BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF DUMONT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured health and physical education teacher employed by the district for more than twenty-nine years – appealed the district's withholding of his salary increment for the 2006-07 school years as arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The respondent contends that the increment withholding was based upon petitioner's need to improve his instructional management and use of disciplinary procedures following a number of incidents in which petitioner used inappropriate language, derogatory names, and demeaning disciplinary techniques with his students.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: during the 2005-06 school year, petitioner had engaged in a form of discipline that required students to sit on a chair inside a storage closet; during the same time period, petitioner used demeaning and derogatory names toward students being disciplined; and petitioner had previously been warned about similar behavior and had received a three day suspension with pay in 2002. The ALJ concluded that petitioner had not met his burden of proving that the respondent's action to withhold his increment was arbitrary, capricious, unlawful, or induced by improper motive. The ALJ recommended dismissal of the petition with prejudice.

Upon a full and independent review of the record, the Commissioner agreed with the ALJ, for the reasons expressed in her decision, that the withholding of petitioner's increment was a reasonable exercise of the Board's lawful discretionary authority. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner – having no basis, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), to question the credibility determinations of the Administrative Law Judge or the findings of fact based upon them – concurs that the Board of Education's withholding of the petitioner's 2006-07 increment was a reasonable exercise of the Board's lawful discretionary authority.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition of appeal is dismissed.

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, William Newsome, a teacher employed by the Dumont Board of Education (respondent), appeals the denial of a salary increment for the 2006-2007 school term based upon his performance for the 2005-2006 school year. On October 20, 2006, petitioner appealed to the Department of Education claiming the respondent's decision to withhold his salary increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. On November 8, 2006, the School District filed its Answer asserting that it acted appropriately pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. The matter was then transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Hearings were held on July 20 and October 26, 2007, whereupon the record remained open for the submission of post hearing briefs. Following receipt of the parties' briefs, the record closed on November 8, 2007.

The issue in dispute is whether respondent's withholding of the petitioner's increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner is a tenured health and physical education teacher who has worked at the Lovell J. Honiss School (Honiss School) in Dumont for the past twenty-nine and a half years. In addition to teaching, he also coaches various sports teams. On February 16, 2005, Principal Bennett informed petitioner of her concerns of his class management techniques when he grabbed a student by the arm and used demeaning names towards the student. Petitioner admitted in his testimony that in 2002 he was disciplined by respondent for inappropriate use of language for which he received a three day suspension with pay.

In March 2006, the parents of B.S. and the mother of J.K. complained to school administrators that petitioner had disciplined students by forcing them to sit in the storage closet and referring to them with demeaning names. On March 7, 2006, Principal Karen Bennett interviewed B.S., J.K., and six other Honiss School students. Of the eight students interviewed, four stated that they had to sit in the storage closet and three stated that they had witnessed other students who had to do the same. In addition, five of the students interviewed submitted written statements on March 7, 2006 stating that they heard petitioner refer to those students being disciplined as "jerk", "jackass," "retard," "handicap," "spastic," "mentally ill," "stupid," "donkey" and "idiot." (Exhibit R-2)

On March 7, 2006, Principal Bennett met with petitioner to discuss these allegations. Petitioner admitted using the term "spastic" and did admit that he had B.S., a minor student, sit in the storage closet, but next to the refrigerator which is near the doorway.

On March 9, 2006, Principal Bennett observed petitioner's class followed by a written report about petitioner's classroom management techniques. (Exhibit R-3). On April 5, 2006, petitioner wrote a rebuttal statement in which he admitted using the word "spaz," referring to coordination of body parts, but denied that that term was directed towards any individual student and further denied using other derogatory words. He admitted that on two occasions he had students sit within the open doorway of the closet while he stood a foot away. (Exhibit P-3)

On May 12, 2006, Principal Bennett held a formal conference with petitioner to discuss his performance during the 2005-2006 school year, including the incidents occurring in March 2006. Principal Bennett recommended that petitioner's increment be withheld. Superintendent Montesano also recommended that petitioner's increment be withheld based upon petitioner's need to improve on instructional management and his use of disciplinary procedures. (Exhibit "R-7") Principal Bennett testified that the storage closet is a non-instructional area and students are not permitted in this area for safety reasons.

Petitioner testified on his own behalf. He stated that he never directed inappropriate language towards any student since he had been teaching. He admitted to using the term "spaz" or "spastic", but denied directing that term at particular student. He testified as to an incident which occurred in February 2006 involving student, B.S., who was not following directions during volleyball and was told to sit on the side of the gym. When B.S. allegedly put his foot out onto the volley ball court to disrupt other students, petitioner moved B.S. to sit next to him in front of the storage closet. He claimed that a photograph he produced [Exhibit P-1(a)] depicts the chair in front of the storage closet where petitioner placed the student.

Prior to this incident, another incident occurred in December 2005 involving the discipline of student A.Y. Petitioner claimed that A.Y also sat on a chair outside the storage closet and further claimed that the students made up the allegations in order to retaliate against him.[1] He also claimed that there was a conspiracy among the students with respect to the incident in 2006[2] and a prior incident in 2002 of using derogatory names.

Four of the students who had given statements to Principal Bennett testified at the hearing. Each confirmed that petitioner used derogatory terms towards students and placed students inside the closet, not at the doorway as testified to by petitioner. Their testimony was consistent with each of their prior statements made to Principal Bennett on March 7, 2006 except for P.R. In Bennett's report and her testimony, Bennett stated that P.R. said that he did not know of any students being put in the closet which was confirmed in P.R.'s written statement. However, at the hearing, P.R. testified that students were put in the closet. He further testified that, when he was questioned by Principal Bennett, he stated that he was not asked about the closet and that is why it was not addressed in his statement.

Petitioner produced two character witnesses, Herbert Reinhert and Laura Van Buren, both of whom worked with petitioner in his coaching capacity. While both considered petitioner to be an excellent coach and never hearing him use inappropriate language, neither was present to the events alleged or aware of these proceedings.

James Hunt, a seventh grade health and physical education teacher at Honiss School also testified on behalf of petitioner. He testified that both he and petitioner

[1]Petitioner claimed that B.S. had a negative progress report, but that report was not produced. He also claimed that J.K.'s sister was cut from the volleyball team. J.K. testified, however, that he was not aware of this. Petitioner further claimed that students in general enjoy getting teachers into trouble.

[2] The students testified that on March 7, 2006, they did not know why they were being called into Principal Bennett's office for questioning and had not spoken with other students about the investigation of petitioner.

had placed students in a chair within the entrance way to the storage closet, using that form of discipline more than ten times during the school year. He said that when student B.S. was told to sit at the storage closet entrance, petitioner stood next to him the entire time. However, he could not recall whether he or petitioner stood next to the students on each and every occasion. He also stated that on some occasions students were told to sit in the hall by the juice machine. He was not aware of any instances where petitioner used derogatory names in referring to students. He further claimed that students and their parents will try to get a teacher, such as petitioner, in trouble for no apparent reason.

When facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings. Credibility is the value that a finder of fact gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, its internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (8th Cir. 1963). Based upon these principles, the testimony of Bennett and the students was deemed credible and compelling. All were straightforward in recounting the events and were clear in their independent recollections. The testimony of these witnesses had the ring of truth and the evidence respondent presented is entitled to substantial weight. The testimony of petitioner, on the other hand, was not deemed credible since his answers were conflicting and his demeanor argumentative. Petitioner's claim that the students were out to get him lacked a ring of truth.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. Petitioner is a tenured health and physical education teacher who has been assigned to the Lovell J. Honiss School for the past twenty-nine years.
2. During the course of his classes in the 2005-2006 school year, petitioner had engaged in a form of discipline of requiring students to sit on a chair inside a storage closet.
3. During that same time period, petitioner resorted to use of demeaning and derogatory names towards those students being disciplined.
4. In 2002, petitioner was warned and disciplined for his inappropriate use of demeaning names towards students. He was suspended with pay for three days.
5. In 2005, Petitioner had been warned by the principal about his use of inappropriate discipline techniques and again about his inappropriate use of demeaning names towards that student. These warnings preceeded the events presented here.
6. As the result of the 2005 action where petitioner grabbed a student, demeaned that student, and the incidents of placing students in the storage closet as a form of discipline, and his continued use of name calling, the respondent withheld his salary increment for the 2006-2007 school year.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Salary increments are controlled by N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which provides that:

> Any board of education may withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board of education. It shall be the duty of the board of education, within 10 days, to give written notice of such action, together with the reasons therefor, to the member concerned. The member may appeal from such action to the commissioner under rules prescribed by him. The > commissioner shall consider such appeal and shall either affirm the action of the board of education or direct that the increment or increments be paid. The commissioner may designate an assistant commissioner of education to act for him in his place and with his powers on such appeals. It shall not be mandatory upon the board of education to pay any such denied increment in any future year as an adjustment increment.

An increment is not a statutory right but "a reward for meritorious service to the school district." North Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. North Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593-594 (1984). The statute was intended to vest local school boards "with the ability to withhold increments from teachers who had not performed well during the previous year." Probst v. Haddonfield Bd. Of Educ., 127 N.J. 518, 526. (1991). A local board's exercise of its discretionary powers "may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). The issues to be determined are: (1) whether the underlying facts were as those who made the evaluation claimed, and (2) whether it was unreasonable for them to conclude as they did upon those facts, bearing in mind their expertise. Id. at 296-297.

The determination to be made is whether the district "had a reasonable basis for its factual conclusion." Id. at 295. Indeed, it has been observed that:

> [a] school district has no duty to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence that the allegations against petitioner are true. To do so would convert an increment withholding action into a tenure case and accordingly shift the burden of proof to the board. Such is not the purpose of an appeal to the Commissioner under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14.

Moreover, the decision to withhold an increment has been held to be "a matter of essential managerial prerogative which has been delegated by the legislature to the board." Ibid. citing Bernards Township Board of Education v. Bernards Township Education Association, 79 N.J. 311, 321 (1979). In contesting a salary increment withholding, a teacher has the burden of proof of demonstrating that the decision was unreasonable, arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Kopera, supra, at 297.

Courts have used varying language when trying to elaborate on the 'arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable' standard. Despite the variations, the common element among all of the decisions is that board of education actions are given a strong presumption of validity. See Thomas v. Board of Education. Twp. Of Morris, 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd o.b., 46 N.J. 581 (1966) (school board decisions "entitled to a presumption of correctness"). "A board of education has broad discretionary authority and its actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith." Quinlan v. North Bergen BOE, 73 N.J.Super 40, 46 (App. Div. 1962). Not only are board actions entitled to a "presumption of correctness" they have a presumption that those actions "will be upheld by the Commissioner of Education, absent a showing of bad faith, illegal motive or a lack of rational basis." Raimondi v. Westwood Regional Board of Education, EDU 5904-04, Initial Decision (Sept. 26, 2005), adopted, Comm'r (Dec. 27, 2005), affirmed, State Board (June 9, 2006) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal /search.html>.

Here the respondent withheld petitioner's increment for the 2006-2007 school year based upon his failure to implement appropriate instructional managerial practices and disciplinary procedures in his gym classes, despite prior warnings in the previous school years. During the school year 2005-2006, petitioner continued to use derogatory names towards students and required that they sit within the storage closet as a form of discipline.

While petitioner claimed that the students were trying to get him in trouble, he failed to present any competent or credible evidence to support this contention.

Having focused largely on attacking the credibility of the students, petitioner failed to present even a modicum of evidence that the action of the school board in withholding his increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

In a proceeding such as this, the burden of proof by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence is upon the petitioner. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

Based upon the facts adduced and the legal principles cited above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met his burden of establishing that respondent's action was arbitrary, capricious, unlawful, or induced by improper motive. To the contrary, respondent had a reasonable basis for its action.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner be and is hereby denied a salary increment for the school year 2006-2007. And it is further ORDERED that the appeal filed by petitioner be and is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." These matters involving the tenure removal of an athletic director and three successive increment withholding appeals were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on four separate dates, for hearings as contested cases. On September 7, 2007, the cases were consolidated by Letter Order.

The hearing commenced on October 5, 2007. The parties entered into settlement negotiations and, as a result, resolved the within matter subject to the approval of the Commissioner.

On October 30, 2007, the parties placed the essential terms of the settlement on the record before me.

On November 20, 2007, the original Settlement Agreement was received and the record closed on that date.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures. (J-1) The Board approved the settlement as reflected by petitioner's counsel letter of November 16, 2007. (P-1)

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE CHARGES AGAINST MICHAEL RICH, FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION, MICHAEL RICH, vs. FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION SOMERSET COUNTY	OFFICE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW DOCKET NOS: EDUTH 4488-07S EDU 8763-05S EDU 8745-06S EDU 6800-07S (CONSOLIDATED CASES) Civil Action SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The parties have reached a complete settlement on all issues contained in the above captioned matters, which matters concern tenure charges alleged by the Board of Education, and three appeals of successive increment withholding actions by the Board, based on the same allegations as the tenure charges and the restoration of two out of three increments by the Board, in exchange for Mr. Rich's agreement to accept the withholding of one increment and to accept a transfer to a position of vice principal. The parties believe that this settlement is a reasonable compromise on all of the issues, and achieves an outcome that is responsible and realistic. The following factors are the keys to this settlement.

First, from the Board's perspective, the most serious of the infractions alleged in the tenure charges is the misappropriation of approximately $5,000.00 in gate receipts. From the beginning of the Board's investigation into this matter, it was believed that the money in question had been stolen by either Mr. Rich, the Bursar (who also handled gate receipts from time to time), or both; Mr. Rich has always vigorously resisted these allegations. In addition, at the time the instant charges were filed, the Bursar had resigned from the District. Thus, the tenure charges were only filed against Mr. Rich.

In the meantime, the Office of the Somerset County Prosecutor investigated a claim that the Bursar, on numerous occasions, had failed to deposit similar types of receipts, which she had collected from persons running non-athletic events. As a result of this investigation by the Prosecutor a criminal complaint and a warrant for the arrest of the Bursar (whose whereabouts are currently unknown), have been issued. In light of this development, the Board is now prepared to accept that the Bursar is likely to have misappropriated the athletic funds in question.

Second, by accepting a transfer to the position of vice principal, the Board is satisfied that none of the allegations in the tenure charges will occur again, because of the significant differences between the responsibilities of the two positions. Thus, the pursuit of tenure charges in order to achieve termination from the position of Director of Athletics, Health and Physical Education is no longer necessary. In addition, the Board is satisfied that Mr. Rich's experience in education and supervision will enable him to perform well as a vice principal, a belief shared by Mr. Rich.

Third, Mr. Rich acknowledges that he had not adequately supervised the athletic department and accordingly accepts the consequences of this settlement.

Fourth, the circumstantial nature of all of the charges would require many days of hearing to present the charges, and to defend against them, resulting in significant loss of administrative time and an expenditure of considerable funds for legal fees by the Board.

Finally, this settlement serves the public interest by achieving finality and certainty, with a responsible outcome.

The terms of the settlement are:

1. The tenure charges will be withdrawn.

2. The increment appeals will be withdrawn.

3. Mr. Rich will agree to a reassignment/transfer to the position of full-time vice principal, which shall be at the elementary level through June 30, 2008.

4. Mr. Rich will receive payment for 120 days of withheld salary, in the gross amount of $36,283.62.

5. Increments

   5.1 The increment withheld by the Board for the 2005-06 school year ($3,788.58) will be restored, and paid retroactively. Mr. Rich's 2005-06 salary will be $116,881.

   5.2 The increment withheld by the Board for the 2006-07 school year ($3,973.95) will be restored, and paid retroactively. His 2006-07 salary will be $120,855.

   5.3 The increment withheld by the Board for the 2007-08 school year (value not yet established at this point) will not be restored. Mr. Rich's 2007-08 salary will remain at its 2006-7 level ($120,855), and will not be adjusted for the 2007-08 school year, regardless of any salary adjustment eventually negotiated by FTSAA for the 2007-08 school year, for members of that bargaining unit.

   5.4 Following the 2007-08 school year, Mr. Rich's salary will be governed by FTSAAA negotiated settlement.

6. Mr. Rich will continue to receive salary payments at his current rate of pay, $113,092 until the settlement is approved by the Commissioner, all litigation has been dismissed and Mr. Rich has commenced employment as vice principal.

7. Upon his return to employment, Mr. Rich's salary will be increased as set forth above.

   7.1 Mr. Rich will receive payment for the retroactive salary adjustments set forth above.

   7.2 Mr. Rich will receive payment for the difference between his agreed upon salary for 2007-08 ($120,855) and his current salary ($113,092), for the time period between July 1, 2007 and the date he actually commences employment as vice-principal.

   7.3 Mr. Rich will receive payment in the amount of $315.60, representing the difference between the amount he received for payment of unused vacation time for 2005-06 and the amount at his adjusted salary.

   7.4 Mr. Rich will receive payment in the amount of $646.80, representing the difference between the amount he received for payment of unused vacation time for 2006-07 and the amount at his adjusted salary.

8. The Board recognizes that Mike Rich has tenure and seniority in the position of Director of Athletics, Health and Physical Education, which status survives this settlement.

9. Mr. Rich and the Board agree that there will be no further litigation/claims or other action related to this matter.

10. Mr. Rich has entered into this agreement with a full understanding of his rights.

11. The Board of Education has consented to the terms of this settlement.

7. Materiality of Provisions

The parties mutually acknowledge that each and every provision of this Agreement is material, and the breach of any provision shall be considered a material breach, which would relieve the non-breaching party of its performance obligations.

8. Effective Date

In the example, both the base salary and the pension rate were determined by the period of time covered by the reinstatement.

PERS AND TPAF MEMBERS ONLY

Chapter 62, P.L. 1994, eliminated the 2% Social Security offset in employee pension contributions as of July 1, 1995, and established a flat 5% pension rate of contribution. The 5% rate took effect for employees enrolled on or after July 1, 1994. The law provided for a gradual implementation of the new rate for members enrolled prior to July 1, 1994. As of July 1, 1995, if the full rate was 6% or more, it was changed to 5%. If the full rate was less than 6%, it was changed to 4% as of July 1, 1995, and 5% as of July 1, 1996. In accordance with Chapter 115, P.L. 1997, the member rate was lowered to 4.5% as of January 1, 1998.

Chapter 115, P.L. 1997 made possible a one-time accounting change which resulted in the systems being fully funded. Beginning January 1, 1998, employee pension contributions for the PERS and TPAF were reduced for calendar years 1998 and 1999, and for calendar year 2000 for the TPAF, from 5% to 4.5%. Effective January 1, 2004 the TPAF member contribution rate returned to 5% of pensionable salary.

Enrollment date before July 1, 1994.	No change in rate or Social Security offset.	If full rate was 6% or more, the rate changed to 5%. If full rate was less than 6%, the rate changed to 4%. 2% Social Security offset eliminated.	Rate remained 5%. Rate increased to 5%.	4.5%
Enrollment date July 1, 1994 or later.	Rate of contribution set at 5%. No Social Security offset.	Rate of contribution set at 5%. No Social Security offset.	Rate of contribution set at 5%. No Social Security offset.	4.5%

Chapter 415, P.L. 1999, reduced the PERS pension contribution rate from 4.5 % (the reduced rate under Chapter 115, P.L. 1997) to 3 % of pensionable salary. The rate change was effective January 1, 2000 and remained in effect until July 1, 2004 for State PERS members and until January 1, 2005 for local PERS members when contribution rates returned to the full 5% of pensionable salary.

AWARDS OF BACK PAY

A member who appeals the suspension or termination of his or her employment and is awarded back pay for all or a portion of such suspension or termination, shall receive retirement credit for the period covered by the award. This retirement credit is given regardless of the amount of back pay awarded, provided that the full normal employee pension contribution is received from the member or deducted from the value of the award.

The amount of the pension contribution will be determined by the provisions of the award.

1. If the member receives full back pay, including normal salary increases, then the contribution will be computed on the base salaries that the employee would have earned for the reinstated period of suspension or termination.
2. If the settlement is less than full back pay, the pension contributions will be based upon the salary that the member was receiving for pension purposes, prior to the suspension or termination of employment.

If the amount of back payment awarded is insufficient to deduct the value of the normal pension contributions due, such contributions shall be paid by the member.

EMPLOYER'S RESPONSIBILITIES

The certifying officer is responsible for providing the Division of Pensions and Benefits with the following:

1. A letter attesting to the base salary or salaries to be used to compute pension contributions.
2. A copy of the resolution or legal document that details the terms of the settlement. This settlement agreement must specifically state:
   - a. That an award of back pay has been made to the member.
   - b. The amount of back pay.
   - c. The dates covered by the award.

This information, along with pension and contributory life insurance premiums, if applicable, should be sent to the attention of the Supervisor of the Audit Section, Division of Pensions and Benefits, PO Box 295, Trenton, NJ 08625-0295. The Division cannot process a settlement agreement that does not contain this required information.

Members of the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund and the Public Employees' Retirement System who are covered under the contributory group life insurance must remit life insurance premiums. These premiums are computed on the same base salary as the pension contributions and remitted in the same manner as described above.

Once the required information and contributions have been received and audited, the member will be credited with service for the period covered by the award.

To determine the pension contributions due, you should use the appropriate base salary(ies) as priviously explained in "Awards of Back Pay". The pension rate to be used is determined by the rate in effect for the reinstated period. For example, a local PERS member appealed his August 1, 2004 termination, and on March 1, 2005, he was ordered reinstated with full back pay. The member's full pension rate in effect on August 1, 2004 was 3% and on January 1, 2005 increased to 5%. The annual base salaries for the reinstated period were $24,000 for August through November, and $25,500 from December through February. Pension contributions would be computed as shown in the following example:

Period 2004/05	Base Salary	Pension Rate*	Total Pension Contribution Due
August	$2,000	3%	$60.00
September	$2,000	3%	$60.00
October	$2,000	3%	$60.00
November	$2,000	3%	$60.00
December	$2,125	3%	$63.75
January	$2,125	5%	$160.25
February	$2,125	5%	$160.25
TOTAL	$14,375	—	$516.25

 For awards to members of PERS or TPAF covering 7-1-96 through 1-1-05, refer to the charts on page 2.*
For awards to members of PFRS use 8.5%.
For awards to members of SPRS use 7.5%.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

In October 2007, the petitioning charter school served an Order to Show Cause upon respondent, requiring her to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending her certificate – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 and 18A:28-8 – for resigning her position as Kindergarten teacher without providing the notice required by her contract, and the 60-day notice required by law. The respondent failed to answer the order. Respondent was duly advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to respond would cause each allegation in petitioner's papers to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner.

There being no response to the order to show cause, the Commissioner concluded that the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted, and are sufficient to justify suspension of respondent's certification. Accordingly, summary decision is granted to petitioner, and respondent's certificate is suspended for a period of one year from the date of the filing of this decision – a copy of which has been forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for the purpose of effectuating this order.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION : OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATION OF TARA HEMERICK, GREY CHARTER SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY. :

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

For Petitioner, Sills Cummis & Gross

Respondent: No appearance by or on behalf of Tara Hemerick

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on October 9, 2007, by way of an Order to Show Cause served by petitioner, Grey Charter School, upon respondent, Tara Hemerick, requiring respondent to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending her teaching certificate, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 and 18A:28-8, for resigning without providing the amount of notice required by her contract with respondent, and for failing to provide the 60 days notice required by law. By notice dated October 9, 2007, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (the Bureau) acknowledged receipt of proof of service upon respondent of the order to show cause.

On November 21, 2007, the Bureau sent respondent a final notice, via regular and certified mail, directing respondent to file an answer within ten days. The final notice advised that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), failure to respond would cause each allegation in petitioner's papers to be deemed admitted, and might result in summary decision by the Commissioner. Neither the notice sent by certified mail nor the notice sent by regular mail was returned., and no answer to the order to show cause has been filed as of this date.

As stated above, the final notice to respondent clearly advised that if an answer was not filed within ten days of receipt of same, each allegation in the papers supporting the order to show cause would be deemed to have been admitted and the Commissioner might decide the matter on a summary basis. The Commissioner now concludes that the allegations, which respondent has chosen not to deny, may be deemed admitted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e), and are sufficient to justify an order suspending respondent's teaching certification.

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that summary decision is granted to petitioner, and respondent's teaching certification is suspended for a period of one year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 and 18A:28-8.[1]

S.M., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILDREN, S.M. AND Y.M.,

PETITIONER,

V.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BLOOMFIELD, ESSEX COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a residency appeal on behalf of her children, who were enrolled as high school students in the Bloomfield School System in September 2007. The respondent sought reimbursement of tuition for the period of S.M. and Y.M.'s alleged ineligible attendance. Petitioner failed to appear at a November 2007 hearing, and respondent moved to dismiss the petition on the basis that petitioner failed to prosecute her case.

The ALJ found that: petitioner failed to prosecute her appeal, leaving no basis to consider overturning the residency determination of the respondent Board, and respondent's proofs as to ineligibility and tuition rate were convincing and satisfy its burden of proof for the counterclaim The ALJ concluded that petitioner must pay the respondent tuition in the amount of $2,404.42 for the period of ineligible attendance.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ, adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, ordered petitioner to compensate the Board for tuition owed, and dismissed the petition. The Commissioner noted that no findings were made with respect to the suggestion in the Initial Decision that petitioner may be homeless, and that the procedures of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.1 et seq. must be implemented if petitioner now claims to be so.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BLOOMFIELD, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs that the petitioner – having failed to appear at hearing or file an explanation for such failure – has not demonstrated S.M. and Y.M.'s entitlement to attend the schools of the district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, and that the Bloomfield Board of Education is entitled to collect tuition for the period of their ineligible attendance in the district.*

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL – directing disenrollment of S.M. and Y.M. from the Bloomfield schools and petitioner's reimbursement to the Board of $2,404.42 in tuition – is adopted as the final decision in this matter. In so holding, the Commissioner stresses that no findings are made herein with respect to any suggestion (Initial Decision at 4-5) that the petitioner may be homeless; however, if she now claims to be such, the parties and the Essex County Superintendent of Schools – by copy of this decision – are reminded that the procedures of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.1 et seq. must be implemented forthwith.

INITIAL DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 09962-07

AGENCY DKT. NO. 262-9/07

S.M., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILDREN, S.M. AND Y.M.,

Petitioners,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BLOOMFIELD, ESSEX COUNTY,

Respondents.

S.M., pro se, Failed to Appear

Mark A. Wenczel, Esq., for respondents (Gaccione, Pomaco & Malanga, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 21, 2007 Decided: November 29, 2007

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioners (S.M.) appealed on September 12, 2007 from the denial by the Board of Education of the Township of Bloomfield, Essex County (respondent/BOE) to allow her children (S.M. and Y.M.) to be educated in the Bloomfield School System. Bloomfield denied the petitioner's attendance at its school, based on the fact that the children were not domiciled in the District. The respondent filed an Answer and Counterclaim requesting the re-imbursement of tuition for Y.M.[1] from the period beginning September 2007. The matter was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on October 3, 2007 and set down for a hearing on November 21, 2007. By 10:00 a.m. on the date of the hearing, the petitioner had failed to appear. The Board then moved to dismiss S.M.'s petition, on the basis that she failed to appear and prosecute her case. The District presented proof that on November 14, 2007 Mr. Wenczel, attorney for the Board of Education, had left a copy of the documents, that it planned to rely upon at the hearing and a copy of the subpoenas, that it had served on the petitioner's alleged landlord, at the last known residence of the petitioner. The respondent's motion was granted on the understanding that the file would be held for 24 hours to allow the petitioner to contact the court if there was a good reason why she did not appear. Since the petitioner did not contact the OAL, the District's motion is granted. The District presented its case for tuition reimbursement.

ISSUE

1. Whether the respondent is entitled to tuition reimbursement.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the testimony presented and the documentary evidence submitted, and having had an opportunity to observe the witness and to assess her credibility, I make the following FINDINGS OF FACT:

1. S.M. came to the office of the Bloomfield Board of Education in September 2007 and asked for registration forms to register her two children in the school system.
2. Dr. Nicolette Salerno, administrator of residency for the District, requested that S.M. present proof of residency, such as a lease, mortgage documents or utility bill to show proof of residency. S.M.

[1] The Board is not requesting tuition re-imbursement for S.M. because they believe that, because he is a special education student, they cannot seek re-imbursement.

stated that she was staying with her father. The District asked for an affidavit from the father and the completion of certain residency forms provided by the District. S.M. refused to complete the requested forms. The only information provided was a letter from Grandville Lawrence (not notarized) stating that S.M. and her children were living with him.

3. Dr. Salerno requested that S.M. show establishment of residency by opening a bank account, or showing an address on a pay stub or providing a change of address from the post office. S.M. did not provide this information.

4. S.M. did provide certain personal information regarding her children. However, she failed to provide a copy of her children's birth certificates, which was requested.

5. Vincent Barba, compliance officer for the Bloomfield BOE conducted surveillance at the alleged residence of the petitioner on November 13, 2007 at 3:00 p.m. At 4:00 a woman identifying herself as an owner of the building (later identified as Ms. Chitty) left the residence. Mr. Barba identified himself and asked if S.M. and her children were tenants in the upstairs apartment. Ms. Chitty answered no and then proceeded to call her mother (co-owner of the residence) on her cell phone. Mr. Barba asked if S.M. lived in the upstairs apartment. The woman (Mrs. Wilson) stated that the tenants on the second floor had asked if S.M. and her family could live with them for a short time until she got on her feet. Ms. Wilson allowed this under those circumstances. However, S.M. and her children were no longer living at the property and had not lived there for several months.

6. Ms. Chitty testified that S.M. and her children had moved in with Mr. Granville Lawrence and his sister, Leeann Harris, during the summer of 2007. They all occupied a two bedroom apartment. The last time that she saw S.M. at the property was about one month ago. She never had a conversation with S.M.

7. Mrs. Wilson testified that Ms. Harris had asked her to allow a family member, who was having difficulties, to live in the apartment until she got on her feet. Since this situation had occurred before and Mrs. Wilson had not had any problem, she said that she would allow it on a short term basis. Mrs. Wilson did not know that S.M. would be moving in with her children.

8. The landlord never received rent from S.M. and did not consider her a tenant.

9. Prior to moving to the Bloomfield address, S.M. and her children had a four month residency in Irvington. However, the last school that they attended was in Newark.

10. Y.M. is a 9th grade student. He attended school for 45 school days. Tuition for a student in that grade is $9,778 per year. The per diem rate is $53.43 based on dividing the annual tuition by 180 days. On that basis the district is owed $2,404.42 for tuition for Y.M. for the period he attended the school district.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Public education must be provided free to persons over six and up to twenty years of age, who are domiciled within the School District - N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). "The domicile of a person is a place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, into which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving...." In the Matter of Unanue 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374 (Law Division 1991). Minors lack the capacity to choose their own domicile and thus their domicile is that of their parent or guardian.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38 b(2) allows the district to apply for removal of the child from the District, if they do not meet the statutory requirement and to ask for the reimbursement of tuition costs during the period of ineligibility. The petitioner failed to appear and present proof that she and her children were domiciled in Bloomfield. From the testimony elicited from Mrs. Wilson it is clear that she gave her tenants permission to have S.M. live at the residence for a short period of time. In fact, S.M. no longer lives at the address provided to the District. If the petitioner is homeless, her homelessness did not arise out of her residency in Bloomfield, but rather from Newark or Irvington. Therefore, the District is not responsible for educating S.M. and Y.M.

CONCLUSION

Based on the testimony and proofs presented, I CONCLUDE that the District has met its burden under N.J.S.A. 18A:38 b(2) that S.M. and Y.M. were not domiciled in Bloomfield and therefore are not entitled to a free education in the District. I further CONCLUDE that Y.M. was educated in the district for a period of 45 days at the tuition rate of $53.43 per day for a total of $2,404.42 for which the district is entitled to reimbursement.

ORDER

I ORDER that the District's application for tuition reimbursement in the amount of $2,404.42 is hereby GRANTED and S.M. and Y.M. are ORDERED to be immediately disenrolled from the District.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner sought an order from the Commissioner to compel respondent charter school to expunge certain records from her son's school file. Respondent contended that petitioner's appeal was time-barred, having been filed on June 29, 2007, well beyond 90 days after the August 2006 letter which informed the petitioner that respondent had refused her request for expungement.

The ALJ found that: C.G.'s statements, included in the records that petitioner seeks to expunge, demonstrate conduct of such character as to constitute a continuing danger to the physical well-being of other pupils, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2; petitioner provided no evidence that respondent either acted in bad faith or did not act reasonably when compiling C.G.'s student records, nor does petitioner assert that these incidents did not occur; and petitioner should have filed her request for expungement of C.G.'s records within 90 days of August 21, 2006, but waited approximately eleven months to do so. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the appeal is time barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), denied the petitioner's motion for partial summary decision, and dismissed the petition.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petition is properly dismissed for failure to meet the 90 day rule, and denied petitioner's motion for partial summary decision.

J.G. on behalf of minor child, C.G.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
GALLOWAY COMMUNITY CHARTER SCHOOL, ATLANTIC COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This matter comes before the Commissioner by way of a "Motion for Partial Summary Disposition," wherein petitioner, J.G., requested that most of her minor child's (C.G.) disciplinary record be expunged. The Commissioner has reviewed the record, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the parties' exceptions and reply exceptions, and concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that petitioner's appeal was not timely filed.

While C.G. was in seventh grade, he was disciplined for inappropriate behavior towards other students. Incident reports regarding the discipline, and other undated and unsigned writings describing the behavior, were put into his student file. The appeal before the Commissioner does not challenge the discipline itself, but rather demands removal of the documents describing C.G.'s behavior.

As outlined in the respondent's brief – the better part of which was set forth in the Initial Decision – petitioner was provided with a copy of C.G.'s file, including the portions reflecting disciplinary matters, on or about July 19, 2006. She wrote to respondent on August 21, 2006, appealing "its decision to keep certain records in [C.G.'s] files." (Exhibit E of "Respondent's Brief in Opposition to Petitioner's Motion for Partial Summary Disposition.") Respondent declined to change its position and petitioner eventually filed a petition of appeal to the Commissioner on June 29, 2007.

The respondent urged, and the ALJ agreed, that petitioner should have filed her appeal to the Commissioner concerning the records within 90 days of August 21, 2006, the date of the letter that indicated that respondent had refused petitioner's request for expungement of the materials in C.G.'s file. The Commissioner notes, however, that on October 4, 2006, the parties executed a "Consent Order," which was included in the record of this matter.[1] The Consent Order delineated a schedule for evaluations of C.G. after which a meeting was to take place to develop an Individual Education Program (IEP) for him; the last paragraph of the order provided that the petitioner reserved "all rights to future action with respect to any program, placement, and record issues." (Emphasis added.) Petitioner argues that the Consent Order extended the limitations period for filing an appeal concerning C.G.'s records.

The Commissioner finds that it is not unreasonable to regard the limitations period as having been consensually extended for the time period required for the terms of the "Consent Order" to be effectuated. However, the facts show that those terms – i.e., completion of evaluations and the scheduling of an IEP meeting – appear to have been accomplished before March 28, 2007, when C.G. returned to school. Thus, even if the Commissioner deemed the appeal deadline to have been deferred until after the agreed upon evaluations were completed and an IEP meeting was held, the petition was still not timely filed.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), petitioners are required to file their appeals within 90-days of the action about which they complain. This limitations period was established many years ago to ensure a measure of repose in education matters. Kaprow v. Board of Educ.

[1] The "Order" does not appear to have been signed by the ALJ.

of Berkeley Tp., 255 N.J. Super. 76, 86 (App. Div. 1992). It has been the subject of many appeals to the courts, which have explained that an agency's construction of such a statute over a period of years without legislative interference is to be given great weight as reflecting conformity with legislative intent. Nor has the Legislature expressed any disagreement with the Commissioner's and State Board of Education's construction of the regulation. Id. at 87.

The general language in the last paragraph of the Consent Order cannot serve as a proper basis upon which to indefinitely defer the filing before the Commissioner of petitioner's claims. Accordingly, the Commissioner denies petitioner's motion for partial summary decision and dismisses the petition for untimeliness.

Petitioning preschool contends that respondent Board did not provide proper notification of intent not to renew its Abbott provider contract for the 2007-08 school year, and appeals both the Board's decision and the NJDOE Division of Early Childhood Education's affirmation of it.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Board failed to adhere to the procedural requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b) in notifying the petitioner of its intent to nonrenew; petitioner's efforts to address tasks as agreed to in a 2005-06 corrective action plan (CAP) support petitioner's contention that it is able and willing to provide required preschool services; and respondents failed to prove that petitioner is not able and willing to continue as an Abbott preschool provider. The ALJ ordered that the decision of the Division of Early Childhood Education, affirming the Board's action, be reversed; the ALJ further recommended that the Board enter into a contract for the 2007-08 school year with petitioner, and provide appropriate notice of same to parents of preschool-eligible students in the district.

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision of the OAL. The Commissioner found that, under the particular circumstances of this matter, the Board's technical violation of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b) did not prevent petitioner from receiving adequate notice, that CAP and budget approval are not, in themselves, sufficient to demonstrate ability and willingness to meet Abbott standards, and that the Board and Department demonstrated a sufficient basis for their conclusion that nonrenewal of petitioner's contract was appropriate and consistent with law.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have exceptions from the Irvington Board of Education (Board) and the Department of Education (Department) – both filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and 1:1-18.8 – and the petitioner's reply to same.

[1] The petitioner in this matter is variously identified – throughout the papers and by all parties including the petitioner itself – as either "Toddlertown" or "Toddler Town." Although the latter appears on the school's official letterhead, the former is retained in the present decision because the parties' dispute was pleaded, and has proceeded from the outset, under this appellation.

Substantially reiterating arguments raised at the OAL, the Board's exceptions urge rejection of the Initial Decision in its entirety. The Board again asserts that it met the necessary procedural requirements for nonrenewal of its contract with the petitioner by providing: 1) notice of such nonrenewal on or before March 1 as stipulated by the contract – which does not require a statement of reasons; and 2) reasons for its dissatisfaction in documented communications throughout the course of the preceding year, and again during the review process at the Department as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2.3(b) – which does not set a date or prescribe limitations of time for such provision. The finding of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) to the contrary, according to the Board, places form over substance and ignores that the petitioner had – at the very least – ample constructive notice of the matters of concern to the Board, so that it was fully able to defend its own position before both the Department and, later, the OAL. (Board's Exceptions at 2, 5-9)

The Board further reasserts that the petitioner is not "able and willing" to comply with standards for provision of Abbott preschool programs, as evidenced by the significant financial, operational and facility issues identified by the Office of Compliance Investigation (OCI) report – several of which remain outstanding – and the judgment of the Department liaison to the Board (Jessica Peters), who testified at length as to her observations of, and experience with, the petitioner's operations and facility. To the contrary, the Board contends, the record evinces a "long and documented history of, among other concerns, excessive lease payments; questionable payroll, food and other expenditures; inferior classroom sizes; inadequate security; and various other financial irregularities and educational program-related deficiencies…the existence of which was not denied and the remediation of which was woefully incomplete." (Board's Exceptions at 1, 3, 9-12; quotation at 1 and 3)

The Department's exceptions, likewise reiterating prior OAL argument, also urge rejection of the Initial Decision. The Department first takes exception – for reasons similar to those of the Board – to the ALJ's findings on the petitioner's ability and willingness to meet Abbott standards (Department's Exceptions at 1-3). It further asserts that it did not act arbitrarily or unreasonably in affirming the Board's decision not to renew petitioner's contract, since in reviewing this decision, it had before it ample evidence of both the petitioner's noncompliance with Abbott standards and the Board's history of written communications with the petitioner – the latter ensuring that the petitioner would (and, in fact, did) have sufficient opportunity to refute the Board's decision consistent with the intent and purpose of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2-3(b). (Id. at 3-6)

The petitioner, on the other hand, urges adoption of the Initial Decision in its entirety, addressing the Board's and the Department's (respondents) respective exceptions in a single reply that, like respondents' exceptions, substantially renews arguments raised at the OAL. The petitioner first contends the ALJ correctly found it "able and willing" to meet Abbott standards, since the OCI report so heavily relied upon by the respondents is not current and petitioner is in "substantial compliance" with the ensuing corrective action plan (CAP); further, according to the petitioner, any claims of breach of contract are belied by the fact that the Board never once invoked the process set forth in rule (N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(d)) for addressing such claims. The petitioner also asserts that the ALJ rightly rejected the respondents' contentions with respect to classroom size, attendance at training sessions, use of preschool premises as a law office, and lack of security, since the respondents have engaged in a "disingenuous pattern" of misrepresentation to "portray a lopsided and incomplete version of events" through "overblown assertions" having little or no basis in fact. In sum, according to the petitioner, the respondents were "unable to effectively demonstrate [either] a single breach of the Abbott preschool contract, [or] a single instance of noncompliance with the Code by Petitioner." (Petitioner's Reply at 1-5, 20; quotations at 1-5 passim and 20)

On the question of the Board's compliance with applicable nonrenewal procedure, the petitioner reiterates its argument that N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2-3(b) requires reasons for a nonrenewal decision to be given along with the decision, asserting that the interpretation espoused by the respondents would leave a provider to guess at a board's reasons for nonrenewal, thus precluding it from mounting a prompt and thorough refutation within the very short time frame allowed by the rule and causing all manner of procedural confusion and delay. According to the petitioner, there can be no doubt that the Board violated N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2-3(b) or that the Department acted arbitrarily and unreasonably in upholding the Board's decision despite such violation, since the Board's "evidence" of its purported notice is nothing more than a series of "cherry-picked" communications that are erroneous, disputed, unclear, or devoid of mention of nonrenewal as a consequence – while the Department had no authority to ignore a duly promulgated administrative rule, nor to interpret it in a manner contrary to its obvious purpose and intent. (Petitioner's Reply at 5-10, 10-20, 20-22)

Upon careful review and consideration, for the reasons that follow, the Commissioner rejects the Initial Decision and dismisses the petition of appeal.

Initially, the Commissioner fully concurs with the petitioner and the ALJ that N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2.3(b) does, in fact, contemplate that a statement of reasons will be given to a provider contemporaneous with notice of a board's decision not to renew its contract, and that the Board herein failed to take this specific action. However, she also concurs with the Department that – under the particular circumstances here present – the Board's violation was effectively technical and does not act to preclude substantive review of the Board's underlying reasons, either by the Department or by the Commissioner on appeal.

There is no question that the Board in this matter did not articulate its reasons for nonrenewal within the body of – or in any addendum to – the letter notifying the petitioner of its intent not to renew the petitioner's contract for the 2007-08 school year, notwithstanding that the letter itself was provided within the time frame specified by the parties' contract.[2] However, given the documented history of escalating communications between the parties regarding ongoing problems perceived by Board officials – many of them validated by on-site observations of Department staff and Department assessment of CAP implementation issues arising from an OCI report which, it is noted, the petitioner did not appeal – the petitioner cannot creditably claim that it was taken by surprise on receiving notice, as the contractual deadline approached, of a Board decision not to renew – notwithstanding the absence of prior specific mention by the Board of nonrenewal as a consequence for its concerns; nor can it persuasively contend that it could not sufficiently fathom the reasons for such decision so as to undertake preparation of a meaningful rebuttal. Indeed, as the Department notes, the petitioner was, in fact, able to present a very substantial response to the Board's reasons during the course of its review – and again at the OAL hearing – so that the purpose of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2.3(b) was satisfied both at the Department level and on appeal, and the petitioner's claims of prejudice and denial of due process cannot reasonably stand.[3]

[2] That preschool provider contracts are required to utilize a standard Department form with any alteration requiring Department approval (N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(c)-(d)) is yet another indication that the contract and nonrenewal rules are intended to work in tandem.

Consequently, in the Commissioner's view, while the Board should have articulated its reasons along with giving notice of intent as contemplated by rule, the omission of such articulation in this instance does not negate the past history of communications between the parties, nor does it render the Department's approval – which the record shows to have been based both on its own direct knowledge and the parties' extensive submissions on review – inherently arbitrary and unreasonable as found by the ALJ. Rather, it is clear that Department staff (appropriately) looked beyond the letter of the procedural rule to its intent in light of the underlying situation and – recognizing that the petitioner was well aware of the Board's (and the Department's) ongoing concerns with various aspects of the petitioner's operations and that the petitioner was being afforded the due process to which it was entitled – reviewed the matter on the merits and determined – both on an independent, individual basis and as a team – that the Board's decision to end its relationship with the petitioner had sufficient substantive basis, made appropriate provision for educating the petitioner's students

[3] The petitioner cautions that the Department's lax interpretation of the rule's requirement for reasons will lead to situations where a provider could be totally surprised by, or have to "dig" for reasons that might explain, a Board decision not to renew its contract. The Commissioner does not disagree that boards cannot be permitted to have carte blanche with respect to how and when they notify a provider that its contract will not be renewed. However, there is no question here of the rule's intended meaning, only of the Department's application of it under specific factual circumstances where it knew the provider to be well aware of the board's concerns. That the petitioner herein was able to prepare for Department review as it did was not, as the petitioner contends, due solely to the competence and dedication of its legal counsel and staff. (Petitioner's Reply at 16-17)

elsewhere, and did not place the Board in violation of Abbott law requiring utilization of community providers. (Testimony of David Joye, T4 at 46-128; testimony of Jessica Peters, T3 at 120-22, 134-54[4])

Thus, under these circumstances, the Commissioner finds that the Board may be deemed to have substantially complied with the notice requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A:2.3(b), notwithstanding its technical violation, and that the Department did not err in so concluding. The question remains, however, as to whether the Board's decision to nonrenew and the Department's affirmation of it are arbitrary and unreasonable so as to warrant reversal by the Commissioner. On this point, the Commissioner, again, cannot concur with the Initial Decision, finding – as it did with the question of sufficiency of the Board's notice – that the decision effectively places form over substance, ignoring evidence demonstrating legitimate concerns on the part of the Board and minimizing the import of these concerns in terms of the provider's willingness and ability to meet Abbott standards.

In his recommended decision, the ALJ concludes that the petitioner was "able and willing" to continue as an Abbott preschool provider, as evidenced by its entry into a Board and Department-approved CAP which addressed budgetary and staffing issues, often without specific time frames for implementation, and by Department approval of the petitioner's 2005-06 and 2006-07 budgets – as well as by the respondents' failure to substantiate with sufficient evidence their claims as to classroom size, "no show" jobs, and failure to attend training sessions for the Curiosity Corner curriculum. (Initial Decision at 5-6) [4] These and all subsequent similar citations refer to the transcripts of OAL hearings held on June 21, 2007 (T1), June 22, 2007 (T2), July 10, 2007 (T3) and August 10, 2007 (T4).

However, with respect to the Board's contentions regarding 1) a law practice and other businesses utilizing the school building while the Abbott program was being charged for the entire rent, 2) the security guard paid with Abbott funds not working in the budgeted position and found absent or not visible during site visits, and 3) questionable and disallowable expenditures, the undisputed fact that the petitioner has made material progress in meeting various elements of the CAP, and had its budgets approved for the period at issue, does not alter the equally obvious fact that the question of full Abbott usage of the petitioner's facility has still not been resolved to the Board's (or the Department's) satisfaction;[5] nor does it excuse inappropriate usage of budgeted staff positions[6] or dilatoriness in compliance with CAP directives and related Department or district requests, notwithstanding the absence of a fixed deadline.[7] Similarly, the fact that other providers still used by the Board may also have budget and accounting issues identified through OCI reports does not preclude the Board or Department from citing such issues as a basis for a decision not to renew a particular provider's contract. The Department's budget approval and OCI-CAP processes are separate and distinct from the process for review of nonrenewal decisions, and – although the results of one may have relevance to findings in another – budget and CAP approval cannot, in and of themselves, be taken as sanctioning of actions or omissions later raised as concerns in a nonrewal proceeding so as to insulate these from Department (or Commissioner) review.[8]

The Commissioner does concur with the ALJ – as did the Department – that no evidence was presented to support the allegation that the petitioner's director also held another position as cruise director.

With respect to the Board's remaining "unsubstantiated" reasons, the ALJ has effectively held the Board to proving its allegations precisely as they are stated in its February 21, 2007 and March 1, 2007 letters, while ignoring the fact that underlying the Board's inartful articulation were legitimate concerns which were more than adequately validated by the record, and of which all parties to this matter were clearly aware. In finding the Department's witness "unable to specify which 'no show' jobs [he found] troubling" (Initial Decision at 5), the ALJ has ignored the witness's explanation that he understood "no show" jobs to encompass questions of staff supported by Abbott funds performing non-Abbott work during the course of the school day. (T4 at 102) With respect to the Board's allegations of "substandard" classroom sizes despite "a significant amount of the building [being] used for office space," the record is clear that what Board and Department officials understood by "substandard" was not that the petitioner's classrooms were in violation of the regulatory minimum applicable to them as "grandfathered" spaces, but rather that usage of the petitioner's facility – in the interest of improving the students' educational environment – could have been, but was not, adjusted to decrease administrative space and increase classroom size to something closer to the current standard for "non-grandfathered" facilities. (T3 at 238-40, 137-40, 158-65, 175-76, 181; T4 at 11-26, 103-05) With respect to the Board's contention that the petitioner failed to attend Curiosity Corner training, the ALJ did not find in favor of the petitioner, as the petitioner suggests, but rather declined to make any finding at all because he judged the proofs to be in equipoise.

[8] The Commissioner notes that, in any event – and as implicitly recognized in the ALJ's conclusions (Initial Decision at 10) – the approved budget did not include the rent increase sought by the petitioner based on its claim of full Abbott facility usage. (T4 at 99)

Compounding the problem is the Board's repeated use of the terms "breach" and "violation," which sound in termination for cause and permit the petitioner to counter (correctly) that 1) the Board cannot claim breach of contract where it never availed itself of contractual (N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(f)) and regulatory processes (N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(d)) specifically established to address such claims, and 2) the Board did not prove violation of any specified rule or statute. This matter, however, involves the nonrenewal – not the termination – of a preschool provider contract, so that it is not subject to the more stringent standards governing the latter; nor can it be overlooked that no provider is entitled to renewal of its annual contract, and a board is not obliged to give any particular provider a new contract so long as its decision to nonrenew can withstand Department scrutiny.

Under this circumstance, all the Department – and the Commissioner on appeal – need determine is that a board's decision has a reasonable basis, that alternative means exist to educate the provider's students, and that the board is not violating the prohibition against duplication of community provider services where available providers are able and willing to meet Abbott standards and use of their services is practical. In the Commissioner's view, adoption of the narrow, technical approach espoused in the Initial Decision sets a standard that would tie boards' hands in seeking optimal implementation of their preschool programs, effectively requiring providers to be noncompliant to the point of warranting mid-contract termination due to major deficiencies or egregious violation of law before a board can be allowed to cease offering them annual contracts based on the reasonable belief that continued use of their services is not practical as a result of ongoing issues in the application of Abbott standards. This is particularly so where, as here, legitimate board and Department concerns are met with insistent denial, trivialization, misunderstanding or misrepresentation, and where compliance with the full range of stringent fiscal and accounting requirements associated with status as an Abbott provider is grudging at best and often open to question.[9]

In so holding, the Commissioner fully recognizes that the Board and its agents are not without fault in their handling of the nonrenewal of the petitioner's contract; indeed, many of the difficulties presented by this matter are due to the Board's lack of attention to proper procedure[10] and its imprecise articulation of the reasons for its underlying decision. However, under the circumstances here present, the appropriate

[9] Examples abound in the record of this matter. For instance: The petitioner's witness (executive director) is adamant that no external legal work is being done at the petitioner's facility during Abbott hours, and plainly annoyed that the Board and Department continue to press this point (T1 and T2, passim); yet she states that the petitioner's in-house counsel (her daughter) – who she claims is a full-time, on-site Abbott employee – keeps an office in East Orange because she does not want to meet with law clients at the preschool facility during the business day. (T2 at 176-77) She is equally adamant that there is no issue with the security guard performing appropriate duties; yet when he was not at his station during an on-site visit by Board and Department staff, who were accompanied by the witness and her son, she stated in response to staff questioning that the guard had gone to get paper towels, then later advised them that she was mistaken because her son was the security guard and had been with them the whole time. (T3 at 35, 47-49, 102-106, 178-79) She insists that the OCI did not single out the petitioner for audit, and that the audit referenced in this matter was random, routine and performed on all providers in the district; yet the record is unequivocally clear that it was initiated by a referral from the Department liaison based on conversations with the district. (T1 at 85-90, 102-03; T4 at 65-66; Exhibit P-24) She denies receiving communications claimed to have been sent to her by Board staff, contending that they are after-the-fact "fakes" fabricated to bolster the Board's case. (T2 at 178-79) Throughout her testimony, she alternately claims that the Board's action is 1) in retaliation for the petitioner's exercise of its rights in challenging the Board, first in its (incorrect and unsuccessful) characterization of a teacher as unqualified and then in its claim that the petitioner's classrooms were "substandard" when they, in fact, met applicable space requirements, and/or 2) an attempt to fill its own new preschool with the petitioner's students; yet there is no evidence to support either of these contentions, which are at the very least countered by credible testimony from Board and Department witnesses. (T1 and T2, passim; T3 at 104, 132-148, 194-203) remedy for the errors made by the Board is not to compel it to continue contracting with a provider with whom it has had ongoing, State-validated concerns – particularly where alternatives are now available and the petitioner's ability and willingness to freely meet the full range of Abbott standards is belied by the resistance it has shown on this record to requirements it considers unreasonable or trivial. While the ALJ is correct in observing that procedural rules are "not to be ignored" (Initial Decision at 9), in a matter of this type – in order to fulfill her obligation to ensure that Abbott programs are delivered, and Abbott monies spent in accordance with their intended purpose – the Commissioner cannot allow the letter of the law to prevail over its spirit and intent when the latter dictate a contrary result.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected for the reasons expressed herein, and the petition of appeal is dismissed.[11]

[11] Based on statements in the petitioner's exceptions (at 23) and, more particularly, in papers filed before the State Board of Education in conjunction with the petitioner's motion for emergent relief seeking issuance of a final Commissioner decision by December 21, 2007 notwithstanding the provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act, the Commissioner is aware that a number of Board students continue to attend the petitioner's school, apparently without payment of tuition in whole or part. While the Commissioner clarifies that she intends nothing in this decision to compel parents to transfer their children mid-year to an Abbott facility within the district, she concomitantly clarifies that the Board is not responsible for the payment of tuition for any time these students have thus far attended, or continue to attend for the balance of the 2007-08 school year. The Commissioner further reminds the parties that emergent relief was denied in this matter, and that the ALJ's initial decision in the petitioner's favor was a recommendation having no force and effect unless and until adopted by the Commissioner; thus, any action the petitioner may now deem to be to its detriment was taken at its own peril.

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Irvington Board of Education ("Board") notified Toddlertown Child Care Center ("Petitioner") of its intent not to renew its preschool provider contract for the 2007-2008 school year. Petitioner contends that it did not receive proper notification from the Board. Petitioner appeals both the Board's decision and the Division of Early Childhood Education ("DECE") affirmation of that decision.

On February 27, 2007, petitioner sought an interim order from the Commissioner of the Department of Education enjoining the Board from withholding rental payments. OAL Docket No.: EDU03041-2007, Agency Docket No.: 58-2/07. (Toddlertown I) On March 15, 2007, petitioner filed an amended petition with the Commissioner challenging the non-renewal and a motion for emergent relief. On March 16, 2007, the Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") where it was filed as a contested case. After hearing oral arguments on March 22, 2007, I granted the motion for emergent relief. (Toddlertown II) On April 5, 2007, the Commissioner rejected my recommended Order on the basis that the Board's non-renewal of petitioner's contract had not been presented to DECE for affirmation or denial as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b). The Commissioner transferred the non-renewal matter to DECE and, after receipt of additional submissions from both the Board and petitioner by April 13, 2007, the DECE, on April 26, 2007, decided to affirm the Board's decision not to renew. On May 11, 2007, petitioner filed an appeal and a motion for emergent relief. After hearing oral argument on May 30, 2007, I declined to grant emergent relief. OAL Docket No.: EDU05430-2007, Agency Docket No.: 129-5/07. (Toddlertown III) I consolidated Toddlertown I, II, III and held hearings at the OAL on June 21, 2007, June 22, 2007, July 10, 2007 and August 10, 2007. The record closed on September 4, 2007 upon the receipt of briefs.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The following facts are not in dispute, and I FIND them to be FACTS of this matter:

The Irvington public school district is an "Abbott" district which receives public state funds for the provision of free preschool services for all three and four year old children who reside within the Township of Irvington. The New Jersey Department of Education ("DOE"), specifically, its Division of Early Childhood Education ("DECE"), is charged with overseeing the publicly funded preschool programs throughout the state. Both the New Jersey Supreme Court and the DOE mandate that Abbott districts must collaborate with local child care providers to implement required preschool programs.

Beginning on or about 1999, the Board contracted with petitioner to provide Abbott preschool programs for the district on a year to year basis.

By letter of February 21, 2007, Audrey Lassiter, Director of Early Childhood Education for Board advised the district's Assistant Superintendent of a number of "problems with the management of Toddler Town Child Care with respect to honoring the conditions of the contract". Petitioner was not copied for purposes of this letter. By letter of February 23, 2007, petitioner was notified of the Board's decision not to renew the contract for the 2007-2008 school year. No reasons were given in the letter for the non-renewal decision. By letter of March 1, 2007 to the DECE, Lassiter reiterates the "problems" previously listed in the February 21, 2007 letter as "contributing factors" to the district's decision "not to renew". This letter, not copied to petitioner, informs the DECE that "due to the opening of the new in-district preschool, Irvington Public Schools has made a decision not to renew our contract with Toddlertown Child Care Center".

There is a dispute as to whether petitioner was "able and willing" to meet the quality standards of Abbott preschool programs and deliver the corresponding services. Lassiter enumerates, in her February 21, 2007 letter, a number of problems with respect to "honoring the conditions of the contract" and she subsequently repeats the identical problems or "contributing factors" as the basis for the Board's decision in her March 1, 2007 letter to the DECE. The following problems are specifically listed in both letters.

"The OCI report substantiates what has been our belief for several years that there is the existence of a law practice and other businesses utilizing the building while the Abbott Program is charged for total lease cost.

Refusal to comply with OCI auditor and early childhood liaison's request to remove law firm name from exterior glass door.

According to the OCI report findings, the director holds another position as cruise director

Eight out of the ten contracted classrooms have substandard classroom sizes although a significant amount of the building is used for office space

Salaries paid to workers for no show jobs

The fulltime paid security person is not working in the position budgeted for in the 2006-2007 contract

Toddler Town requested and was approved for a fulltime security guard during the operational hours of the Abbott Educational Program. We have found during site visits that the security person either absent or not visible during entry into the building and lack of a security desk located in the entry area of the building.

Constant submission of questionable and disallowable expenditures
Did not attend training of new curriculum, Curiosity Corner."

Jessica Peters, Education Program Development Specialist with DOE, highlighted DECE's reasons for affirming the Board's non-renewal;

1. Concerns regarding the budget
2. Outstanding OCI matters

3. Staffing concerns regarding "staff in budget not present"
4. Correspondence regarding non attendance at curriculum meeting.

On or about November 2005, the Office of Compliance Investigation (OCI) of the DOE commenced a limited review or "point in time" audit of the 2005-2006 school year contract, budget and financial records of petitioner. This review was completed in June 2006 and petitioner thereafter entered into a corrective action plan regarding the November 2005 audit. The plan enumerated the tasks at issue and provided actual or anticipated dates of completion. The corrective action plan agreed to by the Board and petitioner addressed the manner in which accounting and budget controls, budget and contract, facility, payroll and staffing and quarterly expenditure reports would be addressed. In instances where immediate action was necessary, the Board could, if they wished, recoup any disputed or inappropriate expenditure. The action would be reflected in the column labeled, status of task accomplishments, of the corrective action plan. David Joye, the budget/policy analyst for DECE emphasized that there was "nothing set in stone" as to a requirement when each task must be completed. Despite the concerns raised in the OCI Report and the ongoing efforts to address any outstanding budgetary concerns in the corrective action plan, petitioner's 2005-2006 and 2006-2007 budgets were subsequently approved. I FIND that the budgetary and staffing issues were addressed and a corrective action plan was agreed to by both the Board and petitioner.

Lassiter's February 21, 2007 letter also cites a concern about "substandard classrooms". Jessica Peters concedes that petitioner's classrooms met the "minimum requirements" as to classroom size. Thus, David Joye affirmed that non-renewal was "not based" on a concern regarding "substandard classroom size". Furthermore, during his testimony, Joye could not specify which "no show jobs" , referred to in both the February 21, 2007 and March 1, 2007 letters were troubling. The Board's contention that petitioner failed to attend the training sessions for the Curiosity Corner curriculum was disputed by petitioner's letter dated November 1, 2006. Since neither the Board or petitioner could provide sufficient evidence to substantiate the accuracy of the sign in sheets for the training sessions in question, I decline to make a finding in this regard.

DECE's contention that petitioner was not "able and willing" to continue to provide services was not substantiated in the documents or testimony presented. In fact, neither the Board or DECE was able to substantiate their contention that petitioner was not "able and willing" to meet any of the quality standards of Abbott preschool programs as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(b). I FIND that in asmuch as petitioner has, with the Board's approval, addressed and continues to address a majority of subject issues as well as the completion of tasks as agreed to in the 2005-2006 school year corrective action plan, this effort underscores petitioner's position that it is "able and willing" to provide the required services as an Abbott preschool program provider.

ISSUES

The issues are whether the Board properly notified petitioner of its intention not to renew the 2007-2008 contract and whether DECE's affirmance of that decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Legislature created Abbott districts in response to the New Jersey Supreme Court's decision in Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287, 394 (1990). There are twenty-eight urban districts classified as special needs districts under the Quality Education Act of 1990. N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-3. Because Abbott districts do not have the local resources to provide their students with a thorough and efficient education, the State must assure that funding adequately provides for the unique educational needs of the districts. Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287, 295 (1990). Subsequent Abbott decisions have mandated the provision of preschool services for three and four year olds in these districts. Abbott v. Burke, 153 N.J. 480, 508 (1998). The New Jersey Commissioner of Education was required to promulgate regulations and guidelines codifying education reforms incorporated in a judicially mandated school reform plan, including procedures and standards governing applications by individual schools and districts for needed programs and necessary funding. Id.

With the mandate to provide preschool services to three and four year olds in the district, the regulations provide that ". . .the district board of education shall contract with a child care provider . . .to implement required preschool programs and shall not duplicate programs or other services otherwise available in the community. The district board of education shall enter into an Abbott Preschool Program Contract with a child care center provider. . .to provide services to preschool children only when that provider is able and willing to meet the quality standards of Abbott preschool programs. . . ." N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(b). A district "must collaborate with local . . .licensed child care providers . . .whenever practical to implement required preschool programs." Abbott v. Burke, 163 N.J. 95, 114 (2000).

N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3 provides for procedures to be utilized by both the district and provider in the event of non-renewal or termination of program contracts. Since this matter involves the non-renewal issue, the applicable regulation governing the procedure for non-renewal is found in N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b) as follows;

> (b) The district board of education, child care provider, and Department shall use the following process for non-renewal of a child care center provider's Abbott Preschool Program Contract:
> 1. The school district shall notify, in writing, the child care center provider and the Department of the decision and reasons for non-renewal of the Abbott Preschool Program Contract.
> 2. The child care center provider may dispute the non-renewal of the Abbott Preschool Program Contract by written notification within 10 business days to the Office with a copy to the Department of Human Services, Office of Early Care and Education.

3. The Office may request additional information.

4. The Office shall affirm or deny the appropriateness of the non-renewal decision.

5. The non-renewal decision may be appealed to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-9.2.

The Board's position here is that petitioner was aware of the district's concerns, many of which are set forth in Lassiter's February 21, 2007 letter, prior to the district's official decision to not renew the 2007-2008 provider contract. The Board further contends that the OCI report of June 2006 placed the petitioner on notice of the Board's reasons for non-renewal. Therefore, the Board argues, its obligations under N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b) had already been satisfied prior to the Board's formal notification to the provider/petitioner on February 23, 2007. DECE's position, in affirming the Board, is that since petitioner had not corrected the areas of concern contained in the OCI report and the corrective action plan, petitioner was not "able and willing" to continue to provide Abbott services as a preschool provider. I disagree as to both.

N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b)(1) is very clear regarding the non-renewal process; "The school district shall notify, in writing, the child care center provider and the Department of the decision and reasons for non-renewal of the Abbott Preschool Program Contract". (emphases added) In the only letter to petitioner addressing the non-renewal of its 2007-2008 contract, the Board, on February 23, 2007, fails to provide any reasons for its non-renewal decision. While the Board argues that the petitioner had "constructive notice" of its intent not to renew, this position is perversely one-sided. Although the issues that had been the subject of correspondence or discussion between the Board and petitioner from 2005 to February 2007 may have involved numerous topics, and in that respect, could arguably have created some form of "notice" as to those topics, the core question would still be; Notice of what? The Board has not proffered any testimony or document indicating that the correspondence and discussions between the Board and petitioner since 2005 served as any notice of the Board's intent not to renew. In her March 1, 2007 letter to DECE, Lassiter introduces a new "reason" for non-renewal, "due to the opening of the new in-district preschool . . . ." However, neither this "reason" or the letter was communicated to the petitioner.

Notwithstanding the fact that during the course of these hearings, issues regarding the alleged "misuse of state funds for salaries" or "use of state funds for questionable or disallowable expenditures" were advanced by both the Board and DECE, procedural requirements set forth in the regulations cannot be ignored. Salary concerns and expenditures were addressed in an agreed upon corrective action plan between the Board and petitioner regarding the 2005-2006 budget with the completion of the tasks at different stages of advancement. In addition, N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-7.1 and the FY 2007 Appropriations Act (P.L. 2006, c.45) expressly charge the Commissioner of DOE with ensuring, through careful scrutiny of district expenditures, that the very substantial amount of State funding received by Abbott districts is expended in a lawful, efficient and effective manner, and to take any affirmative action to achieve this end.

The documents and testimony submitted by the Board, specifically that of George Henry, Fiscal Specialist for the Irvington Office of Early Childhood, highlight an ongoing business relationship that involves requests for various budgetary documentation and the provider's response to the specific request. Fiscal specialist Henry emphasized, "I go over quarterly reports with provider every quarter". David Joye, in referring to the corrective action plan, testified that the dates of completion can be either "actual or anticipated". When asked if there was a "general expectation as to when corrective action plans - - a time line of when the tasks outlined in the corrective action plans, should ultimately be completed and corrected?" Joye responded, "We don't have anything set in stone, but depending on the severity of the finding may impact."

I CONCLUDE that the Board failed to adhere to the procedural requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.3(b). I also CONCLUDE that the decision of DECE to affirm the Board's decision is unreasonable given the Board's clear violation of the procedural requirement of notifying the petitioner/provider in writing of the decision and reasons for non-renewal. I CONCLUDE that the agreement to enter a corrective action plan and subsequent budget approvals fail to support the Board's or DECE's position that petitioner is not "able and willing" to continue as an Abbott preschool provider. Lastly, inasmuch as any issue regarding the payment of rental increases initially raised in Toddlertown I needs to be addressed, I CONCLUDE that since the Abbott preschool program budget between the Board and petitioner must be approved for each school year by the State of New Jersey and the Board and petitioner only contracts to provide preschool services on a year to year basis, any rent increase not approved for a particular school year is not authorized.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that the decision of DECE be REVERSED. It is further ORDERED that the Board enter into a contract for the 2007-2008 school year with petitioner for the purpose of providing Abbott preschool services to all eligible students. It is also ORDERED that the Board provide notice to parents of preschool eligible students in Irvington of petitioner's participation in the Abbott preschool program for the 2007-2008 school year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF KRISTA REYNOLDS, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH OF HOPATCONG, SUSSEX COUNTY,

Robert M. Tosti, Esq., for petitioner, the Board of Education (Bressler, Amery & Ross, P.C., attorneys)

Nancy I. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent Krista Reynolds (Oxfeld Cohen, P.C., attorneys)

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

In this matter the School District of the Borough of Hopatcong (Board) charged tenured teacher Krista Reynolds with inefficiency and sought her removal or reduction in salary under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq.

On July 10, 2007, the Board filed Tenure charges against Reynolds. On July 30, 2007, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) referred the matter to the OAL after having reviewed the Tenure charges and having deemed them sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary.

The circumstances which gave rise to the Tenure charges were allegations that teacher Reynolds taught in an inefficient manner by failing to control the behavior of her students; failing to maintain a classroom culture conducive to learning; failing to provide and deliver to her students the appropriate grade level content in her German classes; failing to alter and adjust her teaching methods; creating inefficient lesson plans; failing to organize her classes such that appropriate assessment of student learning can be achieved; and failing to utilize the many resources available to her to enrich the educational experiences of her students.

At the commencement of the hearing on October 9, 2007, the parties engaged in extensive settlement discussions which led to a proposed settlement agreement subject to Board approval the terms of which were placed on the record. On November, 26, 2007, the Board submitted a fully executed Settlement Agreement and Board resolution accepting the settlement. See the attached copy.

Based upon a review of the record as well as the proposed settlement agreement and attached Board resolution, and the representation of the parties on the record of this matter, I make the following FINDINGS:

1. The nature of the charges has been documented by the submission of a Statement of Charges and Certificate of Determination.

2. The settlement is in the public interest as it conserves the Board's resources and delivers a final result whereby Reynolds will no longer be associated with the District of the Borough of Hopatcong rather than the unpredictable outcome of a hearing. Additionally, the salary cost approximates that which the District would have to spend during the hearing given the anticipated length of the hearing. The public interest is not jeopardized by this settlement, a provision of which is Reynolds' retirement from her position, in that the nature of the charges do not involve criminal activity or unbecoming conduct as expressed in N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4.

3. The proposed settlement agreement is with the consent of all parties.

4. By the terms of the proposed settlement agreement and the representations of Reynolds at the hearing, the charged party has entered into this agreement with a full understanding of her rights.

5. Reynolds has been advised of the Commissioner's role in referring tenure resolutions to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificates.

I therefore CONCLUDE that this Settlement Agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that approval of it is in the public interest. Inefficiency charges, standing alone without accusations of wrongdoing or conduct unbecoming, are not generally something which concerns the State Board of Examiners. Barshatsky v. Bd. of Educ. of the Freehold Regional High School District, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 71.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OAL DKT No. EDU 07683-07

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The Hopatcong Board of Education and Krista Reynolds have agreed to amicably resolve this matter on terms set forth below. The parties agree this Settlement Agreement is in the public interest.

The nature of the charges are inefficiency, not misconduct, and this settlement is a rational resolution in what would be an arduous and lengthy hearing which would require payment of salary to the Respondent for at least as long as the time for salary to continue under the settlement. That is, even if the matter were to be tried, the salary payments would continue until at least May 15, 2008.

The Hopatcong Board of Education has passed the attached resolution attesting to its consent and to settle this matter on the terms set forth therein.

The teacher, Krista Reynolds ("KR"), in open court and under oath set forth her understanding of her rights to proceed to hearing and her satisfaction with her legal representation. KR has been advised of the Commissioner's role on referring tenure resolutions to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificates.

This settlement is in the public interest as it conserves district resources, delivers a final result rather than the unpredictable outcome of a hearing, and the salary cost approximates that which the district would have to spend during a hearing.

The terms, as set forth in the attached resolution are as follows:

1. KR's salary payments will resume November 1, 2007, as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and continue through May 31, 2008;
2. KR will present a letter of retirement effective May 31, 2008 and her letter will be submitted to the Board for acceptance once this settlement is approved by the Commissioner of Education;
3. By signing this Agreement, KR waives and releases any claims she would otherwise maintain against the district other than ordinary benefits and endorsements of employment through May 31, 2008; and
4. The tenure charge will be withdrawn and KR's employment will be concluded as of May 31, 2008.

RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, pursuant to tenure charges of inefficiency against K.R. filed on or about June 25, 2007, a hearing has been scheduled to be heard beginning November 7, 2007, and

WHEREAS, pursuant to discussion held amongst the parties, with the assistance of the Administrative Law Judge assigned to the case, a tentative resolution to the tenure charges of inefficiency has been reached, and

WHEREAS, the parties have considered the uncertainty of the final result in such a complex case, the cost and expense of a lengthy hearing which is expected to take at least fifteen (15) hearing days, the expenditure of district funds for legal fees and the additional burden of administrative time and effort, and taking into consideration that the salary payments will resume for K.R. on or about November 1, 2007, and that the expected decision of the Commissioner is not anticipated to be issued until approximately May 15, 2008, and

WHEREAS, counsel for the respondent has indicated a willingness to have her client K.R. retire as of May 31, 2008, and K.R. has, under oath, expressed her willingness to accept the terms of the proposed settlement, and

WHEREAS, the Board has considered the certainty of result that such a resignation would achieve, and weighing the best interests of the district and the public fisc;

NOW, THEREFORE, be it resolved that the district authorizes counsel to enter a settlement of the tenure case on the condition that K.R. presents a letter of retirement effective May 31, 2008 and waives and releases any and all claims she could otherwise maintain against the district (other than ordinary benefits and emoluments of employment from November 1, 2007 to May 31, 2008), and that counsel may present said settlement to the Office of Administrative Law on or about November 7, 2007, so that this matter may be concluded without further expense to the district, and

BE IT further resolved that upon approval of this settlement by the Commissioner that the Board will honor the terms thereof and that this matter will be concluded.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF MOUNTAINSIDE, UNION COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BERKELEY HEIGHTS, UNION COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Mountainside Board of Education, which sends its high school students to the Berkeley Heights school district pursuant to a sending-receiving relationship established in 1997, contends it was overcharged for tuition over the years – during which the two districts calculated payments and credits through an ad hoc method rather than as set forth in regulation – and was due a cumulative credit/refund of $673,496. When, in the fall of 2006, Mountainside declined to pay invoiced tuition amounts based on this contention, Berkeley Heights cross-appealed.

Based on the parties' submissions and a limited hearing held for the purpose of taking expert testimony, the ALJ found, inter alia, that: the 90-day limitations period does not apply to bar the claims of either party; the proper method of calculating tuition credit is the method outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)(6), and school districts are not free to agree to a method of calculating tuition that contradicts the provisions of statute and regulations; the issue of tuition credits for special education students is not encompassed in this matter; and, per the proper formula, Mountainside should pay Berkeley Heights $2,980,313.90 for the 2006-07 school year, additionally receiving a credit of $236,046.10 so as to bring the total estimated tuition for 2006-07 to $3,216,360.

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision with modification and clarification. The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the matter was appropriately decided without plenary hearing, that the provisions of rule rather than any contractual agreement between the parties must govern calculation of tuition credits, and that special education costs are not appropriately considered in deciding the present dispute. The Commissioner further concurred that the 90-day rule did not foreclose consideration of the matter on the merits, although the Commissioner modified the ALJ's analysis on this point. Finally, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's methodology for determining how best to rectify the parties' past errors and bring them into compliance with law moving forward. The Commissioner directed Mountainside to remit tuition to Berkeley Heights for the 2006-07 school year in the amount necessary to bring its total payments for the year to $2,980,313.90, reflecting the total estimated tuition of $3,216,360 less $236,046.10 in prior year credit.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF MOUNTAINSIDE, UNION COUNTY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
PETITIONER,	:	DECISION
V.	:
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BERKELEY HEIGHTS, UNION COUNTY,	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions and replies filed by the Mountainside Board of Education (Mountainside) and the Berkeley Heights Board of Education (Berkeley Heights) in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and 1:1-18.8.

On exception, Mountainside notes its agreement with the Initial Decision in most respects, urging the Commissioner to adopt the recommendations of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) as to: 1) the timeliness of the petition; 2) the need to resolve this matter by calculating estimated tuition and credit for overpayment for the years at issue in the manner advocated by Mountainside's expert, i.e., in strict accord with applicable rule rather than through the ad hoc method previously employed by the parties; and 3) the conclusion that Mountainside had been shortchanged over the years and was due credit by way of adjustment. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 2-7)

Mountainside disagrees, however, with the specific manner in which the ALJ actually implemented her substantive ruling, contending that she "erroneously inputted several data entries that distorted the bottom line result for the 2006-07 and 2007-08 school years, in a manner contrary to the very principles she intended to apply." According to Mountainside, "[while] these errors will net themselves out in the long run, they delay a full application of the formulas provided under the statute until the 2008-09 school year, which is unnecessary because it is possible to fully apply the statutory formulas in the current 2007-08 school year." (Petitioner's Exceptions at 7)

Mountainside explains that the ALJ's Attachment 2, which is intended to show tuition and credits actually paid over the years as corrected for an "overapplication" in 2005-06, errs in commingling actual and recalculated figures, with the result that certain amounts appearing as paid to Mountainside were not, in fact, received as they should have been according to the simulation developed in Attachment 1. Had the ALJ used the correct figures based on undisputed historical data, Mountainside concludes, she would have arrived at $638,431.90 as the amount of credit to be received by Mountainside in 2006-07, representing the sum of the credits due Mountainside from 2002-03 ($297,877.60) and 2003-04 ($354,141.50), adjusted for the difference ($13,587.20) between the credits actually received in 2000-01 through 2005-06 ($1,552,288) and the credits that should have been received for overpayments in 1997-98 through 2001-02 ($1,538,700.80). (Petitioner's Exceptions at 7-12) Mountainside adds that – since the 2006-07 school year has now ended – the $638,431.90 credit should be construed as "credit received" for that year, so that the regulatory formula can be fully implemented during 2007-08 by crediting Berkeley Heights with the $138,811 underpaid by Mountainside in 2004-05. (Id. at 12)[1]

In reply, Berkeley Heights references its own exceptions (see below) and notes its disagreement with Mountainside's contention that the Initial Decision is correct in most respects. It also objects to Mountainside's characterization of the ALJ's methodology, since, according to Berkeley Heights, the ALJ adopted the methodology of its expert rather than that of Mountainside's, comparing the amount paid with the amount owed and then applying that reconciliation to the third year following – deviating only in one overapplication of credit in order to achieve balance for the 2006-07 school year and avoid reconciliation problems going forward. (Respondent's Reply at 2-3) Likewise infirm, Berkeley Heights asserts, is Mountainside's proposed modification of the ALJ's calculations, which commingle credits actually given – not always correctly – with credits properly due, thus failing to produce an accurate account of what would be owed and to whom during the 2006-07 school year if the regulatory formula had been properly implemented from the inception of the parties' agreement. (Id. at 3-4) Finally, Berkeley Heights contends that there remains an issue of fact as to whether the $402,500 credit received by Mountainside in 2005-06 was intended to satisfy all credits claimed up to that point – an issue which cannot be resolved without remanding the matter for testimony from individuals having personal knowledge of the parties' transactions. (Id. at 4)

In its primary exceptions, Berkeley Heights contends that the ALJ misconstrued applicable law and made findings that are arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable – thus rendering the 90-day rule meaningless, omitting issues material to Berkeley Heights' claims and defenses, and reaching beyond both the scope of the parties' summary decision motions and the relief requested in the underlying petition and cross-petition. (Respondent's Exceptions at 1-2)

Following a detailed recitation of the evidence and proceedings before the ALJ from its own perspective (Id. at 2-13), Berkeley Heights argues that the ALJ should have dismissed Mountainside's appeal as untimely, since "[the] notion that a party to a sending-receiving agreement can go back in time many years seeking credits or additional tuition monies has no support in law and is anathema to the means by which school districts must behave." (Respondent's Exceptions at 15-16, quotation at 16)

According to Berkeley Heights, the ALJ erred in finding that Mountainside had an absolute statutory right to reimbursement, so as to render the 90-day rule inapplicable. Such finding, Berkeley Heights contends, ignores the fact that Lavin v. Hackensack Board of Education, 90 N.J. 145 (1982), was intended to create only a narrow exception to regulatory limitations periods, and that open-ended interpretation of Lavin in a matter of this type entirely undermines the requirement for reconciliations of tuition disparities to be made three years after the contract year at issue; it also, the Board continues, ignores recent case law applying the 90-day rule to a tuition dispute. (Bd. of Ed. of the Township of Pemberton v. Bd. Of Ed. of the Burlington County Special Services School District, Commissioner of Education Decision No. 134-07, decided April 12, 2007) (Respondent's Exceptions at 17-18)

The ALJ further erred, Berkeley Heights asserts, in finding that the parties' engagement in ongoing discussions about tuition credits due (or not due) to

Mountainside resulted in there being no single event that would have triggered the 90-day limitation period; to the contrary, the Board continues, it has consistently been held that attempts to resolve a dispute informally or through negotiation do not negate either the receipt of adequate notice – which Mountainside had at any number of points up to and including the March 16, 2006 meeting at the county office[2] – or the tolling of applicable limitations periods. (Respondent's Exceptions at 18-23, citing to Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Board of Education, 255 N.J. Super. 76 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd, 131 N.J. 572 (1993), and Pemberton, supra, among others) Berkeley Heights also reasserts that Mountainside's claims with respect to 2001-02 must be foreclosed – even assuming, arguendo, that its claims as to later years are not considered time-barred – based on prior decisional law finding the limitation period in a tuition dispute to have begun upon expiration of the period for collecting amounts due based on the reconciliation of estimated and certified tuition rates. (Respondent's Exceptions at 23-24, citing Lord Sterling Schools, Inc. v. Bd. of Ed. of the Morris School District, Morris County, Commissioner of Education Decision No. 277-02, decided July 19, 2002)

According to Berkeley Heights, the ALJ additionally erred in finding that relaxation of the 90-day rule was warranted, since 1) the public interest is best served by upholding the State's clear policy in favor of recognizing the need, with respect to exposure to disputes, for stability and repose in the fiscal and administrative affairs of boards of education; and 2) the ALJ's perception of the "interests of justice" is based on the erroneous belief that Berkeley Heights gave no indication of any intent to argue untimeliness until it filed its cross-motion for summary decision, when, in fact, it was pleaded as an affirmative defense in the Board's answer to Mountainside's petition. (Id. at 25-26)[3]

[2] Berkeley Heights states that "the undisputed facts reveal that [Mountainside] received notice of the certified tuition rates each year. It is also undisputed that [Mountainside] was aware that 'substantial arrearages in reimbursement [were] due' sometime between July and November 2005 and did nothing. Thereafter, [Mountainside] received a credit of $402,500, and did nothing to recoup the rest of the overpayments allegedly owed. [Mountainside] was never led to believe that the entirety of its demand would be satisfied and Berkeley Heights never admitted to owing same. Finally, [Mountainside] was specifically instructed to take action to protect its interests in March 2006, and did nothing." (Respondent's Exceptions at 22-23)

Thus, Berkeley Heights asserts, the Commissioner should find that Mountainside's appeal is foreclosed by the 90-day rule; however, if she does not, the ALJ's determinations as to the parties' intent during their dealings and the actual figures at issue must then be rejected. According to Berkeley Heights, the parties' cross-motions for summary decision sought resolution of two questions only: the appropriate method to be applied in calculating credits – i.e., whether credit could be claimed based on the difference between the tentative tuition charged and the certified tuition rate without regard to payments actually made – and whether Mountainside's claim was barred by the statute of limitations. Berkeley Heights opines that, once the ALJ declined to grant summary decision on either motion, she should have advanced the matter to plenary hearing instead of holding a narrowly circumscribed hearing and then proceeding to rule on numerous issues of fact and law without benefit of testimony from individuals who had personal knowledge of the parties' interactions during the relevant school years – thereby making findings "predicated on an incomplete and prejudicial record," so as to result in a decision that is inherently arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. (Respondent's Exceptions at 28-29)

[3] Since the ALJ based her conclusion that Berkeley Heights' cross-petition was timely solely on her prior determination with respect to Mountainside's petition, Berkeley Heights also reiterates its arguments before the ALJ as to why its own cross-petition was not untimely filed, for consideration by the Commissioner in the event that she determines to dismiss Mountainside's petition as untimely.

Specifically, Berkeley Heights contends, an issue of fact remains as to the nature of the $402,500 credit extended to Mountainside during the 2005-06 school year, of which the parties have taken very different views and on which the ALJ should not have reached any conclusion – particularly as to whether it resulted in either party waiving claims or defenses – without taking testimony on the parties' intent and making a concomitant evaluation of witness credibility. (Respondent's Exceptions at 29-31) An issue of fact also remains, Berkeley Heights continues, with respect to the $49,250 payment applied in the 2001-02 school year – which the ALJ accepted "based solely on unsworn representations of counsel, without benefit of witness testimony or supporting affidavits" as a payment toward prior tuition despite its manifest irregularity. (Id. at 31-32, quotation at 32) Berkeley Heights further asserts that the ALJ erred in precluding it from bringing evidence and testimony with respect to how the parties handled special education costs during the years in dispute, since the issue was sufficiently implicated in the parties' pleadings and Mountainside cannot fairly claim to have been "overcharged" without taking these costs into account. (Id. at 32-34)

Moreover, according to Berkeley Heights, the Commissioner must reject a number of the ALJ's specific determinations as without factual basis in the pleadings and testimony: 1) that Mountainside could reasonably have believed that its tuition claim was open to further negotiations after mediation at the office of the county superintendent; 2) that Berkeley Heights' business administrator retired on "short notice," suggesting that duress or problems relating to the current dispute may have been involved; 3) that the interactions between the parties' two business administrators were exactly as represented in Mountainside's brief and certifications, without testimony from – or cross-examination of – either of the two men; 4) that Mountainside's "rough transcription" of a voicemail message allegedly left for its business administrator by the Berkeley Heights business administrator can be accepted as true for the matters asserted, likewise without testimony from, or cross-examination of, either of the two men; 5) that the dispute encompassed the 2004-05 school year notwithstanding that the petition did not include the latter; 6) that Berkeley Heights admitted that tuition should be reckoned in accordance with statute and rule and not by contract terms, in a context "sounding in the doctrine of waiver, requiring testimony on the parties' intent;" and 7) that Berkeley Heights' expert admitted that, should the ALJ find regulation applicable, then the amount of credit calculated by Mountainside for the period of 1997-99 was correct. (Respondent's Exceptions at 34-36, quotation at 36)

Finally, Berkeley Heights objects to the ALJ's statement regarding credit due Mountainside for the 2007-08 school year, since: 1) that year is outside the scope of both the petition and the cross-petition; 2) credits owed relating to the 2005-06 school year and beyond cannot be known until the Department of Education releases certified costs for those years; and 3) the parties have already agreed on an appropriate credit for the 2007-08 school year. (Respondent's Exceptions at 37-38)

In reply, Mountainside – after countering Berkeley Heights' factual and procedural recitation with one of its own (at 2-13) – first reiterates its arguments as to why its appeal is not untimely filed. (Petitioner's Reply at 13-30) It reasserts its contention that Mountainside has an absolute statutory entitlement to pay no more in tuition than Berkeley Heights' actual cost per pupil, citing Lavin, supra, and Bd. of Ed. of the Borough of Alpha v. Alpha Educ. Ass'n., 188 N.J. 595 (2006), and distinguishing the present matter – which is "simply a matter of inputting data into the regulatory formula" – from others where the 90-day rule was found applicable, noting that the latter involved employment benefits grounded in statute but dependent on discretionary action of a board of education. (Id. at 14-15) It further reasserts that review of the underlying facts demonstrates that Berkeley Heights cannot – as it must to invoke untimeliness as an affirmative defense – pinpoint any one objective event constituting a violation of Mountainside's rights so as to trigger running of the 90-day rule; to the contrary, according to Mountainside, to whatever extent such "plausible 'concrete events' " can be identified, its appeal was filed well within 90 days of each of them, and, moreover, each monthly tuition invoice can be deemed a continuing and separate cause of action pursuant to Alpha, supra. (Id. at 16-25, quotation at 25)

Mountainside then reiterates its arguments to the effect that – should the 90-day rule be found applicable and Mountainside determined to have filed beyond the regulatory deadline – relaxation of the rule is warranted. Mountainside again asserts that: 1) important public interests are at stake, since calculation of tuition is a matter of significance to every district sending students to another public school district; and 2) strict application of the rule would result in injustice, since the parties engaged in continuing dialogue with neither side signaling to the other that the point had come for legal action. (Petitioner's Reply at 25-30)

Mountainside further contends that Berkeley Heights cannot now claim that the ALJ erred in not conducting a plenary hearing, since it did not oppose Mountainside's motion for summary decision on grounds that material facts were in dispute, but rather cross-moved for summary decision on its own behalf in the belief that the ALJ would decide in its favor based on the evidence and certifications submitted, without the need for live testimony. (Petitioner's Reply at 31-36) As to the ALJ's exclusion of claims for reimbursement of special education costs, Mountainside denies that such claims may be inferred from a cross-petition filed "for the sole purpose of recouping from Mountainside the tuition that Berkeley Heights had anticipated receiving in its budget for the 2006-07 school year," and asserts that – to the extent that they are included in Berkeley Heights' cross-motion for summary decision – the Board's moving papers presented no evidence in support of such claims. (Id. at 36-37, quotation at 36) With respect to Berkeley Heights' contention that the ALJ made factual findings not supported by the record, Mountainside counters that such findings are entirely grounded in the parties' evidential submissions, which the ALJ appropriately scrutinized for points of concession and instances where rebuttal evidence was either nonexistent or insufficient to raise a genuine issue of material fact. (Id. at 37-40)

To the extent that Berkeley Heights objects to the ALJ's acceptance of the testimony of Mountainside's expert over that of Berkeley Heights, Mountainside urges that the methodology proposed by Berkeley Heights errs in failing to recognize that "the calculation of tentative tuition to be billed to the sending district is separate from the calculation of any reimbursement due the sending district in those years, except to the extent that the receiving district chooses to prorate the reimbursement monthly as a credit against the tentative charge otherwise due from the sending district." Only in this way, Mountainside asserts, can the discrepancy between tuition charged and actual cost in any year be "squared up" over the four-year cycle as intended by the statute, whereas the methodology proposed by Berkeley Heights is "the financial equivalent of throwing the sending district off the back of a moving train." (Petitioner's Reply at 40-44, quotations at 43, 44)

Finally, Mountainside interprets Berkeley Heights' exception to the ALJ's award of relief pertaining to the 2007-08 school year as a claim for entitlement to the 2006-07 portion of the ALJ's award while rejecting the 2007-08 portion as beyond the scope of present proceedings. While reiterating its belief that the ALJ erred in her specific cash-flow instructions and urging adoption of its own calculations as set forth on exception, Mountainside asserts that Berkeley Heights can in no event "cherry pick that portion of the result that is advantageous to it, while escaping the consequences of that portion arguably favoring Mountainside" – since the ALJ's directives were an "integrated whole" not susceptible to bifurcation. (Petitioner's Reply at 44-45, quotation at 45)

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision with modification and clarification as set forth below.

Preliminarily, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that this matter can be fully and fairly decided on the parties' cross-motions for summary decision together with the record developed at the hearing convened for the purpose of taking expert testimony on the question of proper calculation of tuition credits. While the parties obviously impute very different meanings to many of their past actions and calculations and Berkeley Heights objects to what it perceives as certain questionable inferences on the part of the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that the material facts necessary for disposition of this matter are clear on the record and largely undisputed, and that where a material factual dispute does exist – i.e., the nature of the $49,250 and $400 payments made by Mountainside in the 2000-01 school year – the existing record was sufficient for the ALJ to have made reasonable findings of fact.

Similarly, with respect to the question of timeliness, the Commissioner likewise agrees with the ALJ that this matter should be decided on its merits; however, she does so for reasons other than those stated in the Initial Decision.

Initially, the Commissioner does not agree that this matter falls within the scope of Lavin, supra, so as to render the 90-day rule inapplicable. The provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19(a) specifying that tuition to be paid by a sending district shall not exceed the actual cost per pupil does not create an "entitlement" in the sense addressed in Lavin, which distinguished between benefits to which an employee was absolutely entitled by statute and those dependent on the contract of employment or services rendered; indeed, extending the Court's holding from the narrow circumstance addressed in Lavin to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19(a) – and, by implication, to virtually every statute prescribing non-discretionary parameters for the operation of local district boards of education – would, as Berkeley Heights correctly asserts, render meaningless both the 90-day rule and the carefully crafted regulatory mechanism for orderly reconciliation of tuition costs.[4] [5]

Further, the Commissioner does not agree that there is no single point in time that can be identified as constituting appropriate notice of a cause of action on Mountainside's part. Whatever the parties' differences as to details and intentions, there is no dispute that: 1) during the summer and fall of 2005, Mountainside's business administrator raised the issue of credits for the 2001-02 and 2002-03 school years (due in 2004-05 and 2005-06, respectively) with the Berkeley Heights business administrator; 2) Mountainside was credited in November 2005 with $402,500 to be paid over the course of the 2005-06 school year; 3) discussions continued between the parties' respective business administrators, who by then were additionally required to consider the question of credits for 2003-04, to be reflected in the 2006-07 budget following the December 2005 certification of 2003-04 actual tuition rates by the Department of Education; and 4) by the spring of 2006, Mountainside had clearly taken the position that it was cumulatively owed $673,496 and Berkeley Heights was equally clear about its disagreement with this position. As required by N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)5, the districts' dispute was taken to the county superintendent for mediation, and although efforts were made by county office staff, no mutually acceptable agreement could be reached and the parties resolved to continue in their respective postures.[6]

[4] As further noted by Berkeley Heights, the 90-day rule has, in fact, previously been applied in matters involving payment of tuition.

Thus, as of March 16, 2006 – the date of the meeting at the county office – Mountainside was clearly on notice that Berkeley Heights was firm in its stance that Mountainside was not owed the credits claimed, so that Mountainside could have no reasonable basis to expect that Berkeley Heights would either be paying it additional monies attributable to 2002-03 during the remainder of the 2005-06 school year or

[6] The Commissioner here notes that the parties and the ALJ all infer that the County Superintendent "failed" to render a "decision" resolving the parties' dispute once they could not reach agreement, and that, when the County Superintendent did not make a determination in the matter, the Department of Education's Division of Finance could or should have intervened in some way. There is, however, no provision in rule for "decision" or "determination" by either the County Superintendent or the Department – notwithstanding that a county superintendent may on occasion take a position on a tuition matter in dispute between parties to a sending-receiving relationship, as in Board of Education of the Borough of Lincoln Park v. Board of Education of the Town of Boonton, Commissioner of Education Decision No. 246-03, decided May 15, 2003, cited by Mountainside before the ALJ and on exception. What N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)5 expressly provides for is "mediation" by the County Superintendent, so that there should have been no expectation of a dispositive ruling by the County Superintendent once mediation proved unsuccessful. (Cf., for example, N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.8, requiring County Superintendent or Division of Finance "decisions" and "determinations" on disputes involving homeless students.)

crediting it in 2006-07 with the cumulative monies it believed it was due. At this point, in the Commissioner's view, the parties were undeniably at impasse, and Mountainside – as the aggrieved party with no entitlement to subsequent intervention by the County Superintendent or Department – needed no further "trigger" to file a petition with the Commissioner. Berkeley Heights, in contrast, could not assume that Mountainside would withhold actually payment on its 2006-07 tuition invoices solely because it budgeted for the large cumulative credit it believed itself due; in so doing, Mountainside was merely acting – at its own peril – consistent with its previously stated position, which it could and would (presumably) then seek to vindicate through appeal to the Commissioner. Berkeley Heights was not aggrieved, and had no cause of action ripe for adjudication, until Mountainside actually failed to honor its tuition obligation in the absence of a ruling from the Commissioner entitling it to pay less than the invoiced amount.

However, by failing to pay the invoices issued by Berkeley Heights – thereby unilaterally taking for itself the relief it should have obtained from the Commissioner – Mountainside effectively compelled Berkeley Heights to file a cross-appeal, thus ensuring that it would be able to press its claims in the form of a defense in the event they were found untimely in their own right.[7] While the Commissioner ordinarily would not countenance such a tactic, she cannot overlook the unique posture of this matter – which has brought to light a nearly decade-long history of the parties to a still-extant sending-receiving relationship ignoring regulatory mechanisms for calculation and payment of tuition and credits, the cumulative effects of which, if unattended, will be carried over into the future.[8] Neither can she ignore that both parties are equally to blame for the morass created by their mutual failure to abide by the provisions of a regulatory scheme expressly designed to ensure clarity, accuracy and stability in tuition arrangements between public school districts; indeed, this entire matter is an object lesson in the wisdom of the regulation and pitfalls of tampering with its application. Consequently – although she does not agree with the ALJ that interpretation of the applicable tuition rules serves the general public interest, since the rules are clear on their face and there can be no two opinions as to how they should operate – the Commissioner does believe it necessary to decide this matter in the more specific interest of the citizens of Mountainside and Berkeley Heights, who are entitled to have the tuition arrangements between their respective boards of education brought back into alignment with law designed to ensure fairness to both.

Turning, then, to the merits of the matter, the Commissioner first concurs with the ALJ, for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision, that: 1) the regulatory provisions at N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f) rather than the parties' contractual terms govern the calculation of tuition credits for the 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years, so that Berkeley Heights cannot claim a right to reimbursement of credits for those years paid over and above contractual amounts; 2) special education costs – for which Berkeley Heights did not claim reimbursement at any time prior to the present litigation or expressly plead in its cross-petition – are not appropriately considered in this matter; and 3) Mountainside's $49,250 payment to Berkeley Heights in 2000-01 was for tuition, while its $400 payment was not.

[8] In this respect, the present matter differs from other matters, as cited by Berkeley Heights, where the 90-day rule was applied to foreclose appeal of a disputed tuition calculation.

The Commissioner further concurs that – in order for the parties to be positioned at the conclusion of proceedings so that past errors are rectified to the extent reasonably and fairly possible at this point, and so that the law can be followed moving forward – it is necessary to analyze and recast the payments and credits between the parties from the outset of their relationship in 1997 through the date of closing of the record, notwithstanding that Mountainside's petition expressly addressed only the 2001-02, 2002-03, and 2003-04 school years and that the parties may have already made an agreement between themselves with respect to the 2007-08 school year.

Finally, the Commissioner finds the ALJ's methodology – as set forth and applied in the Initial Decision at 26-34 – to be well-devised for the purpose at hand, reducing the dispute to abstract formulations that clearly reveal the fallacy of each of the parties' positions on appeal, allow for incorporation of the valid aspects of both positions, and provide a clear, consistent mechanism for calculating the adjustments and realignments necessary to conform the parties' past actions to the framework of law. The Commissioner further concurs that Mountainside should remit to Berkeley Heights the difference between what it should have paid and what it actually paid for the 2006-07 school year, rather than crediting that amount as an underpayment to Berkeley Heights in a subsequent budget; as previously stated, Mountainside acted at its own peril in unilaterally taking for itself relief it should have sought to obtain by order of the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons expressed therein, as clarified and modified above.[9] The Mountainside Board of [9] The Commissioner notes that Mountainside's expert – Melvin L. Wyns – although identified correctly in the body of the Initial Decision, is erroneously listed in the Appendix (at 39) as "David" Wyns.

Education is directed to remit to Berkeley Heights tuition for the 2006-07 school year in the amount necessary to bring its total payments for the year to $2,980,313.90, reflecting the total estimated tuition of $3,216,360 less $236,046.10 in prior year credit.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[10]

BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Vito A. Gagliardi, Jr., Esq., for respondent (Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 12, 2007 Decided: July 20, 2007

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Mountainside Board of Education, filed a verified petition on or about July 12, 2006, alleging that the respondent, Berkeley Heights Board of Education, had failed to credit or refund to Mountainside the sum of $673,496, representing the total overcharges for fiscal years 2001-2002, 2002-2003 and 2003-2004, and demanding payment of same. The respondent filed its answer on August 2, 2006, demanding that the Commissioner of Education dismiss the petition with prejudice and award attorneys' fees and costs of suit. In addition, it raised the affirmative defense that the petitioner's claims were barred by the applicable statutes of limitations. The matter was forwarded for filing at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on September 11, 2006. A telephone conference was held on October 13, 2006. At that time it was decided that the parties would file cross-motions for summary decision. The respondent also made application to file a cross-petition out of time. The application was granted and Berkeley Heights filed its cross-petition on November 14, 2006. The petition alleged that, in compliance with its contractual obligation, Berkeley Heights passed its 2006-2007 school budget and informed the petitioner of the estimated per-pupil cost for 2006-2007. It further alleged that it informed Mountainside of the credit that it would receive based upon the actual cost-per-pupil adjustment from prior years. Without the respondent's knowledge, petitioner adopted a school budget for 2006-2007 with a large, unjustifiable credit and decided to pay over $600,000 less than the tuition due to respondent. Berkeley Heights alleged that due to the actions of the petitioner it would experience a shortfall of $643,721 for the 2006-2007 budget year.

Mountainside filed its motion for summary decision on November 28, 2006. Berkeley Heights filed its opposition to the petitioner's motion for summary decision and its notice of cross-motion for summary decision on December 21, 2006. Mountainside filed its brief in opposition to the respondent's cross-motion on January 11, 2007. Berkeley Heights filed its reply brief on January 26, 2007. On January 23, 2007, I sent a letter stating that I was reserving decision on the summary decision motions and was taking testimony on the issue of the proper method of calculating tuition credits under N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)(6). The parties requested an opportunity to submit expert reports. These reports were submitted by March 13, 2007, along with a spreadsheet requested by the judge. Expert testimony was presented on April 24, 2007. There remained outstanding the amount that Mountainside actually paid to Berkeley Heights in the 2000-2001 and 2003-2004 school years. Further correspondence ensued between the parties. On May 22, 2007, Berkeley Heights agreed with Mountainside that the $2,850.33 payment by Mountainside was for transportation and not tuition. In the last correspondence by Berkeley Heights on June 12, 2007, there was still no agreement on the characterization of the $49,250 payment made in the 2000-2001 school year. Therefore, the record was closed on June 12, 2007.

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

1. Mountainside and Berkeley Heights have a sending-receiving arrangement. Mountainside sends its students in grades nine through twelve to Governor Livingston High School in Berkeley Heights.

2. In 1997 the parties entered into an "Agreement to Establish High School Sending-Receiving Relationship." The Agreement was to remain in full force through June 30, 2007.

3. This agreement was not in the proper form, according to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19. According to its terms and in contravention of the statute and regulations, the tentative and final tuition for 1997–1999 was to be $12,500 per student per year.

4. During all other time periods covered by the contract the Mountainside Board of Education was to pay tuition to Berkeley Heights for each Mountainside student enrolled in the high school in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19 and N.J.A.C. 6:20-3.1.

5. According to the formula outlined in the contract, which followed the terms of the statute and regulation, the parties were to agree on a tentative tuition charge for each year. Mountainside was to notify Berkeley Heights in writing no later than December 15 of each year of the estimated average daily enrollment of pupils expected to be sent to the high school in the next school year. Berkeley Heights was to notify Mountainside of the estimated cost per pupil no later than January 15 of each year, and the parties were to agree in writing on the tentative total tuition to be charged for each school year no later than seven days prior to the date on which the proposed school budget for that year was required to be submitted to the County Superintendent.

6. An upward or downward adjustment of the tuition charge for any given year was to be made in the third year following the determination by the Commissioner of Education of the actual tuition charge multiplied by the actual daily enrollment of Mountainside students.

7. The agreement also contained a formula for calculating a tentative tuition charge for budgetary purposes each year as per the statute and regulation.

8. During the 2005-2006 school year a disagreement arose between Mountainside and Berkeley Heights over the proper method of calculating credits due Mountainside for overcharges in school years 2001-2002, 2002-2003, 2003-2004 and 2004-2005.

9. In July 2005 Roderic McLaughlin became secretary/school business administrator for the Mountainside School District. Upon his arrival he undertook an analysis of Mountainside's sending-receiving payment history and discovered what he considered to be substantial arrearages for school years 2001-2002 and 2002-2003. He reported these calculations to the Berkeley Heights' school business administrator, William Van Tassel, in November 2005.

10. In November 2005 Berkeley Heights gave Mountainside a credit of $402,500 toward overcharges. This amount was paid to Mountainside at the rate of $57,500 per month through June 2006.

11. The two men agreed to continue discussions about a way to resolve the other credit issues, including the 2003-2004 school year credits, which would be certified in December 2005 and reflected in the 2006-2007 budget planning cycle.

12. McLaughlin attempted to have further discussions with Van Tassel over a number of months, but the Berkeley Heights administrator kept telling him that he would have to get back to him.

13. In December 2005 the certified per-pupil cost figures for the 2003-2004 school year were released. It showed that the tentative per-pupil cost exceeded the actual cost per student.

14. In January 2006 Mr. Van Tassel left a voice message for Mr. McLaughlin. The gist of the message was that Berkeley Heights was still working on the credit issue, but had no final proposal. Because of a pending lawsuit involving de-regionalization, a one-shot credit might be arranged. However, Mr. Van Tassel said that if Mountainside had to come up with a figure, it should "put in what we talked about and we'll see where it plays out." Petitioner's Reply Br. at 3.

15. Mr. Van Tassel announced his retirement on short notice and left Berkeley Heights by February 2006.

16. Michael Kistner was appointed as interim secretary/school business administrator for Berkeley Heights in February 2006. During February and early March, Kistner and McLaughlin exchanged e-mails in which McLaughlin explained the basis for his belief that Mountainside was owed additional tuition credits. Kistner questioned the basis for some of McLaughlin's calculations and McLaughlin attempted to explain his position.

17. By February 2006 Mountainside and Berkeley Heights were involved in the budget adoption cycle for the 2006-2007 school year.

18. McLaughlin included in his preliminary budget calculations a $673,496 credit for what he calculated was the overpayment by Mountainside to Berkeley Heights for school years 2002-2003 and 2003-2004 and the remaining credit for 2001-2002.

19. All Type II school districts, which included Mountainside and Berkeley Heights, were required to adopt and submit preliminary budgets to their County Superintendents by March 16, 2006. The County Superintendent had until March 27, 2006, to approve them.

20. Both school boards' public hearings on their proposed budgets were to be held by March 30, 2006. A formal vote adopting their budgets was to be held no later than March 31, 2006. The annual school election was scheduled for April 18, 2006.

21. According to N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)(3), Mountainside and Berkeley Heights were required to enter into a written agreement stipulating the tentative tuition for the 2006-2007 school year at least seven days prior to the deadline for submitting their proposed budgets to the County Superintendent. However, the two districts had been unable to reach a consensus.

22. A meeting was scheduled for March 16, 2006, for Dr. Carmen Centuolo, the Union County superintendent, to mediate the matter.

23. Both districts planned to attend with their superintendents and school business administrators. However, Dr. Centuolo was ill and, instead, Katherine Davenport, the Union County school business administrator, conducted an informal work session with the districts' business administrators.

24. At the meeting, McLaughlin took the position that Mountainside was entitled to a total credit of $673,496 for overpayments. Kistner countered that Mountainside was not entitled to the credits. Ms. Davenport was unable to mediate the problem and no written decision was ever made by her or Dr. Centuolo on the merits.

25. Mr. McLaughlin attempted, after the meeting with Ms. Davenport, to seek assistance from the State Department of Education's Division of Finance in resolving the differences between the two districts. However, he was unable to secure any definitive position on the matter from the State.

26. At the public meeting of the Mountainside Board of Education on March 14, 2006, Mr. McLaughlin made a presentation which included the $673,496 tuition credit adjustment in the 2006-2007 school budget.

27. On March 28, 2006, the Mountainside Board of Education, at a public hearing, voted to approve the 2006-2007 school budget and submit it to the voters. The budget included the credit of $673,496.

28. On April 18, 2006, the residents of Mountainside approved the school budget.

29. Berkeley Heights adopted its proposed school budget for 2006-2007 on March 27, 2006. In its budget there was a tuition credit due to Mountainside of $127,483. Mountainside had a representative on the Berkeley Heights Board of Education present at the meeting.

30. On April 18, 2006, the residents of Berkeley Heights rejected the proposed budget. As a result, the budget was sent to the township governing body for revision.

31. On May 11, 2006, the township council approved a revised budget with $400,618 in reductions.

32. The proper way to calculate the amount of tuition paid and credit given is outlined in Attachments I & 2. According to the analysis, Mountainside should pay Berkeley Heights $2,980,313.90 for the 2006-2007 school year. This is in addition to the $236,046.10 credit that Mountainside should receive. Thus, the total estimated tuition that Mountainside would pay Berkeley Heights for the 2006-2007 school year would be $3,216,360.00. For school year 2007-2008, Mountainside should receive a tuition credit of $263,574.80.

ISSUES

1. Can some or all of the issues in this matter be decided on summary decision?

2. Are some or all of Mountainside's claims for reimbursement barred by the 90-day limitations period?

3. Are some or all of Berkeley Heights' claims for payment barred by the 90-day limitations period?

4. What is the proper method of calculating the credits (if there are any) owed to Mountainside?

5. Can school districts contract a method of calculating payment of tuition by a sending district that differs from the statutory and regulatory formula?

6. Is the issue of special education charges cognizable in this matter?

STANDARD FOR SUMMARY DECISION

The rules governing practice in the Office of Administrative Law provide that a motion for summary decision may be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. This provision mirrors the language of R. 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary decision should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits that may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving, party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact that can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. The Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), set the standard to be applied when deciding a motion for summary decision.

> . . . the determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party . . . , are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

The questions of fact in this case involve the proper mathematical calculation of tuition credit. Therefore, I took expert testimony on the issue of the proper formula to be followed in determining whether there were tuition credits due from one party to the other. All the other issues of the case involve questions of law and not fact. I therefore CONCLUDE that all the issues in the case except for the proper calculation of tuition can be decided on summary decision.

APPLICATION OF N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i)

Berkeley Heights' Position

Berkeley Heights maintains in its briefs that the petitioner's claims for additional tuition credits for years 2001-2002, 2002-2003 and 2003-2004 are time-barred by the provision of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). That section states:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

Further, the respondent argued that, according to Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Board of Education, 255 N.J. Super. 76, 88 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd, 131 N.J. 572, 588-89 (1993), unofficial and informal notice is sufficient to trigger the 90-day limitations period. It alleges that Mountainside was aware that it had a claim against Berkeley Heights for credits owed for the 2001-2002 and 2002-2003 school years at some point between July 2005 and November 2005. Berkeley Heights points to the petitioner's brief, in which it stated that Mr. McLaughlin, Mountainside's business administrator, "undertook an analysis of the sending-receiving payment history with Berkeley Heights and discovered substantial arrearages in reimbursement due Mountainside for tuition overpayments of $411,796.00 in 2001-2002 and $295,848.00 in 2002-2003." Petitioner's Br. at 1. Mountainside should have filed its petition for reimbursement no later than 90 days from the November 2005 date. Instead, it waited to file until July 2006. In addition, Berkeley Heights asserted that it gave Mountainside a credit of $402,500 to resolve overpayments made by Mountainside in prior years. In its brief the petitioner asserted that it was due additional moneys. If that was the case, then it should have brought an action 90 days from the November 2005 date. Instead it waited until July 2006. Again, it was out of time to file. Berkeley Heights also contended that, during the March 16, 2006, meeting at the County Board of Education offices, Berkeley Heights interim board secretary Michael Kistner made Mr. McLaughlin, the Mountainside Board of Education representative, aware that Berkeley Heights did not believe that Mountainside was entitled to the credits it demanded and "the two Districts were left to take whatever action they deemed necessary to protect their respective interests." Petitioner's Br. at 8-9. Under these circumstances the 90-day period began to run from March 16, 2006, and the petitioner was out of time when it filed in July 2006. Further, Berkeley Heights adopted its 2006-2007 proposed school budget on March 27, 2006. Mountainside had a representative on the Berkeley Heights Board of Education who was present during the meeting. Therefore, the petitioner had full knowledge on March 27, 2006, that the adopted budget did not reflect a credit to Mountainside of the $673,496.00 that it claimed was owed to it. Despite this notice, Mountainside did not file its petition until July 12, 2006.

As for relaxing the 90-day rule, the respondent maintained that it has been the practice of New Jersey courts to strictly interpret the limitations period. See Kaprow, supra,131 N.J. 572 (1993); Nissman v. Bd. of Educ. of Long Beach Island, 272 N.J. Super. 373 (App. Div. 1994); Morris-Union Jointure Comm'n v. Bd. of Educ. of S. River, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 453. The purpose was to provide finality in education matters and stability for school systems facing budgetary requirements. Contrary to the petitioner's assertions, the "interests of justice" are not served by relaxing the limitations period. Berkeley Heights similarly contended that Mountainside's argument that the statute of limitations should be tolled or relaxed, because there were ongoing negotiations/conversations between the two districts, is without factual and legal basis. The respondent argued that ongoing conversations do not toll the running of the limitations period, nor do they negate the fact that the petitioner had notice of a cognizable claim as far back as July 2005. Berkeley Heights claimed that it made no representations or engaged in any conduct that was intentionally calculated to mislead the petitioner or lull the petitioner into a false sense of security with respect to its right to file suit. Therefore, it is irrelevant whether ongoing conversations were actually occurring. Respondent's Reply Br. at 8-9.

Finally, Berkeley Heights pointed out that the holding in Lord Sterling Schools v. Board of Education of the Morris School District, Agency Dkt. No. 129/4-02, Comm'r (July 19, 2002) <http://www.nj.gov/education/legal>, stands for the proposition that the limitations period is triggered, at the latest, upon the expiration of the period for collecting amounts due, the end of the second school year following the year for which the actual cost per pupil was certified. Therefore, the statute of limitations for the alleged overcharges for 2001-2002 would have been 90 days after the end of the 2004-2005 school year. The claim was not brought until July 2006. Therefore, it is barred.

Mountainside's Position

Mountainside first argued that the 90-day rule did not apply in this case. Citing Lavin v. Hackensack Board of Education, 90 N.J. 145 (1982), and Board of Education of Alpha v. Alpha Education Association, 188 N.J. 595 (2006), it asserted that the rule is not applicable to matters in which an absolute statutory entitlement is at stake. The absolute statutory entitlement to pay no more than "the actual cost per pupil" as outlined in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19(a) made the 90-day rule inapplicable.

The petitioner argued that even if it were found that the 90-day rule applied, based on Kaprow, the party invoking this affirmative defense must pinpoint an "objective event" constituting a violation of Mountainside's rights coupled with meaningful notice to Mountainside that this "event" occurred. Mountainside claimed that an "objective event" was difficult to find in a situation such as this, where the parties had a longstanding relationship and were constantly reconciling conflicting positions. "It is only when the other has taken concrete action infringing the other's legal rights that [the] 90-day period should commence running." Petitioner's Reply Br. at 15. Mountainside pointed out that, as a matter of law, any reimbursement for tuition overpayments for school years 2002-2003 and 2003-2004 was due by June 30, 2006, and June 30, 2007, respectively. Mountainside's petition was filed within the 90-day timeline for these two school years. As far as the 2001-2002 tuition reimbursement, Mountainside argued that Berkeley Heights waived its affirmative defense of the statute of limitations by agreeing to repay the bulk of amount due, i.e., $402,000, during the 2005-2006 school year.

