ABRIDGEMENT OF PLEADINGS.

Between	}	On Appeal from the Court of Chancery.	10
VITO SAN GIACOMO, Complainant-Appellant,
and
ORATON INVESTMENT COMPANY, a corporation, Defendant-Appellee.

A bill for an accounting was filed by the complainant-appellant against the defendant-appellee and all the matters in dispute have been adjusted by the parties hereto, excepting that which is hereinafter described. 20

Complainant-appellant asks that he be reimbursed by the defendant-appellee in the amount of $892.50 interest on a mortgage in which the defendant-appellee was the mortgagee. The jurisdiction of the Court to try this matter was admitted.

On September 17, 1917, Vito San Giacomo obtained a warranty deed to premises located at 303 Sherman avenue, Newark, N. J., from Maria Martha Loprete and her husband, Demetrio Loprete, subject to the mortgage in question. 30

Sometime prior thereto on September 22, 1915, Maria Martha Loprete, the then owner had leased the premises in question for a period of five years to the defendant-appellee, and the defendant-appellee, immediately leased back same premises for the same period to Demetrio Loprete, the husband of Maria Martha Loprete.

Abridgement of Pleadings.

On the same time and as part of the same transaction the defendant-appellee loaned to Maria Martha Loprete the sum of Four Thousand ($4,000.00) Dollars and took back as security for the payment of this Four Thousand ($4,000.00) dollars a three year mortgage. The mortgage provided that no interest was to be charged.

The question before this Court is whether or not a legal rate of interest on the unpaid balance of this mortgage should run after the maturity date or whether no interest was due to the defendant-appellee. If the defendant-appellee was entitled to interest, the Court below should be affirmed; if the defendant-appellee was not entitled to interest, the Court below should be reversed and the defendant-appellee ordered to return to the complainant-appellant $892.50, the amount of interest paid.

This abridgement of pleadings is filed by agreement of the parties in lieu of the pleadings.

“We agree on the above abridgement of pleadings.”

Five Hundred ($13,500.) Dollars.

2. The party of the first part further agrees to loan the party of the second part the sum of Four Thousand ($4000.) Dollars, without interest.

3. The party of the second part agrees to ex- 30

the rate of five per cent on the sum of Thirteen

4. The said party of the second part agrees 40 to execute a lease to the party of the first part covering the entire first or store floor and cellar thereunder of the premises No. 303 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, for a period of five years at a rental of One Dollar per month, payable monthly in advance, the party of the second part to make all repairs, and the said lease to contain no covenant against assigning or subletting.

5. The party of the second part further agrees to execute a lease of the store and cellar thereunder of the premises No. 301 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, to the said party of the first part, for a period of five years, at a rental of One Dollar per month, payable monthly in advance, the party of the second part to make all repairs, and the lease to contain no covenant against assigning or subletting. In the event that the party of the first part fails to secure a tenant for the premises No. 301 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, within four months from the date hereof, the said party of the first part will surrender this lease to the party of the second part. Said surrender to be upon the condition that if the said premises are rented for saloon purposes that the said party of the second part will rent only to such party or parties who will purchase exclusively from the party of the third part the Beer, Ale and Porter required in conducting a saloon business at No. 301 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, for a period of five years. The party of the first part agrees in case it sublets the store No. 301 Sherman Avenue that it will not rent it for a lower figure than Forty ($40.) Dollars per month; and in the event it is rented for Forty ($40.) Dollars or more per month, that the party of the second part will receive the benefit for such rentals.

Dollars per month to apply on the principal sum of Thirteen Thousand Five Hundred ($13,500.) Dollars.

7. It is agreed by and between the parties hereto that the said mortgage of Seventeen Thousand Five Hundred ($17,500.) Dollars is to be subject to a first mortgage of Six Thousand ($6000.) Dollars on the premises No. 303 Sherman Avenue, now held by the Second Ward Building & Loan Association.

8. The party of the first part agrees to sublet the store No. 303 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, to the party of the fourth part for the purpose of conducting a saloon at the aforesaid premises at a rental of $1.00 per month. part the privilege of naming the amount of the future rental of the store should the party of the fourth part vacate the same. Should the premises No. 303 Sherman Avenue be rented at the sum of Forty ($40.) Dollars per month or more, the said party of the second part is to receive the benefit of such rental.

