 1998 surrounding the allegations made by J.M. and his meeting with the principal wherein he was confronted with the charges. Respondent takes issue with the fact that the principal did not identify his accuser and disputes the principal's contention that he admitted viewing pornographic pictures. Respondent emphasizes that in that conversation, he admitted only that he had inadvertently pulled up material, words not images, that someone might deem inappropriate. (Id. at 8, 9)

Respondent argues that the Board has never been specific about when the alleged inappropriate conduct occurred. J.M. and the Board's attorney gave contradictory versions of the times and dates, he contends, claiming at various times that the inappropriate computer access occurred in both the afternoon and morning sessions with the student and in other instances indicating that it was solely during the afternoon sessions. Further, at hearing, the student couldn't identify even the month in which the alleged inappropriate Internet access began to occur or the number of times it had occurred. Respondent maintains that J.M.'s inability to identify the dates/times of the alleged inappropriate usage, plus the fact that the student's accusations contradicted other witnesses' testimony, renders J.M.'s testimony unreliable. (Id. at 10-15)

Respondent maintains that he did not delete any files from the computer and suggests that when Bob Padian, principal of Madison High School, changed the date on the computer from March 2, 1998 to February 27, 1998, any files accessed during that time would have a false February 27, 1998 date. Respondent also suggests that if the Cache and History files had been deleted as alleged, those files should have been empty when Michael Ricciardi, a computer consultant for the

[1] The record reflects that Room 6A was unlocked before school and was locked after the room was cleaned by the custodians on the night shift.

Board, opened them on March 5, 1998, but they were not. Respondent further explains that this computer was particularly prone to freezes and crashes. (Id. at 17)

Additionally, respondent argues that it is impossible to determine whether the pornographic cookies on the computer were purposely downloaded and if so, when and by whom, whether they were the result of an access that occurred in the course of a Netscape browser entering a Web page which had references pointing to these sites, or whether the cookies on the computer could have all come from Mr. Ricciardi's Internet search on March 5, 1998. He further explains that, on the one date that it is possible to infer that the computer was accessed for pornographic purposes, December 30, 1997, the school was closed for winter break and respondent was home recuperating from hernia surgery. (Id. at 20)

In Section II of his exceptions, respondent argues that, despite the ALJ's finding J.M.'s testimony inconsistent and his finding that it was impossible to conclude from the evidence whether someone intentionally accessed pornographic websites, the ALJ concluded that respondent was guilty of conduct unbecoming a teacher. The effect of the Initial Decision, therefore, was to shift the burden of proof from the Board to respondent. As stated in respondent's exceptions:

> In place of these affirmative proofs, the ALJ relied on the fact that, in his opinion, Respondent could not come up with a suitable explanation for files that appeared to be deleted or with a suitable response to the student's accusations. He wrote that, among other things, it was "the absence of any other evidence to explain the creation date of the MagicCookie file" that compelled the conclusion that Grundfest deliberately deleted the MagicCookie file on February 27, 1998. (ID 17) Requiring Respondent to produce such information shifted the burden of proof from the Board to the Respondent, standing the tenure statutes on their head. [footnote omitted] Instead of relying on the Board's inadequate proofs that Grundfest deleted files on February 27, the ALJ relied on his own view that Grundfest was unable to prove that the files were not deleted.
> Similarly, the ALJ shifted the burden when it came to Grundfest's denial of the charges. The ALJ concluded that "Grundfest's carefully constructed testimony that his access was 'inadvertent' and 'accidental' was not credible." (ID 19) Again, the ALJ relied on the absence of an explanation by Respondent to > prove that the alleged acts occurred, reversing the burden from the Board to Grundfest. Instead of considering the failure of the Board to prove that Grundfest admitted inappropriately using the computer, the ALJ instead relied on his disbelief of Grundfest's response to the charges. (emphasis in text) (Respondent's Exceptions, Section 2, at 2)

Citing In re Wolf, 231 N.J. Super. 365, 370 (App. Div. 1989), "[c]hildren's testimony, especially when it contradicts previous statements, 'must be used with great caution...particularly where, as here, such use requires a final adjudication grounded primarily on the basis of the testimony,'" respondent reiterates his argument that J.M.'s testimony was not credible, arguing that in a room where three other teachers worked, J.M. and J.M. alone said that he had witnessed respondent accessing pornography, yet J.M. could not identify when this access allegedly occurred, rendering J.M.'s testimony more than just "somewhat inconsistent" as the ALJ found, and not the kind of testimony on which a man's career should be destroyed. Respondent challenges the believability of J.M., saying that "[i]t defies imagination that a fifth grade boy could see his teacher looking at pictures of naked ladies on the computer every day for three months and not a tell a soul." Respondent also takes issue with the fact that the Board paid for J.M.'s attorney. (Respondent's Exceptions, Section 2, at 4-7)

Citing Wakefield v. Pinchak, 289 N.J. Super. 566, 573-74 (App. Div. 1996), respondent maintains that due process requires that the accused be provided with specific dates when the alleged acts are alleged to have occurred. Because it is undisputed that the computer in question was freely available to all students and staff, respondent argues, the Board's failure to identify specific dates and times of the alleged impermissible access was unfairly prejudicial to respondent, since it made him responsible for explaining all pornography linked to the computer. (Respondent's Exceptions, Section 2, at 9, 10)

Respondent avers that the Board's failure to state who had made the charges against him, and its failure to identify dates/times the alleged acts occurred, violated his right to be informed of the charges and his accuser. He claims that he responded to the principal as he did since he knew that a student couldn't have seen anything inappropriate because nothing had occurred when students were present. However, since he did surf the net after school hours, he thought it possible he could have offended a fellow teacher who might have seen a swimsuit banner ad. This lack of information, respondent argues, compromised his ability to defend himself accurately and with precision. (Id. at 11, 12)

The computer evidence was contaminated by Board employees, respondent maintains, and thus should be discounted. Further, the computer evidence could not prove who accessed the computer, or when it was accessed, since there was no log-in procedure or password protection. Since both experts agreed that pornography could be found on any computer that surfed the Web, the ALJ concluded it is impossible to determine whether someone intentionally accessed pornographic sites or whether the access was inadvertent. The ALJ also specifically found that the Board contaminated the integrity of the evidence. (Id. at 13, 14)

Respondent disputes the ALJ's conclusion that respondent deleted files, stating that that conclusion is flawed because the February 27, 1998 date is unreliable. Not only is it impossible to verify that the clock was either functioning or reliable at the time in question, but the ALJ himself concluded that the Board personnel had contaminated the evidence:

> "it is now impossible to determine with independent certainty whether a time stamp on a file in the Macintosh reading February 27, 1998, is the true date or the false date." (ID 7, n. 29). Despite making this finding, the ALJ nevertheless based his conclusion that Respondent deleted files on February 27, 1998 on a time stamp on a Macintosh file reading February 27, 1998 (ID16), a conclusion that is directly controverted by the finding that any February 27, 1998 date on a file on the Macintosh is unreliable. (emphasis in text) (Id. at 17)

Further, respondent claims his due process rights were violated because he had no opportunity to examine the computer for evidence before it was contaminated by Board employees, and also because he was denied discovery of J.M.'s student records which could have provided evidence of emotional and family problems that existed at the time the student made the allegations. (Id. at 19, 23-26)

Finally, citing In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 420 (App. Div. 1967) (where extraneous considerations impact penalty decisions, the rights of the accused can be seriously prejudiced), respondent argues that the ALJ's reliance on respondent's "unwillingness to admit his conduct, his willingness to discredit a student, and his attempts at erasing his tracks" were improper considerations when determining penalty. Respondent maintains that the right to deny charges and to confront his accuser is a fundamental aspect of due process and that it is improper to penalize him for exercising his rights. (emphasis in text) (Respondent's Exceptions, Section 2, at 21)

In its reply exceptions, the Board disputes respondent's argument that the ALJ shifted the burden of proof from the Board to respondent. The Board insists that the ALJ's decision was based first and foremost upon credibility findings and that the ALJ simply believed the Board's witnesses and did not believe respondent. (Board's Reply Exceptions at 2, 3)

The Board urges the Commissioner to adopt the ALJ's credibility determinations, stating that the ALJ found J.M.'s testimony credible, that it was consistent with what the child had reported a year and a half earlier and that the supervisor of the one teacher assigned to the classroom during J.M.'s afternoon tutoring sessions testified that the teacher was frequently out of the room. The Board avers that there is no evidence to support the allegation that J.M. threatened respondent and that J.M. had, in fact, testified that he liked respondent. The Board argues that its underwriting of a portion of J.M.'s legal costs in this proceeding should not be taken as evidence of an effort to "subvert" or "suborn" the testimony of J.M. (Id. at 4-6)

The Board argues that J.M.'s testimony is buttressed by clear evidence because the computer was "rife" with pornographic content, including a large amount of access to pornographic "news groups," which, the Board maintains, cannot be inadvertently accessed but must be accessed through subscriptions. Further, given his knowledge of "news groups," the preponderance of credible evidence points to respondent. (Id. at 6-8)

Respondent's assertion that his rights were violated when the principal confronting him did not inform him of the identity of his accuser or the specifics of the allegation against him is without merit, the Board contends, because respondent should have been truthful regardless of the identity of his accuser. The Board states that the adverse inference the ALJ drew from respondent's evasive and suspicious responses when he was confronted with the accusations was appropriate. (Id. at 8)

The Board further argues that the computer provides ample evidence in support of the findings of the ALJ, citing the fact that a number of files, such as the MagicCookie File, the Cache log, the Address Book and other Netscape files were deleted by "someone" on February 27, 1998 and that respondent was the only person with the motive and opportunity to do so. The Board also argues that the Board's witnesses established proof as to the chain of custody and that those witnesses testified as to the computer clock's accuracy up until the date it was sent to Ontrack for data retrieval. (Id. at 9, 10)

The Board challenges the testimony of respondent's expert, Mr. Goldstein, which concluded that files could have been deleted through a computer crash or through inadvertence, saying that he lacked credibility. (Id. at 11) Defending its conduct on the handling of the evidence, the Board asserts that there is no evidence that the computer evidence was contaminated and that a chain of evidence was presented which explained minute-by-minute, day-by-day what actions the Board took and what effect such actions had on the data on the computer files. Further, witnesses independently verified that they had turned on the computer on certain days and the functions performed. (Id. at 12)

Finally, the Board urges the Commissioner to adopt the ALJ's recommended penalty, stating that termination of respondent's tenure is entirely appropriate and fully supported by the evidence. The Board avers that the ALJ acted properly in excluding the use of the student's records and that respondent's attempt to bring extraneous material into the matter was nothing less than a "red herring," which was properly rejected. (Id. at 13, 14)

Initially, the Commissioner notes his agreement with Dr. Feinsod, Madison Superintendent of Schools, that the charge of accessing pornographic materials on a school computer is reprehensible and, if proven true, violates a sacred trust between the teacher and his students. (Tr. 10/5/99, at 66-67)

Sustaining tenure charges for unbecoming conduct, however, is a very serious matter. The ramifications for respondent would be not only the loss of his tenured employment, but also the automatic referral of the matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible revocation of his teaching certificate, and the possible loss of his pension benefits. Since the penalty for respondent would be severe, it is the Board's responsibility and its burden to prove by a preponderence of credible evidence that 1) pornographic materials were intentionally accessed on the school computer in question, and that 2) respondent was the one who accessed those materials.

Upon an exhaustive review of the record, including transcripts of the nine days of hearings, the computer experts' reports and other evidentiary documents, the Commissioner cannot accept the recommended decision of the ALJ because the record does not support his conclusions. Central to the Board's case in this matter are (1) the accusations of an 11-year-old boy, J.M., who testified that he saw respondent view "like porno stuff; naked people" (Tr. 10/12/99, at 70), and (2) the computer data evidence.

Like the ALJ, the Commissioner finds J.M.'s testimony "somewhat inconsistent" because J.M. testified that respondent began viewing pornographic material on the computer in "September. Like December. November. One of those," (Tr. 10/12/99, at 71), and that, after prompting by petitioner's counsel, J.M. testified that he saw his teacher viewing pornographic sites only after another student transferred out of his language class in December 1997. (Initial Decision at 3) Although some variance is expected in the testimony of minors, it has long been established that student testimony must be examined with great caution, e.g., In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Barry Deetz, decided by the State Board November 7, 1984, aff'd Docket No. A-1264-84T5 (App. Div. 1985), certif. denied, 101 N.J. 321 (1985). Although not necessarily required in evaluating student testimony, it is noted that there is no witness testimony corroborating J.M.'s accusations.[2]

Despite finding his testimony "somewhat inconsistent," the ALJ credited J.M.'s testimony, concluding that "[respondent's] lewd actions were observed at least once by J.M., an 11-year-old boy who was made to suffer the subsequent anxiety of revealing the incident." (Id. at 20) Notwithstanding his obligation to accord due consideration to the ALJ's opportunity to observe witnesses to assess their credibility, the Commissioner's primary responsibility in this matter is to adduce whether the evidence produced at hearing supports the charges against respondent by a preponderence of credible evidence. In this instance, the Commissioner finds that the record does not support reliance on J.M.'s testimony. See Quinlan v. Board of Education of North Bergen Township, 73 N.J. Super. 40, 42, 50-54 (App. Div. 1962) and In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967).

Not only was J.M. unsure which month(s) he observed respondent viewing sexually explicit material as indicated above, but he was also inconsistent in recounting which days of the week, the time of day and the number of instances.[3] J.M. also testified that the alleged incidents occurred when he was in respondent's class for writing.[4] (Tr. 10/12/99, at 70) Although J.M. had writing only three days a week, he testified that he saw respondent accessing pornographic material every time he went into the classroom and that he went there every day. (Tr. 10/12/99, at 74) Upon further

[2] The Commissioner does not concur with the Board that respondent's statement to Principal Lippiett, "and then he said that, yes, it was true, but he had done it inadvertently, that sometimes when searching for other items an inappropriate image could come up on the screen, and then he gave me an example," constitutes an admission of guilt by respondent. (Tr. 10/4/99, at 25)

[3] The Board establishes the dates that respondent is accused of accessing sexual material on the Internet between December 1, 1997 and February 27, 1998 based on J.M.'s testimony that the access occurred in his writing classes when he was the only student assigned to respondent, but the Board admits that there is no evidence that respondent looked at sexual material on any specific day between December 1 and February 27. (Tr. 11/16/99, at 120)

[4] It is undisputed that J.M.'s writing classes with respondent were Monday and Thursday afternoons from 2:00 to 2:30 p.m. and Friday mornings from 11:30 a.m. to 12 noon.

clarification by the Board's attorney, J.M. testified that he witnessed the inappropriate behavior "five or seven times" and "Way more than once." (Tr. 10/12/99, at 75)

Further, the Board was unable to corroborate J.M.'s accusations with witness accounts. Counsel for the Board acknowledged that he had interviewed the teachers and none of them ever saw respondent put anything on the screen of a sexual nature, nor did any students, other than J.M., complain of seeing anything of a sexual nature.[5] (Tr. 10/5/99, at 211, 212) Likewise, the school's principal, Barbara Lippiett, who testified on behalf of the Board, did not provide any testimony of observing respondent access inappropriate material, although the possibility existed for her to observe such activity, if it were occurring during class times, in that it was her stated practice to visit room 6A frequently and always unannounced. (Tr. 8/26/99, at 64 and 10/4/99, at 55-56) It is also noted that J.M. accuses respondent of viewing pornographic material in classroom 6A, which is separated by low dividers and assigned for use by four teachers, Nancy Croessmann, Marilyn D'Amelio, Debra Neeley and Respondent Robert Grundfest, and their students. Teachers Marie McGuire, John Connolly, Barbara Koes and Joan Hart periodically used the room and the computer in question. Nancy Croessmann, Marilyn D'Amelio and Debra Neeley, the three teachers assigned to room 6A with respondent, testified on his behalf. They were unanimous in stating that room 6A was very active with students and teachers constantly going in and out of the room,[6] and that they had never seen respondent do anything inappropriate on the computer. (Tr. 10/5/99, at 158, 206 and 223) Marilyn D'Amelio, who tutored a student in the classroom at the same time on Friday mornings that J.M. had his writing sessions with respondent, and Nancy Croessmann, who tutored students with schedules that mirrored both J.M.'s morning and afternoon writing sessions,[7] testified that they could see the computer screen

[5] The Commissioner notes that J.M. reported to Ms. Lippiett that another student, K.S., may have seen inappropriate materials, but when questioned by Ms. Lippiett, K.S. said she had never seen respondent use the computer at all when she was with him. (R-9, in evidence)

[6] J.M. testified that Ms. D'Amelio and Ms. Croessmann and some students were in and out of the classroom during his classes. (Tr. 10/12/99, at 105-107)

from their work areas and that they did not seen anything inappropriate, nor did their students report seeing respondent do anything inappropriate on the computer. (Tr. 10/5/99, at 156-159, 205, 206)

J.M.'s uncorroborated testimony must, therefore, be evaluated in light of its inconsistencies regarding the dates and times of the alleged activities, and in conjunction with other statements J.M. made on the record. J.M. admitted that he sometimes lied about whether or not his homework was done and sometimes made up things about what happened on the playground to avoid getting into trouble. (Tr. 10/12/99, at 84) Respondent claims that J.M. threatened him, claiming that J.M. told him that he could get him fired, which J.M. was unable to deny, testifying that he "may have but I don't recall," and upon additional questioning explained further:

> As I said before, I don't recall doing it but I may have 'cause--I mean I don't remember doing it in the fifth grade or anything but I could have said it in like third grade 'cause I had him in my class, too.
> (Tr. 10/12/99, at 76)

Finally, based on the Board's timeline that J.M. observed respondent viewing sexually explicit material between December 1, 1997 and February 27, 1998, it is important to note that J.M. did not confide in anyone--not a fellow student, a teacher, his principal, his counselor or his parents, that this was occurring until the end of the third month. (Tr. 10/12/99, at 94, 97, 107-109)

Accordingly, after a thorough review of J.M.'s testimony with due consideration to the ALJ's observations, noting the tender age of the student, and in light of the fact that there is no witness testimony to corroborate J.M.'s accusations, the Commissioner must reject the ALJ's reliance on J.M.'s testimony.

The Commissioner, therefore, turns to an assessment of the validity of the computer evidence, which must be viewed 1) in light of the lack of Board policy regarding the use of school computers and the lack of security for the computer in question prior to J.M.'s accusations, and 2) whether the computer evidence was compromised by Board employees investigating J.M.'s allegations.

First, as specified in the record, the Board did not have a policy in place governing the use of school computers prior to J.M.'s accusations. (Tr. 10/4/99, at 78-81) Further, the computer in question was not password-protected and there was no log-in procedure. Respondent's classroom, Room 6A, where the computer was located, was unlocked by a custodian before school and locked again by the custodian on the evening shift after the room was cleaned. The room and computer were available to the four teachers and their students assigned to the room, as well as at least three other teachers who periodically used the computer and the classroom. Anyone could have used the computer after school and into the evening before the room was locked, including someone affiliated with a community group in conjunction with events scheduled at the school. (Tr. 10/4/99, at 62-65, 77, 78 and Tr. 11/16/99, at 134, 135)

Since there were no security measures in place in regard to the use of the computer, the Board admits that it cannot identify a single specific date on which it is alleging respondent accessed pornography. Both the Board's expert and respondent's expert agree that there is no way to determine when a particular web site was accessed or who accessed it since there was no password or log-in procedure, and the Macintosh didn't track the accessed sites by recording the time and/or date.[8] (Tr. 11/15/99, at 111, 216 and 11/18/99, at 127) The only date the Board was able to link with respondent was February 27, 1998.[9] By relying on the creation dates and last-modification dates in the data files records, the Board concluded that respondent had deleted files on February 27, 1998 shortly after he was confronted with J.M.'s accusations against him. The Board reasons that this circumstantial evidence points to respondent as he was the only person with the motive and opportunity to delete files on that date. However, the deletions on February 27 cannot be read to point solely to respondent because the record reflects that the computer evidence was compromised when

[8] Noticeably absent from the Board's investigation into this matter is a request to the Internet service provider for a listing of websites accessed with the dates and times.

[9] The only date that the Board was able to infer from the data on the computer that the computer was accessed for pornographic purposes was on December 30, 1997. (Exhibit M21) Respondent testified that December 30, 1997 was a day during which the school was closed for winter vacation, and that he was at home recuperating from hernia surgery on that date. (Tr. 11/18/99, at 4, 5)

one of the Board employees, Bruce Padian, in the course of his investigation into this matter on March 2, backdated the computer to February 27, 1998. Respondent's expert, Dr. Goldstein, testified that resetting a date backwards would mean that the computer would have found some files that had a date later than the computer date, which is not a good condition to have on the computer, and could possibly lead to failures or crashes on the machine. (Tr. 11/18/99, at 114) On cross-examination, the Board's expert, Mr. Kremen, was questioned about the effect of this backdating, as follows:

> Q And on your web site, you publish a -- an on line forensic publication. Is that right?
> A Yes.
>
> Q You're familiar with Mark Friedman (phonetic) and Chicara Boon (phonetic)
>
> A Yes.
>
> Q Do they write for your web publication?
>
> A Yes.
>
> Q I'm going to -- is one of the articles they wrote, Old Rules for New Stuff, Pretrial Discovery and Seizure of Computer Based Evidence?
>
> A Yes.
>
> Q Did you have any role in writing that?
>
> A No.
>
> Q Have you reviewed it?
>
> A I've read it. Yes.
>
> Q It -- it says in here, most files also contain a date and time stamp of when the file was last changed. If, for example, the date and time are later than the date of a letter or memorandum, that may mean that the memorandum may have been written after the fact. Of course, the memorandum may just as easily have been accessed and rewritten, with no changes at a later date. The date and time stamp is not infallible. In fact, it is very easy to manipulate, with the proper software tools. Accordingly, just because the date and time stamp appears to be a certain date, do not believe that date to be an absolute fact. Now, do you recall that being published in your journal?

A Yes.

***

Q Is that statement true?

A Yes.

Q A few -- a sentence later, it says, like any other digital data, the date and time stamp is highly manipulative. Do you agree with that statement?

A Yes.

Q Now, when Mr. Padian changed the date, any file that was created at the time he was looking at the computer would be dated February 27th. Correct?

A That's correct.

Q Any file that was accessed when he was looking at the computer would have an access date of February 27th. Correct?

A Correct.

Q Any file that was deleted would have a deletion date of February 27th. Is that correct?

A That -- a file doesn't -- a file would never have a deletion date.

Q It was -- if it was created, it would have a February 27th date. Right?

A Right.

Q And a modification date of February 27th. Correct?

A Correct.

Q It's those three. Creation, access and modification. Right?

A Correct.

Q And you don't know any particular -- when any particular file was deleted, because there is no deletion date that's available. Correct?

A Well, there's also -- right. You would not find a deletion date or time.

Q Okay. Now, as a forensic computer consultant, would you ever advise a client to change the date on a computer before you'd had a chance to make a mirror image copy of the data on that computer?

A No. I would not.
(Tr. 11/15/99, at 128-132)

The ALJ also noted that by backdating the Macintosh, Padian contaminated the integrity of the evidence, making it impossible to determine with independent certainty whether a time-stamp on a file reading February 27, 1998 is a true or false date. (Initial Decision at 7, footnote 29)

Second, the Commissioner turns to the Board's process of investigating the computer evidence following J.M.'s accusations. On February 26, 1998, the day before respondent was confronted with J.M.'s accusations, Bill Moesch, the director of Special Services, was the first of four Board employees to inspect the computer prior to its being forwarded to Ontrack for data retrieval. Mr. Moesch turned on the computer, looked at some of the most recent files for sexual content and found nothing that gave him any concern, so he turned the computer off. (Tr. 10/4/99, at 188, 189) On March 2, 1998, Bruce Padian, principal of Madison High School, examined the Macintosh. He plugged it in and booted it up, but did not connect the modem. Padian then changed the computer's clock from March 2, 1998 to February 27, 1998, the last date that respondent had access to the computer, then he searched the files on the hard drive. Finding no sexually explicit content, he reset the clock back to March 2 and shut the computer down. (Tr. 10/4/99, at 205-208)

On March 3, 1998, School Business Administrator Michael Hayser took custody of the Macintosh and transported it to his office. (Tr. 10/5/99, at 36) On March 5, 1998, Michael Ricciardi, booted up the Macintosh and examined the files. Finding no sexually explicit content in the files, Mr. Ricciardi further contaminated the evidence when he connected the modem and accessed the Internet and proceeded to conduct a search on the Donner Party to investigate respondent's explanation that he had inadvertently accessed a pornography site when he had searched for the Donner Party as part of his research for a school project. Mr. Ricciardi testified that some of the listings he retrieved in the search were of a sexual nature. (Tr. 10/5/99, at 86, 101-104)

On March 23, 1998, Robert Hinchcliffe, a senior technical analyst with Fleet Securities, booted up the computer, but did not connect the modem. Mr. Hinchcliffe found the "MagicCookie" file, which was time-stamped with a creation date of February 27, 1998 at 1:57 p.m. and contained six domain names that were pornographic in nature. He then printed out the MagicCookie file. (Initial Decision at 8)

On March 25, 1998, the computer was sent to Ontrack Data Recovery for retrieval of the hard drive data. As noted by the ALJ in a footnote:

> According to an Ontrack technical report prepared by Ms. McNary, dated October 4, 1999, the Macintosh was not booted in order to retrieve the hard drive data, as booting can "change the evidence, including the file count." [R-24, in evidence] Ms. McNary testified that when a computer is booted, certain files and corresponding dates may be altered, although this alteration is usually limited to operating system files. The last date Grundfest had access to the Macintosh was February 27, 1998. It was booted at least three times before Ontrack recovered the deleted files. (emphasis added) (Initial Decision at 8, footnote 37)

Thus, the Commissioner finds that the contamination of the computer data evidence caused by the Board's mishandling of the Macintosh computer in question is inexcusable and fatal to its case. It is undisputed that the computer in this matter was in an unlocked room for most of the day and evening where it was available for use by a significant number of people. It is also uncontested that the computer was neither password protected nor log-in protected. Although there is some evidence that pornographic sites were accessed on the Macintosh computer in question, the Board has failed to provide the information necessary to conclude with any degree of certainty from the computer data evidence whether the amount of pornography is consistent with any computer that has accessed the Internet, whether someone intentionally accessed pornographic sites, or whether any access was inadvertent. [10] Further, because Board employees contaminated the computer evidence, it is also not possible to determine who accessed the pornographic sites or on what dates(s) the access occurred. Such contamination also precludes a determination on whether files were deleted by respondent on February 27, 1998 as charged, or whether they were deleted inadvertently by Mr. Padian when he backdated the computer on March 2 in the process of his investigation, or by an unknown person at some other time.

For the reasons set forth above, the Commissioner determines that the Board has failed to meet its burden of proof substantiating the charges of misconduct by respondent by a preponderence of credible evidence.

Accordingly, the Commissioner dismisses the tenure charges against respondent and directs his reinstatement with back pay for the period of his suspension at the level of pay that he would have received had the charges not been brought against him.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[11]

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF ROBERT I. GRUNDFEST,	:	STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH	:	DECISION
OF MADISON, MORRIS COUNTY.	:

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, June 20, 2000

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Rand, Algeier, Tosti & Woodruff (David B. Rand, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Herbert, Van Ness, Cayci & Goodell (Steven P. Goodell, Esq., of Counsel)

After an exhaustive review of the record in this matter, including the transcripts of the hearing held in the Office of Administrative Law, we affirm the decision of the Commissioner of Education to dismiss the tenure charges certified against the respondent for the reasons expressed therein. Even giving "due weight to the ALJ's unique position and ability to make demeanor based judgments," Whasun Lee v. Board of Education of the Township of Holmdel, Docket #A-5978-98T2 (App. Div. 2000), slip op. at 14, we conclude that the Madison Board failed to demonstrate the truthfulness of the charges–which alleged that the respondent had accessed pornographic web sites on his classroom computer during school hours–by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

Nov. 1, 2000

The Board in this case presented only one witness who claimed to have seen the respondent viewing pornographic material on the computer: J.M., an 11-year-old fifth-grade student in the district at the time of the alleged incidents. J.M.'s testimony is particularly critical to this case since we agree with the Commissioner that the Board is unable to establish from the computer evidence when pornographic web sites might have been accessed, which sites if any were actually accessed, and by whom. We stress in that regard that the computer was not password-protected, did not have a log-in procedure and, indeed, was used by a number of other teachers. Indeed, the classroom was not locked until after it was cleaned at night by the custodial staff. Moreover, as found by the Commissioner, the subsequent attempt by other individuals to review the computer's files, including backdating the computer clock, seriously compromised the integrity of the evidence.

Although the ALJ did not make a specific finding that J.M. was credible or otherwise comment on his demeanor, he did credit J.M.'s testimony enough to find that the respondent's actions "were observed at least once by J.M." Initial Decision, slip op. at 20. In so doing, however, the ALJ also acknowledged that J.M.'s testimony was "somewhat inconsistent." Id. at 3.

As pointed out by the Commissioner, corroboration of student testimony is not necessarily required, but it has long been established that student testimony must be examined with great caution. E.g., In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Barry Deetz, decided by the State Board of Education, November 7, 1984, aff'd, Docket #A-1264-84T5 (App. Div. 1985), cert. denied, 101 N.J. 321 (1986). Moreover, we are cognizant of our obligation to "recognize and give due weight to the ALJ's unique position and ability to make demeanor based judgments." Whasun Lee, supra, slip op. at 14. See Quinlan v. Board of Education of North Bergen Township, 73 N.J. Super. 42, 50-54 (App. Div. 1962). However, we are equally aware that we are not bound by the ALJ's assessments of the substance of the testimony of his evaluation of the factors which bear upon credibility. Deetz, supra. "The law does not require that the State Board automatically accept any ALJ's credibility determination, even if the ALJ's determination is based on sufficient evidence." Whasun Lee, supra, slip op. at 13-14.

In this instance, J.M. testified that he saw the respondent viewing "like porno stuff; naked people," on the computer. Tr. 10/12/99, at 70. J.M. indicated that the respondent was sitting in front of the computer viewing the images and that he could see nearly the entire screen from his seat, which was on an angle towards the computer. Id. at 72-74. He further testified that the other teachers who shared the classroom with the respondent would be going in and out of the room while he was there. Id. at 71. J.M., who was being tutored by the respondent three days a week, stated that he saw the respondent viewing these images "every time I would go to the classroom." Id. at 74.

Three other teachers were assigned to the room with the respondent. Each had a separate work station separated from the others by low partitions. As more fully detailed in the Commissioner's decision, the other teachers testified that teachers, students and staff were constantly going in and out of the room and that they had never observed the respondent viewing anything inappropriate on the computer. Nancy Croessmann, one of the teachers who shared the room with the respondent, testified that she could easily see the respondent's computer from her work station, that she was with students in the room while J.M. was with the respondent, that she also used the computer, and that she had never seen the respondent use the computer for any inappropriate purposes. Tr. 10/5/99, at 150-158.

We agree with the Commissioner's well-reasoned analysis rejecting the ALJ's reliance on J.M.'s testimony. See Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 30-33. In light of J.M.'s tender age; the inconsistencies in his testimony; J.M.'s acknowledgement that he had lied on occasion to the respondent about having done his homework and about incidents that had occurred on the playground; the fact that J.M. had apparently threatened the respondent prior to the alleged computer incidents that he could get him fired; and the lack of witnesses who could provide any corroboration for J.M.'s allegations–despite his acknowledgement that other teachers were in the classroom while he was there–we conclude that the testimony of J.M. cannot be credited so as to substantiate the charges.

Given the problems inherent in a case of this nature, prudence dictates that district boards establish procedures that would protect the integrity of evidence when an accusation alleging improper use of a school computer is made. Such procedures should be designed with due consideration for the problems that can arise when the individual against whom such allegations have been made is permitted to have continued access to the computer, including the opportunity to delete damaging evidence, and when district staff with no technological expertise access the computer in an attempt to verify such allegations. Such measures would not only protect an individual against whom false allegations have been made, but would also preserve evidence of improper computer use.

Therefore, for the reasons expressed by the Commissioner as expounded herein, we agree that the Board failed to demonstrate the charges against the respondent by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

Roberta Van Anda abstained.

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF MILLVILLE, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,

Respondent.

G.L., on behalf of petitioner D.L., pro se

Russell Paul, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: June 19, 2000 Decided: June 19, 2000

BEFORE JOSEPH LAVERY, ALJ:

THE MOTION

Petitioner, G.L., on behalf of her daughter, D.L., moves for emergent relief. She asks that D.L. be permitted to march in procession with her class at graduation, to be held tomorrow, Tuesday, June 20, 2000.

Respondent, Millville Board of Education contests the motion, and grounds its refusal on a policy prohibiting participation in graduation ceremonies by any student not certified as having completed the requirements for graduation: successful completion of 110 credits worth of course work.

Today's Order affirms the refusal of the Board of Education to permit D.L. to take part in graduation ceremonies.

ANALYSIS OF THE RECORD

Background:

D.L. is a 19-year old student at Millville High School. She is also classified as having a specific learning disability. She has been on home instruction since May. Prior to that, she was schooled with other students in a resource room setting.

It was D.L.'s intent, as well as that of her mother, G.L., that she graduate this year. However, the respondent Millville Board of Education (the Board) declared that D.L. had not completed the required 110 credits for graduation, and for that reason she could not be permitted to graduate. The Board maintained that this was consistent with a policy in existence for over 30 years. Her remedy, in the Board's view, is to successfully complete the remaining course work during summer school, and then to receive the requisite certification.

Petitioner does not object to the requirement of further course work, but does appeal from the bar to participation in the imminent graduation ceremonies.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

Petitioner's Argument:

D.L. notes that in her courses in Science, History, Physical Education and Health, as well as in Culinary Arts and Sewing, she was not administered final examinations by the home instructors assigned to her since last May. Petitioner concedes that she did take the English examination.

Recalling that, during the previous summer school, she had been removed from Physical Education and Health because of an altercation; D.L. complained that another girl, also removed, was allowed to return to the class, while she was not. This removal was appealed to the Board's Affirmative Action Officer, but D.L.'s appeal was ultimately denied as being without foundation.

Addressing her courses, D.L. maintains that she was given too short notice to take three examinations in one day, as scheduled by the school. Additionally, one of the teachers who was her home instructor arrived at 2:30 p.m., well before her mother's return from work at approximately 4 p.m. D.L. recalled that she called the school twice: that day and the next in an attempt to reach the teacher, but the calls were not returned.

D.L.'s mother, G.L., contends that insufficient attention was paid to the disability under which D.L. labors, and consequently this has placed D.L. in the present dilemma.

Argument of the Board:

The Board argues that, as noted above, the policy of prohibiting marching in the ceremonies without a certification to graduate has been a matter of long-standing. However, it points out that, in this case, the Board otherwise has gone out of its way to accommodate D.L. It observes that last summer, when petitioner had been ejected from the Physical Education and Health Class, and after she had dropped from the Science class of her own volition without returning, losing (10) credits, the Board sought to assist. It advised both G.L. and D.L. that if her performance improved during the school year 1999-2000, these two courses would be waived and sufficient credits would be recorded to permit graduation.

Nevertheless, the Board stresses, petitioner failed her English examination and accumulated failing grades in the other courses cited by D.L.: Science, History, Physical Education and Health. Her grades in those courses would have assured failure even if she had received a grade of "A" in each and every associated final examination. Additionally, the Board avers it is prepared to show that on all the disputed occasions when the school representatives came to administer the final examinations, no one was home.

The Board insists that the present dispute, based on its facts, is outside the jurisdiction of special education law, and only the Commissioner may make the final administrative decision on this motion. In its view, D.L.'s classified status is irrelevant as a matter of law, because of factual underpinning to which only education law may be applied.

CONCLUSION OF LAW

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not carried the burden of showing that the Board has acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unreasonably, which is the standard for relief before the Commissioner of Education, Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). On appeal, the administrative law judge and the Commissioner may not substitute their own assessments of what Board response should have occurred, unless the Board's decision is rendered invalid by falling under the foregoing prohibiting standard.

The rule governing emergent relief applications before the Commissioner of Education is:

> (b) Where a motion for a stay or emergent relief is filed, it shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. De Gioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interest of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm that the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 [See also, Crowe v. De Gioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982).

Here, both D.L. and G.L. acknowledge that D.L., from last summer alone, falls short 10 credits from the minimum 110 needed to graduate. Further, D.L. concedes that she lacks 5 more credits for English, a subject on which she was examined finally, yet failed the course. Moreover, the Board credibly relates that final exams in D.L.'s remaining courses (for which she was not tested finally) would have left her without overall passing grades, even if she had received A's in the tests (Exhibit R-1). Consequently, accepting arguendo petitioner's version of the reasons some final examinations were not administered, the impact of those reasons on this appeal would be mooted by the still-lacking 15 credits.

As to D.L.'s educational disability, G.L. brought this appeal through the Commissioner of Education on the facts related at hearing. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3. Nothing of record indicates that the IEP [Exh. P-1] was challenged under the law or rules governing special education cases. Neither do the facts, when considered against the existing IEP (Exhibit P-1), show a credible connection, established by preponderating evidence, between the complaint and shortcomings in the application of that IEP, which would warrant a special education appeal.

All that is at issue here is (a) whether D.L. has earned the appropriate number of credits to be certified for graduation, and (b) whether the policy barring her (and other similarly situated students) for not doing so is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. On the face of this record, D.L. has not, and the policy is not. For these reasons, the refusal of the Board of Education to allow D.L. to take part in the graduation ceremonies tomorrow must be affirmed.

ORDER

I, ORDER, therefore, based on the above rationale, that the appeal by G.L. on behalf of D.L., be DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF LIVINGSTON, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON REMAND
H.L. AND D.L.,
RESPONDENTS.	:

Petitioning Board sought calculation of pre-judgment interest in matter wherein petitioner was entitled to tuition in the amount of $5,614.03 for the attendance of H.L. and D.L.'s two children in the Livingston schools when respondents were not domiciled in the District (October 1, 1990 until January 22, 1991). The Board calculated the pre-judgment interest for the period from January 22, 1991 through the date of the Commissioner's decision, May 26, 1998, to be $2,310.36 by the method set forth in the Rules Governing the Courts, *R.*4:42-11, because it was unable to obtain any discovery from respondents as to their financial affairs. Respondents claimed loss of all financial records in the move to Livingston. In his opinion of May 28, 1999, the Commissioner determined that the record was insufficient to determine the interest by the method specified in N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)1, as directed by the State Board, and remanded the matter to OAL for the sole purpose of computing the pre-judgment interest in accord with the applicable regulation.

The ALJ concluded that one last attempt should be made to comply witb the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)1, that is, to calculate pre-judgment interest based upon "the average rate of interest earned on investments by" respondents from January 22, 1991 through May 26, 1998. The ALJ ordered respondents to produce all records and documents relating to their investments for the years 1991 through 1998 for the Board by April 15, 2000. Upon receipt of the information, the Board would review the records to ascertain the average rate of interest and submit the calculations. If respondents fail to disclose the information or provide inadequate information by the specified date the ALJ ordered that, upon submission of an affidavit stating that respondents failed to provide the required discovery, the Board would receive an order granting summary decision for pre-judgment interest in the amount of $2,310.46 as calculated in accord with N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.15 and N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)2.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own. Commissioner directed respondents to remit the amount of $2,310.36 to the Board.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 26, 1998, following an Initial Decision by the undersigned at the Office of Administrative Law, the Commissioner of Education issued a final decision, affirming that the respondents were not domiciled in Livingston from October 1, 1990 until January 22, 1991, and, consequently, petitioner was entitled to tuition in the amount of $5614.03 for the attendance of H.L. and D.L.'s two children in the Livingston schools during that period. The amount of tuition due was based upon the calculation by the Board for the period in question and this amount was accepted and affirmed by the Commissioner. In addition, the Commissioner granted the Board's request for prejudgment interest.

On June 26, 1998, the respondents filed an appeal from the Commissioner's decision with the State Board of Education. On February 3, 1999, the State Board issued its decision affirming the award of prejudgment interest and tuition, as calculated by the Board and affirmed by the Commissioner, but remanding the matter for the recalculation of the prejudgment interest in accord with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)1. The State Board ordered interest from January 22, 1991 through the date of the Commissioner's Decision, May 26,1998.

The Board calculated the prejudgment interest to be $2310.36 by the method set forth in the New Jersey Court Rules, *R.*4:42-11, because it was unable to obtain any discovery from the respondents as to their financial affairs. In his opinion of May 28, 1999, the Commissioner determined that the record was insufficient to calculate the interest by the method specified in N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)1, as directed by the State Board, and remanded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on July 17, 1999, for the sole purpose of computing the prejudgment interest in accord with the applicable regulation. That is the only issue to be determined by the undersigned in this hearing.

On March 29, 2000, the Appellate Division of the Superior Court affirmed the award, including the amount, of the tuition due and the prejudgment interest. (A-3897-98T1) (unreported). The decision of the Appellate Division did not render moot the issue which is the subject of this appeal: the calculation of the prejudgment interest.

THE APPLICABLE REGULATION

N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)1, which governed the awarding of interest in an education case, provided, in relevant part:

> (a) The Commissioner pursuant to the criteria herein may award both prejudgment and/or post-judgment interest in any circumstance in which a petitioner has sought such relief and has successfully established a claim to a monetary award.
>
> (b) "Interest" is defined as follows:
>
> 1. Prejudgment interest is interest awarded for that period of time prior to the adjudication of the monetary claim.
>
> .....
>
> (c) The following criteria shall be applied when awarding interest:
>
> 1 Prejudgment interest shall be awarded by the Commissioner where he or she has concluded that the denial of the monetary claim was an action taken in bad faith and/or has been determined to have been taken in deliberate violation of statute or rule.
>
> .....
>
> (d). Rate of interest shall be awarded as follows:
> 1. Prejudgment interest shall be awarded based upon the average rate of interest earned on investments by the party responsible for such payment during the period of time in which the monies awarded were illegally detained.
> 2. Post-judgment interest shall be awarded based upon the prevailing rate of interest established by court rules at the time that the right to the monetary claim was determined. (See New Jersey Court Rules, R.4:42-11(a).)

N.J.A.C. 6, Chapter 24, was readopted and recodified as N.J.A.C. 6A, Chapter 3, effective April 3, 2000. Specifically, the applicable regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16, was recodified and amended, effective April 3, 2000, as N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d). As a result, prejudgment interest is now to be computed in accord with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d):

> (d) The rate of interest for the awarding of prejudgment and postjudgment interest shall equal the average rate of return, to the nearest one-half percent, for the corresponding preceding fiscal year terminating on June 30, of the State of New Jersey Cash Management Fund (State accounts) as reported by the Division of Investment in the Department of the Treasury.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d)]

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Previously, the Board was unable to compute prejudgment interest according to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)1 because of the respondents failure and refusal to provide the necessary information during discovery. Pre-hearing discovery requests for the necessary financial information were denied by respondents as irrelevant. Other Board demands for financial information in pre-hearing discovery and/or hearing testimony during the prior appeal in this matter were met with the response that relevant documents were lost or mislaid and respondents had no recollection of the information sought. As a result, there was no way to apply the governing regulation as written to calculate the prejudgment interest owed by D.L. and H.L. Consequently, the Board moved before the undersigned for summary decision to apply the method of *R.*4:42-11 which did not require any cooperation from respondents.

In the resulting Order on Motion by the undersigned, dated January 8, 2000, the Board's motion was granted to the extent that the respondents were given until April 17, 2000 to provide the necessary discovery. If it were not provided, the Board, upon application to the undersigned, would be granted summary decision with the prejudgment interest to be calculated in the most reasonable manner possible under the circumstances as described in the Order. As of April 30, 2000, the required information had not been provided to the Board and, therefore, I CONCLUDE that it is entitled to prejudgment interest in an amount as computed by the method below.

Initially, in the event that respondents failed to cooperate, it was determined that N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.15, which permits the regulations to be relaxed, should be applied. By relaxing the regulation, the Board could then utilize a method of computing the interest which did not require the cooperation of respondents.

However, since the Order on Motion was issued in January 2000, the applicable regulation was recodified and amended, effective April 3, 2000, as set forth in full above. Consequently, I CONCLUDE that there is now no longer a need to relax the regulations and the new regulation, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d), may be applied as written.

In any event, the use of this regulation to calculate prejudgment interest leads to exactly the same result as the application of the old N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16(d)2, as proposed in the Order on Motion, would have reached. This last regulation utilized the method of R. 4:42-11(a)(ii) of the New Jersey Court Rules applicable to post judgment interest awards, which is precisely the same method used to calculate prejudgment interest awards in R. 4:42-11(b) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d).

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the calculation of prejudgment interest should be performed according to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d). Since its language, in relevant part, is identical to that of R. 4:42-11(a)(ii), the applicable annual rates set forth in the Publisher's Note for R. 4:42-11(a)(ii) will be utilized here.

The Publisher's Note contains the following interest rates for the relevant years in this case:

Year	Interest Rate
1991	8.5%
1992	7.5%
1993	5.5%
1994	3.5%
1995	3.5%
1996	5.5%
1997	5.5%
1998	5.5%

Applying these interest rates on an annual basis to the tuition award of $5,614.03 results in a sum of $2,310.36 in simple interest. I CONCLUDE that this is the correct amount of prejudgment interest to be awarded to the Board in this matter.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that respondents pay prejudgment interest to the Board in the amount of $2,310.36 as calculated above in accord N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.17(d).

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF JUAN COTTO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX	:
COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

District certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct, corporal punishment and insubordination against respondent teacher for alleged incidents from the 1996-97 school year -- using excessive force to discipline students, uttering profanity and making derogatory and demeaning statements to students.

In light of the testimony of the witnesses and the evidence in the record, the ALJ concluded that the District sustained its tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent. The ALJ determined that even though respondent knew that corporal punishment is illegal and had received ample notice to refrain from excessive use of physical force in disciplining students, he used excessive physical force on five separate occasions within a four-month period. Moreover, the ALJ found that not only did respondent control his students by physical intimidation, he also verbally abused them and that respondent had been accused of similar misconduct in 1991. The ALJ concluded the appropriate penalty was dismissal. (In re Ostergren, In re Cowan) The ALJ ordered respondent dismissed from his tenured position.

The Commissioner adopted findings and determination in the Initial Decision as his own. Respondent was ordered dismissed from his tenured teaching position as of the date of this decision. The Commissioner forwarded the matter to the State Board of Examiners for action, as it deems appropriate.

Statement of the Case

This is a teacher tenure proceeding under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -18. Tenured teaching staff members hold employment in the public school system "during good behavior and efficiency." Petitioner State-Operated School District of the City of Newark ("District") has brought several charges of "corporal punishment," "unbecoming conduct" and "subordination" against respondent Juan Cotto ("Cotto") arising out of a series of incidents occurring in February 1997 and at other times during the 1996-97 academic year.[1] Specifically, the District accuses Cotto of using excessive force to discipline students, of uttering profanity and racial epithets in his classroom, and of referring to students in derogatory and demeaning language. Additionally, the charges refer to the previous use of force and inappropriate disciplinary methods during the 1991-92 academic year. These earlier charges are best viewed in the context of prior warning to Cotto that his conduct was unacceptable and should not be repeated. Basically, the outcome of this dispute depends on an assessment of the witnesses' credibility. If any of the tenure charges is sustained, the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") must determine whether dismissal or some lesser penalty is warranted.

[1] N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 authorizes the bringing of tenure charges against a teacher "for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause." While the District refined the charges into three separate categories, all of the incidents fall under the general heading of "unbecoming conduct."

Procedural History

On April 29, 1997, Cotto's building principal filed tenure charges, together with a sworn statement of supporting evidence, with the district superintendent. Cotto filed a timely response. Upon review of these papers, the district superintendent determined that there exists probable cause to credit the supporting evidence and that the charges, if true, warrant some type of disciplinary action.[2] Accordingly, on June 16, 1997, the district superintendent certified the tenure charges to the Commissioner. Thereafter, on July 18, 1997, Cotto filed an answer in which he denied all the charges.

Subsequently, on July 29, 1997, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case. The OAL held twelve days of hearing ending on September 23, 1998.[3] Both parties submitted post-hearing briefs by January 19, 1999. Witnesses and exhibits are listed in the appendix.

[2]On July 5, 1996, the Commissioner of Education entered an order removing the Newark Board of Education, creating a state-operated school district, and authorizing the Commissioner to appoint a state district superintendent to direct all operations of the new district. Contini v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 196, 228, aff'd 286 N.J. Super. 106 (App. Div. 1995). Ordinarily, it is the local school board that would determine the existence of probable cause and certify tenure charges to the Commissioner. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. But the enabling legislation authorizing creation of a State-Operated School District confers board powers on the State District Superintendent "to perform all acts and do all things consistent with the law necessary for the proper conduct, maintenance and supervision of the schools in the district." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-35(e). See also N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-38(b).

Findings of Fact

Many of the background facts are undisputed. Juan Cotto has been a teacher in the Newark public school system for twenty years. He received most of his schooling in the Newark public school system, except for two years spent at St. Benedict's Preparatory High School. After high school, he was awarded a scholarship to Seton Hall University, where he earned a bachelor's degree in Spanish language. Cotto holds an administrator certificate endorsed as principal/supervisor and an instructional certificate endorsed as teacher of elementary and bilingual education.

Throughout most of his teaching career, he served as either a bilingual or English as a Second Language ("ESL") teacher at different elementary schools in the district. He started working for the Newark school district as a team teacher of bilingual education in December 1976. For the next three years (1977-78,1978-79 and 1979-80), he served as an ESL teacher at Wilson Avenue School. In 1980-81, he took a leave of absence and returned to Seton Hall University to obtain a master's degree in education. Upon his return to the Newark school system, he taught one year (1981-82) as a bilingual teacher at McKinley School and one year (1982-83) as an ESL teacher at the Norton School. For a twelve-year period (1983-84 to 1995-96), Cotto was a bilingual classroom teacher at the Elliott Street School, teaching mainly at the third and fourth grade level.

Shortly after the State took over operation of the Newark school district, the new administration sought candidates for promotion to a vice-principal position. Cotto was an attractive applicant for the job, because of his fluency in Spanish and his roots in the [3]At the conclusion of the District's proofs, the OAL granted respondent's motion to dismiss for lack of evidence charges alleging that Cotto had told a female student identified as J.T. that she was "hooking with her boyfriend," and that he had also called her "a bitch." Similarly, the OAL dismissed as beyond the scope of the charges allegations that in October 1991 Cotto hit a student identified as T.V. in the head.

Newark community. Assistant Superintendent Lydia Silva interviewed Cotto for the job and reviewed his resume and certifications. She did not have access to his personnel file, however, because the district records had been sealed. Before selecting Cotto for the job, she spoke to his building principal, Jorge Almeda, who gave him "a warm recommendation." Starting in September 1996, Cotto became the acting vice principal of the Franklin School, which has a high proportion of Spanish-speaking students.[4]

Within a short time, Silva began receiving complaints about Cotto's performance as an administrator. She recalls getting reports from Benigno Santiago, principal of the Franklin School, that Cotto was antagonizing parents and staff, that he was acting unprofessionally and that his management style was confrontational. As a result, she made a decision to transfer Cotto back to a teaching position. Unfortunately, Santiago, who has since retired and moved away, was unavailable to corroborate Silva's testimony. Although respondent called two officials of the Newark Teachers' Union who indicated that Santiago had never expressed any dissatisfaction with Cotto's performance, a school administrator would not necessarily broadcast his unhappiness with another administrator to teachers' union representatives.[5]

Silva testified unequivocally that she was unaware of an earlier investigation of Cotto by state child-welfare authorities and that such investigation did not enter into her thinking. Joseph Del Grosso, president of the teachers' union, gave hearsay evidence that the reason for Cotto's demotion was to avoid embarrassing Silva, who had recommended promotion of someone under investigation for child abuse.[6] The present matter, however, does not involve the validity of Cotto's transfer, which was the subject of a separate grievance proceeding concerning salary.

[4]For a few days in late August 1996, Cotto temporarily served as acting vice principal at the Raphael Hernandez School, before being switched to Franklin School by the start of the new school year.

[5] Since Cotto was an administrator at the time, he was not represented by the teachers' bargaining unit.

[6] Ultimately, state authorities concluded that the prior charge against Cotto was unsubstantiated.

Several times during the hearing, Cotto sought to deflect attention from the underlying tenure charges by accusing others of conducting a personal vendetta against him. His attacks were directed not against Lydia Silva alone, but also against Delores Brandao, a vice principal who was his last supervisor, and Carmen Ruiz, the person who replaced him as vice principal. These collateral issues have little to do with the truth of the tenure charges, which must stand or fall on the credibility of witnesses to the alleged incidents.

Cotto remained as vice principal at Franklin School for only two weeks before receiving notification of his transfer to a teaching position. He learned in the third or fourth week of September 1996 that he was transferred to teach a regular sixth-grade class at Abington School. Silva explained that the assignment was based on the needs of the District and that Cotto was properly certified to teach the class. Nonetheless, it was the first time in his career that he had not been put in charge of a bilingual or ESL class.

When Cotto took over, the class had been in session for nearly a month and had already had two teachers. Initially, there were twenty-eight students in the class, ranging in age from ten to fifteen, all crowded into a small room. Despite his teaching experience, Cotto acknowledges that he had difficulty maintaining discipline in his class. Problems developed in December 1996, when three female students were added to his roster. Cotto attributes the breakdown in discipline to the arrival of these additional students, one of whom had been incarcerated in a juvenile facility and another of whom had been a disruptive force in another class. Interestingly, however, the charges of excessive use of force by Cotto do not involve these particular children.

Excessive Use of Force

Each separate instance of unbecoming conduct will be discussed under an appropriate heading:

(1) Pushing a Student Against a Wall on November 2, 1996

Count 1(e)(i) of the tenure charges alleges that Cotto "grabbed pupil A.M. and threw him against a wall in class," causing him to "hit his head." A.M., who was thirteen-years old at the time of the incident, was a student in Cotto's sixth grade class at Abington School. Smiling mischievously, he admitted "getting smart with the teacher" and giving him "a lot of mouth." While Cotto was teaching a lesson on November 2, 1996, A.M. asked another student for some paper and Cotto evidently overheard him. Going to the back of the room where A.M. was sitting, Cotto announced, "You're pushing too many buttons." A.M. gave the impertinent response, "What button did I push to get you so [mad]."

What happened next is the subject of conflicting testimony. According to A.M., Cotto "grabbed" him by the shirt and "pushed" him back, so that his chair tilted on two legs. As he leaned backwards in his chair, A.M. claimed to have hit his head against a padded pole located in the rear of the room. Later, he noticed marks on his clothes at chest level, like a "burn" or "rubbing mark." Although not seriously injured, A.M. said he was scared that his teacher "was going to go crazy."

Next day, A.M.'s father sent a note to the school complaining that his son's teacher "plays too rough with him and plays too much." In the handwritten note, the father elaborated that his son "told me that [Cotto] grabbed him pretty hard, and he did mark him cause I saw it." Efforts to discredit A.M. by virtue of the fact that Cotto had accused him of cheating on a test and threatened to retain him in sixth grade were unsuccessful, since those events only occurred after the shoving incident. Vice Principal Delores Brandao immediately investigated the matter and spoke separately with both participants. While she did not see any mark on his body so long after the alleged physical contact, A.M. repeated his story that Cotto "had a tendency to joke around with him" and had "grabbed him and . . . made this mark on him." Cotto did not deny touching A.M., but "dismissed it as an accident."

Classmates largely corroborate A.M.'s version of the event. J.E., then eleven-years old, remembered seeing Cotto "pushing A.M. towards the blackboard." She was a good student with no disciplinary record and no motive to fabricate her testimony. Similarly, L.B., a ten or eleven-year old male student, witnessed Cotto "grab" A.M. in his neck area and "shove" or "push" him in the back of the room by the closet. L.B. could tell Cotto was angry "because he starting acting in a weird way and he started yelling[.]" When A.M. blurted out that he wanted to transfer out of Cotto's class, L.B. heard Cotto reply, "I don't care. I don't want you in my classroom anyway." Although L.B. had problems of his own in Cotto's class, he appeared relatively unbiased. Indeed, L.B. testified that he liked Cotto because he "was funny" and "made me laugh."

At the hearing, Cotto maintained that he and A.M would occasionally "nudge" each other, but "[t]hat was the extent of our horseplay." Drawing a diagram of the layout, Cotto argued that A.M. could not possibly have hit his head as he claimed because a desk with books blocked off access to the radiator pipe located at the rear of the classroom. Contradicting Vice Principal Brandao's testimony, Cotto denied that she had ever confronted him with the father's note or asked for his side of the story.

I FIND that Cotto used unnecessary force to punish A.M. in retaliation for a wisecrack made by the child. Resort to physical force was totally inappropriate, since the situation did not pose a genuine threat to the safety of himself or others. Whether or not Cotto actually meant to cause harm, he had no business committing what amounts to an assault against one of his students. Surrounding circumstances strongly support a finding that Cotto lost his temper as a result of A.M.'s verbal taunt and lashed out by pushing or shoving him.

Several reliable student witnesses confirm that Cotto's push was the precipitating force that propelled A.M. backwards. Corroboration comes from the child's father, who observed a mark on A.M.'s body when he returned home from school and promptly brought the incident to the school's attention. Falling backwards in his chair, A.M. would not necessarily have been aware of what object came in contact with the back of his head, only that he felt an impact. It is inconsequential whether A.M. happened to hit his head on the wall, the pipe, the blackboard or a cabinet. The important point is that Cotto clearly pushed him with sufficient momentum to cause him to fall. Fortunately A.M. did not suffer any lasting injury.

(2) Pushing A Student Into a Chair in January or February 1997

Count 1(e)(ii) of the tenure charges alleges that Cotto "grabbed pupil L.B. by his coat, pushed him and forced him to sit down." L.B., the child who liked Cotto because he was funny, had skipped a grade and was younger than other children in the class. Cotto described him as "immature" and "very hyper[active]." L.B. confessed that he "talked a lot" and "messed with Mr. Cotto." He lived in Stephen Crane Village and regularly took a school bus for seven or eight blocks to his home. On the date in question, Cotto had kept the class after school as punishment for misbehavior. Testimony differs on the reason for this mass detention. As L.B. remembers the incident, Cotto had wrongfully accused him of stealing a poster and, when a search of L.B.'s belongings did not turn up the missing item, he made the whole class stay after school. Cotto, however, recalled that he detained about ten students, including L.B., because of their mistreatment of the school librarian and because L.B. had been "very abusive with his cursing."

Both witnesses agree that L.B. disobeyed his teacher by getting up from his chair and trying to leave the classroom. L.B. admits that he left his chair without permission and went over to the doorway "trying to turn the door knob". He agrees that Cotto kept telling him to sit down and that he kept getting up and trying to leave. According to L.B., Cotto "kept shoving me and shoving me," until one time when he "pushed me over the chair." With his hands, L.B. demonstrated Cotto pushing him in his chest area.

Although L.B. acknowledged that Cotto "wasn't using a lot of force," he surmised that the weight of a book bag strapped to his back caused him to fall over the chair. Apparently, L.B. was not wearing his coat, so that it was impossible for Cotto to have grabbed him "by his coat" as charged. As he fell back, L.B. hit his shoulder against the chair. Nevertheless, the incident was not regarded as serious enough to send him to the nurse or to notify his parents. On cross-examination, L.B. agreed that Cotto may not have purposely pushed him over the chair, but added that Cotto "shouldn't have pushed me." Soon after being released, L.B. ran crying to Vice Principal Brandao. She spoke to Cotto, who admitted that he was trying to "restrain" the child from leaving the classroom.

Numerous eyewitnesses substantiate L.B.'s complaint that Cotto pushed him and that he fell into a chair. M.L., an eleven or twelve-year old child who took the same school bus home, verified that Cotto "grabbed" L.B. as he was trying to leave the classroom and "pushed him down in his seat." D.M., a child of approximately the same age, saw Cotto "pushing" L.B. to prevent him from walking out of the class. J.C., who must have been ten or eleven, recalled that Cotto would not let L.B. catch his bus and "kept pushing him away from the door." J.G., also eleven or twelve, stated Cotto "just grabbed" L.B. and "set him in the seat." J.V., in the same age range, recalled seeing Cotto "pushing [L.B] away from the door," "grabb[ing] him by the arm," "kind of lift[ing] him up" and "put[ting] him in his seat." F.C., age eleven or twelve, confirmed that Cotto "grabbed" L.B. and "pushed him down into the seat." Notwithstanding minor differences in the details, they all agreed that Cotto pushed or grabbed L.B. to keep him in the room.

Cotto's version is largely consistent with the District's evidence, although he denies that he deliberately sought to hurt L.B. Cotto recounted that L.B. tried on several occasions to leave the room and that he stood in front of the doorway blocking the exit with his body. L.B. "would try to push me out of the way," and "I would resist." Each time, Cotto "escorted" him back to his chair and, on the fifth or sixth try, L.B. "tripped over the chair or one of the kids put their legs out." Cotto contends that it was an accident, and that he never intentionally pushed L.B. into the chair. When L.B. got up again in a last attempt to leave the classroom, Cotto finally summoned the security guard, who responded to the scene in "about three or four minutes."

I FIND that Cotto used a disproportionate amount of force to maintain discipline in his classroom. Unquestionably, L.B.'s failure to remain in his seat was an act of defiance to the authority of his teacher, and the District concedes that Cotto was justified in blocking the doorway to prevent him from leaving the room. Proofs establish, however, that Cotto's response went beyond mere passive resistance. Instead, he repeatedly pushed or shoved the youngster to encourage him to return to his seat. Cotto overreacted to the situation and utilized more force than necessary under the circumstances. Certainly it should have been foreseeable that exerting pressure against a young boy wearing a backpack might cause the child to fall and hurt himself. In addition, Cotto failed to explain adequately why he chose to engage in a physical confrontation with one of his students. He could easily have called the security guard for assistance, as he eventually had to do anyway.

(3) Pushing a Student Against a Blackboard in February 1997

Count 1(e)(iii) of the tenure charges alleges that Cotto "grabbed pupil M.L. by the neck and pushed him against the blackboard causing him to hit his head." M.L. transferred to Abington School after having been expelled from Good Counsel School for fighting in front of the principal. While in Cotto's class, he was suspended for passing notes, talking back to the teacher and fighting with other students. Reportedly he also had disciplinary problems with other teachers.

Insofar as the record reveals, the blackboard incident occurred shortly before February 10, 1997. On that occasion, M.L. was unable to solve a math problem at the board and asked his teacher for help. According to M.L., Cotto came up behind him, pushed him into the board and grumbled, "Do the damn problem." M.L. testified that Cotto "grabbed" the back of his neck with one hand, held his arm with the other hand, and "just pushed me into the board[.]" On further questioning, M.L. acknowledged that Cotto had instructed him to stay at the board, but that he was about to return to his seat. Only M.L.'s hand came in contact with the board, not his head as alleged in the charges.

Cotto flatly maintained that the blackboard incident never occurred and denied ever touching M.L. He suggested that M.L. might have a motive to lie because Cotto had talked to his mother about not promoting him and had given him a bad grade in penmanship. However, it appears that M.L. was promoted to seventh grade at the end of the year and has been generally receiving good grades.

Immediately after the incident, M.L. went see Vice Principal Brandao. She personally observed scratch marks on the back of M.L.'s neck. The next morning, M.L.'s parents came to the school to discuss what had happened. Cotto says that he met with M.L.'s mother on February 10, 1997, but that she never said anything about the blackboard incident. Around the same time, Principal William Afflitto and Vice Principal Brandao asked M.L. to write a note about Cotto's treatment of students in his class. On February 10, 1997, M.L. prepared such a note regarding Cotto's inappropriate use of language, without mentioning the blackboard incident.

I FIND that in February 1997 Cotto grabbed M.L. by the back of his neck and arm and pushed him into the blackboard. M.L. was having difficulty doing a math problem and had asked Cotto for assistance. Instead, Cotto employed physical force to prevent M.L. from returning to his seat and, incidentally, to punish him for not knowing the right answer. Again, this application of power was totally out of proportion to the circumstances. The situation clearly called for instructional intervention, not for a gratuitous display of violence. Independent observation corroborates that Cotto utilized sufficient force to leave scratch marks on M.L.'s neck. With respect to credibility, M.L. honestly recognized his own shortcomings and did not exaggerate the extent of his injuries. In contrast, Cotto failed to offer any explanation of how M.L. acquired scratch marks in his class.

(4) Grabbing a student by the neck on February 11, 1997 and pushing him in a chair on February 20, 1997

Count 1(e)(iv) of the tenure charges alleges that Cotto "grabbed pupil L.R. by the neck, placing a choke hold on him, causing loss of breath" and "also pushed pupil L.R." It turns out that these are actually two separate incidents, one of which occurred on February 11, 1997 and the other on February 20, 1997. At the completion of the petitioner's case, the District conceded that the proofs failed to support the allegation of using a choke hold and contended that the charge should be considered as another example of the use of excessive force.

L.R., age ten or eleven, was the product of an abusive home environment. His father confided to Cotto that the Division of Youth and Family Services ("DYFS"), the state agency responsible for investigating child abuse, had brought charges against the child's mother for physically and mentally abusing L.R. and for leaving him home alone. Consequently, the family court awarded custody to the father. Once the father gained custody, he enrolled L.R. in the Newark school system, where L.R. was put in Cotto's sixth-grade class at Abington School. Thus, Cotto had advance knowledge that L.R. was a particularly fragile and vulnerable child. The initial incident took place on February 11, 1997, L.R.'s first day of class in his new school.