Mountainside asserted that the meeting at the Union County Board of Education's office on March 17, 2006, did not represent the type of notice that would start the 90-day limitations period. The County Superintendent was not present at that meeting, so no formal decision was rendered by the County Board of Education. The outcome of the meeting was that each Board of Education presented its position, with no resolution. Mountainside asserted that, if the State Department of Education had issued a ruling on the merits of the disputed tuition prior to the adoption of the Mountainside or Berkeley Heights budget, that would have constituted an adverse administrative determination and the 90-day period would have begun to run. However, no such ruling was ever issued. As for Berkeley Heights' argument that the limitations period began to run when Berkeley Heights adopted the budget in the presence of Mountainside's sending-receiving representative, Mary Beth Schaumberg, Mountainside pointed out that the budget presentation at that meeting did not explicitly break out the tuition credits being given to Mountainside. More importantly, Ms. Schaumberg was aware that the Mountainside Board was already on notice that Berkeley Heights disagreed with its position and the State Department of Education had declined to take a stand on the merits of the issue and the matter would have to be settled after the school board election. Further, Mountainside pointed out that the school budgets were tentative, since they were subject to the outcome of the election. Mountainside's budget passed on April 18, but Berkeley Heights' budget was defeated. The revised budget was not adopted until May 11, 2006. Since Mountainside's petition was filed on July 12, 2006, it was within the 90-day limit. Mountainside also argued that Berkeley Heights' position that the adoption of its budget initiated Mountainside's 90-day limitations period was also flawed, because it presumed that no further changes could be made after the adoption. Mountainside asserted that a budget is a working document and is subject to change even after adoption. It pointed out that Berkeley Heights agreed in November 2005 to pay Mountainside $402,500 in credits that had never been included in Berkeley Heights' 2005-2006 adopted budget. The adoption of the Board's budget was "nothing more than a reservation of rights to position the parties for whatever negotiation or litigation might ensue by the following school year, when an actual breach of the other's rights was threatened to occur." Petitioner's Reply Br. at 20.

Mountainside also argued that, if the adopting of the budgets were considered anticipatory repudiation of its intention to perform its legal obligations during the 2006-2007 school year, the limitations period did not commence running until an actual breach occurred, unless the aggrieved party affirmatively elected to treat the repudiation as a breach. Franconia Assoc., Inc. v. United States, 536 U.S. 129, 144, 122 S. Ct. 1993, 2002, 153 L. Ed. 2d 132, 147 (2002). Since the actual breach could not occur until the first monthly invoice was dishonored in the fall of 2006, Mountainside's petition was filed in a timely fashion in July 2006.

Further, Mountainside analogized this case to Alpha, supra, 188 N.J. 595. In that case the New Jersey Supreme Court found a continuing and separate cause of action each time the school district failed to provide contractual health coverage benefits. Thus, Mountainside argued that each monthly tuition invoice from Berkeley Heights during the 2006-2007 year that failed to credit Mountainside with the reimbursement that it claimed was due could be deemed a continuing and separate cause of action arising from a non-discretionary statutory mandate of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19(a), implemented through N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1.

In addition, Mountainside argued that even if the 90-day rule applied, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16 provides that procedural rules > may be relaxed or dispensed with by the Commissioner, in the Commissioner's discretion, in any case where a strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice.

While the 90-day rule is rarely waived, it can be under certain circumstances where it would be inappropriate or injustice would occur. Mountainside cited Brown v. Board of Education of the Sussex Vocational School, A-4854-83T7 (App. Div. 1985) (quoted in W.V. ex rel C.V. v. Board of Education of Montville, EDU 5402-05, Initial Decision (January 6, 2006), adopted, Comm'r (February 21, 2006) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>)), where the Appellate Division held that there is justification to waive the rule "where a petitioner was reasonably led to believe that he could continue to informally seek relief and not be concerned about the time limitations for filing his formal petition." Mountainside also asserted that the Commissioner had relaxed the rule where enforcement would have allowed a school district to evade its clear legal obligation to pay tuition to a county vocational school on behalf of a resident student. See Bd. of Educ. of the Gloucester County Inst. of Tech. v. Bd. of Educ. of the Lenape Reg'l High Sch. Dist., EDU 10120-98, Initial Decision (October 4, 1999), aff'd as modified, Comm'r (December 16, 1999), remanded, St. Bd. (June 7, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (where another party to the same dispute has filed a petition of its own implicating the same issue). Mountainside emphasized that where the trigger date for the running of the limitations period is unclear or ambiguous, the State Board has applied the clarifications prospectively. The petitioner also argued that Mountainside reasonably could have believed that in the absence of a ruling by the County Superintendent, the limitations period for filing its petition would have commenced no earlier than June 30, 2006. In addition, since the proper method for calculating tuition credits is an important issue for many local boards, it could be considered an important public interest that required adjudication or clarification. Therefore, the 90-day rule could be waived.

Finally, Mountainside invoked the "square-corners doctrine," which holds that government agencies and officials must "turn square corners" in their dealings with others. They cannot use the statute of limitations defense where their negotiations or informal course of dealings with the other party implied that immediate resort to litigation is unnecessary. Petitioner's Reply Br. at 27. Mountainside pointed out that Mr. Van Tassel of Berkeley Heights and Mr. McLaughlin had established a dialogue trying to resolve the arrearage problem. Van Tassel's voice message alluded to the parties coming up with a "one-shot" credit to bring the parties current during the 2006-2007 school year. After Van Tassel retired, the discussions continue between Mr. Kistner and Mr. McLaughlin in February and March 2006. When no agreement was reached by the budget deadline and the Department of Education declined to rule on the matter, the districts put differing credit amounts in their budgets. However, neither side gave the other an indication that this signaled the end of negotiations and the commencement of the limitations period. As Mountainside pointed out, Berkeley Heights did not institute an action based on the differing budget amounts until November 2006, well after the time that the two budgets had been struck. The claim for the first time in the respondent's brief that the trigger date was the date the budget was introduced or passed was the kind of inequitable result that the "square-corners doctrine" was designed to prevent.

Mountainside also pointed out that one of the purposes of the 90-day rule was to allow a district to arrange its affairs without worrying about future legal challenges. If the Board of Education's passage of the proposed budget was the trigger date, then Mountainside's petition should have been filed by mid-June. However, by that date Berkeley Heights had already adopted its revised budget and the tax rate for the 2006-2007 school year had been struck. Thus, Berkeley Heights had suffered no delay by Mountainside's filing its petition on July 12, 2006.

APPLICATION OF 90-DAY RULE TO MOUNTAINSIDE

The first matter to be decided is whether the 90-day rule applies in this instance. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19(a) states that > the board of education of the receiving district shall determine a tuition rate to be paid by the board of education of the sending district to an amount not in excess of the actual cost per pupil as determined under rules prescribed by the commissioner.

N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1, which was promulgated to accomplish this purpose, also speaks in the imperative. It states, in pertinent part:

> If the Commissioner later determines that the tentative tuition charge established by written contractual agreement . . . was greater than the actual cost per student during the school year . . . the receiving district board of education shall return to the sending district board of education in the third school year following the contract year the amount by which the tentative charge exceeded the actual charge as determined above.

As the petitioner pointed out, the New Jersey Supreme Court in Lavin, supra, and Alpha, supra, ruled that the 90-day rule is not applicable to matters in which an absolute statutory entitlement is at stake. Where the regulation talks in terms of the receiving board of education being underpaid by the sending district, it speaks in the permissive. N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)(7) states:

> If the Commissioner later determines that the tentative charge . . . was less than the actual cost per student . . . the receiving district board of education may charge the sending district board of education all or part of the amount owed by the sending district board of education, to be paid during the third school year following the school year for which the tentative charge was paid.

Thus, it would appear that, based on the statutory language, the sending district has an absolute statutory right to reimbursement.

Aside from this determination, there is the issue of whether Berkeley Heights waived its defense of the 90-day rule when it paid $402,000 during the 2005-2006 school year. The parties acknowledged that if the 90-day rule applied, then the limitations period would have run for the 2001-2002 tuition credit. According to the statute, any credit for overpayment should have been paid by June 2005. However, Berkeley Heights did not acknowledge that a credit was due until November 2005 and repayment was not begun until December 2005. In his certification, Mr. McLaughlin claimed that the $402,000 payment was specifically for tuition credits for the 2001-2002 school year. Mr. Van Tassel certified that the money was a recognition of all prior credits due Mountainside. While it is likely that some of the $402,000 payment was a credit for 2001-2002, it is not necessary to determine if all of the payment was attributable to 2001-2002 in order to decide the waiver issue. What is clear is that both sides acknowledged that at least part of the payment was for 2001-2002. Acknowledgement of a debt and partial payment can waive the statute of limitations. See Burlington County Country Club v. Midlantic Nat'l Bank S., 223 N.J. Super. 227, 235-36 (Ch. Div. 1987), which involved payment to some of the bondholders on a debt owed to all of the bondholders. In this case, there was partial payment plus an acknowledgement by Van Tassel that further payment was subject to negotiations. Thus, I CONCLUDE that the acknowledgement and payment of the $402,000 credit waived the limitations argument as to the 2001-2002 school year.

The issue still remains as to the balance of the 2002-2003 and 2003-2004 school years. Berkeley Heights has claimed that there were several triggering dates when Mountainside knew that Berkeley Heights was disputing its rights to credits and it should have filed its petition. The first was when Mr. McLaughlin became business manager and began a comprehensive review of the tuition credit situation in November 2005 and found substantial overpayments. Mountainside should have filed its petition 90 days from that date. The problem with this argument is twofold. First, it is clear that the parties were engaged in a continuing discussion and negotiation regarding the amount of tuition credit due to Mountainside. As the petitioner pointed out, the parties were involved in a long-term sending-receiving relationship. (That relationship has recently been renewed for an additional ten-year period.) There were constant negotiations back and forth regarding tuition reimbursement and other issues that came up between them. While Berkeley Heights argued that the 90-day rule must be strictly interpreted and not waived unless there was proof that Berkeley Heights misrepresented or engaged in conduct that was intentionally calculated to mislead the petitioner, Mountainside pointed out that there was a case that held that there was justification to waive the 90-day rule without showing misrepresentation. DeMaio v. New Providence

Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU), 449 453, allowed for waiving of the time limitation when the party reasonably believed that it could informally seek relief without risking the running of the statute of limitations. Based on the course of conduct between Mountainside and Berkeley Heights, there was no indication at the time that Mr. McLaughlin's review of the tuition credits or Berkeley Heights' payment of $402,000 was the end of the discussion between the parties, including the issue of the balance of the 2001-2002 tuition credit. Therefore, there was no triggering event that would have caused Mountainside to be on notice that the 90-day period was beginning to run. Mr. Van Tassel's voice message to Mr. McLaughlin in January 2006 echoes the same attitude between the parties, i.e., that there was no solution regarding the tuition credit, but they were still working on the issue. If necessary, Mountainside should come up with a figure for budget purposes and they would deal with it later. Further, the issue of the proper method for calculating tuition credits is an important and recurring issue for boards of education. This type of case involving an important public interest is the kind of matter that would justify waiving the 90-day limitations period.

The next date that Berkeley Heights claims was a triggering event was the meeting at the County Board of Education. It is clear that at that meeting there was a discussion between the two business managers and they disagreed about the calculation of the tuition credit. However, as Mountainside pointed out, there was no decision by the County Superintendent as to which calculation was correct, so the parties were left in the same position they were in prior to the meeting. Since there was no adverse administrative determination, Mountainside reasonably could have believed that the issue was still open to further negotiations, especially since there was a new interim business manager who would have to be brought "up to speed" on the tuition issue. The next trigger date proposed by Berkeley Heights was the date of the school board approval of the budget. While at first blush it might seem that this is a trigger date, there are certain problems with this premise. Berkeley Heights pointed out that there was a member of the Mountainside Board of Education, Ms. Schaumberg, on the Berkeley Heights board and she was aware of the adoption of a budget that did not call for the tuition credit that Mountainside was alleging was due. While it is not entirely clear whether Ms. Schaumberg knew the exact amount that Berkeley Heights was putting in its budget for tuition credits, it is fairly certain that she knew that Berkeley Heights disagreed with Mountainside on the credit due to the petitioner. Therefore, the adoption of the budget should be the trigger date. However, there are two problems with this argument. First, the fact that Berkeley Heights adopted a budget did not mean that negotiations were necessarily over. As Mountainside pointed out, Berkeley Heights had paid $402,000 for prior tuition credits and this was not a line item expense in their 2005-2006 budget. The fact that a budget was adopted did not mean that Berkeley Heights could not adjust the tuition credit during the year. In addition, Berkeley Heights' budget was not passed by the taxpayers and the revised budget was not voted on by the town council until May 11, 2006. Therefore, the final budget did not come into existence until that date. It could have been revised at any time prior to that date. Therefore, if there was a triggering event, it did not occur until after the May date. The filing of the petition with the Department of Education on July 12, 2006, was within the 90-day period.

Second, according to N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)(6), the receiving district was to return the excess tuition charge to the sending district in the third school year following the contract year in which the credit was incurred. Therefore, Berkeley Heights could make payments up through June 30, 2006, for credits for the 2002-2003 school year. See Lord Sterling, supra, Agency Dkt. No. 129/4-02, Comm'r (July 19, 2002) <http://www.nj.gov/education/legal>. The filing of the petition on July 12, 2006, was thus within the 90-day time period. As for the 2003-2004 tuition credit, it was not due to be paid until the 2006-2007 school year. The petition was certainly filed prior to that 90-day time limit. If the adoption of the 2006-2007 budget by Berkeley Heights and Mountainside is considered an anticipatory breach, Berkeley Heights' position is still unpersuasive. Mountainside had the right to elect whether to consider the adoption of the budget as a breach of the agreement on tuition credits or wait until June 30, 2006, the last date for payment of the credit from the 2002-2003 school year. By filing in July 2006, the petition was filed in time.

Finally, in the interests of justice, it is clear that the 90-day limitations period should not be invoked. Government agencies have an obligation to "turn square corners." See W.V. Pangborne & Co. v. New Jersey Dep't of Transp., 116 N.J. 543, 554 (1989); Griggs v. Bd. of Educ. of Magnolia, EDU 6404-02, Initial Decision (December 27, 2004), adopted, Comm'r (February 10, 2005) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. This would apply not only to dealings with the public, but also to dealings with other government entities. Up until the time that Berkeley Heights filed its cross-motion for summary decision there was no indication that the respondent would be raising the defense of the 90-day limitations period. If the respondent believed that this was an issue in the case, it certainly had the opportunity to advise the petitioner prior to the cross-motion. One of the purposes of having the limitations period is to allow the school district the opportunity to plan for its fiscal obligations. If the adoption of the 2006-2007 budget by Mountainside on March 17 was the trigger date, then it is unclear how the filing of the petition on July 12 rather than on June 17 would have affected Berkeley Heights' fiscal position for the 2006-2007 school year. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that, in the interests of justice and based on the reasoning outlined above, the 90-day limitations period does not apply.

APPLICATION OF 90-DAY RULE TO BERKELEY HEIGHTS

Mountainside argued that if the 90-day rule were to apply to Mountainside, then it should also apply to Berkeley Heights. Berkeley Heights had argued that at the March 16, 2006, meeting Mountainside was made aware that Berkeley Heights disagreed with the petitioner's calculations about the credit due. Mountainside pointed out that at the same meeting Berkeley Heights was made aware that Mountainside had adopted different tuition figures and was planning to make them part of its budget. Therefore, Berkeley Heights should have filed its petition for reimbursement of underpayment by Mountainside by June 16, 2006. Instead, Berkeley Heights did not file its petition until November 2006. Under Berkeley Heights' theory, it was equally barred from recovery. Mountainside also pointed out that even if there was a factual question as to whether Berkeley Heights received notice of Mountainside's position at the March 16, 2006, meeting, it received written notice no later than June 7, 2006, when the County Superintendent faxed over Mountainside's budget showing the disputed credits deducted from what Mountainside would have planned to pay Berkeley Heights in the coming school year. Therefore, on this theory as well, Berkeley Heights was late in filing its petition in November 2006. Mountainside also argued that if its petition was deemed untimely under an anticipatory repudiation analysis, then Berkeley Heights' cross-petition must also be deemed untimely, since Berkeley Heights was as much on notice of Mountainside's intentions as Mountainside was of Berkeley Heights'.

Having found that the 90-day rule does not apply to bar Mountainside's claim, I likewise CONCLUDE that the rule does not bar any claim that Berkeley Heights has for underpayment of tuition by Mountainside.

1997-1998 & 1998-1999 SCHOOL YEAR CREDITS

In its reply brief Berkeley Heights argued that Mountainside was given credits for overcharges in tuition for 1997-1998 and 1998-1999 despite clear contract language relieving Berkeley Heights from any obligation to do so. Berkeley Heights points to paragraph 5, section c, of the existing agreement dealing with tuition for those years. It states:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of subparagraphs (a) and (b)[1] above, the tuition charge for the 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years shall be twelve thousand five hundred dollars ($12,500.00) per student. In 1997-98 this amount shall be multiplied by 197 Mountainside students, for a total tuition charge of two million four hundred and sixty two thousand five hundred dollars ($2,462,500.00). For 1998-99 the total tuition charge shall be determined by multiplying the per-pupil amount of $12,500.00 by the number of Mountainside students enrolled at the High School on January 15, 1998.
> [Respondent's Reply Br. at 11.]

While Berkeley Heights argued that it was under no legal obligation to give a credit, it acknowledged that, based on the lower per-pupil tuition cost of $10,770 certified by the State, it gave petitioner a credit of $337,350, which was deducted from moneys owed in the 2001-2002 school year. It then went on to argue that if I find that the statute of limitations is not applicable, Berkeley Heights is owed a refund credit in the amount of $337,350.

[1] Subparagraphs (a) and (b) of the agreement refer to the calculation of tentative tuition charges and resultant adjustments based on the actual cost per pupil as certified by the Commissioner of Education in any given school year.

There are a number of problems with this argument. First, Berkeley Heights was granted leave to file a cross-petition of appeal. Nowhere in the cross-petition did Berkeley Heights mention the 1997–1999 credit or anything relating to the issue of the contract versus the statutory calculation of tuition credits. Second, Berkeley Heights admitted that it gave credits to Mountainside for overpayments of tuition for those years. In effect, Berkeley Heights acknowledged that the statute and regulations, rather than the contract terms, should determine the actual tuition charge that Mountainside was obligated to pay. It was only later on in the cross-motion for summary decision that Berkeley Heights asserted that the contract terms should be enforced and no credit was due for 1997–99. During cross-examination, Mr. Thomas, Berkeley Height's expert, refused to characterize these prior payments as credits and claimed that he was not sure whether they were given or what they represented. He did admit, however, that if I found that the regulation was applicable, that the amount of the credit calculated by Mountainside was correct. Mr. Thomas' testimony on this point does not square with the prior conduct of the parties. Having given the credit required under the regulation, Berkeley Heights cannot assert now that it should not have given the credit.

Finally, Berkeley Heights' argument that the contract terms, rather than the statutory and regulatory formula, should prevail, is contrary to case law. The Supreme Court in State of New Jersey v. State Supervisory Employees Association, 78 N.J. 54 (1978), a matter involving collective negotiations agreements between the State and union locals, found that parties cannot enter into binding agreements concerning matters that are the subject of legislation. In Girard Trust Co. v. Schmitz, 129 N.J. Eq. 444 (1941), a matter involving the terms of a will, the court held that a transaction would be void if it was against public policy. Public policy is determined by the constitution, statutes or judicial decisions of the state. In this case, the State has determined that school districts must follow a certain formula in determining tuition calculations. As Mountainside's expert Melvin Wyns pointed out in his testimony, it seems clear from the terms of the statute and regulation that the State did not want a sending district to pay more than the actual (certified) tuition cost per student.[2] That is why there was a formula to credit any overpayment. The language of N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1(f)(6) is mandatory. It states:

> . . . the receiving district board of education shall return to the sending district board of education in the third school year following the contract year the amount by which the tentative charge exceeded the actual charge as determined above.

The issue of the mandatory terms of this regulation was discussed in Board of Education of Spotswood v. Board of Education of Milltown, EDU 197-98, Initial Decision (March 5, 1999), aff'd, Comm'r (June 7, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. In that matter a question arose regarding certain components of the tuition charge. However, the Commissioner made it clear that the payment to the sending district by the receiving district of overcharges based on the tentative versus the certified tuition amounts was mandatory. If the parties could contract to pay a set amount that was in excess of the actual cost (which was the case in 1997-1998 and 1998-1999), then they would be circumventing the intent and terms of the statute. Therefore, the parties are not free to determine another method of calculation. (Mr. Wyns' testimony that the contract terms are ambiguous and may only relate to determination of the tentative tuition rather than the actual tuition amount is not persuasive. The contract speaks clearly about the $12,500 charge per student for 1997-1998 and 1998-1999 being considered the actual cost per-pupil despite any determination by the Commissioner of Education to the contrary.)

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the regulation fixing the formula for determining credit to be given to the sending district governs rather than the terms of the contract. Berkeley Heights cannot recoup the credit for tuition overpayment by Mountainside for the 1997-1998 and 1998-1999 school years.

SPECIAL EDUCATION TUITION CHARGES

In its reply brief, the respondent raised for the first time the issue of tuition credits for special education students. Berkeley Heights alleges that since the inception of the sending-receiving agreement, Mountainside has not been billed for special education costs related to the education of its students. The Berkeley Heights' expert estimated that $277,915 was due to Berkeley Heights for providing resource-room services for Mountainside students for the period 2000–2006. The expert claimed that this was a conservative estimate, which did not take into account other special services offered to these special education students. Berkeley Heights asserted that if I found that the 90-day limitations period did not apply, then it had the right to claim reimbursement for these expenses. The respondent, neither in its answer nor in its cross-petition, ever claimed a right to reimbursement for special education costs. (Berkeley Heights claims that its general prayer for reimbursement should be interpreted to include special education costs, even though they were not specifically mentioned. I do not find this argument to be persuasive.) At this point, if the respondent claims that it is due moneys for special education, then it must file a separate action to recover these costs. They are not part of this matter. It should also be noted that, while Mountainside has claimed, over the course of many years, that it is due tuition reimbursement, Berkeley Heights has never sought special education tuition reimbursement prior to its filing the brief in this action. Therefore, there may be a separate 90-day limitations issue that I decline to rule on in the present controversy. Further, the respondent faces the additional burden that was addressed in Spotswood, supra, EDU 197-98, Initial Decision (March 5, 1999), aff'd, Comm'r (June 7, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, which is that, while the receiving district is obligated to reimburse the sending district for overcharges, it is not required to ask for reimbursement for undercharges.

CALCULATION OF THE CREDITS BETWEEN THE DISTRICTS

Mountainside presented the expert testimony of Melvin Wyns, and Berkeley Heights called Wayne Thomas as its expert. After reviewing the testimony and the reports, it is clear that both districts failed to follow the dictates of the statute and regulations. In Mountainside's case, it failed to pay the amount invoiced, which should have been the estimated cost per pupil (ECP) multiplied by the estimated average daily enrollment (EADE), minus the credit from three years prior. Instead it paid another amount, which appears to have been adjusted based on the number of students attending Berkeley Heights during a given month. This is not a correct application of the statute. Mountainside should have paid based on the EADE, then once the certified cost per pupil and the certified average daily enrollment was determined, an adjustment of the amount owed by Mountainside would be calculated. This would have been credited three years hence. Mountainside should not have deviated from this formula.

As will be illustrated more fully below, Berkeley Heights deviated from the statutory formula in such a manner that it failed to give Mountainside the proper credit for overpayments of tuition in prior years. By using a formula that was not provided by the statute, Berkeley Heights shortchanged Mountainside on the credit that it was supposed to receive in the third year for overpayments made three years prior. Therefore, in order to determine whether one district owes the other district money, it is necessary to completely rework the figures and fit them into the legislative scheme. I will do so in the calculations and attachments below.

Before I begin the calculations, there are two issues that must be resolved. During the initial submissions period, there was a question regarding a $2,850.33 payment made by Mountainside to Berkeley Heights in 2003-2004. This question has been resolved, since both parties now agree that this payment was for transportation costs and not tuition. The second discrepancy regards payments of $49,250 and $400 made in the 2000-2001 school year. Mountainside submitted a voucher countersigned by Berkeley Heights on July 31, 2000, reflecting a payment of $49,650 toward the "97/98 Tuition Agreement" and an activity register showing a payment made to Berkeley Heights during the 2000-2001 school year, allocating that payment to account number 11-000-100-561-000-02 "TUITION/REG," which was the account for regular education tuition. The activity register also showed a payment of $400, which was designated as "Supp & Mater." Berkeley Heights argued that while it did not send an invoice to Mountainside that specifically related to the $49,250, it did receive the payment. However, it claimed that the countersigned voucher was not dispositive proof that the $49,250 was a tuition payment. On Berkeley Heights' side it was recognized as "miscellaneous income," whereas other payments made for tuition were allocated as such by Berkeley Heights.

The account that Berkeley Heights choose to allocate the payment to is not dispositive of the designation that the payment should receive in this matter. Mountainside presented a voucher countersigned by Berkeley Heights that clearly designates the $49,250 payment as part of the "97/98 Tuition Agreement." This is sufficient proof that the payment was for tuition and that both parties acknowledged it as such. Therefore, it will be considered as a tuition payment. The $400 payment has no voucher attached and the activity register does not characterize it as a tuition payment. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the $400 payment was not for tuition, but the $49,250 was for that purpose. The figures in the tables attached reflect these designations.

OVERALL ASSESSMENT

The case between Mountainside and Berkeley Heights is covered by statute. The statute clearly identifies how the estimated tuition is to be calculated, and how the credit for each year is to be determined based on the data certified by the Department of Education (DOE). It is clear from the data provided by both districts that the statute was not followed by either school district.

There are four issues that skew the mathematics and are the contributing factors to the districts' reaching different conclusions about who owes whom money and the amount owed. The factors are a Payment Issue, Computation of Credit Issues, an Overapplication of Credit Issue, and an Underapplication of Credit Issue. Each of these issues will be addressed below.

The only way to resolve these issues was to obtain the records indicating how much Mountainside paid Berkeley Heights each year from the start of this sending/receiving relationship and the certified tuition as calculated each year from the data provided by the DOE. It was then necessary to recalculate the credits each year starting with school year 1997-1998 using the methodology defined in the statute. The results of these calculations are shown in Attachments 1 and 2 below.

SUMMARY OF THE STATUTE

The statute requires that prior to the start of a school year the districts enter into a contract that identifies the estimated cost per pupil (ECP) and the estimated average daily enrollment (EADE). From these numbers the districts can compute a tentative tuition (TT) as follows:

(1) $TT = ECP \times EADE$

The statute also requires that the sending school district pay the receiving school district the tentative tuition less any prior year credit in ten equal payments. The statute defines prior year credit as the credit from three years earlier (CR_{-3}).

The total amount that the receiving school district should invoice the sending school district (AI) is as follows:

(2) $AI = TT - CR_{-3}$

Later, when the DOE determines the certified cost per pupil (CCP) and the certified average daily enrollment (CADE), the certified tuition (CT) is calculated as follows:

(3) $CT = CCP \times CADE$

The credit (CR) for that school year is then determined as follows:

(4) $CR = TT - CT$

If the credit is positive, then the receiving school district must reimburse the sending school district no later than the end of the third school year following this contract year. The reimbursement can be sent via check or applied as a credit for that later school year. If the credit is negative, then the receiving school district can take one of three actions:

a. Bill the sending school district for the entire amount owed.

b. Bill the sending school district none of the amount owed.

c. Bill the sending school district for part of the amount owed.

The billing, if any, is to occur in the third year following the contract year in which the credit was negative.

ISSUES THAT SKEW THE MATHEMATICAL CALCULATIONS

1. Payment Issue

Mountainside did not pay Berkeley Heights the amount invoiced, which skews the calculations. The amount that Mountainside should have paid (AP) should have been the amount invoiced (AI). In that case:

(5) $AP = AI$

Substituting this equivalent into equation (2) yields:

(6) $AP = TT - CR_{-3}$

By rearranging the terms, the equation reads:

(7) $TT = AP + CR_{-3}$. The tentative tuition equals the amount paid plus the credit.

Since Mountainside did not pay the amount invoiced, the tentative tuition cannot be the amount as determined by equation (1), but rather the amount as determined by equation (7). In other words, the tentative tuition for any given year is actually the amount paid (AP) by Mountainside to Berkeley Heights plus the credit that Mountainside should have received for that year.

In the attached charts, equation (7) was used to determine the tentative tuition for each year.

2. Computation of Credit Issues

Both Mountainside and Berkeley Heights computed the credit improperly.

Berkeley Heights' Computation

Berkeley Heights calculated the credit using the following equation, instead of using equation (4):

(8) CRBH = AP - CT. Credit as calculated by Berkeley Heights (CRBH) is the amount paid (AP) by Mountainside minus the certified tuition. Let us look at why this is mathematically incorrect.

Substituting equation (7) into equation (4) we get:

(9) $CR = AP + CR_{-3} - CT$

Comparing equation (9) with equation (8) we see that the difference is the term CR_{-3}, which means that the Berkeley Heights calculation never gave Mountainside the credit due to Mountainside from a previous school year. The impact of this error is discussed in the section entitled "Underapplication of Credit Issue."

Mountainside's Computation

Mountainside computed the credit as follows:

(10) CRM = (ECP - CCP) x CADE. The credit as calculated by Mountainside (CRM) is the estimated cost per pupil (ECP) minus the certified cost per pupil (CCP), times the certified average daily enrollment (CADE). Let us look at why this is mathematically incorrect.

Substituting equations (1) and (3) into (4) we get:

(11) CR = (ECP x EADE) - (CCP x CADE)

Expanding equation (10) we get:

(12) CRM = (ECP x CADE) - (CCP x CADE). The second terms in equations (11) and (12) are identical, but the first terms are different. The only way that they can be identical is if the CADE is absolutely identical to the EADE. This is a highly unlikely case.

However, even if it turned out to be true in a particular year, note that the first term is the tentative tuition as calculated in accordance with the statute as stated in equation (1). We have previously ascertained that since Mountainside did not pay the amount invoiced, equation (1) cannot be used to determine the tentative tuition; equation (7) must be used. Equation (7) is based on the amount that Mountainside actually paid Berkeley Heights in any given year. Therefore Mountainside cannot use its method in determining the credit owed to Mountainside. Even if CADE = EADE, Mountainside is basing the tentative tuition on the amount as calculated by the statute, then paying Berkeley Heights less than this amount, and yet Mountainside is calculating the credit as if it had paid the correct amount.

Rolling Credit

One-way to keep track of the credit owed to (or due from) the sending school district is to compute a rolling credit (RCR). This can be accomplished as follows:

(13) $RCR_0 = RCR_{-1} - CR_{-3} + CR_0$. The rolling credit for the current year (RCR_0) is the rolling credit from the previous year (RCR_{-1}) minus the credit given to the sending district, which is the credit as calculated from three years earlier (CR_{-3}) plus the credit due for the current school year (CR_0).

3. Overapplication of Credit

For school year 2005-2006 Berkeley Heights realized that it owed Mountainside a credit, and it gave Mountainside a credit of $402,500. We will see when we discuss the attached charts that the amount given was more credit than Mountainside should have received, if the statute was followed correctly. The amount of excess credit is defined as the delta credit (ΔCR).

Equation (9) explains how the credit for any given year should be calculated. Recall that equation 9 is as follows:

$$(9) \quad CR = AP + CR_{-3} - CT$$

If the credit given to the sending school district is not CR_{-3}, but rather $CR_{-3} + \Delta CR$, then equation (9) becomes,

$$(14) \quad CR = AP + (CR_{-3} + \Delta CR) - CT$$

Comparing equation (14) with equation (9) shows that the credit for the school year in question will actually be increased by ΔCR, which compounds the problem. Not only is the sending school district receiving more credit than it deserves for the current school year, but it will be receiving an excess credit in three years when this erroneous credit for the current year is applied.

The method of correcting an overapplication of credit (ΔCR) is not addressed in the statute, so good accounting practice should prevail. Good accounting practice dictates that once the mistake is found it should be rectified as soon as possible. The easiest way to rectify the situation is to underapply the credit due to the sending school district the next school year by the amount that was overapplied in the school year in question. This is what was done in Attachment 2 of the attached charts.

4. Underapplication of Credit

If there is an underapplication of credit, the following occurs. Equation (14) still applies, but now ΔCR is a negative number. In this case, not only is the sending school district receiving less credit than it deserves for the current school year, but it will be receiving less credit in three years when this erroneous credit for the current year is applied. Basically, this is what has been happening every year since these two school districts entered into the sending-receiving relationship.

The only way to rectify the situation is to go back to the very beginning of the relationship and recalculate the credits based on the information provided, and agreed upon, by both districts. The attached charts accomplish this task.

EXPLANATION OF ATTACHED CHARTS

Attachment 1 recalculates the transactions by year, starting with the first year of the agreement (1997-1998), in accordance with the statute, using the amounts agreed upon by both school districts. There is still a discrepancy in the amount paid for school year 2000-2001. Based on the evidence provided by Mountainside, the amount used in the attachment is $49,250 more than what Berkeley Heights claimed that it received. The other discrepancy of $400 was not substantiated by Mountainside and therefore the Berkeley Heights numbers are being used.

Equation (7) was used to determine the tentative tuition and equation (4) was used to determine the credit for each school year. The credit was applied in accordance with the statute, in the third school year following the year it was calculated.

A rolling credit is also shown at the bottom of the Attachment 1 chart. Note that the rolling credit for the current school year (2006-2007) is $263,574.80.

Attachment 2 recalculates the transactions as done in Attachment 1 through school year 2004-2005. However, in school year 2005-2006 the credit given is $402,500 instead of $291,158 as shown in Attachment 1. The $402,500 is the amount of credit that both school districts agree was given that year. The difference between $402,500 and $291,158 is $111,342. This is the overapplied credit (ΔCR) discussed above.

In school year 2006-2007 Mountainside is given a credit of only $236.046.10 instead of $347,388.10 as shown in Attachment 1. The difference is an underapplication of credit of $111,342, which is the ΔCR from the previous school year. Note that the rolling credit for the current school year (2006-2007) is $263,574.80, which is the same as in Attachment 1, proving that this method of correcting for a ΔCR is correct.

Another point borne out by both Attachment 1 and Attachment 2 is that Mountainside is behind in its payments for the current school year. Mountainside has paid, including credits received, $1,720,588.90 through February against an estimated tuition of $3,216,360.00. Since Mountainside is to receive a credit of $236,046.10, the amount that should be invoiced by Berkeley Heights and paid by Mountainside is $2,980,313.90 for this school year. Therefore, at the end of the current school year Mountainside should have paid $2,980,313.90.

THE WAY AHEAD

The districts should follow the statute and use the DOE-mandated contract to determine the tentative tuition (TT). For school year 2007-2008 Mountainside should receive a credit of $263,574.80. Once the TT is agreed upon and the credit applied, then the amount invoiced should be determined by equation (2) above. Mountainside should pay one-tenth of this amount each month from September 2007 through June 2008 without making any adjustments.

When the DOE determines the certified tuition, then the credit (CR) should be determined using equation (4).

Note that according to the data provided, the certified tuition for school year 2005-2006 has not yet been released. Therefore the credit for this school year cannot yet be calculated. However, once the certified tuition is released and the credit determined, then this credit should be given to Mountainside in school year 2008-2009.

The process explained in this section, which is in accordance with the statute, should be followed for all subsequent school years as long as this sending-receiving relationship remains in force. When it ends, Berkeley Heights will send checks to Mountainside, no later than the end of the third school year following the year that the credit was earned, for any credits that Mountainside is owed from the last two years of the relationship.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based on the briefs and certifications submitted and the testimony presented, I CONCLUDE and ORDER as follows:

1. The issue of the 90-day rule can be determined on summary decision.

2. Mountainside's claim for reimbursement of tuition credit for 2001–2006 is not barred by the 90-day rule.

3. Berkeley Heights' claim for underpayment of tuition is not barred by the 90-day rule.

4. The proper method of calculating tuition credit is that which was outlined in the regulation.

5. School districts must follow the method of calculation for determining tuition credit based on the statute and regulations promulgated thereunder. They are not free to agree to a formula that contradicts the provisions of the statute and regulations.

6. Following the proper formula, Mountainside, in order to be current, should pay Berkeley Heights $2,980,313.90 for the 2006-2007 school year. In addition, Mountainside should receive a credit of $236,046.10, which would bring the total estimated tuition for the 2006-2007 school year to $3,216,360.00.

7. The issue of tuition credits for special education students is not encompassed in this petition and will not be considered in this action.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of her children in June 2007. The respondent filed an answer and counterclaim for tuition. Petitioner received appropriate notice of a December 2007 hearing, but failed to appear and provided no explanation for her nonappearance.

Having received no explanation from the petitioner for her non-appearance, the ALJ recommended dismissal of the case and returned the file to the Commissioner. The file included respondent's letter conveying its willingness to withdraw its counterclaim.

The Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision – finding that this matter is no longer a contested case and recommending dismissal of the petition – as the final decision in this case.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. In the Initial Decision the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) advises that the petitioner failed to appear at the hearing scheduled in this case, notwithstanding the two notices that had been sent to her at the address listed in her petition. Having received no explanation from the petitioner for the non-appearance, the ALJ recommends dismissal of the case and has returned the file to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4 – along with copies of the notifications that were sent to the parties by the OAL concerning the December 4, 2007, hearing date.

No exceptions have been filed by petitioner, and the respondent has conveyed in writing its willingness to withdraw its counterclaim. The Commissioner consequently adopts the Initial Decision – finding that this matter is no longer a contested case and recommending dismissal of the petition with prejudice – as the final decision in this case.

BEFORE DOUGLAS H. HURD, ALJ:

Petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal, dated June 3, 2007. On June 25, 2007, respondent filed an Answer and Counterclaim for tuition. By letter dated September 7, 2007, respondent advised me that it was dismissing its counterclaim and also confirming that it consented to the dismissal of petitioner's appeal. Thereafter, petitioner was advised that, if she wanted to withdraw her appeal, she needed to so advise me in writing. Petitioner never filed a letter withdrawing her appeal.

A hearing was scheduled for December 4, 2007. Petitioner did not appear at the hearing and provided no explanation for the nonappearance. Respondent continues to rely on its September 7, 2007, letter withdrawing its Counterclaim.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner sought emergent relief, appealing respondent's decision to disenroll her minor grandchildren, B.M., Z.M. and G.P., as of May 1, 2007. Petitioner acknowledged that – because of financial hardship – her family had relocated three blocks from their former residence in Bloomfield to an apartment in East Orange during January 2007, but requested that respondent allow the children – who were deeply affected by a recent family loss as well as the ensuing move – to finish the year in Bloomfield schools, where they had always attended, without payment of tuition.

The ALJ – treating the matter as a residency dispute, as the Board had done at both the local level and OAL hearing – found that: it was unnecessary to hear petitioner's application for emergent relief, since the children would remain in school during the pendency of the appeal by operation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1; the children were not entitled to a free public education in Bloomfield schools as of the date of their move in January 2007; respondent was entitled to disenroll petitioner's grandchildren due to their change in domicile; tuition can be waived in a disputed residency matter when particular circumstances so warrant; and the Board's refusal to waive tuition in this case was not sufficiently justified. The ALJ affirmed the disenrollment of petitioner's grandchildren but dismissed the Board's tuition reimbursement claim.

The Commissioner modified the Initial Decision, noting that the matter was not a residency dispute – since petitioner never claimed her grandchildren were legally entitled to free education once they had moved from the district – but rather an appeal of the Board's discretionary determination not to permit them to attend for the rest of the year as tuition-free nonresident students. Because the children's ineligible attendance continued for the duration of proceedings at the local level and before the Commissioner by virtue of the Board's actions – not those of petitioner – the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that tuition should not be assessed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

C.H., ON BEHALF OF MINOR GRANDCHILDREN, B.M., Z.M. and G.P.,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BLOOMFIELD, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the respondent Board of Education (Board) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. The petitioner did not reply to the Board's exceptions.

On exception, the Board first objects to the Initial Decision on grounds that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) lacked authority to waive tuition for petitioner's grandchildren's period of ineligible attendance in the district. According to the Board, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3(a) – the statute permitting local district boards of education to admit nonresident students in their discretion, erroneously cited by the ALJ – does not apply in this matter, whereas the statute that actually controls – N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)2 – clearly "mandates the imposition of tuition against the parent or guardian whose child attends a school district in which the child does not reside." The Board argues that "[no] case has held to the contrary," and that the Legislature could not have reasonably intended for school boards to have "a mandatory right to tuition unless and until a student requests a 'waiver' pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3(a)" as was effectively held by the ALJ. Thus, the Board proffers, upon its discovery that C.H.'s grandchildren were unlawfully attending school in the district, the children "came within the auspices of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)2, and, therefore, must, by the express provisions of said statute, reimburse the Board for tuition." Once tuition was reimbursed and the children began attending their "proper school," the Board concludes, C.H. could then petition the Board for the children to "attend the Bloomfield School District under the terms and conditions deemed appropriate by the Board." (Board's Exceptions at 2-4, quotations at 3 and 4-5)

The Board next asserts that – even if C.H. was, arguendo, eligible for a waiver of tuition – the ALJ erred in holding the Board's "denial" of such waiver to be arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable; according to the Board, C.H. never made that claim herself and "it is a long held maxim of law that a party which fails to raise a defense waives their right to pursue that defense at a later date." (Board's Exceptions at 5) Moreover, even assuming a claim of arbitrariness was appropriately considered, the Board continues, the ALJ erred by relieving C.H. of any burden of proof and instead placing the burden on the Board – without testimony on this point – to show that its actions were not unreasonable. (Id. at 5-6)

Finally, the Board contends that – contrary to the finding of the ALJ – the petitioner did not come to this matter with "clean hands," and, consequently, cannot be awarded equitable relief. The Board explains:

> Despite admitting that her grandchildren did not reside in Bloomfield, petitioner compelled C.H. (sic) to attend Bloomfield schools for a period of at least three (3) months (January 2007 to March 2007). Then, after being caught illegally attending Bloomfield schools, Petitioner challenged the Board's decision to disenroll C.H. (sic) without legal foundation to mount a challenge. In other words, Petitioner, admitting that C.H. (sic) > lived in East Orange, brought a challenge to the Board's ruling knowing that C.H. (sic) improperly attended Bloomfield schools," thus forcing the Board and the State to "expend money hearing a meritless claim."

> (Board's Exceptions at 6-7, quotation at 7)

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that – as of their move from the district in January 2007 – C.H.'s grandchildren were no longer entitled to a free public education in the Bloomfield school district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, but also that C.H. should not be assessed tuition for the time of the children's ineligible attendance. In so doing, however, she clarifies the ALJ's reasoning as follows.

Initially, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that assessment of tuition can, indeed, be waived in a disputed residency matter, and that the Board errs in arguing to the contrary. Over and above the earlier cases cited as examples by the ALJ (Initial Decision at 6), the Commissioner additionally notes that applicable rule adopted in November 2001 expressly provides that nothing in the chapter shall "preclude an equitable determination, by the district board of education or the Commissioner, that, when the particular circumstances of a matter so warrant, tuition shall not be assessed for all or part of any period of a student's ineligible attendance in the school district." (N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.3(b); see also predecessor rule N.J.A.C. 6A:28-2.10(d)) Thus, there can be no question that the ALJ had the authority, based on specific facts found, to waive any tuition found to be due pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1.

However, as implicitly recognized by the ALJ – notwithstanding that the Initial Decision's analysis is couched in terms of "waiver" of tuition pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 as consequence of the Board's persistent posture in this matter – C.H.'s true claim is not one of entitlement by residency, but rather of unreasonable exercise by the Board of its discretionary authority to permit her grandchildren to attend during the spring 2007 term as tuition-free nonresidents. Indeed, once the question of her family's residency was raised and C.H. acknowledged that they no longer lived within the district and did not claim to meet alternate statutory criteria so as to be entitled to free education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, the question of the children's subsequent attendance in Bloomfield should not have been treated as a residency dispute, either at the local district level or at the subsequent OAL hearing.

Although the record does not reveal how the district administration came to be aware in February 2007 that C.H. was no longer living in Bloomfield, there is nothing to indicate that at any time – either at the local district level or before the Commissioner or the ALJ – C.H. disputed or attempted to conceal that she had moved from Bloomfield during the preceding month (January 2007), when – due to family exigency – she rented a smaller home located three doors away but just over the municipal border in East Orange. To the contrary, once she was notified of the district's findings, C.H.'s quest to keep the children enrolled in Bloomfield for the remainder of the year was at all times based on a plea – in the interest of the children's well-being – for the Board to consider them as tuition-free nonresident students (N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:22-2.2), rather than on any claim of entitlement based on purported residency in the district.

From the outset, however, the Board proceeded as though the matter were a residency dispute arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 and its implementing rules, engaging in protracted investigative and removal proceedings and staying disenrollment of the children throughout – even though C.H. readily acknowledged that the family no longer lived in Bloomfield. When the Board ultimately (on April 10, 2007) heard and denied her request for the children to be considered tuition-free nonresidents and remain in the district with approximately six weeks remaining in the school year – notwithstanding that the April 11, 2007 letter informing her of the children's impending disenrollment provided procedural information specific to claims arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 – C.H. filed with the Commissioner not a residency appeal disputing the Board's finding of ineligibility, but a petition appealing the Board's discretionary determination not to consider the children as tuition-free nonresidents. She further filed an application for emergent relief so that the children would not be disenrolled on May 1, 2007 (the date set by the Board), since appeals under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 – unlike timely appeals filed pursuant to claims of domicile or residency under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 – carry with them no entitlement by operation of law to continue attending school while an appeal is pending.

Consistent with the statutory framework and C.H.'s clear representations, the Department of Education in turn did not transmit this matter to the OAL as a "residency" appeal, but rather as a petition and application for emergent relief with the instruction that the petitioner was seeking an immediate order permitting the named children to "continue attending Board's schools through the end of the [2006-07] school year, notwithstanding having moved from the district." At the OAL, however, the Board first advised the ALJ that a hearing on C.H.'s emergent application was unnecessary because the children would remain in school by operation of law until the matter was decided on the merits, then proceeded to litigate its case – as it continues to do before the Commissioner – substantially as though C.H. had challenged the Board's determination of ineligibility and invoked the protections of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, rather than conceding such ineligibility and appealing from the Board's discretionary denial of her request that the children be permitted to attend for the term as tuition-free nonresidents in light of the family's unfortunate personal and financial situation.[1]

Consequently, it was due entirely to the actions of the Board and its agents that C.H.'s grandchildren continued to attend school in Bloomfield – and thus to incur potential liability for tuition – from the time their residency came into question through the end of the school year. Had the Board acted decisively subsequent to February 23, 2007 – the date of investigative referral from which the Board's own calculation of tuition is reckoned,[2] and within a month of the family's move from the district – and not advised the ALJ on appeal that the Board was proceeding pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 and keeping the children enrolled pending final decision, C.H.'s emergent appeal of the Board's denial of her request for tuition-free nonresident status could have been promptly heard and decided in accordance with applicable standards of law; then, only if the stringent criteria of Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) were met would the Commissioner have ordered the Board to permit the children to remain in the district pending final determination rather than directing C.H. to enroll them forthwith in the district (East Orange) of their legal entitlement, where – due to the timing of events – they likely would have finished the

[1] That the Board understood the petitioner's position at her hearing before the Board – but misconstrued her position on appeal – is evident from the Board's own recitation of events:

> The Petitioner requested the Board to exercise its discretion to permit her grandchildren to attend the District schools free of charge from January through June 2007. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3(a) recognizes the right of the Board to do so. The Board, after hearing from the Petitioner, denied her request. Rather than withdraw her grandchildren from the District schools at the time of the denial, which occurred on or about April 11, 2007, the Petitioner filed the instant appeal and, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, her grandchildren attended the District schools for the balance of the 2006-07 school year. (Post-hearing Summation at 3) school year had emergent relief not been granted.[3] Moreover, had the Board not insisted on characterizing this matter as a residency dispute, proceedings on appeal would have focused – as they should have – on the reasonableness of the Board's discretionary determination to deny C.H.'s grandchildren tuition-free nonresident status, and the record would not be devoid as it is of argument and evidence – from either party, apart from brief comments from the Board in its post-hearing summation (at 3) – specifically directed to this question. Under such circumstances, the Commissioner simply cannot find assessment of tuition against C.H. to be a just result, notwithstanding that her grandchildren did, in fact, attend Bloomfield public schools for 78 school days after they had moved from the district.

Accordingly, as clarified and amplified above, the Initial Decision of the OAL – finding that C.H. is not responsible for payment of tuition to the Bloomfield Board of Education for the period from February 23, 2007 to the end of the 2006-07 school year – is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[4]

[3] Particularly under circumstances where the family had already been subjected to major emotional and physical upheaval, the Commissioner finds absurd the Board's stance on exception, supra, that C.H. should have withdrawn the children from the Bloomfield schools – the only schools they have ever attended – on her own volition upon discovery of their ineligibility in February or March, enrolled them in East Orange, and then, after paying tuition to Bloomfield for the time of their ineligible attendance, petitioned the Board for permission to have them return to Bloomfield to finish whatever was left of the school year. (The record does not indicate where the children will be attending school during the 2007-08 school year – only that they are being returned to their parents, whose district of domicile is not identified.)

C. H. O/B/O MINOR GRANDCHILDREN,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BLOOMFIELD, ESSEX COUNTY,

Respondent.

C.H., pro se

Mark A. Wenczel, Esq., for Respondent (Gaccione, Pomaco & Malanga, attorneys)

Record Closed: September 11, 2007 Decided: October 19, 2007

BEFORE JAMES A. GERAGHTY, ALJ:

BACKGROUND

Petitioner, C.H. on behalf of her minor grandchildren B.M., Z.M., and G.P., contests respondent Bloomfield Board of Education's disenrollment of her grandchildren from the Bloomfield public schools due to their having relocated from Bloomfield to the City of East Orange during January 2007, the beginning of the second semester of the 2006-2007 school year. Specifically, by letter dated March 20, 2007, the school administration advised C.H. that her grandchildren would be disenrolled due to their no longer being domiciled within the Township of Bloomfield. The Board of Education held a hearing after which they voted to disenroll three of her grandchildren effective May 1, 2007. However, the Board decided not to disenroll a fourth grandchild but to grant him the "senior privilege" to complete senior year at Bloomfield High School tuition free. Petitioner appealed to the Commissioner of the Board of Education by letter dated April 27, 2007. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on May 3, 2007 as a request for emergency relief. On May 16, 2007, respondent filed an Answer and Counterclaim for tuition reimbursement of $11,455.86.

A hearing was scheduled for May 15, 2007. By letter of May 11, 2007, counsel for respondent requested an adjournment and averred that the matter was no longer emergent since the appeal stayed the disenrollment and that the involved students continued to attend the Bloomfield Public Schools. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. The tribunal granted the request and rescheduled the hearing for May 24, 2007. Respondent's counsel requested another adjournment due to a scheduling conflict. The tribunal granted the request but scheduled a telephone conference during which the tribunal accepted a proposal that the matter proceed on stipulated facts, written argument, and oral argument by conference call on August 21, 2007.

Under cover of a letter dated August 1, 2007, respondent submitted stipulated facts and a Certification by Dr. Nicolette Salerno, Bloomfield Public Schools Manager of Grants, Admissions and Residency, explaining the tuition reimbursement calculations for petitioner's grandchildren. (Joint Exhibit 1 and Exhibit R-1). At oral argument the tribunal learned that petitioner had applied to the school board for a tuition waiver based on hardship but that her request had been denied.

As invited by the tribunal, petitioner made a post-hearing submission received on September 10, 2007, while respondent likewise made a post-hearing submission September 11, 2007. The record closed that day.

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES

The issues are whether: (1) respondent's decision to disenroll petitioner's grandchildren B.M., Z.M. and G.P. due to a domicile change is sustainable, (2) respondent properly denied petitioner's hardship-based tuition waiver request, and, if so, (3) respondent has sustained its burden of establishing its tuition reimbursement counterclaim.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the stipulated facts, the uncontradicted Certification of respondent's Grant Manager, and petitioner's uncontradicted testimony and written submission, I FIND:

C.H. and her husband lived at 457 Abington Avenue, Bloomfield, New Jersey, for over ten years until 2007. During that time the couple made mortgage and tax payments for their residence. Also, C.H. obtained legal custody of her grandchildren as their parents became incapable of caring for them as evidenced by Superior Court orders. (Appended to the Facts Stipulation.) However, the children always have attended the Bloomfield Schools.

In July 2006, petitioner's husband passed away from chronic liver disease complicated by hepatitis B and C. By the end of his lengthy illness, the family's funds had been depleted. Petitioner had no income until the Social Security Administration paid her husband's benefits after three years of appeals. Meanwhile, petitioner was unable to make mortgage payments. She and her husband declared bankruptcy and lost their Bloomfield home in foreclosure. Thereafter, the family rented a home at 151 Leslie Street, Bloomfield until petitioner's husband's death on July 16, 2006. Thereafter, she rented a smaller less expensive home three doors away at 110 Leslie Street which is over the Township border in East Orange, New Jersey. When petitioner's son graduated from high school, the family lost his aid to dependent children benefits. Petitioner claims her monthly expenses are $3,100 for her and her four grandchildren while the family's monthly income is $3,255. With excess monthly income of $155 petitioner requested the School Board to waive the $11,455.86 tuition reimbursement claim because of the devastating financial hardship her family has experienced.

Petitioner has not challenged the accuracy of the tuition assessment calculated by the School District.

The School District has not explained to the tribunal why it denied petitioner's request for a tuition waiver.

Under the totality of the circumstances, I FIND that: (1) C.H. and her grandchildren were not domiciled within the Bloomfield School District from January 2007, (2) the amount of the tuition reimbursement due from petitioner to the school board, if not waived, is $11,455.86, and (3) the School Board's denial of petitioner's tuition waiver application was an unreasonable failure to exercise its discretionary powers, contrary to principles of equity and justice.

LEGAL AUTHORITY

Persons from the age of five through twenty years old domiciled within a school district are entitled to a free education. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. A domiciliary lives with a parent or legal guardian whose permanent home is located within the school district. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1). As to non-residents:

> Any person not resident in a school district, if eligible except for residence, may be admitted to the schools of the district with the consent of the board of education upon such terms, and with or without payment of tuition, as the board may prescribe.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3a.

Otherwise, if the parent or guardian of a child attending school in the district is not domiciled within the district, the superintendent or administrative principal may apply to the board of education for the child's removal. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1b.(2). No child shall be removed from school during the twenty-one day period during which the parent or guardian may contest the board's decision or during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. Ibid.

School board decisions are presumed correct and unassailable unless shown to be arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. Thomas v. Board of Education, Township of Morris, 89 N.J. Super. 327 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581 (1966); Parsippany-Troy Hills Education Assoc. v. Board of Education, 188 N.J. Super. 161 (App. Div. 1983). The courts have refined the standard explaining that a board's discretionary decision will not be overturned unless "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960).

As to agency action generally, the Supreme Court has explained that a reviewing tribunal inquires whether the agency action violates express or implied legislative polices, whether there was substantial evidence to support the findings upon which the agency acted, and whether the agency clearly erred as its conclusion could not reasonably have been based upon the relevant factors. In the Matter of Tammy Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007). As to the policy inquiry, the Supreme Court has stated:

> Any administrative agency in determining how best to effectuate public policy is also limited by applying principles of fundamental fairness. We have in the past applied such principles of fundamental fairness beyond those required by the Constitution, to administrative agency actions. See In re Arndt, 67 N.J. 432 (1975); Monks v. New Jersey State Parole Bd., 58 N.J. 238 (1971). "When specific parties are particularly affected by a proposed rule, fair play and administrative due process dictate that an agency must conscientiously concern itself with and make reasonable efforts to accommodate the rights and interests of the affected individual and genuinely account for the individualized effect of its proposed action." Balley Mfg. Corp. v. New Jersey Casino Control Comm'n, supra, 85 N.J. 25, 345 (1981) (Handler J, concurring).
> "[T]heir are no simple answers as to what constitutes fundamental fairness" and "[e]ach case must be considered and evaluated on its own merits." In re Kallen, supra, 92 N.J. 14, 27 (1983). The determination of whether agencies have observed principles of basic fairness therefore requires "an examination of the facts in each case, giving weight to the effect of the decision on the agency's public policy." Id. at 26

State of New Jersey Dept. of Environmental Protection v. Stavola, 103 N.J. 425 note 2 (1986).

Although the statute requires school boards to disenroll students not domiciled within their districts and to recoup retroactive tuition, the obligation may be obviated on equitable principles. Akbar Zadran v. Board of Education Township of Belleville, State Board (April 1, 1998) www.state.nj.us/education/legal/sboe/index.html. (Tuition waiver supported by principles of fundamental fairness and equity); M.F. and P.J.F. o/b/o minor children v. Bd. of Educ. Township of Hope, EDU 7367-99, Initial Decision (June 14, 2000) modified, Comm'r. (July 31, 2000) <http//lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (domicile on Township Boarder, tuition waiver predicated upon equity, petitioner's lack of intent to defraud and honest belief in entitlement); H.M. and L.M. v. Township of Freehold, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 418 (1990) (equity and considerable passage of time); and R.D. o/b/o Minor Children v. Board of Education Fort Lee, EDU 7327-00, Initial Decision (February 1, 2001) modified, Comm'r. (April 2, 2001) <http//lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (tuition recovery limited to period following school board decision).

In this case, C.H. acted in good faith and petitioned with clean hands. Based on the precedent involving families living on the border between two school districts, , it would be fair and equitable for petitioner to be relieved of tuition to the date of the School Board's decision to disenroll, that is, April 10, 2007. However, the tribunal considers the Board's denial of the tuition waiver application to have been without a rational basis contrary to implied legislative policies and, therefore, unreasonable. Moreover, there is a dearth of evidence on the record to support the Board's decision. The legislation does not delineate the factors upon which school boards should rely in exercising their discretionary authority to waive tuition. Without more, the tribunal may assume that the legislature intended school boards to waive in appropriate circumstances. More to the point, the legislature must have intended that in domicile cases involving tuition reimbursement there ought to be some circumstances which warrant waiver. Although the tribunal is not prepared to conclude that extreme financial hardship per se justifies a waiver, suffice it to say that on the facts of this case, a discretionary decision to waive would be fairly compelling.

Petitioner and her grandchildren have recently experienced personal calamities resulting from the death of the husband/grandfather, bankruptcy, and foreclosure on the family's Bloomfield residence. Thus, the family was forced to move after the foreclosure. Although they rented a home in Bloomfield until after petitioner's husband's death, the family traded down, as it were, by renting a smaller house three doors away. It is these baleful events whose tragic consequences have left petitioner and her grandchildren in the vulnerable circumstances in which they now find themselves. Petitioner paid real estate taxes to Bloomfield for over ten years thereby financially supporting education in that municipality. The tribunal finds it fundamentally unfair and unjust, principles of equity notwithstanding, for the Board to refuse to waive tuition for one semester despite petitioner's wretched circumstances. It is difficult for the tribunal to imagine a case more compelling in which to grant a tuition waiver.

The School Board adduced no evidence or rationale at the OAL to justify the wavier denial. If the School Board's decision were rational or soundly based on public policy, the tribunal could evaluate it. However, the absence of any such evidence indicates that the Board gave no consideration to the interests of the affected individuals or the individualized effect of its actions. Bally Mfg. Corp., supra. Therefore the decision had no rational basis, was patently arbitrary, and finds no support in the record.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the foregoing uncontradicted facts and legal authority, I CONCLUDE that respondent rightfully disenrolled petitioner's three grandchildren at the conclusion of the 2006-2007 school year due to their change in domicile, but further CONCLUDE that the School Board's denial of petitioner's tuition reimbursement waiver application was not sufficiently grounded by evidence on the record, unreasonable, fundamentally unfair, and inequitable.

DISPOSITION AND ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and conclusions of law, I DECIDE this matter in part in favor of respondent, AFFIRM the disenrollment of petitioner's grandchildren at the conclusion of the 2006-2007 school year, DENY the petition insofar as it challenges the disenrollment, but GRANT petitioner's challenge to respondent's tuition reimbursement claim, and DISMISS that claim accordingly.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

ROBERT L. WILLIAMS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WILLINGBORO, BURLINGTON COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, the executed "Stipulation of Settlement" (Settlement), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon review, the Commissioner approves the terms of the settlement with one comment.

Section 5 of the Settlement recites that respondent will pay petitioner $3000 within thirty days following the execution of the Settlement and the approval of same by "formal action of the Board." Section 6 obligates petitioner to withdraw his petition of appeal with prejudice when petitioner's counsel "receives notice and documentation that the Board has approved the terms and conditions of [the] settlement."

Thus, these provisions anticipated that certain conduct would occur on a date that ultimately fell before the Settlement was considered by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have already implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon a mutually satisfactory alternate date for effectuation of same.

JOINT REQUEST FOR APPROVAL OF SETTLEMENT AND WITHDRAWAL OF TENURE CHARGES

INTRODUCTION

Counsel for the Petitioner, Willingboro Township Board of Education (the "Petitioner" or "Board") and Counsel for its tenured employee, Respondent, Robert J. Teti, (the "Respondent") join in moving before this Honorable Court for an Order declaring that the Settlement Agreement between the parties attached hereto (the "Settlement Agreement") meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a) and recommending that the Settlement Agreement be approved by the Commissioner of Education (the "Commissioner") on the condition that the Commissioner approves without modification the Settlement Agreement and ordering that the Settlement Agreement be implemented and that the tenure charges filed by the Board be withdrawn and this matter dismissed with prejudice.

PROCEDURAL STATEMENT

This matter arises out of tenure charges certified by the Board on November 20, 2006 to the Commissioner of Education against Respondent, Robert J. Teti, a tenured math teacher alleging the inappropriate use of the Internet by viewing alleged child pornography on his own personal computer unconnected with his school-related duties and responsibilities. The charges were based on information initially obtained from law enforcement. Mr. Teti filed an Answer on December 20, 2006 setting forth in detail his denial of the allegations. The tenure charges were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case and the matter was assigned to the Honorable Solomon A. Metzger, ALJ.

The parties have now reached a settlement which is conditioned on the approval of the Commissioner of Education that the tenure charges be withdrawn. The parties agree that upon the Commissioner's approval of the attached Settlement Agreement without modification, the tenure charges against Mr. Teti shall be withdrawn and dismissed with prejudice subject to implementation of the Settlement Agreement. Should the Commissioner fail to approve the Settlement Agreement without modification, the parties agree to make every effort to reform the Settlement Agreement to meet any objections thereto or otherwise abide by the directives of the Commissioner, subject to each party's right to reject any such modified Settlement Agreement and proceed with the tenure proceedings.

JUSTIFICATION FOR WITHDRAWAL OF TENURE CHARGES

The Board originally instituted tenure charges against Mr. Teti, based on information obtained from law enforcement concerning alleged child pornography allegedly found on a personal computer which Mr. Teti, in August of 2005 brought to a computer facility for repair. Mr. Teti was never criminally prosecuted on the allegations. At no time were the allegations connected with Mr. Teti's school activities with the Board. Mr. Teti's performance with the Board as a teacher is not at issue.

The Board, through counsel, has now had an opportunity to fully investigate and assess the allegations, review discovery and confer with witnesses during the discovery phase of the case in preparation for hearing. The Board and Mr. Teti have conducted a detailed and full independent investigation of the allegations, and have exchanged relevant information and documentation. Subsequent to the charges being filed, counsel for Mr. Teti brought to the attention of the Board the report of a qualified expert in the field of computer programs, internet computer use and child pornography, Dr. Rebecca Mercury, Ph.D. which contradicted the allegations. The expert qualifications of Dr. Mercury are set forth in her attached curriculum vitae (Exhibit "1"). Dr. Mercury conducted an independent investigation which included her actual review of the computer evidence and concluded in her forensic report issued August 10, 2007 attached as Exhibit "2" that the evidence "overwhelmingly corroborates Mr. Teti's [statements to law enforcement personnel] that he was unaware of and did not participate in any acquisition, viewing or file sharing of any of the alleged child pornography" (Exhibit "2" pg. 7) . In this regard, Dr. Mercury in her report not only cited to the fact that the computer and other evidence established that numerous individuals other than Mr. Teti had access to the computer and disc drive in question both before and after they had been brought in for servicing, but that there was evidence that the computer involved was "hijacked," i.e. invaded by an insidious virus program known as a "webbot," which was known to be operating during the exact same time period in August 2005 when Mr. Teti's computer was brought in for servicing and involved the placement of child pornography on the user's computer without the user's knowledge. In this regard, Dr. Mercury discovered evidence of the presence of the "webbot" based on certain computer log entries which she found and described in detail in her forensic report of August 10, 2007 (Exhibit "2"). Dr. Mercury further found that the existence of this insidious program was corroborated by the problems Mr. Teti reported having with the computer, and the reason why it was initially brought in for servicing. Dr. Mercury, in her forensic report presented further information with respect to the existence and operation of the "webbot" virus program during the specific time period in question by citing several news articles and programs devoted to the subject and persons who had been accused similar to Mr. Teti, but ultimately cleared (see exhibits annexed to Dr. Mercury's forensic report, Exhibit "2a-f").

The Prosecutor's Office did not prosecute the charges against Mr. Teti. Instead, Mr. Teti was offered pretrial intervention, which he accepted and completed, resulting in an order of the Superior Court dated June 1, 2007 (Exhibit "3," attached) dismissing the allegations in their entirety.

Based upon a full investigation of the evidence that might be presented at a tenure hearing as set forth ante; the lack of any evidence that students received, reviewed or were exposed to any of the materials referenced in the tenure charges or in this Settlement Agreement; that Mr. Teti's alleged actions did not harm or threaten to harm any students at any time; Mr. Teti's tenured service to the District; that Mr. Teti was suspended without pay for 120 days; the uncertainty of the result that might be obtained and costs of proceeding with the litigation the Board has determined to resolve this dispute in a manner it believes to be consistent with the public interest; and,

WHEREAS in recognition of all of the above, the Board has reached an informed determination that the public interest will be served by this negotiated agreement; and,

WHEREAS the agreement between the Board and Mr. Teti is based upon the understanding of all these facts and both the Board and Mr. Teti are satisfied with the resolution of this matter, consider it closed, and believe that it fulfills the public interest.

CONCLUSION

The parties have been fully informed of their respective rights in connection with these proceedings, including those standards for approval of the Settlement Agreement by the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a). The parties are satisfied with the Settlement Agreement and believe that it fulfills the public interest with respect to these matters. For the reasons outlined above, and for good cause shown, this tribunal should conclude that the Settlement Agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a), recommend that the Settlement Agreement be adopted without modification by the Commissioner of Education, order that the Settlement Agreement be implemented on condition that it is so approved, and thereafter upon such approval dismiss with prejudice the tenure charges.

Review

On January 30, 2007 I was given an opportunity to review a CD-ROM at the Gloucester County Prosecutor's Office, Justice Complex, Hunter & Euclid Streets, Woodbury, NJ. This review took approximately 4 hours. I was accompanied by Attorney Steven Cohen and Attorney Michael Damm who were present for the first 2 hours of the review, and Robert Teti who was present for the entire review. The review was facilitated by Detective Laporta of the Gloucester County Prosecutor's Office, who was present for the entire review. As we were not provided with a printed or electronic copy of the materials (excluding any possible contraband) that were reviewed, as per Attorney Michael Damm's request of February 9, 2007, this report consists of a synopsis of information that I transcribed by hand during the review, plus my analysis of the reviewed materials.

Counsel for Robert Teti provided me with additional written documentation pertaining to this matter. A list of the materials that I reviewed is attached to the end of this report.

Observations

The CD-ROM review consisted of an examination of a single derivative evidence CD containing report materials that we were informed had been prepared by forensic examiner Carlos Hernandez of the New Jersey Regional Computer Forensic Lab (NJRCFL). Data on the CD indicated that the report materials were generated on May 16, 2006 at 2:04:23 PM.

Attorneys Cohen and Damm requested that Detective Laporta provide us with a demonstration of the materials that was, to the best of his ability, identical to the one he provided to Lorene W. Moore (of the Willingboro School District) and Attorney Joan K. Josephson on October 11, 2006. Detective Laporta explained that he had verbally provided Ms. Moore and Ms. Josephson with a general explanation of the materials that were on the derivative evidence CD, but that Ms. Moore and Ms. Josephson perused the materials themselves, using the Forensic Tool Kit (FTK) software that was running on the laboratory's computer (a Windows-based PC). Detective Laporta then provided a general overview of the files and data on the CD and allowed us to self-direct our own examination of these materials.

Detective Laporta remarked that Ms. Moore and Ms. Josephson asked him a lot of questions during their review, and we asked him if he could recall some examples of the types of questions and answers that had occurred during their session. In response, he showed us some images that were on the CD and then explained that he had told Ms. Moore and Ms.

Josephson that these were pictures of "a pre-pubescent child engaged in a sexually explicit position." He also told us that he had explained to them that some of the data was obtained using recovery software that provided information from the Internet cache, indicating web sites that he alleged had been browsed and programs that had been executed prior to the impounding of the computer. We then began examining the materials on the derivative evidence CD ourselves, via a menu of selections provided by the FTK software.

The Case Information data indicated that FTK Version 1.61a, build 06.03.13 had been used to prepare this CD. The case number was recorded as 2005-002. Carlos Hernandez was listed as the forensic examiner, along with Investigative Detective William Manstein of the Deptford Township Police Department.

The File Overview data that was provided on the derivative evidence CD indicated that the NJRCFL had listed the total number of file items in the original data set as 223,995, with 4 flagged thumbnail images and 55,055 other thumbnails. The NJRCFL had also listed 755 bookmarked items,10 encrypted files, 439 files from email, 11,867 deleted files, 73,960 duplicate files, 19,114 documents, 55,059 graphics, 137 email messages, 5,328 executable files, 8,815 archives, 2,213 folders, 54,625 units of slack/free space, 2,832 files of other known types, and 75,697 files of unknown type.

The Evidence List for the CD indicated that there were three derivative evidence files contained on it. These were as follows:
1) 007865_ddimage\Part_1\NoName-FAT32, created 5/1/06 at 10:35:19AM
2) 007865_ddimage\Part_5\system_SAV-FAT32, created 5/3/06 at 6:09:54AM
3) 007865_ddimage\UnpartSpace, created 5/3/2006 at 8:22:14AM

There were numerous Registry Viewer Reports on the CD, whose contents we reviewed, including: LastVisitedMRU which appeared to consist of a list of the programs that were last executed on the computer prior to its impounding; OpenSaveMRU which appeared to consist of a list of the paths and files that were last opened or saved on the computer prior to impounding; RecentDocs which appeared to consist of a list of documents and image files that may have been recently accessed; RunMRU which appeared to include the name, type and data names of the most recently run files; and MediaPlayer (2 copies) which appeared to contain a list of paths and names of files that had been run on Windows MediaPlayer.

Under the Selected Bookmarks section, there was information pertaining to BAG files (AOL buddy list file information and lists of screen names), Index.DAT (Internet Explorer cookie index, cache index, and browsing history), Images (around 500 images that the NJRCFL had selected as possibly containing child pornography), Lolita (any files containing the word "Lolita"), and Netscape-Mozilla history (files with browser history).

There were 4 files of AOL IM Users that appeared to contain data pertaining to the users of the AOL Instant Messenger program on the impounded computer. These were as follows: honey6684, prof8384, jorge0082, christina2984. The RecentIMScreenNames data appeared to contain the names of other users who may have exchanged instant messages with these users. There was 1 name in the christina2984 list, 16 names in the honey6684 list, 17 names in the jorge0082 list, and 13 names in the prof8384 list.

There was a file tree containing the path names (directory and subdirectory lists) of files that we were able to peruse using the Microsoft Access software that was on the laboratory computer. We observed that this did not constitute a comprehensive list of the files, since we were unable to locate many of the file names and paths that were referenced in the other report materials. Even some of the file names and paths that would have been derived from data recovery techniques applied to the original drive, appeared to be missing.

Discussion

The derivative evidence CD that we reviewed appeared to be the one referenced in the police reports as being comprised of a copy of some of the materials obtained from a copy of the original impounded computer hard drive. The NJRCFL and the Prosecutor's Office, though, did not provide any evidence or data that could be used to corroborate their claim that the partial copy of the copy of the original drive actually represents a true and correct copy. Neither we, nor apparently the Willingboro School District, were provided with any way to validate the authenticity of any of the information listed on the derivative evidence CD, nor was there any information provided as to why certain items had been bookmarked or flagged, etc.

The usual method for confirming the authenticity of data copies typically involves the computation of hash numbers (a mathematically generated string of digits that uniquely identifies a file or set of digital materials). Although hash numbers were provided for the image files, there were no companion hash numbers for the original data materials that could be used to authenticate either the first copy or the second derivative copy of the files. Without this information, the data on the CD that we reviewed is not authenticatible. This lack of authenticity proof for the derivative data is further compounded by the fact that the originally impounded materials were, in all likelihood, contaminated by the various repair and data recovery processes performed on it by the Best Buy staff. There are also strong chain-of-custody issues, pertaining to the computer and its data, that further compromise its use as evidence.

The materials available for perusal on the derivative evidence CD comprise only a very small portion (possibly less than 1%) of the 200,000+ files that were apparently contained on the original impounded evidence drive. The set of files that were available for perusal thus omits some 99% of the available forensic evidence in this case. As this limited set of materials was generated by the Prosecution's investigative team, it provides only a narrow and potentially biased view of the computer's contents. Evidence that could have corroborated claims of innocence made by Mr. Teti were not available for perusal. For example, the trip photos that Mr. Teti claimed were deleted from his computer by the Best Buy technical staff were not provided, nor was the image (copy of the original drive made by the NJRCFL) provided whereby we could have conducted our own recovery effort in order to confirm Mr. Teti's assertions that material on his hard drive had indeed been damaged, augmented, and/or modified by the Best Buy staff. The fact that the file tree provided on the CD was incomplete also strongly compromises the use of the materials that were available for review at the Prosecutor's office as evidence.

Similarly, the 500+ image files on the CD comprised only around 1% of the 55,000+ images on the original impounded drive. Although the set of image files that we were provided for review were repeatedly characterized as "child pornography" by Detective Laporta, it was clear that at least a third of these images did not actually involve sexual poses, and hence would have probably been excluded as evidence. A further substantial number of the image files were actually only thumbnails (pictures with very low-resolution data) that also might not have been deemed evidence of child pornography.

For the rest of the images in the set provided, there was no data in any of the reports that indicated whether or not these files had ever been identified as actual child pornography by the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC). NCMEC is the forensic clearinghouse for such imagery – their laboratory provides a service to law enforcement that matches forensic images with files they have in a database of known child pornography. This is important because the United States Supreme Court has ruled that image files that appear to depict children engaged in sexual acts can only be deemed child pornography if an actual child has been identified as being involved. Computer-generated graphics or depictions that are derived through altered image data, such as can be produced by combining images that were taken separately (such as an image of an adult that is digitally superimposed with an image of a child) are not admissible as child pornography evidence. There appears to have been no attempt made to identify whether any of the images provided on the examination CD actually constituted child pornography, as per the Supreme Court ruling. Upon inquiry, Detective Laporta indicated to us that the images of children on the CD had not been filtered to exclude any that would not be accepted as child pornography evidence in court.

There was certainly sufficient evidence in the material that was reviewed, as well as in the police reports, to corroborate the fact that Mr. Teti was only one of numerous users of the computer prior to its impounding. Of the material available on the CD for review, neither the FTK software nor Detective Laporta provided any differentiation as to who of these many users (including the repair staff at Best Buy) was responsible for the existence of any of the files or file data (such as the materials containing names of recently accessed files or websites). Certain of the materials on the CD were identified with fabricated file names, indicating that they may have been recovered by the NJRCFL from the deleted or slack areas of the hard drive. These recovered files should have been excluded as evidence in this civil matter since their origin cannot at all be ascertained to have been attributed specifically to Mr. Teti or any of the particular computer users.

The NJRCFL Examination Report, written by Carlos Hernandez, dated May 18, 2006, and attached as document 21 in the Statement of Evidence in Support of Charges of Unbecoming Conduct from the Willingboro Township Board of Education, lists the Compaq Presario computer's serial number as 2H13JD4KC26R. Although this serial number does match the serial number provided on the receipts for the computer that Mr. Teti purchased from Best Buy back on April 13, 2001, and it also matches the computer serial number on the Best Buy Service Order of August 17, 2005, there is no indication in either the sales receipts, the repair receipts, or the NJRCFL Examination Report as to whether the impounded hard drive (Seagate ST340823A with serial number SEF089SH) was indeed the hard drive that originally came with the computer when it was purchased, or if it was the hard drive inside of the computer when Mr. Teti brought it into the Best Buy for repairs.

Furthermore, the Best Buy repair center specifically imposes a waiver of any responsibility for maintaining the integrity of the contents of the hard drive during repairs, as per their Service Order Disclaimer #10 as follows:

> "I, THE UNDERSIGNED AGREE THAT PRIOR TO DELIVERING MY PRODUCT TO BEST BUY FOR REPAIRS OR SERVICING IT IS MY RESPONSIBILITY: (1) TO BACKUP THE DATA, SOFTWARE, INFORMATION OR OTHER FILES STORED ON MY PRODUCT; AND (2) TO REMOVE ALL VIDEOTAPES, COMPACT DISCS, CASSETTES, DVDS, FILM OR OTHER MEDIA FROM MY PRODUCT. FURTHER, I AGREE THAT WHETHER OR NOT I REQUEST BEST BUY TO BACKUP ANY DATA, SOFTWARE, INFORMATION AND/OR FILES, IN NO EVENT SHALL BEST BUY AND/OR ITS THIRD PARTY SERVICE PROVIDER BE LIABLE UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES FOR ANY LOSS, ALTERATION OR CORRUPTION OF ANY DATA, SOFTWARE, INFORMATION, FILES, OR LOSS OF ANY OTHER MEDIA FROM MY PRODUCT."

This wording in this Service Order has strong implications in this case. By virtue of Best Buy specifically disclaiming any responsibility against "loss, alteration or corruption" of data, information or files, they are explicitly notifying the customer of the possibility that such could occur. Best Buy's waiver of liability includes actions that may have resulted in inadvertent or deliberate placement of the materials that were subsequently considered as evidence by the NJRCFL. Anyone who had authorized or unauthorized access to Mr. Teti's computer while it was at the Best Buy for repairs could have caused such "loss, alteration or corruption" to occur. Some examples of actions with potentially deleterious effects that may have been performed could have included: 1) substitution of the original hard drive with a used hard drive that had not been completely erased of data before reloading files from Mr. Teti's original drive; 2) access to the Internet from Best Buy using Mr. Teti's computer; and/or 3) operations performed by the Best Buy staff in conducting the repairs and restoration of benign image files that had been requested by Mr. Teti. It is important to note that such "alteration or corruption" of data can also extend to damage to dates and time-stamps on the files as well as the contents of cache logs (such as those containing the "visited" or "run" lists), thus rendering this information unreliable. The disclaimer also waives any liability due to the performance of the repair service that may have involved the eradication of evidence materials that could have been used to exonerate Mr. Teti from the alleged charges, so it needs to be kept in mind that this also may have occurred.

An important observation from the NJRCFL Examination Report was stated as follows:

> "Reviewed emails and found no emails in which child pornography was attached or distributed. Found the software program "Limewire," which is a file sharing program. There was no data recovered indicating that this program was used to share child pornography."

The claim in Ms. Moore's Memorandum of October 11, 2006 that "there were several child pornography Web sites visited by Robert Teti" followed by a list of Web site names, is not in any way corroborated by the material on the CD that we reviewed, nor is it corroborated by any information provided by the NJRCFL report. In particular, there is absolutely no evidence that indicates that Mr. Teti ever visited any of the websites listed in Ms. Moore's Memorandum. Nor is there any evidence that indicates that Mr. Teti was even aware of the existence of these websites, nor that he was aware of nor participated in the existence or acquisition of any of the alleged child pornography or files containing the world "Lolita" on his computer's hard drive, prior to its impounding. There is certainly no indication that Mr. Teti was involved with file sharing, as was originally alleged, since no evidence on the CD indicates that his user name was affiliated with this activity. This was specifically disclaimed by the NJRCFL Examination Report. There is absolutely no evidence that indicates that any users of the computer participated in file sharing of any alleged child pornography.

What I did find in the materials on the CD, though, was considerable evidence that Mr. Teti's computer was hijacked by a "webbot" that could have been operating prior to the time that he initially dropped his computer off for repairs, during the time it was being repaired, and/or also during the brief interval when the computer was first returned to him and before he brought it back in again to have his lost travel photos recovered.

A "webbot" is a nefarious program that has been invisibly attached to an otherwise normal webpage, such that when someone views it, a rogue program is unknowingly inserted into the user's computer. These "webbots" can be fairly commonplace, for example, earlier this year, one was discovered on the official Webpage of the Super Bowl. Such programs will not necessarily be detected initially by virus software, and even when they are removed, they may leave "backdoors" in place on the formerly infected computer in order to facilitate subsequent invasions. As it happens, there was a particularly insidious set of these rogue programs operating during the August 2005 timeframe, precisely when Mr. Teti brought his computer to the Best Buy for service. These were in a family of "viruses" that are now referred to as CWS (an ironic acronym for "Cool Web Search"). In fact, Mr. Teti's request that additional memory be added to his computer, as a reaction to his observation that the computer appeared to be running slower than usual, was a common symptom of a CWS-style infection [Exhibit A]. The fact that Mr. Teti's family trip photos were deleted may have been another symptom.

Another, and extremely important observation about certain types of CWS infection during that period of time, was that it typically caused downloads of large quantities of data, especially when the computer was not being used, and it also was known to cause computers to involuntarily and discretely access hard core pornography websites. Reports involving pornography downloaded by CWS infected computers were logged by spyware information centers [Exhibit B]. Not merely coincidentally, on August 17, 2005, the exact day that Mr. Teti returned his computer to Best Buy, New York's well-known PC Radio Show devoted nearly all of its hour-long program to a discussion about CWS and other spyware [Exhibit C], given by Alex Eckelberry, the President of Sunbelt Software, an anti-virus firm. He revealed that such hijacked computers were rapidly downloading data from all over the world. Viruses that specifically download child pornography files can continue to circulate and infect computers on the Internet for years. Some of the earlier ones had been featured in articles published by The Register [Exhibits D and E], and the New York Times [Exhibit F], among others. Numerous individuals who had their lives ruined by such nefarious viral code (software) infection have been subsequently vindicated and all charges dropped.

Among the further evidence that Mr. Teti's computer was attacked by CWS or a similar rogue program, is the existence of numerous log entries that involve a file described as a GIF of 1x1 pixels. This description comprises a single dot on the computer screen, of the sort that often is used to conceal a "webbot." Other data on the CD that showed indications of involuntary remote downloads include numerous instances of access dates and times that appear to be inconsistent with the routine use of Mr. Teti's computer. It is certainly possible that the CWS or rogue program, or further evidence of it, still exists in the larger set of data that we were not provided with an opportunity to review.

Given the proliferation of information about the CWS attack during the August 2005 timeframe, it would seem that part of the routine and customary forensic investigation performed by the NJRCFL, as well as by the repair staff at Best Buy, would have included a scan of the computer's hard drive in order to ascertain whether or not such a rogue program existed and was operating in Mr. Teti's computer. Certainly it is possible that the initial repair and the subsequent recovery effort may have obliterated the instance of the actual nefarious code itself, but the trail of evidence (including that which was observable even in the partial data contained on the review CD) should have led the investigators to seek other causes for the existence of the alleged child pornography that had been discovered. There is no evidence in any of the reports affiliated with this case that indicates that due diligence was observed in any of these regards. Certainly such a rogue program might not have been detectable during the early stages of the investigation, but there is high probability that it (or evidence of it) should have been detectable in May of 2006 when the NJRCFL was preparing their forensic report and creating the derivative evidence CD. That the NJRCFL did not scan for CWS or rogue code specifically known to download hard core and child pornography, at that later time, is exceedingly remiss in their handling of this matter.

It is my conclusion, therefore, that the evidence presented on the CD that was reviewed at the County Prosecutor's Office overwhelmingly corroborates Mr. Teti's claims that he was unaware of and did not participate in any acquisition, viewing or file sharing of any of the alleged child pornography found on his hard drive, prior to the time of its impounding.

Additional Remarks

It should be noted that I provided considerable input to Mr. Teti's legal team regarding numerous of the specific interrogatory requests pertaining to the computer-related evidence and derivative reports. To date, most of these Requests for Production have gone unanswered. Since these materials are integral to further corroboration of the claims and discussion made herein, I would like to reserve the ability to submit an amended report, should any of the requests later be satisfied with further materials for review.

TREND MICRO

Welcome to the CoolWebSearch Chronicles

The CoolWebSearch Chronicles

The CoolWebSearch Chronicles detail the variants of the browser hijacker known as CoolWebSearch (CWS). CoolWebSearch is known to be one of the most difficult spyware infections to detect and remove.

CoolWebSearch has evolved as a series of 'variants', each somewhat different than its predecessors, with the later variants significantly more complex to detect and remove. It is believed that the reason why new variants of CoolWebSearch are regularly released is to avoid or defeat attempts to remove it from a computer which it has infected. CWS is a robust infection that exhibits robust intelligence, technical prowess and a determination to survive removal attempts. CWS wants to live.

The difficulty of removing CWS from a user's system is significant. In the early variants, CWS was slightly tricky to remove, but it could be done, carefully, by a knowledgeable Windows user. However, CWS has stepped up the battle and recent variants are virtually impossible to remove manually. Some CWS variants even use methods of hiding and running themselves that had never been used before in any other spyware strains.

The chronological order in which the CWS variants appeared is detailed here, along with the approximate dates when they appeared online. However, since the programmers of CWS have released over two dozen versions of their hijacker in such a short time, and are crunching out new ones practically every week, this document might be out of date at times.

Trend Micro's CWShredder tool to remove CoolWebSearch is updated regularly when new variants emerge.

More info on CWS

How do I get rid of this?

How did it get onto my system?

How do I prevent it from happening again?

CWS.Datanotary

Variant 1: CWS.Datanotary

Approx date first sighted: May 27, 2003
Symptoms: Massive IE slowdown, especially when typing text into forms
Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Very easy, if you know where to look

The first variant of CoolWebSearch wasn't even identified as such. There only were several threads of users experiencing enormous slowdowns in IE when typin messages into text boxes. Delays of over a minute before the typed text appeared were reported. Also some redirections to www.datanotary.com were reported.

The solution to this problem took a while to surface, but after a few weeks (which is pretty long) someone reported the problem going away when going into IE Options, Accessability and disabling the 'Use My Stylesheet' option. After that, the fake stylesheet file could be deleted.

The hijack installed a stylesheet that used a flaw in Internet Explorer and allowed a .css stylesheet file to execute Javascript code. The code in the file was encrypted, and spawned a popup off-screen that did the redirecting. However, this file was called on almost every action taken in IE, slowing it down - this was the most obvious when typing text.

CWS.Bootconf
Variant 2: CWS.Bootconf Approx date first sighted: July 6, 2003 Symptoms: Massive IE slowdown, illegible URLs ie IE Options, redirections when mistyping URLs, startpage & search page changed on reboot Cleverness: 8/10 Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing The second variant seemed like the first one in only one way: it used the exact same .css stylesheet file. But it took the hijack one step further by not only changing the IE startpage and search pages, but changing them to illegible hexcode garbage. Only when this code was decyphered it became clear that CoolWebSearch was behind this all. It almost seemed as if they let Datanotary take the stylesheet exploit hijack for a test ride, before using it themselves. The hijack further involved redirecting the default 'server not found' page to the CoolWebSearch portal homepage by editing the Hosts file, and reloading the entire hijack when the machine was rebooted using a bootconf.exe file that was started with Windows. We also started to see some pages which seemed affiliates of CWS since almost all their links led to www.coolwebsearch.com.

CWS.Oslogo
Variant 3: CWS.OSLogo.bmp Approx date first sighted: July 10, 2003 Symptoms: Massive IE slowdowns Cleverness: 2/10 Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing The filename of the user stylesheet changed into one that didn't even look like a stylesheet on the outside, but got accepted by IE anyway. Two domains were added to the Trusted Zone to ensure CWS could do its dirty work and install any updates if they ever became available. But most of all, IE start and search pages started getting changed to several dozen different sites that were all affiliated to CWS. There didn't seem to be an end to the flow of different domains users were hijacked to.

CWS.Msspi
Variant 4: CWS.Msspi

Approx date first sighted: July 28, 2003
Symptoms: Popups with 'enhanced results' when doing searches on Google, Yahoo and Altavista
Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Impossible, I kid you not
At about this time, the variant appeared that was the hardest to remove. Users started reporting that when they went to Google, Yahoo or Altavista to search for something, popups appeared that (most of the time) advertised bogus 'enhanced results'. This was the one and only symptom.

After looking over the log, it was quickly concluded the msspi.dll file was to blame. One expert took the file apart and found several key URLs that were monitored, and when he changed them to bogus URLs the popups were gone.

However, the file hooked into the Winsock LSP chain, which lies very deep into the bowels of Windows and is one of the hardest parts of Windows to manipulate. Only a very small selection of spyware used this method of infection, and incorrect removal left a computer with a broken Internet connection that could not be fixed even by reinstalling Windows.

Luckily there were one or two tools that could fix a broken Internet connection due to this problem. LSPFix was the one used most since it allowed direct editing of the LSP chain.

CWs.Vrape

Variant 5: CWS.Vrape

Approx date first sighted: July 20, 2003
Symptoms: Redirections to vrape.hardloved.com on virtually anything done in IE, as well as redirections to adult sites, dialers, etc
Cleverness: 5/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing
Perhaps the most widely spread variant of CoolWebSearch, this one was a nightmare for the average user. It combined several hijacking methods, along with random redirections to porn pages, portals and even adult dialers.

The hijack covered most of IE, and a user was left to sit helplessly and watch as almost his every move was redirected to vrape.hardloved.com. One strange thing about this hijack though, is that it operated alone: it didn't use any affiliates and even redirected other adult sites to its own site. It has only been connected with CWS since it appeared together with it in a few logs.

The only good thing about this variant is that the domain hardloved.com has been offline for more than half a week at the time of writing. It is unknown whether this is because of the sheer amount of users being routed to their site, DoS attacks by irate users, account termination because of violation of their host's user agreement, or something else.

CWS.Oemsyspnp

Variant 6: CWS.Oemsyspnp

Approx date first sighted: July 29, 2003
Symptoms: Start page/search pages changed to allhyperlinks.com, activexupdate.com in the IE Trusted Zone, reloading of the hijack on some reboots.

Cleverness: 10/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a bit of Registry editing
This variant was spotted nearly by sheer luck, since it used the same Registry value as the second variant (Bootconf) 'SysPnp'. This was a very clever hijack that disguised itself as a driver update. When the computer was started, there was a 1 in 5 chance the hijack was re-installed and changed the IE start page and search pages to allhyperlinks.com.

However, once the hijack was identified, it was easy to stop: only the autostarting oemsyspnp.inf file had to be disabled using MSConfig, and then it could be safely deleted.

CWS.Oemsyspnp.2: A mutation of this variant exists that uses the filename keymgr3.inf, and the Registry value keymgrldr instead.

CWS.Oemsyspnp.3: A mutation of this variant exists that uses the filename drvupd.inf, and the Regustry value drvupd instead. It hijacks to searchforge.com.

CWS.Svchost32

Variant 7: CWS.Svchost32

Approx date first sighted: August 3, 2003
Symptoms: Redirections to slawsearch.com when accessing Google, searching on Yahoo or mistyping an URL
Cleverness: 10/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a process killer
This variant of CWS was focused on only evading existing detection tools. What was visible in a HijackThis log wasn't nearly all of it. The hijack installed dozens of redirections from international Google domains, MSN and Yahoo search engines to a webserver running at the user's own machine. The webserver even had the seemingly unsuspicious filename of 'svchost32.exe' to look like the Windows system file 'svchost.exe'. Anytime a user accessed Google, searched with Yahoo or mistyped an URL, he was redirected to slawsearch.com.

Fixing this hijack involved using a process killer to stop the webserver process, and editing the Hosts file to remove the Google/Yahoo/MSN redirections.

CWS.Dnsrelay

Variant 8: CWS.DNSRelay

Approx date first sighted: August 7, 2003
Symptoms: Redirections to allhyperlinks.com when omitting 'www' from an URL typed in IE
Cleverness: 8/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing
A very clever hijack that uses a method never used before by any other hijacker, this variant monitored all URLs entered into the IE Address bar, and redirected any URLs starting without 'www' to allhyperlinks.com. The hijack isn't very widespread, and is also pretty hard to spot. Luckily, fixing it requires only deleting one Registry value and one file.

CWS.Dnsrelay.2: A mutation of this variant exists which uses the filename ASTCTL32.OCX instead.

CWS.Dnsrelay.3: A mutation of this variant exists which uses the filename mswsc10.dll instead, which is located in C:\Program Files\Common Files\Web Folders. It hijacks IE to payfortraffic.net. It also adds a custom stylesheet (like CWS.Bootconf) located at C:\Program Files\Internet Explorer\Readme.txt. (This file is not present on uninfected systems.) It uses a Registry value named nvstart to re-register the main mswsc10.dll file on startup.

CWS.Dnsrelay.4: A mutation of this variant exists that is like CWS.Dnsrelay.3, but uses the filename mswsc20.dll instead, located at the same place. It hijacks IE to gofreegalleries.com, adds the same custom stylesheet, and uses the hosts file to hijack numerous sites to allhyperlinks.com.

CWS.Msinfo

Variant 9: CWS.Msinfo

Approx date first sighted: August 22, 2003
Symptoms: Redirection to Global-Finder.com, hijack reappearing when rebooting, possible errors about a missing file 'msinfo.exe'.
Cleverness: 6/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing and some .ini file editing
This variant, using a file called 'msinfo.exe' to reinstall the hijack on a reboot, appears to have several versions. The first one seemed to malfunction often, as seen in the 'first sighted' link where the file wasn't actually installed, but the reference to it was. The second version probably fixed this a few days later, since people started surfacing that had been hijacked by this thing. Lastly, the third version appeared together with a slightly mutated variant #2 (bootconf.exe).

The MSINFO.EXE is installed in a Windows folder where also the legitimate MSINFO32.EXE file resides. It is ran from win.ini, a method rarely used by programs nowadays. It sets nearly all Start and Search pages from IE to URLs at out.true-counter.com, and reinstates these whenever the system is restarted. Fixing this variant involves resetting all the Registry values changed for IE, editing the autorun values in win.ini and the Registry, and deleting the two files.

CWS.Ctfmon32

Variant 10: CWS.Ctfmon32

Approx date first sighted: September 22, 2003
Symptoms: Start page and Search pages changed to www.slawsearch.com, 'Customize Search Assistant' closing after opening it, hijack coming back after a reboot.
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing
This variant surfaced after a quiet time. CWShredder could fix it, but it would return after rebooting the computer. Apart from the new filename 'CTFMON32.EXE' (note that 'CTFMON.EXE' is the real Windows system file) it worked pretty much the same way as CWS.Bootconf: the file loads at startup, resetting homepages and search pages, and then closes. Deleting the file and changing everything back to normal fixes it.

CWS.Tapicfg

Variant 11: CWS.Tapicfg

Approx date first sighted: September 21, 2003
Symptoms: Slow scrolling in IE, redirections to luckysearch.net, hijack returning on reboot, info32.exe errors.
Cleverness: 8/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves quite some Registry editing, win.ini editing and hosts file editing. The style sheet files are marked read-only, system and hidden.
This hijack consists of only one file, that duplicates itself in two places (info32.exe and tapicfg.exe) and acts different depending on its filename. It drops two style sheets on the system, hijacks to acc.count-all.com which redirects to luckysearch.net, and reinstalls the hijack on each reboot. The hosts file redirection also hijacks any mistyped domains to luckysearch.net.
Though a file determining its actions depending on the filename is very bad programming, it surprised me somewhat because it works so well.

CWS.Tapicfg.2: A mutation of this variant exists that uses the filename soundmx.exe, and hijacks IE to globe-finder through a redirection page at in.webcounter.cc. Possibly the same file is loaded as fntldr.exe from WIN.INI. A hosts file redirection of auto.search.msn.com to globe-finder is installed. Two custom stylesheets named tips.ini and hh.htt are installed.

CWS.Svcinit

Variant 12: CWS.Svcinit

Approx date first sighted: September 10, 2003
Symptoms: Homepage changed to xwebsearch.biz and 'http:///', hijack returning on reboot or even sooner.
Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing, ini file editing and a process killer.
This variant was somewhat surprising, because fixing all the items in HijackThis didn't remove it completely - it came back after a reboot (on Windows 2000 and XP). Only after a user had posted a StartupList log it became clear that this hijacker used another additional method of running at boot, besides the two visible in the HijackThis log. Terminating the running process, and deleting the three autorun values fixed it. Also, mssys.exe is possibly involved in this hijack.

CWS.Svcinit.2: A mutation of this variant exists, which uses the filename svcpack.exe instead. It hijacks to http:/// (sic) and uses the same autostarting methods as the first version. Possibly it also drops the file SVCHOST.OLD for unknown purposes.

CWS.Svcinit.3: Possibly, a mutation of this variant exists, which hijacks to xwebsearch.biz and http:/// (sic), as well as installing a hosts file redirection of several dialer sites to searchmeup.com.

CWS.Svcinit.4: A mutation of this variant exists, that hijacks IE to sex.free4porno.net, and adds porn bookmarks to the IE Favorites and on the desktop. It reinstalls from a file c:\windows\svchost.exe (not a valid Windows system file, which is in the system32 folder), running at startup using the name Online Service. It also uses the trojan file msin32.dll for unknown

CWS.Msoffice
Variant 13: CWS.Msoffice Approx date first sighted: October 12, 2003 Symptoms: Homepage changed to searchdot.net, hijack coming back after a reboot, slow scrolling and text typing in IE. Cleverness: 7/10 Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing, and using a command prompt to delete the files. This variant uses a .hta script file to reinstall the hijack on a reboot. The msoffice.hta file is hard to find because the Fonts folder is a special folder for Windows, setup to hide all files in it that are not font files. Thus, a command prompt is needed to be able to see and delete the file. Deleting the file and resetting the IE home and search pages fixes the hijack. CWS.Msoffice.:2 A mutation of this variant exists that hijacks IE to sexpatriot.net and royalsearch.net, installs a hosts file hijack of two porn sites to 64.246.33.179, and reinstalls through a file named fonts.hta using the name AdobeFonts. CWS.Msoffice.:3 A mutation of this variant exists that hijacks IE to supersearch.com and hugesearch.net, and reinstalls through a file named fonts.hta using the name TrueFonts. It also changes the DefaultPrefix and WWW Prefix to redirect all URLs through hugesearch.net.

CWS.Dreplace
Variant 14: Dreplace Approx date first sighted: October 12, 2003 Symptoms: Redirections to xwebsearch.biz and 213.159.117.233, hijack returning on reboot Cleverness: 3/10 , 10/10 on second version Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing This variant installs a BHO with unknown purpose, though it's probable the BHO is there to ensure xwebsearch.biz is set as your homepage on reboot. It redirects the Verisign Sitefinder, so all mistyped domains are redirected to 213.159.117.233. CWS.Dreplace.2: There is a second version of this variant that used the most dastardly trick I have ever seen in a piece of malware. It changed the dreplace.dll so fixing it with either HijackThis or CWShredder will cause your entire system to fail on Windows 98, 98SE and ME! The hijack is the same as the first version for almost all other aspects, and both HijackThis and CWShredder have been updated to circumvent the problem.

CWS.Mupdate
Variant 15: Mupdate Approx date first sighted: October 13, 2003 Symptoms: Homepage changing to searchv.com, redirections to runsearch when mistyping URLs, *.masspass.com in the Trusted Zone, hijack returning on a reboot.

Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing and lots of ini file editing.
This variant isn't very common, but it makes up for this by being very persistent in its existance. It's ran from 3 places at boot, as well as merging a .reg file that reinstalls the hijack, and adding an adult site to the Trusted Zone. It also redirects any mistyped domains to runsearch.com.

CWS.Addclass

Variant 16: CWS.Addclass

Approx date first sighted: October 30, 2003
Symptoms: Redirections through ehttp.cc before reaching pages, IE homepage/searchpage changing to rightfinder.net, hijack returning on reboot.
Cleverness: 4/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing
This one just surfaced when a sample (and thus a CWShredder update) was found for it. The hijack involves AddClass.exe installing the hijack and reinstalling it on reboot. It also changes the DefaultPrefix, WWW Prefix and a non-functional 'www.' prefix which makes each URL you type without 'http://' in front of it redirect through ehttp.cc before reaching the correct destination. IOW, they log everywhere you go. Luckily they are even kind enough to provide a uninstall for this 'Enhanced HTTP protocol' at their site here. This will only partially remove CWS.Addclass though.

CWS.Googlems

Variant 17: CWS.Googlems

Approx date first sighted: November 1, 2003
Symptoms: IE pages changed to http://www.idgsearch.com/, hijack reinstalled on reboot and when running Windows Media Player.
Cleverness: 7/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing, and reinstalling Windows Media Player
This variant is first of its kind, since an important development was observed here: the Windows Media Player executable was deleted and replaced by the trojan. This file reinstalled the hijack when ran. No other variants modify or delete system files, but this one seems to.
It also installs a BHO that reinstalls hijack on a reboot. Deleting GoogleMS.dll and reinstalling Windows Media Player fixes the hijack.

CWS.Googlems.2: A mutation of this variant exists that hijacks IE to idgsearch.com and 2020search.com, installs a BHO named 'Microsoft SearchWord' using the filename SearchWord.dll in the same location as the first version. It also adds *.xxxtoolbar.com to the Trusted Zone.

CWS.Googlems.3: A mutation of this variant exists that hijacks IE to idgsearch.com, installs a BHO named 'Microsoft SearchWord' using the filename Word10.dll in the location C:\Documents And Settings\[username]\Application Data\Microsoft\Office.
This version can also be loaded by a fake Notepad.exe file in the Windows system folder. The fake file has an icon different from the default notepad one.

CWS.Googlems.4: A mutation of this variant exists that hijacks IE to idgsearch.com, 2020search.com and possibly coundnotfind.com. It installs a hosts file hijack to 69.56.223.196 (idgsearch.com), redirecting from several CWS affiliate domains (!), one Lop.com domain, one misspelled Spywareinfo domains (hehe) and several porn domains. It installs a BHO named 'Microsoft Excel' using the filename Excel10.dll, located at the same place as the third mutation. It also adds *.xxxtoolbar.com and *.teensguru.com to the Trusted Zone.

CWS.Xplugin

Variant 18: CWS.Xplugin

Approx date first sighted: November 11, 2003
Symptoms: Some links in Google results redirecting to umaxsearch.com or coolwebsearch.com every now and then
Cleverness: 10/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing
This variant is the first one that is not visible in a HijackThis log. It works invisible, changing links from Google search results to other pages. It took a while to find out how this variant works, since it doesn't use any of the standard locations.
A file xplugin.dll is installed, which creates a new protocol filter for text/html. In normal english, this means it reads most of the web pages downloaded to your browser. It also randomly alters some links in Google search results to pages on umaxsearch.com and coolwebsearch.com. It claims to be made by something called TMKSoft.
It is unknown if deleting the file has no side-effects, but using CWShredder or running regsvr32 /u c:\windows\system32\xplugin.dll (may vary depending on Windows version) fixes the hijack completely.

CWS.Alfasearch

Variant 19: CWS.Alfasearch

Approx date first sighted: November 5, 2003
Symptoms: IE pages changed to alfa-search.com, possibly porn sites being redirected to 216.200.3.32 (alfa-search.com), error message about a 'runtime error' at startup, 4 porn bookmarks added to favorites (one possible child porn).
Cleverness: 1/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a little Registry editing
Possibly the most simple CWS variant since CWS.Datanotary, this hijack only does the basic stuff: changes your IE homepage and search pages, adds porn bookmarks, and pops up a bogus error message at startup.
Deleting MSupdate.exe from the All Users Startup group, deleting the porn bookmarks and resetting the IE homepage and search pages fixed the hijack. The MSupdate.exe file is capable of installing a hosts file hijack as well, but doesn't seem to do this.

CWS.Alfasearch.2: A mutation of this variant exists, that hijacks IE to www.find-itnow.com, drops 7 porn bookmarks in the IE Favorites, and causes error messages concerning 'Win Min' at system shutdown, as well as bogus runtime errors at system startup. It drops a fake Winlogon.exe file in the 'All Users' Startup group of the Start Menu, or in the Startup group of the current user. The file is always running, and hard to remove. If CWShredder repeatedly reports removing this variant, it cannot remove winlogon.exe. To remove this file manually, move it out of the Startup folder, restart, and then delete the file.

CWS.Alfasearch.3: A mutation of this variant exists, that hijacks IE to www.alfa-search.com, and reinstalls by running an encryped VBS script from three places in the Registry, named rundll32.vbe using the name Windows Security Assistant. It also installs a custom stylesheet named readme.txt in the Windows sytem folder, drops 9 porn bookmarks in the IE Favorites and 6 on the desktop, and installs a hosts file hijack of 8 major search engines and one porn site to 64.124.222.169 (alfa-search.com).

CWS.Loadbat

Variant 20: CWS.Loadbat

Approx date first sighted: November 1, 2003
Symptoms: DOS window flashing by at system startup, IE pages being hijacked to ie-search.com, redirection to 'FLS' or Umaxsearch when mistyping URLs or visiting porn sites
Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing and deleting a few files Overlooked at first, this CWS variant used a clever way of reloading the hijack by making it look like some other file (shell.dll or win64.drv) was doing it, when in fact it was just a LOAD.BAT file merging a .reg file.

The second variant added a hosts file hijack of auto.search.msn.com and the Verisign Sitefinder to something called 'FLS' that linked to Umaxsearch, as well as hijacking smutserver.com domains to another porn site.

To remove this manually, killing the autostarts and removing hp.htm , load.bat and srch.reg from the Windows folder along with resetting the IE homepage/search page is enough.

CWS.Msconfd

Variant 22: CWS.Msconfd

Approx date first sighted: November 26, 2003
Symptoms: IE pages being changed to webcoolsearch.com, bogus error message about msconfd.dll at startup, porn bookmarks added to Favorites (some possibly childporn)
Cleverness: 7/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves quite some Registry editing and deleting porn bookmarks, plus struggling to unload the dll which is always in memory
This is the first variant to use a dll file together with the Windows rundll32 file. This makes it a little harder to find the culprit msconfd.dll, responsible for hijacking IE to webcoolsearch.com and adding 11 adult bookmarks to IE, of which 4 are possibly child porn sites.

Deleting the autorun entry, resetting IE and deleting the porn bookmarks fixes most of the hijack. Removing msconfd.dll involves renaming the file, restarting the system and deleting the renamed file.

CWS.Msconfd.2: A mutation of this variant exists, that uses the filename avpcc.dll or ctrlpan.dll that hooks into Windows in the same way as the first version. This version also deletes all the bookmarks in the IE Favorites folder, before replacing them with porn bookmarks.

CWS.Msconfd.3: A mutation of this variant exists, that uses the filename cpan.dll.

CWS.Therealsearch

Variant 23: CWS.Therealsearch

Approx date first sighted: November 29, 2003
Symptoms: IE pages changed to therealsearch.com, porn bookmarks added to IE Favorites, porn sites appearing in IE autocomplete
Cleverness: 4/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing, a process killer, and deleting bookmarks
This variant of CWS appeared to be worse than it actually was at first. Since it had two running processes, it looked like the Peper virus, that was very hard to remove. Luckily these two processes didn't behave like that. The smallest one quicken.exe downloaded and ran the second one editpad.exe (like CWS.Aff.Iedll does) and hijacked IE to therealsearch.com, as well as setting themselves to run at startup.

To remove this variant a process killer is needed to kill editpad.exe and quicken.exe and deleting the files, as well as resetting the IE homepage/search pages and possibly removing CWS.Aff.Tooncomics.2 which can be downloaded by this variant.

CWS.Therealsearch.2: There is a mutation of this variant that hijacks to my.search (sic), that also the filenames c:\windows\winrar.exe and c:\windows\waol.exe.

CWS.Control

Variant 24: CWS.Control

Approx date first sighted: December 7, 2003
Symptoms: IE pages changed to windoww.cc, super-spider.com and search2004.net
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing, and restoring a file from the Windows Setup CD for Windows 9x/ME
This variant is fairly simple, if it wouldn't drop a file in the Windows folder that overwrites a system file in Windows 9x/ME - it is possible your Control Panel will not be functioning normally after being infected with this CWS variant, and you need to use the System File Checker (SFC.EXE) to restore control.exe from your Windows Setup CD. Windows NT/2000/XP does not have this problem with this variant.

CWS.Control.2: A mutation of this variant exists that is identical in every way, but where control.exe always stays in memory.

CWS.Control.3: A mutation of this variant exists that uses random filenames and random startups.

CWS.Olehelp

Variant 25: CWS.Olehelp

Approx date first sighted: January 4, 2004
Symptoms: IE hijacked to omega-search.com, lots and lots of bookmarks added to IE Favorites
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a little bit of Registry editing, and deleting lots of files
This variant is pretty simple. It autoruns a file named olehelp.exe at startup from the Registry, which changes the IE homepage/search page to omega-search.com, and adds a mind-boggling 107 bookmarks to the IE Favorites, of which 14 are porn.

Killing the autostart and deleting the file + bookmarks fixes this.

CWS.Smartsearch

Variant 26: CWS.Smartsearch

Approx date first sighted: January 7, 2004
Symptoms: IE hijacked to smartsearch.ws, redirections to smartsearch.ws when entering incomplete URLs into the address bar, antispyware programs closing without reason only a few seconds after opening them
Cleverness: 5/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a process killer, lots of registry editing and deleting a few files.
This variant is mostly hard to spot since it can use over a dozen different filenames, luckily all with the same registry value. The file is always running and reinstalls the hijack to smartsearch.ws every 10 seconds. Killing the trojan process, deleting/restoring all the Registry values it added or changed and deleting its files fixed the hijack.

CWS.Smartsearch.2: A mutation of this variant exists that attempts to close CWShredder, HijackThis, Ad-Aware, Spybot S&D and the SpywareInfo forums when they are opened. It uses the filename IEXPLORER.EXE (note the extra 'R') and a different Registry value. It drops a hosts file that blocks over two dozen anti-spyware sites. CWShredder has been updated to circumvent this.

CWS.Smartsearch.3: A mutation of this variant exists that uses the startup 'coolwebprogram', and attempts to close CWShredder, HijackThis, Ad-Aware, Spybot S&D and the SpywareInfo forums when they are opened. It also drops notepad32.exe and hijacks the .txt and .log filetypes to open with this file (before showing it in the real Notepad), reinstalling the hijack.

CWS.Smartsearch.4: A mutation of this variant exists that hijacks to magicsearch.ws instead of smartsearch.ws, uses the startup 'MicrosoftWindows' and also drops the notepad32.exe Notepad hijacker like CWS.Smartsearch.3. It also hijacks the DefaultPrefix and WWW Prefix to magicsearch.ws like CWS.Vrape and attempts to kill several firewalls, including (but not limited to) ZoneAlarm and Kerio Personal Firewall.

Known filenames used by this variant:

CWS.Yexe

Variant 27: CWS.Yexe

Approx date first sighted: January 17, 2004
Symptoms: IE start page hijacked to search.thestex.com
Cleverness: 2/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves deleting some Registry values and keys, deleting one folder and restoring the IE homepage
This variant uses a filename often seen as installer for either CWS or Lop.com (y.exe), but uses it as the actual hijacker file. It loads from win.ini as well as system.ini in a weird way that shouldn't even work, and installs a BHO with seemingly the purpose to react to certain keywords on webpages. Removing the BHO and the autorunning y.exe file fixes this hijack.

CWS.Yexe.2: Possibly a mutation of this variant exists that uses the filename services.exe instead of y.exe.

CWS.Gonnasearch

Variant 28: CWS.Gonnasearch

Approx date first sighted: January 18, 2004
Symptoms: IE hijacked to gonnasearch.com
Cleverness: 2/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves deleting some registry keys and values
This variant differs from the others in that it installs not one, but three (!) BHOs. Their exact purpose is unknown. Killing the three BHOs and restoring the IE pages fixed this hijack.

CWS.Smartfinder

Variant 29: CWS.Smartfinder

Approx date first sighted: January 11, 2004
Symptoms: IE hijacked to nkvd.us and smart-finder.biz, redirections to nkvd.us and smart-finder.biz when typing incomplete URLs into address bar.
Cleverness: 10/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some registry editing, and renaming the trojan file, restarting, and deleting it
This variant was surprisingly smart: it used two startup methods (ShellServiceObjectDelayLoad and SharedTaskScheduler) that have to be the absolutely rarely used ones seen ever - and it used them differently on Windows 9x/ME and Windows NT/2k/XP. On top of that, both methods ensure that the file is loaded when Explorer is loaded, making it always in memory like CWS.Msconfd. Additionally, the actual responsible files are invisible in HijackThis, and only one shows in a StartupList logfile (ShellServiceObjectDelayLoad). The responsible file is mtwirl32.dll, and to delete it manually you need to rename it (deleting is impossible since it is in use), restart the system, and then delete the file and its Registry key.

CWS.Smartfinder.2: a second version of this variant exists, that is harder to remove but basically uses the same method of loading, as well as the same CLSID. In addition, it uses a BHO to restore any of the autostarting regkeys you delete to remove this.