It is further agreed that this arrangement in no way breaks the lease given by the party of the second part to the party of the first part for a period of five years at One Dollar per month.

Dollars shall have been paid. The said payments to be made weekly, based upon the number of barrels purchased each week.

10. The said party of the first part agrees that when the sum of Four Thousand ($4000.) Dollars shall have been paid, to release the premises No. 303 Sherman Avenue, Newark, New Jersey, from the mortgage of Seventeen Thousand Five Hundred ($17,500.) Dollars given by the party of the second part to the party of the first part.

11. The said party of the third part agrees to loan to the said party of the fourth part certain moneys for the purpose of paying the license fee at the premises No. 303 Sherman Avenue, aforesaid.

Transcript of shorthand notes of testimony taken in the above-entitled matter before his Honor, John H. Backes, Vice-Chancellor, at the Chancery Chambers, in the City of Newark, New Jersey, in the presence of George A. Henderson for complainant; and James Lafferty for defendants.

30 Mr. Henderson: I offer the deed, bond and mortgage and lease.

(Papers marked Exhibits C. 1, 2 and 3.)

VITO SAN GIACOMO, sworn for complainant.

Direct examination by Mr. Henderson.

Q You are the complainant in this suit? A Yes, sir.

40 Q And the owner of the premises at 303 Sherman avenue? A Yes, sir.

Vito San Giacomo, direct.

Q And you took the deed from Mr. and Mrs. Loprete in 1917? A Yes, sir.

Q That was on the 10th of September? A Yes, sir.

Q What are the premises used for, Mr. San Giacomo? A Saloon and family house. First floor is for saloon, upstairs for families. 10

Q Do you know whose beer, ale and porter is used on those premises? A Feigenspan's.

Q When you took the deed from Loprete did any money pass? A Three thousand dollars, he owed me.

Q He owed you $3,000? A Yes, sir.

Q Is that why they gave you a deed for the property? A That is why I took the deed.

Q Did you pay them anything whatever? A No; the property wasn't worth what I paid. 20

Q That was in settlement of — A (Interrupted.) There was no settlement. Just $3,000 he owed me and he turned the house over to me.

Q Now, in 1926, did you desire to place a mortgage on the property? A Yes, sir.

Q And did you get Mr. Calandra to obtain the mortgage for you? A Yes, sir.

Q And make a search for you? A Yes, sir.

Q And what did you learn from Mr. Calandra? A I learned there was a $4,000 mortgage from the Oraton Investment Company—from Feigenspan. I said "that ought to be paid off with the dollar a barrel—commission on the beer." He says, "No; you owe eleven hundred and some odd dollars." 30

The Court: Who was this?

The Witness: Mr. Calandra.

The Court: Attorney for who? 40

Morris Heller, direct.

Mr. Henderson: He was getting a mortgage for Mr. San Giacomo, and he learned—
I think we will practically stipulate the fact.

Q He told you— A (Interrupting.) He told me that there was a mortgage for $4,000—
10 $1,800 on the mortgage which credit was twenty-one hundred and some dollars, I think—I am not sure how much. It was for the dollar a barrel and interest eleven hundred and some odd dollars.

Q What did you do then? A I didn't want to pay it. I told Mr Calandra I had an argument; I said, "Why should I pay?"

The Court: I am not interested in that.

20 Q Eventually it was paid. A I paid it. So finally I paid it because I couldn't put the other mortgage on unless I cleaned up this one.

Q Then you received back your cancelled mortgage and bond with it? A Yes, sir.

Q These two here? A Yes, sir.

(Not cross examined.)

30 MORRIS HELLER, sworn for complainant.

Direct examination by Mr. Henderson.

Q Mr. Heller, you conducted or owned a store, 303 Sherman avenue, didn't you? A Yes, sir; saloon.

Q Saloon. After Mr. Loprete gave up the business? A Yes, sir.

Q Whose beer, ale and porter was used there?
40 A Well, I used Feigenspan's.

Morris Heller, direct.

Q Did you pay for the beer each week? A I did.

Q Now when you paid, what sum did you pay?

The Court: What did you pay?

The Witness: Well, different prices. I 10 don't remember exactly what I paid, but whatever the bill—

The Court: (Interrupting.) Whatever the bill showed you paid?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

Q Was anything said about the one dollar arrangement to you? A I had nothing to do with it.