Problems began almost immediately, when L.R. repeatedly asked permission to go to the bathroom and, on one visit, disappeared for approximately half an hour. When lunchtime arrived, Cotto lined up the class so that he could control their movement down several flights of stairs to the cafeteria. Due to the morning misadventure, Cotto stationed L.R. in the front of the line, where he could watch him. But L.R. refused to stay in place and kept returning to the back of the line to be with another child.

L.R. asserted that Cotto "put his forearm around my neck, walked me downstairs and let go." L.R. claimed that he was trying to get to the front of the line at the time that Cotto "grabbed me." They marched together down two flights of stairs before Cotto "let me go." Even if Cotto had his arms around his neck, L.R. still "could breathe [and] could talk." He indicated that Cotto "did not hurt me," and the encounter left no marks or bruises. L.R. did not promptly report the incident to his father or put it in writing because he felt that "no one would believe me."

Much of Cotto's testimony comports with L.R.'s recitation of events. Since L.R. persisted in ignoring his directions, Cotto had to retrieve him at least four times and transport him to his proper place at the head of the line. For the first four times, Cotto escorted L.R. "by putting my right hand on his shoulder blade and walking him to the beginning of the line." On the fifth or so occasion, Cotto put his hand "on L.R.'s back and over his shoulder once," but never touched "his throat or face or anything like that." Rather, Cotto approached L.R. from behind, reached his right hand over L.R.'s shoulder, and "patted him on the chest." Cotto acknowledged that he was "upset, but not angry" at L.R.'s uncooperative attitude. Denying that the incident amounted to "physical intervention," Cotto admitted putting his arm "lightly" on L.R.'s "chest area." He did not call for security because "[t]eachers have to handle things on their own."

One week later, on February 20, 1997, Cotto and L.R. were involved in a second incident. L.R. had written a note and was passing it to M.L, when Cotto intercepted the message, rolled it into a ball and threw it on the floor near the garbage can. Cotto moved L.R.'s seat next to his own desk in the front of the room. Meanwhile, L.R. tried to recover his crumpled note from the floor. L.R. testified that Cotto then "grabbed me by the shirt" and "pushed me into the chair." A letter from L.R.'s father, who knows only what his son told him, alleges that, as L.R. was walking to his desk, Cotto "came and pull[ed] him and shook him and threw him in his chair." During the hearing, L.R. clarified that he was not really shaken and that a more accurate description would be that Cotto "tossed" him into his chair. For his part, Cotto never really addressed the second incident, except to say that he had no recollection of ever pushing L.R. in a chair. He added, however, that often he had "to walk behind L.R. until he got to his chair" and "make a motion of escorting him to his chair."

I FIND that on February 11, 1997 Cotto inappropriately used physical force when L.R. failed to follow his instruction on where to stand in line. Cotto's own testimony suggests that he placed his arm around L.R's shoulder and put him in some sort of a wrestling hold. Certainly Cotto had no good reason to retain his grip on the child's midsection or neck as he paraded him down two flights of stairs. Cotto's behavior was particularly egregious in view of the fact that L.R. had been the victim of abuse at home and this was the child's first day at a new school.

Cotto committed a second violation on February 20, 1997, when he pushed L.R. into a chair after he caught L.R. passing a note to another student. Once more, Cotto lost control of his temper at the slightest provocation and overreacted by manhandling a child. Cotto's testimony that he has no specific recollection of this incident may indeed be true, since he did not appear to have any appreciation that what he was doing was wrong.

(5) Making Derogatory or Demeaning Statements to Students

Count 3 of the tenure charges alleges that during the 1996-97 academic year Cotto "referred to pupils in a demeaning, disrespectful manner by . . . using profanity, racial epithets and other derogatory language." These comments were directed at several different individuals and heard by many children in the classroom.

For instance, T.F. testified that Cotto said that "welfare kids" or "project kids" are ""stupid" and "because we're on welfare we're never going to get nowhere." She believed Cotto was referring not to her alone, but to the whole class, because he generalized that "black people . . . are too lazy to get a job." L.B. overheard Cotto ridiculing T.F. because "she was on welfare" and "lived in Section 8 houses, stuff like that."[7] He sympathized with her because "[his] mother used to be on welfare when she couldn't support me." When Cotto asked him if he lived in Section 8 housing, L.B. said he did not, he just lived in a "little village."

Unaware of the situation, T.F.'s grandmother went to see Cotto on February 4, 1997. During a conference with a vice principal, T.F. divulged that Cotto "belittl[ed] the children in his classroom" by telling them they "would never amount to anything because they are on welfare." Complaining of the damage to her granddaughter's self-esteem, the grandmother called for an investigation into what was going on in the classroom. When Vice Principal Brandao confronted Cotto with the grandmother's complaint, Cotto submitted a letter requesting an immediate transfer from Abington School.

[7] Section 8 is a federally subsidized rent program designed to assist low-income families in obtaining housing. 42 U.S.C.A. §1437f. See also, 24 C.F.R. Part 882

Other children verified Cotto's use of hurtful language about welfare clients and their children. M.L. felt "embarrassed" when Cotto told him that "[his] mother was on welfare" and that "she can't afford the clothes or the money that he gets." In addition, M.L. confirmed that Cotto "called us stupid" because "we couldn't do the work and other people could do it." Similar comments were reported by J.C., who recalled that Cotto "used to say that our mothers were on welfare" and "used to laugh at us, because we were on welfare." She "felt like crying" when her teacher made those remarks. On another occasion, Cotto derided D.M. in class, telling her that she and her sister "will be in a corner asking for money with a whole bunch of kids." F.C. also heard Cotto predict that D.M would end up on the streets with a couple of kids "begging for money." Requesting a transfer to another teacher, A.M. wrote on March 11, 1997 that Cotto told him "you will be in the corner of 6th street asking for 25¢ so you can buy a pair of pants."

Significantly, Cotto admits that he made comments such as the one related by A.M., but insists that that were taken out of context. Cotto claims he was referring to recent legislation replacing welfare with workfare when he counseled students that they could either get a decent job or they would wind up "on the street corners begging for money or cleaning windshields." Moreover, Cotto defended his actions by maintaining that it was necessary for him to question his students about their financial circumstances in order to complete a survey form required by the federal government. From the nature of the children's emotional reactions, however, it is apparent that Cotto went far beyond routine data-collection and conveyed his personal disapproval of their families' lifestyle. It is doubtful that Cotto would have taken such an abusive approach if he were sincerely seeking to inspire his students. Even if Cotto intended to teach a lesson about the evils of the welfare system, there is no possible excuse for making his students feel hopeless and bad about themselves.

At other times, Cotto referred to his students by insulting names, like when called L.B. a "crack baby" or referred to L.R., who is small for his age, as "a midget." One time, when a fat girl in class was crying, Cotto told her that the only time he had ever heard her cry was "when they closed down Burger King." L.B. testified that Cotto identified his mother as a drug user and told him "that's why you came out the way you are." J.C. cited a similar instance in which Cotto "used to call this girl named T.F, that she was a crack baby." Although Cotto recollected a classroom discussion about the high percentage of crack babies at University Hospital in Newark, he denies telling any of his students that they were crack babies, "even jokingly."

Children also accuse Cotto of using vulgar expletives in the classroom. The record is replete with examples of Cotto having uttered curse words such as "shit," "damn" and "hell" in front of various students. In one such instance, M.L. asked to go to the bathroom, and Cotto replied, "I don't give a shit what you do." L.R. was nearby at the time and corroborated M.L.'s account of the language used. Acknowledging that he indeed muttered "bullshit" under his breath, Cotto contends that he used such language only after M.L had asked to go to the bathroom for the fifth time. Generally, however, Cotto denies that he spoke to his students using words like "shit" or told students they were "dumb" or "stupid." His denials have a hollow ring, however, in light of the consistent and credible testimony by nearly all other witnesses. Of ten students from Abington School who testified, only J.C. did not hear Cotto cursing in the classroom.

Worse yet, several students report that Cotto made disparaging racial remarks implying that black people have a criminal mentality. In the course of a discussion of current events, L.B. recalls Cotto teaching that, "there's too many black-on-black crimes and that it's the black[s] making all the crimes." He understood Cotto to be saying "that black people was doing all the crimes and all the killing[.]" However, the lesson did not make much sense to him because, as L.B. put it, "I know that it's not just all of us and I know that it ain't me." F.C. thought that Cotto said that, "Most black people in our neighborhood commit crimes." Likewise, A.M. remembered Cotto telling the class that "thieves and junk would like mostly be black people, African American" and that "they're the ones that mostly rob." So too, T.F. said Cotto told the class that black people are so lazy `"they'd rather go out and rob and steal from people instead of getting a straight job." She felt it "wasn't right," but "wasn't going to cry."

Far from denying the substance of the students' testimony, Cotto readily admits that he discussed FBI statistics, including a breakdown of crime data by ethnic group, as part of a lesson on current events. He would bring in newspaper articles regarding crime in the neighborhood and open up the topic for classroom discussion. Cotto never adequately explained what educational benefit would be achieved by identifying the racial characteristics of individuals committing crimes in Newark. At one point, he mentioned that his students "wanted to know what was going on in their community," although it would certainly have been possible to discuss the detrimental impact of a high crime rate without turning it into a racial issue. Later in his testimony, Cotto told a rambling story about tribal warfare in African history and suggested that somehow this historical background would enable his students "to appreciate and see the cultural significance of what was happening."[8] As the record clearly shows, however, all that the black children managed to learn from this experience is that they are likely to grow up to become criminals.

I FIND that Cotto called some of his students by insulting names critical of their socioeconomic status or physical appearance. Repeatedly, Cotto made comments implying that his students were incapable of learning. Often he cursed or uttered profanity when he did not like what a student was doing. Moreover, Cotto made racially charged statements suggesting that African-American children are more violent and less industrious than children of other races. Such constant barrage of negativity had the effect of causing his students to lose confidence in their natural abilities and of hampering their ability to succeed in school. None of these methods served any useful educational purpose or met any federal requirements.

[8] Cotto apparently has a theory that the origin of crime in Newark traces back to days when one black tribe in Africa "raided [the] village" of another black tribe and "raped [their] women." Ironically, he expounded his views in celebration of Black History Month, which is intended to develop students' pride in their heritage.

(6) Prior Warnings and Reprimands

Count 1(a) of the tenure charges alleges that in or about September 1991 Cotto "slapped pupil X.L. and another student across the back of their heads as an inappropriate method of stopping a fight." Five years ago, DYFS conducted an investigation into Cotto's alleged use of excessive force in quelling an altercation between a group of third-grade students in a boys' lavatory at the Elliott Street School. Unlike the other charges against Cotto, this one involved breaking up a fight, so conceivably Cotto may have been justified in using some physical force to prevent personal injury. After thorough investigation, including interviews of all persons with knowledge of the facts, the DYFS institutional-abuse investigation unit issued written findings, in which it concluded that the allegations of child abuse were "unsubstantiated with concerns."[9]

An accompanying report by DYFS investigator Patricia Rogers determined that two students had been fighting and that Cotto intervened to stop them. According to the report, Cotto had admitted to the investigator that he "slapped X.L. and J.M. across the heard with an open hand." The report concluded that, "[t]he method of intervention was inappropriate" because the blow was to the head area, "although no excessive force was utilized." In the final section, the report recommended that Cotto be retrained "regarding appropriate methods of intervention."

[9] State rules governing investigation of complaints of child abuse require DYFS to make a finding of whether the allegations were "substantiated," "not substantiated" or "unfounded." The designation "not substantiated" is used "when the available information, as evaluated by the Division representative, provides some indication that a child was harmed or placed at risk of harm, but does not indicated that the child is an abused or neglected child[.]" N.J.A.C. 10:129A-3.3(a)(2).

Investigator Rogers, an impartial witness with no interest in the outcome, testified that Cotto "denied slapping any student in the face," but "did indicate that he slapped both of the students on the back of the head with an open hand." She also recalled Cotto saying that he had "apologized" to the mother for his actions and promised "to refrain from such methods of discipline." X.L.'s mother confirmed that Cotto thought her son was involved in the bathroom fracas, but nonetheless "apologized for hitting him." Cotto, on the other hand, claimed that he separated four children "slugging it out" in the bathroom and denied hitting any child in the back of the head. He admits apologizing to the mother, but only for the inconvenience of having her take time off to come to school.

Regardless of whose recollections are more accurate, the significance of the 1991 episode is that Cotto was put on notice that he should not use unnecessary force in disciplining students. In October 1991, Principal Jorge Almeda sent a letter reminding Cotto "teachers cannot use corporal punishment in any way or manner" and asking him to "review Title 18 in order to avoid any future incidents."

Soon after Cotto arrived at Abington School in September 1996, Vice Principal Brandao, Cotto's immediate supervisor, gave him a one-on-one orientation and handed him an information package that included materials on corporal punishment. By late October or early November 1997, Brandao met with Cotto and offered him advice on strategies for handling disciplinary problems. Principal Walter Afflito also took Cotto aside and warned him, "[W]hatever you do, don't put your hands on any student. If you have a problem, you either call the office, call the security guard or call an administra[tor.]"

A revealing moment came on cross-examination when Cotto was asked for his understanding of the term corporal punishment. Displaying an incredible lack of insight, Cotto stated that corporal punishment occurs when someone physically hits a child "and leaves bruises [or] marks" or mentally damages a child "to the point that he needs therapy."

I FIND that Cotto was aware that corporal punishment is illegal and had received ample notice that he should refrain from excessive use of physical force in disciplining his students.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the District has sustained its tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against Cotto and that the appropriate penalty is dismissal.

Tenure protects teachers from arbitrary dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). It is designed to aid in the establishment of "a competent and efficient school system" by affording to teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service. Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). Toward that end, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 provides that no tenured teacher shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause." Additional procedural safeguards, including the right to a list of charges, a sworn statement of evidence and an impartial hearing, are written into the law.

"Unbecoming conduct" is an elastic term broadly defined to included any conduct "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [government] employees and competence in the operation of [public] services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998). Behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct "need not be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 22, 40 (App. Div. 1992). In the context of a school tenure case, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974), certif. den. 65 N.J. 292 (1974).

Use of physical force by a teacher to maintain discipline or to punish infractions constitutes conduct unbecoming an employee. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 401, 421 (App. Div. 1967). See also, In re Cowan, 224 N.J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988). In addition, a teacher may not administer corporal punishment, except for use of such force reasonable and necessary to quell a disturbance, to disarm students carrying weapons, to defend himself, or to protect other persons or property. *N.J.S.*A. 18A:6-1. In re Wagner, 93 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 143, 145 (Comm'r Jan. 15, 1993.) Competent teachers never find it necessary to resort to physical force or violence to maintain discipline or compel obedience. Ostergren v. Franklin Twp. Bd. of Educ., 1965 S.L.D. 185, 186 (Comm'r Oct. 25, 1966). Unfitness to remain a teacher may be demonstrated by a single incident, if sufficiently flagrant. Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J. L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd o.b. 121 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944). Generally, however, dismissal is reserved for cases where there has been a continuing pattern of misconduct accompanied by prior warnings or counseling. In re Cowan, 741. In re Fulcomer, at 421.

Here Cotto used excessive physical force on five separate occasions within a four-month period. All of these incidents followed a predictable pattern in which Cotto pushed or shoved a small child in order to get him to sit down, stay at the blackboard, remain at the head of the line, or otherwise obey his instructions. Each instance involved sufficient force to cause the child to fall backwards or, in one instance, to incapacitate the child while walking down stairs. Therefore, there was a foreseeable risk of injury to children as a result of Cotto's actions. None of the incidents involved any genuine classroom disturbance, threat to the safety of the teacher or of other students, indication of weapon possession or damage to property. Under the circumstances, the use of physical force by the teacher was unjustified. Furthermore, Cotto had received prior warnings as the result of a DYFS investigation into his past conduct and had been repeatedly counseled by his supervisors on proper methods of student discipline. Given the frequency and similarity of Cotto's outbursts, it is difficult to believe that they were simply accidental or unintentional.

Teachers represent "one of the most dominant and influential forces in the lives of the children, who are compelled to attend the public schools[.]" In re Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321 (Comm'r June 12, 1972). Children are entitled to a supportive and nurturing classroom environment in which to develop their intellectual capacities and bolster their self-esteem. Adolescents are especially vulnerable to the influences of their teachers, who serve as role models and help to shape how youngsters actually view themselves. Constant negativity and insensitivity in dealing with students is a serious deficiency. In re Gilbert, 1982 S.L.D. 274, 326 (Comm'r April 5, 1982), aff'd 1982 S.L.D. 382 (St. Bd. Nov. 3, 1982). See In re Birch, 1978 S.L.D. 63 (Comm'r Feb. 9, 1978), wherein a teacher was dismissed for displaying a negative attitude toward students, including making disparaging remarks about students in class. Being a teacher requires an intense dedication to civility and respect for people as human beings. Morris Sch. Dist. v. Brady, *92 N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 419 (Comm'r 1992). Psychological damage from steady exposure to verbal abuse from a teacher may be longer lasting than scars from physical abuse. In re Johnston, 1995 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 439 (Comm'r Feb. 6, 1995). Cotto's hostile attitude and constant barrage of criticism undermined his students' self-confidence and eroded their eagerness to learn.

Factors to be considered in assessing penalty include the nature and gravity of the offense; any extenuating or aggravating circumstances; and the effect on the maintenance of discipline and the proper administration of the school system. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J.Super. 404, 420-422 (App. Div. 1967). In re Doyle, 201 N.J. Super. 347, 351 (App. Div. 1985). Excessive use of force to discipline students and intentional infliction of emotional distress are matters of the utmost seriousness. See In re Cowan, at 741, upholding dismissal of an "experienced, capable and generally well-liked" teacher whose uncontrollable temper "has led him to abuse his students verbally and physically." As the Commissioner has aptly observed, "teachers who resort to unnecessary and inappropriate physical contact with those in their charge must expect to face dismissal or other severe penalty. Ostergren, at 187.

In terms of extenuating circumstances, Cotto's length of service cuts both ways. On the one hand, he has served the children of Newark for twenty years with noted success in the field of bilingual education. On the other, a teacher with such experience should surely know better than to push, shove and verbally abuse his students. It is not a mitigating circumstance that Cotto may have resented having been demoted from a supervisory position and put in charge of a difficult-to-teach class. Whatever grievance Cotto may have against the District, he had no right to take out his frustrations on innocent children. While teachers are subject to the same emotional stresses as other individuals, "their particular relationship to children imposes upon them a special responsibility for exemplary restraint and mature self-control." Ostergren, at 186.

One major aggravating circumstance is that Cotto had been accused of similar misconduct in 1991, so this is not the first time that questions about his disciplinary methods had been brought to his attention. He failed to heed the advice of his supervisors, who offered to assist in overcoming any problems in this area. Another aggravating factor is that his conduct was not limited to a single isolated occurrence, which might be attributed to a lapse in judgment or a bad day, but consists of a series of events pointing to Cotto's lack of appropriate temperament.

Lastly, Cotto's repetitious misconduct had a devastating effect on classroom atmosphere. Not only did Cotto try to control his students by physical intimidation, but also he cast aspersions on their intellectual capacity, their physical appearance and their ethnicity. Told enough times that they are stupid, ugly or inferior, impressionable children may come to believe what their teacher is saying about them.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF JUAN COTTO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX	:
COUNTY.	:

The record and Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions were timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

The primary arguments set forth in respondent's exceptions are briefly summarized below:

> 1. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) ignored the preponderance of the credible evidence which supported the fact that respondent never acted unprofessional or confrontational while he served as vice principal and that he was unfairly demoted to a teacher status in order that Carmen Ruiz succeed to his earned vice principalship.
>
> 2. The preponderance of the credible evidence rebuts the allegation that respondent pushed A.M. against the wall as alleged in count 1(e)(ii).
>
> 3. The ALJ failed to recognize that Assistant Superintendent Silva's office placed respondent in a school he requested not to be sent to, thus exhibiting an existing bias against him.
>
> 4. Respondent was not credited by the ALJ for the four months of success he had with his class. The ALJ failed to recognize the success respondent had with a difficult class, ignoring the impact on the class when three students were added in December.
>
> 5. The ALJ ignored the poor character and credibility of L.B., a student who was not unbiased to respondent and who, himself, denied the charge that respondent pushed him and forced him to sit down.

6. The preponderance of credible evidence supports the fact respondent never committed the actions alleged in charge 1(e)(iii) involving M.L.

7. The ALJ erred when he concluded that respondent's testimony was that he put L.R. in a wrestling hold and the preponderance of the credible evidence does not sustain that respondent used excessive force.

8. The ALJ failed to acknowledge the evidence that the students who alleged he made derogatory statements were influenced to do so by the administration at the Abington Avenue School and did so to prevent their being retained in sixth grade.

9. The penalty of dismissal as ordered by the ALJ is too severe.

Having conducted a thorough and independent review of the record of this matter, including the transcripts of the 12 days of hearing,[1] the Commissioner concurs with and adopts as his own the ALJ's findings, conclusion and recommended penalty for the reasons well expressed in the Initial Decision, since they are amply supported in the record. In the process of the detailed examination of the record, the Commissioner gave careful consideration to respondent's exceptions but finds no basis in either the transcripts or the record as a whole to overturn the ALJ's credibility determinations in this matter. Further, the Commissioner is fully satisfied that the ALJ's recitation of testimony is thorough and accurate and that the ALJ carefully assessed and gave due weight to conflicts, inconsistencies and potential biases in determining which testimony and evidentiary documentation to credit in reaching his findings of fact.

The Commissioner is unpersuaded by respondent's arguments set forth during the hearing, in his post-hearing brief and in his exceptions, relative to his removal as an acting vice principal, after two weeks of service, at the Franklin School, and his assignment as a sixth grade class at the Abington Avenue School, a school to which he had requested not to be assigned. While it is understandable that respondent raises such arguments in an attempt to demonstrate that the tenure charges are a result of bias and bad faith by administrative staff and to impugn the credibility of witnesses, the fact remains that this matter concerns allegations regarding respondent's actions as a teacher. In that regard, the ALJ was correct when he stated during the hearing, "One thing that I'd like to make clear is that this really is not a case about why Mr. Cotto was transferred from his vice principal's position to -- to a teaching position. Really it is a tenure charge which picks up at the time he was a teacher. However, I -- I understand, Mr. Liss, you're – you're raising this as background information to show a bias or an attempt of [the administrative staff to remove respondent]." (Tr. 9/23/98, at 8) Furthermore, the Commissioner is in complete agreement with the ALJ's statement that:

[1] It is noted for the record that a portion of the June 16, 1998 hearing had to be reconstructed based on the ALJ's notes due to a problem experienced with the audio tape recording of the session. During the last day of the hearing,

> The present matter, however, does not involve the validity of Cotto's transfer, which was the subject of a separate grievance proceeding concerning salary.
> Several times during the hearing, Cotto sought to deflect attention from the underlying tenure charges by accusing others of conducting a personal vendetta against him. His attacks were directed not against Lydia Silva alone, but also against Delores Brandao, a vice principal who was his last supervisor, and Carmen Ruiz, the person who replaced him as vice principal. These collateral issues have little to do with the truth of the tenure charges, which must stand or fall on the credibility of witnesses to the alleged incidents. (Initial Decision at 4-5, emphasis supplied)

Given the nature of the tenure charges herein, which rest upon a multitude of alleged actions by respondent involving the use of excessive force, corporal punishment and making derogatory and demeaning statements to students, an assessment of the credibility of witnesses is of the utmost importance to a determination in this matter, and, as stated above, the counsel agreed that the reconstructed testimony derived from the ALJ's notes comported with/were not materially different from their recollection of the testimony. (Tr. 9/23/98, at 4)

Commissioner, upon thorough examination of the record, is fully satisfied that the ALJ properly considered all testimony and measured the credibility of same. In so holding, the Commissioner is aware that this was an admittedly difficult task for the ALJ, particularly in light of the number of student witnesses and the need to examine the testimony of children with great caution (In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Quinones, 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 649, 653), a task which, in the Commissioner's judgment, the ALJ did quite competently herein. Contrary to respondent's exceptions, the Commissioner determines that the preponderance of the credible evidence amply supports the ALJ's findings and conclusions relative to the specifications involving A.M., M.L., and L.R.

Furthermore, the Commissioner finds respondent's exceptions with respect to L.B. to be entirely without merit. The ALJ's summation of testimony and his conclusions regarding respondent's pushing L.B. and shoving him into his seat (pages 8-10 of the Initial Decision) are well stated and fully supported by the record. Upon review of the record, the Commissioner does not accept respondent's assertion that L.B. is of "poor character" and biased towards respondent. The Commissioner also rejects respondent's glib suggestion that L.B. denied respondent pushed him and forced him to sit down. L.B.'s account of events regarding the incident was substantially corroborated by a preponderance of the credible evidence by numerous other students. As set forth by the ALJ, L.B. candidly testified, inter alia, that he disobeyed respondent by getting up from his chair "plenty of times" (Tr. 6/18/98, at 165) and tried to leave the classroom, despite respondent telling him to sit down. Insofar as falling over his chair is concerned, L.B. was also forthright in acknowledging that the fall could have been accidental in that the heavy weight of his book bag/backpack could have triggered the fall over the chair. (Id. at 127,165 and 185) However, as stated by L.B., "It might have been an accident but he shouldn't have pushed me." (Id. at 166). Further, the ALJ is correct in finding that respondent used a disproportionate amount of force, even taking into account L.B.'s disobedience/defiance. As stated by the ALJ:

> Unquestionably, L.B.'s failure to remain in his seat was an act of defiance to the authority of his teacher, and the District concedes that Cotto was justified in blocking the doorway to prevent him from leaving the room. Proofs establish, however, that Cotto's response went beyond mere passive resistance. Instead, he repeatedly pushed or shoved the youngster to encourage him to return to his seat. Cotto overreacted to the situation and utilized more force than necessary under the circumstances. Certainly it should have been foreseeable that exerting pressure against a boy wearing a backpack might cause the child to fall and hurt himself. In addition, Cotto failed to explain adequately why he chose to engage in a physical confrontation with one of his students. He could have easily called a security guard for assistance, as he eventually had to do anyway. (Initial Decision at 9-10)

As to respondent's position that the students made false allegations against him to prevent retention in sixth grade, the Commissioner finds no credible evidence in the record to support this.[2] What is supported by the record is that respondent subjected the students to a constant barrage of negative commentary of a type which could readily cause students to lose confidence in their natural abilities and hamper their ability to succeed in school. (Id. at 17) Moreover, the Commissioner finds the ALJ's recitation of testimony and the analysis relative to respondent's derogatory and demeaning comments/remarks to students to be fully supported by the record and he finds totally incredible respondent's attempts to evade culpability with claims that any mention of such things as welfare, crime and crack babies/drug use was tied to instruction in current events. An excerpt from L.B.'s testimony gives some insights into what a student felt, even when news articles may have been used as an instructional strategy. L.B. states when being questioned on cross-examination by respondent's attorney:

Q. [D]id you like being taught current events?

[2] A review of the transcripts indicates that all students who testified in this matter were promoted in 1997 from grade six and in 1998 from grade seven. Further, one student was transferred to the sixth grade Gifted and Talented class when removed from respondent's class and received grades of all B's and one C (Tr. 6/19/98, at 4-5), and in 1998 one student had been promoted to ninth grade, having been moved out of respondent's class in 1997and placed into seventh grade. (Tr. 7/13/98, at 5 and 53)

A. Yes.

Q. And why did you like it?

A. Because since I don't watch the news a lot it gets me to catch up on the outside world.

***

Q. Okay.[N]ow you said that current events is about the outside world, does that refresh you to some degree of what you were talking about in current events with Mr. Cotto?

A. Yes, a little bit.

Q. Okay.[C]an you remember about some of the subjects you talked about?

A. I remember one subject when he talked about what --what-- the killing of black-on-black, stuff like that.

Q. [C]ould I have that again?

A. [W]hy is the black killing the black and why is there so much black-on-black crime.

Q. Okay. So one subject that he discussed with you in current events is why -- why blacks are killing blacks and why there is so much black crime. That was in -- that was being taught in current events; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And did Mr. Cotto have any newspapers at the time or any -- anything at the time while he was discussing the subject with you?

A. A newspaper.

Q. Now, do you recall him -- the newspapers that he brought in about black-on-black crime and crimes committed by blacks, did he bring in anything about white crime and Puerto Rican crimedid he discuss that type of situation with you?

A. He didn't discuss that.

THE COURT: Pardon me?

[A.] He brought in newspapers but he didn't discuss nothing like that. It always had something to do with black people on welfare, black people killing black, this and that.

Q. Okay.

A. And statistics.

Q. Okay. So he brought in newspapers on welfare during current events and he brought in newspapers on black people killing black people. And during all the time that you had current events did he ever talk about Puerto Ricans?

A. No.

Q. Did he ever bring in papers about Puerto Rico?

A. Once.

Q. Oh.

A. About the Puerto Rican – about a Puerto Rican parade.

Q. Okay.Did Mr. Cotto ever say that it was good that black people were killing black people?

A. No.

Q. Was he concerned about black people harming black people?

A. No. ***

A. -- but he was concerned that -- it seemed like he -- he liked it or he just -- it seemed he wasn't concerned in a good way. It was like -- how do you say it-- like happy about it or something like that -- not happy but joy -- he was like glad to see it or something like that.

Q. You thought he was -- it was your impression that he was glad to see that the newspaper said that black people were killing black people -- and that he was glad that -- that there was black crime on black crime.

A. Yes. (Tr. 6/18/98, at 170-174)

As to the ALJ's conclusions of law, the Commissioner fully concurs that the District has sustained its tenure charges against respondent and that the appropriate penalty is dismissal for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision. Although stated more than thirty years ago, the holding of the Commissioner in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Thomas Appleby, 1969 S.L.D. 159 has applicability in the instant matter and bears repeating herein.[3] The Commissioner held in Appleby that:

> While the Commissioner understands the exasperations and frustrations that often accompany the teacher's functions, he cannot condone resort to force and fear as appropriate procedures in dealing with pupils, even those whose recalcitrance appears to be open defiance. The Commissioner finds in the century-old statute prohibiting corporal punishment (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1) an underlying philosophy that an individual has a right not only to freedom from bodily harm but also to freedom from offensive bodily touching even though there be no actual physical harm. [In re Ostergren, supra] The Commissioner said further, [In re Fulcomer, supra],
> > "that such a philosophy with its prohibition of the use of corporal punishment or physical enforcement does not leave a teacher helpless to control his pupils. Competent teachers never find it necessary to resort to physical force or violence to maintain discipline or compel obedience. The Commissioner cannot find any justification for, nor can he condone the use of physical force by a teacher to maintain discipline or punish infractions. Nor can the Commissioner find validity in any defense of the use of force or violence on the ground that 'it was one of those things that just happen'. While teachers are sensitive to the same emotional stresses as all other persons, their particular relationship to children imposes upon them a special responsibility for exemplary restraint and mature self-control."
> Thus, when teachers resort to "unnecessary and inappropriate physical contact with those in their charge (they) must expect to face dismissal or other severe penalty. [Ostergren, supra] (Appleby, at 172-173)

[3] In the Appleby matter, the Commissioner determined the teacher had exhibited a pattern of conduct that demonstrated a disposition to resort to unlawful physical force and to harsh and abusive treatment of students whose conduct the teacher found offensive.

Moreover, the Commissioner is in full agreement with the ALJ's conclusions that a teacher with respondent's experience should have known better than to push, shove and verbally abuse his students and that it is not a mitigating circumstance that Cotto may have resented having been demoted from a supervisory position and put in charge of a difficult-to-teach class. This is particularly true in light of respondent's failure to heed prior warnings about similar misconduct as charged herein. As aptly stated by the ALJ:

> Cotto's repetitious misconduct had a devastating effect on classroom atmosphere. Not only did Cotto try to control his students by physical intimidation, but also he cast aspersions on their intellectual capacity, their physical appearance and their ethnicity. Told enough times that they are stupid, ugly, or inferior, impressionable children come to believe what their teacher is saying about them. (Initial Decision at 23)

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons expressed therein. Respondent is dismissed from his tenured teaching position with the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark as of the date of this decision. This matter shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, for action as it deems appropriate.

HEARING OF EUGENE M. LEGGETT,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION ON REMAND
CITY OF TRENTON, MERCER	:
COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause against respondent physical education teacher due to his handling of two incidents in his swimming classes. Board alleged that respondent utilized improper techniques to effectuate the rescue of students and failed to properly supervise students. After barring, in an interlocutory order affirmed by the Commissioner, the Board's presentation of testimony and/or report of its expert as a result of the late submission of the report, the ALJ found, and the Commissioner affirmed, that the Board failed by proofs, by either direct or by reasonable inferences, to establish a prima facie case on any of the four charges that it brought, and, therefore, concluded that the charges must be dismissed. On appeal, the State Board reversed the interlocutory order and remanded the matter, determining that the Board should be given the opportunity to present expert evidence in regard to respondent's alleged professional misconduct.

In his decision on remand, the ALJ found that the contribution made to the record in the proceedings on remand did not result in any meaningful addition to the evidence in the matter such that the ALJ and the Commissioner would be compelled to alter their previous determination that the four charges of unbecoming conduct must be dismissed because the Board failed to establish a prima facie case in support of the charges.

The Commissioner adopted the findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own. Tenure charges were dismissed.

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ACTING CHIEF ALJ:

This contested case involving tenure charges brought by the Trenton Board of Education ("Board"), against Mr. Leggett, a tenured physical education teacher in the Trenton District ("District"), is before the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on remand from the State Board of Education ("State Board"), which determined that the Board should be given the opportunity to present expert evidence in regard to Mr. Leggett's alleged professional misconduct. [1] In short, the charges against Leggett arose from concerns regarding his handling of two incidents that occurred in the pool at the Holland Middle School, to which he was assigned as the supervisor.

[1] See Initial Decision dated November 5, 1998, Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County v. Eugene Leggett, EDU 4017-98, Initial Decision, (November 5, 1998), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, adopted, Comm'r of Ed., (December 17, 1998), <http://www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.html>; remanded, State Bd. of Ed. (June 2, 1999) <http://www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.html>.

In each instance a student was in trouble in the water, in each instance the student was rescued and fortunately, did not suffer any lasting or serious injuries. The first incident occurred in late September or early October 1997; the second incident occurred on February 10, 1998.

Following the State Board's remand, the respondent filed a motion for summary decision. This was denied in a Letter Order dated March 14, 2000. The testimony of the Board's expert, Mr. Joseph Blazejewski was received on May 1, 2000. The record closed following that testimony.

Mr. Blazejewski is the Director of Health and Safety Services for the Burlington County Chapter of the American Red Cross ("Red Cross") and is responsible for the training of instructors and trainers in first aid, CPR and aquatic water safety and lifesaving. He possesses certifications as an instructor trainer in these several specialties. He serves as the Aquatic Director for a Boy Scouts of America ("Boy Scouts") summer camp and has been a certified lifeguard since the late 1960's. He holds certifications from the Red Cross, YMCA and Boy Scouts. He has never trained personnel for work in public school settings. He provided his expertise and his report and testimony to the Trenton Board of Education without compensation. Prior to rendering his report he did not visit the pool in question, did not determine the equipment that was available to Mr. Leggett at the time of either incident and did not interview anyone, although he did review the tenure charges, the police reports and the interviews conducted by the police, including that of Mr. Leggett. He visited the site a few days before testifying, but the information gathered at the site visit would not have changed the contents of his report and his conclusions.

In his report Mr. Blazejewski first concluded that on February 10, 1998, Mr. Leggett had left the pool area unsupervised (except by a teacher who could not swim) and that as the person in charge and responsible for the pool area he should not have left the area. He asserted, based upon his understanding gathered from the police interview with Leggett that Leggett had received a Red Cross lifesaver certification in 1973, that Leggett would have known from his training that he was never to leave the pool area unless relieved by a properly trained person. When he left the pool area he was not able to conduct proper supervision and this was a violation of his responsibilities.

Blazejewski next concluded that Leggett had acted improperly and in derogation of his training on February 10, 1998, when he sent a student into the water to go down to the bottom of the pool (which was eight feet deep) and check upon the condition of a student who was apparently in trouble. By doing so Leggett exposed the student who he sent into the water to possible endangerment. In the Red Cross training one is taught that one should never send a non-trained person to perform a rescue. Leggett would have learned this in his training for the lifesaving certification. Instead of sending a surrogate, Leggett should have entered the water himself and brought the student to the surface.

Leggett also acted improperly on February 10 when he used a shepard's crook pole in the rescue as such a device is hard to use at the bottom of the pool.[2] It is hard to get the hook underneath a person lying on the bottom, and the crook is better suited for the rescue of someone who is floating. There is a danger that the person using the pole might poke or grab the victim in the wrong way. In addition, the victim might become conscious and could grab the rescuer and both might go down into the pool. Leggett's training would have taught him to recognize an emergency and respond properly to it. One is taught to approach the situation with caution and dive in, hesitate and change position, then to grab the victim with both hands and kick to the surface.

In the case of the student (who had a cramp) rescued in late September or early October, Leggett violated proper procedure in having a student who was located at the side of the pool enter the pool and go to the victim's aide. Again the danger was that the victim would grab the rescuer. His training should have led him to use a pole or crook to assist the victim and/or to have entered the water himself. Additional options would have been to reach the victim, to throw out a floatation device or to go to the victim with support.

Blazejewski concluded that Leggett had received Red Cross lifesaving training because in response to a question posed by the police, Leggett had produced a December 1973 Red Cross life-saver card. Knowledge of the possession of such an old certification would be of no use in determining whether the holder was trained in up to date procedures now approved by the Red Cross. Some procedures have in fact changed over the twenty-five years between 1973 and the dates of the incidents and some have not.

[2] Blazejewski at first was under the impression that the pole used had a net attached to it. He later learned that it was in fact a pole with a hook thereon, a so-called Shepard's Crook. Such a pole is a more appropriate device to use than a pole with a net, but is nevertheless not easy to use and therefore not favored for such a rescue.

The witness acknowledged that he was not aware when he drew his report that the finding of fact made in the original hearing concluded that there was no evidence that the February 10, 1998, incident had originated at a time when Leggett was out of the pool area. See Initial Decision of November 5, 1998, page 5 ("So, in regard to the First Count, if my understanding of the First Count is that the Board suggests that there was a failure to supervise based upon the idea that somehow D. ended up at the bottom of the pool when Leggett was outside the room and not supervising, and that there was a problem with his supervision. I can find no evidence either direct or by reasonable inference to conclude that that charge had been out or could be made out.").

The witness acknowledged that certified Red Cross, YMCA and/or Boy Scout lifesaving personnel must be re-certified every three years. He had no evidence that Leggett was ever re-certified after 1973. Blazejewski testified that there was "no adequate supervisor" on duty at the pool on either occasion in question as neither Leggett nor anyone else present was properly certified. In such a situation, Blazejewski would not be comfortable using the pool himself and the presence of someone who had last received training twenty-five years ago would not lessen that discomfort. He did note that the Red Cross and the other certifying agencies have never trained anyone that it was proper to send an untrained individual into the pool to effectuate a rescue.

No further evidence was received from either party.

DISCUSSION

The State Board determined that it was appropriate in light of the very serious issues involved in this case to allow the District to present its expert witness despite the serious discovery derelictions that led to the denial of the admission of that evidence at the prior hearing. The Board has presented that evidence. It should be noted here that the Trenton Board has also suggested that some or all of Leggett's conduct could be condemned without the need for expert evidence, as his conduct was purportedly so inappropriate that on its face it constituted misconduct and a violation of the professional standards governing tenured teachers. However, the evidence presented in this hearing establishes that in the area of lifesaving there is a long-standing practice to certify persons as trained in the techniques and methods to be used in lifesaving and rescue. While there may be instances where a non-certified person could be held civilly liable for improper actions, in the context of a tenure proceeding, where the issue is whether the teacher has violated recognized professional standards, I CONCLUDE that the proper test of Leggett's conduct must include the recognition of these certification procedures and the fact that, as will be noted below, it is well-recognized that in public settings, only those persons properly certified should be assigned to the supervision of swimming pools and swimming classes. As will also be discussed, that recognition of the need for such "appropriate supervision" was ignored by the Trenton Board in the instances at issue in this proceeding, despite its own regulations and policies, and has only very recently been recognized by the State Board through the adoption of administrative regulations. I am convinced that Leggett's conduct on the days in question must be assessed with reference to those standards of conduct to which a properly trained individual could be held. In an area which requires considerable training, testing and certification in order to teach one the proper and safe methods of rescue, it is not appropriate to condemn Leggett for actions which he may have undertaken and directed that a trained individual would have known were inappropriate, unless it has been demonstrated that Leggett could be held to have knowledge of and to be chargeable with responsibility as a properly trained and certified individual.

Mr. Blazejewski has proffered his opinions as to the failure of Mr. Leggett to comply with appropriate lifesaving techniques in regard to the rescues effectuated in late September or early October 1997 and on February 10, 1998. His first premise, that Leggett failed to maintain proper supervision of the pool area, was made without knowledge that the earlier initial decision had found no evidence that there had been a failure of supervision involved in either matter. As such, the expert's first premise cannot be sustained, and he has not added anything to the evidence that would cause any change in my original opinion as to the First Count of the tenure charges.

As for Blazejewski's other opinions, they all proceed from the basis that Leggett was a trained individual who therefore must have been instructed in and should have known the proper techniques for lifesaving and rescues. Of course, the flaw in this thinking is that while at one time some twenty-five years before the incidents in question Leggett did hold a certification from the Red Cross, by 1997-98 that certification was hopelessly out of date. As the expert acknowledged, the certifying agencies require that a certified individual undergo re-certification every three years. These certifying agencies therefore have concluded that one must be regularly updated and re-examined in order to continue to hold the imprimatur of authorization and expertise that the certifications are meant to identify. As Leggett was some eight re-certifications from certified status, it is grossly unfair and unwise to hold him to any standard that might be applied to one who is currently certified, or even to one who, while not presently certified, has recently been certified. It would be foolish to rely upon the ability and expertise of one possessing a perhaps faded (or even non-existent) memory of training in rescue and lifesaving techniques acquired long ago, and even the Board's expert would feel uncomfortable as a user of a pool at which no currently certified "appropriate supervision" was present, if he would even use the pool at all in such circumstances.

The Board, unlike the State Board at the time of these events[3], apparently had standards that were apparently intended to identify those who could properly be assigned to pool duty. According to the Board's amended answer to Interrogatory 12, the Trenton Board at the time of the incidents required that a teacher of swimming have a New Jersey State teaching certificate, an American Red Cross Water Safety Instructor's Certificate, a Lifeguard Training Certificate, a CPR certificate and be certified in standard First Aid. Presumably the Board intended that the certifications be up to date. Unfortunately, the Board failed to follow its own standards and assigned Leggett in derogation of those standards. Mr. Leggett clearly did not belong where he was on either day in question and the District had no business assigning him as it did and placing the children in its charge under his supervision. The District now seeks to hold Leggett responsible for not using proper techniques to save children whom he in fact did save. There is great irony here. The fault which lies here is very much that of the Board, for assigning

[3] The State had no standards that required that a teacher assigned to a pool have any particular certifications, although in the wake of the events of February 10, 1998, and this case, standards have since been proposed and adopted. 31 N.J.R. 3559 (November 15, 1999); 32 N.J.R. 448 (February 7, 2000). These regulations, codified at unqualified personnel to supervise a pool in violation of its own policies. Fortunately, Mr. Leggett's efforts successfully rescued the children despite the unorthodox manner of the rescues. That he may have placed others in a degree of danger is unfortunate (though it must be noted that no assisting student was in any way injured), but in the absence of any evidence that he can be held to the standards of a trained individual in the performance of a task which is well acknowledged to require significant training and examination leading to certification, there is no basis to fault him for using the wrong method to achieve successful rescues. As the Board did not train him for the task, did not require that he be currently certified, violated its own policies, and in essence placed an unqualified individual in a very inappropriate role, thereby placing its students and even Leggett in a precarious position, there is no basis for finding that Leggett violated the professional standards to which the Board and the Commissioner have a right to hold him. Therefore the tenure charges are DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.7, require that teachers assigned to teach swimming must possess a valid Lifeguard Certificate, a valid Water Safety Instructor Certificate and a valid CPR for Professional Rescuer Certificate.

HEARING OF EUGENE M. LEGGETT,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION ON REMAND
CITY OF TRENTON, MERCER	:
COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions of the Board and the respondent's reply thereto, filed in accordance with the directives of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.4, were fully considered by the Commissioner in making his determination herein.

The Commissioner has independently and carefully reviewed and considered this matter, which was remanded as a consequence of the State Board's reversal of the Commissioner's Interlocutory Order, affirming the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), precluding the introduction of the Board's expert's report and testimony on the basis of such report's untimely submission. Upon such review, the Commissioner must agree with the determination of the ALJ that the contribution made to the record in these further proceedings on remand has not made any meaningful addition to the evidence in this matter, such that the ALJ and the Commissioner would be compelled to alter their previous determination that the within four charges of unbecoming conduct must be dismissed because the Board has failed to establish a prima facie case in support of these charges. See In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Eugene M. Leggett, School District of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, decided by the Commissioner of Education, December 17, 1998. In so determining, the Commissioner is obliged to remain mindful of the well-established principle that, in order for him to sustain charges brought pursuant to the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq., the District bears the burden of proving such charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13 (App. Div. 1974).

In this matter, as the Commissioner previously recognized, > the focus of the examination here is not whether the Commissioner, or any other individual for that matter, in retrospect, might find that there were more appropriate procedures which might have been utilized under the circumstances which occurred in these incidents but, rather, the relevant issue in this tenure case is whether the Board has established that respondent's actions breached any established standard of behavior.

> (emphasis added) (In re Leggett, Slip Opinion at 22)

Once again, as aptly expressed by the ALJ here, > in the absence of any evidence that [Leggett] can be held to the standards of a trained individual in the performance of a task which is well acknowledged to require significant training and examination leading to certification, there is no basis to fault him for using the wrong method to achieve successful rescues. [T]here is no basis for finding that Leggett violated the professional standards to which the Board and the Commissioner have a right to hold him. (Initial Decision at 7)

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is affirmed for the reasons clearly stated therein and the within tenure charges are hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning nontenured teacher challenged the Board's decision to deny her a contract for the 1997-98 school year and sought a contract of employment for the 1998-99 school year. Petitioner withdrew all claims except those for back pay for April through June 1998. (Petitioner's long-term substitute teacher position ended on April 3, 1998.)

The ALJ determined that it was clear that it was the Board's intent to reappoint petitioner notwithstanding the negative recommendation of the superintendent at its August 1997 Board meeting. The Board acted on that intent at the September 24, 1997 Board meeting. Petitioner's salary pursuant to her reappointment for the 1997-98 school year was not in dispute; the Board, however, did not pay petitioner after April 4, 1998 although it was obligated to do so and it did not reassign her to other teaching duties, although it was entitled to do so. The ALJ concluded that petitioner was entitled to summary decision compensating her for the balance of the 1997-98 school year April through June 1998. The ALJ ordered the Board to compensate petitioner for back pay in the amount of $8,991.75 with reimbursement to the Department of Labor for unemployment compensation benefits for the same period.

The Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own and directed payment of back pay tc petitioner.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY,

Respondent.

Dennis M. DeSantis, Esq., for respondent (Destribats, Campbell, DeSantis, Magee & O'Donnell, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 28, 2000 Decided: May 12, 2000

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ:

This matter commenced on June 10, 1998, when Toni Healy (hereinafter petitioner) filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education seeking a determination that the Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton (hereinafter respondent) had wrongfully deprived her of her contract of employment for the 1997-98 school year. The petition of appeal also sought an order awarding petitioner a contract of employment for the 1998-99 school year. An answer on behalf of respondent was filed on June 26, 1998, and on July 13, 1998, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13.

A prehearing conference was conducted on September 14, 1998, at which time the following were identified as the issues for determination at hearing:

1. Was respondent arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable in declining to offer petitioner a full-time position for 1997-98?

2. Was respondent arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable in declining to offer petitioner a contract of employment for 1998-99?

3. Is issue number one barred by the regulatory statute of limitations?

4. What are the appropriate remedies, if any?

A hearing was scheduled for February 8 and 9, 1999, at the Trenton office of the Office of Administrative Law. Prior to that time, however, respondent filed a motion for summary decision together with supporting papers. Petitioner filed a response opposing the motion for summary decision and on July 26, 1999, the undersigned issued an order denying respondent's motion for summary decision. That order is attached hereto and made a part hereof as if set forth herein at length. By letter dated August 25, 1999, counsel for petitioner wrote to the undersigned with a copy to counsel for respondent, as follows:

> We respectfully request that an initial decision issue in this matter. We believe that Ms. Healy's salary claim for the period of April 3, 1998 to the end of the school year is warranted.

The undersigned replied by letter dated October 4, 1999, as follows:

> Although N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.1(a)2 provides that no technical forms of motion are required, something more specific that your August 25, 1999 letter to me is necessary to advise your adversary and me concerning what relief you are requesting. As my July 26, 1999 letter order stated, your pleadings seek relief in addition to compensation for April-June 1998 and if you now are abandoning those other claims, we need to know that. Please advise in writing whether you are moving for partial summary decision or whether the only remaining claim is for salary for the period April 3, 1998 to the end of the school year and you are therefore, moving for summary decision.

Thereafter in a letter dated November 2, 1999, petitioner withdrew all claims except those for back pay for April through June 1998 and reiterated her request for judgment on the papers. The undersigned advised the parties by letter dated February 1, 2000, that she would interpret the November 2, 1999 letter from petitioner's counsel as petitioner's motion for summary decision, following which counsel for respondent advised that he would be filing opposition to the motion. Respondent's brief and the certification of Michael Luciano were received on February 25, 2000. Petitioner filed two responding certifications on March 14, 2000, hers and one from Andrew Kaszimer. Nothing further having been received from respondent, the record closed on March 28, 2000.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts relevant to a determination of this matter are not in dispute, and I therefore FIND the following as uncontested facts.

Petitioner was employed initially by respondent from September 1, 1996 to June 30, 1997, as a Special Education Teacher. At the conclusion of her first year of employment she was informed by her supervisors that her contract would not be renewed for the upcoming school year. Thereafter petitioner wrote to respondent requesting a statement of reasons for her non-renewal. Respondent replied by letter dated July 23, 1997, as follows:

> This letter is in response to your request for the reason your employment as a teacher in the Hamilton Township School District was not renewed for the 1997-98 school year.

The reason is as follows:

> "Your supervisors were not satisfied with the behavior management system you utilized for students."

Petitioner subsequently requested a hearing before respondent Board of Education for the purposes of convincing the Board to rehire her. This hearing was held on August 27, 1997. At the hearing Andrew Kaszimer, President of the Hamilton Township Education Association, spoke on petitioner's behalf, whereafter petitioner herself addressed the Board. Following discussion it was the consensus of the Board not to accept the superintendent's recommendation for non-renewal of petitioner's contract. The Board did not adopt a resolution that evening reappointing petitioner, however, because Joan Josephson, Esquire, the Board attorney who was present at the meeting, advised the Board that statutory law provided for the superintendent to make final recommendations concerning reappointment of staff. On August 27, 1997, when the attorney rendered such advice to the Board, it was in fact inaccurate because on August 6, 1997, the State Board of Education had issued its decision in Angelo Velasquez v. Board of Education of the Borough of Brielle, Monmouth County, EDU 8276-95, wherein it reversed the Commissioner's decision so interpreting the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1.* At the next Board meeting on September 24, 1997, Board member Philip Bowe made a motion "to reappoint the employee discussed in Executive Session (petitioner) at the discretion of the Superintendent." This motion was subject to a roll-call vote and carried with five in favor, two opposed and two abstaining. On September 24, 1997, there were no vacant full-time positions in respondent's district for which petitioner held a valid certificate/endorsement. On November 5, 1997, petitioner was assigned as a long-term substitute for a special education teacher who was on an approved maternity leave. An unsigned copy of petitioner's contract for this position provides:

> It is agreed between the Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton in the County of Mercer, party of the first part, and Toni Healy, party of the second part, that said Board of Education has > employed and does hereby engage and employ the said party of the second part as a Long-term substitute teacher in public schools, under the control of said Board of Education, from the 5th day of November, 1997 to the 3rd day of April 1998, at the annual salary of $30,321, prorated, to be paid in equal biweekly installments. That the said party of the second holds an appropriate certificate issued in New Jersey now in full force and effect, and that said person, before entering upon the duties of such position, will exhibit the certificate to the Superintendent of Schools/designee in which such school is situate.

* Although the decision was issued on August 6, 1997 by the State Board of Education, it was not mailed to the parties in the case (neither of which were represented by Hamilton Board counsel) until sometime thereafter. Accordingly, the failure of Board counsel to be aware of the State Board decision, a mere three weeks after it was issued, was completely understandable.

> The said party of the second part hereby accepts the employment aforesaid and agrees to faithfully do and perform duties under the employment aforesaid, and to observe and enforce the rules prescribed for the government of the school by the Board of Education.
>
> It is hereby agreed by the parties hereto that this contract may at any time be terminated by either party giving to the other sixty days notice in writing of intention to terminate the same, but that in absence of any provision herein for a definite number of days notice, the contract shall run for the full term named above.
> Dated this 25th day of November 1997 Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton, in the County of Mercer.

 You are replacing a teacher who is on a leave of absence and who may be returning to his/her position at the expiration of this contract. This position is non-tenurial and carries no seniority eligibility. You will be assigned to the Substitute Teacher List if no position is available at the [missing word or line].

Although the copy of the contract in the record is unsigned and respondent was unable to produce a signed copy at the request of the undersigned, a March 10, 2000 certification, signed by petitioner, states "I signed a contract for a long-term substitute position with the Board under the assumption that I would receive a permanent appointment when such became available. I was under this assumption due to a conversation between Michael Luciano and Andrew Kaszimer, during which Mr. Luciano related such information to Mr. Kaszimer. (See certification of Andrew Kaszimer.)" The referenced certification of Mr. Kaszimer states that (at some unidentified time) Michael Luciano (Assistant Superintendent) informed him that when a permanent position became available with the Board, petitioner would receive the assignment. Mr. Kaszimer's certification states that he related this information to Ms. Healy. At the conclusion of petitioner's employment as a long-term substitute, the superintendent determined not to reassign her to any position for the remainder of the contract year, stating as his reason concerns related to her performance. Petitioner requested and was granted an appearance before the Board of Education at its regular meeting on March 25, 1998. The minutes from that meeting recite:

I. Personnel Matter – T.H.

A. President of HTEA stated his understanding of the Velasquez ruling as it applied to T.H.

1. State Board upheld ruling of Administrative Law Judge allowing employees to convince boards of education to renew their contract in the event they are not recommended by the Superintendent.

2. HTEA understanding was that the Board was agreeable to reappointing T.H.

3. Two special education positions were filled this evening T.H. was not appointed.

B. Statement by T.H.

1. Employee concerned with her professional reputation.

2. Employee believed she did a good job and alleged that she was not told otherwise by her supervisor.

Board member questioned why employee sought representation if there were no concerns with performance.

Employee responded she did not seek or have union representation when she met with her supervisor.

3. Employee distributed letters from colleagues and parents in support of her performance.

Andy Kaszimer and T.H. left at 10:55 P.M.

C. Board attorney advised the Board that only the Superintendent has the authority to rehire the employee at this time.

1. Velasquez only applies when a non-tenured teacher is not recommended for rehire.

2. In August, the Board passed a motion to appoint T.H. at the discretion of the Superintendent.

D. Discussion by Board Members

1. Concern was expressed that the motion was structured based on the situation at the time. (At the time there was no position open. Employee was appointed as long-term sub.)

2. Question was raised regarding employee's performance.

Assistant Superintendent expressed some concerns that were raised in the employee's recent evaluation. Based on performance, the administration is not recommending the employee for reappointment.

The meeting adjourned at 11:07 P.M.

Respondent took no official action with respect to petitioner on March 25, 1998 or thereafter. Petitioner filed the petition of appeal commencing the within action on June 10, 1998. The additional salary petitioner would have received had she continued to work until June 30, 1998 was $8,991.75.

APPLICABLE LAW AND DISCUSSION

The once classic statement of the standard for granting or denying summary judgment set forth in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954), was modified in Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995). Therein the Court held that the standard to be applied is now the same as the standard for determining motions for involuntary dismissal under R. 4:37-2(b) and for determining motions for judgment under R. 4:40-1 and R. 4:40-2. Trial courts considering motions for summary judgment are now required to engage in the same type of evaluation, analysis or sifting of evidential materials in light of the burden of persuasion that applies if the matter goes to trial. The Court explained:

> Under this new standard, a determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." . . . Credibility determinations will continue to be made by a jury and not a judge. If there exists a single, unavoidable resolution of the alleged disputed issue of fact, that issue should be considered insufficient to constitute a "genuine" issue of material fact for purposes of Rule 4:46-2. . . . The import of our holding is that when the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law, . . ., the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. (Citations omitted) Id. at 540.

The Court noted that to send a case to trial knowing that a rational decision-maker could reach but one conclusion was indeed "worthless" and would "serve no useful purpose." The purpose of this new standard, the decision explained, was to encourage trial courts not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves.

In the present matter, although none of the facts set forth hereinabove under the Findings of Facts section are in dispute, respondent nevertheless argues that summary decision may not be granted in favor of petitioner because of the absence in the record of any evidence concerning mitigation. In this regard, it is true that individuals such as petitioner must exercise reasonable diligence and ordinary care to mitigate damages. It is also true that there are no facts in the record concerning mitigation. The principle is well established, however, that in an action to recover damages for wrongful discharge from employment the defense that a petitioner earned or could have earned a livelihood during the term of his/her discharge is an affirmative one and the burden of proof rests upon the breaching employer. West Orange Supplemental Instructors Association, et al. v. Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, 92 N.J.A.R. 2nd (EDU) 287, 302, citing Roselle v. LaFera Contracting Company, 18 N.J. Super. 19, 28 (Ch. Div. 1952). The discovery period in the within matter was over long before respondent filed its motion for summary decision and certainly long before petitioner filed her motion. Accordingly, considering the burden of proof as required by Brill, supra, the absence of any evidence in the record concerning mitigation prevents respondent from prevailing on the damages issue, not petitioner. Furthermore, although it is true as respondent argues in its most recent brief in opposition to petitioner's motion for summary decision that petitioner may have received unemployment compensation during the months in issue, it is not true that the respondent Board is entitled to have those monies deducted from the damage award it owes to petitioner. Neither may petitioner retain any monies paid to her as unemployment compensation when she receives her damage award from the Board of Education, however. Petitioner is statutorily obligated to return those monies to the Department of Labor. See N.J.S.A. 43:21-5(b) and Jeffrey Bellamy v. Essex County Hospital Center, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) 652, 654 . After reporting the full amount of back pay to the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund and deducting and forwarding the appropriate employee contributions to the TPAF, as a practical matter, respondent may transmit to the Department of Labor any monies owed by petitioner for reimbursement of unemployment compensation, but neither petitioner nor respondent may be unjustly enriched at the cost of the unemployment compensation fund.

The other legal issues remaining in this matter have already been addressed in my Letter Order, dated July 26, 1999, which is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) requires a petitioner to file a petition of appeal no later than the ninetieth day "from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education. . . which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." Under the facts as I have found them to be hereinabove, the earliest date upon which petitioner could be charged with notice of all the facts necessary to file a petition of appeal is March 25, 1998, the date of the board of education meeting at which her continued employment was discussed. The petition was filed on June 10, 1998, well within the 90-day period following March 25, 1998. As I ruled on July 26, 1999, when respondent determined by recorded roll call vote on September 24, 1997, to reappoint petitioner, it granted her a new annual contract of employment for the 1997-98 school year (as it would have done in August of 1997, but for its mistaken belief that it could not). Although documentation in the record indicates that respondent "approved" petitioner's "reappointment" to the long-term substitute position on November 25, 1997, in fact she had already been reappointed at the September 24, 1997 meeting, subject only to the specific assignment, and it is clear that respondent never acted at a public meeting to invoke the termination clause which is standard in a non-tenured teacher's contract. See, e. g., the language of the termination clause in the contract quoted hereinabove at pages 4-5. The fact that respondent may have been confused about what it was doing with respect to petitioner's reappointment does not negate the legal effect of its official action reappointing her. It is clear that it was the respondent's intent to reappoint petitioner notwithstanding the negative recommendation of the superintendent at its August 1997 board meeting; it acted on that intent at the September 24, 1997 board meeting. The annual salary to be paid to petitioner pursuant to her reappointment for the 1997-98 school year is not in dispute; after April 3, 1998, respondent did not pay petitioner, although it was obligated to do so, and it did not reassign her to other teaching duties, although it was entitled to do. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner is entitled to summary decision compensating her for the balance of the 1997-98 school year (April 4, 1998 to June 30, 1998.) It is therefore ORDERED that respondent compensate petitioner for back pay in the amount of $8,991.75. It is further ORDERED that both petitioner and respondent cooperate to ensure that the Department of Labor is reimbursed for unemployment compensation benefits which petitioner received related to her period of unemployment from April 3, 1998 through June 30, 1998, if any.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

RE: Toni Healy v. BOE of Township of Hamilton
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 6173-98

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the verified pleadings in this matter, the respondent's motion for summary decision with supporting certification, petitioner's letter brief in opposition to the motion, the tape of oral argument on May 15, 1999, respondent's supplemental certification and petitioner's reply. I have also conducted my own research and have come to the conclusion that when respondent "reappointed" petitioner at its meeting on September 24, 1997, "at the discretion of the Superintendent," petitioner was granted a new annual contract of employment for the 1997-98 school year, subject to specific assignment at the discretion of the Superintendent. This is the only legally permissible interpretation of the resolution passed by the Board on September 24, 1997; boards of education have been specifically authorized by the Legislature to appoint teaching staff members by a recorded roll call majority vote and the board may not delegate its responsibility to appoint teaching staff members to any of its agents, officers or other employees. Cardman v. BOE of Millburn, 1977 S.L.D. 746, 750. Accordingly, the "discretion of the Superintendent" must necessarily refer to assignment, not to reappointment. If the Board failed to pay petitioner's salary for September and October 1997, I CONCLUDE that the June 10, 1998 petition is out of time to seek reimbursement for those months. I assume that she was in fact paid for November 5, 1997 to April 3, 1998, the time she actually did teach, and her claim for salary from April 3 to the end of the school year is not barred by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c). Whether petitioner ever signed or saw the contract which appears at Exhibit F of Mr. Luciano's February 9, 1999 certification is irrelevant in light of my foregoing conclusion that respondent granted her a new teaching contract on September 24, 1999; pursuant to the Commissioner's decision in Bickford v. BOE of Elmwood Park, 1978 S.L.D. 855, cited by petitioner, because the respondent took no official action to terminate the contractual relationship, it remained legally in effect for the duration of the 1997-98 school year. For these reasons, respondent's motion for summary decision dismissing the petition of appeal is DENIED.

I am reluctant to issue an initial decision at this point because there is no pending cross-motion for summary decision and the petition of appeal does seek an order granting relief in addition to compensation for April-June 1998 (although we did discuss the merits of the additional prayer for relief.) In view of my legal conclusions herein, I am not certain what else, if anything, remains to be decided in this case. Please advise if a hearing date is necessary.

This order may be reviewed by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION either upon interlocutory review, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10, or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

Very truly yours,

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GEORGE MAMUNES,	:
PASCACK VALLEY REGIONAL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN	:	DECISION
COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent tenured social studies teacher, based on accusations that he uttered racist, sexist and/or derogatory comments to students in his third-period classroom on seven occasions.

Based on the evidence presented at hearing, the ALJ concluded that the Board had established, by a preponderence of the relevant credible evidence, that the incidents serving as a basis for the tenure charges had occurred. However, the ALJ found that respondent's actions did not warrant termination in light of his prior lengthy and unblemished record of service, finding that, although he exercised poor judgment and was insensitive in his remarks to students, respondent did not intend his comments to be racist, sexist or demeaning to his students. Therefore, the ALJ recommended the penalty imposed be the forfeiture of 120 days of salary withheld following the certification of tenure charges, the forfeiture of two months' additional salary and that merit increments be withheld until the end of the 2000-2001 school year.

The Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the ALJ for the reasons expressed therein as the final decision in this matter. In so determining, the Commissioner noted that, although he is without authority to compel respondent to attend training classes designed to address and prevent insensitive conduct in the classroom, it would be appropriate for the Board to do so within the confines of respondent's tenure and contractual rights. OAL DKT. NO. EDU 7245-98N

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF GEORGE MAMUNES, PASCACK VALLEY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY

Rodney T. Hara, Esq., for Petitioner (Fogarty and Hara, attorneys)

Harold N. Springstead, Esq., for Respondent (Springstead and Maurice, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 29, 1999 Decided: May 5, 2000

BEFORE BARBARA A. HARNED CALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this proceeding, petitioner, Board of Education of the Pascack Valley Regional High School District (Board), charges respondent, George Mamunes, a tenured teacher employed by the Board, with unbecoming conduct and seeks his dismissal from his tenured position. On July 13, 1998, the Board filed seven tenure charges against Mr. Mamunes with the Commissioner of Education. The tenure charges assert that Mr. Mamunes exhibited unbecoming conduct on seven occasions in the classroom when he uttered racist, sexist and/or derogatory comments to students and when he required students to chant "school sucks" in the classroom. Respondent's answer to the tenure charges was filed with the Commissioner on July 23, 1998. The matter was transmitted by the Commissioner to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 30, 1998 for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A pre-hearing conference was held on September 9, 1998 and a pre-hearing order was entered on September 11, 1998. On October 9, 1998, a telephone conference was held at the request of the Board who objected to responding to some of the interrogatories propounded by respondent on the basis that complying with the discovery request would violate the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:3-6.5 which govern the confidentiality of student records. On that date an interlocutory order was entered stating that the Board would not be compelled to respond to any interrogatory seeking pupil records in the absence of a court order or consent of the parents. The hearing was conducted on November 23, 24, 25, December 1, 9, 15, 17, 18, and 30, 1998. Post-hearing submissions were filed by respondent on January 28, 1999 and by petitioner on January 29, 1999, on which latter date the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

The parties stipulated that all procedural requirements of the Tenure Act were satisfied in this matter. It is undisputed that during the 1997/1998 school year, Mr. Mamunes taught five college preparation classes in World History at Pascack Valley Regional High School (Pascack).