CWS.Winproc32

Variant 30: CWS.Winproc32

Approx date first sighted: January 23, 2004
Symptoms: IE being hijacked to icanfindit.net or 4-counter.com, hijack returning on system restart or possibly sooner
Cleverness: 2/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves using a process killer and some Registry editing
A very simple variant. Winproc32.exe loads at startup, and hijacks IE. The file stays in memory so a process killer is needed to remove it. It drops 4 porn bookmarks in the IE Favorites folder. It also tries to hijack the default user (HKEY_USERS\.DEFAULT) but fails to do so.

CWS.Msconfig

Variant 31: - CWS.Msconfig

Approx date first sighted: February 5, 2004
Symptoms: IE pages being hijacked to www.31234.com on system startup and when changing homepage back, continuous errors about an invalid Registry script in temp2.txt, extra item in right-click menu of webpages named '??????'
Cleverness: 2/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a process killer, some Registry editing and restoring a Windows system file from CD
This variant uses the filename msconfig.exe which overwrites the real Windows file in Windows 98/98SE/ME. The temp2.txt file it drops is actually a Registry script, but since it's in the wrong format, Windows 9x/ME will throw up an error about an invalid Registry script. Windows 2000/XP will import it without complaining, creating the '??????' item in the IE right-click menu. The msconfig.exe file will always stay in memory, reinstalling the hijack every 5 seconds. Killing the process, deleting the file and restoring the IE homepages/search pages fixes this hijack.

The real Windows file msconfig.exe can be download here, if you can't restore it from your Windows Setup CD for some reason.

CWS.Xxxvideo

Variant 32: CWS.Xxxvideo

Approx date first sighted: February 11, 2004
Symptoms: IE pages changed to enjoysearch.info, 4 bookmarks added to Favorites, all returning when system is restarted

Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing
A very simple variant, with a encrypted script file running at startup, reinstalling the hijack. Killing the autorun entries, deleting the two .hta files and the four bookmarks fixes this.

CWS.Winres

Variant 33: CWS.Winres

Approx date first sighted: February 10, 2004
Symptoms: IE pages changed to 2020search.com, about:blank page changed to search engine
Cleverness: 7/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing
This variant is the first to achieve a remarkable result: it changes the about:blank page itself to look like a search engine. This is later seen in the CWS.Xmlmimefilter variant, using a different method. The variant possibly adds three domains to the Trusted Zone and adds two bookmarks to the desktop.

Deleting the BHO, resetting the IE homepage, and removing the sites and bookmarks fixes this.

CWS.Xmlmimefilter

Variant 34: CWS.Xmlmimefilter

Approx date first sighted: February 29, 2004
Symptoms: IE homepage changed to about:blank, which is changed to a search engine named 'Microsoft Search the Web', mistyped URLs being redirected to this same search engine
Cleverness: 10/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves quite some Registry editing
Though the hijacking of the about:blank page was also done by the CWS.Winres variant, this new variant accomplishes it in a much more elegant way. The DLL itself used for handling the 'about:' protocol is changed to a malicious msxmlpp.dll one, displaying a search engine instead of a blank page filled with links to 66.117.38.91.

Changing the CLSID of the about protocol back to the default {3050F406-98B5-11CF-BB82-00AA00BDCE0B}, deleting the file and removing the hosts file hijack fixes this.

CWS.Aboutblank

Variant 35: CWS.Aboutblank

Approx date first sighted: March 2, 2004
Log reference: Reconstruction
Symptoms: IE pages changed to about-blank.ws and 213.159.118.226 (1-se.com), hijack returning on system restart
Cleverness: 5/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing and deleting a randomly named file

This variant does everything in its powers to redirect you to a domain owned by 1-se.com. IE is hijacked to it, the hosts file is replaced to redirect about 100 porn and CWS domains to 1-se.com, and a randomly named stylesheet is dropped that redirects to 1-se.com when certain keywords appear in webpages.Restoring the IE pages by searching the Registry for about-blank.ws, removing the hosts file, the svchost.exe file in the Windows directory (the one in the System32 folder is legit) and the randomly named stylesheet (1079 or 1087 bytes in size) fixed this.

CWS.Systeminit

Variant 36: CWS.Systeminit

Approx date first sighted: March 21, 2004
Symptoms: IE pages changed to your-search.info, redirections to search-dot.com, hijack returning on system reboot, URL shortcuts appearing on desktop and in favorites
Cleverness: 2/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing
A small variant, using two files to reinstall the hijack. The stylesheet links to search-dot.com, the two autostarting files set the IE homepage/search pages to your-search.info. A backup of the systeminit.exe file is kept at C:\Documents And Settings\sys.exe (this location is hardcoded into the trojan file). Deleting the three trojan files, the stylesheet, the bookmarks and restoring the IE pages fixes this hijack.

CWS.Sounddrv

Variant 37: CWS.Sounddrv

Approx date first sighted: March 12, 2004
Symptoms: IE pages changed to defaulsearching.com, hijack returning on system reboot.
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing
This variant is very small, but its sneakiness lies in the filename used, which was originally mistaken for a sound card driver. Apart from that, this hijack is really simple. Deleting the file and restoring the IE pages fixes this hijack.

CWS.Searchx

Variant 38: CWS.Searchx

Approx date first sighted: April 6, 2004
Symptoms: IE pages changed to about:blank (which is changed to a search portal linking to searchx.cc) and a search page inside a DLL on the system, hijack returning on system reboot
Cleverness: 8/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots of Registry editing
This variant is not very hard to spot, but slightly harder to troubleshoot since its symptoms look a lot like those of CWS.Xmlmimefilter. It drops a randomly named DLL in the system folder and sets the IE homepage/search pages to it. A BHO is also added pointing to the same DLL. The about:blank page is modified by creating two new protocol filters for text/html and text/plain which allows the DLL to control most of the content flowing through the IE browser as web pages. The trojan keeps a record of all actions in a log file at c:\filter.log. Removing the two filters in the Registry, deleting the BHO, the DLL and the logfile and restoring the IE pages fixes this hijack.

Note: The CWS.Realyellowpage has been sighted together with this variant sometimes, causing CWShredder to not be able to remove this one. Refer to the manual removal method for that variant to delete the offending dll, then run CWShredder again to remove CWS.Searchx.

CWS.Realyellowpage
Variant 39: CWS.Realyellowpage Approx date first sighted: March 16, 2004 Symptoms: IE pages changed to real-yellow-page.com, drxcount.biz, list2004.com or linklist.cc, hijack inexplicably returning on reboot with no file seemingly responsible Cleverness: 10/10 Manual removal difficulty: Extremely Difficult This variant is a nightmare. If you come across an infected machine that keeps changing back to the aforementioned sites over and over again for no visible reason, you've probably seen this one. It's like whoever is reponsible for this hired some blackhat coder and told him to make the most complex, invisible and devious hijacker he could think of. And he did. The file is randomly named, and normally hooks into the IE process, loading itself as a module into it. And then it hides the host process from the process list. Yes, you read that right, the process hosting the dll disappears from the task list and most process viewers/managers we tried. Right now, CWShredder does not remove this variant. As soon as we figure out how to do it, we will update CWShredder for it.

CWS.SysTime
Variant 40: CWS.SysTime Approx date first sighted: Symptoms: Start Page hijacked Cleverness: 1/10 Manual removal difficulty: Difficult Hijacks various IE Pages to: http://213.159.117.134/index.php. The file loads at startup, resetting homepages and search pages.

CWS.HomeSearch
Variant 41: CWS.HomeSearch Approx date first sighted: Symptoms: Start Page hijacked, "Only The Best" popups Cleverness: 9/10 Manual removal difficulty: Difficult Hijacks various IE Pages to "HomeSearch" and displays Pop Up ads titled "Only The Best". This variant uses random filenames in several locations on the disk and uses random CLSIDs for the Helper objects. A cleverly disguised windows service replaces and partially removed components of this variant.

CWS.Look2Me
Variant 42: CWS.Look2Me Approx date first sighted: Symptoms: AdDestroyer and Virtual Bouncer adware that keeps coming back after being removed. Hosts file redirections that keep coming back after being deleted. Cleverness: 9/10 Manual removal difficulty: Very Difficult Hijacks numerous pages through HOSTS file redirections. Remains resident and downloads adware to the pc while connected to the internet. Look2Me has several redundant files that monitor for partial removal and replace missing components. In order to elude detection and removal this variant changes its signature with each restart of the system and removes security rights from administrative users.

CWS.MSFind
Variant 43: CWS.MSFind Approx date first sighted: Symptoms: Hijacks to coolwebsearch.com/search.php Cleverness: 2/10 Manual removal difficulty: Involves some Registry editing Hijacks IE to coolwebsearch.com when searching. File loads at startup and monitors IE, does not actually change any of IE's settings.

CWS.Cassandra
Variant 44: CWS.Cassandra Approx date first sighted: Symptoms: Hijacks to letgohome or here4search and leaves a "security warning" desktop hijack Cleverness: 8/10 Manual removal difficulty: Very Difficult Hijacks IE to letgohome or here4search. Creates a desktop hijack and changes policy settings to disable certain display settings.

CWS.SnugWeb
Variant 45: CWS.SnugWeb Approx date first sighted:

Symptoms: IE pages changed to about:blank (which is changed to a search portal linking to snugweb.com) and a search page inside a DLL on the system
Cleverness: 8/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves some of Registry editing
Alias: StartPage-DU.dll (NAI), Trojan-Downloader.Win32.Small.qt (KAV), Win32/Startpage.OW (CAI), Trj/Multidropper.OT (Panda)

This UPX compressed trojan drops QWSXP.DLL in the system folder and sets the IE homepage/search pages to it. A BHO is also added pointing to the same DLL. The about:blank page is modified by creating two new protocol filters, one for text/html which allows the DLL to control most of the content flowing through the IE browser as web pages. The other protocol filter is randomly named and probably caused by a bug in trojan code. Because of it close similarity with CWS.SearchX, it is probable that CWS.SnugWeb is a corrupted or earlier version of the said trojan.

Removing the two filters in the Registry, deleting the BHO and the DLL and restoring the IE pages fixes this hijack.

CWS.CoolSearchA

Variant 46: CWS.CoolSearchA

Approx date first sighted: February 4, 2005
Symptoms: IE hijacked to bettersearch.biz
Cleverness: 4/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a killing running processes, a lot of Registry editing and deleting a few files.
Alias: Win32/Small.QL (RAV), Trojan-Clicker.Win32.Agent.bz (KAV), Dropper.Small.10.L (Grisoft), ADW_COOLSEARCH.A (Trend)

This CoolWebSearch variant consists of two Browser Helper Objects that support each other. The first one is WinTitle Module BHO which installs itself as WinTitle.dll in the Windows System directory. The other one is the WinSuck Module BHO which installs itself as WinSuck.dll also under the Windows System directory. Both BHOs hijack IE to bettersearch.biz when performing searches to Yahoo and Google.

For more information on this variant, please refer to ADW_COOLSEARCH.A

CWS.EZSearch

Variant 47: CWS.EZSearch

Approx date first sighted: March 25, 2005
Symptoms: Displays unwanted popups and advertisements, the addition of certain urls into the user's favorite folders and redirection of certain websites.
Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves killing running processes, some Registry editing, deletion of shortcuts from the "My Favorites" folder and some hosts file editing.
Aliases for CWS.EZSearch.A: AdClicker-CI (NAI), TrojanClicker:Win32/Agent.BX (RAV), Trojan-Clicker.Win32.Agent.bo (KAV/Ikarus), W32/AdClicker.AT (F-Prot), Trj/Clicker.DD (Panda), Win32:Trojano-993 [Trj] (Alwil), ADW_EZSEARCH.A (Trend)
Aliases for CWS.EZSearch.B: Trojan-Clicker.Win32.Agent.dv (KAV),

ADW_EZSEARCH.B (Trend)

CWS.EZSearch.A drops a randomly named DLL in the Windows temporary folder on every system restart and links it to Internet Explorer as a BHO. The hijack installs dozens of redirections from international Google domains, MSN and Yahoo search engines to a certain webserver and also adds several shortcuts/urls to the infected machine's "Favorites" folder. This CWS variant removes and updates previous installations of CoolWebSearch such as CWS.BootConf and CWS.SVCHost32. It also disables firewall and antivirus software notifications of the Windows Security Center (found in WinXP SP2 and Win2003 SP1). It drops a copy of itself in the Windows system folder (usually as scrsvc.exe) and creates an autorun entry for this. If Windows Firewall is installed in the system, the hijack will also register itself in the Firewall policy as among the authorized applications that can access the network.

CWS.EZSearch.B has the same features as the first variant. It also installs random applications in the system such as the Google taskbar add-on to IE and WorldAntiSpy anti-spyware software. It also creates registry entries with very long value names that sometimes result to the entries becoming invisible when viewed in the standard Registry editing application Regedit.exe Killing two watchdog processes, deleting the BHO and the DLL and removing the added URLs in the "Favorites" folder fixes this hijack.

For more information on CWS.EZSearch.A, please refer to ADW_EZSEARCH.A
For more information on CWS.EZSearch.B, please refer to ADW_EZSEARCH.B

CWS.FindOnline

Variant 48: CWS.FindOnline

Approx date first sighted: April 17, 2005
Symptoms: IE pages changed to www.lookfor.cc, www.find-everything.com, www.find-more.net. New bookmarks in the IE Favorites.
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Registry editing and deletion of bookmarks from the IE Favorites.
Alias: Generic.ca (McAfee), Trojan.Win32.StartPage.rx (KAV), Startpage.20.AV (Grisoft), SPYW_STARTPAGE.J (Trend)

The CWS variant primarily does is to alter the homepage, search pages and start page to http://lookfor.cc. At specific intervals, the Start page is also set to www.find-everything.com and www.find-more.net. It also adds lot of bookmarks in the IE Favorites related to porn sites and adult products.

For more information on this variant, please refer to SPYW_STARTPAGE.J

CWS.CraftSearch

Variant 49: CWS.CraftSearch

Approx date first sighted: June 26, 2005
Symptoms: Modifies IE pages. The home, start and search pages are redirected to http://www.all-find.org
Cleverness: 8/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a killing running processes, a lot of Registry editing, deleting a few files and hosts file editing.

Alias: Adware-CraftSearch (McAfee), Trojan.Win32.StartPage.xs (Kaspersky)

This CWS variant drops several DLL in the windows system directory, most significant of which is wirl.dll -- the real DLL file and installed into the system as a Browser Helper Object (BHO). It prevents access to the MSN search website by modifying user's hosts file and changes settings for Microsoft Internet Explorer, including Start Page and search settings. The other dropped DLL file are not actual library files are harmless data files used by this variant.

Killing a running process, deleting the BHO and the DLL and some Registry editing fixes this hijack.

CWS.LookFor

Variant 50: CWS.LookFor

Approx date first sighted: June 26, 2005
Symptoms: IE pages such as homepage, start page and search pages changed to http://lookfor.cc.
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Lots of registry editing
Alias: QLowZones-15 (McAfee), Trojan-Downloader.Win32.Small.abq (Kaspersky)

This CWS variant lowers the security settings of Internet Explorer by modifying lot of registry entries. This makes the affected system more vulnerable to malware or spyware attacks while the user browses the Internet. It also adds several domains into the Trusted Sites zone for IE.

Removing added domains from IE's Trusted sites and restoring the security settings for IE fixes the changes made by this malware.

Affiliate variants - not directly related to CWS, but sighted together with it very often

CWS.Aff.iedll

Affiliate variant: iedll

Approx date first sighted: August 18, 2003
Symptoms: Errors in a file 'iedll.exe' or 'loader.exe' on Windows startup. Sighted a lot together with other CWS variants.
Cleverness: 3/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a process killer and a bit of Registry editing.
This affiliate variant, with unknown origin, consists of two files. The first one, loader.exe downloads the second one, iedll.exe and runs it. Both files are set to autostart when Windows starts. The 'hijack' becomes obvious when iedll.exe crashes - and it does this frequently. Apparently, this program is programmed so badly, it won't even carry out its payload and does not hijack IE. It is only displayed here because it has been sighted together with other CWS variants on very numerous occasions.

CWS.Aff.iedll.2: A mutation of this variant exists, that has the same files iedll.exe and loader.exe located at C:\Program Files\Windows Media Player.

CWS.Aff.Winshow

Affiliate variant: Winshow

Approx date first sighted: July 13, 2003
Symptoms: Changed IE pages to youfindall.com, BHO added to IE named 'winshow.dll'. Second variant hijacks to searchv.com and also redirects mistyped URLs to a porn site, and reloads the hijack on a reboot, or even sooner.
Cleverness: 5/10, second variant 8/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves lots and lots of Registry editing, a bit of hosts file editing and deleting one file.
This affiliate variant originally was quite innocent, consisting only of one Browser Helper Object (BHO) named 'Winshow', with unknown goal. It was frequently sighted together with other CWS variants.

CWS.Aff.Winshow.2: The second variant of this one also used the BHO and filename, but added a hosts file hijack that redirected mistyped domains/URLs to a porn site, and reloaded a IE hijack to searchv.com on reboot using a Registry command file. One file named MSUpdater.exe was sitting in the 'All Users' startup folder in the Start Menu, and also reloaded the hijack. Deleting both files fixed the hijack. It is still unknown what the BHO actually does.

CWS.Aff.Winshow.3: A third version of this variant exists, that uses the filename winlink.dll for the BHO. It hijacks to both searchv.com and thesten.com. It does not have the additional files the second version has.

CWS.Aff.Winshow.4: A fourth version of this variant exists, that adds an uninstall entry in Add/Remove Software labelled Winshow, and auto-updates from a Registry value named WinShowUpdate.

CWS.Aff.Winshow.5: A fifth version of this variant exists, that uses the filename iefeatsl.dll, hijacks to search-click.com and auto-updates from a Registry value named iefeatslUpdate. It also downloads and installs a BHO named SubmitHook.

CWS.Aff.Winshow.6: A sixth version of this variant exists, that uses a random string for its filename and folder, with the same CLSID as the previous two variants, {587DBF2D-9145-4c9e-92C2-1F953DA73773}. It also downloads and installs a BHO named SubmitHook and autoupdates from a Registry value named Updater.

CWS.Aff.Madfinder

Affiliate variant: Madfinder

Approx date first sighted: October 15, 2003
Symptoms: IE homepage changed to madfinder.com, BHO with filename 'BrowserHelper.dll', hijack returning on reboot, or even sooner.
Cleverness: 5/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves a process killer and lots of Registry editing.
This variant seems to consist of two files that support each other. svc.exe runs invisible, downloads the second BrowserHelper.dll and installs it as a BHO. However, this BHO file also contains the first file and probably puts it back when it is deleted. The variant is always accompanies by a hijack to madfinder.com.

CWS.Aff.Tooncomics

Affiliate variant: Tooncomics

Approx date first sighted: September 18, 2003
Symptoms: IE hijacked to tooncomics.com, targets of hyperlinks on websites changed to porn sites
Cleverness: 9/10
Manual removal difficulty: Involves really lots of Registry editing, and some hosts file editing
This variant seems to be in the league of CWS.Vrape, hijacking to porn sites, redirecting other porn sites to itself, and even using a BHO to change the target of hyperlinks to porn sites like eZula Toptext does. Some users even reported being unable to download CWShredder because the links at the bottom of this article were altered to point to porn sites. Manual removal is pretty hard, because the DNSErr.dll file responsible for the latter part of the hijack has no uninstall built-in like most dlls. However, flat-out deleting the file has no side effects.

CWS.Aff.Tooncomics.2: There is a second version of this hijack that Uses the filename dnse.dll as the BHO, and a second file ld.exe that is always running, reloading the hijack. In this version, the IE homepage and search pages are changed to fastwebfinder.com. A process killer is needed to get rid of ld.exe.

Epilogue - The Fix Known As CWShredder

After reading all of this, you must be under the impression that a CoolWebSearch hijack is near impossible to fix since there are so many variants. Though it is true that most anti-spyware tools won't fix all of the variants, there is one tool that will.

It's called CWShredder and can be downloaded here .

In general, it's a good idea to keep your system up-to-date with WindowsUpdate!!

The spyware/kiddie porn/spam zombie connection

Here's a video taken last week by one of our spyware researchers of an exploit-driven installation of multiple malware and adware apps from a pornographic website

It's from a child porn site and the disgusting images and the URL have been obfuscated (the website is being reported to the authorities).

The site is clearly linked with the very nasty vxiframe(dot)biz crew (purveyors of fun things such as Cool Web Search browser hijacks and the rest).

The researcher surfed to the site in question and immediately get hit with a security exploit that hijacked his browser, installed Spy Sheriff, and dropped a spam zombie/bot (not visible in the video) on his system. His browser window was then closed.

After a short bit he was presented with a combination of nags and ActiveX Security Warning prompts for CrazyWinnings (with Internet Explorer closed, mind you). The EULA for that installation is here.

Most users will never see that EULA, however, or the links to multiple other EULAs for the apps to be installed, which include:

- DirectRevenue/ABI/Aurora
- 180search Assistant
- SurfSidekick
- BullsEye Network
- ShopAtHomeSelect

Every time he cancelled the install he was presented with a nag to allow the install (all the while Spy Sheriff was warning him from the System Tray that his PC was infected).

After finally caving to the CrazyWinnings nag/prompt combo, his PC was deluged with the aforementioned adware. 266 new files (including 77 executables and 24 DLLs) were dropped on his PC and 516 new Registry keys were created.

180 Solutions did indeed pop up a prompt (called a "CBC Force Prompt"), but read the language of that prompt carefully and consider the context in which it is presented.

He chose "Cancel".

Sunbelt Software

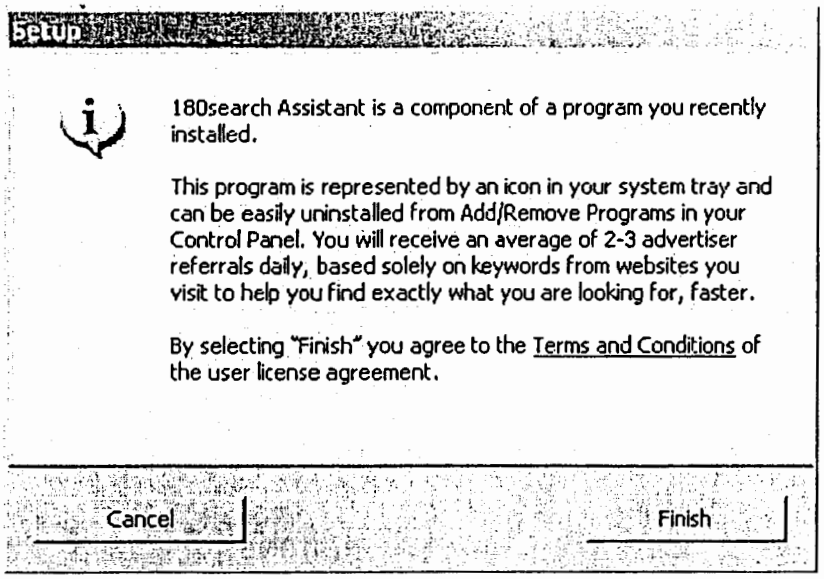
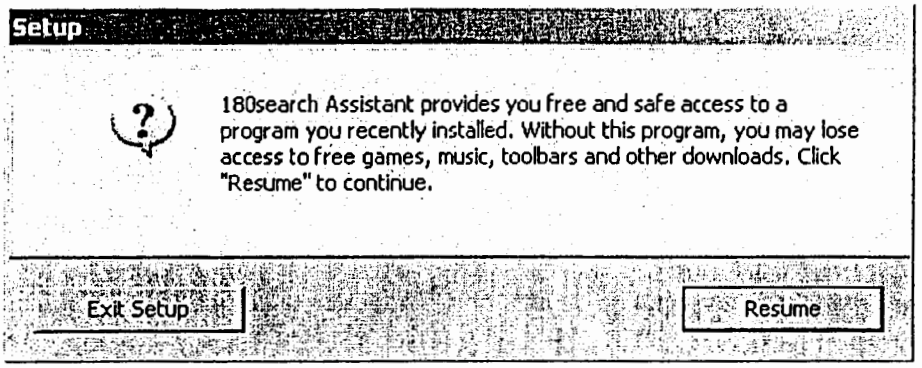
Download FREE CounterSpy

©2007 Sunbelt Software. All Rights Reserved.



He was then confronted with this warning that unless he allowed the installation to continue, he may lose acces to a program he recently installed, as well as free games, music, toolbars, etc.



So he allowed the install, as one would assume users would, out of fear that their PCs or internet connections might break.

This installation was initiated by a security exploit, driven by a combination of bullying nags and warning prompts, and greased with false and deceptive claims from the parties involved. At no point was he ever shown a clear, conspicuous, and truthful description of the software to be installed, and at no time was meaningful consent ever gained to the installation of the software.

So!

Apart from the fact that 180Solutions' and Direct Revenue software is being installed along a spam zombie and installed through a security exploit (both of which they will blame on a rogue distributor), why did DirectRevenue and 180solutions consent to the CrazyWinnings distribution, when notice and disclosure is so obviously poor (no EULA shown to the user, EULA contains only links to EULAs from multiple other adware vendors, etc.)?

(For the record, installation logs and copies of all files installed from that exploit have been archived.)

Verizon has launched a new low-end, cheap DSL service. For only $15 a month, they offer DSL with a download speed 768 kilobytes/second. While this is not fast compared to their regular service or to cable service, it is much faster than the 50K that a modem user maxes out at. Over half of the on-line households still connect with dial-up, so Verizon is hoping to grab these customers before they sign up for cable service. Verizon is following in the steps of SBC, which has done the same thing.

This service is cheaper than many dial-up accounts. Someone who uses dial-up and also maintains a second phone line for Internet use, will find this saves in two ways, as DSL does not require a separate phone line.

The next generation of DVDs will hold a lot more data. The bad news is that a new VHS vs. Beta war seems to be in the offing. Sony leads a group of companies backing the Blu-ray standard. Toshiba heads a group that prefers HD-DVD. Talks aimed at a compromise just fell apart. Blu-ray disks have a more sophisticated format which will be more expensive to produce but will hold 25 GB of data. HD DVDs only hold 15 GB of data but will be cheaper to produce. Toshiba expects to release HD DVD players by the end of 2005.

Microsoft released a new version of their Malicious Software Removal Tool, one that can remove 10 variations of the Zotob worm. A number of anti-virus companies beat them to it. This is malicious program that garnered a ton of publicity last week for attacking a bug in the Plug and Play component of Windows, just days after Microsoft released a fix for the bug.

When publicity was greatest about the Zotob worm, Microsoft claimed that only Windows 2000 was effected. Oops. Some anti-virus software vendors proved to them that other versions of Windows were also effected. XP SP1 is vulnerable to the Plug and Play problem is the Guest account is enabled and you are running as an Administrative class user. In their description of the Zotob.C variant, Trend Micro says it effects Windows 98, ME, NT, 2000, XP and Server 2003.

Joe discussed ZoneAlarm version 6 Security Suite which seems not ready for prime time. ZoneLabs, the vendor, expects to issue a large update to ZoneAlarm 6 Security Suite next week.

Calls

One caller had a digital camera that used to happily connect to his computer via FireWire. After installing the Microsoft patches from August 9th on two computers, the camera no longer is recognized on either computer. After the show a listener suggested that it might be the camera's configuration. If the USB mode was changed from Mass Device (flash card) to WebCam mode, the card won't be recognized by the computer.

In The News

The big news this week is the exploitation of a bug in the Plug and Play component of Windows. The bug fix for this problem was released by Microsoft on August 9th. By the 12th software was posted online to attack and exploit the bug. At least four different malicious programs have been released. Microsoft says the problem only exists in Windows 2000, but anti-virus companies have said that it affects many other versions of Windows too.

Apple released 40 bug fixes to OS X Panther and Tiger (the current and prior releases). Security firm Secunia describes them as highly critical.

When Apple announced they were converting to use Intel processors, their OS X was supposed to run only on special Intel hardware provided only by Apple. Their security scheme enforcing this was cracked very quickly and knowledgeable computer nerds can now run Mac OS X on any Intel based computer.

IBM is making accessibility code available to Firefox users. This is software to enable computer use by people with assorted disabilities. It includes a web page reader and more.

Is the Intel Pentium 4 at the end of its life? The maximum speed is now 3.8 GHz and it generates a lot of heat. Too much heat, it turns out. In contrast, their mobile Pentium M uses less current and generates less heat. Intel just cut the price of Pentium 4 processors by a third.

Spyware

Our topic was Spyware and our guest was Alex Eckelberry, President of Sunbelt Software, the makers of CounterSpy. Joining Alex was Eric Sites, the VP of R&D at Sunbelt. Sunbelt was in the news recently for their discovery of an identity theft ring.

- More on the identity theft ring August 6, 2005. Blog by Alex Eckelberry
- Spyware Researchers Discover ID Theft Ring By Ryan Naraine August 8, 2005 eWeek
- New Keylogger Steals Passwords From IE Internet Week August 11, 2005

In the normal course of their anti-Spyware research, Sunbelt stumbled across key logging software that was doing identity theft. True Spyware.

Eric led the team that made this discovery. He said that Patrick Jordan, another Sunbelt employee, was researching a very malicious piece of software called Cool Web Search (CWS). Towards that end, he purposely infests computers to test CounterSpy. He found a remote callback to a server on the Internet. He traced it back, poked around on the server, and was amazed at what he found. Every 30 minutes about 200 K of data was being uploaded to this machine. The data was coming from all over the world. Sunbelt contacted the FBI.

Sunbelt could read this data and even called a potential victim to warn them of the identity theft. This person's computer was not only infested with a key logger, it was also a spam zombie, being used to send out tons of spam email messages. Comcast had already warned her that she was sending too much email, but she wasn't doing it herself. She did notice a lot of pop-ups on her computer.

Sunbelt found megabytes of detailed personal information on scores of people. The key logging program took advantage of the AutoComplete feature of Internet Explorer. When using this default feature, IE remembers usernames and passwords entered into web pages and records them in the Protected Storage Area (part of the Windows Registry). The key logger stole all your passwords from the not-so Protected Storage Area. It was also logging the kinds of things people were searching for and their bank account numbers.

Sunbelt contacted the web hosting company that was hosting the server collecting the data. Alex said it was a large company and the tech person they spoke with was not very well trained. Alex did not identify the company, and they did take the server off-line.

Alex said this particular Spyware program was very small, very sophisticated and was a version of an existing Trojan Horse program. At the time they found it, only one anti-virus program could detect the program (now they all can).

One aspect of its sophistication was that it could get through firewalls. This is because the Spyware installed itself inside Internet Explorer. To the outside world, and to a firewall, it appears to be, and is, Internet Explorer. The fact that it's an infected version of IE is not noticeable. Technically, the program ran as a Browser Helper Object (BHO). Firefox does not support BHOs, which is one reason it is safer to use than IE.

Speaking of firewalls, Joe mentioned that he does not like the latest version (6) of ZoneAlarm at all. Alex too, felt that it suffered from too many false positives, the same point Joe made recently. The problem with false positives is that many computer users will not understand the message and question from ZoneAlarm. If you answer a question from a firewall wrong, it is not protecting your computer.

To protect yourself from bugs in Windows and IE, either visit update.microsoft.com or turn on Automatic Updates in Windows XP (and 2000). Your computer can get infected with Spyware in many ways and at many web sites.

A caller asked if someone using a Mac but running Windows in a virtual machine can get infected with Spyware. Yes. Windows is Windows whether running in a real or a virtual machine.

Web sites mentioned on the show

- At ihatespyware.com Sunbelt has made available a free utility to get rid of the Spyware they discovered. You can also download a free trial of Counterspy from Sunbelt Software.
- sunbeltblog.com is Alex's blog. It covers security issues and has an RSS feed. Alternate Link. Alex lies RSS Popper for reading RSS feeds, but it only works with Outlook.
- Olivia was enthusiastic about the web site mybodylanguage.co.uk about nutrition and food and what your body is telling you.

Being safe on the Internet requires:

- A Firewall
- An Anti-Virus program
- An Anti-Spyware program
- The latest bug fixes from Microsoft for Windows
- Luck

Alex recommended the free AVG anti-virus program from Grisoft and two free firewalls, ZoneAlarm and Sygate. Besides being partial to his own anti-spyware product Counterspy, Alex said SpySweeper from Webroot is also a very good product.

Our webmaster, Michael, teaches a class on Defensive Computing.

As a result of the discussion during his appearance on our August 17th show, Alex Eckelberry, President of Sunbelt Software, added an entry to his blog called Security on the cheap (August 25, 2005). Catching up news stories from the last couple weeks.

If you are using Windows 98 SE, there is an unofficial "service pack" available for it. That is, you can download a single file, run it, and apply all the bug fixes (over 100) issued for Windows 98 SE at once. This is a free download, maintained by Alper Coskun (a Turkish computer engineering student) and is not sanctioned by Microsoft. The "service pack" includes only fixes for Windows, not the fixes for Internet Explorer v6 or for Windows Media Player v9. It is available at exuberant.ms11.net.

Hank warned against using the just released version of ZoneAlarm, version 6. Apparently the number and quality of warnings issued by the "smart defense advisor" can be confusing to naive or non-power users who can't interpret them and may make a wrong decision. Michael noted there were also assorted problems back when version 4 and version 5 of ZoneAlarm were first released.

The only product mentioned was the peel-n-stick Laptop LegsT for PCs and Mac FeetT for Macs. They attach to the bottom of any standard notebook (2 per computer), then flip down to elevate it to a choice of two heights - 1" or 1 3/8" - for improved typing ergonomics and increased cooling and ventilation underneath the laptop.

The legs sell for $19.95 in packages of four (two sets) each of either the Laptop Legs or Mac Feet. The Laptop Legs are PC gray and the Feet are Mac white and available direct from LapWorks at www.laptopdesk.net.

Suspected paedophile cleared by computer forensics

Trojans found on accused man's HDD

IT forensics firm Vogon has explained how its work helped clear a man accused of storing child pornography on his computer by proving his PC was contaminated by Trojan horse infection capable of downloading illicit images onto his machine.

Julian Green was arrested in October 2002 after police raided his home and found 172 indecent pictures of children on his hard drive. His solicitor, Chris Bittlestone of South Devon law firm Kitson Hutchings, called in one of Vogon International's forensic investigators, Martin Gibbs, to help.

A clone of Green's hard drive was sent to Vogon International in Bicester, where it was imaged and processed in the forensic laboratory using Vogon's specialist software. The data was then extensively examined and a report prepared, which highlighted that the Trojans were most likely to have come from unsolicited emails that Green opened before he deleted them.

Gibbs identified 11 Trojan horse programs on Green's computer which were set to log onto "inappropriate sites" without Green's permission whenever he loaded up a browser to access the Internet.

These findings were decisive in clearing Green of the 13 charges of making indecent images he faced at Exeter Crown Court this summer. On receiving evidence from Vogon the prosecution decided to drop the case.

"The prospects of my client being able to effectively defend himself without Vogon's help were very remote," said Bittlestone. "The stakes for him were extremely high - if he had been convicted, prison was a strong likelihood.

"The maximum sentence for possession of such images is ten years' imprisonment, and anyone convicted of such a matter would have become subject to registration with the police as a sex offender for a period of five years. Martin Gibbs' report was pivotal in this very important case."

Green's acquittal is one of three recent cases where a Trojan defence has succeeded in a British court. In April this year, Karl Schofield, 39, was cleared of possession of child porn when prosecutors accepted expert testimony that the unnamed Trojan could have been responsible for the presence of 14 child porn images on his PC.

Aaron Caffrey, the teenager hacker accused of crippling the Port of Houston's web-based systems, was found not guilty of computer crime offences this month after a jury accepted his story that attackers used an unspecified Trojan to gain control of his PC and launch the assault.

The prosecution argued that no trace of Trojan infection was found on Caffrey's PC but the defence was able to counter this argument with testimony from Caffrey that it was possible for a Trojan to wipe itself.

Nobody is disputing the validity of these verdicts, however legal and security experts have expressed concerns that the Trojan defence might become subject to misuse.

Vogon's Gibbs believes such concerns have been overplayed.

"I don't believe, as some have suggested, that recent cases with 'open the floodgates' to Trojan defences in cybercrime cases. When we look at how indecent images got onto a PC, for example, there is more to substantiate a claim that a Trojan was responsible than just the viral infection of a PC," Gibbs told The Register.

Gibbs was reluctant to go into details but said that factors like file directory structures and registry entries are among the items it considers when making a forensic examination of evidence. Vogon is asked to carry out computer forensic examinations in a variety of civil and criminal cases, working for both the prosecution and defence.

When a Trojan defence is used in a criminal case it is "down to the prosecution expert to dispute the claim", Gibbs added. ®

Browser hijacking programs can redirect users to pornographic websites. But could these malicious programs also lead to false accusations of possession of child pornography?

Malware such as CoolWebSearch (AKA CWS) can change browser start-up and search pages and generate pop-up pages - often punting illegal pornographic websites - on infected PCs. The program exploits IE vulnerabilities to slither onto unpatched PCs. Users would normally have to visit dodgy websites to get infected but it's easy to see how xxx rated spam email received and auto-executed through unpatched versions of Outlook could result in unwitting infection.

The end result would be the URL of borderline-criminal websites appearing in the history file of Net users. And how are spouses or employers to interpret this?

Wired this week carried an illuminating article, quoting several people who claimed their good reputation was threatened because browser hijacking programs had left indications of visits for porn websites on their PCs.

In one case, a Russian-born US resident called 'Jack' (not his real name) said he was forced to confess to child pornography offences on the basis of material he claims may have been deposited on his PC by a browser-hijacking program.

Jack may well have been railroaded in the case and there are issues about how evidence was handled. The chain of custody of the suspect PC, for example, is one area of particular concern. Wired quotes the conclusion of Brian Rothery, a former IBM systems engineer who researched Jack's claims, that "evidence wasn't handled properly".

However, the browser hijack explanation fails to adequately explain how some of the images appeared in locations not used for normal browsing sessions, Wired reports. The location of material and access times of content gives vital clues for investigators. If material is accessed after it is downloaded, especially at a time when a PC is offline, then this points towards a suspect's guilt.

It is straightforward to determine if the possession of illegal content is caused by browser hijacking, according to Neil

The Register

Barrett, technical director of security consultancy IRM, and a veteran expert witness in numerous computer crime cases.

"Unless there is an exploit, material would only appear within the browser context. If illicit material was found on a PC a prosecution could be initiated but analysis is straightforward. It would leap up at a computer forensics expert that a pop-up was responsible for the content found," he said.

Police won't be blindsided

Some child pornography cases have been dismissed after suspects testified that a Trojan horse infection on their PCs could have downloaded without their knowledge (example here and here). According to Barrett, police were unable to counter defence arguments that a Trojan was responsible for the dodgy content found on a PC in these cases because they didn't know enough about what it did. This won't happen again in future. he said.

UK police now routinely check for Trojans on seized computers. In future, police will take virus infection into account in preparing evidence for court. Just because a virus is found on a PC doesn't mean someone is innocent of a computer crime and doesn't necessarily undermine the value of any other evidence recovered. "Police won't be blindsided by any Trojan defence in future," Barrett said.

So skilled and ethical investigators can determine if malicious code - and not salacious urges - explains the presence of dodgy content on PCs. Relying on this safety net is hardly sensible, though. The best approach for Joe Punter is to prevent such content getting onto his PC in the first place. This is yet another reason to use an updated version or IE and Outlook or (easier) to consider using alternative browsers and email clients. ®

Acquitted Man Says Virus Put Pornography on Computer

By JOHN SCHWARTZ

One evening late in 2001, Julian Green's 7-year-old daughter came upstairs from the computer room of their home in the resort town of Torquay, in western England, and said, "The home page has changed, and it's something not very nice."

When Mr. Green checked the machine, he found that the family PC seemed almost possessed. The Internet home page had somehow been switched so that the computer displayed a child pornography site when the browser software started up. Even if he turned the machine off, it would turn itself back on and dial the Internet on its own.

Mr. Green called the computer maker and followed instructions to return his PC to a G-rated state. The pornography went away, but the computer still often crashed and kept connecting to the Internet even when "there was no one in the blinking house," he said.

But Mr. Green's problems were only beginning. Last October, local police knocked on his door, searched his home and seized his computer. They found no sign of pornography in his home but discovered 172 images of child pornography on the computer's hard drive. They arrested Mr. Green.

This month, Mr. Green was acquitted in Exeter Crown Court after arguing that the material had been gathered without his knowledge by a rogue program created by hackers — a so-called Trojan horse — that had infected his PC, probably during innocent Internet surfing. Mr. Green, 45, is one of the first people to use this defense successfully.

While a case that played out in the British legal system sets no precedent in the United States, legal experts say the technical issues raise two troubling possibilities. For one, actual child pornographers could arm themselves with a new alibi that would be difficult to disprove. Or, unknowing Web surfers could find themselves charged with possessing illegal material that a lurking software program has acquired.

"The scary thing is not that the defense might work," said Mark Rasch, a former federal computer crime prosecutor. "The scary thing is that the defense might be right," and that hijacked computers could be turned to an evil purpose without an owner's knowledge or consent.

"The nightmare scenario," Mr. Rasch said, "is somebody might go to jail for something he didn't do because he was set up."

Mr. Green was eventually exonerated, but his life has been turned upside down by the accusations. His ex-wife went to court soon after his arrest and gained custody of their youngest child and his house. Mr. Green, who is disabled because of a degenerative disk disease, spent nine days in prison and three months in a "bail hostel," or halfway house, and was allowed only supervised visits with his daughter.

"There's some little sicko out there who's doing this," Mr. Green said, "and he's ruined my life. I've got to fight to get everything back."

He said he had no clue how the rogue software showed up on his computer. "I never download anything. and as far as I knew, no others had," he said.

When his solicitor, Chris Bittlestone, hired a computer security consultant to examine the PC, nearly a dozen Trojan horse programs showed up on the hard drive. "When the report came in, it was very much what you would call a eureka moment," Mr. Bittlestone said. But Mr. Green took the news differently.

"He was very quiet and said, `See? I told you,' " Mr. Bittlestone recalled.

Tony Dearsley, the computer investigations manager for Vogon International Ltd., the company that examined the machine, says Trojan horse programs are increasingly common.

"Any Web site could contain this sort of thing," he said. "The reputable ones don't. The less reputable ones may." Anyone using the computer who visits sites offering legal adult fare, gambling or even a music file-swapping site might pick up malicious software, he said.

Mr. Green, who now lives with his son and his 83-year-old mother in the nearby town of Paignton, said that it was possible that some member of his family had accidentally infected the computer in that way. "I know my son had a look at some iffy sites," he said. "He's a teenager."

Antivirus software and programs like Ad-Aware can ferret out and disable Trojans, but they must be kept up to date to be effective in a fast-changing field. Mr. Green said that he had antivirus software on his computer, but that it was outdated.

The police would not disclose the source of the original tip in the case, but Mr. Green noted that the raid came two weeks after he had won custody of his daughter in court. Mr. Bittlestone would not comment directly on the matter. "Calls may well have been made," he said. "I'm not quite sure what the dynamics were within the family at that time."

Mr. Bittlestone said that he was troubled that prosecutors did not mention the Trojan programs after his client's arrest: "Either the police didn't spot this issue, or if they did spot it they chose not to pursue it." Mr. Green, he said, is now considering a lawsuit against the police.

Calls to the local police in Mr. Green's area were referred late on Friday to the pedophile unit at Ashburton, which could not be reached. But the prosecutor in the case, David Sapieca, told the BBC: "We don't accept the conclusions of the defense expert report, but there were already other issues in the case regarding the history of the computer itself. We cannot show that Mr. Green downloaded the images on to the computer, so the Crown reluctantly offer no evidence in this case."

Mr. Green's case could point the way to a new defense in courts in the United States, said Andrew Grosso, a lawyer and former federal prosecutor in Washington. The presence of a Trojan could mean that the computer is "not entirely under your control," he said, and a defendant could "legitimately point a finger elsewhere."

A senior official at the Department of Justice said that the defense, while novel, might not hold up in court. "There are ways to look at the evidence to see if something like this — even if it is present — is responsible for the conduct at issue," the official said. Thus a prosecutor would scan the computer to make sure that it did, in fact, have rogue software, and would try to determine whether the software could do what the defendant claimed that it did.

In a child pornography case, he said, investigators would also try to discover other corroborating evidence, like Internet communications with known pedophiles, or a stack of child pornography in the suspect's home.

Mr. Bittlestone said: "You will only be able to use this defense if you can show that Trojan horse viruses have infected" a computer. If not, he said, "You have to account for your actions."

Mr. Green said that despite the disruption in his life, things could have been much worse: he could have spent years in prison, lost all visitation rights to see his daughter, and could have been entered into lists of sex offenders. "There would have been no point to living after that," he said. "Everything is just taken away from you."

But he said he had no sympathy for pedophiles and users of child pornography, many of whom he met in the bail hostel. He called them "nasty little people," and said, "Whatever they do to them isn't enough."

Things are beginning to turn around for him since the British press has written about his acquittal, he said. One of the parents from his daughter's school, who hadn't spoken to him since the arrest, began talking to him the other day.

"She must have said, `Perhaps he's not a pervert after all,' " Mr. Green said.

Re: In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Robert J. Teti
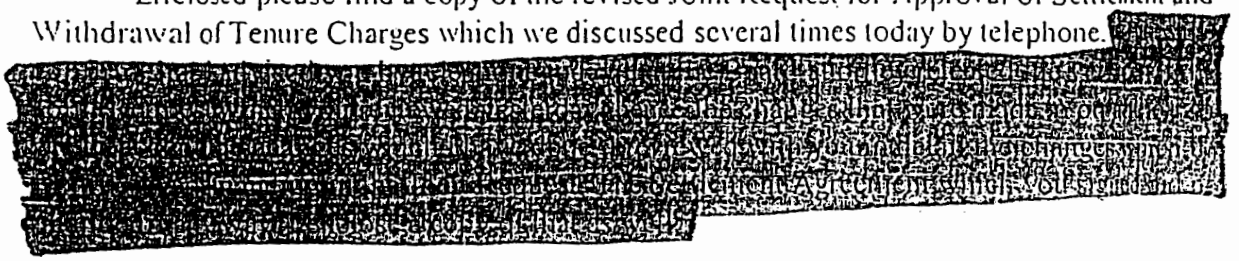
Willingboro Board of Education
OAL Docket No. EDUTH 12278-2006S
Agency Ref. No. 449-12/06
Our File No. 4959

Dear Mr. Teti:

Enclosed please find a copy of the revised Joint Request for Approval of Settlement and Withdrawal of Tenure Charges which we discussed several times today by telephone.



As we discussed on numerous occasions, including today, if the Board approves the agreement, it will go to the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) who will consider it and determine whether or not to recommend approval to the Commissioner of Education. If the ALJ recommends approval, the Commissioner of Education will review it and either approve it or approve it with the recommendation for the Board of Examiners or Division of Pensions to consider possible license/pension revocation proceedings or reject it. If rejected, the case would go back to the Office of Administrative Law for the parties to attempt to revise the agreement or a trial.

Subsequent to our conversations today, I signed the Joint Request and sent it to the Board attorney today for the Board meeting on Monday.

Very truly yours,

AMELIA COLON-SERRANO :

PETITIONER, :

V. :

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD, UNION COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT. :

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – who claims to have acquired tenure as an attendance aide in respondent Board's district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, prior to her voluntary transfer in 1994 to the nontenured position of classroom aide – contends that the Board violated her tenure rights when it failed to return her to a clerical position upon nonrenewal of her contract as a classroom aide in 2006. Respondent contends that petitioner is not tenured, as her initial position of attendance aide was not a tenured position.

The ALJ identified two issues to be determined: whether petitioner's initial position of attendance aide is properly classified as a clerical position, and whether petitioner acquired tenure in this position. The ALJ found that: it is well settled that the duties performed, rather than the title of a position, control whether or not that position is protected by tenure; the duties performed by petitioner in her former position as attendance aide were primarily clerical in nature; therefore, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, the petitioner earned tenure for the time she served in a clerical position as attendance aide. The ALJ ordered the Board to place petitioner in a clerical position held by a nontenured or less senior employee.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted in part, and rejected in part, the Initial Decision. The Commissioner concurred that the petitioner had acquired tenure as a clerical employee by virtue of her service as an attendance aide, but found that – because petitioner voluntarily left her tenured clerical employment for the distinct and nontenurable position of classroom aide – the protections of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 were no longer applicable and she had no entitlement to continued employment in the district. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 11588-06
AGENCY DKT. NO. 357-10/06

AMELIA COLON-SERRANO,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD, UNION COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner adopts in part, and rejects in part, the OAL Decision.

Initially, the Commissioner fully concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons set forth in her recommended decision – that the petitioner acquired tenure as a clerical employee by virtue of her service as an attendance aide in the school district of the respondent Board of Education (Board).

However, the Commissioner cannot concomitantly agree that the petitioner – who voluntarily left her tenured position in 1994 to accept the separate and nontenurable position of classroom aide, which she then held until the nonrenwal of her contract in 2006 – is now entitled to "bump back" into a clerical position held by a nontenured or less senior clerical employee, as reflected in the Order of the ALJ.

As noted in the Initial Decision, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 provides that clerical employees who acquire tenure "shall hold [their] office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense and only in the manner prescribed by [the Tenure Employees Hearing Law]." (at 3-4) In this matter, however, the employment from which the petitioner was dismissed was neither her tenured clerical employment nor an extension or "hybrid" continuation of such employment,[1] but rather the clearly distinct, nonclerical, and nontenured classroom aide position to which she voluntarily transferred in 1994 and continued to hold thereafter by virtue of a series of annual contract renewals. Under these circumstances, when the petitioner was advised in July 2006 that her contract would not be renewed, the protections of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 were no longer applicable; in the absence of express legislative provision for retention of accrued tenure rights upon transfer to a position which is not tenure eligible, the petitioner must be deemed to have relinquished the protections associated with her clerical tenure upon acceptance of the nonprotected position of classroom aide.[2] [3]

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as to its finding that the petitioner acquired tenure in her position as attendance aide, but rejected as to its implicit conclusion that the petitioner's tenure protection continued beyond the voluntary relinquishment of her tenured employment in 1994. Because no relief can now be awarded as a result of the petitioner's one-time tenured status, the petition is dismissed.[4] [5]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[6]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 1/28/08

Date of Mailing: 1/28/08

[4]The Commissioner deems unpersuasive the case law cited by the petitioner in support of her claim (Post-Hearing Brief at 2-3). Specifically, the petitioner ignores that Marybeth Driscoll v. Bd. of Ed. of the West Essex Regional School District, 1993 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 761 was reversed by the State Board of Education at 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU)348, while Dianne Giardina v. Bd. of Ed. of the Twp. of Pequannock, Commissioner of Education Decision No. 124-05, decided April 4, 2005, affirmed State Board of Education Decision No. 23-05, September 7, 2005, pertained to an employee who had transferred from one tenurable position covered by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 to another – as did the case on which it relied, Julia R. Given v. Bd. of Ed. of the East Windsor Regional School District, 1978 S.L.D. 43, also quoted by the petitioner.

[5] While the petitioner has no legal entitlement to continued employment in the district, the Commissioner notes that nothing herein is intended to preclude the Board from offering the petitioner – a longtime district employee who, from all appearances, performed satisfactorily as an attendance aide and whose employment as a classroom aide was terminated solely as the result of newly enhanced educational requirements which she could not meet – an available position for which she is qualified.

[6] This decision may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq.

State of New Jersey
OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION

OAL Docket No. EDU 11588-06N

AGENCY Dkt. No. 357-10/06

AMELIA COLON-SERRANO,

Petitioner

v.

CITY OF PLAINFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

Gail Oxfeld Kanef, Esq., for petitioner (Oxfeld Cohen, P.C. attorneys)

Raymond L. Hamlin, Esq., for respondent (Hunt, Hamlin & Ridley attorneys)

Record Closed: November 1, 2007 Decided: December 13, 2007

BEFORE: CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner, Amelia Colon-Serrano, contends that she worked for ten years in respondent's district as a tenured employee in the position of an attendance aide before transferring to a position as a non-tenured classroom aide. Petitioner was laid off from the classroom aide position. The petitioner alleges that the respondent Board violated her tenure rights when it failed to return her to the position of an attendance aide. Respondent district contends that petitioner's initial position of an attendance aide was not a tenured position and therefore does not have tenure.

The matter was filed as a contested case and received at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on or about December 6, 2006. A telephone scheduling conference was conducted on February 6, 2007, and the matter was heard on May 18, 2007. Closing briefs were submitted on June 26, 2007 and the undersigned obtained an order of extension which supplemented the record until September 24, 2007. Additional information was received on November 1, 2007, the record closed on that date.

ISSUES

Was the position of attendance aide a clerical position?
Did petitioner acquire tenure as an attendance aide?

FINDINGS OF FACT

The relevant facts are not in dispute. Based upon the testimony of Amelia Colon-Serrano I FIND the relevant FACTS to be the following:

Amelia Colon-Serrano was hired by the City of Plainfield Board of Education in October 1984. She was hired as an attendance aide. As an attendance aide she performed all of the duties outlined in joint exhibit marked J-1 except job responsibility numbered seventeen (17).

I FIND and it is STIPULATED that petitioner did not attain tenure as a classroom aide. I FIND and it was further STIPULATED that petitioner did not work as an attendance aide throughout the summer at the high school or the elementary school for the summer school programs.

Petitioner was an attendance aide until March of 1994, when she voluntarily transferred to the position of classroom aide. She became a classroom aide in 1994 until July of 2006. On or about July 2006, respondent board notified her that her contract for employment as a classroom aide would not be renewed because she did not meet the mandated requirements of forty-eight college credits. Ms. Colon-Serrano completed high school in 1965 in Puerto Rico, that is the highest level of education she obtained. I FIND that petitioner did not receive any special or specific training as an attendance aide.

I FIND that as an attendance aide, Ms. Colon-Serrano performed the following duties: She answered the telephones, photocopied all kinds of records, filed student records, prepared reports documenting student absences, completed student transfer forms and performed all the items enumerated in exhibit J-1 except items numbered 16 and 17.

I FIND that petitioner over the years worked under the supervision of the various attendance coordinators. Petitioner prepared weekly reports documenting students' absences and gave the reports to the supervising attendance coordinator. I FIND that the petitioner was not the attendance officer or coordinator. I FIND that petitioner performed ministerial tasks in the attendance office.

DISCUSSION

The relevant statute in this matter is N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, which provides that:

> ...[a]ny person holding any...clerical position or employment under a board of education of any school district or under any officer thereof, after
> 1. The expiration of a period of employment of three consecutive calendar years in the district or such shorter period as may be fixed by the board or officer employing him, or > 2. Employment for three consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year, an academic year being the > period between the time when school opens in the district after the general summer vacation and the beginning of the next succeeding summer vacation,...

> Shall hold his office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation, except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense and only in the manner prescribed by subarticle B of article 2 of chapter 6 of this title.

It is settled law that it is the duties performed rather than the title of a position that controls whether or not a position is protected by tenure. Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. Of North Bergen, 1959-1960 S.L.D. 113, 114, 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962). In the case of Barnes v. Bd. of Educ. Of Jersey City, 85 N.J. Super. 42 (App. Div. 1964), certif. den. 43 N.J. 450 (1964). The Appellate Division addressed the intended meaning of the phrase "clerical position" under N.J.S.A. 18:6-27 which, was the predecessor statute to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2, by conferring tenure on all persons "holding any secretarial or clerical position" under any board of education.

The case of Berardi v. Board of Education of the School district of South Orange and Maplewood, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 239, lends the most guidance in this case. The petitioner in Berardi alleged that she was terminated from her position as a full time "clerical aide" in violation of her tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. The instant petitioner, like in Berardi performed mostly clerical duties. It is undisputed that petitioner performed all of the duties outlined in exhibit marked J-1. Petitioner testified that she answered the telephones, answered the phone for her various supervisors, filed, photocopied student records, photocopied papers for her superiors; petitioner testified that she performed the above duties not only for herself or her department but also for the neighboring departments.

Respondent school district contends that petitioner performed predominantly non-clerical duties such as traveling into the community three (3) times a week and interacted with parents and the community. I agree that petitioner performed these other traditionally non clerical duties but I disagree that these were her predominant duties.

Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary defines a clerk as a) "an official responsible for correspondence, records, and accounts and vested with specified powers or authority, b) "one employed to keep records or accounts or to perform general office work".

Petitioner in the instant matter performed the duties and responsibilities of a clerk as defined above. I FIND she held a clerical position as an attendance aide. In addition, I have considered the fact that petitioner is not a specifically trained attendance aide. Petitioner's highest level of education is her achievement of a high school diploma, which, on its surface, would not qualify her as employable in the category of a paraprofessional.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner served the requisite time in a clerical position and has earned tenure for the time she served as an attendance aide for the respondent district.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that Amelia Colon-Serrano be entitled to bump back into her former position as a clerical employee over and above any non-tenured clerical employee and over and above any clerical employee who has fewer years of service in a clerical position than she.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN, CAMDEN COUNTY, ET AL.,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENTS.	:

The record of this matter, the executed "Settlement Agreement" and "Addendum to Settlement Agreement" (Agreements), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. The Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) approves the terms of the Agreements with one comment.

Section 3 of the Settlement Agreement recites "without agreeing that Petitioner is entitled to attorney's fees, Respondent acknowledges that Petitioner reserves the right to move for compensation of reasonable attorney's fees and damages pursuant to the applicable State and Federal law." This provision is also referenced in Section 5 of the Settlement Agreement.

The Commissioner reminds the parties that it is well established that, due to the lack of express statutory authority for so doing, the Commissioner does not have plenary authority to award counsel fees in determining controversies and disputes presented under Education Law. Maurice S. Kaprow v. Board of Education of the Township of Berkeley, Ocean County, et al., Commissioner Decision No. 260-06, decided August 2, 2006, p.8;

Balsley v. North Hunterdon Bd. of Educ., 117 N.J. 434, 442-443 (1990). Thus, the Department of Education is not the proper forum for any such future claim by petitioner. [1]

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, supplemented by the foregoing caveat.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

The record, Settlement Agreement with Release and Waiver, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner observes that the President of the Franklin Township Board of Education signed the Settlement Agreement with Release and Waiver on behalf of the Board. In that neither the file nor the settlement agreement contains a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating this individual to sign the agreement on its behalf – nor, in the alternative, is the agreement signed by the Board attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation – the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement agreement.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Stipulation of Settlement consistent with the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to hearing.

IN THE MATTER OF JUANDA BOXLEY,	:
NEW HORIZONS COMMUNITY	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
CHARTER SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	AMENDED DECISION

On November 19, 2007, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) rendered a decision concurring with the October 11, 2007 recommendation of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) that the respondent Board member be removed from office – effective upon filing of the Commissioner's decision – for failure to attend the Board member training required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

Subsequently, by letter dated December 20, 2007, the Executive Director of the School Ethics Commission advised respondent – and the Commissioner – that the Commission had voted on December 18, 2007 to vacate its prior decision finding respondent in violation of the School Ethics Act, since the respondent – who resigned from her position on July 1, 2006 – had been the Director of the charter school, not a voting member of the Board of Trustees, and as such was not required to undergo new board member training.

Accordingly, the finding of violation upon which it was based having now been vacated by the Commission, the Commissioner's decision of November 19, 2007 is concomitantly VACATED and shall be deemed of no force and effect.

School Ethics Commission Docket No. T13-07
Agency Docket No. 317-10/07
Commissioner Decision No. 454-07SEC

Dear Ms. Boxley:

You received an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) on August 17, 2007 from the School Ethics Commission based upon information that you failed to attend training within the first year of your first term on the New Horizons Community Charter School Board of Trustees (Board). You did not respond to the OTSC. At its September 25, 2007 meeting, the Commission found that you violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a penalty of suspension from the Board until you attended the October 23, 2007 training session and removal if you failed to attend the October 23, 2007 training session. No comments were filed with the Commissioner and you did not attend the October 23, 2007 training session. By decision dated November 19, 2007, the Commissioner concurred with the penalty of removal recommended by the Commission and removed you as of November 24, 2007.

However, on December 3, 2007, the Commission received correspondence from the current Director of the New Horizons Community Charter School indicating that you resigned from your position of Director as of July 1, 2006. As Director of the New Horizons Charter School, you were not a voting member of the board of trustees. Thus, under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, you were not required to undergo new board member training. Therefore, at its December 18, 2007 meeting, the Commission voted to withdraw its Order to Show Cause and vacate its September 25, 2007 Decision for Failure to Attend Training in this matter.

By copy of this letter to Kathleen Duncan, Director of Controversies and Disputes, the Commission is providing this information to the Commissioner of Education to take action as she deems appropriate based upon this information received by the School Ethics Commission subsequent to the issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

We are sorry for any inconvenience that this may have caused you.

Sincerely,

On January 2, 2008, this matter was forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for review of the penalty recommended by the School Ethics Commission in light of its finding that the respondent had violated the School Ethics Act through failure to file requisite disclosure statements.

However – prior to issuance of a final decision – the Commissioner was advised that, on January 22, 2008, the Commission had voted to vacate its prior decision due to its discovery that the respondent had, in fact, filed statements as required.

Accordingly, given that the finding of violation upon which it was based has now been vacated by the Commission, this matter is deemed withdrawn and dismissed as a controversy before the Commissioner.

JEFFREY JACOVINO,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WEST MILFORD, PASSAIC COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter – including the audiotape of proceedings conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on January 7, 2008 – and the recommended Order of the OAL have been reviewed.

Upon such review, it was evident that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) contemplated that her findings and conclusion in this matter were sufficient to constitute a recommendation on the underlying appeal – notwithstanding that her decision was issued in the form of an Order. Therefore, the parties were provided an opportunity to object to resolution of this matter on emergent motion and invited to file exceptions and/or reply exceptions to the ALJ's decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Exceptions of the Board and petitioner's reply thereto were timely filed.

After a comprehensive review of the audiotape of proceedings conducted below – along with papers filed in support of and in opposition to the grant of emergent relief and arguments advanced in exceptions – I have determined to reject the ALJ's recommended grant of petitioner's emergent application in this matter.

The record here evidences the following uncontested facts:

- Petitioner is a 12th grade student in the West Milford School District.
- While a student in the district, Petitioner has amassed eight suspensions, seven of which were for the use of vulgar language toward staff members.
- Petitioner was most recently suspended – pending a Board hearing – on October 26, 2007. A school staff member suspected that petitioner was under the influence of drugs or alcohol and asked that the district's substance abuse policy be invoked. Petitioner tested positive for a controlled dangerous substance.
- Subsequent to conducting an administrative due process hearing on November 20, 2007, the Board passed a resolution suspending petitioner for the remainder of the academic year.
- Petitioner was provided with an alternative educational placement at Memorial Hall in Bloomfield, New Jersey, which he rejected. Since that time the Board has attempted, with varying degrees of success, to provide home schooling.
- Petitioner has interposed a number of challenges to the validity of the Board's action, and his application here seeks that he be immediately returned to the District's regular educational program.

It is well-established that the granting of emergent relief is an extraordinary remedy that can only be awarded when the party seeking such relief demonstrates the existence of each of four separate conditions: 1) that the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; 2) that the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled; 3) that there is a likelihood that petitioner will prevail on the merits of the underlying controversy; 4) that when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent if the requested relief is not granted. (See Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). The Commissioner finds that the instant matter is replete with significant factual disputes requiring resolution through testimony and evidence before a conclusion can be reached as to the propriety of the Board's challenged action.[1] Such factual disputes – at a very minimum – preclude a finding that petitioner has sustained his burden of establishing either that the legal right underlying his claim is settled or that there is a likelihood that he will ultimately prevail on the merits of the underlying controversy. Consequently, his emergent application must be denied.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL is rejected. This case shall proceed at the OAL for a hearing on its merits which, due to the circumstances of this matter, should – to the greatest extent possible – be conducted on an expedited basis. The Board is directed to pay tuition and transportation costs for Jeffrey Jacovino's attendance at the alternative education program at Memorial Hall, should petitioner elect to avail himself of this option, or – in the alternative – it must ensure that he is provided home instruction pending final adjudication of this matter.

v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WEST MILFORD, PASSAIC COUNTY,
Respondent.

Jeffrey Jacovino, pro se

Michael Rowan, Esq., for respondent (Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, P.C., attorneys)

BEFORE LESLIE Z. CELENTANO, ALJ:

This matter having been opened on the filing of a petition for emergent relief, submitted by petitioner, Jeffrey Jacovino, and respondent, Board of Education of the Township of West Milford, Passaic County having been represented by Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, P.C., Michael Rowan, Esq. appearing, and the undersigned having considered the moving papers, Certification and exhibits submitted by the petitioner, and opposition papers, Certification and exhibits submitted by respondent and having heard the arguments of petitioner and of counsel for respondent, and for good cause shown, and

The undersigned having further determined from the proofs, as more particularly set forth in the oral decision rendered on January 7, 2008, that petitioner has met the standards to grant emergent relief as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1986), that:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interest of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

IT IS therefore on this 7th day of January, 2007,

ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergency relief is GRANTED.

No issues remain and no further relief was being sought.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that a copy of the within ORDER be served upon all parties within 7 days of receipt.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. The record of this matter, the executed "Stipulation to Dismiss Certain Parties" (Stipulation), the "Full and Complete Release and Settlement" (Release), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. The Commissioner approves the terms of the Stipulation and Release with one comment.

Section 2 of the Release recites that respondent will pay petitioner installments of $1,060 on a monthly basis beginning in November 2007 and ending on May 1, 2008. Thus, these provisions anticipated that certain conduct would occur on a date that ultimately fell before the Settlement was considered by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have already implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon a mutually satisfactory alternate date for effectuation of same.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 11-1/08

IN THE MATTER OF AMANDA NAPOLITANI,	:
INTERLAKEN BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The record of this matter, the decision of the School Ethics Commission, forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 solely for review of the Commission's recommended penalty, and respondent's comments have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.3.

In her exceptions, the respondent conveyed the reasons why she believes that the sanction of reprimand should not be imposed upon her. More specifically, respondent states that her omission of income information on her disclosure form was inadvertent and that she was not aware of the deadline for resubmissions.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and additionally admonishes the respondent for failure to timely and fully file the requisite disclosure statement, in that such delay has resulted in a waste of administrative and adjudicative time by local, county and State education officials. While the Commissioner appreciates the respondent's good intentions, the fact remains that the Commission found a violation to have occurred, and the Commissioner cannot disagree that a penalty is warranted even where the violation resulted from oversight rather than deliberate disregard of the law.[1]

[1] The Commissioner notes that reprimand is the least of the penalties available for imposition under the School Ethics Act.

Accordingly, the above-named respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 2/01/08

Date of Mailing: 2/01/08

[2] This decision, as the Commissioner's final determination regarding penalty in the instant matter, may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq.

SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
V.	:	Docket No.: D14-07
AMANDA NAPOLITANI INTERLAKEN BOARD OF EDUCATION MONMOUTH COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Amanda Napolitani, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. The school official filed the disclosure statements on November 28, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on November 28, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Amanda Napolitani violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a teacher employed by the Board, contends that she should have been compensated for five days of spring recess, when she would have been able to return to work following a period of approved medical leave. Petitioner exhausted her sick leave and was placed on unpaid leave for the period immediately preceding the District's spring break. Respondent Board urges that it was within its managerial discretion to extend petitioner's unpaid leave pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-7 and the District's collective bargaining agreement.

The ALJ found that: the collective bargaining agreement allows the Board, at its discretion, to change the requested date for the resumption of duties following an unpaid leave, provided that the date change is not medically contraindicated; the Board properly exercised its discretion to determine the petitioner's duties would resume following spring recess; and petitioner is not entitled to wages for days in which the schools were closed for spring recess since she did not resume her teaching duties until after recess was over. The ALJ ordered the determination of the respondent be affirmed.

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the petitioner is not entitled to relief. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted, and the instant petition is dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions and reply exceptions of the Board were filed in accordance with the prescriptions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

On exception petitioner essentially recasts and reiterates her arguments advanced below. As it is determined that the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) decision fully considered and addressed all of petitioner's credible advancements, these will not be revisited here.

Upon careful and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly stated in her decision – that petitioner is not entitled to the relief she seeks.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Karen Vuksan, a teacher employed by respondent Clifton Board of Education, contends she should have been compensated for days during spring recess. On August 25, 2005, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The parties filed cross motions for summation decision. The undersigned reviewed the documents and closed the record on September 25, 2007. The forty-five (45) day statutory period within which to file the initial decision with the Department of Education expired on November 9, 2007. Based on the administrative law judge's voluminous case load, a forty-five (45) day extension of time to complete the initial decision was granted. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8.

FACTS

The relevant facts are undisputed. Therefore, I FIND:

1. In September 2003, Petitioner began employment in the Clifton School District.
2. Petitioner is certified with endorsements in English and elementary education.
3. Pursuant to Petitioner's employment contract for the 2004-2005 school-year she held a full time ten month position for an annual salary of $42,640.00, to be paid in twenty (20) equal semi-monthly installments of $2,132.00.
4. From April 4 to April 23, 2005, Petitioner was on approved medical leave.
5. Petitioner used accumulated sick leave from April 4 to April 11, 2005, on which date she exhausted her sick leave.
6. On April 12, 2005, Petitioner was placed on unpaid sick leave for April 12, 13, 14, and 15, 2005.
7. Petitioner was on unpaid leave for the week of April 18, 2005.
8. On April 15, 2005, Petitioner received her regular semi-monthly gross pay of $2,133.35.
9. During the month of May 2005, respondent deducted monies from Petitioner's paychecks for the four (4) days in April 2005, in which Petitioner exhausted her accumulated sick. (April 12, 13, 14, and 15, 2005).

10. Petitioner did not receive a paycheck on April 30, 2005.
11. Petitioner's physician cleared her to return to work after April 23, 2005.
12. April 23, 2005 fell on a Saturday.
13. Petitioner would have returned to her classroom on Monday, April 25, 2005. However, spring recess began on Monday, April 25, 2005 and school was closed for five (5) days from April 25 to April 29, 2005.
14. Petitioner returned to her classroom when school reopened on Monday, May 2, 2005.
15. Article X of the collective bargaining agreement between Respondent and Clifton Teachers' Association addresses teacher absences. Paragraph B(11)(f) provides, "Whenever, in the opinion of the Board, the requested date of commencement of an unpaid disability leave or the requested date for the resumption of duties would substantially interfere with the administration of the school district or the education of pupils, the requested dates may be changed by the Board, provided that such date change is not medically contraindicated."
16. Article X B(4) of the collective bargaining agreement provides that teaching staff members may take a maximum of five (5) days leave of absence during a school year in connection with that teaching staff member's own marriage, and further provides that a ten-month teaching staff member will be "docked" 1/200th of his or her annual salary for each such day of absence. The language implies that one day's pay is equivalent to 1/200th of a ten-month teacher's annual salary.

ISSUE

Did the Board properly calculate petitioner's compensation?

Position of the Parties

Petitioner asserts she was ready and able to return to work on April 24, 2005, but it was impossible, due to the school closure. Therefore, the Board impermissibly

"docked" her pay for the period of spring break. Petitioner further claims she was subjected to disparate treatment because other teachers, not on sick leave immediately before the spring break, received their salary for that period. Petitioner relies on N.J.S.A.18A:27-6(3), which sets forth the method of payment to be included in the contract. For example, her salary is predicated on twenty (20) equal monthly installments while school is in session. Petitioner maintains the Board impermissibly calculated her salary on a per diem basis. Petitioner maintains she was ready to return to work and she should have been paid, even though she had not accumulated sufficient sick-time to cover the week school was closed for spring break. She relies on Parker v. Board of Education of Hammonton, 1980 S.L.D. 58; Brunner v. Upper Freehold Regional Board of Education, 1980 S.L.D. 1093; Leeb v. Board of Education of the Township of Holland, 1988 S.L.D 2003; Tucker v. Board of Education of the Township of Montgomery, EDU 6393-03, Initial Decision, (June 20, 2005), adopted, Comm'r. (August 3, 2005) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html.

The Board argues that it was within its managerial discretion to extend petitioner's unpaid leave pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-7, and Article X, B(11)(f) of the Collective Bargaining agreement , which states:

> Whenever, in the opinion of the Board, the requested date of commencement of an unpaid disability leave or the requested date for the resumption of duties would substantially interfere with the administration of the school district or the education of pupils, the requested dates may be changed by the Board, provided that such date change is not medically contraindicated.

DICUSSION

The pivotal issue concerns a school teacher who was on sick leave, had exhausted her leave time, and was not paid for the spring recess, which commenced on the Monday following date she was medically cleared to return to work. I have considered carefully Petitioner's position. The cases relied on address the method applied to calculate the final paychecks upon acceptance of the resignations of school employees. In each instance, the employees were not completing their contracts and the Boards calculated their final salary on a per diem basis. There the Boards were admonished for violating their own rules. (Parker v. Board of Education of Hammonton, 1980 S.L.D. 58; Brunner v. Upper Freehold Regional Board of Education, 1980 S.L.D. 1093; Leeb v. Board of Education of the Township of Holland, 1988 S.L.D. 2003).

However, in Tucker v. Board of Education of the Township of Montgomery, EDU 6393-03, Initial Decision, (June 20, 2005), adopted, Comm'r. (August 3, 2005) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html, petitioner ended her maternity leave, returned to work the day before spring break, and was placed on pay status. Tucker even acknowledged that she returned to work prior to spring break instead of waiting after the spring break in order to be placed on the pay roll period. The Board refused to pay her for the spring break, and the ALJ concluded differently, noting that petitioner returned to work on April 16th, the first day of the second pay period that month. It was also the last day school was in session prior to closing for Good Friday and spring recess. She then returned on April 28, the date school reopened and worked the last three days of the pay period, April 28, 29 and 30. Consequently, she worked every day the schools were open. "Once she crossed the threshold her first day back at work, she should not have been treated any differently than any other teacher in the building". [Id. at 20-21]. The Commissioner agreed and stated:

> N.J.S.A. 18A:27-6(3) and the case law interpreting it--regardless of differences in argument and circumstances--fundamentally require that teacher salaries, including those of tenured teachers and teachers who work less than a full year, be calculated on the basis of monthly or semi-monthly pay periods. While this certainly does not preclude receipt of an adjusted paycheck for any pay period during which a teacher does not have sufficient leave days to cover an absence occurring on a day when school is in session--indeed, N.J.S.A. 18A:30-6 expressly contemplates such adjustment--it does preclude a board from adjusting the contracted salary installment for a teacher not on leave status who has worked each day during the period that teaching staff members were required to report to work. To the extent that, in the current situation, this preclusion produces a result deemed inequitable by the Board, such > result could have been avoided--as noted by the ALJ--by the Board's exercising its undisputed authority to change the requested end date of petitioner's leave so as to prohibit her return to full status on the first day of a pay period encompassing a substantial number of days when school was not in session.

Here, the Board made the decision to extend Petitioner's leave. For guidance, I have also considered Berkowitz v. BOE of the City of Elizabeth, EDU 11428-03, Initial Decision, (October 29, 2004), adopted, Comm'r. (December 9, 2004) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html. Similarly, in Berkowitz, the teacher exhausted her accumulated leave by June 13, 2003. On June 16, 2003, she was placed on unpaid leave. School was scheduled to close for the summer on June 18th, but was extended until June 24, 2003 to make up time missed due to various emergency closings throughout that year. Petitioner did not receive a paycheck on June 30, 2003, and appealed. The ALJ concluded there was no equitable reason to require the Board to pay petitioner for June 25, 26 and 27, 2003. The Commissioner affirmed and stated:

> Petitioner is not entitled to the relief she seeks. However petitioner attempts to characterize her situation, the fact remains that the days for which she asks "not to be docked" occurred at a time during which she was on a pre-arranged leave of absence, unpaid because she had exhausted all her accumulated leave. Petitioner's status from June 16 onward, by its very nature precluded any entitlement to or expectation of pay for the duration of her leave, which extended through the remainder of the school year (June 30); it is of no import that active teachers, i.e., those not on leave, were not required to report to work on three days falling within the unpaid leave period. In effect, with respect to the days at issue, petitioner is demanding that the Board treat her as an employee not on leave, which she clearly was not.

Here, Petitioner was on unpaid leave once she exhausted her accumulated leave time. Although she was cleared by her physician to return to work "after April 23," there was no work for her to return to until May 2, 2005. It was within the discretion of the Board to extend Petitioner's leave pursuant to Article X of the collective bargaining agreement. which provides, "Whenever, in the opinion of the Board, the requested date of commencement of an unpaid disability leave or the requested date for the resumption of duties would substantially interfere with the administration of the school district or the education of pupils, the requested dates may be changed by the Board, provided that such date change is not medically contraindicated." The Board opined that Karen Vuksan's resumption of her duties from April 23 to May 2, 2005 would have substantially interfered with the administration of the school district or education of the pupils since the school would be closed for spring break. Thus, the Board maintains the changed date of May 2, 2005 was not medically contraindicated, and its determination should be upheld.

CONCLUSION

Based on the whole record I CONCLUDE the Board properly exercised its discretion to determine the Petitioner's duties would resume on May 2, 2005, after the spring recess. Therefore, I further CONCLUDE that Karen Vuksan is not entitled to wages for days in which the schools were closed for spring recess as she resumed her duties on May 2, 2005.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the determination of Clifton Board of Education be AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless

IN THE MATTER OF KAREN WATT,	:
INTERLAKEN BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

The record of this matter, the decision of the School Ethics Commission, forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 solely for review of the Commission's recommended penalty, and respondent's comments have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.3.

In her exceptions, the respondent conveyed the reasons why she believes that the sanction of reprimand should not be imposed upon her. More specifically, respondent states that her omission of income information on her disclosure form was inadvertent and that she was not aware of the deadline for resubmissions.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and additionally admonishes the respondent for failure to timely and fully file the requisite disclosure statement, in that such delay has resulted in a waste of administrative and adjudicative time by local, county and State education officials. While the Commissioner appreciates the respondent's good intentions, the fact remains that the Commission found a violation to have occurred, and the Commissioner cannot disagree that a penalty is warranted even where the violation resulted from oversight rather than deliberate disregard of the law.[1]

[1] The Commissioner notes that reprimand is the least of the penalties available for imposition under the School Ethics Act.

Accordingly, the above-named respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
V.	:	Docket No.: D15-07
KAREN WATT INTERLAKEN BOARD OF EDUCATION MONMOUTH COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Karen Watt, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. Ms. Watt filed an answer to the OTSC wherein she indicated that she had filed the disclosure statements, but that her filing was incomplete. However, the Monmouth County office has informed the Commission that the original incomplete filing was received in the county office on June 5, 2007, which is past the April 30, 2007 deadline. Ms. Watt filed the completed disclosure statements on November 28, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School

Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on November 28, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Karen Watt violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within 13 days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, the school official may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. IN THE MATTER OF BENJAMIN DINEEN,	:
UNIVERSITY ACADEMY CHARTER SCHOOL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF TRUSTEES, JERSEY CITY,	:	DECISION
HUDSON COUNTY	:

The record of this matter, the decision of the School Ethics Commission, forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 solely for review of the Commission's recommended penalty, and respondent's comments have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.3.

In his exceptions, the respondent conveys the reasons why he believes that the sanction of reprimand should not be imposed upon him. More specifically, respondent points out that he has been a volunteer trustee for several years and has previously timely filed his annual disclosure statements.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and additionally admonishes the respondent for failure to timely file the requisite disclosure statement, in that such delay has resulted in a waste of administrative and adjudicative time by local, county and State education officials. While the Commissioner appreciates the respondent's good intentions, the fact remains that the Commission found a violation to have occurred, and the Commissioner cannot disagree that a penalty is warranted even where the violation resulted from oversight rather than deliberate disregard of the law.[1]

[1] The Commissioner notes that reprimand is the least of the penalties available for imposition under the School Ethics Act.

Accordingly, the above-named respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
V.	:	Docket No.: D11-07
BENJAMIN DINEEN UNIVERSITY ACADEMY BOARD OF TRUSTEES HUDSON COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Benjamin Dineen, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. The school official answered the Commission on December 13, 2007 and indicated that he had filed the disclosure statements on November 27, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on November 27, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Benjamin Dineen violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
V.	:	Docket No.: D19-07
NEIL GOETZE SEA BRIGHT BOARD OF EDUCATION MONMOUTH COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Neil Goetze, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. The school official did not provide an answer to the Commission's OTSC and has failed to file the disclosure statements.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore, the Commission found that the school official's failure to file the disclosure statements after receipt of the OTSC constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of suspension until the school official files the disclosure statements, removal if the disclosure statements are not filed within 30 days of the Commissioner's decision on penalty, and censure if the disclosure statements are filed prior to issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School

Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The school official has not filed the disclosure statements as of the date of this decision. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore, the Commission finds that the school official's failure to file the disclosure statements after receipt of the OTSC constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Neil Goetze violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that this school official was given ample opportunity to provide the complete disclosure statements. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of suspension until the school official files the disclosure statements, removal if the disclosure statements are not filed within 30 days of the Commissioner's decision on penalty, and censure if the disclosure statements are filed prior to issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing John Peterson, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The school official answered the Commission's OTSC on December 17, 2007 and stated that he completed and signed the disclosure statements at the April 2007 board meeting, that he could not explain why it was not filed and it would be rectified before the December 18, 2007 meeting of the Commission. However, the Cumberland County Office notified the Commission on December 17, 2007 that the school official's disclosure statements had not been filed.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore, the Commission found that the school official's failure to file the disclosure statements after receipt of the OTSC constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of suspension until the school official files the disclosure statements, removal if the disclosure statements are not filed within 30 days of the Commissioner's decision on penalty, and censure if the disclosure statements are filed prior to issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official answered that he completed and signed the disclosure statements at the board's meeting in April 2007. However, the school official has not filed the disclosure statements as of the date of this decision. Therefore, the Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore, the Commission finds that the school official's failure to file the disclosure statements after receipt of the OTSC constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that John Peterson violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of suspension until the school official files the disclosure statements, removal if the disclosure statements are not filed within 30 days of the Commissioner's decision on penalty, and censure if the disclosure statements are filed prior to issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board sought an order from the Commissioner authorizing it to conduct certain assessments of R.O. – a gifted student in math and science who showed weaknesses in some language arts skills – to evaluate his abilities and level of achievement; petitioner also asked the Commissioner to compel respondents' cooperation in the assessment process. Respondents subsequently filed an answer and counter petition requesting that the Commissioner enter an order dismissing the petition based on R.O.'s withdrawal from the school district; petitioner then submitted a letter requesting that the petition be withdrawn for mootness.

No opposition papers having been filed by the specified due date, the Commissioner dismissed the matter for mootness.

PETITIONER,	:

R.O. and R.O. on behalf of minor child, R.O.,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on November 21, 2007, by way of a verified petition by the school district against the respondent parents of minor child, R.O., a gifted student in math and science who showed weaknesses in some language arts skills. Petitioner requested that the Commissioner issue an order authorizing it to conduct certain assessments of R.O. – by a certified learning disabilities teacher/consultant and a school psychologist – to better evaluate R.O.'s abilities and level of achievement. The petition also asked the Commissioner to compel respondents' cooperation.

By notice dated November 21, 2007, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (the Bureau) directed respondent, via regular mail, to file an answer to the petition. On December 28, 2007, the Bureau directed respondent for a second time, via both certified and regular mail, to file an answer to the petition. Neither of the notices sent by regular mail was returned to the Commissioner, and the notice sent by certified mail was acknowledged as received ("green card").

On January 11, 2008, the Bureau received an "Answer and Counter Petition" from respondent R.O., in which respondent requested that the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) enter an order dismissing the petition "because R.O. is no longer enrolled in the district as a student." In addition, the Commissioner received a letter from petitioner requesting that the petition be deemed "withdrawn without prejudice" for mootness – based upon the respondents' withdrawal of R.O. from petitioner's school district and based upon the language requesting dismissal in respondents' answer.

The parties were consequently directed to submit memoranda delineating why the Commissioner should not dismiss both the petition and counter petition as moot, and were advised that if no opposition papers were received by January 22, 2008, the Commissioner would deem the matter moot and dismiss it accordingly. As no opposition papers have been received to date, this matter is hereby dismissed for mootness.

SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION V. JUDY FAYTER UPPER TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION CAPE MAY COUNTY	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION Docket No.: D08-07 DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Judy Fayter, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. Ms. Fayter responded to the Commission's OTSC and indicated that she had intended to resign on April 30, 2007, but when she decided to remain as a board member, she mailed her disclosure statements to the Upper Township School District in late May 2007. However, the disclosure statements were never filed with the county office. Ms. Fayter ultimately filed the form on December 11, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that Ms. Fayter admits that she filed the disclosure statements after the April 30, 2007 deadline. The Commission also notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on December 11, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Judy Fayter violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within 13 days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, the school official may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Wellington Davenport, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. Through his attorney, Robert J. Hagerty, Esquire, the school official filed a response to the OTSC on December 5, 2007. The school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Angel Osorio, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. Through his attorney, Robert J. Hagerty, Esquire, the school official filed a response to the OTSC on December 5, 2007. The school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, who transferred into the respondent's district after completing the eleventh grade in another district, challenged the respondent's decision not to issue her a diploma at the end of the 2006-2007 school year, and requested special permission to graduate based on having completed the courses necessary for graduation from her prior school district. Respondent contends that petitioner failed to meet the district's academic requirements for receiving a diploma.

The ALJ found that: there are no genuine issues of material fact in this matter; petitioner transferred into the Jersey City school district with 81 credits in September 2006; petitioner completed 121 credits by the end of the 2006-2007 school year; pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7C-2, respondent's district requires the completion of 140 credits to graduate; and petitioner admits that she did not have the 140 credits necessary to graduate from Jersey City schools at the end of the 2006-2007 school year. The ALJ concluded that the respondent's decision should be affirmed, and the petition dismissed with prejudice.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

JALEESA A. DOWLING,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the petitioner's exceptions and the Jersey City School District's (District) reply, both timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

In her exceptions, the petitioner contends that certain statements in the Initial Decision are misleading – largely because the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) failed to ask pertinent follow-up questions that would have clarified the petitioner's situation – and seeks to place these statements in context by elaborating upon the OAL factual record. She further contends that 1) the ALJ's legal analysis does not apply to the District, since – as a State-operated school district – it is not governed by a "local board of education" as are districts referenced in laws authorizing the adoption of local district graduation policies, and 2) the District lacks policies and procedures specifically addressing students in her situation. She concludes that she has worked hard and suffered, "yet no one can tell [her] how it would hurt the district" to grant the requested diploma. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 1-2, quotation at 2)

In reply, the District objects to the petitioner's attempt to expand the factual record after the close of OAL proceedings in violation of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4(c), and proffers that her arguments – both before the ALJ and on exception – "cannot overcome the controlling law and the conclusions that follow from it." The District urges adoption of the Initial Decision's grant of summary decision in its favor, additionally noting that – because the ALJ allowed the petitioner to appear at hearing despite her failure to oppose the District's motion for summary decision – the Commissioner could alternatively sustain the District's action on grounds that the petitioner failed to carry her burden of proof at hearing. (District's Reply at 1-3, quotation at 2)

Upon review and consideration, although not unsympathetic to the petitioner's circumstances, the Commissioner must concur with the ALJ that State law expressly contemplates that public school districts – including State-operated districts – may set and enforce local graduation requirements over and above the State-mandated minimum, and that, in light of the undisputed fact that the petitioner lacked the requisite number of credits to graduate from the Jersey City School District at the end of the 2006-07 school year, there is no basis on which the District may grant her a high school diploma based solely on completion of the lesser number of credits required for graduation from her school district of prior attendance.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision of the OAL – granting the District's motion and dismissing the petition of appeal – is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 7848-07
Agency Dkt. No.: 178-6/07

J.A.D.

Petitioner,

v.

STATE- OPERATED DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY,

Respondent.

J.A.D., pro se,

Robin T. McMahon, Esq., attorney for respondent, State-Operated District of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County (Scarinci & Hollenbeck, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 20, 2007 Decided: December 24, 2007

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This is an appeal by a student, J.A.D., challenging the Jersey City Board of Education's ("Board" or "District") decision not to award a state endorsed diploma to her at the end of the 2006-2007 academic year. Petitioner, J.A.D., requests special permission to graduate. Respondent Board determined that petitioner fails to meet the district's academic requirements for receiving a diploma.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 26, 2007, petitioner filed an interim relief request with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner"). On August 6, 2007, Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") where it was filed as a contested case. I scheduled a plenary hearing for November 20, 2007. On November 1, 2007, respondent filed a motion for summary decision. Because petitioner was pro se, I allowed the parties to address any arguments regarding the summary decision motion at the plenary hearing. The record closed on November 20, 2007.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Many of the background facts in this matter are not in dispute. In September 2006, petitioner transferred to the Jersey City school district from the North Bergen school district as a high school student with 81 credits. The North Bergen school district requires the completion of 120 credits to graduate and the Jersey City school district requires the completion of a minimum of 140 credits to graduate. Petitioner completed 121 credits by the end of the 2006-2007 academic year after which she elected not to remain in the Jersey City school district.

J.A.D. testified that at the time of her transfer to the Jersey City school district, she had completed her 11th academic grade in the North Bergen school district. Petitioner indicated that when she transferred in September 2006, she registered to attend Henry Snyder high school in the Jersey City school district at the 12th grade level. J.A.D. affirmed that she was offered an opportunity to enroll in the alternative "Twilight" program to secure additional credits but she declined. Petitioner testified that she requested "special permission" to graduate but was denied.

Ellen Ruane, principal of Henry Snyder high school from 2002 through December 2006 and current special assistant to the District superintendent, testified that J.A.D. "did not have enough credits coming into the district" and therefore, "after review of her credits", she was considered to be at the "junior" grade level. Ruane further indicated that she was not aware of a "special permission program". Ruane conceded that although petitioner was considered a "junior", she did take "English 4 and Health 4" subjects which Ruane conceded were "typically senior class" subjects.

I FIND that petitioner transferred to the Jersey City school district with 81 credits in September 2006. I FIND that petitioner completed 121 credits by the end of the 2006-2007 academic year. I FIND that the Jersey City school district requires the completion of a minimum of 140 credits to graduate.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In accordance with the New Jersey Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, any party may move for summary decision upon all or any of the substantive issues in a case at any time after a case is deemed contested. To grant a motion for summary decision, it must be examined whether "the papers and discovery...together with the affidavits...show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b).

A motion for summary decision is similar to summary judgment found at R. 4:46-2. The motion for summary judgment "shall be served with briefs, a statement of material facts, with or without supporting affidavits." R. 4:46-2(a). "The statement of material facts shall set forth in separately numbered paragraphs a concise statement of each material fact as to which the moving party contends there is no genuine issue, together with a citation to the portion of the motion record establishing the fact or demonstrating that it is uncontroverted." Ibid.

The Supreme Court has held that when deciding a motion for summary judgment:

[a] determination whether there exists a `genuine issue' of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995).]

The burden is on the moving party to exclude all reasonable doubt as to the existence of any genuine issue of material fact; and all inferences of doubt are drawn against the moving party and in favor of the non-moving party. Saldana v. DiMedio, 275 N.J.Super. 488, 494 (App. Div. 1994). Thus, the critical question is "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require [a hearing] or whether it is so one sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 533.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7C-2, authority to establish graduation requirements is vested in local boards of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:7C-4 provides as follows:

All students who meet State and local graduation requirements shall receive a State endorsed diploma; provided, however, that the Commissioner of Education shall approve any State endorsed diploma which utilizes the comprehensive assessment techniques as provided in section 3 of P.L. 1979, c. 241 (C.18A:7C-3).

The New Jersey Department of Education has adopted regulations requiring district boards of education to develop, adopt, and implement requirements for a State endorsed diploma. N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.1 and 6A:8-5.2. Local graduation requirements set forth in these regulations must "include participation in a local program of study of not fewer than 110 credits." N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.1. Under these same regulations, districts may adopt graduation standards requiring a student to earn more credits than the State minimum in order to receive a State endorsed diploma.

In this matter there is no genuine issue of material fact. Petitioner completed 121 credits by the end of the 2006-2007 academic year as a student in the Jersey City school district. This district requires the completion of 140 credits to graduate. Petitioner, by her own admission, does not have the 140 credits to graduate at the end of the 2006-2007 academic year from the District schools.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

V.	:
	:	Docket No.: D24-07
CRAIG DANNELLY TUCKERTON BOARD OF EDUCATION OCEAN COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Craig Dannelly, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. The school official did not provide an answer to the Commission's OTSC and has failed to file the disclosure statements.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore, the Commission found that the school official's failure to file the disclosure statements after receipt of the OTSC constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of suspension until the school official files the disclosure statements, removal if the disclosure statements are not filed within 30 days of the Commissioner's decision on penalty, and censure if the disclosure statements are filed prior to issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School

Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The school official has not filed the disclosure statements as of the date of this decision. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore, the Commission finds that the school official's failure to file the disclosure statements after receipt of the OTSC constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Craig Dannelly violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that this school official was given ample opportunity to provide the complete disclosure statements. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of suspension until the school official files the disclosure statements, removal if the disclosure statements are not filed within 30 days of the Commissioner's decision on penalty, and censure if the disclosure statements are filed prior to issuance of the Commissioner's decision.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within 13 days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, the school official may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Tom Wyatt, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. Through his attorney, Robert J. Hagerty, Esquire, the school official filed a response to the OTSC on December 5, 2007. The school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. DWIGHT MOXIE FREEDOM ACADEMY BOARD OF TRUSTEES CAMDEN COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Dwight Moxie, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. Through his attorney, Robert J. Hagerty, Esquire, the school official filed a response to the OTSC on December 5, 2007. The school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Dwight Moxie violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. V.	:
	:	Docket No.: D04-07
CARY JOSHI FREEDOM ACADEMY BOARD OF TRUSTEES CAMDEN COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Cary Joshi, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. Through his attorney, Robert J. Hagerty, Esquire, the school official filed a response to the OTSC on December 5, 2007. The school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed the disclosure statements on December 4, 2007. The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Cary Joshi violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within 13 days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, the school official may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Karen Moros, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The school official filed the completed disclosure statements on December 6, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a residency appeal on behalf of her daughter, K.T., who was enrolled as a kindergarten student in the Hamilton Township School District in September 2006. The respondent sought reimbursement of tuition for the period of K.T.'s alleged ineligible attendance. Petitioner failed to appear for three hearing dates in August, September and November 2007; ex parte proofs were presented by the respondent at a hearing on November 21, 2007.

The ALJ found that: petitioner failed to prosecute her appeal, leaving no basis to consider overturning the residency determination of the respondent Board; respondent's proofs as to ineligibility and tuition rate were convincing and satisfy its burden of proof for the counterclaim. The ALJ concluded that petitioner must pay the respondent tuition in the amount of $9,443 for the period of ineligible attendance.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ, adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, ordered petitioner to compensate the Board for tuition owed, and dismissed the petition.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. In the Initial Decision, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) advises that the petitioner failed to appear at the November 20, 2007 hearing scheduled in this case – notwithstanding the two notices that had been sent to her at the address listed in her petition. Respondent did appear at the hearing and submitted proofs, e.g., Exhibit R-7, supporting its claim for tuition.[1]

Having received no explanation from the petitioner for her failure to appear at the hearing, the ALJ recommends dismissal of the petition and the granting of respondent's counterclaim for tuition. He has returned the file to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4 – along with copies of the notifications that were sent to the parties by the OAL regarding the November 30, 2007 hearing date.[2]

[1] The Commissioner does not have a transcript of the November 20, 2007,ex parte hearing.

[2] On page 2 of the ALJ's decision, it states that notices of the hearings were sent to both the address in Hamilton which was set forth in S.T.'s petition and the address in Trenton which respondent contends is S.T.'s actual residence. Upon examination of the file, the Commissioner notes that there is no record of notices being sent to the Trenton address.

No exceptions have been filed by petitioner during the period of time allowed under N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4(a).

The Commissioner consequently adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case – recommending dismissal of the petition with prejudice and awarding respondent tuition in the amount of $9,443.00 as requested in its counter-claim.

IT IS SO ORDERED. [3]

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE

No appearance by or for petitioner

Dennis M. DeSantis, Esq., for respondent (Destribats, Campbell, DeSantis, Magee & Staub, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 3, 2008 Decided: January 7, 2008

BEFORE ISRAEL D. DUBIN, ALJ:

S.T. appeals the Hamilton Township Board of Education's determination that her daughter, K.T., is not entitled to a free public education in the Hamilton Township School District because she is not domiciled in the district. The Board has filed a counterclaim seeking S.T.'s payment of tuition for the number of days K.T. attended school in the district.

The Board notified S.T. of its determination on June 7, 2007, and S.T. filed her petition of appeal directly with the Commissioner of Education on June 18, 2007. The Board filed its answer and counterclaim on June 27, 2007, and the matter was then transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case on June 28, 2007.

The hearing was scheduled for August 29, 2007, at which time S.T. failed to appear. However, when the Board raised the possibility that S.T. might not have received notice because there had been a fire at her purported Hamilton Township address, the matter was adjourned and rescheduled for September 18, 2007. Although notice of the rescheduled hearing was sent not only to the Hamilton address, but to a Trenton address as well, S.T. failed to appear. At that time, the matter was given a peremptory hearing date of November 20, 2007, but notwithstanding adequate notice, S.T. once again failed to appear.

Given the fact that the Board had, with its answer to S.T.'s petition, filed a counterclaim seeking S.T.'s payment of tuition for the number of days K.T. had attended school in the district, an ex parte hearing was held and concluded. Although the record remained open to allow S.T. an opportunity to explain her non-appearance by the close of the next business day, no such explanation was received and the record closed November 21, 2007. The record was reopened on January 3, 2008, in order to determine whether S.T. had filed a petition of appeal with or requested an opportunity to appear before the Board and, if so, whether the Board had taken any formal action. The record was closed later that same day upon receipt of the requested information.

On September 6, 2006, S.T. enrolled her five-year-old daughter, K.T., at the Langtree Elementary School in Hamilton Township. At that time, S.T. filled out a pupil enrollment form listing K.T.'s address as "1010 Silver Ct., Hamilton Sq., NJ 08690" and her address as "1010 Silver Ct., Trenton, NJ 08690." She also signed an affidavit in which she stated that she and her children[1] were living with her cousin, Danielle

[1] S.T.'s two other children, Ki.T. and G.B., were later voluntarily withdrawn from the school district.

Kornegay, and that the children were not residing with her in the school district for the purpose of receiving a free education. Ms. Kornegay, in turn, signed a host family affidavit in which she stated that S.T. and her children were permanently domiciled at her home.

Testifying on behalf of the school district was Albert Offredo, who has been an investigator for the Board's Central Registration Office for the past thirteen years. Prior to taking this position he served as a Hamilton Township police officer for twenty-five years, working as a detective – and conducting numerous surveillances – for eleven of those years.

On Monday, May 14, 2007, Offredo was assigned to investigate whether K.T. was domiciled in the school district. He began his investigation the following day, Tuesday, May 15, 2007, conducting surveillance of the residence at 1010 Silver Court between 7:45 a.m. and 9:00 a.m. When he did not see anyone leave the house, he called the Langtree School and was informed that K.T. was in attendance.

On Wednesday, May 16, 2007, Offredo conducted surveillance of a house at 96 Klagg Avenue, Trenton, that S.T. had listed as her prior residence. Offredo arrived at approximately 7:30 a.m. and approximately one hour later, at 8:35 a.m., he saw an adult female and young child get into a green Dodge van and drive straight to the Langtree School. The young child was subsequently identified by school authorities as K.T. Further investigation disclosed that the van was registered to K.T.'s father, L.T.

On Thursday, May 17, 2007, Offredo returned to 1010 Silver Court and waited from 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 a.m. for the adult female and child to emerge. When he did not see anyone leave the house, he called the Langtree School and was advised that K.T. was in attendance.

Offredo conducted a second surveillance later that same day at the Langtree School. At approximately 3:30 p.m., he watched K.T. get into the green Dodge van, which was being driven by an adult female, and then followed the van from the school to 96 Klagg Avenue, where the adult female and K.T. exited the vehicle and entered the residence.

On Monday, May 21, 2007, Offredo arrived at 96 Klagg Avenue at 7:40 a.m. At approximately 8:30 a.m., he watched the adult female and K.T. leave in the green Dodge van and followed them to the Langtree School, where K.T. exited the van and entered the school.

On Tuesday, May 22, 2007, Offredo returned to 1010 Silver Court and waited from 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 a.m. for the adult female and K.T. to emerge. When they did not emerge by 9:00 a.m., he called the Langtree School and was advised that K.T. was in attendance.

Later that same day, at approximately 3:15 p.m., Offredo watched as K.T. exited the school and got into the green Dodge van. He followed the van through the streets of Hamilton Township and Trenton, arriving at 96 Klagg Avenue at approximately 3:40 p.m. At that time he observed the adult female and K.T. enter the residence and, after waiting an additional twenty minutes, terminated the surveillance at 4:00 p.m.

On Thursday, May 24, 2007, Offredo arrived at 96 Klagg Avenue at 7:30 a.m. At approximately 8:36 a.m., the adult female and K.T. left in the green Dodge van and drove directly to the Langtree School, arriving at 8:50 a.m. K.T. exited the van and entered the school. Offredo repeated this surveillance on Tuesday, May 29, and Wednesday, May 30, 2007, with the same result.

Offredo conducted his eleventh and final surveillance the afternoon of May 30. At 3:32 p.m., K.T. was picked up by an adult female driving a Toyota Corolla. Offredo followed the vehicle through the streets of Hamilton Township and Trenton to 96 Klagg Avenue, where K.T. exited the car and entered the house. Further investigation disclosed that the Corolla was registered to Danielle Kornegay.

By letter dated June 7, 2007, and sent to both addresses (Exhibits R-5 and R-6), John E. Conner, the Board's attendance/residency officer, advised S.T. that K.T. had been found to be ineligible to attend the Hamilton Township schools because she was not domiciled within the school district. In this letter, Mr. Conner further advised S.T. that > [i]f an appeal is filed with the Commissioner and the applicant does not sustain the burden of demonstrating entitlement to attend the schools of the district, or the applicant abandons the appeal through withdrawal, failure to prosecute or any means other than settlement, the applicant may be assessed, by order of the Commissioner, enforceable in Superior Court, tuition for any period of ineligible attendance, including the initial 21 day period[2] and the period during the which the appeal was pending before the Commissioner.

Approximately two weeks later, on June 19, 2007, Mr. Conner sent S.T. a second letter (R-7) notifying her that since her "application did not support [her] claim for enrollment," she was being assessed residence tuition for K.T.'s attendance at the school district's Langtree School from September 5, 2007 to June 18, 2007. Since tuition is calculated on the basis of 1/180 of the school district's total annual per pupil cost of $9,443, or $52.46 per day, and K.T. was enrolled in the district for all 180 days, S.T. was directed to pay the district the total amount of $9,443.

When a party fails to appear for a hearing despite having received adequate notice of the proceedings, the appearing party may ask the administrative law judge for permission to proceed through the presentation of ex parte proofs. If, after holding the matter for one day, the judge does not receive from the absent party an explanation for the failure to appear, and the circumstances require a decision on the merits, the judge may then issue an initial decision on the merits based on the ex parte proofs presented. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c). New Jersey Real Estate Commission v. Grennor, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (REC) 29. Since S.T. failed to submit an explanation for her absences on the three scheduled days of hearing, I CONCLUDE that the Board is entitled to an initial decision on the merits based on the proofs presented at hearing.

[2] Among other things, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 provides that a student shall not be removed from school during the 21-day period in which a resident may contest a board of education's decision.

The issue in this matter is whether K.T. was entitled to a free education under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, which provides that public schools shall be free to persons over five and under twenty years of age who are "domiciled within the school district." See V.R. o/b/o A.R. v. Hamburg Bd. of Educ., 2 N.J.A.R. 283, 287 (Educ. 1980), aff'd, State Bd., 1981 S.L.D. 1533, rev'd on other grounds, sub nom Rabinowitz v. New Jersey State Bd. of Educ., 550 F. Supp. 481 (D.N.J. 1982) (New Jersey requires local domicile, as opposed to mere residence, in order for a student to receive a free education).

Generally speaking, domicile is the place of a person's abode where he or she has the present intention of remaining and to which, if absent, he or she intends to return. Mercadante v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971). A person may have multiple residences, but only one domicile at a time; as such, the residence may coincide with domicile, but does not alone determine domicile. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 251 (1955).

"In a strict legal sense, the domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving." In re Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374 (Law Div. 1991) (quoting Kurilla v. Roth, 132 N.J.L. 213, 215 (Sup. Ct. 1944)); see also Mercadante, supra, 111 N.J. Super. at 39. Thus, domicile is what is regarded as an individual's true and permanent home. In re Jaffe, 74 N.J. 86, 90-91 (1977).

The question of domicile is one of fact and must be determined on a case-by-case basis. Lea v. Lea, 18 N.J. 1, 7 (1955). And in the present matter, there is absolutely no evidence that S.T. established even so much as a residence, much less a domicile, in Hamilton Township. Stated another way, the undisputed evidence establishes that S.T. and K.T. were domiciled in the City of Trenton throughout the period of time K.T. attended school in Hamilton Township school district.

Mr. Offredo credibly testified that he conducted three random surveillances of 1010 Silver Court in Hamilton Township without ever seeing K.T. leave the residence in the morning to go to school. On the other hand, he conducted five random surveillances at 96 Klagg Avenue in Trenton and on each occasion saw K.T. leave the house and be driven to school in a green Dodge van registered to her father. What is more, he also conducted three random surveillances of the Langtree School and on each occasion saw K.T. leave school and be driven to 96 Klagg Avenue; twice in the green Dodge van and once in a Toyota Corolla registered to Danielle Kornegay.

After careful consideration of the record before me, I FIND that S.T. and K.T. were at all relevant times residents of and domiciled in Trenton, and therefore CONCLUDE that K.T. was not entitled to a free public education in the Hamilton Township school district during the 2006-2007 school year.

Under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2), a board of education is entitled to recover tuition from the parent of a child found ineligible to attend a school in its district. In such cases, "[t]uition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance... ." Ibid. Here, it is undisputed and I therefore FIND that the school district's total annual per pupil cost for the 2006-2007 school year was $9,443.00 and that K.T. attended the Langtree School for the entire school year. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that S.T. should be assessed tuition costs in that amount.

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that S.T.'s petition of appeal should be and is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. And it is further ORDERED that the Board's counterclaim for recovery of tuition costs associated with K.T.'s attendance at the Langtree School in the Hamilton Township school district during the 2006-2007 school year in the amount of $9,443.00 be and is hereby GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 20-1/08

IN THE MATTER OF JEREMIAH GRACE, :

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY. : DECISION

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) – forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 solely for review of the Commission's recommended penalty – have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.3.

In his exceptions, the respondent reiterates his arguments before the Commission as to why he should not be penalized for failing to file the requisite statement in a timely manner, noting that: 1) his omission was unintended and due to lack of prior experience and familiarity with the requirements of public office; 2) the public interest was not harmed because he, in fact, had no conflicting interest to report; and 3) he regrets his oversight and has taken steps to ensure that it does not recur.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and admonishes the respondent for failure to timely file the requisite statement, in that such delay has resulted in a waste of administrative and adjudicative time by local, county and State education officials. While the Commissioner appreciates the respondent's good intentions, the fact remains that the Commission found a violation to have occurred, and the Commissioner cannot disagree that a penalty is warranted even where the violation resulted from oversight rather than deliberate disregard of the law.[1]

[1] The Commissioner notes that reprimand is the least of the penalties available for imposition under the School Ethics Act.

Accordingly, the above-named respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IT IS SO ORDERED. [2]

SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
V.	:	Docket No.: D25-07
JEREMIAH GRACE ELIZABETH BOARD OF EDUCATION UNION COUNTY	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO FILE DISCLOSURE STATEMENTS

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause (OTSC) issued on November 20, 2007, through regular and certified mail return receipt requested, directing Jeremiah Grace, a "school official" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23 of the School Ethics Act, to show cause as to why the Commission should not find the school official in violation of the School Ethics Act, (Act) N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., for failing to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. In its letter enclosing the OTSC, the Commission provided notification that this school official had 20 days to respond to the OTSC, that the Commission would discuss this matter at its December 18, 2007 meeting, that the school official had the right to attend the meeting, and that the school official could be found in violation of the Act and receive a penalty up to removal. Through his attorney, John W. Bartlett, Esquire, the school official provided an answer to the Commission and filed the disclosure statements on December 17, 2007.

The school official did not appear at the Commission's meeting of December 18, 2007, at which time the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also found that the material facts were not in dispute and, therefore the Commission found that the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements was a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 of the School Ethics Act requires each school official to file personal/relative and financial disclosure statements and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26 requires each school official to file the personal/relative and financial disclosure statements with the School Ethics Commission. The deadline to file these disclosure statements was April 30, 2007 for school officials in office since January 30, 2006 and 30 days from swearing-in or start of employment for newly elected or appointed board members and administrators. The School Ethics Commission was advised by the County Superintendent that this school official did not file the disclosure statements as required by the Act. The Commission notes that the school official filed an answer to the OTSC and filed the disclosure statements on December 17, 2007.

The Commission finds probable cause to credit the allegation that the school official violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission also finds that the material facts are not in dispute and, therefore the school official's failure to timely file the disclosure statements constitutes a clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26.

DECISION/PENALTY RECOMMENDATION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Jeremiah Grace violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 and 26. The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a sanction of reprimand.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within 13 days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, the school official may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF JACQUELINE STIVALA, BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PEQUANNOCK, MORRIS COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) – forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 solely for review of the Commission's recommended penalty – have been reviewed, as have comments filed by the respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:6C-18.3.

In her comments, the respondent does not take exception to the decision of the Commission. Rather, she notes that she filed the requisite statement incorrectly due to distraction caused by a recent personal loss, but rectified her error by refiling upon receiving the Commission's Order to Show Cause and now seeks to ensure that she is in full compliance.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and admonishes the respondent for failure to file the requisite statement in a timely manner – such delay having resulted in a waste of administrative and adjudicative time by local, county and State education officials. While the Commissioner appreciates the respondent's circumstances and good intentions, the fact remains that the Commission found a violation to have occurred, and the Commissioner cannot disagree that a penalty is warranted in light of school officials' obligation – regardless of personal difficulties – to comply with the law while they are holding office.[1]

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Yamira Ramirez
Trenton Board of Education

This SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT ("Agreement") is made between the Petitioner, Board of Education of the City of Trenton ("Board"), and the Respondent, Yamira Ramirez ("Ramirez").

WHEREAS, the Board filed tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education, Agency Docket No. 459-12/06, OAL Docket No. EDUTH 217-07S ("tenure proceeding"), in which Ramirez was charged with engaging in conduct unbecoming of a Board employee, specifically, poor attendance, tardiness, leaving work early without signing out, failure to call in absences, making false entries in the sign in/sign out book, and poor work performance; and

WHEREAS, Ramirez denies that she left work early, failed to call her in absences, made false entries in the sign in/sign out book, performed her work poorly; and

WHEREAS, Ramirez asserts that her absences and tardiness were justified because of personal and family illnesses; and

WHEREAS, one day of the tenure proceedings have been completed with presentation of some of the Board's evidence and Ramirez has not had the opportunity to present her evidence; and

WHEREAS, the Board and Ramirez ("the Parties") feel it is in the best interest of all involved and all issues related to the tenure proceeding be settled allowing for the expeditious resolution of this matter saving both Parties the cost and uncertainty of continued litigation;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the covenants and mutual promises contained herein, it is hereby agreed as follows:

1. The Parties agree that Ramirez will not receive back pay for the one hundred twenty (120) days for the period of suspension which occurred between December 19, 2006 and April 18, 2007 in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6;

2. The Board agrees to dismiss the tenure charges against Ramirez;

3. Ramirez agrees to submit a letter of resignation effective December 31, 2007;

4. The Parties agree and covenant that neither party, nor any person, organization, or other entity on their behalf will file any charge, claim, lawsuit against any Party based upon the fact that the Board filed tenure charges or that Ramirez defended those charges;

5. The Parties recognize that each of them has had input into the drafting of this Agreement and agree that if there should arise a dispute as to its terms, this Agreement shall not be construed against either party based upon the identity of its drafters;

6. The Parties understand that this Agreement and its validity is contingent upon the approval of Administrative Law Judge Solomon Metzger and the Commissioner of Education, and that if any terms of this Agreement are rejected, this Agreement shall be deemed null and void, and in such event, neither Parties' position in relation to the tenure charge shall be prejudiced and the matter shall be returned to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing in relation to the tenure proceeding, and that in such event, the Parties may again attempt to settle the matter in a manner which is satisfactory to Administrative Law Judge Solomon Metzger and the Commissioner of Education.

7. The Parties request that the tenure hearing be held in abeyance in order to obtain the approval of this Agreement by Administrative Law Judge Solomon Metzger and the Commissioner of Education, and in the event that approval is not obtained by the proposed effective date of Ramirez' resignation, but is later approved, Ramirez is not entitled to salary payments during the pendency of obtaining approval of this Agreement after December 31, 2007 (the proposed effective date of Ramirez' resignation);

8. SYNOPSIS

The Central Jersey South Officials Association (CJSOA) filed a Petition of Appeal seeking reversal of the final decision of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) denying its application for certification as an NJSIAA-approved basketball officials' association. The CJSOA contended that NJSIAA's decision was made on a basis (determination of need) lacking authorization in law and without according CJSOA its right to due process. NJSIAA countered that the denial was consistent with applicable NJSIAA rules and represented a lawful discretionary determination of the Association's Executive Committee.

The Commissioner upheld the NJSIAA's decision and dismissed the appeal, finding that: NJSIAA did not engage in improper rulemaking; CJSOA's application received fair and proper consideration; NJSIAA did not act in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in denying CJSOA's application; and CJSOA was not denied due process in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

For Respondent, Steven P. Goodell, Esq. (Herbert, Van Ness, Cayci & Goodell)

This matter came before the Commissioner of Education on August 24, 2007, through the filing of a petition of appeal by the Central Jersey South Officials Association (CJSOA). In its petition, the CJSOA sought reversal of the final decision of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) denying its application to become a "certified chapter of the NJSIAA," contending that the NJSIAA made this determination without authorization in law and without according the CJSOA its right to due process. Following the CJSOA's correction of technical deficiencies in its petition, submission of the record on appeal, and receipt of the NJSIAA's Answer to the Petition, the parties were directed to proceed with briefing in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.3. The CJSOA's brief was duly submitted, and the record before the Commissioner closed on November 2, 2007, upon timely filing of the NJSIAA's responsive brief.