Q And you did not pay any extra dollar? 20

The Court: Were you a tenant in the place?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Under whom?

The Witness: Under Loprete.

The Court: Did you rent from Loprete?

The Witness: I bought the premises from Loprete, yes, sir. 30

The Court: You ran the saloon for yourself.

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: Paid for the beer out of your own money?

The Witness: Yes, sir.

The Court: And paid, as you understood, the current price for the beer?

The Witness: Current price for the beer. 40

Morris Heller, cross.

Cross examination by Mr. Lafferty.

Q Later you rented from San Giacomo, when he became the owner? A When he became the owner I paid him the rent, that is all.

10 Mr. Henderson: I am told that Mr. Calandra has left.

Mr. Henderson: I think we might stipulate on the record as to the amount that was paid in the way of principal and interest on this mortgage.

The Court: Is that all you wanted to prove by Mr. Calendra?

Mr. Henderson: No. I wanted to prove by him that Mr. San Giacomo objected to paying this, but it was finally paid.

20 The Court: You will admit that, won't you?

Mr. Lafferty: I will admit it, sure.

Mr. Henderson: We claim that we made an overpayment of interest.

The Court: If you paid too much interest the Oraton Investment Company will pay you back without any law suit.

30 Mr. Henderson: We paid interest of $1,130.03 and there was also paid on the mortgage $1,832.69.

The Court: You paid those two amounts, $2,962.72.

Mr. Lafferty: I have a statement showing how that was. I am perfectly willing to stipulate that the interest and principal was computed according to this statement, and that is what was paid.

40

Conclusion of Vice-Chancellor.

The Court: They say there was several hundred dollars interest paid too much.

Mr. Lafferty: The difference $237.22 is computed as interest on interest. We will pay that back if that is improper.

The Court: That is improper.

CONCLUSION OF THE VICE-CHANCELLOR.

The Court: I intimated to you gentlemen at the opening of the case that the complainant had an adequate remedy at law for moneys had and received, and, you, Mr. Lafferty, said that you did not raise the point and wanted me to dispose of the case on the merits; that if your clients owed anything they wanted to repay it; and you have not defended on the ground that the payment made to your client was voluntary. The situation as it is presented by counsel's statement of the facts is this. Some years ago the defendant loaned to the complainant's grantor four thousand dollars on bond and mortgage for three years. The loan was to be without interest. The bond and mortgage calls for payment in three years from date. The printed portions of these documents providing for interest are stricken out. The three years were up long ago. The complainant bought the property subject to the mortgage and recently sold it. He agreed to convey it clear of the mortgage and under pressure of the performance of that agreement he paid the defendant what was due on the principal and interest from the due day. The interest was paid under protest, and now the complainant wants it back. He is not entitled to it. The contention

20

40

Conclusion of Vice-Chancellor.

that the loan was to be without interest is true, but the loan was for a period of three years. There was to be no interest during that time. The obligation was to pay the debt on a day stipulated, and upon default the defendant became entitled to interest at the legal rate from the date 10 of the default. The bill will be dismissed.

BRIEF OF COMPLAINANT-APPELLANT.

On September 22, 1915, Marie M. Loprete and her husband, Demetrio Loprete, entered into a lengthy agreement (Exhibit D. 1, p. 19) with defendant-appellee whereby among other things it was agreed that it would lend them $4,000.00 without interest (p. 19, l. 29), and upon payment of the $4,000.00 would release the mortgage (p. 22, l. 33), given to secure payment of this sum. At the same time in accordance with this agreement the Lopretes gave to the defendant-appellee herein, a bond and mortgage (Exhibits C. 2 and C. 3) in the sum of Four thousand ($4,000.00) dollars, without interest, on the premises involved located at 303 Sherman avenue, Newark, N. J., the maturity date of which was three years later. Payments were gradually (as described below) made on the principal to the amount of $2,167.31, leaving a final balance due thereon of $1,832.69 (p. 30, l. 32).

The $4,000.00 was loaned to the Lopretes to start a saloon business at the above address, and it was to be repaid at the rate of one dollar per barrel (p. 22, l. 25) on every barrel of beer, ale and porter of Christian Feigenspan, a corporation (of which defendant was a subsidiary) used on the premises, and no such commodity other than Feigenspan's was to be sold. The corporation, Christian Feigenspan, was also a party to the above agreement (Exhibit D. 1).