Five students, J. M., R. L, P. W., A. S. and A. K. and the mothers of J. M. and P. W. testified on behalf of the Board. J. M. is a fifteen-year-old student at Pascack and at the time of her testimony she was in the tenth grade. J. M. was an entirely credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. During the 1997/1998 school year J. M., who is African-American, was in ninth grade and a student in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class. In November 1997, the school held a pep rally on a Friday afternoon. J. M. attended the rally, as did Mr. Mamunes. The next Monday in history class Mr. Mamunes congratulated J. M. on her performance on the dance team during the pep rally. J. M., who was not on the dance team, thought that Mr. Mamunes had confused her with J. D., an African-American who was on the team. J. M. told Mr. Mamunes that she was not on the team. He replied,

"Oh sorry, I didn't mean to get my colored people mixed up" (P-1, Exhibit A). The comment was not made in a joking manner and it upset, embarrassed and discouraged J. M. She was the only African-American student in the third period World History class and the comment made her feel bad because her mother told her that "colored people" was a derogatory term. No one before had ever used the term "colored people" in referring to J. M.

J. M. is friends with J. D., the African-American student who was on the dance team. However, they do not look alike in that J. D. is lighter-skinned than J. M., taller than J. M. and they have different hair styles (P-2). J. D. is two years older than J. M and had been in Mr. Mamunes' class two years earlier. Other students in the class were shocked by Mr. Mamunes' comment to J. M. and looked at her to see how she would react. After class, students in the class told her they were shocked by the comment. Even students in other classes asked her how she felt about the comment. J. M. told the other students that she was embarrassed and upset. She felt awkward that everyone seemed to know about the comment. Throughout the following week, students came up to J. M. and said things like "I can't believe he said that." She was trying to forget the incident but the other students were upset and kept asking her about it.

That night J. M. told her parents about Mr. Mamunes' comment. They were both very upset. Her father wanted to go to the school and "punch him out." Her mother is a teacher and could see no reason why a teacher would ever make a comment like that made by Mr. Mamunes. J. M.'s mother eventually got the family to calm down. J. M. did not want her parents to go to the school to discuss the matter because she was afraid of a reaction and told them that she wanted to handle the situation in her own way. Her parents respected her wishes and "let it go" because she wanted them to. That night J. M. also spoke with her friend A. S., whom she has known since kindergarten. A. S. was shocked and upset and asked J. M. what she was going to do about it. At some point, Mr. Mamunes apologized for the comment but he did not do so right after the incident and he did not ask her how she felt about the comment.

J. M. described another incident that occurred after the class had taken a quiz. Most of the students did not do well on the quiz. Mr. Mamunes closed the door to the classroom and told the students to say in unison "school sucks" (P-1, Exhibit A). J. M. recalled that Mr. Mamunes said everyone had to say, "School sucks." However, other students recalled that Mr. Mamunes did not require the students to say the phrase but rather permitted them to do so. J. M. was amazed because no other teacher had students say anything like that about school and she had no idea why Mr. Mamunes had the class say this phrase. This happened at least one other time but J. M. did not remember much about the second incident.

A third incident in World History class involved a student C. A. J. M. testified that C. A. is overweight and had suffered a lot of ridicule in the past from other students because of her weight. C. A. is a sweet person but keeps to herself. One day in class, Mr. Mamunes told C. A. to get up and close the classroom door because "you need the exercise." J. M. did not remember when this incident occurred. J. M. felt horrible for C. A. and felt it was really wrong for Mr. Mamunes to make such a statement because teachers are supposed to build students up. Others in the class were also shocked by the comment.

J. M. also described an incident that occurred in the third period World History class during the 1997/1998 school years when the class was studying the Middle East. A. K., who is Indian, was a student in the class. A. K.'s father owns a convenience store. One day in class, Mr. Mamunes made a statement to A. K. that "your dad owns a porno shop" and that A. K. did not have to go to college because he could work in the store like his father. J. M. did not recall what was going on in the class at the time but both statements were made in front of the entire class. J. M. is friends with A. K. who gives out a lot of candy in class from his father's store. He is a "tough type of kid" who "blew off" Mr. Mamunes' comment. A. K. frequently "blows off" such things. J. M. did not speak with A. K. about the comments. She does not recall ever hearing A. K. say that he did not need an education, although other students recalled that he did so when joking with his friends.

J. M., her brother and her parents have a tradition of going to church together on Martin Luther King, Jr. Day and learning about him and the civil rights movement. While school was in session on that day during the 1997/1998 school year, J. M. did not attend classes but rather celebrated with her family. The next day in class Mr. Mamunes said to J. M. " you should be proud of Martin Luther King." J. M. thought he said it in a sarcastic tone. There was a discussion in class about King at the time but the tone of the comment by Mr. Mamunes was sarcastic and it upset J. M.

She felt the comment was demeaning because of his tone and in the context of the earlier remark he made to her and to A. K. about "colored people." J. M. did not recall whether the comment was said in front of the class. J. M. never told Mr. Mamunes that she was upset about the comment because she was afraid of more "smart remarks" from him. She did tell her parents and they were upset. J. M. was told by the other students that Mr. Mamunes holds a Martin Luther King Day celebration in his class but she did not know if other teachers also did so.

J. M. described a video that Mr. Mamunes showed during the third period class for two days in March 1998. The title of the video was "Not Without My Daughter" and it told the story of an American woman who married an Iranian man and went to Iran with her husband for a visit. The husband "tricked" his wife because he had no intention of returning to the United States but rather intended that his wife and daughter would remain in Iran with his family. The movie depicted in various ways the manner in which women are treated in a fundamentalist Moslem society and the woman's attempts to leave Iran with her daughter in spite of her husband's and his family's opposition. At various points during the movie, Mr. Mamunes made comments such as "good, she's listening now;" "she should have listened before" and "women should listen to their husbands." When the woman was beaten in the movie, Mr. Mamunes said that she deserved it. Mr. Mamunes did not stop the movie to discuss his comments and J. M. did not understand why he made them. There was a discussion about the movie before and after it was shown but no discussion while it was running. J. M. recalled that Robert McKenna, a student teacher at the time, was in the class when the video was shown, although Mr. McKenna testified that he was not present at that time. After class, J. M. spoke with students A. S., P. W. and R. L., about the movie and Mr. Mamunes' comments. P. W. was very upset and said she could not take it any longer. As with A. S., J. M. has known R. L. since kindergarten. However, she did not meet P. W. until high school. J. M. does not "hang out" with P. W. or R. L. While she may occasionally go out with R. L., she seldom sees P. W. socially.

On March 27, 1998, Frank D. Sullivan, the Vice Principal of Pascack and Doug Burek, the Board's affirmative action officer, interviewed J. M. She did not know at the time that they had already spoken with P. W. Mr. Sullivan told J. M. that P. W. mentioned her name in connection with Mr. Mamunes and he asked her what she had heard in class. Neither Mr. Sullivan nor Mr. Burek asked J. M. any specific questions. J. M. was not afraid to speak with Mr. Sullivan nor Mr.

Burek but was afraid of more "smart remarks" from Mr. Mamunes. Sullivan and Burek asked her to submit a written statement, which she did on March 30, 1998 (P-1, Exhibit A). In the statement, she wrote of the pep rally and "school sucks" incidents but did not write about the other incidents of which she testified (P-1, Exhibit A). She did not include all the incidents in her written statement because she wrote only of those that most affected her. J. M. prepared the written report during her lunch period and did not have time to give it much thought. She wrote it in the same room with A. S. who also gave a written statement but they sat in opposite sides of the room and did not discuss what to put in their statements. R. L. was not in the room when A. S. prepared her statement. When Sullivan and Burek interviewed J. M. and Mr. Sullivan asked her a general question about what she heard in class, J. M. forgot some of the incidents until she went home and thought about them. She does not think she spoke with A. S. about her meeting with Sullivan and Burek and did not discuss the meeting or her statement with other students because Mr. Sullivan told her not to do so. J. M. thinks she told Sullivan and Burek about the video incident during her interview but was not sure if she told them about the "porn shop" comment.

On cross examination, J. M. acknowledged that class participation counted a lot in Mr. Mamunes' class, more so than in other classes. Nine weeks into the school term, J. M. completed a survey for Mr. Mamunes in which she stated she liked the fact that class participation counts a lot, liked the exercises done in class and enjoyed working in groups (R-2). Mr. Mamunes asked the students to tell him what they liked and disliked about class on the back of the survey form. J. M. completed the back part of the survey and did not indicate that she disliked any comments made by Mr. Mamunes (R-2). However, the form was completed before the incidents occurred. Other than on the form, J. M. did not tell Mr. Mamunes about anything she disliked in class. J. M. thought Mr. Mamunes' class was "alright," at least during the first marking period. Between November 1997 and April 1998 she got along with Mr. Mamunes, volunteering for example to write on the blackboard. Towards the end, however, J. M. did not enjoy the class as much but she is not the type to tell a teacher she does not like his class. J. M. did not recall Mr. Mamunes using a "Devil's Advocate" method of teaching. She received either an A or a B from Mr. Mamunes.

N. M., J. M.'s mother, testified on behalf of the Board. I found N. M. a completely credible and convincing witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. N. M. has been an elementary school teacher in Newark for 29 years. She, her husband, her daughter, J. M. and her son, C. M., sit together every night at dinner and talk about the day's events. One night, J. M. told them that Mr. Mamunes had closed the classroom door and said "school sucks." N. M. was shocked because she felt it was an inappropriate remark for a teacher to make or have students repeat. In her opinion, it is not a positive statement about school and teachers should instill positive attitudes in their students about school. As a teacher, N. M. would never make such a statement about school.

On another evening after school, J. M. told her parents that Mr. Mamunes had confused her with J. D. and that when J. M. told him this, he replied he "gets his colored people mixed up." N. M knows J. D. who is very tall, light-skinned and two years older than J. M. J. M. and J. D. look nothing like each other. Both N. M. and her husband were very angry, upset and offended about this comment. The comment was offensive to N. M. as both a mother and a black person. Even if the comment was meant as a joke, it was offensive to her and her family. Her husband was so upset about the derogatory comment that he wanted to "punch out" Mr. Mamunes. N. M. was particularly concerned because it was J. M.'s freshman year in a new school and she wanted her daughter to feel comfortable, and not hurt, in her new school. Even though both parents were very angry, they decided not to raise the matter with school officials for a number of reasons. Firstly, N. M. teaches her children that as blacks there will be negative things said to them in life and that they cannot react to all such comments. Rather they have to restrain themselves, disregard the comment and find strength in their family. In addition, J. M. did not want her parents to raise the issue. N. M. and her husband decided to respect J. M.'s wishes in order to give her some independence and strength. In effect, they "turned the other cheek" and gave Mr. Mamunes the benefit of the doubt. N. M. never told anyone in the district how offended she and her family were because they decided to handle it within the family. N. M. did, however, talk to both her children about the comment and told them to tell their parents if anything derogatory was said to them.

The day after Martin Luther King Jr. Day, J. M. told her parents that Mr. Mamunes told her that she "should be proud of Martin Luther King," or words to that effect. J. M. thought that Mr. Mamunes said this sarcastically and she was upset about the comment. N. M. has taught her children to respect Martin Luther King Jr. and J. M. is very proud of him and her race. She was let down by Mr. Mamunes' remark. If Mr. Mamunes said "we" should be proud of Martin Luther King instead of "you" should be proud, it would have been a far different statement.

J. M. also told her mother about the video shown in class. While N. M. could not remember exactly what Mr. Mamunes said, she thought he said "good for her" or something like that when a woman was beaten in the movie. N. M. could not recall specifically J. M. mentioning any other comments made by Mr. Mamunes.

N. M. feels that Mr. Mamunes is prejudiced and not just toward blacks. That Mr. Mamunes has conducted a classroom presentation on Martin Luther King Jr. Day for the past fifteen years and coordinated a fund drive for famine relief in Ethiopia does not alter N. M.'s opinion that he is prejudiced because she questions the sincerity of his civil rights activities in light of the comments he made. The totality of what happened in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class in 1997/1998 leads her to conclude that he is prejudiced. Some of the comments he made to the children were inappropriate and degrading. Teachers make a big impact on children and their job is to raise the children up and not to put them down. N. M. believes that Mr. Mamunes is not sensitive to hurting children and she does not want similar comments to be made to her son or to other children. N. M. acknowledged that J. M. had a positive experience with Mr. Mamunes in the beginning of the school year and that she does not think that J. M. would let problems with Mr. Mamunes affect her academic performance.

When the issues involving Mr. Mamunes first arose, J. M. wanted to come forth and provide information and N. M. initially said no due to a "mother's protectiveness." When J. M.'s name was mentioned to Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek, J. M. told her mother that she had to come forth in order "to stop this." N. M. and her husband have always taught their children to tell the truth.

R. L. is a fifteen-year-old student at Pascack and was in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class during the 1997/1998 school year. I found R. L. to be an entirely credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. At some point during the school year, R. L. was called out of class to Mr. Sullivan's office. Mr. Burek was also there. Mr. Sullivan asked R. L. if anything had happened in Mr.

Mamunes' class and then he asked her to put it in writing. He did not tell R. L. what to write but rather just to write down anything that happened that was strange or different. Mr. Sullivan also told her not to talk with anyone about their meeting or her statement and she did not do so. When she wrote her statement R. L sat at a separate lunch table. She did not discuss her statement with either J. M. or P. W. Nor was R. L. aware at the time that P. W. had complained about Mr. Mamunes. In her written statement, R. L related two incidents involving A. K.; two incidents involving J. M. and one incident involving C. A. (P-1, Exhibit C).

The first incident involving A. K. occurred sometime in November 1997 when Mr. Mamunes told A. K. that his father owns a porn shop and that A. K. did not have to go to college and he did not need an education because he will take over his father's shop (P-1, Exhibit C). This comment was made in front of the entire class. R. L. was surprised by the comment because it is not something a teacher would ordinarily say to a student. She did not know A. K.'s reaction to the comment and she did not speak to him about it. However, R. L. felt the comment insulted A. K. R. L would have been insulted if the comment were made to her because education is very important to her. R. L. agreed that A. K. is outgoing, joked around with other students and brought candy to class but did not recall A. K. ever saying that he did not need an education because he could work at his father's store, although other students testified that he did joke around in this manner. The second incident involving A. K. occurred when Mr. Mamunes told A. K. that the only reason A. K. reads the paper is because he unpacks the newspapers at his father's store (P-1, Exhibit C). This comment was made when the class was talking about current events. R. L. does not know if A. K. felt insulted by the comment because she did not speak to him about it. However, she felt it was insulting and she would have been insulted if the remark had been made to her.

The first incident involving J. M. occurred around the time of the winter pep rally when Mr. Mamunes told J. M. that he "gets his colored people mixed up" (P-1, Exhibit C). R. L. was surprised by this comment and felt that J. M. would be upset by it because she was the only black in the class and may already have felt different. In addition, the comment was made in a different tone. R. L. did not know whether Mr. Mamunes meant the comment as a joke and did not know whether he later apologized. J. M. told R. L. during class that she was upset by the comment. If the comment had been made to R. L. she would have been upset. The second incident involving J. M. occurred when

Mr. Mamunes told J.M. that she should be grateful for Martin Luther King (P-1, Exhibit C) because she would not be where she is today without him. Other students, including J. M., recalled the comment as "you should be proud of Martin Luther King." R. L. initially thought this comment was made to J. M. on Martin Luther King Day when the class was discussing Dr. King and that J. M. was in class on that day. She later testified that the comment was made on or about Martin Luther King Day. J. M. was upset by this comment because it insulted her. R. L. did not know specifically why it upset J. M. but if the comment had been made to her, she would have felt "put down."

The fifth incident related in R. L.'s written statement occurred when Mr. Mamunes told C. A. "to shut the door, you need the exercise" (P-1, Exhibit C). C. A. has a weight problem and is very quiet and shy. R. L. could not believe what Mr. Mamunes said to C. A. Even though R. L. did not discuss the remark with C. A. or any other student, she felt that Mr. Mamunes had insulted and upset C. A. R. L. does not recall when this incident occurred.

While not included in her written statement, R. L. testified as to other incidents. R. L. recalled these incidents when she was asked to prepare another written statement in preparation for this hearing. Before a quiz or a test, Mr. Mamunes would close the classroom door and tell the class to say "school sucks." R. L. recalled that he made all the students say this, although other students recalled that he did not require the statement but rather permitted the students to say "school sucks." R. L. felt this was inappropriate because teachers should encourage students about school. R. L. also testified about the video "Not Without My Daughter." During the movie, Mr. Mamunes made comments to the effect that "she's getting what she deserves." The comments upset R. L. R. L. did not recall whether Mr. Mamunes stopped the movie to discuss his comments. After the movie ended, there was a discussion but R. L. did not remember what was said. R. L. spoke with classmates during the movie about the comments and they were surprised and upset about them, although she does not recall which classmates she spoke with. R. L. did not talk with J. M., A. S. or P. W. about the video after class. She does not remember if she sat with J. M., A. S. and P. W. during the movie nor whether any articles were handed out before the movie or a quiz given after the movie. R. L. did not include these incidents in her written statement because she just did not remember them at the time.

R. L. never discussed any of the incidents with Mr. Mamunes. She is not comfortable discussing things that upset her with her friends and to do so with a teacher would be even harder. R. L. agreed that Mr. Mamunes' teaching style is different from some other teachers. There is less memorization in his class and more "thinking things out." R. L. got on okay with Mr. Mamunes while she was in his class. In the World History class, R. L. sometimes sat next to A. S., J. M. and P. W. but there were no assigned seats and sometimes other students would sit with them.

P. W. is a fifteen year-old student at Pascack and was in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class during the 1997/1998 school year. P. W. was an entirely credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. In the classroom, R. L., J. M. and A. S. sat one behind each other in a row by the window. P. W. sat in a different row and there were empty desks between her and the other girls. P. W. found Mr. Mamunes' class to be very different from her other classes in the way he would say things to get the students to learn. She could not actually describe his teaching techniques but that she found some of them to be good and some to be bad. Throughout the year, Mr. Mamunes made comments that P. W. "shrugged off." However, the comments he made during the showing of "Not Without My Daughter" upset P. W. very much and she decided to complain to the Vice Principal, Mr. Sullivan.

P. W. related Mr. Mamunes' comments during the video were as follows: "it's the wife's fault;" "the husband did nothing wrong - he's just fighting for his rights" and "she should just listen to her husband." Additionally, when the husband beat his wife, Mr. Mamunes said "she's getting what she deserves." P. W. was very hurt and shocked by his comments. She felt as though what happened to the wife in the movie could happen to her and it made her feel "selfless." There was no discussion about Mr. Mamunes' comments either during or after the movie.

After class, P. W. was walking toward the lunchroom with A. S. and she started crying. A. S. asked her if she wanted to see Mr. Sullivan and P. W. decided to do so. P. W. was crying during the meeting with Sullivan and she told him about the comments Mr. Mamunes made and that it could not have been part of a discussion. P. W. also told Mr. Sullivan about the comment made to J. M. regarding "colored people" because it was a comment she would never forget. She could not recall if she told Mr. Sullivan about any other comments during this first meeting. At that time, it was mainly the video comments that were on her mind. Mr. Sullivan told P. W. that he would get back to her. P. W.'s closest friends are L. Q. and S. R. and they knew she was doing something about the video comments and may have known that she went to see Mr. Sullivan. P. W. told her parents about her reaction to the comments made during the video and her mother wanted to go to the school but P. W. told her not to.

The following week, P. W. met with Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek. They asked her if Mr. Mamunes had made any racial or discriminatory comments but did not ask her any specific questions. At their request, P. W. submitted a written statement (P-1, Exhibit B). She did not discuss her written statement with anyone else. The first incident related in P. W.'s written statement was the comment to C. A. to "close the door please. You need the exercise" (P-1, Exhibit B). P. W. was amazed that Mr. Mamunes would make such a comment to an overweight student. Although P. W. did not discuss the comment with C. A., if P. W. were C. A. she would have been very upset. P. W. found the comment very hurtful and unfair to C. A. and would not have been able to stay in the class if she had been C. A. According to P. W., some students in class laughed at the comment and thought it was funny, although other students did not recall any such reaction. This incident occurred towards the beginning of the school year.

The second incident related in P. W.'s written statement is the "school sucks" incident (P-1, Exhibit B). P. W. recalled that someone in class complained about a quiz and Mr. Mamunes replied that school is not your friend. Then Mr. Mamunes asked someone to close the door. When the door was closed Mr. Mamunes said "everyone say with me 'school sucks.'" When some students did not make the statement, Mr. Mamunes said "come on, you're thinking it - say it with me." At first P. W. thought it was funny; however, she did not say "school sucks" with the class. The incident did not have much effect on P. W., although she felt it was not right for a teacher to make such a comment about school. A teacher should be promoting school, not putting it down. This incident also occurred towards the beginning of the school year.

The third incident related in P. W.'s written statement was the comment by Mr. Mamunes to J. M. that he was "sorry I get my colored people mixed up sometimes" (P-1, Exhibit B). This occurred around Thanksgiving. P. W. was surprised by this comment. J. M. is her friend and it bothered P. W. that J. M. was being hurt because of her skin color. Mr. Mamunes did not make this comment in a joking manner and even if he had, it would not change P. W.'s negative reaction to the comment. P. W. told J. M. that she would have left the class but J. M. "shrugged it off" and did not want to talk about it. The whole class heard the comment. Mr. Mamunes did not apologize at the time of the comment or at the end of the class. He appeared embarrassed. J. M. did not do or say anything in class about the comment because, according to P. W., she was "holding it in." P. W. discussed the comment with her mother that night. Her mother asked P. W. if she should go to the school but P. W. told her not to because J. M. did not want the incident to go any further.

The fourth incident related in P. W.'s written statement concerned the comments made during the movie and indicated that Mr. Mamunes had said "it's her fault. She shouldn't have believed him. He wasn't doing anything wrong" (P-1, Exhibit B). The fifth incident(s) related in P. W.'s written statement was that Mr. Mamunes "talks to people about their religions and cultures" (P-1, Exhibit B). P. W. explained that she meant the comments Mr. Mamunes made during the video and the comments he made to A.K. The last incident related in P. W.'s written statement was that Mr. Mamunes "told a student that their father owns a 'porn shop'" (P-1, Exhibit B). P. W. explained that she was not in class when this comment was made but that J. M. told her about the comment. If such a statement had been made to P. W., it would make her feel very low and upset.

Although not in her written statement, P. W. testified that Mr. Mamunes also told A.K. that he did not have to go to college because his father's shop "would keep him alive". This was not said in the context of any class discussion and the whole class heard the comment. P. W. was stunned by the remark because it is not true that A. K. does not need a college education and she was surprised that a teacher would make such a remark. P. W. did not include this incident in her written statement because she did not remember it then. Since she wrote her original statement, P. W. has had more time to think about the incidents in class. P. W. recently overhead a conversation between A. K. and another student, P. H. P. H. asked A. K. why he was going to testify at this proceeding and whether Mr. Mamunes had said anything to him. A. K. replied "yes." P. W. told her mother about each statement made by Mr. Mamunes as they occurred.

P. W. had a B average with Mr. Mamunes and received an A from the teacher who took over the class when Mr. Mamunes was suspended. She acknowledged that she received extra help from Mr. Mamunes on a paper. P. W. agreed that Mr. Mamunes had "unique teaching techniques." He would joke with the students and try to be their friend. She felt it was an "okay" approach but to her the fact remains that he was putting down education. P. W. completed a class evaluation during the first semester (R-3). In the evaluation she described the class as "fun" and stated that it was "easy to listen to Mr. Mamunes" (R-3). She also noted that the students were allowed to bring two pages of notes to a test (R-3). However, P. W. noted that she did not like it when Mr. Mamunes told her or the class "to figure it out for yourself' (R-3). For example, Mr. Mamunes told her this when she asked when the next paper was due. P. W. felt that Mr. Mamunes' answers to her questions were not informative enough. P. W. could not recall whether any of the incidents she described occurred before she completed the class evaluation.

P. W.'s mother, R. W., testified on behalf of the Board. R. W. was an entirely credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. R. W. has a doctorate in Biomedical Research in the field of hematology. She speaks with her daughter about school all the time, particularly during dinner and when she calls P. W. from work. During the 1997/1998 school year when P. W. was a freshman, she was often angered about comments made by Mr. Mamunes in the third period World History class, comments which P. W. viewed as racist and sexist. P. W. was particularly upset about comments Mr. Mamunes made during the showing of "Not Without My Daughter." Her daughter told P. W. that Mr. Mamunes said to the class "now she's getting what she deserved" when the wife was beaten by her husband during the movie. P. W. was infuriated about this remark and so was her mother because children should be taught not to condone abuse.

P. W. told her mother that she had gone to see Mr. Sullivan and told him what had occurred in class. She also told her mother that there had been a number of comments throughout the year that were insulting and this comment was the straw that broke the camel's back. R. W. was surprised that P. W. had the courage to go to Mr. Sullivan but proud that she was standing up for herself and speaking out. The authority of teachers in school can be intimidating to students and they fear retaliation if they speak against a teacher. Therefore, R. W. thinks it "terrific" that her daughter spoke out against something that is wrong. She did not go to speak with Mr. Sullivan at that time because P. W. wanted to handle it on her own and R. W. respected her wishes.

Prior to the video incident, P. W. had told R. W. about the comment Mr. Mamunes made to J. M. This was shortly after Thanksgiving. P. W. told her mother that Mr. Mamunes said to J. M. that he "gets his colored students mixed up." P. W. was incensed. She had never heard the phrase "colored people" but knew it was part of a past vernacular and thought it was derogatory. P. W. was very angry for J. M. and she and some other friends offered to go with her to complain about the comment but J. M. told them that the best way to deal with prejudice is to ignore it. R. W. believes the comment was inappropriate because there is no room for prejudice. She offered to go with P. W. to complain about the comment but P. W. said no because J. M. did not want to take it any further.

R. W. agreed that P. W. thought some of the discussions in Mr. Mamunes' class were interesting. She did not recall calling Mr. Mamunes about one of P. W.'s papers, although she agreed she may have done so. R. W. never discussed any of the comments with Mr. Mamunes. She did not discuss the video comments with Mr. Sullivan before P. W. went to him with the problem but she did speak with Mr. Sullivan after P. W. went to him. He asked her if she would participate in an investigation and talk with the Board's attorney.

A. S. is a fifteen year-old student at Pascack and was in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class during the 1997/1998 school year. A. S. was an entirely credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. A. S. was an alternate on the dance team last year and a member during the 1998/1999 school year. In March 1998, A. S. was asked to see Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek. They asked her if anything was going on in Mr. Mamunes' class that should be discussed. They did not ask her about any specific events but did ask her to tell them anything that came to her mind about racism or discrimination in Mr. Mamunes' class. They did not ask that she tell them everything that might have occurred. Mr. Sullivan subsequently asked A. S. to come to his office a second time to write a statement (P-1, Exhibit D). He did not tell her what to write in the statement. A. S. wrote the statement based on what she remembered at the time. She did not have a lot of time to write it and did not realize the importance of the written statement. Some of the incidents she testified to were not included in her written statement because she did not realize the importance of other incidents until she spoke with the Board's attorney. A. S. did not know that J. M. had also spoken with Mr. Sullivan, although they both wrote their statements in the same room.

A. S. danced during the pep rally in November 1997. The next class day Mr. Mamunes congratulated her. After he also congratulated J. M. and she told him she was not on the team, he said "I'm sorry, I didn't mean to get my colored people mixed up." The only black student on the dance team is J. D., who is taller and lighter-skinned than J. M. and has shorter hair. They do not look anything alike. A. S. could not understand why Mr. Mamunes would make such a comment because, to her, it is not right to use the term "colored people." After the comment, J. M. turned and looked at A. S. with a look of incomprehension. During lunch that day, J. M. told A. S. that she was upset and did not understand why Mr. Mamunes would make such a comment. That afternoon, A. S.'s mother drove her and J. M. home from school. A. S. told her mother about the comment. J. M. was sitting on the edge of the car seat, tense and into herself. She was not comfortable talking about the comment with A. S.'s mother. About a week later, J. M. told A. S. that she wanted to talk with Mr. Mamunes about the comment. A. S. went with J. M. to see Mr. Mamunes. J. M. told Mr. Mamunes that she was upset about the comment. Mr. Mamunes said "I'm sorry" but nothing else. He did not appear sincere to A. S. and the apology did not make J. M. feel any better. A. S. included this incident in her written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

A. S. was in class when Mr. Mamunes told J. M. that "you should be proud of Martin Luther King." To A. S., the comment was not said in a good way but rather as though Mr. Mamunes was talking down to J. M. The comment did not need to be said in class and the way Mr. Mamunes said it was wrong. A. S. spoke with J. M. after class about the comment. J. M. was offended and asked "why does he say things like that?" A. S. did not include this incident in her written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

A. S. described incidents when Mr. Mamunes would have the class say "school sucks." He would ask a student to close the door and then have all the students say "school sucks." If a lot of students did not say the phrase, Mr. Mamunes would have the class repeat it. This occurred more than once although A. S. did not recall it occurring in connection with a quiz as other students testified to. These incidents made no sense to A. S. She does not think the phrase should be said in school and especially not by a teacher. A. S. spoke with J. M. about these incidents. At first they laughed but when they thought more about it they realized it just did not make sense for a teacher to say that about school. A. S. included this incident in her written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

During the video "Not Without My Daughter," A. S. testified that Mr. Mamunes said "she's finally getting what she deserved" when the husband was beating his wife. During her testimony, A. S. did not recall any other comments Mr. Mamunes made during the video. However, in her written statement she stated that he made the following comments: "she is finally coming around;" "it was her fault that her husband did this and she should just listen" (P-1, Exhibit D). In her written statement, A. S. did not use the phrase "she's finally getting what she deserved" (P-1, Exhibit D). She was not aware that she had to write down every comment he made. Mr. Mamunes did not stop the video to discuss his comment nor did he discuss the comment afterward. Mr. Mamunes' comment made no sense to A. S. because the wife obviously was not getting what she deserved since no one should be beaten. A. S. spoke with J. M. about the comment and they agreed that Mr. Mamunes was wrong. A. S. included this incident in her written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

A. S. described comments that Mr. Mamunes made to A. K., such as his father's shop is a porn shop and A. K. does not need to go to college. Mr. Mamunes also told A. K. that the only reason he reads newspapers is because he unpacks them at his father's store. These comments were made in front of the entire class and A. S. was not sure whether they were made in a joking manner. To A. S. the comments made no sense and were wrong. A. K.'s father's store is a convenience store, not a porn shop. At about this time, another student, P. H., used to fool around with A. K. that the store was a porn shop. However, to A. S. it is different when a teacher makes the comment. The college statement surprised A. S. because it was not something you would expect to hear from a teacher. A. S. believes everyone needs to go to college. She did not understand why Mr. Mamunes made these remarks. They did not need to be said and a teacher should not cut students down or insult them. If these comments had been made to A. S. they would have hurt her. She asked A. K. if they bothered him but they just "rolled off his back." A. S. agreed that A. K. frequently brought in candy to class and gave it to his friends. She could not recall when these comments were made to A. K. but thought it may have been during the second marking period. Nor could A. S. recall when in class the comments were made or what was being discussed at the time. A. S. did not include these comments in her written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

A. S. described a student in class, C. A., as being overweight and the subject of ridicule because of her weight. A. S. first recalled that Mr. Mamunes told C. A. to turn off the lights because she needed the exercise. After a clarifying question, however, she recalled that Mr. Mamunes told C. A. to close the door because she needed the exercise. A. S. believes Mr. Mamunes made such comments to C. A. more than once. A. S. felt bad for C. A. If a similar comment was made to A. S., she would be upset. In her opinion, comments like that should not be made to teenage girls, especially in light of the eating disorders that can plague teenage girls. A. S. did not include the comment to C. A. in her written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

A. K. is a sixteen year-old student at Pascack and was in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class during the 1997/1998 school year. With one exception noted below, A. K. was a credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt his following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. In 1997, A. K. had lived in New Jersey for three years after immigrating with his family from India in 1994. During a class discussion one day, Mr. Mamunes said that A. K.'s father owned a porn shop. A. K. thought this was an inappropriate comment for a teacher to make in front of the class but he did not really care since he thought Mr. Mamunes was joking around. A. K. acknowledged that he frequently brings candy into class and jokes around with his friends, some of who have kidded him that his father owns a porn shop. At another time, the class was talking about going to college. Mr. Mamunes said that A. K. did not have to go to college because he would take over his Dad's store. Again, A. K. did not care about the comment; he just "blew it off." A. K. has joked with his friends that he does not have to go to college because he can work at home. Mr. Mamunes made a third comment when the class was discussing a current event and A. K. said something about it. Mr. Mamunes then told the class that A. K. only reads papers because he unpacks them at his father's store. A. K. did not take the comment seriously because he thought Mr. Mamunes was joking with him.

A. K. also described an incident involving C. A. As C. A. went to turn off the lights and close the classroom door, Mr. Mamunes said she needed to work out. A. K. saw C. A.'s face and she looked mad. Most students were laughing at C. A. Mr. Mamunes should not have made the comment because many people made fun of C. A. because of her weight.

Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek interviewed A. K. in March 1998. According to A. K. he told Sullivan and Burek about the above incidents. However, A. K.'s demeanor when he testified in this regard changed and he became defensive. Both Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek testified that A. K. denied any comments were made to him when they interviewed him. Based on his change in demeanor and Sullivan and Burek's testimony, A. K. was not credible during this part of his testimony. In November 1998, Mr. Sullivan called A. K. and asked him to write down what happened and A. K. provided a written statement on November 16, 1998 in which he acknowledged the comments made to him by Mr. Mamunes (P-3).

A. K. likes Mr. Mamunes and thought World History was a good class. He received some extra help from Mr. Mamunes on a Watergate project for about five or six minutes but could not remember any other tutoring or extra help nor could he remember whether Mr. Mamunes worked with him on a paper on eastern cultures in the library on April 1, 1998. A. K. did speak with Mr. Mamunes about a problem he had with another student involving a calculator but did not know if Mr. Mamunes spoke to the other student thereafter.

Frank D. Sullivan testified on behalf of the Board. Mr. Sullivan was a credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt his following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. Mr. Sullivan has been employed by the Board for thirty years and is the Vice Principal at Pascack. In that capacity he supervises students, scheduling, operational matters and is responsible for disciplinary matters. At Pascack, the students have the right to present a grievance or complaint and the Student Handbook encourages them to bring such grievances to their counselor, the vice principal or the principal.

On March 19, 1998, P. W. came to see Mr. Sullivan during the middle of the day. It was her lunch period and she came directly from Mr. Mamunes' class. P. W. was very upset and told him she had come to file a complaint. She explained she had just come from Mr. Mamunes' class where he had shown a film about an American woman who married an Iranian and that during the course of the movie, the wife was beaten by the husband. P. W. told Mr. Sullivan that Mr. Mamunes had made various comments during the movie such as "she was getting what she deserved" and "she should do what her husband wants" and "it's her fault." Mr. Sullivan did not ask P. W. if the entire video was shown in one class or if any documents had been handed out in the class. It was apparent from the way P. W. presented herself that she was very upset. She was red in the face and gave a forceful presentation. P. W. told Sullivan that she had spoken with her parents and friends, although she did not say specifically what friends. Her parents urged her to come forward. Mr. Sullivan asked P. W. if she thought Mr. Mamunes was trying to stimulate discussion because the comments conveyed to him by P. W. seemed very harsh. P. W. repeated Mr. Mamunes' comments and added that he was sexist. P. W. then told Mr. Sullivan that Mr. Mamunes had said to J. M. that he was "sorry, I get my colored people mixed up," or words to that effect. P. W. told Mr. Sullivan that J. M. was upset with this comment. P. W. did not tell Mr. Sullivan about any other incidents during this meeting. Mr. Sullivan told P. W. that he would report the matters to the Board's Affirmative Action Officer and get back to her. Mr. Sullivan did not take notes of his initial meeting with P. W. and he could not recall how long this meeting lasted. He did not tell P. W. at the end of this meeting not to talk to anyone about their meeting.

At the time Mr. Sullivan met with P. W., the school's principal, Dr. Barbara Sapienza, was attending a conference. When she returned on March 25, 1998, Mr. Sullivan told her about his meeting with P. W. Dr. Sapienza told him to contact the Board's Affirmative Action Officer, Doug Burek. It was her decision to bring in Mr. Burek. In conducting an affirmative action investigation, the investigators gather information and talk to any one who is mentioned in the course of the investigation. It was Mr. Burek's responsibility to ensure compliance with affirmative action procedures.

Early on March 25, 1998, Mr. Sullivan called Mr. Burek who came to Pascack shortly thereafter. Sullivan asked P. W. to come to his office and he introduced her to Mr. Burek. Mr. Burek asked P. W. to relate what she had told Mr. Sullivan on March 18, 1998. P. W. related the incident with J. M. in which Mr. Mamunes had made the "colored people" remark. P. W. further told them that Mr. Mamunes would close the classroom door and make students yell "school sucks." P. W. did not think this was an appropriate thing for a teacher to do. She also felt that girls were not treated equally in Mr. Mamunes' class. She was not questioned further on this comment. P. W. related to Sullivan and Burek that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. that he did not have to go to college because he could run a store like his father. According to P. W., other students were also upset and she mentioned the names A. S., R. L. and J. M. Mr. Sullivan did not know whether these students were friends of P. W. and that was not an important consideration to him. During this second meeting, P. W. also gave more description about what the video was about and, to Mr. Sullivan, she was still upset about that incident. Mr. Sullivan did not take any notes during this meeting. However, Mr. Burek did take notes which do not indicate that P. W. was upset (P-4).

Neither Mr. Sullivan nor Mr. Burek questioned or directed P. W. as to her statements. Nor did they cross-examine her. Rather, they were just gathering information and let her tell them what was on her mind. She volunteered the additional incidents beyond what she related during her first meeting with Mr. Sullivan voluntarily and without them asking. Mr. Sullivan again asked P. W. if Mr. Mamunes could have been stimulating discussion. She "bristled" and repeated how upset she and other students were. In addition, P. W. did not indicate that any closure had occurred after the comments were made. If a teacher makes such remarks to stimulate discussion, there should be such closure during which the teacher indicates that he or she made the statements in order to stimulate discussion by the students. Mr. Sullivan concluded that Mr. Mamunes had not conducted any closure regarding the remarks that had upset the students.

Mr. Sullivan viewed the comments by Mr. Mamunes to A. K. as inappropriate and typecasting. Comments such as those made to J. M. and A. K. were out of line and insensitive. Mr. Sullivan also felt the "school sucks" comments to be totally inappropriate, indefensible and a bad example. Mr. Sullivan concluded that Mr. Mamunes closed the door on those occasions because he knew what he was doing was inappropriate. Mr. Sullivan explained that ninth graders are subject to a lot of rebellion and comments like "school sucks" reinforce that rebellion.

Following instructions he received from Principal Sapienza, Mr. Sullivan subsequently asked P. W. to submit a written statement. On March 30, 1998, during her lunch period P. W. wrote her statement (P-1, Exhibit B). In her written statement P. W. included additional incidents than those she had related during her interview with Sullivan and Burek. The additional incidents she described were that Mr. Mamunes told C. A. to close the door because she needed exercise; that he spoke to students about their religions and cultures and that he told A. K. his father owns a porn shop (P-1, Exhibit B). To Mr. Sullivan the remarks to C. A. and A. K. were embarrassing and held them up to ridicule. There are no circumstances under which such comments would be appropriate in the classroom. Because of the additional incidents in her statement, Mr. Sullivan concluded that P. W. had "repositioned" herself after her interview. By that he meant that it appeared there were comments made throughout the year that upset P. W. and the video comments were the "straw that broke the camel's back." Mr. Sullivan believes that after her interview, P. W. thought some more about the entire time she spent in Mr. Mamunes' classroom and then recalled the other incidents. There were also things missing in her written statement that P. W. had told Sullivan and Burek during her interview. However, Mr. Sullivan does not interpret that as meaning she was withdrawing the assertion that Mr. Mamunes made those comments.

Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek interviewed the students mentioned by P. W. on March 27, 1998, i.e. A. S., J. M., R. L. and A. K. All four students were in the same class at the time and Mr. Sullivan had a secretary bring them one at a time to his office. Burek and Sullivan did not interview any other students. As they did with P. W., they did not ask leading questions of any of these students. Rather, Mr. Burek explained that their names were given to them by P. W. and asked if they had any information regarding Mr. Mamunes. Sullivan and Burek were trying to receive information and not tell the students what they wanted to know. If a student did not relate an incident mentioned by another student, Sullivan and Burek did not ask them about it. Nor did they ask, for example, when the comment was made to J. M. All information that Sullivan and Burek received during the interviews was volunteered by the students. As he did with P. W., at the end of each interview with the students, Mr. Sullivan cautioned them not to talk about what was said during the interview with anyone other than their parents because he wanted to avoid rumors and/or retaliation. He also told the students that if they had any other information to get back to him. It is common for students to come back to him with additional information after a meeting.

When interviewed on March 27, 1998, A. S. told Sullivan and Burek about the "colored people" remark to J. M. and the "school sucks" incidents. She also told them about the comment to J. M. that she "should be grateful to Martin Luther King, because of him you have equality." Neither Sullivan nor Burek asked A. S. what was going on in class at the time. A. S. was upset during the interview about what had been said by Mr. Mamunes. Mr. Sullivan did not recall whether A. S. told them that J. M. was her friend or that J. M. was upset about the comments. At that point, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek had not interviewed J. M. As with P. W., Mr. Sullivan subsequently asked A. S. to submit a written statement. She did so on March 30, 1998 (P-1, Exhibit D). In her written statement, A. S. repeated the "colored people" incident with J. M. and the "school sucks" incidents (P-1, Exhibit D). However, she added the "Not Without My Daughter" incident which she had not discussed during her interview. Neither during her interview nor in her written statement did A. S. refer to any comments made to A. K. by Mr. Mamunes.

On March 27, 1998, Sullivan and Burek interviewed J. M. They told J. M. that her name was mentioned by P. W. and asked her to tell them what she heard. J. M. first related the incident with the dance team and Mr. Mamunes' "sorry, I get my colored people mixed up" comment. She told them that the comment was very upsetting to her and her parents. J. M. also mentioned the "school sucks" incidents, the statement to A. K. that he did not have to go to college and the statement to J. M. that she should be grateful to Martin Luther King. Mr. Sullivan did not recall what J. M.'s reaction was to the Martin Luther King comment. As with the other students, Mr. Sullivan subsequently asked J. M. to submit a written statement which she did on March 30, 1998 (P-1, Exhibit A). J. M.'s written statement on the "colored people" comment was consistent with what P. W. and A. S. had told Sullivan and Burek. However, in her written statement J. M. did not mention the comment to A.K. nor the Martin Luther King comment to herself (P-1, Exhibit A). Her written comment on the "school sucks" incident that "this has happened more than once" (P-1, Exhibit A) was not mentioned in her interview.

When interviewed on March 27, 1998, R. L. referred only to the comment to A. K. that he did not need to go to college. R. L. was fearful, close to tears and very reluctant to talk to Sullivan and Burek. Mr. Sullivan thought she feared retaliation from Mr. Mamunes but there is no reference to such a fear in Mr. Burek's notes (P-4). In her subsequent written statement, R. L. added the comment to A. K. that his father owned a porn shop; the comment to J. M. that he gets his colored people mixed up; the comment to C. A. about her needing exercise; the comment to J. M. regarding Martin Luther King and the comment to A. K. about his reading newspapers only because he unpacks them at his father's store (P-1, Exhibit C). This additional information was consistent with what Sullivan and Burek had been told by the other students. On April 2, 1998, R. L.'s father called Mr. Sullivan and said he was worried about retaliation and wanted no further discussions with R. L. to occur without his presence.

Mr. Sullivan has had no disciplinary problems with A. S., J. M., P. W. or R. L. All are good students who earn A's and B's. He has received no information that would lead him to believe that any of these students would not tell the truth. Mr. Sullivan found no inconsistencies in the student's statements even though P. W. added incidents in her second interview and she and R. L. added incidents in their written statements. Ninth graders are very nervous about talking to administration and it is not unusual that they add information in subsequent interviews or written statements.

Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek also interviewed A. K. on March 27, 1998. A. K. told them he had no information to give them. Mr. Burek asked if he had heard anything said of him during the third period class and A. K. responded no. They did not ask him any further questions. Since A. K. had given them no information, Mr. Burek wrote nothing down in his notes about this interview (P-4). Mr. Sullivan explained that A. K. had received a one-day suspension in February 1998 for taking another student's calculator, throwing it on the floor and breaking it. Mr. Sullivan investigated the matter. He believes A. K. was reluctant to communicate with him because of the discipline. When A. K. first entered Sullivan's office, he looked worried and Mr. Sullivan told him not to worry, that he had done nothing wrong. Mr. Sullivan thought A. K. lied to him during the February investigation and that he lied to him during the March 27, 1998 interview.

Mr. Sullivan acknowledged that he never evaluated Mr. Mamunes nor sat in on his classes. Nor did he contact Mamunes' supervisor and did not know if the supervisor was ever contacted by anyone regarding Mr. Mamunes' evaluations as a teacher. Mr. Sullivan did not review Mr. Mamunes' evaluations nor did he speak with any of his colleagues. After March 27, 1998, Mr. Sullivan's involvement in the matter was very limited.

Douglass Burek testified on behalf of the Board. Mr. Burek was a credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt his following testimony as FINDINGS

OF FACT. Mr. Burek is the Health and Safety Officer for the Board. In this capacity he has many duties including those of Affirmative Action (AA) Officer for the district's two high schools. He has served as the AA Officer for six years. Mr. Burek attended a one-day training program run by the State for AA Officers and has attended several AA workshops. The district has AA guidelines that Mr. Burek tries to follow. His duties as AA Officer include assisting the Superintendent in implementing AA policies; developing and implementing a three-year plan which sets objectives and a time frame within which to achieve those objectives and investigating complaints of harassment or discrimination.

R-4 is a policy on sexual harassment which sets forth procedures for investigating such complaints. Attached to the policy is a checklist for Affirmative Action Investigation which indicates that a written statement should be obtained from the grievant before the grievant is interviewed (R-4, page 4). Although Mr. Burek initially testified that he tries to follow this checklist in all his AA investigations, he later testified that since R-4 is a policy on sexual harassment and this was not a sexual harassment matter, he did not follow the checklist. In any event, he testified it is difficult sometimes when a student comes in and is very upset. It would be inappropriate to tell the student that he could not talk with her or him until a complaint is put in writing. The checklist also indicates that a log should be maintained which Mr. Burek identified as P-4. The sixth step on the checklist is to interview the witnesses. Mr. Burek explained that when he interviews witnesses at this stage he tries to represent both the person being accused and the complainant. It is not intended to be a witch-hunt but an initial investigation during which his job is to gather information. At this point, Mr. Burek interviews only those whose names are mentioned in interviews. In the past, he has had parents threaten court action when he interviewed students who did not come forward on their own. Accordingly, he does not interview anyone not mentioned in other interviews unless directed to do so by the Superintendent. In cases involving complaints by students against a teacher, one of the first things that Mr. Burek considers is whether it involves grades. That was not an issue in this case, however.

On March 25, 1998, Mr. Burek received a call from Mr. Sullivan regarding a possible affirmative action matter at Pascack. He immediately went to the high school and met with Sullivan. Mr. Sullivan briefed Burek on his meeting with P. W. who had complained to Sullivan about comments made by Mr. Mamunes during a video and a comment to J. M. about "colored people." Sullivan and Burek interviewed P. W. that day. Mr. Burek made "topic notations" of the interview (P-4). This was an initial interview designed just to listen and get the facts.

At the beginning of the interview, Mr. Sullivan introduced Mr. Burek as the district AA Officer. Burek explained his position to P. W. and that he is appointed by the Board and that every district has an AA Officer. He then asked P. W. to repeat her complaints to him. At this point in an investigation, the AA Officer is neutral. He does not ask questions but rather just listens. Burek's notes indicate that P. W. told him of the "colored people" remark to J. M.; the "school sucks" incidents; the comment to A. K. about working in his father's store; the comments made during the video and P. W.'s perception that girls are not treated equally in Mr. Mamunes' class (P-4). P-4, which Mr. Burek described as a log, is paraphrased from the notes he took during interviews. The log is not a verbatim record of the interviews Mr. Burek had with students and he may have left words out that were spoken during the interviews.

Mr. Burek did not ask P. W. how many times the "school sucks" incident occurred nor did he ask any questions about her perception of unequal treatment of girls. Although his log does not reflect precise quotes from P. W. of what Mr. Mamunes said during the video, Mr. Burek recalled that P. W. told him of the following comments: "she deserved it;" "it was her fault;" and "she should listen to him." At the end of the interview, Mr. Burek thanked P. W. and told her that he hoped she spoke with her parents about the interview but that she should not speak with anyone else. He also told her that if she thought of any further information she should come back to him and Mr. Sullivan. These instructions are standard procedures which Mr. Burek followed in all the interviews he conducted regarding Mr. Mamunes.

Mr. Burek then briefed Principal Sapienza on the interview and she indicated that she would advise the Superintendent, Dr. Willett. During her interview, P. W. indicated that J. M., A. S. and R. L. were upset about the comments and that comments had been made to A. K. Accordingly, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek decided to interview those students. Mr. Burek did not know how many other students were in the third period World History class. The following day, March 26, 1998, there was a fire at Pascack and they were unable to conduct the interviews. On March 27, 1998, Sullivan and Burek interviewed the four students. The same introductory and concluding comments that were given to P. W. were given to the other four students. As with P. W., Burek asked no specific or leading questions of the students.

A. S. was the first interviewee. Her statements regarding the "colored people" comment made to J. M. and the "school sucks" comments were very consistent with P. W.'s statements. While Mr. Burek indicated in his testimony that Mr. Mamunes made the class stand and say "school sucks," there is no mention of standing in his log (P-4). Although P. W. did not mention the Martin Luther King comment during her interview, A. S. did refer to it during her interview and indicated that Mr. Mamunes told J. M. that if not for Martin Luther King she would not have equality. Those precise words are not found in Mr. Burek's log because they were paraphrased but he distinctly remembers A. S. using those words because it "stuck in his mind" (P-4). A. S. further stated that J. M. was upset that day (P-4). However, A. S. did not include the Martin Luther King comment in her subsequent written statement (P-1, Exhibit D).

Sullivan and Burek then interviewed J. M. and asked her to tell them about anything that had upset her in class. She first related the mixing up colored people comment which was consistent with the statements of P. W. and A. S. J. M. was very upset by this comment. In addition, J. M. spoke of the "school sucks" incident, which was consistent with the statements of P. W. and A. S. and the comment to A. K. about working in his father's store which was consistent with the statement of P. W. J. M. also spoke of the Martin Luther King comment and indicated she was very upset about it.

R. L. was interviewed next. She was very upset and Mr. Burek recognized that it was an intimidating situation for a student. R. L. made one statement about the comment made to A. K. about his father's store. After that comment, Burek was afraid that R. L. would completely break down and therefore he did not push R. L. for any further statements.

A. K. was the last interviewee on March 27, 1998. He had nothing to share with Sullivan and Burek. Mr. Burek did specifically ask A. K. if he heard a comment by Mr. Mamunes that A. K. did not have to go to college because he could work in his father's store. A. K. denied hearing the comment.

Mr. Burek has no notes of the above interviews other than his log and he did not know whether Mr. Sullivan took notes. After the interviews, Mr. Burek updated Dr. Sapienza. On March 27, 1998, Mr. Mamunes called Mr. Burek at home and asked him what the accusations were and who was filing the complaint. Mr. Burek would not reveal the names of the students to Mr. Mamunes and referred him to the Board's attorneys. On March 30, 1998, Mr. Sullivan called Mr. Burek and told him that they were getting written statements from all the interviewed students with the exception of A. K. Mr. Burek called P. W.'s mother and left a message notifying her that P. W. had filed a complaint and that it was being investigated. P. W.'s mother advised Mr. Burek that P. W. had kept her apprised of what was happening.

On April 1, 1998, Mr. Burek saw the written statements. Some of the information in the written statements was new to him, such as the comment to C..A. about needing exercise and the porn shop comment to A. K. Although it was not his understanding at the end of the interviews that additional information would be provided, it is not unusual for students to be intimidated and forget things during interviews with administration and then remember them later. In this regard, the written statements were a vehicle for the students to bring additional information to the attention of the administration. Mr. Burek felt the students were telling the truth even though there were differences between their oral and written statements. He attributed the inconsistencies to a variety of factors including the students' age, intimidation by the presence of Mr. Sullivan and himself and their emotions. Mr. Burek did not know whether the four students who submitted written complaints were friends or formed a "clic" or sat together in class. On April 20 and 21, 1998, Mr. Burek contacted the parents of the four students that submitted written statements.

On April 8, 1999, Mr. Burek, along with Dr. Sapienza, interviewed a random sample of three or four students from each of Mr. Mamunes's other classes. Mr. Burek was told to interview these students although he could not recall by whom. He did not interview any other students in Mamunes' third period class because he was not told to do so. Mr. Burek recorded the names of the students interviewed but did not note them or their comments in his log. None of these other students had anything derogatory to say about Mr. Mamunes. The interviews with these students followed a different procedure which Mr. Burek and Dr. Sapienza felt was fair. Dr. Sapienza introduced Mr. Burek as the AA Officer and he told the students he was conducting a survey of the school environment to see if people in various relationships were being treated with respect. The questions asked the students concerned their relationship with other students, with teachers and with coaches. Mr. Burek did not identify Mr. Mamunes in any of his questions nor ask about specific types of comments that may have been made because he did not want to conduct a "witch hunt" or lead the students. Mr. Burek taught for twenty years and recognizes that there are situations when students have an ax to grind and that is why he did not use Mr. Mamunes' name in these interviews. Mr. Burek did not interview Mr. Mamunes. At this point he was under the direction of the Superintendent's office and he was not directed to interview Mr. Mamunes.

After reviewing the written statements, Dr. Sapienza ascertained who the "obese girl" was and directed Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek to interview her and to reinterview A. K. On April 9, 1998, they reinterviewed A. K. Mr. Burek asked A. K. if Mr. Mamunes made a comment that his father owned a porn shop. A. K. replied that he had not heard such a comment. Mr. Burek took no notes of the two interviews he had with A. K. He was not sure why he did not but it could have inadvertently resulted from his "hectic effort" to update Dr. Sapienza on the status of the investigation. A. K. was not asked to submit a written statement because, according to Burek, he was not a complainant and written statements are obtained only from complainants.

Burek and Sullivan also interviewed C. A. on April 9, 1998. The same introductory and concluding remarks as with the other students were given to C. A. Mr. Burek stated to C. A. that her name had been mentioned as someone who was upset by a comment directed at her or others in class. C. A. did not respond. Mr. Burek then asked her specifically if Mr. Mamunes ever said to her that she needed exercise. C. A. replied that she had not heard such a comment. There was no entry for C. A. in Mr. Burek's log because he found the interview not significant enough to add to the log.

On April 24, 1998, a meeting was held with Superintendent Willet, Dr. Sapienza, Mr. Burek, Mr. Mamunes and his attorney and the Board's attorney present. The written statements of the students were reviewed with Mr. Mamunes and he was given an opportunity to respond to each of the statements. After this meeting, Willett, Burek and Sapienza reviewed what had occurred with the Board's attorney.

Barbara Sapienza, Ph. D., testified on behalf of the Board. Dr. Sapienza was a credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt her following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. Dr. Sapienza is the principal of Pascack and she has been in that position for seven years. In addition to serving as principal, Dr. Sapienza has served in various other capacities, including teacher, administrative assistant and director of student activities, for a total of thirty-two years at Pascack. Prior to becoming an administrator, Dr. Sapienza taught business courses. Dr. Sapienza enjoys working with the students during classroom observations, in the hall and through student activities and feels she has a cordial and open relationship with them and that students do not hesitate to come to her if they need help.

In March 1998, Dr. Sapienza was away at a conference. Upon returning, she met with Mr. Sullivan on March 25, 1998. Mr. Sullivan told her about a student who had come to him with a complaint regarding comments Mr. Mamunes made during a video and a comment made to J. M. about "getting his colored people mixed up." Dr. Sapienza told Mr. Sullivan to call Mr. Burek, without first consulting Superintendent Willett. She did not take notes of her meeting with Mr. Sullivan. After Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek met with P. W. on March 25, 1998, either Sullivan or Burek gave Sapienza an oral summary of the interview. Later that afternoon, Dr. Sapienza had a meeting with Superintendent Willett during which she updated him on the interview with P. W. and advised him that an investigation would be undertaken. At this point she had seen nothing in writing and she did not know who would be interviewed on March 27, 1998. Dr. Sapienza did not tell Mr. Sullivan nor Mr. Burek not to take a statement from Mr. Mamunes.

Following the interviews of A. S., R. L., J. M. and A. K. on March 27, either Mr. Burek or Mr. Sullivan gave Dr. Sapienza a summary of the interviews. In this summary, Dr. Sapienza was told that Mr. Mamunes made inappropriate comments in class and the comments he made during the film were described as was the "colored people" comment. Dr. Sapienza was also told that R. L. was very timid during the interview and was nervous and upset and that A.K. had no substantial information in that he either did not hear any comments or he did not remember. Dr. Sapienza advised Superintendent Willett of the summary; told him that the statements were of a discriminatory nature and gave him a few examples. Dr. Sapienza was directed by the superintendent to obtain written statements from the students. Accordingly, she directed Mr. Sullivan to obtain written statements early the following week. Dr. Sapienza did not know why Mr. Sullivan did not ask A. K. for a written statement.

Mr. Sullivan gave Dr. Sapienza the written statements contained in P-1 and she faxed them to Superintendent Willett on March 30, 1998. She called before the fax to alert the superintendent that they were coming and to ask for a "protocol" on further investigation. Superintendent Willett directed Dr. Sapienza to work with Mr. Burek and randomly select students to be interviewed from other classes taught by Mr. Mamunes that year. Superintendent Willett's instructions to Dr. Sapienza were that they were not to re-interview any student interviewed by Burek and Sullivan nor were they to interview any additional students from the third period class. Dr. Sapienza did not know exactly how many other students were in the third-period class but she thought the total class size was around seventeen. Dr. Sapienza described these instructions to her as a "protocol" for the investigation, although the protocol was not put in writing. The protocol did not include asking Mr. Mamunes or his supervisor any questions or looking at Mr. Mamunes' evaluations.

Dr. Sapienza spoke to Mr. Mamunes on March 27, 1998 and told him of the allegations regarding his conduct. A meeting between the two was scheduled for March 30, 1998 at 3:30 p.m. but she had to cancel the meeting because Dr. Sapienza could not reach the Board's attorney. On April 1, 1998, Dr. Sapienza gave Mr. Mamunes a letter signed by Superintendent Willett suspending Mr. Mamunes immediately based on "allegations [which] include comments made to students that were of a racial or ethnic nature" (P-5). Superintendent Willett further advised Mr. Mamunes that "[s]ince these allegations involve students currently enrolled in your classes, I believe that it would be in everyone's interest for you to be away from the school setting until this matter is resolved" (P-5). This suspension was with pay. No information was given to Mr. Mamunes' students regarding his absence from school. A long-term substitute teacher was brought in and was told to focus on the course content and make no statement regarding Mr. Mamunes because it was a personnel matter and that they did not know how long he would be out of school.

On April 8, 1998, Dr. Sapienza and Mr. Burek interviewed the randomly selected students from Mr. Mamunes' other classes. The interviews were conducted in the same manner for each student. Dr. Sapienza introduced Mr. Burek and explained what he did as AA Officer. The students were asked about relationships within the school, both in and out of classroom. No specific questions were asked about Mr. Mamunes or about any specific incident. Dr. Sapienza found that no significant information was derived from this process and no similar statements as those brought forward by the four third-period students were mentioned. This did not surprise Dr. Sapienza because fourteen year-old students are very reticent and afraid of retribution. She found out that students were having a good time and that people were nice to each other. The interviews were "neutral and undirected" because she did not want to make the interviews a topic of conversation among students. Dr. Sapienza took no notes of these interviews and did not know if Mr. Burek did so. They did not interview any other students in the third period class because Superintendent Willett directed them not to do so.

In addition to the randomly selected students, Dr. Sapienza decided to interview the student described in the written statements as an obese student to whom Mr. Mamunes reportedly said "close the door, you need the exercise." Dr. Sapienza was familiar with almost all the freshman and, after looking at the class list, was able to identify the reference as being to C. A., although her name had not been given to Dr. Sapienza by Mr. Sullivan or Mr. Burek. Dr. Sapienza also decided to re-interview A. K. because the reference to "porn shop" was new information contained in R. L.'s written statement which was given after A. K. was initially interviewed by Sullivan and Burek.

Dr. Sapienza and Mr. Burek interviewed A. K. and C. A. on April 9, 1998. Dr. Sapienza introduced Mr. Burek to A. K. Mr. Burek explained his position and told A.K. that they were trying to get an idea of the school environment and the relationship between students and teachers in and out of class; that they were doing a follow-up and that a statement had been made regarding A. K. Mr. Burek then told A. K. that a statement had been made that Mr. Mamunes referred to his father's store as a porn shop. A. K. paused for a long time and then said that he had not heard such a comment from Mr. Mamunes. Dr. Sapienza and Mr. Burek did not push A. K. about the comment. While Mr. Burek took notes during the interview, Dr. Sapienza did not. She did not put in writing that A. K. said he never heard the comment nor did she believe her subsequent oral summary to Superintendent Willett included a comment that A. K. said he never heard the porn shop statement.

In Dr. Sapienza's opinion and based on her knowledge of children, when they pause and "retreat" through body language, they are usually withholding something and she felt A. K. was withholding and reticent. His statement had been bothering Dr. Sapienza because he had been called in to talk with Mr. Sullivan, by whom A. K. had just been disciplined, and Mr. Burek, a stranger. She saw it as a stressful situation for A. K. Accordingly, a short time before this hearing, Dr. Sapienza decided to talk with A. K. alone. She said to A. K. that there were statements given and that one of them was a reference to a porn shop and asked him if that comment had been made. He replied yes. Dr. Sapienza asked A. K. if there were any other comments made and again he replied in the affirmative. When she asked him what comments, he described the comments set forth in his written statement of November 16, 1998 (P-3). A. K. told Dr. Sapienza that the comments were made to the entire class. Dr. Sapienza did not ask A. K. why he had not told Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek about the comments but when she asked him about the porn shop comment, he responded with a reference to the disciplinary action Mr. Sullivan had imposed on him and she interpreted this to mean that A. K. was afraid to talk with Sullivan. When she spoke alone with A. K., he seemed very open and relaxed and Dr. Sapienza felt that A. K. trusted her and was truthful with her. A. K. did not tell Dr. Sapienza that he himself had referred to his father's store as a porn shop or that he did not have to go to college because he could work in his dad's store. Dr. Sapienza asked A. K. to put the comments made by Mr. Mamunes in writing and he did so before he left her office.

Mr. Burek started the interview with C. A. by introducing himself and explaining what the AA officer does. He then told her that they were checking on the environment and relationships in the school and doing a random sampling of students. He asked for C. A.'s observations and not whether she had any complaints. He and Dr. Sapienza were trying to keep the interview "neutral." Mr. Burek asked C. A. whether she had noticed any kind of relationship between teachers and students in the hallway or in class. C. A. gave no response other than a statement to the effect that everything's fine. Mr. Burek then asked her specifically if there had been a comment made in her class about her getting up to close the door because she needed exercise. C. A. cheeks got a little flushed, she looked down and her body "retreated." She responded that she did not remember hearing such a comment in class. Neither Mr. Burek nor Dr. Sapienza pushed C. A. any further. Dr. Sapienza did not take any notes of the interview. Dr. Sapienza did not draw any conclusions at this point because she was doing a gathering of facts and not making a judgment. Afterwards, after talking to other students and reviewing the written statements, Dr. Sapienza understood why C. A. did not respond. She had been taunted in middle school about her weight and she was being interviewed by her principal and a stranger. Dr. Sapienza thought C. A. was reticent and that it was unlikely that C. A. would respond in a manner that would indicate she is overweight because it is a very sensitive issue for her. Dr. Sapienza thereafter advised Superintendent Willett of the A. K. and C. A. interviews and gave him summaries of them.

Dr. Sapienza acknowledged that C. A. had completed a class evaluation nine weeks into the World History class in which she indicated she was more confident in class; that she looked forward to class; that it's a good time and that if she has problems she can go to Mr. Mamunes who will help her understand it completely (R-5). However, Dr. Sapienza did not know whether the comment reportedly made to C. A. was made before or after she completed the evaluation.