OPERATIVE FACTS

1. On January 25, 2007, CJSOA legal counsel and founding member George T. Kotch, Esq. wrote to NJSIAA Assistant Director Larry White applying for certification of the CJSOA as an NJSIAA-approved "basketball chapter" beginning with the 2007-08 school year. He represented that CJSOA's assignor (Mr. Anthony Celentano) had previously learned from Mr. White that "there was not a formal document but the procedure for 'Approval of Officials Chapter' was outlined in the official's handbook, page one (1), and that was the beginning of the process." (Record on Appeal, Item 3)

2. The 2006-07 NJSIAA Handbook (at 115) includes a chapter entitled "NJSIAA Minimum Requirements for Review of Officials' Chapters," which is replicated in the official's handbook (at 1). That chapter in its entirety states as follows:

> 1. The chapter must provide evidence of officiating experience of its membership, noting league, conference, or levels of competition and years of service.
> 2. The chapter must provide a list of their (sic) duly elected officers and membership.
> 3. The chapter must provide a copy of their (sic) Constitution and Bylaws for review by the NJSIAA.
> 4. The chapter must agree to grant the NJSIAA the final authority for testing, training, and evaluating procedures adopted by the chapter.
> 5. The chapter must provide an outline of their (sic) testing, training, and evaluating procedures for certification of prospective and present members. All members must pass an annual written examination, as approved by the NJSIAA.
> 6. The chapter must agree to comply with all the provisions of the Constitution, Bylaws, and Rules and Regulations of the NJSIAA; decisions of the Executive Committee of the NJSIAA; and the tenets of agreements effected by the Officials' Councils and the NJSIAA.
> 7. The Executive Committee may approve the certification of officials and/or officials' chapters in all sports; and the minimum requirements for testing, training and evaluating all officials.

3. Subsequent to its initial communication and in accordance with the understanding set forth at No. 1 above, the CJSOA provided the

NJSIAA with: a roster of its members, noting their years of experience and highest level of officiating; a listing of schools, leagues and special events to which the CJSOA had provided services; the CJSOA constitution and bylaws; a list of CJSOA officers; and the CJSOA's application form outlining the training/qualification process for membership in the CJSOA. (Record on Appeal, Items 5 through 8)

4. In a series of subsequent communications between CJSOA officials and NJSIAA Assistant Director White, the latter identified additional information needed before the application could be considered; the former provided what they believed to be responsive submissions. (Record on Appeal, Items 9 through 13 and 18)

5. On May 4, 2007, NJSIAA Assistant Director White wrote to the member schools of its Colonial Valley Conference (CVC) and Burlington County Scholastic League (BCSL), advising them of the CJSOA's application, and requesting that they complete and return by May 18, 2007 an accompanying survey so as to enable the NJSIAA to determine if there was a need for a new NJSIAA-affiliated basketball officials' association. In making this request, Mr. White referenced an unnamed 1995 decision of the Commissioner of Education upholding NJSIAA's determination not to approve a new basketball association because, among other reasons, insufficient need had been demonstrated. (Record on Appeal, Item 16) The CJSOA contends that it had no prior knowledge of this survey. (Petition of Appeal, ¶7)

6. On May 8, 2007, the CJSOA president wrote to the recipients of the NJSIAA survey, objecting to the manner in which the NJSIAA characterized the CJSOA's application and offering its own perspective to the surveyed schools. (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 6, citing to Record on Appeal, Item 19)

7. Twenty-two (22) survey responses were received (Record on Appeal, Item 17), representing all member schools in Mercer County and 11 out of 19 member schools in Burlington County. (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 5)

8. On May 21, 2007, Assistant Director White wrote to CJSOA Assignor Celentano to advise him that NJSIAA staff would be recommending against Executive Committee approval of the CJSOA's application at the committee meeting to be held on June 6, 2007, which the CJSOA was invited to attend for purposes of addressing the committee and answering any questions it might have; by copy of the letter, representatives of NJSIAA's currently affiliated basketball officials' associations serving Mercer and Burlington counties

(Central Jersey Board 193 [Board 193] and Camden Board 34 [Board 34]) were also invited to appear. The reasons given by Mr. White for his recommendation included: the lack of need for an additional basketball officials' association; survey results indicating that member schools were happy with existing services; a roster of CJSOA members that was significantly less substantial than represented (107), due to a large number of cadets (23) and several officials (51) who currently belonged to an existing association that did not permit dual membership; and satisfaction with the current arrangement on the part of the four schools served by the CJSOA's assignor. (Record on Appeal, Item 2) The CJSOA contends that this communication was "the very first time" it was informed that review of its application would be based on a demonstration of need. (Petition of Appeal, ¶9)

9. On June 6, 2007, the NJSIAA Executive Committee met as scheduled. Representatives of the CJSOA – including its legal counsel, president and assignor – appeared before the committee and spoke in favor of the CJSOA's application, countering adverse arguments and additionally requesting an adjournment on grounds that they did not have sufficient time in which to respond to the NJSIAA's requirement for a showing of need as indicated in Assistant Director White's May 21 letter. Representatives of Board 193 and Board 34 stated their view that current arrangements were satisfactory to them and to the NJSIAA's member schools, and expressed concern about the quality and impact of a third organization; NJSIAA Assistant Director White and the Board 193 representative also expressed concern about a significant portion of the current CJSOA membership being a "break-off" or "splinter" group of Board 193 – individuals utilized by the CJSOA assignor, who had failed in a bid to become the assignor for Board 193 – rather than a new group of officials. (The Board 193 representative additionally raised a question about whether many of CJSOA's purported "members" had even agreed to be represented as such.) Following presentations, inquiry and debate, the committee was not persuaded by the CJSOA's request for a continuance, and voted 23-6 (with one abstention) to deny the application. (Record on Appeal, Item 1) The instant appeal then ensued, the CJSOA's petition having been filed on August 24, 2007.

THE CJSOA'S POSITION ON APPEAL

The CJSOA first challenges the validity of the NJSIAA's reliance on a showing of need, contending that nothing in the NJSIAA's authorizing statute (N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3) or in the NJSIAA Constitution and Bylaws requires – or even identifies – that such a showing must be made in order for an officials' organization to be recognized as a chapter of the NJSIAA. (Petitioner's Brief at 3-5) According to the CJSOA, the NJSIAA treated the "need" standard as though it were a rule – which it cannot be because it was not published and filed with the Secretary of State as required by the New Jersey Supreme Court in precedent cited within Merry Heart Nursing & Conv. Home v. Dougherty, 131 N.J. Super. 412 (1974), at 418. (Id. at 5) Moreover, the CJSOA continues, the survey used by the NJSIAA to ascertain need was not even a useful instrument for this purpose, in that it failed to provide critical information about the CJSOA and stated neither the CJSOA's reasons for seeking NJSIAA chapter certification nor the benefits that would result from such certification. As a consequence, according to the CJSOA, the survey responses constituted "not a bench mark showing of a lack of a need (sic), but...rather a lackluster confirmation that the school districts were okay with the services that they had received thus far." (Id. at 5)

The CJSOA further contends that its due process rights were violated by the NJSIAA, first in the association's failure to inform CJSOA that a showing of need would be required for its application to be approved, and then in failing to allow the CJSOA an opportunity to obtain evidence once the "need" standard was made apparent. Asserting that it is fundamental to due process for a rule to be known to those to whom it applies – and for affected individuals/organizations to have a reasonable opportunity to timely respond to the rule's application – the CJSOA notes that it was not informed of the "need" standard until five months after it filed its initial application and that there were only 16 days between Assistant Director White's May 21, 2007 letter and the Executive Committee meeting of June 6, 2007. (Petitioner's Brief at 6-7)

To remedy these deficiencies, the CJSOA concludes, the Commissioner must either overturn the decision of the NJSIAA and grant the CJSOA's application, or send the application back to the NJSIAA Executive Committee for a new determination after the CJSOA has been given sufficient time to gather evidence demonstrating the need for an additional officials' association. (Petitioner's Brief at 7)

THE NJSIAA'S POSITION ON APPEAL

By way of background, the NJSIAA's brief instructs as follows: One of the NJSIAA's chief tasks – originating from the requirement in its Constitution for uniformity in the arrangements and control of high school athletic contests – is to see that such contests are appropriately officiated, thus requiring it to ensure that there are a sufficient number of competent, trained officials in each sport in each region of the state. The NJSIAA achieves this end by entering into standard three-year contracts ("affiliation agreements") with independent associations of officials in particular sports, which must at a minimum meet the requirements established by NJSIAA regulations (Handbook at 115; Officials' Handbook at 1). Once an officials' association enters an affiliation agreement with the NJSIAA, its members can be hired during the term of the agreement as independent contractors by NJSIAA member schools to officiate varsity interscholastic athletic competitions, and either party may terminate the agreement on six months' notice.[1] In accordance with the afore-cited NJSIAA regulation, the decision to enter into an affiliation agreement with a particular officials' association is left to the discretion of the Executive Committee. The committee will typically decline to so enter if there is no need for an officials' association in a given area or if recognizing a new association would cause problems with currently contracted associations – as occurred in 1995 when the committee determined not to enter into an agreement with an applicant basketball officials' association, in a decision upheld by the Commissioner. New Jersey Basketball Officials' Association v. NJSIAA, decided August 24, 1995 (Record on Appeal, Item 15) (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 2-4)

[1] The NJSIAA notes that members of unaffiliated officials' associations are still free to provide referees and umpires for forms of competition other than high school varsity, such as recreation leagues, summer leagues, and middle school, college and university competitions.

With particular respect to the CJSOA application, the NJSIAA states that it currently has affiliation agreements with two officials' associations covering the Mercer-Burlington County region: 1) Central Jersey Board 193, which covers high school basketball games in Mercer and recreational games in Burlington, has "a full complement of officials" and has "no problem providing officials for NJSIAA member schools;" and 2) Camden Board 34, which provides officials for contests in Camden, Salem, Gloucester and Burlington Counties and is likewise "fully staffed," with "no problem providing basketball officials to schools in Burlington County" – for which it has 92 registered officials. (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 4-5) The NJSIAA further opines that: 1) based on the results of the survey indicated under Operative Facts above (page 2, No. 3), the officiating needs of its member schools in the region are being met and there are no problems with the existing associations; 2) although the CJSOA assignor – who in March 2006 unsuccessfully sought to be elected assignor for Board 193 – is utilized by four high schools in Northern Burlington County, he assigns to those games officials who are members of affiliated officials' associations, such as Boards 193 and 34; and 3) fifty-one officials listed on the roster of CJSOA are actually members of Board 193, which prohibits dual membership. (Id. at 5-6)

In response to the CJSOA's arguments on appeal, the NJSIAA counters that it is not a State agency and its rules and regulations are not required to be promulgated pursuant to the Administrative Procedure Act, citing B.C. v. Bd. of Ed. of the Cumberland Regional School District, 220 N.J. Super. 214, 235 (App. Div 1987); rather they have been approved by the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3. (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 2, 9). The regulation at issue,[2] the NJSIAA contends, is therefore fully valid, and under it (at ¶7), the NJSIAA Executive Committee is clearly vested with the discretion to approve, or not approve the certification of officials' chapters meeting the stated (at ¶1-6) minimum requirements for consideration. The existence of these threshold requirements, the NJSIAA continues, does not preclude the committee from considering other relevant factors, provided it does so in a reasonable manner – as the Commissioner expressly found it to have done in New Jersey Basketball Officials' Association, supra. According to the NJSIAA, the decision to accept or reject an application is, in effect, a decision on whether or not to enter into a contract with an association, which has no "right" to be recognized by the NJSIAA notwithstanding that it qualifies for consideration. Moreover, the NJSIAA states, to the extent that the CJSOA takes issue with the survey of affected schools conducted by the NJSIAA, the results were more than sufficient to inform the Executive Committee that member schools were satisfied with the status quo; more importantly, the survey results were but one factor in the committee's decision. (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 8-10, referencing Record on Appeal, Items 1-2)

The NJSIAA further counters that it did, in fact, provide the CJSOA with all of the due process to which it was entitled. Even though the CJSOA had no protectable right at stake, the NJSIAA asserts, the NJSIAA accorded it both advance notice and opportunity to be heard by the decision-making body – the two fundamental elements of due process. (Citing Jamgochian v. New Jersey State Parole Board, 394 N.J. Super. 517, 533 (App. Div. 2007), itself citing Goss v. Lopez, 419 U.S. 565, 579 (1975).) The NJSIAA points out that the CJSOA was aware in early May that NJSIAA staff were surveying member schools to determine the need for an additional affiliate association; in fact, the CJSOA contacted those same schools on May 8 on its own behalf in response to the survey. The NJSIAA also observes that written notice of the NJSIAA staff's recommendation to the Executive Committee was mailed to the CJSOA on May 21, sixteen days prior to the committee meeting; there, at a hearing recorded and transcribed by a certified court reporter, the CJSOA was represented by counsel and had the opportunity, prior to the committee's consideration and vote, to present argument – including lengthy statements by its president and assignor – as well as cross examine witnesses. To the extent that the CJSOA contends that 16 days was insufficient time for it to prepare a showing of need, the NJSIAA asserts, such time frame was more than adequate to enable the CJSOA to prepare a presentation appropriate for an executive hearing – particularly where the CJSOA had notice of NJSIAA staff concerns, and of a survey intended to gauge need – at least a month before the June 6 meeting.[3] (NJSIAA's Reply Brief at 10-12)

[3] By way of illustrative example, the NJSIAA contrasts the 16 days accorded here with the 10-day periods associated with its own Controversies Committee when functioning in a quasi-judicial capacity, and with applications for development under the Municipal Land Use Law (N.J.S.A. 40:55D-12).

DETERMINATION

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner determines to uphold the decision of the NJSIAA and dismiss the CJSOA's appeal.

The NJSIAA is a voluntary association of public and nonpublic schools, organized pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3, to oversee athletics for its member schools in accordance with a constitution, bylaws, rules and regulations approved by the Commissioner of Education and adopted annually by member schools, for which they become school policy enforceable by the NJSIAA.

It is well-established that the Commissioner's scope of review in matters involving NJSIAA determinations is appellate in nature. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3; Board of Education of the City of Camden v. NJSIAA, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 182, 188. That is, the Commissioner may not overturn an action by the NJSIAA in applying its rules, absent a demonstration by the petitioner that the Association applied such rules in a patently arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner. B.C. v. Cumberland Regional School District, 220 N.J. Super. 214, 231-232 (App. Div. 1987); Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 297 (App. Div. 1960). Nor may the Commissioner substitute her own judgment for that of the NJSIAA, even if she were to decide differently in a de novo hearing, where due process has been provided and where there is adequate basis for the decision reached by the NJSIAA committee. Dam Jin Koh and Hong Jun Kim v. NJSIAA, 1987 S.L.D. 259; see, also, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.4(a).

Moreover, this standard has been codified to provide clear notice to the public and regulated parties:[4]

> 1. If the NJSIAA has granted a petitioner due process and its decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record as a whole, the Commissioner shall not substitute his judgment for that of the NJSIAA, even if the Commissioner might judge otherwise in a de novo review.
> 2. The Commissioner shall not overturn NJSIAA's application of its own rules absent a demonstration by the petitioner that such rules were applied in an arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable manner. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.5(a).

Additionally, the New Jersey courts have spoken as to the narrow scope of "arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable" in the context of challenges such as that herein:

> In the law, "arbitrary" and "capricious" means having no rational basis.  Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached. (citations omitted) Bayshore Sew. Co. v. Dep't of Envt. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).

Thus, petitioners bringing claims against the NJSIAA bear a heavy burden, and, considering the record of this matter in light of the prescribed standard of review, the Commissioner cannot find that the CJSOA has met such burden herein.

Initially, the NJSIAA cannot be found to have engaged in improper rulemaking as alleged by the CJSOA, since the NJSIAA is not a State agency and its governing rules and regulations are not subject to the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3. Similarly unpersuasive is the CJSOA's claim that the NJSIAA unfairly applied a standard that was not reflected in published rules with which the CJSOA fully complied. By their own terms, the rules in question do not establish standards for NJSIAA approval of officials' associations, but merely delineate the minimum level of organizational information and evidence of willingness to submit to NJSIAA governance that an applicant association must provide to the committee in order to be eligible for consideration. The decision to approve an application, or not, is expressly left to the discretion of the Executive Committee, exercise of which the rules do not circumscribe in any way – thus allowing for evaluation of each individual application on a case-by-case basis in light of its unique character and particular attendant circumstances, subject only to the proviso that approval may not be denied arbitrarily or for unlawful reasons. In the present instance, the CJSOA's application did, in fact, receive the consideration to which it was entitled by virtue of passing the regulatory threshold, and the Commissioner can find nothing unreasonable or unlawful in the NJSIAA's subsequent evaluation of the application or its decision to deny approval, as reflected in both the staff recommendation to the Executive Committee and the deliberations of the committee itself.

Finally, the Commissioner must reject the CJSOA's central contention that it was denied due process in this matter. Nothing in law requires the NJSIAA to limit the discretion of its Executive Committee by codifying specific parameters for approval of officials' associations, and applicants for such approval have no cause for complaint where they have received reasonable notice of the basis for their review and opportunity to be heard before a decision is made on their application. In the present instance, the record belies the CJSOA's claims that it was surprised by and unprepared for the NJSIAA's consideration of need as a factor in evaluating its application: At least as early as May 4, 2007, through its survey of potentially affected schools, the NJSIAA placed the CJSOA on notice that it was considering whether there was, in fact, a need for creation of a new basketball officials' association; indeed, the CJSOA's own May 8, 2007 counter-memorandum to the surveyed schools recognized this purpose by providing what its president believed to be the clarifying and amplifying information necessary to convince survey respondents that, among other things, its application did, indeed, fill such a need.[5] Finally, even if it were true – which it is not – that the NJSIAA gave no indication that need would be a consideration until Assistant Director White wrote to the CJSOA on May 21, 2007 advising of his recommendation to the Executive Committee, the 16 days between that letter and the committee meeting on June 6, 2007 were entirely sufficient for the CJSOA to prepare a presentation countering the NJSIAA staff recommendation and challenging the anticipated opposition of existing associations, bearing in mind that the process for approval of an officials' association application is an executive review – not an adjudicative proceeding based on an adversarial evidentiary hearing. Indeed, the transcript of the committee meeting (Record on Appeal, Item 1) shows the CJSOA to have made just such a presentation, particularly through the extended and comprehensive arguments of its president and assignor – both of whom not only addressed opposing recommendations, but also proffered additional considerations of their own.

[5] To the extent that the CJSOA deems the NJSIAA survey instrument deficient as a tool for evaluating need, any such perceived deficiency was effectively remedied by the CJSOA's own communication with the surveyed schools. Similarly, to the extent that the CJSOA believes the survey was not sufficiently widely disseminated, as it argued before the Executive Committee (Record on Appeal, Item 1 at 10), it had ample time to register that complaint with the NJSIAA or make contact of its own, as it did with respect to the surveyed schools.

Accordingly, the Commissioner having found that the CJSOA was afforded the due process to which it was entitled and that the NJSIAA's decision denying approval of the CJSOA's application for certification was neither unreasonable nor contrary to law, the NJSIAA's decision is upheld and the petition of appeal dismissed.[6]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[7]

Date of Decision: 2/13/08

Date of Mailing: 2/13/08

[6] The Commissioner also dismisses NJSIAA Assistant Director Larry White as an individual respondent in this matter, since, as noted by the NJSIAA (Reply Brief at 12), Mr. White functioned solely as a staff member of the NJSIAA, whose executive body ultimately made the decision under appeal.

[7] This decision, as the final decision of the State administrative agency, may be appealed to the Superior Court. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.5.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured assistant principal employed by respondent in a twelve-month administrative position – appealed the district's withholding of her salary increment for the 2005-2006 school year. Petitioner contended that the Board violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 when it withheld her increment after the commencement of petitioner's work year and without prior notice of intent to withhold the increment. Petitioner filed a request for arbitration alleging that the increment withholding was disciplinary and without cause; respondent filed a petition with the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission claiming that the increment withholding was evaluative and not disciplinary, and therefore not subject to arbitration; arbitration was consequently stayed. Respondent asserts that this dispute is strictly procedural, and the petition should have been filed within ninety days of the Board's action denying petitioner her increment, but was not.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the petition was timely filed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d; the petitioner's school year coincides with the District's fiscal year, which begins on July 1; collective bargaining incremental increases in District administrative salaries for the 2005-2006 school year commenced on July 1, 2005; petitioner's salary increment had already vested by the time the respondent Board acted to withhold it; respondent's action reduced petitioner's compensation, which is not permitted absent the filing of tenure charges. The ALJ granted petitioner's motion for summary decision in her favor.

The Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, amplifying the ALJ's discussion of N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d and additionally citing Henry Pruitt et al. v. Board of Education of the City of Englewood, Bergen County with respect to withholding the increments of twelve-month employees.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

		DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF BRIDGETON, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions by the Board of Education (Board) were untimely filed and, consequently, are not considered herein.[1]

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that: 1) the petitioner's appeal was timely filed, and 2) the Board of Education's (Board) action to withhold the petitioner's increment cannot be sustained.

With respect to the timeliness of the appeal, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d works to ensure that a teaching staff member who sought arbitration in the belief that the withholding of his or her increment constituted discipline – and then had such arbitration enjoined when a dispute arose as to the nature of the withholding – would not be precluded by operation of the 90-day rule (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i)) from subsequent appeal to the Commissioner.

[1] Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, exceptions are due 13 days from the date the Initial Decision was mailed to the parties, on January 10, 2008 in the present instance. Although the Board's exceptions bear a face date of January 23, 2008, they were prepared for mailing on January 24, 2008, sent to the Commissioner by Federal Express Priority Overnight on Friday, January 25, 2008, and did not arrive at the Department until Monday, January 28, 2008. On February 1, 2008, the petitioner filed a timely reply to the Board's exceptions notwithstanding their late submission.

Viewing N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d in its larger context, the statutory framework clearly envisions that this provision will be triggered any time a dispute arises as to whether a teaching staff member's increment withholding is disciplinary in nature. N.J.S.A. 34:13A-26 establishes that:

> Disputes involving the withholding of an employee's increment by an employer for predominately disciplinary reasons shall be subject to the grievance procedures established pursuant to law and shall be subject to the provisions of section 8 of this act [N.J.S.A. 34:13A-29, binding arbitration as final step].

N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27 continues:

> a. If there is a dispute as to whether a transfer of an employee between work sites or withholding of an increment of a teaching staff member is disciplinary, the commission shall determine whether the basis for the transfer or withholding is predominantly disciplinary.
>
> b. If the commission determines that the basis for a transfer is predominately disciplinary, the commission shall have the authority to take reasonable action to effectuate the purposes of this act.
>
> c. If the commission determines that the basis for an increment withholding is predominately disciplinary, the dispute shall be resolved through the grievance procedures established pursuant to law and shall be subject to the provisions of section 8 of this act.
> d. If a dispute involving the reason for the withholding of a teaching staff member's increment is submitted to the commission pursuant to subsection a. of this section, and the commission determines that the reason for the increment withholding relates predominately to the evaluation of a teaching staff member's teaching performance, the teaching staff member may file a petition of appeal pursuant to *N.J.S.A.*18A:6-9 and *N.J.S.A.*18A:29-14, and the petition shall be deemed to be timely if filed within 90 days of notice of the commission's decision, or of the final judicial decision in any appeal from the decision of the commission, whichever date is later.

In the present instance, the petitioner sought arbitration on the posture that her increment was withheld for disciplinary reasons, and it was the Board's own responsive action – filing a petition with the Public Employment Relations Commission contending that the withholding was evaluative rather than disciplinary, so that arbitration should be enjoined – that created a dispute subject to the provisions of paragraph a. of N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27, so as concomitantly to trigger application of paragraph d. in the event the commission concurred with the Board's position. Therefore, as found by the ALJ, the petition of appeal in this matter cannot be held untimely filed and must be considered on its merits notwithstanding that it challenges the Board's action on procedural rather than substantive grounds.

With respect to the challenged action itself, the Commissioner must concur with the ALJ that – once the petitioner's increment vested on July 1, 2005, as it did based on her status as a twelve-month employee governed by applicable collective bargaining agreement and Board salary policy provisions – the plain language of statute prohibited reduction of her salary absent the filing of tenure charges; therefore, the Board's July 12, 2005 increment withholding action cannot stand. Henry Pruitt et al. v. Board of Education of the City of Englewood, Bergen County, Commissioner of Education Decision No. 262-93, decided October 25, 1993; affirmed with clarification, State Board of Education Decision No. 67-93, decided August 2, 1995.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, as amplified above, the Initial Decision of the OAL – granting the petitioner's motion for summary decision in her favor – is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Record Closed: December 20, 2007 Decided: January 3, 2008

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner appealed respondent's action withholding her incremental salary increase. The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was transmitted to the OAL on October 6, 2006, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision. Oral argument was held on August 21, 2007, and supplemental briefs were submitted thereafter. On December 20, 2007, limited testimony was taken from respondent's Business Administrator. The record closed on December 20, 2007.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts in this case are not in dispute. They are as follows.

Petitioner Giorgio (hereinafter referred to as "petitioner") is a tenured teaching staff member employed by the respondent, Bridgeton Board of Education (hereinafter referred to as "respondent or Board"). Petitioner currently serves, and at all times relevant herein including the 2004-05 school year and the 2005-06 school year, has served as Assistant Principal at Bridgeton High School for the Bridgeton School District. Petitioner serves, and has served during all relevant times set forth herein, as a twelve month administrator.

On or about June 29, 2005, petitioner met with High School Principal Irving Marshall and received her annual evaluation, which was signed by Principal Irving Marshall. Within the evaluation document is a section wherein the evaluator indicates if he is recommending the withholding of an increment. Principal Marshall did not recommend withholding petitioner's increment.

On July 12, 2005, the Bridgeton Board of Education voted to withhold petitioner's increment for the 2005-06 school year. Petitioner received no prior notice of the intent of the Board to act to consider withholding her increment at the July 12, 2005, meeting.

On or about July 13, 2005, petitioner received notice form the Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Victor Gilson, that the Bridgeton Board of Education had acted on July 12, 2005, to withhold her increment. Petitioner received no notice prior to July 13, 2005, that the respondent intended to withhold her increment.

Petitioner is a member of the Association of Bridgeton Administrators (ABA). A collective bargaining agreement for the ABA was in effect covering the period July 1, 2003, through June 30, 2006, at the time the Board acted to withhold petitioner's increment on July 12, 2005.

In accordance with the collective bargaining agreement between the Bridgeton Board of Education and the ABA, petitioner was on Step 5 of the Salary Guide for the HIGH SCHOOL ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL – 12 MONTH salary guide, and received a salary of $85,170 for the 2004-05 school year. Step 6 of the Salary Guide for the HIGH SCHOOL ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL – 12 MONTH provided for a salary of $89,541 for the 2005-06 school year.

Nicole M. Schoener, Business Administrator for the Bridgeton District, submitted a certification wherein she stated that she "added" the increment to each administrator's salary on July 15. The administrators received their 2005-2006 increments with that paycheck. Schoener subsequently provided testimony clarifying this statement. Schoener testified that July 15 was the date of the paycheck. Administrators at Bridgeton were paid bimonthly. The July 15 paycheck covered the period July 1 through July 15.

Petitioner was paid a salary of $85,170 by respondent for the 2005-06 school year, which was the same salary that petitioner received for the 2004-05 school year.

On August 3, 2005, the ABA filed a grievance on behalf of Dorian Giorgio contending that her increment withholding was disciplinary. The grievance was denied by the Superintendent on August 9, 2005, and then on appeal denied by the Bridgeton Board of Education on October 11, 2005.

On November 7, 2005, petitioner filed a request for arbitration pursuant to Article III – Grievance Procedure of the Collective Bargaining Agreement between the Bridgeton Board of Education and the Association of Bridgeton Administrators alleging that the increment withholding was disciplinary and was without cause. On January 11, 2006, the Bridgeton Board of Education filed a petition with the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission claiming that the increment withholding was evaluative and not disciplinary and was therefore not subject to arbitration. In consequence, the arbitration was stayed.

On June 29, 2006, the New Jersey Public Employment Relations Commission rendered its decision and concluded that the increment withholding was not disciplinary in nature. As a result, arbitration was permanently enjoined.

On August 22, 2006, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27 and N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, petitioner filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging the increment withholding as being untimely.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I. THE TIMELINESS OF THE PETITION

Respondent asserts that the petition was not timely filed. Respondent argues that the dispute before me is procedural only, and that as such, the petition should have been filed within ninety days of the Board's action denying petitioner her increment.

Respondent notes that petitioner initially filed for arbitration under the grievance procedure contained in the collective bargaining agreement. Respondent sought successfully to enjoin arbitration through the Public Employment Relations Commission (PERC). Only after PERC ruled did petitioner file this petition before the Commissioner, relying upon N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d.

Respondent's position is premised upon its reading of N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d. That statute states in pertinent part:

> d. If a dispute involving the reason for the withholding of a teaching staff member's increment is submitted to the > commission pursuant to subsection a. of this section, and the commission determines that the reason for the increment withholding relates predominately to the evaluation of a teaching staff member's teaching performance, the teaching staff member may file a petition of appeal pursuant to N.J.S. 18A:6-9 and N.J.S. 18A:29-14, and the petition shall be deemed to be timely if filed within 90 days of notice of the commission's decision, or of the final judicial decision in any appeal from the decision of the commission, whichever date is later.

Respondent argues that in order to qualify for under N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d, the petition must address the "reason" for the withholding of the increment. In other words, the petition must allege a substantive argument, not merely a procedural argument.

Petitioner's counsel candidly agreed that petitioner's argument before me is procedural only. Petitioner does not assert that the withholding of the increment was unwarranted. Petitioner's counsel stated that to sustain that position, petitioner would be required to show that the Board's action was arbitrary and capricious. Petitioner's counsel conceded that petitioner could not sustain that burden. Accordingly, petitioner herein makes only a procedural argument, namely, that the Board acted out of time and is barred from withholding her increment.

Respondent urges that because the petition does not address the substantive issue, it is not protected by N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d. Respondent asserts that because the issue is solely procedural, it should have been raised within ninety days of the Board's action, simultaneous with the demand for arbitration.

Petitioner's counsel argued that the demand for arbitration did in fact address the merits of the case, and that no other action could be taken until the question of arbitration was disposed of. He stated that the standard of proof before the arbitrator was lower, making it feasible to argue the substantive issue. He also noted that petitioner was and remains prepared to arbitrate the substantive issue, and has only been prevented from doing so by the Board's action that resulted in the enjoining of arbitration by PERC.

I have reviewed the demand for arbitration, P-1, and I FIND that the demand for arbitration does in fact address the substantive issue. Further, I am satisfied that the purpose and intent of N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27d was to provide a mechanism whereby a petitioner could seek arbitration and, should arbitration be enjoined, not find himself time barred from pursuing a remedy before the Commissioner.

Accordingly, respondent's motion for summary decision on grounds of untimeliness is DENIED.

II. THE TIMELINESS OF THE BOARD'S ACTION

Petitioner argues that the Board's action withholding petitioner's increment was untimely. The Board acted on July 12, 2005. Petitioner urges that because she is an assistant principal, and therefore a twelve month employee, her school year began on July 1, 2005. She states that the Board was barred from withholding her increment once the new school year had begun.

Petitioner cites a series of cases that stand for the proposition that a Board of Education must act prior to the commencement of the new school year if it seeks to withhold an increment. Petitioner cites the language of Newark Teachers Union v. Bd. of Ed. Of Newark, OAL DKT. EDU 9836-83 (April 26, 2984), modified by Comm'r of Ed. (June 13, 1984), wherein the Commissioner held:

> That as a matter of fundamental fairness board action to withhold an increment must be made prior to the date the ten-month period of service commences. Therefore, this would require board action prior to September 1 of the school year involved. Although actual service may not commence until the first day of school, September 1, nonetheless, is the date upon which a staff member's salary entitlement commences for the ten-month period of service, September to June. (At page 14 of the slip opinion.)

> Consequently, it is the determination of the Commissioner that a school board must act prior to September 1 of a given school year to withhold the increment of a staff member whose period of service is September to June.

See also In the Matter of Board of Ed. Of Northern Highlands Regional H.S. v. Martin, (unreported Appellate Decision, March 13, 1979 having Docket No. A-2119-70). Also see School Law Decision in the same matter, 1979 SLD 853; Charles Gersie v. Board of Ed. Of the City of Clifton, 1972 SLD 462; In the Matter of George Montgomery v. Board of Ed. Of the City of Irvington, OAL Docket No.: EDU 12289-95 (January 4, 2000) aff'd Commissioner (February 15, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; Sutton and Sheridan v. Board of Ed. Of the City of Orange, OAL Docket No. EDU 7873-85 and EDU 7845-85 (consolidated).

While each of these cases stands for the proposition that the Board must act prior to the start of the new school year, each of those cases deals with a ten month employee whose work year began when the school year commenced on September 1. None considers the issue of how this rule affects a twelve month employee such as petitioner.

This matter turns on the question of when petitioner's school year starts. Petitioner argues that the year begins July 1. She points to several factors that favor her interpretation. By law, the school's fiscal year begins on July 1 and ends on June 30. Additionally, the collective bargaining agreement between respondent Board and petitioner's union ran from July 1, 2003 through June 30, 2006 (P-2).

Respondent counters that the academic year commences September 1, with the opening of school. Respondent points out that the Commissioner in Newark Teachers Union v. Bd. of Ed. Of Newark, supra, utilized the academic year as the benchmark for delineating the deadline for withholding of a ten month employee's increment.

Logic would dictate that respondent is correct. Although the petitioner works twelve months of the year, I take official notice that the bulk of an assistant principal's work is done during the time school is in session. Certainly the absence of the student body from the school renders July and August months when the duties of an administrator are reduced.

Further, upholding petitioner's argument would place a greater burden on the administrative staff. The evaluation process in this case was completed on June 29. I again take official notice that during late May and June, New Jersey schools are dominated by frenetic activity, including final examinations, step-up ceremonies and graduations, and the various and sundry tasks necessary to the closing out of the school year. If the Board must act on administrative increments prior to June 30, the administrative staff will be burdened with yet another job, completing administrative evaluations, during this time of turmoil.

Finally, petitioner seeks to prevail here on a technicality. She does not contend that the increment was arbitrarily and capriciously withheld; she argues only that the Board acted too late. In short, petitioner does not dispute that the withholding of her increment was meritorious; rather, she contends that she should be allowed to avoid the consequences of her conduct because the Board's action was untimely.

Based upon the PERC decision, the Board's action is by definition remedial. Where is the justice in allowing petitioner to evade such remedial action that might improve her performance to the benefit of the students she oversees?

Logic and equity dictate that respondent should prevail in this matter. Unfortunately, the law says otherwise.

The parties have stipulated that petitioner is a tenured assistant principal. Respondent's business administrator has certified that she "added" the increments to the administrative staff's salaries on July 15, 2005. Although that statement appears to place the accrual of the increment subsequent to the Board's action of July 12, the business administrator clarified the situation when she testified that the July 15 paycheck covered the period July 1 through July 15, 2005.

Given those facts, it is clear that the incremental increase in salary commenced on July 1, 2005. Consequently, by the time the Board took action on July 12, petitioner's increment had already vested. The Board's action did not forestall the awarding of the increment; instead, the Board's action reduced petitioner's compensation.

N.J.S.A. 8A:6-10 states in pertinent part:

> No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation,
>
> (a) if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state, or
>
> except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing held pursuant to this subarticle, by the commissioner, or a person appointed by him to act in his behalf, after a written charge or charges, of the cause or causes of complaint, shall have been preferred against such person, signed by the person or persons making the same, who may or may not be a member or members of a board of education, and filed and proceeded upon as in this subarticle provided.

Because petitioner is tenured, once her increment vested on July 1, the Board could not "withhold" it. The Board's action of July 12, 2005, constitutes a reduction in petitioner's compensation. Such a reduction is not permitted absent the filing of tenure charges. Newark Teachers Union v. Bd. of Ed. Of Newark, supra; Massaro v. Board of Education of Bergenfeld, Bergen County, Hearing Examiner's Report (Jan. 28, 1981), rejected, Comm'r (Dec. 4, 1981), affirmed, St. Bd. (June 2, 1982.

Nothing before me indicates that the legislature intended this result when it enacted N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Both the statutory scheme and the subsequent case law appear to have been structured to address ten month employees. But at the same time, nothing before me tends to show that the legislature did not intend this result. Consequently, the plain language of the statute prohibits the reduction of petitioner's salary through the withholding of the increment without the filing of tenure charges. Since no such charges were filed in this matter, petitioner's motion for summary decision must be GRANTED, and respondent's motion for summary decision must be DENIED.

ORDER

I ORDER that petitioner's motion for summary decision be GRANTED.

I ORDER that respondent's motion for summary decision be DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY.	:

The Initial Decision on Remand of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the parties' revised settlement agreement, and the record of this matter have been reviewed,* mindful of the Commissioner's October 31, 2007 determination that the prior settlement agreement recommended for adoption by the Administrative Law Judge failed to adequately address the standards of In re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846, decided by the Commissioner of Education April 7, 1982, aff'd. State Board April 6, 1983, and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a), which are required in the review of tenure matters. Specifically, the Commissioner directed that – due to the nature of the charges – if this matter was to be settled without adjudication, there must be a detailed explication on the record as to why the charges cannot be pursued.

Upon review of the revised agreement and record on remand, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms, since she finds that they now comport with the Cardonick standards necessary in the review of settlements in tenure matters. The Commissioner adopts the settlement as the final decision in this matter, which is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement. A copy of this decision will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action as that body deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ADAM AQUILINA, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY.

Karen A. Murray, Esq., for petitioner
(Murray & Murray, attorneys)

Sanford R. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent
(Oxfeld Cohen, P.C., attorneys)

Record Closed: December 11, 2007 Decided: January 7, 2008

BEFORE IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

On March 15, 2007, the Elizabeth Board of Education ("Board") certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming and insubordination against respondent Adam Aquilina under the provisions of the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq. The Board suspended respondent without pay effective March 15, 2007, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

The Board accused respondent of the following: engaging in an inappropriate, intimate relationship by making multiple cellular telephone calls to a student; nurturing inappropriate relationships with students; providing transportation to students in his personal vehicle; being alone with female students in a locked classroom. Aquilina has consistently denied the charges.

The Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") acknowledged receipt of the certified tenure charges on March 22, 2007. After receipt of respondent's answer on March 28, 2007, it transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing on April 10, 2007.

The matter was scheduled for a hearing as OAL Docket EDU03757-07 on August 7, 2007 at which time both parties agreed to a proposed settlement subject to Board approval. On September 20, 2007, The Board approved the settlement terms and forwarded it to me on October 2, 2007. On this date, I issued an Initial Decision/Settlement in which I concluded that the agreement met the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved by the Commissioner. On October 31, 2007, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision/Settlement and remanded the matter for further proceedings in order that a "better explication on the record" be provided by the parties as to why the tenure charges cannot be pursued. A hearing on the remanded case, now referenced as OAL Docket EDU11777-07, was then held on December 11, 2007.

Based upon a review of the record, as well as the proposed settlement agreement and Board resolution attached hereto, and the representation of the parties on the record of this matter, I make the following FINDINGS:

1. The nature of the charges has been documented by the submission of a Statement of Charges and Certificate of Determination.

2. The parties have expressed that the settlement of the matter reflects a determination by the Board that a hearing in this matter would be protracted and costly. Litigation of the charges would lead to the disruption of the Board's educational program due to the great amount of time lost by administrators, teaching staff members and other personnel who would be required to testify to the various incidents that led to the filing of the tenure charges.

3. If a hearing becomes necessary, numerous school administrators, teachers and former students would be called to testify. The alleged student victim, who was eighteen years of age during the 2005-2006 academic year, would need to be located. The allegations, none of which indicate any physical sexual contact between the respondent and students, pertain to events and/or observations dating back approximately three years. The parties are not aware of the alleged student victim's whereabouts or the location of many of the potential witnesses who would need to be called to provide testimony to substantiate the charges against respondent. Additionally, the respondent no longer resides in New Jersey.

4. The parties to the matter have consented to the terms of the Settlement Agreement as evidenced on the record and as evidenced by the signatures of the parties and/or their authorized representatives on the written settlement agreement. At a meeting held on September 20, 2007, the Board authorized the settlement memorialized in the attached Settlement Agreement.

5. From the Board's viewpoint, the outcome under the settlement will be as good or better than could be achieved if it prevailed after a lengthy or costly tenure battle. The respondent teacher would be removed from its employ. In addition, approximately $100,000 – $200,000 in legal costs for one tenure hearing would significantly impact the Board's entire legal budget for the 2007-2008 academic year of $ 750,000.00. Money spent on litigation costs would be put to better use for the children of Elizabeth.

6. Before entering this agreement, Aquilina fully understood his rights and had adequate opportunity to consult with legal counsel. In particular, Aquilina acknowledged his understanding that the Commissioner may refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for such action regarding his teaching certificate as it deems appropriate.

7. The parties have shown that the settlement of the matter is in the public interest. The terms of the agreement will satisfy the reasonable objectives of the Board and will avoid the necessity of expensive and time-consuming litigation. As indicated above, the parties have provided further explanation on the record as to why the charges could not be pursued.

8. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I therefore CONCLUDE that this Settlement Agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that approval of same is in the public interest. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms, and it is FURTHER ORDERED that the proceedings in this matter be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, Aquilina is currently employed as a tenured teaching staff member; and,

WHEREAS, Aquilina and the Board are parties to a proceeding with caption and docket No. as follows: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Adam Aquilina, School District of the City of Elizabeth, Agency Docket No. 84-3/07, OAL Docket No. EDUTH 03757-2007N; and;

WHEREAS, after the completion of discovery and in view of the extensive anticipated costs of litigating this case for an Abbott District, the Board is agreeable to the dismissal of the tenure charges, subject to the conditions set forth in this Agreement;

WHEREAS, both the Board and Aquilina desire to enter into a Settlement Agreement stipulating the terms of his separation from all employment with the Board, together with the release of all his tenure and seniority rights as an employee of the Board, as well as providing for the exchange of General Releases of any and all claims which the parties may have against the other arising from Aquilina's employment or otherwise;

WHEREAS, the terms of settlement take into account the public interest, as well as the fact that the litigation of this action, and anticipated appeals thereafter, have caused and will continue to cause disruption to the educational programs in the Elizabeth School District due to the absence of administrators, teachers and students who have or will hereafter have to testify at hearings, and that the Board and Aquilina have incurred and will continue to incur substantial financial costs to continue this litigation;

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises of the parties and in exchange for the consideration more particularly noted below, it is hereby agreed:

1. The Board agrees that the Tenure Charges in this matter bearing Agency Dkt. No. 84-3/07, OAL Dkt. No. EDUTH 03757-2007N shall be dismissed, with prejudice, subject to the approval of this Agreement by the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner of Education.

The resignation letter shall be in the form annexed hereto as Exhibit A. The letter of resignation shall be null and void if the terms of the Separation of Employment Agreement are not met. The resignation is otherwise irrevocable. The Board waives all statutory or contractual claims for notification of Aquilina's resignation.

4. The Board shall publicly approve and accept the resignation of Aquilina at its next regularly scheduled meeting, which resignation shall be effective the close of business on

Additionally, the sum of $2,725.00 shall be paid to Aquilina within ten (10) days of the approval of this Agreement by the New Jersey Commissioner of Education. The Board shall further undertake to amend its payroll records and pension reports to the N.J. Division of Pensions so that Aquilina's salary for the 2006-2007 school year is Forty-Nine Thousand Fifty-Six Dollars ($49,056.00).

6. The Board shall restore the prorated salary, adjustment and longevity increment(s) that it withheld from Aquilina for the 2007-2008 school year, which gross sum is stipulated to be Three Thousand Four Hundred Seventy-Five Dollars ($3,475.00). Division of Pensions so that Aquilina's salary for the 2007-2008 school year is established to be a gross amount of Fifty-Two Thousand Five Hundred Thirty-One Dollars ($52,531). Aquilina shall receive a prorated amount of his salary for Sept. - Nov. 30, 2007.

7. Through and until November 30, 2007, the Board shall continue to provide Aquilina all the insurance coverage(s) that it is presently providing to Aquilina under the plan(s) applicable to teaching staff members employed by the Board.

8. Upon the termination of Aquilina's employment on November 30, 2007 and consistent with his rights under the Consolidated Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1986 ("COBRA"), Aquilina shall be able to purchase, at his own cost and expense, the insurance coverage presently provided to other teaching staff members employed by the Board.

9. Aquilina waives any and all rights to tenure, seniority, recall or reinstatement as of the effective date of his resignation. COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

The School Ethics Commission determined that respondent – a former member of the Roselle Board of Education – violated the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i), by confronting the Superintendent of Schools after a board meeting on March 1, 2004, during which the Board had voted to approve the Superintendent's contract.

The Commissioner – whose jurisdiction is limited to reviewing the Commission's recommended sanction – found that the Commission's recommended penalty of censure is the appropriate penalty in this matter. Accordingly, the Commissioner ordered that the respondent be censured as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 36-1/08

IN THE MATTER OF ETHYLENE GRIMSLEY, :	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ROSELLE BOARD OF EDUCATION, :	DECISION
UNION COUNTY. :

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission ("Commission"), including the recommended penalty of censure, have been reviewed.

This matter comes before the Commissioner to impose a sanction upon Ethylene Grimsley, former member of the Roselle Board of Education, based upon findings of fact and conclusions of law by the Commission that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members when she confronted the Superintendent of Schools at the conclusion of the March 1, 2004 board meeting.

Upon issuance of the decision of the Commission, respondent was provided 13 days from the mailing of such decision to file written comments on the recommended penalty for the Commissioner's consideration. Respondent's comments – dated February 6, 2008 and postmarked February 14, 2008 – were untimely and, therefore, are not considered herein.

Initially, it must be emphasized that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-9.1, the determination of the Commission as to violation of the School Ethics Act is not reviewable by the Commissioner herein. Only the Commission may determine whether a violation of the School Ethics Act occurred. The Commissioner's jurisdiction is limited to reviewing the sanction to be imposed following a finding of a violation by the Commission.

Therefore, this decision is restricted solely to a review of the Commission's recommended penalty.

Upon a thorough review of the record, the Commissioner determines to accept the Commission's recommendation that censure is the appropriate penalty in this matter. In so ruling, the Commissioner is satisfied that, in recommending a penalty for the violations it found, the Commission fully considered the nature of the offenses and weighed the effects of aggravating and mitigating circumstances. Therefore, the Commission's recommended penalty in this matter will not be disturbed.

Accordingly, IT IS hereby ORDERED that Ethylene Grimsley be censured as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

* This decision, as the Commissioner's final determination regarding penalty in the instant matter, may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq., within 30 days of its filing. Commissioner decisions are deemed filed three days after the date of mailing to the parties.

IN THE MATTER OF ETHYLENE GRIMSLEY	:	BEFORE THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
	:	Docket No. C21-04
ROSELLE BOARD OF EDUCATION UNION COUNTY	:	DECISION

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a complaint filed on April 5, 2004, by Anthony Esposito, a member of the Roselle Board of Education (Board), alleging that Ethylene Grimsley, also a member of the Board, violated the School Ethics Act (Act), N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. The respondent specifically alleged that the complainant violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i) when she confronted the Superintendent at the conclusion of the March 1, 2004 board meeting. The respondent filed an answer denying that she violated the Act and asked the Commission to find the complaint frivolous and impose sanctions.

The Commission invited, but did not require, the parties to attend its July 27, 2004 meeting. The parties were advised of their right to bring counsel and witnesses. The complainant and the respondent attended the hearing and testified before the Commission. During the testimony, the parties revealed that the Superintendent had brought assault charges against the respondent in municipal court. Thus, at the conclusion of the testimony, the Commission determined that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-32, which prohibits the Commission from acting on any matter actually pending in a court of law of this State, it could not proceed with a decision. During the public portion of the July 27, 2004 meeting, the Commission voted to hold the matter in abeyance until such time as the municipal court matter was resolved.

On December 8, 2004, the respondent's attorney, Kathleen Smallwood Johnson, Esq., notified the Commission that the municipal charges had been dropped. The parties were then notified that the matter would be placed on the Commission's agenda for its January 2005 meeting; however, the January 2005 meeting was cancelled due to snow. Therefore, at its February 2005 meeting, the Commission determined that probable cause existed to credit the allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(i) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members. The Commission also voted to find that the material facts were in dispute with regard to the allegations on which it found probable cause. The Commission voted to send the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing in accordance N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(b). However, the matter was never sent to the OAL.[1]

On August 2, 2007, the Commission notified the complainant that his complaint had not been sent to the OAL. The Commission informed the complainant that its process for conducting a hearing for complaints such as this one, that allege a violation of only the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, had changed. The complainant was notified that, if he still wished to proceed with the complaint, the Commission would hold a de novo hearing in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1, to determine if a violation of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members had occurred, and, if it determined that a violation had occurred, it will then determine what sanction to recommend to the Commissioner of Education. The complainant informed the Commission that he wished to proceed with the complaint.

Thereafter, the parties were notified that the matter was rescheduled for December 18, 2007. The complainant attended the meeting; the respondent did not. Testimony was heard, as set forth below. During the public portion of the meeting, and recognizing that the December 18, 2007 hearing was de novo, the Commission voted to find that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i), and voted to recommend a penalty of censure. The Commission also found that the complaint was not frivolous.

THE PLEADINGS

The complainant asserts that he witnessed the respondent, Ms. Grimsley, assault the Superintendent, Ms. Darlene Roberto, at the conclusion of the March 1, 2004 hearing. The complainant alleges that Ms. Grimsley's verbal abuse and hostile actions caused the Superintendent to fear imminent bodily harm. The complainant contends that Ms. Grimsley pushed her way toward Ms. Roberto while Mr. Aubourg, a board member, escorted Ms. Roberto to her car so that she could leave the scene. He further alleges that the actions of Ms. Grimsley, according to the complainant, were totally unprofessional, lacked proper decorum, and violated the expected standards of a public official. He alleges that this behavior was a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i). (Complaint at page 1)

In her answer, Ms. Grimsley denies the allegations in the complaint, and attributes the allegations to the fact that she was selected as Board President. Ms. Grimsley affirms that she did not assault the Superintendent. Rather, she avers that at the March 1, 2004 meeting, the Board considered an extension of the Superintendent's contract and/or a salary increase for her. The respondent states, "The Superintendent and certain members of the Board, including the Complainant herein, disagreed with my rationale that prior to voting on the issue of the Superintendent's contract we should evaluate her performance." (Answer at page 1, paragraph 3) The respondent argues that her reasons for requesting an evaluation were supported in law.

The respondent further affirms:

> Aside from making various comments on the record, the Superintendent approached me after the meeting to express her disdain for my position. She did so in a threatening manner causing me to fear that she would physically > assault me in retaliation for the manner in which I voted and the statements that I made on the record. At no time did I assault her or threaten her. Nor did I ever intend to do so. (Id. at paragraph 4)

As to the complainant's allegation that she violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), the respondent reasons that her "suggestion during the vote that sparked this Complaint was a general statement of the law that the Board must follow." (Answer at page 2, paragraph 6) The respondent further contends that the complainant fails to allege any facts that would demonstrate that she made personal promises or took private action that may compromise the Board. Rather, she asserts that "[t]he exchanges between the Superintendent and myself did not have any affect on the Board." (Id.)

As to the complainant's allegation that she violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(i), she asserts that the complainant fails to allege any facts that would demonstrate that she failed to support and protect any of the Board's employees in properly performing their duties. In this connection, the respondent argues,

> I do not believe that the Commissioner of Education would interpret the instigation of a verbal assault upon a Board member by a superintendent as a '...proper performance of their duties.' Nor does that provision require a Board member to refrain from responding while under such a verbal attack which could lead to physical assault upon the Board Member. (Id. at paragraph 7)

In support of her position, the respondent attaches documentation to show that the Board approved a merit increase for the Superintendent on March 1, 2004.

EVIDENCE

In his testimony, at the December 18, 2007 meeting, Mr. Esposito expressed his concern that this matter was not properly transmitted to the OAL after the probable cause hearing. He stated that he believed the respondent assaulted the Superintendent and that such conduct violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i). Mr. Esposito acknowledged that the Board was in the process of considering a pay increase for Darlene Roberto. He attested that Ms. Grimsley did not want to approve a pay increase for the Superintendent; the Board, however, did approve the increase. He further stated that at the end of the meeting, as the Board members were leaving the building, the respondent "snapped." The complainant testified that Ms. Grimsley "went into a rage and went after Darlene Roberto in a very threatening manner." Mr. Esposito testified that Ms. Grimsley was holding some books, which she threw to the ground and she confronted the Superintendent, calling her a liar. The complainant acknowledges that the Superintendent filed charges in municipal court which were later withdrawn. Additionally, since that time, the Superintendent has resigned from her position with the Board. The complainant referred in his testimony to statements that were made by the Superintendent, himself and other Board members to the Roselle Police Department following this incident.[2] He attests that these statements establish that an assault occurred.

Mr. Esposito testified that once the Board made its decision to approve the Superintendent's pay increase, no further action should have been taken by the respondent. He asserted that this event was unsettling and the incident altered the momentum of the board. He testified that under Ms. Roberto's leadership, the Board was able to accomplish some necessary building expansion, thereby reducing classroom sizes and improving education. Because Ms. Roberto has since left the district, he regrets that she did not have the opportunity to see the fruits of her labor.

The record includes the following sworn statements provided to the Roselle Police Department:[3]

(1) A statement provided by Darlene M. Roberto, Superintendent dated March 4, 2004 indicating that after the March 1 Board meeting, she was leaving the Board of Education building when she was approached by Ms. Grimsley. The two exchanged words about the Superintendent's contract. Ms. Roberto stated, in relevant part:

> I was about to get in my car, [Ms. Grimsley] yelled "wait a minute" and slammed my car door closed. She took all the papers in her hands and slammed them down on the ground and said "I've had enough of this [expletive]! Don't you [expletive] blame me for --" and then I don't remember what she said. Her hands were flying in my face and she was just about nose-to-nose with me. She was saying "this is [expletive] and we're going to setting [sic] this right now." I think this is where Cecilia came over and tried to get in between us and then Ethylene pushed Cecelia out of the way with her hands. She just pushed Cecilia very hard with both hands. She was very loud, Cecelia came back to try and restrain her and she pushed Cecelia again. Cecilia told me to get in my car but I couldn't. Then Toni Burrell and Yves pulled up in their cars, saw what was going on and jumped out of their cars. Yves went to help Cecelia hold Grimsley back. As I attempted to get in my car, Grimsley broke loose and she came at me again in a physically aggressive manner. At that point, it took Esposito, Aubourg, and Ricks to hold her back for me to get in my car. I got in my car and locked the door. She

[2] The record indicates that Ms. Roberto submitted these statements to the Commission for its consideration. Later, the complainant requested copies which were simultaneously forwarded to him and to the respondent.

[3] Throughout the police statements, the name of the respondent and some of the witnesses are misspelled. The citations herein are as they appear in the statements, with these misspellings.

> broke loose from them and came right up to my car. I pulled off, I floored it. I kept backing away when she first came at me. (Roberto Statement at page 3)

Lastly, Ms. Roberto reported feeling that her safety was jeopardized and as such, she would not stay in her office later than 4 pm. (Id. at 4) She also indicated she was fearful of repercussions. (Id. at 5)

(2) A statement provided by Mr. Yves Aubourg, member of the Roselle Board of Education, on March 4, 2004 indicated that after the meeting, he was talking to some of the Board members and they were out in the parking lot. Mr. Aubourg stated, in relevant part:

> I heard a melee going on and I saw Toni got out of her car and go towards the melee. Then I got out of my car. Right in front of Darlene's car were a lot of papers, in front of the driver's side tire. I could see Darlene with her arms crossed in front of her and Mrs. Grimsley going after her. Mrs. Grimsely was saying "I'm [expletive] tired of people saying I hate you. I need to talk to you!" Cecelia was trying to stop Mrs. Grimsley from going after Darlene. I got in between them and told Darlene to get in her car and get out of here. As I took her to her car, I realized that my car was blocking her. When I got back to my car to let her out, I heard Mrs. Grimsley say to her, "You're [expletive] lucky that I didn't tell the community that you were drunk at the convention". Then Darlene rolled down her window but I didn't hear what she said. As she pulled out, Mrs. Grimsley threw a bottle of water at her car. (Aubourg Statement at page 3)

(3) A statement provided by J. Alan McGarry, member of the Roselle Board of Education, on March 8, 2004 indicated that after the meeting, six our seven people walked out at once, i.e., himself, Ms. Grimsley, Cecilia Ricks, Toni Burrill, Anthony Esposito and Yves Aubourg. Mr. McGarry states Ms. Grimsley attempted to have a conversation with Ms. Roberto about her contract, but Ms. Roberto indicated that she had no intention of discussing it and put up her hand to so indicate. Mr. McGarry stated that Ms. Roberto then opened her car door and was attempting to get in. Mr. McGarry reported, in relevant part:

> Ethylene's voice got louder and Darlene told her she did not want to discuss it. At that point Ethylene threw her papers down and slammed Darlene's car door shut and then put her body between Darlene and the door. Ethylene stated "I'm sick of this", and that is all I can recall. Darlene started backing up. She wanted to put some > distance between her and Ethylene and then Cecelia Ricks can [sic] from around the car and just placed herself between the two women. Ms. Grimsley pushed Ms. Ricks aside in an attempt to get closer to Ms. Roberto several times. Then Ms. Burrill arrived and the two positioned themselves between Ms. Roberto and Ms. Grimsley. (McGarry Statement at page 3)

Mr. McGarry further stated that Ms. Roberto was eventually able to get to her car and leave. He stated, "Ethylene then yelled something to Ms. Roberto about not telling anybody about her inappropriate behavior at the convention. Ms. Roberto rolled down her window and yelled something back and stated she didn't tell anybody about Ethylene embezzling money from the school board. Then Ethylene then swung her water bottle at Ms. Roberto's car." (Id. at page 4)

(4) A statement provided by Cecelia Ricks, member of the Roselle Board of Education, on March 9, 2004 affirmed that after the Board meeting on March 1, 2004, all nine members left together, along with the Superintendent. Ms. Ricks stated that Ms. Grimsley said something to Ms. Roberto when leaving; Ms Roberto responded "I don't want to hear it, I know you don't like me." Further accusations followed; Ms. Ricks stated that "At this point Ethylene was enraged as Darlene attempted to get into her mini-van. Ethylene threw her papers on the ground and slammed the superintendent's door closed. Darlene backed up about 5 feet and at this point I was behind Ethelyne and stepped between the two." (Ricks Statement at page 2) She stated that she came between the two women because she thought Ms. Grimsley was going to attack Ms. Roberto, and she wanted to prevent her from doing so. Ms. Ricks reported that she got "shoved aside" by Ms. Grimsley "so that she could continue charging Darlene." (Id.) Ms. Ricks further stated, in relevant part:

> I again ran in front of the two of them and Yves Auborg had pulled up at this point and I looked at him and requested he get out of the car to help me. I motioned for him to get out of the car but he was unaware I was asking him for help. He got out of the car when he saw me being pushed a second time. Yves got out, Toni Burrill and I surrounded Ethelyne and I yelled for Darlene to get into her car and get out of here. When Darlene started to move towards her vehicle, Yves went over and blocked her body with his, so she could safely get into her car. Then he realized his car was blocking hers so he moved his vehicle and Darlene proceeded out of the driveway. Before she could get out Ethelyne was still yelling at her. (Id. at pages 3 and 4)

Ms. Ricks stated that Ms. Grimsley yelled "I didn't tell anybody you were drunk" and Darlene rolled down her window and said "I didn't tell anybody you embezzled money."

Ms. Ricks states that when Ms. Roberto began to drive away, Ms. Grimsley swung her water bottle at the car, but it did not hit the car. (Id. at page 4)

(5) A statement provided by Anthony Esposito, member of the Roselle Board of Education, on March 10, 2004 indicated that after the meeting on March 1, he left with some Board members. He reported, in relevant part:

> I was walking to my car and got into my car. I saw Ms. Grimsley and Ms. Roberto arguing and it seemed like Ms. Grimsley was getting rather close to Ms. Roberto. I pulled my car around and got out of the car and Ms. Roberto said to Ethelyne, "I don't have to take this, I don't have to listen to this, I'm going home." Ethelyne kept saying "you are always lying on me, always lying on me." Ms. Roberto was under the impression that Ms. Grimsley was out all over town discussing her contract, cause Ethelyne kept saying "it's not you, it's the process, it's the process". Darlene stated "it is you, you don't like me, and whatever I try to get done, you block it". Ms. Grimsley kept saying you keep lying on me. Ms. Roberto opened her driver's side door and Ms. Grimsley threw all her books and things on the ground and as Ms. Roberto tried to get into her car, Ethelyne slammed the car door shut and went at her. Ms. Roberto backed up and Ethelyne kept pushing towards Ms. Roberto in a threatening manner. At this point, Ms. Burrill and Ms. Ricks intervened and tried to calm Ethelyne down. Ms. Grimsley was trying to push Ms. Ricks and Ms. Burrill off her to get to Ms. Roberto. (Esposito Statement at pages 2-3)

Mr. Esposito further reported that during the incident, he was out of his car and close by, but he was not going to intervene because Ms. Burrill and Ms. Ricks were already there. (Id. at page 3) As to what happened when Ms. Roberto pulled away, Mr. Esposito affirmed that Ms. Grimsley stated she never told anybody that Ms. Roberto was drunk at one of the conventions and Ms. Roberto replied "I didn't tell anybody that you took $900.00 from the Board". Mr. Esposito said that Ms. Grimsley held a water bottle in her hand as if she was going to throw it, but she did not. (Id. at page 4)

(6) A statement provided by Toni Burrill, member of the Roselle Board of Education, on March 16, 2004 indicated that after the meeting on March 1, 2004, she stopped briefly to speak with other Board members and proceeded to her car. She reported that she started her car and made a turn to leave the parking lot; she pulled over to say good bye and realized that Ms. Grimsley was yelling. Ms. Burrill also stated, in relevant part:

> I saw Cecelia step between Ethelyne and Darlene. I jumped out of the car and ran over and at that point

> Ethelyne had slammed her papers down to the ground and she was screaming something "I'm sick and tired of people saying I said things that I didn't say, I didn't say that". Darlene had gone to open her car while Ethelyne was yelling and she slammed Darlene's car shut. Ethelyne kept getting closer to Cecelia and she grabbed her and shoved her for the purpose of getting her out of the way so she could get to Darlene. Ethelyne shoved Cecelia at least three times because Cecelia was trying to be a body blocker between the two of them. Yves saw what was going on and got out of his car to come to the assistance of Darlene and Cecelia. (Burrill Statement at pages 3-4)

Ms. Burrill reports that there was then an exchange of words between herself and Ms. Grimsley. Thereafter, Mr. Aubourg escorted Ms. Roberto to her car and told her to drive away. She continues, > Darlene was inside her car pulling out and Cecelia was behind me. I was close to Darlene's car. Ethelyne yelled to Darlene "I didn't tell anybody about you [sic] behavior in Atlantic City" and Darlene replied, "And I didn't tell anybody about you embezzling money.["] Ethelyne had a water bottle in her hand and turn [sic] around and tried to hit Darlene with the bottle in the car and again I questioned what she was doing and told her she was completely out of control. I then left after Darlene pulled away." (Id. at page 4)

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Commission found the following facts based on the pleadings, testimony and documents on the record.

1. On March 1, 2004, the complainant and respondent were members of the Board of Education of Roselle. The respondent is no longer a Board member.

2. On March 1, 2004, the date of the incident Ms. Roberto was the Superintendent; however, she no longer works for the district.

3. Following a Board meeting on March 1, 2004, the complainant, respondent and fellow members of the Board exited the building to the parking lot.

4. In the parking lot the respondent and Ms. Roberto exchanged words concerning the Superintendent's contract which had just been the subject of a Board vote; this exchange became heated and intense.

5. When Ms. Roberto attempted to get into her car, respondent prevented her from doing so.

6. Specifically, the respondent threw her papers to the ground, slammed Ms. Roberto's car door closed, and blocked Ms. Roberto's entry to her car.

7. Ms. Cecilia Ricks, a Board member, placed herself between Ms. Roberto and the respondent in an attempt to prevent the respondent from physically assaulting Ms. Roberto.

8. Ms. Grimsley twice pushed Ms. Ricks aside to get to Ms. Roberto. It was only with the assistance of fellow Board members that Ms. Roberto was able to get into her car and drive away.

9. Upon driving away, Ms. Grimsley yelled to Ms. Roberto that she had not told anyone that Ms. Roberto was drunk at a convention.

ANALYSIS

The Commission initially notes that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29, the complainant bears the burden of factually proving any violations of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members. The complainant contends that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), which provides:

> I will recognize that authority rests with the board of education and will make no personal promises nor take any private action that may compromise the board.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-7.1, "private action" is defined as action taken by a member of a district board of education or a member of a charter school board of trustees that is beyond the scope of the duties and responsibilities of a member of a district board of education or a member of a charter school board of trustees. Here, there is no dispute on the record that the Board approved Ms. Roberto's merit increase at its March 1, 2004 meeting. To the extent there was any objection to this action, once the vote was taken, it was not appropriate for the respondent to unilaterally engage in further discussion with Ms. Roberto about the contract, as she did upon exiting the building, let alone to engage in a heated exchange. Moreover, there can be no doubt that respondent's physical intervention between Ms. Roberto and her car in the parking lot, respondent's pushing aside of another board member, and respondent's parting words to Ms. Roberto as she drove away, constituted private action significantly beyond the scope of her duties as a Board member.

As to whether private action of this kind "may compromise the board," the Commission finds that it does. In so finding, the Commission notes that Ms. Roberto reported that because of this incident she was fearful for her safety and afraid to stay at work beyond 4:00 p.m. Additionally, five board members gave statements under oath to the Roselle Police Department which clearly establish that the respondent's conduct was inappropriate, unprofessional and extreme. It is not unreasonable to expect that when a Superintendent and five Board members are so affected by an event, there can be consequences for the district's operations. Indeed, Mr. Esposito testified that he believed this incident altered the momentum of the district. Thus, while there is no evidence on this record proving a causal connection between this incident and Ms. Roberto's departure, the Commission notes that it is only necessary to determine that Ms. Grimsley's conduct was such that it may compromise the board. Accordingly, the Commission finds that the complainant has demonstrated that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members.

The complainant further contends that respondent's conduct violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(i), which establishes a board member's obligation to support and protect school personnel in the proper performance of their duties. Here, the Commission again finds that the respondent's physical intervention between Ms. Roberto and her car in the parking lot, together with her pushing aside another board member in order to get to Ms. Roberto, sufficiently demonstrate that she was acting contrary to her duty in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(i). That the respondent exacerbated these physical actions with accusations about the Superintendent being drunk at a convention demonstrates an aggression that is completely antithetical to her duty as a Board member. Accordingly, the Commission finds that the complainant has demonstrated that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(i) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members.

DECISION

For the reasons expressed above, the Commission finds that Ethylene Grimsley violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members.

REQUEST FOR SANCTIONS

At its December 18, 2007 meeting, the Commission considered the respondent's request that the Commission find that the complaint was frivolous and impose sanctions pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(e). The Commission notes that it can find no evidence which might show that the complainant filed the complaint in bad faith solely for the purpose of harassment, delay or malicious injury. To the contrary, as noted above, the Superintendent and four other Board members offered corroborating statements as to the respondent's behavior on March 1, 2004. The Commission also has no information to suggest that the complainant should have known that the complaint was without any reasonable basis in law or equity or that it could not be supported by a good faith argument for an extension, modification or reversal of existing law. The Commission's finding of a violation shows that the complaint was reasonably based in law. For the foregoing reasons, the Commission finds that the complaint is not frivolous and denies the respondent's request for sanctions against the complainant.

PENALTY

The Commission recommends that the Commissioner of Education impose a penalty of censure. In so doing, the Commission finds instructive the matter entitled I/M/O Charles Fischer, C30-03. Therein, the Commission found the Board member in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (i) when he contacted the complainant, a business office employee, at her home on Friday evening to obtain copies of reports which he said he needed for a meeting on Sunday. The Board member admitted to raising his voice at the complainant, albeit that he claimed it was in response to her yelling, rather than out of anger. The Commission determined that when the respondent requested that the complainant return to the office to obtain the information he was seeking, such conduct was private action that may compromise the Board. The Commission noted that if the respondent was dissatisfied with the complainant's responses, he should have hung up and called the Superintendent, rather than raise his voice at a Board employee. Moreover, the respondent's insistence that the complainant provide the reports, together with his request that she return to work to obtain them, were not supportive of her as an employee performing her duties. In Fischer, the Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand. In the instant matter, the record is clear that the respondent's conduct toward the Superintendent after the meeting of March 1, 2004 was more intense, more aggressive and indeed more flagrant than the respondent's conduct in Fischer. As noted above, however, the respondent is no longer a Board member. Therefore, the Commission is constrained to recommend a penalty other than suspension or removal.

This decision has been adopted by a formal resolution of the School Ethics Commission. This matter shall now be transmitted to the Commissioner of Education for action on the Commission's recommendation for sanction only, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29. Within 13 days from the date on which the Commission's decision was mailed to the parties, Ms. Grimsley may file written comments on the recommended sanction with the Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties field no exceptions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons set forth in his decision – that respondent's unilateral retirement, effective December 20, 2007, renders the instant tenure charges moot. The Commissioner further agrees that pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17(a)(1), the District's chief school administrator is responsible for advising the State Board of Examiners of respondent's retirement and the charges that had been certified against him.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant tenure charges are dismissed as moot. The Board's chief administrator is hereby directed to comply forthwith with his/her obligation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17(a)(1).

Record Closed: January 2, 2008 Decided: January 10, 2008

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

This matter is on remand from the Commissioner of Education Decision dated November 13, 2007. Respondent A.S. had challenged a finding of substantiated physical abuse by the Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit (IAIU) of Department of Children and Families (DCF). A.S. had denied that he committed physical abuse and sought to have his name removed from the Central Registry. See, N.J.S.A. 9:6-8.11 and N.J.S.A. 10:129A-3.4(c). Also, the School District of the City of Elizabeth (Board) had charged tenured teacher A.S. with unbecoming conduct for physical abuse of two children and sought his removal under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq.

DCF transmitted its matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on May 4, 2007, under Docket No. HDY 05207-07. The Commissioner of Education had previously transmitted its matter to the OAL under Docket No. EDU 03809-07.

The circumstances which gave rise to the Tenure charges were allegations that teacher A.S. engaged in corporal punishment by punching a student in the chest and slapping him across is face on February 16, 2005 and by slapping another student across his face on February 24, 2004.

At the commencement of the hearing on July 23, 2007, the parties engaged in extensive settlement discussions which led to a proposed settlement agreement subject to Board approval the terms of which were placed on the record. On September 27, 2007, the Board submitted a fully executed Settlement Agreement and Board Resolution accepting the settlement.

The settlement agreement also resolved the matter involving DCF, whereby DCF agreed to modify the finding of "substantiated" child abuse against A.S. to "not substantiated" and to remove his name from the State's Child Abuse Registry. Since, by the acknowledgement of its counsel, DCF had already approved that part of the settlement pertinent to it, there was no basis to follow the predominant interest order requiring that an initial decision be submitted to DCF before submission to the Commissioner.

I submitted an Initial Decision Settlement on October 4, 2007, concluding that the settlement was in the public interest. In her Order of Remand of November 13, 2007, the Commissioner indicated that the charges filed against A.S. were ..."such that the Commissioner cannot approve a settlement that leaves the Board's allegations unadjudicated unless she can be certain that respondent will no longer be able to work in New Jersey schools or present himself for any type of employment – in New Jersey or elsewhere – as an educator duly licensed by the State." Although she did not preclude the possibility of settlement, she rejected the Initial Decision and directed instead that the matter be remanded for such further proceedings as are necessary to address the concerns expressed in her Order of Remand or to proceed to plenary hearing.

I then scheduled the plenary hearing to resume on December 11, 2007. Prior to that date, and consequently prior to any adjudication of the tenure charges, and without the submission of any newly proposed settlement agreement, counsel for the Board advised that the Board had been notified by letter that A.S. was retiring from his tenured position effective December 20, 2007. On January 2, 2008, counsel submitted a letter on behalf of the Board withdrawing its tenure charges against A.S. as he retired on December 20, 2007. Attached to that submission was a December 14, 2007, letter to the Board from A.S. advising as follows: "Due to forty years of service and job related disabilities I am forced to retire. My retirement will become effective on December 20, 2007." A copy of the letters of the Board and A.S. are attached. No other claims by either party were presented to me. Both parties have asserted that the unilateral retirement has rendered the tenure charges moot.

The issue is whether the pending tenure charges should be dismissed as moot in light of the unilateral retirement of A.S.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 addresses the withdrawal, settlement or mooting of tenure charges. Section (a) deals with a withdrawal or settlement of tenure charges and provides that, "once tenure charges are certified to the Commissioner, such charges may be withdrawn or settled only with the Commissioner's approval." That regulation necessitates that certain requirements must be satisfied in order to secure the approval of the Commissioner. The parties here no longer seek the approval of the Commissioner of a settlement between them, and the Board does not seek a unilateral withdrawal of the charges. Instead, the Board seeks to withdraw the charges it previously filed on the grounds of mootness in light of A.S.'s December 20, 2007 retirement.

Section (d) of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 focuses on the current posture of this matter – namely that A.S. has unilaterally retired from his tenured position.

> Where tenure proceedings are concluded prior to adjudication because the charged party has unilaterally resigned or retired, the Commissioner may refer the matter to the State Board of Examiners for action against the charged party's certificate as it deems appropriate, prior to the conclusion of tenure charges as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4

N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4 provides that the chief school administrator of a district shall notify the Board of Examiners when a tenured teaching staff member who is accused of unbecoming conduct resigns from his position. Additionally, Section (b) requires that, if the Board of Examiners issues an order to show cause based on the information that the school district provided about the certificate holder, it shall be the responsibility of the reporting school district to cooperate with the Board of Examiners in any proceeding arising from the order to show cause.

In view of A.S.'s retirement, I CONCLUDE that this matter is moot. An issue is moot when a determination is sought on a matter which, when rendered, cannot have any practical effect on the existing controversy and where the conflict between the parties has become merely hypothetical. In re Conroy, 190 N.J. Super. 453, 458 (App. Div. 1983); In the Matter of Saez, EDU 11306-05, Initial Decision, (February 22, 2006), adopted, Comm'r (April 4, 2006) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html; Barshatsky v. Freehold Regional High School District Bd. of Educ., 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 73. The Commissioner will ordinarily not review questions which become academic before the issuance of a decision out of reluctance to render a legal decision in the abstract and a desire to conserve administrative resources. Saez, supra and Henry v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Wildwood, 1975 S.L.D. 1, 3.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a) specifically requires that tenure charges may be withdrawn or settled only with the Commissioner's approval, and then only upon consideration of certain factors. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(d) however does not require the Commissioner's review of the status of tenure proceedings not yet adjudicated when the individual, as here, resigns or retires. In considering the plain language of these two provisions, it is clear that pending tenure charges should be dismissed as moot when there is a unilateral resignation or retirement. In the Matter of Clothier, EDU 9526-00, Initial Decision, (January 31, 2001), adopted, Comm'r (March 19, 2001) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html. The Saez matter was procedurally similar to the present case. The parties originally reached a settlement, which the administrative law judge approved in an initial decision. The Commissioner however rejected the settlement and remanded the matter for further proceedings. Prior to the resumption of the hearing, Saez unilaterally resigned. Under those circumstances the Commissioner agreed that Saez' resignation from his tenured position rendered the controversy moot and did not consider the factors required in a settlement or withdrawal situation under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a).

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the tenure charges certified by the School District of the City of Elizabeth against A.S. be dismissed as moot; and

It is further ORDERED that the School District of the City of Elizabeth report the conduct alleged in the tenure charges to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter, the parties' Stipulation of Settlement and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner determines to accept the parties' settlement agreement as – in light of respondent's September 20, 2006 resignation from the District– she cannot compel the Board to proceed with adjudication of the tenure charges, notwithstanding her concerns about unresolved allegations of theft of musical instruments from a district school.*

Accordingly, the settlement is approved and the tenure matter dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement. This matter is hereby referred to the State Board of Examiners for action pursuant to *N.J.A.C.*6A:9-17.1 et seq. as it deems appropriate.

INITIAL DECISION

SETTLEMENT

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 05723-05

AGENCY DKT. NO. 99-5/05

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF CINDY WILJHELM, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF MORRIS, MORRIS COUNTY.

James M. McCreedy, Esq., for petitioner School District of Morris (Wiley, Malehorn, Sirota & Raynes, attorneys)

Mary Frances Palisano, Esq., for respondent Cindy Wiljhelm (Law Offices of Alan L. Zegas, attorney)

Record Closed: December 20, 2007 Decided: January 14, 2008

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

The School District of Morris, Morris County (Board or District) filed tenure charges against respondent Cindy Wiljhelm, a teaching staff member, and recommended dismissal for reasons of incapacity, unbecoming conduct and other just cause. Respondent denied the alleged criminal wrongdoing.

On December 5, 2007, the parties presented sufficient evidence to support a proposed settlement. The Stipulation of Settlement and Board Resolution executed by the parties is attached hereto.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5 .6(a), the Commissioner of Education must approve settlement and withdrawal of certified tenure charges. The standards established by the State Board of Education In re Cardonick,1990 S.L.D. 842, 846 must include the following: 1) the nature of the charges; 2) an explanation of the circumstances justifying the settlement or withdrawal; 3) consent of both the charged and the charging parties; 4) the charged party entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his or her rights; 5) demonstrate that the agreement is in the public interest; and 6) the teaching staff member has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible loss of certificate. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5 .6.

Based on the relevant evidence I FIND:

1. The District filed charges with the Commissioner of Education against respondent, which are summarized as follows: (a) In September 2002, the District met with respondent to discuss tardiness, schedule changes and other issues; (b) In April 2003, respondent received two ratings of unacceptable on observations from the building principal for professional characteristics; (c) Respondent used District computers in violation of school policy; (d) On or about February 23, 2005, respondent was suspended without pay and criminally charged with receiving stolen property of eight musical instruments labeled Alexander Hamilton (School), valued at $6,000.00. Respondent denied all criminal charges.

(2) The parties with advice of counsel agreed to a proposed settlement and provided an explanation to justify the agreement.

(3) The parties were advised of all rights under the agreement as set forth in the Stipulation of Settlement and Board Resolution, which is attached and summarized as follows: (a) respondent shall resign from her teaching position with the District effective September 20, 2006; (b) the Board shall dismiss the tenure charges pending approval of the agreement by the OAL and Commissioner of Education; (c) the parties agree not to issue communications or statement to the press that disparages or encourages any action against either party; (d) the Board will provide a neutral service letter for respondent including dates of employment, positions and salary; (e) respondent "expressly understands that the Commissioner of Education may refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible certificate revocation proceedings."

(4) If a hearing is necessary, the Board anticipates presenting four witnesses and respondent anticipates presenting four witnesses. Given the voluminous statements in support of the charges, a hearing will require a minimum of four days. The parties believe in good faith that the stipulation of settlement and board resolution are in the public interest.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Stipulation of Settlement and Board Resolution executed by petitioner School District of Morris and respondent Cindy Wiljhelm satisfies the requirements of In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 (1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846): Therefore, the Stipulation of Settlement between the parties should be APPROVED.

It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

HEARING OF ELLEN TAUSSI, SCHOOL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

FAIRFIELD, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and insubordination against respondent, a tenured secretary, and sought her removal from employment in the Township of Fairfield School District. Respondent filed an answer to the charges, but subsequently submitted an irrevocable letter of resignation dated January 7, 2008. On January 8, 2008, the petitioning Board issued a resolution accepting respondent's resignation and withdrawing the tenure charges.

The ALJ found that the respondent resigned from her tenured employment, and holds no certificate issued by the New Jersey Department of Education. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the matter should be dismissed as moot.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ, and dismissed the petition as moot.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

(Lindabury, McCormick, Estabrook & Cooper, attorneys)

Patrick P. Toscano, Jr., Esq., on behalf of respondent

Record Closed: January 15, 2008 Decided: January 15, 2008

BEFORE: IMRE KARASZEGI, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, School District of the Township of Fairfield, Essex County ("Board"), brings charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent, Ellen Taussi ("Taussi"), a tenured administrative support staff employee, and seeks her removal. On October 15, 2007, the Board filed the following with the Department of Education: sworn tenure charges and statement of evidence, certificate of determination for filing tenure charges and proofs of service. On October 22, 2007, the respondent's answer was filed with the Department.

The Department transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on October 25, 2007 for a hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b). On October 29, 2007, the case was assigned to me and on October 31, 2007, a telephone conference was held in order to set forth a proposed schedule for the hearing of this matter.

On January 10, 2008, counsel for the Board provided the OAL and petitioner's counsel with the attached copy of an irrevocable letter of resignation from respondent, effective January 7, 2008, and a resolution from the Board, dated January 8, 2008, accepting respondent's resignation and withdrawing the tenure charges.

FINDING

Having reviewed the documents submitted in this matter, I FIND that respondent has irrevocably resigned from her public employment as an administrative support staff employee, effective January 7, 2008. I FIND respondent does not hold a certificate issued by the New Jersey Department of Education. I also FIND that the standards set forth in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frank Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 have been met.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the tenure charges certified by the School District of the Township of Fairfield against respondent be DISMISSED as moot.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." AGENCY DKT. NO. 69-3/07

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GEORGE C. LANGLEY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF	:	DECISION
BRIDGETON, CUMBERLAND COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter, the parties' proposed "Settlement Agreement, Approved Leave of Absence and Resignation," and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner cannot accept the proposed settlement as recommended by the OAL.

Initially, the Commissioner emphasizes that – pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a), – once tenure charges have been certified by a board of education, they may be settled only with the Commissioner's approval, and that any proposed settlement, whether submitted to the Commissioner or to the Administrative Law Judge, must address the standards expressly established for this purpose by the State Board of Education. In re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846. Specifically, a proposed settlement must: 1) be accompanied by documentation as to the nature of the charges; 2) include an explanation of the circumstances justifying settlement; 3) evidence the consent of both the charged and the charging parties; 4) indicate that the charged party entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his or her rights; 5) demonstrate that the agreement is in the public interest; and 6) indicate, where the charged party is a teaching staff member, that he or she has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible action against the staff member's certificate.

In the present matter, the Bridgeton Board of Education (Board) has offered no justification for settlement other than its desire to avoid the cost, uncertainty and inconvenience of litigation while still obtaining removal of the respondent from employment with the district – notwithstanding the well-established principle that, having once taken up the burden of tenure charges, a board may not lay it down without spreading forth on the record a reasonably specific explanation of why such charges need no longer be pursued or why it is now in the public interest not to pursue them. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Kenneth Smith, School District of Orange, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner March 22, 1982, decision on remand June 16, 1983, aff'd with modification by the State Board of Education November 2, 1983, aff'd N.J. Superior Court, Appellate Division, January 30, 1986. In the latter regard, the Commissioner stresses that the mere fact that the terms of a proposed tenure settlement call for the teaching staff member's resignation or retirement does not in and of itself assure that the Cardonick standards have been met, since the Commissioner's concern for the public interest extends beyond the boundaries of the particular district certifying the tenure charges. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Corey Younger, State-operated School District of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County, decided September 7, 1999, and In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Elmena Jean, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, decided October 4, 1999.

Furthermore, the record of this matter provides no indication that the respondent understands the Commissioner's duty, pursuant to Cardonick, supra, and N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.1 et seq., to refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of his teaching certificate – an omission that would itself preclude approval of the present settlement under any circumstances.

Finally, with respect to the Board's response to inquiries regarding the respondent's employment with the district (Term #4), the Commissioner reminds the parties that the Board's actions must at a minimum comport with the requirements of New Jersey's Open Public Records Act, N.J.S.A. 47:1A-1 et seq., which states that the following employment information shall be public:

> An individual's name, title, position, salary, payroll record, length of service in the instrumentality of government and in the government, date of separation and the reason therefor; and the amount and type of any pension received . (emphasis added) N.J.S.A. 47:1A-10[1]

Accordingly, the proposed settlement and the Initial Decision of the OAL recommending its approval are hereby rejected, and this matter is remanded to the OAL for further proceedings addressing the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unable to reach agreement under these conditions, the tenure charges shall duly proceed to plenary hearing.[2]

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 2/19/08

Date of Mailing: 2/21/08

[1] The Commissioner additionally reminds the parties that the tenure charges and related case documents, unless sealed for good cause shown, are also a matter of public record. See Williams v. the Board of Education of the Atlantic City Public Schools et al., 329 N.J. Super. 308 (App. Div. 2000); see also N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.1(a).

[2] In so holding the Commissioner stresses that she does not preclude the possibility of settlement in this matter, but cannot meet her broader obligation to the schools and children of this State without ensuring that proposed tenure settlements are consistent with the standards of Cardonick, supra.

[3] This decision may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq.

RESOLUTION OF
THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF BRIDGETON

WHEREAS, the Board of Education has filed tenure charges against George C. Langley for conduct unbecoming a teacher, insubordination, inefficiency, incapacity and failure to discharge responsibilities, excessive absenteeism and other just cause; and

WHEREAS, one day of trial was scheduled in connection with the hearing and all parties appeared; and

WHEREAS, there are extensive documents, proofs and trial days possible for this matter to proceed; and

WHEREAS, the parties have conferred;

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, as follows:

The Bridgeton Board of Education hereby determines that it is in its best interest and the best interests of the public to agree to the settlement agreement attached hereto which includes the resignation of George C. Langley from employment in the School District of the City of Bridgeton and which agreement resolves the tenure charge;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that among the reasons the Board of Education determines that this is in its best interest are as follows:

1. It is anticipated that trial in this matter may take an additional seven (7) to eight (8) full days.

2. The anticipated trial would result in substantial financial expense to the Bridgeton Board of Education both with respect to attorney's fees and loss of staff time.

3. It is anticipated that the loss of work days for the Superintendent of Schools, the Principal of West Avenue School, the Assistant Principal of West Avenue School, the Human Resources Director, and Supervisors involved in this case as well as Teachers and witnesses would amount to over thirty (30) days in lost work time for school personnel.

4. The Board of Education is already paying George C. Langley his salary under the tenure hearing law and Mr. Langley's suspension of pay for one hundred twenty (120) days has expired.

5. Due to the complicated and involved nature of this tenure hearing, it is probable that the final resolution, if this matter were to go to trial, could extend beyond the time frame that the Board has agreed to pay Mr. Langley pursuant to the agreement between the parties. Due to the uncertainties of litigation, the Board of Education determines that it is in its best interest to approve the agreement that is set forth hereinafter which will bring finality to this matter and avoid possible continued litigation and expense.

6. It is clearly a business decision to come to the agreement between the Board of Education and George C. Langley as it will clearly save the Board of Education money and the agreement will provide to the Board of Education the desired result of having Mr. Langley removed as a Teacher in the School District.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the President of the Board of Education and the School Business Administrator are hereby authorized to execute this agreement on behalf of the Bridgeton Board of Education.

The foregoing resolution was moved by Marie Bernstein; and seconded by Brenda Dellaquilla.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT, APPROVED LEAVE OF ABSENCE AND RESIGNATION

This Settlement Agreement, Approved Leave of Absence and Resignation (the "Agreement"), is entered into this 11th day of December, 2007, by and between GEORGE C. LANGLEY ("Mr. Langley") and the BRIDGETON BOARD OF EDUCATION, CUMBERLAND COUNTY (the "Board") (collectively, the "Parties"). For purposes of this Agreement, the term the "Board" shall mean and include the Bridgeton Board of Education, a body public. The term "Mr. Langley" shall mean and include George C. Langley and any and all of his heirs, executors, administrators, successors, predecessors, assigns, agents, representatives and privies. This Agreement constitutes the complete and final settlement of any and all disputes arising from or relating to Mr. Langley's employment by the Board.

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Board prepared and filed tenure charges ("Tenure Charges") based on charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher, insubordination, inefficiency, incapacity and failure to discharge responsibilities, and excessive absenteeism against Mr. Langley pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. and said charges were certified on March 8, 2007 and are pending under Agency Docket No. 69-3/07 and OAL Docket No. EDUTH 02212-2007S; and

WHEREAS, the Parties desire to enter into this Agreement to fully and finally settle and resolve any and all claims, complaints, charges and actions of any kind whatsoever, whether known or unknown, which the Board may have against Mr. Langley; and

WHEREAS, the Board acknowledges and agrees that this Agreement shall cause the Board to voluntarily dismiss, waive and withdraw any and all administrative actions of any kind against Mr. Langley and the Board has agreed to request that the Commissioner of Education approve the Board's voluntary dismissal of the tenure charges with prejudice;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and mutual covenants contained in this Agreement, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. (A) Mr. Langley agrees that upon signing this Agreement and by signing his Resignation which is attached hereto as Appendix A, he is irrevocably resigning his employment with the Board effective June 30, 2008.

(B) As a result of the tenure charges being certified on March 8, 2007 and contested as represented in the prior introduction, Mr. Langley's pay was stopped for 120 days, but began again on September 1, 2007. All parties, to avoid the litigation of the contested tenure matter before an administrative law judge and specifically, the Board, in exchange for Mr. Langley's resignation pursuant to paragraph 1(A) above, agrees to place Mr. Langley on paid leave of absence until June 30, 2008.

2. (A) In addition, the Board shall pay to Mr. Langley a lump sum payment in the amount of TWELVE THOUSAND ($12,000.00) DOLLARS on June 30, 2008 for his release of any and all claims, complaints, charges and actions of any kind and/or nature whatsoever, whether known or unknown, that he may have regarding the Board including entitlement to future employment. The only contingency to this payment is the prior approval by the Commissioner of Education of this settlement.

(B) Mr. Langley, for the consideration given by the Board as set forth above, which he acknowledges is adequate and satisfactory to him, hereby commits as follows:

(1) Mr. Langley irrevocably and unconditionally remises, releases, waives and forever discharges the Board from any and all manner of liabilities, actions, causes of action, contracts, agreements, promises, claims and demands of any kind or nature whatsoever, in law or equity, whether known or unknown, which Mr. Langley has ever had or now has against the Board in connection with his employment with the Board, the resignation of his employment, compensation and/or benefits with the Board and the charges. Mr. Langley further understands and agrees that this Agreement shall act as a complete bar to any claim, demand or action of any kind whatsoever which could be or could have been brought by him and which seeks personal, equitable or monetary relief for him against the Board, including but not limited to: any claims of wrongful discharge; breach of express or implied contract; fraud; discrimination; retaliation; wages; benefits; other compensation; misrepresentation; defamation; liability in negligence or tort; and any claims of any kind which may be brought in any court of law or equity or an administrative agency; claims for arbitration in any forum; the U.S. Constitution, as amended; the Constitution of the State of New Jersey; Title VII of the U.S. Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the U.S. Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967; the U.S. Americans with Disabilities Act; the U.S. Age Discrimination in Employment Act; the U.S. Employment Retirement Income Security Act; the U.S. Fair Labor Standards Act; the United States Family and Medical Leave Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Department of Personnel; and any other federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance relating to employment; related torts; and employment, discrimination; employee benefits; collective bargaining agreement; and the termination of employment; and any other claim arising from or relating to Mr. Langley's employment. Mr. Langley understands that he is not releasing any claims he may have to enforce the provisions of this Agreement. This release covers both claims that Mr. Langley knows about and those he may not know about, except for claims (I) that may arise after the date Mr. Langley executes this Agreement; (ii) for a breach of this Agreement; or (iii) with respect to any benefits in which Mr. Langley has a vested interest under the terms and conditions of any of the Board's employee benefit plans. Mr. Langley further agrees not to file a lawsuit or administrative claim or demand for arbitration to assert any of the claims he has given up, released or waived. Any substantial or material breach of this Agreement shall entitle the non-breaching party to an injunction or any action at law or equity to remedy the breach and an award of reasonable attorneys' fees, other professional fees, costs and expenses incurred to remedy and defend against said breach.

3. The Board agrees to request that the Commissioner of Education approve the Board's voluntary dismissal of the tenure charges, Agency Docket No. 69-3/07, OAL Docket No. EDUTH 02212-2007S, with prejudice in light of Mr. Langley's resignation and the lump sum consideration paid and the paid and unpaid leave of absence granted to him by the Board. In executing this Agreement, Mr. Langley understands the ultimate decision with regard to the resolution of the tenure charges lies with the Commissioner of Education and in the event that the New Jersey Commissioner of Education rejects the settlement between the Board and Mr. Langley, then this agreement is completely null and void and the tenure charges currently pending will continue to be processed.

4. With respect to any inquiries directed to the Bridgeton School Board's Department of Human Resources regarding Mr. Langley's status, the Board shall have the responsibility only as provided below. If any inquiries are made, there will be a neutral reference and Appendix B shall be read to the inquiring party.

5. This Agreement is not and shall not in any way be deemed to constitute an admission or evidence of any wrongdoing or liability on the part of the Board or Mr. Langley. Rather, this Agreement constitutes the good faith settlement and release of disputed claims, and it is acknowledged and agreed by the Parties that this Agreement is being entered into by the Parties solely to avoid the burden, expense, delay and uncertainties of further litigation and to fully and finally resolve, settle and dismiss with prejudice, any and all claims of any kind whatsoever, whether known or unknown, which the Board or Mr. Langley has ever had or now has against each other arising out of or relating to his employment with the Board.

6. This Agreement may not be changed orally and no modification, amendment or waiver of any provision contained in this Agreement, or any future representation, promise or condition in connection with the subject matter of this Agreement shall be binding upon any party hereto unless made in writing and signed by such party and subject to approval by the Board.

7. This Agreement contains the entire agreement and complete settlement between the Parties and supersedes any and all previous agreements of any kind whatsoever between them, whether written or oral. All prior and contemporaneous discussions and negotiations have been and are merged and integrated into, and are superseded by this Agreement. This is an integrated document.

8. In the event that any provision of this Agreement or the application thereof should be held to be void, voidable, unlawful or, for any reason, unenforceable, the remaining portion shall remain in full force and effect and to that end, the provisions of this Agreement are declared to be severable.

This Agreement is made and entered into, and shall be subject to, governed by and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey and shall be fully enforceable in the courts of that state, without regard to principles of conflict of laws. The parties agree that any suit, action or other legal proceeding arising out of th Agreement shall be brought in the Superior Court for the State of New Jersey, County of Cumberland.

9. Mr. Langley agrees that he shall be responsible for his own attorney's fees and costs incurred in connection with any matter mentioned in this Agreement.

10. In executing this Agreement, Mr. Langley has had an opportunity to speak to his attorney and has relied upon the legal advice of his attorney as to the terms of this Agreement, which have been completely read by him and explained by his attorney, and those terms are fully understood and voluntarily accepted.

11. This Agreement shall not be executed in counterparts and shall be enforceable only if executed by Mr. Langley and the Board.

12. This Agreement shall become effective immediately following the execution by Mr. Langley and the Board.

WHEREFORE, intending to be legally bound, the Parties have agreed to the aforesaid terms and indicate their agreement by signing below.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a resident of Ewing Township – contested respondent's determination that her niece, R.H., is ineligible to attend school in respondent's district, claiming that R.H. resides with her because the child's father, who has full legal custody, works long hours as a truck driver. Petitioner acknowledged that she receives financial assistance from R.H.'s father for clothing and medical costs. Respondent district asserts that R.H. is not entitled to a free education in Ewing and counterclaimed for tuition reimbursement.

The ALJ found that: legal custody of R.H. lies with her father; petitioner does not support R.H. gratis; the record is absent of evidence to show that there is a family or economic hardship pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b) and N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.2(a); and the father's work schedule does not constitute hardship for purposes of eligibility for public school attendance at an out-of-district school. The ALJ concluded that R.H. is not eligible for a free public education in Ewing township, and ordered the petitioner to pay the Board $44.43 per day for each day of R.H.'s ineligible attendance.

Upon a full and independent review of this matter, the Commissioner concurred with the findings of the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record in this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been carefully reviewed. No exceptions were filed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) analysis and adopts the recommended decision as the final decision in this case. Accordingly, the minor child, R.H., is not entitled to a free public education in respondent's district; the petition is hereby dismissed, and the petitioner is ordered to remit to respondent $44. 43 for each day that R.H. attended school in Ewing.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 8546-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 289-10/07

R.C., O/B/O MINOR CHILD, R.H.
Petitioner,
v.
EWING TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION, MERCER COUNTY,
Respondent.

R.C., petitioner, pro se

Jeffrey F. Belz, Esq., for respondent Ewing Township Board of Education

Record Closed: November 29, 2007 Decided: January 10, 2008

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ (t/a):

Petitioner is single and rents a house in Ewing Township, Mercer County, New Jersey. She is the aunt of R.H. R.H. is petitioner's brother's daughter. Petitioner says R.H. lives with her in Ewing Township, along with two granddaughters who also live in her home. Petitioner appeals the residency determination reached by the Ewing Township Board of Education (Board) that R.H. is neither domiciled nor a resident of the school district for purposes of attending the Board's schools free of charge.

Simultaneous to the Board determining that R.H. is not a resident of Ewing Township and not otherwise entitled to attend its schools free of charge, it also demanded tuition payment from petitioner in the amount of $44.43 a day for the education R.H. received in its schools between October 8, 2007 and the date this dispute is finally resolved. Pending disposition of this matter, R.H. continues in Ewing Township school attendance.

Petitioner filed her pro se residency appeal October 11, 2007 with the Commissioner of Education after which the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing. In its filed Answer, the Board asserts J.H. resides with her own biological mother [1] in another school district and that she should attend public school in that district. The Board counterclaims for tuition for the time J.H. was, it asserts, improperly enrolled in its schools on the strength of an affidavit filed by petitioner.

A hearing was conducted November 28, 2007 at the OAL, Mercerville after which the record closed November 29, 2007. The conclusion is reached in this initial decision that J.H. is not eligible by reason of residency or domicility to attend the Board's schools free of charge, and it is also concluded that petitioner is obligated to pay it $44.43 per diem for each and every day school was open for instructional purposes from October 8, 2007 when J.H. was enrolled on the strength of the assertedly false affidavit she filed.

ISSUES

The issues to be decided are whether R.H. is entitled to be enrolled in the Board free of charge under N.J.S.A. 38-1 for purposes of receiving a thorough and efficient program of Education. If not, is petitioner obligated to pay the Board $44.43 per diem for each and every day school was open for instructional purposes from October 8 forward.

FACTS

Except as otherwise noted, the facts established by a preponderance of credible evidence in the record are these.

1. R.H. is the daughter of petitioner's brother.

2. The father has full legal custody of R.H.

3. Petitioner lived in Trenton until on or about August 20, 2007 when she moved to Ewing Township.

[1] While the counterclaim specifically refers to R.H. as living in another school district with her mother, the evidence adduced at the November 28 hearing affirmatively shows the mother is not involved in this matter in any way.

3A. Petitioner says that R.H. has lived with her since she was about two years old. There is no corroborating evidence to support this claim.

3B. Petitioner sought to enroll R.H. in the Ewing Public Schools as a resident of Ewing. School officials required the father to file a Verified Information Sheet (P-1). School officials also required petitioner to file an affidavit (P-2), and a Residency Verification/Registration Form (P-3) to support the assertion R.H. is entitled to attend its school free of charge.

4. Petitioner acknowledges in testimony that her brother pays her, tenders her, gives her $100 a week for the support of R.H. (See, P-1, Id.)

4A. Father acknowledges in the Information Sheet (P-1) that he "contributes toward support of said [R.H.] child."

5. Father is gainfully employed as a truck driver. He did not testify at the hearing, nor did he attend the hearing. Petitioner says father had lived in Florence, New Jersey until sometime in the summer of 2007 when he moved to Trenton. However, in the Residency Verification Form (P-3) filed by petitioner, petitioner says father lives in Lawrence, New Jersey.

5A. Father reports in the Information Sheet (P-1) that he works from 5 a.m. in the morning. Related to that assertion petitioner attests the reason R.H. lives with her is "Due to [father's] early hrs. and late return home from work." (P-2)

5B. After the requested documents were filed with school authorities, the attendance and residency officer for the Board, David J. Mikalauskas, sent petitioner a Notice of Determination of Eligibility the following day, September 27, 2007, stating R.H. is not entitled to a free education in the Ewing school district petitioner failed to show a hardship.

5C. Petitioner acknowledges she receives assistance from father regarding clothing costs for R.H. and medical payments.

5D. While not precise, the testimony of petitioner is sufficient to find as fact that R.H. stays overnight with her father from time-to-time, and on the weekends, and that he visits her at petitioner's house in Ewing.

6. Petitioner testified that prior to her moving to Ewing Township during the 2007 summer months, she transported R.H. to and from school in Bordentown, New Jersey. In the filed Residency Verification Form (P-3), she says the prior school of attendance was the Miriam Morris School on South Broad Street in Hamilton Township.

7. J.H. began attending the Ewing Township public schools on October 8, 2007. She remains enrolled as a student pending disposition of this matter.

8. The Board seeks tuition payment from petitioner in the amount of $44.43 per day for each day R.H. was enrolled in its schools and schools were open for instructional purposes. This amount represents the average per pupil cost in the Township based on its current expense costs, on a 181 school day academic year, and, the number of average daily-enrolled students.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 provides that:

> Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:
>
> a. Any person domiciled who is domiciled within the school district.
>
> b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district, if so required by the board a sworn statement that he is domiciled within the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term * * * and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district . . .
> If in the judgment of the board of education the evidence does not support the validity of the claim by the resident, the board may deny admission to the child. The resident may contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 > days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner on the validity of the claim and shall heave the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection. . .

> No child shall be denied admission during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. In the event the child is currently enrolled in the district, the student shall not be removed from school during he 21-day period in which the resident may contest the board's decision nor during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. If in the judgment of the commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the resident, he shall assess the resident tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the school district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to t e local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner win which orders of the commissioner are enforced . . .

For purposes of this statute regarding education for out-of-district students based on hardship, the domicile of an unemancipated child is the domicile of the parent, custodian, or guardian. P.B.K. v. Board of Educ. of The Borough of Tenafly, 343 N.J. Super. 419 (App. Div. 2001) In this case, and with father having full custody of J.H., her domicile is Lawrence or Trenton, whichever town in which father resides. Recall that petitioner testified father lives in Trenton, while he reports in his filed Verified Information Sheet (P-1) that he lives in Lawrence, New Jersey.

N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1 (a) provides that a student is eligible to attend school in a school district if the student is domiciled with the district. Subparagraph 1 of the same rule states that a student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is living with a parent or legal guardian whose permanent home is within the district. Such is not the case here. Petitioner is neither the parent nor legal guardian of R.H.

Consequently, R.H. is not eligible to attend the Ewing Township schools by reason of domicility within the township. R.H. is not domiciled within the Township.

Next, the statute would allow for R.H. to attend the Ewing schools if certain conditions were met. One, the person with whom she is staying is a resident of Ewing. The Board does not dispute petitioner is a resident of Ewing Township. The second condition of the statute requires petitioner to support R.H. gratis 'as if [she] were [petitioner's] own child . . . and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements' , or that the child resides with another because of family or economic hardship.

N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.2 (a) 1 instructs that an otherwise eligible student, kept in the home of a person other than the student's parent or legal guardian, is eligible to attend school in that school district if:

> i. The student's parent or guardian has filed, together with documentation to support its validity, a sworn statement that he or she is not capable of supporting or providing care for the student due to family or economic hardship and that the student is not residing with the other person solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education.

The same rule, at (a) 4 allows:

> 4. A student shall not be deemed ineligible under this subsection solely because a parent or legal guardian gives gifts or makes limited contributions, financial or otherwise, toward the welfare of the student, provided that the resident keeping the student received no payment or other remuneration from the parent or guardian for regular maintenance of the student.

Petitioner has the burden of persuasion to demonstrate R.H. is entitled to attend the Ewing schools free of charge based on paragraph (b) (1) of the preceding statute and the cited administrative rules.

The evidence is that father contributes $100 a week for the support of R.H. While there are no hard and fast rules regarding what constitutes a 'limited contribution' for the maintenance of a child, a regular $100 a week contribution is more than a 'limited' contribution by any reasonable standard. Essentially, father is paying for the support of R.H. while she is at petitioner's home and, consequently, the conclusion must be drawn that petitioner does not support R.H. gratis, as is required by the statute.

While there is some evidence to show father and daughter more likely than not spend weekends together at father's home, a finding in this regard is not essential for disposition of this case.

Petitioner attests in her affidavit that the reason R.H. is at her home is not because R.H. has lived with her since she has been two years old, but because father goes to work early in the morning and does not return until late at night. It may be officially noted that such a circumstance is faced by many families every day of the week in single families and when both parents are present. While it is a difficult situation, the fact of early work and late return home does not constitute hardship for purposes of eligibility for public school attendance at an out-of-district school.

CONCLUSIONS

The attendance and residency officer for the Board concluded that petitioner failed to show a 'hardship' existed as the basis for the enrollment of R.H. in Township schools. I CONCLUDE petitioner failed in her burden to demonstrate by a preponderance of credible evidence that R.H is entitled to attend the Ewing schools free of charge under N.J.S.A. 18;38- b (1). The record is absent evidence to show there is hardship based on the facts presented. In addition, the record shows petitioner does not support R.H. gratis contrary to the requirement of the law.

Having concluded petitioner failed to show R.H. is eligible for free public school attendance at the Ewing Township public schools by reason of domicile, or, on the strength of her affidavit, I NOW FIND AND CONCLUDE petitioner is obligated to pay the Board $44.43 per day for each day R.H. was enrolled in its schools while open for instructional purposes.

It is so ORDERED

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

PETITIONERS, :

V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTHERN VALLEY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY, : DECISION

RESPONDENT. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners initially sought an emergent relief order directing respondent Board to effectuate their son's placement in an appropriate alternative education program, including instruction in advanced placement courses, following his long-term suspension in his senior year of high school; petitioners also sought an order directing the Board to treat J.L.'s college applications and recommendations no differently than it would for any other student. The parties jointly agreed to have the matter decided based on their written submissions and off-the-record discussions prior to the hearing, and they waived the right to have the matter decided under the standards for emergent relief established in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982); effectively, the parties agreed that the ALJ's determinations following the emergent relief hearing would constitute an Initial Decision rather than an interim order addressing the petitioner's request for emergent relief.

The ALJ dismissed the petition, ordering that: the Board provide an Alternative Education Program to J.L. consisting of home-based instruction in physical education and English, and petitioner's requests for transcripts and/or teacher recommendations for college applications be forwarded by the school district's Director of Guidance to the appropriate staff members without comment.

The Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter, noting that the provisions of the order included in the Initial Decision are harmonious with pertinent regulations, and have not been the subject of exceptions by either party.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTHERN VALLEY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter – including the audio tape of the hearing which took place in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 31, 2007, the recommended "Order-Emergency Relief" dated January 2, 2008, and the "Initial Decision Dismissal" dated January 9, 2008 – have been reviewed. No exceptions have been filed.

Petitioners' minor child, J.L. – a high school senior – was given a long-term suspension as a result of behavior which he does not substantially deny. The behavior also led to family court orders which, inter alia, directed that J.L. attend a Suspension Alternative Program (SAP) in Hackensack, New Jersey. It is undisputed that the respondent district is sending J.L. assignments in English and Physical Education – the only two remaining courses that he needs for graduation – and that a certified teacher at the SAP has been supervising J.L.'s execution of the assignments.

It is also undisputed that J.L. had been taking Advanced Placement (AP) courses at the time of his suspension from school on November 26, 2007. In their petition of appeal, petitioners requested that the district provide J.L. with an alternative educational program and that instruction in the AP courses be included as part of that program. Further, petitioners requested that J.L.'s college applications be processed no differently than those of other twelfth graders, and that no information about the discipline imposed upon J.L. or the Family Court proceedings be included in J.L.'s transcripts.

In its answering papers, respondent advised that transcripts for J.L.'s college applications were being sent out on a timely basis, with no "disciplinary records." As to J.L.'s educational program, respondent stated that if the SAP program were terminated by the court, respondent would provide J.L. with home instruction – in English and physical education only – until graduation.

Respondent outlined its analysis concerning its obligations to J.L. as follows. Under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(a)(9), each student given a long-term suspension must be provided with "educational services, either in school or out of school, that are comparable to those provided in the public schools for students of similar grades and attainments, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, which may include a public education program provided in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-9 or 10." N.J.A.C. 6A:16-9.1 et seq. pertains to alternative education programs and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-10.1 et seq. pertains to home (or out of school) instruction.

Respondent reasoned that since J.L. was in a court ordered alternative program, N.J.A.C. 6A:16-9.2 dictated the nature of the educational benefits that he was entitled to receive. More specifically, respondent relied on N.J.A.C. 6A:16-9.2(a)(8) for the proposition that J.L.'s entitlement was limited to "[a]cademic instruction sufficient to fulfill graduation requirements, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.1 . . . ." To fulfill respondent's graduation requirements, which – according to respondent – are in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.1, J.L. needs instruction in English and physical education for the duration of this school year. Accordingly, respondent's position is that its obligation to J.L. goes no further than the provision of instruction in those two subjects. AP subjects are not required for graduation and, indeed, it would be a significant and unjustifiable burden on the district's resources to provide J.L. with tutors for the various advanced courses he had been taking.

Notwithstanding that petitioners initially applied for emergent relief, on the day of the hearing the parties mutually agreed as follows:

1. They would accept a decision by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) based upon the parties' written submissions, supplemented by off-the-record discussions prior to the hearing; and

2. They waived the right to have the matter decided under the standards for emergent relief articulated in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).

Thus, the parties effectively agreed that the ALJ's determinations concerning the information proffered at the December 31, 2007 hearing would constitute an Initial Decision on the underlying appeal, rather than an interim order addressing petitioner's request for emergent relief.[1]

Without sharing his analysis of the facts and law, the ALJ dismissed the petition with the following conditions, to which no exceptions have been filed.[2] The ALJ ordered: 1) that respondent provide home instruction to J.L. in English and physical education – the physical education instruction to consist of written assignments in lieu of physical performance;[3] 2) that respondent's guidance counselor process transcript requests and forward reference requests to the designated teachers, who are free to respond – or not – as their conscience dictates; 3) that "to the extent permitted by law, the terms of this Order shall remain confidential";[4] and 4) that the petition be dismissed.

[1] It was for this reason that on January 9, 2008, the ALJ "re-identified" the action taken in his January 2 emergent relief order as an Initial Decision – Dismissal.

[2] The Commissioner notes that the the ALJ's reference on the audio tape of the hearing to off-the-record discussions, the lack of formal factual and legal analysis in the Initial Decision, and the absence of exceptions to the decision suggest a voluntary resolution by the parties.

Upon consideration of the record, the Initial Decision and the audio tape of the OAL hearing, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case. In light of the regulatory provisions set forth above, the commissioner cannot conclude that respondent's actions are arbitrary or capricious. Further, the provisions of the order included in the Initial Decision are harmonious with the pertinent regulations, and have not been the subject of exceptions by either party.

Accordingly, the petition is dismissed without prejudice, subject to conformance with the provisions of the order incorporated into the Initial Decision.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTHERN VALLEY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,
Respondent.

James L. Plosia, Jr., Esq., for respondent (Apruzzese, McDermott, Mastro & Murphy)

Record Closed: December 31, 2007 Decided: January 9, 2008

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

Petitioner appeared on December 31, 2007, on an application for Emergency Relief seeking an order directing respondent the Board of Education of the Northern Valley Regional High School District, Bergen County (District) to effectuate J.L.'s placement in an appropriate alternative education program, and directing the District to confirm that it will treat J.L.'s college applications and related recommendations no differently than it would for any other student.

Ordinarily a request for interim relief or stay under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 requires as follows:

(b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The parties however jointly requested and agreed that I make a determination based on their respective proffers in their written submissions without application of, or being bound by, the standards of Crowe v. DeGioia, after which petitioner would withdraw its Petition without prejudice.

The District suspended J.L. from school effective November 26, 2007. A hearing originally scheduled before the Board of Education had been adjourned at the request of petitioner. A hearing is now scheduled for January 14, 2007. At an initial hearing in Superior Court of New Jersey-Chancery Division, Family-Part, Bergen County, a juvenile court order issued placing J.L. in a Detention Alternative Program (DAP) and house arrest except for school or religious matters. The Court then directed J.L. to attend the Suspension Alternative Program (SAP) in Hackensack, which is not affiliated with the District. Petitioner complains that there is no effective instruction being provided to J.L. in the SAP.

The District contends that its obligation to provide an alternative education program is dictated by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-9.2(a)8, which only requires academic instruction sufficient to fulfill graduation requirements. It represents that J.L. already had a sufficient number of credits to graduate by the end of his Junior year and that the only remaining core course requirements for his Senior year are physical education and English, instruction in which he is receiving at the SAP. Petitioner seeks an alternative education program that will be effective and will continue, in addition to physical education and English, instruction in four elective advanced placement courses, which J.L. had been taking prior to his suspension. For support of its claim of entitlement to the continuation of these additional courses in an alternative education program, petitioner relies on N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(a)9, which requires, during long-term suspensions, that educational services be provided, either in school or out of school, that are comparable to those provided in the public schools for students of similar grades and attainment.

I have also been requested by the parties to address the issue of teacher recommendations that may accompany college entrance applications.

After careful consideration of the proffers of both parties as well as their representations on the record, including an agreement to accept a determination by me without an analysis of the Crowe v. DeGioia standards, I CONCLUDE that the following Order best harmonizes the regulations relied on by each party in light of the proffered facts.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER that:

1. The District shall provide an Alternative Education Program to J.L., which shall consist of home-based instruction in physical education and English to be provided by a certified teacher from the District. The physical education instruction shall consist of written assignments in lieu of actual physical performance.
2. Petitioner shall forward any requests for transcripts and/or college application-related teacher recommendations to the District's Director of Guidance. Such requests shall be forwarded by the Director of Guidance to the appropriate teachers without comment. Such teachers shall be free to respond to the recommendation requests in accordance with their own conscience.

3. Based on the agreement of the parties as stated on the record, in view of this Order, the instant Petition is dismissed without prejudice.