On September 17, 1917, complainant-appellant purchased the property (Exhibit C. 4) subject to the above mortgage, therein described as "originally in the sum of Four thousand ($4,000.00) dollars" (p. 19, l. 30).

On or about November 3, 1926, having sought to have the mortgage cancelled he was informed by defendant-appellee that there was due $2,962.72 (p. 30, l. 33). He learned that this was made up of $1,832.69 unpaid balance of the principal, $892.81 interest and $237.22 in interest on interest (which last sum was later repaid complainant, p. 31, l. 3). Complainant thought that the entire mortgage had long since been cleared off (p. 27, l. 33). He, however, paid these sums, under protest, after objection, because he had to remove the encumbrance of this mortgage in order to place a new mortgage on the premises (p. 28, l. 16), (p. 30, l. 23), (p. 31, l. 38).

It is the contention of complainant that defendant improperly exacted this interest, and that it should be returned. The jurisdiction of the Court below to try the issue was admitted (p. 1, l. 25).

Complainant's suit was originally for an accounting. All the items in dispute were adjusted excepting the $892.81 interest, which matter went to a hearing, and the Court decided that the bill asking for the return to complainant of this interest should be dismissed. The Court said "The contention that the loan was to be without interest is true, but the loan was for a period of three years. There was to be no interest during that time. The obligation was to pay the defendant on a day stipulated, and upon default the defendant became entitled to interest at the legal rate from the date of the default. The bill will be dismissed" (p. 31, l. 40).

This, complainant-appellant contends, is an erroneous finding of facts by the Court, and the Court erroneously decided that the defendant-appellee was entitled to the interest involved and dismissed the bill. The complainant appeals from the alleged error of the Court in failing to decide that complainant was entitled to the relief asked, and in dismissing complainant's bill.

Complainant relies upon the four following Points:

(1) The agreement between the parties at the time of the loan provided that no interest was to be charged on the loan, and the term of this agreement remained unchanged.

(2) Under the bond and mortgage on which interest is claimed the mortgagee was not at any time entitled to interest.

(3) Defendant was not entitled after the maturity date to any interest until a demand was made for payment of the principal, and payment of the principal was made before it was demanded, consequently no interest can be exacted.

(4) Even if the mortgagee had been entitled after maturity to demand interest, his failure to do so bars him.

POINT ONE.

The agreement between the parties at the time of the loan provided that no interest was to be charged, and the terms of this agreement remained unchanged.

An agreement was placed in evidence by the defendant and marked Exhibit "D. 1" (pp. 19-25). The bond and mortgage were in evidence and referred to this agreement (Exhibits C. 2 and C. 3, pp. 7-14). In the bond and mortgage every reference to interest has been eliminated or obliterated from the paper. On the outside of the bond there has been obliterated two printed lines, one reading "interest payable" and the other reading "interest rate," after which followed a percentage mark; in their place in parentheses was typewritten "no interest" (p. 8, l. 40).

The agreement referred to is very important and a perusal of it conclusively confirms the fact that it was for the loan of Four thousand ($4,000.00) dollars without any interest. Paragraph two of this agreement reads "party of the first part" (the defendant-appellee) "further agrees to loan to the party of the second part the sum of Four thousand dollars ($4,000.00) without interest" (p. 19, l. 27). No limit of time after which interest would be charged, is set forth in this agreement.

Further on in this agreement paragraph ten reads (p. 22, l. 32), "the said party of the first part agrees that when the sum of Four thousand ($4,000.00) dollars shall have been paid, to release the premises No. 303 Sherman avenue, Newark, N. J., from a mortgage of $17,500 given by the party of the second part to the party of the first part." Here, too, nothing is said about the $4,000.00 ever carrying interest but merely that the premises will be released from the mortgage when the $4,000.00 shall have been repaid. We might note here that the agreement provides earlier therein for two mortgages, one $13,500.00 with interest at 5%, and the other, the mortgage for $4,000.00. This makes the $17,500.00, spoken of as though it were one mortgage. The $4,000.00 mortgage was to be on the premises at 303 Sherman avenue and the $13,500 to be on the premises 299-301 Sherman avenue (p. 24, l. 10), Paragraph 6 of this agreement (p. 21, l. 1) provides for all the payments to be made. It set forth taxes, water rents, semi-annual interest on the $13,500 mortgage, and all other charges, but never a word about interest on the $4,000.00.