On April 20 and 21, 1998, Dr. Sapienza met with the parents of P. W., R. L., A. S. and J. M. to update them on the investigation and to make them comfortable with her. She also met with Robert McKenna, a student teacher with Mr. Mamunes, who was at Pascack for the third marking period, from the end of January to the beginning of April, 1998. Mr. McKenna worked closely with Mr. Mamunes and had taken over all his classes except for the third period. Although he did not take over the third period class, Mr. McKenna was occasionally in the class. Mr. McKenna did not hear any of the comments mentioned by the four students and did not observe anything out of the ordinary in Mr. Mamunes' classes. According to Dr. Sapienza, Mr. McKenna provided "no significant information" regarding the investigation, by which she meant that he provided no information that would substantiate improper comments to students by Mr. Mamunes. In Dr. Sapienza's opinion, Mr. Mamunes would not say anything improper in front of another adult and thus she was not surprised that Mr. McKenna had not heard anything our of the ordinary. Mr. Burek was present at the McKenna interview and took notes but Dr. Sapienza did not know if he wrote down Mr. McKenna's statement. Dr. Sapienza did not recall any other students from Mr. Mamunes' classes coming to talk to her about him in April 1998.

Pursuant to an April 22, 1998, letter to Mr. Mamunes from Superintendent Willett (P-6), a meeting was held in Willett's office on April 24, 1998. Present at the meeting were Superintendent Willett, Dr. Sapienza, Mr. Burek, Mr. Mamunes and counsel for Mr. Mamunes and the Board. Mr. Mamunes was given the opportunity to respond to each charge and he presented a great deal of written documentation and responded at length to each of incidents raised by the students.

Thereafter, Superintendent Willett instructed Dr. Sapienza not to talk to any of the four students who gave statements. She did not do so until October 1998 when she and the Board's attorney met with P. W., A. S. and J. M. and their mothers to talk to them about this hearing and to get their cooperation. The Board attorney did the interviewing. Each student was interviewed with their mother in the room. During these interviews, Dr. Sapienza was told that C. A. had been taunted in middle school which she had not known before. Dr. Sapienza called C. A.'s parents who did not want to put C. A. through anymore. Dr. Sapienza asked her mother to talk to C. A. She told the mother that it was important to get information from C. A. because the matter was going to hearing. She explained about the comment reportedly made to C. A. and that she was aware that C. A. had been taunted in middle school. C. A.'s parents told her they would speak to C. A. and get back to Dr. Sapienza. Subsequently, C. A.'s mother called Dr. Sapienza and told her that C. A. had gotten very angry, asked "why are you asking me again" and did not want to talk about it. Dr. Sapienza interpreted this reaction as C. A.'s embarrassment about her weight.

Dr. Sapienza also spoke with R. L.'s father. Both R. L. and her father were upset and her father did not want to pursue the matter because his daughter was upset and he was concerned about retaliation. Accordingly, R. L. was served with a subpoena to testify during this proceeding. A few days before this hearing commenced, Dr. Sapienza spoke with A. K.'s father and asked him to meet with her to discuss A. K.'s written statement (P-3). Both A. K. and his father met with Dr. Sapienza. A. K.'s father was very upset when he saw his son's written statement. He explained to Dr. Sapienza that he brought his family to the United States so his children would receive a good education and he wanted his son to go to college and be successful. A. K.'s father supported A. K. testifying and A. K. agreed to do so. However, the next day A. K. was very nervous and said " I can't, I can't." He did not say why he could not. Accordingly, A. K. was also served a subpoena to testify.

The four students who signed written statements, P. W., A. S., J. M. and R. L., received an A or B grade from Mr. Mamunes and no disciplinary actions had ever been taken against them. Nor were the four students in the same classes throughout the day. Ninth graders take their Humanities courses (History and English) back to back so the students can get to know each other a little better by virtue of being together for two periods, but relationships with students in their other classes may be "momentary." Dr. Sapienza did not inquire whether the four students were friends or best friends or hung out in a group because it was not important to her. In her experience, friendships between ninth graders can change rapidly. Additionally, it did not concern her that J. M. and A. S. have been best friends for a long time because there were corroborating statements from the other two students. Dr. Sapienza did not know whether the four students sat next to each other in class or whether they confided in each other and such facts were not of significance to her.

In Dr. Sapienza's opinion the comment to J. M. regarding "colored people" (Charge 1) constitutes unbecoming conduct because it says that all African-Americans are the same with no distinguishing characteristics. Furthermore, the term "colored people" is unacceptable for anyone to use. The phrase "colored people" brings back racially inflammatory language of the 1950's and 1960's and is completely inappropriate for a teacher to say to students. A discriminatory statement such as this one is unacceptable in school because it interferes with a student's self-image and feelings and adversely affects a safe learning environment. Dr. Sapienza was not sure if "people of color" is an appropriate phrase; thought "black" is okay but that African-American is the most appropriate. Sapienza agreed that the "colored people" remark was made four months before the complaint was filed in March 1998.

The comment to J. M. regarding Martin Luther King (Charge 2) constitutes unbecoming conduct in Dr. Sapienza's opinion because it singled out J. M. for being absent on the holiday and was made to the entire class. Dr. Sapienza also believed that the comment was viewed as racially insensitive by other students which created a learning block for them, as shown by R. L. mentioning the comment in her written statement and A. S., in addition to J. M., mentioning it during their interviews (P-1, P-4). In Dr. Sapienza's opinion, it is very unusual for ninth graders in a new school to bring anything forward about a teacher and for J. M., A. S. and R. L. to mention this comment, it must have been a powerful experience for them. Dr. Sapienza agreed that the Martin Luther King comment was made two months before the first complaint was made. She did not know whether there was any discussion by J. M. of how she celebrated the holiday or if there was any other class discussion regarding Martin Luther King. When she met with J. M. and her mother in October 1998, Dr. Sapienza observed the pain that J. M. suffered as a result of the comment and it "came to life for her."

Dr. Sapienza's views the comments made to A. K. about his father's store and college (Charge 3) as unbecoming conduct because comments about a student before the entire class are totally inappropriate. A teacher should not describe a legitimate business such as owned by A. K.'s father in a derogatory manner. Moreover, going to college should be made a priority by teachers who should not limit students but reinforce the concept that education is the basis for the rest of their lives. These statements were detrimental to A. K.'s self-esteem and educational progress. Dr. Sapienza also viewed the statements as racial because A. K. was the only student of Indian descent in the class and the only student to whom such comments were made. That A.K. was apparently not upset by the comments did not alter Dr. Sapienza's opinion because A. K. is a very strong and proud person whose lets such comments "roll off him." The adverse reaction of P. W., A. S., R. L. and J. M., who either included the comments in their written statements or referred to them during their interviews (P-1, P-4), shows that the comments were inappropriate. As to the comments made to A. K. about college, his lack of need for an education and reading newspapers only because he unpacks them (Charge 4), Dr. Sapienza believes these comments constitute unbecoming conduct because they are derogatory of a student's abilities and a student's education and work ethnic. Moreover, a student's family should not be joked about by teachers who should focus on positives in promoting a student's education.

Dr. Sapienza is of the opinion that the comment to C. A. about needing exercise (Charge 5) constitutes unbecoming conduct because a teacher and a school must be sensitive to and supportive of each student's unique sensitivities and needs. C. A. was very sensitive to her appearance and it was very unacceptable to call attention to her. Such a comment should not be made to any student because what a teacher says has a big impact on students. While a teacher can make jokes in class, he or she must be careful. Any type of ridicule directed toward a student by a teacher, whether racial or directed at a physical characteristic like weight, is unacceptable under any condition, even if the teacher is joking.

The comments made during the "Not Without My Daughter" video (Charge 6) constitute unbecoming conduct in Dr. Sapienza's opinion because Mr. Mamunes failed to give the students a clear direction of his plan and gave no summary to put his comments in context and as a result the comments were viewed as sexist. Sexist comments are unacceptable because teachers need to teach students respect for one another. This was a long movie shown over several days. Mr. Mamunes made the comments on the last day and did not stop the video to discuss his comments. If Mr. Mamunes made the comments to elicit a response from the students, in other words to play Devil's Advocate, he should have framed the discussion so students knew where he was going. Instead he gave the students no indication that he was not serious and their perception was that he meant the comments. Other than the four students who complained about the comments, Dr. Sapienza did not know how many other students in the class may have been upset by the comments. Dr. Sapienza did not know if Mr. McKenna was asked about the video.

The "school sucks" incidents (Charge 7) constitute unbecoming conduct in Dr. Sapienza's opinion because school rules prohibit the use of profanity and cursing by students and students are subject to discipline if heard using profanity or cursing. A teacher must be a role model for students and any cursing by teachers in school is unacceptable. That Mr. Mamunes closed the classroom door on these occasions indicates that he knew it was inappropriate. It is also very disturbing to Dr. Sapienza that Mr. Mamunes would make the class repeat the phrase if one student did not say the phrase. To her, this is a violation of the students' trust and an inappropriate tool to use in any situation since there are many other ways to deal with student stress. Even if some students were not bothered by these incidents, Dr. Sapienza would still find them inappropriate.

Dr. Sapienza did a "drop in" on Mr. Mamunes' course during the middle of March 1998 pursuant to a superintendent requirement that a principal observe one-third of the teaching staff on a rotating basis. She was not sure of the exact date but it was before the complaints were brought to her attention. Mr. Mamunes was reviewing a quiz with the class when Dr. Sapienza observed. Dr. Sapienza usually takes notes of her observations and thought she maintained her notes of Mr.

Mamunes' class. She never discussed the observation with Mr. Mamunes because shortly after that, the complaints were brought to her attention.

Edwin Bialkin was the Supervisor of Instruction for the 1997/1998 school year and in this capacity he was Mr. Mamunes' supervisor. He made the assignment of Mr. Mamunes to the ninth grade World History class because he thought it was the best course for Mr. Mamunes to teach and Dr. Sapienza approved the assignment. When Mr. Mamunes was suspended, Dr. Sapienza told Mr. Bialkin that Mr. Mamunes would not be in for a while and that they would need a substitute teacher. She did not tell Mr. Bialkin the factual basis for the tenure charges. When Dr. Sapienza originally became principal she reviewed each teacher's personnel file. In addition, since becoming principal, she has signed off on all the teacher evaluations and classroom observations. Mr. Mamunes received very good evaluations for twenty years and there was nothing in twenty years of evaluations that resembled the tenure charges against him in this proceeding. Dr. Sapienza described classroom observations as a "slice of time" while annual evaluations are summaries of professional growth and development. In her opinion, the types of comments which led to the filing of tenure charges against Mr. Mamunes would not have been made while a teacher was being observed by a supervisor.

There is a positive annual evaluation for Mr. Mamunes prepared by Mr. Bialkin sometime during the spring of 1998 which has not been signed and may have been prepared after Mr. Mamunes was suspended (R-6). Dr. Sapienza had not seen this evaluation before the hearing. Her practice is to write something on every evaluation, sign and date it and forward it to Superintendent Willett. The spring 1998 evaluation does not contain any comment from Dr. Sapienza or her signature (R-6). Nor is it signed by Mr. Bialkin or Mr. Mamunes as is required and the date that a conference was held to discuss the evaluation is blank (R-6). Mr. Bialkin was not aware of the nature of the charges against Mr. Mamunes and thus the spring 1998 evaluation would not reflect the investigation conducted by Dr. Sapienza, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek. On Mr. Mamunes' evaluations for years 1994 through 1997, Dr. Sapienza wrote the following comments: "Mr. Mamunes has a great deal to contribute to the ninth grade interdisciplinary program. This will be an important area of contribution for this professional" (R-11); "the principal supports Mr. Mamunes' efforts in the integration of technology into the curriculum" (R-12; "Mr. Mamunes is commended for his active participation in collegial activities. The sharing of ideas and strategies enhances the curriculum. Thank you" (R-13) and "Mr. Mamunes is a seasoned professional who willingly shares his expertise with his department members. His dedication and interest in our students is appreciated" (R-14).

In Mr. Mamunes' file there are also positive classroom observations as exemplified by one completed in December 1994 and one completed on December 5, 1997 (R-7, R-9). Dr. Sapienza reviews classroom observations and initializes each page indicating that she has read it, although not necessarily that she agrees with what is written. Mr. Mamunes was nominated for the Governor's Teacher Recognition Program in April 1995 and was sent a letter acknowledging that nomination by the Teacher Recognition Committee (R-8). Dr. Sapienza explained that the Teacher Recognition Committee asked parents, students and teachers for recommendations for this program and a form was distributed during homeroom. Any teacher who received at least one nomination was sent the letter by the Committee. The principal does not serve on the Committee. Mr. Mamunes has never actually received the award. During the investigation of the complaint against Mr. Mamunes, Dr. Sapienza did not refer to any of these positive evaluations or classroom observations.

Richard E. Willett, Ph. D., testified on behalf of the Board. He has been the Pascack Valley Regional High School District superintendent since 1993. Prior to holding this position, he was a Department of Science Coordinator between 1978 and 1980; vice principal of Westfield High School between 1980 and 1983; principal of Columbia High School between 1983 and 1989 and superintendent of the Kinnelon school district between 1989 and 1993. Dr. Willett was a credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt his following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. Dr. Willett's duties as superintendent include overall responsibility for leadership, management and operation of schools, teachers and students. There are two high schools in the District, Pascack Hills and Pascack Valley. In fulfilling his responsibilities as superintendent, Dr. Willett speaks with each principal every day and tries to see each one every day.

On March 25, 1998, as Dr. Willett was about to convene a meeting with Dr. Sapienza and the principal of Pascack Hills, Dr. Sapienza told him that Mr. Sullivan had advised her about a student who came to him to complain about sexist comments that Mr. Mamunes made during a video. She also told him about a comment wherein Mr. Mamunes referred to a student as a colored person. Dr.

Willett directed Dr. Sapienza to have Sullivan and Burek interview P. W. and all other students who were identified by P. W. Since there was a fire in the school on March 26, the interviews were not held until March 27, 1998. Dr. Sapienza told Dr. Willett the results of the interviews that day by telephone. To Dr. Willett there appeared to be a pattern of more than one student complaining about similar types of comments. Accordingly, he asked Dr. Sapienza to get statements in writing from the four students interviewed on March 27, 1998. He also asked that A. K. be interviewed. This was a matter of great concern to Dr. Willett.

The written statements of P. W., J. M., A. S. and R. L. contained in P-1 were faxed to Dr. Willett on March 30, 1998. There was a new reference to a comment made to an obese student. Accordingly, Dr. Willett asked Dr. Sapienza to find out who this student was. Since students would not ordinarily submit such written statements, it indicated to Dr. Willett that the four students felt very strongly about the issue and were serious about their concerns over the comments. During this time period Dr. Willett spoke with Dr. Sapienza several times a day. He asked her if all the students were in the same class, whether they were from the same middle school, whether they had disciplinary records and what their grades were. There was nothing in their histories to indicate that there would be any other reason for them to come forward other than their being upset about the comments. Since Dr. Willett had no reason to doubt the veracity of the four students, he felt he did not need any further corroboration. He told Dr. Sapienza to tell the students not to discuss their statements with other students. There were 16 or 17 students in the third period class. However, Dr. Willett directed Dr. Sapienza not to interview any other students in the third period class, other than the four who had come forward, because to remove them one by one from class and ask specific questions would highlight Mr. Mamunes, which Dr. Willett did not want to do. Dr. Willett acknowledged, however, that the other students could have been brought to the office for an interview from other classes and thus would not necessarily highlight Mr. Mamunes.

Instead of interviewing any other students in the third period class, Dr. Willett told Dr. Sapienza to do a "superficial" review of Mr. Mamunes' classes without identifying Mr. Mamunes. He felt it was important to look at other classes to see if there was a larger problem. At the same time, he did not want Mr. Mamunes to be identified and he felt the students may be reluctant to be interviewed in the first place. Accordingly, he asked Dr. Sapienza not to ask the other students specific questions. Dr. Willett described this random sampling of other students as "not deep enough or pointed enough to identify anything specific." Sixteen students from other classes of Mr. Mamunes were interviewed and none reported any complaints against Mamunes. Dr. Willett also spoke to Dr. Sapienza about Mr. Mamunes' prior history. He was told there was no indication of similar comments in the past. As a result, he saw no need to speak with Mr. Mamunes' supervisors. In addition, Dr. Willett likes to keep those "in the know" in such circumstances to a minimum. Dr. Willett was also advised that Mr. McKenna had been interviewed and reported that he did not observe anything inappropriate during Mr. Mamunes' classes. After the tenure charges were filed against Mr. Mamunes, Mr. McKenna also reported that Mr. Mamunes told him before the video class that he was going to interject comments. The procedure or protocol for the investigation was developed over time by Dr. Willett as he had never been involved in anything like this before. During this period he spoke on a daily basis with Dr. Sapienza and also with Mr. Burek on occasion.

The meeting which had been scheduled with Mr. Mamunes for March 30, 1998 was not held because he was demanding the names of the students and the administration had not yet spoken with the students' parents or told the students what would happen with their statements. This concerned Dr. Willett and he therefore directed Dr. Sapienza to meet with the students and their parents so they would be aware of what was occurring. After speaking with the Board's attorney, the March 30 meeting was cancelled. Because the students seemed so serious about their concerns and Dr. Sapienza, Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek fully believed the four students, Dr. Willett felt that it would be better if Mr. Mamunes was not in the classroom while the investigation was on going. He did not want the students to have to face Mr. Mamunes in class after he was given their names. In addition, Dr. Willett wanted to protect Mr. Mamunes against potential claims of retaliation if he had to take disciplinary action against a student, although he acknowledged there was nothing in Mr. Mamunes' history that showed any retaliation against students. Accordingly, Dr. Willett spoke with the Board president and then suspended Mr. Mamunes with pay effective April 1, 1998 (P-5).

During the meeting on April 24, 1998, which was attended by Drs. Willett and Sapienza, Mr. Burek, Mr. Mamunes, the attorneys and a union representative, Mr. Mamunes was asked to respond to each of the written statements. He was given an opportunity to respond to each statement. In addition, Mr. Mamunes submitted copies of his evaluations as well as documents concerning his work in the civil rights area. Mr. Mamunes also submitted An Open Letter to the Board in which he described his efforts in class, curriculum development, publications and civil rights work (R-16). After Mr. Mamunes and his attorney left the meeting, Dr. Willett discussed Mr. Mamunes' presentation with his staff and the Board attorney. They met for two to three hours, trying to reconcile what Mr. Mamunes said with the students' statements. After follow-up discussions with Dr. Sapienza and the Board attorney, Dr. Willett concluded that Mr. Mamunes had not refuted the allegations against him. While he denied making the comment to C. A., Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that he made similar comments to students at times. He did not deny making the rest of the comments but rather had explanations for them. To Dr. Willett the explanations were unacceptable for a teacher of 27 years experience, especially one with the civil rights background that Mr. Mamunes claimed to have. Dr. Willett did not recall discussing Mr. Mamunes with Mr. Sullivan but thought that he may have had a short discussion with Mr. Burek.

Dr. Willett was aware that not all the students mentioned the same incidents and that there were some differences between the students' oral and written statements. These differences did not surprise him because he had directed Dr. Sapienza not to ask direct questions of the students but rather to keep the questions open-ended since he did not want it to seem as though the administrators had put words in the students' mouths. If all the statements had been the same, Dr. Willett would have been concerned that the students were talking with each other about their statements. The fact that there were differences made the statements more credible to Dr. Willett. Dr. Willett also thought it insignificant that some of the students may not have been in class during a particular incident.

Dr. Willett was initially concerned that A. K. did not confirm the statements made to him by Mr. Mamunes. However, Dr. Sapienza explained to him that she thought A. K. was "sloughing it off" and not being forthright because he did not want to be involved. Moreover, Dr. Willett had no reason to doubt the students' statements regarding A. K. because they were not particular friends of his. Accordingly, Dr. Willett gave more weight to the students' written statements than to A. K.'s oral denial. Similarly, he gave more weight to the written statements regarding C. A. than her oral denial because Dr. Sapienza and Mr. Burek had concluded that C. A. just did not want to acknowledge any statement regarding her weight. In Dr. Willett's opinion, Dr. Sapienza is "superb" in reading students.

Dr. Willett agreed that Mr. Mamunes' past classroom observations and evaluations were satisfactory and did not reveal that similar comments had been made in the past by Mr. Mamunes. However, Dr. Willett believes it would be unlikely that such behavior would be demonstrated with another adult present in the classroom. A tenured teacher, who teaches over 900 classes a year, is observed once a year on a pre-announced date. Accordingly, it is very difficult to discover such behavior. It almost always comes to light through a student. In his twenty plus years as a supervisor, it has been Dr. Willett's experience that students are reluctant to bring complaints against a teacher. Students tend to feel an allegiance to a teacher rather than to an anonymous administrator. In addition, potential retaliation is a major concern of parents and students. Even though Dr. Willett has never seen a teacher retaliate against a student for raising a complaint, he knows that parents and students have this concern. At Pascack, 90% of the students are college-bound and trying for top colleges. They are very academically driven with a high commitment to success in school and they do not want to do anything that will jeopardize their grades. Dr. Willett believes it took a lot of nerve for the four students and their parents to come forward in this matter. He does not think the fact that A. S. and J. M. are best friends explains their coming forward or gives them a motive to do so because neither had an ax to grind with Mr. Mamunes as a result of a poor grade or disciplinary actions. Moreover, the complaining students were not just the two best friends but also included students in a different social circle than J. M. and A. S.

Dr. Willett views the "colored people" comment made to J. M. (Charge 1) as a racist comment which has no place in the lexicon of a teacher. In his opinion, referring to African-Americans as "colored people" is using a pejorative term comparable to referring to them as "niggers." In addition, the comment indicates that Mr. Mamunes does not recognize African-Americans as individuals, which is also pejorative. The document submitted by Mr. Mamunes during the April 24, 1998 meeting shows he had a high level of knowledge of racial relations and civil rights in the United States. This intensified Dr. Willett's belief that the comment was racist and pejorative because of all people, Mr. Mamunes should be sensitive to comments of this nature. This comment was derogatory and demeaning to the student and even if Mamunes said it in jest, it was totally inappropriate.

The comment made to J. M. regarding Martin Luther King (Charge 2) begins to show a pattern of conduct in Dr. Willett's opinion since this was the second racist comment made to J. M. during the school year. J. M. should not have been singled out as the only student in class who should be grateful for Dr. King. Dr. Willett agreed that J. M. did not state that the comment was made sarcastically in her written statement. Nevertheless, the comment was inappropriate regardless of whether Mr. Mamunes said it in a sarcastic manner as J. M. felt he did. Mr. Mamunes was the professional in the class and he should have been sensitive to the fact that his comment upset J. M. Moreover, other students recognized the comment as inappropriate and thus the comment had an impact beyond just the one student. The district is striving to teach tolerance and understanding in school and this type of comment is not the way to accomplish that goal. Again, Mr. Mamunes' involvement in civil rights activities heightened Dr. Willett's concerns because Mr. Mamunes certainly should be aware of the importance of Dr. King to all students and making this type of comment to the whole class teaches the wrong thing.

Similarly, the comments made to A. K. (Charge 3) have no role in the classroom. Speaking pejoratively about a student's parent in simply unacceptable. This comment put A. K. and his father in a negative light and had no business being said in a classroom. In Dr. Willett's opinion, the "porn shop" comment was also racist because many Indians own convenience stores in the area. The comment to A. K. that he did not need to go to college degrades A. K. and degrades education in the eyes of other students. Neither comment would improve A. K.'s self-esteem and teachers just should not say such things to the entire class. Dr. Willett acknowledged that A. K. admitted that his friends made similar comments to him in class. However, that A. K.'s overt reaction was to ignore Mr. Mamunes comment and "slough it off," makes no difference to Dr. Willett. Other students felt the comments were out of line and this can lead to a loss of respect for the teacher that will adversely affect the students' learning.

The additional comments made to A.K. regarding his lack of a need for an education and when he reads the newspaper (Charge 4) are not acceptable because Mr. Mamunes was in effect telling the class that education is not important. A teacher should never make such a comment. The comments also suggest that A. K. is lazy and/or stupid, which is not a statement designed to enhance A. K.'s learning. Dr. Willett was of the opinion that the comment regarding the newspaper was said to A. K. after he had given a correct answer on a current events issue. Comments such as those made to A. K. have the potential to lessen respect for Mr. Mamunes and all teachers.

In Dr. Willett's opinion the comment to C. A. that she should get up and close the door because she needs the exercise showed insensitivity and was cruel even if said as a joke. Such a comment from a teacher can be devastating to a student, although Dr. Willett acknowledged that he was not aware of C. A.'s response or whether she felt degraded because she denied hearing the remark. It was not an appropriate comment even if Mr. Mamunes said it in jest about his own physical problems in closing the door. Such comments could lead other students to wonder who would be made fun of next. To Dr. Willett, C. A.'s failure to pursue a complaint against Mr. Mamunes indicates that the comment was extremely hurtful to her. The fact that other students brought it up shows that they viewed the comment as wrong and they lost respect for Mr. Mamunes as a result of the comment. Dr. Willett agreed that prior to Mr. Mamunes' suspension, the remark to C. A. was reported only in P. W.'s and R. L.'s written statements and not during their interviews or in the other two written statements and that P. W. was not in class when the remark was made. Nevertheless, Dr. Willett gave credence to R. L.'s written statement based on what he saw as a pattern of insensitive comments to students.

Dr. Willett views the comments made during the "Not Without My Daughter" video as outright sexist comments that demean the equality that should exist between men and women and tells the students that it is acceptable to abuse women. If Mr. Mamunes intended to make the comments as a "Devil's Advocate," he should have set it up for the students. For example, he could have closed out the class by telling the students that he had played Devil's Advocate during the film and that they should think about it after class. If there were insufficient time to do this at the end of that class it should have been done at the beginning of the next class. The video was shown on March 19, 1998. There were at least seven class days between March 19 and April 1, 1998, when Mr. Mamunes was suspended (P-9, P-10). Mr. Mamunes did not give the appropriate closure to his comments during any of these classes. Giving a test at a later time does not constitute closure since closure needs to be accomplished at the time of the comments or shortly thereafter. As a result, the students were left to reach their own conclusions and, given the lack of closure, the conclusion they reached was appropriate and logical. As an experienced educator, Mr. Mamunes should have known how to use his comments in a proper educational strategy. Dr. Willett agreed that part of Charge 6 is a criticism of Mr. Mamunes' teaching style. He also agreed that since some Iranian men have the view of women depicted in the video, that it was an appropriate lesson to teach in class but that it was not taught appropriately.

Regarding the "school sucks" comment, Dr. Willett testified that if a student made this comment, he or she would be disciplined and perhaps suspended. A comment such as this upsets the sanctity of the classroom and for a teacher to require students to say a vulgarity is just wrong. Dr. Willett could not think of any circumstance under which it would be appropriate to have students say "school sucks" in order to relieve tension. Mr. Mamunes' closing of the classroom door indicates that he knew what he was having the students do was inappropriate and wrong. Dr. Willett acknowledged that Mr. Burek never told him the students reported that Mr. Mamunes had them stand up when they yelled "school sucks."

In 1995, Mr. Mamunes received a letter from the district's Governor's Teacher Recognition Committee advising him that he had been nominated for recognition based on his "distinguished achievement as a teacher" (R-8). Dr. Willett explained that teachers, secretaries, students, parents and members of the community may nominate a teacher to the Committee. The letter sent to Mr. Mamunes is a form letter that is issued every year by the Committee. Approximately one-third of the faculty in the district have received similar letters, although Dr. Willett did not know how many teachers received a similar letter in 1995. Neither the letter nor Mr. Mamunes' past observations and evaluations had an impact on Dr. Willett's consideration of these tenure charges because comments such as those made by Mr. Mamunes during the 1997/1998 school year would not have been made while he was being observed by his supervisor.

Edwin Bialkin testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes. Mr. Bialkin was a credible witness and, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt his following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. Mr. Bialkin recently retired from Pascack Valley where he had taught for 35 years. For twenty years, Mr. Bialkin served as the Supervisor of Instruction for the Social Studies and Foreign Languages departments. Part of his responsibilities in that position was to observe and evaluate the teachers in the two departments. Mr. Bialkin observed Mr. Mamunes in class for four to five years when they both worked at Pascack Hills High School. Mr. Bialkin then was transferred to Pascack Valley High School. After several years as a volunteer "swing" teacher at both schools, Mr. Mamunes starting teaching full-time at Pascack Valley and Mr. Bialkin observed him in class from 1992 through 1998 (R-9, R-20 to R-24).

Mr. Bialkin's observations of Mr. Mamunes were uniformly positive with comments such as: " students were given every opportunity to speak and make comment; those speaking while others were doing so were asked to stop and listen to their peers" (R-19,1/12/89); "this lesson was excellent from beginning to end; without question the objectives as indicated above were met" (R-20, 12/21/92); "student presentations and answers were greeted with continual evaluative comments; those answers which needed amplification or correction were handled in a positive way" (R-21, 2/3/94); "Mr. Mamunes showed excellent patience when dealing with student questions or contributions; sufficient time was consistently given in allowing students to think of and suggest answers to questions requiring more than knowledge or comprehension" (R-22, 12/13/94); "good review of the previous lesson as to the reasons for good discussion in this class as well as other classes or out of school situations" (R-23, 12/11/95); "without question the lesson was successful and the activity well chosen to fulfill the objectives as stated above, fine job" (R-24, 12/13/96); and "students showed absolutely no anxiety in the classroom when answering teacher questions or posing questions to the teacher; further, positive humor consistently present throughout the lesson" (R-9, 12/5/97). The back of the observation forms lists the areas to be reviewed with a breakdown of matters to be considered. According to Mr. Bialkin, Mr. Mamunes satisfied the criteria consistently. As required for every teacher, the observation forms also contain suggestions for improvement. Mr. Bialkin agreed that the observations are limited to what he observed in class on that particular day and do not reflect anything that may have happened in other classes.

It is Mr. Bialkin's opinion that Mr. Mamunes enjoyed the respect of his students. If he had not, Mr. Bialkin would have observed students fooling around or not paying attention. Students have ways of letting observers know if they do not like or respect a teacher.

Mr. Bialkin also prepared annual evaluations of Mr. Mamunes which were positive. In 1989 Mr. Bialkin evaluated Mr. Mamunes as, inter alia, "a teacher with strong instructional skills interested in the creation and pursuit of those strategies and techniques emphasizing student centered as compared with teacher centered lessons" and that "[h]is sense of professionalism is strong" (R-18). During his testimony, Mr. Bialkin explained that the strategies and techniques used by Mr. Mamunes forced students to read, research and discuss issues and not just accept something because it is printed in a textbook. He characterized Mr. Mamunes as a "student centered" teacher and one who was never satisfied with old ways. Between 1989 and 1993, Mr. Mamunes was evaluated by another supervisor. In 1994, Mr. Bialkin was again Mamunes' supervisor and found that "[w]ithin the area of innovative instruction, Mr. Mamunes continues to exhibit strong skills" and that "[h]e is well prepared for class and his style of classroom management creates an atmosphere in which students can succeed" (R-14). Mr. Bialkin made similar comments in evaluations he prepared of Mr. Mamunes in 1995, 1996 and 1997 (R-13, R-12, R-11).

As is required with all evaluations, Mr. Bialkin also identified areas for improvement, including expanding the use of new computer programs in the classroom and developing activities for use in the class (R-11 to R-14, R-18). In preparing annual evaluations, Mr. Bialkin considered the totality of job performance, including what a teacher does with students out of class; for example, meeting with them to provide help, and the teacher's role in the department. While he utilizes the observation report he does not rely entirely on it in preparing evaluations. In addition, Mr. Bialkin informally visits classes on occasions for ten minutes or so.

Mr. Bialkin acknowledged the evaluations he prepared on Mr. Mamunes used identical language year after year in some areas, particularly in the area of Areas of Strength and Pupil Progress even though different classroom observations occurred each year and the observations contained different recommendations than included in the evaluations. He explained that he reached conclusions regarding Mr. Mamunes' strengths in March 1988 and that his strengths remained the same through to 1998 even though classroom observations were different. In one classroom observation in 1991, Mr. Bialkin observed that Mr. Mamunes appeared impatient at one point during the class (P-15). This was not noted in his annual evaluation for that school year (P-14). Mr. Bialkin explained that the observation had no effect on Mr. Mamunes' annual evaluation because there is no relationship between the two. Moreover, the recommendations contained in the observations are for a specific lesson rather than annual recommendations. As to the Pupil Progress portion, Mr. Bialkin explained that Mr. Mamunes used techniques to gauge pupil progress which did not change over the years.

Mr. Bialkin prepared an evaluation of Mr. Mamunes for the 1997/1998 school year in which he wrote that, inter alia, Mr. Mamunes "continues to exhibit strong skills . . . [w]ith emphasis on student centered activities . . ." (R-6). Mr. Bialkin met with Mr. Mamunes to discuss the evaluation and then forwarded it to Principal Sapienza at the end of February or early March 1998. He never received the evaluation back from the Principal and therefore it was never signed (R-17). The evaluation period is based on the preceding twelve months, i.e. from the end of February to beginning of March. Therefore, anything that may have occurred in class after February 1998 was not included in R-6. Moreover, since Mr. Bialkin was not aware of any incidents, the evaluation does not reflect any of the incidents included in the tenure charges.

In the district's World History classes they utilize multi-cultural teaching in which Asian, Middle Eastern and African cultures are studied to find commonality with our western culture. Mr. Bialkin described Mr. Mamunes as "terrific" in locating data that demonstrates commonality.

Mr. Bialkin described the difference between inductive and deductive teaching. Inductive teaching forces students to think; it is student-directed and requires a lot of student interaction. Deductive teaching is teacher-directed; it consists mainly of lectures in which students are given information and requires less student interaction. Mr. Mamunes is an inductive teacher and some students who have never had an inductive teacher before the ninth grade have difficulty adjusting. Mr. Bialkin also described the levels of higher order thinking based on Bloom's Taxonomy as follows: (1) knowledge; (2) comprehension; (3) analysis; (4) synthesis and (5) evaluation. The last three reflect the highest orders of thinking. Evaluation is very difficult, especially for ninth grade students but Mr. Bialkin did observe analysis and synthesis occurring in Mr. Mamunes' classes, which is the goal of inductive teaching.

Mr. Mamunes uses a teaching technique known as "devil's advocate" which Mr. Bialkin described as a very common technique. When this technique is used, it is very important to explore the students' reactions. A teacher must explain what he or she said or did and why so that students do not leave the lesson thinking the teacher really believes what he or she said. Another common teaching technique used by Mr. Mamunes is paraphrasing what a student has said.

Mr. Bialkin defined "closure" as bringing an activity to an end and a debriefing of students concerning what they have learned from the class. When a teacher raises a controversial subject, he or she can expect a lot of student debate and discussion. To ensure that students achieve the educational benefit from the exercise, a teacher needs to ascertain what the students learned from the lesson. Mr. Bialkin acknowledged that a student can react the wrong way to teacher comments but that should be evident during the lesson. When closure is done depends on the teacher's objective. Closure can be done at the end of a class period or after several class periods. Although Mr. Bialkin does not utilize the technique, a teacher could also accomplish closure through the use of a quiz.

Mr. Bialkin received some calls from parents who were concerned that their children were not doing well in Mr. Mamunes' class. In such instances, Mr. Bialkin advised the parents to speak with Mr. Mamunes and that if they still had questions, he would schedule a meeting. In the past, Mr. Bialkin did meet with some parents along with Mr. Mamunes. While Mr. Bialkin could not say whether all the parents left these meetings happy, they did have a better understanding of Mr. Mamunes' teaching style. Mr. Bialkin never received a complaint of racism or sexism about Mr. Mamunes and was not involved in these tenure charges. Rather, Dr. Sapienza called Mr. Bialkin into her office and advised him that he would need to find a long-term substitute for Mr. Mamunes. When Mr. Bialkin asked why, Dr. Sapienza told him she could not say. Mr. Bialkin had no knowledge of the complaints which was unusual since he had always been involved in other cases regarding teachers he supervised. It was very frustrating for Mr. Bialkin because he had no idea what was happening.

While Mr. Bialkin had no knowledge of the nature of the complaints against Mr. Mamunes, he agreed that it is not appropriate to utter racist or sexist comments in the classroom and if such comments were made, it would be a concern to him. Mr. Bialkin was aware that the district has an Affirmative Action office headed by Mr. Burek and that Burek would investigate allegations of racist and/or sexist issues. He agreed that if a student came to him with a racist or sexist complaint he would refer the student to the AA office. While it was reasonable for the district to refer the allegations to Mr. Burek, it would also have been reasonable for the administration to discuss the matter with him. Although Mr. Bialkin has never been involved in investigating AA issues, the principal has called him to her office to discuss teacher comments that could be defined as sexist, although none of such comments could be defined as racist.

Mr. Bialkin agreed that it is not proper to use profanities in class and he would refrain from using vulgarities also, although he is aware that younger teachers may use vulgarities. "School sucks" has come into the jargon of students and is a term used everyday by them. Mr. Bialkin does not see the comment as appropriate in school but is aware that some younger teachers use the phrase. As to a teacher denigrating education, Mr. Bialkin felt there would have to be "one hell of a good reason" for a teacher to do so. It would never be appropriate for a teacher to make fun of a student's infirmities or to refer to a student's weight in class. It may sometimes be appropriate to make fun of a student in connection with something the student said in response to a lesson but only if the student is then built up again. Mr. Bialkin also felt that it may be appropriate to single out a student based on race to ask a question but only in the context of a lesson. If there is a close relationship between students and the teacher, it could be appropriate to fool around with a student in front of the class but only if the student and the rest of the class understand what is happening. Mr. Bialkin could not imagine making any joke of racial nature. Students look to their teachers to provide leadership and guidance on issues such as race and it is a very big responsibility.

While Mr. Bialkin and Mr. Mamunes attended college together, Mr. Bialkin denied any current or recent personal relationship with Mr. Mamunes. For a few years after college, they and their wives went out together socially but eventually lost contact with each other when Mr. Bialkin left Pascack Valley to become a department head at Pascack Hills. When they were colleagues teaching in the district they would have a drink together occasionally but not with their wives and this was before Mr. Bialkin became Mr. Mamunes' supervisor. Mr. Bialkin's prior friendship with Mr. Mamunes did not affect his evaluation of Mr. Mamunes.

Louis Cassella testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes. While I found some of Mr. Cassella's testimony concerning appropriate conduct and/or comments for a teacher to be troubling, his demeanor was forthright and he was an otherwise credible witness. Accordingly, unless a factual dispute is specifically noted below, I adopt his following testimony as FINDINGS OF FACT. Mr. Cassella taught History in the Pascack Valley regional school district for 27 years before he retired in 1986. In 1964, Mr. Cassella became a supervisor and he eventually hired Mr. Mamunes for the 1971-1972 school year. He supervised Mr. Mamunes for fifteen years thereafter. In the course of supervising Mr. Mamunes, Mr. Cassella observed him teaching three to four times a year, for two to three consecutive days on each observation. Between 1972 and 1986, Mr. Cassella completed numerous classroom observations and annual evaluations on Mr. Mamunes (R-46 to R-62). Over the years, Mr. Cassella found that Mr. Mamunes' courses were always well planned, that the students were attentive and that Mr. Mamunes had a good teacher/student rapport with his students.

In 1974, Mr. Cassella observed a class in which Mr. Mamunes was teaching some controversial environmental issues (R-47). During this class, Mr. Mamunes was effective in teaching students to utilize critical thinking. His inductive, rather than deductive, teaching style was somewhat radical at that time. Mr. Mamunes frequently used the Devil's Advocate technique and Mr. Cassella learned that technique from him. In a 1978 observation, Mr. Cassella noted that Mr. Mamunes related well to the class in a "manner that reflects a good sense of humor, an awareness of the students' abilities and . . . a good sense of their feelings" (R-48). He also noted in this observation that Mr. Mamunes' summary technique was excellent (R-48). Mr. Cassella agreed that a "summary technique" is important when a teacher plays Devil's Advocate because a controversial topic should not be left in an open-ended way. A teacher sometimes does not know if students have reached a conclusion or what that conclusion may be and it is important for the students to critically assess the Devil's Advocate statement or at least to question their own positions. While a summary technique is an important goal, a teacher sometimes cannot reach it due to time constraints. However, bringing a topic to closure while it is fresh in the students' mind is beneficial.

In 1979, Mr. Cassella observed a class in which role-playing was being used in the context of an illegal immigrant family (R-50). Mr. Cassella found the students to be enthused and involved and that there was a great deal of effective teaching going on (R-50). Mr. Mamunes frequently used this role-playing technique. In Mr. Cassella's 1980 annual evaluation of Mr. Mamunes he noted Mr. Mamunes' role in developing the Minorities in America mini course (R-51), which role Mr. Cassella described as "key" in his testimony. Mr. Cassella also noted Mr. Mamunes' use of the Devil's Advocate technique which can be risky but provokes students to think and concluded that Mr. Mamunes's "ability to deal with controversial issues and situations [is] excellent" (R-51). While Mr. Cassella was not comfortable with all of Mr. Mamunes' teaching techniques, this was not because the techniques were wrong but rather that they were not compatible with Mr. Cassellas' personality.

In a March 13, 1981 observation, Mr. Cassella noted that Mr. Mamunes' responses to students were always constructive, that he frequently complimented students, and that he found good qualities in student contributions whenever he pointed out a weak element (R-52). Mr. Cassella noted that whenever he observed Mr. Mamunes, he would provide constructive comments to his students. Mr. Cassella would accept "putting a student down" if it was done while a teacher was playing the Devil's Advocate. If this is done, however, the teacher should bring the issue to closure by the end of the class to make the student feel better because a student's self esteem in class is important. Mr. Cassella has pulled over an Indian student, for example, and asked "where is your dot" but the student knew he was kidding because of what Mr. Cassella taught in class. Mr. Cassella has also used "trigger" words such as nigger and whop in class but only in the context of a lesson. Such words should not be directed at a student unless done in the context of the lesson. When Mr. Cassella taught immigration, he played the role of an immigration officer and made comments such as "hey, you wonk, get over here." While he acknowledged that such statements pose a risk, Mr. Cassella does not think he ever offended a student and he never received any complaints. If he found out that a student was offended by a remark, he would never repeat it to the student.

On one occasion, Mr. Cassella made a comment to a female student he was coaching on the lacrosse team to "get some of that off" and he does not think she was offended. He recognizes, however, that some people are sensitive about their weight but believes it is impossible to know the sensitivities of every student. Mr. Cassella could envision himself saying to a student "close the door, you need the exercise more than I do" but he would not have said it in reference to the student's weight. After he made such a comment, it may have occurred to him that the comment could be taken the wrong way and that he should not have said it.

When Mr. Cassella evaluated Mr. Mamunes in 1981, he praised his ability in motivating students to think critically and to contribute to class discussions (R-53). In a 1983 observation, Mr. Cassella noted a teaching manner that stimulated student effort in a relaxed classroom in which students were at ease in expressing their feelings and concerns (R-55). When he evaluated Mr. Mamunes in 1983, Mr. Cassella noted Mr. Mamunes' efforts in "teaching the teachers" and his continuing ability to motivate students to question and think critically (R-56).

In January, 1984, Mr. Cassella observed Mr. Mamunes teaching the Minorities mini course (R-57). He described this as involving a controversial issue because many students have prejudices which both Mr. Mamunes and Mr. Cassella felt should be brought into the classroom. Mr. Mamunes would accomplish this by inviting representatives from the American Indian Movement (AIM) and the Civil Rights movement to speak to his classes. In his 1984 annual evaluation of Mr. Mamunes, Mr. Cassella found Mr. Mamunes to be an excellent teacher and a model of professionalism (R-58). In a November 1984 classroom evaluation, again of the Minorities unit in the United States History course, Mr. Cassella commended Mr. Mamunes for his "sensitivity to the need for positive teacher feedback in the classroom setting" (R-59). Mr. Cassella explained that Mr. Mamunes was a master of dealing with situations where, for example, a student would use the word "nigger."

In his 1985 annual evaluation of Mr. Mamunes, Mr. Cassella stated that Mr. Mamunes "continues to display the qualities of teaching that exemplify the highest expectations of a professional teacher" (R-60). In fact, this was Mr. Cassella's experience with Mr. Mamunes throughout the years he supervised him. According to Mr. Cassella, Mr. Mamunes is a "master teacher" who holds a passion for teaching. Mr. Cassella's 1986 annual evaluation of Mr. Mamunes found his performance as a classroom teacher to be commendable and that he displayed a "great deal of enthusiasm in delivering a lesson" (R-61). In the last classroom observation that Mr. Cassella completed on Mr. Mamunes, he noted as particularly useful the comparison Mr. Mamunes introduced between the civil rights activities of Malcolm X and Martin Luther King, Jr. (R-62). This technique of compare and contrast requires students to draw their own conclusions. Over all the years that Mr. Cassella supervised Mr. Mamunes he found him to be very impressive in his broad knowledge of the subject matters he taught.

During the fifteen years that Mr. Cassella supervised Mr. Mamunes he never received a call from a parent complaining about Mr. Mamunes. While parental complaints could have gone to a guidance counselor, they would have been investigated and Mr. Cassella would have become aware of them. Three or four students did ask to be transferred out of Mr. Mamunes' class because they were not doing well. Mr. Cassella concluded that Mr. Mamunes' conduct at other times was consistent with what he observed during his observations because he never received any student complaints about inappropriate comments by Mr. Mamunes. Mr. Cassella found that Mr. Mamunes was not an easy teacher to supervise because he was never a "yes" man and when he disagreed with Mr. Cassella he would confront him with that disagreement.

When Mr. Cassella gave a test in class, he always tried to relax students by indicating that the test was not that important by saying something like "aren't tests stupid?" In recognition that some students will not make it to college, Mr. Cassella had discussions about the dignity of students who do not go on to college. He has also spoken to his students about the "absurdity" of some portions of the educational structure and told them to "go home and tell your parents to invest all the money you saved for college in a mutual fund." Mr. Cassella has heard students say that school sucks in class and he finds the phrase to be very common and inoffensive to him. He has even heard a priest use the term "sucks." He himself, however, would not use the phrase because of his age and because in the 1950's and 1960's the phrase had a different meaning than it has now.

Respondent George Mamunes testified on his own behalf. Mr. Mamunes' overall credibility was difficult to assess. During most of his testimony, his demeanor was sincere and forthright. At other times, he gave non-responsive answers and seemed reluctant to provide a straight answer without drawing absurd fine lines and "splitting hairs." He also appeared evasive at times and some of his testimony, particularly regarding the comment to C. A., strains credulity and came across as an after-the-fact attempt to provide justification for an ill-considered comment. Since overall, he was a credible witness, his following testimony is adopted as FINDINGS OF FACT unless otherwise noted.

Mr. Mamunes graduated from Montclair State College in 1960 with a degree in Social Studies and English and is certified to teach in those subjects. Over two summers he took courses in American Studies on fellowships at Bucknell University and the University of Hawaii. In 1967 he received a Masters degree in American History from Montclair State College after attending evening classes. Between 1960 and 1964 Mr. Mamunes taught social studies at Dumont High School and between 1964 and 1968 he taught American History at New Providence High School. In 1967 and 1968, Mr. Mamunes took evening courses at Middlesex County College. Between 1968 and 1971, Mr. Mamunes served as Chair of Social Studies at Whippany Park High School until the school board eliminated chairperson positions. From June 1970 to September 1971, Mr. Mamunes worked for the Herald News as its Education Coordinator. He started teaching in the Pascack Valley Regional High School District in September 1971 and continued to do so until he was suspended in April 1998.

From 1971 to approximately 1991, Mr. Mamunes taught at the Pascack Hills Regional High School. While there he primarily taught classes in United States History, World History and Economics. He also taught other courses on occasion such as Minorities in America, You in the Law, Sociology, Human Behavior and Environment and Planning. In addition, he introduced two new courses, American Indian and American Civilization. For these courses he wrote the curriculum and ordered the materials. Mr. Mamunes also created a twenty-page African and Asian Studies Manual that was distributed nationwide to classroom teachers by the New York Times. Between 1991 and 1993, Mr. Mamunes volunteered to teach as a "swing" teacher, i.e. he taught at both Pascack Hills and Pascack Valley. From 1993 until his suspension, Mr. Mamunes taught full-time at Pascack Valley High School. He taught in two areas primarily: US History II, an eleventh grade course, and World History, a ninth grade course. In addition, Mr. Mamunes specializes in teaching students with learning disabilities. During the 1997/1998 school year, Mr. Mamunes taught three classes of college preparation World History and two classes of World History in the Learning Center.

Over the years, Mr. Mamunes has been active in various areas involving civil rights and he believes he submitted this information to the district's Board of Education when they were considering these tenure charges (R-16). He submitted such information to show the Board that he is neither a racist nor a sexist person nor one who would make racist or sexist remarks. Examples of Mr. Mamunes civil rights activities include an African, Asian and Middle East curriculum at Whippany Park High School that he designed in the 1960's. During the 1970s when he was working for the Herald News, Mr. Mamunes created a booklet titled "Women's Liberation" which was distributed to teachers for 25 cents for use in their classes. While at Pascack Hills High School, Mr. Mamunes taught an eighteen-week course in Minorities in America for several years and established the first American Field Service Club at the school that was instrumental in bringing over the school's first foreign exchange students. He also wrote a unit on the Role of American Woman for the United States History course which unit he revised and taught for twenty years. This unit begins in 1848 and covers topics such as the right to vote, eclipse of the women's liberation effort in the 1920's and its revival in the 1960's (R-16).

Other activities in which Mr. Mamunes engaged during the 1970's include teaching English as a volunteer to ex-officers of the South Vietnamese Army; serving as President of the American Field Service for three years; creating and teaching a North American Indian course; designing and teaching Irish-American and Japanese Relocation units for U. S. History; and creating a bi-lingual "deportation hearing" in which U. S. History and Spanish students act out roles of immigration officials and Hispanic illegal aliens (R-16). Mr. Mamunes read Toni Morrison's "Beloved" and found it to be an extremely important work and Ms. Morrison to be a sensitive writer about the pain felt by blacks resulting from slavery and Jim Crowism. Mr. Mamunes created a Martin Luther King Day presentation that he presents in class every year on Martin Luther King Day and during which he sings and explains three songs reflecting Black history in the United States. After his presentation, the students discuss Dr. King and other civil rights leaders in the context of these songs.

During the 1980's and 1990's Mr. Mamunes organized trips by his Sociology classes to the Fortune Society where students spoke with ex-convicts about why they were incarcerated and how they were trying to go "straight." Mr. Mamunes described this as a "risky" thing to do but explained that he likes to take risks. He also conducted a workshop to "kick off" the year for Jewish educators in Bergen County during which he received a " Classroom Covenant." The Covenant has provisions such as students have the right to be treated with kindness; that no one will laugh at them, ignore them or hurt their feelings and that they will not be treated unfairly because they are fat or thin, fast or slow, or boy or girl (R-16). Mr. Mamunes usually stapled the Covenant on his classroom walls and he and his students would sign the Covenant. Additionally, a committee would be established and any committee member could stop what was going on in class if it violated the Covenant by saying "Covenant." However, for personal reasons which Mr. Mamunes did not wish to discuss, the Covenant was not hung in his classrooms during the 1997/1998 school year, a committee was not formed and the students were not asked to sign the Covenant. While he did not expect his students to subscribe to the Covenant during the 1997/1998 year, Mr. Mamunes testified that he continued to follow the Covenant's provisions since they are a statement of his beliefs and he tried to act at all times consistently with the provisions and ideals of the Covenant.

Mr. Mamunes organized an Ethiopian Relief Drive at Pascack Hills that raised $2700 in student contributions in one week. He has taught summer graduate education courses to inner city teachers for eighteen years for Performance Learning Systems, a for profit corporation; has taught a Saturday workshop on multicultural values for teachers; wrote and taught a unit comparing world religions for World History students and served as faculty advisor to the Amnesty International Club.

Mr. Mamunes has been a member of the Unitarian Church for twenty-five years, which follows these general principles: (1) all religions have worth; (2) tolerance is the key to understanding and (3) each individual has worth and responsibility. Mr. Mamunes tries to live by these principles. Membership in the Church is open without regard to race, national origin, gender, age, sexual orientation or physical challenge (R-25).

Mr. Mamunes described his philosophy of teaching as incorporating all levels of Bloom's Taxonomy. A particular lesson can be started at any level. For example, the Martin Luther King lesson starts at the analysis level. He generally, however, starts a lesson at a lower level and makes sure that the class reaches the higher levels before completing the lesson. Mr. Mamunes describes the process as one of problem solving rather than as one of higher-level thinking. His teaching methodology uses primarily inductive teaching methods in which he encourages class participation and rarely lectures.

According to Mr. Mamunes, students can have four reactions in class: fear, attention, comfort and boredom. It is important to keep the students reacting with attention and in comfort. In his words, Mr. Mamunes wants the students to be comfortable with him and slightly uncomfortable with the curriculum. For this reason, he tells his students they can call him "Mr. M." Mr. Mamunes also described two types of students. The "self-limiting" students usually prefer the lower levels of thinking because they are easier and the students can show success quicker. The "mastery-oriented" students have to engage in hard thinking and require creativity and courage. "Self-limiting" students may move from comfort into boredom. If this happens, Mr. Mamunes may put a little "fear" into the situation, for example, by playing Devil's Advocate. He feels that he has to train students to be less self-limiting. In doing so, he acts as their guide; i. e., an expert but not an authoritarian. In this regard, he disagrees with Dr. Sapienza's description of ninth grade students as "putty in need of careful molding." Rather, he views these students as having opinions and values of their own. Rather than molding them, Mr. Mamunes guides them and they mold themselves. Mr. Mamunes does not want students who just try to please the teacher because they are not being authentic when they do so. He agreed that he occasionally fell a little short of all his teaching goals as pointed out in one comment on a classroom observation (R-20) and welcomed these observations as a way to improve his teaching.

Mr. Mamunes has taught the Project T.E.A.C.H. summer course for Performance Learning Systems Inc. fifteen times since the 1970's. The manual for this course is called "Teach/Teacher Effectiveness and Classroom Handling" (T.E.A.C.H.) which is given to all the teachers taking the course (R-26). In his classes Mr. Mamunes has tried all the teaching techniques discussed in T.E.A.C.H. to determine which techniques work. He has "internalized" some of the techniques and uses them reflexively. Examples of the techniques he uses include asking open-ended questions and using confirmatory paraphrases and leading paraphrases and playing Devil's Advocate. The Devil's Advocate technique involves taking a position to stimulate deeper thinking by someone who may hold a different position. Mr. Mamunes also described various types of statements such as approval, empathy and support statements that he uses to break through resistances to learning such as pride, emotional resistance and intellectual resistance. He also utilizes positive phrasing, tone of voice and body language to eliminate any suggestion of sarcasm and/or ridicule. Other techniques utilized by Mr. Mamunes and discussed in T.E.A.C.H. include giving a student a "Hobson's Choice" or a Contingency Action Proposal (CAP) (R-26). He sometimes also does an irrelevant maneuver such as singing to students "it's home room time" to the tune of Howdy Doody.

At the beginning of each school year Mr. Mamunes gives every student a handout captioned "Participating in Class Well" which provides the students with advice on how they should participate in class (R-27). For example, participating in class includes asking questions of all kinds; listening with empathy; laughing at the teacher's jokes; challenging the teacher's point of view and showing concern for classmates (R-27). The handout also lists playing the Devil's Advocate as one way to participate in class and Mr. Mamunes' 1997/1998 third period World History class did use that technique in class. One third of a student's grade in Mr. Mamunes' classes is based on class participation.

As indicators of the atmosphere he develops in his classes, Mr. Mamunes cited to several classroom observations prepared by his then supervisor, Vincent Sausto. In an observation dated December 9, 1994, of a World History Learning Center class, Mr. Sausto noted that "[I]t is obvious that the comfort level is very high for everyone assigned to this class" and that there were several acts of kindness by students to each other that are "example[s] of the kindness and interest that Mr. Mamunes has created in this classroom" (R-7). In an observation dated March 1992 of a Social Studies class, Mr. Sausto noted that Mr. Mamunes' "work with his students has been commendable" and that he is "a very cooperative professional who is on top of the teaching-learning process" (R-28).

Late in the day on March 27, 1998, a school secretary gave Mr. Mamunes a sealed envelope. In the envelope was a memo from Dr. Sapienza advising Mr. Mamunes that an official complaint had been registered with Mr. Burek, the Affirmative Action Officer, by a student and that the allegation concerning inappropriate comments would be discussed at a meeting on March 30 at 3 p.m. in Dr. Sapienza's office (R-15). Mr. Mamunes was concerned and went to Dr. Sapienza's office to speak with her. However, he was told that Dr. Sapienza was not in the building. He waited and eventually Dr. Sapienza spoke with him. Mr. Mamunes asked what the complaint was about and Dr. Sapienza replied that she could not tell him. He told Dr. Sapienza that he believed the union contract required that he be given the names of the complainants. They went to the school library and reviewed the terms of the contract. However, Dr. Sapienza then told him that she believed the Affirmative Action rules applied and they superseded the contract.

On March 30, 1998, at 9 a.m. Mr. Mamunes filed a grievance. At 1:30 p.m. Dr. Sapienza told him that their meeting was cancelled because the "lawyers are looking into things." The following day, April 1, 1998, Mr. Mamunes was suspended with pay. Dr. Sapienza told him that she could not give him an explanation for the suspension at that time and asked him to turn in his grade book. Mr. Mamunes did not know the specific nature of the complaint at that time, only that it involved comments of a sexist and racist nature. On April 20, 1998, Mr. Mamunes attended a Board meeting and asked for an explanation for his suspension but received no response from the Board. On April 22, 1998, Mr. Mamunes received the letter from Dr. Willett scheduling a meeting for April 24, 1998 and attaching the signed copies of the students' written statements (P-6).

On April 24, 1998, Mr. Mamunes, his wife and his attorney attended the meeting in Dr. Willett's office. Dr. Willett, Dr. Sapienza and the Board's attorney were also present. According to Mr. Mamunes, he responded to all the charges during this meeting. He subsequently attended another Board meeting and told the Board that the charges made no sense in light of his teaching methods in which he challenges his students to engage in higher level thinking and to clarify their values. Mr. Mamunes explained to the Board that he wants to empower his students to be powerful thinkers and researchers and not just act to please the teacher. His teaching methods would not work if he belittled his students. On May 18, 1998, the Board voted to approve the appointment of a long-term substitute "for the Social Studies teacher at PVHS who is on leave" (R-32). Mr. Mamunes found this wording "curious" and it upset him because he had actually been suspended.

Mr. Mamunes testified concerning the charges against him. As to Charge 1, in late November 1997 a Friday afternoon pep rally was held in the gym. Mr. Mamunes led his eighth grade class to the assembly in the gym where his class sat up high in the bleachers. Mr. Mamunes has a hip problem that was bothering him that day. Accordingly, he asked another teacher to watch his class and he stood on the gym floor. Mr. Mamunes described himself as thinking about the weekend and being in a "reverie." When the dance team came on the floor, he thought he recognized A. S. and J. M. and reminded himself to compliment them on Monday since the entire team's performance had been very good. J. D. had been a student of Mr. Mamunes' a few years earlier. Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that J. D. and J. M. do not look like each other and that J. M.'s skin is "somewhat darker" than J. D.'s skin. However, he thought their hairstyles are similar, although he acknowledged he does not know much about hairstyles. On Monday morning, A. S. and J. M. were sitting next to each other as they always did. Mr. Mamunes told them that he had never seen the dance before and that it was terrific. J. M. stiffened, looked up and told Mr. Mamunes that it was not she on the dance team but J. D. Mr. Mamunes was embarrassed and exacerbated with himself and thought of himself as a jerk. He put his hands up and said "now I'm getting colored people mixed up." He really meant it as a joke on himself and was trying to "whisk" his error out of the classroom. Mr. Mamunes thought that J. M smiled after his comment and he apologized two or three times during class and again at the end of class. J. M. responded "no problem." Mr. Mamunes apologized to J. M. because he had caused her embarrassment by mixing her up with J. D. and not for making the statement about "colored people".

Mr. Mamunes does not view his statement as offensive because it was not made to J. M. but rather to himself and to the "world at large." Mr. Mamunes did not consider the impact the comment would have on J. M. because he intended that she would see the comment as a joke on himself. He wanted to relieve his and her embarrassment and go forward with the class. He also intended the same impact on the rest of the class, i.e. that they would view the comment as a joke on himself. It did not occur to him that other students would be offended by the comment. In Mr. Mamunes' opinion the comment was "absolutely" not a racist comment and contends that it did not say that all African Americans look the same. He believes that no two students look alike. I do not accept Mr. Mamunes' characterization of his comment for the reasons discussed infra in the Legal Discussion portion of this decision.

Mr. Mamunes believes the comment was appropriate for what he was trying to accomplish, which was to bring closure and to go forward with the class. Since his intent was not to hurt J. M. or any other student he does not view the comment as in conflict with his classroom covenant nor with his guidelines for classroom participation which state that students should "sho[w] concern for classmates" (R-16, R-27). Mr. Mamunes provides "Promoting Creativity" guidelines to his student teachers and he subscribes to the principles contained therein (R-42). One of the guidelines is "accept[ing] and develop[ing] pupils' feelings" (R-42). He does not consider his comment to J. M. as violative of this principle because he was not trying to hurt J. M. or any other student but rather to relieve J. M.'s embarrassment. Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that there are risks associated with using humor in the classroom as discussed in the Project T. E. A. C. H. manual (R-26, page 157). However, he believes he avoided those risks because he delivered his statement without sarcasm or a put-down (R-26, page 157, paragraph 4). Nor did he believe that the comment reflected a topic that was too serious to laugh about (R-26, page 157, paragraph 1) because he did not think it was a very serious problem that he mixed up two students; the laughter was directed at him and, to him, the phrase "colored people" is a neutral term. Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that he could have used other humorous phrases such as "I'm out to lunch" and that, in retrospect, such phrases might have been a more effective and appropriate teaching technique to handle the situation. However, while "pedologically" the statement may have been ill chosen, Mr. Mamunes believes it was not inappropriate because the term "colored people" is a part of every day usage.

Mr. Mamunes does not view "colored people" as a racist statement. For example, the word "colored" is included in the NAACP's title. In his World History class, Mr. Mamunes teaches about how the NAACP was founded and he is aware that its charter is for all non-white people and not just black people. To Mr. Mamunes, "colored" is an everyday term and he thinks it is outrageous to compare "colored" with the word "nigger." In support of his position, Mr. Mamunes cites to the definitions of the two words in Webster's New World Dictionary (R-33) and Webster's Third International Dictionary (R-34). Both dictionaries define "nigger" as being an offensive term while "colored" is defined as a group other than the Caucasoid (R-33, R-34). One of the dictionaries includes "Negro" as part of the definition of "colored" (R-34). However, Mr. Mamunes does not use the word "Negro" in his teaching because that term "harkens back to slavery" and all its horrors. He uses the term "colored people" in his curriculum only when he teaches about the NAACP and Brown v. Board of Education. Mr. Mamunes is aware that in the 1950's and 1960's the terms "white" and "colored" were used by restaurants., water fountains and other facilities to separate whites and blacks. Nevertheless, he views "colored" as a common non-derogatory term used to refer to African Americans since they arrived in the United States.

According to Mr. Mamunes, there has been "an evolution of fashions" and regional differences over time in referring to African Americans. In the Northeast, the more fashionable term became "black," while in the South the term became "colored." Mr. Mamunes cited to an article written in 1996 by Henry Louis Gates, Jr., the W. E. B. DuBois Professor of the Humanities at Harvard University, in which Professor Gates states that among the phrases African-American, people of color and colored, he likes "colored" best because it evokes memories of his mother and his childhood in rural West Virginia (R-37). Mr. Mamunes agreed that Professor Gates' opinion is based on his own life experiences and his relationship with his mother and that Mamunes had no way of knowing whether J. M. and her mother share Professor Gates' feeling toward the term "colored people." Before making the comment, Mr. Mamunes did not consider how J. M. would view the statement in light of her life's experiences. He did not research the use of the term, as described above, until after Dr. Willett equated the term "colored people" with "nigger" during his testimony.

Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that the term "colored people" is not common in New Jersey in referring to African Americans and that he does not generally use the term but explained that the term "black" did not fit the situation because J. D. has lighter skin than J. M. I found this explanation to be ridiculous. Mr. Mamunes does not make an immediate connection between the civil rights movement and the term "colored people" and testified that he has no way of knowing what term specific African Americans would find objectionable. Some may object to the term "African American." Accordingly, it did not come as a big surprise to him that some African Americans would find the term "colored people" objectionable because of its relationship to the issue of segregation. He did not take this into account when he made the comment to J. M. although he usually does consider how students will perceive a statement by him because some students will perceive comments differently. Mr. Mamunes did not take that perception into account in this instance because he did not intend in any way to offend J. M. when he used the phrase "colored people". Rather, he felt "lousy" and "stupid" and wanted to address the tension he had created in the class by making what he saw as a self-deprecating remark. No one ever complained to him about the remark until the tenure charges were filed in April 1998.

As to Charge 2, Mr. Mamunes explained that Martin Luther King Day was on a Monday in 1998 and he did his usual class presentation honoring Dr. King. J. M. was not in school that day. The following day Mr. Mamunes asked J. M. where she had been and she replied she had been at her church with her family honoring Dr. King. J. M. was beaming and was obviously very proud. Mr. Mamunes wanted to show his support of J. M.'s decision to the entire class. Accordingly, he told J. M. that she should be proud of Martin Luther King. His intent was to show that he approved how she spent the day; to bring closure to the prior day's lesson and to include J. M. in that lesson. He did not say it sarcastically in any way and he observed no reaction in the class. During his testimony, Mr. Mamunes could not recall whether he stressed any particular word in his comment to J. M. but felt that if he did so, he would have stressed the word "should." In an affidavit he submitted to the Board in June 1998, Mr. Mamunes indicated that he stressed the word "should" (R-31, page 6). Prior to April 22, 1998, Mr. Mamunes had no idea that there was a problem with his comment and never "in his wildest dreams" did he think the statement would be interpreted negatively. Six to seven weeks elapsed between the two comments to J. M. During that time period no one told Mr. Mamunes that J. M. was having a problem with his "colored people" comment and that comment was not in his mind when he complimented J. M. on her decision to honor Dr. King. He does not believe he is racially insensitive in any way.