4. To the extent permitted by law, the terms of this Order shall remain confidential.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." The record of these consolidated matters, the parties' proposed Stipulation of Settlement and Release with respect to each respondent, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the proposed settlement is consistent with established standards governing settlement of tenure matters. In re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, aff'd State Board April 6, 1983, 1990 S.L.D. 842, 846; N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a).*

Jerry N. Friedland, Esq., for Respondent Irene Nichols

Record Closed: December 13, 2007 Decided: January 8, 2008

BEFORE MARIA MANCINI LA FIANDRA, ALJ:

These matters were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") from the Department of Education, separately, on August 7, 2006, November 15, 2006 and March 12, 2007, for hearing as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

On January 10, 2007, the Board filed a motion to consolidate the matters bearing OAL Dkt. Nos. EDU 9056-06 and EDU 11124-2006. An order of consolidation was entered on January 24, 2007 granting the Board's motion to consolidate these two matters. Subsequently, the matter bearing OAL Dkt. No. EDU 3320-07 was transmitted to the OAL. A motion to consolidate this case was filed on April 20, 2007 and an order granting consolidation was entered on May 17, 2007.

A hearing was scheduled for numerous days at the OAL, 33 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey. Prior to the hearing scheduled for December 4, 2007, settlement discussions were held and a settlement was reached.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Stipulation of Settlement and Release indicating the terms thereof as well as the Certification from the Board approving the settlement, which are attached and fully incorporated herein.

In cases where, as here, tenure charges have been certified to the Commissioner, such charges may only be withdrawn or settled with the Commissioner's approval and, pursuant to regulation, the proposed settlement or withdrawal must address specific standards as established by the State Board of Education in the matter entitled In re Cardonick, State Board decision, April 6, 1983 (1996 School Law Decisions, 842, 846). N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6.

Those standards require that the proposal be accompanied by documentation as to the nature of the charges. In these three consolidated cases, the Respondents were charged with misconduct related to their respective positions. The misconduct involved the failure to fulfill duties as required by their respective positions and the mishandling of certain funds within East Orange Campus High School. In addition, Respondent James was charged with aiding and abetting fraud, misrepresentation and/or theft by deception. The charges are explicitly and specifically detailed in documentation transmitted to OAL as the "Sworn Tenure Charges" against each of the Respondents.

I FIND, therefore, the first requirement of the regulation has been satisfied.

Second, the regulation requires the circumstances justifying settlement or withdrawal be explained. In this case, at the time of settlement, eleven days of hearings had been held; and twenty-six additional days had been scheduled up to the end of June 2008 with the caveat that more days might be required. Several witnesses were located out of state and would have to travel substantial distances and incur expenses in order to appear. In addition, during the eleven days of testimony, it became apparent that there were significant credibility and proof problems with the case.

The consent of the parties, the indication that the charged parties entered into the agreement with a full understanding of their rights, and the showing that the Respondents, all teaching staff members, had been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of positions to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate are indicated by and in the written agreements as will as having been made on the record by all Respondents on December 4, 2007.

With respect to showing that these agreements are in the public interest, because twenty-five additional hearing days will not be required, the parties, in particular, the Board herein, will save the expenses connected with the litigation and, perhaps more importantly, the District will be spared the disruption of having to cover positions for those employees who are called to appear as witnesses over such an extended period of time.

Finally, also in the public interest is the finality inherent in such settlements. The three positions occupied by Respondents can be filled on a permanent basis when the Commissioner approves the agreements.

Accordingly, I FIND the settlement agreements meets the standards as established by the State Board of Education and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I further FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore, ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Specifically exempted from this release are any claims arising under the Workers' Compensation Act, N.J.S.A. 34:15-1 et seq., and for health insurance continuation coverage under and pursuant to Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act (commonly referred to as "COBRA"), provided that Respondent is not entitled to

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF ANTHONY PARASKEVOPOULOS	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF	:	DECISION
THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause against respondent, a tenured music teacher, and sought his removal from employment in the Newark Public Schools. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on his behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant removal of the respondent from his tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the Board, ordered respondent dismissed from his tenured position, and transmitted a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for action as that body deems appropriate.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

AGENCY DKT NO. 22-1/08

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF ANTHONY PARASKEVOPOULOS	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF	:	DECISION
THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

For the District, Adam S. Herman, Esq., Office of the General Counsel

No appearance by or on behalf of Anthony Paraskevopoulos

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on January 7, 2008 through the certification of tenure charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause by the State-operated School District of the City of Newark against Anthony Paraskevopoulos, a tenured teacher in the District.

By notice dated January 7, 2008, the Commissioner directed respondent, via both certified and regular mail – the certified copy having been signed for on January 9, 2008 – to file an Answer to the tenure charges against him. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would, absent granting of an extension for good cause shown, result in the charges being deemed admitted by the charged employee. Because no reply reply has been received from respondent – or any attorney on his behalf – in response to the District's charges,[1] each count of the charges against respondent is deemed to be admitted.

The Commissioner has reviewed the tenure charges certified against respondent by the District and the statement of evidence in support of those charges, specifically:

> 1. Anthony Paraskevopoulos is a tenured teacher who was hired by the District on or about September 15, 2003. He has been assigned to the McKinley school as a teacher of music.
>
> 2. On or about May 7, 2007, Anthony Paraskevopoulos verbally reported to his principal, Ms. Carolyn Granato, that he observed another music teacher at McKinley school inappropriately touch students on multiple occasions.
>
> 3. Principal Granato reported the allegations made by Anthony Paraskevopoulos to the Division of Youth and Family Services.
>
> 4. Anthony Paraskevopoulos deliberately made a false statement to Principal Granato against another staff member.
>
> 5. On or about May 10, 2007, Anthony Paraskevopoulos admitted to Principal Granato that he fabricated the allegations of inappropriate touching of students by the other music teacher.
>
> 6. Anthony Paraskevopoulos either caused, and/or had the potential to cause, a severe negative impact on the District and its students, the Division of Youth and Family Services and the staff member who was the subject of Anthony Paraskevopoulos' deliberate false statement.
>
> 7. Anthony Paraskevopoulos' actions caused the District's administration to divert its time and attention from educational activities while dealing with the admittedly false allegations.
>
> 8. Anthony Paraskevopoulos' actions caused the Division of Youth and Family Services to divert its time and attention from legitimate allegations of child abuse and neglect.
>
> (Statement of Tenure Charges certified to the Commissioner January 7, 2008, Lydia Silva, Assistant Superintendent, State-operated School District of the City of Newark)

[1] It is noted that the District effectuated proper service by overnight mail sent on January 16, 2008.

Deeming such charges to be admitted, and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the allegations against him, the Commissioner finds that the District has demonstrated that respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct and other just cause, warranting dismissal from his tenured position.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the District, and respondent Anthony Paraskevopoulos is dismissed from his tenured teaching position in the District's employ as of the date of this decision. A copy of this decision will be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action as that body deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a resident of Ewing Township – contested respondent's determination that her niece, P.T., is ineligible to attend school in respondent's district, claiming that she has an order granting her residential custody of P.T. as of September 14, 2007. Respondent sought tuition reimbursement for the alleged period of ineligible attendance at the rate of $57.29 per day.

The ALJ found that: P.T. was not properly domiciled in respondent's school district as required under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a); petitioner does not support P.T. gratis, as P.T.'s mother makes a significant monthly contribution to her upkeep; petitioner's testimony that P.T.'s mother lives in an abusive atmosphere is unpersuasive; and petitioner has failed to demonstrate that P.T. is entitled to attend Ewing schools free of charge because of a family or economic hardship. The ALJ concluded that petitioner is obligated to pay respondent $57.29 per day for each day P.T. was enrolled in its schools while open for instructional purposes.

Upon a full and independent review of this matter, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision, and directed that petitioner be assessed tuition for P.T.'s period of ineligible attendance, as set forth by the ALJ.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs – for the reasons fully set forth by the Administrative Law Judge – that the petitioner has not demonstrated D.T.'s entitlement to attend the schools of the district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, and that the Ewing Township Board of Education is entitled to collect tuition for the period of her ineligible attendance.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL – finding D.T. ineligible to attend Ewing Township schools and directing the petitioner to pay the Ewing Township Board of Education $57.29 per day for each school day of D.T.'s enrollment from October 5, 2007 – is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 8545-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 288-10/07

L.T., O/B/O MINOR CHILD, P.T., Petitioner,
v.
EWING TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION, MERCER COUNTY,
Respondents.

L.T., petitioner, pro se

Jeffrey F. Belz, Esq., for respondent, Ewing Township Board of Education

Record Closed: December 5, 2007 Decided: January 22, 2008

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ (t/a)

Petitioner resides in Ewing Township, Mercer County, New Jersey. Her niece through marriage, P.T., her husband's sister's daughter, lives with her and her husband. P.T.'s parents live separately in Trenton, New Jersey. In a petition filed before the Commissioner of Education, petitioner seeks an Order to have her niece attend the public schools operated by the Ewing Township Board of Education (Board) free of charge. Petitioner makes claim that P.T. is entitled to such attendance ostensibly under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 (b) because she resides with her in Ewing Township and because the Honorable Audrey Peyton Blackburn, J.S.C., New Jersey Superior Court, Chancery Division - Family Part, issued an Order granting her residential custody of P.T. as of September 14, 2007. The Board says petitioner failed to carry her burden of persuasion to show P.T. is entitled to free education in its public school district.

In a counterclaim against petitioner, the Board seeks tuition payment in the amount of $57.29 a day for the education P.T. did receive in its schools between October 5, 2007, and the date this dispute is finally resolved. Pending disposition of this matter, R.H. continues in Ewing Township school attendance.

A hearing was conducted November 28, 2007, at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville, after which the record closed December 5, 2007, upon receipt of the Board's writing. The conclusion is reached in this Initial Decision that J.H. is not eligible by reason of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 (b) to attend the Ewing Township Board of Education schools free of charge. The conclusion is also reached that petitioner is obligated to pay the Ewing Township Board of Education $57.29 per diem for each and every day school was open for instructional purposes from October 5, 2007, when P.T. was enrolled on the strength of petitioner's claim of eligibility.

FACTS

Except as otherwise noted, the facts established by a preponderance of credible evidence in the record are these.

1. P.T. is the niece of petitioner by marriage.

2. P.T.'s mother is petitioner's husband's sister.

3. Mother lives in Trenton with her male friend in his house.

3A. According to petitioner, mother and her male friend have been in a relationship for seven years, but then later during the hearing, petitioner asserted the relationship has existed for only three years.

3B. Petitioner says the relationship between P.T.'s mother and the male friend foments much verbal abuse.

3C. Petitioner is not specific when she alleges P.T. needs to escape verbal abuse other than to say the abuse upsets P.T. who telephones her when the abuse begins.

3D. Despite the verbal abuse, mother operates a day care center from the house in which she lives with her male friend.

3E. When asked how a day care center can be operated in an atmosphere where verbal abuse is such that her niece calls her for assistance, petitioner testified she does not really know and that she is only concerned about her niece.

3F. Petitioner testified P.T. returns to her mother's house, that is, the house of her male friend, every week-end. When asked how P.T. could return to the environment she left or how the mother tolerates P.T. returning to the tension created by the asserted verbal abuse, petitioner explained she did not know and that, had she known, this hearing would have gone into such detail she would have told the mother to be present to give testimony.

3G. Petitioner testified mother is looking for her own house so she could have her day care center there.

4. At hearing, petitioner identified P.T.'s father as H.M. When reminded that she stated in an affidavit (R-3) filed with the Board attesting to the eligibility of P.T. to attend its schools, she stated the father's name was P.M., petitioner explained that she intended to identify him as P.M., but that a son, P.T.'s brother, is also called P.M.

4A. In an Information Sheet filed with the Board in support of her claim P.T. is eligible to attend the Ewing Public Schools free of charge, mother identified the father as H.M. (See, R-4)

4B. Father lives in Trenton, in an apartment, with his female friend.

4C. Petitioner testified that while father does not visit P.T. at her home, he does come to her house to take P.T. to school in Ewing and may take her to his apartment from time to time.

5. Petitioner explained she had determined to allow P.T. to live with her this past September so that she would be removed from the asserted abusive environment of being with her mother and her mother's friend.

6. Petitioner testified it occurred to her to seek a court order allowing P.T. to live with her so that she could attend Ewing schools. Petitioner explained P.T. had attended Trenton Public Schools in prior years, but she could not drive her to Trenton every day because she does not have a car.

6A. Petitioner says mother agreed that residential custody should reside with petitioner.

7. Petitioner testified she secured her desired Order (R-1) on or about September 14, 2007, by appearing at the chambers of the Honorable Audrey Peyton Blackburn without having appeared before Judge Blackburn. Judge Blackburn's aide gave her the Order signed by Judge Blackburn.

8. The Order she received recites on its face that petitioner was the moving party for custody/visitation of P.T. and that P.T.'s mother was a respondent along with P.T.'s father, P.M., being a named respondent. The Order also recites;

> Both parties agree the Plaintiff shall obtain residential custody effective 9/14//07. It should be noted that Defendant, [P.M.] was not present during this consent agreement.

9. Petitioner testified she receives $400 a month from the parents for the care of P.T.

10. In addition to P.T. returning to her mother on the weekends during the school year, petitioner testified it is planned that P.T. shall also live with her mother during the summer months while on vacation from school.

11. Petitioner filed a Residency Verification Form (R-2) with the Board in furtherance of her goal to have her niece, P.T., attend the Ewing schools free of charge

12. There is no dispute petitioner resides in Ewing Township, Mercer County, New Jersey.

13. Petitioner filed an Affidavit (R-3) with the Board in furtherance of her goal to have her niece, P.T., attend the Ewing schools free of charge.

14. The affidavit is dated October 1, 2007. Petitioner attests that the reason P.T. resides in her household rather than with her mother or father is as follows:

> My niece should not have to be subjected to her environment she is being subjected to. Also her mother is currently becoming homeless. Abusive boyfriend making it not healthy for my niece, it [affects] he schooling & self, needs to be in loving household.

14A. In the Information Sheet (R-4) filed by mother, she says in response to the question of whether she has to means to support her child:

> Situation is unsafe. Not a good environment [?] boyfriend abusive [?] daughter [needs?] stable environment in a loving home with relatives

15. Petitioner attests in the same affidavit that "No person is paying me for the keep of this child or supplying the child with any means of support. I am contributing 100% of the support of this child including that time between school years." This attestation is inconsistent with her testimony that she receives $400 a month for P.T.'s upkeep.

16. Petitioner also attests that in the event any of the statements in the affidavit are false, she acknowledges she would be liable for tuition of P.T. during the days she attended the Ewing schools.

17. The attendance and residency officer for the Board notified petitioner by letter dated October 2, 2007, that the conclusion was reached that P.T. is not eligible for free admission to the Ewing Public Schools because the reasons stated in the custody affidavits do not constitute a hardship. (See, R-5).

Petitioner appeals the determination made by the Board that P.T. is not eligible to attend the Ewing Township Schools free of charge.

ANALYSIS

The Order from New Jersey Superior Court does not, by itself, constitute eligibility for free public school attendance in a specific school district under Education Law, Title 18A. The statute governing attendance at a local school district is N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, et seq.

N.J..S.A. 18A:38-1 provides that:

Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:

> a. Any person domiciled who is domiciled within the school district.
>
> b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district, if so required by the board a sworn statement that he is domiciled within the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term * * * and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district . . .
>
> If in the judgment of the board of education the evidence does not support the validity of the claim by the resident, the board may deny admission to the child. The resident may contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner on the validity of the claim and shall heave the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection . . .
> No child shall be denied admission during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. In the event the child is currently enrolled in the district, the student shall not be removed from school during the 21-day period in which the resident may contest the board's decision nor during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. If in the judgment of the commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the resident, he shall assess the resident tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the school district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to t e local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner win which orders of the commissioner are enforced . . .

Paragraph a. of the statute entitles a child to a free public school education in the district in which they are domiciled. The domicile of an unemancipated child is the domicile of the parent, custodian, or guardian. P.B.K. v. Board of Educ. of The Borough of Tenafly, 343 N.J. Super. 419 (App. Div. 2001). In this case, the domicile of the father is Trenton, New Jersey.

Therefore, under paragraph a. of the statute, P.T. is not eligible by reason of domicile to attend the Ewing Public Schools free of charge. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1 (a) provides that a student is eligible to attend school in a school district if the student is domiciled within the district. Subparagraph 1 of the same rule states that a student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is living with a parent or legal guardian whose permanent home is within the district. Such is not the case here. Petitioner is neither the parent nor legal guardian of R.H.

Consequently, R.H. is not eligible to attend the Ewing Township schools by reason of domicility within the Township. R.H. is not domiciled within the Township.

Paragraph b., subparagraph (1), of the statute would allow P.T. to attend the Ewing schools if certain conditions were met. That part of the statute reads:

> Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district . . . a sworn statement that he is domiciled with the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that he intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term . . . and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district.

N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.2 (a) 1 instructs that an otherwise eligible student, kept in the home of a person other than the student's parent or legal guardian, is eligible to attend school in that school district if:

> i. The student's parent or guardian has filed, together with documentation to support its validity, a sworn statement that he or she is not capable of supporting or providing care for the student due to family or economic hardship and that the student is not residing with the other person solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education.
>
> The same rule, at (a) 4 allows:
>
> 4. A student shall not be deemed ineligible under this subsection solely because a parent or legal guardian gives gifts or makes limited contributions, financial or otherwise, toward the welfare of the student, provided that the resident keeping the student received no payment or other remuneration from the parent or guardian for regular maintenance of the student.

Petitioner has the burden of persuasion to demonstrate P.T. is entitled to attend the Ewing schools free of charge based on paragraph (b) (1) of the preceding statute and the cited administrative rules.

The evidence is that mother contributes $400 a month for the support of P.T. While there are no hard and fast rules regarding what constitutes a 'limited contribution' for the maintenance of a child, a regular $400 per month contribution is more than a 'limited' contribution by any reasonable standard. Essentially, mother is paying for the support of R.H. while she is at petitioner's home and, consequently, the conclusion must be drawn that petitioner does not support R.H. gratis, as is required by the statute.

In addition, the evidence shows P.T. and mother spend weekends together and intend to spend the summer months together. I am not persuaded that P.T. is exposed to a verbal abuse atmosphere at mother and male friend's home as stated by petitioner. There are no domestic violence orders in effect, mother has been with her male friend for three to seven years, and mother operates a day care center out of her residence. Logic dictates that if the atmosphere at mother's residence was as abusive as petitioner claims, a day care center could not be operated on those premises because the parents of the toddlers enrolled in the center would be distraught as petitioner claims P.T., a 14 year old, is supposed to be. Petitioner's testimony that mother lives in an abusive atmosphere is not persuasive.

CONCLUSIONS

The attendance and residency officer for the Ewing Township Board of Education concluded that petitioner failed to show a 'hardship' existed as the basis for the enrollment of P.T. in Ewing Township Schools. I CONCLUDE petitioner failed in her burden to demonstrate by a preponderance of credible evidence that P.T. is entitled to attend the Ewing schools free of charge under N.J.S.A. 18:38- b (1). The record is absent of evidence to show there is hardship based on the facts presented. In addition, the record shows petitioner does not support R.H. gratis, contrary to the requirement of law. Finally, the record shows there is no intention of having P.T. reside with petitioner beyond the school term – or even during the school term – as if the child were petitioner's own, for she already spends weekends in Trenton with her mother. Therefore, the inference is drawn that the purpose for P.T. living with petitioner in Ewing Township instead of with her mother in Trenton is for P.T. to attend the Ewing Public Schools rather than the Trenton Public Schools.

Having concluded petitioner failed to show R.H. is eligible for free public school attendance at the Ewing Township public schools by reason of domicile, or, on the strength of her affidavit, I NOW FIND AND CONCLUDE petitioner is obligated to pay the Ewing Township Board of Education $57.29 per day for each day P.T. was enrolled in its schools while open for instructional purposes.

It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this emergent matter – including the audiotape of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 29, 2008 – and the recommended order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) from the bench, have been reviewed by the Deputy Commissioner to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33.

Upon such review, the Deputy Commissioner adopts the ALJ's recommended order granting emergent relief in this matter, as she concurs – for the reasons articulated on the Accordingly, the within application for emergent relief is hereby granted. This matter is being returned to the OAL for such further proceedings as may be necessary to bring it to conclusion.

SYNOPSIS

The Board of Education of the Township of North Brunswick challenged the determination of the Somerset County Superintendent that North Brunswick is the district of origin and residence of the children of the S family, and asked the Commissioner to determine that the family is homeless and that Somerville was their last permanent residence. Respondents both filed answers, and moved to dismiss the petition on the grounds that it had been filed well beyond the allowable 30-day filing period authorized by *N.J.A.C.*6A:17-2.8(b) and N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(d).

The ALJ found that: North Brunswick was aware of the County Superintendent's determination that it was the residence of the children in question on or about January 17, 2007, and did not file its notification with the New Jersey Department of Education, Division of Finance, until June 8, 2007; the filing was substantially beyond the permitted 30-days from receipt of notice of the County Superintendent's determination; no legitimate reason for failure to file a timely notice has been presented. The ALJ concluded that North Brunswick failed to comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(d), and therefore the petition should be dismissed.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter; the petition was dismissed as untimely.

RESPONDENTS.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions of petitioner North Brunswick Board of Education (North Brunswick) and reply exceptions of respondent Somerville Board of Education (Somerville) were filed in accordance with the prescriptions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

On exception, North Brunswick attempts to argue: 1) that summary decision was prematurely granted as the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) merely "presumed" that the Board had notice of the County Superintendent's January 17, 2006 decision, without any factual or discovery support; 2) that this matter is improperly dismissed as it has only been adjudicated with respect to tuition derived by the district "for school funding purposes," and failed to address the legal obligation of respondent Somerville to pay on the legal theories of quantum meruit or unjust enrichment; and 3) there is a statutory entitlement to reimbursement for tuition and transportation costs which cannot be restricted by an administrative code 30-day limitation provision.

In response, respondent Somerville posits: 1) petitioner's argument with respect to summary decision being prematurely granted is wholly disingenuous as at no time during the course of this matter did it either allege that it was unaware of the determination of the County Superintendent or offer any excuse for its delay in appealing that determination; 2) to the extent petitioner believed it may have had other theories of recovery in this matter, it should have raised them in its underlying pleadings or responsive brief. Advancement of speculative claims must be made before – not after – the issuance of the Initial Decision; and 3) as the County Superintendent determined that petitioner, not Somerville, was the district of origin of the family in this matter, petitioner possessed no statutory entitlement to tuition and transportation which was curtailed by administrative regulations.

Upon a careful and independent review, the Commissioner – finding petitioner's exceptions without merit – concurs with the ALJ that this matter is appropriately dismissed as untimely.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted – for the reasons clearly articulated therein – and the instant Petition of Appeal is dismissed.

Record Closed: December 26, 2007 Decided: January 17, 2008

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The North Brunswick Board of Education ("North Brunswick") filed a Petition, and subsequently an Amended and Second Amended Petition (hereinafter referred to simply as the "Petition"), with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner"), seeking a declaration that the children of the Soto family were homeless and that Somerville, New Jersey, was their last permanent residence and directing that the Somerville Board of Education ("Somerville") pay tuition costs for the six Soto children for the 2006-2007 school year. The petition named as respondents both the Somerville Board and the New Jersey Department of Education ("DOE"). They filed answers and each moved to dismiss the Petition on the grounds that it had been filed out of time, well beyond the allowable 30 day filing period authorized by N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.8(b) and N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(d). North Brunswick has responded to the motions and the Commissioner transferred the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The facts relevant to the timeliness issue do not appear to be in dispute. North Brunswick claims that the Soto family left its Somerville residence in August 2006 due to financial difficulties and moved in with a relative at an address in North Brunswick for approximately one month. An affidavit of hardship was completed describing the family's dependence upon that relative. The six Soto children were enrolled in North Brunswick schools. North Brunswick notified the Business Administrator for the Somerville Board in 2006 that it sought reimbursement from Somerville for tuition for the six Soto children, claiming that they were homeless as defined in N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3, as they were residing with a relative temporarily out of necessity because the family lacked a permanent residence and asserting that Somerville was their last permanent place of residence. On January 17, 2007, the Somerset County Superintendent of Schools, acting pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.8(a), determined that the Soto family's district of origin and residence was in North Brunswick. On January 18, North Brunswick, which asserts it had not yet received the County Superintendent's determination, wrote to Somerville again demanding tuition payments for the Soto children. No response to this demand was received. North Brunswick filed its appeal of the County Superintendent's determination to the DOE's Division of Finance on June 8, 2007, which denied the appeal on July 3, 2007, as having been filed out of time under N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(d). This appeal to the Commissioner followed.

N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.8(b) provides that "[a] district disputing the county superintendent's determination may appeal to the Department of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(d), (e) and (f)." Subsection (d) states,

> A district board of education contesting the Department's determination of district of residence shall submit a written notification that a dispute exists to the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Finance, within 30 days of the receipt of a final notice that a child is determined to be a resident of the district for the purpose of State funding. . . "

Here, North Brunswick does not dispute that its appeal to the DOE Division of Finance was not filed within thirty days of the receipt of the County Superintendent's determination that it was the residence of the Soto children. It claims, however, that it cannot be determined at this juncture in the case when it "could reasonably be determined to have knowledge of a total denial of its request." It bases this contention upon the fact that on January 18, it sent correspondence to Somerville demanding tuition and never received any answer to that demand. "Minimally, there was a new separate request for tuition reimbursement supported by undisputed legal authority submitted on January 18, 2006 for which no response was ever received." Indeed, it notes that its first submission to Somerville "had not set forth any legal authority concerning the Petitioner's entitlement to tuition payments and was summarily denied." North Brunswick relies upon Burd v. New Jersey Telco, 76 N.J. 284, 291 (1978) for the proposition that a Statute of Limitations period does not commence until a party "learns" or "reasonably should learn" of the existence of facts which equate to a cause of action.

N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2 establishes the procedure for determining the district of residence for school funding purposes. Subsection (g) provides how the district of residence of homeless children is to be determined. The regulations provide that the district of residence is determined by the Commissioner or her designee, here the County Superintendent of Schools. Upon notification by the DOE of the determination of a district of residence, the board may contest the DOE's determination by submitting written notification to the Division of Finance, within thirty days of receipt of a final notice that a child was determined to be a resident for purposes of State funding. The Division of Finance "shall notify the district board of education whether a redetermination of district of residence shall be made within 90 days of the receipt of the written notification that a dispute exists."

North Brunswick does not dispute that it was notified by the County Superintendent of the determination that it was the district of residence shortly after the issuance of the January 17, 2007, decision. It does not dispute that it filed its notice with the Division of Finance on June 8, 2007, 142 days after the January 17 decision. It provides no excuse for this delay. Instead, in a feeble effort to get around the regulation and save its challenge, it invokes its letter to Somerville of January 18, which it says was sent out without knowledge of the previous day's decision by the County Superintendent. Yet it does not explain how that letter factors into the regulatory scheme. It is clear that as of shortly after the January 17 decision, it had notice that the decision made pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(b) had been made and was not in accord with its position on the residence issue. Knowing this, it also knew that under the regulation; subsection (c) provided that if it did not seek reversal or redetermination or appeal, it was "bound by such determination." Its next step therefore was to notify the Division of Finance of its dispute in writing within thirty days of its receipt of the final notice. That "final notice" under this regulatory construct was clearly the County Superintendent's decision. There is no provision for another request or demand to the school district which had not been determined the district of residence and certainly no hint or suggestion in the regulations that any such demand would toll the thirty day period for notifying the Division of Finance of the dispute and seeking its review of the County Superintendent's decision. The January 18 letter to Somerville and the lack of any response thereto is wholly irrelevant in regards to whether North Brunswick filed its challenge in a timely manner.

As in Board of Education of the Twp. Of Springfield v. N.J. Dept. of Educ. et al., EDU 5987-02, Initial Decision (August 21, 2003), adopted, Com'r (October 2, 2003), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, North Brunswick has failed to provide any compelling reason to justify its failure to file for approximately ninety days beyond the thirty day deadline. And, despite North Brunswick's attempt to suggest that this motion should not be determined until after discovery is completed and its contention that there is a factual determination to be made as to when it "reasonably learned of a final determination that would initiate the counting on the applicable Statute of Limitations period," these are not meritorious objections. The district has never denied its knowledge of the County Superintendent's decision of January 17, and the regulations make it plain that that knowledge of the final determination is the starting point from which the thirty days is measured. Any question as to what is the "final determination" from which the deadline is calculated is answered by simple reference to the regulatory scheme. No further discovery appears necessary to permit a fair determination of the pending motions to dismiss.

I FIND that the North Brunswick Board was aware of the County Superintendent's determination that it was the residence of the Soto children on or about January 17, 2007, and that it did not file its notification with the Division of Finance until June 8, 2007. This filing was substantially beyond the allowable thirty days from receipt of notice of the County Superintendent's determination. No legitimate reason for failure to file a timely notice has been presented. I CONCLUDE that North Brunswick failed to comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23-5.2(d) and therefore its appeal should be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner contested respondent's determination that her son, V.J., is ineligible to attend school in respondent's district, claiming that she was domiciled in the district until she became homeless in March 2006; respondent Board is therefore responsible for his education as a homeless child. Respondent district asserts that V.J. is not entitled to a free education in South Orange-Maplewood schools, and counterclaimed for tuition reimbursement for the period of ineligible attendance.

The ALJ found that: petitioner was homeless from March 2006 until June 2007; as of July 2007, petitioner was domiciled in Newark; from March 2006 through June 2007, V.J. was eligible for a free public education in respondent's school district; beginning in July 2007, V.J. was no longer eligible to attend respondent's schools free of charge; respondent Board may disenroll V.J. upon issuance of the final decision in this matter; and respondent's request for tuition reimbursement for V.J.'s attendance during the 2007-2008 school year is granted, to be calculated at the rate of $67.20 per day for the number of days of attendance by V.J. during the current school year.

Upon a full and independent review of this matter, the Commissioner concurred with the findings of the ALJ regarding the period of homelessness of petitioner and her son, and that V.J. ceased to be eligible for free public education in respondent's school district as of July 2007. In response to petitioner's request that her son be permitted to finish out the current school year as a nonresident student and that she not be required to pay tuition because of the extreme financial hardship it would cause, the Commissioner found nothing in the record to support an order compelling the District to forgive tuition for the period of ineligible attendance or to permit V.J. to attend as a nonresident student. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 5656-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 121-5/07

S.J., on behalf of minor child, V.J.,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as has the petitioner's statement on exception, to which the Board of Education (Board) did not reply.

In her exceptions, the petitioner does not take issue with the findings of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), but asks that – since his behavior and attitude have improved at Columbia High School through the efforts of caring teachers – her son be permitted to finish out the 2007-08 school year in respondent's district as a nonresident student without payment of tuition, and that the tuition assessment against her be forgiven due to the extreme financial hardship it would cause. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 1-2)

Upon review, the Commissioner first concurs – for the reasons fully set forth by the ALJ – that the petitioner and her son were homeless from March 2006 through June 2007, prior to which time they resided in the respondent's school district so as to render V.J. entitled to attend school in South Orange-Maplewood during this period. She further concurs that – as of July 2007 – the petitioner and her son were no longer homeless, but rather domiciled in Newark; thus, at that point, V.J. ceased to be eligible for free public education in the Board's district and the Board is entitled to collect tuition for the period of his ineligible attendance.

With respect to the petitioner's request for forgiveness of such tuition, the Commissioner finds that – while the Board is certainly free to exercise its own discretion and elect to forgo collection of the tuition it is now lawfully due – there is nothing in the record that would justify an order of the Commissioner compelling such action, notwithstanding that N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.3(b) expressly permits this result when the particular facts so warrant. Similarly, while the Commissioner understands the petitioner's desire that her son be allowed to finish out the academic year in his current school, there is no basis in the record on which to order such relief; permitting nonresident students to attend school in a district – with or without payment of tuition – is a discretionary determination of the local district board of education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3, and nothing in the present record indicates that the Board abused its discretion or acted in violation of law or district policy in declining to permit V.J.'s attendance on this basis.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL – finding V.J. ineligible to attend South Orange-Maplewood schools as of July 2007 and assessing the petitioner $67.20 per day for V.J.'s enrollment during the 2007-2008 school year – is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 5656-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 121-5/07

S.J. ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, V.J.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY,

Respondent.

S.J., pro se

Rita F. Barone, Esq., for respondent
(Purcell, Ries, Shannon, Mulcahy & O'Neill, attorneys)

Record Closed: December 31, 2007 Decided: January 22, 2008

BEFORE RICHARD McGILL, ALJ:

S.J. (hereinafter sometimes "petitioner") filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging a residency determination by the Board of Education of the South Orange-Maplewood School District (hereinafter "respondent") in regard to her son, V.J., who was attending respondent's Columbia High School. The substance of the determination was that V.J. was not entitled to a free education in respondent's schools and that he would be denied admission as of May 1, 2007. Respondent counterclaims for tuition reimbursement for an alleged period of ineligible attendance.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed her petition on May 1, 2007, invoking the Commissioner's authority to hear and determine controversies arising under the school laws pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. As a result of the timely filing of the petition, V.J. has continued to attend Columbia High School during the pendency of the appeal. On May 21, 2007, respondent filed an answer and counterclaim.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on May 30, 2007, for determination as a contested case. A hearing was scheduled for November 16 and 21, 2007, at the Office of Administrative Law in Newark, New Jersey. On October 26, 2007, respondent filed a motion for summary decision. Petitioner did not file a response to the motion, but as it appeared to the undersigned that there were genuine issues of material fact, the hearing took place as scheduled. Respondent's motion for summary decision was subsequently denied by Order dated December 31, 2007.

ISSUES

The main issue in this proceeding is whether V.J. was eligible to attend respondent's public schools during the period from May 1, 2007, to the present. S.J. maintains that she was domiciled in the school district until she became homeless in March 2006. S.J. contends that because she lived within the school district when she became homeless, respondent remains the district of residence for V.J. and therefore responsible for his education as a homeless child. Respondent contends that V.J. is not domiciled in the school district and is not homeless and that therefore respondent is entitled to tuition reimbursement for a period of ineligible attendance by V.J.

S.J. stayed at various locations during the period from March 2006 to the present. One issue is whether S.J. was in a state of homelessness during these stays. Another question is whether S.J. was domiciled at her mother's home in Newark or at an apartment which she rented in July 2007 in Newark.

FACTS

S.J. testified on her own behalf, and she also called her mother, E.B., as a witness. Registrar Tiffani Barnes testified for respondent. While petitioner and Registrar Barnes differed as to various details as well as S.J.'s status at various locations, all witnesses testified to essentially the same course of events.

Based upon the evidence presented at the hearing, I FIND as follows:

1. In September 2005, S.J. enrolled her son, V.J., in respondent's Maplewood Middle School for eighth grade.

2. At the time, S.J. had an apartment on C. Avenue in Maplewood, New Jersey.

3. V.J. was thirteen years old at the time.

4. S.J.'s mother, E.B., owned a home on O. Terrace in Newark.

5. S.J. has a daughter, K.N., who attended Mount Vernon Elementary School in Newark throughout the pertinent period of time.

6. In March 2006, S.J. left her apartment on C. Avenue in Maplewood pursuant to an Order for Orderly Removal dated March 13, 2006, of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division, Essex County, Special Civil Part.

7. S.J. owned a beauty salon located in South Orange.

8. S.J. stayed at the beauty salon along with V.J. and K.N. from March to August 2006.

9. S.J. had to give up the beauty salon, because she could not pay the rent.

10. S.J. went to stay with a friend, B.S., on T. Avenue in South Orange, where she remained from August through November 2006.

11. Respondent's representative requested that S.J. produce a valid lease for this address.

12. S.J. was unable to produce a valid lease because B.S. was moving from the apartment.

13. S.J. stayed at her mother's home in Newark from December 2006 to January or February 2007.

14. S.J. was welcome to stay at her mother's home, but S.J. did not want to remain there, because she and her mother had differing views as to bringing up children.

15. In January or February 2007, S.J. went to live in the attic of a friend's home on M. Drive in South Orange.

16. Respondent's representative asked for a valid lease.

17. After S.J. produced a lease, respondent's representative threatened the homeowners with prosecution for leasing space in an area zoned for one-family homes.

18. Feeling harassed by the school district, the homeowners told S.J. that she had to vacate the premises.

19. S.J. left M. Drive in South Orange in or about April 2007.

20. S.J. stayed with a friend on M. Avenue in Newark from April to May 2007.

21. S.J. stayed with her mother from May to June 2007 and then with her sister.

22. At the time, S.J. was receiving public assistance.

23. In July 2007, S.J. rented an apartment on P. Avenue in Newark with the Essex County Division of Welfare paying a security deposit and providing temporary rental assistance for July through October 2007.

24. S.J. was still living at this location as of the hearing date.

25. In September 2006, V.J. entered the ninth grade at respondent's Columbia High School.

26. By letter dated March 9, 2007, a principal advised S.J. that V.J. was not properly domiciled within the school district and that therefore the superintendent was making application to have V.J. removed from the school district. A hearing was scheduled for March 23, 2007.

27. By letter dated April 10, 2007, the superintendent of schools advised S.J. that at a meeting on April 9, 2007, respondent determined that V.J. was not entitled to a free public education within its school district.

28. The letter further advised S.J. that she had twenty-one days to contest respondent's decision with the Commissioner of Education and that S.J. would be denied admission as of May 1, 2007.

29. S.J. filed a timely appeal to the Commissioner of Education.

30. By letter dated May 3, 2007, respondent acknowledged that V.J. could attend Columbia High School during the pendency of the appeal.

31. In September 2007, V.J. continued to attend Columbia High School, where he is still considered to be a ninth grade student.

32. As of the hearing in this proceeding, V.J. was still attending respondent's Columbia High School.

33. The tuition reimbursement rate for students attending Columbia High School is $63.18 per diem for the 2006-2007 school year and $67.20 per diem for 2007-2008 school year.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

A person who meets age requirements and is domiciled within a school district may attend its public schools free of charge. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). A person may have many residences but only one domicile. Somerville Bd. v. Manville Bd., 332 N.J. Super. 6, 12 (App. Div. 2000), aff'd, 167 N.J. 55 (2001). A child's domicile is normally that of his or her parents. Ibid. The domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving. Matter of Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374 (Law Div. 1991), aff'd, 311 N.J. Super. 589 (App. Div. 1998), certif. denied, 157 N.J. 541 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S.Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed.2d 518 (1999).

The district of residence for a homeless child, as determined in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12, shall be responsible for the education of the homeless child. N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12.1. The district of residence for children whose parent temporarily moves from one school district to another as the result of being homeless shall be the district in which the parent last resided prior to becoming homeless. N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12(c). The term "homeless" refers to an individual who temporarily lacks a fixed, regular and adequate residence. Ibid.; N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.2. The "school district of origin" means the school district in which the parent last resided prior to becoming homeless. Ibid. A child is homeless when he or she resides in any of the following: (1) a publicly or privately operated shelter designed to provide temporary living accommodations; (2) a public or private place not designated for or ordinarily used as a regular sleeping accommodation; and (3) the residence of relatives or friends with whom the homeless child is temporarily residing out of necessity because the family lacks a regular or permanent residence of its own. N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3. A homeless child is entitled to a free public education in his district of residence as determined in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(f). The parent has the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)2.

Petitioner contends that she resided within respondent's school district until she became homeless with the result that V.J.'s education is still respondent's responsibility. Respondent maintains that S.J. has not proven that V.J. was domiciled within the school district or that he meets the definition of a homeless child. Further, respondent argues that S.J. was living in her mother's home in Newark and that therefore V.J. was domiciled in Newark.

Preliminarily, S.J. does not claim that V.J. was kept in the home of another and supported by such other person gratis within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(1), and there is no evidence that V.J. fell within that category. It follows that V.J. was not entitled to a free public education from respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(1).

As another preliminary matter, it is noteworthy that S.J.'s daughter, K.N., was attending school in Newark, while V.J. was enrolled in respondent's schools. S.J. claims that both K.N. and V.J. lived with her throughout the pertinent period of time, and she has not otherwise drawn a distinction between them. Although K.N.'s attendance at the Newark schools is not at issue in this proceeding, it would appear that there is an inconsistency in K.N. and V.J. attending school in different districts. However, this does not answer the question whether V.J. was ineligible to receive a free education in respondent's school district.

It is also noteworthy that in her petition, S.J. does not claim that she is currently domiciled in respondent's school district. Rather, S.J.'s claim is based exclusively on homelessness.

As of March 2006, S.J. lived on C. Avenue in Maplewood within respondent's school district. S.J.'s testimony along with the court papers removing her from this address clearly indicate that she resided at this location within the school district. It is noteworthy that for purposes of determining responsibility for the education of a homeless child, it is only necessary that he resided in the school district prior to becoming homeless.

Thereafter, S.J. and V.J. lived at S.J.'s beauty salon from March through August 2006. The beauty salon is a private place not designated for or ordinarily used as a regular sleeping accommodation within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)2. It follows that V.J. was a homeless child during this period of time.

S.J. next moved to T. Avenue in South Orange where she remained with a friend from approximately August to November 2006. S.J. considered this location to be temporary because the friend was planning to move, and S.J.'s view is confirmed by the short duration of the stay. Under the circumstances, S.J. and V.J. were temporarily residing with a friend or relative out of necessity because they lacked a permanent residence of their own within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)3. Therefore, V.J. was a homeless child during this period of time.

S.J. next moved to O. Terrace in Newark, where she lived with her mother from November 2006 to January or February 2007. Respondent maintains that this location was S.J.'s domicile based on the fact that she provided this address in relation to V.J.'s enrollment and also K.N.'s attendance in the Newark public schools. But S.J. and E.B. explained their differences, and the length of S.J.'s stay in E.B.'s home was very short. It follows that S.J. and V.J. were residing temporarily at the home of a relative out of necessity because they lacked a regular or permanent residence of their own within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)3. This is not to say that any stay with a relative means that the parent or child is homeless. If the stay lasts for an extended time, it cannot be described as temporary. But in this instance, the stay of a few months was temporary in nature. It follows that V.J. was a homeless child during this period of time.

S.J. next moved to the home of a friend on M. Drive in South Orange and rented space in the attic. S.J. stayed at this location approximately from January or February 2007 to April 2007. In view of the shortness of the stay, it would be accurate to characterize S.J.'s circumstances as temporarily residing with a friend out of necessity because she lacked a regular or permanent residence of her own within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)3. Under the circumstances, V.J. was a homeless child during this period of time.

S.J. stayed at a friend's home on M. Place in Newark for a time in April 2007. In view of the short duration of this stay, S.J. was temporarily living with the friend out of necessity because she lacked a regular or permanent residence of her own within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)3. It follows that V.J. was homeless during this period of time.

S.J. returned to her mother's home for May and part of June 2007. This stay was similar to the time that S.J. spent in her mother's home from December 2006 to January or February 2007. S.J. spent the end of June 2007 at her sister's home in Newark. These stays with relatives were temporary in nature and occurred out of necessity within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)3. Therefore, V.J. was a homeless child during this period of time.

In July 2007, S.J. rented her own apartment on P. Avenue in Newark with a security deposit and temporary rental assistance from July through October 2007 provided by the Essex County Division of Welfare. S.J. emphasizes the word "temporary" in the expression "temporary rental assistance," but this word is intended to refer to the assistance rather than the housing. As the tenant in her own apartment, S.J. was no longer homeless within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a). With no other residence, S.J. and V.J. were domiciled in Newark as of July 2007.

Based upon the above, S.J. and V.J. were homeless from March 2006 through June 2007. Beginning in July 2007, S.J. and V.J. were no longer homeless, and they were domiciled in Newark. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that V.J. was eligible for a free education in respondent's public schools through June 2007, and I FURTHER CONCLUDE that V.J. was ineligible for a free education in respondent's public schools beginning July 2007. It follows that V.J. must leave respondent's public schools upon issuance of the final decision in this matter.

A counterclaim for tuition reimbursement may be granted when there is a period of ineligible attendance in a public school. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). The determination herein is that V.J. was eligible to attend respondent's public schools during the 2006-2007 school year. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that respondent's request for tuition reimbursement for a portion of the 2006-2007 school year is without merit and must be denied.

As determined above, V.J. did not meet the requirements to receive a free education in respondent's public schools during the 2007-2008 school year. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner must be assessed tuition for the period of ineligible attendance during the 2007-2008 school year. The tuition for the period of ineligible attendance is the product of the per diem rate of $67.20 and the number of days of attendance by V.J. during the 2007-2008 school year.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that:

1. Respondent may disenroll V.J. upon issuance of the final decision in this matter.

2. Respondent's request for tuition reimbursement for V.J.'s attendance during the 2006-2007 school year is denied.

3. Respondent's request for tuition reimbursement for V.J.'s attendance during the 2007-2008 school year is granted and shall be calculated as set forth above.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

M. H.-C., on behalf of minor child, A.R.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed respondent's denial of her application to enroll her brother, A.R., in respondent's school district.

The ALJ found that A.R. resides with petitioner in respondent's district; petitioner and A.R.'s mother filed the necessary affidavits to apply to enroll A.R. in respondent's school district under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b); petitioner has residential and joint legal custody of A.R.; and petitioner took custody of A.R. due to economic and family hardship. Thus, the ALJ concluded that petitioner had met her burden to show, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b), that A.R. is entitled to a free public education in respondent's district.

The Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter, as supplemented. The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination that A.R. is entitled to a free public education in Ewing as an "affidavit student." The Commissioner further found that, as a result of the court order placing A.R. in petitioner's home, i.e., bestowing upon petitioner joint legal and residential custodianship of A.R., A.R. is also entitled to a free public education in Ewing under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) and N.J.S.A. 18A:38-2.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision have been reviewed.[1] No exceptions were filed by the parties. For the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision[2] and those articulated infra, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case.

More specifically, the Commissioner concurs that the record contains evidence supporting the conclusion that economic hardship underlay A.R.'s transfer to petitioner's household, making A.R eligible for a free public education in Ewing as an "affidavit student" under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b). The Commissioner also finds that A.R. qualifies for a free education in the Ewing district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-2.[3]

It is undisputed that A.R. actually resides with petitioner and that the record contains a copy of an order of the Superior Court, Mercer County, Family Part, awarding joint

[1] No transcript of the hearing in the Office of Administrative Law has been provided to the Commissioner.

[2] The Commissioner notes that the second full paragraph on page 2 of the Initial Decision contains a passage from another case concerning a minor whose initials are J.H. Viewing the Initial Decision as a whole, it is clear that this passage was inserted in error, and that the conclusions on page 9 of the Initial Decision constitute the Administrative Law Judge's recommended decision in this matter.

[3] N.J.S.A. 18A:38-2 specifically provides, in pertinent part, that:

> Public schools shall be free to any person over five and under 20 years of age nonresident in a school district who is placed in the home of another person, who is resident in the district, by order of a court of competent jurisdiction of this state...

legal and residential custody of A.R. to petitioner. The Commissioner may not look behind that order. For example, in L.D.M., on behalf of minor child, T.D. v Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 151-01, decided May 11, 2001, L.D.M. had applied for custody of her younger brother, T.D., due to family circumstances. She was granted custody by way of an order of the Superior Court. The West Orange district maintained that it was not required to provide T.D. with a free public education. In determining, to the contrary, that T.D. was entitled to a free public education in West Orange, the Commissioner reasoned as follows:

> As was determined by the Commissioner and affirmed by the State Board of Education in L.A. v. Board of Education of the Town of West Orange, 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 266 (1996), aff'd by the State Board of Education, 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 554 (1997); and V.H. v. Board of Education of the Township of Quinton, 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 124 (1996), aff'd by the State Board of Education, 97 *N.J.A.R.*2d 554 (1997),[4] as of the date that a resident of a district takes legal control of a child, entitlement to attend school free of charge is no longer to be examined pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b), the "affidavit student" provision.
> (...) once L.D.M. assumed legal custody of T.D., the only appropriate inquiry for respondent was whether L.D.M. and T.D. were domiciled in the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). Inasmuch as respondent does not dispute that L.D.M. is domiciled in West Orange, and the domicile of the child follows that of the parent or guardian having legal custody over him or her, Mansfield Twp. Board of Education v. State Board of Education, 101 N.J.L. 474, 479-480 (Sup. Ct. 1925), it is hereby found and determined that T.D. was entitled to a free public education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a), as of the effective date that L.D.M. acquired legal custody of T.D. See also Y.L., on behalf of M.A. v. Board of Education of South Orange-Maplewood, Number 658-97, decided by the Commissioner of Education December 24, 1997. (...) Further, as was held in L.A., and affirmed by the State Board, the motives of the party obtaining a custody order are not determinative. A custody order must be accepted on

[4] In V.H., when custody of a child was transferred from his parents to a great-grandmother, the child's domicile was changed to the district in which the great grandmother resided and he was deemed to be entitled to a free education in that district as of the effective date of the custody transfer.

See, also, V.S.-L., on behalf of minor child, Z.M.M. v. Board of Education of the City of Garfield, Bergen County, Commissioner Decision No. 281-07, decided July 9, 2007.

Respondent does not dispute that M.H.-C. is a resident of Ewing. In view of the above referenced custody order and school law, the Commissioner concludes that A.R. is entitled to a free public education in the Ewing school district. Respondent is, therefore, ordered to continue to admit him to its schools as long as there is no change in the Superior Court order that would alter his entitlement. Further, in view of the foregoing, no tuition is due respondent.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[5]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 8850-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 270-9/07

M.H.C., O/B/O MINOR CHILD, A.R.,
Petitioner,
v.
EWING TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION, MERCER COUNTY,
Respondents.

M.H.C., petitioner, pro se

Jeffrey F. Belz, Esq., for respondent Ewing Township Board of Education

Record Closed: December 13, 2007 Decided January 28, 2008

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ (t/a):

Petitioner is a resident of and domiciled in Ewing Township, Mercer County, New Jersey. Petitioner alleges her 16 year old brother, A.R., lives with her in her Ewing Township home since on or about September 16, 2007. A.R.'s parents are divorced. Father does not appear to be involved in the life of A.R. Mother lives in Morrisville, Pennsylvania, with her other son, A.R., who attends Morrisville High School. M.H.C. executed and filed an affidavit with Ewing Township school officials on or about September 16, 2007, along with an affidavit executed by A.R.'s mother, seeking A.R.'s enrollment on a tuition-free basis, or as an affidavit student, under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 (b). The Ewing Township Board of Education advised petitioner on September 18, 2007 that her application was denied.

On or about September 19, 2008, petitioner filed a Pro Se Residency Appeal under the referenced statute and under administrative rules, N.J.A.C. 6A:22-1, et seq., with the Commissioner of Education after which the matter was transferred November 7, 2008, to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing. On the strength of the appeal, the Board allowed A.R. to be enrolled in its school pending disposition of the dispute. In its filed Answer, the Board alleges A.R. resides with his mother in "another district [and] A.R. should attend public school in that district." (See, Board's First Separate Defense) The Board counterclaims for tuition for the time A.R. was, as it asserts, improperly enrolled in its schools on the strength of an affidavit filed by petitioner.

A hearing was conducted December 12, 2007 at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville after which the record closed December 13, 2007. The conclusion is reached in this initial decision that J.H. is not eligible under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 to attend the Board's schools free of charge. I also conclude petitioner is obligated to pay it $54.75 for each day school was open for instructional purposes from October 8, 2007 when J.H. was enrolled.

ISSUES

The issues to be decided are whether A.R. is entitled to be enrolled in the Ewing Township Board of Education free of charge under N.J.S.A. 38-1 (b) for purposes of receiving a thorough and efficient program of education. If not, is petitioner obligated to pay the Ewing Township Board of Education $54.75 for each and every day school was open for instructional purposes from September 19, 2007 forward.

FACTS

Except as otherwise noted, the facts established by a preponderance of credible evidence in the record are these. David Mikalauskas is the Board's Attendance and Residency Officer. He is assigned the duty of insuring students seeking enrollment are eligible under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 to attend the Ewing schools free of charge. Mikalauskas testified that since his initial employment with the Board in 1989, more than 900 pupils have been removed from school enrollment through the discovery of lack of eligibility either through domicile or affidavits. He testified that because Ewing Township borders an urban area, the City of Trenton, his experience shows that some urbanites and others seek to give custody of their children to relatives in Ewing so that the appearance of enrollment qualification may be secured.

In this case, Mikalauskas explains the reason for denying A.R. enrollment in the Ewing public schools is the failure of his mother, and petitioner, to show either a family or economic hardship as the reason for him to be living in Ewing with his sister, petitioner, while his mother is across the river in Morrisville, Pennsylvania.

A preponderance of the credible evidence in this record establishes the following facts:

1. A.R. is petitioner's brother.

2. The Board acknowledges that A.R. is a resident of Ewing Township.

3. Petitioner attests in her affidavit (R-1) filed with the Board on or about September 16, 2007 that A.R. is living in her home permanently as a member of her family since June 30, 2007.

4. Petitioner attests that the reason A.R. is residing with her and not his parents is:

[A.R.] is currently distressed about living in Morrisville and [his mother] cannot afford him. I [petitioner] am capable of providing him a better life.

5. Petitioner attests she was in the process of securing custody of A.R. at the time of filing the application. It is further noted the Honorable Audrey Peyton Blackburn, J.S.C., by Order dated October 30, 2007, granted petitioner joint legal custody with A.R.'s mother, and granted petitioner residential custody.

6. Petitioner attests she acknowledges that:

> In the event the Board challenges any of the statements I have made, and it is determined that the child is not eligible [to attend Ewing schools free of charge], I will be obligated to pay the school district tuition or all days of illegal attendance..."

7. At the time she filed her affidavit, petitioner also filed with school officials an affidavit executed by A.R.'s (R-2) mother.

8. Mother attests she is divorced; that she lives in Morrisville, Pennsylvania; that she is employed at a major department store at a local shopping mall; that she does not have the means to support A.R. despite her employment.; that she has one other child living with her at home who attends Morrisville High School; I and, that A.R. should not be enrolled at Morrisville High School because "I [could?] care for [only?] one child at this time."

9. In a case management sheet (R-3) used by New Jersey Superior Court, Chancery Division – Family Part, it is reported to Superior Court that mother earns between $170.00 a week to $290.00 a week. If we assume she earns the higher figure, $290.00 per week, then her annual income would be close to $15,000.00. Official notice may be taken that it is difficult, if not impossible, to provide for one's self on that amount of money in our society and more difficult to raise two teenage sons.

10. Mother attests A.R. will be living with M.H.C. the entire calendar year and that M.H.C. is authorized to make all school-related decisions regarding A.R..

11. The Board's attendance and residency officer, Mikalauskas, caused the district's investigators to confirm A.R. was living with his sister in Ewing Township by way of an at home visit. The investigators affirmatively reported A.R. was living with his sister, petitioner, in Ewing Township.

12. In the case management sheet (R-3), ostensibly completed by petitioner in securing joint and residential custody of A.R. and submitted to the Board after the instant appeal was filed with the Commissioner of Education, petitioner recites that A.R.'s mother was then:

> . . . working part time and not mother was not able to provide [A.R.] with financial [stability] as a young teenager. Additionally, [mother] has no health care for him. I am married with one child > living in a home that I own in Ewing Twp. I am able to provide him a good home, foundation & stability, with legal rights I will be able to add him to my health plan with no additional cost. He currently resides with me.

13. Petitioner submitted copies of receipts for various purchases she made and many of which are purchases that would be typically made for a teenager such as A.R. Indeed, the Board does not dispute that petitioner does support A.R. gratis

14. Mikalauskas advised petitioner by letter dated September 18, 2007 that her application to have A.R. enrolled in the Ewing Township Public Schools was denied because "the reasons stated in the custody application do not constitute a hardship." (See, Notice of Determination of Eligibility, September 18, 2007 (C-1))

15. Mr. Mikalauskas testified he concluded that a family or economic hardship to justify the enrollment of A.R. in its schools was not established by petitioner as is required by Board policy which itself is based on N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 (b).

16. When asked to explain what constitutes a 'family or economic hardship' under Board policy, Mr. Mikalauskas testified a hardship exists when, as an example, mother passes away and father is in jail, or, when the student has been abused by mother and father is not in the picture, or, when parents are in Florida and student has travelled thousands of miles to live with aunt or uncle, or, the student is in a situation in which should he/she remain, the situation would be detrimental to his health, welfare, or safety.

17. The Board seeks a daily tuition rate of $54.75 from petitioner. Mr. Mikalauskas testified that the Department of Education certifies the district's annual per pupil cost, which in this case is $9,911. That figure is then divided by the number of school days, which in this case are 181. The quotient, or $54.75, represents the daily average per pupil cost in the Ewing Township School District.

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 provides that:

> Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:
>
> a. Any person domiciled who is domiciled within the school district.
>
> b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district, if so required by the board a sworn statement that he is domiciled within the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term * * * and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district . . .
>
> If in the judgment of the board of education the evidence does not support the validity of the claim by the resident, the board may deny admission to the child. The resident may contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner on the validity of the claim and shall heave the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection. . .
> No child shall be denied admission during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. In the event the child is currently enrolled in the district, the student shall not be removed from school during the 21-day period in which the resident may contest the board's decision nor during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. If in the judgment of the commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the resident, he shall assess the resident tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the school district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner win which orders of the commissioner are enforced . . .

The statute authorizes boards of education to challenge the validity of affidavits submitted by parents and relatives to determine if the pupil is entitled to a free education in the particular district. The statute was amended in 1977 to prevent the following situation:

> Parents sometimes attempt to send their children to schools in districts other than their own without actually changing their residences. It is a very simple matter for a parent to request a relative or friend who resides within the district to provide the child with an official address within the district for purposes of school attendance. Further, if the friend or relative agrees to sign an affidavit, the school district must accept the child as a student within the system.
> [Statement to Senate Bill No. 1464-L. 1977, c. 373.]

In addition to the above statute, State Board of Education rules, at N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.2 (a), 1 instruct that a student, kept in the home of a person other than the student's parent or legal guardian, is eligible to attend school in that school district if:

> i. The student's parent or guardian has filed, together with documentation to support its validity, a sworn statement that he or she is not capable of supporting or providing care for the student due to family or economic hardship and that the student is not residing with the other person solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education.

The same rule, at (a) 4 allows:

> 4. A student shall not be deemed ineligible under this subsection solely because a parent or legal guardian gives gifts or makes limited contributions, financial or otherwise, toward the welfare of the student, provided that the resident keeping the student received no payment or other remuneration from the parent or guardian for regular maintenance of the student.

One who seeks to have an individual enrolled in a school on the basis of affidavits has the burden of persuasion to demonstrate the individual is entitled to attend the school free of charge. In this case, petitioner has the burden of persuasion to show the necessary entitlement. Petitioner is required to demonstrate that (1) she is domiciled within respondent's school district; (2) she is supporting A.R. gratis; (3) A.R.'s mother is not capable of supporting or providing care for him due to family or economic hardship; and (4) A.R. is not residing with petitioner solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education in respondent's school district.

The Board does not dispute that petitioner is domiciled within the Ewing Township school district, it does not dispute that petitioner supports A.R. gratis, and, it does not claim that A.R. resides with petitioner for the sole purpose of attending the Ewing Township public schools. The Board does contend petitioner failed to show a family or economic hardship.

Whether a hardship exists is determined on a case-by-case basis. As examples, in K.M. v. Board of Education of Ocean Township, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 632, a fourteen-year-old student had been living with her mother and brother in a two-bedroom apartment in Neptune, N.J. The student and her brother shared a bedroom, which was deemed inappropriate by the family as the student reached her teenage years. The student's mother could not afford a three-bedroom apartment, so the student moved into the grandmother's home in Ocean Township. The commissioner found that a sufficient economic hardship existed to justify the student's enrollment in the Ocean Township district schools. In McClean v. Board of Education of Township of Ocean, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 632, it was found to be inappropriate for a child entering adolescence to share a bedroom with her brother when their parents could not afford a larger apartment. Under the circumstances a hardship was found to exist. In Y.I.S. v. Northern Valley Regional High School District, EDU 10964-97, Initial Decision (December 6, 2001), adopted, Comm'r (January 8, 2002), aff'd, State Board (May 1, 2002), the travel schedule and working hours of a single parent were found to constitute a hardship.

The issue of what constitutes a family or economic hardship was discussed by the State Board of Education in J.B. v. Board of Educ. of Tp. of Ocean, 96 2d (EDU) 628, remanded, State Bd. of Educ. Dec. 4, 1996, on remand Feb. 11, 1997, remanded, State Bd. of Educ. Sept. 3, 1997. The State Board requires a two-part test for establishing hardship: (1) the presence of a family or economic hardship, and (2), parental incapability of supporting or providing care for the child due to that hardship.

In this case, it is clear mother does not have the financial resources necessary to raise two sons, each of whom is in their high school years. Indeed, when A.R. was living with his mother in Morrisville the evidence shows he was not covered by health insurance. Given the condition of present day health care and costs, that element could by itself constitute a hardship on A.R. that would affect him the rest of his life.

2d (EDU) 628, remanded, State Bd. of Educ. Dec. 4, 1996, on remand Feb. 11, 1997, remanded, State Bd. of Educ. Sept. 3, 1997. The State Board requires a two-part test for establishing hardship: (1) the presence of a family or economic hardship, and (2), parental incapability of supporting or providing care for the child due to that hardship.

In this case, it is clear mother does not have the financial resources necessary to raise two sons, each of whom is in their high school years. Indeed, when A.R. was living with his mother in Morrisville the evidence shows he was not covered by health insurance. Given the condition of present day health care and costs, that element could by itself constitute a hardship on A.R. that would affect him the rest of his life.

The examples provided by Mr. Mikalauskas present what he believes to be a hardship and may well fit within the two-prong test required by the New Jersey State Board of Education. But the lack of parental regular and sufficient income for food, clothing, housing, and medial costs, as well as miscellaneous costs associated with raising children, does constitute a hardship. The consequence of that hardship is an incapacity by the parent to provide appropriate care for the child.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on a preponderance of credible evidence, and the stipulations entered by the Board on this record, I CONCLUDE petitioner met her burden to demonstrate A.R. is entitled to attend the Ewing schools free of charge under N.J.S.A. 18:38- b (1). The Board's counterclaim for tuition is denied based on the conclusion reached.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,

PETITIONER,

V.

NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have exceptions and replies filed by the petitioning Board of Education (Board) and the respondent Department of Education (Department) pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-8.7(c).[1]

Upon consideration of the record and the parties' arguments on exception, for the reasons that follow, the Commissioner adopts in part, and rejects in part, the Initial Decision of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ).

STANDARD OF REVIEW

Initially, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board in this matter bears the burden of proving its entitlement to the funds sought by a preponderance of competent, relevant and credible evidence. (Initial Decision at 17).

[1] In its exceptions, the Department included introductory "background" information, together with a related certification of Department Budget and Policy Analyst David Joye, incorporating factual representations not proffered at hearing. The Board vigorously objected to such inclusion, noting that parties to contested matters may not use exceptions to supplement evidence and testimony. The Commissioner agrees, and, accordingly, has not considered this portion of the Department's submission in rendering the within decision. N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4(c).

The Board has contended on exception – as it consistently did before the ALJ – that its burden lies solely in successfully countering the reasons for denial given in the Department's written decision. According to the Board, N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-8.7(a)1 requires that the Department's actions be judged exclusively on the basis of the specific written reasons included in its denial letter, and that the Department cannot be permitted to "cobble together" facts from the administrative record on appeal in an attempt to construct post facto justifications for its actions. The Board asserts that if the Department's stated reason for denying a request can be shown to lack sufficient evidentiary foundation or to be based on factually or legally unsupportable reasons and assumptions, then the Board must prevail on appeal. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 3-5; see also T1-T3 passim, and Petitioner's Post-hearing Brief at 6-7 and passim thereafter)

This position, in the Commissioner's view, effectively shifts the burden to the Department and improperly relieves the Board of its affirmative obligation to demonstrate on appeal that programs or expenditures denied by the Department are, in fact, necessary for adequate and efficient provision of required preschool education – an obligation that surely cannot be met by seizing upon the letter of the Department's written determination while ignoring, or attempting to foreclose, the more expansive explications presented at plenary hearing. As pointed out by the Department, the rule cited by the Board – although it does, indeed, require the Department to provide specific reasons for denying a program or expenditure – places no limitations on the scope of the ALJ's and Commissioner's review (Respondent's Reply at 1-3); moreover, the more directly applicable rule, N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-8.6(c) expressly states that – over and above the documents and information submitted to the Department by the Board – the record on appeal shall include "any additional information relied upon by the Department in making the determination at issue."

The Board has further contended that the Supreme Court requires the Department to view the Board's assessment of its own particularized needs with deference, which may not be overcome without sufficient reason. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 5-6; see also Petitioner's Pre-hearing Brief at 5-6) However, as correctly noted by the Department (Respondent's Reply at 3-4), the deference invoked by the Board refers to the Department's review of district requests, not to the Commissioner's review on appeal; certainly, such deference cannot work to preclude the Department (or the Commissioner) from denying insufficiently justified requests – a result surely not intended by the Court, and one that would be manifestly contrary to sound public policy.

Accordingly, if the Board is to prevail on any of the issues in dispute in this matter, it must demonstrate to the Commissioner that the funding it seeks is, in fact, necessary to adequately and efficiently provide required preschool educational programs; anything less would prevent the Commissioner from responsibly exercising the duty of oversight charged to her by law. Board of Education of the City of New Brunswick, Middlesex County v. New Jersey State Department of Education, Commissioner's Decision No. 122-05, decided March 15, 2005; Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, Union County v. New Jersey State Department of Education, Commissioner's Decision No. 127-06, decided April 7, 2006; Board of Education of the Town of Phillipsburg, Warren County v. New Jersey State Department of Education, Commissioner's Decision No. 166-04, decided April 21, 2004.

EXTENDED DAY/EXTENDED SCHOOL YEAR PROGRAM

Turning, then, to the Board's request for funding for an extended day/extended school year (ED/ESY) program in light of the requisite standard of review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board is not entitled to such funding.

The Board contends on exception that – contrary to the finding of the ALJ, who, according to the Board, did not apply the proper standard of review and erroneously focused on irrelevant evidence – it is entitled to the requested funding for its extended day/extended school year (ED/ESY) program. The Board asserts that the Department's stated basis for denial was the Board's exceeding of the six-hour, 180-day minimum preschool program required by law and the apparent overlap of the ED/ESY program with wrap-around services funded by the Department of Human Services (DHS) – the former of which is not precluded by any court decision, statute or rule when based on student need, and the latter having been discounted at hearing through evidence and argument indisputably demonstrating the qualitative difference between the ED/ESY program and DHS-provided child care. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 6-11; see also Post-hearing Brief at 7-9 and 13-17) The Board further contends that the ALJ erred in construing too narrowly the National Institute for Early Education Research (NIEER) study, which – when read properly so as to recognize its broader point that more time in the classroom yields better results for disadvantaged preschoolers – fully supports the Board's determination that the student population it serves would benefit significantly from the ED/ESY model – a determination to which deference should have been accorded as required by the Court. (Id. at 11-15; see also Post-hearing Brief at 9-13)

The Commissioner, like the ALJ, is unpersuaded by the Board's arguments. Initially, the Commissioner notes that the State Board of Education has acted to fulfill the mandate of the Supreme Court that all children in Abbott districts be afforded the opportunity to obtain a high-quality preschool education by defining the elements it believes to constitute such education and establishing processes to ensure that sufficient funds are available to support them; to this end, the State Board has directed that children in Abbott districts be provided with comprehensive full-day, full-year preschool programs meeting stringent educational and staffing requirements. N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.1 et seq.; N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-1.2 (defining "full-day, full year" as a six-hour comprehensive educational program offered for not less than 180 days over the course of the ten-month academic year) Thus, as recognized by the ALJ, and previously by the Commissioner in Phillipsburg, supra, any request for funding of preschool education beyond the extensive program already required by law must be justified by a compelling showing that even this program – which is presumed to be fully adequate for its purpose and can in no way be accurately characterized as a minimally sufficient "base line" – does not enable students to enter kindergarten ready to succeed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.1. In the present matter, as set forth by the ALJ in the Initial Decision at 16-17 and detailed by the Department in its Post-hearing Brief at 4-13 and 21-24, no such showing has been made; to the contrary, both Department and Board witnesses attested that the district is able to meet the needs of its preschool students during the regular school day. (Initial Decision a 6, 12; Testimony of Ellen Wolock at T2:232-34, 291-98, 302;[2] Testimony of Olga Hugelmeyer at T1:160-67)[3] [2] This and all similar citations refer to transcripts of OAL hearings held on March 13, 2008 (T1), March 18, 2008 (T2) and March 19, 2008 (T3), respectively, followed by applicable page numbers.

[3] Although the Board has evidently been providing ED/ESY programs at some of its schools for a number of years, funds budgeted for this purpose were neither identified nor scrutinized as such, nor was express approval ever granted by the Department. (Initial Decision at 4-5; Board's Pre-hearing Brief at 7; Exhibit P-1 at Bates stamp 092; Testimony of Tracy Markowitz at T1:27; Department's Reply Exceptions at 9, note 7; Testimony of David Joye at T2:62-65, 125-33, 161-63; Testimony of Ellen Wolock at T2:182-83)

Moreover, even entertaining, arguendo, the Board's contention that the NIEER study (Exhibit P-6) supports its claims,[4] the Commissioner could not accept a simple "more is better" rationale without a specific factual nexus to the identified unmet needs of district students, which was not provided herein. Finally, as to the Department's reference to "overlap" with DHS wraparound services, the record is clear that such reference was to time and funding, not to educational character, and that the Board would, in fact, be receiving State funding from two sources for the same time period had its request been granted. (Department's Reply at 7-10; Testimony of David Joye at T2:149-60; Testimony of Beverly Wellons at T2:321-22) Accordingly, the Department did not err in citing "overlap" as an additional reason for denying the requested funding.[5]

LUNCH ASSISTANTS

Applying the requisite standard to the Board's request for funding for lunch assistants, the Commissioner adopts in part, and rejects in part, the recommendation of the ALJ.

Both parties take exception to the Initial Decision on this point, the Department to the ALJ's recommendation that funding should be provided for 165 lunch assistants for one hour and the Board to the fact that such funding was limited to one hour

[4] The Department objects to this argument as an interpretation of counsel having no support in the record and not consistent with the testimony of any witness at hearing. (Department's Reply at 10-11) The Department had additionally objected to the introduction of this document into evidence because it was not submitted by the Board either in support of its original application or during subsequent discussions prior to appeal; however, it was ultimately allowed by the ALJ. (T1:29-32, T2:6-11)

[5] The Department recommended that further action be considered to address the possibility of certified teachers being paid twice for overlapping hours, so as to, in effect, be paid for longer days and/or longer school years than they actually worked. (Department's Reply at 9-10) Because the present record does not permit a determination on this point and the Commissioner has an obligation to ensure the effective and efficient use of Abbott funds, the Department's Office of Fiscal Accountability and Compliance will be directed to investigate this matter.

rather than granted in full. The Department contends that its use of a 1:3 assistant-to-classroom ratio to determine that 55 was the appropriate number of lunch assistants for the district reflects what it has found to be reasonable, customary and consistent with practices in Abbott districts statewide; furthermore, according to the Department, this level of support could be properly effectuated by the Board in this instance – so as to maintain the required 2:15 and 1:15 teacher-to-student ratios during lunch and nap times, respectively, without additional lunch assistants – if teachers and teacher assistants were held to the half-hour lunch specified in their contract or relief teachers were utilized for lunch purposes, as they are in other Abbott districts, rather than (less appropriately) for specialty instruction in subjects such as physical education, music and art. The Department further stresses that funds for lunch assistants were sought through a special request[6] – i.e., a one-year request either exceeding or not fitting within guidelines for a line-item category on the budget submission form – so that the Board was required to provide a detailed justification including documented evidence of need and effectiveness, which it did not. (Respondent's Exceptions at 4-9; see also Post-Hearing Brief at 13-17 and 24-25)

The Board in turn objects to the ALJ's finding that a 2:15 teacher-to-student ratio need not be maintained during student nap time. According to the Board, the ALJ's provision of single-adult (1:15) coverage during this period – when many students remain active, according to the uncontradicted testimony of Board witnesses – compromises student safety by not allowing for adequate supervision if the one adult must leave the classroom for any reason; moreover, the Board continues, it is inconsistent with his (correct) finding that safety and security considerations require that two adults be present during lunch hour. The Board asserts that the Department's decision – with respect to both lunch and nap times – was based on inaccurate assumptions about the length of teacher lunch hours, and on arbitrary application of a 1:3 assistant-to-classroom ratio that ignores the district's actual circumstances – including the fact that the Board cannot utilize relief teachers for lunch purposes, as do other Abbott districts maintaining a 2:15 teacher-to-student ratio, because they are assigned elsewhere. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 15-21; see also Post-Hearing Brief at 18-23)

Upon review, the Commissioner finds that the Department correctly determined the appropriate number of lunch assistants needed by the Board. The ALJ's recommendation that the requested 165 positions be funded during the student lunch hour is based on his categorical acceptance of the Board's established operational pattern, with teachers permitted to take a one-hour lunch rather than the contractually specified half-hour,[7] and relief teachers unavailable because they are assigned to deliver specialty instruction. However, as evidenced by the testimony of Department witnesses – both the budget analyst involved in making the decision under appeal and the educational expert with whom he collaborated, who was directly familiar with the district's lunch practices – this pattern could readily be altered to make more efficient use of available resources and bring the district's costs and staffing allocations more into line with those of other districts and with best practices, while fully complying with staffing ratios designed to ensure adequate student supervision; indeed, the Department has been working with the district to effectuate exactly that result. (Testimony of David Joye at T2:113-23, 168-70; Testimony of Renee Whelan at T3:11-125) Thus, the Department's determination to limit funding to 55 lunch assistants was neither an arbitrary application of "numbers crunching" nor a mistake based on incorrect factual assumptions; rather, it was a fully informed judgment against State subsidization of an inefficient and ineffective operational arrangement, and must accordingly be upheld on appeal.

[7] The Commissioner notes that no past or current contract was ever produced specifying a one-hour lunch for teachers and teacher assistants; Exhibit P-19 is a proposed successor agreement pertaining to the 2009-10 and 2010-11 school years. See also Initial Decision at 7; Statements of counsel at T2:46; and Testimony of Olga Hugelmeyer at T1:216-219 and T2:52-58.

TECHNOLOGY INFRASTRUCTURE

Finally, for similar reasons, the Commissioner rejects the ALJ's recommendation that the Board be granted its special request for $44,000 in technology infrastructure funding.

On exception, the Department again contends, as it did before the ALJ, that the Board's existing $132,000 aid allotment – which represents $800 per class that can be spread across all in-district preschool classrooms – is sufficient for infrastructure purposes, which are additionally supported by initial start-up funding for new classrooms ($44,100 in 2008-09, for 18 new classrooms). According to the Department, the fact that the Board was granted an identical request for the 2007-08 school year does not bind the Department to grant similar requests in subsequent years, and certainly cannot prevent the Department from rectifying inefficient use of funds. Moreover, the Department asserts, a special request for technology funds cannot be granted unless the Department can verify that the entire amount of available technology funding has been appropriately allocated – a standard which the Board did not meet, either before the Department or at hearing. The Department notes that its denial of the Board's request is in no way inconsistent with its stance on the importance of technology, as evidenced by the significant level of support provided to the district for this purpose; it further rejects the Board's contention that denial of the requested special funding will result in elimination of telephone service, the router, internet access and maintenance/support services in three schools, observing that these fundamental costs should be addressed before expending funds, as the Board does, on nonessential items such as digital cameras and smart board bulbs. (Respondent's Exceptions at 9-15; see also Post-hearing Brief at 17-18 and 26-27)

The Board counters that the reason proffered by the Department's denial letter was the sufficiency for infrastructure needs of the Board's $800 per classroom allocation, so that the Department cannot now claim that the Board's request was inadequately supported or that funds could be appropriately reallocated from elsewhere in its budget. According to the Board, the ALJ assessed the evidence and (correctly) concluded that the Board had demonstrated its need for the funding at issue, so that the Department's position to the contrary should be rejected as based on unsupported assumptions, conjecture and speculation, as well as considerations other than need – as evidenced by its own prior approval of the same request. (Board's Reply at 8-13; see also Post-hearing Brief at 23-27)

The Commissioner, however, finds that the ALJ's decision was predicated on need for the items requested while ignoring the Board's manner of addressing its technology expenditures. Although the need for the services at issue in this matter – basic internet and telephone connectivity – is beyond serious dispute, what is in question is the need for funding over and above amounts ordinarily provided to support preschool technology.

Notwithstanding that the Board has in the past been allowed to fund infrastructure needs for Schools 50, 51 and 52 through special requests, now that this situation has come to the Commissioner's attention on appeal, she cannot condone and perpetuate inefficiency by allowing past practice to compel the award of additional funding in an area where the Board has failed to exercise reasonable fiscal discretion. As the Department's denial reflects (Testimony of David Joye at T2:95-112), there is no indication on this record that the Board made any attempt, before seeking additional funding, to first address its basic technological needs, then assess how best to use remaining allocations; to the contrary, the record clearly suggests that the Board treats its $800 per-class allotment as a series of self-contained entitlements, with each class's expenditures expanding to fill the amount available regardless of broader needs and no consideration given to ongoing infrastructure components.[8] Under these circumstances, the Commissioner cannot be persuaded, as she must by law, that the requested funds – as opposed to the services identified as their intended purpose – are necessary for the Board's adequate and efficient provision of preschool services.

In so holding, the Commissioner fully recognizes that she is requiring the Board to make choices, since, in the ever-burgeoning realm of technology, services and materials arguably of benefit to students are always likely to exceed levels that can realistically be supported by public funds. However, maintenance of a rich learning environment through use of technology (Exhibit P-15) is not inconsistent with efficiency and fiscal prudence, and proposed expenditures must always be scrutinized to identify items which can be done without, deferred, or provided in a more efficient manner while

[8] Tracy Markowitz testified that a classroom not needing a new smart board lamp ($300) would then have more money to spend on software, or that if software were not purchased, on a digital camera; she further testified that if the Board's special request is not granted, much of the existing classroom technology will be rendered useless due to lack of connectivity. (T1:113, 122-127, 130-131) Olga Hugelmeyer testified that funds are exhausted each year because classroom teachers are informed of the remaining balance on their $800 allotments as the year progresses and invited to submit additional order(s) based on their further needs assessments; she, too testified that denial of the special request would cut off phone and internet connectivity to the affected schools. (T3:133-36) still meeting student needs; for those items deemed truly necessary but for which funds are otherwise unavailable, the special request process is then appropriately utilized.

CONCLUSION

In sum, the Commissioner finds no merit to the Board's claims that the Department's January 15, 2008 denial of the funding requests herein at issue in any way violated constitutional remedies, court mandates, rules of the State Board of Education or departmental guidelines, nor to its claim that such denial will prevent the district from providing required and needed programs, services, positions and resources for preschool students. (Petition of Appeal at 1-10) Rather, for the reasons set forth above, the Commissioner finds that the Department's actions were reasonable and lawful in all respects, and that the Board on appeal has failed to meet its burden of proving that the funding it has requested is necessary to provide required preschool educational programs in an adequate and efficient manner.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted in part, and rejected in part, as set forth above, and the petition of appeal is dismissed in its entirety.[9]

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY, Petitioner,
v.
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION ,

Richard E. Shapiro, Esq., for petitioner

Melissa Dutton and Joyce Atkins, Deputy Attorneys General (Anne Milgram, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: March 20, 2008 Decided: March 25, 2008

BEFORE J. HOWARD SOLOMON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This is an appeal by the Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth (petitioner or District) from the denial of its request for State funding of certain items contained in its preschool budget for the 2008-2009 fiscal year. Pursuant to the mandate of the New Jersey Supreme Court, Abbott school districts must provide high quality preschool programs to their three-and four-year old children and the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) must ensure that such programs are adequately funded and assist local districts in implementing them.[1] The petitioner challenged the amount of funding in three categories, namely, its extended day/extended school year (ED/ESY) program, the reduction in funding for lunch assistants and the denial of funding for its technology infrastructure.

Petitioner's appeal was filed with the Commissioner on February 14, 2008, and was referred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 15, 2008 as a contested case. Hearings took place on March 13, 18 and 19, 2008, and the parties were given until March 20, 2008 for the submission of post hearing briefs, on which date the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The petitioner, an Abbott district, produced several witnesses in support of its request for funding in these three areas. Tracy Markowitz, the Interim Director of Early Childhood Education for the District, testified that on November 15, 2007, petitioner submitted its budget proposal (Exhibit P-2) to the New Jersey Department of Education (respondent or Department), which included funding for its ED/ESY Program, funding for 165[2] lunch assistants, and a special request of $44,000 for technology infrastructure. According to her, the teachers' and administrators' salaries connected with the ED/ESY Program were budgeted in the line items for teachers and administrative staff (principals, vice principals, clerks). Funding of $705,171 for lunch assistants was also a line item.

[1] Abbott v. Burke, 153 N.J. 480, 505-508 (1998) (Abbott V) and Abbot v. Burke, 163 N.J. 95, 120 (2000) (Abbott VI).

[2] Originally, the proposed budget requested 139 lunch assistants, but it was stipulated at the hearing that the correct number was 165 lunch assistants, one for each preschool class.

By letter from the Department, dated January 15, 2008 (Exhibit P-3), the budget of the District was approved, with the exception of funding for the ED/ESY Program, reduced funding for lunch assistants since only fifty-five assistants were approved from the original request of 165, and of funding for the special request of technology infrastructure, which was denied. Regarding the ED/DYS Program, the Department claimed that the budget it approved contained sufficient funding for a six hour, 180 day education program mandated by Abbott and the regulations, but "does not include funding for extended day or summer wrap-around programs[3], which are provided by the Department of Human Services [DHS]." (Exhibit P-3). The Department also reduced funding for lunch assistants to $235,345 for fifty-five lunch assistants instead of the 165 requested by the District "based on a ratio of one lunch aide for every three classrooms, and salaries have been adjusted to fit the regular day/year salary guide." (Id.) The technology infrastructure request was denied altogether on the basis that classroom technology funds allotted for each classroom were to be used for infrastructure costs. (Id.)

In her description of the ED/ESY Program, Markowitz explained that children receive one and one-half additional hours of education per day than those in the regular schedule since classes begin at 7:45 a.m. and last until 3:45 p.m. Furthermore, the regular schedule starts in September while the ED/ESY Program starts in August. In supporting the need for ED/ESY funding, she discussed the Early Screening Inventory Revised (ESI), an assessment tool to determine those children who may need intervention and referral to a child study team which she confirmed was administered by learning consultants (LTDC), not by teachers. Under this assessment tool, there are three categories: "okay," "rescreen," and "refer." The "referral" category is for those children who appear to have difficulties in language, fine motor and other essential skills, and require referral to a child study team. (Exhibit P-4). The "re-screen" category deals with children who may, but not necessarily, need intervention. (Exhibit P-4). The children in the "okay" category are those children who require no referral. She stated that the State-wide "referral" average should be five to seven percent, while petitioner's average was higher, at eleven percent. Children under the "okay" category should be at the eighty-five percent level, while petitioner's level reflected seventy-nine percent.

She mentioned that there were four schools in the District with an ED/ESY Program and three schools with ED (extended day) only. While the regulations require six hours per day of education, she felt that children were receptive to more instructional time beyond the six-hour minimum requirement. She referred to the study done by the National Institute for Early Educational Research (NIEER) (Exhibit P-6), which studied early child development and the positive results of a longer preschool program. She prepared comparison graphs (Exhibit P-7) to support the District's position that ED/ESY children are better prepared for entry into kindergarten than those in the regular day program. She claimed that wraparound services provided by DHS (further discussed below) were essentially childcare services which did not provide an instructional component since the staffs in wraparound were not required to be certified teachers as in the ED/ESY Program. The graphs she prepared (Exhibit P-7), which were also based upon the Early Learning Assessment System (ELAS) for literacy, made a comparison between the ED/ESY Program and the regular program. She opined that the ED/ESY Program gave a higher proficiency level in phonological awareness and word recognition/fluency.

In discussing these comparison graphs, she initially thought the information on the State percentages, against which she made her comparisons, came from an e-mail provided by a representative of NIEER, when in fact it came from respondent. She further corrected her testimony on the results of the Early Screening Inventory (ESI-R) (Exhibit P-4), indicating that the State percentages were not State averages, but expected percentages. Accordingly, petitioner did not make its analysis in comparing test results on State-wide averages, only on expected averages. She also acknowledged that some teachers work in the wraparound program.

Markowitz also discussed the impact that reduced funding for lunch assistants would have on the District. In the District, lunches are not only served in classrooms, but also in temporary trailers which requires additional time since the lunch assistant must leave the school building and walk to the trailers. Additionally, there is a safety concern caused by such a reduction where a teacher or assistant teacher would not be able to address an emergent situation without leaving the rest of the children unattended. Petitioner wants to maintain two adults for every fifteen students, but the funding approved by the Department would only allow for one lunch assistant for three classrooms. Each classroom contains fifteen students for a total of forty-five children per lunch assistant. She also mentioned that there are disciplinary concerns which are not infrequent among three and four-year-olds, which might not be addressed if staffing were reduced. Additionally, the District received a rating of over five on the Early Child Environmental Rating Scale (ECERS), which she felt it would lose with such a reduction. Lunch not only includes preparation, but children washing their hands and brushing their teeth, as well as getting ready for a nap. She claimed that since the 1999-2000 school year, petitioner had been approved for one lunch assistant for each class.

Markowitz also discussed the need for technology infrastructure in order to maintain preschool learning expectations, which involve critical thinking skills. She related that most students in the District do not have computers at home and rely upon the District for their technology experiences. Part of infrastructure includes access to the internet through servers and routers. She disputed the Department's decision that the allotment of $800 for technology support, which is given to each class, would accomplish those goals. The $800 allotment is used to purchase replacement items, such as smart board bulbs, which cost approximately $300 each, and cartridges. She presented a sampling of technology costs for Schools 50, 51, and 52 (Exhibit P-16), which included a breakdown on how the $800 allotment is used. This sampling only represented costs to the present, and not further anticipated costs before the school year ends. Schools 50, 51 and 52 each contain twenty class rooms and in each class room there is a smart board. She noted that funding for technology infrastructure had been approved by the Department for the past nine years, with $44,000 being approved for the past school year.

Olga Hugelmeyer, the District's Assistant Superintendent for Teaching and Learning, mentioned that the ED/ESY Program had been in place for some time. It was established in School 26 in 1999, in School 50 in September 2001, in School 51 in September 2004, in School 52 in September 2005, in School 29 in January 2006, in School 30 (ED only) in September 2006, and in School 31 (ED only) in September 2006. In the school year 2008-2009, there will be three new schools (Schools 21, 27 and 28) which are scheduled to provide extended services. These schools, with the exception of Schools 50, 51 and 52, which are stand-alone preschools, will house pre-K through eighth grade. She, too, is familiar with the wraparound program which she asserts is lacking an educational component since the ED/ESY Program requires certified teachers, while the wraparound program does not. The District does receive funding for a two-hour wraparound program at six sites where a half hour is used in the morning and an hour and a half is used for after school hours.

While the District is a large Abbott district, where she felt there would be more at-risk students, she did, however, confirm that the educational needs of the students were met during the regular day school hours of 8:15 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. She further noted that the District selected students for the ED/ESY Program on a lottery basis, where two hundred students were accepted at each site. Therefore, any student, not just at-risk students, could be admitted under the lottery system, even children who were screened as "okay" under ESI-R screening.

With regard to lunch assistants, there are seven or eight children seated at a table, with two tables per classroom. Classrooms are limited to fifteen students. A "family-style" lunch is served which requires supervision. She also mentioned that the District received an ECERS score of 5.3 which the District did not want to lose with a reduction in lunch staffing. She reiterated that a ratio of two adults per class of fifteen students was necessary to maintain proper supervision and adult interaction. She stated that since the District allows teachers and assistant teachers a one-hour lunch, the reduction would have an adverse effect on safety and supervision. The time for lunch is approximately two hours, which includes cleanup and nap time. She mentioned that during nap time, many students do not sleep, but remain active, reiterating the need for the presence of two adults per fifteen students. She originally thought that there was a written contract for teachers and assistant teachers for their lunch hours, but then realized that there was no written contract in that regard, only an unwritten practice. A provision will be in place in a written contract for the 2009-2010 and 2010-2011 school years for teacher and assistant teacher lunch hours. She noted that the practice of allowing teachers and assistant teachers a one-hour lunch had been in effect since October 1994.

On the issue of infrastructure funding, she stated that the Department had approved such funding over the past five years in amounts ranging from $32,000 to $44,000 and that if such funding were not approved for the 2008-2009 school year, internet and telephone services, among other services, would be lost. She related that the infrastructure justification for the 2008-2009 school year was identical to the justification submitted for the 2007-2008 school year where $44,000 was approved. The 2008-2009 school year was the first year the Department denied such funding. The District also cited the Department's treatise entitled "Preschool Teaching & Learning Expectations: Standards of Quality" (July 2004), which provides that "[a] rich learning environment contains the following elements: . . . the use of technology, such as computers with age-appropriate software, to enhance the development of critical thinking skills." (Exhibit P-15).

Susan Mettlen, the District's Director of Technology and Information Systems, prepared the request for infrastructure funding. She mentioned that this funding is necessary for telephone service, a router which provides internal and external networking capabilities, access to the internet, and fixed and annual service costs in implementing this technology. If funding were denied, these services would not exist. She noted that preschoolers use computers most of the school day, even the internet.

Corey Weiss, a data analyst for petitioner, referred to the Terra Nova Standardized Assessment (Terra Nova) to support the District's request for ED/ESY funding at Schools 50, 51 and 52. He explained that the comparisons of language, math and reading scores (Exhibit P-17) justifies funding the ED/ESY Programs since those students in the program performed better than those in regular day programs. He admitted, however, that he was not familiar with all facets of Terra Nova, such as when, at the kindergarten level, it should administered. He further confirmed that his findings did not take into account certain variables, such as dual language, environmental or other differences, but claimed that he took the entire school district into consideration which, in his opinion, negated such variables.

The first witness for the Department was David Joye, its Budget and Policy Analyst for early childhood development. His duties include developing and implementing guidance for budget expenditures as well as reviewing budgets of the various boards of education. He confirmed that the Department approved petitioner's budget for the 2008-2009 school year in the sum of $44,825,158 to implement its approved Abbott Preschool Program. (Exhibit P-3). This was less than the requested budget of $45,946,763 submitted by the District (Exhibit P-2) since there was a reduction in line items for teacher and administrative salaries which the District had included for its ED/ESY Programs, a reduction in funding for lunch assistants and a denial of funding for technology infrastructure. He mentioned that the Department approved all of the special requests made by the District, with the exception of funding for technology infrastructure and further stated that if a special request were approved in one school year that approval does not bind the Department in succeeding school years. In submitting a special request, a justification must be submitted with the proposed budget. He stated that nowhere in the District's budget line items were there entries specifically for ED/ESY Programs. He claimed that he only learned of the ED/ESY Programs in March 2007, and the Department followed with a letter to the District on March 2, 2007 (Exhibit R-1) requesting confirmation. The District responded on March 12, 2007 [Exhibit R-2(a)-(c)] confirming its ED/ESY Programs. Joye noted that the regulations only require that preschool children attend a minimum of a six-hour day for 180 days and further mentioned that the District offered wraparound services through DHS, a program which provides longer school days for children of working families and which is funded by DHS. He acknowledged that he participated in the preparation of the letter dated January 15, 2008 (Exhibit P-3) which approved the budget for the District and authored the comments on the budget reductions.

While the regulations only require a six-hour day, 180-day school year, Joye acknowledged that districts could seek additional funding beyond the minimum, but stated that that was not done here. He did state, however, that the Department allowed the District a six-hour forty-five minute school day which was beyond the minimum, not, however, the eight hours requested.

While he claimed that he only became aware of the ED/ESY Program recently, he was shown a letter from the District dated June 1, 2007 (Exhibit P-20), which discussed the ED/ESY Program as early as November 15, 2001. Nevertheless, he felt that the denial was justified since the wraparound program "wraps around" an educational component, although he was not sure if the wraparound programs contained the same educational components as ED/ESY Programs

On the reduction of funding for lunch assistants to fifty-five, providing a 3:1 ratio (three classrooms per one lunch assistant), he based this reduction upon his assessment that other Abbott districts were funded for one lunch assistant per three classrooms. He mentioned that there is nothing in the regulations pertaining to lunch assistants and concluded that the data submitted by the District failed to justify its request. However, he acknowledged that he was not familiar with the specific use of lunch assistants by the District and further acknowledged that the Department's budget approval letter (Exhibit P-3) provided no explanation for the reduction of lunch assistants nor did it explain how the ratio was to work.

With regard to the technology infrastructure request of $44,000, Joye claimed that the District could use technology funding of $800 per classroom which appeared on the District's line items. In support of his position, he mentioned that each new preschool is given initial funding of $2,450 which is intended for all essential technology components. Therefore, he concluded that the $800 allotment per year per classroom should suffice. With 165 classrooms, the District's $800 per classroom allotments totaled $132,000. He explained that these funds could be used across all classrooms, meaning that the $800 allotment was not dedicated to a particular classroom and that unused portions could be shared with other classrooms. He further noted that follow-up justification for infrastructure funding was submitted in February 2008, after the Department denied this special request. [Exhibit R-5(a-d)]. He felt that the District had not explained how its allotments for technology costs would not sufficiently fulfill its infrastructure needs. He also noted that some of the items for technology expenditures (Exhibit P-16) were not recurring, such as the cost for a digital camera. He did, however, acknowledge that the technology costs submitted (Exhibit P-16) were only to the present, and he did not know if those funds would be exhausted before the end of the school year.

The Department then presented Ellen Wolock, its Director for Preschool Education. She received a doctorate in education and specializes in early childhood education. She has been serving as director for the past eleven months, and for the past five years was involved with preschool education for the Department. Part of her duties include overseeing the implementation of Abbott pre-school programs, reviewing Abbott pre-school budgets in their final stages, and assisting in drafting budget approval letters.

She was unaware that the District provided ED/ESY Programs since she was not "that involved" with petitioner. She reviewed the District's letter of March 12, 2007 [Exhibit R-2(a)] which sought to justify funding for its ED/ESY Program. However, she felt that the analysis performed by the District in its justification was not accurate. She stated that the District receives six hours and forty-five minutes for its preschool day, which the District was comparing to an eight-hour study. She further stated that the Abbott Preschool Program Longitudinal Effects Study (APPLES) (Exhibit P-5), cited by the District, only measured the positive effects on children who were enrolled in preschools over those who were not, not the effects of longer school days. In agreeing with the findings in APPLES, she felt that children who attended Abbott preschools performed better than those who did not.

She was familiar with the ECER screening assessment since she worked with its developer, Dr. Samuel Meisel, at the University of Michigan. She explained that the purpose of ECER is to sample children's skills in the areas of language, motor skills and cognition where a school could "flag" a child with a potential learning problem. This screening process should only be used after school starts, within the first six weeks, and not during the summertime, in order to enable students to become familiar with their teachers, thereby providing a more comfortable and secure atmosphere which would translate into better test results. If LTDCs, and not teachers, administered this test, as is done in the District, students would not have the same familiarity as they have with their teachers, which could translate into poorer test results. In her opinion, the ECER assessment does not determine learning needs, which can only be verified by a child study team.

In discussing the category of "rescreen" under ESI-R screening, which the District used to justify funding, she stated that this category is of no significance since it could include children who refused to cooperate in the screening process, not necessarily those who require further evaluation. However, the category "refer" does necessitate some form of intervention, such as a child study team for full testing to determine if there is a special need, such as in speech. In her opinion, the screening results performed by the District did not justify ED/ESY Programs. She was not aware of any studies which compared the extended day in preschool to a regular day.

In further disputing the validity of the analyses done by the District, Wolock commented that the Early Learning Assessment System (ELAS), advanced by the District, requires a teacher to observe a child in various activities, such as playing with blocks, and to assess that child's performance. This requires a subjective analysis where teachers may vary in points assessed. She pointed out that, rather than using the four point scoring scale as required in this assessment, the District used only two points in its assessments. She further disputed the graphs submitted by the District (Exhibits P-7 and P-9) in support of ED/ESY funding, she disputed the validity of these graphs since it was not shown if the graphs included wraparound or dual language programs.[4] With regard to the other graphs presented by the District (Exhibit P-9), she expressed the same concerns. When asked about Terra Nova testing (Exhibit P-17), which assesses the skills of children in mathematics and reading, and was used by the District in support of ED/EYS funding, she again expressed the same concerns about the variables she noted in the other analyses prepared by the District.

[4]Dual language programs require teaching the children for two weeks in English and for two weeks in their other spoken language which enhances their learning skills.

When examining the District's preschool schedule (Exhibit R-7), she had a concern where large group time (LGT), which usually involves children sitting in a circle while a teacher conducts some activity, was followed by "story time" where children also sit in a circle while a teacher reads a story. She felt that these types of activities, which are programmed back-to-back, were not beneficial since the total time involved was too long for a child.

She was part of the approval process for the 2008-2009 budget, and in denying funding for the ED/ESY Program, she was confident that the District could meet the Abbott requirements for preschoolers in the regular day sessions since there has been improvement and growth in the quality of its teachers. She noted that the District not only has master teachers, but a system which supports children with special needs, all without the need for the extended day model. She related that no other Abbott district was approved for ED/ESY preschool funding, asserting that it was the quality of instruction, not the length of the school day that was important.

When asked about the NIEER study (Exhibit P-6), also cited by the District, she stated that this study only pertained to half-day versus extended-day programs, not the six hour forty-five minute days in the District to eight hour days. She also noted that the District placed children in the ED/ESY Program on the basis of a lottery, not upon need. She did confirm that the wraparound program did not require certified teachers and that the wraparound program did not require the same 15:2 student-teacher ratio as required by Abbott.

Beverley Wellons, the Assistant Director for Childcare Operations with DHS, Division of Family Development, has been involved with the wraparound programs for Abbott districts since 2004. She also received a degree in early education. She mentioned that wraparound programs consist of four hours a day from September to June, which can be utilized before and after the school day (thus "wraparound"), and ten hours per day for the months of July and August. The purpose of the program is to give children of working families a longer school day so that a work day is not affected. She mentioned that the staffs for the wraparound programs are required to be licensed in child care by the Department of Children and Families, and that the wraparound program is required to be developmentally appropriate. In describing the educational component in wraparound, she referred to the "Manual of Requirements for Childcare Centers" (section 10:122-6.1) issued by DHS (Exhibit R-9) in which the following is provided:

> (a) The center shall develop and provide a variety of children's planned activities, geared to the age and developmental level of the children served, that:
>
> 1. Promote the development of language, thinking and problem-solving skills, curiosity, exploration, large and small muscles, social competence, self-esteem, and positive self-identity; and
> 2. Are relevant to the cultural background of the children and foster intercultural awareness.
> Id., at p. 55.

In order to qualify for wraparound funding, which is based on a per student basis, family income must be below 300% of the Federal poverty level. Those parents whose income is above that level can pay from their own resources for wraparound services. While wraparound provides a ratio of two adults per twenty children, the District can use certified teachers in the program and can expand the adult ratio to students.

Renee Whelan, who has a doctorate in education, is involved in early childhood education for the Department. She serves as the liaison between the Department and the District, as well as liaison for three other Abbot districts. As liaison, she assists in developing programs through visits to these districts and is involved in the budget process. Over the past two years, she had observed about thirty preschool classrooms in the District and made other visits to assess those areas in need of attention.

On February 6, 2007, she visited the District for the purpose of assessing lunchroom assistants and to see if the Department's best practices were followed. She observed three classrooms housed in temporary trailers and two classrooms in the school building. Each visit lasted approximately five minutes. In all but one classroom, she noticed lunch assistants standing about, without any interaction with the children, except in one class where the lunch assistant directed a child to be seated. There was only one teacher in each of the rooms. She commented that best practices suggest that teachers eat with their students in order to continue the educational component and provide interaction. She also felt that if teachers remained in the classroom during lunch time, there would be a higher ECER score. She did not remain for nap time.

Based upon information she received from the District, she based her budget analysis for lunch assistants on a half hour lunch for teachers and assistant teachers. In making this analysis, she took into account her personal observations of February 6, 2007, the daily schedule provided by the District (Exhibit R-7), the daily routine for the 2007-2008 school year (Exhibit R-11) and the contract settlement for 2006-2009, which all appeared to confirm that teachers and assistant teachers were given a half hour for lunch. Therefore, she felt that teachers and assistant teachers could easily have their lunches either during the children's naptime or lunch time. She did, however, acknowledge that, on or about March 11, 2008, she received an email from Gissela Diaz of the District confirming that teachers and assistant teachers were given one-hour for lunch. (Exhibit P-21).

She also mentioned that the three other Abbott districts where she serves as liaison, although smaller in size, did not use lunch assistants, but relief teachers. It was her position that petitioner did not follow best practices which recommends that teachers remain with their children during lunch time. (Exhibit P-22). While she did, in part, base her budget assessment for lunch assistants on her visit on February 6, 2007 when she observed only five classrooms, in visiting the District on other dates for reasons unrelated to lunch assistants, she continued to note the failure of the assistants to interact with the children.

In the previous school year, she acknowledged that 122 lunch assistants were approved for the District and in the year prior to that, more than 100 lunch assistants were approved. However, she noted that, in her other districts, the teachers and assistant teachers were given a thirty to forty minute lunch. She also noted that petitioner is approved for twenty relief teachers which the other districts use during lunch. Although she was aware that the District used relief teachers between different sites, in her opinion, that was not the best use of these teachers who could be monitoring children during lunch hour. In the other districts, relief teachers remain in the classroom for about forty minutes and then leave to prepare for their next class, which she felt was in accordance with best practices.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

In Abbott v. Burke, 153 N.J. 480, 508 (1998) ("Abbott V"), the New Jersey Supreme Court emphasized the importance of early childhood education and directed the Commissioner to "ensure" that preschool programs for three-and four-year-old children are adequately funded. Thereafter, in Abbott v. Burke, 163 N.J. 95, (2000) ("Abbott VI"), the New Jersey Supreme Court reaffirmed its commitment to quality preschool programming and reiterated its direction to the Commissioner to "ensure" adequate resources and funding for that purpose. Two years later, in Abbott v. Burke, 170 N.J. 536, 559 (2002) ("Abbott VIII"), the Supreme Court revisited the topic and commented that funding decisions should be "based not on arbitrary, predetermined per-student amounts, but rather, on a record containing funding allocations developed after a thorough assessment of actual needs." More recently, in Board of Education of Millville v. New Jersey Department of Education, 183 N.J. 264 (2005), the Supreme Court clarified that to "ensure" adequate funding is not the same as to "provide" state funding and that the Commissioner may require Abbott districts to reallocate money from District budget accounts to make up preschool funding shortfalls.

N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.1 repeats the Court's mandate in Abbott V that all children residing in the Abbott districts be given the opportunity of a high-quality preschool education beginning at age three. This provision also includes specific standards for quality preschool education: a certified teacher and an assistant teacher for each class, maximum class size of fifteen students, developmentally appropriate preschool curriculum, adequate facilities, and transportation, health and other related services, as needed.

In that regard, under N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 (preschool programs), "(a) [t]he district board of education shall offer a full-day, full-year preschool program to all eligible children." A "full-day, full-year" is defined as "a preschool day consisting of a six-hour comprehensive educational program meeting Department requirements at N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 for at least 180 school days and not exceeding a 10-month academic period." N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-1.2.

The District is in compliance with this requirement. It offered no expert testimony to justify that longer school hours are clearly beneficial over the six hour minimum mandated by Abbott and N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2. Although the District suggested such a result, the data submitted in support of its position was not sufficiently credible. Several variables were not taken into account, such as wraparound and dual language programs. The ESI-R results only serve to identify those students who may require further evaluation, such as by a child study team. Accordingly, the graphic analyses were not accepted as reliable. In support of its position, the District relied upon the NIEER study "Is More Better? The Effects of Full-Day vs. Half-Day Preschool on Early School Achievement" which indicates that children who are involved in a longer day (eight hours) demonstrated positive benefits over those children who experienced only a 2.5 to three hour day. This was not relevant to the District which provides, at least, a six hour day, and, according to the Department, a six hour and forty-five minute day. The District even agreed that its regular day program was sufficient to meet the requirements of Abbott and the regulations, and, accordingly, no proofs were offered to the contrary. The Department noted there were no other Abbott districts which operated an ED/ESY program for preschool children. Furthermore, wraparound funding is available, whether based on income eligibility or pay status, which provides extended hours to "[p]romote the development of language, thinking and problem-solving skills, curiosity, exploration . . . social competence, self-esteem and positive self-identity . . ." (Exhibit R-9, at p. 55).

The District's justification for ED/ESY funding, even though forwarded to the Department after its proposed budget was submitted, did not establish that the Department's denial was arbitrary, nor did it establish by credible evidence the need for such funding. The burden of proof from an agency's adverse action is on the petitioner. N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-8.6(c) states:

> The burden of proof shall be on the petitioning party to demonstrate that these standards were met by the applicant notwithstanding the Department's determination to the contrary. The record on appeal shall consist of those documents and information submitted to the Department in support of its application and any additional information relied upon by the Department in making the determination at issue.

The burden must be met by a preponderance of competent, relevant and credible evidence. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Precisely what is needed to satisfy the standard must be decided on a case-by-case basis. The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of the credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975).

Based upon the facts adduced, I CONCLUDE that the District has not met its burden. There were many variables in its analyses which were not addressed. In addition, its reliance upon various assessments and screening processes did not outweigh the contrary explanations offered by the Department. The regulations require a six hour, 180 day school year. The District is complying with these requirements. Accordingly, it presented no compelling proofs that it was unable to meet the needs of its preschoolers. Therefore, its request for ED/ESY funding should be denied.

The next issue involves the reduction in funding for lunch assistants. The Department reduced a request to fund 165[5] lunch assistants to fifty-five. In dollars, the District requested funding of $705,171, while the Department approved only $235,345. In the absence of legal precedent on the ratio of preschool lunch assistants per classroom, reliance will be made upon the testimony and documents presented. The Department relied upon its preschool program guides (Exhibits R-10 and R-12) to advance its position that teachers should be present during lunch time to enhance the learning component. It assumed that teachers and teacher assistants had half an hour for lunch as in other Abbott districts, and as contained in many of the documents submitted by the District. Instead, the District allows its preschool teachers and assistant teachers a full hour. In order to provide a safe environment during lunch and nap time, which together consists of a two hour period, the District requested one lunch assistant for each of its 165 preschool classrooms.

When the Department visited five preschools in the District in the prior year, it was noticed that lunch assistants provided no interaction with children, with the exception of one who told a child to be seated. The lunch assistants were seen standing around with little or no interaction. In support of its position, the District related that while many children sleep during nap time, others do not, requiring some activity for those children who do not nap. No indication, however, was given about the usual number of students who nap and those who do not. Therefore, it is difficult to assess the need for a lunch assistant during nap time since a teacher or assistant teacher is present. Since the District provides a one hour lunch for its teaching staff, which the Department indicates is more than any other Abbot preschool, some accommodation must, however, be made to ensure that a safe and secure environment exists during lunch. Based upon the facts adduced, I CONCLUDE that the Department should provide funding for 165 lunch assistants for one hour only, during the eating, hand washing and teeth brushing phases. During nap time, the presence of the teacher or assistant teacher should be sufficient to monitor those children engaged in an activity.[6]

On the issue of technology infrastructure for Schools 50, 51 and 52, the District made a special request for funding of $44,000 in addition to the $800 allotment each class receives for technology costs. The Department maintained the position that this classroom allotment, which consists of $132,000 when taking into account the 165 classrooms in which each is funded $800, should be sufficient to meet the District's infrastructure needs. These allotments were not limited to a particular classroom, but could be shared with other classrooms which had not exhausted their allotments. The District contended, however, that these allotments were exhausted each year in replacing various items, such as ink cartridges and bulbs for smart boards. What was evident from the proofs provided by the District was that not all of the replacement items were recurring annually, such as the cost for a digital camera. However, even putting aside digital camera costs, it was clear that this allotment would likely be exhausted by the end of the school year since the proofs submitted only reflected those costs up to the hearing dates.

Although a determination by the Department in one year may not binding on succeeding years, nevertheless, the justification presented for infrastructure funding was identical to the justification provided for the 2007-2008 school year, which was granted. In addition, the District mentioned that such funding, although not necessarily in the amount presently requested, had been granted over the past several years.

Of particular interest is the Department's own treatise which encourages a rich learning environment through the use of technology, ". . . such as computers with age-appropriate software, to enhance the development of critical thinking skills."[7] In this regard, the District offered compelling reasons for infrastructure funding—the need for telephone service, networking capabilities, and internet access. Based upon the facts adduced, I CONCLUDE that funding of $44,000 for technology infrastructure be provided.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, the following is ORDERED:

1. Funding for the ED/ESY Programs be and is hereby DENIED;
2. Funding for lunch assistants be and is hereby granted for 165 lunch assistants for one hour only.
3. Funding for technology infrastructure of $44,000 be and is hereby GRANTED.

Similarly, ROBINSON realizes that though the BOARD has a duty to reasonably accommodate her disability, she must be able to perform her duties, including but not limited to maintaining sobriety and having a satisfactory record of attendance and that, consistent with In re Yaniello, CD 203-95 (Jun. 12, 1995), aff'd. S.B. 78-95 (Jan. 8, 1997), aff'd. App.Div. Dkt. No. A-3482-96T1 (Apr.2, 1998) (unreported), the BOARD may lawfully hold ROBINSON to the terms of a return to work agreement. The BOARD cannot assume that, without the following protections contained in the Contract, ROBINSON will limit possible alcohol consumption to off-duty hours, or that the effects of alcohol will be dissipated by the time the workday commences.

NOW THEREFORE, the matters in dispute having been amicably adjusted by and between the parties, it is hereby represented, warranted, promised, covenanted and agreed as follows:

EXHIBIT A

1. The recitals in the Settlement Agreement are made part of the Contract by reference.

2. The BOARD will seek the Commissioner's approval for this Contract, and if the Commissioner approves the Contract without modification, ask the Commissioner to allow the tenure charges against ROBINSON to be withdrawn and dismissed with prejudice.

3. Upon suspicion or evidence of ROBINSON's return to alcohol abuse after the execution of the Contract, ROBINSON consents in advance to submit to blood testing. The BOARD's demand for blood testing shall be provided in writing and delivered to ROBINSON by personal delivery. ROBINSON must present herself at the place designated for testing for the presence of alcohol in her body within one (1) hour upon receipt of the demand unless extended by the BOARD in writing. Blood testing is to take place at a licensed, BOARD-designated hospital, clinic, hospice, laboratory or other healthcare provider utilizing a split sample method, with the sample to be split into three parts. In the event that the first part of the sample tests positive utilizing the then-current standards accepted by the U.S. Department of Transportation, the BOARD may immediately suspend ROBINSON in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et seq., and the second part of the sample will be forwarded promptly and directly by the licensed, BOARD-designated healthcare provider described above to a facility operated by a licensed laboratory. ROBINSON will pay for the analysis of the second part of the sample. In the event that the second part of the sample tests positive, the BOARD will consider the result as a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON. In the event that the second part of the sample tests negative, another licensed laboratory will test the third part by merger or acquisition at the expense of the BOARD. The third test shall be conclusive. In the event that the third part of the sample tests positive, the BOARD will consider the result as a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON. In the event of a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON, following the principles articulated in Yaniello, supra, ROBINSON acknowledges that she will be subject to the termination of her employment and tenure;

4. For an indefinite period after the full and final execution of this agreement, ROBINSON consents in advance to submit to random blood alcohol testing. The BOARD's demand for blood testing shall be provided in writing and delivered to ROBINSON by personal delivery. ROBINSON must present herself at the place designated for testing for the presence of alcohol in her body within one (1) hour upon receipt of the demand unless extended by the BOARD in writing. Blood testing is to take place at a licensed, BOARD-designated hospital, clinic, hospice, laboratory or other healthcare provider utilizing a split sample method, with the sample to be split into three parts. In the event that the first part of the sample tests positive utilizing the then-current standards accepted by the U.S. Department of Transportation, the BOARD may immediately suspend ROBINSON in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et seq., and the second part of the sample will be forwarded promptly and directly by the licensed, BOARD-designated healthcare provider described above to a facility operated by a licensed laboratory. ROBINSON will pay for the analysis of the second part of the sample. In the event that the second part of the sample tests positive, the BOARD will consider the result as a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON. In the event that the second part of the sample tests negative, another licensed laboratory will test the third part by merger or acquisition at the expense of the BOARD. The third test shall be conclusive. In the event that the third part of the sample tests positive, the BOARD will consider the result as a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON. In the event of a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON, following the principles articulated in Yaniello, ROBINSON acknowledges that she will be subject to the termination of her employment and tenure.

5. In the event that ROBINSON is absent from work for two (2) or more consecutive days, the BOARD may require that she supply a physician's note providing that she was unable to work due to illness or medical condition and indicate the illness or medical condition she suffered from. In the event she fails to provide the physician's note within three (3) work days upon written request to ROBINSON, she acknowledges that she will be subject to termination of her employment and tenure.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties have executed this Agreement on the date first hereinabove written.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions and replies of the Board – filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4[1] – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching her determination herein.

Petitioner's exceptions recast and reiterate her arguments advanced below, again presenting in detail reasons why she feels justified in withholding information with respect to her domicile. As the Commissioner determines that all of this "justification" was fully considered and addressed by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) in his initial decision it, will not, therefore, be revisited here.

Upon full and independent review of the record, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that summary decision is appropriately granted to the Board – as petitioner's failure to [1] It is noted that although the OAL mailing advisory sheet purports that the Initial Decision was mailed to the parties on March 14, 2008, the OAL's decision mailing envelope addressed to petitioner (copy included with her exceptions) evidences a postmark mailing date of March 19, 2008.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 355-11/07

Z.A., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD,
J.K.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SADDLE RIVER, BERGEN COUNTY,

Respondent.