It is true that the mortgage had a due date three years later, but some due date was of course necessary and it was placed far in the future. This due date was merely the date on which the mortgagee could have come in and demanded the balance due on the mortgage. As he did not do so the mortgage was extended on the same terms until a demand should be made. Accordingly the provision for no interest is likewise extended. The case of Jersey City v. O'Callaghan cited below, under Point 2, is quite pertinent.

Among citations in point we find the following:

Wyckoff v. Wyckoff, 44 Equity 56, in which Vice-Chancellor Van Fleet said:

"On a loan of money, the rate of interest agreed upon, or, if no interest be agreed upon, the rate allowed by law at the date of the contract, will be the rate which the contract will bear until the money is paid."

22 Cyc. 1533, cites with approval the case of Jersey City v. O'Callaghan in 41 Law 349, cited below, and says:

"But what has been termed the weight of opinion both as to the number and authority of cases is to the effect that the stipulated rate, whether it be greater or less than the legal rate will attend the contract until the payment of the debt."

Among the cases of other states, besides New Jersey we find Casey v. Gibbons, in the Supreme Court of California, 1902, holding "a mortgage debt bears the same rate of interest after, as before, maturity," and Evans v. Rice, 30 S. E. 463, in the Supreme Court of Virginia, which holds "The rate of interest reserved in the contract continues as an incident of the debt due, in absence of any stipulation to the contrary."

POINT TWO.

Defendant, under the mortgage in this case on which interest is claimed, was not at any time entitled to interest.

Our case is one in which there was an agreement as to interest. The money was loaned and it was expressly agreed that no interest was to be charged. From the written agreement, from the bond and mortgage, from the very actions of the parties in never thereafter raising the question of interest, and never demanding any interest after the due date until complainant wished to pay off the mortgage, we must conclude that there was never any intention on the part of the parties to this agreement that interest would ever be exacted.

Chief Justice Beasley, speaking for the Court of Errors and Appeals, in the case of Jersey

City v. O'Callaghan, which is reported in 41 Law, 349, at page 353, said:

"Interest proper arises whenever money is lent or forborne with an understanding, express or implied, that an equivalent shall be given for its use, and in such case the rate of interest agreed upon, or, if none such be agreed upon, the rate then existing by law, is, in the absence of a new agreement, the rate to be paid until the return of the money. And this rate prevails notwithstanding any statutory change of the rate of interest during the interim. * * *
Loans that are intended to run for a long period of time, and which are designed to stand as permanent investments, are usually, in form, made payable after short terms of forbearance, so that, as a question of intention, it is not a strained construction of such transactions to imply, after pay-day has arrived, a renewal of the agreement with respect to interest, and that the loan is continued by mutual consent upon the original terms. Therefore on loans and on forbearances, the original rate of interest will rule until the repayment of the money, unless the rate shall have been altered by a new agreement between the parties. In such cases it is interest and not damages that is to be assessed."

22 Cyc. 251, "If the contract provides for a certain rate of interest until the principal sum be paid, such contract will control the recovery as to the rate after maturity."

When the date of maturity arrived in 1918 defendant did not demand payment of the mortgage, and never demanded it until complainant, thinking the mortgage was paid (p. 27, l. 33) sought to have it cancelled, and was then told that $2,962.71 would have to be paid before the mortgage could be cancelled.

The minds of the parties met on the question of interest. They were in accord that the only sum to be repaid was the $4,000.00. This is not a case where they failed to agree on interest. They did agree, and the outcome of their deliberations was an agreement that the indebtedness would be extinguished when the $4,000.00 was paid.

This was a joint adventure for the profit of both of the parties hereto. The owner was to conduct the business, and build up the trade and make his profit in the difference between the price of the beer sold to him and purchased from him; the defendant was to supply the $4,000.00 to enable the business to function and likewise make his profit from the business. Both parties were to profit from the sales, and the principal sum was to be paid off as barrels were supplied and their contents sold. No thought of interest was ever entertained or expressed.

POINT THREE.

Defendant was not entitled to any interest until a demand was made for payment of the principal. Payment of the principal was made before it was demanded, consequently no interest will lie.