Mr. Mamunes honors Dr. King in his class every year because he is awe of Dr. King and what he accomplished through his teachings. Dr. King's ability to mobilize people effectively in non-violent protest is an important lesson for everyone. Mr. Mamunes agrees that all Americans, and not just African-Americans, should be proud of Dr. King and he spent the entire class on Martin Luther King Day conveying this message. In his comment to J. M. he used "you" instead of "we" because his intent was to show support for J. M. His intent was not to say that only J. M. should be proud of Dr. King.

Regarding Charges 3 and 4, Mr. Mamunes testified that he had a good relationship with A. K. and that they saw each other at lunchtime. Sometimes A. K. finished lunch early and would leave the cafeteria and speak with Mr. Mamunes who was on hall duty. They spoke about class work, A. K.'s life in India and his ability to speak several languages. Several times, A. K. asked Mr. Mamunes for extra help. In fact, on the day he was suspended, Mr. Mamunes was giving A. K. extra help and he delayed going to Dr. Sapienza's office for twenty minutes so he could help A. K. As a result of the extra help, A. K.'s papers were improving and his preparation for tests was better. Mr. Mamunes also helped A. K. following an incident in which A. K. broke another student's calculator. Mr. Mamunes spoke to the other student on A. K.'s behalf. While A. K.'s testimony indicated that he received less help from Mr. Mamunes than Mr. Mamunes testified to, A. K.'s testimony did not refresh Mr. Mamunes' recollection such that he could say whether A. K. was correct in his testimony.

Mr. Mamunes described A. K. as a student who wants to be liked by the other students. A. K. handed out candy to other students while attendance was being taken, joked with other students and bantered with them quite a bit. During the taking of attendance, A. K. and the other students made jokes about his father's store including references to Penthouse and Playboy. Mr. Mamunes usually ignored this bantering because he did not want to call undue attention to it. However, Mr. Mamunes was concerned that A. K. believed handing out candy was making him friends and felt that A. K. should think about that issue. Mr. Mamunes was also concerned about A. K.'s "buddies." Students this age are always "razzing" each other and they would do so when A. K. handed out candy. Mr. Mamunes felt that these students should also think about what they were doing and saying. Accordingly, Mr. Mamunes sometimes used a leading paraphrase, see page 12 of the Project T.E.A.C. H. Manual (R-26), to stop the bantering and to get class started. His intent was to crystallize the comments of the students so that A. K. would see what the reaction was to his handing out candy and the other students would realize what they were saying. This was an issue that Mr. Mamunes dealt with throughout the school year in that he was attempting to get the students to rethink their values and go against a deep cultural and ingrained pattern of razzing and trying to buy friends. I found this explanation of why he used leading paraphrases with A. K. to be unrelated to the actual comments he made to A. K. and thus confusing at best.

The leading paraphrase that Mr. Mamunes recalled using was in reference to A. K. handing out candy. He did not remember ever telling A. K. that his father's store was a porn shop although Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that he could have said something like "you're saying that A. K.'s father runs a porn shop" as a leading paraphrase to other students who made such a comment. Similarly, Mr. Mamunes did not remember making comments to the effect that A. K. did not need to to college because he could run his father's porn shop, that A. K. did not need an education or that the only reason A. K. reads the newspaper is because he unpacks the papers at his father's store. According to Mr. Mamunes, if he made such comments he did so in the context of using a leading paraphrase to bolster A. K.'s self-esteem while other students were "bantering" with him during the taking of attendance. For example, if A. K. or one of his friends said that A. K. did not have to go to college, Mr. Mamunes testified that he might have responded by putting out a hand and saying "A. doesn't have to go to college" in a nonjudgmental way and would follow up with a statement that A. K. was doing better in class.

Mr. Mamunes never intended to demean A. K. in any way. Rather, any use of leading paraphrases was intended to crystallize the students' thinking while at the same time putting an end to the comments. If Mr. Mamunes made such statements he would have make them regardless of how other students would interpret them but would be on the alert for a negative student reaction to A. K. According to Mr. Mamunes, there was never a verbal or non-verbal reaction to any comment made to A. K. No one complained about any comments he made to A. K. prior to April 20, 1998. While he is concerned that some students felt he made derogatory and negative comments, he believes that any comments he made were appropriate and not derogatory or negative.

The written statements of the students and their testimony, including A. K.'s statement and testimony that the comments were made to him, did not refresh Mr. Mamunes' recollection as to whether he ever made the comments to A. K. attributed to him by the students and A. K. He has given the matter great thought since the charges were filed against him but he simply does not recall making such comments. Since he cannot recall the comments, he has no way of knowing whether the students are telling the truth or whether their testimony is accurate or not. Mr. Mamunes had no knowledge or information, however, that would indicate why the students, including A. K., would give inaccurate or false statements. Nor did Mr. Mamunes have any recollection of making the comment regarding newspapers to A. K. after A. K. answered a question during class as testified to by the students rather than during attendance.

Moreover, Mr. Mamunes disagrees with Drs. Willett and Sapienza that a comment like the porn shop statement is racial. In his experience, many Indians are Caucasian and skin color is one of the lesser qualities used by anthropologists to define a race. He teaches his students that skin color is not an important indicator of race. Nor does Mr. Mamunes stereotype convenience store owners as Asian-American and has no knowledge as to whether a high percentage of Asian Americans of Indian descent own convenience stores. In his experience, storeowners come from a variety of cultures. During the 1997/1998 school year Mr. Mamunes went out of his way to purchase items at A. K.'s father's store in order to tell him good things about A. K.

Mr. Mamunes denied ever making a derogatory comment to C. A. concerning her weight as alleged in Charge No. 5. He explained that C. A. sat in the first seat of the first row which was adjacent to the door and that he did occasionally ask her to close the door if, for example, a movie was being shown in a near-by classroom. He also asked students in other classes to close the door and would sometimes joke to the student in each class who sat nearest the door to "get the door, please-you need the exercise more than I do" (R-31, page 12). While Mr. Mamunes did not deny making such a statement to C. A., he could not recall ever making a statement that she needed exercise in connection with asking her to close the door. However, he testified that if he did make such a comment to C. A., it would have been a self-mocking reference to his hip problems which prevent him from exercising.

It never occurred to Mr. Mamunes that there was anything "loaded" about such an "exercise" comment because the comment had nothing to do with a student's weight. He never considered the impact of such a statement on a student because the only intended impact was to get the door closed. Mr. Mamunes agreed that a teacher should be concerned with how his comments are perceived by students and that teachers should anticipate the effect of their comments on the class. However, he was not concerned about the impact of any statement he may have made that a student needed exercise because it would not have been a comment regarding the students' weight but rather a reference to his own hip problems. In making such a statement, Mr. Mamunes used tonality and body language to tell the students that he regretted asking them to close the door so frequently because of his physical problem. If Mr. Mamunes was aware that a student was the butt of jokes about a particular matter, he would not make any comments that could be perceived as adding to a pattern of abuse because a teacher should never make a remark that would cause distress to a student. If he had been aware that C. A. was perceived by other students as overweight, he would not have made the comment about exercise. If he had known that C. A. perceived herself as overweight he may have made the comment anyway if it would help to treat her like everyone else. He would not have made the comment if it would only lead to ridicule of C. A.

According to Mr. Mamunes, he did not think of C. A. as overweight because he claims he does not know what "overweight" means. To him, "overweight" is more a state of mind than a fact in that it is a judgmental term that says a person weighs more than he or she should. Mr. Mamunes testified that he has no way of judging whether a student is overweight because he does not compare his students by weight. While Mr. Mamunes described "obese" as an adjective without a judgmental overtone, he nevertheless also refused to say whether C. A. is obese because it is not a word in his vocabulary. He testified repeatedly that he could not decide if a person is overweight or obese because he avoids putting people in such categories. Because he does not put people in these categories, Mr. Mamunes also could not say whether any specific student was sensitive about her weight, although it would not surprise him if some students were sensitive regarding their weight. In Mr. Mamunes' words, he "treats the intellect and doesn't see the clothes or weight." Mr. Mamunes' insistence that he has no concept of what overweight means simply does not ring true. In preparing his affidavit to submit to the Board, Mr. Mamunes reviewed the written statements submitted by the students. Even though the written statements referred only to an "obese girl" (P-1), Mr. Mamunes' affidavit identified the girl specifically as C. A. (R-31, pages 10, 11 and 12). He explained that he did not identify C. A. from the "obese" description but rather because she was the student he asked to close the door in that class. He would never say anything to embarrass or ridicule C. A. and it would be unthinkable to him to mock her because of her weight. Rather, he had a good student-teacher relationship with C. A. and gave her extra help when she asked for it. After C. A. received the top score on one test, Mr. Mamunes noted it in class and asked the class to give her a round of applause. He described C. A. as a quiet, reflective student who wants to do well in class and who does not interact frequently with the other students.

Regarding the charge that he made sexist comments during the "Not Without My Daughter" videotape, Mr. Mamunes explained that he was teaching a unit on the Middle East which covered many aspects, including fundamentalist Islam and the role of women in the Middle East. He provided information to the students regarding the role women play in that culture such as the prohibition on them attending college or working or leaving the home without a male escort and the clothing restrictions placed upon them. Mr. Mamunes taught this information "inductively," by which he means that he provided data to the students so they could think about it, discuss it and then crystallize the information in their minds.

After discussing the various ways that women are treated under Islam, Mr. Mamunes showed the video so that students would think about the issues raised and he instructed them to take notes. Mr. Mamunes has shown this video in World History class for approximately ten years and it is shown over four class days. During the course of showing the video to his third period class, Mr. Mamunes discussed the video with his student teacher, Mr. McKenna, because Mr. Mc Kenna was showing the video in the classes he was teaching. He explained to Mr. Mc Kenna the nature of the film and what he wanted the students to get out of it. Mr. Mamunes also told Mr. Mc Kenna that the third period class was focusing on the mother's escape attempts and thus the students were not paying attention to the issues raised in the film concerning the Islamic culture. Accordingly, Mr. Mamunes told Mr. Mc Kenna that he intended to play the Devil's Advocate to get the students to focus on the issues rather than the escape. He was also concerned that the students may have gotten the wrong impression that abuse is a tenet of the Islam faith.

Mr. Mamunes recalled that, as a Devil's Advocate, he made comments during the film to the effect that it was unfortunate the mother was not given the opportunity to learn the beauty of Islam; that she should try harder to see the beauty of her husband's religion and that she might have avoided abuse by being more submissive to her husband. The comments made by him as set forth in Charge 6 were not intended to be sexist remarks but rather a Devil's Advocate attempt to get the class to focus on the cultural aspects of the movie. There was no response or reaction from the class to any of the comments made by Mr. Mamunes during the video because they were so wrapped up in the film that they "didn't take the bait." He concluded that his attempt to foster discussion had failed. Mr. Mamunes did not recall whether he stopped the video at any point to foster discussion when he made his comments but did recall stopping the video for the last five minutes of class several times in order to discuss the video, although he did not remember if this occurred on the days he played Devil's Advocate. During these discussions, Mr. Mamunes did not bring up the comments he made during the video because he concluded there had been no reaction to them and the Devil's Advocate technique had failed.

Mr. Mamunes flatly denied being sexist and cited to his curriculum vitae as showing that his beliefs are centered on the belief of equality between races and sexes. As further evidence of his position on other cultures, Mr. Mamunes cited to an essay question he includes on his World History exam which advises students that World History is partially designed to make students less ethnocentric and asks them to identify two times when they traded in their ethnocentrism for a more balanced understanding of a non-American culture group (R-43).

After the showing of the video, the students were mainly concerned with a research paper that was due the following week. Since this was a complicated project, several class days were spent in the library. In addition, one class day was used to review for an upcoming test. Mr. Mamunes did not want to do "closure" on the video and his remarks at this point because several students were working on papers on the Middle East and he did not want to tell them what to think. Rather, he intended to do a "cognitive" closure on the video when he did closure for the entire Middle East unit. He did not see any need for closure on an emotional basis right after the video because there had been no reaction to his comments from the students. In support of this decision, Mr. Mamunes cited a handout he received from another teacher on promoting creativity in the classroom (R-42). One of the suggestions in the handout is that a teacher who does not seek instant closure promotes creativity (R-42). Mr. Mamunes explained that suspending closure allows students to think and analyze and come to their own conclusions rather than having the teacher wrap up the ideas for them or tell them what is right or wrong. Suspending closure is thus consistent with inductive teaching while instant closure reflects deductive teaching. Mr. Mamunes believes that when teaching inductively, closure best occurs at the end of a unit rather than at the end of a class. He views suspending closure as compatible with the sixth and seventh levels of Bloom's. His intent was to accomplish closure at the end of the entire Middle East unit but he was suspended before this occurred.

Mr. Mamunes agreed that some students could have internalized his comments during the video and thought about them without showing any outward reaction. While he did not know it at the time, he now realizes that some students did internalize his comments and were upset by them.

At the time, he did not feel immediate closure was needed because he felt the students had not absorbed his comments and also because they had seen him in class for over half a year and knew that he would not ridicule someone based on sex or race. He thought he had "earned their trust." There is always a risk in playing Devil's Advocate that some students will take his comments literally. Knowing in hindsight that four students found his comments objectionable, Mr. Mamunes still believes that his comments were appropriate without immediate closure at the time. He regrets that the students did not bring up their objections for discussion and feels that the issue could have been resolved if P. W. simply asked him what he meant by his comments. He "blames" the school culture for not fostering in students a willingness to question teachers. In the future, Mr. Mamunes would still take the risk of playing Devil's Advocate but would do it in a more sophisticated manner. He would work to change the school culture so that students will feel free to bring problems to their teachers for discussion. In addition, he would "rethink" his decision to forego immediate closure. He recognizes that there is always room for improvement in applying techniques such as the Devil's Advocate and would take steps to avoid what occurred during the playing of "Not Without My Daughter".

Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that he asked his students to say "school sucks" on more than one occasion, as alleged in Charge 7, but denied that the comment disrupted order or discipline in the class. Rather, he explained that he first heard the comment in the late 1960's or early 1970's and that it seemed to be a mantra for students. He decided to incorporate the statement into class as a tension-releasing device and to relieve disappointment after a test. For example, he would say to the students the following: "some of you didn't do too well on the test and you may go yell at your next teacher or kick your dog.... To save the next teacher or your dog I'm going to allow one quiet, unified 'school sucks' and then we'll go on to the next chapter." Mr. Mamunes did not require any student to make the statement and the students do not stand nor shout. Generally, at least half the class makes the comment. He did close the classroom door as a courtesy to fellow teachers because of the noise caused by 16 students talking all at once.

Mr. Mamunes described the "school sucks" technique as an "irrelevant maneuver" as discussed in the T.E.A.C.H. manual (R-26, page 158). He has used the technique three or four times a year for the past ten to twelve years and no one complained about it before the 1997/1998 school year. In fact, he used the technique during one class when a state evaluator was present and after the class, the evaluator told Mr. Mamunes that it had been a "nice class." Mr. Mamunes does not view this technique as encouraging students to defy authority nor as being in derogation of education but rather as a humorous demonstration that a teacher relates to the students' fears and emotions. According to Mr. Mamunes, the students knew that he is not anti-education nor anti-school and that he does not believe school sucks. Rather, they knew that he was merely interjecting a little joke to allow the class to let out steam. In the context in which he used this technique, Mr. Mamunes described it as having a positive and therapeutic impact, allowing the students to laugh while referring to a disappointing environment which was causing a sense of frustration. Mr. Mamunes clarified that he never told the students it was okay or fine to use the phrase but rather that he would "permit" it in class on several occasions. In his mind this was different from approving use of the phrase.

Mr. Mamunes believes that the word "sucks" is not inappropriate in itself but rather it depends on the context in which the term is used. In certain circumstances, Mr. Mamunes testified that he would even let the students say "Mr. Mamunes sucks" but would not allow them to say "Dr. Sapienza sucks" because it would be inappropriate in that context. He also agreed that it would be inappropriate for students to tell a guidance counselor or Dr. Sapienza that "school sucks" when asked why they failed a test or to tell the guidance counselor or Dr. Sapienza that Mr. Mamunes told them it was okay to respond in such a manner. He would consider that a breach of trust between him and the students and of the understanding between them that the phrase would be used only in a limited way in class. In such a situation, use of the phrase would constitute a disrespect for the counselor and Dr. Sapienza while using it in the classroom context as he did was merely a "bit of humor." Mr. Mamunes saw no purpose for his students using the term indiscriminately with other school administrators, although he never specifically told the students not to use the phrase outside of class. Rather, he assumed that ninth grade students would know where to use the phrase appropriately. Mr. Mamunes acknowledged that teachers are authority figures and role models for students and that what teachers say and do impacts on students.

Mr. Mamunes views the charges against him as a personal affront and described how he and his wife took extra steps to ensure that their children were exposed to many cultures and that as a family they have always been open to all cultures. He was especially careful to provide assertiveness training to his daughter because historically women have not been allowed to be aggressive.

Three students from Mr. Mamunes' 1997/1998 ninth grade World History class testified on his behalf, P. H., M. M. and C. E. Based on their demeanor, I reject the Board's contention that these students showed obvious bias in favor of Mr. Mamunes and therefore their entire testimony should be disregarded. However, to the extent that their accounts of incidents in the class differs from those of the five students testifying on behalf of the Board, I found the Board witnesses' testimony more convincing since some of them were the direct recipients of comments (J. M. and A.K.) and others had memorialized Mr. Mamunes's comments, either in interviews or written statements in March 1998, while the comments were fresher in their minds than in December 1998 when P. H., M. M. and C. E. testified. Accordingly, I adopt the following as FINDINGS OF FACT except where otherwise noted.

P. H. testified that Mr. Mamunes encouraged his students to use their brains and not to just memorize facts. One of Mr. Mamunes' favorite sayings was "figure it out yourself." P. H. felt comfortable in Mr. Mamunes' class. He found Mr. Mamunes' class to be a nice environment, one of mutual respect. He liked the way Mr. Mamunes taught because P. H. felt he had to use his brain and it allowed him to excel. P. H. got a lot from the discussions in Mr. Mamunes' class and he actively participated in them. Mr. Mamunes always offered extra help to the students and never poked fun at any student or made racist remarks. As the marking periods progressed, P. H. did better in Mr. Mamunes' class than in his other classes and he did poorer in World History after Mr. Mamunes left school in March 1998. P. H. liked Mr. Mamunes a lot and not having homework from his class but denied being a "teacher's pet."

According to P. H., J. M. "sort of laughed" or "snickered" after Mr. Mamunes' comment about mixing up his "colored people." I do not accept this characterization since it is inconsistent with the testimony of the other students. P. H. did not believe Mr. Mamunes made the comment in a racist manner. No student laughed at J. M. because of Mr. Mamunes' comment. It was not meant to be a funny comment but rather a comment that Mr. Mamunes had confused two students because they were black. P. H. did not speak to J. M. about the comment during class or thereafter and did not know whether Mr. Mamunes ever apologized to her for the comment. A. S. "made a big deal" of the comment by making a gesture and saying something to the effect of "oh, My God." P. H. viewed this as a gesture of surprise and shock by A. S. but did not know why she reacted that way. P. H. was not sure if referring to J. M.'s skin color was a sign of mutual respect by Mr. Mamunes, but he was sure that Mr. Mamunes was not putting J. M. down by making the comment because Mr. Mamunes is not a racist person. P. H. might use the term "colored people" or "African American" but the issue does not usually come up because Pascack Valley is mostly a white school. After being shown yearbook pictures of J. M. and J. D., P. H. agreed that they did not look like each other and that J. D.'s skin color is lighter than J. M.'s. P. H. recalled the second comment to J. M. as "you should be proud of your heritage" rather than a specific reference to Dr. King. I reject P. H.'s testimony in this regard as inconsistent with the testimony of the other students. He also did not think this comment was racial. P. H. could not recall the class discussion held on Martin Luther King Jr. Day.

P. H. is a friend of A. K. He confirmed that A. K. brought candy into class every day and that A. K. and his friends were always joking around, although P. H. testified he was not part of this bantering. These jokes included references to A. K.'s father's store as a porn shop. A few times, Mr. Mamunes said something to A. K. to the effect that his father owned a porn shop. These comments were made sarcastically only after A. K. had repeatedly referred to his father's store as a porn shop and A. K. was not offended by them. P. H. thought Mr. Mamunes was testing A. K. by making these sarcastic statements. P. H. recalled once, at the beginning of class, Mr. Mamunes said to A. K. that he had stopped by "your Dad's porn shop and got a newspaper." On this occasion, P. H. was with A. K. and there was no joking going on in the class. There were some other students present who could have heard the comment but P. H. could not remember how many or who they were. At times, A. K. would say that he did not need an education and Mr. Mamunes would respond sarcastically with comments such as "yeah, what do you need a college education for." Mr. Mamunes, however, never told A. K. that he did not have to go to college. I reject this testimony as inconsistent with the testimony of the other students. P. H. never heard Mr. Mamunes say anything bad about A. K. and denied hearing any comment regarding A. K.'s reading of newspapers. P. H. was aware that there is a stereotype of Indians owning convenience stores.

P. H. did not recall Mr. Mamunes ever making nasty remarks to C. A. and specifically did not think Mr. Mamunes ever told C. A. to "close the door, you need the exercise." P. H. was absent for only two days during the applicable time period. He agreed that C. A. is overweight and that if such a statement had been made to her, it would not reflect mutual respect between student and teacher. He also agreed that Mr. Mamunes did ask C. A. to get up and close the door whenever he wanted the door closed.

During the video "Not Without My Daughter," P. H. recalled Mr. Mamunes making a few comments such as "she should try learning the culture before she wants to leave." He did not recall any statements to the effect that "she should listen to her husband" or "she's getting what she deserves." I reject this testimony as inconsistent with the testimony of the other students. P. H. did not observe any students being upset about these comments. The lights were off during the video although there was sufficient light from the windows to take notes. There was no discussion during the video or at the end of each class about any comments made by Mr. Mamunes. At the end of the movie, however, there was a discussion about the video initiated by Mr. Mamunes as part of the teaching plan for that day. During this discussion, the students had the opportunity to ask questions and express opinions if they wanted. P. H. did not recall anything specific from this discussion beyond a discussion of why the mother could not go to the American embassy for help since it had been taken over by the Iranians.

On several occasions after some tests, Mr. Mamunes did tell the class "if you want, you can say school sucks." However, Mr. Mamunes did not require the students to make this statement. P. H. thought this showed that Mr. Mamunes could relate to his students and this fostered a nice environment in which to learn. P. H. views "sucks" as a curse word and agrees that it would not be appropriate to tell the principal that school sucks. The door was always closed when the class made this statement and P. H. thought it was because Mr. Mamunes did not want others to hear what they were saying and that other teachers may not have approved of his teaching method.

P. H. testified that P. W. did not like Mr. Mamunes and that she and her friends would snicker and make fun of him. They would insult Mr. Mamunes, although P. H. could not remember exactly what they said. Although P. H. was not friends with P. W., he did have conversations with her in English class during which she said she did not like Mr. Mamunes. He did not recall why P. W. said she did not like Mr. Mamunes but remembered that she never mentioned any of his comments until after Mr. Mamunes left. She then told P. H. that his comments to J. M. were racist. J. M. and A. S. said they hated Mr. Mamunes and his teaching and that it made no sense to them. In English class, A. S. also commented that she did not like Mr. Mamunes or the way he taught and that "he is a joke." She made these comments early in the school year before Mr. Mamunes made any of the comments contained in the charges against him. A. S., J. M. and P. W. also complained about the grades they received in Mr. Mamunes' course and did not agree with the way he taught. A. S., J. M. and R. L. were rude to Mr. Mamunes. They were always talking in class and when Mr. Mamunes would say "girls, the class is up here," they would laugh. P. H. was not friends with A. S., J. M. or R. L. He was not interviewed by the school administration regarding Mr. Mamunes' class. I reject P. H.'s testimony as to when the four students starting complaining about Mr. Mamunes and the nature of those complaints as inconsistent with their testimony and unsupported by any other testimony or evidence in this record.

M. M. was also in Mr. Mamunes' 1997-1998 ninth grade World History class. She described the class as a lot different from what she was used to. It was a "laid back" and relaxed course with a lot of class participation during which students could say things without feeling stupid and a lot was taught. Mr. Mamunes did not stress memorization in any way.

After Mr. Mamunes made the comment about mixing up his colored people, M. M. recalled that he apologized to J. M. and A. S. several times. J. M. did not appear affected by the comment, although M. M. did not have any discussion with J. M. or anyone else regarding the comment. M. M. does not usually refer to people by their skin color and does not usually find it appropriate to do so, especially in their school because there are so few minority students. Although she may use the term "colored people" if it applied, she would probably use the term "African-American." M. M. would not have made such a comment to J. M. and she agreed that she could not relate exactly to how J. M. would feel about the comment. During class on Martin Luther King Day, Mr. Mamunes led a class discussion on Dr. King. It was the only class M. M. had in which such a discussion was held.

M. M. recalled A. K. always giving candy and gum out in class and that he and one his friends referred to his father's "porn shop". A. K. also said that he did not have to go to college because he would take over his Dad's business. When A. K. made such a comment, Mr. Mamunes would say something like "we know you don't need education but this is history class" in order to get class started. Mr. Mamunes only made such statements to A. K. in response to a similar statement made by A. K. M. M. did not recall any comment to A. K. regarding why he read newspapers, although she recalled Mr. Mamunes saying that he got the newspaper at A. K.'s store and A. K. saying that he worked at the store. She is aware of a stereotype of Indians owning convenience stores.

M. M. never heard Mr. Mamunes tell C. A. that she needed exercise but agreed that he asked C. A. to close the door because her desk was closest to the door. M. M. described C. A. as overweight but did not know if C. A. was sensitive about her weight since M. M. knows many overweight people who are not sensitive about their weight.

During the showing of "Not Without My Daughter," Mr. Mamunes would stop the movie and discuss it if necessary. For example, Mr. Mamunes explained what the women were wearing. M. M. did not hear Mr. Mamunes say words to the effect that it was the wife's fault and she should listen to her husband. If he did make such a comment, he was playing Devil's Advocate with the students which he did on occasion. At the end of the movie, there was a discussion which summed up the movie and related it to what they were learning at the time.

Every once in a while, Mr. Mamunes would tell the class "okay, you can say school sucks" and then he would start the class. He did this sometimes when the students were angry with their English teacher. Mr. Mamunes did not require any student to say "school sucks."

M. M. liked the World History class and Mr. Mamunes. He made the students think instead of just memorizing which M. M. views as a waste of time. He also gave M. M. a lot of extra help and she received B and B+ grades in Mr. Mamunes' class. M. M. also liked that they did not have a lot of written homework, although the papers assigned to them took a long time to complete. She felt very comfortable in World History class and never heard Mr. Mamunes make a racist or sexist comment. In contrast, J. M., A. S., P. W. and R. L. did not like Mr. Mamunes. In English class they said things about his class and they never "attached" to his manner of teaching because they were used to memorizing. I reject M. M.'s testimony as the nature of the four students' discontent with Mr. Mamunes as inconsistent with their testimony. M. M. is not friends with P. W. and admitted to not liking her. They just never got along. M. M. does speak with A. S. and J. M. and they get along although they are not best friends.

M. M. did not know why Mr. Mamunes had left school and she found it very frustrating. She and another student, C. E., went to Dr. Sapienza and asked her what was going on and if they could do anything. M. M. and C. E. are best friends and have known each other since they were born. Dr. Sapienza would not say anything and merely told them not to be late for their next class. She did not ask either of the students any questions about their World History class.

C. E. was a student in Mr. Mamunes' 1997-1998 ninth grade World History class. She enjoyed the class very much because she found there was more learning and comprehension and not just memorizing of facts. C. E. liked the fact that there was no homework but the papers they were assigned did take a lot of work. She received a B+ in Mr. Mamunes' class. Regarding the dance team incident, C. E. recalled Mr. Mamunes telling J. M. that he had gotten her mixed up with J. D. C. E. did not remember any reference to "colored people" during this conversation. She recalled that during class on Martin Luther King Jr. Day, there were songs and that the next day Mr. Mamunes asked J. M. where she had been and then said to her that she should be proud of Dr. King. J. M. seemed fine after this comment and no one else seemed upset. C. E. never spoke to J. M. about the Dr. King or dance team comments and has no personal knowledge regarding J. M.'s reaction to those comments.

There was a lot of kidding around in class with A. K. because of his father's store and his handing out of candy. A. K. himself did a lot of this kidding around. In contrast to P. H.'s testimony, C. E. recalled that P. H. also kidded with A. K. C. E. did not recall any comments about a porn shop or Mr. Mamunes telling A. K. that he did not need a college education. According to C. E., Mr. Mamunes never told C. A. to close the door because she needed the exercise. C. E. described

C. A. as overweight but did not know if C. A. is sensitive about her weight. She does know that teenagers can be sensitive about being overweight.

C. E. went with M. M. to see Dr. Sapienza who told them she could not give them any information and they should go back to class. Dr. Sapienza did not ask them any questions about how the World History class was run by Mr. Mamunes. As with M. M., C. E. does not get along with P. W.

Robert McKenna testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes. Mr. McKenna was a credible witness and I adopt the following as FINDINGS OF FACT. During the 1997-1998 school year Mr. McKenna was a senior at Montclair State University and student taught at Pascack Valley High School under Mr. Mamunes. During the first semester, Mr. McKenna spent two weeks observing classes. During the remaining twelve weeks of the program, starting on February 1, 1998, he taught four of Mr. Mamunes' classes which did not include the third period World History class. During this period Mr. McKenna met with Mr. Mamunes throughout the school day as Mr. Mamunes mentored him and provided guidance. Mr. McKenna found that Mr. Mamunes had a great rapport with the students. He was constantly in motion and was well liked and respected by the students. The students enjoyed Mr. Mamunes as a person and Mr. McKenna observed no negative reaction to Mr. Mamunes from the students. Mamunes would use body language, tone of voice and humor to relax and engage the class and did not talk down to the students. The research projects assigned the students by Mr. Mamunes were interesting and challenging but also fun. Mr. McKenna describes Mr. Mamunes as "an exceptional mentor whose primary concerns were student learning and my own personal growth as an educator" (R-41). Mr. McKenna never heard Mr. Mamunes make a racist or sexist remark or demean any student.

Mr. McKenna was scheduled to show the "Not Without My Daughter" video to one of the classes he was teaching. Prior to showing the film, Mr. Mamunes discussed with Mr. McKenna how he was going to show the movie in the third period class. He told McKenna he intended to play Devil's Advocate with the students and make almost outrageous statements to get the students to think about the important parts of the film and not just focus on the action aspects. One comment that Mr. Mamunes discussed was one he planned to use after a scene of domestic violence in which he would say to the students that the wife "would be much better off if she would just learn to cooperate with her husband" (R-41). Mr. McKenna did not use this technique when he showed the film because it is not his style. But he thought it would grab the students' attention and let them know that the video was not just entertainment but about issues they were studying in class. McKenna understood that at the end of the film, there would be a discussion on the video and Mr. Mamunes' comments. He felt it imperative that this "debriefing" be done with such an entertainment type of film to make sure that the students were getting what they should from the film about issues such as the role of women, religion, culture and the United States government in Iran. Mr. McKenna submitted a statement to the Board when it was considering these tenure charges in which he stated that Mr. Mamunes had told him about the comments he intended to make and that such comments were, in Mr. McKenna's opinion, "made with the express intent of gaining a response of disbelief from students who would then be forced to view the film with a critical eye" (R-41). Mr. McKenna was not in the third period class every day and was not there when the video was shown so he has no personal knowledge of what Mr. Mamunes actually said during the movie.

Mr. McKenna was told only that there was a personnel issue when Mr. Mamunes stopped teaching. He was interviewed by Dr. Sapienza and Mr. Burek a few weeks after Mr. Mamunes left the school. McKenna was asked if he had ever heard Mamunes make racist or sexist remarks and replied that he had not. He was not asked about any specific comment. Mr. McKenna was also asked about the video and replied that he was not in the classroom when Mamunes showed the film.

Mark August Convoy testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes. Mr. Convoy was a credible witness and I adopt the following as FINDINGS OF FACT. Mr. Convoy has been a teacher in the Pascack Hills High School for thirteen years and student taught under Mr. Mamunes in 1986. He knows Mr. Mamunes very well and frequently observed Mamunes teaching, both as a student and later as a teacher. The two traded resources, talked about techniques and became close. Mr. Convoy described Mr. Mamunes as an inductive teacher who begins lessons with concrete experiences of students and then builds on those experiences. Mr. Convoy acknowledged that he is not a supervisor and never assessed Mr. Mamunes in light of evaluation criteria but he did do so informally based on his many years of experience as a teacher.

While Mr. Convoy was certainly not in Mr. Mamunes' class every day and thus could not testify as to what occurred when he was not there, Mr. Convoy never heard Mr. Mamunes make a racist or sexist remark or joke, either in class or in social situations. He knows that Mr. Mamunes is a member of the Unitarian Church and that racist and/or sexist comments are not part of his life style. Mr. Convoy described Mr. Mamunes' reputation as a very tolerant teacher and, based upon his personal knowledge of him as a friend and teacher, characterized him as a "champion of tolerance." An illustration of this tolerance is the Minorities in America course which Mr. Convoy taught as a student teacher under Mr. Mamunes' supervision. Among other topics, this course covered black spiritual songs and taught the students that minorities are part of the fabric of our country.

Personally, Mr. Convoy does not use the phrase "colored people" because it is an old-fashioned term which offends some blacks. The term is a vestige from the times of segregation in our country and he would not use it in speaking to a student in his class. Instead, Mr. Convoy uses the terms "black" or "African-American" although he is aware that some blacks are offended by either term. In teaching his classes, Mr. Convoy is cognizant of not offending students and is aware of the sensitivities of overweight students. He would not deliberately make a statement regarding the physical characteristics of a student which would embarrass the student. On his best days, Mr. Convoy would probably not say "close the door, you need the exercise" to an overweight student because such a comment would probably offend the student. However, a teacher can sometimes offend unintentionally or inadvertently, although if such offense occurs more than once it cannot be seen as unintentional.

Mr. Convoy is aware of a common stereotype in our culture that links Indian Americans with ownership of convenience stores and that this stereotype is a comical theme on the Simpsons television show. He would not make any comments in class to perpetuate such a stereotype because students should not be encouraged to believe in these stereotypes and he would discourage students from engaging in any discussions which would lead them to do so. Mr. Convoy also would not make a reference to a store owned by a student's father as a porn shop because to do so would be disrespectful of the student, put him in a negative light and perpetuate a stereotype. .Mr. Convoy believes it is important for a teacher to reinforce the importance of education and would not tell a student that he or she does not need an education. It is also important to encourage student participation in class and Mr. Convoy would not denigrate a student's response even if it were incorrect. He would not tell such a student that the only reason he reads newspapers is because he unpacks them at his father's store.

Mr. Convoy has a technique called a "silent scream" which he uses to relieve student stress. He tells the students to contort their faces and pretend they are screaming. Mr. Convoy described a series of posters that were sold ten to twelve years ago which contained a series of vignettes taken from school life with a caption that said "school sucks." The posters were very common and may have been distributed by an educational company. Mr. Convoy has three of the vignettes in his class by the pencil sharpener. Mr. Convoy has never told his class they could say "school sucks" and was not sure whether he ever would. To Mr. Convoy, it is an issue of style which depends on the circumstances. However, he does not think the phrase is inappropriate in class because usage of the term is fairly common.

Mr. Convoy uses the Devil's Advocate technique to stimulate discussion in his classes. Sometimes a teacher has to be provocative to get a response or reaction from the students. Using the technique can be risky because it is challenging the students' point of view by espousing unpopular opinions and some students are more sensitive to their point of view being challenged. It is an effective technique but Mr. Convoy does not use it often. Usually when this technique is used, the teacher will know the students' reaction immediately. Mr. Convoy would want to know if the technique had any effect on the students. If they did not react to his comment, he would want to know why they did not react. In the ideal world, the teacher would know whether the students took the comment literally. Freshmen students are prone to taking everything literally and thus it is trickier to use the Devil's Advocate technique with them. It is important that students find out that the comment made is not the teacher's opinion and thus Mr. Convoy believes it is important to "get a handle" on how students have interpreted information in a lesson. The way to do this after playing Devil's Advocate is through closure, which is commonly done at the end of a unit at the discretion of the teacher, or through "debriefing" shortly after the comment is made. If there is no opportunity for discussion immediately after playing Devil's Advocate, a debriefing at the end of class is the most likely technique used because it is important to do it while the statement is fresh in their minds.

Debriefing may have to occur the next class day if time runs out. If students are silent however, you may never know their reaction to the Devil's Advocate statements.

Stuart Hollis has been a Social Studies teacher in the Pascack Valley Regional School District for thirty-one years. Mr. Hollis was a credible witness and I adopt the following as FINDINGS OF FACT. Mr. Hollis knows Mr. Mamunes as a colleague and a friend. Twenty years ago, Mr. Hollis and Mr. Mamunes taught a series of "mini" courses on the Soviet Union, Minorities, Constitutional Law and the History of Art. Mr. Hollis observed Mr. Mamunes teaching the Minorities course for three to four days a week during a ten-week period before Mr. Hollis taught the course the following semester. He described Mr. Mamunes as a creative, brilliant teacher who creates his own lesson plans to get students to think which can make some students uncomfortable. Mr. Mamunes' teaching techniques are different from other teachers who rely solely on textbooks.

An example of a technique used by Mr. Mamunes was the use of colored cards which he handed out to students. Mr. Mamunes then asked the students if they agreed with a statement such as "do you think woman should be in the work place and be in management positions" and they would vote by using the appropriate card for agree or disagree. This technique put students "on the spot" and forced them to speak their mind. Six weeks of the Minorities course was spent on Black History. During this portion of the course, Mr. Mamunes taught about slavery and gave readings to the class on W. E. B. Du Bois and the creation of the NAACP. He also taught the students about Booker T. Washington who urged Blacks to assimilate and the views of Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X. Mr. Mamunes led discussions among the students on which points of view were the best. He also taught about the differences between urban and rural black cultures and included black spirituals in the class materials. Mr. Mamunes challenged the students with a forceful and dynamic presentation which provided more depth and understanding to the students and made them work hard in class.

The Minorities course observed by Mr. Hollis occurred twenty years ago when Mr. Hollis was not a supervisor. While no one told him to incorporate Mr. Mamunes' techniques, he did incorporate some of them. Mr. Hollis did not incorporate other techniques used by Mr. Mamunes because he has a different teaching style and likes to avoid confrontation. During the 1997-1998 school year, Mr. Hollis and Mr. Mamunes both taught at the same school and Mr. Hollis observed Mr. Mamunes' classes periodically for 15 to 25 minutes and saw his lesson plans that year.

Ellen M. Dougherty testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes. Ms. Dougherty was a credible witness and the following is adopted as FINDINGS OF FACT. She is the Administrative Manager and Corporate Secretary for Performance Learning Systems Inc. (Performance) located in Emerson, New Jersey. The firm provides graduate courses for teachers, has offices throughout the country and works with school districts throughout the country. The instructors employed by the firm must have a master's degree and seven years of recent classroom experience. They are supervised by Performance and by various colleges which grant credit to teachers who take the courses. Colleges which grant such credits include Seton Hall, Drexel and Western Maryland.

Performance has employed Mr. Mamunes for twenty years, although he was not currently teaching for them at the time of this hearing. During the course of this twenty years, Mr. Mamunes taught approximately 1000 teachers, including minority teachers, in various states including Massachusetts, Virginia, Alabama, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Every participant in Performance course fills out an evaluation form. Mr. Mamunes' evaluations were above average. Performance has received no complaints about Mr. Mamunes concerning racist, sexist or other inappropriate comments. Ms. Dougherty described Mr. Mamunes as an above average instructor whom she feels comfortable sending to any area of the country to teach. She did acknowledge that she has no personal knowledge of his performance or any comments he made in class. Rather, her opinion is based on the evaluations submitted by Performance's students. Those students do let the firm know if inappropriate comments are made by instructors. Ms. Dougherty agreed that Performance does not teach adolescents and she has no knowledge of Mr. Mamunes effectiveness in teaching adolescents or of his effectiveness in implementing the techniques described in the T.E.A.C. H. manual used by Performance instructors.

Carol Patterson testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes. Ms. Patterson was a credible witness and the following is adopted as FINDINGS OF FACT. She is employed as a teacher of children with learning disabilities by the Ridgewood public school system. Ms. Patterson has known Mr. Mamunes for over twenty years because her children and his children went to school together and they have both been members of the Unitarian Church. They are also members of the same Book Group in which they read authors from other countries and of all races and ethnicity. Some examples include the works of Toni Morrison and the books "Color of Water" and "Gandhi's Truth." The member of the group who selects the book is responsible for leading the discussion but Mr. Mamunes often contributes a lot to the discussion because of his history background. In all the years she has known him, Ms. Patterson has never heard Mr. Mamunes make a racist, sexist or improper ethnic remark or conduct himself in any such manner. Ms Patterson and her husband submitted a written statement to the Board setting forth their knowledge of Mr. Mamunes (R-45). Ms Patterson acknowledged that she has never seen Mr. Mamunes teach and thus does not know how he interacts with his students and that she has no knowledge of his activities in the school district or in the classroom.

J. M. testified in rebuttal for the Board. Based on her credibility, I adopt the following as FINDINGS OF FACT. The World History class was assigned to do a research paper from a list of topics provided by Mr. Mamunes. J. M. decided to research a poet, Sappho. When she told Mr. Mamunes, he told J. M. that Sappho was a lesbian. Mr. Mamunes made no other comment about Sappho to J. M. J. M. was not aware that Sappho was a lesbian; she became embarrassed and did not want to do the paper. She was uncomfortable doing the research because other students saw her. Although J. M. thought Mr. Mamunes' comment was inappropriate and she was embarrassed, she spoke with her mother and decided to do the paper anyway because she wanted to be mature enough to finish the project. J. M. received an "A" on this paper.

J. M. described P. H., M. M. and C. E. as teacher's pets of Mr. Mamunes. There was a baby picture of P. H. on the bulletin board for the entire year. No other baby pictures were on the bulletin board, although J. M. acknowledged that students were free to post whatever they wanted on the board. Mr. Mamunes and P. H. are both Greek and J. M. thought that explained why he favored P. H. Mr. Mamunes always picked M. M. and C. E. as his assistants and favored them. While J. M. did assist Mr. Mamunes later on during the school year by writing down topics on the board, she did not consider herself a teacher's pet because, in her opinion, Mr. Mamunes favored the three other students. While I credit J. M.'s testimony that she viewed these three students as "teacher's pets," I make no finding that in fact Mr. Mamunes displayed any favoritism towards them since I found J. M.'s testimony in this regard too vague to reach such a conclusion.

J. M. denied that she had any conversations with P. W., A. S. or R. L. in which she said she did not like Mr. Mamunes before he made the comments to her. She disliked him after he made the comments to her and the other students. Before those comments, J. M. had no problem with Mr. Mamunes. A. S., R. L. and P. W. also did not like Mr. Mamunes because of the comments he made to J. M. and the other students.

Mr. Mamunes argues that the testimony of the four students who testified on behalf of the Board should be entirely disregarded because the four are friends who, in effect, conspired to get rid of Mr. Mamunes because they did not like him or his teaching methods. I find nothing in this record to support anything approaching the conspiracy that Mr. Mamunes describes. There is no doubt that J. M. and A. S. are the closest of friends but R. L. only occasionally socializes with them and P. W. seldom does. Moreover, both J. M. and P. W. spoke with their mothers about their concerns contemporaneously with at least some of Mr. Mamunes' comments which upset them, a strong indicator that it was the comments they disliked and not him personally or his teaching style. The demeanor of all four students while they testified showed not even a hint of personal animosity towards Mr. Mamunes and there is nothing in their prior history or records that would support a conclusion that they would go to such lengths to get rid of a teacher simply because they did not like him. Accordingly, I reject entirely Mr. Mamunes' contention that there was an unjustified conspiracy against him which resulted in these tenure charges.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Preliminarily, I address several legal arguments advanced by Mr. Mamunes concerning the investigation of the charges against him and whether an adverse inference should be drawn against the Board for its failure to preserve notes of some interviews that provided supportive evidence for Mr. Mamunes or to call as witnesses other students in Mr. Mamunes' third period World History class. Relying on some of the Board's answers to interrogatories and the testimony of Drs. Willett and Sapienza and Mr. Sullivan, Mr. Mamunes faults the Board's investigation because allegedly the administrators did not search out witnesses that would provide evidence in support of him and did not record such evidence when they did receive it. However, whether the Board's investigation could have been conducted in a different manner or even a better manner does not establish that its investigation was tainted nor does it negate the credible testimony of J. M., R. L., P. W., A. S. and A. K. See,Tthomas v. Morris Twp. Board of Education, 89 N. J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd 46 N. J. 581 (1966); Quinlan v. North Bergen Board of Education, 73 N. J. Super. 40, 46-47 (App. Div. 1962)(the Commissioner will not substitute his or her judgment for the local board of education's unless it was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable).

Nor do I find that the instant matter contains the appropriate circumstances for drawing an adverse inference against the Board. While it is true that the Board administrators either did not take notes or discarded them of interviews that provided favorable evidence to Mr. Mamunes, that evidence was provided through the testimony of the Board's administrators who acknowledged its existence. Nor does the fact that the Board did not call all the other students in the class to testify support a negative inference. A negative inference cannot be drawn against one side if the witnesses are available to both sides. State v. Lamumba, 253 N. J. Super. 375, 395-396 (App. Div. 1992). Mr. Mamunes argues that the other students were not available to him because the Board refused to provide him with their names and addresses pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:3-6.3(a) and that the undersigned upheld this determination. As I previously ruled, the Board was obligated to take this position under the cited regulation. Mr. Mamunes had the option of seeking a court order to obtain the names and addresses or appealing the interlocutory order. He exercised neither option. I am not aware of any case law supporting a negative inference in such circumstances. Moreover, Mr. Mamunes called three of the other students, strongly suggesting that he knew how to get in contact with the remaining students. Accordingly, Mr. Mamunes' arguments that the charges should be dismissed and/or a negative inference should be drawn against the Board are rejected.

Turning to the substantive legal discussion, the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq., governs the filing of tenure charges against tenured teaching staff members of the State's public school system. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 provides in relevant part that no tenured teacher "shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation" unless "inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause" is shown after a hearing held pursuant to the statute. In a tenure proceeding under the statute, the Board has the burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the tenure charges are supported in the record as a whole. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Fargo, 1990 S.L.D. (Commissioner of Education, November 15, 1989), motion to vacate denied, 1991 S.L.D. 2548 (State Board, November 6, 1991).

The Commissioner of Education and the State Board of Education have repeatedly recognized the important influence that teachers have on their students. As the Commissioner stated in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Tordo, 1974 S.L.D. 97, 98-99 (Commissioner of Education, January 16, 1974):

> Teachers are public employees who hold positions demanding public trust, and in such positions they teach, inform, and mold habits and attitudes, and influence the opinions of their pupils. Pupils learn, therefore, not only what they are taught by the teacher, but what they see, hear, experience and learn about the teacher. When a teacher deliberately and willfully violates the law . . . and consequently violates the public trust placed in him, he must expect dismissal or other severe penalty as set forth by the Commissioner.

Moreover, the Commissioner has recognized that "[a]dolescents are especially vulnerable to the influences of their teachers, who serve as role modes and help to shape how youngsters actually view themselves." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Johnston, 95 N. J. A.R. 2d (EDU) 439, 443.

There are numerous cases in which the Commissioner and the State Board have sustained tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against teachers who have uttered racist and or sexist remarks to students. See, e.g., Burg v. State Operated School District of the City of Newark, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 3291-97, Commissioner of Education (December 18, 1997) (slip op. at 19); Princeton Regional School District Board of Education v. Campbell, 93 N. J.A. R. 2d (EDU) 196, 224, aff'd 93 N.J.A.R. 2d 604 (State Board 1993), aff'd 95 N. J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 211 (App. Div. 1995), certif. denied, 142 N. J. 518 (1995); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Sheridan, 92 N. J. A. R. 2d (EDU) 257, 262-63; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Blasko, 1980 S.L.D. 987, 999 (Commissioner of Education, August 28, 1980), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 1981 S.L.D. 1392 (State Board, April 1, 1981); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Matcki, 1971 S.L.D. 566, 575 (Commissioner of Education, November 18, 1971), aff'd 1973 S.L.D. 773 (State Board, February 7, 1973), aff'd 1973 S.L.D. 773 (App. Div. November 28, 1973).

In the instant matter, four of the charges brought against Mr. Mamunes allege that he uttered racist, inappropriate ethnic and or sexist remarks to his students (P-1, Charges 1, 2, 3, and 6). As to Charge 1, Mr. Mamunes admits that he made the comment to J. M. about getting his "colored people mixed up." He argues, however, that the remark was not racist because the term "colored people" is acceptable to at least some African-Americans, is not the same as the term "nigger" and he made the comment as a joke in disparagement of himself and to ease J. M.'s embarrassment. Mr. Mamunes further argues that the comment was not racist because J. M. did not react adversely to it and never told him that the remark bothered her. I reject all of Mr. Mamunes' arguments in this regard.

Neither the dictionary definitions introduced into evidence by Mr. Mamunes, the article by Professor Gates nor the use of the word "colored" in the name of the NAACP are sufficient to remove the sting of this comment to J. M. As was evident from her testimony and that of her mother, the comment was extremely hurtful to J. M. and to her entire family. This testimony was supported by the credible testimony of A. S. that J. M. was extremely upset by the comment. Even several of Mr. Mamunes own witnesses testified that they would not have made this comment to J. M. M. M. does not usually refer to people by their skin color and would not have made the comment to J. M. Mark Convoy does not use the phrase "colored people" because it is an old-fashioned term which offends some blacks and is a vestige from the times of segregation in our country. Mr. Mamunes himself is aware that in the 1950's and 1960's the terms "white" and "colored" were used by restaurants, water fountains and other facilities to segregate the races. He is also aware that "colored people" is not a common term in New Jersey and testified that he does not generally use the term, negating the impact of Professor Gates' article which is based on his life experiences in the rural south. Moreover, Mr. Mamunes' testimony that the term "black" did not fit the situation because J. D. has lighter skin than J. M. is absurd. Importantly, Mr. Mamunes' position that "colored" is not the same as "nigger" ignores the fact that, regardless of the term he used, he was in effect telling a student that he cannot tell members of her race apart.

Based on his apparent sincerity during this part of his testimony, I credit Mr. Mamunes' testimony that he intended the comment as a disparaging joke on himself and not as a put down of J. M. However, even humorous discriminatory remarks are inappropriate and use of humor simply shows a teacher's lack of "sense and sensibility." Sheridan, supra, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d at 259, 262; Blasko, supra, 1980 S.L.D. at 999. Finally, that J. M. did not appear to Mr. Mamunes to react adversely to the remark does not eliminate its discriminatory impact. It is not unusual that a ninth grade student would feel too intimidated to challenge a teacher's remark. This conclusion is supported by the testimony of J. M. that she feared retaliation and that of A. S. that J. M. was uncomfortable even talking about the incident with A. S.'s mother. Perhaps most problematic in this regard is Mr. Mamunes' insistence, even after hearing about the impact on J. M. of his remark during this hearing, that the remark was not inappropriate in the context of what he was trying to accomplish. This indicates that Mr. Mamunes is not concerned with the feelings of his students or their reactions to comments he might make. Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Board has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Mamunes engaged in unbecoming conduct as alleged in Charge No. 1.

As with Charge No. 1, Mr. Mamunes does not deny that he said to J. M. "you should be proud of Martin Luther King," as alleged in Charge No. 2. He argues, however, that this was not a racist comment because it was not said sarcastically; his intent was to provide positive reinforcement to J. M.; neither J. M. nor anyone else in the class appeared to react negatively to the comment and no one complained to him about the remark. Even though J. M. and some of the other students thought that Mr. Mamunes made this comment in a sarcastic manner, I credit his testimony that he did not intend sarcasm but rather a positive reinforcement for J. M. I found his testimony sincere in this regard and consistent with his history of special class presentations on Dr. King on the anniversary of his birthday every year. Nevertheless, the fact remains that, as testified to by J. M.'s mother and Dr. Willett, the comment had the effect of singling out J. M. based on her race and conveying to the entire class that only African-Americans benefited from Dr. King's accomplishments and should therefore be proud of him. While this was not Mr. Mamunes' intent, his continued insistence that the remark was appropriate, even after hearing of its impact on J. M., her family and other students, and his testimony that he is proud he made the statement and did not consider how J. M. would react to it, indicate a troubling insensitivity on his part and support a conclusion that Mr. Mamunes, however unintentionally, made a statement to J. M. which had a discriminatory impact upon her and others in the class. For the same reasons as with Charge No. 1, the fact that J. M. did not complain about this comment to Mr. Mamunes or anyone in administration until she was asked about his comments in March 1998 does not negate the discriminatory nature of the comment. Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Board has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Mamunes engaged in unbecoming conduct as alleged in Charge No. 2.

Charges 3 and 4 contain allegations that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. his father owns a porn shop; A. K. does not need to go to college because he will take over his father's porn shop; A. K. does not need an education and the only reason A. K. reads newspapers is because he unpacks the newspapers at his father's store. There are some discrepancies in the testimony of the students concerning Mr. Mamunes' comments to A. K. J. M. recalls that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. his father owns a porno shop and A. K. did not have to go to college because he could work in the store like his father. R. L. recalled that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. his father owns a porn shop and A. K. did not have to go to college and did not need an education because he will take over his father's shop. R. L. also recalled that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. that the only reason A. K. reads the paper is because he unpacks the newspapers at his father's store. P. W. recalled that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. he did not have to go to college because his father's shop would keep him alive and that J. M. told her that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. his father owns a porn shop on a day when P. W. was absent from class. A. S. recalled that Mr. Mamunes told A. K. his father's shop is a porn shop; A. K. does not have to go to college and the only reason he reads newspapers is because he unpacks them at his father's store.

M. M., who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, recalled that when A. K. made a comment to the effect that he did not have to go to college because he would take over his Dad's business, Mr. Mamunes would respond with something like "we know you don't need an education but this is history class" in order to get the class started. C. E., who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, did not recall any such comments made by Mr. Mamunes to A. K.; she recalled that only students made such comments. P. H., who also testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, recalled a few times when Mr. Mamunes said something to A. K. to the effect that his father owned a porn shop but only after A. K. first repeatedly referred to his father's store as a porn shop. P. H. also recalled one time when Mr. Mamunes told A. K. he had stopped by his Dad's porn shop and got a newspaper and that this comment was not made in reference to any joking in the class. P. H. further recalled several times when Mr. Mamunes sarcastically responded to A. K. "yeah, what do you need a college education for" after A. K. had said that he did not need an education. According to P. H., Mr. Mamunes never told A. K. that he did not have to go to college and made no comment to A. K. regarding why he read newspapers.

A. K. recalled that Mr. Mamunes once said his father owned a porn shop and agreed that his friends have kidded him about his father owning a porn shop. A. K. also recalled that during a class discussion about attending college, Mr. Mamunes told him he did not have to go to college because he would take over his Dad's store. A. K. agreed he has joked with his friends that he does not have to go to college because he can work at home. A. K. testified as to a third comment made by Mr. Mamunes when the class was discussing a current event and A. K. said something about it. Mr. Mamunes told the class that A. K. only reads papers because he unpacks them at his father's store.

Mr. Mamunes could not remember making any of the remarks attributed to him by the students. However, he acknowledged that he could have made them, or similar remarks, in the context of using a leading paraphrase to bolster A. K.'s self esteem when other students were bantering with A. K. during the taking of attendance. According to Mr. Mamunes, if he made such remarks, they were not derogatory or negative comments but were appropriate in the context of what he was trying to accomplish in class.

For the following reasons, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Mamunes made the four comments to A. K. as alleged in Charges 3 and 4. As noted above, I found the four students who testified on behalf of the Board to be very credible witnesses who had no reason to fabricate stories against Mr. Mamunes. They all recalled at least several of the comments made to A. K. as alleged in the charges. While there are some discrepancies in the specific words spoken by Mr. Mamunes and the number and type of remarks he made to A. K., those discrepancies can be explained. Some of the students simply may not have been listening to Mr. Mamunes when he made one of the remarks or may have been absent from class on that particular day. Moreover, I cannot credit these students with making up or imagining comments of this nature. In addition, A. K. confirmed that all the comments were made to him and P. H., who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, confirmed that two of the comments were made to A. K. In this regard, I reject Mr. Mamunes' argument that A. K.'s testimony must be discredited because he had earlier denied to Mr. Burek and Mr. Sullivan that the comments were made. With the one exception noted above in the factual discussion, A. K.'s demeanor while testifying about the comments made to him was credible. His testimony was also consistent with that of the other students. While A. K.'s earlier denial that the remarks were made would usually be troublesome, the Board's explanation that A. K. did not want to get involved at the time because of a recent disciplinary action against him makes sense. Nor do I find it troubling that P. W. may not have heard the porn shop comment first hand yet included it in her written statement. This does not suggest a "conspiracy" to get Mr. Mamunes but rather is completely consistent with a student (i.e., J. M.) discussing what has happened in class with a fellow student who was absent (i.e., P. W.).

Mr. Mamunes argues that even if he made the comments, they do not constitute unbecoming conduct because he would have done so in the context of joking with leading paraphrases which used A. K.'s own words to bolster A. K.'s self esteem and to get the class back on track. Firstly, since Mr. Mamunes testified that he cannot remember making the comments, it is difficult to accept his testimony regarding the context in which they would have been made, especially in light of the majority of the students' testimony that they did not think Mr. Mamunes was joking. Secondly, Mr. Mamunes' attempt to relate any comments he made to A. K.'s tendency to bring candy to class simply does not make any sense because the comments testified to by the students had nothing to do with candy or attempting to "buy friends". Thirdly, that a teacher's comments may have been taken out of context is not a defense to a charge of unbecoming conduct based on those comments. See, Sheridan, supra, 92 N. J. A. R. 2d at 261-63. Finally, even if A. K. and/or his friends made similar comments, that does not justify a teacher perpetuating and/or repeating demeaning remarks to a student.

The Board contends that the comments made to A. K. constitute unbecoming conduct because they played on a stereotype of American Indians owning convenience stores and thus demeaned A. K.'s ethnicity. The Board also argues that the comments constitute unbecoming conduct because they demeaned A. K.'s academic abilities and his family's occupation. Although there is support in the record for a stereotype that convenience stores are owned by Indian Americans and it is undisputed that A. K. was the only Indian American in the World History class, there is little or no indication that either A. K. or the other students thought Mr. Mamunes was singling out A. K. because he is Indian American or because of a stereotype. Rather, as testified to by the students called by the Board, what they found troublesome about the comments was the denigration of A. K.'s academic abilities and Mr. Mamunes' seeming disregard for the benefits of a college education. In fact, A. K., unlike J. M., was not troubled by any alleged racist thrust to the comments, but merely thought the comment about his father's "porn" shop was inappropriate. As for the rest of the comments, A. K. was not troubled by them because he thought Mr. Mamunes was joking. Unlike the "colored people" and Dr. King remarks, the remarks made to A. K. are not inherently racist since they contain no reference to skin color or to a particular race. Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the remarks made to A. K. were not racist in nature.

However, I also CONCLUDE that the comments did denigrate A. K.'s academic abilities, his family and the educational process. Telling the entire class that A. K. only reads newspapers because he unpacks them at his father's store has the effect of demeaning A. K. in the eyes of his classmates even though A. K. may not have realized that was the case. The comments that A. K. does not need an education and does not need to go to college were interpreted by the Board's witnesses as in derogation of education, a message that no teacher should convey to his students. Finally, the comment that A. K. father's store is a porn shop is completely extraneous to any educational purpose and made unnecessary and inappropriate fun of A. K.'s family. The public trust placed with teachers and the importance of teachers as role models to their students requires that teachers refrain from making fun of any student's academic abilities or his family's occupation or denigrating education in the minds of their students. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Tordo, 1974 S.L.D. 97, 98-99 (Commissioner of Education, January 16, 1974). Comments such as those made by Mr. Mamunes to A. K. constitute "conduct directly antithetical to his role as a teacher and as a role model for the students in his classes." Sheridan, supra, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d at 262-63. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Mamunes engaged in unbecoming conduct by making inappropriate comments to A. K. that denigrated his academic abilities, his family and the importance of education.

Charge 5 contains the allegation that Mr. Mamunes told C. A., an overweight student, to close the classroom door because she needed the exercise. This remark was contained in the written statements of P. W. and R. L. but not in the written statements of J. M. and A. S. (P-1). However, during the hearing, all four students testified that Mr. Mamunes made this comment to C. A. J. M.

explained that she did not include the comment to C. A. in her written statement because she only included the comments that most affected her. A. S. explained that she did not include the C. A. comment in her written statement because she did not have a lot of time to complete the statement and she included only those comments she remembered at that time. P. W. testified that some of the other students laughed at this comment. None of the other three students testified as to either C. A.'s reaction or any reaction form the other students. A. K. testified the comment was that C. A. needed to work out. He further testified that C. A. looked mad and that most of the other students laughed at her. Because C. A. is overweight and has been the subject of ridicule due to her weight, all five students called by the Board testified that Mr. Mamunes should not have made the comment and that they would feel bad if a similar comment had been made to them. The three students who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, P. H., M. M. and C. E., all testified that they never heard Mr. Mamunes make the "exercise" comment, although he sometimes did ask C. A. to close the door. All three agreed that C. A. is overweight and P. H. agreed that if Mr. Mamunes made such a comment to C. A. it would not be reflective of a mutual respect between teacher and student. When C. A. was interviewed by the school administrators she repeatedly denied ever hearing this remark, even after Dr. Sapienza made several calls to her mother to ask C. A. about the comment. Dr. Sapienza and Dr. Willett believe that C. A. continued to deny the remark had been made because C. A. is so sensitive about her weight that she simply cannot bear to discuss the issue with anyone.

Mr. Mamunes did not recall ever making the "exercise" remark to C. A., although he acknowledged that he sometimes did ask C. A. to close the door. Mr. Mamunes recalled that he may have made the remark, or one similar, to students in other classes. If he did so, it was a self-deprecating reference to his hip problem which made it difficult for him to exercise. Mr. Mamunes further testified at length that the terms "overweight" and "obesity" are meaningless to him because he does not evaluate his students in these terms and he repeatedly stated that he since he could not say whether C. A. is overweight or obese, he would not consider whether she was sensitive in this regard in making any comment to her, although he would never deliberately say anything hurtful to C. A. or any other student.

For the following reasons, I CONCLUDE that Mr. Mamunes told C. A., who is overweight, to close the door and added that she needed the exercise. As noted above, I found the testimony of J.

M., P. W., R. L. and A. S. to be credible and they all agreed that Mr. Mamunes made this comment and that C. A. is overweight. With one exception regarding A. K.'s testimony that he told Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Burek about Mr. Mamunes' comments to him, I found the testimony of A. K. to be credible and he also agreed that Mr. Mamunes made this comment. Moreover, A. K.'s testimony that students laughed at C. A. is corroborated by the testimony of P. W. As discussed above, I reject Mr. Mamunes' contention that J. M., P. W., R. L. and A. S. were all friends and out to "get him" because they did not like him or his teaching style. Mr. Mamunes has advanced no other plausible reason why these students would fabricate this comment. The three students who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes denied hearing the comment. However, their failure to hear the comment could easily be the result of the students just not listening to Mr. Mamunes at the time or because they were absent from the class at the time.

Further, I found Mr. Mamunes' testimony that he could not recall making the comment to C. A. but may have made it to students in other classes in a self-deprecating reference to his hip problem to be inexplicable. What would prevent him from making the comment to C. A., if, as he testified, he does not consider a student's weight when he makes comments to them? If this is true, how could Mr. Mamunes be sure he never made the comment to C. A.? Moreover, I found Mr. Mamunes' insistence that he is not aware of a student's weight and does not even know the meaning of overweight and/or obese to be disingenuous at best and an exercise in "hair-splitting." Finally, the denials by C. A. regarding this comment do not justify disregarding the testimony of five students that the comment was made. I credit the testimony of the students and Dr. Sapienza that C. A. is a shy student and sensitive about her weight. For such a student, it is not surprising that she would be reluctant to come forward and challenge a teacher and testify that the teacher had humiliated her in class. Dr. Sapienza's attempts to contact C. A. to obtain her testimony were just that and not, as alleged by respondent without any factual support, to coerce C. A. into giving false testimony.

The Board argues that the comment to C. A. constitutes unbecoming conduct. Verbal abuse of a student falls with the meaning of unbecoming conduct. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Cowan, 224 N. J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988). A comment such as this to a shy, overweight student is, at best, insensitive and adversely affects the student's self esteem, a result which should be avoided at all costs by a teacher. Even if the teacher meant no intentional harm to the student, and I credit Mr. Mamunes' testimony that he meant no harm to C. A., making such a remark in these circumstances reflects an unacceptable insensitivity to students' feelings. I CONCLUDE that the Board has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Mamunes engaged in unbecoming conduct when he told C. A. to shut the door and added that she needed the exercise.