Z.A., pro se

Meri J. Van Blarcom-Gupko, Esq., for the respondent (Wiley Malehorn Sirota & Raynes, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 5, 2008 Decided: March 11, 2008

BEFORE JOSEPH PAONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Z.A. appeals the determination of respondent Board of Education of the Borough of Saddle River (Board) that J.K., petitioner's son, is ineligible to attend Northern Highlands Regional High School (NHRHS) because Z.A. refuses to provide her address to the Board. The Board is seeking reimbursement from petitioner representing tuition for the number of days of ineligible attendance.

On October 3, 2007, the Board wrote to Z.A. and requested proof of residency. Z.A. then wrote to the Commissioner, State Board of Education, and requested "emergent relief" to prevent the Board from demanding her residency information. She was advised by the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Bureau), that if she could not reach a resolution with the Board, she could file a residency appeal. By letter of October 15, 2007, the Board notified petitioner that it determined that J.K. is not domiciled in the district because his "parent failed to provide and is unwilling to demonstrate proof of residency." After receipt of A.A.'s residency appeal, the Bureau transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law on December 21, 2007. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

On January 24, 2008, the Board filed for summary decision, which Z.A. opposed. The Board contended that Z.A.'s refusal to provide her home address required that J.K. be removed from NHRHS, A.A.'s residency appeal be dismissed and the Boards cross-petition for tuition be granted. Z.A. responded, in essence, that due to her concern for her and her child's safety, she should not be required to provide her home address. I denied the Board's motion and scheduled a hearing for February 20, 2008. On that date, at my request, the parties endeavored to resolve their dispute. They agreed that because Z.A. harbored concern for her safety and desired to keep her address confidential, Z.A. would be permitted to verify her address directly with Borough of Saddle River Police Chief Timothy McWilliams, who would then confirm to the Board Z.A.'s residence in the Borough, without disclosing Z.A.'s actual address to the Board. The hearing was rescheduled for March 5, 2008, after the Board advised me that Z.A. failed to abide by the resolution. On that date, the hearing was held and the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Board sends high school students residing in the Board's district to NHRHS. J.K. is Z.A.'s eighteen-year-old son and attends NHRHS. Each day, either Z.A. drives J.K. or J.K. drives himself to school. Z.A. claims that she lives in the Borough. When uncertainty arose as to J.K.'s residence, the Board requested that Z.A. provide proof of her residence. Z.A. had previously only provided a post office box number to the Board. Z.A. refused, citing concern for her safety.

Z.A. testified that her fear arose after her previous landlord filed an eviction action against her five years ago and obtained a judgment for possession. She contends that he prevailed in that action because he had bribed the judge. She alleges that her landlord has connections to organized criminal families in New York. She said that her landlord told her that he could make life difficult for her. She claims to have received harassing phone calls and to have been followed. She believes that her landlord is somehow responsible for loosening lug nuts on her motor vehicle. She fears that if the Board obtains her address, it may be released to her former landlord. At the hearing, Z.A. provided no police reports, documents, witnesses or corroboration of any sort to substantiate her suspicion about her landlord or her fear for her safety.

Z.A. further testified that she met with the police chief on February 26, 2008. She admitted that she did not provide McWilliams with any information to verify her address. Z.A. related that she lives with a man and the lease and utility bills are in his name. She claims that he refuses to help her because he does not want to be involved with the police. She also claims that her landlord refuses to provide a letter verifying that she lives in the apartment because he also wants no involvement with the police. Z.A. does not work or attend school. She has no bank account and her address is not listed with any government agency. The address shown on her driver's license is to a post office box. She asserts that there is nothing in her name anywhere, "in fact I don't exist." Z.A. is unable to offer any document to support her contention that she resides in Saddle River.

McWilliams testified that when he met with Z.A., he explained to her that he would not release her address to anyone and was only acting on the Board's request to confirm her residence in Saddle River. He would not use the information for any code enforcement or criminal investigation purpose. R-1. McWilliams added that not only would Z.A. not provide verification of her address, she wouldn't even reveal to him her address. McWilliams added that Z.A. asked if he could give her a break and falsely report that he confirmed her address.

Z.A. denied that she refused to tell McWilliams her address. She suggested that he never asked. As a result of this dispute in testimony, I halted the hearing and allowed Z.A. and McWilliams to go outside of the hearing room so that Z.A. could, at a minimum, provide her address to McWilliams. When the hearing resumed, McWilliams informed me, and Z.A. conceded, that Z.A. refused to give him her address.

Z.A.'s refusal to provide her address to the Board due to a concern for her safety is suspect. Her testimony regarding her fear was unsubstantiated and fanciful. And notwithstanding her failure to provide verification of her residence to the McWilliams, her credibility is seriously undermined by her refusal to provide merely her address to the police chief. Accordingly, I FIND that Z.A. refused to provide any evidence that she lives in the Board's district. I further FIND that her purported reason for not providing her address is baseless.

According to the Board, tuition was calculated for the 2005-2006 year at $10,388.91, the 2006-2007 year at $10,539.61, and the 2007-2008 year at $10,751.25. R-2. J.K. attended NHRHS 97 days during the 2005-2006 school year. He attended the entire 2006-2007 school year. And during the 2007-2008 school year, he attended 112 days, until the March 5, 2008, hearing date. R-3

"Public schools shall be free to . . . [a]ny person who is domiciled within the school district" and is over five and under twenty years of age. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). In order for a district to determine a student's eligibility for enrollment, the board is authorized to request documentation. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.4. The regulations allow a plethora of documents to constitute proof of domicile. These documents may include, but are not limited to, leases, signed letters from landlords, and other evidence of tenancy or residency, voter registrations, licenses, permits, financial account information, utility bills, delivery receipts and other evidence of personal attachment to a particular location, court orders, receipts, bills, employment documents, unemployment claims, business records or documents issued by a governmental agency. Ibid.

I CONCLUDE that Z.A. is obligated to provide proof of her domicile. I further CONCLUDE that since I found that Z.A. failed to provide any proof of her residency, J.K. is not entitled to a free education. The Board, however, is entitled to recover tuition from Z.A. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). "Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance . . . ." Ibid. Therefore, the per diem rate for the 2005-2006 school year is $57.72, and the per diem rate for the 2007-2008 school year is $59.73. Accordingly, I also CONCLUDE that the total tuition for the 2005-2006 school year is $5,598.84. The total tuition for the 2006-2007 school year is $10,539.61, and the total tuition for the 2007-2008 school year, up to, and including, March 5, 2008, is $6,689.76. Thus, the total due the Board as of March 5, 2008, the date of the hearing, is $22,828.21.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER that the Board's decision to remove J.K. from the NHRHS is AFFIRMED. I further ORDER that the Board's application for tuition reimbursement is GRANTED in the amount of $22,828.21, plus $59.73 per day for each day that J.K. continues to attend NHRHS after March 5, 2008.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions – dated April 3, 2008 and filed on April 4, 2008 in response to an OAL decision mailing date of March 20, 2008 – were untimely pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4[1] and, therefore, are not considered here.

Upon full consideration of the record, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that this matter is appropriately dismissed as moot. Petitioner was reinstated with no break in service or loss of compensation or benefits and she has, therefore, suffered no loss of position and no damage. Further adjudication of this matter is to no avail as all petitioner is left with here is a theoretical issue which has no practical effect. (See Maureen Price v. Board of Education of the Township of Washington, Burlington County, Commissioner's Decision No. 25-08, decided January 23, 2008; Also See Wood v. Board of Education of the Borough of Pemberton, Burlington County, Commissioner's Decision No. 209-03, decided May 1, 2003)

[1] "Within 13 days from the date the judge's initial decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the agency head." (N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4(a))

Record Closed: March 10, 2008 Decided: March 17, 2008

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of a reduction in force instituted by the Maple Shade Board of Education. Petitioner sought a hearing and the matter was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23. Respondent has filed a motion to dismiss the petition as moot.

The facts for purposes of the motion are undisputed. Petitioner is a tenured teacher of Spanish in the Maple Shade School District. By notice dated May 11, 2007 the district informed her that her position would be eliminated. She filed a petition of appeal on June 28, 2007 claiming entitlement to a teacher of Spanish position. On August 6, 2007 the Board offered petitioner employment for the 2007/08 school year, which allowed her to continue without any break in service or diminution in benefits and salary. This is the substance of the record.

Petitioner acknowledges that on reinstatement she suffered no damages from the RIF. Nonetheless, she believes that the seniority determination made under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, must be reviewed. This position is at variance with longstanding administrative precedents in the area, Price v. Bd. of Ed. of Washington Township, 1/23/2008, http://www.nj.gov/education/legal; Wood v. Bd. Of Educ., Borough of Pemberton, Commr's Decision No. 209-03, decided May 1, 2003); Andreula v. Bd. Of Ed., City Of Hoboken, OAL Dkt. EDU 6537-84 (12/18/84), aff'd Comm'r of Ed. (1/31/85). When a tenured staff member reinstated after a RIF has lost nothing, there is nothing to be gained from a review of the seniority issue, the dynamics of which may change with future circumstances. I am persuaded therefore that this case is moot.

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that this petition be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner notes that, although the parties have resolved their respective claims, they have done so without bringing the terms of such resolution to the record. EMILY DIAZ,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MAHWAH, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This matter was initiated by way of petition of appeal filed with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) on February 20, 2008. On February 26, 2008, the parties were directed to submit briefs discussing whether the Commissioner has jurisdiction over the issues articulated in the petition. After thorough consideration of the parties' undisputed factual representations and their legal arguments, the Commissioner is not persuaded that the jurisdictional grounds necessary for her adjudication of this case are present.

The "First Cause" of the petition recites that petitioner, a tenured teacher, is the "target of a disciplinary proceeding before the superintendent's designee." This allegation is made in reliance on a "Notification of Concern – Level 2" to petitioner from her World Language Supervisor, Mimi Lezanski, discussing petitioner's actions in pressuring a student to intervene in a dialogue between petitioner and Lezanski about petitioner's teaching methods. In claiming that she is entitled to legal counsel of her choosing at all meetings concerning the "Notification of Concern," petitioner references Article 11 (Grievances), Sec. C (3) of the collective bargaining agreement (CBA) between respondent and its staff. That provision states that the grievant "shall have the right to representation of his/her own choosing at the Superintendent's level and above in the procedure, after first having discussed the grievance with his/her supervisor, if relevant, and then his/her principal." Petitioner also claims a violation of the constitutional rights of substantive and procedural due process.

The "Second Cause" alleges that petitioner is not being provided with certain documents, such as a letter or letters written by the student from whom petitioner requested assistance. Petitioner has, however, attached an "Exhibit B" to the petition, which is a letter from respondent's counsel to petitioner's counsel, stating that although petitioner did not have the right to legal counsel at meetings regarding the Notice of Concern, she could access her personnel file and provide her counsel with copies of documents contained therein.

At the outset, the petitioner is reminded that the Commissioner has no jurisdiction over contractual disputes. Integrated Security Technology v. Board of Education of the Township of Hardyston, et al., Commissioner Decision No. 433-07, November 7, 2007; Vitacco v. Lincoln Park Board of Education, Commissioner Decision No. 312-98, July 17, 1998. Thus, she will make no findings on the meaning or application of Article 11 of the CBA.

Second, the facts before the Commissioner reveal that the "process" which has taken place regarding petitioner is set forth in Article 12 of the CBA, entitled "Notification of Concern." This article of the CBA addresses concerns "about any aspect of an employee's responsibilities outside the instructional and evaluation process." As stated above, the Commissioner cannot be the arbiter of controversies that arise concerning the rights and responsibilities of the parties under such contractual provisions as Article 12 of the CBA.

Third, there are no facts before the Commissioner that would support the need for adjudication of constitutional issues. In petitioner's letter brief dated March 26, 2008, she has stated that her petition does not appeal the increment withholding which was apparently imposed upon her for the 2007-2008 school year. Nor have any tenure proceedings been filed against her. Thus, there are currently no property or other fundamental rights in jeopardy. Due process rights are consequently not implicated.

Further, the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to adjudicate constitutional issues unless they are inextricably intertwined with specific violations of school law (N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1 et seq.) – the area of the Commissioner's expertise. Valent v. New Jersey State Board of Education, 114 N.J. Super. 63, 69 (Ch. Div. 1971). As petitioner has identified no specific violations of particular provisions of the education laws, the Commissioner has no grounds upon which to address constitutional claims.

Accordingly, the petition is dismissed.

The record of this matter, the "Settlement Agreement," and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner observes that neither the file nor the Settlement Agreement contains a copy of the Board of Education's resolution approving the settlement. Nor is the agreement signed by the Board attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation.[1] The Commissioner consequently cannot approve the within settlement.

Further, Sections 3, 4, 8 and 14 of the Settlement Agreement recite that the various provisions will take effect upon the execution of the Settlement Agreement and the approval of same by the Board. Thus, these provisions indicate that the parties anticipated that certain conduct would occur on dates preceding consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

[1] The Board attorney's acknowledgement that Glenn Garrison is the person who signed the settlement agreement does not satisfy the requirement that the agreement be accompanied by a ratifying Board resolution or executed by the board attorney.

In light of the foregoing, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Settlement Agreement to include either the Board attorney's signature or a board resolution approving the settlement and designating Glenn Garrison to sign on behalf of the Board. 2. "Petitioner", as used herein, shall mean BRIAN LUKE and his successors-in-interest, heirs, administrators and assignees.

3. In consideration of the mutual promises set forth herein and for other valuable consideration, within thirty (30) business days of the Board's receipt of an executed copy of this Settlement Agreement, the Board shall restore the annual and adjustment increments withheld from Petitioner so that his current salary will be $97,307 effective September 1, 2007. Respondent shall pay Petitioner, in a lump sum, $3800 plus the pro rata portion of the $97,307 annual salary for 2007-2008 that he has not received to date. Respondent shall withhold all appropriate taxes and pension contributions from said lump sum payment and shall report Petitioner's corrected salary to the New Jersey Division of Pensions.

4. In consideration for the restoration of the annual and adjustment increments references above, Luke agrees to submit his irrevocable resignation of employment as a teaching staff member of the Englewood School District effective June 30, 2010. Said resignation shall be deemed accepted by the Board upon execution of this agreement.

5. For the period through June 30, 2010, Luke shall continue in his current teaching assignment with the District. Except as set forth below, the District agrees to take no other action to affect Luke's employment with the District through the date of his resignation set forth herein. If however, Luke clearly demonstrates his inability to perform his duties in a professional manner or satisfy the minimum standards of performance for licensure as a teaching staff member, the Board may exercise its managerial rights as are provided by law.

6. This Settlement Agreement is contingent on and subject to approval and ratification by the Board.

7. This Settlement Agreement contains the full agreement of the Board and Brian Luke as respects the resolution of the issues raised in the above-referenced Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner of Education.

8. Petitioner will withdraw the Petition of Appeal under the docket numbers, with prejudice, upon the receipt of a fully executed settlement agreement from the Board with a copy of the Resolution approving the same. Petitioner will likewise release the Respondent from all employment related statutory or contractual claims existing at the time this settlement agreement is executed save for any pending workers compensation actions. This release shall not include the release of claims governed by public policy.

9. If any term, provision or condition of this Settlement Agreement is held invalid or unenforceable by a court of competent jurisdiction, such holding shall be without effect upon the validity or enforceability of any other provision, term or condition of this Settlement Agreement other than the consideration set forth in paragraph 3, 4 and 5.

10. This Settlement Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

11. The parties agree to cooperate fully and execute any and all supplementary documents and to take all additional actions that are necessary or appropriate to effect the terms of this settlement agreement.

12. This Settlement Agreement may be executed in counterparts, each of which shall be deemed to be an original copy, but all of which together shall be deemed one and the same instrument.

13. This Settlement Agreement contains the entire Agreement between the Petitioner and the Board with regard to the matters set forth in it. It shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of their officials, officers, directors, representatives, employees, associates, partners, agents, servants and successors in interest and enforceable in any court of competent jurisdiction.

BEFORE ANA C. VISCOMI, ALJ:

This matter, involving petitioner's claim that the Board denied him a contractually required 5.25% salary increase, was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on October 19, 2007, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A telephone conference was conducted on January 17, 2008, at which time the parties represented that settlement negotiations were ongoing. On March 13, 2008, the parties submitted a copy of the settlement agreement. After review of this settlement, I requested clarification as to some of the terms. On March 26, 2008, I received the additional documentation I requested.

I have reviewed the terms of the settlement (J-1), Board Resolution (J-1), along with the explanatory documentation I requested (C-1), and I FIND:

Alan L. Krumholz, Esq., for petitioner J.A.O. on behalf of minor child, A.O.
(, attorneys)

Allan C. Roth, Esq, for respondent West New York Board of Education
(Roth Horowitz, LLC., attorneys)

Record Closed: April 15, 2008 Decided: April 16, 2008

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

BACKGROUND

J.A.O., the mother of A.O. a fourth grade student in the West New York Public School System filed a pro se petition seeking what appeared to be on its face, a transfer of her son from one public school in West New York to another public school in West New York.

This matter was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law as an emergent matter and scheduled for hearing.

On April 15, 2008, the return date of the emergent application, A.O. retained an attorney.

The inartful drawing of the original petition led Mr. Krumholz to request an amendment of the emergent application.

The original emergent application as forwarded by the Commissioner characterized the emergent relief being sought as an appeal of the transfer of A.O. from one school to another. The facts however indicated that on March 18, 2008, one day prior to J.A.O. signing her petition of appeal, her son A.O. had been suspended as a result of what was contended to be an act of violence he perpetrated against another student.

According to the Board of Education of the Town of West New York ("Board") the procedures delineated in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3 were being implemented which resulted in the scheduling of an informal hearing for March 25, 2008.

In two letters following the scheduling of the informal hearing, one dated March 25, 2008 and the second dated April 2, 2008, the procedural and substantive elements of this case were disclosed to J.A.O.

J.A.O. and her son did not attend the informal hearing on March 25, 2008 but did appear for the scheduled Board hearing on April 9, 2008.

Despite their appearance on that date, the Board decided to adjourn the scheduled hearing contending that the matter could be resolved or at least discussed and pursued further after the emergent application was heard at the OAL.

The emergent application as amended by Mr. Krumholz sought to have A.O. reinstated in public school and the suspension terminated.

A review of documents indicates that there is a prior history that exists with respect to disciplinary matters and A.O. and there also appears to have been an incident on the date of the suspension, March 18, 2008, which had been reviewed on the date of the informal hearing, March 25, 2008.

N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.3(10)iii states that:

> A formal hearing before the District Board of Education, which, at a minimum, shall:
> > iii. take place no later than 30 calendar days following the day the student is suspended from the general education program.

It is not disputed that A.O. was suspended on March 18, 2008 and that the 30-day period for a Board hearing had not run. It was in fact the contention of the Board that a hearing was scheduled for April 16, 2008 at which point a recommendation would be made to the Board concerning A.O.'s suspension.

In essence, the emergent relief application was denied because it was premature. The code provisions delineating procedures to be followed by the Board have been adequately followed although J.A.O. has refused out of school educational services that the Board offered to provide to her son. She indicates that she is home schooling him at present.

Since the 30 day period for Board action has not passed, the emergent application is premature and therefore DISMISSED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If (title of agency head) does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF CHANDLER DENNIS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF SOUTH ORANGE-	:	DECISION
MAPLEWOOD, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The Board certified tenure charges consisting of ten counts of conduct unbecoming against Chandler Dennis – a tenured physics teacher – for alleged inappropriate conduct towards a minor female student, material breach of public trust and professional responsibility, and other just cause.

The ALJ found that respondent was guilty on two counts of conduct unbecoming a teacher, based on: 1) the birthday gift to his minor student, and 2) the clandestine email account he established so that he and his minor student could secretly communicate. The ALJ additionally found that the penalty of removal from respondent's teaching position too severe a sanction given the circumstances herein; he concluded that only a portion of Charge Four and Charge Five of the certified tenure charges have been sustained, the other charges are dismissed, and the appropriate total penalty for the sustained charges is the forfeiture of seventy days of salary. The ALJ ordered respondent reinstated to his position as a tenured physics teacher, with restoration of any pay or benefits withheld except for the aforesaid seventy-day penalty.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision with modification as to penalty. The Commissioner ordered that respondent shall not be dismissed from his tenured employment, but shall forfeit the 120 days of salary withheld following certification of tenure charges. In so doing, the Commissioner emphasized the necessity to impress upon respondent the seriousness of the conduct in which he engaged.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 5080-07
AGENCY DKT NO. 83-3/07

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF CHANDLER DENNIS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF SOUTH ORANGE-	:	DECISION
MAPLEWOOD, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

The record and Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The Board's exceptions and respondent's reply thereto – submitted in accordance with the prescriptions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching her decision herein.

The Board excepts to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) findings and analysis of law on charges 1, 2, 3, 5, 6, 7, 9 and 10, in large measure replicating arguments advanced in its post-hearing submission to the ALJ. It cites extensively to the testimony of its witness, B.S., and advances the analysis and conclusion which – it purports – inevitably result from such testimony, particularly in light of the District's responsibility to protect its students from predatory behavior before such danger materializes. The Board charges that the ALJ made multiple erroneous legal conclusions to dismiss proven tenure charges because – by arbitrarily analyzing the charges individually rather than in the aggregate – he failed to recognize that each of the charges was part of a larger pattern of suggestive comments, interactions and behaviors that respondent engaged in while attempting to exploit his teacher/student relationship with B.S. It points out that such a clear pattern of conduct placed B.S. in a position of grave danger.

(Board's Exceptions at 17-18) As to penalty, the Board urges that respondent's pattern of predatory behavior warrants no less than termination from his position.

In reply, respondent strongly supports the correctness and propriety of the ALJ's decision:

> ...when reviewing the Initial Decision and what follows, it is clear that Dennis was judged on what he was shown to have done, rather than what the Board suggests he allegedly attempted, but did not in fact do. The Initial Decision properly reflects the overall assessment of the witnesses' stories in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it 'hangs together' with the other evidence. (citation omitted) (Respondent's Reply Exceptions at 7)

Upon a comprehensive review of the record of this matter – which included transcripts of the hearing conducted at the OAL on August 3, 14, September 7, October 15 and November 14, 2007, along with the parties' exception submissions – the Commissioner adopts the recommended decision of the OAL as modified below.

Initially, the Commissioner recognizes that in this, as in all tenure matters, the Board bears the burden of proving each of its charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence. The Commissioner further recognizes that the outcome of this particular matter with regard to the proving of the charges is predominantly dependent on witness credibility. This being the case – and the ALJ having had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before him, and having made findings of fact based upon their testimony – the standard governing the Commissioner's review is clear and unequivocal:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by > sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record. (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c))

Upon a reasoned review of the record with this governing standard in mind, the Commissioner cannot conclude that the ALJ's credibility assessments and resultant fact-finding were without the necessary level of support and, as such, the Commissioner must substantially adopt the Initial Decision with regard to the truth of the Board's charges.

In summary, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively presented in his decision – that the Board did not meet its burden of proof of demonstrating unbecoming conduct against respondent on Charge 1, alleging that respondent invited B.S. on a date with him to New York so they could go to a racetrack during the summer of 2007; Charge 2, alleging that respondent offered B.S. Hershey Kisses with the comment that he was giving her the candy in lieu of an actual kiss, which could get him in trouble; Charge 3, alleging that respondent complimented B.S.'s appearance by saying that he liked it when she wore her hair down, that he was jealous when he saw her with a boy, and that he could not wait until she was eighteen; Charge 6, alleging that the establishment of the e-mail account (described in Charge 5) for B.S. without her knowledge or consent constituted a violation of B.S.'s privacy and was a material breach of respondent's professional responsibility; Charge 7, alleging that in connection with the establishment of the e-mail account (described in Charge 5), respondent placed a note in B.S.'s pocketbook which constituted a violation of her privacy; Charge 9, alleging that the events described in Charges 1 to 8 evidence an attempt to create an improper relationship that constituted a breach of the public trust; and Charge 10, alleging that

Charges 1 to 9 collectively constitute a pattern of "sexually inappropriate behavior" that sought to take advantage of the teacher/student relationship.[1]

As such, at the completion of fact-finding as to the truth of the Board's charges, the ALJ concluded – and the Commissioner concurs – that the only sustained charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent was that portion of Charge 4 which alleges that respondent's sending of a birthday card and gift certificate for a nail salon to B.S. for her birthday was inappropriate and Charge 5 which alleges that respondent created a clandestine e-mail draft communication system exclusively for himself and B.S., and that he composed the message reflected in Exhibit P-3 – excluding the controversial paragraph, the authorship of which the ALJ found, and the Commissioner agrees, has not been established.

Turning to the appropriate penalty to be imposed in this matter, the Commissioner is particularly cognizant that it has long been recognized that – by virtue of the unique position they occupy – educators must be held to an enhanced standard of behavior. As was succinctly stated in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, School District of Black Horse Pike Regional, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321

> [Teachers] are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment.
> (Emphasis added)

It is without question that establishment of a surreptitious e-mail account to privately communicate with a minor female student and gifting this student with a card and a present for her birthday evidenced inordinately poor judgment on the part of this mature teacher and was undoubtedly inappropriate, unprofessional, and unbecoming conduct. In fashioning a penalty, the Commissioner finds it necessary to balance the totality of the record here with the need to stress most emphatically to this respondent and to other educators that such behavior cannot be permitted in the school environment. In this regard, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ that the charges actually proven in this matter do not warrant the extreme penalty of respondent's dismissal from his tenured position. However, the Commissioner cannot agree with the ALJ that forfeiture of 70 days salary is sufficient to impress upon respondent the seriousness of the conduct in which he engaged. Rather, given the necessity to assure that respondent learns the need for self-restraint, prudence and controlled behavior in his interactions with students under his charge, the Commissioner finds it appropriate here that he suffer the loss of the 120 days of salary withheld, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, following the certification of tenure charges.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons expressed therein except as to penalty. Respondent shall not be dismissed from his tenured employment, but shall forfeit the 120 days of salary withheld following certification of the within tenure charges.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 05080-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 83-3/07

SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY,

Petitioner,

v.

CHANDLER DENNIS,

Sheldon Pincus, Esq., for respondent (Bucceri & Pincus, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 5, 2008 Decided: March 24, 2008

BEFORE JAMES A. GERAGHTY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 19, 2007, the School District of South Orange and Maplewood, New Jersey, certified ten tenure charges under the Tenure Employees Hearing Act against Columbia High School Physics Teacher Chandler Dennis (hereinafter "respondent" or

"Dennis") for conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member which entailed inappropriate conduct towards a female student, material breach of public trust and professional responsibility, and other just cause, all of which occurred during the winter/spring 2006 school semester. Respondent Dennis appealed to the Commissioner of Education who referred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on April 27, 2007. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1.1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1.1 et seq. On May 31, 2007, the undersigned issued an Order that the New Jersey Department of Children & Families Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit ("IAIU") grant respondent's counsel access to documents related to its investigation of the complaint in the instant matter. After in camera review, on July 3, 2007, the undersigned issued a Protective Order concerning redaction of the involved documents.

Meanwhile, the IAIU had investigated the School District complaint of child abuse or neglect. The IAIU determined that the complaint was "unfounded" within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 10:129-1.3. At the first OAL hearing on August 3, 2007, respondent moved to dismiss all charges based on a statutory provision that requires a school district to remove references to a complaint from a school employee's personnel records if that complaint was determined to be unfounded, and that it should not be used against the employee for any purpose including discipline. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7a. The tribunal denied the motion because the investigation involved an unfounded complaint of sexual abuse. However, respondent's alleged conduct towards the student could be inappropriate and otherwise constitute misconduct on the strength of which the matter proceeded.

There were five hearings at the OAL from August 3, 2007 through November 14, 2007. The Board's witness at the first hearing was Columbia High School Principal Dr. Lovie Lilly who explained how the matter came to the school administration's attention and the action taken. On August 14, 2007, B.S., the involved student, testified concerning the interactions between herself and respondent, specifically the substance of the charges against him. On September 7, 2007, A.W., B.S.'s boyfriend, testified in support of the charges. Thereafter, respondent introduced a series of teachers as character witnesses to include Thomas Whittaker, Jr., Melissa Cooper, and Carolyn Moran. Jeffrey Gifford, a former student, likewise testified for respondent. On October 15, 2007, DYFS worker Omgeri Aminga testified for respondent. Later that date, respondent Dennis testified. His testimony concluded November 14, 2007.

The parties received the final hearings transcripts December 20, 2007. Both parties submitted post-hearing briefs on or before January 21, 2008. The parties submitted reply briefs on February 4 and 5, 2008. The record closed February 5, 2008.

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES

The issue is whether petitioner has met its burden of establishing that respondent engaged in inappropriate behavior towards a female student in various respects individually and collectively constituting conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Summary of Charges

During the 2005-2006 school year, Dennis recruited B.S., one of his Physics students, to serve as a classroom assistant. Early in the winter/spring semester 2006, B.S. became the object of allegedly inappropriate attention from Dennis resulting in the following charges.

Charge 1 - Dennis invited B.S. on a date with him to New York so they could go to a racetrack during the summer of 2007.

Charge 2 - Dennis had a practice of giving his aides candy. However, he offered B.S. Hershey Kisses with the comment that he was giving her the candy in lieu of an actual kiss which could get him in trouble.

Charge 3 - Dennis complimented B.S.'s appearance saying he liked it when she wore her hair down, that he was jealous when he saw her with a boy, and that he could not wait until she was eighteen.

Charge 4 - In December 2005, Dennis gave B.S. and other of his students Christmas gifts including a Santa hat with earphones and candy. In February 2005, Dennis sent B.S. a birthday card with a gift certificate to a nail salon. The card was addressed "To My Niece" as "Uncle" and "Niece" were private nicknames utilized by the two.

Charge 5 - Dennis established a clandestine e-mail account for B.S. so that they could communicate privately during the summer. Dennis surreptitiously left a note in B.S.'s pocketbook with instructions to access the account. He left a message for B.S. explaining how she could leave a draft message for him to retrieve, and vice versa, without e-mails actually being sent. Dennis left one message for B.S. which stated in part:

> I know this is sneaky but folks would not understand a friendship (or more) between a 17-year-old lady and a middle-aged man. People calling you "puta" and sending me to jail or wanting to beat me up!.

Charge 6 - The establishment of the e-mail account as described in Charge 5 for B.S. without her knowledge or consent constituted a violation of B.S.'s privacy and was a material breach of Dennis' professional responsibility.

Charge 7 - In connection with the establishment of the e-mail account as described in Charge 5, Dennis placed a note in B.S.'s pocketbook which constituted a violation of her privacy.

Charge 8 - Dennis afforded B.S. access to his school computer. On one occasion when they were alone, B.S. discovered pornography on the computer.

Charge 9 - The events described in Charges 1 to 8 evidence an attempt to create an improper relationship that constituted a breach of the public trust.

Charge 10 - Charges 1 to 9 collectively constitute a pattern of "sexually inappropriate behavior" as it seeks to take advantage of the teacher/student relationship.

OAL HEARING

At the August 3, 2007 hearing, School Principal Dr. Lovie Lilly testified concerning how the incidents involving student B.S. and respondent Dennis came to her attention. On June 16, 2006, she met with teachers Thomas Whittaker and Melissa Cooper as well as Michael Healey, an administrator, who reported that B.S. told them of events that were "disturbing" her involving Dennis who she believed "liked her." (T1-45).[1] B.S. gave Mr. Whittaker a piece of paper on which there was an e-mail address and password. She said Dennis had given it to her so that they could communicate. B.S. explained to Whittaker that she or Dennis were to leave a draft message in the e-mail address and that either party could access the message without the need to have it actually transmitted across the wire. T1-46. Mr. Whittaker seemed troubled about reporting the matter to Dr. Lilly because he and Dennis were colleagues and friends. Ms. Cooper stated that B.S. had come to her accompanied by her cousin, J.C., another female student at the school. B.S. told Ms. Cooper that Dennis gave her a candy kiss, "since I can't kiss you." T1-54. B.S. also told Ms. Cooper too that she was uncomfortable around Dennis. Dr. Lilly stated that she reported these matters to the assistant superintendent of schools as well as to the Division of Youth & Family Services ("DYFS") and the Maplewood Police Department.

Dr. Lilly testified that she interviewed B.S. with Assistant Principal Janice McGowan on June 19, 2006. B.S. told her that Dennis invited her to go to New York to a racetrack and that he had given her the e-mail account and explained how it would operate without actually transmitting messages. B.S. also told her that Dennis said that they had a "platonic" relationship and that he could not wait until she was eighteen-years old. In addition, she stated that Dennis sent her a gift certificate to a nail salon for her birthday in a card on which he had written "From your Uncle." T1-66. B.S. said that she "felt funny" about the gift and that her mother told her "to be careful of Mr. Dennis." T1-66. B.S. also told Dr. Lilly about the Hershey Kisses from Mr. Dennis. In addition, she reported that Dennis complimented her about her hair and that he expressed jealousy about her talking with boys at the school. B.S. explained the e-mail account where she and Dennis would "park" messages without transmitting them. B.S. told her that he said she should delete the drafts after reading them because people would not understand their relationship. T1-68. B.S. reported that Dennis had given her his school computer password despite a school policy against student access to the school database system. B.S. said that she saw pornography on one occasion when she logged onto the computer and that Dennis stated that he did not know how the pictures got there. T1-70. Dr. Lilly said that during the interview B.S. appeared frightened and that she found it difficult to discuss the matter. She also told Dr. Lilly that she did not want Dennis to get into trouble, that she wanted this to go away, but that she wanted him to stop. T1-71.

Dr. Lilly testified that in her opinion Dennis should not return to the school because he crossed a line by committing unprofessional behavior. T1-85.

At the beginning of the August 14, 2007 hearing, the tribunal disposed of two motions to dismiss made by respondent at the August 7, 2007 hearing. Respondent argued that the Board Resolution certifying the tenure charges was passed improperly in public session rather than in executive session, citing N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b)(7). The tribunal denied the motion because the discrepancy was a procedural irregularity that did not prejudice respondent. Moreover, the Board cured the defect by rescinding the public resolution and then adopting a resolution in executive session.

The second motion to dismiss was based on the IAIU finding that the child abuse complaint was unfounded. Accordingly, the School District was required to remove any reference to the complaint and investigation from the employee's personnel records and the complaint should not be used against the employee for any purpose relating to employment. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7a. The tribunal denied this motion too because the findings report stated that the investigation involved a sexual abuse complaint. Stating that there was no sexual genital contact between the student and the teacher, the report concluded that the student was not harmed. However, mentioning the surreptitious e-mail account, and the pornography B.S. observed on Dennis' computer, the report stated ". . . interactions and behavior placed [B.S.] at some risk of harm but were not to the degree required by statute to find sexual abuse." (Exhibit R-43). Nevertheless, the charges, except for Charges 8 and 10, were not based upon sexual abuse as such, but rather on other inappropriate misconduct. Actually, most of the charges were based on inappropriate behavior constituting conduct unbecoming. Therefore, based on the IAIU "unfounded" finding, this initial decision is not predicated in any way on sexual abuse or neglect in view of the statutory proscription. In a comparable case involving the consequences of an IAIU unfounded finding of sexual abuse, the Appellate Division explained that, the finding notwithstanding, respondent's actions may be otherwise actionable. Stated differently, disciplinary proceedings were within the discretion of the school district. In the Matter of Physical Abuse Concerning A.I, 393 N.J. Super. 114 (App. Div. 2007). The tribunal denied the motion. T2-7.

B.S. testified that she graduated from Columbia High School in June 2007. During the 2005/2006 school year, she was a student in respondent's Physics class. B.S. did not previously know Dennis but knew of him from her older sister who had been his student. A few months into the school year, Dennis began to compliment B.S. about her hair. Since their relationship had become friendly, she "opened up to Mr. Dennis [feeling like he] was more - of a friend than a teacher and I told him about it if I had a problem with my boyfriend . . . ." (T2-17) She testified that Dennis told her that he became "jealous" if she talked about or was with boys. She said that he expressed jealousy a few times. Dennis told B.S. that their relationship was "different" and that "... he felt different for me than other students, that he never felt like this for another girl." T2-19. She testified that at first his remarks did not bother her until the end of 2005 when she realized that his remarks had made her "uncomfortable." T2-20-22. She stated that he told her that they had a "platonic relationship." T2-21. She stated that Dennis told her "plenty of times" not to worry and that "nothing would happen" because she was underage. T2-22. He also told her that he couldn't wait until she became eighteen and he planned to take her to bet on horses. At Christmas he gave all his students a Santa hat with earphones and a candy cane. For her birthday on February 20, 2006, he gave her a gift certificate to a nail salon in an anonymous card addressed "To My Niece." Previously she had told him she patronized the involved salon and they had gotten into the habit of referring to each other as niece and uncle. T2-24. She said that she didn't know whether he ever gave birthday gifts to other students. She stated that he gave her Hershey Kisses on several occasions during one of which he told her that he gave her the candy ". . . because he wanted to kiss me and he couldn't." T2-27.

B.S. testified that she was one of Dennis' student assistants and consequently he favored her in certain ways such as not disciplining her for lateness. Also, he allowed her to use his school computer, for example, to check students' attendance. Also, Dennis gave her his computer password. T2-34. B.S. testified that on one occasion when she had accessed to his computer to check on pictures from a student trip she discovered pornography and described it as what might be recognized as Karma Sutra pictures. The pictures were in a folder saved to his computer. Dennis said that he did not know how these pictures got on his desktop.

At the end of the semester Dennis told B.S. that he wanted to keep in touch with her. He said that he could take her to bet on horses and go on a cruise around New York. T2-40. B.S. testified that Dennis' said that the prospective cruise and racetrack date was, "to be just me and him and that this was between us." T2-42. At this time he also told her not to be scared, "that nothing was going to happen." Further, he said that he could not do anything because she was not eighteen. T2-44. B.S. said that Dennis previously had made remarks about not being able to wait until she turned eighteen but that he never said what he expected to happen.

B.S. testified about the e-mail account. Her boyfriend, A.W., found a paper with the e-mail address while rummaging through her handbag. B.S. said that she did not recognize the piece of paper but did recognize Dennis' handwriting on it. B.S. did not have access to a computer at the time. A.W. took the paper home, went to the site and discovered a draft message that he read to her over the phone. She summarized what A.W. told her, that is, that the message should be a secret as well as the method by which they would stay in contact. In addition, the message purportedly stated that nobody would understand a friendship between a middle-aged man and a teenager. Moreover, if she wanted to write back to him she should leave a draft at the site and delete the one that she saw from him. T2-54-55. B.S. identified P-3, the text of that message that had been shown to her at the prosecutor's office. She testified that she understood that A.W. accessed the message that was in a draft folder and e-mailed it to himself. She was not present when he did this.

B.S. stated that she overheard a conversation between Dennis and another teacher during which Dennis was describing an episode in which a teacher had an improper relationship with a student. Dennis noticed B.S. and her friend J.C. enter the classroom and offered them cookies. At some point he stated "I would never do something like that." T2-69. J.C. said to B.S. that it was time for them to go. B.S. testified that she believed that he made the remark for her benefit.

B.S. testified that her girlfriend, J.C., "influenced" her to tell somebody about Dennis' actions towards her. J.C. had told her "if you don't tell, you know, somebody, that I'm going to – I'm going to tell." T2-76. B.S. decided to tell her poetry teacher, Mr. Whitaker, as she knew Whitaker and Dennis were friends. She did not tell Dr. Lilly because she did not want Dennis to get in trouble. B.S. testified that she hoped Whitaker would talk to Dennis whom she understood to be his best friend and colleague at the school and explain to him that she felt uncomfortable that their relationship that she described as changing from student-teacher to a friendship to one in which Dennis seemed to have developed " feelings like he started to get attracted to me more and more." T2-79.

On cross-examination, B.S. explained that she had been shy at the beginning of the school year but in time was more at ease with Dennis and had begun to disclose personal problems or feelings with him. She said that she was comfortable with him for most of the school year until near the end, about June 2006, when J.C. and another friend expressed their views that his behavior towards her had become inappropriate.

On cross-examination, B.S. also testified that when she began to fall behind in her grades she asked Dennis for extra help during her study period which was right before physics class. He agreed but, as it happened, Dennis never actually helped her with physics. Rather, she would go on the computer or just stay in the room. T2-127-128.

B.S. disclosed to Dennis that she had a serious health problem that required a brief hospital stay. She asked him to keep the information confidential. At about that time Dennis told her that a female family member of his was likewise seriously ill.

During her cross-examination, B.S. stated that Dennis told her mother about the uncle/niece sobriquets, and that he complimented her appearance "a few times." T2-145. She did not remember viewing an internet site with Dennis when she was selecting gifts for her boyfriend. T2-166. She did not remember a conversation where she disclosed to Dennis planning a weekend trip with her boyfriend. T2-167. She stated that A.W. told her he did not edit the e-mail. Other students had access to Dennis' computer. T2-193. B.S. did not see Dennis give candy kisses to other students. T2-194.

On redirect, B.S. was asked if there was anything about the e-mail message (Exhibit P-3) that led her to believe it was composed by Dennis. She responded:

The Chika, well, Mr. Dennis like he said, his wife was Hispanic. So he tried to speak Spanish on occasions with me and the – he tried to say "punta" he spelled the word – incorrectly.

Question: What's the word?

Answer: P-U-N-T-A and he -

Question: That's a Spanish word?

Answer: Yes.

Question: And what did it say?

Answer: That he put P-U-T-A.

Question: Okay.

Answer: Another clue is that it said "middle aged man" which is – he asked me about the Puerto Rican Day parade which I told him about that I was going to. Another clue was the Chika. The – clue where (sic) not to tell anybody and this is between us. He told me that before in the classroom and he repeated it in the e-mail. So I knew that it was him.

Question: What does "punta" mean?

Answer: It means a bad word.

Question: It's a bad word?

Answer: Yeah.

Question: Okay, it is

Answer: It's b-i-t-c-h (T2-206, 207)

B.S.'s boyfriend, A.W., testified at the September 7, 2007 hearing. He stated that on June 13, 2006 he discovered the note with the e-mail account name and password in her handbag. At B.S.'s behest, he accessed the e-mail address on his computer at home. At the OAL hearing he identified Exhibit P-3 as the message that he found at that e-mail address. He explained that he called B.S. and read her the message. He then forwarded it to an address of his. He stated that he did not alter the message. He also stated that at the time he was concerned, but not angry, and that he told B.S. to notify the principal about it.

At that juncture, petitioner rested.

Respondent moved to dismiss all the charges because petitioner had not made a prima facie case. T2-56-58. Respondent then renewed the motion but confined it to Charges 7 and 8, that is, Dennis having surreptitiously put the note with the e-mail address in B.S.'s pocketbook thus violating her privacy, and allowing her to discover pornography on his computer. The tribunal denied the motion as to the e-mail account note inasmuch as there is sufficient evidence for a prima facie case that Dennis created the note and placed it in B.S.'s pocketbook. The court granted the motion as to Charge 8 because of the DYFS finding that allegations of sexual abuse or neglect were unfounded. Accordingly, no misconduct charge can be predicated upon sexual misconduct. T2-66-67. Therefore, Charge 8 was dismissed.

Respondent's first witness was Geoffrey Gifford, a sophomore at Pace University. While a high school student at Columbia High School, he studied physics with Dennis and was one of his assistants. At the time Dennis gave him a Christmas gift and a graduation gift. He testified that Dennis gave gifts to other student assistants. Gifford also testified that Dennis dispensed candy to the class. Mr. Gifford continued as a character witness, stating that he never saw Dennis engage in inappropriate conduct towards a student.

Language Arts teacher Thomas Whitaker then testified. He described the visit by B.S. and J.C at his office during which B.S. gave him a paper with an e-mail address on it. She told him that her boyfriend saw the paper and was "upset." He reviewed an affidavit he gave to the Essex County Prosecutor concerning the interview and in response to questions from counsel stated that B.S. never accused Dennis of touching her and that she did not want to get Dennis in trouble. (Exhibit R-40). He also said that she told him that Dennis gave her candy, "instead of a kiss." Whitaker too acted as a character witness and opined that he thought that Dennis is fit to teach " . . . and I think our children would be best served with someone like Mr. Dennis in the building." T2-111.

Social Studies teacher Melissa Cooper testified for respondent. She identified her Prosecutor's Office statement (Exhibit R-39), that she had given previously. She described her interview with B.S. and J.C. during which B.S. told her about the Hershey Kisses and the e-mail. She stated that B.S. said "It's not a big deal" but that it was J.C. who insinuated that there was something inappropriate. T2-141. Later, after she had reported the meeting to Dr. Lilly, the girls came to her and complained about it. T2-143. Ms. Cooper testified that she knew that J.C. had behavioral problems, that is, " . . . she was significantly involved in a lot of conflicts between students." T2-147. Finally, she testified that she believed Dennis was one of the best teachers in the school and that he truly cares about kids. T2-155. The witness went on to state that she reported the matter to the principal to "nip it in the bud." Having expressed admiration for Dennis her remark suggested that she did not want to see his reputation damaged by false accusations.

Special Education teacher Carolyn Moran testified for respondent. She said that she saw Dennis give students candy including Hershey Kisses. T2-176. Also, she saw him compliment students on their work and on their appearance. She stated that, in terms of gender, Dennis' motivational techniques were even-handed. On cross-examination she admitted that she knew nothing of the relationship between B.S. and Dennis.

At the end of the testimony counsel moved into evidence without objection, the bulk of the documents that had been marked but not already admitted. For example, R-1 through R-32 and R-43 to R-45. T2-192-193.

At the October 15, 2007 hearing, IAIU Investigator Omgeri Aminga testified for respondent. He stated that he interviewed B.S. in the presence of her parents. He also interviewed Dennis who disclosed the e-mail account he had created for B.S. so that they could share medical information. Dennis told the investigator that B.S. had "full knowledge" of the e-mail account. B.S. had denied disclosing health information to Dennis. Also, Mr. Aminga stated that the prosecutor's office already had closed out their parallel investigation. He stated that the prosecutor's office found no evidence of e-mails on Dennis' computer. T4-20. In fact, as to the account he set up for B.S., Dennis told the investigator "Yes, I set up an e-mail account but never used it." T4-26.

Mr. Aminga testified that he found no evidence of sexual contact between Dennis and B.S. but that Dennis had placed B.S. at some risk of harm. T4-38.

After colloquy between the tribunal and counsel, Chandler Dennis testified. After describing his credentials and methods as a physics teacher, including complimenting students on their appearing and dispensing candy, Dennis testified that near the end of the first semester in 2005, B.S. began to miss class. She told Dennis about an illness and asked him to keep the matter confidential. He also testified that she did not come to him for tutoring. He admitted sending her the birthday card with a gift certificate and using the aunt/niece nicknames with her.

Dennis said that he and B.S. discussed her health intermittently. Members of his family too had health issues which he disclosed to her. For example, he told her that his wife had terminal brain cancer.

Dennis explained that B.S. was one of many students, including faculty, who had access to the internet on his computer. However, they had to use their own account number and password. T4-139-140.

B.S. discussed A.W. with Dennis. On one occasion Dennis had given her permission to browse on the computer and she showed him a gift catalog web page displaying apparel that she contemplated buying A.W. for his birthday. Dennis testified that he complimented her on choosing the gift and stated words to the effect that he was jealous that he was not getting such a gift. T4-143. Dennis testified that he never stated that he was jealous of B.S. or of her boyfriend. He disclosed an instance where he saw her with a boy who had his arm around her and he asked her if she thought A.W. would be jealous. B.S. made light of it. Dennis testified that there was no further discussion regarding jealousy. He also testified that he never actually met A.W.

On another occasion the subject of A.W.'s birthday arose. B.S. stated that in addition to whatever gifts she was going to give him, she contemplated spending the weekend with him and " . . . give up her virtue to him." T4-146. Dennis said he realized that the conversation had suddenly shifted to sex and that he had never discussed it with her before. He saw her remark as a "red flag" and tried to extricate himself. He recalls that his response to her then was:

> I wish you wouldn't drop something like this on me when you're seventeen. I wish you had waited until you were eighteen to make – this is a serious decision. This is – you know, you – you want to be ready – when you do this. You – you need to have protection,
>
> I really wish you weren't under age and kind of dropping it on me and I think your parents would tell you the same thing. This is a beautiful thing that you want to do, but it's – you know, that's something I wish you'd get a little older, give this some more thought."

T4-147.

Dennis testified that he never otherwise made a remark about B.S. becoming eighteen or that he couldn't wait for her to become eighteen.

During the annual Great Adventure field trip, Dennis received word that his eighty three year-old mother had taken a fall and broke her arm. Also, her cancer had spread and she was now exhibiting signs of dementia. T4-148. He was advised to put her in hospice. Apart from the usual distress that would accompany such news, Dennis also was concerned because his sister who took care of their mother's financial affairs likewise was in the hospital. On May 15, 2006, Dennis received a call from a doctor who wanted him to make a decision about hospice care. He took the call in his classroom while B.S. was present. She overheard the conversation and closed the classroom door to give him some privacy. He testified that while on the phone he opened the door twice rather than be alone in the classroom with a female student. T4-

150. He admitted to having been upset and that she tried to console him verbally. In this respect he recalled having said to her:

> I really, really wish we could just get away, run away, get away from the situation for a day, from all these problems.
>
> * * *
>
> I – something I've done once or twice is take – there's a cruise that leaves from New York and goes to Monmouth Park Racetrack.
>
>
> The cruise is chilly. My phone doesn't ring when I've done it. Phone doesn't ring. When you get down there you sit at the lunch tables and you bet or don't. You sit in the sun. You forget out [sic] your worries for a day.
>
> * * *
>
> Wouldn't that be great to do something like that.

T4-151-152.

She responded that it sounded like fun. He then testified that he thanked her for listening and that he felt much better. The subject of a cruise or racetrack never came up again.

Dennis testified that several days after B.S. overheard his conversation with the doctor about hospice for his mother, he told B.S. that they had a "platonic relationship" and that they were friends. He explained the meaning of the term, that it did not entail a physical relationship, that it was not that type of friendship. T4-154.

During a subsequent conversation, B.S. expressed concern about Dennis' wife and that she would like to know how she was doing. Dennis told her that it would make sense if they kept in contact because he was interested in the progress of her health. He stated that he offered to get B.S. an e-mail account and she agreed. He pursued the matter and established an e-mail account with Yahoo as well as a user ID and password for her. T4-158. He testified that he gave B.S. a piece of paper with that information and that she accepted it. There was no actual discussion. He stated that he composed a draft message. The message was worded the same as that reflected in Exhibit P-3. However, Dennis denied composing the penultimate paragraph. He said that he wrote "I saw you – I saw you at the Puerto Rican Day Parade yesterday." He said that he did not actually send the message but left it on the site as a draft. He stated that, upon reflection, he decided to delete the draft because of a recent event at the school which resulted in a faculty member in litigation for improper contact with a student.

Dennis testified about the Hershey Kisses. He said that he distributed them in various classes to male and female students. When distributing the candy he would make a facetious remark such as not to tell anyone that Mr. Dennis gave you a kiss. The students would laugh. T4-166-167. Dennis testified that he gave B.S. Hershey Kisses and said that she accepted the candy and never expressed any discomfort with it. He testified that he had distributed candy to students for six or seven years.

Dennis categorically denied ever telling B.S. that he had feelings for her unlike those he had for any other girl, that she had nothing to worry about, and that nothing would happen because she was under age. T4-168-169. He testified that he never had nor suggested that there ever should be any physical contact between himself and B.S. He also stated that he never asked her on a date to a New York racetrack.

On cross-examination, Dennis explained that he had been disciplined by having his increment withheld by the school Board because of his participation in what can only be described as a campaign to undermine or remove the prior principal. He had written a letter to parents criticizing her. (Exhibit P-4).

Dennis admitted that in the draft e-mail he urged B.S. to keep this means of communication secret. T4-225. He explained that the health information he expected they would exchange was confidential – not for third parties. He stated that he recommended communicating with drafts because they can be edited before sending. He admitted that the draft messages were not to be sent. Also, with this system, messages could not be traced. He stated that that feature of the communication system was significant because he did not want third parties to see the messages because of the case involving a different teacher who had gotten into trouble because of e-mails. He stated, "that no matter how innocuous that something like this could get in trouble." T4-232. Dennis testified that he deleted the message within twenty-four hours because he thought it was foolish in that actually there was no need for confidentiality. While denying that he authored the penultimate paragraph, Dennis admitted that the message conveyed in the first three paragraphs, " . . . to ask a child to have a secret between you" is "inappropriate." T4-236. As to the paragraph:

> I know this is sneaky, but folks would not understand the friendship (or more) between a 17-year-old lady and a middle-aged man. People calling you "puta" and sending me to jail or wanting to beat me up."

T4-238 and (Exhibit P-3).

Dennis testified that he suspected A.W. edited the message by adding that paragraph.

On cross-examination, counsel probed A.W.'s purported choice of words. He asked Dennis why A.W. would refer to his girlfriend as a "seventeen year-old lady" and Dennis as a "middle-aged man." Dennis responded that the former did not sound like "teenage words" and the latter reference did not seem like one that would have been chosen by A.W. inasmuch as people refer to him, Dennis, as old and that he considers himself to be old. T4-241-242.

Dennis' cross-examination continued on November 14, 2007. He reiterated his denial of having invited B.S. to a racetrack. He clarified previous testimony explaining why he deleted the draft e-mail message. Basically, he testified as to what were his then ruminations to the effect that the information in the message was redundant and that there was not anything that he needed to be concerned about. T5-35. He also spoke about litigation involving his prior discipline in which the court held that his verbal attacks on the previous principal were not protected speech. T5-41.

Respondent was the last witness. The Court received four documentary exhibits from the School District and fifty documentary exhibits from the respondent.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

This matter was initiated when Columbia High School Junior, B.S., told her teacher, Mr. Whittaker that her physics teacher, respondent Chandler Dennis, had said or done things that made her uncomfortable. She was accompanied by another student and close friend, J.C., whom she always referred to as her cousin. Later the same day B.S. and J.C. visited J.C.'s teacher Melissa Cooper. At J.C.'s behest, B.S. told Ms. Cooper about some of the circumstances which caused her to feel uncomfortable about Dennis. Mr. Whittaker and Ms. Cooper repaired to the principal, Dr. Lovie Lilly, to report the information they received. Dr. Lilly summoned B.S. and interviewed her. During these meetings, as reported by the involved teachers and principal, B.S. displayed a reluctance to discuss the events involving Dennis but did so at the urging of J.C.

Following school protocol, Dr. Lilly contacted DYFS and the Maplewood police both of which investigated the matter. The DYFS IAIU found that allegations of sexual abuse were unfounded, but that the investigation uncovered circumstances which might have been detrimental to B.S. The police found no criminal activity and the County Prosecutor took no actions. Nevertheless, the School District brought ten charges of misconduct against Dennis all of which involved allegedly inappropriate behavior towards his student, B.S., a seventeen-year-old minor, which were said to constitute conduct unbecoming a teacher. During the hearings, the tribunal dismissed charge eight that Dennis left pornographic images on his computer which were discovered by B.S. Dennis denied doing so but admitted that his student assistants had internet access on his computer. Accordingly, assuming arguendo that B.S. actually found said images, someone other than Dennis could have placed them on his desktop photograph folder. Though the charge remained unproven, the tribunal dismissed it because of the IAIU unfounded finding which vitiated any charge involving allegedly sexual misconduct.

Seven of the other nine charges involved discreet acts or statements which expressly or implicitly reflect an attempt on the part of Dennis to create other than a student/teacher relationship with B.S. To the point, although those charges did not allege sexual misconduct, that is, the School District did not claim that Dennis was, to use the vernacular, hitting on B.S., his conduct suggested that he was setting the stage for what could have become a romantic relationship. Stated differently, again, in the vernacular, the charges infer that he was coming on to her. Dennis denied the charges and offered explanations for remarks of his that were taken out of context, misconstrued, or reported inaccurately so as to create a false impression. The parties agreed upon very little.

Teacher tenure cases are reviewed de novo at the OAL. The school district has the burden of proof by a preponderance of the believable evidence.

Charge One - B.S. testified that Dennis asked her to accompany him on a cruise to a race track. Dennis denied ever asking her on what could be characterized as a date. He explained that during May 2006 B.S. visited him in his classroom and over heard his telephone discussion with a doctor about hospice care for his terminally ill mother. At the time Dennis's wife and sister were seriously ill. Seeing Dennis' distress, B.S. commiserated with him. Dennis testified that he then told B.S. how nice it would be to get away from it all and escape personal problems at least for one day. He related how he had gone on a cruise to a race track for that purpose. His remarks to her, as he testified, were in the subjunctive rather than an actual invitation. B.S. responded that it sounded like a nice idea and left it at that. The matter never arose between them again. Dennis' version of the episode seemed credible. In any event, no one overheard the conversation so neither version could be substantiated. Accordingly, I FIND the School District failed to meet its burden of proving that Dennis asked B.S. on a boat ride to a New York race track or to anywhere else.

Charge Two – B.S. testified that Dennis gave her candy kisses accompanied by a remark to the effect that he would like to kiss her but he cannot because she is only seventeen. She stated that he said that to her twice. Dennis said that it had been his custom for several years to give candy including Hershey kisses to his students including his student assistants. B.S. was one of his assistants. He stated that he distributed the candy as a morale booster. Both male and female students received the candy. Teacher Carolyn Moran corroborated his testimony. Dennis testified that, as to both male and female students, he would say facetiously that the students should not tell anyone that he is giving them a kiss because they would not understand.

Given that B.S. could not repeat Dennis' words to her verbatim, and that no one overheard him, it appears that she either misunderstood or took out of context any remark he might have made about giving her a kiss while distributing the Hershey Kisses. She never complained about the candy and testified that it never occurred to her that anything wrongful might have occurred until she discussed it late in the semester with J.C.

I FIND that Dennis distributed Hershey Kisses to B.S. and to other students but that the District failed to meet its burden of proving that its distribution was accompanied by any inappropriate remarks.

Charge Three - This charge covers a variety of allegedly inappropriate remarks Dennis made to B.S. to include statements that he could not wait for her to turn eighteen, that he was jealous when she was with other boys, and that he liked it when she wore her hair down. These remarks might be characterized as flirtatious. Dennis denied making them. He stated that the subject of her age came up only when she was on the internet seeking a gift for her boyfriend and told Dennis how she contemplated spending a birthday weekend with him and giving up her virginity. Dennis stated that he was shocked and made uncomfortable by this disclosure and advised her against taking that step. He said that she should wait until she was eighteen before she made such a decision and that he believed her parents would give her the same advice. Dennis testified that the only remark he made to B.S. which included the word jealousy occurred at that time when she showed him on-line clothing that she contemplated purchasing her boyfriend A.W. for his birthday. Dennis made complimentary remarks and observed that he was jealous that he was not getting a like gift. At another time, seeing B.S. with another male schoolmate, he remarked whether A.W. would be jealous. B.S. responded in a manner that indicated that she did not take his remarks seriously. These two uses of the term jealous, in context, were not in any sense improper.

Dennis admitted complimenting B.S. and other students on their appearance. Teacher Carolyn Moran corroborated that such remarks were made to both male and female students in public rather than in private.

I FIND that Dennis complimented B.S. about her appearance in circumstances that did not suggest any impropriety or, as insinuated by the charge, as a tactic in a subtle campaign to establish or lay the groundwork for an inappropriate relationship with B.S. Accordingly, as to inappropriate remarks, the School District has failed to meet its burden of proof.

Charge Four - The School Board alleges that Dennis inappropriately gave B.S. a Christmas gift and a birthday gift. Dennis explained that he routinely gave small gifts of token value to his assistants and to other students. He gave such gifts to his student assistants at Christmas. The gift to B.S. was no different than the others. The birthday gift in February 2006 might have been unusual but not unprecedented. Former student Gifford testified about an occasion when Dennis purchased a gift for a handicapped student who could not attend the Great Adventure class trip. Nevertheless, the nail salon gift certificate (of undetermined value) with the niece/uncle birthday card is troublesome. Apart from holiday gifts, Dennis was not in the habit of indiscriminately presenting gifts to his students. Rather, he gave such gifts for special reasons. B.S. disclosed the gift to her parents who did not complain and then she thanked Dennis for the gift. At the time, B.S. did not express any discomfort. However, the question is not B.S.'s reaction, but rather whether it was appropriate for Dennis, her teacher, to give her a birthday gift. Apparently, at least to Dennis, the teacher/student relationship had become a friendship. Later Dennis was to pointedly describe the relationship as platonic to underscore that it was not romantic. However, although the gift appeared to be innocuous, it was inappropriate for Dennis to cultivate a relationship with B.S. which was other than teacher/student. Therefore, I FIND that Dennis gave B.S. Christmas and birthday gifts, that the former was not inappropriate, but that the latter was inappropriate.

Charges Five, Six and Seven all relate to some aspect of the e-mail incident. Dennis' conduct was allegedly inappropriate because the e-mail account was clandestine and its creation for B.S. without her consent violated her privacy. Moreover, Dennis' allegedly putting the note with the address and password in B.S.'s pocketbook likewise violated her privacy.

As a threshold matter, there is nothing about the events surrounding the e-mail that constitute an invasion of privacy. Dennis testified that he suggested creating the e-mail account as a way for B.S. and himself to communicate during the summer concerning her health and that of Dennis' family members, and that B.S. did not object. He admitted establishing the account and stated that he gave her the paper with the e-mail address and password. B.S. stated that she was unaware of the paper which A.W. found in her purse. Even if B.S.'s version of events was accurate, it had nothing to do with B.S.'s privacy. Therefore, I FIND that the School District did not sustain its burden of proof regarding Charges Six and Seven.

Dennis admitted creating the e-mail account and the rather clumsy communication method he proposed for B.S. and himself. Apparently, the parties were to communicate by leaving draft messages on the website. In that way, each could access the draft messages and delete them after reading. Also, either party could leave new draft messages at the site without actually sending anything. In this way, no e-mail would be sent and there would be no message trail evidencing the communications. Clearly, Dennis did not want anyone to access these messages. He explained that only health information would be exchanged and therefore privacy was important. Dennis denied composing the penultimate paragraph:

> I know this is sneaky but folks would not understand a friendship (or more) between a 17-year-old lady and a middle aged man. People calling you "puta" and sending me to jail or wanting to beat me up!

(Exhibit P-3). The last paragraph with the single sentence about B.S.'s presence at the Puerto Rican Day Parade is obscured. It would have been necessary to scroll down to see it.

Dennis stated he deleted the message within twenty-four hours of posting. However, during that time A.W. accessed it and mailed it to a new account he created for himself. A.W. denied editing the message in any respect. Nevertheless, Dennis' categorically denied authoring the above quoted paragraph. If Dennis composed the paragraph, it is highly incriminating because he at once admits that the process is "sneaky" and that there was or might be a "friendship (or more)" between himself and B.S. The "more" suggests a romance. Also, Dennis admitted that it would be unusual for A.W., a twenty-year-old, to refer to his girlfriend as a "seventeen year old lady." It would also likewise be odd for him to refer to Dennis as "a middle aged man." Although Dennis referred to himself as an old man, if he had composed the paragraph, it is more likely that he would have described himself more positively. The last sentence clarifies things. If anyone would refer to B.S. as "puta" or "punta" because of her relationship with Dennis, it would have to be because of an understanding that the relationship had become physical. Also, the remark that such a relationship would cause people to want to beat him up or have him incarcerated can only refer to an illicit physical relationship with a minor.

Despite his denial, A.W. might have composed the paragraph as a spiteful way of incriminating Dennis. It is difficult to believe, as A.W. testified, that he was not angry when he saw the message, but only concerned. Even without the incriminating paragraph, the message could be interpreted as an effort on the part of Dennis to maintain an inappropriate relationship with "Chica." On the other hand, if Dennis composed the paragraph, it is understandable that he would want to delete it upon reflection. He testified as to a variety of circumstances that suggested an awareness on his part that a relationship between a teacher and a minor student could lead to trouble. His characterization as his relationship with B.S. as platonic, his opening the classroom door twice while alone with B.S. during the emotional telephone discussion with a doctor about hospice care for his mother, and his loud reference to another teacher's fall for having such a relationship, only underscores his concern. Also, B.S.'s testimony concerning Dennis' remarks about her turning eighteen, if substantiated, would also indicate that Dennis was showing restraint because he knew that he was, in a manner of speaking, playing with fire. However, as to this critical paragraph, the evidence is at an equipoise concerning its authorship.

Despite the importance and focus on the one message Dennis left and quickly removed from the e-mail site, the fact that he created a secret mechanism to communicate with B.S. was inappropriate. A teacher has no business secretly communicating with one of his students between their junior and senior year regardless of the purported subject of the communications. It was wrong for Dennis to create the account, and as to this specification, the School District has met its burden of proof.

Therefore, I am constrained to FIND that the School District has sustained its burden of proof that Dennis created a clandestine e-mail draft communication system exclusively for himself and B.S., and that he composed the message reflected in Exhibit P-3. However, the evidence fails to establish that he authored the penultimate paragraph.

Charge Nine - The Board alleges that Dennis attempted to create an improper relationship with B.S. If all or most of the charges were sustainable, that might be a fair conclusion. But most were not sustainable. The upshot is that what was a student/teacher relationship became a familiar less formal friendship. It was not until the end of the semester that B.S. found herself uncomfortable after being counseled by J.C. and A.W. It is only the controversial paragraph in the draft e-mail, which the School District did not prove was authored by Dennis, that would have evidenced the alleged attempt. None of the proven facts support this allegation. Although the clandestine e-mail account was improper, it did not, by its nature, affect what was already a friendship between Dennis and B.S. Even here, the secret communication system would not have given Dennis an "advantage," private or otherwise, vis-à-vis B.S. Therefore, I FIND that the School District has failed to meet its burden of proof as to Charge Nine.

Charge Ten - Petitioner alleges that the totality of Charges One through Nine demonstrate a pattern of sexually inappropriate behavior. Inasmuch as petitioner failed to meet its burden of proof regarding Charges One, Two, Three, Four in part, Six, Seven, Eight, and Nine, I FIND that it has similarly failed to substantiate Charge Ten. Also, the IAIU "unfounded" investigatory finding vitiates the charge.

LEGAL AUTHORITY AND ANALYSIS

A tenured New Jersey public school employee shall not be dismissed or reduced in compensation during good behavior except for, among other things, unbecoming conduct after a hearing by the Commissioner or the Commissioner's appointee upon written charges. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Tenure protects teachers from dismissal for political, or unfounded reasons. Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Ed., 90 N.J. 63 (1982). It is axiomatic that teachers stand in loco parentis in relation to the students under their charge.

Unbecoming conduct is not defined in the statute. However, the courts have stated that, ". . . the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office and position." In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13 (App. Div. 1974), certif. den. 65 N.J. 292 (1974). For this purpose, the Commissioner considers the nature and gravity of the offenses, evidence of provocation, extenuation, or aggravation, and any harm or injury to discipline and the proper administration of the school system. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967). The Commissioner upheld the termination of a male teacher who made romantic advances towards female students. In re Tenure Hearing of Robert Mantone, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 322 (1993). In that case there was no physical contact.

Charges must be dismissed if the weight of the evidence neither supports them nor demonstrates unfitness. In re Tenure Hearing of John M. Nies, Chatham Township, Morris County, 1963 S.L.D. 172. When the evidence is in equipoise, the party with the burden has failed. In re Tenure Hearing of Elbert Smith, Hudson County Area Vocational Technical School, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 903.

If tenure charges are sustained, the penalty may be dismissal or reduction in compensation. In a case in which a teacher made sexually provocative remarks which indicated a prurient interest in the student, the Commission upheld removal. Board of Education of the Township Parsippany-Troy Hills v. Hess, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 34. On the other hand, a teacher who made comments regarding a student's appearance and actually touched students was not removed. In that case, the penalty was forfeiture of 120 days' pay as well as withholding increments for two years. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William Blust, School District of Watchung Borough, EDU 00386-03S, Initial Decision, (April 5, 2004). Similarly, a teacher's improper remarks towards female students including comments about condoms cost him six-months' salary plus withholding of two increments. In re Tenure Hearing of Henry Allegretti, School District of the City of Trenton, EDU 6408-99, Initial Decision, (February 4, 2000), modified, Comm'r. (March 22, 2000), affd., State Board of Ed. (August 4, 2000).

Of the ten charges against respondent, petitioner was able to sustain only one regarding the clandestine e-mail account and part of the charge involving a birthday gift. Although the birthday gift was inappropriate in a student/teacher relationship, it was only of questionable propriety in what otherwise might be characterized as a benign friendship. Without any suggestion that Dennis' intent was either prurient or predatory, he did cross the line in terms of an inappropriate relationship with a student. Dennis' testimony was replete with remarks that suggested his awareness of the potential for wrongdoing and the need for restraint and rectitude. Nevertheless, the gift was inappropriate and constituted conduct unbecoming a teacher.

The clandestine e-mail episode was far more serious. Here too, without any suggestion of predatory intent or harm to the student, the entire scheme, even if well intentioned, was highly inappropriate. A teacher should not be establishing a secret communication system with a student, especially without the knowledge and consent of her parents. Dennis' testimony reveals his ambivalence about the mechanism. At first, he seemed to feel that the matter was insignificant but within a short time withdrew his message from the draft folder. He realized that he had definitely crossed the line and tried to take back the message. But it was too late. Nevertheless, the content of the message notwithstanding, it is the creation of the surruptitious e-mail account that was inappropriate. The only palliating factor is that B.S., the person for whom the message was intended, never saw it. She never would have seen it if A.W., for whom it was not intended, did not obtain access. Finally, importantly, B.S. would never have gone to Mr. Whittaker without badgering from J.C. and the insistence of A.W. The teachers with whom she spoke as well as Dr. Lilly all observed her reluctance and discomfiture at disclosing what became the allegations against Dennis. Remarks to various parties indicated that she wanted the matter to go away and that she did not want to make trouble for Dennis. Also, it never occurred to her to be uncomfortable until the end of the second semester. It is noteworthy that when B.S. told her mother that she thought Dennis "liked her," her mother did not seem particularly concerned and took no action, but merely told her to be careful.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the foregoing findings of fact, legal authority, and legal discussion, I CONCLUDE that Chandler Dennis committed misconduct involving his minor student B.S. in two respects: (1) he gave her a birthday gift which was beyond what might have been appropriate in a student/teacher relationship, and (2) he established a clandestine e-mail account so that he and B.S. could secretly communicate. Both these actions constituted conduct unbecoming a teacher. However, I further CONCLUDE that under the totality of the circumstances, that removal is far too severe a sanction that should be reserved for egregious harmful or potentially harmful misconduct. It was inappropriate here. Nevertheless, discipline is warranted. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that for so much of Charge Four involving the inappropriate birthday gift, Dennis should forfeit ten days' salary. I also CONCLUDE that, as to Charge Five involving the clandestine e-mail account, Dennis should forfeit sixty days' salary. Therefore, the total penalty arising out of this matter is withholding or forfeiture of seventy days' salary.

DISPOSITION AND ORDER

NORTH HUDSON ACADEMY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, DIVISION OF FINANCE,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, the audiotape of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the recommended order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to meet the requisite standards for the granting of emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Initially, the Commissioner concurs, for the reasons expressed in the order, that petitioner has failed to show that it will suffer irreparable harm if the Commissioner does not permit it to charge its sending districts the requested higher tentative tuition rate for the 2008-09 school year. The Commissioner further notes that applicants for emergent relief must also demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying appeal and show that the balance of interests and equities under the circumstances rests in their favor – neither of which petitioner can be found to have done where the Department appears to have acted reasonably and consistent with law, and where the relief requested by petitioner would compromise the Department's ability to ensure that adjustments to sending district tuition are limited to allowable costs.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein and above, the order of the ALJ – denying the petitioner's application for emergent relief – is adopted as the final decision in this interim matter, and petitioner's claims shall now proceed to hearing on the merits.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 05189-08

AGENCY DKT. NO. 108-4/08

NORTH HUDSON ACADEMY,

Petitioner,

v.

NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, DIVISION OF FINANCE,

Respondent.

Robert S. Feder, Esq., for the petitioner

Sookie Bae, Esq. Deputy Attorney General, for the respondent (Anne Milgram, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

The North Hudson Academy, petitioner, brings this action seeking emergency relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1 et seq. seeking a higher tentative tuition rate for the 2008-2009 school year pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2. On April 14, 2008, the Commissioner of Education received petitioner's application for emergent relief. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on April 16, 2008. On April 22, 2008, oral argument was presented before the undersigned.

Petitioner is a non-profit private school for students with disabilities, who provided education and related special services for severely emotionally disturbed children primarily from Hudson County. For 19 years, petitioner has rented a facility from St. Brigid's Roman Catholic Church, at a rate of $72,000.00 for the 2007-08 year. In early 2007, petitioner was notified that the Archdiocese of Newark was going to sell St.

Brigid's and that petitioner's lease would be cancelled as of August 2008. In November 2007, petitioner agreed to purchase the facility for approximately $3.2 million dollars, which was secured mostly through mortgages and loans with a yearly interest of $240,000.00. In order to close the budget gap, petitioner requested a higher tentative per diem tuition rate, an increase from the current $183.60 to $224.27 for the 2008-09 year. Petitioner now seeks to have the per diem rates increased through emergency relief.

The Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6, allow "emergency relief" to be granted "where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The New Jersey Supreme Court has held that in order to be entitled to emergency or injunctive relief, a party must demonstrate that (1) irreparable harm will result if relief is not granted; (2) the legal right underlying the claim is settled; (3) the moving party has a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits; and (4) the relative hardship between the parties in granting or denying the relief. Rinaldo v. RLR Inv., LLC, 387 N.J. Super. 387, 395 (App. Div. 2006) (citing Crowe v. De Gioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982). While elaborating on the first prong of the Crowe test, the Court stated that "harm is generally considered irreparable in equity if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages." Crowe, 90 N.J. at 132-3. However, this is not a complete bar on claims seeking monetary awards based on emergency relief since "pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected." Ibid.[1]

In order to satisfy the first prong, the prospect of future harm cannot be purely speculative. "Concerns that 'may' lead to irreparable harm are not enough." Peregoy v. Peregoy, 358 N.J. Super. 179, 203 (App. Div. 2003). This requirement was born out in a case similar to the matter at hand, Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Englewood Cliffs v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Englewood, EDU 1086-86, State Bd. of Educ., Decision on Motions (June 3, 2005) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. In that case, the Englewood Board sought $6 million from the Commissioner of Education to cover a budgetary shortfall. The shortfall was alleged to have been borne out of the New Jersey Supreme Court's requirement that Englewood continue its sending/receiving relationships so as to effectuate racial balance and diversity. As support for their motion of emergent relief, the Englewood Board argued that without the funding it would be left without top administrators, numerous programs would fail, 318 students would be "dispossessed of their education," and the first graduating class would be "denied the opportunity to complete their program." Englewood, EDU 1086-86, <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. In denying the emergency relief, the State Board held that Englewood "has failed to demonstrate that it will suffer irreparable harm if it is not afforded the relief it seeks." Ibid. The State Board held that the "scenario presented" by Englewood was "speculative" and that nothing showed that Englewood would be required to dismantle the Court ordered program without emergency funding. Ibid.[2]

[1] Cf. Parks v. Commerce Bank, N.A., 377 N.J. Super. 378, 387 (App. Div. 2005) (injunctive relief is granted where the underlying basis of the claim is monetary harm, since not granting the injunction "would significantly undermine the business's economic relationships" and "such a loss is not susceptible to monetary quantification.")

In the instant matter, based upon arguments presented and the documents submitted, North Hudson claims that not granting emergency approval of the rate increase will result in financial hardship. However, the temporary financial hardship does not equal irreparable harm in this case. First, the budget shortfall of the difference between the rent on the property from the previous year and the estimated costs for maintaining the property related to the purchase is based on speculative costs attributed to the acquisition of the church property. North Hudson makes numerous "assumptions" in order to calculate the "allowable cost" related to the property costs. North Hudson calculates the property tax based off of the total sale price of the property, $3.2 million, not the official assessment of the property. North Hudson also attributes $180,000, nearly one-third of the estimated $550,000 "allowable cost," to an estimated depreciation rate of the property. These amounts are purely speculative and do not, by themselves, support a finding of irreparable harm and the granting of emergency relief. Furthermore, petitioner has the right to recoup any legitimately incurred allowable costs after submitting audited financial statements to respondent. N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.9. Therefore petitioner faces no irreparable harm, and I so CONCLUDE.

[2] The State Board also put a great deal of weight on the fact that Englewood knew for months about the impending shortfall and did not take adequate steps to propose an adequate budget.

Since North Hudson has not shown that the failure to increase the tuition rate on an emergency basis would result in irreparable harm, the motion for emergent relief is DENIED.

This Order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of the Department of Education, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no longer than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this Order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

WHEREAS Petitioner has been continuously employed by the Board on a full time basis since approximately September of 2000, having been a Health and Physical Education Teacher and Athletic Trainer through June of 2004, and beginning from September of 2004 through June of 2007 having been appointed solely as a Health and Physical Education Teacher; and,

WHEREAS Petitioner has served for the requisite period of time prescribed by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and, thus, holds tenure status as a teacher and certain seniority rights; and,

WHEREAS Petitioner, at the start of the 2007-2008 school year, was assigned to the position of "Teacher: ISS (In School Suspension)" and continues in that position; and,

WHEREAS the Board represents that it has formally approved the job description for that position, Exhibit "A," which requires New Jersey State Certification meaning a teaching certification issued by the New Jersey State Board of Examiners; and,

WHEREAS pursuant Dowding v. Monroe Township Board of Education, State Board of Education, 90 S.L.D. 1711 and N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.5(b) a copy of the job description for the position was sent to the Acting Camden County Superintendent of Schools, H. Mark Stanwood, by way of

WHEREAS the Acting Camden County Superintendent, by way of correspondence date December 21, 2007 (Exhibit "C"), replied stating that: 1) the position as described in the job description was appropriately titled; 2) that he did not need to approve of the title since "it is recognized in the Coding Manual for Certificated Staff Report and the Editlink document of job codes and their respective authorizing licenses"; and, 3) "candidates holding any valid, standard instructional license may be assigned to such a position, relative to any relevant collective bargaining agreements"; and,

WHEREAS, based upon the above, inasmuch at it appears that Petitioner has been placed in a position that requires a teaching certificate and that he holds such a certificate, this being in accordance with his tenure rights and pursuant to the New Jersey Administrative Code;

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF DENNIS, CAPE MAY COUNTY,	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner was employed as a teaching staff member in respondent's district during the 2006-07 school year. She contended that although she received a notice of intent to terminate her employment from the Superintendent of Schools in June 2007, she was never officially terminated by the Board as required by statute and should receive back pay. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision, and the facts of the matter are not in dispute.

The ALJ found that: N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4 specifies that only the Board of Education may remove an employee, by a majority vote of the full board; such Board action did not occur in this matter until January 5, 2008; petitioner's termination was therefore not effective until that date; petitioner is entitled to back pay from the date of her last pay, October 17, 2007, until the date the Board officially terminated her; and petitioner's termination afforded her neither entitlement to a statement of reasons nor an informal appearance before the Board. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that petitioner be awarded back pay from October 17, 2007 to January 5, 2008, and that she not be afforded a statement of reasons for her termination or an informal appearance before the Board.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that petitioner is due back pay for the period specified above. While noting that the ALJ had determined that petitioner could not rely on N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b) as support for a request for a statement of reasons for her termination and an informal meeting with the respondent board of education, the Commissioner determined that such requests for relief were not raised in the petition or addressed in the prehearing order. Consequently they were not addressed by the Commissioner. Respondent was ordered to award back pay to petitioner for the period commencing October 17, 2007 through January 5, 2008.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner). For the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion that petitioner is due back pay for the period commencing October 17, 2007 and continuing through January 5, 2008 – the day upon which respondent passed a resolution ratifying petitioner's termination.

The Commissioner acknowledges that the ALJ determined that petitioner cannot rely on N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b) as support for a request for 1) a statement of reasons for her termination and 2) an informal meeting with the respondent board of education. However, since these two requests for relief were not raised in the petition or addressed in the prehearing order, they need not be addressed by the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the portion of the Initial Decision in which petitioner is awarded back pay for the period beginning October 17, 2007 and ending on January 5, 2008.

Record Closed: March 14, 2008 Decided: March 28, 2008

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was transmitted to the OAL on December 26, 2007, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision. The facts are undisputed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner was employed as a teaching staff member in respondent Dennis Township Board of Education's ("Board") district during the 2006-2007 school year. On May 3, 2007, the Board approved petitioner for reemployment for the 2007-2008 school year, and on May 4, 2007, the Superintendent of schools, George Papp, notified petitioner in writing of the Board's action. On May 11, 2007, petitioner accepted. On June 7, 2007, she executed a memorandum accepting her salary for the 2007-2008 school year, subject to any change negotiated in a new Collective Bargaining Agreement. The memorandum, which both parties agree constitutes a contract for employment, contained the following language:

> Termination of Employment. Title 18A:28-8 Notice of intention to resign required within sixty (60) days' notice, in writing, for tenured personnel. Notice of termination or resignation required within thirty (30) days' notice, in writing, for non-tenured personnel.

On June 15, the Superintendent notified petitioner in writing as follows:

> At the June 28, 2007 Board of Education Meeting, I will be notifying the Board of your termination of employment. You will begin the 30 days of contractual notice on Tuesday, September 4, 2007. Your last day of work will be Tuesday, October 16, 2007.

The Board took no action on petitioner's termination until January 5, 2008. At that time, Board passed a resolution ratifying petitioner's termination retroactive to June 15, 2007.

Petitioner now asserts that her termination was not effective until the Board acted on January 5, 2008. She further argues that she is entitled to a statement of reasons for her termination and an informal appearance before the Board. The Board counters that the Superintendent's action of June 15 was sufficient to effectuate the termination; no Board action was required. Alternatively, the Board contends that its retroactive resolution of January 5, 2008 is dispositive.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

1. The Termination

The controlling statute in this matter is N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1a, which states in pertinent part:

> A board of education shall appoint, transfer or remove a certificated or non-certificated officer or employee only upon the recommendation of the chief school administrator and by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board....(Emphasis added)

The language of the statute is clear on its face. An employee may only be removed by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the Board. In this case, such Board action did not occur until January 5, 2008.

The Board cites two cases in support of its contention that the action of the superintendent was sufficient to effectuate petitioner's termination. Neither applies to the facts before me.

In Kufel v. Board of Education of the Union County Vocational-Technical School District, 96 N.J.A.C. 2d (EDU) 14 (1995), the Superintendent of Schools served a notice of termination on petitioner on March 15, 1995. The termination was to be effective sixty days later on May 14, 1995. On March 16, 1995, one day later, the Board of Education passed a resolution approving the termination.

In considering these facts, the Administrative Law Judge held:

> Since the Board ratified Gagliardi's action one day after he notified Kufel, I CONCLUDE that, for all intents and > purposes, it was the Board which notified, suspended and terminated petitioner on March 15, 1994.

The Board's action in Kufel took place one day after the Superintendent served the notice of termination, and fifty nine days prior to the date of termination. In the present case, the Board failed to act prior to the final termination date of October 16, 2007, but instead waited until January 5, 2008.

But the court in Kufel went on to state:

> According to Rockefeller, supra, subsequent ratification was probably not even necessary.

Rockefeller v. River Edge Board of Education, 75 S.L.D. 898 (1975) is the second case relied upon by the Board. The Board contends that Rockefeller held the action of the Superintendent terminating an employee required no ratification by the Board. The above-quoted equivocal language in Kufel affords at least some support for that proposition.

But such an interpretation of Rockefeller is erroneous. The facts of Rockefeller are as follows. On October 8, 1973, the Board of Education determined to terminate petitioner "during a private work session" and directed the superintendent to notify her. The superintendent did so on October 9, 1973, advising that petitioner's last day of work would be December 10, 1973. Thereafter, on November 19, 1973 the Board passed a formal resolution terminating petitioner.

The hearing examiner found that the Superintendent had acted based upon the action of the Board at the October 8, 1973 private work session. Therefore, the Board, and not the superintendent terminated petitioner. The Commissioner affirmed.[1]

[1] I note that the Board's action in Rockefeller took place in 1973, prior to the enactment of the Open Public Meetings Act in 1975. Such board action at a "private work session" would be of dubious validity under present law.

Therefore, Rockefeller does not stand for the proposition that the action of the superintendent alone is sufficient to terminate petitioner.

N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1a specifies that only the Board of Education can remove an employee, and only by a majority vote of the full board. Such Board action did not occur herein until January 5, 2008. Accordingly, petitioner's termination was not effective until at least that date.

The next question becomes, precisely what is the effective date of the termination?

The individual employment contract requires thirty days notice of termination be given. Petitioner may argue that the Board's action of January 5 constituted the only valid notice she received, and therefore she is entitled to pay from October 17, 2007, through February 4, 2008, thirty days pay after the January 5, 2008 Board action.

I reject such a scenario. Petitioner received actual notice of her prospective termination on June 15, 2007. She has known what would happen to her since that date and has had the opportunity to plan how she would address her termination. The notice requirements of the contract were satisfied as soon as the Superintendent advised petitioner that her employment would end.

Consequently, petitioner's entitlement to pay ended when the Board perfected her termination by passing the resolution of January 5, 2008. Petitioner is entitled to back pay from the date of her last pay until the date the Board terminated her. That time period commenced October 17, 2007, and ended January 5, 2008.

2. Reasons and Informal Appearance

Petitioner also claims entitlement to a statement of reasons for her termination and an informal appearance before the Board. She relies upon N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1b, which states in pertinent part:

> A board of education shall renew the employment contract of a certificated or non-certificated officer or employee only upon the recommendation of the chief school administrator and by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board. The board shall not withhold its approval for arbitrary and capricious reasons. A nontenured officer or employee who is not recommended for renewal by the chief school administrator shall be deemed nonrenewed. Prior to notifying the officer or employee of the nonrenewal, the chief school administrator shall notify the board of the recommendation not to renew the officer's or employee's contract and the reasons for the recommendation. An officer or employee whose employment contract is not renewed shall have the right to a written statement of reasons for nonrenewal pursuant to section 2 of P.L.1975, c.132 (C.18A:27-3.2) and to an informal appearance before the board. The purpose of the appearance shall be to permit the staff member to convince the members of the board to offer reemployment.
> [Emphasis added.]

Again, the statutory language is unequivocal. The procedure for providing reasons and an informal appearance only applies when a nontenured officer or employee is "not recommended for renewal."

Such is not the case here. Petitioner was recommended for renewal and was in fact renewed. Thereafter she was terminated under the applicable provision of her employment contract. The termination afforded her neither entitlement to a statement of reasons nor an informal appearance before the Board.

ORDER

I ORDER that petitioner be awarded back pay for the period October 17, 2007, through January 5, 2008.

I ORDER that petitioner not be afforded a statement of reasons for her termination or an informal appearance before the Board of Education.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. No transcript of the March 3, 2008 hearing has been provided.

A letter from J.R.'s mother was received on April 11, 2008. The Commissioner may not rely on its contents because the letter was filed beyond the time allowed by N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 for exceptions and was not submitted by the petitioner.

After careful and independent review, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case. SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a resident of the Borough of Somerville – contested respondent's determination that her grandson, J.R., is ineligible to attend school in respondent's district, claiming that J.R. resides with her in Somerville. Respondent Board did not file a counterclaim for tuition.

The ALJ found that: J.R. is not properly domiciled in respondent's school district as required under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) and is therefore not entitled to attend Somerville Borough schools free of charge; petitioner does not support J.R. gratis, as the mother and stepfather make weekly contributions toward his support; there is no basis upon which to conclude that a family or economic hardship exists in this case; and tension and arguments among family members is not a legal basis to assert a claim of entitlement to attend public schools free of charge. The ALJ recommended dismissal of the petition.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, noting that no tuition is due at this time as respondent Board did not file a counterclaim or provide proofs regarding tuition rates in the district.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 249-08
AGENCY DKT. NO. 376-12/07

T.H., O/B/O OF MINOR CHILD J.R.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOMERVILLE, SOMERSET COUNTY.

Respondents.

T.H., petitioner, pro se

Michael J. Rogers, Esq., for respondent Board of Education of the Borough of Somerville, (McDonald & Rogers, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 4, 2008 Decided: March 25, 2008

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ (t/a):

Petitioner is a resident of the Borough of Somerville, Somerset County, and has been for the past 40 years or so. Her grandson, J.R., who had been living with his mother and stepfather in Hillsborough, came to live with her during November 2007 because of "problems" he was having with his mother and stepfather. In a petition filed before the Commissioner of Education on or about January 7, 2008, petitioner seeks an Order to have her grandson attend the public schools operated by the Borough of Somerville Board of Education (Board) free of charge. Petitioner makes claim that J.R. is entitled to such attendance under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 (b) because he resides with her in the Borough of Somerville, ostensibly because if he continued to live with his mother and stepfather in Hillsborough "a family or economic hardship" would be created. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(1).

The Board says petitioner failed to carry her burden of persuasion to show that J.R. is entitled to free education in its public school district. Pending disposition of this matter, J.R. continues in attendance at the Borough of Somerville public schools. The Board did not file a counterclaim for tuition against petitioner.

A hearing was conducted March 3, 2008, at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville New Jersey, after which the record. The conclusion is reached in this Initial Decision that J.R. is not eligible to attend the Borough of Somerville public schools by reason of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 (b), or by any legal authority, free of charge.

FACTS

Except as otherwise noted, the facts established by a preponderance of credible evidence in the record are these.

1. Petitioner, T.H., is the maternal grandmother of J.R.

2. It is undisputed that petitioner has been a life long resident, 40 years plus, of the Borough of Somerville.

3. J.R. is 16 years of age.

4. Up until on or about November 2007, J.R. had been residing with his mother and stepfather in Hillsborough, Somerset County, New Jersey

5. Until in or about November 2007 J.R. attended the Hillsborough High School. J.R.'s mother testified J.R. requires special education which, she says he received at Hillsborough.

6. J.R.'s mother attends community college. The evidence shows that sometime in November 2007 she was in her Hillsborough bedroom at her computer working on a school paper. J.R.'s stepfather entered the bedroom and began to distract her from the school task at hand. The stepfather's attempt at distraction was resisted by mother, and the noise of the argument soon resulted in J.R. entering the bedroom to see what was the matter.

7. J.R. testified he heard a "loud bang" and then entered his mother's bedroom to see what was the matter.

8. The stepfather testified he did not appreciate J.R. entering the bedroom, and told him so. J.R. reacted to what he perceived to be a physical assault on his mother's person, and the stepfather reacted to J.R.

9. During the stepfather/son reaction to each other over mother telling stepfather to leave her alone because she had to get the paper done for class, J.R. was "poked" in the eye.

10. Stepfather testified that it is a "lie" for anyone to say he poked his stepson, J.R., in the eye. He says he loves his wife and he loves his stepson. In furtherance of his claim that he did not poke J.R. in the eye, stepfather notes no physician was called, nor was J.R. taken to the hospital.

11. While mother says stepfather is very strict with J.R., she did call the Somerville police because in her view the poke in the eye was deliberate and, I infer, she became fearful for her safety and the safety of her son, J.R.

12. While the police quieted the disturbance at the house, there were no arrests made, no complaints were filed against anyone, and no report was filed with any State child protection agency.

13. Shortly after this disturbance, J.R. called his grandmother, petitioner, and asked her if he could stay with her. She responded in the affirmative.

14. In the meantime, it is noted mother and stepfather have been together for 10 years.

15. Mother says J.R. and stepfather argue, and she acknowledges J.R. has had problems getting along with her as well.

16. Mother explains that J.R. is staying with his grandmother, petitioner, because he wants to live with his grandmother. Mother is quick to note that she intends to move to Somerville very soon at which time J.R. would then resume living with her and stepfather.

17. Petitioner testified that despite the fact her daughter has the financial resources necessary to support J.R., she agrees to allow him to live with her because of the problems he has getting along with mother and stepfather. Petitioner also recites that J.R. had some unspecified difficulties getting along with his peers at Hillsborough High School.

18. Mother is employed by Somerset County, while stepfather is employed by a new car dealership in the area.

19. Stepfather testified he and his wife, J.R.'s mother, give petitioner $50-60 a week in support of J.R.

20. While petitioner agrees to J.R. living with her temporarily until his mother, her daughter, finds a place to buy in Somerville, she is emphatic that she does not want legal custody.

21. Mother says the present lease she and stepfather has does not expire until August 2008. She says their intention is to look for a house to purchase in Somerville. Stepfather says he will not purchase a house merely to purchase a house. The house, he says, must be of value and reasonably priced.

22. Mother testified she is to begin family counseling and she intends to have her son and stepfather enroll as well. Mother visits with J.R. at petitioner's home on weekends, while J.R. and stepfather talk on the telephone.

23. In the meantime and shortly after J.R. took up residence with petitioner, she took him to the Somerville public schools to be enrolled as eligible for free public school attendance by virtue of his residing with her.

24. Petitioner was advised by someone at the district's administrative offices that J.R. is not eligible for free public school attendance solely because he lives in her house. However, school authorities did allow J.R. to be enrolled in its schools pending disposition on the issue of eligibility by the Commissioner of Education.

25. J.R. has been enrolled in the Somerville Schools since on or about the end of November 2007. Petitioner filed a Pro Se Residency Appeal dated December 5, 2007, before the Commissioner of Education seeking a determination that J.R. is eligible to attend the Somerville public schools free of charge by virtue of his living with her.

25. Petitioner recites in her appeal that J.R. should be allowed to attend Somerville public schools free of charge for these reasons:

> Not legal guardian – his mom will be moving to Somerville in 6 months. I took him out of the home – problems with step father.

ANALYSIS

The statute governing attendance free of charge at a local school district is N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, et seq.:

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 provides that:

Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:

a. Any person domiciled who is domiciled within the school district.

b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district, if so required by the board a sworn statement that he is domiciled within the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term * * * and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district . . .

If in the judgment of the board of education the evidence does not support the validity of the claim by the resident, the board may deny admission to the child. The resident may contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner on the validity of the claim and shall heave the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection . . .

No child shall be denied admission during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. In the event the child is currently enrolled in the district, the student shall not be removed from school during the 21-day period in which the resident may contest the board's decision nor during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. If in the judgment of the commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the resident, he shall assess the resident tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance > in the school district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner win which orders of the commissioner are enforced . . .

Paragraph a. of the statute entitles a child to a free public school education in the district in which they are domiciled. The domicile of an unemancipated child is the domicile of the parent, custodian, or guardian. P.B.K. v. Board of Educ. of The Borough of Tenafly, 343 N.J. Super. 419 (App. Div. 2001).

In this case, the 'parent' for purposes of the statute is the mother whose domicile is Hillsborough Township in Somerset County. Therefore, under paragraph a. of the statute, J.R. is not entitled by reason of domicile to attend the Somerville Borough public schools free of charge because his domicile is not that of his grandmother even though he lives with her. J.R.'s domicile is that of his mother, which is in Hillsborough.

The administrative rule, N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1 (a), provides that a student is entitled to attend school free of charge if the student is domiciled within the district. Subparagraph 1 of the same rule states that a student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is living with a parent, or legal guardian whose permanent home is within the district. Such is not the case here. Petitioner is neither the parent nor the legal guardian of J.R., although her permanent home is in Somerville Borough.

Consequently, J.R. is not entitled by law to attend for free of charge the Somerville Borough public schools by reason of domicility within the Borough. J.R. is not domiciled within the Borough.

Paragraph b., subparagraph (1), of the statute would allow J.R. to attend the Somerville Borough public schools if certain conditions were met. That part of the statute reads:

> Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if her were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district . . . a sworn > statement that he is domiciled with the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that he intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term . . . and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district.

N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.2 (a) 1 instructs that an otherwise eligible student, kept in the home of a person other than the student's parent or legal guardian, is entitled to attend school free of charge in that school district if:

> i. The student's parent or guardian has filed, together with documentation to support its validity, a sworn statement that he or she is not capable of supporting or providing care for the student due to family or economic hardship and that the student is not residing with the other person solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education.

The same rule, at (a) 4 allows:

> 4. A student shall not be deemed ineligible under this subsection solely because a parent or legal guardian gives gifts or makes limited contributions, financial or otherwise, toward the welfare of the student, provided that the resident keeping the student received no payment or other remuneration from the parent or guardian for regular maintenance of the student.

Petitioner has the burden of persuasion to demonstrate that J.R. is entitled to attend the Somerville Borough schools free of charge based on paragraph (b) (1) of the preceding statute and the cited administrative rules.

The evidence is that mother and stepfather contributes $40 to $60 a week for the support of J.R. While there are no hard and fast rules regarding what constitutes a "limited contribution" for the maintenance of a child, a regular $40 to $60 a week contribution is more than a "limited" contribution by any reasonable standard. Essentially, mother and stepfather are paying for the support of J.R. while at petitioner's home and, consequently, the conclusion must be drawn that petitioner does not support J.R., gratis, as is required by the statute.

In addition, the evidence shows mother spends weekends visiting with J.R. at petitioner's home and J.R. spends time on the telephone with stepfather. I FIND no basis upon which to conclude a family or economic hardship exists as the root of the problem this family has getting along with each other. J.R. did not seek to move to his grandmother's because mother and stepfather have economic woes. He sought to stay with grandmother because of the tension and arguments that emerged in his presence or because of his presence with stepfather and with mother. Arguments between and among family members are not unique to this family. However, that family members have a difficult time getting along with each other is not a legal basis to assert a claim of entitlement to attend public schools free of charge.

It is noted the evidence shows it is likely J.R. is in need of special education and that he may require certain related services towards reaching a meaningful free and appropriate public education. Without knowing more, and without reaching a conclusion, it does appear anger management for J.R. and the entire household may be of assistance.

CONCLUSIONS

I CONCLUDE petitioner failed in the burden to demonstrate by a preponderance of credible evidence that J.R. is entitled to attend the Somerville Borough public schools free of charge under N.J.S.A. 18:38- b (1). The record is absent of evidence to show there is hardship borne out of economic considerations or any other hardship based on the facts presented. In addition, the record shows petitioner does not support J.R. gratis contrary to the requirement of law.

Therefore, the inference is drawn that the purpose for J.R. living with petitioner in Somerville Borough instead of with his mother in Hillsborough is as a matter of convenience for mother. Mother removes J.R. from the household because of the friction generated when he is present, and not because he alone creates the friction, but which neither she nor the stepfather seem capable of presently addressing. A side benefit to the matter of convenience is to allow J.R. to attend free of charge the Somerville Borough public schools rather than the Hillsborough schools. Such facts do not constitute a legal entitlement to attend public schools free of charge.

Having concluded petitioner failed to show J.R. is eligible for a free public school attendance at the Somerville Borough public schools by reason of domicile, or, on any other basis, the appeal filed by petitioner is hereby DISMISSED.

It is so ORDERED

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter – including the audiotape of proceedings – and the recommended order of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that petitioners have demonstrated entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, supra, and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Initially, for the reasons set forth at length in the ALJ's order, the Commissioner agrees that petitioners have demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying appeal and that the balance of interests and equities under the circumstances rests in petitioners' favor. Moreover, the Commissioner agrees that petitioners have met the threshold standard of irreparable harm notwithstanding that prom attendance is a privilege rather than a right, since the opportunity to participate cannot be regained once lost and dismissal of petitioners' emergent application on this basis alone would,

[1] This matter was originally docketed, and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on an emergent basis, under the caption D.B., on behalf of minor child, E.B.*, based upon counsel's representation regarding the name of E.B.'s parent. as noted by the ALJ, effectively insulate the school district's actions from any meaningful review.[2]

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL granting petitioner's application is adopted for the reasons expressed therein and above. Because the present decision fully disposes of all issues in dispute between the parties, no further proceedings are necessary, and this matter is, therefore, dismissed with the request that the Clerk of the OAL return the file to the agency pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-3.3.

[2] In so holding, the Commissioner is cognizant of the well-established principle that a prohibition from attending events of this type does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant extraordinary remedy. However, harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity of the harm have frequently been addressed together; they are, however, two separate factors, and it is on the basis of the severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of interests – and not its irreparable nature that applications of this sort typically fail. Martin A. Domacasse v. Board of Education of the North Warren Regional School District, Warren County, decided by the State Board April 17, 1996; *L.J. on behalf of minor child, S.J., and David Wickham v. OAL DKT. NO. EDU 04102-08

D.B. ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD E.B. AND GREGORY HECK, Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF PINELANDS REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT,
Respondent.

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

This is an emergency application in which the petitioners, parent of a E.B., a child who is a junior in the respondents high school, and a eighteen-year-old who was to accompany E.B. to her junior prom at 8 p.m. this evening, seek relief from the Commissioner of Education because they were informed that Mr. Heck will not be permitted to accompany Ms. B. to the prom. This information was conveyed to Ms. B. at school. No written document incorporating any reasons for this decision has been produced and testimony received from school principal Procopio indicates that no such document exists. The Board has a written policy, part of the student handbook, that provides that the administration reserves the right "to deny admittance to any person not currently enrolled at Pinelands." Mr. Heck graduated from Pinelands last year and is now a freshman in college. Mr. Procopio testified that he informed the student and her mother that the reason Mr. Heck could not attend the prom was because of an arrest which Procopio knew about from the newspaper and had some apparently hearsay information received from a school employee. At this hearing, Procopio identified two other alleged reasons why Heck was barred. One involved an allegation made some time ago that involved a claim that Heck had engaged in some improper sexual conduct; the other that he had been removed from a school basketball game at which he was apparently a spectator. Procopio had no first hand knowledge of the latter matter, learning of it, he testified, from the school's athletic director. As to the alleged sexual matter, he agreed that no charges of any kind have ever been brought as a result of the allegations, no discipline was ever imposed by the school on Heck, who was a student at the school at the time the allegation was made, and despite the existence of the allegation prior to both Heck's senior prom and graduation exercises, the district did not seek to bar him from either event. Also, Procopio agreed that nothing in regard to the allegation has changed since Heck graduated. Thus, since then, as before, no charges have been brought and he has never been confronted with the charges in any formal manner. As for the arrest, a letter from the Prosecutor of Ocean County dated April 17, 2006, produced as evidence in this hearing, shows that the matter was administratively dismissed. No other charges of any sort remain in regard to that arrest.

Applications for emergent relief must demonstrate that the petitioner meets the standards set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). These standards are codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).

> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
>
> 3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b)]

Initially, the Board argues that the application for emergent relief should be dismissed because the petitioners cannot point to any irreparable harm that would arise from Mr. Heck's being barred and Ms. B. not being allowed to attend the prom with her chosen escort. But, as I noted to counsel on the record, while traditionally there has been some doubt about this question and agency case law exists that supports both that there is and that there is not irreparable harm, it is clear that the deprivation of the privilege of attendance at the prom does involve significant financial and emotional harm, even if the latter may be of limited duration or extent. More importantly, if the irreparable harm standard always serves to effectuate dismissal of contentions that a school board has acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner in regard to decisions about proms, it appears that there is no practicable means to challenge a Board's decision. While the Commissioner's standard in reviewing the discretionary determinations of school boards is quite strict, and the Board is therefore generally not second-guessed, nevertheless it is appropriate that Board actions be subject to review on the merits rather than be perfunctorily upheld without consideration of the merits because, "the prom is a privilege and no irreparable harm can exist." Therefore, I decline to dismiss the appeal on the basis of the failure of the petitioners to demonstrate irreparable harm and conclude that in fact, irreparable harm has been demonstrated in the unique context of this one-time event.

The Crowe v. DeGoia standards require that the petitioners demonstrate that they have a reasonable likelihood of prevailing on the merits. Here, the sole reason offered the parent of B. and the student, as well as Mr. Heck, was the existence of the arrest. Mr. Procopio testified adamantly that the existence of any arrest was sufficient to bar a non-student, regardless of the nature of the arrest. While it is likely that a policy that barred non-students who had pending arrest matters awaiting disposition would be appropriate, here the fact is that the arrest led to no prosecution of any sort, and indeed the matter was dismissed administratively. Mr. Heck is presumed innocent of criminal charges until proven guilty, but even more that that, here the entire matter has been dismissed. It is arbitrary and unreasonable for the Board to rely on this arrest to bar Heck. As for the other reasons stated at hearing for barring him, it is important to note that while the district has discretion to act, it cannot simply keep adding reasons as it goes along. As for the alleged sexual misconduct, I am well aware that many such incidents do not go forward to formal charges because the alleged victim chooses not to press the matter. But when no such charges are brought, and no disciplinary charges are brought by the school when the alleged perpetrator is himself still a student, and he is not barred from his prom or graduation because of the allegations and there is no evidence in the record at all regarding the alleged event except for a reference by the principal that he spoke to the alleged victim and her parent and made a classroom adjustment for her, it is entirely unfair and arbitrary for the district to now decide that it will punish Mr. Heck, and not incidentally Ms. B., for an unproven matter to which he has never been called to task. Regardless of rumors, innuendoes, name-calling and the like, the Board must have a more solid footing upon which to act, even where the matter involves a non-student and even where it has discretion in deciding whether to act.

Finally as to the alleged removal from a sporting event, Mr. Procopio had only second-hand knowledge of this and while he claims that the athletic director told him that Heck was unruly and that the athletic director escorted Heck from the event, no other information has been shown about what his conduct supposedly was. Did he yell too much? Did he throw something? Did he swear, did he fight? Nothing exists in writing about the matter; no charges of any sort were filed. And again, this was not a reason for barring him that was offered in the oral discussion with his parent and himself and Ms. B.'s parent.

Based upon the record, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has demonstrated a reasonable likelihood of success at demonstrating that the Board acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner. Further, I CONCLUDE that, on balance, the petitioners will suffer more harm if barred under these circumstances than will the Board if Mr. Heck is permitted to attend the prom.

It is well settled law that the Commissioner will not interfere with the discretionary determination of a school board unless the Board has acted in an arbitrary and unreasonable fashion. That is a high test to overcome; here, I CONCLUDE that the facts demonstrate that the petitioners have a reasonable likelihood of success in meeting that test. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that emergency relief is appropriate and I ORDER that the respondent shall permit Mr. Heck to attend the prom with Ms. B.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner contended that he is not required to provide respondent Board with records he retained at the end of his employment as a guidance counselor with the district in June 2007, claiming that the documents are personal memory aids rather than student records. Respondent alleges the records in question are student records which must be retained by the Board. The facts in this matter are not disputed, and the parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ sealed Joint Exhibit 1, consisting of copies of the documents in question, and found that: pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19 and N.J.A.C. 6A:32-2.1, the records at issue are student records which must be returned to the Board and not retained by petitioner; only authorized organizations or persons shall have access to student records, and only individuals who are certified school district personnel who have educational responsibility of a student are entitled to access these records; and petitioner holds no such entitlement as he is no longer employed by the Board. The ALJ ordered that the Board's motion for summary decision be granted; that petitioner immediately return to the Board all 199 pages of documents and retain no copies of same.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. The Commissioner additionally adopted the ALJ's separate order sealing the parties' Joint Exhibit 1 in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions were filed in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. The Board did not submit reply exceptions.

Petitioner's exceptions essentially replicate arguments advanced in submissions before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. In that it is determined that these were considered and addressed in the Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that summary decision is appropriately granted to the Board as she agrees with his determination that the documents at issue in this matter are student records, and – since petitioner no longer has educational responsibility for the students who are the subject of these records – he possesses no entitlement to access or retain custody of them.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons stated therein and the instant petition of appeal is dismissed. Also adopted is the ALJ's separate Order sealing the parties' Joint Exhibit 1 in this matter. Petitioner is hereby directed to immediately return the 199 pages of documents comprising the subject matter of this action to the Board of Education of the Township of Lafayette.

Record Closed: March 4, 2008 Decided: March 31, 2008

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner William Welty, a former guidance counselor employed by respondent Township of Lafayette Board of Education, requests a determination as to whether certain papers retained by him at the conclusion of his employment in June 2007, must be returned to the Board as student records or whether they are excluded from the definition of student records as "information recorded solely as a memory aid, not for the use of a second party" under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-2.1.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed his petition with the Commissioner of Education on October 29, 2007. After the Board filed an Answer on November 15, 2007, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13, which, on November 20, 2007, filed it for determination as a contested case.

On February 15 and March 4, 2007, the parties filed cross-motions for summary decision. By separate order I have sealed Joint Exhibit 1.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

As neither party contends that there are any disputed facts nor challenges the statement of facts set forth in the cross-motions for summary decision I FIND the following to be the FACTS of this case:

Welty was employed as a guidance counselor by the Board during the 2005-2006 and 2006-2007 school years. When his employment ceased at the conclusion of the 2006-2007 school year, he retained certain documents because he believed they were memory aids rather than student records and, as such did not need to be left with the Board. Board representatives have requested that he return the documents.

The documents consist of 199 pages, which are made part of this record as JT. 1. Welty conceded that the following bate stamped documents were retained in error and were not memory aids generated by him, and he has agreed to return them: 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 12, 19, 20, 21, 23, 40, 42, 51, 83, 86,96, 134, 145, 153, 157, 159, 160, 161, 165, 171, 173, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 192. They consist of preprinted signed permission slips for guidance counselor counseling sessions with named students; letters or e-mails to and from parents or guardians or school staff related to students; preprinted authorizations for the release or exchange of information; and a student-generated letter.

The remaining documents are, in most instances, typed on a form entitled "Case Notes." Each document identifies a particular student Welty had been assigned to counsel and records the date and time and the observations made at that time. In most cases the notations are initialed. A random sampling of the notes is as follows:

> "Student exhibited lying behavior during lunch period. Issue was brought to the attention of student's teacher, and discipline was decided upon. Student started to cry and it was difficult to calm the student down [Jt-1-2];"

> "Ct (client) met with counselor to begin closure for the year. Ct was tasked with drawing an award for himself doing something he is good at. Ct seemed extremely distracted and didn't want to perform the task [Jt-1-13];"

> "Ct and counselor engaged with other students in a lunch social circle in the counselor's office. Ct and three other students appeared to enjoy the extra attention [Jt-1-24];"

> "Counselor called ct's mother to discuss sticker chart and behavior log. Mother does not feel that the book is working and report the ct feels embarrassed and upset when she was read passages from the book at home [Jt-1-32];"

> "Counselor was approached by outside visitor regarding student making accusations against her brother hitting her. She claimed to outside visitor that there is a bruise on her shoulder and that her brother has a pocket knife that he threatens her with ... Counselor asked teacher to send her to guidance. Alerted nurse, school psychologist and assistant principal to the situation [Jt-1-41];"

"Ct and counselor played a game of checkers to further establish rapport. Ct appeared to enjoy the game and was pretty talkative and engaging [Jt-1-46];"

"Ct reported bullying behavior from a fellow class mate and was distraught about how to handle situation. Counselor advised ct to ignore the student bullying her and discussed how her reactions may give satisfaction to the student when she is bullying her. Ct agreed and will attempt this [Jt-1-48];"

"Mother is worried about the efforts by Ct's teachers to place him into mainstream classes re: his stress levels. Also discussed Ct's behavior at home being diametrically different than his attitude at school [Jt-1-94];"

"Ct met with teaching aide and counselor for lunch socialization session. The discussion focused on a summarization of the last few month's activities in the counselor's office. Counselor gave compliments to ct for having made so much progress and provided closure to the student for the year [Jt-1-162];"

CONCLUSIONS AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

The Board contends that the documents are student records, and, as such, Welty has no right to retain them as he is no longer assigned educational responsibility for these students. Welty contends that they are not student records but rather are personal memory aids not maintained for the purpose of second party review. I CONCLUDE that they are student records which must be returned to the Board and not retained by Welty.

The regulations concerning student records flow from the statute upon which they are predicated. N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19 entitled "Pupil records, creation, maintenance and retention, security and access ...." provides:

> The State Board of Education shall provide by regulation for the creation, maintenance and retention of pupil records and for the security thereof and access thereto, to provide general protection for the right of the pupil to be supplied with necessary information about herself or himself, the right of the parent or guardian and the adult pupil to be supplied with full information about the pupil, except as may be inconsistent with reasonable protection of the persons involved, the right of both pupil and parent or guardian to reasonable privacy as against other persons and the opportunity for the public schools to have the data necessary to provide a thorough and efficient educational system for all pupils.

The State Board defines a "student record" as follows:

> "Student record" means information related to an individual student gathered within or outside the school district and maintained within the school district, regardless of the physical form in which it is maintained. Essential in this definition is the idea that any information that is maintained for the purpose of second party review is considered a student record. Therefore, information recorded by any certified school personnel solely as a memory aid, not for the use of a second party, is excluded from this definition.
> N.J.A.C. 6A:32-2.1.

Although there is no additional explanation or description of the information excepted from the definition of "student record," namely, "information recorded solely as a memory aid, not for use of a second party," there is another regulation which persuasively suggests that the very information contained in Welty's case notes are intended to be part of a student's records. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.1(h) requires that, "[a]ll anecdotal information ... collected on a student shall be dated and signed by the individual who originated the data." It is clear that the documents Welty continues to contest consist of anecdotal information on specific students. In almost all instances, these notes are dated and initialed by Welty. These documents and the information contained in them were created by Welty in the normal course of performing his assigned duties as a guidance counselor and contain anecdotal information about each student regarding personal and educational issues, interventions and progress. In other words they consist of observations or short stories about an event involving a particular person. If the State Board had intended such anecdotal information to constitute memory aids not for the use of a second party rather than a student record, there would have been no need to impose a requirement of dating and signing the anecdotal information, and subsection (h) would not have been placed in the regulation dealing with general considerations for student records. If these entries were intended by Welty to be merely personal memory aids not for second party review as he contends, it is unexplainable why he would have initialed and dated almost all of them.

Welty's argument is unavailing that these documents were not maintained for the purpose of second party review. The availability of the information contained in these notes for second party review by Welty's guidance counselor successor is important in order to assist him or her to learn the counseling history of a student, consider maintaining continuity of the counseling, and most effectively counsel the students formerly counseled by Welty. The use of this information as student records is consistent with the statutory mandate to create, maintain and retain "...data necessary to provide a thorough and efficient educational system for all pupils." N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19.