This is not a case such as would come under Ackers v. Winston, 7 C. E. Green, 44, which holds "where the bond and mortgage calls for interest, without naming the rate, the rate fixed by the law at the date of the instruments will be chargeable." Our contract expressly said "No interest" was to be charged. It was agreed—we might say—that a rate of nothing on each dollar was to be charged.

More than eight years after the due date of the mortgage, Nov. 3, 1926, the balance of the principal was paid. This was without any demand being made for it. Nor during that time was any interest demanded or even mentioned. This is significant and shows how the parties felt about the question of interest. It is true, there are cases that hold that "Where no rate of interest is agreed upon," the legal rate will lie after the maturity date of the mortgage. I respectfully submit that this cannot be understood to apply to our case, in which their mind did meet on the question of interest and the rate of interest was agreed upon, which was nothing on each dollar. Besides the principal, that interest, or "nil," is all the defendant was entitled to until it made a demand for the principal, from which date of demand the interest would run, if complainant failed to pay the principal. The agreement, for which the mortgage was given as collateral, simply said no interest was to be paid and the mortgage was intended to carry out the terms of this agreement.

In a suit on a demand note in Scudder v. Morris, 3 N. J. Law, 13, the Court said in passing "He promises to pay on demand, thus putting it in the power of the holder to entitle himself to interest when he might think proper; but until he makes a demand, the money is not actually due. If it had been the intention of the parties that the money should draw interest, why not express it? Their omitting to do so leaves the fair conclusion that it was not intended." Our case went further than this. Every reference to interest is eliminated, and it is expressly set forth wherever possible that no interest is to be charged.

POINT FOUR.

Even if the mortgagee had been entitled after maturity to demand interest, his failure to do so bars him.

The case of Jones v. Haines, 79 Equity 110, 113, and the extracts from 33 Corpus Juris, 191 and 239, all set forth below, indicate that where a creditor neglects to press his claim for a long period of time, he is not entitled to recover interest. In the instant case more than eight years elapsed from the maturity date, and more than eleven years elapsed from the date of execution of the agreement and the bond and mortgage, and no demand for or even mention of interest was ever made.

In Jones v. Haines, 79 Equity 110, 113, V.-C. Leaming said:

"If interest should be here recovered it would necessarily be as interest and not by reason of any contract therefor; in such case interest will not be allowed where the delay in the payment of the principal is a result of the neglect of the claimant to force payment for so long a time."

33 Corpus Juris, 239, "It has been said that interest is never allowed where the delay is a result of the failure of the creditor to press the collection of his claim."

33 Corpus Juris, 191, "Where interest is claimed as damages, and not by reason of any contract therefor it will not be allowed if the delay in the payment of the principal debt is a result of the negligence of the creditor to demand such payment."

Conclusion.

We must remember that the mortgage on which stress has been laid was given as collateral security for the payment of the $4,000.00 loaned without interest pursuant to the written agreement. Under the agreement both the parties to this suit would profit financially.

This agreement provided for a loan of $4,000.00 without interest and further provided that on repayment of $4,000.00 the premises in question would be released from this mortgage given to secure its payment. No date within which this was to be repaid was mentioned in the agreement, from the original method of payment on each barrel sold, a definite date could not be fixed.

This $4,000.00 was repaid before any demand was made for it. The bond and mortgage say the money is to be loaned without interest. Every reference to interest is eliminated both from the body of the bond and mortgage and even from the printed back of same, on which is typed "no interest." No mention of, or demand for, interest was made at any time before the final payment, and more than eight years elapsed between the maturity date of the mortgage and payment of the principal, and more than eleven years elapsed between the loan and its final payment.

It is respectfully contended, in view of all these facts, that the dismissal of the complainant's bill was error, and this Honorable Court should reverse the Court below and order the return to the complainant-appellant by the defendant-appellee of the sum of $892.50 the amount of interest unlawfully exacted, together with interest on same and costs of suit to be taxed.

Respectfully submitted,

GEORGE A. HENDERSON,

with Complainant-Appellant.

BRIEF OF DEFENDANT-APPELLEE.

Statement of Facts.