Charge 6 contains allegations that while the wife was being beaten in the "Not Without My Daughter" video, Mr. Mamunes told the class that it was her fault her husband did this and she should just listen to him and that, when she did listen to her husband, Mr. Mamunes told the class that she was finally coming around. J. M., R. L., P. W. and A. S. all credibly testified that Mr. Mamunes made these comments, or ones similar in effect, during the video. Both P. W. and A. S. included these comments in their written statements while J. M. and R. L. did not (P-1). J. M. did not include these comments in her written statement because she wrote only of those comments that most affected her. R. L. just did not recall the comments when she wrote her initial statement. While there are some inconsistencies in the precise words used by the four students to describe Mr. Mamunes' comments, it is clear that all four had the definite impression that Mr. Mamunes was placing blame on the wife for the actions of her husband. Moreover, the inconsistencies in the students' testimony are minor in that they reflect different recollections of the precise words used by Mr. Mamunes and not the meaning of the comments he made. Neither the inconsistencies nor the absence of these comments in two of the written statements affects the veracity of the testimony of these four students. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Cooke, 92 N. J. A R. 2d (EDU) 220, 226. As reasoned in Cooke, "[t]here are personal differences in an ability to recall, length of time needed for recall, impressionability, imagination and ability to discriminate in processing and understanding auditory and visual observations." Id. at 225-26. Indeed, if the students fabricated these comments it is likely that they would have ensured there were no inconsistencies. Ibid.

The three students who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes did not recall any comments made by Mr. Mamunes suggesting it was the wife's fault and she should listen to her husband. However, I reject their testimony as inconsistent with Mr. Mamunes' testimony that in fact he did make comments to this effect and as inconsistent with Mr. McKenna's testimony that Mr. Mamunes told him he planned to make a comment to the effect that the wife would be better off if she learned to cooperate with her husband. I do not suggest that the three students were lying; merely that if they heard the comments they either did not comprehend the impact of the comments or have simply forgotten them. Such comments are, at least facially, overtly sexist. Accordingly, based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that during the filming of "Not Without My Daughter" Mr. Mamunes made sexist comments to his students to the effect that it was the wife's fault she was beaten and that she should listen to her husband.

While Mr. Mamunes does not deny making such comments or that such comments are facially sexist, he contends that they were an appropriate use of the Devil's Advocate technique. Based on Mr. McKenna's testimony I do not doubt that Mr. Mamunes made these comments while he was playing Devil's Advocate. However, his failure to provide closure or to debrief the class left these four students with the impression that he meant what he said. They felt demeaned and degraded as a result. In this regard I reject Mr. Mamunes' suggestion that he was not given time to bring closure to his sexist Devil's Advocate comments. There was ample time between the showing of the video and Mr. Mamunes' suspension for him to provide closure. Moreover, the contention that he had no time for closure before he was suspended is undercut by his testimony that he never intended to provide closure because he observed no reaction to his comments and thought that the students simply did not "rise to the bait."

Similarly, I do not find persuasive the argument that closure was not needed because Mr. Mamunes observed no reaction from the students. Mr. Convoy, who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, indicated that if students show no reaction to the Devil's Advocate technique, it is incumbent on the teacher to find out why. Mr. Mamunes' attempt to place the blame on the students or the "school culture" for not coming to him with their concerns is misguided at best. It was his responsibility as the teacher using this technique and knowing its risks to ensure that no misunderstandings existed. In addition, both Mr. Bialkin, who testified on behalf of Mr. Mamunes, and Mr. Convoy, further testified that closure after using the Devil's Advocate technique should occur while the comments are fresh in the student's mind, ideally no later than the end of the class. Mr. Mamunes' failure to provide closure on his sexist comments left the students feeling just as degraded and demeaned as they would have felt had he really meant the comments. In such circumstances, the sexist comments should be given their plain and ordinary meaning. This charge is not, as Mr. Mamunes characterizes it, merely a dispute about teaching techniques. Rather, his failure as a teacher to provide closure left four of his students feeling demeaned and degraded and reflects a very questionable lack of sensitivity to the impact of his remarks on students. It is undisputed that there is no place for sexist comments in the classroom. Campbell, supra, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d at 206-07, 221, 224. Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Board has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Mamunes engaged in unbecoming conduct when he made sexist comments during the filming of "Not Without My Daughter."

Charge 7 contains the allegation that Mr. Mamunes' practice of requiring his students to say "school sucks" was disruptive of order and discipline in the classroom and undermined the integrity of the educational system. It is undisputed that on at least several occasions Mr. Mamunes either required or permitted the students to say "school sucks" in class and that he closed the classroom door when this occurred. However, it is disputed whether Mr. Mamunes required the students to make this statement. J. M. and R. L. testified that Mr. Mamunes required every student to say "school sucks." P. W. testified that when some of the students did not make the statement, Mr. Mamunes told them "come on, you're thinking it - say it with me." A. S. testified that if a lot of students did not say the phrase, Mr. Mamunes would have them repeat it. Both P. H. and M. M. testified that Mr. Mamunes did not require any student to say "school sucks" but rather it was permissive. Mr. Mamunes testified that he allowed, but did not require, the students to say "school sucks" as a tension releasing technique. I do not interpret the testimony of P. W. and A. S. as supportive of a finding that Mr. Mamunes required the students to make the statement. The greater weight of the evidence indicates that the statement was voluntary and I so CONCLUDE.

A teacher's permission to students to use vulgarities in their writing assignments and his use of vulgarities in front of parents has been found to be unbecoming conduct based upon its adverse effect on the school's operation. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Kane, 1979 S.L.D. 528, 532, 534 (Commissioner of Education, October 5, 1979). Moreover, teachers have an obligation to promote education and avoid instilling negativity toward the educational process in students. Pietrunti v. Board of Education of Brick Township, 128 N. J. Super. 149 (App. Div. 1974) certif. denied 65 N. J. 573 (1974), cert. denied 419 U. S. 1057 (1974); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Johnston, 95 N. J. A. R. 2d (EDU) 439, 443.

Mr. Mamunes contends, however, that "sucks" is not a vulgarity but rather a term that has come into general usage by teenagers to refer to anything that is a severe disappointment to them. I reject this argument. All of the Board administrators and J. M.'s mother, who is a teacher, strongly view the term as a vulgarity inappropriate for use in the classroom. While Mr. Mamunes' witnesses testified that they could envision a proper use for the term in class, the fact remains that not one of them has ever utilized it in class. I also find persuasive the testimony of Dr. Sapienza and Mr. Sullivan that a student using this phrase in school is subject to discipline. Even Mr. Mamunes was forced to acknowledge that the statement "court sucks" would not be appropriate. The testimony and common sense all support the conclusion that the term "sucks" is a vulgarity and therefore an inappropriate word to use in the classroom. Moreover, despite Mr. Mamunes' protestations to the contrary, it cannot be doubted that the phrase "school sucks" is a negative comment on the educational process. As such, it is an inappropriate method for a teacher to use in order to relieve stress. Regardless of whether Mr. Mamunes required the comment or merely permitted it by students, his actions in this regard constitute unbecoming conduct, see Kane, supra. Based on the foregoing I CONCLUDE that the Board has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that Mr. Mamunes engaged in unbecoming conduct when he invited his students to say "school sucks" in unison.

Having concluded that the Board has sustained its burden of proving all seven charges, the appropriate penalty must be decided. In determining the penalty to be imposed when tenure charges have been sustained, it is appropriate to consider the teacher's prior record in the District, the nature and gravity of the offenses under all the circumstances involved and any harm the teacher's conduct may have had on the proper administration of school system. See, In re Fulcomer, 93 N. J. Super. 404, 421-22 (App. Div. 1967). Based on these considerations, I CONCLUDE that, while at least some of Mr. Mamunes' comments were of a serious and unacceptable nature, the totality of the circumstances involved and his prior record support a reduction in pay rather than dismissal from his tenured position. The "colored people" comment was very hurtful to J. M. and her family and shocking to some of the other students. However, Mr. Mamunes' intent was not to hurt J. M. but rather to make a disparaging remark about himself. In choosing his words he exercised poor judgment and was insensitive to J. M.'s feelings but he did not intentionally make a racist comment to her. Similarly, Mr. Mamunes' comment regarding Martin Luther King Jr. reflects a troubling insensitivity but was intended as positive reinforcement for J. M. and not as a racist remark. The comments to A.K. were not of a racist nature but did denigrate his academic abilities and demeaned his father's occupation. The comment to C. A. was insensitive and injurious to her self-esteem but Mr. Mamunes had no intent to hurt C. A. The sexist remarks made during the showing of "Not Without My Daughter" resulted from Mr. Mamunes' inadequate use of the Devil's Advocate technique rather than an intent to demean women. Finally, the "school sucks" incidents constitute a misguided attempt to relieve student tension and Mr. Mamunes did not require all students to make this statement. Given these circumstances and Mr. Mamunes' long and unblemished record in the District, the appropriate penalty is forfeiture of two months pay; forfeiture of the 120 days' salary withheld following certification of the tenure charges by the Commissioner and withholding of any merit increments until the end of the 2000/2001 school year. See, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jason Burg, 1997 S. L. D., OAL Dkt. No. EDU3291-97 (Commissioner of Education, December 18, 1997).

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, IT IS ORDERED that respondent George Mamunes forfeit two months pay and forfeit 120 days pay withheld following the certification of tenure charges. Further ORDERED that merit increments be withheld from Mr. Mamunes until the end of the 2000/2001 school year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GEORGE MAMUNES,	:
PASCACK VALLEY REGIONAL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN	:	DECISION
COUNTY.	:

The record in this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed.[1] The Board's exceptions and respondent's exceptions, as well as the replies thereto, were submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, and were duly considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

The Board's exceptions contest the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion that the nature of the charges themselves and respondent's overall professional record do not warrant termination of employment. The Board argues, inter alia, that the ALJ erred in accessing the seriousness of respondents' statements to students, and that respondent's actions warrant the severest penalty of removal from his tenured teaching position.

In his exceptions, respondent asserts that Charge 3 should be dismissed because the ALJ made factual findings that respondent did not make stereotype or racial statements (Respondent's Exceptions at 1), that Charge 5 was not sustained by a preponderence of the credible evidence (id. at 14), and that Charges 2 and 6 do not rise to the level of unbecoming conduct (id. at 15, 16). Respondent contends that in reaching her determination, the ALJ relied on inadmissible opinions expressed by the school's administrators, who were not qualified as experts in the fields of psychology or human behavior. (Id. at 3) Additionally, respondent challenges the credibility findings in the Initial Decision, alleging that the ALJ was unconcerned with the inconsistencies in the students' testimony and written statements. Respondent avers that if the students' statements were consistent, the ALJ found that they were telling the truth, but if the students' statements were inconsistent, the ALJ found that it showed that they didn't fabricate testimony because their ability to recall things is different. (Id. at 9-10)

[1] Although hearings were conducted on November 23, 24, 25, 1998 and December 1, 9, 15, 17, 18 and 30, 1998, the only transcripts provided to the Commissioner were those of the December 15 and December 17 hearings and a partial transcript of the hearing on December 9, all of which were provided by the Board.

In its reply exceptions, the Board argues that Charges 2, 3, 5 and 6 should be sustained and urges the Commissioner to modify the ALJ's recommended penalty to provide for respondent's immediate dismissal from the District. (Board's Reply Exceptions at 30)

Respondent's reply exceptions urge the Commissioner to adopt the findings of the ALJ with a modification of the penalty since respondent never intended to disparage or embarrass anyone or to hurt their feelings. Respondent further requests that his long and honorable teaching career, as well as his record of promoting tolerance and civil rights as noted by the ALJ, be taken into consideration in determining penalty. (Respondent's Reply Exceptions at 11-12)

Having conducted a careful and independent review of the record in this matter, including the arguments advanced by the parties, the Commissioner finds no cause to disturb the credibility determinations and factual findings rendered by the ALJ. The Commissioner is satisfied, based upon the record before him, that the ALJ appropriately measured the plausibility of content in deciding the credibility of witnesses and the proper weight to assign to testimony in reaching her factual findings and conclusions.

Accordingly, the Commissioner concurs that the Board has sustained its burden of proving all seven charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher by a preponderence of credible evidence.

As to the appropriate penalty, the Commissioner finds it necessary to balance the totality of the record herein with the need to stress most emphatically on respondent the seriousness of his conduct and his need for greater control and sensitivity in dealing with his students. The Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that, in view of all the facts in this matter, the extreme penalty of loss of tenured employment is not warranted. However, the Commissioner also agrees that respondent's use of inappropriate language is a serious infraction deserving a harsh penalty. The Commissioner, therefore, concurs with the ALJ that the appropriate penalty is respondent's forfeiture of the 120 days of pay withheld following the certification of tenure charges, the forfeiture of an additional two months' salary, and the withholding of increments until the end of the 2000-2001 school year.[2] In so determining, the Commissioner also notes that, although he is without authority to compel respondent to attend training classes designed to address and prevent insensitive conduct in the classroom, it would be appropriate for the Board to do so within the confines of respondent's tenure and contractual rights. See In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of DiPillo, School District of the Township of Randolph, Morris County, 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 206, 208.

[2] It is noted that respondent has no entitlement to receive a salary amount that includes an award of an increment during his suspension following the Board's certification of tenure charges. See In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Anthony Castaldo, School District of the Union County Regional High School No. 1, decided by the State Board, 1986 S.L.D. 3026.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision in this matter is adopted for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

IN THE MATTER OF THE DIVISIONAL :

REALIGNMENT BY THE NORTHERN :

NEW JERSEY INTERSCHOLASTIC :

LEAGUE. :

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, six parochial school members of the Northern New Jersey Interscholastic League (NNJIL), sought reversal of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) Executive Committee's decision upholding a divisional realignment by the NNJIL which established two public school divisions and one nonpublic school division. NNJIL is a voluntary league comprised of 13 large public schools in Bergen, Essex and Passaic Counties and six parochial schools in Bergen County, and is one of the 21 leagues and conferences under the jurisdiction of the NJSIAA. On June 3, 1999, the NNJIL adopted an Amendment to Article VII of its Constitution establishing a third division comprised solely of nonpublic schools. Petitioners alleged that by NNJIL establishing a separate division segregating the parochial schools, the public schools had discriminated against the parochial schools and had denied them full membership in the League. Petitioners filed suit in Bergen County Superior Court against the 13 NNJIL public schools but the NJSIAA intervened and the Superior Court enjoined the NNJIL from implementing the new divisional alignment pending the NJSIAA's full and final review and further order by the Court.

Following a hearing, issuance of a Report, a subsequent meeting and work session by the NJSIAA's Special Committee, the Committee issued a Supplemental Report finding that the new divisional alignment was an acceptable method of addressing the League's competitive imbalance (the dominance of the nonpublic schools since 1988) while providing all member schools full membership in the League and a full and fair schedule of athletic competition. On Janurary 12, 2000, NJSIAA's Executive Committee heard oral argument on the Special Committee Reports and voted 33-0 to adopt the Reports.

As set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.4, the Commissioner's review in NJSIAA determinations is an appellate one. Having conducted an independent review of the 500-page record of the proceedings, including transcripts of the hearings and meetings and the parties' submissions on appeal, the Commissioner was persuaded that petitioners have been accorded the due process to which they were entitled, that the Special Committee's findings and conclusions were well-grounded in the record and that petitioners failed to establish that the NJSIAA's determination upholding the divisional realignment of the NNJIL was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The Commissioner found petitioners' contention that because there is an absence of a rational basis or legitimate State purpose to be served by the divisional realignment, that the NNJIL violated petitioners' constitutional rights under the Fourteenth Amendment, Equal Protection Clause, was without merit. The Commissioner found that the record supported the conclusion that a rational basis exists to limit the League's organization to public schools because: 1) parochial schools were found to be dominating League competition creating a competitive imbalance and 2) parochial schools have an enrollment advantage since they are able to enroll students from a wide geographic area and are able to offer financial aid to their student-athletes. Moreover, the Commissioner found petitioners' allegations that the realignment contravened their rights under Article I, Paragraphs 1, 3 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution to be without merit. Petitioners were not excluded from the benefits of membership, maintain full voting rights, continue to compete against public schools within the League and their games against public schools carry the same weight in the standings as their games against parochial schools. The Commissioner also found that the realignment did not in any way advance or inhibit the exercise of religion, nor did it violate the Law Against Discrimination, noting that the Special Committee could not find evidence that the new divisional alignment was motivated by discrimination on the basis of religion or out of any "anti-Catholic bias." The Commissioner affirmed the NJSIAA's decision.

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter has come before the Commissioner of Education by way of a Petition of Appeal filed on February 15, 2000, and amended on March 3, 2000, by the six parochial school members of the Northern New Jersey Interscholastic League (NNJIL). Therein, petitioners seek a reversal of the decision of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) Executive Committee, dated January 13, 2000, adopting the July 22, 1999 and January 3, 2000 determinations of the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences (Special Committee), upholding a divisional realignment by the NNJIL which established two public school divisions and one nonpublic school division. Petitioners seek reversal of NJSIAA's decision as being a violation of petitioners' rights as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, Amendment XIV; New Jersey Constitution, Article 1, paragraphs 1 and 5; and the provisions set forth at 42 U.S.C. sec. 1981 (sic) et seq. Petitioners submit that they have suffered and will continue to suffer irreparable harm by being excluded from full membership in the league because of the NJSIAA's failure to provide petitioners with a full and fair schedule, and that, further, petitioners will suffer harm and damages by the discriminatory acts as they pertain to women's high school sports in violation of their civil rights. (Petition of Appeal at 2)

On March 21, 2000, respondent NJSIAA filed its Answer to the Petition of Appeal, along with the Statement of Items Comprising the Record and the attached two-volume Record before the NJSIAA. On March 28, 2000, respondents, public school districts of the NNJIL, filed their Answer to the Petition of Appeal. By letter of March 30, 2000, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes established a briefing schedule. Petitioners subsequently filed a brief in support of their appeal on April 17, 2000,[1] and respondents, public school districts and NJSIAA, filed briefs on April 27, 2000 and May 9, 2000, respectively, whereupon the record in this matter was closed.[2]

NNJIL is a voluntary league comprised of 13 large public schools in Bergen, Essex and Passaic Counties and six parochial schools in Bergen County, and is one of the 21 leagues and conferences under the jurisdiction of the NJSIAA. Prior to the adoption of an Amendment to Article VII of its Constitution on June 3, 1999 by the NNJIL establishing a third division comprised solely of nonpublic schools, NNJIL was structured into two divisions, the Atlantic Division and the Pacific Division. Bergen Catholic was in the Atlantic Division with These additional documents submitted by petitioners were not before the NJSIAA and not previously made a part of the record. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.2(d), these additional submissions were, therefore, not considered by the Commissioner in rendering his decision.

On June 10, 1999, the six parochial school members of the NNJIL filed suit against the 13 NNJIL public schools in Bergen County Superior Court, alleging that, by segregating the parochial schools in a separate division, the public schools had discriminated against the parochial schools, and had denied them full membership in the League. The NJSIAA intervened and requested the Superior Court to permit NJSIAA to hold hearings and investigate the complaint. (NJSIAA's Brief at 1, 2) The Superior Court's decision on August 17, 1999 enjoined NNJIL from implementing its new divisional realignment pending the NJSIAA's full and final review and further order by the Court. The Court further ordered that the injunction would not apply to the NNJIL's 1999-2000 football schedule as it had been agreed to by the parties. (Superior Court Decision at 2)

On July 7, 1999, the Special Committee of the NJSIAA held a hearing at which all parties appeared with counsel for the purpose of considering the parochial schools' complaint. The Special Committee issued its report of its findings and conclusions on July 22, 1999. (NJSIAA's Brief at 2)

The Findings of Fact determined by the Special Committee in its July 22, 1999 report were as follows:

1. The NNJIL consists of nineteen schools: thirteen large public schools in Bergen, Essex and Passaic Counties and six parochial schools, located in Bergen County. Three of the parochial schools: Bergen Catholic, St. Joseph's Regional and Don Bosco are all boys schools; two of the parochial schools, Immaculate Heart and Holy Angels Academy, are all girls schools; and the remaining parochial school, Paramus Catholic, is co-educational.

2. In 1982, five of the six parochial schools were added to the NNJIL by the NJSIAA as part of the first statewide realignment.

3. After the first realignment, the NNJIL consisted of a Bergen Division and an Essex-Pacific Division. Since the 1988-89 school year, the NNJIL was divided into the Atlantic Division, consisting of Bergen Catholic and the larger NNJIL public schools, and the Pacific Division, comprising the five remaining parochial schools and the smaller NNJIL public schools.

4. Since the 1988-89 school year, parochial schools have won both the boys and girls All Sports Championship in each division in which they have competed.

Immaculate Heart Academy has won the Pacific Division All Sports Championship for girls for nine straight years; Don Bosco has won it for boys for nine of the last ten years; and Bergen Catholic has won its boys division title for thirteen of the last fourteen years. The only division title regularly won by public schools is the Atlantic Division Girls, where no parochial schools compete.

5. In their most recent football game, St. Joseph's was beating Paramus 46-0 in the first quarter, when St. Joseph's substituted their junior varsity team in for their varsity. Such lopsided games do not foster healthy competition.

6. Although all NJSIAA schools are subject to the Association's eligibility rules, parochial schools operate under different admissions policies and are able to draw student-athletes from a wide geographic and population base. Public schools are generally restricted to admitting students from the local school district.

7. While some public schools admit tuition-paying students, it is not the norm, and there is no evidence that such students have had an impact on athletic competition.

8. Bergen Catholic, as an example, accepts students from throughout Bergen County, outside Bergen County, and outside New Jersey.

9. Parochial schools also differ from public schools because they are able to offer financial aid to student-athletes who qualify.

10. In the fall of 1998, Dr. Charles Khoury [Principal, Paramus High School] initiated a proposal to amend the NNJIL Constitution to create a public school division and a non-public school division. The public school division would be divided based on enrollment. He convened a meeting of public school principals on November 4, 1998 to discuss this initiative. Parochial schools were not invited to that session.

11. Dr. Khoury sent his proposed constitutional amendment to Mr. John Job, the Principal of St. Joseph's High School, who was then serving as the President of the NNJIL. It was thereafter distributed to all of the nineteen schools in the League. He submitted the amendment at the December 3, 1998 league meeting.

12. On March 11, an NNJIL meeting was convened, at which time Dr. Khoury again advanced his proposal for the new divisional alignment. Representatives of the parochial schools in attendance opposed this proposal, which was deferred for consideration until the June 3, 1999 meeting of the NNJIL.

13. In mid-April 1999, George Middleton, the Athletic Director of Bloomfield High School, prepared a schedule for the 1999 football season. The schedule requires each team to play the rest of the teams in its division; honors prior contracts schools have for games against non-conference teams; and fills out the remainder of the schedule with intra-divisional crossover games. The crossover games were scheduled based on the competitive strengths of the respective teams.

14. The League voted to adopt this schedule 17-1, with all the parochial schools accepting the schedule while reserving their right to object to the new division alignment. The only school to dissent was Clifton.

15. As crafted, the football schedule provides the parochial schools with a full and fair opportunity for athletic competition. The schedule assures that the parochial schools are not excluded from the League, and provides for competition with other League members.

16. On June 3, 1999, the NNJIL adopted Dr. Khoury's constitutional amendment by a 13 to 6 vote, with every parochial school opposed.

17. The parochial schools have charged that they were shut out from the process by which the League amended its Constitution, and were therefore denied due process. Their chief complaint was that the public schools had secretly met without them to discuss the proposal, and also met with an NJSIAA staff member who recommended the new alignment.

18. Dr. Khoury testified that NJSIAA Associate Director James Loper did not meet with the public school representatives, which was confirmed by Mr. Loper.

19. Dr. Khoury admitted that the public schools had met, at his invitation, for lunch at his school to discuss whether the schools shared a common concern about the lack of competitive balance in the League, and if so, to discuss how to address the problem. While it certainly would have been preferable to include parochial school members, there was nothing improper about this meeting.

20. The amendment was debated twice and voted upon in an open forum in which all NNJIL members, public and parochial alike, were present. At the June 3, 1999 NNJIL meeting, the amendment garnered the required two-thirds majority for passage. There was nothing about the process that would invalidate the result.

21. On June 5, 1999, the six parochial schools instituted a lawsuit against the NNJIL and its public school members, contending that the constitutional amendment deprived them of the full benefits of League membership.

22. The Committee finds that the NNJIL constitutional amendment was not motivated on religious grounds. It was rather advanced because of the domination of the League competition by the parochial schools and desire by the public schools to require more competitive balance within the League. The amendment recognized that the parochial schools could draw a wider enrollment of student-athletes, without consideration to geographic attendance zones.

23. The Committee finds that the aforesaid reasons for adopting the constitutional amendment were both legitimate and rational and came only after years of domination of intra league competition by Bergen Catholic in the Atlantic Division and Don Bosco and Immaculate Heart in the Pacific Division.

24. The NNJIL has not changed any schedules for the 1999-2000 school year other than the football schedule. In turn, the football schedule, which was approved by the parochial schools, provides for a full schedule of nine contests for each of the four parochial football teams and was approved by the parochial schools themselves in April 1999.

25. The Committee could not find any evidence that the new divisional alignment was motivated by discrimination on the basis of religion or out of any "anti-Catholic bias."

26. Except for the meeting on November 4, 1998, all of the meetings of the NNJIL, beginning in December 1998 leading up to the adoption of the constitutional amendment in June 1999, were open to all members of that League. The amendment was adopted after early notice to all schools and after open and free discussions among League members.

27. Despite allegations to the contrary by the parochial schools, there is no evidence that the NNJIL will discount contests played by its public school members against parochial school opponents in determining divisional and league champions.

28. Although arranging the divisions on the basis of enrollment or attendance zones is rational, the impact on the parochial schools raises substantial concerns. In particular, a division of three girls' programs does not provide an adequate competitive framework for divisional championships. (July 22, 1999 Report by the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences at 8-11)

Based on the above Findings of Fact, the Special Committee reached the following conclusions and recommendations:

1. The amendment to Article VII of the NNJIL Constitution on June 3, 1999 was based upon an attempt by that League to provide greater competitive balance among its member schools. It was also based upon a decision to arrange three divisions; two public divisions based on enrollment, and a non-public division, which recognized that these schools had a much wider enrollment pool. That decision was founded on a decade or more of experience with parochial schools dominating intra league competition.

2. Placing parochial schools in a separate division can be a reasonable method of redressing competitive imbalance in a league. In this case, a competitive imbalance was found to exist, and it was not unreasonable to require that non-public schools, all of which operate with similar admissions policies, be required to play each other in the same division. The decision was not based upon any "anti-Catholic school" sentiment and did not deprive the parochial schools of either full membership in the League or complete interscholastic sports schedules for the future.

3. Having found that the decision to require the non-public schools to compete against each other was rationally based, the Special Committee nevertheless recognizes that significant problems continue to exist with this particular alignment:

   First, the non-public school division contains only four schools competing in boys sports and three schools competing in girls sports. League and conference divisions in New Jersey generally consist of five or more schools. Without any question, a girls' division of three teams is far too small.

   Second, the League has not yet addressed how divisional championships will be awarded. When it does, results from public-parochial contests should be given the same weight as results from other games.

   Third, future League schedules should be similar to the existing football schedule, which takes into account the relative strengths of the teams and continues to schedule publics against parochials.

   Fourth, as is the prevailing practice for most conferences, adjustments in divisional alignments could be made every two years.

4. The Special Committee recommends that the NNJIL schools meet to review its new divisional alignments, taking into account the issues set forth in this decision.

5. The Special Committee directs that the NNJIL report by November 1, 1999, as to action taken consistent with this decision. It is the hope of the Special Committee that the NNJIL will resolve these concerns itself, amicably, without resorting to further litigation. (Id. at 11-12)

On October 22, 1999, Joseph O. White, President of the NNJIL, filed a response to the Special Committee's July 22, 1999 decision. The Special Committee met on November 8, 1999 and decided at that time to invite the involved parties to a December 8 work session for discussion purposes.[3] (January 3, 2000 Supplemental Report by the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences at 2) On January 3, 2000, the Special Committee issued its Supplemental Report. The following are the findings and conclusion in that report:

> FINDINGS
> The Special Committee is satisfied that the NNJIL has taken substantial steps to meet the concerns expressed by the Special Committee in its July 22, 1999 decision. While not perfect, the new divisional alignment appears to be an acceptable method of addressing the League's competitive imbalance while providing all member schools with full and fair athletic schedules.
>
> The Special Committee's first concern was that the parochial divisions were too small: four parochial schools compete in boys sports and only three parochial schools compete in girls sports. The NNJIL addressed this concern in two ways. First, the League attempted to expand its membership by merging with other regional conferences. The hope was that the parochial division could thereby be increased with parochial schools from nearby conferences. Those attempts were unsuccessful. Second, the schedule devised by the League insured that, for purposes of competition, the parochial schools would not be isolated in the parochial division. Parochial schools will compete against schools from the two public school divisions as well as against the parochial schools in the non-public school division. The parochial-public games will carry the same weight in the division standings as parochial-parochial games. Therefore, the disadvantages of a small division--playing the same teams over and over again and having a limited number of games from which to draw a division champion--will not be present. Although there are only three schools competing with girls programs in the parochial division, those schools will play a full schedule of games against schools throughout the NNJIL, and their division champion will be determined based on the results of all of their NNJIL games.
>
> A benefit of the new alignment is that the League will award more division championships. Division champions will be named for three divisions instead of just two, and All Sports Banners will be awarded for all three divisions.

[3] League representatives and parochial school representatives were invited to attend. George Middleton, Executive Secretary of the NNJIL, attended, as well as nine other public school representatives, but no representatives from the parochial schools attended the work session. (January 3, 2000 Supplemental Report by the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences at 2, 3)

The Special Committee's second concern was that at the time of the July 1999 hearing, the League had not finalized how it would designate division champions. The Committee recommended that the League accord results from inter-divisional play the same weight as results from intra-divisional play. As noted above, the League accepted the Committee's recommendation and as a result, division champions will be selected based on all the regular season games a team plays against NNJIL schools, not just on games played against division rivals.

The Special Committee's third concern was that future scheduling take into account the relative strength of a school's athletic program for each sport and continue to schedule public schools against parochial schools in the future. To meet that concern, NNJIL schedulers divided the League into three sections, based on the strength of a school's athletic program for each sport over the last five years. Inter-division, or "crossover" games were then scheduled between programs of similar strength. Scheduling in this manner, based on strength of program, insures that the League will maintain a competitive balance that is healthy for all schools. It also has the added benefit of allowing schools to play games against a wider variety of opponents. As the strength of a school's program rises or falls each year, the school's opponents will change accordingly.

The new schedule also gives all NNJIL schools an opportunity to play each other. Under the old two-division format, teams from the Atlantic Division rarely met teams from the Pacific Division. Bergen Catholic, for example, played just two regular season football games against parochial schools in the five seasons from 1994 through 1998.

Certain aspects of the old scheduling system remain in effect. As in the past, all schools will have an opportunity to schedule their own non-League games. Public and parochial schools will continue to compete against each other. Most importantly, the new League schedules demonstrate that both parochial and public schools will enjoy a full schedule of League competition, just as they did under the old system.

Finally, the Special Committee recommended that adjustments in divisional alignments could be made every two years. In response, the NNJIL noted that the Constitutional amendment establishing the public and non-public divisions stated, in part, that "divisions shall be established every two years." According to the League, adjustments to the manner of division alignments could be made every two years on any basis that is agreeable to the membership, as long as the change has the necessary votes for adoption.

CONCLUSION

The NNJIL has satisfactorily addressed the concerns raised by the Special Committee in the July 22, 1999 report. The League's scheduling assures that the parochial schools will not be denied full membership in the League, and that they will receive a full and fair schedule of athletic competition. (Id. at 3-6)

On January 12, 2000, the Executive Committee of the NJSIAA heard oral argument on the two Special Committee reports and voted 33-0 to adopt the reports.[4] (Statement of Items Comprising the Record, Exhibit 42)

PETITIONERS' POSITION

Initially, petitioners argue that the realignment is improper because the parochial schools will be deprived of the benefits of full competition and conference play. Since the non-public division contains only four schools competing in boys' sports and three schools competing in girls' sports, petitioners contend that the configuration is inconsistent with other New Jersey leagues and conference divisions, which generally consist of five or more schools. Petitioners aver that the fact that the parochial schools would enjoy a full schedule misses the point, because it is simply improper to maintain a division of three teams in the NNJIL, and that permitting a three-team division is potentially precedent setting. Citing Bergen Catholic High School as an example, petitioners submit that the number of games scheduled in several sports for Bergen Catholic are fewer in number for the 2000 season than were scheduled in 1999 under the previous division alignment. Petitioners further argue that parents of Bergen County Catholic school students still have to pay taxes to finance public school athletic stadiums, sports equipment, coaches, etc., but their children will be unable to play in a division which would allow them to engage in direct competition for the division championship with those schools. (Petitioners' Brief at 8-10)

[4] The NNJIL parochial schools chose not to attend this meeting. (Statement of Items Comprising the Record, Exhibit 42)

Further, petitioners assert, inter alia, that there is no rational basis to segregate the parochial schools into their own division, as set forth by the Supreme Court in Christian Bros. Inst. v. No. N.J. Interschol. League, 86 N.J. 409, 418 (1981), and that the false purpose of fostering competition is merely a pretext for the discriminatory intent of the public schools to segregate the parochial schools into their own division. Despite the findings of the Special Committee, which concluded that the parochial schools dominated the pubic schools in athletic competition, petitioners point out that two of the parochial schools, Don Bosco and Paramus Catholic, have not faired well against either the public schools or the other parochial schools. Since public schools, such as Barringer, Belleville, and Paramus have also not faired well against other public schools, petitioners suggest that segregating the parochial schools into their own division will do little to improve competitiveness. (Id. at 11-13)

Petitioners continue by arguing that their rights under Article I, Paragraphs 1, 3 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution have been violated. Petitioners assert that they have been denied the privileges of full membership in the NNJIL and will experience scheduling difficulties because they have been segregated into a separate division solely due to their religious affiliation. Citing Sorbino v. New Brunswick, 43 N.J. Super. 554 (Law. Div. 1957), Kerr v. Kerr, 129 N.J. Super. 291 (App. Div. 1974), State v. Levine 109 N.J.S. 503 (1932) and Robinson. v. Cahill, 118 N.J. Super. 223 (Law Div. 1972), petitioners further argue that they have been denied equal protection as guaranteed by the State Constitution as a result of the discriminatory manner in which they have been treated. Petitioners assert that religious beliefs should not bar petitioners or any of its students from the equality of rights which the law affords to others. (Id. at 14-18)

Additionally, petitioners seek damages and injunctive relief pursuant to 42 U.S.C. sec. 1983, contending that there is a cause of action because segregation of the League, without just reason and with harm to petitioners, violates the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Petitioners emphasize that no specific purpose is alleged for the deprivation of their federal rights, but that it is claimed that petitioners have not been treated similarly with the other members of the League. Petitioners contend that a State Court has the power to hear the matter and that it has been held that an action based on 42 U.S.C. sec. 1983 can be properly brought before a State Court as State and Federal Courts have concurrent jurisdiction over civil suits arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, except in exceptional circumstances. See Luker v. Nelson, 341 F. Supp. 111 (D.C. Ill. 1972) and Long v. District of Columbia, 469 *F.*2d 927 (D.C. Cir. 1972). Petitioners submit that Wright v. Arkansas Activities Assoc., 501 *F.*2d 25 (8th Cir. 1974) held that "a voluntary association consisting of public and parochial schools in a state which maintains competitive athletic programs qualifies as a 'person' under 42 U.S.C. 1983." Therefore, the League is a "person" under the statutory meaning of the word. (Id. at 19-21)

Citing Gabaldon v. United Farm Workers Organizing Committee, 111 Ca. Rptr. 203 (1973), Sykes v. California Dept. of Motor Vehicles, 497 *F.*2d 197 (9th Cir. 1974), Ward v. Kentucky State University Board of Regents, 360 F. Supp. 1179 (D.C. Ky. 1973) and Parish v. National Collegiate Athletic Assoc., 361 F. Supp. 1214 (D.C. La. 1973), petitioners argue that League members and everyone of its individual members acted through the authority derived from the State and therefore acted "under color of state law." Petitioners further argue that the courts have the power and duty to fashion affirmative relief under the statute so as to provide a more effective remedy for violation of the Federal Law. See Johnson v. Capital City Lodge No. 74, Fraternal Order of Police, 477 *F.*2d 601 (4th Cir. 1973). (Id. at 21-24)

Recognizing that the Fourteenth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution does not protect an individual against wrongs committed by other individuals, petitioners submit that the crucial factor in determining the existence or non-existence of Fourteenth Amendment protection is the interplay of governmental and private action. Petitioners assert that discrimination by the creation of a nonpublic league is rendered possible by the "State Authority" lodged in respondents and is a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment Equal Protection Clause. Arguing that, in the absence of a rational basis or reasonable explanation why petitioners are continuously treated differently from other members or a legitimate State purpose to be served by petitioners' segregation into a nonpublic division, that petitioners Constitutional Rights of Equal Protection have been violated. (Id. at 25-27)

Finally, petitioners assert that their rights as protected by the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination set forth in N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(f), were violated when they were segregated from the rest of the League without any reasonable justification or explanation. Petitioners contend that the statute applies in this instance, because the NNJIL qualifies as a "place of public accommodation" as settled in Nat. Org. for Women v. Little League Baseball, 127 N.J. Super. 522 (App. Div. 1974). As a "public accommodation," NNJIL has withheld its facilities, its advantages and its privileges, petitioners aver, and has, therefore, acted in an illegal and discriminatory manner. (Id. at 28-30)

RESPONDENTS NNJIL PUBLIC SCHOOLS' POSITION

Initially, respondents state that the scope of review by the Commissioner in NJSIAA determinations is limited. Citing Board of Educ. of the City of Camden v. NJSIAA, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 182, 188; Dam Jin Koh and Hong Jun Kim v. NJSIAA, 1987 S.L.D. 259; and B.C. v. Cumberland Regional School Dist., 220 N.J. Super. 214, 231-32 (App. Div. 1987), the Commissioner may not overturn an action by NJSIAA, absent a finding that NJSIAA acted in a patently arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable manner, even if the Commissioner would have decided differently in a de novo hearing. Respondents aver that NJSIAA's divisional realignment decision resulted from a desire to foster competition and to eliminate competitive imbalance, was not based on religious affiliation or beliefs, did not violate NJSIAA rules and did not deprive petitioners of a full and fair opportunity to participate in interscholastic athletics. Respondents, therefore, urge the Commissioner to affirm NJSIAA's reasonably and legitimately based determination upholding the divisional realignment. (Respondents' Brief at 5-7)

Respondents submit that the divisional realignment at issue does not contravene petitioners' rights under Article I, Paragraphs 1, 3 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution. In Christian Bros., supra, they argue, the New Jersey Supreme Court expressly addressed Bergen Catholic's claim that denial for admission into the NNJIL constituted a violation of its State and Federal constitutional rights, ruling that a rational basis, i.e,. that the action taken is rationally related to a legitimate public end, would be sufficient to withstand any challenge under Article I, paragraphs 1 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution. See Barone v. Department of Human Servs., 107 N.J. 355, 366 (1987); Board of Educ. v. Borough of Englewood Cliffs, 257 N.J. Super. 413, 469 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd 132 N.J. 327, (cert. denied), 510 U.S. 991 (1993). Further in Valencia v. Blue Hen Conference, 476 F. Supp. 809 (D. Del. 1979), aff'd without opinion 615 *F.*2d 1355 (3rd Cir. 1980), respondents contend the trial court found that a classification limiting membership in an interscholastic athletic organization to public schools would be supportable if it was motivated by legitimate interests in preventing athletic recruiting and in maintaining a competitive balance among schools within the association. (Respondents' Brief at 8, 9)

Respondents aver, inter alia, that Sorbino, supra, which petitioners cite in support of their equal protection argument, is clearly distinguishable as complainants were property owners, not members of an athletic association. Respondents also observe that Sorbino inferentially undermines petitioners' position in that the Law Division expressly noted therein that "[W]here reasonable justification exits for separate classification, legislation that treats all persons within a class reasonably selected for regulation in a like or similar manner satisfies the requirements of the State and Federal Constitutions." (Respondents' Brief at 10, citing Sorbino at 19) Since the nonpublic schools in the NNJIL have dominated athletic competition within the League for the past decade and the NNJIL's decision was motivated by a rational purpose, i.e., to foster competition, NNJIL's realignment of the divisions in a procedural proper manner did not violate petitioners' constitutional rights. Respondents also argue that petitioners' reliance on Kerr, supra, is inappropriate because Kerr is inapposite, holding in the context of a divorce proceeding that protective privilege of communication between a psychologist and his client was not a violation of the equal protection clause. (Id. at 10, 11)

Respondents state that petitioners cannot meet their burden of showing that NNJIL has advanced or inhibited the exercise of religion in violation of Article I, Paragraph 3 of the New Jersey Constitution. Respondents assert that there is not a single fact in evidence to suggest that the majority vote of the League's members amending its Constitution to establish a nonpublic school division was done for any reason other than a secular legislative purpose, nor have petitioners shown that the primary or even incidental effect of the realignment will advance or inhibit religion. (Id. at 12)

As a voluntary association, the NNJIL's decision to realign its League into public and nonpublic groupings was private conduct, not state action, respondents argue. Citing NCAA v. Tarkanian, 488 U.S. 179, 197 n.18 (1988) (quoting San Francisco Arts & Athletics, Inc. v. United States Olympic Committee, 483 U.S. 522, 545 (1987)), (where an athletic association speaks collectively through its member institutions to govern the manner in which member schools may compete and where it does so independent of state law, its conduct cannot be deemed "state action"), and Arlosoroff v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 746 *F.*2d 1019, 1021 (4th Cir. 1984), (where the NCAA's adoption of bylaws limiting player's eligibility was private conduct, not state action), respondents assert that petitioners have no cause of action against the NNJIL under the equal protection clause of the Federal Constitution or under 42 U.S.C. sec. 1983 because the realignment of the League's divisions does not constitute "state action." Even assuming arguendo, that the NNJIL's action amounts to State action, however, respondents claim that the majority of Courts have determined that rules and decisions by state and local athletic associations analogous to those posed here are subject to the rational basis standard. See Moreland v. Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, 572 *F.*2d 121 (3rd Cir. 1978). Respondents argue that in Archbishop Walsh High School v. Section VI of the New York State Public High School Athletic Ass'n, Inc., 643 *N.Y.S.*2d 928, 931 (N.Y. 1996), a case with facts similar to those herein, the Court of Appeals found that among the legitimate goals which persuaded the Court to adopt a rational basis standard were the association's interest in preserving the character of its competition by excluding private schools that are able to offer financial incentives and differentiating admission incentives to their students. The Court also rejected the Catholic High Schools' argument regarding its Fourteenth Amendment right to equal protection, finding that this "narrowly targeted argument is untenable because the unequal treatment of which it complains is discriminatory between public and nonpublic schools, not anything of a religious nature and not even anything within the entire class of nonpublic schools. ([Archbishop Walsh] at 930)" (emphasis in text) (Respondents' Brief at 13-17)

Additionally, respondents aver that petitioners' claim that NNJIL's decision to realign the divisions within the League contravened the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (LAD), N.J.S.A. 10:5-3, is without merit. Although the Legislature did not expressly address whether a nonprofit athletic organization falls within the LAD's coverage as a "place of public accommodation," the statute has been construed to permit reasonable restrictions which promote reasonable government functions, even where the functions are overtly religious in nature. See In re Katherine Frey Dickerson, 193 N.J. Super. 353, 372 (Ch. Div. 1983). (Respondents' Brief at 22)

Finally, respondents explain that both the Special Committee and the Executive Committee of NJSIAA found that the concerns raised by the Special Committee in its first report have been sufficiently addressed. In response to the concern regarding how championships would be awarded, NNJIL determined that all interdivisional and intradivisional contests would count equally in determining championships and that each division would award championships and select all-division teams, increasing by 50% the number of championships awarded and the number of athletes recognized. The NNJIL also agreed to schedule public schools against nonpublic schools with consideration to the strengths and weaknesses of the respective teams, and to make adjustments to divisional alignments every two years. In response to the Special Committee's concern about the size of the nonpublic schools' women's teams, the NNJIL devised a schedule whereby the nonpublic schools'women's teams would participate in a full and fair schedule by competing with the public schools. Respondents conclude, therefore, that petitioners' allegation that NNJIL did not adequately address the Special Committee's concerns is meritless, and they, therefore, urge affirmance of the Special Committee's and Executive Committee's findings. (Id. at 24-27)

RESPONDENT NJSIAA'S POSITION

Respondent NJSIAA argues that the legal standard for the Commissioner's review of its decisions is set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.4, which provides that if NJSIAA has granted petitioners due process and its decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record, the Commissioner shall not overturn the NJSIAA's application of its own rules, absent a demonstration by petitioners that such rules were applied in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner. In that regard, NJSIAA submits that the due process afforded petitioners was extensive, allowing both the public and parochial school members ample opportunity to present their arguments, as follows:

> (1) within one month of the filing of petitioners' complaint in Superior Court, NJSIAA held a hearing before its eleven-member Special Committee with all interested parties;
>
> (2) the Special Committee prepared a 12-page written decision within 15 days of the hearing setting forth its findings of fact and conclusions and its concerns, and directing the NNJIL to respond to its concerns by November 1, 1999;
>
> (3) upon receipt of the NNJIL response to its concerns, the Special Committee met in executive session to consider the response and then met again > at a work session at which all the parties were invited to participate;

>
> (4) less than one month after the work session, the Special Committee issued its Supplemental Report; and
> (5) on January 13, 2000, the Special Committee presented its two reports to the Executive Committee at a meeting where all NNJIL schools were invited to participate, and at which the Executive Committee voted to adopt the Special Committee's conclusions. (NJSIAA's Brief at 15-17)

NJSIAA further argues that its decisions were based on the record, which showed that the public schools had not unconstitutionally discriminated against the parochial schools, and that there was a rational basis for placing the parochial schools in a "non-public'" division because the League had indeed experienced a lack of competitive balance. NJSIAA contends that there was nothing about the process of the NNJIL's realignment which would invalidate the result, and that the evidence further showed that the realignment was not motivated by religious bias, but rather by the fact that the parochial schools had dominated the League championships since 1988 in all sports except the Girls Atlantic Division in which no parochial schools competed. NJSIAA submits that the statistics provided by petitioners actually prove that there was a need for some action, since those statistics show that overall the parochial schools were 99-32 against public schools in football from 1994-98, and that the Bergen Catholic football team was 42-1 against public schools from 1994-98, while St. Joseph's football team was 26-2. Yet these two parochial powerhouses never met during that period of time because they were in different divisions. (Id. at 17, 18)

NJSIAA points out that the record shows that parochial schools operate under enrollment policies different from those of public schools, enabling parochial schools to draw student-athletes from a wide geographic and population base and enabling them to provide financial aid to qualifying student-athletes. NJSIAA asserts that its decision addressed both (1) the concerns of the public schools that their competition with the parochial schools was inherently unequal, by ensuring that the parochial powerhouses would compete against each other, as well as the strongest public schools, and (2) the parochial schools' fear of exclusion, by ensuring that parochial schools would continue to play public schools, and that such interdivisional games would carry equal weight with the intradivisional games in the League standings. (Id. at 18, 19)

NJSIAA avers that petitioners' argument that the 2000-2001 schedules do not provide full scheduling are without merit. NJSIAA points to the fact that in a League with an odd number of schools, no schedule will be symmetric, as demonstrated by the 1999-2000 basketball schedule wherein Paramus Catholic had 17 league games, while several public schools had 14 league games and the rest of the schools averaged 16 league games. (Id. at 20)

NJSIAA disputes petitioners' claim that its realignment decision will set a precedent for other leagues, stating that the controversy within NNJIL was due to a unique set of circumstances and that any such issue brought before the NJSIAA would be addressed on its own merits. NJSIAA also asserts that its decision does not have the effect of stare decisis and that petitioners' contention that leagues will create one-team divisions is speculative. (Id. at 20)

Further, NJSIAA argues that participation in interscholastic athletics is a privilege, not a right, and that privilege can be circumscribed by rules such as those found in the NJSIAA Constitution, Bylaws, rules and regulations. See Burnside v. NJSIAA, unpublished decision of the Appellate division dated Nov. 15, 1984 (Docket No. A-625-8477), Camden City Bd. of Ed. v. NJSIAA, unpublished decision of the Appellate Division dated February 18, 1992

(Docket No. A-2802-91T2), and Bd. of Ed. of the City of Camden v. NJSIAA, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 182, 188. Even if there were a fundamental right to participate, NJSIAA further argues, an interscholastic league limitation of its membership to public schools does not result, per se, in a denial of equal protection if there is a rational basis, such as in this instance, where nonpublic schools were found to be dominating League competition creating a competitive imbalance, attributable to their ability to enroll students from a broad geographic base and their ability to offer scholarships. Christian Bros., supra. In contrast, the public schools are limited to enrolling those students living within the district and cannot offer scholarships. (NJSIAA's Brief at 20, 21)

Finally, NJSIAA concludes that the NNJIL's new alignment takes a strong first step toward restoring competitive balance within the League and has not deprived the parochial schools of any competitive opportunities. NJSIAA takes issue with petitioners' argument that they have been excluded from the League, reasoning that the parochial schools remain members of the NNJIL, have full voting rights, still compete against public schools within the League and their games against public schools carry the same weight in the standings as their games against parochial schools. (Id. at 21, 22)

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

The NJSIAA is a voluntary association of public and nonpublic schools, organized pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3, to oversee athletics for its member schools in accordance with its Constitution, Bylaws, rules and regulations, which are approved by the Commissioner of Education and adopted annually by the member schools. Upon adoption by the member schools, the said rules and regulations are deemed school policy and are enforced first by the internal procedures of the NJSIAA.

As set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.4, the Commissioner's review in NJSIAA determinations is an appellate one. Camden City Bd. of Ed., supra. That is, the Commissioner may not overturn an action by NJSIAA in applying its rules absent a finding that NJSIAA applied the rules in a patently arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner. B.C., supra. Nor may the Commissioner substitute his judgment for that of NJSIAA, even if he were to decide differently in a de novo hearing, where due process has been provided and where there is adequate basis for the decision reached by the NJSIAA Committees. Koh, supra. Further, the burden of proof rests with the person challenging the decision. Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 297 (App. Div. 1960).

Having conducted an independent review of the approximately 500-page record of the proceedings below, including the transcripts from the Special Committee and Executive Committee hearings and meetings, and the parties' submissions on appeal, the Commissioner is persuaded that petitioners have been fully accorded the due process to which they are entitled, that the Special Committee's findings and conclusions are well-grounded in the record, and that petitioners, therefore, have failed to establish that the NJSIAA's determination upholding the divisional realignment of the NNJIL was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Initially, the Commissioner notes that the record substantiates NJSIAA's contention that extensive due process was afforded petitioners. After Dr. Khoury sent his proposed amendment to realign the divisions in the NNJIL to Mr. John Job, Principal of St. Joseph's High School, who was then President of the NNJIL, the proposal was distributed to all 19 schools in the League. The proposed amendment was subsequently discussed at League meetings on December 3, 1998 and March 11, 1999, and adopted on June 3, 1999 with the required two-thirds majority for passage.[5] On July 7, 1999, the Special Committee of the NJSIAA held a hearing on petitioners' complaint that the public schools had discriminated against the parochial schools by denying the parochial schools full membership in the League when it segregated them into a separate division. At the complaint hearing on July 7, the Special Committee took testimony under oath and reviewed numerous documents. The proceedings were recorded and transcribed, and all sides were represented by counsel and had the opportunity to present evidence and cross-examine witnesses. (Tr. 7/7/99 at 2-4)

The Special Committee issued a Report of its findings and conclusions on July 22, 1999 indicating some concerns with the realignment, which the NNJIL addressed in a response filed on October 22, 1999. The Special Committee subsequently met in executive session on November 8, 1999, and thereafter invited all parties to their December 8, 1999 work session for discussion purposes. On January 3, 2000, the Special Committee issued its Supplemental Report, and the Executive Committee heard oral arguments on the two Special Committee Reports at an open public meeting on January 12, 2000, at which time the Executive Committee voted 33-0 to adopt the Special Committee's Reports.

In approving the NNJIL divisional realignment, the Special Committee specifically found that:

> the NNJIL constitutional amendment was not motivated on religious grounds. It was rather advanced because of the domination of the League competition by the parochial schools and desire by the public schools to require more competitive balance within the League. The amendment recognized that the parochial schools could draw a wider enrollment of student-athletes, without consideration to geographic attendance zones.

[5] The amendment passed by a vote of 13 to 6, with all parochial schools opposed.

> The Committee finds that the aforesaid reasons for adopting the constitutional amendment were both legitimate and rational and came only after years of domination of intra league competition by Bergen Catholic in the Atlantic Division and Don Bosco and Immaculate Heart in the Pacific Division. (July 22, 1999 Report by the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences at 11)

The record supports the Special Committee's conclusion that NNJIL has experienced a lack of competitive balance with the parochial schools' domination of the League Championships since 1988 in all sports except the Girls Atlantic Division in which no parochial schools competed. Immaculate Heart Academy has won the Pacific All Sports championship for girls for nine straight years; Don Bosco has won it for boys for nine of the last ten years; and Bergen Catholic has won its boys division title for 13 of the last 14 years. (NJSIAA's Brief at 17, 18 and Exhibit 14, T-1 to T-9) As the Special Committee noted, parochial schools operate under less restrictive enrollment policies than public schools whereby parochial schools enroll student-athletes from a wide geographic area and, unlike the public schools, are able to provide financial aid to student-athletes who qualify. Therefore, the Special Committee's conclusion affirming NNJIL's divisional realignment for the purpose of fostering a competitive balance by placing nonpublic schools, all of which operate under similar admissions policies, in the same division, is reasonable and rational. See Christian Bros., supra, and Valencia, supra. Further, the Commissioner's painstaking review of the record in this matter found no basis whatsoever to support petitioners' allegations of discriminatory intent or that the parochial schools have been segregated into a separate division solely due to their religious affiliation. (Petitioners' Brief at 13)

With respect to petitioners' claim that the realignment will deprive the parochial schools of the benefits of full competition and conference play, the Commissioner finds that the Special Committee and NNJIL have adequately addressed those concerns by ensuring that parochial schools would continue to play public schools, based on strength of athletic program, and that such interdivisional games will carry equal weight with the intradivisional games in division standings. Additionally, adjustments to the division alignments can be made every two years on any basis that is agreeable to the membership, as long as the change has the necessary votes for adoption. (January 3, 2000 Supplemental Report by the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences at 5) The Executive Committee of the NJSIAA also noted on the record at its January 12, 2000 meeting that NNJIL schedules would be reviewed on a year-to-year basis by NJSIAA as part of its oversight to assure equity of athletic schedules. (Tr. 1/12/00 at 39-42)

Further, the Commissioner finds petitioners' allegations that the NNJIL's divisional realignment contravenes petitioners' rights under Article I, Paragraphs 1, 3 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution are without merit. Article I, Paragraphs 1, 3 and 5 read as follows:

>
> All persons are by nature free and independent, and have certain natural and unalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, of acquiring, possessing and protecting property, and of pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.

> No person shall be deprived of the inestimable privilege of worshiping Almighty God in a manner agreeable to the dictates of his own conscience; nor under any pretense whatever be compelled to attend any place of worship contrary to his faith and judgment; nor shall any person be obliged to pay tithes, taxes, or other rates for building or repairing any church or churches, place or places of worship, or for the maintenance of any minister or ministry, > contrary to what he believes to be rights or has deliberately and voluntarily engaged to perform.

>
> Paragraph 5
> No person shall be denied the enjoyment of any civil or military right, nor be discriminated against in the exercise of any civil or military right, nor be segregated in the militia or in the public schools, because of religious principles, race, color, ancestry, or national origin.

There is no support in the record for petitioners' assertions that they have been excluded from the benefits of membership, and, therefore, that their state constitutional rights have been violated under the above provisions. Initially, petitioners have not demonstrated that they have been excluded from the benefits of membership by the realignment of the divisions within NNJIL. Under the provisions of the division realignment, as approved by NJSIAA, the parochial schools remain members of NNJIL, have full voting rights, continue to compete against public schools within the League and their games against public schools carry the same weight in the standings as their games against parochial schools. (NJSIAA's Brief at 21, 22) See Christian Bros., supra, at 416-418, where, in an action brought by Bergen Catholic High School in 1981 contending that its denial for admission to the NNJIL violated its rights under Article I, Paragraphs 1 and 5 of the New Jersey Constitution, the New Jersey Supreme Court concluded that a rational basis would be sufficient to withstand any challenge under Article I, Paragraphs 1 and 5 in circumstances limiting membership by classification similar herein where the "classification was supportable by legitimate interests in preventing athletic recruiting and maintaining a competitive balance within the association." In the Commissioner's view, therefore, NJSIAA's finding that a rational basis existed for the NNJIL divisional realignment, is supported by the record.

With respect to petitioners' assertion that their state-protected right of religious freedom stated in Article I, Paragraph 3 above has been violated, petitioners have not demonstrated that NNJIL has in any way advanced or inhibited the exercise of religion by its divisional realignment. In In the Matter of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association's Proposed Realignments of Athletic Leagues and Conferences, 1982 S.L.D. 544, 562, the Administrative Law Judge observed that "athletic activities and contests which NJSIAA oversees have no direct relationship to the content of the instructional program in member schools. Nor are those athletic activities such that they foster the establishment of religion. As such, they do not violate the principles enunciated by the United States Supreme Court." See also Everson v. Ewing Board of Education, 330 U.S. 1 (1946) and School District of Abington Township, Pennsylvania, et al v. Schempp, 374 U.S. 203 (1963).

Similarly, the Commissioner finds petitioners' contention that because there is an absence of a rational basis or legitimate State purpose to be served by the divisional realignment, that NNJIL violated petitioners' constitutional rights under the Fourteenth Amendment, Equal Protection Clause, is without merit. As stated above, the record clearly reflects that a rational basis existed for the divisional realignment, since NNJIL athletic competition had been dominated for years by the parochial schools and since the parochial schools enjoyed an advantage by their less restrictive enrollment policies. As articulated in Christian Bros., supra, at 418, "a rational basis can exist for an interscholastic league limited to public schools and that such a limitation does not result per se in a denial of equal protection under the Federal Constitution." It is further noted that classifications differentiating between public and nonpublic schools on similar reasonable grounds designed to mitigate uneven competition between public and non-public high schools as affected by recruitment opportunities geared toward student athletes have been upheld by the Fifth and Sixth Circuits. See Denis J. O'Connell High Sch. v. Virginia High Sch. League, 581 *F.*2d. 81, 85 (4th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 440 U.S. 936 (1979) and Louisiana High Sch. Athletic Ass'n, 616 *F.*2d. 16. Additionally, to sustain a cause of action under the Equal Protection Clause or under 42 U.S.C. sec. 1983, petitioners must demonstrate state action. Even assuming, arguendo, that NNJIL's decision to amend its Constitution to permit the divisional realignment was "state action" sufficient to raise a claim, however, decisions by state and local athletic associations analogous to those posed here have been found to be subject to the rational basis standard. See Christian Bros., supra, at 416-417; Moreland, supra; and Archbishop Walsh, supra. In the Commissioner's view, NJSIAA's determination that a rational basis existed for the divisional realignment is amply supported in the record.

The Commissioner also finds no basis for petitioners' assertion that the divisional realignment by the NNJIL violated the Law Against Discrimination as set forth in N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 et seq. Even if a nonprofit athletic organization would fall within the LAD's coverage as a "place of public accommodation" as argued by petitioners, there is nothing in the record to suggest that the decision to realign the divisions reflect any religious restrictions which would implicate LAD, nor, as noted above, have petitioners provided any evidence that the realignment has deprived them of full membership privileges in NNJIL. The Special Committee specifically noted that they "could not find any evidence that the new divisional alignment was motivated by discrimination on the basis of religion or out of any 'anti-Catholic bias.'" (July 22, 1999 Report by the Special Committee on Leagues and Conferences at 11)

Finally, it is well-settled that participation in interscholastic sports is a privilege, rather than a right, and that privilege can be circumscribed by rules, such as those found in the NJSIAA Constitution, Bylaws, rules and regulations. Burnside, supra; Camden City Bd. Of Ed., supra. Even assuming, arguendo, a right to participate, however, an interscholastic league may limit its organization to public schools if there is a rational basis to do so. The record supports the conclusion that a rational basis exists, in this instance, because 1) parochial schools were found to be dominating League competition creating a competitive imbalance and 2) parochial schools have an enrollment advantage since they are able to enroll students from a wide geographic area and are able to offer financial-aid to their student-athletes. Christian Bros., supra, and Valencia, supra. It is noted, however, that the League herein does not seek to exclude parochial schools, but rather to incorporate their participation in such a manner as to restore a competitive balance within the League. The record reflects that NNJIL has realigned its divisions cognizant of the necessity of maintaining the benefits of full membership for the parochial members, expanding the competition among the parochial schools enjoying the same enrollment procedures, and insuring the parochial schools of continued competition against public schools within the League.

Accordingly, having found that due process was granted petitioners, and that there is sufficient credible evidence in the record to support the NJSIAA's conclusion with regard to competitive imbalance within the League, the Commissioner can find no basis under the appropriate standard of review on which to overturn the NJSIAA's decision and, therefore, must affirm its determination in this matter.[6]

INTRODUCTION

The Berlin Township Board of Education is a constituent district of the Lower Camden County Regional District No. 1 (Board) On May 12, 1998 the voters approved the dissolution of the regional district. [1] At a meeting held in March 2000, the Board approved what it calls a Dissolution Incentive Program (or Program) by which selected personnel are to be paid certain sums of money in the present school year and again in the 2000-2001 school year in return for their promise to continue their employment until the dissolution date. [2] The Berlin Township Board of Education seeks emergency relief in the form of a temporary restraining order against the Board from making payments to any employees under the program until a hearing is conducted on its five count verified petition of appeal filed before the Commissioner June 21, 2000.

The Commissioner immediately transferred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to-13. Oral argument on the emergency relief application was heard June 26, 2000 at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville. The record of the application includes petitioner's motion for interim relief with supporting letter memorandum, along with the five count petition of appeal, and the letter memorandum of the Board with supporting affidavit in opposition to the motion., as well as its answer to the verified petition of appeal. Intervenor joins in the Board's opposition to the application for emergency relief. An audio transcript of the oral argument is also included in the record.

FACTS

I have reviewed all papers filed on the application. For purposes only of the motion, and except as otherwise may be noted, the facts of the matter are these.

The record shows that sometime during the 1999-2000 school year, an administrator voluntarily left the employ of the Board. The administrator made application for payment of accrued sick leave days under the then existing Agreement between the Administrators'

[1] It is represented that the Commissioner of Education established June 30, 2001 as the effective date of the dissolution.

Association and the Board. The application was denied because the Board was of the view one had to retire under a recognized retirement program such as the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund (TPA & F) or the Public Employees Retirement System (PERS) to be eligible for such payment. This, the record suggests, was contrary to the view held by the superintendent and by the Association. In order to provide the benefits to certain employees the superintendent already believed the Agreement provided but which the Board rejected, and to provide an incentive for certain employees not to leave the employ of the Board until the dissolution is effective, he recommended the adoption of the Dissolution Incentive Program. The Program is not the result of negotiation under the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Act between the Board and the Association; rather, it stems from the recommendation of the superintendent to forestall the possibility of employees considered to be key from leaving the District prior to the effective date of dissolution. The Program as approved by the Board consists of three parts. Part A is that part which petitioner seeks to restrain, while Parts B and C address related though separate issues. Part A of the Program provides as follows:

> Administrators who choose not to retire from the district but would otherwise be eligible for the negotiated sick leave benefit in the contract will be eligible to receive full compensation associated with this benefit if they remain employed as an administrator or in their respective position in the Lower Camden County Regional High School District #1 until the date of final dissolution. 'Administrators' in this recommendation are defined as those who are members of the Administrators' Association, members of the Central Administration (minus the Superintendent and Business Administrator/Board Secretary) and personnel covered by the Central Office Personnel Terms of Employment. The approximate cost of this benefit is $800,000-900,000 and it is also recommended that payment be spread over a two year period. (Petition of Appeal, Exhibit C)

The letter memoranda filed by the parties in support of their respective positions show agreement that the Program as set out above is intended to provide eligible employees to receive a maximum of $45,000 in accrued sick leave benefits if the employee remained employed with the Board until dissolution, while retaining all other accrued tenure and seniority rights they may otherwise have in the constituent districts post dissolution. Monies for the payments to be made

[2] A companion case to this matter involves the issues of tenure and seniority claims teachers may presently have for use once the dissolution becomes effective. (See Lower Camden County Regional Education Association, et al. v. Berlin Township Board of Education, et al., OAL DKT. NO. EDU 962-00, AGENCY DKT. NO. 83-3/00) under the Program are to come from current expense surplus; no money has been budgeted either in the 1999-2000 or 2000-2001 current expense budget for the Program. While the resolution adopting the program suggests the benefits are intended for those who otherwise intended to retire, the term "retire" apparently has been defined by the Board to mean any eligible employee who intended to leave its employ in good standing for any reason.

Those who participate in the Program must agree to the following:

> Individuals who accept payment for unused sick days and who are not retiring from TPAF/PERS agree to remain employed by the Lower Camden County Regional High School District Number One until the date of dissolution. The final date of dissolution may be June 30, 2001, or a later date, if dissolution is not completed by that projected date. Individuals who choose to resign from Lower Camden County or otherwise leave the employment of Lower Camden County for any reason other than retirement prior to the date of dissolution agree to immediately repay all monies received and forfeit any future benefit associated with this provision. Failure to make the aforesaid repayment may result in Lower Camden County commencing any legal or equitable action as permitted pursuant to New Jersey Law, as well as any administrative proceeding, including tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and for commencement of revocation or suspension of certificate, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6. (See Exhibit I attached to Board's memorandum in opposition to the motion for emergency relief.)