Only authorized organizations, agencies or persons shall have access to student records. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.5(a). Individuals with this entitlement are limited to certified school district personnel who have assigned educational responsibility for a student. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.5(e)(4). As the documents in issue are student records and as Welty no longer has assigned educational responsibility for the students who are the subject of the documents, Welty no longer has a right to access these records or to retain custody of them.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 370-12/07

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF THOMAS PITEO, NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS, ADULT DIAGNOSTIC AND TREATMENT CENTER.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter, the proposed stipulation of settlement, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner observes that Section 2 of the stipulation of settlement recites that respondent "shall be suspended for an additional five (5) days without pay. This suspension will begin Monday, March 17, 2008, and will continue through Friday, March 21, 2008." This provision indicates that the parties anticipated that certain conduct would occur on dates preceding consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, provided that the terms set forth in section 2 have been implemented or will be implemented on a date certain which has been agreed upon by the parties. The matter is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Ellen M. Hale, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner New Jersey State Department of Corrections (Anne Milgram, Attorney General, attorney)

Rosemarie Cipparulo, Esq., for respondent Thomas Piteo (Weissman & Mintz, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 2, 2008 Decided: April 2, 2008

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ:

The New Jersey Department of Corrections, Office of Education Services, brings tenure charges against the respondent for conducting conduct unbecoming a teacher as defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11) – Other sufficient cause, Human Resources Bulletin 84-17, as amended, C31 – Violation of the New Jersey Department of Corrections policy prohibiting racial and/or sexual harassment, discrimination and/or retaliation; and Violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) – Conduct unbecoming a public employee, Human Resources Bulletin 84-17, as amended, C-11 - Conduct unbecoming an employee. This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 21, 2007, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was scheduled for a telephone prehearing on January 31, 2008, and a Prehearing Order issued January 17, 2008, outlining the scheduling of discovery and confirming the hearing dates of March 6 and 31, 2008. On February 4, 2008, at the request of the parties, the March 6, 2008, hearing was adjourned in order to complete discovery and an Amended Prehearing Order was issued with extended discovery deadlines.

An in-person settlement conference was scheduled for February 13, 2008. By letter dated February 11, 2008, counsel for respondent advised that the matter had been settled and the parties were working out the settlement language, and the settlement conference was adjourned. On March 28, 2008, the parties faxed an executed settlement agreement indicating the terms of the settlement, and provided an original copy of the settlement agreement on April 2, 2008, which is attached.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the parties' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The New Jersey Department of Corrections ("NJDOC" or "Department"), Adult Diagnostic Treatment Center, which is located in Avenel, New Jersey, represented by ANNE MILGRAM, Attorney General of New Jersey, Ellen M. Hale, Deputy Attorney General, appearing; and Thomas Piteo, a tenured employee of the NJDOC represented by Rosemarie Cipparulo, Esq., appearing; by way of this Stipulation of Settlement say:

WHEREAS, the NJDOC initiated the filing of tenure charges against Mr. Piteo, having filed the charges with the Commissioner of Education on or about November 16, 2007; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Piteo was charged with Conduct Unbecoming a Teacher as defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) 11 Other sufficient cause, Human Resources Bulletin 84-17, as amended, C31-Violation of New Jersey Department of Corrections policy prohibiting racial and or sexual harassment, discrimination and or retaliation and violation of N.J.A.C. 4a:2-2.3 (a)6 - Conduct unbecoming a public employee; and

WHEREAS, the tenure charges alleged that on March 16, 2007, Thomas Piteo, a Teacher I within the New Jersey Department of Corrections, violated the Policy Prohibiting Discrimination, Harassment and Hostile Environments in the Workplace ("Policy") when he sent an electronic mail containing an offensive joke to another Department staff member;

WHEREAS, the Department claims that this was the second violation of the Policy;

WHEREAS, the NJDOC sought the suspension of Mr. Piteo for thirty (30) days without pay for the above set of charges;

WHEREAS, Mr. Piteo disputed the charges;

WHEREAS, the matter was initially referred in December 2007 to the Office of Administrative Law for a plenary hearing;

WHEREAS, a hearing has been scheduled for March 31, 2008;

WHEREAS, Mr. Piteo was suspended with pay from November 8, 2007 to December 10, 2007;

WHEREAS, Mr. Piteo is credited with twenty-five days time served for the violation of the Policy;

WHEREAS, the petitioner has concluded that it may be difficult, time consuming and expensive to prove the tenure charges against Mr. Piteo;

WHEREAS, the parties wish to enter into an amicable resolution of the tenure charges filed against Mr. Piteo;

WHEREAS, Mr. Piteo entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his rights;

WHEREAS, it is in the best interest of the parties and the public to enter into this Stipulation of Settlement. By entering into this settlement agreement, petitioner avoids the excessive costs of litigation; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises contained herein, the parties agree as follows:

1. Mr. Piteo admits the charges and underlying conduct as set forth above. Mr. Piteo admits that this is the second violation of the Policy.
2. As the penalty, Mr. Piteo shall be suspended for an additional five (5) days without pay. This suspension will begin Monday, March 17, 2008, and will continue through Friday, March 21, 2008.
3. This Agreement shall be part of Mr. Piteo's official personnel file and Mr. Piteo's admission of the noted charges and the penalty imposed by way of settlement may be presented and considered in any subsequent disciplinary action against him.
4. Mr. Piteo agrees to attend a sensitivity training program to be scheduled by the Department.

5. This Agreement constitutes a final and complete resolution of the tenure charges in this matter and fully disposes of all issues in controversy between the parties hereto. Mr. Piteo agrees not to appeal the terms of this Agreement in any administrative, arbitral or judicial forum.

6. Settlement of this matter is justified and in the public interest because it imposes the desired discipline without the need for a contested tenure hearing. The reduction in penalty from a thirty day suspension to twenty-five days credit for time served, with the remaining five day suspension to be without pay is equitable in exchange for eliminating the expense, time and uncertainty connected with a contested tenure hearing.

7. Appellant is aware and acknowledges that the Department of Corrections' policies require petitioner to move for tenure charges seeking Mr. Piteo's removal for a third violation of its Equal Employment Division policy.

8. This Agreement shall only become effective when the Commissioner of Education approves it. Any disapproval by the Commissioner shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue this matter further.

This Agreement is made in good faith. The parties have read the Agreement and freely and voluntarily agree to its provisions.

Record Closed: April 1, 2008 Decided: April 1, 2008

BEFORE JOHN R. TASSINI, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Donald Swinchoski, a tenured teacher in the school system operated by respondent Rumson-Fair Haven High School Board of Education (BOE) claimed that the BOE wrongfully withheld his employment and adjustment increments. The BOE denied any wrongdoing. See N.J.S.A. 10:4-6 to -21, N.J.S.A. 18A:4-12 N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-4.1. See also Rice v. Union County Reg'l High School Bd. of Ed., 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977), cert. den., 76 N.J. 238 (1978). As shown by the attached settlement agreement, the parties have settled their differences.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 27, 2007, the petition was filed with the Department of Education's Bureau of Controversies and Disputes and, on August 1, 2007, the BOE's answers were so filed. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The Department transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on August 15, 2007. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b). The Settlement Agreement with the BOE's attorney's signature and certification was submitted on March 19, 2008 and, on April 1, 2008, the attorneys and I conferred to confirm that the Settlement Agreement's paragraph four refers to memoranda that are personnel records (related to performance) and the record was closed on that date.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The parties understood the settlement agreement and the parties voluntarily entered in to it.

2. The settlement agreement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

The case involves substantial issues of fact. The settlement agreement avoids the time and expense of full hearing and further litigation. The settlement agreement's terms are reasonable.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The settlement agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and should be approved.

ORDER

I ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement agreement and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. November 27, 2007 memorandum from Superintendent Peter J. Righi.

INITIAL DECISION

DISMISSAL

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 01614-07
AGENCY DKT. NO. 3-1/07

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DARREN MCCRIMMON, HILLSIDE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Thomas O. Johnston, Esq., for petitioner (Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, attorneys)

Gregory T. Syrek, Esq., for respondent (Bucceri and Pincus, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 7, 2008 Decided: April 9, 2008

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

This matter involves tenure charges of insubordination and conduct unbecoming certified by the School District of Hillside (District) against Darren McCrimmon (McCrimmon) under the Tenure Employees' Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 to -18.1.

McCrimmon is a tenured custodian employed by the District. The District accused McCrimmon of repeatedly and willfully failing to perform the duties specified in the custodian job description, despite written warnings and directives from supervisors and for trespassing on school property while out on workers compensation and allowing non-district individuals access into the gymnasium without authority. He was also accused and charged with alleged sexual harassment of a fellow custodian.

On December 21, 2006, the District filed its written charges with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner). Subsequently, the matter was referred by the Commissioner to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on January 19, 2007 for a hearing as a contested case.

After numerous discussions pertaining to the OAL matter, the parties have agreed and have prepared a Stipulation of Dismissal indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein, as well as the Board minutes approving the dismissal.

In accordance with the decision of the State Board of Education in In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 [1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846] and as codified by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, the record of any proposed settlement must include:

> . . . the nature of the charges, the length of the teacher's employment, circumstances justifying the settlement, consent or authorization by the Board of Education and the teacher to the proposed agreement, the administrative law judge's finding that the teacher entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his or her rights and [a finding] that the agreement is consistent with the public interests.

Based upon my review of the record, I FIND that the proposed settlement is consistent with the public interests for the following reasons:

1. McCrimmon has been employed as a custodian in the Hillside school system since May 1998.
2. The nature of the charges has been documented by the submission of a Statement of Charges and Certificate of Determination.
3. It is anticipated that the hearing in this matter would be protracted and costly.
4. If a hearing becomes necessary, the District has identified school personnel who are potential witnesses.
5. Litigation of the charges would lead to the disruption of the District's educational program due to the great amount of time lost by administrators and other personnel who would be required to testify to the incidence which led to the filing of the tenure charges against an employee who has forfeited his custodial position and who is barred from obtaining public employment in the future.

6. Under the proposed settlement, McCrimmon has submitted his resignation effective upon the date of approval of the Commissioner. McCrimmon has been paid the equivalent of four months wages, less any monies paid him following service of tenure charges.

7. Under the best of circumstances, the hearing needs to be conducted and then the administrative law judge would have forty-five days to prepare an initial decision and the Commissioner would have an additional forty-five days for review and issuance of a final decision.

8. If the tenure matter proceeds to hearing, both parties would incur costs of paying their attorneys for a likely lengthy hearing.

9. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the terms of settlement are in the public interest.

It is ORDERED that the parties comply with the terms of settlement and that these proceedings are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

STIPULATION OF DISMISSAL

This Stipulation of Dismissal ("Stipulation") is made and entered into, pursuant to, and in accordance with, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, by and between counsel for the HILLSIDE BOARD OF EDUCATION (hereinafter "the Board") and DARREN McCRIMMON (hereinafter "Mr. McCrimmon"), for full settlement of all claims that could have been alleged in the above tenure proceedings.

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Board operates the Hillside Public School District; and

WHEREAS, Mr. McCrimmon had been employed by the Board since May 1998 as a custodian; and

WHEREAS, on October 24, 2006, Mr. McCrimmon was suspended with pay; and

WHEREAS, McCrimmon's increment was withheld for the 2005-2006 school year; and

WHEREAS, on December 4, 2006, Tenure Charges (the "Charges") were filed with the Board, against Mr. McCrimmon, as a result of Mr. McCrimmon's alleged actions. (A true and correct copy of the Charges is attached hereto as Exhibit A and incorporated herein by reference.); and

WHEREAS, at its December 21, 2006 Board meeting, the Charges were certified to the Commissioner of Education (the "Commissioner") and Mr. McCrimmon was suspended without pay; and

WHEREAS, on January 19, 2007, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, the Commissioner referred the Charges (Agency Docket No.: 3-1/07) to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL"); and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing and for other good and valuable consideration, including that which is in the public interest, it is hereby agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

1. Mr. McCrimmon shall tender his resignation, effective the date it is approved by the Board and the Commissioner of Education.

2. The Board agrees to withdraw the Charges that are currently pending before the Honorable Honorable Joann LaSala Candido, A.L.J., OAL Docket No.: EDU 01614-2007N, as Mr. McCrimmon's resignation renders the tenure charges moot.

3. The Board agrees to pay Mr. McCrimmon the amount equivalent to his wages for four (4) months, less any monies paid him following service on him of tenure charges. This payment will have the appropriate tax withheld in the normal course.

4. The parties agree that the resolution of this matter upon the terms set forth herein is both in their interests and in the public interest for the following reasons:

a. to avoid disruption of the school district and, possibly, other districts currently employing individuals who would be called upon to testify in these proceedings; and

b. to avoid a lengthy, expensive hearing on the charges and any possible appeals; and

c. to avoid the expenditure of additional public funds to pursue charges against an employee who has forfeited his present employment position with the Board and who is barred from obtaining public employment in the future.

The New Jersey Department of Corrections ("NJDOC" or "Department"), East Jersey State Prison, which is located at Lock Bag R, Rahway, New Jersey 07065, represented by ANNE MILGRAM, Attorney General of New Jersey, Ellen M. Hale, Deputy Attorney General, appearing; and Kenneth Landau, a tenured employee of the NJDOC represented by Rosemarie Cipparulo, Esq., appearing; by way of this Stipulation of Settlement say:

WHEREAS, the NJDOC initiated the filing of tenure charges against Mr. Landau, having filed the charges with the Commissioner of Education on or about October 31, 2007;

WHEREAS, Mr. Landau was charged with Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee;

WHEREAS, the tenure charges alleged that on September 21, 2007, Kenneth Landau, a Teacher I within the New Jersey Department of Corrections, was charged in Elizabeth, New Jersey, with unlawful possession of an antique handgun in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-5B;

WHEREAS, the NJDOC sought the dismissal of Mr. Landau on the above set of charges;

WHEREAS, Mr. Landau disputed the charges;

WHEREAS, the matter was initially referred in January 2007 to the Office of Administrative Law for a plenary hearing; and

WHEREAS, no hearing has yet been scheduled;

WHEREAS, on December 12, 2007, Mr. Landau entered into a Pre-Trial Intervention Program (PTI), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:43-12 (see also New Jersey Court Rule 3:27-2) for the above-referenced criminal charges for unlawful possession of a handgun. The PTI term is for twelve months beginning on December 12, 2007, and if successfully completed will terminate on December 11, 2008; and

WHEREAS, the petitioner has concluded that, it may be difficult, time consuming and expensive to prove the tenure charges against Mr. Landau. Based upon the evidence presented, petitioner will have difficulty proving Mr. Landau knowingly possessed the handgun in his luggage when he attempted to board a flight at the Newark International Airport to attend his father's funeral in Florida;

WHEREAS, the parties wish to enter into an amicable resolution of the tenure charges filed against Mr. Landau;

WHEREAS, Mr. Landau entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his rights;

WHEREAS, it is in the best interest of the parties and the public to enter into this Stipulation of Settlement. By entering into this settlement agreement, petitioner avoids the excessive costs of litigation. Additionally, petitioner agrees that upon successful completion of PTI, Mr. Landau, who has been employed for twenty-two years, eight months with the petitioner, with no prior record of any disciplinary charges, may resume his duties and functions of his position as Teacher I; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises contained herein, the parties agree as follows:

1. Mr. Landau admits the charge of Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee and Other Just Cause, specifically, as it relates to his unintentional unlawful possession of a handgun at the Newark International Airport.

2. As the penalty, Mr. Landau shall be suspended without pay until he successfully completes the PTI term and provides proof of dismissal of the indictment. This suspension will begin Monday, February 18, 2008, and will end upon Mr. Landau providing a court order from the New Jersey Superior Court, Union County, demonstrating successful completion of the PTI term and dismissal of the indictment with prejudice.

3. This Agreement shall be part of Mr. Landau's official personnel file and Mr. Landau's admission of the noted charge and the penalty imposed by way of settlement may be presented and considered in any subsequent disciplinary action against him.

4. If Mr. Landau attempts to obtain employment during the suspension period, he must submit his request for secondary employment to the Ethics Liaison for approval. Mr. Landau cannot take part in any secondary employment until it has been approved by the Ethics Liaison.

5. If Mr. Landau fails to successfully complete the PTI program and obtain dismissal of the indictment with prejudice, he will immediately resign, retire or be terminated from his position as Teacher I. If Mr. Landau fails to successfully complete the PTI program and obtain a dismissal of the indictment with prejudice, the petitioner will report the misconduct alleged in the tenure charges to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6-11-3.5;

6. This Agreement constitutes a final and complete resolution of the tenure charges in this matter and fully disposes of all issues in controversy between the parties hereto. Mr. Landau agrees not to appeal the terms of this Agreement in any administrative, arbitral or judicial forum.

7. Settlement of this matter is justified and in the public interest because it imposes the desired discipline without the need for a contested tenure hearing. The reduction in penalty from removal to a suspension without pay for the proscribed period is equitable in exchange for eliminating the expense, time and uncertainty connected with a contested tenure hearing.

8. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any other matter involving Mr. Landau or any other employee.

9. This Agreement shall only become effective when the Commissioner of Education approves it. Any disapproval by the Commissioner shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue this matter further.

This Agreement is made in good faith. The parties have read the Agreement and freely and voluntarily agree to its provisions.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 381-12/07

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE OF GUSTAVO MARTINEZ, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF UNION CITY, HUDSON COUNTY.

Susan Lavelle, Esq., for Petitioner School District of Union City

Tomas Espinosa, Esq., for Respondent Gustavo Martinez

Record Closed: March 28, 2008 Decided: April 7, 2008

BEFORE MARIA MANCINI LA FIANDRA, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") from the Department of Education on February 8, 2008, for hearing as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A hearing was scheduled at the OAL, 33 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey. Prior to the hearing, settlement discussions were held and a settlement was reached.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Stipulation of Settlement and Release indicating the terms thereof. The Superintendent is the signatory on behalf of the and the Board has passed a resolution approving the settlement, both are attached hereto and fully incorporated herein as part of this decision.

In cases where, as here, tenure charges have been certified to the Commissioner, such charges may only be withdrawn or settled with the Commissioner's approval and, pursuant to regulation, the proposed settlement or withdrawal must address specific standards as established by the State Board of Education in the matter entitled In re Cardonick, State Board decision, April 6, 1983 (1996 School Law Decisions, 842, 846). N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6.

Those standards require that the proposal be accompanied by documentation as to the nature of the charges. In this case, Respondent who is employed and tenured as a school custodian, is charged with excessive absences and conduct unbecoming a public school employee which was predicated on charges of submitting time sheets for overtime he could not have worked, leaving work early without permission, and absence without permission. In addition, he has been found to be highly intoxicated on duty and he has been admitted to inpatient rehabilitation programs several times. Moreover, the charges are set forth in full in the Statement of Charges and Evidence which were transmitted to this Court by the Commissioner; these, too, are incorporated herein and made a part hereof as if set forth in full.

I FIND, therefore, the first requirement of the regulation has been satisfied.

Second, the regulation requires the circumstances justifying settlement or withdrawal be explained. In this case, the Board's attorney has set forth the circumstances of the case which, the Board feels, justify settlement. I hereby incorporate page two, paragraph two of the letter of March 27, 2008, as if set forth in full.

The consent of the parties, the indication that the charged party entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his rights are indicated by and in the written statement.[i]

Accordingly, I FIND the settlement agreement meets the standard as established by the State Board of Education and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF THE RED BANK CHARTER SCHOOL, MONMOUTH COUNTY,[1]	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners sought to invalidate a settlement that resolved lawsuits filed against the Red Bank Charter School (RBCS) by two creditors to recover monies owed in connection with the construction and renovation of RBCS's school facility, projects undertaken by the Red Bank Charter School Foundation (Foundation). Petitioners contended that the settlement effectively ratified a series of unauthorized actions on the part of former board trustees who acted on behalf of the separate Foundation, and that settlement will result in expenditure of funds in violation of school law. Petitioners filed a motion for emergent relief which was denied by the ALJ, who found no likelihood of success on the merits.

The ALJ found that: the salient facts and applicable law were outlined in his prior order denying emergent relief; the petition lacks merit, as boards of education enjoy wide discretion in the conduct of school affairs and the settlement at issue here falls well within that exercise; the RBCS Board of Trustees entered into the settlement on the advice of counsel that they had only poor defenses against the creditors' claims; the Board's decision to settle was not arbitrary or capricious. The ALJ ordered that the petition be dismissed.

The Assistant Commissioner, to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34, concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL with supplementation. The Assistant Commissioner found that: the respondent Board acted reasonably in voting to approve the settlement under the totality of the circumstances presented; the Foundation was never truly independent of the RBCS – having been created for the sole purpose of providing RBCS with a school building and financial assistance – and RBSC was subsequently responsible for the liabilities of the Foundation. The petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioners wish to undo a settlement reached between the respondent Board of Trustees of the Red Bank Charter School (RBCS or the Board), and Patock Construction Corp. (Patock), and Short-Term Money LLC (Short-Term), to resolve two lawsuits filed by the aforesaid companies to recover monies owed in connection with the construction and renovation of premises used as RBCS's school facility.[2] Both parties requested summary disposition of the matter.[3]

The material facts of this case do not appear to be disputed. The Assistant Commissioner, to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34, has relied, in particular, upon facts presented 1) in an affidavit by Bruce Whitaker, current president of the RBCS Board of Trustees (Whitaker Affidavit), and 2) in various exhibits annexed to the

[1] The New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Charter Schools was originally a named respondent but has been dismissed by agreement of the parties.

[2] An emergent application that had been filed with the petition was denied by way of a November 20, 2007 order of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), which order was adopted by the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on December 18, 2007.

petition, including the May 6, 2005 report of a compliance investigation conducted by the New Jersey State Department of Education (Exhibit I to the petition).

From these facts it is apparent that in 2000, a foundation was created (the Foundation) for the purpose of financing, purchasing and renovating a facility to be used as the Red Bank Charter School. In 2003, the Foundation received a loan from the New Jersey Economic Development Authority (NJEDA) and purchased property at 58 Oakland Street in Red Bank (58 Oakland). In September 2003, the Foundation entered into a contract in the amount of $1,853,000 with Patock to perform renovations at 58 Oakland. In so doing, the Foundation did not observe the laws designating procedures to be followed when public entities contract for services. No resolutions approving the property purchase, the NJEDA loan, or the contract with Patock were passed by the respondent board of trustees of RBCS.

In January 2004, the president of the Board of Trustees signed documents on behalf of the RBCS in connection with the transfer to RBCS of the title to 58 Oakland and the liability for the NJEDA loan. The Foundation monitored the renovation project and, during the Spring of 2004, paid Patock over $1,200,000. However, the Foundation purportedly requested more work – in the amount of $453,495. The RBCS Board of Trustees did not formally approve this change order.

In May or June of 2004, the RBCS students were moved into the renovated 58 Oakland. At about the same time, the Foundation borrowed $600,000 from Short-Term and paid same to Patock. A few months later, in August 2004, the Foundation sought to borrow an additional $200,000 from Short-Term. In exchange, Short-Term asked for a second mortgage on 58 Oakland and an agreement that RBCS would assume the debt if the Foundation defaulted. The president of the RBCS Board of Trustees signed such an agreement, although the Board never formally approved same.

The Foundation was apparently attempting to secure another loan from Commerce Bank in October 2004. Representatives from Patock and Short-Term, whom the Foundation then collectively owed over $1,300,000, appeared before the respondent Board to urge them to vote to approve the use of 58 Oakland as collateral for such a loan. In December 2004, after hiring special counsel, the Board formally approved the terms of the Commerce Bank loan.

In January 2005, the Office of Compliance Investigation of the New Jersey State Department of Education (OCI) was asked to review RBCS's records. Its findings in March of 2005 included a determination that 1) the Foundation and RBCS were not separate entities,[4] 2) the Foundation incurred debt disproportionate to the value of the property it purchased and renovated, 3) the Foundation expected RBCS to take responsibility for debt that the trustees did not approve, and 4) the Foundation ignored public bidding laws. The OCI also noted that the former president of the board of trustees took actions independent of the rest of the Board.

A large penalty was imposed upon RBCS for the foregoing improprieties, and later reduced in a settlement with the RBCS. In addition, the OCI directed that RBCS implement procedures to limit debt, ensure that no debt or expenditures be incurred without board approval, and ensure that the Board be advised of all actions taken by the Foundation. The membership of the RBCS Board of Trustees subsequently changed and, by August 2005, all of the Foundation's board members had resigned.

In or about August 2005, Patock filed an action for the balance on its contract (and change order). RBCS's initial motion to be dismissed as a non-party to the contract between Patock and the Foundation was denied. Further, the judge who oversaw the pretrial mediation advised RBCS that its defenses to the litigation were weak. Short-Term filed a similar action against RBCS in April 2006.

[4] For instance, the Foundation's articles of incorporation and bylaws indicate that the sole 'member' of the Foundation was the RBCS; the RBCS trustees voted for the Foundation trustees; the RBCS trustees were responsible for approving and monitoring the Foundation's operating and capital budgets and approving the Foundation's strategic, business and/or long-term plans; and any amendments to the Foundation's bylaws and articles of incorporation had to be approved by the RBCS trustees.

After extensive consultation with counsel, the respondent Board voted to settle the two lawsuits by accepting responsibility for the outstanding debt owed to Patock and Short-Term. The Whitaker Affidavit recites that the trustees knew that RBCS's case was weak, and were concerned about the possibility that judgment creditors could possibly compel the sale of 58 Oakland. Whitaker also explained that the trustees were aware of resentment from several of the school's benefactors, who were unhappy with RBCS's handling of the Patock and Short-Term claims. Loss of benefactor support was a serious concern.

Settling the lawsuits clearly saved further costs of litigation and, just as importantly, the plaintiffs agreed to relieve RBCS from paying a prodigious amount of interest on its debts if it managed to pay the principal within a year. Further, approval of the settlement enabled RBCS to initiate discussions with Commerce Bank to refinance the first mortgage on 58 Oakland to absorb the settlement debt and allow for manageable long term payment of same.

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that petitioners had failed to meet their high burden to show that respondents had abused their discretion in approving the above referenced settlement. First, he pointed out that boards of education – including boards of trustees for charter schools - enjoy wide discretion in the conduct of school affairs. The Assistant Commissioner notes that N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2 specifically bestows upon such boards the authority to sue and be sued, and the ancillary power to settle litigation.

Further, when an administrative agency acts within its authority, its decision is entitled to a presumption of correctness and will not be upset unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Morris Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327 (App. Div. 1965); Kopera v. West Orange Bd. Of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960). No such showing may be harvested from the facts of this case. The respondent Board settled claims against which they had only poor defenses, according to their lawyers and a mediating judge. In so doing, they avoided further litigation costs, were forgiven a significant amount of interest payments, kept judgment creditors away and won back former benefactors. Such action was neither arbitrary nor unreasonable.

The petitioners urge, by way of contrast, that RBCS need not take responsibility for the illegal or ultra vires acts of the Foundation and the former president of RBCS' Board of Trustees. The ALJ aptly addressed this argument on pages 3-4 of his November 20, 2007 order denying emergent relief:

> The Trustees do not deny that prior arrangements with the Foundation were problematic. The Department's Office of Charter Schools has already made this finding, imposed penalties, and directed corrective action . . . .
>
> . . . .
>
> Petitioners characterize the Trustees' action as ratification [of prior ultra vires acts] and then rely on principles that forbid governmental units from embracing illegal or ultra vires conduct, to conclude that the Board may not settle the Patock/Short-Term Money claims. Yet, the matter does not rest alone on prior errors and misdeeds, but on the totality of circumstances before the trustees now. . . .
> (Emphasis added)

As the OCI found, the Foundation was never truly independent of the RBCS and was, in fact, created for the sole purpose of providing RBCS with a school building and financial assistance. In such situations the corporate veil will be pierced and the 'parent' corporation will be held responsible for the liabilities of the 'subsidiary.' See, e.g. OTR Associates v. IBC Services, Inc., 353 N.J. Super. 48 (App. Div. 2002) (the basic finding that must be made to enable the court to pierce the corporate veil is "that the parent so dominated the subsidiary that it had no separate existence but was merely a conduit for the parent," citing State, Dep't. of Envtl. Prot. v. Ventron Corp., 94 N.J. 473, 501 (1983)).

Further, RBCS was the beneficiary of the work that was requested of Patock, and the money that was borrowed from Short-Term. Neither law nor equity will countenance a recovery that would result in unjust enrichment. Empire Box Corp. v. Delaware, L. & W. R. Co., 171 F. 2d 389, 390 (2d. Cir. 1948). See, also, Donnelly v. Capodici, 227 N.J. Super. 310, 313, (Ch. Div. 1987).

It is within the Commissioner's jurisdiction to find that the Board of the RBCS acted reasonably in voting to approve the settlement of the Patock and Short-Term lawsuits – under the totality of the circumstances set forth above – and the Assistant Commissioner sees no need to revisit the RBCS' former violations of school law, as those violations have been addressed by the Department of Education's OCI.[5] Accordingly, the Assistant Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision of the OAL and dismisses the petition.

Record Closed: January 18, 2008 Decided: February 15, 2008

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of a petition filed with the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The file was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23. The matter has been submitted on cross-motions for summary decision, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5; Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995).

The salient facts and applicable law were outlined in a prior order dated November 20, 2007 denying emergent relief; the Commissioner reviewed and approved the order. That discussion is incorporated herein by reference. In brief summary petitioners wish to undo a settlement reached between Red Bank Charter School, Paddock Construction Corp., and Short-term Money LLC to resolve a lawsuit filed in the Superior Court, Monmouth County. In denying petitioners emergent relief application I found no likelihood of success on the merits and now find that the petition lacks merit. Boards of Education enjoy wide discretion in the conduct of school affairs and the settlement falls well within that exercise, Thomas v. Morris Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327 (App. Div. 1965); Kopera v. West Orange Bd. Of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960).

The Trustees' have also added a few arguments. They maintain that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to hear this matter. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 only authorizes the Commissioner to hear cases "arising under the school laws," and the lawsuit between the parties to the Superior Court action was contractual. Moreover, to the extent that petitioners seek to have the Commissioner intercede because they suspect criminal wrongdoing their complaints are more properly brought to the Attorney General. The Trustees' argue also that if petitioners wanted to invalidate this settlement they should have intervened in the Superior Court where Paddock and Short-Term Money might have had an opportunity to respond.

These are interesting propositions, but the Trustees' pursue them without vigor; no cases are cited. It is sufficient therefore to deny petitioners' claims for the reasons previously expressed; on the advice of counsel the Trustees' settled claims for which they had only poor defenses. Petitioners differ with that advice, but it was not arbitrary for the Trustees to take it.

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the petition of appeal be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning private school for students with disabilities appealed the Department's December 15, 2006 revocation – based on the lack of a facility meeting applicable health and safety standards – of its approval to operate effective December 31, 2006, contending that the Department failed to follow proper procedures, made unreasonable demands, and denied it due process.

The ALJ recommended reversal of the Department's action, finding that the Department did not give petitioner appropriate notice of deficiencies or reasonable opportunity to address them before revoking petitioner's approval.

The Commissioner rejected the ALJ's decision, finding that the Department's action to revoke petitioner's approval was fully warranted under the circumstances and effectuated in accord with applicable law. The Commissioner noted that petitioner was on notice at least as early as October 4, 2006 that – as a direct result of its unilateral expansion beyond approved capacity – its facility was insufficient for enrollment levels and not in compliance with applicable health and safety rules; moreover, as of December 15, 2006, petitioner still could not represent, in response to the Department's December 6, 2006 request, that its students would – by the end of the year or any date certain immediately thereafter – be assured of a safe, educationally appropriate school site. Opining that the Department would have failed in its own obligations had it not acted as it did, the Commissioner upheld the Department's revocation and dismissed petitioner's appeal.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

ALL CAN EXCEL (A.C.E.) ACADEMY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF SPECIAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the Department of Education (Department) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. Petitioner did not reply to the Department's exceptions.

On exception, the Department first asserts that – contrary to the conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – it was not required to follow the monitoring/investigation procedures set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:14-9.1 et seq. (Subchapter 9) before exercising its authority to revoke petitioner's approval pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)3. According to the Department, Subchapter 9 flows from the federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA) and its purpose is to monitor local compliance with the IDEA so as to ensure that eligible students are provided with a free, appropriate public education in the least restrictive environment, whereas N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)3 flows from the Department's statutory authority to effectuate the school laws of the State and specifically empowers the Department to act immediately against any private school for students with disabilities where it has been documented that the health, safety or welfare of students is at risk. Thus, the Department contends, compliance with the procedural requirements of Subchapter 9 cannot be viewed as a precondition to action taken under the authority of the complementary but distinct provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)3. (Department's Exceptions at 1-5)

The Department further contends that the ALJ erred in concluding that petitioner was not given an opportunity to correct deficiencies and was lulled into a false sense of security before having its approval revoked. To the contrary, the Department asserts, each of the allegedly "surprise" deficiencies cited by the Department in its December 6, 2006 memorandum was either already known to petitioner through prior discussions with Department staff – during which petitioner was clearly apprised of the need to ensure that its facility situation was addressed – or a violation of established regulations with which petitioner had an ongoing, independent obligation to comply. A finding that revocation could not be imposed under these circumstances, according to the Department, would effectively insulate noncompliant private schools from prompt Departmental intervention and remove any incentive for diligence in conforming their practices to rule. (Department's Exceptions at 5-8)

The Department next proffers that the ALJ's conclusions were based – substantially as a result of looking beyond the facts as they existed at the time of the Department's action – on the erroneous assumption that extension of petitioner's lease was a viable option, so as to permit its continued operation at 71 Sanford Street until a new facility was ready. According to the Department, the ALJ's own fact-finding established that, on the date of the Department's determination: 1) 71 Sanford Street lacked proper approvals as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.4(b), including a Certificate of Occupancy and fire approvals for the second floor notwithstanding that such space had been used for student instruction since at least October 2006; 2) the facility was significantly overcrowded as a result of petitioner – without the Department's prior knowledge or approval – having unilaterally expanded its enrollment beyond the building's lawful capacity, to the point where students were seen to be cramped and endangered during a Department site visit, with no other location authorized as an additional school site; and 3) petitioner's lease was due to expire in approximately 15 days (on December 31, 2006), with petitioner still unable to guarantee that an adequate site would be available for students upon their return from winter break on January 2. Under the totality of these circumstances, the Department avers, it was compelled to act decisively so that the school's student population would not be abruptly displaced and sending districts would have adequate time to make alternative arrangements for their students' education consistent with required procedural safeguards. (Department's Exceptions at 9-14)

Finally, the Department contends this matter is now moot, since the relief sought by petitioner – reversal of the Department's determination to revoke its approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities at 71 Sanford Street – cannot be granted. To the extent that petitioner no longer occupies the site on which the approval in question was based, the Department asserts, reversal would be meaningless because any private school for students with disabilities that seeks to expand by opening an additional location must apply for approval as a new private school. Indeed, the Department observes, on March 15, 2007, it expressly notified petitioner of its eligibility to apply for approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities at 760 Clinton Avenue, since the necessary site approvals had at that point been acquired; however, no application had been submitted as of the date of the hearing in this matter. (Department's Exceptions at 14-16)

Upon review, the Commissioner is unpersuaded by petitioner's arguments and cannot concur with the ALJ that the December 15, 2006 revocation of petitioner's status as an approved private school for students with disabilities was unfair or unwarranted. On the contrary, the Commissioner finds the Department's action to have been fully justified under the circumstances, as well as undertaken in a manner consistent with applicable law.

Petitioner has attempted to portray itself during this proceeding as an unsuspecting victim of heavy-handed State officials who acted in flagrant disregard of its rights – denying it any semblance of due process, depriving it of any reasonable opportunity to cure "alleged" deficiencies before being foreclosed from continued operation, and perhaps even targeting it for undisclosed reasons. However, the disobliging facts – as found by the ALJ and not materially disputed by petitioner – are as follows: Upon the Department's October 4, 2006 inquiry – precipitated by information that a serious violation was occurring at petitioner's school – petitioner was confirmed to have enrolled students far in excess of the maximum number allowed, and to have addressed the resulting overcrowding in its approved facility by transporting students in private vehicles to a second, unapproved facility. On subsequent site visits conducted on October 5 and November 1-2, 2006 – although students were no longer being transported to the second facility – Department officials found them crammed into undersized second-floor rooms unapproved for student instruction, observed a number of plainly visible safety hazards, and discovered that petitioner had failed to maintain local fire and building approvals as clearly required by regulation. Moreover, petitioner had indicated that the lease on its sole approved facility – which by that point had itself been rendered inadequate by petitioner's unapproved, unilateral expansion in enrollment – was expiring on December 31, 2006, and petitioner was able neither to identify an acceptable alternative site nor to offer anything more than hopeful speculation – belied by the physical evidence as it then existed, as well as the pace at which work had previously progressed – that the building into which it was planning to move would be ready for student occupation in January 2007.[1] (Initial Decision at 4-16) Thus, regardless of whether petitioner and its landlord might have agreed between themselves to month-by-month extension of petitioner's lease beyond December 31, 2006, petitioner's then-current facility was clearly inadequate for the number of students enrolled – and had been since at least October 4, 2006 – and petitioner could offer no imminent date certain for availability of an approvable alternate location.[2]

The Commissioner similarly rejects petitioner's argument that the Department denied it due process and gave it no reasonable opportunity to correct deficiencies. Initially, the Commissioner fully concurs with the Department that Subchapter 9 and N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)3 represent two complementary but distinct processes, and that the latter clearly (and appropriately) authorizes the Department to act without observing the procedural requirements of the former in situations where student health and safety are at risk. Moreover, petitioner was on notice as early as October 4, 2006 – upon the Department's confirmation that petitioner had enrolled students beyond its approved capacity and was impermissibly transporting "overflow" students to a separate, unapproved site – that it needed a contingency plan in the event it was unable to carry out its planned move to a larger facility by the end of the year;[3] petitioner surely could not have expected that the Department would allow it to continue using its current, now-inadequate facility indefinitely while it proceeded in due course with its long-term plan for a wholesale move to new quarters – the timing of which would be determined not by student needs or compliance with regulation, but by petitioner's desire to avoid having to re-apply for approval as a new school pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.3(a), as it would if it opened a second location, rather than simply seek an amendment to its existing approval pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.3(a)2, as it could if it merely relocated.[4] Finally, while petitioner might well have been able to address many – or even most – of the "minor" violations identified during the Department's November 2, 2006 site inspection of 71 Sanford Street had it been provided with the ensuing evaluation report (Exhibit J-8), it is beyond comprehension that petitioner would believe it needed a specific directive from the Department before it was required to rectify obvious hazards and inadequacies and ensure that the fire and safety approvals required by rule were, in fact, in its possession; more importantly, the referenced "easy fixes" would still not have resulted in petitioner's current facility being adequate for the number of students enrolled, so that the fundamental obstacle to petitioner's continued operation – and the essential basis for the Department's withdrawal of approval for reasons of student health and safety – would have remained.[5] Under these circumstances, the Commissioner finds particularly disingenuous petitioner's insistence that the Department forced closure upon it by making unreasonable and unrealistic demands. To whatever extent petitioner was "backed into a corner" by the purportedly narrow time frame within which it was required to present the Department with an approvable site, that dilemma was entirely of its own making: the direct result of its unilateral expansion of enrollment beyond approved capacity, together with its failure to clearly understand – and consequently to make diligent efforts to comply with – the standards required before using all or part of a facility as instructional space.[6]

[1] The site was not actually deemed compliant until February 21, 2007. (Initial Decision at 16)

[2] The Commissioner expressly rejects the ALJ's suggestion (Initial Decision at 18) that petitioner could have been allowed simply to "cut" 24 of its 120 students to bring itself back into compliance with capacity requirements until its new facility was ready; such "solution" is tantamount to shifting the consequences for violating regulation from the offending private school to the sending districts and their students.

Similarly, the Commissioner rejects any notion that petitioner could have been lulled into a sense of false security by the Department's December 6, 2006 communication. The memorandum in question (Exhibit J-3) plainly states that extending the lease on 71 Sanford Street beyond December 31, 2006 was not an option in view of the inadequacy of that facility for the number of students enrolled, and that – unless petitioner could identify an alternative facility by December 15, 2006 – sending districts would be notified of the need to arrange other programming for their students, and petitioner would be placed on conditional approval. Thus, petitioner was unequivocally put on notice that, absent identification of an acceptable location by the stated deadline, [6] Indeed, the record shows petitioner to have acted with alacrity in this regard only upon revocation of its approval, despite being clearly obligated by law to maintain proper certificates. Testimony of Shakuur Sabuur, T2 at 131, 179-81; T3 at 26-27, 39-45, 48-53, 100-18. Testimony of John Ferraro, T2 at 75-77, 88. See also Initial Decision at 4, where the ALJ finds it "noteworthy that Dr. Sabuur's testimony did not reflect a clear understanding as to required approvals." (Initial Decision at 4).

it could accept no new students and its approval to operate in any capacity would end on December 31, 2006 – at which time current students who had been allowed to remain in the interim would be removed and re-placed by their sending districts. Petitioner, then, should not have been surprised when – upon expiration of the deadline without its having identified an approvable facility in which to educate students effective January 1, 2007 – the Department deemed it incapable of operating as a private school for the disabled after December 31, 2006 and revoked its approval as of that date pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.19(b)3.[7] That the Department's December 6, 2006 communication did not convey any sense of urgency to petitioner – and, indeed, was actually viewed by it as something of a reprieve[8] – speaks volumes about petitioner's failure to comprehend its own rights and obligations, as well as those of the Department, under laws governing private schools for students with disabilities.

Finally, the Commissioner does not agree with the ALJ that the letter of Lisa Nathari – received by the Department on October 13, 2006 (Exhibit R-1) – effectively initiated, with respect to facility issues, a complaint investigation against petitioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:14-9.2 so as to invoke the procedural requirements of that regulation. (Initial Decision at 21-22). On the contrary, the Commissioner perceives the letter's sole relevance to this matter to be the fact that the phone call preceding it served as the impetus for the Department's unannounced October 4, 2006 site visit to petitioner's premises to ascertain whether students were, as alleged, being transported to an unapproved facility in violation of law – the confirmation of which set into motion the chain of events ultimately leading to the action herein in dispute. Notwithstanding the further issues identified by Ms. Nathari in her letter, the Commissioner finds, as did the ALJ (Initial Decision at 22-23), that the Department did not revoke its approval of petitioner for reasons other than those stated in its memoranda of December 6, 2006 and December 15, 2006 (Exhibits J-3 and J-5) – reasons which, in the Commissioner's view, clearly permitted it to act as it did.

In conclusion, then, the Commissioner determines that – contrary to the conclusion of the ALJ – the Department has met its burden of demonstrating by a preponderance of evidence that its action to revoke petitioner's approval to operate as a private school for students with disabilities was both justified and lawful, and as such must be sustained. In so holding, the Commissioner stresses that the issue in this matter is not whether petitioner was well-intentioned or whether petitioner can now – or could have at some point after the Department's action – operate a school in compliance with regulation;[9] rather, the question is whether the Department's action was warranted under the circumstances and effectuated in accordance with applicable law. It is of no import that, as events transpired, petitioner made diligent efforts toward compliance once its approval was actually revoked, or that one of the alternate sites it had been developing became approvable a little more than two months after the Department's action; the fact remains that, at least as early as October 4, 2006, petitioner – as a result of its own unapproved expansion in enrollment – knowingly lacked a facility complying with applicable health and safety rules, and as of December 15, 2006, still could not demonstrate that its students would, by the end of the year or any date certain immediately thereafter, be assured of the safe, educationally appropriate environment to which they were entitled by law. Faced with this situation, the Department could not have acted other than it did, and, indeed, would have failed in its own obligations had it permitted petitioner to continue operating beyond December 31, 2006.

[9] The record shows that petitioner was eligible to reapply for approval to operate as of February 21, 2007 (Exhibit R-7), but had not done so as of the date of hearing in this matter, despite the Department's March 15, 2007 reminder of such eligibility (Exhibit R-2). The record does not indicate if petitioner applied for approval subsequent to hearing.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed herein, the Initial Decision of the OAL – recommending reversal of the Department's revocation of petitioner's approval as a private school for students with disabilities – is rejected, and the petition of appeal is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[10]

ALL CAN EXCEL (A.C.E.) ACADEMY,

Petitioner,

v.

NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF SPECIAL EDUCATION PROGRAMS,

Respondent.

Ronald C. Hunt, Esq., for petitioner (Hunt, Hamlin & Ridley, attorneys)

Sookie Bae, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent

(Anne Milgram, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: November 1, 2007 Decided: March 13, 2008

BEFORE RICHARD McGILL, ALJ:

All Can Excel (A.C.E.) Academy (petitioner) challenges a determination by the Office of Special Education Programs in the New Jersey Department of Education (respondent) to revoke the approval issued to petitioner to operate a private school for students with disabilities. The Office of Special Education Programs advised petitioner of the revocation by memorandum dated December 15, 2006, and petitioner filed a verified petition along with a request for emergent relief with the Commissioner of Education on January 3, 2007.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on January 8, 2007, for determination as a contested case. A hearing in regard to the application for emergent relief in the form of a stay was conducted on January 11, 2007, at the Office of Administrative Law in Newark, New Jersey. The application for a stay was denied by an Order of a Deputy Commissioner of Education dated January 19, 2007. The plenary hearing was conducted on July 16, 18 and 19, 2007, and the record closed on November 1, 2007, upon receipt of reply briefs.

ISSUES

The main issue in the proceeding is whether respondent has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that revocation of petitioner's approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities is warranted under the circumstances of this case. The reasons for the revocation are set forth in a memorandum dated December 15, 2006, which references a memorandum dated December 6, 2006. The first key point was that petitioner's lease was due to expire on December 31, 2006, with the result that the students would not have a school on January 2, 2007. The second key point was that petitioner's existing facility was unsafe for the provision of educational services to the students. The stated concerns were as follows: (1) there was insufficient educational space for the number of students and staff in the building; (2) petitioner was using two classrooms on the second floor of the building in which the school was located without a certificate of occupancy; and (3) potential fire hazards had been identified in several areas of the school including the second floor. As a result, extension of the lease for the current location was not a viable option.

The third key point was that the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, gave petitioner until December 15, 2006, to propose a new location for the school and obtain all necessary approvals. Further, if petitioner did not have an approved location by the close of business on December 15, 2006, sending districts would be notified of the need to arrange other programming for their students and petitioner would be placed on conditional approval. Finally, as set forth in the memorandum dated December 15, 2006, petitioner failed to obtain a new facility by December 15, 2006, and therefore was incapable of operating as an approved private school for students with disabilities in accordance with applicable regulations. Accordingly, petitioner's approval was revoked as of December 31, 2006.

Petitioner disputes the ultimate factual assertions by respondent. Petitioner maintains first that there was no real possibility that the students would not have a school as of January 2, 2007, because petitioner received an extension on its lease until January 31, 2007, and could have received additional extensions as necessary. Second, with respect to safety concerns, petitioner contends that it would have corrected them promptly if respondent had complied with applicable regulations which required a written report to petitioner identifying any deficiencies. Third, petitioner argues that the terms of the warning letter dated December 6, 2006, were unreasonable in that it was impossible to complete construction and have various agencies conduct inspections and issue approvals within nine days.

Finally, the manner in which respondent handled the situation was fundamentally unfair. First, respondent did not comply with applicable regulations which contain provisions requiring that petitioner be given an opportunity to cure deficiencies. Second, the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, foreclosed the only viable option which was to give petitioner the opportunity to bring its facility at 71 Sanford Street into compliance with its existing approvals, while directing petitioner to do the impossible by finding an approved location in nine days. Third, the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, was unfair in that it warned petitioner only of a conditional approval and lulled petitioner into a false sense of security. In contrast, a warning of a revocation would have created a sense of urgency to correct any deficiencies. Fourth, there is reason to believe that the revocation was imposed for reasons that went beyond those set forth in the memoranda dated December 6, 2006, and December 15, 2006, and that petitioner was not given notice or an opportunity to be heard in regard to those other reasons.

FACTS

Respondent presented the testimony of Elaine Lerner, who is employed by respondent as an Education Program Development Specialist with the Office of Special Education Programs, and John Ferraro, who is employed by respondent as the Essex County School Business Administrator. Dr. Shakuur A. Sabuur is employed by petitioner as its director and principal and testified as its only witness.

It is noteworthy that Dr. Sabuur's testimony did not reflect a clear understanding as to required approvals, but otherwise all witnesses gave credible testimony as to the underlying facts. The factual issues in this case are whether the broader assertions in the memoranda dated December 6, 2006, and December 15, 2006, are true.

Based upon the evidence presented at the hearing, I FIND as follows:

1. In March 1999, petitioner received its initial approval to operate a private school for the disabled serving pupils with behavioral disabilities.

2. In February 2001, petitioner received approval to move its school to the most recent location at 71 Sanford Street in East Orange, New Jersey.

3. On or before October 27, 2006, petitioner received approval to operate eight classes for pupils with disabilities. The physical location for the school was the first floor of the building at 71 Sanford Street in East Orange. The first floor had eight classrooms.

4. Since the maximum number of pupils with disabilities per class is twelve in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:14-4.7(e), the limit for the entire school was ninety-six students.

5. There were five rooms on the second floor, but they were not approved for educational use as of the beginning of the 2006-2007 school year.

6. The students were receiving special education services in an out-of-district placement.

7. Dr. Sabuur planned to expand the school and operate it at two different locations. One location would be for grades K to 6, and the other would be for grades 7 to 12.

8. A building was purchased at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark and was intended to serve grades K to 6.

9. Another building was purchased at 186 South Clinton Street in East Orange and was intended to serve grades 7 to 12.

10. On August 20, 2006, a fire at 71 Sanford Street resulted in smoke and water damage.

11. Initially, the East Orange Fire Department would not allow petitioner's personnel into the building.

12. After petitioner's personnel were allowed into the building, they worked over Labor Day weekend and got the building ready for the opening of school during the first week of September 2006.

13. Petitioner did not notify respondent of the fire and its aftermath.

14. In September 2006, petitioner had approximately 120 pupils.

15. Since there was not sufficient room at 71 Sanford Street, some pupils and staff were transported to the building at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark.

16. The building at 760 Clinton Avenue lacked various required approvals including approval from respondent for use as a school.

17. A fire inspection was conducted on September 19, 2006, at 71 Sanford Street. A report indicates that there was a violation for storage in a front hallway obstructing a means of egress.

18. Petitioner had furniture in a hallway.

19. On September 28, 2006, respondent received a telephone call from Lisa Nathari, who was previously an employee of petitioner's school. Ms. Nathari had been terminated by Dr. Sabuur in or about March 2006.

20. Ms. Nathari stated that students attending All Can Excel Academy had been transported to any unapproved location by individuals using their private vehicles.

21. As a result of the telephone call, an unannounced visit was made to the site at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark by Ms. Lerner, Judith Vasquez from the Office of Special Education Programs and Mark Lanzi, who is the Essex County Child Study Supervisor.

22. The building at 760 Clinton Avenue was not an approved site for a school.

23. There were five staff members instructing twenty-two elementary students. No administrator was present at 760 Clinton Avenue.

24. The team for the site visit then went to 71 Sanford Street, where they asked to speak with the administrator.

25. They were told that Dr. Sabuur was not on site, but he arrived within the hour.

26. Dr. Sabuur said that there was a problem with the number of students and that it was his plan to move the elementary school pupils to another building.

27. Dr. Sabuur took the team to 186 South Clinton Street and gave them a tour of the building. There were some construction workers but no teachers or children.

28. Dr. Sabuur stated that his lease at 71 Sanford Street would expire on December 31, 2006, but that he was confident that the building at 186 South Clinton Street would be ready in time for the move.

29. Ms. Lerner was concerned that the building would not be ready in time, because it was basically a shell, and she advised Dr. Sabuur that he should have a contingency plan.

30. By letter dated October 6, 2006, Roberta Wohle, the Acting Director of Office of Special Education Programs, directed petitioner to immediately cease utilization of 760 Clinton Avenue, because it was not an approved location.

31. Meanwhile, Essex County Business Administrator John Ferraro and Essex County Child Study Supervisor Mark Lanzi visited the second floor of petitioner's facility at 71 Sanford Street on October 5, 2006.

32. Later that day, Essex County Superintendent of Schools Anthony P. Marino sent a letter prepared by Mr. Ferraro to petitioner stating that two of the four rooms on the second floor are appropriate for educational use and that the two other rooms have potential but need renovation.

33. Dr. Sabuur took this letter to mean that petitioner had approval to use the two rooms on the second floor that were determined to be appropriate for educational use.

34. On October 13, 2006, respondent received a five-page letter from Ms. Nathari, detailing multiple concerns related to petitioner.

35. A monitoring team led by Ms. Lerner conducted an unannounced visit to petitioner's facility at 71 Sanford Street on November 1, 2006.

36. All students who were previously at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark were back at the facility at 71 Sanford Street.

37. Dr. Sabuur was present at the time of the visit, but Ms. Lerner did not have any conversation with him about facility issues at that time.

38. Mr. Ferraro visited 71 Sanford Street on November 2, 2006, to inspect the entire facility.

39. Mr. Ferraro completed a checklist with eighty items. For each item, there is a description followed by boxes entitled "Yes," "No" and "N/A." "Yes" indicates compliance, "No" reflects lack of compliance, and "N/A" means "not applicable."

40. For some items, 100 percent compliance is required; for others, eighty percent is satisfactory.

41. Mr. Ferraro found noncompliance with respect to nine items for which 100 percent compliance was required.

42. With respect to the other items, the compliance rate was less than eighty percent.

43. Some of the areas of noncompliance related to fire safety.

44. Mr. Ferraro observed that the school was very crowded, particularly the classrooms on the second floor.

45. The checklist is normally given to the owner of the building to correct the deficiencies.

46. Mr. Ferraro forwarded the checklist to the monitoring team. He did not forward the checklist to the owner for the building or to petitioner.

47. Correction of the deficiencies involved "easy fixes," a characterization to which Mr. Ferraro agreed on cross-examination.

48. Dr. Sabuur had construction workers at 760 Clinton Avenue and 186 South Clinton Street.

49. Workmen could have corrected all of the deficiencies at 71 Sanford Street in a day or two.

50. Petitioner had a certificate of occupancy for the first floor of 71 Sanford Street, but it was not in petitioner's name.

51. On November 2, 2006, petitioner did not have a fire certificate because of furniture in the hallway.

52. During the monitoring visit, Dr. Sabuur stated that he intended to move the school to another location by the beginning of the new year.

53. Dr. Sabuur and Mr. Ferraro drove to 186 South Clinton Street in East Orange.

54. The building was still under construction. There was no sheetrock on the walls, there was an elevator shaft with no elevator, and the stairwells had no steps.

55. Mr. Ferraro did not think that the building would be ready by the beginning of January 2007.

56. By memorandum dated November 21, 2006, to Mr. Ferraro, the monitoring team noted that Dr. Sabuur planned to move the school due to the expiration of the lease on December 31, 2006, that the school would not have an approved alternate site by that time and that students would not have a school program at the beginning of January 2007. The memorandum requested assistance in gathering information related to petitioner's facilities from local officials.

57. The memorandum requested the following: (1) a report from the East Orange building inspector concerning the second floor at 71 Sanford Street; (2) a comprehensive report from the East Orange fire inspector listing items of noncompliance at the site; (3) a status report concerning the facility at 186 South Clinton Street; and (4) inspection reports from the Newark building inspector and fire inspector regarding 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark.

58. Ms. Lerner did not consider the site at 71 Sanford Street to be suitable for continued use for five reasons as follows: (1) petitioner was losing its lease with the result that there was not going to be a building that had received approval available for the students; (2) there were concerns about a fire and with respect to the current fire inspection; (3) tools were found in the facility; (4) the second floor did not have a certificate of occupancy or a fire inspection certificate and had not been approved for use by respondent; and (5) Dr. Sabuur stated that he felt that the current location was not adequate to meet the students' needs.

59. In response to the memorandum dated November 21, 2006, Mr. Ferraro contacted local officials in East Orange and Newark.

60. As of November 27, 2006, the second floor at 71 Sanford Street had not been inspected for issuance of a certificate of occupancy for educational use.

61. A fire inspector from East Orange went back to 71 Sanford Street, but the situation was unchanged with respect to the furniture in the hallway.

62. The work on the building at 186 South Clinton Street was not nearly complete, and the facility would not be ready to serve as an educational site as of January 1, 2007.

63. The building at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark had a certificate of occupancy for business use as a training center and administrative office.

64. Mr. Ferraro forwarded his response to Ms. Lerner.

65. The site at 71 Sanford Street would be suitable for continued educational use, if petitioner corrected the problems.

66. Dr. Sabuur felt that the site was no longer adequate, because he wanted to move to a larger facility.

67. Mr. Ferraro never discussed a lease extension with Dr. Sabuur.

68. Acting Director of the Office of the Special Education Programs Roberta Wohle sent a memorandum dated December 6, 2006, to Dr. Sabuur.

69. The memorandum stated that it had been brought to the Acting Director's attention that petitioner intended to move its school from its approved location at 71 Sanford Street in East Orange by December 31, 2006, to an unspecified location due to expiration of the lease. The memorandum expressed concern that the students would not have a school program on January 2, 2007.

70. The memorandum noted that extending the lease at the current location was not a viable option because several facility concerns had been identified by respondent and the East Orange fire inspector. These concerns included insufficient educational space for the number of students and staff in the building as well as the use of the second floor for which petitioner did not have a certificate of occupancy. Further, potential fire hazards were identified in several areas of the school including the second floor.

71. The memorandum further stated that petitioner must notify the Superintendent of Schools of the proposed relocation to schedule a facility review. The memorandum advised Dr. Sabuur that any proposed building must receive written approval by the county office in which the facility is located before any students may attend the new location.

72. Finally, the memorandum advised Dr. Sabuur that if the school did not have an approved location by the close of business on December 15, 2006, sending districts would be notified of the need to arrange other programming for their students and that petitioner would be placed on conditional approval.

73. In response to this memorandum, Dr. Sabuur sent a letter dated December 11, 2006, to Acting Director Wohle, identifying four sites for inspection including 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark, with a copy to the Essex County Acting Superintendent of Schools.

74. Two of the sites were dismissed by Ms. Lerner, because they were to be used by a charter school which was in its planning year. The buildings were not ready as of December 2006, and as of July 2007, the charter school still did not have all of the approvals for these buildings.

75. As of December 14, 2006, construction work was ongoing at 760 Clinton Avenue, and the building was not ready to open by the next day, December 15, which was the deadline.

76. Ms. Lerner treated the fourth site as withdrawn based on comments by Dr. Sabuur.

77. Mr. Ferraro visited 760 Clinton Avenue on December 14, 2006.

78. Mr. Ferraro had a discussion with Dr. Sabuur, who said that he was getting ready to open both 760 Clinton Avenue and 186 South Clinton Street in January 2007. As of December 14, 2006 both buildings were undergoing renovations.

79. On December 14, 2006, Mr. Ferraro sent a memorandum to Acting Director Wohle. Mr. Ferraro mentioned that petitioner did not have a certificate of occupancy for the second floor or a fire inspection certificate for 71 Sanford Street.

80. Mr. Ferraro listed a variety of other concerns mainly related to fire safety and overcrowding.

81. Late on December 15, 2006, Acting Director Wohle e-mailed a memorandum to Dr. Sabuur. The memorandum stated that as of 4:15 p.m. petitioner still did not have an approved location. As a result, County Offices of Education were being directed to contact each local school district in writing to advise them of the need to arrange alternate placements for their students.

82. The memorandum further stated that petitioner's current facility was determined to be unsafe for the provision of educational services to children. Further, petitioner had failed to obtain a new facility by December 15, 2006, as directed in the memorandum dated December 6, 2006. Since petitioner did not have an approved facility, petitioner's approval was revoked as of December 31, 2006.

83. Meanwhile, Dr. Sabuur did not give up on petitioner's facility at 71 Sanford Street.

84. By letter dated December 15, 2006, petitioner's landlord confirmed an agreement with Dr. Sabuur to extend petitioner's lease to January 31, 2007.

85. By memorandum dated December 18, 2006, the interim Essex County Superintendent of Schools advised school districts that petitioner's approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities was being revoked, because petitioner failed to obtain a new location for its school. As a result, all school districts with students placed with petitioner needed to immediately take all steps necessary to secure an alternative placement for each student.

86. On December 19, 2006, a meeting was held among Senator Ronald Rice, Dr. Sabuur and Interim Essex County Superintendent of Schools Thomas Dowd.

87. At the meeting, Mr. Dowd presented a table identifying areas of critical concern that led to respondent's decision to revoke petitioner's approval.

88. The table contains three columns entitled "Facility," "Program" and "Personnel."

89. The column entitled "Facility" contains sixteen items and generally corresponds to the concerns mentioned above in regard to this proceeding.

90. The columns entitled "Program" and "Personnel" contain fourteen and ten items, respectively. The items in these columns were not mentioned in this proceeding aside from the letter from Ms. Nathari. For example, an item described as "Non-compliance/non-sectarian program" is uniquely suggestive of the letter from Ms. Nathari, who claimed that she was terminated because she converted from Islam to Christianity.

91. Petitioner's facility at 71 Sanford Street was re-inspected on December 22, 2006, and a fire certificate reflecting satisfactory compliance was issued on that date.

92. A certificate of occupancy for educational use was issued for 71 Sanford Street including the second floor with petitioner as the tenant.

93. Despite Dr. Sabuur's best efforts to have the certificate of occupancy issued in December 2006, it was issued on January 2, 2007.

94. By memorandum dated January 3, 2007, Mr. Dowd requested confirmation from all school districts that their students previously enrolled in petitioner's school had been provided with alternative placements.

95. Petitioner did not have any students after the beginning of January 2007.

96. On January 18, 2007, petitioner received a certificate of occupancy for educational use for the building at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark.

97. An inspection team from the Essex County Office of Education toured petitioner's facility at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark on January 31, 2007.

98. The team completed a report entitled "Evaluation of School Buildings Checklist Report (Indicator 7.6)," which is the same form as was completed by Mr. Ferraro on November 2, 2006, in regard to 71 Sanford Street in East Orange.

99. By letter dated February 7, 2007, Mr. Dowd advised Dr. Sabuur that based upon the inspection the facility at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark was noncompliant.

100. Mr. Dowd attached a copy of the Evaluation of School Buildings Checklist Report (Indicator 7.6) to his letter dated February 7, 2007.

101. A certificate of inspection for fire safety was issued to petitioner for its facility at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark on February 9, 2007.

102. After a second inspection of petitioner's facility at 760 Clinton Avenue, Mr. Dowd advised Dr. Sabuur by letter dated February 21, 2007, that the site was now compliant.

103. By letter dated March 15, 2007, Acting Director of the Office of Special Education Programs Roberta Wohle advised that with overall approval for use of the facility at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark as a school building, petitioner could apply for approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities.

104. A Life Hazard Use Certificate of Registration was issued on March 20, 2007, for petitioner's facility at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark.

105. As of the hearing in this matter, petitioner had not applied for approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Respondent's memorandum dated December 15, 2006, revoking petitioner's approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities did not cite any legal authority for that action other than a reference to "applicable resolutions." The letter mentioned, however, that petitioner's facilities had been determined unsafe for the provision of educational services to students. The regulation which is applicable to this type of situation is N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)3, which states that the Department of Education may immediately remove program approval when it is determined that the health, safety or welfare of the students is in danger.

In the case of a revocation, the burden of proof is on the agency. In re Suspension or Revoc. License of Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 188 (App. Div. 1977). The standard of proof is a fair preponderance of the believable evidence. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 560 (1982).

The revocation letter dated December 15, 2006, and the December 6, 2006, memorandum referenced therein, mention several potential dangers in regard to the students' health, safety or welfare. One major concern is that the students would not have a school as of the beginning of January 2007. This concern presumably relates to the welfare of the students. Other concerns are insufficient space for the number of students and staff and the use of the second floor for which petitioner did not have a certificate of occupancy. Finally, there were concerns related to fire safety in the building.

As support for the concern that petitioner's students would not have a school after December 31, 2006, respondent relies on statements by Dr. Sabuur that petitioner's lease at 71 Sanford Street in East Orange was scheduled to expire on that date. Respondent seems to equate expiration of the lease with a circumstance where petitioner would actually vacate the premises by December 31, 2006. But there is no indication that the landlord was pressuring petitioner to leave the building by December 31, 2006, and there is nothing unusual about a renewal or an extension of a lease. The impetus to leave the building came from Dr. Sabuur, who wanted to expand the school to two different buildings. In fact, petitioner received an extension of the lease to January 31, 2007, and additional extensions were possible. Under the circumstances, it is simply not true that petitioner had to vacate the building by December 31, 2006.

According to the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, extension of the lease at 71 Sanford Street was not a viable option due to three concerns as follows: (1) insufficient educational space for the number of students and staff; (2) the use of the second floor which had safety concerns but no certificate of occupancy; and (3) fire safety concerns. The concerns related to the sufficiency of space and the use of the second floor are closely related. Petitioner's building at 71 Sanford Street had eight classrooms on the first floor and five rooms on the second floor. Two of the rooms on the second floor were used as classrooms. Petitioner has a total of 120 students in this space.

Petitioner's approval provides for eight classrooms, which by regulation could have twelve pupils each for a total of ninety-six students. It appears that by reducing the number of students to ninety-six, petitioner could eliminate the need for use of the second floor and resolve the problem with insufficient space. Respondent did not explain why petitioner could not resolve these problems by simply bringing itself into compliance with its existing approvals.

Another concern related to fire safety. The two sources for this concern are the fire inspection on September 19, 2006, which cited petitioner for storage in a hallway, and Mr. Ferraro's monitoring evaluation on November 2, 2006.

Assuming that all fire safety matters must be satisfactorily resolved, there are still several difficulties which diminish the significance of respondent's concerns as a basis for revocation. First, as discussed further below, respondent is supposed to advise the educational agency of deficiencies and provide an opportunity to cure them in cases where the problems were detected as the result of monitoring or a complaint investigation. Here, Mr. Ferraro completed an evaluation checklist reflecting concerns as to fire safety, but respondent did not send a copy to petitioner. It is unreasonable to hold the deficiencies against petitioner, when it was not given a copy of the evaluation checklist. Further, all of the deficiencies required nothing more that "easy fixes," which workers could have completed in a day or two. Finally, petitioner obtained a fire certificate evidencing satisfactory compliance by December 22, 2006.

It follows that the concerns related to petitioner's facility were not insurmountable obstacles to continued use of the facility on an interim basis. In sum, petitioner could have remained at 71 Sanford Street as an interim measure by bringing itself into compliance with its existing approval and completing "easy fixes" in regard to the deficiencies related to fire safety.

In the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, the Acting Director of the Office of Special Education Programs directed petitioner to notify Mr. Dowd, the Essex County Interim Superintendent of Schools, of the proposed new location of the school to schedule a facility review. The Acting Director noted that the proposed building must have written approval before any students may attend the new location. Finally, if the school does not have an approved new location by December 15, 2006, petitioner will be placed on conditional approval.

The memorandum dated December 6, 2006, in effect required petitioner to complete construction and/or renovations at its proposed new facility, have inspections completed and approvals issued, some of which were sequential in nature, within nine days. In response, petitioner focused on the facility at 760 Clinton Avenue in Newark. The building and electrical approvals were issued on January 17, 2007, and then the certificate of occupancy for educational use was issued on January 18, 2007. The inspection for approval of the building for use as a school took place on January 31, 2007. By letter dated February 7, 2007, Mr. Dowd advised petitioner that the facility was noncompliant, but he attached a copy of the evaluation checklist identifying the areas of noncompliance. The fire certificate of inspection was issued on February 9, 2007. The date of the second educational inspection is not specified, but Mr. Dowd sent petitioner a letter dated February 21, 2007, advising that the building was compliant and that the facility was approved for use as a school building.

This sequence of events is indicative of a realistic time frame for approval of petitioner's facility at 760 Clinton Avenue for use of a school building. It follows that the nine-day time limit that respondent gave petitioner to have its building approved for use as a school was not even close to being realistic. This sequence of events also shows the importance of the checklist to have deficiencies corrected promptly.

Petitioner maintains that the process related to the revocation was unfair in several respects. First, respondent did not comply with provisions contained in regulations related to monitoring and complaint investigations in that respondent did not advise petitioner of deficiencies and provide an opportunity to cure them. Second, the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, was unfair in that it foreclosed the only viable option, which was to bring the then-current facility at 71 Sanford Street into compliance with existing approvals, while directing petitioner to undertake the impossible task of having an approved new location by December 15, 2006. Third, the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, warned that failure to have an approved location by December 15, 2006, would result in a conditional approval, which is a relatively mild action, but the memorandum dated December 15, 2006, imposed a revocation, which is much more severe. Fourth, there are indications that the revocation was imposed for reasons that went beyond those mentioned in the memoranda dated December 6, 2006, and December 15, 2006, and that petitioner has not been given notice and an opportunity for a hearing in regard to these other reasons.

An administrative agency in determining how best to effectuate public policy must apply principles of fundamental fairness. State, Dep't of Envtl. Protection v. Stavola, 103 N.J. 425, 436 (1986). Principles of fundamental fairness extend beyond the requirements of the Constitution. Ibid. In making a determination, an agency must conscientiously concern itself with and accommodate the rights and interests of affected individuals and genuinely account for the individualized effect of the proposed action. Ibid. The determination whether an agency has observed principles of basic fairness requires an examination of the facts of each case. Ibid.

Respondent has an obligation to monitor programs and services in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:14-9.1(a). After the monitoring process is completed, a report must be sent to the public or private educational agency. N.J.A.C 6A:14-9.1(c). If a public or private educational agency receives a report that indicates noncompliance, it shall develop an improvement plan to be submitted to respondent for approval. N.J.A.C. 6A:14-9.1(d). Similarly, an educational agency against which a complaint is directed shall receive an opportunity to respond to the complaint. N.J.A.C. 6A:14-9.2(c)4. The substance of these regulations is that educational agencies will be given an opportunity to correct deficiencies.

Here, the letter from Ms. Nathari amounted to a complaint. Nonetheless, petitioner was not given a copy of her letter. In addition to denying petitioner the opportunity to deal with specific items, this omission prevented petitioner from being aware of the scope and gravity of the accusations in the letter. Further, petitioner was not given a copy of the evaluation checklist, as is customary, from the monitoring on November 2, 2006, reflecting fire and other safety deficiencies. This omission denied petitioner the opportunity to complete the "easy fixes" that were necessary to correct these deficiencies. In view of the severe action taken against petitioner, respondent should have complied with the spirit of these regulations as a matter of fundamental fairness.

Petitioner's second concern is that the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, foreclosed its only viable option, which was to remain at its then-current location on an interim basis, while directing petitioner to do the impossible by coming up with a new approved location by December 15, 2006. As set forth above, petitioner had a viable option to remain at its then-current facility by bringing itself into compliance with its existing approvals. In contrast, it was impossible for petitioner to take all the steps necessary to have a new approved location by December 15, 2006. By foreclosing petitioner's only viable option and directing petitioner to do the impossible, respondent failed to satisfy its obligation to conscientiously concern itself with the interests of all parties and consider the effects of its actions.

Petitioner's third concern as set forth above is that the memorandum dated December 6, 2006, warned of a conditional approval. However, the memorandum dated December 15, 2006, imposed a revocation.

When an approved private school for students with disabilities is not in compliance with a requirement, respondent may place the school on conditional approval status. N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)1. An approved private school which is issued a conditional approval status may not accept new students. N.J.A.C. 6A:14-7.10(b)li. Both parties were well aware that with 120 students, petitioner was not in a position to take more students. Under the circumstances, conditional approval status was a very mild action which would not likely instill a sense of urgency to deal with the situation. Instead, petitioner was lulled into a false sense of security. Again, respondent failed to satisfy its obligation to consider in a conscientious manner the impact of its actions on petitioner.

Petitioner's fourth concern is that respondent revoked petitioner's approval for reasons that went far beyond those set forth in the memoranda dated December 6, 2006, and December 15, 2006. More specifically, the concerns are that respondent revoked petitioner's approval based on unproven accusations in Ms. Nathari's letter from October 2006 and from the monitoring on November 1 and 2, 2006. This concern is supported by a letter dated December 19, 2006, from Mr. Dowd stating that an attached table identifies critical concerns that led to the decision by respondent to revoke petitioner's approval.

The table lists forty areas of noncompliance including sixteen for the facility, fourteen for the program and ten for personnel. Approximately half of these items can be found in Ms. Nathari's letter. Even if all of the areas of noncompliance were identified or confirmed by the monitoring on November 1 and 2, 2006, the fact remains that the Interim Essex County Superintendent of Schools stated that forty areas of noncompliance led to the revocation, while only approximately seven of these items are mentioned as the reasons in the memoranda dated December 6, 2006, and December 15, 2006.

While petitioner's concerns are understandable under the circumstances, they do not warrant the conclusion that the Acting Director of Office of the Special Education Programs acted for reasons other that those set forth in the memoranda dated December 6, 2006, and December 15, 2006. Nonetheless, based on the other three concerns raised by petitioner, I CONCLUDE that the process in regard to the revocation of petitioner's approval did not satisfy the requirement of fundamental fairness.

Based upon all of the above, I FURTHER CONCLUDE that respondent has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the circumstances warrant a revocation of petitioner's approval to operate a school for students with disabilities. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the revocation of petitioner's approval to operate a private school for students with disabilities is reversed.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Pro se petitioner initially sought emergent relief to have disciplinary charges against his son – B.G., III – dismissed, and to have a Child Study Team assessment and related development of an Individual Education Program to address B.G.'s needs; he subsequently amended his petition to request monetary compensation for, inter alia, the expenses of childcare and possible future attorney fees. An emergent relief hearing was held, at which the ALJ determined that certain of petitioner's initial issues had been mooted by the Board's actions prior to the hearing date, and others were not conducive to determination on an emergent basis; the ALJ denied the application for emergent relief. Subsequently, the Board moved to dismiss the petition for failure to state a claim upon which relief could be granted.

The ALJ found that the Commissioner has no statutory authority to grant reimbursements for costs and legal fees, and the remaining issues in the petition were determined to be moot. Accordingly, the ALJ recommended dismissal of the petition in its entirety, with prejudice.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties filed no exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner determines that summary decision is appropriately granted to the Board as she concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that there is no legal authority for petitioner to recover damages or legal fees in this forum, and the remaining issues comprising the instant petition of appeal have previously been rendered moot.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons articulated therein and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

Record Closed: April 7, 2008 Decided: April 25, 2008

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner B.G. o/b/o B.G. III., (BG) a minor child has petitioned the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et. seq., for an order (1) dismissing disciplinary charges against BG because the procedural requirements for short and long term suspensions and expulsion were allegedly not followed; (2) directing that BG be immediately re-admitted to school; (3) directing that BG be immediately referred to an East Orange Board of Education Child Study Team (CST) for proper assessment and development of an Individual Education Program if necessary; and (4) directing that BG's educational program not be changed prior to the completion of the CST evaluation and its recommendation. In his amended petition, petitioner asks for an additional remedy of monetary compensation of $1000 for expenses for childcare and related expenses, loss of wages and for attorney fees for possible future litigation incurred as a result of the alleged negligence of Director of Educational Support Services Alexis Colander.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 25, 2008, petitioner filed a petition with the Commissioner seeking emergent relief. On February 1, 2008, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education notified petitioner that the matter would not proceed on an emergent basis until the requisite submission is made addressing the standards set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. The Director thereafter transmitted the matter on February 14, 2008, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13, for determination as a contested case. Petitioner filed an amended petition on February 15, 2008. I heard the application for emergent relief on February 19, 2008. I issued an Emergency Order on February 20, 2008, denying the application for emergent relief and concluding that certain issues were moot and the others were not conducive to determination on an emergent basis. On March 27, 2008, the Commissioner adopted my Emergency Order as the final decision in this interim matter.

On March 27, 2008, the Board filed Notice of Motion to Dismiss in Lieu of Answer to Petition of Appeal and moved for an Order dismissing the outstanding issues in the petition for failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted. As the OAL rules do not provide for a motion for dismiss, this application is being treated as a Motion for Summary Decision under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. B.G. has filed no responding affidavit setting forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 (b).

BG is seven years old and had been in the first grade at the George Washington Carver School when he was suspended. He currently attends the Whitney Houston Academy School in the District.

In the amended petition B.G. contended:

1. During BG's third suspension for exhibiting violent and disruptive behavior, the Board assigned BG to home instruction and placed him on long-term suspension/expulsion pending the completion of a CST evaluation.
2. The Board violated BG's due process rights by failing to meet the regulatory procedural requirements for a long-term suspension regarding notices and hearings.
3. Prior to BG's third suspension, petitioner requested a CST evaluation, which the Board did not process prior to BG's removal from school, and the evaluation has not started despite the passage of two months.
4. The Board's decision to provide BG with home instruction is denying his right to an education because it does not cover the State's core curriculum requirements, is not comparable to the education he was receiving prior to his suspension, and did not start until over one month after the last suspension.
5. The Board knew that the CST evaluation could take up to ninety days to complete. By making its completion a condition of BG's readmission, it knew he would be out for over thirty days. The Board made this decision without developing an Individualized Program Plan.

   (See amended petition)

At the emergent relief hearing of February 19, 2008, Counsel for the Board represented on the record that: (1) based on a psychiatric evaluation that concluded that BG was not a danger, the Board was offering to immediately return BG to a regular first grade classroom at a school of petitioner's choice where BG would receive the same educational program he had been receiving subject to the results of a CST evaluation (B.G. accepted this offer and requested placement of BG at the Whitney Houston School, and arrangements were made for BG to report to that school on February 20, 2008, and he currently attends school there); (2) if, in petitioner's discretion, BG has fallen behind in the first grade program as a result of the period of home schooling, the Board would provide BG with a period of prospective home schooling in addition to the resumption of his attendance in a regular classroom; (3) the CST has been conducting an evaluation of BG on an expedited basis and has completed psychiatric, psychological and social history assessments. The final neurological assessment was scheduled for February 22, 2008, after which the CST would expedite the completion of its evaluation (Petitioner expressed his satisfaction with the current activity of the CST); and (4) there is no suspension action pending against BG.

In view of the Board's actions and representations and B.G.'s agreement with those actions on February 19, I determined that those issues were moot. (See Emergency Order of February 20, 2008).

The remaining relief demanded by B.G. in his January 22, 2008, petition and February 15, 2008, amended petition is: "Monetary compensation of $1000.00 for expenses incurred as a result of [Director of Educational Support Services and Parent Relations] Colander's negligence. Expenses include childcare and related expenses, and loss of wages. Expenses to cover childcare, loss of wages. I would like to reserve the right to request attorney fees for possible future litigation." (See amended petition).

The Board contends that B.G.'s request for monetary damages and attorney's fees should be denied as a matter of law because the Commissioner does not have the authority to award monetary damages or attorney's fees.

The Commissioner has consistently denied that she is clothed with the authority to grant prayers for relief for punitive damages and reimbursement for costs and legal fees. Winter v. Bd. of Educ. of Tp. of North Bergen, 75 S.L.D. 236, 240. Also see, Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Tenafly, 1974 S.L.D. 420, aff'd, State Board of Education, March 5, 1975. Instead, the award of money damages in education cases occurs only in a limited number of cases authorized by the education statutes such as lost earnings (of a school district's staff member) or restoring an increment improperly withheld.

Spivak v. Westwood Regional High School District, 97 N.J.A.R.2d(EDU) 270. The payment of any other damages is not within the Commissioner's authority. Dunn v. Elizabeth Board of Education, 96 N.J.A.R.2d(EDU) 279, aff'd, State Board of Education (December 6, 1995).

B.G. seeks to be reimbursed for his lost wages and child care expenses ostensibly while his son was on a school suspension and also seeks compensation for Colander's alleged negligence. I CONCLUDE that the Commissioner has no statutory authority to grant such relief. I also CONCLUDE that B.G. is not entitled to counsel fees. The Commissioner has held that, "in the absence of express statutory authority to award counsel fees, the Commissioner may not direct that [a party] be compensated for legal fees...." W.C.K. o/b/o M.P.-Y.C. v. Board of Education of the Borough of Dumont, EDU 09381-02, Final Decision, (March 18, 2004), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. B.G. has provided no statutory authority to the contrary. In any event, B.G. has appeared pro se in this matter and has presented no evidence that he has incurred any attorney's fees.

As the Board is entitled to Summary Decision regarding B.G.'s demand for damages and the right to request future attorney's fees, and as the remaining issues in the petition have been previously determined to be moot, the dismissal of the amended petition in its entirety with prejudice is appropriate.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the Board's Motion be GRANTED and that the petition be DISMISSED in its entirety with prejudice.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." Record Closed: April 28, 2008 Decided: April 28, 2008

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ:

Petitioner, Joel McGuckin, claims that he has tenure as a supervisor in the Township of Winslow school district, and that his tenure rights were violated when a newly-created supervisory position was given to a non-tenured employee. This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on November 22, 2007, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A prehearing was held on January 8, 2007, at which time counsel requested that this case be placed on the inactive list for a period of 90 days since the petitioner was presently on a leave of absence with pay for medical reasons and the parties were attempting a global settlement of all pending issues. By an Order entered on January 16, 2007, the matter was placed on the inactive list for a period of three months. By subsequent Orders dated March 26, 2007, and June 6, 2007, the matter was continued on the inactive list for additional periods of 45 days each while the parties continued with settlement negotiations. On October 10, 2007, the matter was again continued on the inactive list for an additional six months because the Board has asserted that petitioner was not capable of returning to work and he was on medical leave pending the results of several medical examinations. Settlement negotiations were to continue once the examations had been completed.

On April 18, 2008, an executed Settlement Agreement was received, and on April 28, 2008, a certified copy of the resolution of the board of education approving the settlement was received.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the petitioner's signature and the execution thereof by the president and secretary of the board of education and the submission of a certified and sealed copy of the resolution of the board of education approving the settlement as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.13(d).

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. JOEL McGUCKIN, Petitioner, vs. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF WINSLOW TOWNSHIP, CAMDEN COUNTY, Respondent.	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY OAL DOCKET NO. EDU-8870-06 AGENCY REF. NO. 375-10/06 CIVIL ACTION SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

THIS AGREEMENT is made on this ____ day of February, 2008, between the Board of Education of the Township Winslow, 30 Coopers Folly Road, Atco, New Jersey 08004 (hereinafter "Board of Education") and Joel McGuckin, 125 South Landing Road, Waterford Works, New Jersey 08089 (hereinafter "McGuckin").

WHEREAS, McGuckin holds the position of teaching staff member in the Winslow Township School District and has held that position in good standing throughout his employment in the School District; and

WHEREAS, McGuckin has entitlement to an administrative position in the Winslow Township School District effective July 1, 2006, by virtue of McGuckin's being the holder of an Administrative Certificate with a Principal/Supervisor endorsement and a Settlement Agreement between McGuckin and the Lower Camden County Regional School District Board of Education

(now dissolved), the Winslow Township Board of Education, and other school districts dated September 2004, which was approved by the Commissioner of Education; and which is the subject of this petition of appeal.

WHEREAS, McGuckin had accumulated sick leave days throughout his employment with the Board of Education; and

WHEREAS, the parties by entering into this Agreement wish to agree upon issues with regard to McGuckin's claim and intent to retire due to a medical condition which has arisen while this petition of appeal has been pending.

NOW, THEREFORE, for good and valuable consideration, the parties hereto agree as follows:

1. Employment Status – McGuckin shall be entitled to employment as a Supervisor in the Winslow Township School District retroactive to July 1, 2006 through June 30, 2008. McGuckin shall submit a letter of resignation from his employment for purposes of retirement for the last day of the 2007-08 school year, which shall be accepted by the Board of Education contemporaneously with and contingent upon approval and acceptance of this Agreement, but which shall be effective after and only after approval of this Settlement Agreement pursuant to paragraph 4 of this Agreement.

2. Salary Payment – In addition to the salary he is receiving, McGuckin shall receive back salary for the difference between his salary as a teacher and the average salary paid to four individuals holding administrative certificates who were appointed to positions effective July 1, 2006, that amount of additional pay, i.e., back salary, being $15,683.25. McGuckin shall also receive back salary and salary going forward for the 2007-08 school year for the difference between his salary as a teacher and the average salary paid to those same four administrators, that amount of additional pay, i.e., back salary, being $21,343.50. Said payments shall be made on July 15, 2008.

3. Sick Leave – McGuckin shall be paid for his unused sick leave days in the amount of $1,537.82. This amount shall represent McGuckin's total entitlement to payment of sick leave.

4. Understanding

a. This Agreement is contingent upon its acceptance by the Board of Trustees of the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund, and its recognition that the additional salary McGuckin shall receive under this agreement is creditable for all pension purposes, and upon its approval by the Commissioner of Education.

b. This Settlement Agreement, once approved, shall be binding upon the respective parties, their successors, heirs and assigns, and after, and only after this Agreement is approved by the Commissioner of Education and accepted by the Board of Trustees of the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund for the purposes described in this paragraph shall McGuckin's resignation be effective.

c. Nothing contained in this Agreement shall constitute evidence of a past practice on the part of the Board of Education, nor shall same be binding upon the Board of Education with respect to any other employee of the Winslow Township School District. The Board of Education and McGuckin have entered into this Agreement based upon the particular facts and circumstances unique to McGuckin's employment situation.

d. McGuckin hereby waives, by virtue of the submission of his letter of resignation for purposes of retirement, any entitlement, past, present and/or future to a teaching and/or administrative position in the Winslow Township School District by virtue of his status as a tenured employee. This paragraph shall be subject to the other provisions of this Agreement and shall not take effect until McGuckin's resignation is effective.

e. McGuckin and the Board of Education each mutually release the other for any and all claims they may have and/or had against the other arising from the employment relationship for anything that has occurred up to the date of this Agreement.

5. Payment to Estate – In the event that McGuckin should become deceased prior to payment of part or all of the salary and/or sick leave provided by this Agreement, then any remaining monies shall be paid to McGuckin's estate.

6. Employment Records – All negative correspondence shall be expunged from McGuckin's employment records. A copy of that information may be maintained in the Board of Education's "litigation" file concerning this matter.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have set their hands and seals as of the date first mentioned above.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF KHEMI (KIM) FREEMAN, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, PASSAIC COUNTY.

Nancy I. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent Khemi (Kim) Freeman (Oxfeld Cohen, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 25, 2008 Decided: April 30, 2008

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

On December 12, 2007, the Department of education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13. A hearing was scheduled on April 22, 23 and 24, 2008. During the pendency of the hearing the parties settled the matter. The attached Stipulation of settlement was submitted on April 25, 2008, indicating the terms of agreement which are incorporated herein by reference.

Having reviewed the record and the settlement terms, I FIND:

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5 .6(a), the Commissioner of Education must approve settlement and withdrawal of certified tenure charges. The standards established by the State Board of Education In re Cardonick,1990 S.L.D. 842, 846 must include the following: 1) the nature of the charges; 2) an explanation of the circumstances justifying the settlement or withdrawal; 3) consent of both the charged and the charging parties; 4) the charged party entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his or her rights; 5) demonstrate that the agreement is in the public interest; and 6) the teaching staff member has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible loss of certificate. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6.

I have reviewed the record and terms of the settlement and FIND:

(1) Sufficient documentation in the complaint and certification to support the Tenure Charges of Conduct Unbecoming a Teaching Staff Member filed before the Commissioner of Education as appended to the Initial Decision. (attached)

(2) The parties have provided an explanation to justify the settlement:

> "Whereas, the parties have determined that resolution of this matter without a hearing is in the interests of the public and consistent with furthering the public good, since the Petitioner District will obtain its goal of no longer employing Respondent as a tenured teacher, without having to resort to a lengthy hearing to address thirty tenure charges, the anticipated minimum of fifteen witnesses to be produced by Petitioner (including at least three, but likely six, student witnesses), the anticipated time and expense of the hearing, as well as the unavailability of additional hearing dates for approximately six months;

(3) The settlement agreement and release of claims executed by the parties demonstrates the consent of the parties to finally settle the matter and release all claims between the parties.

(4) The credible evidence reflects that petitioner State Operated School District of Paterson and respondent Khemi (Kim) Freeman entered into the settlement agreement with advice of counsel and were advised all rights under the agreement as set forth in the Settlement of Agreement and Release of Claims shall be construed in accordance with and governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey.

(5) The parties have established by the credible evidence that the settlement agreement and release of claims is in the public interest.

(6) Respondent will submit to the District an irrevocable letter of resignation, effective August 30, 2007. Further, she has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Settlement Agreement and Release of Claims executed by petitioner State Operated School District of Paterson and respondent Khemi (Kim) Freeman satisfies the requirements of In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 (1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846): Therefore, the Settlement Agreement and Release of Claims executed the parties should be APPROVED.

It is so ORDERED.

This matter having come before the Court upon the filing of Tenure Charges by Petitioner State Operated School District of Paterson (hereinafter referred to as "Petitioner" and/or "District") against Khemi (Kim) Freeman (hereinafter referred to as "Respondent" and/or "Freeman"), and

WHEREAS, the parties have determined that resolution of this matter without a hearing is in the interests of the public and consistent with furthering the public good, since the Petitioner District will obtain its goal of no longer employing Respondent as a tenured teacher, without having to resort to a lengthy hearing to address thirty tenure charges, the anticipated minimum of fifteen witnesses to be produced by Petitioner (including at least three, but likely six, student witnesses), the anticipated time and expense of the hearing, as well as the unavailability of additional hearing dates for approximately six months; and

WHEREAS, the parties agree to fully and finally settle and/or release all claims between them arising out of Freeman's employment and separation from employment with District;

The parties do hereby agree as follows:

1. The foregoing recitals are incorporated herein.

2. Freeman has executed and supplied an irrevocable letter of resignation, which is attached to this Agreement, which resignation will become effective on the date that this Agreement is approved by the Commissioner of Education.

3. Until approval of this Agreement by the Commissioner, Freeman will continue on paid suspension.

4. ~~During the term of said suspension, and in perpetuity following the approval of this Agreement by the Commissioner~~, Freeman will not be employed by, volunteer for, be a participant in, or attend any program, event, or activity ~~which is at all related to the Paterson Public Schools, which shall include, but not be limited to, any program, event or activity~~ which is sponsored by the Paterson Public Schools, which operates with or uses public school monies or funding, or which is located in or on any Paterson Public Schools property (whether owned or leased). bea This does not limit Freeman's right to participate in any public forum on Paterson Public Schools property. KF 4/23/08

5. In consideration of the foregoing, the Petitioner School District will not prosecute the thirty (30) tenure changes certified against Respondent Freeman.

6. In consideration of the foregoing, Freeman hereby releases and forever discharges District and its present and former affiliates, subsidiaries, officers, directors, agents, employees, and their successors and assigns, from any and all actions, causes of action, suits, claims, charges or complaints which Freeman may have or may have had, or may claim to have or have had, in the past, currently, or in the future, against any of them, except as may be necessary to enforce this Agreement. Freeman acknowledges that this general release also includes but is not limited to claims arising under federal, State, and local laws prohibiting employment discrimination, claims arising under the State education laws, including the tenure laws, claims arising under State, federal or common law for breach of contract, or claims growing out of any legal restrictions on the District's rights with regard to employment of individuals. Freeman hereby expressly waives and releases any and all claims or rights arising under the State education laws, N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1, et seq., including but not limited to the "Tenure" laws set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1, et seq., and the "Tenure Employees Hearing Law," set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et seq., as well as any and all claims or rights arising under the Civil Rights Acts of 1964 and 1991, 42. 7. This Agreement does not constitute an admission by either party of any wrongful action or violation of any federal or state statute, or common law rights, including those relating to the provisions of any law or statute concerning employment actions, or of any other possible or claimed violation of law or rights.

8. The terms of this Agreement shall be kept confidential. Freeman agrees not to disclose the terms thereof to any person other than Freeman's immediate family, accountant, attorney, income tax preparer or similar professional, or taxing authorities, unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction. District agrees not to disclose the fact, terms or amount thereof to any person other than its Board of Education members, administrators and necessary clerical staff, accountants, auditors, attorneys, tax preparers, or other persons on a need-to-know basis, or ~~unless otherwise~~ as required by law or ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction or order of the Government Records Council. OAL DKT. NO. EDU 1763-08

(EDU 5908-07 on remand)
AGENCY DKT. NO. 133-5/07

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF WILLIAM THOMAS, PLAINFIELD SCHOOL DISTRICT, UNION COUNTY.	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter,[1] the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the exceptions filed by respondent have been reviewed.

Pursuant to a November 26, 2007 remand order of the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner), a plenary hearing took place in the OAL on February 26, 2008 to adjudicate the facts underlying tenure charges that petitioner had filed against respondent on May 16, 2007. After the conclusion of the hearing, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found, as a matter of fact, that the petitioner's witness – Union County police officer Dennis O'Connell – was more credible than respondent,[2] and that petitioner had proven the facts necessary to sustain the tenure charges.

More specifically, the ALJ found that on May 4, 2004, O'Connell observed respondent sitting alone at a picnic table in Greenbrook Park and approached him. Respondent left his seat and advanced toward O'Connell, stating that everything was fine, even before O'Connell asked any questions. Respondent's demeanor was agitated, his eyes were bloodshot and his speech was rambling and incoherent.

[1] As no transcript of the February 26, 2008 hearing has been provided, the Commissioner will rely upon the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) account of the witnesses' testimony.

[2] Respondent alleges in his exceptions that O'Connell "acknowledged that he had very little recollection of the event in question and that he would have had even less recollection had he not reviewed his notes before the hearing . . . ." The Commissioner may not rely on this representation, in the absence of a transcript or other support from the record and, further, finds nothing out of the ordinary about a witness who needs to consult contemporaneous notes in order to give testimony about an event fours years after the fact.

A bag of suspected controlled dangerous substances (CDS) and a tube (or pipe) was on the picnic table where respondent had been seated and several more bags of suspected CDS were on the ground at respondent's feet. O'Connell arrested respondent for CDS possession and respondent mentioned, in the course of the arrest, that he had a problem with cocaine. State laboratory testing and analysis of the tube and the contents of the bags revealed that they contained cocaine.[3]

In light of the foregoing factual findings, and legal precedent pertinent thereto, the ALJ concluded that petitioner had met its burden to show that respondent had perpetrated unbecoming conduct sufficient to warrant termination. The Commissioner concurs.

In his exceptions, respondent urges the Commissioner to dismiss the petition because in describing respondent's unbecoming behavior, the original tenure charges also recited that respondent was arrested, indicted and accepted into the court's pre-trial intervention program because of the offending conduct. The Commissioner joins the ALJ in rejecting this argument.

As the ALJ pointed out, respondent had ample notice of the exact nature of the behavior which petitioner believed disqualified him to serve as an educator of school children. Petitioner met its burden at the February 26, 2008 hearing to prove that respondent committed the conduct. The Commissioner cannot find that the public good is served by invalidating charges – the factual bases of which were adequately articulated and subsequently proven – solely because the charges were drafted in a way that appeared to put more emphasis on legal procedure than on the underlying factual circumstances and their ramifications.

[3] The ALJ found that respondent's testimony at the hearing – i.e., that two other men had left the cocaine and tube on the picnic bench about twenty minutes before O'Connell observed respondent – lacked credibility. Nor did the ALJ find credible respondent's contention that he never told O'Connell that he had a problem with cocaine.

Respondent also suggests that petitioner, having failed to present any fact witnesses at the first OAL hearing in this matter, should not have had a second chance to prove its charges at the remand hearing. This argument is untimely. Respondent's opportunity to appeal the Commissioner's November 26, 2007 order for a remand hearing to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.3 has long since expired.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision in its entirety. The tenure charges against respondent are upheld, and respondent is terminated from his position in petitioner's district. Back pay is awarded, both from the date of the dismissal of the criminal indictment until May 17, 2007 – when the tenure charges were filed – and from the one hundred twenty-first day after the filing of tenure charges until the date of this decision. Back pay shall be reduced by any sums that respondent has received from employment during the applicable periods, and respondent shall provide any and all documentation reasonably required to ascertain the amount of back pay which is due him.

This matter shall be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action as that body deems appropriate against respondent's certificate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[4]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 01763-08
AGENCY DKT. NO. 133-5/07
(REMAND EDU 05908-07)

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF WILLIAM THOMAS, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PLAINFIELD, UNION COUNTY.

Willie L. Parker, Esq., for petitioner (Hunt, Hamlin & Ridley, attorneys)

Sanford R. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 14, 2008 Decided: April 9, 2008

BEFORE J. HOWARD SOLOMON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The School District of the City of Plainfield, Union County (District), brought charges of unbecoming conduct, incompetence and other just cause against respondent, William Thomas, a certificated and tenured employee holding the position of acting principal at the Washington Community School. The District contended that respondent's arrest on May 4, 2004 for allegedly possessing a controlled dangerous substance (CDS), to wit: cocaine, and drug paraphernalia while in a public park, and his subsequent indictment and his entry into, and completion of, a pre-trial intervention program, warranted his removal from his tenured position. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

On May 16, 2007, the District filed with the Department of Education (Department) a Certificate of Determination for filing of tenure charges, the District's sworn tenure charges, and a sworn Statement of Evidence in support of these charges, all in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, 6-11 and N.J.A.C. 6:24-5.2. The District's Certification of Service was filed on May 21, 2007. On June 1, 2007, respondent's answer was filed.

The Department then transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was received on June 7, 2007, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b). The initial hearing took place on September 6, 2007. Other than stipulated facts which were placed on the record, no witnesses appeared for the District at that hearing. On September 17, 2007, the record closed upon the receipt of post hearing briefs.

The undersigned then rendered an Initial Decision which concluded that respondent's entry into PTI, which fact was stipulated into evidence, was not a favorable conclusion of the criminal charge pending against him, and accordingly the tenure charges were sustained in light of the high standards required of all educators. However, the Commissioner of the Department, in rejecting this conclusion, remanded the matter back to the OAL "for a hearing on the facts underlying the tenure charges of unbecoming conduct, incompetence and other just cause." The Commissioner's decision was dated November 26, 2007.

As a result of the remand, further hearing dates were peremptorily scheduled for February 26 and February 29, 2008. The matter was heard to completion on February 26, 2008. Thereafter, the parties were given until March 14, 2008 for posthearing briefs and written summations, on which date the record closed.

At the commencement of the hearing on February 26, respondent moved for dismissal of the tenure charges, claiming they were defective. He argued that the tenure charges were predicated on the issuance of two summonses [complaints], his indictment, and entry into PTI which did not provide "a favorable outcome of the charges instituted against him, as no determination of guilt or innocence will be made." (Sworn Tenure Charges, paragraph seven). He also argued that paragraph eight of the tenure charges was similarly predicated on the basis on his arrest, indictment and entry into PTI. Accordingly, he stipulated to his arrest, indictment and entry into PTI, while denying possession. Paragraphs seven and eight of the tenure charges read as follows:

> 7. Thomas is scheduled to complete the PTI program on or about March 16, 2007. Thomas' successful completion of the PTI program does not constitute a favorable outcome of the criminal charges instituted against him, as no determination of guilt or innocence will be made.
>
> 8. Thomas' arrest, indictment and entry into the PTI program for possession of a controlled dangerous substance, namely cocaine, constitute unbecoming conduct, incompetence and other just cause for dismissal.

The undersigned reserved on his motion until the conclusion of the proceedings.

In addition, respondent moved for reimbursement of back pay from the date he completed PTI on March 16, 2007 until the filing of tenure charges on May 17, 2007 and then from the one hundred twenty-first day after the filing of tenure charges until a determination has been made by the Commissioner, subject to any set-off by way of compensation he received during these periods, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The undersigned also reserved on this motion.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

As was done at the initial hearing in September 2007, the parties entered into the following joint stipulation of facts (Exhibit J-1):

1. Respondent possesses a certification in the following area: Elementary, Mathematics K-12, Supervisors, Principals, and Chief School Administrator (Superintendent).

2. He has a Bachelors' Degree in Mathematics and Chemistry, a Masters' Degree in Administration and Supervision. In addition, respondent has all the credits necessary for his Ed. D, Educational Leadership. However, he has not yet defended his dissertation.

3. He began employment as a teacher in 1993 in the Newark Public Schools as a high school mathematics teacher. In 1996, he was promoted to the administrative position of Staff Developer in Mathematics in the Newark School District. He continued to work in Newark until September 1998 when he joined the Plainfield School District as a Vice-Principal at the High School. Two years later in 2000, the District honored his request and he became Vice-Principal at Cedar Brook Elementary School. In November 2003, he became the Acting Principal of the Washington Community School, an elementary school in Plainfield. For personal reasons, respondent. took a leave of absence, which was effective May 1, 2004.

4. On May 4, 2004, respondent was issued two summonses [complaints] by the Union County Police Department. The first was for possession of a controlled dangerous substance, namely cocaine, in Greenbrook Park, Plainfield, New Jersey. The second was for possession of drug paraphernalia at the same time and place, the paraphernalia being a clear plastic tube commonly used to inhale CDS.

5. On December 9, 2004, he was indicted by a Union County Grand Jury for possession of a controlled dangerous substance on May 4, 2004 in the City of Plainfield, a third degree offense.

6. On March 16, 2005, in lieu of a trial or guilty plea, respondent was accepted into a Pretrial Intervention, Supervisory Treatment Program

(PTI). The terms of his acceptance into PTI were that the program would be for a period of twenty-four months, respondent had to perform sixty hours of community service, undergo random drug testing, complete a substance abuse treatment program and pay certain fees associated with entry into PTI.

7. He completed PTI on March 16, 2007.

8. The Plainfield District of Education certified tenure charges against respondent to the Commissioner of Education on May 16, 2007.[1] Immediately upon learning of his completion of PTI, the Plainfield Superintendent of Schools began the tenure process for respondent.

After this stipulation was placed on the record, the District called Corporal Dennis P. O'Connell, a police officer with the Union County Police Department, to testify on its behalf. He briefly discussed his background which included the completion of two narcotics courses and a prior assignment to a narcotics task force. During his career as a police officer, he had been involved in hundreds of arrests for possession of a CDS.

On May 4, 2004, O'Connell, was on duty, dressed in his full uniform, and was driving a marked patrol vehicle through Greenbrook Park, a public park. He noticed respondent sitting alone at a picnic table, who acted suspiciously when he abruptly looked at O'Connell. There were few people in the park at the time. O'Connell exited from his patrol vehicle and began to approach respondent. Respondent jumped up from his seat and approached O'Connell telling him, without being questioned, that everything was okay. Respondent appeared agitated, his eyes were bloodshot, he was rambling and his speech was incoherent. O'Connell concluded that, based upon his experiences as a police officer, respondent was probably under the influence of a CDS since there was no odor of alcohol emanating from his breath.

[1] Tenure charges were sworn to on March 13, 2007 and filed with the Commissioner on May 17, 2007.

O'Connell then walked to the table where respondent had been seated and noticed a bag on top of the table, the contents of which appeared to be crack-cocaine. He also notice a tube on the table commonly used for smoking crack-cocaine. O'Connell then directed respondent to return to his seat at the table where he was placed under arrest. A backup police officer arrived. O'Connell then observed nine more bags on the ground by respondent's feet which he also suspected contained CDS. These bags were not previously noticeable, but were after respondent was seated. O'Connell stated that during the course of his arrest, respondent admitted that he had a problem with cocaine. The bags and their contents, as well as the tube, were sent to the State laboratory for analysis. The contents of the bags and residue found on the tube tested positive for cocaine. [See Exhibits P-3(a-b) and Exhibit P-4(a-b)].

O'Connell, who did not see respondent ingest cocaine, confirmed that he was not charged with being under the influence, only for possession. He noticed no one else in the area where respondent had been seated. It was O'Connell's usual practice to charge only possession where a CDS was involved, not under the influence, since the department had no testing procedures in place for persons under the influence. Accordingly, he did not give any field tests to respondent.

Respondent then testified in his own behalf. On or about May 1, 2004, a few days prior to his arrest, he had requested and was granted a family leave of absence since he and his wife were having marital difficulties. On May 4, 2004, he claimed that he took a taxi to a bank in Somerville since he was not able to drive a motor vehicle due to legal issues concerning his license. On the way back, he got off at Greenbrook Park which was within walking distance of his home. Prior to entering the park, he stopped at a delicatessen and ordered lunch. While there, he claimed to have met an individual named Rasheen whom he recognized as a parent of one of his students. After ordering lunch, both he and Rasheen and a companion of Rasheen walked into the park. He stated that both Rasheen and his friend sat on the opposite side and at the opposite end of the picnic table where respondent was later seen by O'Connell. After a while, Rasheen and his friend left. About fifteen to twenty minutes later, O'Connell approached him.

In explaining why he got up from his seat to walk towards the approaching police officer, respondent claimed that it was his custom to greet someone who was walking towards him. He stated that O'Connell walked past him to the picnic table where he "pried out" a bag and a pipe[2] embedded in between the boards of the table where Rasheen and his friend had been seated. Respondent also claimed that the nine bags on the ground were found where Rasheen and his friend had been seated. He denied ever telling O'Connell that he had a problem with drugs, and denied that the drugs belonged to him or that he was under the influence.

Respondent further stated that, upon the advice of his attorney, he entered the PTI program where he performed sixty hours of community service, underwent drug testing and paid certain fees. He completed PTI on March 16, 2007, after which the prosecutor dismissed the charges. At the time of the hearing, he stated that he was employed as a principal of a school, which position was about to be eliminated. At the time of his arrest, although on a family leave of absence, he was employed by the District at the Washington Community School.

When facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings. Credibility is the value that a finder of fact gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, its internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (8th Cir. 1963). O'Connell's testimony was compelling and credible. He recalled the incident, for the most part, even without referring to his report. Although he could not recall the height or weight of respondent who was outside of the hearing room at the time he was asked, his testimony was, nevertheless, cogent and clear. Respondent, on the other hand, was less than credible. His reason for approaching the officer was not believable, particularly where he mentioned that everything was okay even before being questioned, unless he did not want the officer to reach the table.

[2]The drug paraphernalia was referred to as a "tube" or "pipe."

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS, in addition to the above stipulated facts:

1. On May 1, 2004, respondent was granted a family leave of absence from the District because of marital difficulties.

2. On May 4, 2004, respondent was seated at a picnic table in Greenbrook Park, a public park, when he was observed by O'Connell, a police officer, in the rank of corporal, with the Union County Police Department.

3. O'Connell, a trained and experienced police officer in matters involving CDS, was on patrol, wearing his uniform and driving a marked patrol vehicle.

4. After respondent abruptly looked at him, O'Connell exited from his vehicle and began to approach respondent.

5. Respondent got up from his seat and, in turn, approached O'Connell stating that everything was okay even before O'Connell questioned him.

6. Respondent appeared agitated, his eyes were bloodshot, he was rambling and his speech was incoherent. No odor of alcohol was detected.

7. O'Connell noticed a bag of suspected CDS and drug paraphernalia (a tube) on the table where respondent had been seated.

8. When he directed respondent to return to his seat at the table, O'Connell noticed several more bags of suspected CDS at respondent's feet.

9. Respondent was then placed under arrest for possession of CDS and drug paraphernalia.

10. During the course of his arrest, respondent told O'Connell that he had a problem with cocaine.

11. The bags and their contents and the pipe were submitted to the State laboratory for testing.

12. The laboratory analysis concluded that the substance in the bags and the residue on the pipe was positive for cocaine.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The issue to be decided is whether the District had just cause to remove respondent, a tenured educator.

As mentioned, respondent moved to dismiss the tenure charges claiming they were defective in that they were predicated, not upon possession, but upon his arrest, indictment and entry into the PTI program, the completion of which did not result in a favorable outcome of the criminal charges. In support of his argument, respondent cited West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962), a civil service case, where the following was stated:

> p]roperly stated charges are a sine qua non of a valid disciplinary proceeding. It is elementary that an employee cannot legally be tried or found guilty on charges of which he has not been given plain notice by the appointing authority. The de novo hearing on the administrative appeal is limited to the charges made below. (citations omitted).

In Bock, a firefighter, who was a civil service employee (not an educator), received a preliminary notice of disciplinary action for a potential suspension for being late three times in one month. At the hearing on those specific charges, Bock pleaded guilty. However, the Director of Public Safety, who governed the forum, considered Bock's entire background, which included incidents not named in the notice, and ordered his dismissal. In the appeal process, his removal was modified to a six month suspension. When the matter came before the New Jersey Supreme Court, the Court agreed with the length of suspension, but not the basis upon which it was decided. The original charges only gave notice of three specific lateness derelictions. However, Bock was actually tried and found guilty for habitual tardiness and consequent chronic neglect of duty based upon his entire attendance record over many years. The Supreme Court held that not only was Bock unaware of the penalty of removal, but also that he was being charged with chronic lateness. The original notice only mentioned the alleged three instances of lateness and a potential suspension, not chronic lateness or removal. Accordingly, the Supreme Court held that "[i]t is elementary that [a civil service] employee cannot legally be tried or found guilty on charges of which he has not been given plain notice by the appointing authority. The de novo hearing on the administrative appeal is limited to the charges made below." (Citations omitted). Bock, p. 522. (Emphasis added).

In the present matter, the tenure charges clearly articulated the reasons for respondent's arrest, the issuance of the summonses [complaints] and his indictment- that is, for possession of a CDS and drug paraphernalia. Paragraph eight of the tenure charges clearly explained that respondent's arrest and indictment were based upon his possession of a CDS and drug paraphernalia. Had there been additional criminal charges prosecuted at the hearing which had not been recited in the tenure charges, those additional charges would have been outside of the tenure charges and possibly precluded by Bock. However, here the tenure charges gave sufficient and "plain" notice to respondent. For the reasons set forth above, respondent cannot claim surprise as in Bock. Accordingly, his motion to dismiss is DENIED.

In tenure cases, the District bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relies by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). Tenure protects educators[3] from arbitrary dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Education, 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). It is designed to aid in the establishment of "a competent and efficient school system" by affording to teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service. Viemeister v. Prospect Park Board of Education, 5 N.J Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). Accordingly, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 provides that no tenured person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause."

One of the charges brought by the District was unbecoming conduct which has been broadly defined to included any conduct "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [government] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998). Behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct "need not be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Hartmann v Police Department of Ridgewood, 258 N.J Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992). In the context of a school tenure case, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974), certif denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974).

Educators are held to certain prescribed standards of conduct because of the public trust placed in their positions. In that regard, the Commissioner has stated that:

> they are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other > types of employment . . . Those who teach do so by choice, and in this respect the teaching profession is more than a simple job; it is a calling. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, School Dist. of Black Horse Pike Reg., Camden County, 1972 S.L.D. 302.

[3] Since respondent is an educator which term is defined as "a person . . . that educates, esp. a teacher, principal, or other person involved in planning or directing education" [The Random House College Dictionary 420 (Revised Edition 1984)], references to the cited high standard of conduct shall apply to all educators, including teachers, principals and vice principals.

See also School District of the Township of Parsippany-Troy Hills v. Hess, 97 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 34, in which it was stated that:

>
> [Id. at 51 (citing, In re Tyler, 12 N.J.A.R. 297).]

In In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ernest Tordo, School District of the Township of Jackson, 1974 S.L.D. 97, the Commissioner also stated:

> Teachers [and educators] are public employees who hold positions demanding public trust, and in such positions they teach, inform and mold habits and attitudes, and influence the opinions of their pupils. Pupils learn, therefore, not only what they are taught by their teachers, but what they see, hear, experience, and learn about their teacher. When a teacher . . . violates the public trust placed in him, he must expect dismissal or other severe penalty as set by the Commissioner.

> Id. at 98-99.

The fact that possession of CDS or paraphernalia occurred off school premises had no bearing on the determination that the possession, in and of itself, constituted unbecoming conduct. Willingboro Board of Education v. Lott, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 516, aff'd State Board of Education, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 35; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of McIntyre, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 718, aff'd, Appellate Division Docket No. A-5942-94 (July 10, 1996). "Possession of a controlled dangerous substance constitutes conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member and subjects a teaching staff member to penalty . . . The fact that criminal charges against the respondent were dismissed does not diminish his violation of the public trust. The appropriate penalty for the respondent is dismissal." McIntyre, supra.

Based upon the facts adduced, I CONCLUDE that respondent was in possession of a CDS, to wit: cocaine, and drug paraphernalia. Accordingly, the District has proven unbecoming conduct, incompetence[4] and other just cause.

With regard to his motion for back pay, respondent relies upon N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, which states:

> Upon certification of any charge to the commissioner, the board may suspend the person against whom such charge is made, with or without pay, but, if the determination of the charge by the Commissioner of Education is not made within 120 calendar days after certification of the charges, excluding all delays which are granted at the request of such person, then the full salary (except for said 120 days) of such person shall be paid beginning on the one hundred twenty-first day until such determination is made. Should the charge be dismissed, the person shall be reinstated immediately with full pay from the first day of such suspension. Should the charge be dismissed and the suspension be continued during an appeal therefrom, then the full pay or salary of such person shall continue until the determination of the appeal. However, the board of education shall deduct from said full pay or salary any sums received by such employee or officers by way of pay or salary from any substituted employment assumed during such period of suspension. Should the charge be sustained on the original hearing or an appeal therefrom, and should such person appeal from the same, then the suspension may be continued unless and until such determination is reversed, in which event he shall be reinstated immediately with full pay as of the time of such suspension.

During the time when respondent was under indictment, he was not entitled to back pay. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3. "Any employee or officer of a board of education in this State who is suspended from his employment, office or position, other than by reason of indictment, pending any investigation, hearing or trial or any appeal therefrom, shall receive his full pay or salary during such period of suspension . . ." Id. (Emphasis added). Here, respondent was indicted on December 9, 2004, and completed PTI on March 16, 2007, after which he claimed the criminal charges were dismissed. Therefore, respondent argues that his back pay should commence on the date he completed PTI [actually it should be the date of dismissal of the criminal complaint or indictment. N.J.S.A. 2C:43-13d]. In his moving papers, respondent certified that he was paid by the District until December 15, 2004, which was his last pay check following his indictment. On May 17, 2007, tenure charges were filed against him. He, therefore, asserts that he is entitled to back pay from the date of the completion of PTI until May 17, 2007, when tenure charges were filed[5] and from the one-hundred-twenty-first day after the tenure charges were filed until a determination has been made by the Commissioner.

New Jersey law provides that "upon certification of any charge to the commissioner, the board may suspend the person against whom such charge is made, with or without pay." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. However, "if the determination of the charge by the Commissioner of Education is not made within 120 calendar days after certification of the charges. . . then the full salary . . . of such person shall be paid beginning on the one hundred twenty-first day until such determination is made." Id. (emphasis added). The only exclusions from the calculations of the 120 day requirement are "all delays which are granted at the request of" the respondent as well as any mitigating salary received by the respondent "from any substituted employment assumed during such period of suspension." Id. "This statute contains mandatory language which requires that a board commence payment of salary on the 121st day after certification. It does not authorize a board to withhold such money until some later date, such as the conclusion of a tenure proceeding." IMO Tenure Hearing of Brian Yatauro, EDU 0793-99, Initial Decision (6/12/99), modified, Comm'r (10/13/99)

[5]Respondent did not certify when the criminal complaint or indictment was dismissed nor did he produce a copy of the order of dismissal.