The defendant, Oraton Investment Company, and the defendant at trial, Christian Feigenspan, a corporation, are closely associated, the former being owned either entirely or practically so by the latter. On September 20, 1915, these two corporations entered into an agreement with Demetrio Loprete and his wife, Marie Marta Loprete. The agreement had to do with the purchase and lease of real estate. Paragraph 2 thereof provided that the Oraton Investment Company should loan to Marie Marta Loprete the sum of Four thousand dollars ($4,000.) without interest. Paragraph 9 provides that this loan shall be repaid by Demetrio Loprete, paying upon the purchase of beer, ale and porter One dollar ($1.00) per barrel in excess of the agreed price for those products, which extra dollar per barrel should be credited on account of the Four thousand dollars ($4,000.) loan.

In carrying out this agreement Demetrio Loprete and his wife executed to Oraton Investment Company a bond and mortgage, both dated September 22, 1915, conditioned for the payment of Four thousand dollars ($4,000.) three years from date. The body of the bond contained no reference to interest. The body of the mortgage contained no reference to interest. There is a statement on the exterior of the bond where the interest rate usually appears as follows: "No Interest."

To summarize the facts, therefore, a bond and mortgage conditioned for the payment of Four thousand dollars ($4,000.) on a definite date, without interest, became due and payable on that date and was partially unpaid.

Thereafter, the complainant-appellant became the owner of the property and desiring the mortgage satisfied was required to and did pay interest on the unpaid balance at maturity until payment by him of the balance of principal. The question here involved is whether or not that interest was properly payable.

Brief of Argument.

The argument on behalf of the defendant-appellee will deal exclusively with the one question of whether or not an obligation payable on a certain date, without interest, bears interest after that date, if unpaid on that date.

Interest is divided into two classes. The one class of interest is a charge for the loan of money or for an agreement postponing the date on which it shall be payable, which agreement may be expressed or implied. The second class of interest is for damages sustained by reason of non-payment of money due or past due. The first is referred to in Jersey City v. O'Callaghan, 41 N. J. Law, pg. 349, as interest proper and the latter is referred to as damages.

The interest in the nature of damages arises from breach of a contract and it is a part of the damages arising by reason of the breach of that contract. Interest proper arises from an agreement. So long as that agreement continues in effect the interest is payable in accordance with the agreement. The Courts of New Jersey have said that where an agreement is made upon the loan of money for interest at a fixed rate it will be implied that the agreement continues from year to year after the maturity date unless an agreement to the contrary is made. This implication arises from a well-known practice in the money lending business of making loans which is intended to be for long terms, upon an agreement that by the term of the mortgage or other evidence of obligation they shall mature at the end of a short term.

It is submitted, however, that when a loan of money is made upon a consideration other than interest reserved, there can be no implication of the continuance of the loan, without interest, beyond the time when it became due by the terms of the agreement, and, certainly such an implication cannot arise in the absence of proof of the contract giving rise to the loan without interest, of the performance of that contract and of the continuance of performance thereof after the due date fixed by the evidence of obligation.

In the present case the contract of September 20th, is evidence of the consideration. It clearly establishes the fact that there was no agreement as to a rate of interest. There was no charge for money loaned and there was no charge for the withholding of the right to collect money due. The loan of money, therefore, was upon contract. The consideration was the performance of that contract. The time for performance was fixed by the maturity date fixed in the bond and mortgage. Therefore, when the maturity date fixed in the bond and mortgage arrived and the money which was loaned without interest was unpaid there was a breach of that contract. While there might have been an implied agreement that interest would continue at the same rate had there been interest and had the loan been made for a consideration in the nature of interest there should be no implication that the contract continued where there was no evidence of a consideration which continued after the maturity of the contract and, therefore, after its breach.

It is submitted, therefore, that interest in the present case is in the nature of damages and that being in the nature of damages there is, by implication of law, an obligation to pay interest at the legal rate, that is, in this case, at the rate of six per cent. from the date of maturity of the contract.

Since the courts have implied an agreement in cases where money has been loaned for a consideration, or, as it has been called, true interest, it is submitted that it is proper for the Court at this time to consider a business practice well known and firmly established. That business practice is that where a note or other evidence of obligation has become due on a particular day and no interest is mentioned, interest is payable from and after the due date. The best example of this is in the banking business where notes are discounted or purchased by banks. They are made payable on a definite date. There is no mention of interest. Interest on that obligation accrues and is collected as a universal practice from the date of maturity.

It is, therefore, submitted that in the present case interest became due upon the bond of Demetrio Loprete and wife secured by mortgage upon property purchased by the complainant-appellant from the date on which that bond became payable by reason of the fact that upon that date there was a breach of agreement.