Petitioner also alleges in support of its application for emergency relief that one of the Board members who voted in favor of the Program is in conflict of interest because his wife who is employed by the Board may be eligible for participation in the Program, and because his wife's immediate supervisor is considered to be eligible to participate in the Program, and because his running mate for board membership is also eligible to participate in the Program. The Board specifically denies these allegations that the referenced Board member is or was in conflict of interest.

ARGUMENTS ON THE MOTION FOR INTERIM RELIEF

PETITIONERS' ARGUMENTS

Petitioner seeks emergency relief because it asserts students in the still existing regional district will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted because the funds necessary to support the Program have not been budgeted and will be taken from current expense surplus and those funds may be better used to provide instructional supplies and equipment to provide them a through and efficient program of education; that it has a reasonable likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the petition of appeal because the Board has no authority to create and fund a program by which public funds are expended for services not rendered; that in balancing the relative hardship of the parties, it would suffer greater harm if the relief is not granted than the damage the affected employees would incur if the relief were to be granted; and, the public interest supports granting the relief requested.

BOARD'S ARGUMENTS IN OPPOSITION

The Board argues that petitioner's motion for emergency relief must be denied for petitioner failed to show irreparable harm if the relief is not granted. The Board says it has sufficient surplus to support the Program and the Program has the legitimate goal of providing quality staff for its students. The Board argues that it has the legal right to enter contractual obligations with its employees and that it should be allowed to operate its schools in the manner it sees fit. The Board maintains that the granting of injunctive relief would unlawfully impair its contractual obligations and more likely than not encourage administrative employees to resign or retire and leave its employ resulting in insufficient staff to operate its schools.

ANALYSIS

Emergency interim relief is to be granted if the moving party demonstrates it will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted, the legal right underlying the claim is not unsettled, that the moving party has a reasonable probability of success on the merits, and that the equities favor the granting of the relief. Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-134 (1982).

The motion for emergency relief must be granted for this reason. It is recognized a board of education through either expressed or implied power has wide authority to operate the schools in a manner it sees fit. However, authority to act must exist in order for board action to be valid.

I am aware of no authority nor has any been cited for a board of education to enact the Dissolution Incentive Program.

The Program, insofar as this record shows, is a "bonus" program in that it pays certain employees an amount over and above their contractual entitlements to do something they implicitly already agreed to do; that is, to continue in the Board's employ until they determine not to do so through resignation, retirement, or other means of separation from employment. The payment of public funds under the Program is for a service not otherwise rendered because the employee is already committed to remain in the Board's employ. Should the employee determine to retire under TPA&F or PERS, the benefits the Program contemplates, and presumably identical to the benefits in the negotiated Agreement, being paid would still be available to the employee but only because they retired in the generally accepted sense of retirement under a retirement program.

Based on the facts developed in this record on the motion, should emergency relief not be granted, irreparable harm would be inflicted not only upon students of the regional district but upon the general public of the entire regional school district because public funds would be expended for services not rendered. The payment of public money to do something one is already obligated to do is a bonus payment; the payment of money for service one is already obliged to provide. It appears that petitioner has a reasonable probability of success to establish the Program as an ultra vires act of the Board, and the equities favor the granting of the relief because if the Program is a valid exercise of Board authority payments may be made to those who are otherwise eligible under the Program. Should payments be now made and the Program be declared invalid, the recovery of the payments already made would place the burden of recovery on the Board which would take more time than it now has available to it.

CONCLUSION

For all the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE the application of the Berlin Township Board of Education for emergency interim relief must be GRANTED pending a plenary hearing on the merits. The Lower Camden County Regional School District No. 1 Board of Education is hereby temporarily enjoined from expending public funds under its Dissolution Incentive Program until such time that a plenary hearing is conducted on the merits of the verified petition of appeal. At the conclusion of the plenary hearing, the temporary restraining order may be dissolved or it may be made permanent. Should the restraint be dissolved, all affected employees may be made whole through the payment of benefits contemplated by the Program.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's motion for emergency interim relief must be and is GRANTED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CAMDEN COUNTY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 1, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, individual high school student (D.H.) and her father on behalf of her sister (S.H.), challenged the Board's refusal to place D.H. in 12th grade and S.H. in 11th grade absent receipt of their transcripts from a nonpublic school. Because of a financial dispute as to tuition, that school refused to send the school records of the students to the respondent Board.

Emergent relief was granted in May 2000 to permit D.H. to graduate with her class provided she passed the required courses necessary for graduation.

In light of the testimony of witnesses and the evidence that both students passed the eleventh grade proficiency test, the ALJ ordered that D.H. be permitted to graduate provided she passed the required courses necessary for graduation and that S.H. be placed in the 12th grade for the 2000-01 school year provided she passed her current courses.

The Commissioner adopted findings and determination in Initial Decision as his own.

Record Closed: May 11, 2000 Decided: May 23, 2000

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

This matter concerns the petition filed by the petitioners, with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) on April 24, 2000. The petitioners request that the Commissioner find that Deanna Hoover, as of the start of the 1999-2000 school year, had successfully completed the requirements for the eleventh grade and that she be allowed to graduate from the Edgewood Senior High School at the end of the 1999-2000 school year. Also, that the Commissioner find that S.H., as of the start of the 1999-2000 school year, had successfully completed the requirements for the tenth grade and that she be placed in the eleventh grade for the 1999-2000 school year. In addition, the petitioners filed a request for emergency relief on behalf of both Deanna Hoover and S.H.

The matter was transmitted on April 27, 2000, to the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-t o –13, prior to the filing of any papers by the respondent, since the petitioners requested emergency relief.

The matter was scheduled for an oral argument as to the motion for emergency relief and for a hearing on May 11, 2000. I granted the motion for emergency relief as to Deanna Hoover by order dated May 15, 2000. The record as to this initial decision closed on May 11, 2000.

I FIND that the facts pertinent to this matter are not in dispute.

Deanna Hoover attended St. Joseph High School for three years and S.H. attended St. Joseph High School for two years. At the end of the 1998-99 school year, Keith Hoover, the father of Deanna Hoover and S.H., enrolled his daughters with the respondent. Because of a financial dispute as to tuition, St. Joseph High School refused to send the school records of Deanna Hoover and S.H. to the respondent. Both Deanna Hoover and S.H. past the Grade 11 High School Proficiency Test (P-9, P-8), and the respondent placed Deanna Hoover in the twelfth grade and S.H. in the eleventh grade at the Edgewood Regional Senior High School for the 1999-2000 school year. Without the school records from St. Joseph High School, Michelle Ferner, the principal of the Edgewood Regional Senior High School testified that she cannot certify that Deanna Hoover has the necessary credits needed for graduation or that S.H. has the needed credits for advancement to the twelfth grade.

At the hearing, Deanna Hoover testified that she took and successfully completed the following courses at St. Joseph High School:

Freshman (9th grade) – 1996-97 School Year

English I	-	4 marking periods (full year)
Algebra I	-	4 marking periods
Physical Science	-	4 marking periods

Intro to Computers	-	1 marking period

Sophomore (10th grade) – 1997-98 School Year

English II	-	4 marking periods

Computer	-	1 marking period
First Aid	-	1 marking period

In addition, Deanna Hoover presented her final report card for her freshman year (P-1), and intern report cards for her sophomore (P-2) and junior years (P-3). By affidavit, Robert Cizozzi stated that he was one of Deanna Hoover's teachers during the 1998-99 school year at St. Joseph High School and that she had successfully completed the eleventh grade at St. Joseph High School (P-10). Keith Hoover testified that his daughter, Deanna Hoover had successfully completed her first three years at St. Joseph High School.

During the 1999-00 school year at the Edgewood Senior High School, Deanna Hoover testified that she is taking the following courses:

English	-	4 marking periods
Mathematic	-	4 marking periods
Physical Education	-	4 marking periods
Work Program	-	4 marking periods

Deanna Hoover presented her first marking period report card for her senior year (P-4), and testified that she is passing all her courses except for mathematics.

Both Ms. Ferner and Ross Heaton, the Director of Guidance at the Edgewood Senior High School, testified that based on the high school's graduation requirements policy (J-1), if the high school had received school records from St. Joseph High School showing that Deanna Hoover had taken the courses she testified she took at St. Joseph High School, she would have had sufficient course credits for placement in the 12th grade at the Edgewood Senior High School for the 1999-00 school year. Ms. Ferner testified that based on the courses Deanna Hoover testified she took at St. Joseph High School and the courses she is taking at the Edgewood Senior High School, Deanna Hoover will have sufficient course credits to graduate if she passes her current courses except for mathematics.

S.H. testified that she took and successfully completed the following courses at St. Joseph High School:

Freshman year (9th grade) – 1997-98 School Year

English I	-	4 marking periods
Algebra I	-	4 marking periods
Physical Science	-	4 marking periods
World Culture	-	4 marking periods
Spanish I	-	4 marking periods
Physical Education	-	2 marking periods
Family Life	-	1 marking period
Computer	-	1 marking period

Sophomore year (10th grade) – 1998-99 School Year

English II	-	4 marking periods
Spanish II	-	4 marking periods
U.S. History	-	4 marking periods
Biology	-	4 marking periods
Geometry	-	2 marking periods
Algebra II	-	2 marking periods
Physical Education	-	2 marking periods
Driver Education	-	1 marking period
Computer	-	1 marking period

In addition, S.H., presented her intern report cards for her freshman and sophomore years (P-5, P-6). Mr. Hoover testified that his daughter, S.H. had successfully completed her first two years at St. Joseph High School.

During the 1999-00 school year at the Edgewood Senior High School, S.H. testified that she has taken or is taking the following courses:

English	-	4 marking periods
History	-	4 marking periods
Science	-	4 marking periods
Advanced Mathematics	-	4 marking periods
Computer	-	4 marking periods
Exploring Childhood	-	4 marking periods
Physical Education	-	4 marking periods
Health	-	1 marking period

S.H. presented her second marking period report card for her junior year (P-7), and testified that she is passing all her courses.

Both Mr. Heaton and Ms. Ferner testified that if the high school had received school records from St. Joseph High School showing that S.H. had taken the courses she testified she took at St. Joseph High School, she would have had sufficient course credits for placement in the 10th grade at the Edgewood Senior High School for the 1998-99 school year. Ms. Ferner testified that based on the courses S.H. testified she took at St. Joseph High School and the courses she is taking at the Edgewood High School, S.H. will have sufficient course credits to be placed in the 12th grade if she passes her current courses.

Kenneth E. Smith, Esq., on behalf of the petitioners, argued that based on the fact that both Deanna Hoover and S.H. had successfully past the Grade 11 High School Proficiency Test and their testimony as to the courses they successfully completed at the St. Joseph Highs School, the Commissioner should determine that Deanna Hoover was properly placed in the 12th grade and that S.H. was properly placed in the 11th grade for the 1999-00 school year. Also, Mr. Smith argued that the Commissioner should determine that Deanna Hoover has sufficient course credits to graduate this June provided she passes all necessary courses for graduation and S.H. has sufficient course credits to be placed in the 12th grade class for the 2000-01 school year.

Mr. Smith stated that the facts in this matter are similar to those in M.C. on behalf of L.C., a minor child v. Board of Education of the Freehold Regional High School District, Monmouth County, EDU 8229-98, Initial Decision, (October 29, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, adopted, Comm'r. (February 20, 2000). This case deals with the high school placement of L.C. who had been home schooled for a period of time. The Commissioner emphasized that the decision regarding the placement of L.C. should not have focused on the equivalency of L.C.'s home school instruction to the school's program but rather on L.C.'s level of proficiency as determined by appropriate testing. In this matter, Mr. Smith argued that the placement of Deanna Hoover and S.H. was correct based on their scores in the eleventh grade proficiency test and their testimony as to the courses they had successfully completed at St. Joseph High School.

Barry Chatzinoff, Esq., on behalf of the respondent, stated that without the previous high school records, the respondent cannot determine if Deanna Hoover has sufficient credits to graduate and S.H. has sufficient credits to advance to the twelfth grade consistent with the respondent's policy (J-1) and N.J.A.C. 6:3-4A.1(d)ii(3).

I am persuaded by the testimony of the witnesses and Mr. Smith's arguments, and I ORDER that Deanna Hoover be permitted to graduate this June provided that she passes the required courses necessary for graduation, and that S.H. be placed in the 12th grade for the 2000-01 school year provided she passes her current courses.

The hearing in this matter was handled on an expedited basis and I am confident that the Commissioner will issue a final decision as soon as possible.

At the hearing, both parties waived the right to file exceptions.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF BRADLEY BEACH, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER ,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, DIVISION OF FINANCE,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board appealed the Department's determination that petitioner was the "district of residence" for student M.J.F. during the 1998-99 school year and that petitioner was therefore financially responsible for M.J.F.'s education during that period, under the State Facilities Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-1 to –13, and the regulations promulgated thereunder.

The ALJ noted that under N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12, subsection (b), children placed in residential State facilities by State agencies are deemed to reside in the district where their parent or guardian resided at the time of admission to the State facility. Based on the Bradley Beach address provided by DYFS for Mr. F., M.J.F.'s adoptive father, the Department determined that this was M.J.F.'s district of residence for the 1997-98 school year. Since the information did not change for the 1998-99 school year, the Department reached the same conclusion. Thus, the ALJ concluded that, in the absence of any affirmative proofs to the contrary, petitioner was the district of residence for M.J. F.

The Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision since the ALJ, in his Pre-hearing Order placed the burden of proving district of residence upon the State, but in his Initial Decision he re-shifted the burden to petitioner, with no advance notice of such change afforded petitioner. The Commissioner observed that it is well-established that when a board is contesting a district of residence determination made by Finance based upon the information provided it by the Department of Human Services, the board bears the burden of proving that such determination was in error. Thus, the Commissioner set aside the Initial Decision and remanded the matter to OAL to allow petitioner's presentation of its case with the unambiguous recognition that it bears the burden of persuasion.

Jack S. Senechal, Deputy Attorney General, on behalf of respondent (John J. Farmer, Jr., Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: April 24, 2000 Decided: May 15, 2000

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of respondent's determination that petitioner was the "district of residence" for M.J.F. during the 1998/99 school year and is therefore financially responsible for his education during that period, under the State Facilities Education Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-1 to -13, and regulations promulgated thereunder. Petitioner requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A.

52:14B-1 to -12. A hearing was conducted on April 6, 2000, and the record closed on April 24, 2000, with receipt of the last post-hearing memorandum.

Certain facts are undisputed. M.J.F. was born on May 22, 1987. A birth certificate in evidence reflects that M.N.F. is his father, that R.E.F., now deceased, was his mother, and that the family resided in Bradley Beach (R-3). Documentation from the Department of Human Services, Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS), confirms a Bradley Beach address, and adds that Mr. and Mrs. F. were adoptive parents (R-1). On August 29, 1995, the Superior Court awarded temporary custody of M.J.F. to the DYFS (R-2). On April 1, 1996, the DYFS placed him at the School for Children at Monmouth University, a residential facility. On September 18, 1996, the DYFS moved M.J.F. to the Somerset Hills School, another residential facility, where he remains. Based on the Bradley Beach address provided by the DYFS for Mr. F., respondent determined that this was M.J.F.'s district of residence for the 1997/98 school year (R-4). No appeal was taken. The information did not change for the 1998/99 school year, and respondent reached the same conclusion (R-5); now petitioner sought review.

Melvin L. Wyns is director of the Office of School Finance for respondent, and he decides district of residence questions. Mr. Wyns testified that he makes no independent investigation, but rather relies on information supplied by the DYFS. When the DYFS furnished documentation that M.J.F. was at Somerset Hills School and that M.N.F. continued to reside in Bradley Beach, his course was clear. Mr. Wyns acknowledged not knowing for sure whether the DYFS had instituted proceedings to assume guardianship, but he is generally notified of such actions. It did not appear that guardianship had transferred to the DYFS as late as February 1999 (A-1).

Petitioner presented no witnesses. This is the substance of the record.

The record lacks depth. Some documentation reflects that Mr. and Mrs. F. were the adoptive parents of M.J.F., that the DYFS took custody of the child in 1995 and placed him residentially, that Mr. and Mrs. F. lived in Bradley Beach and that Mr. F. continued to live there during the 1998/99 school year. Petitioner argues that the information is too thin to deem it responsible for tuition. For example, we cannot say with assurance that Mr. and Mrs. F. ever actually adopted M.J.F. We do not know if the DYFS has assumed guardianship and thus financial responsibility for his education. In short, the documentation standing alone is insufficient to preponderate. I do not agree.

N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12 requires the Department of Education to determine district of residence for school funding purposes. Under subsection (b), children placed in residential State facilities by State agencies are deemed to reside in the district where their parent or guardian resided at the time of admission to the State facility. Annual redeterminations are made based on the residence of the parent or guardian as of October 15 of each school year. Regulations permit respondent to make this decision from addresses supplied by the relevant State agency, N.J.A.C. 6:20-5.3(b). Mr. Wyns followed this procedure.

Petitioner cannot be heard to complain about a dearth of evidence when it failed to so much as call a witness. Petitioner sought and obtained an order for the production of the DYFS file pursuant to N.J.S.A. 9:6-8.10. If this did not fully clarify matters, it was free to go on. The names of the DYFS employees who supplied Mr. Wyns with the information he used are contained in the records; they could have been approached. If petitioner was unsure about Mr. F.'s status as an adoptive father, it might have contacted him as well. Court records would likely verify whether the DYFS had assumed guardianship for M.J.F. Although respondent's initiative was limited, it met the regulatory scheme, which appears reasonably calculated to yield a correct result. In the absence of any affirmative proofs to the contrary, it is enough.

Based on the foregoing, it is my conclusion that respondent has established that Bradley Beach is the district of residence for M.J.F.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF BRADLEY BEACH, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, DIVISION OF FINANCE,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions were timely filed pursuant to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination that it is responsible for M.J.F.'s educational costs for the 1998-99 school year, essentially contending that 1) in reaching such conclusion the ALJ misapplied the burden of proof that he, himself, had previously established and 2) in light of its burden, the quantum of proof advanced by respondent was insufficient to reasonably lead to the conclusion that petitioner is the financially responsible district in this matter. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 2) As such, it avows, the Initial Decision is incorrect and must be overturned.

In support of this charge, petitioner first argues that the ALJ's decision chastising it for the "lack of depth" in the record in that petitioner presented insufficient proofs or failed to call witnesses in this matter, ignores a pivotal consideration here, respondent, not petitioner, bore the burden of proof. (Id. at 3-4) It proffers that in the progress of this case it quickly became apparent that the parties here were in significantly disparate positions with regard to obtaining information necessary to allow a determination in this matter, i.e., "[t]he records pertaining to the alleged adoption of the child, and to the alleged transfers of custody, guardianship and parental rights, are protected by statute. N.J.S.A. 9:6-8.10" (Id. at 3) The only information which petitioner has here, it maintains, and the only information to which it is entitled, is a packet provided by the State in November 1999 in response to a Motion for the Production of Documents filed by petitioner. Additional information, it posits, is in the sole control of the State. (Id.) Such a situation, it avers, moved petitioner to seek a transfer of the burden of proof in a pre-hearing telephone conference between the ALJ and the parties on November 8, 1999 where, subsequent to hearing petitioner's arguments in this regard, the ALJ appropriately shifted the burden of proof from petitioner to respondent in his November 23, 1999 Pre-hearing Order. (Id. at 3-4) Petitioner further contends that no interlocutory appeal was taken on the issue of burden, nor was any objection, formal or informal, raised on this issue until the conclusion of the hearing on April 6, 2000, at which time respondent argued that the burden should be shifted back to petitioner, which contention was subsequently denied by the ALJ. Consequently, petitioner advances, respondent had the burden of proving that petitioner is the financially responsible district here and any lack of depth in the record is solely attributable to respondent. (Id. at 4)

Notwithstanding that "the ALJ himself placed the burden upon the State," subsequent to the closing of the record, he filed an Initial Decision which clearly re-shifted the burden to petitioner, with no advance notice of such change being afforded petitioner. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 10) Such a clear contradiction, it argues, "constitute[s] a severe prejudice, injustice and inequity against [petitioner]." (Id.) Petitioner, therefore, urges that should the Commissioner find "that the ALJ properly shifted the burden to [petitioner] without notice or rationale, [petitioner] must then be afforded the opportunity of a further hearing, at which time it may present additional witnesses and testimony, consistent with the responsibilities of a party which knows it bears the burden of persuasion." (Id. at 11)

Petitioner next argues, that based upon the allocation of the burden of proof established by the Pre-hearing Order, the proofs advanced by respondent in support of its determination were insufficient to "objectively and conclusively" allow for determination of petitioner as the financially responsible district here. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 9) In that respondent has failed to meet its burden of persuasion here, petitioner contends that subsection (d) of the controlling statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12, requires that the State assume financial responsibility for the educational costs of M.J.F. (Id.)

Upon his independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner is compelled to reject the Initial Decision since he concludes that, notwithstanding that the ALJ's Initial Decision reflects the utilization of the proper burden of proof in matters of this type, as was advanced in respondent's exceptions, the ALJ's Pre-hearing Order in this case erroneously imposes the burden of proof on respondent, thereby serving to unduly prejudice petitioner's advancement of its case. As such, this matter must be remanded to the OAL to allow for full presentation and argument under the correct standard.

The Commissioner observes that it is well-established that when a board is contesting a district of residence determination made by Finance based upon the information provided it by the Department of Human Services, the board bears the burden of proving that such determination was in error. See Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City v. New Jersey Department of Education, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d. (EDU) 545; Board of Education of the City of

Wildwood v. New Jersey State Department of Education, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 273, Reversed on other grounds State Board of Education June 7, 2000; State-operated School District of the City of Newark v. New Jersey State Department of Education, Division of Finance, decided by the Commissioner March 22, 1999. Moreover, petitioner's argument with respect to its inability to secure information, over and above that which has been provided in this matter, is rejected as without merit. Although certain DYFS records and documents themselves may, indeed, be protected from discovery, the Board clearly has the ability to call witnesses and elicit testimony from individuals with knowledge of essential facts. As one such example, the person who completed the report relied on by the respondent could be called to testify as to the basis for the information which was provided the respondent; as another, noted by the ALJ, the Board's concerns vis-à-vis Mr. F.'s status as an adoptive father could be resolved by contacting and/or calling him as well. (Initial Decision at 3)

Accordingly, the recommended Initial Decision is set aside and this matter is remanded to the OAL to allow for petitioner's presentation of its case with the unambiguous recognition that it bears the burden of persuasion.

The parties, the petitioner Mary Ford ("Petitioner" or "Ford") and respondent State Operated School District of the City of Paterson ("District"), state as follows:

1. On or about July 15, 2000, the petitioner, a non-tenured accountant, filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education claiming the District's action withholding her salary increment for the 1999-2000 school year was arbitrary and capricious.

2. The District filed an Answer to the Petition denying the petitioner's claims.

3. In light of the nature of this dispute, and the possibility of protracted litigation, it is in the best interest of the parties to resolve the this matter before the Commissioner of Education.

4. The parties hereby stipulate to the terms outlined herein. The petitioner agrees to withdraw the Petition of Appeal in the above matter with prejudice.

5. The District agrees to restore only one-half of the petitioner's salary increment for the 1999-2000 school year. The petitioner's salary increment for the 1999-2000 school year is $1,460, not including her base salary. The District agrees to increase petitioner's salary by one-half of her withheld increment or approximately $730, retroactive to September, 1999. Petitioner fully understands that the one-half withheld salary increment is permanent, except that she may apply to the State District Superintendent for restoration of the increment. The Superintendent, as part of his discretionary authority, may consider restoring the increment prospectively only. Petitioner may apply for restoration on condition that she receive at least three consecutive years of satisfactory evaluations from the date of this Agreement.

6. The petitioner acknowledges that this Agreement does not prevent the District from taking disciplinary action in the future, whether based upon performance or conduct, if warranted. The parties understand and agree that this Agreement may not be used to suppor or defend potential disciplinary action.

7. The parties respectively acknowledge that each has had ample opportunity to seek independent legal counsel, financial or other advice regarding this Agreement, and that each is signing this Agreement freely and voluntarily, without coercion, duress or pressure from the other party.

8. By entering this Agreement, each party releases and discharges the other with respect to all claims or rights that either party may have against the other.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 10864-99

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DR. ROBERT H. MANN, ASBURY PARK SCHOOL DISTRICT,

---

Kathleen Smallwood-Johnson, Esq., for petitioner (Hill Wallack, attorneys)

James E. Collins, Esq., for respondent (Cerrato, Dawes, Collins, Saker & Brown, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 22, 2000 Decided: May 23, 2000

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

The Asbury Park Board of Education sought to remove Dr. Robert H. Mann, serving under contract pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 as superintendent of schools, prior to the end of the contract period. The matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, and answered by the respondent.

The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case on December 10, 1999, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13.

After a motion to dismiss three of the counts in the petition of appeal was denied and after four days of hearing and one day of settlement conferences, the parties reached an amicable resolution of the matter. On May 18, 2000, the terms of the settlement were read into the record. After being placed under oath, the respondent stated he fully understood and consented to all of the terms and conditions of the settlement. The Board's counsel represented that the Board had authorized her to enter into the settlement on its behalf and that the Board would meet that night to ratify the agreement.

On May 22, 2000, I received a certified copy of the Board's resolution of May 18, 2000 approving the settlement and typed and handwritten copies of the agreement. The latter had been signed in my presence, on May 18, 2000. These documents are attached to and are part of this initial decision.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement, and

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I further FIND no impediment to this settlement in the nature of the charges brought. The agreement comports with the principles expressed in Cardonick v. Brooklawn Board of Education, decided by the State Board of Education, April 6, 1983.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 10864-99
AGENCY DKT. NO. 331-11/99

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF DR. ROBERT H. MANN,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ASBURY PARK SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	DECISION
MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) in the form of a Settlement Agreement have been reviewed.

Upon careful and independent review of the terms of the settlement, together with the full record of this matter, the Commissioner is compelled to reject the agreement as it is currently structured. On its face, the agreement purports to "dissolve the employment contract of Dr. Mann as Superintendent of the Asbury Park School District, 6/30/00." (Settlement Agreement) However, such an arrangement cannot, in and of itself, serve as a settlement duly reached pursuant to the certification of tenure charges brought before the Commissioner, in accordance with the standards for settling such tenure matters. In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, affirmed State Board of Education April 6, 1983, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846. In this respect, the Commissioner finds that the within agreement and supporting record are completely devoid of the content and analysis fundamental to a board's duty to act in a manner consistent with public policy. Cardonick at 848.

Initially, the Commissioner notes that it is well-established that, having once taken up the burden of tenure charges, the Board may not lay it down without spreading forth on the record a reasonably specific explanation of why such charges can no longer be pursued or why it is now in the public interest not to pursue them. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Kenneth Smith, School District of the City of Orange, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner March 22, 1982, decision on remand June 16, 1983, affirmed with modification by the State Board of Education November 2, 1983, affirmed Superior Court January 30, 1986. The present record contains no such explanation and analysis. Neither does the agreement indicate that respondent was advised of the Commissioner's duty, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6, to refer tenure determinations to the State Board of Examiners for possible revocation of his certificate.

Moreover, it appears that the terms of the settlement have already been effectuated through the Board's initial distribution to respondent of $50,000 on or before June 1, 2000. To the extent such payment was made in furtherance of this agreement, the Board has acted at its own peril, since settlement agreements of controverted matters are of no force and effect and may not be implemented absent the Commissioner's approval pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1.

While the Commissioner does not preclude the possibility of settlement in this matter, he stresses that in order for him to meet his own obligation to the schools and children of this State, he must be assured that any settlement is consistent with appropriate standards for setting aside tenure matters as expressed in Cardonick, supra.

Accordingly, the proposed settlement is rejected for the reasons expressed herein. The Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for expansion of the record and revision of the Settlement Agreement, consistent with the concerns set forth above.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

State of New Jersey
OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 634-00

AGENCY DKT. NO. 335-11/99

JUDY SMITH,

Petitioners,

v.

ASBURY PARK

BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

Wayne Oppito, Esq., for petitioner

Kathleen Smallwood Johnson, Esq., for respondent (Hill Wallach, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 18, 2000 Decided: May 18, 2000

BEFORE JOHN R. TASSINI, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, employed by the respondent Asbury Park Board of Education (BOE) as a tenured teaching staff member, appeals from the BOE's withholding of her salary increment. Petitioner alleges that the BOE failed to notify her of the reason for the withholding of the increment and that the withholding was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, etc., and petitioner contends that the BOE violated laws including N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14.

The BOE has failed to participate in this appeal, so that its defenses are stricken and it is ordered to pay the increment.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 19, 1999, the petition of appeal was filed with the Department of Education and, thereafter, the BOE's answer and defenses were filed. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The Department transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where, on February 10, 2000, it was filed as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b). On March 21, 2000, the case was assigned to me and I sent a scheduling letter to the attorneys relative to this case and the related case bearing OAL docket number EDU 633-00. The scheduling letter, among other things, notified the attorneys of a May 3, 2000 4:00 p.m. telephone conference to be held for the cases. On May 3, 2000, at 4:00 p.m., petitioner's attorney was available; however, telephone calls to the BOE's attorney's office showed that no attorney was available for the BOE.

In my May 3, 1999 letter, I wrote to the BOE's attorney:

> My files show that you are the attorney for the Asbury Park BOE in these cases and that, by way of my March 21, 2000 letters, I notified Wayne Oppito, the attorney for BOE employees Burgess and Smith, and you of a telephone conference to be held today at 4:00 p.m. Mr. Oppito was available for today's telephone conference. However, you were not available.
>
> This is notice to you that, if by May 12, 2000, I do not have from you a written explanation for your unavailability for today's conference, I will assume that the Asbury Park BOE does not intend to defend the petitions (claims) brought by Burgess and Smith; I will order the Asbury Park BOE's defenses stricken; and I will ask the OAL's clerk to transmit the cases back to the Department of Education for action consistent with the petitioner's claims, i.e., ordering the Asbury Park BOE to pay the increments, etc.

After mailing the above-quoted letter I have had no response and no communication from the BOE's attorney or anyone else acting on behalf of the BOE.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

As a matter of fairness and due process, parties must cooperate with the administrative adjudicatory process, including participation in prehearing conferences, etc., and, for failure to appear and participate in any proceeding scheduled by an ALJ, the party that fails to appear and participate may be subject to appropriate orders in the interest of fairness, etc. N.J.A.C. 1:1-9.1.1, -13.1, -14.6.

The BOE, having had notice of same, failed to participate in the scheduled prehearing conference and has failed to respond to the notice that, for such failure to participate, its defenses would be stricken and it would be ordered to pay the subject increment.

ORDERS

I ORDER the BOE's defenses to the petitioner's claims stricken and I ORDER the BOE to pay the increment to the petitioner.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 East State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF ALEXANDER SIPOS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
GARFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	DECISION
BERGEN COUNTY.	:

July 10, 2000

IN THE MATTER OF ALEXANDER SIPOS,	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
	:	Docket No.: C20-99
GARFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION, BERGEN COUNTY	:	DECISION

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The above matter arises from a complaint filed by Sheila Kelly on August 23, 1999 alleging that respondent Alexander Sipos violated the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. Specifically, Mrs. Kelly alleged that the Board hired Mr. Sipos' wife and brother. She also alleged that Mr. Sipos made the motion to hire his wife twice, once as secretary to the high school principal and, six months later, as child study team secretary, resulting in a large raise for Mrs. Sipos. The complainant further alleged that Mr. Sipos' actions violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22(a) and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b). On October 12, 1999, Mrs. Kelly amended her complaint to include an allegation that the Board had hired Mr. Sipos' daughter and an employee of Meltzer's Sporting Goods, where Mr. Sipos works as a manager. The Commission found probable cause that Mr. Sipos violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) when he made two motions to pass resolutions that resulted in the appointment of his wife to two positions with the Board. It did not find probable cause regarding the remaining allegations. The Commission found that there were no material facts in dispute and requested that respondent file a written statement as to whether the conduct constitutes a violation of the Act. The Commission now finds that Mr. Sipos violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) and recommends a penalty of censure.

Mr. Sipos filed his answer on September 24, 1999 stating that he made the motion on all the personnel appointments because it was his duty as chairperson of the Personnel Committee. He denied having violated the School Ethics Act. Mr. Sipos' response to the amended complaint was that his daughter was appointed to her position with the Board a year before he became a member in April 1997. He denied that he has any relationship with the current employee of Meltzer's that would create a conflict of interest under the Act.

The Commission invited the parties to testify at its February 22, 2000 meeting. Mr. Sipos appeared with his attorney, Toni Belford Damiano, Esq. Mrs. Kelly appeared pro se. After hearing testimony, the Commission tabled the matter. At its March 28, 2000 meeting, the Commission voted to find probable cause that Mr. Sipos violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) by making the motions to hire his spouse. Ms. Damiano submitted a timely written statement on behalf of Mr. Sipos in response to the Commission's determination. Mrs. Kelly also submitted a written statement, but it was not in time to be considered by the Commission.

FACTS

The Commission finds the following facts to be undisputed.

Mr. Sipos was elected to the Garfield Board of Education in April 1997. He is a thirteen year resident of Garfield. When the 1998-99 Board held its reorganization meeting, it decided that individual committees that had been formed would have the responsibility of moving their committee's resolutions, via the chairperson, before the Board. According to Mr. Sipos, this meant that each specific committee would discuss its particular business at a committee meeting scheduled prior to the regularly scheduled Board meeting. At all times relevant to this complaint, Mr. Sipos was the appointed chair of the Personnel Committee. As such, he was to present to the Board resolutions to be acted upon involving personnel.

On July 21, 1998, Mr. Sipos' wife was appointed to the position of eleven-month high school secretary at a salary of $26,529.33 effective August 1, 1998. Mr. Sipos made the motion to pass the personnel committee resolutions that included her appointment. The vote was eight ayes and one "excused" which was Mr. Sipos. At the January 19, 1999 meeting of the Board, Mrs. Sipos was appointed to the position of twelve-month child study team secretary at a salary of $33,893.12 effective January 20, 1999. Mr. Sipos again made the motion to pass the personnel committee resolutions that included the appointment of Mrs. Sipos. The vote was five ayes, one "excused" (Mr. Sipos) and three absent. Mrs. Sipos' salary thus increased by $7,364.00 or 27.7%.

Although he was Chairperson of the Personnel Committee, there is no information to indicate that Mr. Sipos participated in discussions or involved himself with the decision to hire his wife. He either did not attend meetings at which the positions were discussed or stepped out of the room during those particular discussions. Mr. Sipos did not participate in interviews with the applicants for the positions that his wife obtained and did not discuss the qualifications of his wife for the appointments that she received.

Counsel for Mr. Sipos agrees with the facts set forth above, except that Mr. Sipos wishes to stress that he moved the resolutions of the Personnel Committee en masse and excused himself from the vote. Therefore, he did not believe that he violated the Act.

ANALYSIS

The Commission found probable cause on the charge that Mr. Sipos' conduct when he made two motions to pass resolutions that resulted in the appointment of his wife to two positions with the Board violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c). It provides:

> No school official shall act in his official capacity in any matter in which he, a member of his immediate family, or a business organization in which he holds an interest, has a direct or indirect financial involvement that might reasonably be expected to impair his objectivity or independence of judgment. No school official shall act in his official capacity in any matter where he or a member of his immediate family has a personal involvement that is or creates some benefit to the school official or member of his immediate family.

Mr. Sipos argues that because the Commission found that he did not use his position to secure unwarranted privileges for his wife in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b), it must similarly find that he did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c). The Commission disagrees.

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) prohibits acting in one's official capacity in any matter in which he or his spouse has a financial involvement that might reasonably be expected to impair his objectivity. There is no question that Mr. Sipos and his wife had a financial involvement in the two positions to which his wife was appointed. Clearly, the employment of one's spouse is a matter that might reasonably be expected to impair one's objectivity. Therefore, the only question remaining is whether Mr. Sipos acted in his official capacity. Making a motion that places a matter before the board for its vote is the way board business is conducted. Without the initial motion, no business takes place. Therefore, Mr. Sipos' moving the resolutions to hire his spouse on two instances was clearly acting in his official capacity. Pursuant to the Act, it is of no moment that he moved all the personnel committee recommendations or that he moved them en masse. The only question is whether Mr. Sipos acted in his official capacity, which he clearly did.

The Commission rejects the argument that it has to find that Mr. Sipos was trying to secure unwarranted privileges or employment for his wife in order to find a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c). The two provisions are separate and require different evidence. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) does not require that the Commission show that a school official acted with a motive to secure employment for someone who does not deserve it. Rather, subsection c requires only a showing that the school official took official action as a Board member in a matter in which he had a financial involvement in which his objectivity may be impaired. The Commission finds that Mr. Sipos took such action.

In finding a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c), the Commission is also mindful of the Legislature's purpose set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22(a), which provides:

> In our representative form of government it is essential that the conduct of members of local boards of education and local school administrators hold the respect and confidence of the people. These board members and administrators must avoid conduct which is in violation of their public trust or which creates a justifiable impression among the public that such trust is being violated.

In this case, the Commission is concerned that Mr. Sipos actions created a justifiable impression that the public trust was violated. Here, Mr. Sipos became a board member in April 1997, became Chair of the Personnel Committee and then moved the resolution to appoint his wife in July 1998. The fact that the personnel committee resolutions were moved en masse contributes to the public's feeling that the Board is attempting to limit the amount of information that it receives. The public would have a justifiable impression that Mr. Sipos was involved with the appointment of his wife when he serves as Chair of the Personnel Committee and then places the appointments before the Board for their consideration. While the Commission does not find a violation solely on N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22(a), the Commission believes that its conclusion that Mr. Sipos violated the N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the Act is more than adequately supported by the Legislature's stated purpose.

DECISION

For the foregoing reasons, the Commission finds that respondent Alexander Sipos violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act. It now recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a penalty of censure.

In determining the penalty to recommend to the Commissioner of Education, the Commission considered that Mr. Sipos had been serving on the Board for more than a year at the time he made the motion, therefore he should have attended new board member training by that time. Nevertheless, the Commission finds it credible that he did not know that he would violate the Act by moving the Personnel Committee recommendations that included his wife since he abstained from the votes. Therefore, the Commission finds that the appropriate penalty that suits the offense, but informs Mr. Sipos and the other board members that they must not act in their official capacity in any manner concerning matters involving the hiring of their family members, is a censure.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, the respondent may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and Mrs. Kelly.

IN THE MATTER OF ALEXANDER SIPOS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
GARFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	DECISION
BERGEN COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission have been reviewed. Initially, the Commissioner emphasizes that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), the Commission's determination as to violation of the Act is not reviewable by him. Only the School Ethics Commission may determine whether a violation of the School Ethics Act has occurred, and the Commissioner's jurisdiction is limited to reviewing the sanction to be imposed following a finding of such a violation by the School Ethics Commission. Therefore, this decision is restricted solely to a review of the Commission's recommended penalty.

Exceptions with respect to the Commission's recommended penalty were submitted on behalf of Mr. Sipos.[1] N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.1. Counsel for Mr. Sipos urged the Commissioner's leniency, arguing:

> Because this is a case of first impression, and because Mr. Sipos was cognizant of what the existing law states with respect to conduct involving employment of a spouse, it is respectfully requested that you consider applying any sanctions prospectively or, alternatively, levy the most lenient censure. Mr. Sipos had no intent to violate the School Ethics Law and, in fact, he took every step that he thought necessary to not be in violation of the School Ethics Law. (Sipos' Exceptions at 5)

[1] Complainant Sheila Kelly submitted comments to the Commission's decision by letter dated June 30, 2000. However, even assuming such comments were timely filed, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-1.1 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, Ms. Kelly is not a party to the within matter so as to provide her with the requisite standing to file written exceptions to the Commission's decision.

Upon thorough review of the full record in this matter, the Commissioner determines to accept the Commission's recommendation that censure is the appropriate penalty in this matter for the reasons expressed in the Commission's decision.

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Alexander Sipos be censured as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.[2]

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RAMAPO-INDIAN HILLS REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BERGEN COUNTY VOCATIONAL TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, Board of Education of the Ramapo-Indian Hills Regional High School District, challenges the legal basis for the operation of certain magnet schools (designated Academies) by the Bergen County Vocational Technical School District. Petitioner seeks a determination that it is not legally obligated to pay tuition for its resident students enrolled in the Academies operated by respondent because the Academies are not approved by the Commissioner of Education, and because operation of the Academies is contrary to the Carl D. Perkins Vocational & Applied Technology Act. Alternatively, petitioner seeks a determination that it is not liable for tuition because it operates a program that is at least comparable to that offered by respondent.

The ALJ, in granting respondent's motion for summary decision, determined that petitioner is responsible to pay tuition for its students attending respondent's Academies. The ALJ rejected the argument that the Academies were not approved by the Department and concluded that the programs offered therein are vocational within the meaning of the Perkins Act. Finally, the ALJ rejected petitioner's argument that it is not liable for tuition for resident students because it operates a comparable program in its schools.

The Commissioner affirmed in part and modified in part the decision of the ALJ. The Commissioner affirmed the determination that the Academies are approved pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:43-8.2. The Commissioner also affirmed the determination that the Academies conform with State and Federal definitions of "vocational education." In addition, the Commissioner reversed the determination of the ALJ that the "comparable program" threshold requirement in the regulations, which permits boards of education to decline to pay tuition for students to attend a program in another district that is identical or comparable to a program offered in the resident district, is contrary to the enabling statute. Finally, the Commissioner determined that petitioner's programs were not comparable to the programs provided in respondent's Academies and affirmed the ALJ's grant of summary decision.

BEFORE KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of the Case

This is a challenge by a regional high-school district to the legality of certain magnet schools, designated "Academies," operated by a county vocational school district. Petitioner Board of Education of the Ramapo-Indian Hills Regional High School District ("Ramapo-Indian Hills") seeks a declaration that it has no legal obligation to pay tuition or related costs for resident students enrolled in any Academy operated by respondent Bergen County Vocational-Technical School District ("Bergen Vo-Tech"). Basically, petitioner alleges that Bergen County Vo-Tech has failed to obtain the approval of its programs by Commissioner of Education, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:54-24, and that operation of these schools contravenes the provisions of the Carl D. Perkins Vocational & Applied Technology Act ("Perkins Act"), 20 U.S.C.S. §§2301 to 2471. Alternatively, if the legality of the Academies is upheld, petitioner contends that it is not liable for tuition because, as provided by N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.11, it offers a program at least comparable to that offered by Bergen Vo-Tech. The parties have filed cross-motions for summary decision on the merits.

Procedural History

Ramapo-Indian Hills filed its petition with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") on January 20, 1999. Bergen Vo-Tech filed its answer on February 16, 1999. Subsequently, on March 15, 1999, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case.

On March 1, 2000, Bergen Vo-Tech filed a motion for summary decision, together with supporting certification, statement of undisputed facts and brief. That same date, Ramapo-Indian Hills filed a cross-motion for summary decision, with brief. Thereafter, on March 16, 2000, the parties filed opposing papers, including additional certifications. Both parties filed replies by March 23, 2000. The OAL heard oral argument on March 30, 2000.

Findings of Fact

All relevant facts are uncontested and may be derived from the pleadings, certifications and attached exhibits, and admissions made during oral argument. For purposes of these motions, I FIND the following undisputed facts:

Ramapo-Indian Hills is a limited-purpose regional school district serving secondary school students residing in the municipalities of Franklin Lakes, Oakland, and Wyckoff, New Jersey.[1] It operates two high schools, Ramapo High School located in Franklin Lakes and Indian Hills High School located in Oakland, New Jersey. Facilities operated by Ramapo-Indian Hills are "comprehensive" high schools providing regular education courses consistent with state core curricular standards, college preparatory courses, special education services, and extracurricular activities. As part of its instructional program, Ramapo-Indian Hills offers two specialized pre-collegiate programs entitled the University Program for Science, Mathematics & Research and the University Program for International Studies & Business (collectively "University Programs").

Petitioner does not maintain a separate vocational school. However, it offers several courses in subjects traditionally regarded as vocational, such as drafting, metal and power technology, wood technology, and business studies. The Directory of Verified Occupational Educational Programs, revised 1995, ("Directory").[2] shows that Ramapo-Indian Hills has only one vocational program approved by the Commissioner, namely "accounting technician," CIP No. 520302.[3]

[1] N.J.S.A. 18A:13-1 to 81 permits establishment of a limited-purpose regional school district authorized to provide one or more levels of educational instruction, including high school, within a designated territory.

[2] The excerpt of the Directory applicable to Bergen County is part of the record in this matter because both sides appended it to their moving papers. Moreover, it is readily available to the general public at the New Jersey Department of Education's website. http://www.state.nj.us/njded/voc/pubvoc.xls

[3] The N.J. Department of Education uses the Classification of Instructional Programs ("CIP") director to categorize the program and to assign a CIP number to the program. The CIP code process enables all states to used standardized categories for reporting program information to the U.S. Department of Education.

Bergen Vo-Tech is a county vocational school district with offices in Paramus, New Jersey.[4] Among its educational programs, Bergen Vo-Tech offers four specialized programs known as the Academy for Medical Science and Technology ("AMST"), the Academy for Business and Computer Technology ("ABCT"), the Academy for Engineering and Design Technology ("AEDT") and the Academy for the Advancement of Science and Technology ("AAST") (collectively, the "Academies").

Each of the Academies offers a four-year program designed to prepare high-school students for entry into a four-year college or university. Illustratively, the website for AMST emphasizes, "We are dedicated to learning in many different aspects of the medical field. This will help us when we go on to our course of study in college." http://www.bergen.org/AMST/about.html Likewise, the website for ABCT promotes that its students "receive the best education and learning environment available" and that "[t]hese selected, elite young women and men learn computer and business skills early in their high school years and move on to the most prestigious colleges in the nation." http://www.bergen.org/ABCT/index.html Respondent's answers to interrogatories reflect that one-hundred percent of the graduates of the AAST program (the only Academy yet to have a graduating senior class), went on to a four-year college or university, including some of the top institutions of higher learning in the country.

Some seventy-five programs taught at Bergen Vo-Tech are approved by the Commissioner and listed in the official Directory. Dr. Thomas A. Henry, Director of the Office of School-to-Career and College Initiatives at the New Jersey Department of Education ("Department"), clarified that presently the Department "does not approve or regulate the format by which an approved vocational program is offered."[5] (Emphasis [4] N.J.S.A. 18A:54-12 authorizes the county board of chosen freeholders to establish county vocational schools.

[5] Dr. Henry explained that, "The term format refers to either the administrative structure of the program (i.e. magnet school, career academy, traditional program) or the intended audience (i.e. secondary, postsecondary, special needs). He added that, "Although magnet schools and career academies have been operating for nearly 100 years in this country, they are becoming increasingly popular because of their demonstrated success in student achievement."

added). However, he emphasized that, "every magnet school and career academy must be based on an approved vocational program." (Emphasis added). With regard to Bergen Vo-Tech, Dr. Henry identified the following approved vocational programs "as the foundations for the academies:"

Drafting CIP 480101	Academy for the Advancement of Science and Technology
Electrical/Electronics Engineering Technology CIP 15030	Academy for Engineering and Design Technology
Computer Applications CIP 521201	Academy for Business and Computer Technology
Allied Health CIP 511614	Academy for Medical Science and Technology

In its newsletter, Ramapo-Indian Hills recognizes that, "Education has changed dramatically in the last decade alone, with new standards, technology and curricular advances challenging our students to perform at a higher level." Currently, several students residing within the Ramapo-Indian Hills School District attend one of the Academies run by Bergen County Vo-Tech. Petitioner anticipates that additional students residing within its district will seek enrollment in Academy programs for the upcoming academic year.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that Ramapo-Indian Hills is obligated by statute to pay tuition and related costs for resident students attending the Academies operated by Bergen Vo-Tech.

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." In order to defeat a summary-decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing." Use of the summary procedure is aimed at "the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial." Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Wesfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954).

Recently, the New Jersey Supreme Court encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' [citation omitted], the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Brill, at 540. Both parties agree that the legal issues in this case are ripe for disposition on the papers.

N.J.S.A. 18A:54-20-1(a) provides, in pertinent part, that:

> The board of education of each school district or regional school district in any county in which there is a county vocational school district shall send to any of the schools of the county vocational school district each pupil who resides in the school district or regional school district and who has applied for admission to and has been accepted for attendance at any of the schools of the county vocational school district. The board of education shall pay tuition for each of these pupils to the county vocational school district[.] (Emphasis Added).

New Jersey statutes broadly define "vocational education" to include any education intended "(a) to fit for profitable employment; (b) to provide training which is supplemental to the daily employment; or (c) to fit for homemaking, according to the state plan for vocational education adopted by the state board." N.J.S.A. 18A:54-1.

Such language is sufficiently expansive to cover magnet schools of the type involved here. Rejecting the argument that magnet schools are elite, quasi-private academic institutions falling outside the scope of vocational education, the Commissioner declared that "vocational education encompasses a range of levels from rudimentary to highly advanced." M.R. v. Bd. of Educ. of Pompton Lakes, CD#386-97, (Comm'r July 29, 1997) (slip op. at 6.), remanded on other grounds, SB#386-97 (State Bd. Dec. 3, 1997). www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.htmf

In arriving at this conclusion, the Commissioner relied on state regulations which enunciate that vocational instruction does not deal exclusively with immediate employment opportunities, but "may also prepare individuals for enrollment in advanced or highly skilled postsecondary vocational and/or technical education programs." N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.3(a). Any suggestion that schools espousing rigorous academic standards and high-level preparation are incompatible with the concept of vocational education "ignores the changing and ever more sophisticated needs of today's workplace, as well as the wisdom of the Legislature in recognizing that the State plan for vocational education must remain fluid in response to this continual evolution." Pompton Lakes, at 6.

With specific mention of the AEDT and ABCT operated by Bergen County Vo-Tech, the Commissioner noted that such schools "are, in actuality, advanced-level vocational schools falling well within the purview of the State's vocational educational delivery system." Hence, the Commissioner determined that, "Within that system, they effectively function as career academies, magnet schools offering rigorous, highly structured programs linking college-level academies to advanced preparation in specified vocational/technical fields (in this instance, Engineering and Design Technology, and Business and Computer Technology.)" Pompton Lakes, at 6.

Nevertheless, Ramapo-Indian Hills contends that it does not have to pay for attendance of its resident students at the Academies because respondent's schools are not approved by the Department as required by state law. N.J.S.A. 18A:54-24 mandates that "[t]he courses of study to be pursued in every county vocational school, and all changes therein" shall be approved by the Commissioner, with the advice and consent of the State Board. Significantly, this statutory directive requires approval of particular "courses of study" rather than any particular kind of school. In the Department's own words, approval is given to the content of "programs" and not to the "format" or "administrative structure" chosen by a county vocational school to implement its function. Consequently, the Academies operated by Bergen Vo-Tech do not require separate approval. Only programs taught in such schools must be approved.

Before a program can obtain the required approval, it must successfully navigate a multi-layered review process, which includes: recommendations from the Workforce Investment Board to eliminate unnecessary duplication of programs and to foster a unified delivery system; recommendation by the County Superintendent of Schools; consideration of occupational supply and demand needs by the Vocational Education Program Review Panel, and final approval by the Director of the Office of School-to-Career and College Initiatives. N.J.A.C. 6:43-8.2.

When a program receives approval, it is listed in the official Directory published by the Department. Several Commissioner's decisions have held that listing of a course in the Directory reflects "its status as a [Department] approved trade and industrial program." See, e.g., Bd. of Educ. of Gloucester Cty. Instit. Of Tech., Initial Decision, EDU 10120-98 (Oct. 28, 1999), modified Final Decision (Comm'r Dec. 16, 1999) (slip op. at 13) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html, upholding an ALJ ruling that, "There is no reason to look behind this approval." Accord, D.F. v. Bd. of Educ. of Roselle Park, EDU 5903-98 Initial Decision (May 24, 1999) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html), adopted Final Decision (Comm'r July 9, 1999) www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.htmf, wherein the Commissioner examined the list of approved programs to determine whether the local school district offered a comparable program to that offered by the county vocational school.

Continued viability of these holdings, however, has been put into question by a recent remand order from the State Board critical of the practice of taking official notice of the Directory without prior notification to the parties.[6] K.B. v. Bd. of Ed. of Rancocas Valley Reg. High Sch. Dist., EDU 6974-97, Initial Decision (Nov. 12, 1997)(slip op. at 8), adopted (Comm'r Dec. 29, 1997), remanded (St. Bd. March 2000) http://www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.html Of course, that problem does not arise here because both parties incorporated relevant portions of the Directory in their moving papers. More importantly, however, the State Board went on to hypothesize that:

> [E]ven if the Commissioner had followed the required procedure for taking official notice of the fact that the GCIT program was listed in the Department's Directory of Verified Occupational Education Programs, it was not proper for him to construe such inclusion as providing conclusive proof that the program satisfied the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:54-1 et seq. The record before us is devoid of any information regarding the procedure for inclusion of a program in the Directory during the period relevant to this matter. Nor is there any indication of the basis for the determination to include the GCIT performing arts program or the standard applied in determining to include that program.

Unlike Rancocas, the regulatory process for inclusion of Bergen Vo-Tech's programs is spread on the record and the head of the responsible office within the Department has corroborated that the Academies' programs have received the Department's blessings. Insofar as Ramapo-Indian Hills alleges that Bergen Vo-Tech's programs lack the necessary Department approvals, that assertion is factually insupportable and legally incorrect.

Instead, petitioner appears to be mounting a collateral attack on the underlying validity of the approval given to these particular programs. Essentially, Ramapo-Indian Hills is asking an administrative law judge to micromanage the workings of the Department of Education and intrude into the exercise of its vested discretionary authority. Courts will abstain from interference with regulatory and administrative judgments of professionals in the field of public education "unless those judgments are

[6] N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.2 requires that a judge "shall disclose the basis for taking official notice and give the parties a reasonable opportunity to contest the material so noticed."

palpably arbitrary or depart from governing law." Dennery v. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 626, 643 (1993). Ramapo-Indian Hills, however, does not allege that the Commissioner or his representatives acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably, but merely advocates a narrower view of what constitutes "vocational education."

Not every agency action requires the full trappings of an administrative hearing, with accompanying rights to discovery, subpoena power and cross-examination. Illustratively, a trial-type hearing is unnecessary in order for the Commissioner to evaluate a cap waiver application, Bd. of Educ. of East Windsor Reg. Sch. Dist. v. State Bd. of Educ., 172 N.J. Super. 547(App. Div. 1980) or for the Department of Community Affairs to review fees established by local ordinance, Toys R Us v. Twp. of Mt. Olive, 300 N.J. Super. 585 (App. Div. 1997) or for the Department of Transportation to place a traffic signal. Cedar Grove v. Sheridan, 209 N.J. Super. 267 (App. Div. 1986). See, S. Lefelt, New Jersey Administrative Law and Practice §120 (Supp. 1999). Facts involved in resolutions of that type have sometimes been designated as "legislative." Cunningham v. Dep't of Civil Service, 69 N.J. 13, 22 (1975). Disputes over policy questions "need not be resolved through trial procedure even if the decision is made in part on the basis of broad and general facts of the kind that contribute to the determination of a question of policy." 2 Davis, Administrative Law Treatise, §12:3 (2d ed. 1979).

Administrative agencies possess the ability to be flexible and responsive to changing conditions. This flexibility includes the ability to select those procedures most appropriate to enable the agency to implement legislative policy. Texter v. Human Services Dep't, 88 N.J. 376, 385 (1982). If a full-blown administrative hearing were required whenever a school district does not want to pay its bill, the result will tend to stifle educational innovation and turn every routine billing dispute into a detailed programmatic review. Surely parents of students who attend county vocational schools should be able to rely on the government seal of approval and not be personally liable for tuition costs.

Next, Ramapo-Indian Hills argues that it is not obligated to pay for resident students' enrollment in the Academies because the programs "are not vocational within the meaning of the Perkins Act." Previously, in the Pompton Lakes case, the State Board granted the Commissioner's motion to participate in a pending case and to remand the matter to the OAL for consideration of the identical issue apparently raised for the first time on appeal. Eventually, however, Pompton Lakes was resolved by settlement between the parties so that the Perkins issue was never addressed. M.R. v. Bd. of Educ. of Pompton Lakes, EDU 1084-98 Decision on Remand (Comm'r Oct. 19, 1998) http://www.state.nj.us/njded/legal/index.html.

Initially, it should be noted that the underlying premise of petitioner's argument is erroneous. Assuming that federal funds available under the Perkins Act cannot be legally used to finance the Academies' programs, it would not necessarily follow that Ramapo-Indian Hills should be relieved of its independent obligation under state law to contribute its appropriate share of tuition costs. Instead, it would mean that Bergen Vo-Tech might be subject to a future accounting by government auditors and be required to reimburse the federal government for any misspent money. Thus, even if petitioner is right on this point, it would not help win the present case.

Ramapo-Indian Hills posits its legal analysis on an interpretation of the language of the Perkins Act. In the definitional section, 20 U.S.C.A §2302(29), the term "vocational and technical education" means organized educational activities that:

> (A) offer a sequence of courses that provides individuals with the academic and technical knowledge and skills the individuals need to prepare for further education and for careers (other than careers requiring a baccalaureate, master's, or doctoral degree) in current or emerging employment sectors; and (B) include competency-based applied learning that contributes to the academic knowledge, higher-order reasoning and problem-solving skills, work attitudes, general employability skills, technical skills, and occupation-specific skills, of an individual.

Seizing on the phrase "other than careers requiring a baccalaureate, master's or doctoral degree, " Ramapo-Indian Hills emphasizes that the definition does not make college education a career goal. Inquiry into the meaning of a law begins by looking to the plain language of the statute itself. When the language is clear, no further inquiry is necessary unless applying the plain language leads to an absurd result. In re Resorts International, Inc., 181 F. 3d 505 (3d Cir. 1999). On its face, the highlighted language in the Act only modifies "careers" and does not similarly limit provision of academic and technical knowledge needed for "further education." Indeed, Congress explicitly intended Perkins money to be used for education that contributes to "academic knowledge, higher-order reasoning and problem-solving skills."

Other statutory sections cited by petitioner do not help its argument. The primary purpose of the Perkins Act is "to make the United States more competitive in the world economy by developing more fully the academic and occupational skills of all segments of the population." To achieve that purpose, the Act envisions "concentrating resources on improving educational programs leading to academic and occupational skill competencies needed to work in a technologically advanced society." 20 U.S.C.A §2301. Because "area vocational and technical school" is defined in terms of educational services for "individuals who are available for study in preparation for entering the labor market," 20 U.S.C.A. §2302(3)(A) and (B), does not imply that Congress sought to deprive such students of enhanced preparation necessary to prosper in today's technologically sophisticated climate. Requiring funds for secondary-school programs to be utilized for programs that "link" secondary and postsecondary vocational and technical education displays an awareness on Congress' part of the importance of continuing education after graduation from high school. 20 U.S.C.A. §2355(b)(8).

Further support for an expansive reading of the federal legislation comes from the State Plan for Vocational-Technical Education FY 2000-2004 ("State Plan"), which must comport with the Perkins Act and be approved by the United States Department of Education.[7] 20 U.S.C.A. §§2321 to 2328. This five-year plan reflects New Jersey's vision for vocational education. Funds awarded under the Perkins Act are to be used to improve the skills of vocational students by "integration of academics with vocational and technical education programs" and by developing "a coherent sequence of courses to ensure learning in the core academic and vocational and technical subjects." State Plan, §2.2 (at 24.) Increased reliance on technology will provide students "with the academic, and vocational and technical skills that lead to entry into the high technology and communications field." Ibid. Vocational-technical courses are geared to develop competencies for various endeavors including "further education." State Plan, §2.3 (at 26). Programs must include "occupationally specific skill training and integrated applied academic instruction" and must not be remedial in nature or calculated to repair deficiencies in basic skills. State Plan, §2.3 (at 27). Programs funded under the Perkins Act "will prepare students either for entry into high-skill, high-wage jobs in current and emerging occupations or for opportunities in postsecondary education[.]" State Plan, §2.5 (at 34.) There is no basis for Ramapo-Indian Hills' assertion that vocational training may not prepare high school students for entry into college.

Ramapo-Indian Hills' major concern is that allowing vocational schools to offer college-preparatory courses would "compete, supplant and/or conflict with the role of the traditional public secondary school." At oral argument, petitioner's counsel complained that county vocational schools have "invaded" the province reserved to local school districts. We have come full circle when vocational schools, long regarded as a refuge for less academically-talented students, are now accused of luring away the best and the brightest by offering greater educational opportunities. Implicitly, Ramapo-Indian Hills has no objection to its students attending Bergen Vo-Tech, provided that the quality of education at vocational school is inferior to its own. Competition in excellence, however, is a healthy development likely to promote improvement in educational quality in both regular and vocational schools. Children will benefit if they and their parents are afforded some choice in deciding which of the two types of settings will best equip them to become useful and productive citizens.

Lastly, Ramapo-Indian Hills claims that it is not obligated to pay for student enrollment at the Academies by virtue of N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.11(a), under which students shall be admitted to county vocational programs offered "so long as the resident district board of education does not offer a comparable type of program." Insisting that its University Programs are "comparable" to those offered at the Academies, Ramapo-Indian Hills demands a course-by-course comparison to ascertain whether it fits within the exemption. This portion of the regulation, however, conflicts with the governing statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:54-20.1(a), which does not recognize an exception for "comparable programs." Under the statute, the payment obligation applies to all local or regional school districts, except for those "maintaining a vocational school or schools pursuant to article 2 of chapter 54 of Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes."[8]. Thus, the regulation purports to enlarge the category of districts that do not have to pay tuition beyond the scope contemplated by the Legislature.

To the extent that the regulation impermissibly exceeds the clear statutory language, it must yield to the overriding legislative policy. Clear legislative intent cannot be trumped by countervailing administrative practice. Turnpike Auth. v. ASFME, Council 73, 150 N.J. 331, 351 (1997). Administrative regulations "cannot alter the terms of a legislative enactment or frustrate the policy embodied in the statute." N.J. Chamber of Commerce v. N.J. Election Law Enforcement Comm'n, 82 N.J. 57, 82 (1980). An administrative regulation "must be within the fair contemplation of the delegation of the enabling statute." N.J. Guild of Hearing Aid Dispensers v. Long, 75 N.J. 561-562 (1978). When the rule of an administrative agency contravenes the statute which created it, the rule lacks legal efficacy. In re the Freshwater Wetlands Protection Act Rules, 238 N.J. Super. 515, 526 (App. Div. 1989).

Here Ramapo-Indian Hills acknowledges that it has not "establish[ed] and maintain[ed]" a vocational school, which it would be permitted to do under N.J.S.A.

[8] N.J.S.A. 18A:54-5 to 10.4.

18A:54-6.[9] Since it does not maintain its own vocational school, Ramapo-Indian Hills is bound as a matter of law to pay tuition for its resident students enrolled in a county vocational school.

Order

It is ORDERED that Bergen Vo-Tech's motion for summary decision is granted and that Ramapo-Indian Hills pay all past, present and future tuition and related costs for all its resident students attending the Academies.

And it is further ORDERED that Ramapo-Indian Hills' cross-motion for summary decision is denied.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

[9] Petitioner correctly points out that it is not required to obtain state approval of its vocational program under N.J.S.A. !8A:54-24 because it "neither operates, nor has ever claimed to operate[,] a county vocational school."

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RAMAPO-INDIAN HILLS REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BERGEN COUNTY VOCATIONAL TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions were submitted in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner excepts to the ALJ's finding that respondent's Academy programs are, in fact, approved programs because these Academies were "founded upon" other approved vocational programs. Petitioner maintains that both statute and regulation require that "each and every course of study offered in a vocational school must be approved by the Commissioner and the State Board of Education ." (emphasis in text) (Petitioner's Exceptions at 5) In this connection, petitioner contends that the ALJ failed to conduct a "proper inquiry" into whether the respondent's academy programs satisfy the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:54-1 et seq.; that is, petitioner seeks "a factual hearing to determine whether the Academies' programs have been approved and, if so, the standard that was applied in reaching that determination." (Id. at 9) Petitioner asserts that the ALJ's conclusion in this regard does not satisfy the State Board's recent remand decision in K.B. & G.C.I.T. v. Bd. of Ed. of Rancocas Valley Reg. H.S. District, supra. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 10)

Petitioner further challenges the ALJ's legal conclusion that the Academies are "vocational," within the meaning of both State and Federal law. For the reasons expressed in its prior submissions before the ALJ, petitioner maintains that the curricula and course offerings available in the Academies do not reflect vocational programs. While petitioner does not dispute that the definition of vocational education must remain flexible, "it does dispute that the concept of vocational education should be read so expansively that there is essentially no difference between a vocational education and a 'regular' educational program." (Id. at 13)

Finally, petitioner excepts to the ALJ's finding that N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.11 contravenes the plain meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:54-20.1, thereby rendering the regulation null and void. (Id. at 20) Rather, petitioner argues that the regulation in question is a "logical extension of N.J.S.A. 18A:54-20.1 and the two enactments must be read in pari materia." (Ibid.) Petitioner acknowledges the Supreme Court's substantial deference to regulations adopted by administrative agencies, based on the Court's recognition that:

> the "basic purpose of establishing agencies to consider and promulgate rules is to delegate the primary authority of implementing policy in a specialized area to governmental bodies with staff, resources and expertise to understand and solve those specialized problems." (Id., citing In re Amendment of N.J.A.C. 8:31B-3.31, 119 N.J. 531, 543-44 (1990) (which cites to Bergen Pines Hosp. v. Department of Human Servs., 96 N.J. 456, 474 (1984))

Moreover, petitioner asserts that the ALJ overlooked M.R. v. Pompton Lakes, supra, wherein the Commissioner read the pertinent statute and code together, as establishing a statewide procedure for providing vocational education to students. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 21)

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner determines to affirm in part, and reverse in part, the Initial Decision of the ALJ. At the outset, the Commissioner concurs that this matter is ripe for summary decision and, accordingly, accepts the factual findings of the ALJ. (Initial Decision at 3-5)

The Commissioner next affirms, for the reasons expressed in the Initial Decision, that the programs operated by respondent's academies have been approved, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:43-8.2. In so doing, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ's discussion satisfies the State Board's directive in K.B., supra, to bring to the record "information regarding the procedure for inclusion of a program in the Directory [of Verified Occupational Educational Programs] ." (Id. at 9)

Additionally, for the reasons well-articulated by the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that the Academy programs at issue herein satisfy State and Federal definitions of "vocational education,"[1] and do not contravene either the expressed language or the intent of current vocational education mandates. Specifically, with respect to Federal enactments, as the ALJ aptly notes:

> The primary purpose of the Perkins Act is "to make the United States more competitive in the work economy by developing more fully the academic and occupational skills of all segments of the population." To achieve that purpose, the Act envisions "concentrating resources on improving educational programs leading to academic and occupational skill competencies needed to work in a technologically advanced society." 20 U.S.C.A. section 2301. (Initial Decision at 12)

Finally, the Commissioner rejects the ALJ's finding that N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.11(a) contravenes its enabling statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:54-20.1(a). In this connection, the Commissioner underscores that, read together, [1] See also M.R. v. Pompton Lakes, supra, for discussion regarding State vocational education law and regulations.