<http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. The purpose behind the 120-day requirement was commented upon the Appellate Division when it said:

> It seems clear that in enacting it the Legislature must have had in mind the economic hardship endured by teachers and other board of education employees suspended without pay pending the outcome of charges filed against them and certified for hearing to the Commissioner of Education. We are certain, moreover, of the Legislature's awareness that in many instances, because of the volume of matters awaiting hearing, a prompt disposition of charges is not feasible. Thus, the obvious intent and purpose of the amendment was to alleviate the financial plight of those affected by providing for the payment of their full salary (less sums received from other employment during suspension) from the 121st day following the certification of charges until the determination thereof by the Commissioner, or in the case of an appeal by a board from a decision adverse to it, until the determination of the appeal.

[In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13 (App. Div. 1974).]

It is clear that the Legislature required that the salary was to commence on the 121st day. Yatauro, supra.

The 120 day rule is mandatory even if it is determined the teacher was rightfully dismissed. The ALJ in Yatauro emphasized the fact that a board must abide by the payment requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 regardless of whether the tenure charges were upheld or not:

> The law as it currently exists does not permit a board of education to refuse to pay to an employee the employee's full pay once the 120-day initial period has concluded. Where a board fails to do so, it cannot invoke equitable considerations to support a refusal to pay the moneys owed to the now ex-employee following his or her removal on substantiated tenure charges.
>
> [Ibid.]

The initial analysis of a statute's meaning begins with its plain language. Hardwicke v. American Boychoir School, 188 N.J. 69, 95 (2006) (citations omitted);

DiProspero v. Penn, 183 N.J. 477, 493 (2006). Where the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous, its interpreter should not turn to extrinsic interpretive aids in an attempt to ascribe to it further meaning. Id. at 492.

In the instant matter, tenure charges were filed on May 17, 2007, the 137th day of the year. Respondent is entitled to be paid from the 258th day, September 15, 2007 (the 121st day thereafter), until the Commissioner renders a decision.

As noted above, in addition to the first 120 days after tenure charges have been filed, a teacher may be suspended without pay "by reason of indictment." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3. These two circumstances are the only times when a teacher employed by New Jersey public schools can be suspended without pay. "A tenured employee may be suspended without pay only if indicted or if tenure charges have been preferred and certified to the Commissioner of Education. In all other circumstances, a suspension must be with pay." Slater v. Board of Educ. of Ramapo-Indian Hills Regional Hills, 237 N.J. Super. 424, 426 (App. Div. 1989). In the instant matter, respondent was suspended without pay after the criminal complaint or indictment was dismissed upon his completion of PTI and before the filing of tenure charges. As he was neither indicted nor facing tenure charges, respondent is entitled to back pay for this time. See I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Robert G. Morton, EDU 0253-97, Initial Decision (06/11/99), adopted, Comm'r (07/30/99) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/ search.html>.

In Morton, a teacher was indicted on numerous drug offenses, to which he pled and was sentenced to probation. Following his guilty plea, the Board of Education suspended Morton without pay for one month before filing tenure charges. Although Morton's dismissal was upheld by the Commissioner, Morton was granted back pay for the time he had been suspended without pay but no longer under indictment and before tenure charges were filed. "If the Board applies to the appropriate court and receives a forfeiture order, the effective date of forfeiture would be the date of conviction and Mr. Morton would not be entitled to any back pay. In the absence of such a forfeiture order, Mr. Morton's suspension should have been with pay until the Board certified tenure charges against him." Id. Since a forfeiture order was not presented in the instant matter, respondent was improperly suspended without pay for the time he was no longer under indictment until the date tenure charges were filed.

In opposing respondent's motion, the District relied upon Kerwick v. Trenton, 184 N.J. Super. 235 (Law Div. 1982), arguing that completion of PTI did not equate to a final determination in respondent's favor, and therefore he should be denied back pay altogether. This argument is without merit as Kerwick is irrelevant to the issues presented here. In that case, the court held that a police officer whose indictment was dismissed after successfully completing PTI could not seek reimbursement for his legal defense. Id. at 239. The relevant statute in Kerwick specifically required that the charges be dismissed or finally determined in the officer's favor before costs for his defense would be reimbursed. Id. at 237. See also Cressinger v. Board of Education of City of Newark, 256 N.J. Super. 155 (App. Div. 1992). That is not the issue here. In the above cited cases, the party claiming reimbursement for counsel fees was required to have a favorable outcome on the criminal charges. The matter here involves back pay, not reimbursement for counsel fees, and is without legal precedent to require a favorable disposition. The language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 places a mandatory requirement on the board, not a voluntary one. Yatauro, supra, EDU 0793-99 <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

Based upon the facts adduced, I CONCLUDE that the respondent is entitled to back pay, not only from the date of the dismissal of the criminal complaint or indictment until May 17 2007, when tenure charges were filed, but also from the one-hundred-twenty-first day following the filing of tenure charges until a determination has been made by the Commissioner. The amount of back pay is to be reduced by any and all sums respondent received by way of pay or salary from other employment during these periods.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the appeal filed by respondent with regard to the tenure charges be and is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

It is further ORDERED that respondent be provided with back pay from the date of the dismissal of the criminal complaint or indictment until May 17, 2007, when tenure charges were filed, and from the one hundred twenty-first day after the filing of tenure charges until a determination on those charges has been made by the Commissioner. The amount of back pay shall be reduced by any sums respondent received by way of pay or salary from other employment during these periods. In addition, respondent must establish the precise amount of pay to which he is entitled and shall promptly provide any documentation reasonably required by the District in its determination or confirmation of the amount due.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Dear Mr. El-Hewie:

I have reviewed the most recent request for emergent relief submitted by you in conjunction with the matter entitled Mohamed F. El-Hewie v. Board of Education of the Bergen County Vocational School District, Bergen County, Agency Dkt. No. 225-6/06, decided by me on April 10, 2008 and presently on appeal before the State Board of Education. Therein, you ask that I order immediate restoration of your employment and "rectification of the falsified record submitted by the [respondent Board of Education] to the Provisional Teacher Program," as well as appoint a special investigator to review "the corrupt actions of the Office of Controversies and Disputes that led to the Commissioner's decision to accept the malicious Initial Decision of the ALJ [Administrative Law Judge]."

In your submission, you contend that the Office of Controversies and Disputes "succeeded into sneaking a fraudulent Initial Decision by ALJ Margaret Monaco through the Commissioner's office with falsified review of Petitioner's written exceptions and permitted a corrupt ALJ to deprive Petitioner of his constitutional rights to the state-approved teacher training program." In support of this allegation, you recite a litany of instances where you believe the ALJ concealed "corruption and breach of professional standards" on the part of school district officials by accepting untrue testimony and/or falsified exhibits, and claim that the relief due you as a result of your petition is "[two years] overdue and has been caused by the unscrupulous actions of the Respondent and the Commissioner of Education."

Initially, as I did in my previous emergent decision, I note that any request for extraordinary relief must meet the established standard set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982); see N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Specifically, the requesting party must be able to demonstrate that s/he will suffer irreparable harm in the absence of immediate relief, that his/her claim is based on settled law, that s/he is reasonably likely to prevail on the merits, and that the balance of equities and interests lies in his/her favor. Having considered your present application in light of this standard, I once again cannot find that the relief you are seeking is warranted.

As you are aware, even assuming, arguendo, that your employment situation and certification status constitute irreparable harm, your application cannot succeed without meeting the remaining necessary criteria. In that regard, I note that – while you have made accusations of fraud, corruption, unscrupulousness and malice against both the Administrative Law Judge and staff of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes – these accusations are based on nothing more than your continuing disagreement with the ALJ's credibility determinations and the fact that my April 10, 2008 decision found your exceptions unpersuasive and adopted the Initial Decision of the ALJ; thus, I cannot find that your application demonstrates a likelihood of success on the merits. Further, I cannot find that your personal interest in obtaining the employment and licensure to which you believe you are entitled outweighs the finding to the contrary of a fully litigated administrative decision – a decision which, to any extent you believe it incorrect or unfounded, is fully reviewable by the State Board and courts on appeal.

Finally, I have considered your request that I investigate the conduct of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, and having done so, conclude that bare accusations of wrongdoing – based solely on the exercise of professional judgment with which you do not agree – do not constitute a sufficient or appropriate reason to direct the undertaking of an investigation.

Accordingly, I hereby DENY the application for emergent relief and DECLINE to conduct the requested investigation, and I remind you once again that any perceived deficiencies in the Commissioner's decision and the Initial Decision upon which it is based may be fully and fairly addressed by you on appeal.*

Sincerely,

Lucille E. Davy
Commissioner

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF VINELAND, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured, certificated supervisor in respondent's district – claimed that the decision of the respondent Board to appoint a non-tenured person as supervisor of early childhood education violated his tenure rights. Petitioner's position was eliminated in a reduction in force in July 2006 and he subsequently applied for a newly posted position as supervisor of early childhood education; the Board selected another candidate purportedly because petitioner did not possess the requisite experience in preschool education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19).

The ALJ found that: the only issue to be determined in this matter is whether or not petitioner has the required experience in preschool education; it is appropriate to review petitioner's experience as far back as may be relevant; petitioner's experience between 1976 and 1979 in a Philadelphia learning center for preschoolers unquestionably qualifies as preschool experience and is not precluded by regulation; and the wording of the regulation does not require hands-on experience. The ALJ concluded that petitioner's experience meets the regulatory requirements for experience in preschool education, and ordered that the Board provide the petitioner with back pay and emoluments due him from the date he was removed from their employ, September 20, 2006, until the date he returned to the district in another supervisory position, July 2, 2007; the ALJ also ordered that any income received during that period be considered in mitigation.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, with amplification regarding the appropriate standard of review and the ALJ's order for relief.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF VINELAND, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the parties' exceptions have been reviewed. No hearing transcript was provided to the Commissioner.

The parties stipulate that petitioner was a tenured, certificated supervisor in respondent's district. His job title was "supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis," and the description for that title is attached as Exhibit A to a Stipulation of Facts that was submitted by the parties prior to the January 4, 2008, hearing at the OAL (the Stipulation). On July 19, 2006, respondent abolished that and other positions in the course of a legitimate reduction in force. Petitioner was advised that his last day of employment would be September 20, 2006.

Later in July 2006, respondent's district posted the position of "supervisor of early childhood education." Petitioner applied, but a Ms. Bleistine – another employee who was qualified for the job, but not a tenured supervisor – was given the position. In response to petitioner's inquiry as to why he was not selected for the job, respondent's interim superintendent – in a letter dated September 7, 2006, which is annexed to the Stipulation as Exhibit D – cited two criteria set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19), which identifies qualifications for supervisors of preschool education. More specifically, the interim superintendent directed petitioner's attention to the following two job requirements:

> Each district Board of Education shall ensure that Supervisors of Preschool programs hold a New Jersey Supervisor's Certificate and have a background and experience in Preschool Education.

The interim superintendent advised petitioner that "it was determined that [petitioner's experience working from 1976-1979 in a Philadelphia learning center for preschoolers] did not satisfy the criteria of 'a background and experience in Preschool Education'."

Petitioner filed his appeal with the Commissioner on October 26, 2006. In its answer, respondent conceded that petitioner holds a New Jersey administrative certificate with a supervisor endorsement, but once again alleged that he lacked "the requisite background and experience in preschool education." In Paragraph 12 of the pre-hearing Stipulation it was reiterated that the reason for petitioner's rejection was that he did not have the background and experience in preschool education called for in N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 (a) (19) for the position of supervisor of early childhood education.

In the case file forwarded to the Commissioner is an unsigned and undated "Stipulated Statement of Facts" (Stipulated Statement) which appears to summarize the testimony given at the OAL hearing. Paragraph 21 of the Stipulated Statement recites that "[t]he only issue to be decided in this matter is whether petitioner had experience in preschool education, as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 (a) (19)." Paragraph 22 states:

> If petitioner had "experience in preschool education" as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 (a) (19) and was in competition with a non-tenured applicant, such as Ms. Bleistine, for the position of > supervisor of early childhood education, he would have been awarded the job because of his tenured status.

These two paragraphs can also be found on page 5 of the Initial Decision, at the end of the section entitled "Stipulated Facts."

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) concluded, after considering the hearing testimony and petitioner's job descriptions and educational certificates, as follows:

> [T]he experience described by petitioner meets the regulatory requirements of "experience in preschool education" found at N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 (a) (19).
> Initial Decision at 10-11.

In light of the facts concerning petitioner's administrative, supervisory and analytical experience relating to early childhood education, and for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision, the Commissioner concurs that it was unreasonable for respondent to determine that petitioner's experience relating to preschool education was inadequate. See, e.g., Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294-96 (App. Div. 1960); G.M. on behalf of minor child T.M. v. Board of Education of the Borough of Roselle Park, Union County, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 107, 109 (It is well established that actions of local boards that lie within their discretionary powers may not be upset unless they are arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives.)

Nor will the Commissioner disturb the ALJ's determination to disregard respondent's argument that its decision to reject petitioner's application for the early childhood supervisor position was justified by petitioner's alleged failure to have participated in annual training specific to preschool program implementation. This argument is untimely, as it appeared for the first time in respondent's post-hearing brief.[1] The Commissioner, therefore, adopts the Initial Decision of the OAL.

In considering the ALJ's order for relief, the Commissioner notes that it does not correspond with the relief that petitioner requested in his petition – i.e., placement into the position of early childhood supervisor in respondent's district, with retroactive salary and benefits. This may be explained by facts disclosed on page 5 of the Initial Decision. More specifically, after petitioner's job in respondent's district – as supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis – ended, he worked in the Bridgeton School District for ten months as supervisor of mathematics and science. On July 2, 2007 he returned to respondent's district as "supervisor for Tier I No Child Left Behind Data Analysis and Art."

The Commissioner assumes that the ALJ's order – solely restoring "back pay and emoluments owed from the date he was removed from employment, September 20, 2006, until the date he returned to employment in Vineland, July 2, 2007," minus any income he received during that period – reflects that fact that petitioner once again holds a supervisory position in respondent's district and no longer wishes to replace the current supervisor of preschool education. This assumption is buttressed by petitioner's failure to except to the relief ordered by the ALJ.

Accordingly, respondent shall pay to petitioner all back salary and benefits owed from September 21, 2006 through July 1, 2007, less any income petitioner received from employment during that period.

---

[1] Nor is it clear to the Commissioner from the wording of N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2 (a) (19) that it requires a candidate for supervisor of preschool programs to have already participated in annual training in preschool program implementation prior to his or her installation into the supervisor position.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

AGENCY DKT. 389-10/06

CAREY SAVAGE,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF VINELAND, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,
Respondent.

Robert M. Schwartz, Esq., appearing for the petitioner

Frank P. Cavallo, Jr., Esq., appearing for the respondent (Parker McCay, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 29, 2008 Decided: April 11, 2008

BEFORE DENNIS P. BLAKE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Carey Savage contends that the decision of the respondent, Vineland Board of Education, appointing a non-tenured person as supervisor of early childhood education violated his tenure rights. After agreeing to a stipulated statement of facts both parties agreed that the only issue to be decided is whether petitioner has "experience in preschool education," as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19). If he does, then it is agreed that he was qualified for the post and that his tenure rights were violated by respondent's failure to appoint him.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about July 20, 2006, respondent notified petitioner that his position as supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis had been abolished. He was advised that his last day of employment would be September 20, 2006. He remained on a preferred eligibility list in accordance with N.J.A.C. 18A:28-12. On July 24, 2006, he applied for the position of supervisor of early childhood education. On September 7, 2006, respondent advised petitioner that he was not qualified for the position, and on August 30, 2006, it had appointed a non-tenured applicant to the position. On October 25, 2006, petitioner filed his appeal of respondent's appointment of the non-tenured applicant. On November 2, 2006, respondent filed its answer. On November 8, 2006, the Department of Education transmitted the appeal to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. At a prehearing conference on June 25, 2007, it was revealed that petitioner had obtained another job and that a settlement proposal had been made. However, that proposal was turned down by respondent and the hearing was scheduled for August 28, 2007. That hearing date was adjourned due to the death of petitioner's attorney's father. On December 4, 2007, both parties agreed to prepare a joint stipulation of facts, which was filed and marked as Exhibit J-1. The hearing took place on January 24, 2008, and the record remained open until February 29, 2008, for the submission of briefs.

STIPULATED FACTS

1. Petitioner, Carey L. Savage (hereinafter referred to as "petitioner"), was initially employed by the respondent, Vineland Board of Education (hereinafter referred to as "respondent"), on or about March 24, 2003, in the position of "supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis."

2. The petitioner's position of supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis had a job description, which is attached hereto as Exhibit A. The actual title set forth in the job description is "supervisor of school reform and data analysis."

3. Among the qualifications for the position of supervisor of school reform and data analysis was the requirement that the holder of the position have a New Jersey administrative certificate in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-1 et seq., with a supervisor endorsement in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6:11-9.3 and -9.6.

4. Petitioner met the qualifications for the position for which he was assigned/initially employed, the title of supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis.

5. On or about July 20, 2006, Maryann Greenfield, the executive director of personnel for the respondent, corresponded with petitioner informing him that at its meeting of July 19, 2006, the respondent abolished his position pursuant to the authority found in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. Ms. Greenfield advised petitioner that he would remain on a preferred eligibility list in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12. Petitioner was further advised that his "last day of employment" would be September 20, 2006. Attached hereto as Exhibit B is Ms. Greenfield's July 20, 2006, correspondence.

6. On or about July 28, 2006, the respondent circulated an "internal posting" for the position of supervisor of early childhood education. Attached hereto as Exhibit C. On or about July 24, 2006, the petitioner applied for the position of supervisor of early childhood education.

7. On or about September 7, 2006, respondent, through its interim superintendent of schools, Dr. Keith Figgs, notified the petitioner that he did not "qualify" for the position of supervisor of early childhood education. Attached hereto as Exhibit D.

8. In his correspondence of September 7, 2006, Dr. Figgs referred to N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(15),[1] which provided that each district board of education "shall ensure that supervisors of preschool programs hold a New Jersey Supervisor's Certificate and have a background and experience in preschool education."

9. The respondent had a job description adopted on or about October 1, 2003, for the position of supervisor of early childhood education. Attached hereto as Exhibit E.

10. Petitioner holds a K–12 supervisor's certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners of the State of New Jersey. (See Exhibit I, which pertains to the certificates held by the petitioner, as well as the degrees he has obtained.)

11. In addition, petitioner also served as a program specialist for the Community Concern #13 Multipurpose Learning Center in North Philadelphia from 1976 to 1979.

12. Nonetheless, the respondent maintains that petitioner does not have the "background and experience" in preschool education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(15)[2] for the position of supervisor of early childhood education.

13. The respondent did not appoint the petitioner to the position of supervisor of early childhood education. Instead, the respondent appointed a non-tenured staff member to the position.

14. By virtue of the fact that petitioner served in the position of supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis from March 24, 2003, through September 20, 2006, he accrued tenure as a supervisor. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

15. The respondent appointed Nancee Bleistine as supervisor of early childhood education. Ms. Bleistine was appointed as coordinator of early childhood education by the respondent in March of 2004. (See Exhibit F.)

---

[1] Now N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19).
[2] See note 1.

16. Nancee Bleistine was the holder of a standard certificate in nursery school and elementary education (Exhibit G) and supervisor certificate (Exhibit H) issued by the State of New Jersey.

17. Nancee Bleistine has been employed from 1998 through the present at the Vineland City School District in the area of preschool/early childhood education.

18. Abolition of petitioner's prior job at Vineland as supervisor of whole school reform was proper and in keeping with all legal requirements.

19. If petitioner had not applied for the position of supervisor of early childhood education, Ms. Bleistine would have been qualified for that position.

20. The position of supervisor of early childhood education falls within the preschool programs covered by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19).

21. The only issue to be decided in this matter is whether petitioner had "experience in preschool education," as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19).

22. If petitioner had "experience in preschool education" as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19) and was in competition with a non-tenured applicant, such as Ms. Bleistine, for the position of supervisor of early childhood education, he would have been awarded the job because of his tenured status.

SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY

Carey Savage has been employed as supervisor for Tier I No Child Left Behind, Data Analysis and Art at the Vineland School District since July 2, 2007. Prior to that, he worked in the Bridgeton School District as supervisor of mathematics and science education for ten months. He was also chairman of the math and science committees. Prior to that he worked as the supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis in Vineland. His last day of employment in Vineland was September 20, 2006. In that job he had supervisory responsibility over Nancee Bleistine. Ms. Bleistine is the non-tenured applicant who was appointed to the position of supervisor of early childhood education, the appointment that is the basis for this appeal. She was a facilitator in the Whole School Reform program. She worked as a liaison for core curriculum coordination. She facilitated for grades one through four. Petitioner supervised her in these activities. Data analysis was required to make the data quantifiable for distribution to teachers throughout the school district. Ms. Bleistine was part of that process. Petitioner ran conferences to ensure that core curriculum content standards were being developed and followed throughout the school district. He supervised Ms. Bleistine to ensure that the requirements for grades one through four were met. He had occasion to go to her school and supervised her performance of her duties. He did this to ensure maximum benefit of the core curriculum content standards for grades one through four. He did reports on raw scores for grades one through four and analyzed various disciplines for these classes. He prepared reports on the scores and discussed them with teachers. He would convene conferences for all school teachers, including teachers of preschool through grade 12. He prepared a performance analysis report in accordance with the preschool report of N.J. ASK 3. The State wanted to know if preschool education was viable. He looked at preschool 3 and 4, that is, preschool for three- and four-year-olds. The object of this analysis was to ascertain if students fared better in elementary school after attending preschool. This analysis also involved the review of racial and language components. As a result of his work in this area, Vineland determined that students who attended a two-year preschool fared better academically in grade school than students who attended only one year of preschool.

Petitioner's job description for supervisor of whole school reform and data analysis stated that he would supervise facilitators from preschool through grade 12. He supervised the preschool supervisor. His job functions were to work cooperatively and collectively with preschool-through-grade-12 principals and other supervisors. He reviewed their work to ensure fulfillment of core curriculum line requirements. These requirements were set to prepare preschoolers to function effectively at grade-school level. He also was involved in the professional development of teachers and supervisors, preschool through grade 12. This development concerned making teachers and supervisors able to make data-driven decisions. This was done districtwide. He has made presentations to teachers and students at levels from preschool through grade 12.

Prior to his work at Vineland, petitioner worked as the program specialist for the Community Concern #13 Multipurpose Learning Center in North Philadelphia from 1976 to 1979. This was a private consortium involved with Head Start programs. In Philadelphia there was no requirement for public school students to attend kindergarten. The purpose of this consortium was to create a nurturing system and chart development of preschool-through-twelfth-grade students. However, during public school hours, that is, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., his group dealt exclusively with preschool students. He had ten preschool teachers, six of whom were certified, working for him. He was a program specialist responsible for these school teachers. He evaluated them, developed programs, and interacted with other teachers. He did direct observations of lesson plans of preschool teachers. He made recommendations for better performance. This was a preschool program. He evaluated all preschool teachers at the center. The center served sixty preschool students, who were three to four years old. The curriculum dealt with four modes of instruction which taught preschoolers at different intensities and used different modalities. His preschool teachers taught language arts and other basic disciplines. He ensured that there was proper teacher interaction with students. He also would meet with all preschool students' parents.

On cross-examination petitioner acknowledged that he never developed a curriculum that met New Jersey Department of Education preschool requirements, nor did he ever implement a New Jersey early learning assessment system. He was not sure of what the master teacher requirements were for a preschool teacher. He never developed a New Jersey early childhood progress aid plan. With respect to his work as a data analyst, he did not give the tests, he just analyzed the results. His job at Vineland was to make sure that preschool was viable. His in-service work at Vineland required him to speak about the data that he had analyzed and how to integrate that data with preschool-through-twelfth-grade students.

The consortium in North Philadelphia was involved with preschool-through-junior-high students. It was licensed as a private daycare center. His teachers at that facility did prepare lesson plans. The State of Pennsylvania and the City of Philadelphia licensed this facility as a private daycare facility and provided some funding. The consortium was made up of the sending schools.

CONCLUSION OF LAW

The parties agreed that the only issue to be decided is whether or not petitioner has "experience in preschool education" as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19), which reads as follows:

> Each district board of education shall ensure that supervisors of preschool programs hold a New Jersey Supervisor's Certificate, have experience in preschool education and participate in annual training specific to preschool program implementation.

In an opening statement, counsel for respondent cited the definition of the word "experience," as found in the Merriam-Webster Dictionary, as "direct participation in events as a basis of knowledge; practical knowledge, skill or practice derived from direct participation in a particular activity."

Respondent was asked to supply, in its brief, any additional authority that interprets, defines or explains the word "experience" as used in the above-quoted regulation. In its brief, respondent acknowledges that the terminology in question is not defined in the New Jersey Administrative Code, and then refers to the regulatory scheme adopted as a result of the Abbott v. Burke decisions, N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.1 et seq. It is recognized by this judge that Vineland City is an Abbott district. However, none of the regulations give any guidance for interpreting or explaining the "experience" contemplated by N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19). The next reference in respondent's brief is to a Self-Assessment Validation System (SAVS) referred to in N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(9). That system was to be the basis of a two-year program submitted by all Abbott districts by November 15, 2007. It is quoted by respondent as requiring, by September 2007, that all early childhood administrators possess early childhood credentials, meaning, "Preschool through Grade three certification, Nursery school certification and/or a Master's Degree in Early Childhood Education." See Respondent's Brief, Attachment A. If such a "system" were in effect at the time of the appointment in question it would be a relevant consideration in this matter. However, the requirement that early childhood administrators have early childhood credentials was not in effect until September 2007. Indeed the copy of the SAVS enclosed with respondent's brief indicates that it was revised in November 2007. The appointment of Ms. Bleistine as supervisor of early childhood education occurred on August 30, 2006, more than a year prior to the completion of the "system" and well before the Board was to submit its two-year program based on the "system." Clearly, this recommendation from a task force that, interestingly, included Ms. Bleistine, is not relevant to the appointment made in August 2006. Moreover, the inclusion of the recommendation for preschool certification is evidence that such certification was not a requirement before the "system" was completed and the program implemented.

I am left to an interpretation of the regulation that is evident from the plain meaning of the regulatory language. Oberhand v. Director, Div. of Taxation, 193 N.J. 558 (2008). Adopting the dictionary definition of "experience" offered by respondent, "direct participation in events as a basis of knowledge; practical knowledge, skill or practice derived from direct participation in a particular activity," petitioner's participation in preschool education will be examined.

There is no temporal qualifier on the experience requirement in the regulation. Thus, it is appropriate to review petitioner's experience as far back as may be relevant. Clearly, his experience from 1976 to 1979 in Philadelphia dealt significantly with preschool education. From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. he worked exclusively with preschool children. He directly supervised six preschool teachers. These responsibilities would unquestionably qualify as preschool experience and the regulation does not clearly exclude them just because they occurred thirty years ago.

The job description for supervisor of whole school reform in Vineland gave petitioner various responsibilities, including:

> 2. Work cooperatively and collectively with grades PreSchool–12 principals and other supervisors to ensure that instructional programs and services are coordinated in the elementary schools and are administered uniformly and equitably and meet the standards of School Reform and the district model(s) for School Reform.
>
> 3. Ensure coordination of services and articulation between the secondary and elementary levels of the instructional program by communicating frequently with instructional supervisors and principals on the grades PreSchool–12 level.
> [J-1, Exhibit A.]

In carrying out these responsibilities petitioner convened conferences for all teachers, including preschool, and prepared performance analyses. He observed preschool 3 and 4 classes to assess the effect preschool education had on three- and four-year-old children. This was done in conjunction with the NJ ASK 3 program. He also supervised the facilitators that worked with this program for preschool through grade 12. His responsibilities also covered the administration of the preschool supervisor, as well as ensuring that Ms. Bleistine effectively developed the core curriculum content standards and that they were followed throughout the school district. He was also involved with the professional development of teachers and supervisors, preschool through grade 12, in their ability to make data-driven decisions.

Although he has never developed a preschool curriculum, nor did he ever implement a New Jersey early childhood progress aid plan, petitioner's experience over the last thirty years has touched on numerous aspects of preschool education. This experience was never of the hands-on variety, he never personally taught a preschool class. But the wording of the regulation does not require that kind of experience. Nor does the regulation exclude experience gained in conjunction with other aspects of education. Indeed, the regulation covers supervisors, and does not exclude administrators whose preschool experience is limited to non-teaching duties.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the experience described by petitioner meets the regulatory requirements of "experience in preschool education" found at N.J.A.C. 6A:10A-2.2(a)(19). Since this hearing was limited, by the agreement of the parties, to this sole issue, respondent's reference to the requirement in that regulation of annual training is not addressed.

ORDERS

I hereby ORDER that the Vineland Board of Education provide to petitioner all back pay and emoluments owed from the date he was removed from employment, September 20, 2006, until the date he returned to employment at Vineland, July 2, 2007. I further ORDER that any income he received, including that derived from his work in the Bridgeton School District, during that period, be considered in mitigation.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Former school teacher, now employed in a new position as Parent Center Educator, sought nullification of the Department's determination disqualifying her from school employment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, as a consequence of her conviction on child abuse charges resulting from hitting her 8 year-old son with a plastic jump rope. Petitioner contended that in her new position – which is not enumerated in the statute – she has no regular contact with students, and should therefore not be subject to the disqualification law.

The ALJ found that the petitioner is not employed in a school but in an administrative office, in a building that does not house classrooms, and therefore is not employed in a position that has regular contact with students. The ALJ concluded that the criminal history record check law does not apply to petitioner, and she is therefore not disqualified from the position of Parent Center Educator.

The Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision, finding that: the ALJ misread and misapplied the controlling statute, which is properly interpreted to encompass any position with a potential for access to students; petitioner has full access to school grounds and the ability to hold or observe parent education classes in school buildings while school is in session; and there are no safeguards in place that would prevent petitioner from coming into contact with unattended children. The Commissioner determined that there is no basis for concluding that the criminal history disqualification law does not apply in this case, and dismissed the petition.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have exceptions filed by the Department of Education (Department) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.[1]

On exception, the Department urges rejection of the Initial Decision and reiterates its stance that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 must be interpreted broadly so as to effectuate the legislative intent of protecting public school students from persons deemed to be a danger to them, as reflected in that statute. According to the Department, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 applies on its face – without regard to particular assignment or location – to all teaching staff members and to a number of other specifically enumerated positions, several of which – such as school secretaries and maintenance workers – do not typically entail student contact in the performance of job duties; therefore, the Department asserts, the Legislature plainly intended its prohibition against school employment by persons convicted of a disqualifying offense to apply to any person whose position or credentialing provides potential access to the district's schools, and [1] Petitioner did not reply to the Department's exceptions.

hence, regular opportunity for contact with students. The Department contends that petitioner – by virtue of her qualifications, duties and compensation status as detailed at hearing – is both a teaching staff member and in a position providing unfettered access to district schools, so that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 must be read to preclude her employment in New Jersey public schools. (Department's Exceptions at 6-10; see also Letter Brief in Lieu of Answer and in Support of Motion to Dismiss at 4-9, Letter Brief in Reply to Petitioner's Brief in Opposition to Motion to Dismiss at 2-4, and Post-Hearing Brief at 6-11)

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner must concur with the Department that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) has misread and misapplied the controlling statute in finding that the criminal history record check law does not apply to petitioner.

Prelminarily, the Commissioner finds that the language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 applies categorically to all of the positions it specifically enumerates, regardless of their particular individual character. This being so, the ensuing phrase "or any other person serving in a position which involves regular contact with pupils" must necessarily be understood, as contended by the Department, in a similarly expansive manner – encompassing any position with a potential for access to students comparable to that of the enumerated positions.

In the present matter, the Atlantic City school district has attempted to accommodate petitioner's wish for continued employment, following her disqualification as a teacher, by fashioning a position intended to remove her from the purview of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1. However, the record is clear that petitioner continues to function in a manner that subjects her to the strictures of that statute: First, notwithstanding that the job description for Parent Center Educator (Exhibit P-2/R-10) permits a four-year college degree to serve as an alternative credential to teaching certification, the duties of the position are fully consistent with those of a certified teaching staff member;[2] accordingly, they command commensurate compensation, and petitioner was hired to perform them specifically based on her certification status and past experience as a teacher. Moreover, although petitioner's office may be in a separate administration building, it was uncontroverted on record that 1) parent education classes – which petitioner both teaches and supervises – can be held in school buildings while school is in session, 2) petitioner, as an administrator, has full access to school grounds, and 3) no safeguards are in place that would prevent petitioner from coming into contact with unattended children. (Testimony of Donna Haye,[3] as recited by the Department in Exceptions at 3-5[4] without objection from petitioner[5]) Under these circumstances, the Commissioner cannot reasonably find that petitioner's status and opportunity for contact with students are materially outside the scope of coverage envisioned by the Legislature; thus, there can be no basis for concluding, as did the ALJ, that the criminal history disqualification law does not apply to petitioner.

In so holding, the Commissioner is fully aware that application of the statute in this instance may appear unduly harsh; however, the inquiry in this matter is not – and cannot be, in light of the Legislature's 1998 action expressly foreclosing it – whether petitioner's

[2] Duties include assisting the principal in determining parent needs, providing demonstration lessons and technical assistance, assisting the principal in the development of instructional programs and evaluation procedures of program participants, and assisting appropriate administrative personnel in all matters relating to the Parent Center. The Parent Center Educator job description was presumably not submitted to the County Superintendent for review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.5 (the record is silent on this point); however, the position arguably should not be held by an uncertificated employee.

Additionally, according to hearing testimony referenced by both petitioner and the Department, petitioner was actually hired as a "Parent Coordinator" (supervisor of Parent Center Educators) rather than as a Parent Center Educator; however, no job description for that position was brought to the record and all employment actions by the Atlantic City Board of Education refer to petitioner as a Parent Center Educator. (Petitioner's Post-hearing Brief at 2; Department's Post-hearing Brief at 4-5; Department's Exceptions at 4-5; Exhibits R-11, R-12 and R-13)

[3] Assistant Superintendent Donna Haye is erroneously referenced, at various places in the Initial Decision, as Donna Hays or Donna Hayes. Her name appears correctly in the parties' papers, as verified through the district's staff directory at http://www.acboe.org.

[4] Reiterating its Post-hearing Brief at 3-5.

[5] The record of this matter did not include a transcript of the February 6, 2008 hearing, erroneously identified by the ALJ (Initial Decision at 2) as having occurred on February 7, 2008.

employment should be allowed because she poses no danger to children notwithstanding her conviction for a disqualifying offense, and will be eligible to have her conviction expunged in about two years. Although it is evident from the record that both the Atlantic City school district and the ALJ were influenced by their belief to this effect (Initial Decision at 2 and 4; Testimony of Donna Haye, Exhibit R-8), there can be no question that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 – as amended by P.L. 1998, c. 31 – no longer allows considerations such as the specific parameters of an applicant's position, the nature, seriousness, date and circumstances of an applicant's offense, and the applicant's history vis-à-vis other offenses and evidence of rehabilitation to enter into a determination of qualification for school employment. Were the Commissioner to hold otherwise, she would fail in her obligation to effectuate the Legislature's unequivocal intent to preclude judgment of individual applicants in the interest of ensuring the maximum degree of protection for children.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected for the reasons set forth herein, and the petition of appeal is dismissed.[6]

Ned P. Rogovoy, Esq., for petitioner

Joyce D. Atkins, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Anne M. Milgram, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: March 31, 2008 Decided: April 21, 2008

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ, T/A:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 8, 1999, in the Atlantic County Criminal Division of the Superior Court, the petitioner, Nina Chavis, after having pled guilty to an accusation charging her with child abuse contrary to N.J.S.A. 9:6-3, was sentenced to two years probation and costs of $180.00. The crime to which she entered a plea was described as "...hitting her 8 year old son with a plastic jump rope."

At the time of the offense, the petitioner enjoyed an excellent reputation as an elementary school teacher. The respondent learned of the petitioner's conviction on April 3, 2007, and notified her and the Atlantic City School Superintendent that it would seek to disqualify the petitioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, et seq. from her position as a certified elementary school teacher.

On May 9, 2007, the petitioner's resignation from the position of teacher at the Texas Avenue School in Atlantic City was accepted by the Atlantic City Board of Education.

On June 26, 2007, the Atlantic City Board of Education appointed the petitioner to the position of Parent Center Educator, effective July 1, 2007. The position of parent educator is not enumerated in the disqualification statute but may be such a position "...which involves regular contact with pupils..." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1.

The petitioner requested a plenary hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to the New Jersey Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and the Act creating the OAL, N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to 13.

A plenary hearing convened in Atlantic City on February 7, 2008, and the record closed on March 21, 2008, upon receipt of briefs and closing arguments.

As explained below, the petitioner is not disqualified from the position of Parent Center Educator because she will have no regular contact with pupils.

THE RELEVANT STATUTE

N.J.S.A. 18a:6-7.1 provides, in pertinent part:

> A facility, center, school, or school system under the supervision of the Department of Education and board of education which cares for, or is involved in the education of children under the age of 18 shall not employ for pay or contract for the paid services of any teaching staff member or substitute teacher, teacher aide, child study team member, school physician, school nurse, custodian, school maintenance worker, cafeteria worker, school law enforcement officer, school secretary or clerical worker or any other person serving in a position which involves regular contact with pupils unless the employer has first determined consistent with the requirements and standards of this act, that no criminal history record information exists on file ... which would disqualify that individual from being employed or utilized in such capacity or position....
>
> An individual, except as provided in subsection g. of this section, shall be permanently disqualified from employment or service under this act if the individual's criminal history record check reveals a record of conviction for any crime of the first or second degree; or > a. An offense as set forth ... in R.S.9:6-1 et seq.

The statute clearly seeks to protect children from the possibility of abuse or sexual predation by excluding convicted persons from employment in schools.

FACTS

The Assistant Superintendent of Atlantic City Schools, Donna Hays, is the person responsible for the supervision of petitioner. She recommended petitioner for the position of Parent Center Educator. She furnished a copy of the petitioner's job description. Petitioner's sole function as a Parent Center Educator "...is to provide assistance (instructional, corrective, remedial) to build leadership capacity for parents." She has no contact with students.

Hayes reviewed petitioner's credentials for the job. Petitioner is a former "Teacher of the Year" and Hayes rates her teaching ability as "excellent." She believed petitioner would be an excellent administrator. She is the person who hired petitioner.

Petitioner's office is on the sixth floor of the Administration Building. There are no students on the sixth floor of the Administration Building. In fact, there are no students assigned anywhere in that building.

The Department established that a parent meeting with petitioner might bring a child to the meeting. The Department also established that a student may become a parent herself and bring her child to the meeting. These are possibilities only and do not raise any flags. If such contact occurred, it would certainly not be regular contact. It would in fact be very irregular contact.

Petitioner is not a sexual predator. Her conviction is for striking her own child with a plastic jump rope, apparently on one occasion.

DISCUSSION

Petitioner Chavis is not employed in a school but in an administrative office in a building that houses no classrooms. Her clientele consists of teachers and parents. She less apt to encounter a student in her office than in the community. The only way that she may encounter a student is if a parent or parents, meeting with petitioner, brings his or her or their child to the meeting or if a student herself has a child and utilizes petitioner as a resource for her own child.

That children need to be protected from those who may injure them is an important function of the law and its prosecution. But the law should be enforced consistent with its legislative purpose. Removing petitioner from her position as a parent educator simply because, qua educator, she may appear to come within the ambit of the statute is overreaching. The persons "protected" here would not be children but parents for whom there is no need of protection. After all, petitioner's conviction was for a single act of corporal punishment on her own child at home.

FINDING, CONCLUSION AND ORDER

I FIND that petitioner is not employed in a position that has regular contact with students.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner is not disqualified for the position of Parent Center Educator with the Atlantic City Board of Education.

I ORDER that the petition seeking to disqualify petitioner from her position as a Parent Center Educator filed herein be dismissed.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

RECEIVED
2008 APR 14 A 11: 16
STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Wendell Lee
Trenton Board of Education

This SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT ("Agreement") is made between the Petitioner, Board of Education of the City of Trenton ("Board"), and the Respondent, Wendell Lee ("Lee").

WHEREAS, the Board filed tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education, Agency Docket No. 245-8/07, OAL Docket No. EDUTH 08169-2007S ("tenure proceeding"), in which Lee was charged with engaging in conduct unbecoming of a Board employee, specifically, inappropriate use of physical force against two high school students (striking one with a ruler and shoving another one) and inappropriate language towards students; and

WHEREAS, the Board can only rely on three students of the seven student witnesses to prove the allegations contained in the Charges because two students have left the School District and are not available to testify, one student is not available to testify because she is performing community service in New Orleans, LA and one student feels Lee's hitting another student with a ruler was an accident; and

WHEREAS, Lee is 76 years old and has been continuously employed by the Board for approximately 20 years without any disciplinary charges after working in the private sector for 35 years; and

WHEREAS, Lee denies that he used inappropriate physical force and denies using inappropriate language; and

WHEREAS, Lee intends to present testimony statements from other students to dispute statements made about his classroom behavior; and

WHEREAS, the Parties feel it is in the best interest of all involved and all issues related that the tenure proceeding be settled allowing for the expeditious resolution of this matter, and saving students from having to testify, and saving both Parties the cost of legal fees and uncertainty of litigation;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the covenants and mutual promises contained herein, it is hereby agreed as follows:

1. The Board agrees to dismiss the tenure charges against Lee;

2. Lee agrees to submit a letter of retirement effective June 30, 2008;

3. The Parties agree that Lee will not receive back pay for the one hundred twenty (120) days for the period of suspension without pay which occurred between August 27, 2007 and December 25, 2007 in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6;

4. Lee will remain on the payroll but will be placed on administrative assignment through the end of the 2007-2008 school year

5. Lee further agrees to voluntarily relinquish his teaching certification to the New Jersey State Board of Examiners effective this same date;

6. The Parties agree and covenant that neither party, nor any person, organization, or other entity on their behalf will file any charge, claim, lawsuit against any Party based upon the fact that the Board filed tenure charges or that Lee defended those charges;

7. The Parties recognize that each of them has had input into the drafting of this Agreement and agree that if there should arise a dispute as to its terms, this Agreement shall not be construed against either party based upon the identity of its drafters;

8. The Parties understand that this Agreement and its validity is contingent upon the approval of Administrative Law Judge Dennis Blake and the Commissioner of Education, and that if any terms of this Agreement are rejected, this Agreement shall be deemed null and void, and in such event, neither Party's position in relation to the tenure charge shall be prejudiced and the matter shall be returned to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing in relation to the tenure proceeding, and that in such event, the Parties may again attempt to settle the matter in a manner which is satisfactory to Administrative Law Judge Blake and the Commissioner of Education.

9. The Parties request that the tenure hearing be held in abeyance in order to obtain the approval of this Agreement by Administrative Law Judge Blake and the Commissioner of Education, and in the event that approval is not obtained by the proposed effective date of Lee's retirement, but is later approved, Lee is not entitled to salary payments during the pendency of obtaining approval of this Agreement after June 30, 2008 (the proposed effective date of Lee's retirement);

10. The Parties acknowledge that this Agreement is based upon their analysis and understanding of the evidence which would be presented should the hearing continue, and that in the event that this Agreement is not approved and the hearing is reconvened, neither this Agreement or anything in this Agreement shall be admissible in evidence;

11. In settling this matter, the Parties acknowledge that they are waiving their rights to a hearing before the Office of Administrative Law and the right to file exceptions to the Commissioner of Education as well as appeals in accordance with state law;

12. The Parties further acknowledge and agree to the terms of this Agreement and are satisfied with the legal representation that they have received in this matter;

13. The Parties warrant that this Agreement is entered into voluntarily, without any duress, or without any other promises or agreements not expressed herein, and with the understanding that neither Party is compelled to do so, and that by entering into this Agreement, each Party waives their right to a hearing and disposition on the merits of the charges;

14. Lee has approved the terms of this Settlement Agreement as acknowledged by his signature below;

15. The Board has approved the terms of this Agreement by a roll call majority vote and acknowledged by the execution of this Agreement by the Board President.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 7015-08
AGENCY DKT. NO. 135-5/08

M.R., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, J.R.,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON APPLICATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF KEARNY, HUDSON COUNTY,	:	FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter – including the audiotape of proceedings – and the recommended order of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, supra, and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. The Commissioner so holds, however, for reasons different than those stated by the ALJ.[1]

Initially, unlike the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that petitioner has met the threshold standard of irreparable harm notwithstanding that prom attendance is a privilege rather than a right, since the opportunity to participate cannot be regained once lost and dismissal of an emergent application on this criterion alone would effectively insulate a school district's actions in matters of this type from any meaningful review.[2]

[1] The ALJ delivered an oral decision from the bench that was somewhat more detailed than the written order embodying it; however, the basis for the ALJ's final recommendation is the same in both.

[2] In so holding, the Commissioner is fully cognizant of the well-established principle that a prohibition from attending events of this type does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant extraordinary remedy. However, harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In past cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity of the harm have frequently been addressed together; they are, however, two separate factors, and it is on the basis of the severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of interests – and not its irreparable nature that applications of this kind typically fail. Martin A. Domacasse v. Board of Education of the North Warren

However, applicants seeking extraordinary remedy must also demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying appeal and show that the balance of interests and equities under the circumstances rests in their favor. Here, the Commissioner cannot find that petitioner has met the necessary burden. Rather, the Commissioner finds – based on the testimony educed at hearing – that the petitioner has little, if any, likelihood of prevailing in a claim that the Board's decision to deny prom attendance to J.R. under the circumstances was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or unlawful, or that J.R.'s interest in attending his senior prom outweighs the Board's interest in maintaining consistency in its application of discipline and a safe and orderly environment in school and at school events.[3]

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application is adopted with modification as set forth above. Because the present decision fully disposes of all issues in dispute between the parties, no further proceedings are necessary, and this matter is, therefore, dismissed with the request that the Clerk of the OAL return the file to the agency pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-3.3.

Regional School District, Warren County, decided by the State Board April 17, 1996; L.J. on behalf of minor child, S.J., and David Wickham v. Board of Education of the Township of Manchester, Ocean County, decided by the Commissioner May 2, 2003. See D.M.S., on behalf of minor child, E.B., and Gregory Heck v. Board of Education of the Pinelands Regional School District, Ocean County, et al., decided by the Commissioner May 9, 2008.

[3] The Commissioner notes that the Board's policy on loss of extracurricular activities in conjunction with a student suspension does not clearly appear in the student handbook, and she suggests that the Board consider such inclusion in the future. This omission has no bearing on the present matter, however, since it is undisputed that the student body was fully aware of the policy, having been advised – and regularly reminded – of it through school assemblies during all four years of high school.

[4] This decision may be appealed to the State Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-27 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.1 et seq.

13. Voluntary and Knowing Agreement. Gilliland acknowledges that she has executed this Agreement after consulting with her attorney, David Nash, Esq., and after considering the terms of the Agreement, and further acknowledges that she has read this Agreement in its entirety, understands all of the terms and freely, voluntarily and knowingly, without duress or coercion, assents to all the terms and conditions contained herein.

LAWRENCE PALMER, Complainant, v. PEMBERTON TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION, Respondent.	ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT

APPEARANCES:

Steven R. Cohen, Esq. for the complainant (Selikoff & Cohen, attorneys)

LaTonya Bland, Esq. for the respondent (Capehart & Scatchard, attorneys)

BY THE DIRECTOR:

These matters are before the Director of the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights (DCR) pursuant to a verified complaint filed on December 16, 2002 by the complainant, Lawrence Palmer (Complainant), alleging that the respondent, Pemberton Township Board of Education (Respondent), subjected him to unlawful employment discrimination because of his disability and reprisal in violation of the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (LAD), N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 to -49, and also before the Commissioner of the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) pursuant to charges of unbecoming conduct filed by Pemberton Township Board of Education against Lawrence Palmer, a custodian with tenure status in its employ.

Complainant also filed a corresponding charge under federal law with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC). Pursuant to a work-sharing agreement between EEOC and DCR, Complainant waived further processing of his EEOC charge pending DCR's investigation of his LAD complaint.

On April 22, 2003, Respondent filed an answer to the verified complaint denying Complainant's charges of discrimination. On May 30, 2003, at the request of Complainant's counsel, DCR transmitted this action to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -21 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter before DOE was also transmitted to the OAL for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -21 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. By order dated February 26, 2004, the DCR matter (Lawrence Palmer v. Pemberton Township Board of Education, OAL Docket No. CRT 4059-03) and the DOE matter (Pemberton Township Board of Education v. Lawrence Palmer, OAL Docket No. EDU 6638-02) were consolidated for hearing, with the predominant interest assigned to the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights.[1]

The parties subsequently reached an agreement to resolve their disputes. On February 1, 2008, the parties filed with OAL a signed Agreement and General Release, which was dated February 22, 2007, the terms of which were approved by the Board of Trustees of the Public Employee Retirement System (PERS) on December 12, 2007. On April 10, 2008, the Honorable Daniel B. Mc Keown, Administrative Law Judge (ALJ), issued an initial decision dismissing the verified complaint filed with DCR and the charges before

BEFORE DANIEL B. MC KEOWN, ALJ (t/a):

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Despite the matters listed above having been settled between and among the parties by virtue of the Board of Trustees of the Public Employment Retirement System having granted Lawrence Palmer an ordinary disability retirement, and my recommendation being that the Director of the Division on Civil Rights and the Commissioner of Education accept the settlement attached hereto and incorporated herein as if set forth in full, the procedural history of the matter is presented because of the length of time these cases have been pending.

On August 29, 2002, the Pemberton Township Board of Education (Board) certified charges of unbecoming conduct to the Commissioner of Education for determination against Lawrence Palmer (or Palmer), a custodian with a tenure status in its employ. Respondent was simultaneously suspended without pay from his employment. Respondent filed an Answer within 30 days to the charges in which he denied the factual allegations and, among other defenses, set up as a Second Separate Defense his allegation that the Board acted in violation of the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 105-1, et seq. The matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on October 3, 2002, as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 and assigned to administrative law judge, Steven R. Reback.

On December 16, 2002, Palmer filed a verified complaint before the Director of the Division on Civil Rights by which he alleges the Pemberton Township Board of Education subjected him to unlawful discrimination because of his multiple handicaps, that the Board failed to make reasonable accommodation for his handicaps, and that it unlawfully reprised against him. At the request of counsel for Palmer, the Director transferred the matter to the OAL on May 30, 2003. At or about the same time the verified complaint was filed with the Director, Palmer also filed a verified complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Charge No. 17EA310226.

On January 9, 2004, the Honorable Steven C. Reback issued a recommended ruling granting the motion of the parties to consolidate the cases for purposes of adjudication. He also ruled that the Division on Civil Rights has the predominant interest in the matters. In a joint decision by the Director of the Division on Civil Rights and the Commissioner of Education dated February 26, 2004, the recommended rulings of ALJ Reback on consolidation and predominant interest were affirmed. The last paragraph of the joint ruling states:

> IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Division on Civil Rights has the predominant interest in this consolidated matter. The Administrative Law Judge will issue a single initial decision recommending findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.3. Upon transmittal of the initial decision to both agencies, the underlying record will be forwarded to the Director of the Division on Civil Rights to render his final decision, and award relief and assess a penalty, if warranted. The Director's decision and the complete record will then be sent to the Commissioner to take any action or grant any relief he deems appropriate.

In a letter ruling dated April 6, 2004, ALJ Reback granted the Board's motion to compel Palmer to undergo a psychological examination prior to hearing. An appeal of that ruling was taken to the Director of the Division who, on May 3, 2004, reversed ALJ Reback and held that sufficient examination results were already available to the Board. In an Order filed June 17, 2004, the New Jersey Superior Court, Appellate Division, denied the Board's motion for interlocutory review of the Director's ruling.

At or about the same time of the Order being entered by the Court, ALJ Reback retired. On August 9, 2004, the undersigned agreed to take the cases. During a telephone conference call held December 21, 2004, it was agreed to adjourn the scheduled hearing dates, and to reschedule the hearing for dates to be agreed upon at another conference call to be held December 27, 2004. The hearing was eventually scheduled to begin in March 2005 (See, Letter, December 27, 2004). The scheduled hearing was adjourned on the strength of a letter request dated March 7, 2005, joined in by both counsel and the deputy attorney general assigned to monitor the case for the Division on Civil Rights. The letter states in part:

> The parties are engaged in a serious but highly complicated settlement discussion which requires consultation with third party experts regarding the impact on certain proposals on Complainant/Petitioner Palmer. Because Mr. Palmer is mentally limited, and does not read nor write aside from a barely legible signature, the negotiations are further complicated by the special considerations required to protect his interests. Only because both parties consider these discussions may yield a settlement do they join in the request for additional time so they can devote their time to the require analysis rather than preparation for a hearing which may not be necessary.

The record shows that on or about September 19, 2005, Palmer submitted a proposed settlement to the Board regarding the case before the Division on Civil Rights, the matter pending before the Commissioner of Education, and the complaint filed before the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Efforts toward bringing these matters to conclusion continued by counsel and this ALJ. (See, letters dated October 5, 2005, November 5, 2005, August 24, 2006, September 6, 2006, October 10, 2006, October 23, 2006, and, November 30, 2006). In addition, counsel for the Board did provide periodic status reports of the matters.

Finally, by letter dated December 18, 2007, counsel advised that the Public Employees' Retirement System Board of Trustees, at its meeting on December 12, 2007, approved Palmer's application for ordinary disability retirement. A signed settlement agreement was eventually filed here on February 1, 2008, even though the date of the Agreement and General Release is February 22, 2007. Counsel explains in a cover letter to the settlement agreement:

> . . . [A]pproval of Mr. Palmer's application for ordinary disability retirement was the only contingency in the settlement agreement . . . which is why the Agreement and General Release is dated February 22, 2007. The PERS Board of Trustees acted to grant Mr. Palmer's disability pension on December 12, 2007.

I reviewed the settlement signed by the parties on February 22, 2007, and relied upon them to dispose of all issues in the consolidated cases including the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission case.

Parties seeking approval of a settlement agreement in a matter before the OAL must fully disclose the terms of the settlement and establish that the agreement is voluntary, consistent with the law, and dispositive of all issues in controversy. N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1(a) and (b).

To the extent Lawrence Palmer has been represented by effective counsel throughout this entire proceeding, and the Board has been represented by effective counsel as well, the settlement agreement is accepted as a full, fair, and final disposition of all issues presented and considered here, including the complaint filed before the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. The granting of an ordinary disability retirement allowance by the Public Employment Retirement Service Board of Trustees, and the concurrent withdrawal of all claims Palmer may have against the Board for any reason related to his employment, and the Board's withdrawal of tenure charges against Palmer, are terms acceptable under law to dispose of the verified complaint brought by Lawrence Palmer against the Pemberton Township Board of Education before the Director of the Division on Civil Rights, and justify the withdrawal of tenure charges, none of which are of moral turpitude, certified to the Commissioner of Education for determination by the Board against Palmer.

Accordingly, the Settlement Agreement and General Release, along with the Resolution of the Pemberton Township Board of Education's approving this settlement, received by the undersigned on April 7, 2008, attached hereto and incorporated herein dispose of Lawrence Palmer v. Pemberton Township Board of Education, OAL Dkt. No. CRT 4059-03, Agency Dkt. No. EC28WE – 48921E, Pemberton Township Board of Education v. Lawrence Palmer, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 6638-02, Agency Dkt. No. 284-9/02, and the complaint identified as Charge No. 17EA310226 filed before the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the DIRECTOR OF THE DIVISION ON CIVIL RIGHTS for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the DIRECTOR OF THE DIVISION ON CIVIL RIGHTS, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Director of the Division on Civil Rights does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-17.8, upon rendering its final decision the DIRECTOR OF THE DIVISION ON CIVIL RIGHTS shall forward the record, including this recommended decision and its final decision, to the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who may subsequently render a final decision on any remaining issues and consider any specific remedies which may be within its statutory grant of authority.

Upon transmitting the record, the DIRECTOR OF THE DIVISION ON CIVIL RIGHTS shall, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-17.8(c) request an extension to permit the rendering of a final decision by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION within forty-five days of the predominant agency decision. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not render a final decision within the extended time, this recommended decision on the remaining issues and remedies shall become the final decision.

Dear Judge McKeown:

I am following up on my December 18, 2007 letter and Ms. Bland's letter of January 24, 2008. We are hopeful that the parties' settlement agreement may be presented to the Commissioner of Education and the Division on Civil Rights for approval in the near future, now that the Public Employees' Retirement System Board of Trustees has approved Mr. Palmer's application for ordinary disability retirement. As you know, approval of Mr. Palmer's application for ordinary disability retirement was the only contingency in the settlement agreement (¶10), which is why the Agreement and General Release is dated February 22, 2007. The PERS Board of Trustees acted to grant Mr. Palmer's disability pension on December 12, 2007.

In reviewing our files, Ms. Bland and I realized that you were never presented with a fully executed copy of the Agreement and General Release. I am enclosing a copy for your records and use in writing your Initial Decision Approving Settlement. I have already provided you with the a copy of the PERS Board of Trustees' letter.

I called the Office of Administrative Law yesterday to see if I could get in touch with you by phone, and left a message for you with Judge Tassini's secretary. Please call me if you need any additional information.

Thank you for your continuing assistance to the parties in this matter.

Very truly yours,
SELIKOFF & COHEN, P.A.

PALMER further agrees that his signature on this AGREEMENT constitutes an acknowledgment that he is relinquishing all present and future rights to employment and re-employment with BOARD effective upon a final determination by PERS granting PALMER's petition for an ordinary disability retirement.

4. In full consideration of the mutual execution of this AGREEMENT, and the mutual agreement to be legally bound by its terms, and in recognition that PALMER's waiver of his tenure rights and right to a tenure hearing represents good and valuable consideration, BOARD:

(a) will immediately place PALMER on a medical leave of absence with pay, benefits and pension contribution from his duties as a custodian. The medical leave of absence with pay, benefits and pension contribution will be retroactive to January 1, 2006 and will continue through June 30, 2007 or such earlier date as the Board of Trustees of PERS approves PALMER's application. During the medical leave of absence, PALMER will have the unconditional right to full salary and emoluments of employment. In the event that his ordinary disability pension is not approved by the Board of Trustees of PERS by July 1, 2007, then this AGREEMENT will terminate unless mutually extended in writing by the Parties.

(b) AND will exercise its discretion pursuant to Probst v. Bd. of Ed. of Haddonfield, 127 N.J. 518 (1992), and restore PALMER's salary and adjustment increments for the 2003-2004, 2004-2005 and 2005-2006 school years and recognize PALMER's service as a custodian from July of 2003 through June of 2006 so that his salary for these years will be properly reflected as $30,011, $33,259 and $35,728, respectively. The PARTIES recognize that the restoration of the increments will result in a payment of $19,438.42 in back pay.

(c) AND will submit a Corrected Salary Form notifying the Division of Pensions of PALMER'S corrected salary for the 2003-2004, 2004-2005 and 2005-2006 school years, such that his pension will be adjusted upward to reflect an increase in the average of his three highest years' salaries, AND will pay directly to PERS $1,166.30 in additional pension contributions on PALMER's corrected salary, AND will issue an IRS Form 1099 INT to PALMER for the $1,166.30 to be paid by the BOARD to PERS.

(d) AND will pay PALMER the following sums:

(1) $19,438.42 in back pay. The Board will pay this sum to PALMER within fourteen (14) days of PALMER's tender of a partially executed copy of this AGREEMENT to the BOARD into an interest-bearing escrow account located at INSERT BANK NAME AND LOCATION in the name of "LAWRENCE PALMER" and this account will remain in place until either: (a) the final approval of the settlement memorialized by this AGREEMENT without modification by the Director of the DCR and the Commissioner of Education; (b) the granting of his ordinary disability pension application by the PERS or (c) the denial of his ordinary disability pension application by the PERS, whichever comes later. Provided that PALMER receives the ordinary disability pension and the settlement is approved as is contemplated by this AGREEMENT, the BOARD will cause the principal and all accrued interest to be paid to PALMER. The principal will be treated as wages and subject to usual and customary payroll deductions and the BOARD will issue an IRS Form W-2 to PALMER for the wages. The BOARD will issue an IRS Form 1099 INT for the accrued interest. In the event that PERS denies the pension application, the escrow arrangement will come to an end and the BOARD will receive all proceeds from the escrow account.

(2) $94,395.38 as payment of emotional distress damages in good faith reliance upon Murphy v. Internal Revenue Service. The BOARD will pay this sum to PALMER upon either: (a) the final approval of the settlement memorialized by this AGREEMENT without modification by the Director of the DCR and the Commissioner of Education or (b) the granting of his ordinary disability pension application by the PERS, whichever comes later.

(3) Neither the BOARD, nor its counsel, nor PALMER's counsel makes any representations as to the taxable status of the payments or credits set forth above, or any portion of them. It is further understood and agreed that PALMER retains full and complete responsibility for any taxes, penalties and assessments of any kind which may become due in connection with all payments made on behalf of the BOARD.

(e) AND will, to the extent requested, cooperate and assist PALMER in making his application for an ordinary disability pension effective December 1, 2006, including but not limited to the prompt completion of all necessary forms, such as the Employer Certification for Disability Retirement, the referral to BOARD-selected doctors for medical examination and the issuance of medical reports in support of his application for an ordinary disability pension, and including any appeals arising from any denial of his application, with the common goal being to attempt to get him an ordinary disability pension.

(f) AND will provide PALMER with all benefits and emoluments to which he would otherwise be entitled under the collectively negotiated AGREEMENT, federal law and/or state law, including but not limited to providing pension contributions and PALMER's existing health insurance coverage (including but not limited to major medical, dental, vision and prescription plans) until a determination by PERS granting PALMER's petition for an ordinary disability retirement.

(g) AND agrees to dismiss the Tenure Case with prejudice and without costs.

(h) AND will provide a neutral letter of reference in the form attached hereto as Exhibit A upon request to prospective employers of PALMER, which shall be limited to the period of PALMER's employment by BOARD, his salary history, and positions held.

(i) AND will provide neutral references upon request to prospective employers of PALMER, which shall include such information as the period of PALMER's employment by BOARD, his salary history, and positions held. Such references shall indicate that he remained an employee of the BOARD until his retirement. Any prospective employer who inquires as to PALMER's employment history shall be referred to the Superintendent of Schools and informed of his retirement. In no event shall BOARD, its officers, members, employees and agents make any statement to any prospective employer, verbal or written, which is adverse to PALMER's interests. All such references shall be cleared through the Superintendent of Schools.

(j) AND agrees that PALMER has been "terminated (other than by reason of gross misconduct)" effective upon a final determination by PERS granting PALMER's petition for an ordinary disability retirement pursuant to 29 U.S.C. § 1163(2), so as to qualify PALMER for continued health care coverage under the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, ("COBRA"), 29 U.S.C. §§1161-1168, should he elect such coverage. BOARD agrees to cooperate with PALMER to the extent necessary for his to be eligible for and receive COBRA benefits.

(k) AND agrees that BOARD, its officers, agents, administrators will be bound by a covenant of good faith and fair dealing with respect to performance under this AGREEMENT. BOARD expressly warranties that neither BOARD nor its agents or administrators will take any retaliatory action against PALMER.

5. PALMER further agrees and covenants that neither he, nor any person, organization or other entity on his behalf, will file, charge, claim, sue or cause or permit to be filed, charged or claimed any action for legal or equitable relief (including damages, injunctive, declaratory, monetary or other relief) involving any matter occurring at any time in the past up to the date of this AGREEMENT.

6. BOARD agrees and covenants that neither it nor anyone on its behalf will file, charge, claim, sue or cause or permit to be filed, charged, or claimed any action for legal or equitable relief (including damages, injunctive, declaratory, monetary or other relief) involving any matter occurring at any time in the past up to the date of this AGREEMENT or involving any continuing effects or any acts or practices which may have arisen or occurred prior to the date of this AGREEMENT.

7. PALMER hereby agrees and recognizes that his employment relationship with BOARD will be permanently and irrevocably severed effective upon a final determination by PERS granting PALMER's petition for an ordinary disability retirement, and that BOARD does not have any obligation, contractual or otherwise, to hire, rehire, or re-employ him in the future.

8. It is expressly understood that the determination of whether PALMER is eligible for an ordinary disability pension is solely within the discretion of the Division of Pensions and the Board of Trustees of the PERS, and neither BOARD, the New Jersey Education Association, the Pemberton Education Association or anyone else can guarantee that he will receive an ordinary disability pension. If, for any reason, his application is denied, his employment status will be restored to the status quo ante, it being understood that BOARD reserves the right should this occur to take whatever action it deems appropriate regarding his continued status as an employee of BOARD. Should PALMER's application for an ordinary disability pension be denied, the Parties agree, in advance, that neither this AGREEMENT, any medical facts discovered by the BOARD through the examination process by its doctors nor any reports or opinions issued by its doctors be presented by either Party in the trial of any tenure or discrimination case, nor will either party present any medical testimony of any other medical professional which refers to or relies upon such medical facts, reports or opinions in any way.

9. If PALMER's application for ordinary disability is granted, within one month of the granting of the application, the BOARD will give PALMER an opportunity to review his personnel file and designate items for removal. PALMER will prepare a complete inventory of the file and will mark the inventory and the original of each document to be removed from the file with an "R." The BOARD will immediately remove all copies of each document designated with an "R" from PALMER's official personnel file and turn them over to him for destruction. With those documents removed, only the documents designated on the inventory without an "R" will remain in PALMER's personnel file. The Parties specifically agree that all documents leading up to and relating to the cessation of PALMER's employment (including this AGREEMENT and the inventory) will be removed from PALMER's personnel file. The BOARD further agrees that no other documents will be placed in PALMER's personnel file and that no other files containing personnel information related to PALMER shall be maintained by BOARD, its officers, members, employees and agents;

10. PALMER agrees and acknowledges that the agreement by BOARD described herein and the settlement and termination of any claims against BOARD as set forth herein, are not and shall not be construed to be an admission of any violation of any federal, state or local statute or regulation, or of any duty owed by BOARD to him. PALMER further agrees and acknowledges that he has consented to the termination of his employment with BOARD effective upon a final determination by PERS granting PALMER's petition for an ordinary disability retirement, and to the execution of this AGREEMENT to provide an amicable conclusion of his employment relationship with BOARD.

11. Should BOARD fail to pay all monies owed to PALMER directly or to be paid on his behalf under this AGREEMENT as said monies become due, PALMER shall be entitled to have any arrearage thereon reduced to a judgment against BOARD upon the filing of appropriate documents with any tribunal having jurisdiction.

12. The Parties agree that each paragraph of this AGREEMENT is material. In the event that any portion of this AGREEMENT is determined to be illegal or the Director of the Division on Civil Rights or the Commissioner of Education fail or refuse to approve the settlement as memorialized in this AGREEMENT without change , the Parties agree, in advance, to reform the AGREEMENT in good faith to provide each Party with the full benefit of the settlement memorialized by the AGREEMENT to the extent permitted by law.

13. By signing this AGREEMENT, the Parties certify that they have had the opportunity to discuss this AGREEMENT with counsel. They are fully satisfied with the services of their counsel with respect to both this AGREEMENT and all other aspects of this

13. By signing this AGREEMENT, the Parties certify that they have had the opportunity to discuss this AGREEMENT with counsel. They are fully satisfied with the services of their counsel with respect to both this AGREEMENT and all other aspects of this case and they enter into this AGREEMENT knowingly, willingly and without any coercion or improper inducements.

14. By signing this AGREEMENT, each signatory represents that he or he is a Party or has been duly authorized by a Party to sign on that Party's behalf.

15. The parties agree that this AGREEMENT may be signed in counterparts and that facsimiles of signatures will have the same force and effect as original signatures.

Intending to be legally bound hereby, the PARTIES execute the foregoing AGREEMENT this 22nd day of February, 2007

The record of this matter, the audiotape of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the recommended order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.[1]

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the petitioner has failed to meet the requisite standard for the granting of emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. In particular, the Commissioner notes that applicants seeking such extraordinary remedy must demonstrate a likelihood of success on the

Accordingly, the ALJ's recommendation that petitioner's application be denied is adopted as the final order in this emergent matter, which shall be returned to the OAL for such proceedings as are necessary to bring it to closure.[3]

[3] The Commissioner stresses that this matter was transmitted to the OAL solely on the question of whether the Board acted unreasonably in determining not to remove respondent Hill – in the interest of student safety and protection of witness integrity – from contact with students during the pendency of its investigation into the underlying incident involving petitioner's child.

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner G.J. o/b/o E.J., a minor child, has petitioned the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq., for an order (1) seeking immediate removal of a teacher from his classroom assignment due to his alleged assault against E.J.; and (2) removing the teacher from any contact with minors at all for the safety of the other students.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 19, 2008, petitioner G.J., E.J.'s mother, filed a petition with the Commissioner seeking emergent relief. On May 21, 2008, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education notified petitioner that the Bureau could take no action regarding her request for termination of respondent's employment or loss of his license due to the fact that such matters are within the exclusive purview of the local district board of education and State Board of Examiners, respectively. However, the Bureau set forth that it would construe her petitions as an emergent appeal of the Berlin school district's determination not to suspend teacher Wesley Hill while its investigation into her allegations is pending pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3. The Bureau advised her that she would have to demonstrate the standards set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. The Director thereafter transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on May 22, 2008, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 for determination as a contested case. I heard the application for emergent relief on May 27, 2008.

DISCUSSION

For a request for interim relief or stay, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 requires as follows:

> (b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

I have heard the arguments of all parties and read their submissions.

E.J. is thirteen years old and is in eighth grade at the Berlin Community School in Berlin, New Jersey. Wesley Hill is a teacher at the Berlin Community School. He is not E.J.'s teacher.

In her Motion for Emergent Relief, petitioner contends:

1. Her son, E.J., was assaulted by teacher Wesley Hill on a school bus during a field trip on May 16, 2008, resulting in a split lip.

2. G.J. reported the assault to the school principal. He took a report and said he could not follow up until Monday because the teacher had left for the day.

3. G.J. reported the assault to the police department, and Michael Merlino witnessed the injury to her son's lip.

4. Despite her report to the principal, G.J. arrived at the school on Monday May 19, 2008, and found Mr. Hill still teaching in the school. The principal's superior assured her and her husband that the matter was being investigated.

5. As a result of being injured and humiliated by Mr. Hill in front of his classmates, E.J. is extremely intimidated and afraid of Mr. Hill.

6. Mr. Hill never apologized for his actions or reported the incident to anyone, as would have been proper procedure.

G.J. requests that Mr. Hill no longer be employed in the school that her son attends, and, for the safety of other students, that he not be dealing with minors at all.

Counsel for the Board has responded that the Board's investigation showed that E.J. and other students were on a bus on a school field trip when they began playing with water bottles. Mr. Hill interceded and asked E.J. to give him the water bottle. In the process of taking the bottle from E.J., the movement of the bus and the way E.J. handed it to him caused the bottle to hit E.J. on the lips causing a "split lip." The District reviewed the videotape taken on the bus and interviewed five students. Neither the tape nor the students' statements proved allegations of assault. The District concluded that the incident was an accident and no disciplinary action against Mr. Hill was warranted. The Board argues that the standards for emergent relief have not been met. In view of the fact that the Board has already acted to investigate this matter and already concluded that no disciplinary action is warranted, it also argues that the demand for emergent relief pending investigation is moot.

With regard to whether petitioner has met the first standard of demonstrating irreparable harm, petitioner has established that her son was humiliated by the incident. Mr. Hill's discussion of the incident with E.J.'s classmates, saying that E.J. was trying to get him fired, is causing E.J. to be harassed by his classmates. Further, because Mr. Hill was not suspended, E.J. is intimidated by Mr. Hill every time he sees him and he is fearful of attending school in general because he no longer feels safe if teachers can assault him without consequences. I CONCLUDE that petitioner has established irreparable harm.

The next standard, that the legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled, cannot be met. Petitioner argues that she meets this standard because assault on a student is conduct unbecoming a teacher and is therefore just cause for suspension. Although this is true, there is no precedent for a parent to compel such action when the local board refuses to act. Clearly, as set forth in the letter to petitioner from the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, teaching staff members may be suspended. N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6. However, the statute gives such authority to the superintendent of schools, with the approval of the president of the board employing him. Similarly, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 provides for the suspension with pay of any employee of a board of education pending any investigation, hearing or trial. This statute gives local boards of education the authority to suspend pending an investigation; it does not require that they do so, nor does it authorize a parent to compel the board to suspend pending an investigation if the board does not feel it is necessary. I therefore CONCLUDE that the legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is not settled.

For the same reason that the legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is not settled, the petitioner has not established a reasonable probability of success on the merits. The petitioner must clearly and convincingly show that the material facts are not in dispute and the legal claim upon which the application is based is settled or free from doubt. Sherman v. Sherman, 330 N.J. Super. 638, 645 (Ch. Div. 1999). In the present case, all the material facts are in dispute. The tape of the incident neither exonerates nor implicates Mr. Hill in an assault against E.J. The representations of the parties are completely at odds. Further, because discipline of board employees is solely within the purview of the local board of education, there is no legal authority on which I can rely to suspend or ultimately terminate the employment of a teaching staff member separate from the process established by law for removal of tenured employees. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. I therefore CONCLUDE that the petitioner has not established a likelihood of success on the merits.

Although the petitioner persuasively set forth why a balancing of the interests of the parties favors E.J.'s interests over the Board's, we need not reach this standard due to the inability of the petitioner to satisfy two of the four standards as set forth above.

In conclusion, petitioner has not demonstrated that the legal right underlying this claim is settled, nor has she established that she has a reasonable probability of success on the merits. Therefore, she does not satisfy the Crowe v. DeGioia standards and the Motion for Emergent Relief must be denied.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergent relief is DENIED. Based on the limited issue that the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes transmitted for consideration by the OAL, no other issues remain for this forum once the emergent matter is resolved.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT REGARDING ACTIONS PENDING BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

This SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT is entered into by and between the Board of Education of the City of Camden ("Board") and its employee, Charles Shepherd ("Shepherd").

WHEREAS, Shepherd has been continuously employed by the Board in various capacities, since in or around 1987, and most recently as an Acting Bus Aide; and

WHEREAS, on March 26, 2007 the Board voted to terminate Shepherd due to "Conduct Unbecoming of a Board Employee"; and

WHEREAS, Shepherd appealed the termination of his employment by the Board, which resulted in a contested case before the Commissioner, State of New Jersey, Department of Education, OAL Docket No. EDUOA 06493-2007S, Agency Ref. No. 179-6/07; and

WHEREAS, both parties are aware that the basis of Shepherd's termination by the Board was a refusal by Shepherd to take a drug test at the Board-appointed laboratory on the day requested by Board employees; and

WHEREAS, both parties acknowledge that the reason for the Board's requirement for Shepherd to take a drug test upon his return to work was because Shepherd had enrolled in an in-patient drug rehabilitation facility without prior knowledge to the Board; and

WHEREAS, both parties acknowledge and agree that, as Shepherd is employed as an Acting Bus Aide, his position is governed by all of the governance policies of the Board including, in particular, Policy 4119.23/4219.23 Smoking, Drinking and Use of Drugs on School Premises; Employee Substance Abuse which requires that employees with commercial driving licenses and/or who perform safety-sensitive functions fall under the requirements of the Omnibus Transportation Employee Testing Act of 1991; and

WHEREAS, the Board and Shepherd have each retained independent counsel of their own choosing, and have been advised of their respective rights and responsibilities pursuant to Title 18A and now wish to resolve the disputed matters between them amicably; and

WHEREAS, neither party acknowledges any liability or wrongdoing in this disputed matter;

NOW THEREFORE, the matters in dispute having been amicably adjusted by and between the parties, it is hereby stipulated and agreed as follows:

1. The above recitals are repeated and made a part of this Settlement Agreement by reference;

2. The Board will seek the Commissioner's approval for this Settlement Agreement, and if the Commissioner approves the Settlement Agreement without modification, the Board shall return Shepherd to his former position and step with all benefits, medical, dental, vision, accrued sick time, vacation, pension, and entitlements in place as of Shepherd's separation from employment on March 26, 2007;

3. This Agreement constitutes the last chance Shepherd has to continue his employment with the Board. Any breach of the terms of this Last Chance Agreement by Shepherd will result in Shepherd's termination of employment from the Board and Shepherd and the Board agree that Shepherd shall not ever serve as an employee of the Board again;

4. Should the Commissioner fail to approve this Settlement Agreement without modification, the parties have agreed to make every reasonable effort to reform this Settlement Agreement to meet any objections. In the event that such reformation is not possible, this Settlement Agreement will become null and void, the parties will return to the status quo as it existed before this Settlement Agreement was drafted, the matter will be listed for a plenary hearing and the parties agree, in advance that neither the settlement, this Settlement Agreement, the Joint Request for Approval of Settlement, nor any representations of fact set forth in the settlement, this Settlement Agreement or the Joint Request for Approval of Settlement will be admissible for any purpose in the hearing or any appeals arising therefrom.

5. Shepherd shall not be entitled to any "back-pay" as a result of this Settlement Agreement, but shall receive a one-time payment of $5,000.00, which shall not have any precendential value nor will such payment in any way affect or increase Shepherd's salary, possible increments, longevity or otherwise;

6. For a period of eighteen (18) months from the Commissioner's final approval of this agreement by and between Shepherd and the Board, Shepherd consents in advance to submit to any alcohol testing or drug testing, e.g. Breathalyzer analysis, blood testing, urine testing, upon request by the Board or its administrators for the presence of alcohol and/or any controlled dangerous substance ("CDS") in his body. Such testing is to take place at a licensed, Board-designated hospital, laboratory or clinic utilizing the then-current standards accepted by the United States Department of Transportation and in use by the Board. In the event that the sample tests of Shepherd are positive, it will be considered a violation of this agreement by Shepherd and the Board shall immediately terminate Shepherd from his employment with the Board. In the event of a violation of this agreement by Shepherd, following the principles articulated in Yaniello, Shepherd acknowledges that his employment will be terminated.

7. Upon termination of employment from the Board, Shepherd agrees that he will have breached this Last Chance Agreement and agrees that his termination from the Board is not appealable in any forum or court of law but shall be deemed final and determinative. This includes, but is not limited to, the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law, New Jersey Department of Personnel, grievance arbitrations, Public Employment Relations Commission, state courts, and federal courts under any law or theory of law;

8. Shepherd agrees that he has been fairly and adequately represented and advised at all stages of these proceedings, that he is fully satisfied with the services of counsel and that he is voluntarily, without coercion and with a full understanding of his rights and the ramifications of this Settlement Agreement, entering into it on his own accord. Shepherd fully understands that this Settlement Agreement is subject to the approval of the Commissioner of Education.

9. The signatory for the Board acknowledges that the Board has ratified this Settlement Agreement at a duly-noticed meeting.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 154-5/08

KENTWOOD ACADEMY, PETITIONER, V. LUCILLE DAVY, COMMISSIONER, NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION ON APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF

The record of this matter – including the audiotape of proceedings – and the recommended order of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1]

Upon such review, the Commissioner finds that she cannot concur with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that petitioner has demonstrated entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Initially, the Commissioner does agree with the ALJ – for the reasons expressed in the OAL order (at 3) – that petitioner has met the threshold standard of irreparable harm. However, applicants seeking the extraordinary remedy of emergent relief must also demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying appeal and show that the balance of interests and equities under the circumstances rests in their favor, and the Commissioner cannot find that petitioner here has done so.

With respect to settled law and likelihood of success on the merits, the Commissioner finds that petitioner has not shown the Department of Education (Department) to have acted in any manner inconsistent with either controlling law or the May 15, 2007 settlement agreement (Petitioner's Exhibit N, Respondent's Exhibit J) by which the parties – both represented by counsel – voluntarily, fully and with finality concluded their lengthy history of differences, including the alleged wrongs perpetrated against petitioner by the Department. That agreement provided on its face that petitioner had until March 31, 2008 to comply with the regulatory requirement for an average daily enrollment of 24 public school placement students, and that such average would be based on enrollment between April 1, 2007 through March 31, 2008; petitioner does not claim to have met this requirement as stipulated, and does not even allege that the Department failed to accord petitioner the requisite time to do so. Further, petitioner's contention that the Department failed to issue the stipulated letter to sending districts is a bare assertion unsupported by evidence and denied by the Department, so that material facts in this regard are, at a minimum, in dispute.[2] Thus, the Commissioner cannot agree with the ALJ that "interpretation of [the settlement agreement] could result in petitioner's claim being settled as a matter of law," or that "based upon the circumstances and actions taken by the [Department] prior to the settlement, it is likely petitioner will prevail on the merits of its underlying claim." (Order at 3)

[1] Respondent filed exceptions to the OAL order, and a reply was subsequently filed by petitioner; however, because applicable rules make no provision for such submissions, these have not been considered by the Commissioner in reviewing this matter.

Finally, the Commissioner finds the balance of equities and interests in this matter to be in equipoise. While the ALJ noted the potential impact of denial of a stay upon the school and students who will need to obtain new placements for next year (Order at 3), the Commissioner finds that these do not outweigh the Department's interest in enforcing rules designed to ensure effective and efficient provision of public school services or the disruption to students' education that will occur if a stay is granted and petitioner does not prevail on the merits of its claims, resulting in revocation of its approval in mid-year.

[2] To any extent that petitioner may be relying – as suggested by the petition of appeal at 8, ¶30 – on the fact that the required letter (Respondent's Exhibit K) was dated May 14, 2007 and the stipulation was not executed until May 15, 2007, the Commissioner here rejects that argument as placing form over substance in view of the fact that the May 14, 2007 letter is identical to the May 10, 2007 draft incorporated into the stipulation by reference.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, the recommended Order of the OAL granting petitioner's application for emergent relief is rejected. The application is instead DENIED, and petitioner's claim shall proceed to hearing on the merits.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

KENTWOOD ACADEMY,
Petitioner,
v.
LUCILLE DAVY, COMMISSIONER,
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,
Respondent.

Thomas O. Johnston, Esq., appearing for petitioner (Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, attorneys)

Cynthia Raymond Rimol, Deputy Attorney General, appearing for respondent (Anne Milgram, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

BEFORE BARRY N. FRANK, ALJ:

Petitioner brings this action seeking emergency relief by way of issuance of temporary restraints enjoining respondent from revoking petitioner's status as an approved private school for the disabled. Petitioner also seeks injunctive relief with the Superior Court of New Jersey regarding the same issues scheduled to be heard on June 4, 2008. Petitioner requests this court retain jurisdiction if the Superior Court does not. On May 28, 2008, the Commissioner of Education received petitioner's application for emergent relief. The Commissioner of Education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on June 2, 2008. On June 3, 2008, oral argument was presented before the undersigned.

Kentwood Academy is an approved private school that educates disabled children classified with emotional and behavioral limitations. On May 20, 2005, the Department of Education (DOE) notified Kentwood that it had been approved to operate two classrooms with a maximum capacity of nine students per classroom. An unannounced inspection by the DOE was conducted on June 19, 2006. Based upon the findings of that inspection, Kentwood was placed on conditional approval status, preventing Kentwood from accepting new students until they were in compliance.

Upon Kentwood's application for emergent relief in September 2006, the undersigned issued an order restraining the DOE from placing Kentwood on conditional approval status. The parties entered into a partial stipulation of settlement on December 12, 2006, whereby Kentwood was in compliance with the DOE regulations and was not on conditional approval status. The parties reached a final stipulation of settlement on May 15, 2007, whereby it was agreed in part that Kentwood would have until March 31, 2008, to establish an average daily enrollment (ADE) of twenty-four public school placement students. This settlement was predicated upon the rescission of the March 14, 2007 letter by letter dated May 10, 2007.

The standards to be met for emergent relief as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) and Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), are:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

[N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).]

In the instant case, upon a consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, I FIND that petitioner is entitled to emergent relief since the standards set forth in Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) have been met.

If the current letter issued by the DOE is not rescinded prior to a full hearing, the harm to petitioner will be irreparable. Effectively, petitioner would be out of business before the hearing took place which would make the hearing meaningless.

A settlement agreement was entered into between the parties. This agreement is a contract and interpretation of this agreement could result in petitioner's claim being settled as a matter of law.

Similarly, based upon the circumstances and actions taken by the DOE prior to the settlement, it is likely petitioner will prevail on the merits of its underlying claim.

Finally, upon balancing the equities and interests of the parties, by failing to issue an injunction pending a full hearing, the school would be closed and its twenty-nine students would be forced to find another school. Clearly, under these circumstances, it is petitioner and its students who would suffer the greater harm if relief were not granted.

Therefore, petitioner's motion for emergent relief is GRANTED.

It is ORDERED that within ten days from the date of the execution of this order, the following is to take place:

a) The DOE is enjoined from revoking Kentwood's approval status effective July 1, 2008;

b) Pending final adjudication of this matter, Kentwood will continue to be considered an approved private school for students with disabilities; and

c) Surrounding sending districts are to be notified in writing that Kentwood is approved to accept student enrollment for the 2008-09 school year.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF BUTLER, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. In that the relief sought by the instant petition of appeal – which was transmitted to the OAL in July 2007 – would be rendered moot subsequent to K.W.'s graduation on June 19, 2008, pursuant to a telephone conference call between the parties and the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, it was agreed that the Commissioner's review of this matter would be conducted on an expedited basis. Consequently, it was similarly agreed that the parties would necessarily have a significantly abbreviated schedule for the submission of exceptions and reply exceptions to the Initial Decision (i.e., close of business on June 10 and close of business on June 12, 2008, respectively). Exceptions of the Board and petitioners' reply thereto were filed in accordance with this schedule and were fully considered by the Commissioner in making her determination herein.

Upon her review of the record – which included transcripts of the hearing conducted at the OAL on February 25 and March 27, 2008 – and after full consideration of exception submissions, the Commissioner agrees with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion that – under the particular circumstances in this matter – the Board's determination that K.W. was ineligible to apply to the National Honor Society (NHS) in the spring semester of his junior year was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable and that K.W. should have been allowed to apply.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons comprehensively detailed therein. The Commissioner directs that K.W. be invited to immediately apply to the NHS and that an ultimate determination as to his application be made no later than 12:00 p.m. on Monday, June 16, 2008.

BORO OF BUTLER BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Stuart J. Moskovitz, Esq., for petitioner C.W. & S.W. o/b/o K.W.

David W. Carroll, Esq., for respondent Boro of Butler Board of Education (Parker McCay, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 13, 2008 Decided: June 4, 2008

BEFORE BARRY E. MOSCOWITZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Students who have cheated at Butler High School are not allowed to apply to the National Honor Society (NHS). Respondent Board of Education did not allow petitioner K.W. to apply because the high school principal misremembered that K.W. had been found to have cheated on an exam. Should K.W. have been allowed to apply? Yes. It is arbitrary and capricious to deem that a student had cheated when no such determination had been made.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In the spring semester of his junior year at Butler High School, K.W. was not allowed to apply to the NHS. K.W. filed a grievance with the Board of Education but the Board upheld the determination. As a result, K.W. filed an appeal with the Commissioner of Education.

On July 26, 2007, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. On February 25, 2008, and March 27, 2008, a hearing was held and the parties were permitted to submit closing briefs. The record was closed upon their receipt and only reopened to accept the transcript.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

In June 2005, K.W. sat for his final exam in chemistry. It was the last day of school and the end of his sophomore year. An anxious test-taker, K.W. had arrived about half an hour early but the classroom door was locked so he remained outside in the hallway to study until his chemistry teacher, Michael Klobus, arrived.

Klobus arrived about fifteen minutes later and let K.W., together with the other students who had since arrived, into the classroom to continue studying at their desks. K.W. specified that he took his seat, placed his study materials on his desk, and continued studying.

His study materials consisted of his textbook, his notebook, and his notes. Among his notes was a list of formulas that Klobus had handed out in advance of the exam as a study aid. K.W., in preparation for the exam, had written some extra formulas on it. Significantly, it was this piece of paper that K.W. would fail to clear from his desk when it was time to take the exam.

When Klobus first handed out the list of formulas as a study aid, he explained that he would provide a clean copy with the exam. Klobus, however, provided more than just that list. He also provided a copy of the periodic table of elements, a scrap piece of paper, and the "Scantron" answer sheet. These were in addition to the exam questions. There were more than five pieces of paper in all.

According to K.W., he had not fully cleared his desk when Klobus handed out these test papers, and K.W. inadvertently mixed up his list of formulas with them. When asked how it happened, K.W. answered that he had panicked:

> Q: Okay. And how did that piece of paper end up being on your desk while starting the test?
>
> A: I guess, from panicking from when [Klobus] told me to put the – my books away, I guess I accidentally misplaced it under my test papers.

When asked what he did once he realized that he had mixed up his list of formulas with the test papers, K.W. answered that he feared he would be accused of cheating, so he "bunched" his papers together:

> Q: What did you do when you realized it was there?
>
> A: I – I was already nervous about the test, so I took my papers and I bunched them up, because I was afraid I was going [to be accused] of cheating, and I didn't want to get in trouble. So, I just put them together – I bunched them together and I held onto it.

Meanwhile, Klobus noticed that everyone else had their test papers spread out on their desks. "[E]verybody had their papers all spread out," Klobus stated, "and [K.W.'s] were all stacked in a neat – in one neat stack, and it just looked so odd." So Klobus asked K.W. if he could see his papers.

When he saw the list with the extra formulas, Klobus was not pleased. "[I]t was the very last exam of the very last day," Klobus explained, "and I was just not very pleased that this was happening to [K.W.] and myself." Nevertheless, Klobus allowed K.W. to finish the exam. "I never made a judgment," Klobus said, "but I had to report it."

By all accounts, K.W. is an exceptional student. He had a grade-percentage average of 97 going into the chemistry exam and currently has a cumulative grade point average of 4.3. He is well regarded by both faculty and students alike and was selected by Butler High School the following year as the school's representative to American Legion Jersey Boys' State. Arguably, this is an even more prestigious honor than selection for membership in the NHS because only one junior from each high school in New Jersey is selected to participate in Boys' State.

At the hearing, Klobus implied that K.W. did not use the extra formulas on the exam. He explained that in his years of experience, those who get caught cheating admit it, but K.W. did not. To the contrary, K.W. insisted that he did not refer to his list, if for no other reason than the early part of the exam did not call for it. As both K.W. and Klobus explained, the early part of the exam called for definitions, not equations. Moreover, Klobus stated that K.W. was a "very good student in chemistry" who would have "done well" on the exam without the extra formulas. He also did not think that they would have helped him "very much" anyway.

The exam itself was scheduled for about ninety minutes. About sixty minutes remained when Klobus handed the exam papers back to K.W., but K.W. was too distraught to continue. He continued to plead his case to Klobus by the classroom door and could barely finish the exam when he returned to his desk.

When K.W. finished the exam, he went to the guidance office with Klobus, where they discussed the incident with the head of guidance, Julie Placko. According to K.W., neither Klobus nor Placko stated that K.W. cheated. Meanwhile, his mother, C.W., was in the parking lot waiting to pick him up. When K.W. told her what had happened, C.W. told him to stay in the car with his younger brother so she could go inside the school to discuss the matter with Klobus and Placko herself. When C.W. reached the guidance office, she was also met by the head of curriculum, Wendell Kralovich.

C.W. testified that she believed her son when he told her that he had left his list of formulas out on his desk by mistake. She also testified that she believed her son when he told her that he had not used the extra formulas. "I believe my son," C.W. stated, "He has never given me any reason to lie." In addition, C.W. emphasized how dedicated her son is to his studies. "I know how hard he studies," C.W. protested, "I mean . . . my kid has given up Devil's tickets to study."

Moreover, C.W. insisted that her son be branded a "cheater" if he had really cheated. "You are the teacher in his classroom," C.W. recalled she said to Klobus, "I have respect for you, and I want to tell you right now, if you feel that my son was cheating in any way, if you saw my son cheat, give him a zero right now."

Still, no determination was made that K.W. had cheated and no discipline was imposed. But it looked bad. As a result, it was agreed that there had to be a "repercussion" (as Klobus testified at the hearing) or a "consequence" (as Placko wrote in her report).

The school principal, William Hanisch, was on the upper field preparing for the commencement exercises scheduled to take place later that day when these discussions took place. As soon as he received a phone call on the upper field from Placko about the incident, he returned to his office to discuss the matter with her. When Hanisch reached his office, C.W. again asked that her son be given a zero.

Indeed, C.W. testified that she wanted confirmation that her son had cheated. But no determination was made and no discipline was imposed. According to C.W., Hanisch told her that he would get back to her.

Kralovich recommended to Hanisch that K.W. get a zero because he believed the incident was cheating, but Klobus told Hanisch that a zero would be too "harsh" because K.W. deserved an "A" in his class. It was then that Klobus gave Hanisch his opinion that K.W. was a "very good student in chemistry" who would have "done well" on the exam without the extra formulas and that that they would not have helped him "very much" anyway.

After speaking with Klobus, Hanisch decided that K.W. would not get a zero. "So I found Dr. Klobus and spoke to him," Hanisch recounted, "And we determined that rather than give K.W. a zero, we would base his grade . . . on the portion of the exam that was completed after the material had been removed from his desk." According to Hanisch, the lower grade would be the discipline for the incident.

To conclude the matter, Hanisch told C.W. that there would be no further repercussions and that the incident would not be reported to any college:

> I met with C.W. again and talked to her about what we had determined . . . She also questioned me if there would be any further repercussions as far as discipline, and I told her "No, there would be no further repercussions as far as discipline, and it would not be reported to colleges."

Similarly, Placko wrote in her report that "any action taken was going to be the only consequence."

Moreover, no determination was made that K.W. had cheated. As Placko also wrote in her report, "My assumption at that point was that it wasn't determined that [K.W. had] cheated because he was able to take the exam and receive[] a grade."

The policy that the NHS advisor, Gail Bignell, enforced against K.W. the following year was never discussed. As Bignell explained, the policy – that students "who had been caught cheating" or "had been found to have cheated" are not allowed to apply to the NHS – is not contained in the NHS guidelines or student handbook.

It is not even fully explained to students. As Bignell testified, she merely tells juniors in their spring semester that the NHS is more than a scholarship society: "The [NHS] is not just a scholarship society," she recited, "it is based on scholarship, service, leadership, and above all, character." Therefore, the W.'s could not have been aware of this policy to discuss it with Hanisch – or anyone else for that matter – at the end of K.W.'s sophomore year.

The written policy for admission into the NHS at Butler High School, however, is relatively straightforward. Ostensibly, juniors who have a grade point average of 3.5 or better in their spring semester are invited to apply. They are then rated by the faculty, and ultimately by a faculty council, in the areas of "Scholarship, Service, Leadership, and Character," according to NHS guidelines. Incidentally, these four areas are the same areas considered for selection to Boys' State – which simply adds "Patriotism" as a fifth area for consideration.

The following is an excerpt from the NHS guidelines as it is reprinted in the student handbook:

> Selection for membership in the National Honor Society is the highest honor that can be accorded to a high school student. This honor is bestowed upon students who can meet rigorous standards in four areas:
>
> SCHOLARSHIP, SERVICE, LEADERSHIP and CHARACTER.
> Each candidate is evaluated by the entire school faculty, and ultimately by a faculty council, in the four areas using the guidelines listed below. Standards by the National Association of Secondary School Principals have been adopted as the basis for selection to the Butler Chapter of the National Honor Society.

Students who had been caught cheating, however, are not invited to apply. "If there had ever been any documentation or any problems with cheating," Bignell stated, "a letter is not forthcoming." Stated otherwise, "cheaters" were not allowed:

> In 1993 and 94, when a former principal was in charge of the National Honor Society . . . he in fact made calls to the National Honor Society to back that up . . . and he made the decision that there would not be a letter forthcoming to a student who had been caught cheating. Cheaters were not allowed in the National Honor Society.
> [Emphasis added.]

Although Bignell testified that this policy has been enforced since 1993, no evidence exists that Bignell actually invoked it at any other time since then. Indeed, those students who are rejected because they are deficient in the areas of "Leadership" or "Service" are given another chance in their senior year. "The policy is that you got one more chance," Bignell said, "as long as your grades [have] been maintained."

This second chance, however, does not apply to those students who have been found to have cheated. When asked, "If a student has been found to have cheated, is there an opportunity for them to reapply under your policies?" Bignell answered, "No, there isn't." (Emphasis added.)

Still, any instance of cheating had to be more than an appearance of cheating. "I think it has to be more than somebody suspecting," Bignell answered in response to a question attempting to clarify the policy, "I think that it has to be an entire process that was seen through." To Bignell, the process was just as important as its outcome:

> [I]f a student got a letter, and then all of a sudden [an instance of cheating] appeared, it would have thrown up a red flag. I would have immediately taken it to Mr. Hanisch, and Mr. Hanisch would have said, "We cannot accept this. You never followed the process." So the process was very important.

And the process included documentation. If the incident was not documented, then it could not be considered. "Mr. Hanisch was very, very clear at faculty meetings," Bignell stated, "That if you had never gone through the process of talking to the parents, talking to guidance counselors, and making this a documented situation, then you could not take that moment to rate a student down for cheating. It was not considered."

Moreover, any outcome or determination had to have been based on personal knowledge, not upon hearsay:

> In that process, Mr. Hanisch and I always spoke, always spoke to the faculty about never, ever rating a student on leadership and character based on hearsay, based on gossip, based on another member talking about the student.

> This was your sole interaction with that student, so we could get as honest picture as possible. And we worked on that and worked on that, to make the faculty understand that at no time are you to take someone else's opinion about a student.

Ironically, Bignell initially believed that K.W. had cheated based upon hearsay. "I had heard of an incident," Bignell recounted, "and I wanted to make sure that . . . we were following the policy that we had followed before . . . that if a student had been caught cheating, they do not get a letter to the Honor Society." (Emphasis added.) To Bignell, this was more "humane" than giving a letter to a student who was "going to be rejected anyway."

Nevertheless, Bignell went to Hanisch to make sure that K.W. had in fact been caught cheating or had been found to have cheated – and Hanisch told her that such a determination had been made by the administration. On direct examination, Bignell testified as follows:

> Q: Okay. Did you speak with Mr. Hanisch about whether there had been a determination by administration, as to whether or not [K.W.] had cheated?
>
> A: Yes, I did.
>
> Q: And what did he tell you?
>
> A: He told me that the decision had been made that – that the discussion had happened, and I had to follow the policy that we had done in the past. It had nothing to do with K.W.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

Bignell was upset. "This was not an easy thing to do," Bignell said, "K.W. is a wonderful young man, he's very respectful. I never had a problem with K.W. in class. And it was very hard to do this."

But no determination had been made by the administration as to whether or not K.W. had cheated.

It wasn't even documented. In fact, the incident wasn't documented until the next year when K.W. was not allowed to apply to the NHS because of it. And then it was mistakenly documented as cheating.

More specifically, on May 14, 2007, Hanisch wrote a memorandum to the superintendent of schools, Rene Rovtar, who had asked him to record his recollection of the events from the previous year, in anticipation of the W.'s meeting with the Board of Education on May 17, 2007. In his memorandum, Hanisch wrote that K.W. was not invited to apply to the NHS because of a "cheating incident." Thus, the incident was documented – and documented as cheating – for the very first time on May 14, 2007, nearly a year after the matter had been resolved.

Procedurally, the request to meet with the Board of Education began when C.W. met with Hanisch to learn why her son was not allowed to apply to the NHS. In trying to figure that out, Hanisch met with Kralovich while C.W. met with Placko. Then Hanisch and Placko met with C.W. together to tell her that they had never discussed the NHS with her the year before when they had met to resolve the matter and had assured her that there would be no further repercussions. Finally, C.W. met with Hanisch to learn that he had deemed the incident "cheating" before she met with Rovtar to ask for the hearing with the Board.

It was after that meeting with C.W. that Rovtar directed Hanisch, Kralovich, Placko, and Klobus to document their recollection of the incident from the year before and the events that followed. Upon her receipt of those documents, Rovtar prepared her own memorandum for the Board of Education in anticipation of its meeting with the W.'s. In her memorandum, dated May 15, 2007, Rovtar informed the Board that K.W. was ineligible to apply to the NHS because he had cheated; and even if he hadn't cheated, he was still ineligible to apply because it appeared that he had cheated:

> In contemplating my decision, I obtained information from the classroom teacher, the guidance counselor, Mr. Hanisch, and Mr. Kralovich. I determined that the student should not be eligible for the NHS based on an issue of academic > integrity. Whether or not the student actually cheated is secondary in my opinion. What is of primary importance is that the piece of paper with the extra formulas was present on his desk when he was taking the exam . . . I feel strongly that it is important for the student body to know that cheating is not acceptable and will not be tolerated.

In taking these alternative positions, Rovtar expanded Butler High School's unwritten policy about student eligibility for the NHS. Not only were students who had been caught cheating or had been found to have cheated ineligible to apply to the NHS, but so were students who had appeared to have cheated.

She had also rejected Placko's report that K.W. was not determined to have cheated and that any discipline taken was to be the only consequence: "It was my understanding at the meeting that the only action taken was going to be the only consequence," Placko had written in her report, "[C.W.] asked on numerous occasions at the meeting if her son cheated [and t]he response was no."

More significantly, Rovtar had overlooked the threshold issue in this case, which she never presented to the Board of Education: Had a determination been made that K.W. had in fact cheated when the matter was resolved at the end of his sophomore year, or had the matter been resolved at the end of his sophomore year without such a determination having been made? If such a determination had been made, then the unwritten policy applied; if no such determination had been made, then it didn't. Indeed, this was the question before Hanisch when Bignell invoked the unwritten policy about student eligibility for the NHS.

Before the meeting with the Board of Education took place, Rovtar had explained to the W.'s that any request for a meeting had to be in writing. She also explained to them that the Board did not have to grant the request. Toward this end, Rovtar sent the W.'s a copy of the Board's grievance policy.

Consequently, on May 9, 2007, the W.'s, through counsel, submitted their grievance and asked for an opportunity to be heard. On May 15, 2007, the Board of Education, through counsel, granted the request. It also explained that their presentation would be limited to thirty minutes in closed session and that the Board's determination would be made in executive session.

The meeting took place on May 17, 2007. Earlier in the day, Rovtar, in preparation for the meeting, had sent the members of the Board of Education a copy of the Board's policy on student grievances; a copy of the NHS guidelines from the student handbook; and a copy of all correspondence between the attorneys.

In addition, Rovtar sent them a copy of Board's "Plagiarism" policy, which contains the school's definition of "cheating." Rovtar, however, referred to it as the school's "Plagiarism/Cheating Policy." Similarly, Rovtar enclosed a copy of the documents she had asked Klobus, Kralovich, and Hanisch to prepare in anticipation of this litigation, but she did not include a copy of report she had asked Placko to prepare. Incidentally, only Hanisch spoke at the meeting with the Board of Education; and Placko did not testify at the hearing before this tribunal.

On May 18, 2007, Rovtar informed the W.'s of the Board's decision.

Given this discussion of the facts, I FIND the following FACTS as salient:

Students with a grade point average of 3.5 or better in the spring semester of their junior year at Butler High School are invited to apply to the NHS. Students who had been caught cheating or were found to have cheated, however, are not allowed to apply. K.W. had better than a 3.5 grade point average in the spring semester of his junior year but the Board of Education did not allow him to apply to the NHS because Hanisch misremembered that K.W. had been found to have cheated on his final exam in chemistry at the end of his sophomore year when the matter was resolved and he was assured there would be no further repercussions.

While K.W. was involved in an incident at the end of his sophomore year in which it appeared that he had cheated, the matter was resolved without a determination having been made that he had cheated. K.W. was simply given a lower grade as the only discipline and was assured that there would be no further repercussions. The NHS was not discussed.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Courts have uniformly held that the denial of membership in the NHS is not a property interest, see, e.g., Price v. Young, 580 F. Supp. 1, 2 (E.D. Ark. 1983), and only one court has held that the denial of membership in the NHS implicates a liberty interest, see Warren v. National Association of Secondary School Principals, 375 F. Supp. 1043, 1048 (N.D. Tex. 1974). This case, however, is different from those cases. In those cases, the students were evaluated according to NHS guidelines and then denied membership. In this case, K.W. was not even evaluated because he had been deemed to have cheated nearly a year after the matter had been resolved. As such, K.W.'s good name is at stake.

Where a person's "good name, reputation, honor, or integrity" is at stake, "notice and an opportunity to be heard" are essential. Bd. of Regents v. Roth, 408 U.S. 564, 573, 92 S. Ct. 2701, 2707, 33 L. Ed. 2d 548, 558 (1972). An organization may also create procedural rights in addition to the constitutional minimum. Ferguson v. Thomas, 430 F.2d 852 (5th Cir. 1970). In this case, K.W. was given notice and an opportunity to be heard. He was even given the additional procedural safeguards contained in the Board's grievance policy.

More specifically, the W.'s were given the reason why K.W. was not allowed to apply to the NHS; they were given a copy of the grievance policy itself; their attorney submitted a written grievance according to the policy; and the W.'s were given an opportunity – beyond the policy's requirements – to make a presentation before the Board. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that K.W. was not deprived of any liberty interest as protected by the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment, and the issue now turns to the determination itself.

Determinations by Boards of Education are presumed correct unless arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable, and their factual determinations must be accepted if supported by substantial credible evidence. Thomas v. Bd. of Educ. of the Twp. of Morris, 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd o.b., 46 N.J. 581 (1966). In this case, K.W. was involved in an incident at the end of his sophomore year in which it appeared that he had cheated, but the matter was resolved without a determination having been made that he had cheated. K.W. was simply given a lower grade as the only discipline and was assured that there would be no further repercussions. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Board's factual determination that K.W. had been found to have cheated on his final exam in chemistry at the end of his sophomore year when the matter was resolved is not supported by substantial credible evidence and the unwritten policy about student eligibility for the NHS did not apply to him in the spring semester of his junior year.

Accordingly, I must also CONCLUDE that the Board's determination that K.W. was ineligible to apply to the NHS in the spring semester of his junior year was arbitrary and capricious and that K.W. should have been allowed to apply.

Had K.W. been given the opportunity to apply, Klobus could have determined that K.W. had sufficient character for admission to the NHS, and the faculty council could have ultimately determined that Butler High School's representative to Boys' State was equally deserving of membership in the NHS. I strongly urge Butler to consider this possibility and recommend that they invite K.W. to apply to the NHS at once so they can make any ultimate determination before graduation later this month.

ORDER

Given my FINDINGS of FACT and conclusions of law, I ORDER that K.W. be allowed to apply to the National Honor Society and that a decision be rendered before graduation later this month.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. SOPHIA GIACOMAZZI,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner was originally hired as a leave replacement teacher of English for the 2002-2003 school year, and subsequently – in June of 2003 – entered into a regular contract to teach English when a permanent position was vacated by retirement. She claims that her tenure rights were violated when her contract was not renewed in April 2006, contending that she had attained tenure in October 2005 because her assignment remained unchanged after the permanent teacher she had been replacing returned to work in October 2002. Respondent Board urges dismissal of the petition, as petitioner was not hired into a tenure track position until June 2003. Cross motions for summary decision were filed by the parties.

The ALJ found that: summary decision is appropriate in this matter, as there are no material facts in dispute; respondent Board was unable to dispute or show supporting documentation contradicting petitioner's claims in this matter; as of October 2002 – when the teacher whom petitioner was hired to replace returned to work – there was no longer a leave replacement position available in the English department and therefore petitioner's "Leave Replacement Employment Contract" was no longer operative; petitioner began to teach in the capacity of a full-time regular teacher as of October 2002; petitioner has proven that the terms of the Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, were not implemented in this matter, and that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1 does not prevent petitioner from accruing tenure credits beginning in October 2002. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that petitioner did acquire tenure in respondent's district, and the Board's termination of petitioner's employment was a violation of her tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. The ALJ ordered respondent to reinstate petitioner to her tenured position.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision of the OAL, finding that: although there were teachers on temporary leave during the 2002-2003 school year, there were no actual vacancies in the English department until June 2003 and therefore no tenure-track positions to which petitioner could lay claim; respondent Board has the discretion to modify teaching assignments and locations; and petitioner's claim that by continuing her assignment to teach the same courses in the same rooms for the remainder of the school year – after the permanent teacher she was hired to replace had returned to work – is without merit. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

SOPHIA GIACOMAZZI,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY	:	DECISION

The record, Initial Decision and parties' exceptions in this case have been carefully and independently reviewed. No material facts are in dispute. For the reasons which follow, the Initial Decision granting summary decision to petitioner is rejected.

Petitioner signed a "Leave Replacement Employment Contract" (Leave Replacement Contract) with the respondent district on or about May 20, 2002. (Exhibit D to respondent's motion for summary disposition) The contract recited that petitioner was to serve "as a Leave Replacement 1.0 FTE[1] Teacher of English at Columbia High School . . . from September 2, 2002 to June 30, 2003 at an annual salary of $35,000 . . . ." Ibid. (Emphasis in original.) In the contract was a sentence that indicated that petitioner would be replacing Nelson Trias, who was on military duty, and that petitioner "acknowledge[d] that this leave replacement position [was] only for the term specified above, and that such time [could not] be counted toward tenure." (Ibid).

On or about July 22, 2002, another established teacher in the high school English department – Ms. Wessel-Dwyer – was granted family leave. Consequently, another substitute teacher – Mr. Lampf – was hired for the 2002-2003 school year. It is undisputed that both Trias and Wessel-Dwyer were expected to return to the English department.

After the 2002 Fall term began, Trias returned from military leave – earlier than expected. As a result of his return, there was no need for two substitute teachers in the high school English department. Lampf, who had been hired two months after petitioner, was given notice, and – on or about November 11, 2002 – Trias took over the classes that Lampf had been teaching. (Exhibit I to respondent's motion for summary disposition) Petitioner continued to teach the classes that had been assigned to her at the beginning of the school year.

Since at the time that Trias resumed teaching in the high school English department, respondent anticipated the return of Wessel-Dwyer, it did not post any permanent English teaching positions. Accordingly, petitioner did not apply for and was not awarded a contract for a permanent position, but rather finished the 2002-2003 school year under the Leave Replacement Contract.

At the beginning of the 2003-2004 school year, another member of the Columbia High School English department – Ms. Wastie – retired, resulting in an opening for a permanent teaching position. Petitioner's application for the position was successful, and she entered into a regular contract with respondent – dated June 2, 2003 – to teach high school English during the 2003-2004 school year. (Exhibit J to respondent's motion for summary disposition) That contract was followed by contracts for the 2004-2005 and 2005-2006 school years.

On April 7, 2006, respondent's Superintendent Horoschak sent petitioner a letter advising that she would not be recommended for contract renewal. (Exhibit K to respondent's motion for summary disposition) Subsequently, petitioner was provided with a written explanation of reasons for the non-renewal, an informal meeting with the Superintendent and union representation, and an informal appearance before the respondent Board of Education. (Exhibits K-O to respondent's motion for summary disposition)

Petitioner urges that respondent's failure to renew her employment was a violation of tenure rights. More specifically, she maintains that she received a tenure track position as of October 21, 2002, when Trias returned to teach in the Columbia High School English Department. To support her position, petitioner relies on a number of facts included within her 21 item "Statement of Facts."

First, petitioner refers to the sentence in her Replacement Leave Contract that relates that she is substituting for Trias. Second, she points to the fact that for the 2002-2003 school year, she remained in '(Trias') classroom' and continued to teach the same classes that she had been teaching before Trias returned to Columbia High School on October 21, 2002. Third, petitioner regards as significant the fact that, upon his return, Trias took over courses that had been previously taught by Wessel-Dwyer and substitute Lampf. Finally, petitioner refers to the fact that upon Trias' return she was not given a different leave replacement contract identifying her as a substitute for Wessel-Dwyer.

Petitioner argues that the foregoing facts bestowed a tenure track position upon her on October 21, 2002, despite the fact that there was – on that date – no open permanent position in the high school English department. She acknowledges that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1[2]

[2] N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1:

> In each district the board of education may designate some person to act in place of any officer or employee during the absence, disability or disqualification of any such officer or employee subject to the provisions of section *N.J.S.A.*18A:17-13. The act of any person so designated shall in all cases be legal and binding as if done and performed by the officer or employee for whom such designated person is acting but no person so acting shall acquire tenure in precludes the acquisition of tenure by any person acting in the absence of another employee, but she maintains that by reason of Trias' return, she was no longer acting temporarily for him; rather, she was automatically transformed into a permanent employee, with the tenure clock ticking. Because she remained in 'his classroom' and continued teaching 'his classes' she reasoned that she had permanently acquired his position.

To support her view, petitioner offers John Calabria v. Board of Education of the Township of Winslow, Camden County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 6403-02, Agency Dkt. No. 210-7/02; Initial Decision February 4, 2003; Final Decision adopting Initial Decision, March 14, 2003, Decision # 115-03. Calabria was a substitute teacher who, the Commissioner decided, achieved tenure-track status when the teacher he had been replacing returned to the district. Petitioner maintains that her circumstances are identical to Calabria's.

The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) in the present case 1) accepted petitioner's reasoning, 2) found that petitioner's tenure eligibility had begun on October 21, 2002 and that petitioner had achieved tenure in October 2005, 3) concluded that petitioner's tenure had been violated by the non-renewal of her contract in April 2006, and 4) ordered petitioner's reinstatement with back pay and benefits. These determinations rested upon the ALJ's "Findings of Fact" – particularly the findings set forth below, both of which include legal conclusions:

> 12. As of October 21, 2002, when Trias returned from military duty and resumed teaching English there was no longer a leave-replacement position available in the English department. Lampf was given a sixty-day notice of termination and Trias completed Lampf's class teaching assignment in the Wessel-Dwyer's English class through June 2003; the office or employment in which he acts pursuant to this section when so acting.

13. As of October 21, 2002, petitioner's "Leave Replacement Employment Contract" was no longer operative because Trias had returned to work or was no longer on leave; causing petitioner to teach the remainder of the 2002-2003 school year in the capacity of a full-time teacher;

Initial Decision at 10-11.