> these enactments clearly establish a statewide delivery system for vocational education that ensures pupil access to such education through a tiered structure that first directs pupils to the local or regional district, then to the county district if the local district does not offer a comparable type of program, and then to schools statewide, to the extent that facilities permit and students qualify, if a comparable type of program is unavailable within the county district. M.R. v. Pompton Lakes, supra, slip op. at 5.

The Commissioner finds that the "comparable program" threshold requirement, as adopted by the State Board of Education, provides a framework which strikes a workable balance between a student's right to access vocational education and the State's legitimate interest in avoiding duplication of programs and costs. As petitioner notes, it would be illogical to compel a local board "to pay for its students' enrollment in an academy or magnet school program, irrespective of whether the school district offers a comparable program, or even an identical program." (Petitioner's Exceptions at 22)[2]

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the ALJ is affirmed in part, and reversed in part, as set forth herein. Respondent's Motion for Summary Decision is granted. Petitioner is directed to remit tuition costs to respondent for its resident students attending the Academies.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: JUL 19 2000

Date of Mailing: JUL 19 2000

[2] Having so found, the Commissioner further notes that the within record contains the Department's Directory of Verified Occupational Educational Programs, revised 1995 (Initial Decision at 3, footnote 2) which does not include petitioner's University Programs. (Ibid.) As such, petitioner's assertion that it offers a "comparable program" to that of the respondent must be rejected, and it cannot invoke N.J.A.C. 6:43-3.11(a) to prevent its otherwise qualified and eligible students from attending respondent's Academies.

[3] This decision, as the Commissioner's final determination, may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq., within 30 days of its filing. Commissioner decisions are deemed filed three days after the date of mailing to the parties.

SYNOPSIS

This is an appeal of a decision of the NJSIAA to suspend petitioner, Barry Staton, from coaching track and field for the 1999-2000 Spring track season for pulling his team from a track competition on April 27, 1999 prior to its completion. Specifically, Staton was found to have failed to field competitors in three events scheduled after the 200 meter race was completed because of his dissatisfaction with the officiating in that race. The NJSIAA, after reviewing the transcripts of the hearing before the Cape-Atlantic League (CAL) and the arguments of the parties, determined to uphold the determination of CAL to suspend Staton for the 1999-2000 Spring track season for violating its sportsmanship rule.

Staton argues on appeal that the record does not support a determination that he failed to permit his team to complete the track meet on April 29, 1999, arguing instead, that his determination not to filed athletes in certain events does not constitute a failure complete the track meet. In this regard, Staton argues that he permitted an athlete to compete in the high jump competition, which event concluded after the 200 meter race. As such, petitioner argues that he cannot be held to have violated NJSIAA's sportsmanship rule.

The Commissioner affirmed the determination of the NJSIAA. The Commissioner determined that Staton received the full measure of due process to which he was entitled by the NJSIAA. The Commissioner also affirmed the NJSIAA's determination that Staton's failure to field athletes in several events at the April 27, 1999 track meet after completion of the 200 meter race because of his dissatisfaction with the officiating violated its sportsmanship rule, thus warranting his suspension for the 1999-2000 Spring track and field season. Finally, the Commissioner rejected petitioner's argument that, because he permitted an athlete to compete in the high jump competition, which event concluded after the 200 meter race, he did not fail to complete the competition. The Commissioner noted that the high jump competition began prior to the 200 meter race, and that Staton permitted the athlete to participate in order to facilitate his qualification for all-star status. As such, this argument provided no basis to reverse the determination of the NJSIAA as arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education by way of a Petition of Appeal filed on April 17, 2000, by petitioner Barry Staton (hereinafter "Staton"), a track and field coach at Pleasantville High School. Petitioner seeks a reversal of the decision of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (hereinafter "NJSIAA") Executive Committee, dated April 5, 2000, which affirmed the determination of that body's Controversies Committee, dated March 3, 2000, upholding the February 1, 2000 decision of the Cape-Atlantic League (hereinafter "CAL") Executive Committee. Such CAL decision declared that Staton had violated the CAL Constitution and by laws and NJSIAA rules by terminating an April 27, 1999 track meet against Bridgeton High School prematurely, and imposed a penalty of suspension on Staton for the 1999-2000 spring track season. Staton seeks a reversal of the NJSIAA Executive Committee decision as being arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, alleging that the facts and the record do not sustain a finding of premature termination of a meet.

On April 28, 2000, respondent NJSIAA filed its Answer to the Petition of Appeal, along with a listing, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.2(b), of the Statement of Items Comprising the Record on Appeal. On May 4, 2000, respondent CAL advised that its position with respect to petitioner's claims herein was identical to that of the NJSIAA and it, therefore, adopted the Answer filed by the NJSIAA as the CAL's responsive pleading in this matter. On May 11, 2000, Staton, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.3(a), submitted a brief in support of his position and copies of all items comprising the record which had been identified by the NJSIAA. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.3(b), both the NJSIAA and the CAL filed opposing briefs on May 24, 2000. Upon receipt of these submissions, the record in this matter was closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The record evidences the following relevant facts:

- The NJSIAA is a voluntary association of approximately 430 member schools, established pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3, which organizes high school athletics in New Jersey. Each member school adopts the rules and regulations of the NJSIAA as policies of its school's board of education.
- The CAL is a league of 23 public and parochial schools in Cumberland, Atlantic and Cape May counties. This league organizes competitions among these schools in accordance with a league constitution and bylaws approved by the NJSIAA.

- Delegation of authority between the NJSIAA and the leagues/conferences is delineated in the League/Conference Position Statement.[1] (1999-2000 NJSIAA Handbook at pp. 134-135)
- The Pleasantville and Bridgeton High Schools are members of both the CAL and the NJSIAA, and have adopted the rules and regulations of these organizations.
- On April 27, 1999, the male and female teams of Pleasantville and Bridgeton High Schools participated in a dual track meet.
- Following the conclusion of the men's 200m race, Coach Staton raised issues relating to the officiating of the race and made allegations of official misconduct. In so doing, Coach Staton threatened to withdraw his male athletes from the remaining events.
- Coach Staton subsequently pulled his athletes from competition in the shot-put, the 1600-meter relay and the 3200-meter run. Coach Staton allowed his high jumper to complete that event.
- Both the NJSIAA Bylaws and the NJSIAA rules governing Procedure before a game is terminated expressly prohibit a coach or school administrator from unilaterally withdrawing a team from an event which is in progress and vests meet or game officials with the sole authority to prematurely conclude an event.[2]

---

[1]Such provision encourages leagues and conferences to adopt disciplinary procedures through which infractions of good sportsmanship can be penalized, and specifies that the NJSIAA will not interfere with those disciplinary actions imposed by leagues/conferences unless the actions are arbitrary, capricious or in violation of the NJSIAA Constitution and Bylaws.

[2]NJSIAA Bylaws, Article IX, Sportsmanship, Section 2E (NJSIAA Handbook, 1999-2000 at p. 51) in pertinent part specifies:

> COACHES MUST BE CAUTIONED NOT TO REFUSE TO PLAY OR TO COMPLETE A GAME/MEET. SUCH DECISIONS ARE WITHIN THE JURISDICTION OF THE GAME/MEET OFFICIALS ONCE A GAME/MEET HAS STARTED, OR REST WITH HOME MANAGEMENT AND/OR TOURNAMENT DIRECTOR IF THE GAME/MEET HAS NOT STARTED. (emphasis in original)

The policy against improper termination of an event is further memorialized in the Procedure section of the NJSIAA Handbook wherein it states:

- On January 31, 2000, the CAL Executive Committee held a full hearing, where Staton was represented by counsel and a stenographic record was compiled, to consider testimony and evidence with respect to the allegation that Staton had improperly terminated the track and field contest.
- The CAL Executive Committee, in its decision issued on February 1, 2000, concluded that "Staton refused to participate, and indeed removed some athletes preparing to participate, in the remaining events as a result of his strongly expressed disagreement with several decisions made by the meet officials" in violation of NJSIAA Sportsmanship policy (Article IX, Section 2, E), the National Federation of High School Sports Code of Ethics (NFHS 1999 Track and Field Rules Book at p. 74)[3], and CAL Bylaws, Article X, Section 7-B.[4] (CAL Executive Committee decision at pp. 2-4) The CAL decision offered the following substantiation for its conclusion:

> Bridgeton Athletic Director Joe Blandino communicated, in writing, with the NJSIAA on 4/28/99, detailing the incident and his attempt to convince Coach Staton to finish the meet. In this letter, Mr. Blandino stated he warned Coach Staton that his actions could be in violation of NJSIAA and Cape-Atlantic League Rules and Regulations and that a report would be submitted. His

> (NJSIAA Handbook, 1999-2000 at p. 142, emphasis in original)

[3]This provision states "[t]he coach shall respect and support contest officials. The coach shall not indulge in conduct which would incite players or spectators against officials. Public criticism of officials or players is unethical." (CAL Executive Committee decision, at p. 3)

[4]This provision specifies that "[a]ny coach using profanity, obscene gestures, excessive harassment or any motions or actions that could be described as unsportsmanlike...may be subjected to Article X, Section 7-A." Article X, Section 7-A states "[a]fter a hearing, a coach may be censured or barred from the field of play during sanctioned play and/or the school employing him/her made subject to probation, suspension and/or fine where there is a definite indication that the school district is not fulfilling its responsibility for control of its athletic program." (CAL Executive Committee decision at p. 4) communication relates Coach Stanton's comments that his team was "cheated" by the officials and that he was not going to finish the meet. Mr. Blandino provided credible testimony at the hearing that was consistent with the findings in his report, which was written the day after the subject track meet. Mr. Blandino's testimony was supported and confirmed by testimony given by Will Barry, Head Coach Bridgeton Boys Track and Field, who testified he had his own discussion with Coach Staton, in which Coach Staton said his team was being cheated and that they were leaving. Coach Barry testified that he asked Coach Staton to reconsider leaving. Howard Furtek, Assistant Coach Bridgeton Boys Track and Field, testified that Coach Staton said directly to him that Pleasantville was being cheated and he was taking his team from the meet, and that he, (Furtek), attempted to convince Coach Staton to reconsider. In his testimony, Coach Staton did not deny stating to Coach Furtek that Pleasantville was being cheated.

The Press, April 28, 1999 article titled "Bridgeton boys post win after Pleasantville bolts", in which Coach Staton commented, "Beat me I can take it...Cheat me, I'd rather take my kids home," is consistent with Mr. Blandino's testimony and report and the testimonies of Coaches Barry and Furtek. The article additionally states that Pleasantville did not compete in the shot-put, 3200 meter run and 1600 meter relay. In his testimony, Coach Staton claimed that he did not speak directly to the newspaper reporter, even though he was directly quoted three times and referenced four times by the reporter.

[T]he testimony of Starter and Head Official Andrea Kuhar was consistent with the report she submitted to her assignor on May 1, 1999. Ms. Kuhar's testimony corroborated many of the details presented by Athletic Director Blandino including her knowledge of Coach Staton's disagreement with the results of the boys 200 meter race. She also testified that a member of her officiating staff informed her that the Pleasantville teams were boarding the busses prior to the start of the 3200 meter run. Ms. Kuhar additionally testified that the field official in charge of the shot-put, Tony Copare, informed her that the Pleasantville athletes had warmed-up for the event but were told, by their coach, to leave.

[T]he findings of the investigation conducted by the Pleasantville Board of Education, dated September 10, 1999, included the "Undisputable Material Facts" that "Following the conclusion of the men's 200m race, Coach Staton raised issues relating to the officiating of the race and made allegations of official misconduct.

> In doing so, Coach Staton threatened to withdraw the male athletes from the remaining events." (pg2,pp3). Additionally, the Board found that "The facts clearly establish that Coach Staton threatened to withdraw his male athletes from the meet and did in fact withdraw his entries from the 3200 and 1600m(sic) races.", (pg3, pp4) (CAL Executive Committee decision at pp. 2-3)

The CAL's decision discounted Staton's assertion that his action was taken out of concern for his players due to a "hostile environment" stating:

> Considerable testimony was provided by Coach Staton and his witnesses detailing alleged actions by Bridgeton fans in the stands and surrounding areas, creating what Coach Staton and the other Pleasantville High School witnesses referred to as a "hostile environment". The Committee members weighed the testimony carefully in relation to the charges brought against Coach Staton. While there was some consistency in the testimony offered by those witnesses, there was also significant conflicting testimony as to the location of the "hostility" and the degree of danger represented by the alleged actions of the fans. No witness reported the fan behavior to the meet site manager or to an official. The Committee felt it compelling that Coach Staton did not report any "hostile" behaviors to Athletic Director Blandino or to Head Official Kuhar, even though prior testimony demonstrated the opportunity to do so. While Coach Staton asserts he pulled his athletes off the track for protection, he allowed Fred Lemons to continue to compete in the high jump and allowed many of his athletes to stand in the area directly adjacent to the east side of the stadium, below the fans in the area some witnesses described as "hostile". Additionally, Coach Staton did not provide evidence that he immediately informed his athletic administration of the "hostile environment", and, indeed, did not present any such evidence until a Pleasantville Board meeting scheduled on May 18, 1999, eight days after receiving a notice of suspension, from Pleasantville Interim Superintendent Avrami, for the remainder of the track and field season, effective May 10, 1999. (CAL Executive Committee decision at p. 3)

Finally, the Committee's decision determined that "[t]he fact that Coach Staton allowed an athlete to complete an event he had already entered before the coach pulled his team, does not change the stated intent of Coach Staton's actions." (Ibid.)

- The CAL Executive Committee's decision imposed a penalty of suspension for the 2000 Spring Track and Field season on Coach Staton. (Id. at p. 4)
- On February 9, 2000, NJSIAA's Controversies Committee reviewed the full record and concluded that the CAL had acted properly and decided not to overturn the the CAL's decision.[5] (NJSIAA Answer, Second Affirmative Defense, at p. 3) It further separately determined that the imposition of a one-season suspension was not arbitrary or capricious noting that another CAL coach had previously been terminated for a similar violation. (March 3, 2000 decision of the NJSIAA Controversies Committee at p. 2)
- On April 5, 2000, the NJSIAA Executive Committee considered Staton's appeal from the NJSIAA Controversies Committee's ruling and affirmed that body's decision.

PETITIONER'S POSITION

Staton argues that the within record does not sustain a finding that he failed to complete a meet and, therefore, the conclusions of the NJSIAA Controversies Committee, sustained by the NJSIAA's Executive Committee, are arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable calling for the Commissioner's overturning of such decision and vacating of the penalty imposed against him. (Brief in support of Appellant at pp. 2-3)

[5]NJSIAA's Controversies Committee's decision did, however, modify the last page of the CAL's decision "to make clear that, although Coach Staton improperly terminated the track meet with Bridgeton in violation of Article IX, Section 2E of the NJSIAA Bylaws, he did so without 'using profanity, obscene gestures or excessive harassment.' The Committee believed this was important in view of the otherwise unblemished record of Coach Staton and the need for clarification that the Coach did not use abusive or profane language while removing his team from the track meet on April 27, 1999." (NJSIAA Controversies Committee March 3, 2000 Decision at p. 2)

In support of his contention, Staton advances that the April 27, 1999 boys track meet between Pleasantville and Bridgeton had a total of 15 events, with "the meet" comprising the sum total of the scores derived from each team's completion of these 15 individual events.

> When Coach Staton chose not to enter athletes in the shot put event, Bridgeton received, after completing the event, 9 points. The[n], Bridgeton completed the 3200 meter run and received 9 points, then Bridgeton completed the 1600 meter relay and received 5 points, then, by all accounts, approximately twenty minutes later, the high jump event concluded with Pleasantville receiving 5 points and Bridgeton receiving 4 points. After the last event was concluded, that being the high jump, the meet was concluded and Pleasantville left. There is no doubt that the last thing that occurred was the completion of the high jump event. Coach Staton could have stopped his high jumper from completing the event but he let the event continue until the meet was concluded. (Brief in Support of Appellant at pp. 3-4)

Staton, therefore, reasons that because the last points of the cumulative score of the meet were compiled in the high jump, an event in which Pleasantville competed and received 5 points, he cannot be charged with improperly terminating the meet. (Id. at p. 5) Staton posits that there is no prohibition against a coach choosing not to enter athletes in particular events, "no matter what his subjective motivation" may be. (Id. at p.6) Consequently, petitioner argues that, notwithstanding that the reviewing authorities in this matter may have been displeased with what they perceived was Staton's motivation for not entering his athletes in certain events, such displeasure does not equate to "termination of a meet and to reach [such] a conclusion is an arbitrary premise coloring what should be [a] clinical analysis of the facts." (Ibid.) Rather, he argues, he must be tried on the specific charge which he has been accused of violating, "not on some concept of nebulous fairness with no written standard, the law so mandates." (Ibid.)

RESPONDENTS' POSITIONS

CAL

The CAL argues that Staton received a full measure of due process pursuant to the CAL Constitution and Bylaws, i.e., he had a hearing, he was represented by counsel, he had an opportunity to present witnesses on his behalf, and he received a prompt written decision. (Brief of Respondent Cape-Atlantic League, at p. 3) Additionally, it proffers, the CAL's decision to suspend Staton for the 2000 spring track season for terminating the April 27, 1999 Pleasantville/Bridgeton meet "is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record as a whole," (Ibid.) in that there was evidence and substantial credible testimony, under oath, from meet officials and coaches present at the event which "establishe[s] "that [Staton]  refused to participate, and removed some athletes preparing to participate in the events scheduled after the 200 meter race as a result of his strongly expressed disagreement with judgement decision made by the meet officials." (Brief of Respondent Cape Atlantic League p. 4) As such, the CAL argues, under the Commissioner's applicable standard of review in matters of this kind, the decision rendered by the CAL and the NJSIAA should be affirmed. (Id. at pp. 3-4)

NJSIAA

NJSIAA advances that this matter represents a classic example of interpretation of NJSIAA rules, "specifically, when is a track meet 'terminated' and a coach subject to punishment for prematurely terminating the meet?" (NJSIAA Brief at p. 2) NJSIAA further argues that, although Staton had three hearings before entities charged with interpreting NJSIAA rules with respect to termination of a meet, each of which found him guilty of such charge, he, nonetheless, seeks to persuade the Commissioner "that because he allowed one event to proceed, he did not in a technical sense 'terminate' the track meet." (Id. at pp. 1-2) NJSIAA urges that, absent a deprivation of due process, a lack of sufficient substantiation in the record or a demonstration that the NJSIAA's rules were applied in an arbitrary and capricious manner, the Commissioner should not overturn the CAL and NJSIAA's interpretation and application of their rules. Here, the NJSIAA argues, it is clear that both the CAL and the NJSIAA provided Staton the due process to which he was entitled, the decisions reached by these bodies were based on substantial evidence in the record and were neither arbitrary nor capricious. (NJSIAA Brief at pp. 10-15)

Initially, the NJSIAA observes that "Staton has received an extraordinary degree of due process" in this matter. (NJSIAA Brief at p. 10) He received a plenary hearing before the CAL Executive Committee, comprised "of athletic directors and principals from nine Cape-Atlantic League schools", where he was represented by counsel, sworn testimony was offered, witnesses were cross examined, a stenographic record was made, and a written decision advancing that body's rationale for its decision was issued one day later. (NJSIAA Brief at p. 11) This was followed by appeals before two NJSIAA Committees.

First, the NJSIAA's Controversies Committee, where Staton was represented by counsel, reviewed the CAL decision, heard oral argument, and questioned both Staton and the Bridgeton Athletic Director, and the Committee's decision, unanimously upholding CAL's determination, was promptly issued. Second, Staton appeared before the NJSIAA's Executive Committee where, again, he was represented by counsel who presented his arguments. The Executive Committee voted 31-1 to uphold the two prior decisions. (Ibid.) As such, NJSIAA argues that, to date, Staton's "case has been reviewed by 50 educators, all but one of whom have determined that he violated the rules and exhibited unsportsmanlike conduct by prematurely withdrawing his team from the track meet on April 27, 1999." (Ibid.)

Next, the NJSIAA posits, the record clearly supports the findings of the CAL "that Coach Staton purposefully pulled his team from the meet, failing to complete the shot-put, 3200-meter and 1600-meter runs." (NJSIAA Brief at p. 13) The sportsmanship provisions of the NJSIAA Bylaws and Rules (NJSIAA Handbook, 1999-2000 at pp. 51-52) it argues, unequivocally provide that "[a] coach's failure to complete a meet, regardless of the circumstances" is a violation of these provisions, subjecting such coach to "severe punitive action." (Ibid.) Specifically, the NJSIAA proffers, the evidence and testimony show:

>  that the real reason [Staton]  pulled his team from the field was not because of any commotion, but because he was angry at the officiating. Three witnesses testified that Coach Staton had said that he was being cheated and that he was leaving. One witness, Coach Furtek, tried in vain to convince him to reconsider. The Bridgeton athletic director even said that he warned Coach Staton that his actions could be in violation of NJSIAA and Cape-Atlantic League rules, and that a report would be submitted, but Coach Staton pulled his team from the field anyway. The testimony of these witnesses was supported by an article in the Atlantic City Press reporting the events, and testimony of the starter and head official, Andrea Kohar, who said that Coach Staton had disagreed with the results of the 200-meter race and that officials reported to her that the Pleasantville teams were boarding the busses prior to the start of the 3200-meter run and Pleasantville shot-putters had been told by their coach to stop warming up and to leave. Coach Staton's complaints about a "hostile environment" are further belied by the fact that he never reported the "hostile environment" to meet officials, and only raised it as a issue when he faced disciplinary action by the Pleasantville Board of Education.
> (NJSIAA Brief at pp. 12-13)

Finally, NJSIAA contends that Staton's exclusive defense in this regard, i.e., that, because the rules do not expressly prohibit a coach from determining not to enter athletes in specific events, and because he allowed his high jumper to complete the meet, he was not in technical violation of the rules, fails on at least four levels. First of all, it asserts, three separate committees of educators, fully knowledgeable of NJSIAA, CAL and track and field rules, found to the contrary when they undertook to interpret such rules. Specifically, the NJSIAA contends that these individuals recognized that "[w]hile a track coach might elect to save a runner so as not to tire him or her out, or scratch runners from competition for strategic reasons, there is no right to refuse to participate because the coach does not like the way the meet is being run." (NJSIAA Brief at p. 13)

Second, the NJSIAA asserts, irrespective of Stanton's belief as to whether his conduct in this matter was a violation of the rules, "he acted in an unsportsmanlike manner because he deprived his athletes, specifically his shot-putters, 3200-meter runners and 1600-meter relay team, of the opportunity to compete." (NJSIAA Brief at p. 14) Because of Staton's "impulsive act," it avows, these athletes were denied the chance to vie in one of their limited high school contests. (Ibid.)

Third, it argues, Staton's position is fully belied by the facts in this matter. NJSIAA argues that:

> The high jump began before the 200-meter dash, and the only reason he allowed his jumper to finish the event was because the jumper asked him to. The jumper wanted to jump a personal best and qualify for all-star status. Coach Staton refused to participate in every event that began after the 200-meter, when he felt he had been cheated, and he thus failed to complete the meet. (Emphasis in original). (Ibid.)[6]

[6]It is noted that the NJSIAA's submission presents a proffer of explanation of the sequence of events in track and field meets in general, and the meet at issue herein in particular:

> [I]n a track and field dual meet, events on the track follow a fixed schedule, while field events run simultaneously in different areas. The last three running events of a meet are the 200-meter dash, the 3200-meter run, and the 1600-meter relay. During the Bridgeton-Pleasantville meet, the high jump, a field event, started before the 200-meter dash, and concluded sometime before the end of the running races. (Pet. App. Ex E, p. 105 & 118). The shot-put, another field event, was scheduled to begin shortly after the 200-meter dash was finished. Id.
> (NJSIAA Brief at pp. 3-4)

Fourth, the NJSIAA charges that Staton's argument fails on the basis of prior decisional law, citing Bower v. NJSIAA, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 80, wherein the Commissioner upheld a determination of the NJSIAA sanctioning a wrestling coach for pulling his athletes from a tournament match for improper motives, thereby precluding them from participation in a significant competition. (NJSIAA Brief at pp. 14-15)

The NJSIAA urges that, under all of these circumstances, the Commissioner should uphold the decisions of the League and the Association.

APPLICABLE LAW

The Commissioner's standard of review in NJSIAA determinations is explicitly delineated in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.4:

> (a) In determining appeals from NJSIAA decisions, the Commissioner's scope of review shall be appellate in nature.
>
> 1. If the NJSIAA has granted a petitioner due process and its decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record as a whole, the Commissioner shall not substitute his or her judgment for that of the NJSIAA, even if the Commissioner might judge otherwise in a de novo review.
> 2. The Commissioner shall not overturn NJSIAA's application of its own rules absent a demonstration by the petitioner that such rules were applied in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner.

Furthermore, it is well-established that the burden of proof that an action was so deficient rests with the person challenging the decision. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 297 (App. Div. 1960).

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

After consideration of the full record in this matter,[7] the Commissioner determines to uphold the decision of the NJSIAA finding Staton guilty of violating the sportsmanship rules and imposing a penalty of suspension for the 1999-2000 spring track season.

In so determining, the Commissioner, initially, is convinced that there can be no reasonable claim made here that Staton did not receive the full measure of due process owed him by each of the three deliberative bodies which reviewed the charges against him. Similarly, the Commissioner is persuaded that the CAL and the NJSIAA did not act arbitrarily or unreasonably when, on the basis of the record before them, they found Staton guilty of unsportsmanlike conduct for prematurely terminating the competition on April 27, 1999. The rules in this regard are clear. That Staton permitted his high jumper to conclude participation in his event, which had begun prior to the running of the 200-meter race, in order to facilitate the athlete's qualification for all-star status, does not serve to mask or to nullify the reasonableness of, and rational basis for, the Committees' determinations. The record here is abundantly clear that Staton purposely acted to pull his athletes from every competitive event which began subsequent to the running of the 200-meter race, with regard to which he had expressed his dissatisfaction with the officiating and stated his intent to leave the meet, thereby depriving those athletes of a meaningful opportunity to compete in those events. The Commissioner finds it unmistakable that in so doing Staton violated both the letter and the spirit of the sportsmanship rules.

[7]It is noted that the record includes transcripts of the CAL hearing conducted on January 31, 2000 and the NJSIAA Controversies Committee and Executive Committee hearings held on February 29, 2000 and April 5, 2000, respectively.

The Commissioner, therefore, concludes that under these circumstances, Staton has failed to establish that the NJSIAA's interpretation and application of its rules in this matter constituted arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable action which would warrant reversal of that body's decision. The Commissioner, likewise, finds no cause to disturb the penalty prescribed to Staton as a consequence of his infraction.

Accordingly, the Commissioner affirms the determination of the NJSIAA in this matter and hereby dismisses the within Petition of Appeal.[8]

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF ANNE DORETY, :
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF OLDMANS : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION TOWNSHIP, SALEM COUNTY. : DECISION

Whereas, the School Ethics Commission has acted pursuant to the authority granted to it by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. to recommend that the above-named Board member, who was elected to the Oldmans Township Board of Education in April 1999, be removed from office for failure to attend the Board member training sessions by April 2000 as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6; and

Whereas, the School Ethics Commission sent ample notice to the above-named Board member of her failure to attend such training sessions; and

Whereas, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.5(j), on April 14, 2000 the Commission issued an Order to Show Cause why the Board member had not attended such training ; and

Whereas, the above-named Board member failed to provide a timely signed and notarized response to the Order of the Commission; and

Whereas, the Commission voted on May 23, 2000, to recommend removal of the above-named Board member for failure to timely attend training sessions in violation of State statute, memorializing such decision through a resolution forwarded to the Commissioner, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29; and

Whereas, on May 24, 2000, subsequent to the Commission's meeting, correspondence, signed by the above-named Board member but still not notarized, was received by the Commission in response to the Show Cause Order assuring that she will fulfill the training requirements as soon as possible and explaining that, although she had good intentions of honoring her commitment to the Board, her efforts to date had been unsuccessful because, inter alia: the birthday of one of her young children fell on the date of the October 1999 training, which was the first training session reasonably close to her home; a snow storm fell on the date of the January 2000 training and she wrongly assumed that the training was cancelled, but, admittedly, even if she had known it was not cancelled, she would not have driven on icy rural roads to attend; and, although she registered for the April 2000 training, at the last moment a situation with respect to the family's "adopted" great-grandmother required her attention; and

Whereas, on May 24, 2000, the above-named Board member was afforded an opportunity to submit to the Commissioner a response to the Commission's resolution recommending removal; and

Whereas, the above-named Board member submitted to the Commissioner a copy of her response to the Commission cited ante, together with a letter averring that the penalty of removal is too harsh and that a sanction of reprimand, censure or suspension would be justified; and

Whereas, the Commissioner has carefully considered the record of this matter, including the decision of the School Ethics Commission and the above-named Board member's response, and, having done so, determines that removal from the Oldman's Board of Education is justified under the circumstances due to her repeated failure to attend the statutorily required training session within one year of her election to the Oldman's Board in April 1999; now therefore

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, a Supervisor of Pupil Personnel Services and an Assistant Superintendent, alleged violations by respondent Board of the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (NJLAD), the Tenure Employees Hearing Law and the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA). Respondent Board filed a motion for summary decision, alleging a failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted.

The ALJ determined that petitioners failed to allege or demonstrate a tangible adverse employment action that is actionable under the NJLAD. The ALJ further concluded that no viable claim pursuant to the Tenure Employees Hearing Law had been set forth because no tenure charges had been discussed by respondent or filed against petitioners. Finally, the ALJ determined that no OPMA violation had been established because no official action was taken or considered by respondent Board.

The Commissioner affirmed the Initial Decision of the ALJ and dismissed the amended petition. The Commissioner held that, to the extent he has jurisdiction over NJLAD claims, no adverse employment action based on petitioners' race or other invidious classification had been established, nor had petitioners demonstrated that they were subjected to adverse employment decisions which would rise to an allegation of reprisal. With respect to the Tenure Employees Hearing Law claims, the Commissioner held that petitioners failed to state a claim that, if true, would constitute a violation of the tenure laws. Finally, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination that petitioners failed to state a claim pursuant to the OPMA because his incidental jurisdiction over such claims may only be invoked if a valid claim arising under the school laws is established, but no such claim had been established in this case.

Record Closed: April 3, 2000 Decided: May 19, 2000

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners alleged, among other things, that the Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City (Board) and individual members thereof violated the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (LAD), N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 to –42l; that the Board and individual members violated the School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 to –34; petitioners' privacy rights and the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to 6-25; that the Board and named individuals violated the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA), N.J.S.A. 10:5-6 to –21.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Subsequent to Prehearing Conferences, telephone conferences, frequent delays with respect to discovery and other motions, the Board now seeks to dismiss the instant matter by way of summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. The arguments of the parties are set forth herein below.

Respondent's Board's Position

Statement of Facts

This matter involves a four count, "amended" Petition brought by two current employees of the Board.

The four counts seek a "cease and desist" order that would prevent the Board and individuals respondents "from harassing petitioners and interfering in District operations."

Count One alleges racial discrimination in violation of N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(a) and (d) of the LAD.

Count Two alleges "retaliation" in violation of N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(d). It asserts respondent Loggi excluded Clarke from "a very important meeting" (see paragraph 29); did not allow Clarke "to represent the Administration" at another meeting (see paragraph 30); and was publicly "reprimanded" by the respondent Kelly on August 23, 1999 (see paragraph 31).

Count Three alleges that respondents Lopez, Thomas, Kelly and Gallagher have publicly stated that they intend to "terminate petitioners' employment" in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 (see paragraphs 36-37).

Finally, Count Four alleges Sunshine Law violations whereby respondents Lopez, Thomas, Kelly and Gallagher violated "petitioners' rights by making public statements" in violation of N.J.S.A. 4:12(b)(8).

The relief in all cases seeks injunctive relief. There are no factual assertions that:

a. tenure charges exists or are being prepared;

b. petitioners have been suspended, demoted, terminated or have suffered a job-related loss; and/or

c. a job-related sanction has been the subject of Board action.

Woolley has not answered interrogatories; Clarke has.

In response to Question No. 30 that stated:

> Whom do you contend on behalf of the Board violated the individual privacy rights of employees as alleged in Paragraph 14 of the Joint Petition of Appeal? Include in your answer what the specific actions were and the name of the individual(s) whose rights were violated. Provide any documentation that you may have in your possession to support your answers.

Clarke stated:

> Board members Perry, Kelly, Gallagher and others named in the Petition. The Board has committed numerous violations. Board members violated my rights by discussing my employment with the > press and with third parties. Recently, the Commissioner ruled that the Board violated Dr. Williams's privacy and tenure rights on March 1, 1999. See attached decision. On September 2, 1998, Judge Martone ruled that the Board violated the tenure laws by filing a Cross Petition [containing the exact language in the tenure charges.]

In response to Question No. 31 that stated:

> Whom do you contend on behalf of the Board violated the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA) as alleged in Paragraph 14 of the Joint Petition of Appeal? Include in your answer what specifically was violated as contained in the Act. Provide any documentation that you may have in your possession to support your answer.

Clarke stated:

> Board members named in the Petition. The Board has committed numerous violations of the OPMA. Board members violated my rights by discussion (sic) my employment with the press and with third parties, and not providing me with a Rice notice. Recently, the Commissioner ruled that the Board violated Dr. Williams's privacy and tenure rights by voting in public on March 1, 1999. See attached Decision. Previously, Judge Martone ruled that the Board violated OPMA by filing a Cross Petition (containing the exact language in the tenure charges) on September 2, 1999. Also, the Atlantic City Press has sued the Board in the past for OPMA violations. See also closed session minutes of board dated December 8, 1998 and minutes of Policy committee meeting on March 25, 1999.

In response to Question 32 that stated:

> Whom do you contend on behalf of the Board violated the tenure laws as alleged in Paragraph 14 of the Joint Petition of Appeal? Include in your answer what the specific sections of the tenure laws were violated and the name of the individual(s) whose rights were violated. Provide any documentation that you may have in your possession to support your answers.

Clarke stated.

> See No. 30.

In response to Question No. 49 that stated:

> Describe in detail the types of retaliation were you subjected to by board members as stated in Paragraph 17 of the Joint Petition of Appeal? Include why you feel that this retaliation was the result of your reporting racially discriminatory practices of the District, and whom on behalf of the Board committed these alleged acts of retaliation against you.

Clark stated:

> Some board members placed my name on a "Hit List" and then attempted to eliminated [sic, eliminate] my position in retaliation for assisting in ending the discriminatory practices concerning the grade and transcript scheme; and also for dealing with "protected employees." (Daly Griffiths)

Question No. 64 stated:

> Do you feel that the respondents are not entitled to be involved in administrative matters? Please refer to the allegations in Paragraph 23 of the Joint Petition of Appeal when forming your response. State specifically why you feel they should or should not be involved and what you feel job description is.

Clarke did not respond.

Clarke has admitted that the Board has the right to eliminate certain positions as its prerogative. See, Clarke's answers to Questions Nos. 66 through 67.

Question No. 68 stated:

> Do you have any knowledge of instances where the Board terminated an individual and/or eliminated a position without notifying the individual(s) affected? If yes, state in detail, who was terminated, what positions were eliminated, the date of the event(s), etc.

Clarke only answered yes.

The Atlantic City School District is a district in distress inasmuch as it is a "Level Two" monitored school district. This status was based upon a May 1995 Monitoring Report promulgated by the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner); it is the level preceding a State takeover. During the 1997-98 school year, the School District ran an approximate five million dollar ($5,000,000) deficit that was eliminated by the Commissioner's permission to transfer funds from a capitol account in order to cure the multi-million dollar deficit.

The financial distress caused a discussion of a reduction in force (RIF) of staff that may have impacted the petitioners herein. However, the full RIF did not have to be implemented. It is this potential (never realized) job loss that petitioners carelessly refer to as a "Hit List."

Consequently, this tribunal is faced with a Petition that alleges no tangible, adverse employment action by the employer, and no claim for relief.

Point One

No Claim is Stated for an LAD Violation

Petitioners in this case have not alleged any tangible adverse employment action by the employer, the Board. They have alleged that a private speech of certain members that allegedly reflected an individual intent to terminate employment is a violation of LAD. They further allege that they were periodically excluded from meetings by their supervisor (not the Board). In short, they allege no remediable conduct under the law.[1]

LAD is a comprehensive scheme that prohibits an unlawful employment practice. It is axiomatic that the employee must be deprived, of, by the employer (in the case, the Board), a term, a condition or a privilege of employment. N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(a). Likewise, reprisals on account of forbidden practices are illegal. N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(d). These two provisions are those relied upon by the petitioners.

Entitlement to attendance at, private meetings has never been declared actionable under LAD. Certainly, a discharge from employment is actionable. Slohoda v. UPS, Inc. 193 N.J. Super. 586 (App. Div. 1984). A failure to hire is actionable, O'Lowe v. NJ Dept. of Corrections, 313 N.J. Super. 249 (App. Div. 1998) and a RIF layoff is actionable. Edwards v. Schlunberger-Wells, 984 F. Supp. 264 (D.N.J. 1997). A denial of a promotion is actionable. Jamison v. Rockaway Twp. Bd. of Ed. 242 N.J. Super. 436 (App. Div. 1990).

Allegations of reprisals do not state a cause of action unless adverse employment action is taken. Reyes v. McDonald Pontiac, 997 F. Supp. 614 (D.N.J. 1988) and Craig v. Suburban Cablevision, Inc., 274 N.J. Super. 303 (App. Div. 1994) aff'd 140 N.J. 623 (1997).

The case at bar is devoid of any suggestion, let alone facts, supporting the requisite element of a deprivation of a term and condition of employment. Both petitioners remain employed without any reduction in pay. They have not been suspended, demoted or refused a promotion. In short, no claim for relief has been stated under LAD.

[1] Clarke is an Assistant Superintendent. This tribunal is undoubtedly aware that no board member (or full Board for that matter) can affect the employment of an Assistant Superintendent without the "nomination" of the Superintendent. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-16. Likewise, he cannot even be transferred without a recommendation form the Superintendent. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(a). Petitioners make no claim that such recommendations were entertained, let alone made. Thus, no individual Board members purported intent to termination is relevant where no majority action ever occurred.

Point Two

No Violation of the Tenure Laws is Present

The only reference in the Tenure Law scheme relating to confidentiality is found in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, which provides:

> 18A:6-11 Written charges; written statement of evidence; filing, statement of position by employee; certification of determination; notice.
> Any charge made against any employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the secretary of the board in writing, and a written statement of evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the board. The board of education shall forthwith provide such employee with a copy of the charge, copy of the statement of the evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath with respect thereto. After consideration of the charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary. The board of education shall forthwith notify the employee against whom the charge has been made of its determination, personally or by certified mail directed to his last known address. In the event the board finds that such probable cause exists and that the charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction in salary, then it shall forward such a written charge to the commissioner for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, together with a certificate of such determination. Provided, however, that if the charge is inefficiency, prior to making its determination as to certification, the board shall provide the employee with written notice of the alleged inefficiency, specifying the nature thereto, and allow at least 90 days in which to correct and overcome the inefficiency. The consideration and actions of the board as to any charge shall not take place at a public meeting.

The statute is quite clear that the confidentiality attaches only in the event, and at the point, where the written charges are prepared. Then and only then do the deliberations become confidential. Even pre-charge employee notification non-renewal and/or related activity has never been held to be subject to N.J.S.A 18A:6-11. N.J.A.C. 6:24-5.1(b)(7) mimics the statute and does not create a blanket prohibition of discussing a RIF.

In that vein, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 provides:

> Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article. [emphasis supplied.]

Obviously, the Legislature has clearly articulated an intent that no RIF can be limited or eviscerated by the Tenure Laws.

The Legislative command is as clear as it is mandatory. The plain language is that "Nothing . . . shall prevent the reduction of the number of any such persons." The Supreme Court has held that compensation can be reduced without Tenure Charges where there is a bona fide RIF. Impey v. Shrewsbury Board of Education, 142 N.J. 388 (1995).

Likewise, the Supreme Court has held:

> In addition, under Article Three of Chapter 28, entitled "Effect of Reduction of Force Upon Persons Under Tenure," N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 states:
>
> > Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or > supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article.

>
> The dominant concern of this provision is that fiscal emergencies may warrant layoffs even of tenured teachers.

See, Old Bridge Board of Education v. Old Bridge Education Association, 98 N.J. 523, 531 (1985).

The plain, unambiguous command of N.J.SA. 18A:17-3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 that exempt RIF's from the Tenure Laws must be given its ordinary meaning. Lammers v. Point Pleasant Board of Education, 134 N.J. 264, 274 (1993). This is particularly the case when the dispute involves a RIF. Francey v. Salem Board of Education, 286 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1996).

The case at bar clearly does not involve any tenure charges, or any discussion of possible tenure charges. At best, petitioners have stated a complaint about purported individual threats of termination. That activity, even if proven, is not actionable. No tenure charges have ever been contemplated and the Petition states no basis for relief under the Tenure Laws.

Point Three

No Violation of the Sunshine Law is Alleged that Would Require Relief

The conclusory assertion of a Sunshine Law violation is a puzzlement. No facts are alleged that support any such claim. When asked for the factual basis for this claim, Clarke's answer to Question No 31. states:

> Board members named in the Petition. The board has committed numerous violations of the OPMA. Board members violated my rights by discussion (sic) my employment with the press and with third parties, and not providing me with a Rice notice. Recently, the Commissioner ruled out that the board violated Dr. Williams' privacy and tenure rights by voting in public on March 1, 1999. See attached Decision. Previously, Judge Martone ruled that the > Board violated OPMA by filing a Cross Petition [containing the exact language in the tenure charges] on September 2, 1999. Also, the Atlantic City Press has sued the Board in the past for OPMA violations. See also closed session minutes of the board dated December 8, 1998 and minutes of Policy committee meeting on March 25, 1999.

Plainly, no factual basis is asserted. How any public discussion by individual Board members states a Sunshine Law violation is unclear to say the least.

The Sunshine Law is enshrined at the highest level of our System of Public Laws that regulates a well-ordered democratic process. Polillo v. Deane, 74 N.J. 562 (1977). All meetings must be open to the public, subject to only nine numerated exceptions. The only pertinent exceptions herein are found at N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(3) and (8) that state:

> (3) Any material the disclosure of which constitutes an unwarranted invasion of individual privacy such as any records, data, reports, recommendations, or other personal material of any educational, training. social service, medical, health, custodial, child protection, rehabilitation, legal defense, welfare, housing, relocation, insurance and similar program or institution operated by a public body pertaining to any specific individual admitted to or served by such institution or program, including but not limited to information relative to the individual's personal and family circumstances, and any material pertaining to admission, discharge, treatment, progress or condition of any individual, unless the individual concerned (or, in the case of a minor or incompetent, his guardian) shall request in writing that the same be disclosed publicly.
> a. Any matter involving the employment, appointment, termination of employment, terms and conditions of employment, evaluation of the performance of, promotion or disciplining of any specific prospective public officer or employee or current public officer or employee employed or appointed by the public body, unless all the individual employees or appointees whose rights could be adversely affected request in writing that such matter or matters be discussed at a public meeting.

Advance notice of a private Board meeting is required to be given by the employee who has the right to force the matter into public forum. Jamison v. Morris School District, 198 N.J. Super. 411 (App. Div. 1985), Rice v. Union County High School Bd. of Ed. 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App.

Div. 1977), cert., denied, 76 N.J. 238 (1978) and Thomas v. Bergen County Welfare Board, 122 N.J. Super. 371 (App. Div. 1973). Clearly, no such notice was required herein and there was no violation of the laws and rights of Plaintiff under the Sunshine Law. See, Opinion of Attorney General, No. 1-1988.

> N.J.S.A. 10:4-13 provides:
> No public body shall exclude the public from any meeting to discuss any matter described in subsection 7b until the public body shall first adopt a resolution, at a meeting to which the public shall be admitted:
>
> a. Stating the general nature of the subject to be discusses; and
> b. Stating as precisely as possible, the time when and the circumstances under which the discussion conducted in close session of the public body can be disclosed to the public.

RIFs are not implemented by official action are not remediable under the Sunshine Law because no rights are "adversely affected." Jamison v. Morris School District, 198 N.J. Super. 411, 416 (App. Div. 1985). Only "action taken by a public body at a meeting" in violation of the Law is remediable and even then in only "voidable." N.J.S.A. 10:4-15(a). Only clandestine meetings by a majority of a public body that result in official action are voidable. South Harrison Twp. Committee v. Gloucester Freeholder Board, 210 N.J. Super. 370 (App. Div. 1986).

The conclusory assertions based upon surmise and insinuation in the case at bar, even if credited, do not establish a violation. If several Board members not involving a majority, stop and chat about Board business they are not violating the law. In this case, petitioners can't even support a factual and legal theory to support their scurrilous claim.

Point Four

No Relief Can Be Granted in this Case Because it Would Deprive Respondents of Their Right to Free Speech

What is really at stake in this matter is an individual Board members right to speak his or her mind on issues of public affairs. Petitioners are really seeking a prior restraint for non-actionable conduct that does not violate any law, but may violate their own sensibilities no matter how unreasonable they are.

This tribunal must realize that the so-called "grading fixing" scandal in 1996 involved no affirmative finding by the Commissioner. Petitioners may feel that their activity was important and justifiable, but it did not clothe them with an indefinite immunity from criticism of other behavior totally unrelated to their actions in 1996. More to the point is the fact that all of the respondents herein only one was a member of the Board in 1996.

Petitioners seek sanctions for fair public comment by an individual board member.

The granting of the relief requested and the unique circumstances of this matter would unconstitutionally deprive the individual defendant board members of their First Amendment rights.

This tribunal must embrace the proposition that fair public comment by public figures concerning other public figures is protected First Amendment speech. See New York Times v. Sullivan 376 U.S. 254 (1964).

The protected speech of respondents cannot be muzzled by an executive branch order. Only the judiciary can entertain such a radical request.

Our Supreme Court has stated:

> Generally, [t]he term prior restraint is used 'to describe administrative and judicial orders forbidding certain communications are to occur.' Alexander v. United States, 509 U.S. ___, ____, *222 113 S. Ct. 2766, 2771, 125 *L. Ed.*2nd. 441, 450 (1993) (quoting M. Nimmer, Nimmer on Freedom of Speech § 12-24 at 1040 (2d. ed. 1988) (noting that central feature of prior restraint is "attempt to suppress speech prior to publication.)" Injunctions are often "classic examples of prior restraints." Alexander, supra. 509 U.S. at __, 113 S. Ct. at 2771, 125 L. Ed. 2d. at 450. But as the Supreme Court noted in Madsen, not all injunctions that "incidentally affect expression * * * are 'prior restraints' * * *." 512 *U.S.*at ___, n. 2, 114 S. Ct. at 2524 n. 2, 129 L. Ed. 2d. at 607 n., 2(3)(4). Although never outlining a precise test, the Supreme Court has considered a number of factors in determining whether a restriction is a prior restraint. One of those factors is whether the restraint prevents the expression of a message. See, Ibid. ("Here petitioners are not prevented from expressing their message in any one of several different ways; they are simply prohibited from expressing it within 36 foot buffer zone."); Alexander, supra. 509 U.S. at ____, 113 S. Ct. at 2771, 125 *L. Ed.*2d. at 450 (finding that order requiring petitioner to forfeit property related to racketeering activity was not prior restraint because it "does not forbid petitioner from engaging in any expressive activities in the future, nor does it require him to obtain prior approval from any expressive activities.") Thus the Supreme Court has consistently found (often without discussion) that injunctions are prior restraints if they forbid entirely the publication of a message.

Speech on "matters of public concern" is at the heart of the First Amendment protection. Dunn &Bradstreet, Inc.v. Greenmoss Builders, Inc. 472 U.S. 742 (1985). Thus, as then Judge Pashman stated in East Rutherford Industrial Park v. State of New Jersey, 119 N.J. Super. 352, 361-362 (Law Div. 1971):

> The public has an interest in keeping apprised of impending governmental action. To that end, the press and government are granted untold liberty of expression and reporting under the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. This public interest must take precedence over the possible and speculative injury to property rights resulting from the freedom of expression and the press. In a day when the right of government to suppress and classify information which it deems vital to the nations' security is > being seriously argued and challenged, the plaintiffs allege incidental damages pale into significance."

Simply put, individual board members are entitled as citizens/taxpayers to speak their mind freely.

For all the foregoing reasons, this matter should be dismissed.

Petitioner's Position

Pursuant to the administrative regulations N.J.A.C 1-12.5(b), a motion for summary decision may be made "if the papers and discovery which have been filed together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue of as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." First of all, the respondents' motion is improper because discovery is not complete. When the respondent initially filed its motion, petitioner Woolley was on an extended medical leave and could not provide answers to interrogatories before February 29, 2000. Therefore, it is assumed that for purposes of this motion, that additional facts asserted in the attached answers are uncontested.

Further, on March 15, 2000, counsel wrote the respondents' attorney Mr. Frino and asked for responses to seven key questions. (See attached letter as Exhibit A). As of this date, Mr. Frino has not called nor responded to counsel's letter. For instance, Interrogatory No. 10 is directed at respondent Gallagher:

> As to respondent Gallagher, state whether you made statements regarding petitioner Clarke's employment to anyone (excluding legal counsel) during the period April 30, 1998 to June 30, 1999?

Response: None to Board's recollection . . .

Clearly, the question is not answered by Mr. Gallagher. The response is evasive. Mr. Gallagher could have responded yes or no, and if yes went on to answer question 11. Since these interrogatories were propounded upon the respondents on July 12, 1999, if there way any misunderstanding, a phone call or letter requesting clarification could have been made. There is no question that the actions of Mr. Gallagher are in question here. It appears patently unfair for respondents to evade questions then file a motion under these circumstances. The petitioners only ask that Your Honor grant them a fully opportunity for discovery. Without dwelling on this discovery issue, the petitioners will now respond to substantive nature of the motion for summary decision.

Factual Statement

On or about April 22, 1999, petitioners Ellen Woolley and Melvin A. Clarke, filed a Joint Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner. On October 12, 1999, the petitioners filed an Amended Petition. The petition asserts the following claims: a pattern of racial harassment, and reprisal in violation of the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1, et seq. and N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(d); making public comments regarding terminating petitioners in violation of rights to confidentiality protected by the Tenure Employee's Hearing law, and Governor's Executive Orders. No. 9 and 11; and violation of petitioners' privacy rights under the Open Public Meetings Act, N.J.S.A. 4:12(b)8(OPMA).

The respondents argue that the petitioners' claims should be dismissed as insufficient to maintain an action under NJLAD, tenure laws and OPMA. To the contrary, the petitioners assert that the evidence adduced at this date, even with incomplete discovery at this stage, demonstrate a pattern of racial harassment and reprisal.

The court should handle this matter in a similar fashion like a motion for involuntary dismissal under Superior Court Rule R. 4:31-2. The ". . . judicial function here is a quite mechanical one. The trial court is not concerned with the worth, nature or extent (beyond a scintilla) of the evidence, but only with its existence, viewed most favorably to the party opposing the motion." Dolson v. Anastasia, 55 N.J. 2, 5-6 (1969). In other works, the evidence in support of the asserted claims, should be viewed most favorably to the petitioners.

First and foremost, the Atlantic City School District historically has had racial divisions and strife, which has negatively impacted its ability to overcome Level Two Monitoring deficiencies. As stated in Paragraph 6 of the Amended Petition, in May 1996, the petitioners exposed a grade and transcript fixing scandal at the high school, which favored white students from sending districts such as Margate and Ventnor. They also reported that African American students were denied entry to upper level courses. This illegal practice had existed for years." This was a highly controversial public disclosure, which caused bad feelings and charges of racial favoritism. In fact, one board member, Jeffrey Fauntleroy, a graduate of the high school, recalled how as a student he was denied entry to into advance placement course. Mr. Fauntleroy, became emotionally upset, cried and then said, "they ruined my life." (Paragraph 7 of the amended Petition). Further, on March 4, 1996, Board President Marven Hill, wrote to the media stating that ". . . Mr. Clarke and Mrs. Woolley methodically presented to Dr. Ney definitive and credible evidence of long term grade and transcript abuses at the High School." The petitioners participated in several investigations by the Department of Education. The Atlantic County Prosecutors Office also started an investigation and issued subpoenas for many school records.

In June 1998, the racial divisions on the board were clearly played out when the new majority suspended former superintendent Dr. Benjamin Williams, and then filed tenure charges. This led to three lawsuits alleging racial discrimination, two of which are still pending involving former employees. Charlotte Wellins and Hiawatha Green. The discrimination case by the superintendent and the tenure charge case initiated by the Board were recently settled.

Moreover, board members Gallagher and Kelly are accused of micro-managing the District. It should be noted that Ms. Kelly is a board member from Ventnor based upon the sending-receiving relationship with the high school.

Here are the key facts that are relevant for this motion:

1. Ms. Kelly's written reprimand of petitioner Clarke on August 23, 1999;

2. Excluding of Mr. Clarke from the September 2, 1999, meeting with officials from the Department of Education while other cabinet officers were in attendance;

3. Gallagher told employee Elisah Tompkins that Clarke had accused his friend of attempting to orchestrate his removal in a closed session board meeting. Gallagher took exception to Clarke's statement. (Clarke's Answers to Interrogs., No. 57);

4. Ms. Kelly's role in supervising the school management team and excluding petitioner Woolley from participation;

5. As to Ms. Woolley being questioned at a July 28, 1998, board meeting regarding the grade fixing scandal, Mr. Feibig, the Fiscal Monitor, had to intervene and stop the questioning because it "crossed the line.;"

6. Two instances wherein the superintendent failed to discipline staff members who harassed Ms. Woolley by using crude language, spiting at her office, and on October 29, 1999, one teacher directed sexually offensive language at her. (Answer to Interrogatories No. 49);

7. Revelations of the "Hit List" as stated by respondent Thomas directly to petitioner Clarke (Affidavit paragraphs 3 & 6), and confirmation by Mr. Frino; and

8. Disclosures of improper conduct of Thomas seeking to fire central office administrators such as Dr. Campbell and Clarke. (Affidavit paragraph 9).

The above is just a sample of the improper conduct exhibited by the respondents. What is truly unique here is that roles of Thomas, Kelly and Gallagher have exceeded common bounds as policymakers, a part of the whole board, but, rather, includes administrative decision making. The Department of Education has warned the Board repeatedly about the practice of micro-managing.

Legal Argument

As to the Count One of the Amended Petition, the petitioners assert a claim of racial harassment. The court should examine this claim under the standard applied in Lehman v. Toys 'R' Us, Inc. 132 N.J. 587, 603, (1993). To establish a claim under of hostile work environment under NJLAD, a plaintiff must demonstrate that the complained of discriminatory conduct; (1) would not have occurred but for the employee's reporting the grade fixing scandal and participating in the investigation (2) severe or pervasive enough to make (3) a reasonable person believes that (4) the conditions of employment are altered and the working environment is hostile or abusive. (Emphasis)

First, it should be noted that the respondents did not address the alleged pattern of racial harassment contained in the Petition. The petitioners contend that but for their roles in reporting the grade fixing scandal at ACHS, they would not be subject to the endless and senseless attacks by the respondents. As set forth in facts Nos. 1 through 8, supra., the petitioners contend that the respondents' actions are sufficient to meet the "severe and pervasive" element. As stated above, Kelly, Gallagher and Thomas have acted with hostility towards the petitioners.

Next, the LAD prohibits acts of reprisal against a person because he or she has opposed any practice or act forbidden under LAD, or because he or she has filed a complaint, testified or assisted in any proceedings under LAD. N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(d); Velantzas v. Colgate Palmolive Co., 109 N.J. 189, 192 (1988). NJLAD is liberally construed to achieve its remedial purposes. N.J.S.A. 10:5-3. To establish a prima facie claim of unlawful reprisal, a person must demonstrate that (1) she engaged in protected activity that was known by the alleged retaliator; (2) she thereafter suffered and adverse employment action; and (3) there was a causal connection between the protected activity and the adverse action. See, Jamison v. Rockaway Twp., 242 N.J. Super. 436, 445 (App. Div. 1990).

The petitioners satisfy the first element of the test based upon reporting the grade fixing scandal, which favored white students from sending districts, and participating in subsequent investigations. Also, both petitioners have testified at recent hearings for ex-employees (Wellins and Green) alleging discriminatory discharges.

Next, the respondents argue that the petitioners have failed to satisfy the second element based upon no showing of an "adverse employment action." The respondents' counsel misconstrues the scope of LAD by attempting to define adverse action too narrowly to apply to terminations or demotions. Deavenport v. MCI Telecommunications, 74 FEP Cases 1238 (D.C. Col. 1997) (Court construing Title VII retaliation statute rejected employers argument that adverse action must be based upon "ultimate employment decision" or hiring, firing, or compensation.) In one case Berry v. Stevenson Chevrolet, 74 F. 3rd. 980, 986 (10th Cir. 1996) the court stated that adverse employment action is not limited to monetary losses in the form of wages or benefits. More importantly, in Lombardi v. Cosgrove, 7 F. Supp. 2d. 481, 498 (D. N.J. 1997), the court denied a motion for summary judgment on a retaliation claim under LAD. The plaintiff claim that a defendant order her office taken away in retaliation for filing an incident report survived summary dismissal and proceeded to trial.

The respondents have not shown that as a matter of law the petitioners' claims do not satisfy adverse employment action. The written reprimand by Ms. Kelly, Exhibit E, of the Petition copied to several people, clearly was disciplinary. Ms. Kelly, the representative from Ventnor seems incredulous to the disclosures of grade fixing and has vented her anger at Woolley and Clarke. Further, the exclusion of petitioners from important meetings that they otherwise attended in the past with other administrators has negatively impacted the conditions of employment and undermined their positions. Colleagues know that the petitioners are left out of the "loop" and do no want to be seen with petitioners for fear of retribution. Beyond mere argument, the respondents have offered no explanation to support their actions. Ms. Kelly has singled petitioners out for retribution. All of these actions took place after petitioners engaged in protected activity.

The respondent did not address the causal connection element. Petitioners believe they have provided sufficient evidence to satisfy this element. If all the evidence supporting the reprisal claim is considered in the most favorable light, the respondents' have failed to meet their burden, and therefore, the motion for summary decision should be denied.

Further, petitioner Clarke asserts that respondents violated his tenure and privacy rights by discussing his employment with the press and with third parties. Paragraphs 1-20 of the Petition supports Mr. Clarke's claim of privacy and tenure rights violation. Mr. Clarke brought to the Board's attention a March 19, 1999 article wherein Board members talk about eliminating his position to the media. At no point did Mr. Clarke receive notice of intended action or a problem with his performance from the interim superintendent. Later the Superintendent Loggi informed Clarke that he was discussed in executive session at a regular board meeting. Moreover, the actions by respondent Gallagher approaching employee Thompkins concerning a matter discussed in closed session was clearly improper. Assuming the actions as described by Mr. Clarke took place, such action by the board, or two of its members – Kelly and Gallagher, was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(b)8. See, Oliveri v. Carlstadt – East Rutherford Bd. of Ed., 160 N.J. Super. 131 (*App. Div.*1978).

As evidence of past violations by the respondent, the petitioners cite a recent ruling by the Commissioner finding that the Board violated Dr. Williams' privacy and tenure rights, decision dated March 1, 1999. See attached Decision. On September 2, 1998, Judge Martone ruled that the Board violated the tenure laws by filing a Cross Petition [containing the exact language in the tenure charges].

In addition, the petitioners argue that the tenure laws protect them from arbitrary actions of boards and conduct of board members. The petitioners are tenured administrators who have demonstrated competency and professionalism over the years.

The Legislature has granted boards of education mandatory and broad powers to perform acts consistent with the law and the rules of the State Board, necessary for the "lawful and proper conduct" of the public schools. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1.d. Relative to this, a board may file tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 in accordance with proscribed procedures. What if a board member, decides to make public statements about removing unpopular employees because of a personal animus? This is the case here. No superintendent has recommended for removal of the petitioners. But board members have sought to remove and harass petitioners for political reasons. The petitioners believe that this is a violation of their privacy rights as protected by the tenure laws.

For the foregoing reasons, the petitioners ask that Your Honor deny the motion for summary decision and schedule a hearing on all contested claims.

The Board's Reply

Petitioners have demonstrated a total misapprehension of their burden in meeting the within application to dismiss. They must demonstrate the existence of a dispute that will entitle them to judgment. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). They must submit evidence that would require submission to the truer of fact. See, R. 4:46-2(c). Obviously, facts supporting the elements of the cause of action must be proffered and if the facts are not proffered, summary judgment is mandatory. Canesi v. Wilson, 295 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1996).

The within application is based upon the certified Interrogatory answers of Clarke and Woolley and the copies of minutes of the ACBOE that are appended to the brief. There has been no effort by respondents to "contest" facts for purposes of this motion. The facts adduced by petitioners simply do not state any claim upon which this tribunal could grant relief. The improper hearsay and speculation of petitioners as to individual board members is of no assistance or relevance to the dismissal application.[2]

The legal argument of petitioners begins at page five and is both confusing and confused.

A. The Count One and Count Two Claims

Petitioners argue that they are asserting "a claim of racial harassment." This statement should give a thinking person pause: A white female and a black male are both claiming "racial harassment?" They both rely upon a gender harassment case, Lehman v. Toys-R-Us, 132 N.J. 587 (1993) and then argue that their protected status is not race, but "reporting the grade fixing scandal and participating in the investigations." The first element of a Lehman claim is that the conduct would not have occurred "but for" gender or race. Lehman, page 603. Obviously, no claim upon which relief can be granted is stated by alleging a protected status that is not predicated on race or gender.

[2] The desperate eleventh hour complaint about an insufficient interrogatory answer No. 11 is a red herring. Those answers have been in the possession of counsel since February 16, 2000. No "complaint" was made about until one week before petitioners' reply was due, after they received an extension of time (over the respondent's objection). Petitioners served interrogatories on the respondent Board and not any individual respondent. This is not a basis for denying the relief in the application. Schettingo v. Roizman, 310 N.J. Super. 159, 165 (App. Div. 1998).

Petitioners' next assert a retaliation claim and assert that they have suffered an adverse employment action. They falsely characterize a letter by an individual Board member as a reprimand and their exclusion from a meeting by an interim superintendent as a satisfaction of this element. They fail to comprehend the law and offer no legal support for the theory. The retaliation must be performed by the employer. See, N.J.S.A. 10:5-12(d). Petitioners have not alleged facts to support this element and offer no legal authority to support a retaliation claim.

B. The Count Three and Count Four Claims

Petitioners again offer no legal support for their "tenure claim." Indeed, no claim can be asserted because the employer never considered a tenure charge.

The only legal authority offered in support of the Open Public Meeting Acts claims is Oliveri v. Carlstadt-East Rutherford Board, 160 N.J. Super. 131 (App. Div. 1978). Oliveri would be valid legal support if any official action was taken; no action was ever taken or considered, and therefore, no Sunshine Law violation occurred. See, Jamison v. Morris School District, 198 N.J. Super. 411, 416 (App. Div. 1985).

Accordingly, for all of the foregoing reasons, as a matter of law, the facts alleged do not rise to a level that would allow for legal or equitable relief. The essential elements of the claims for relief have not been alleged.

CONCLUSIONS

The standard for granting or denying summary judgment has been set forth by our Supreme Court in the matter of Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Company of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). The standard was subsequently modified by the Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995). The Brill Court held that the standard to be applied is now the same as the standard for determining motions for involuntary dismissal under R. 4:37-2.(b) and for determining motions for judgment under R. 4:40-1 (Motion for judgment at trial) and R.

4:40-2 (Reservation of Decision on Motion: Motion for Judgment notwithstanding the verdict.) The courts considering motions for summary judgment are not required to engage in the same type of evaluation and analysis, or sifting of evidential material in light of the burden of persuasion that applies as if the matter goes to trial. The Brill Court held that:

> Under this new standard, a determination whether there exits a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged dispute issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." . . . . Credibility determinations will continue to be made by a jury and not a judge. If there exists a single unavoidable resolution of the alleged disputed issue of fact that issue should be considered insufficient to constitute a "genuine" issue of material fact for purposes of Rule 4:46-2 . . . The import of our holding is that when the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law . . . the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment . . .
